COURT OF EXCHEQUER—Monday, July 14.

FISHER v. PALMER.

This was an extraordinary caſe, being an iſſue directed from the equity ſide of the Court, to aſcertain whether a child of the plaintiff was born alive or not, ſo as to authoriſe the plaintiff to keep his wife's eſtate as tenant by courteſy of England. As this ſort of title has but ſeldom occurred, it may be neceſſary to ſtate, that when a man marries a woman having a freehold eſtate, and it is not ſettled by any marriage article, it does not remain with the huſband after death, unleſs he has a child by her born alive, in which caſe he keeps it for his life, and is called tenant by the courteſy of England.—The queſtion here was, whether a child of Mr. Fiſher, born in the year 1796, and which was ſuppoſed to have been ſtill-born, did not retain after its birth ſufficient remains of life to ſay, whether it was born alive? At the death of his wife, Mr. Fiſher ſuppoſing he had no right to the eſtate, had reſigned it to the defendant, who had married his wife's ſiſter;—but ſubſequent facts having come to his knowlege, he brought this action to recover it back again. To prove the facts of the child being born alive, the two principal witneſſes were the nurſe, and Mary Rey. olds, a nook in the plaintiff's famil; ; but Dr. Lyon (since dead) declared an hour before the birth, that the child was living. He directed a bath of warm water to be prepared, and gave the child, when delivered, to immerse it in the warm water. It did not cry nor move nor shew any other symptom of life ; but when it was in the water, there was twice a twitching and tremulous motion of the lips, which both these women swore they distinctly saw ; one of them exclaimed the lips had moved, when Doctor Lyon had directed her to blow down its throat—she did so, but it never exhibited any other symptom of life.—Doctors Babbington and Heaton were each called and examined as to these symptoms, whether the child could be said to be alive. They both agreed that the muscular motion of the lips could not have happened if the vital principle had been quite extinct, and that therefore the child was alive. In addition to this it was stated, that the child was full grown, and perfectly formed, and had not evidently been dead for any time.

For the defendant, Mr. Dallas contended, that the symptoms stated were too equivocal to infer the prefence of the vital principle in the child, and argued that it was extremely probable the women were mistaken.

Dr. Denman, for the defendant, having heard the symptoms, gave his opinion that the child was not alive. He thought the motion of the lips might be produced without the vital principle, and make a distinction between uterine life and external life, the latter of which was produced by the act inflating the lungs ; and in the other circulation was produced by another progress. He thought the remains of uterine life might have produced the tremulous twitching of the lips.

The Lord Chief Baron summed up very ably and with great precision to the jury, and told them to point their attention to this one question—" Was there any spark of life whatever in the child at its birth, or not ?" According as they found the fact so must be their verdict.

The Jury found that the child was born alive, which entitles the father to recover back the mother's estate.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman of the village of Poughkeepsie, dated TUNIS.

" I am now on the site of the once renowned Carthage——where Scipio fought, where Hannibal conquered, where the intrepid old Bellifarius himself drew out his legions, and hid the light of heaven for seventeen long days with the smoke of that noble city, defigrated by his own hand. About one mile from where I now sit, ftands a ftupendous archway and gate, the only entire furviving monument of ancient Carthage ! This was the fouthern entrance into the town ; and in its vicinity are a number of mutilated cifterns, and part of the aqueduct which brought water from the celebrated mountain of Zowan (within fight) which is more than fifty miles diftant—Till within a few years there remained, I think, feventeen entire arches of this admirable memorial of human labor and perfeverance, which were near an hundred feet high, fupported by columns about fixteen feet fquare, and thirty apart ; but his fupreme excellency, the all powerful and magnificent Mahomed Alli Bey, his prefent worfhip, thought proper to build two or three paltry batteries to grace the rifing ground near Tunis, and caufed all the fine arches to be pulled down, to furnifh ftone for that noble purpofe.

" The ciftern (about fixteen or twenty remain to be traced) are indeed admirable fpecimens of the ingenuity of the ancient Carthagenians. They are about fifty yards long, ten wide, and fifteen deep, all under ground ; and I imagine would contain fufficient water to fupply Carthage five years, admitting 200,000 gallons deftroyed daily."—*P. From the National Intelligencer.

Translation of a review of a Work published in France by Eufebius Salverti, entitled conjectures upon the cauſe of the apparent diminution of waters upon our globe.

Many celebrated and natural hiftorians have published fyftems of cofmogony : their theories, fpringing from delicate imaginations, are rather ingenious than true ; we admire without believing them. Love of the public good has conducted citizen Eufebius Salverti upon their fteps ; aided with the light of experience, he explains under the modeft title of conjectures, a phenomenon the moft intereſting to humanity. Newton, fays, he thought that the mafs of water fpread over the globe, undergoes a progreffive diminution ; this opinion is the refult of obfervations which are continually renewed. In all times the fea has left dry vaft flats formerly covered with waves, if, on the other hand, it has overflown new lands, thofe conquefts do not equal its loffes : we daily fee many fources difappear, and the beds of rivers diminifh : Homer paints the Scamander as a terrible river whofe angry waves arrefted the impetuous Achilles, and would have overwhelmed him, if he had not been fuccoured by the gods ; and the Scamander is now only a rivulet. The parallel direction of the hills which border the courfe of rivers prove that they were formerly bathed by their waters, the enquirer aſks himſelf, what is the cauſe of this diminution? Eufebius Salverti examines all the hypothefis hitherto framed to refolve this intereſting problem :—the water abſorbed by organized bodies, then decompoſed by the vegetation of plants, and the digeſtion of animals : the formation of whirlpools and caverns in the interior of the earth ; the ſeparation of the two principles of water in the atmoſphere. This laſt hypotheſis, ſupported by the ſtriking experiments of modern chemiſtry, furniſhes the author an occaſion of explaining, in a new and very ingenious manner, the formation of the Aurora Borealis ; but none of theſe ſyſtems appear to him ſufficient, and he concludes, that the diminution of waters is only apparent, and that the circulation alone is diminiſhed. He demonſtrates this propoſition by the experiment of the pump of Verral, in which the quantity of water furniſhed appears more conſiderable in proportion to the quickneſs of movement, although always the ſame, if the ſuperior reſervoir pours into the inferior : he explains it further by the apparent riches of a country, calculated, not upon the quantity of money exiſting, but upon the quantity in circulation. Men, in digging canals and narrowing the beds of rivers to facilitate communications, in draining ponds and Marſhes for the benefit of agriculture, in cutting down foreſts, have diminiſhed the means of evaporation and conſequently the rains, the ſources and currents of rivers : it is above all by deſtroying the woods that men have diminiſhed the circulation of water for trees are the moſt powerful conductors of this element : and a ſimple glance caſt upon the globe, ſuffices to prove that the countries where the vegetation is the moſt vigorous, are alſo the richeſt in running waters. From a diminiſhed circulation of water reſults two conſtant phenomena ;—the one is the impoveriſhment of vegetation, the other the variation of temperature in countries a long time unimpaſſioned with woods ; finally, from theſe effects reſult the depopulation of countries in which formerly flouriſhed the moſt powerful empires. But it will be aſked what becomes of the portion of water which no longer circulates? Euſebius S. anſwers this queſtion, by an idea new, by a ſyſtem which is ingenious, and which is very plauſible. If, ſays he, in a vaſt extent of country, all the trees are deſtroyed, the vapors of the earth will be attracted only by the mountains ; a portion of the clouds will be arreſted upon their elevated tops, which diſpoiled of the trees that defended them, will preſent only naked peaks almoſt impermeable to water, and unprovided with the warmth which maintained vegetation, theſe clouds will condenſe into ice at their ſummits inſtead of filtrating to form ſources at their feet ; the reſt of the vapors and clouds become the ſport of every current of the air, will, above all, participate of the continual motion which the centrifugal force ariſing from the rotation of the globe, impreſſes upon the atmoſphere : theſe clouds will be driven towards the poles, and will there add to the frightful maſs of ice. The author ſupports this theory by obſervations and concluſive experiments ; he proves that the higher glaciers of Switzerland and the polar ſeas augment daily : a part of Greenland is no longer acceſſible, and the Strait of Frobiſher is now ſo obſtructed that no veſſel can find a paſſage. We ſhould be obliged to copy his work entire, to follow Euſebius, Salverti in his philoſophic reaſonings, which he preſents with an order, a clearneſs and an elegance very rare amongſt writers who occupy themſelves with phyſical ſciences.

In order to judge of his ſtile we cannot refuſe to tranſcribe at leaſt one paragraph. " Run over," ſays he, " with an attentive eye, the entire ſurface of the globe ; contemplate at firſt the enormous piles of ice which load the two hemiſpheres ; the maſs is almoſt double in the ſouthern hemiſphere, which poſſeſſing a much leſs terreſtrial ſurface, can only recollect upon its few elevations a ſmall part of all the water which is evaporated from its vaſt ſeas ; in proportion as the lowering of the mountains worn by the action of waters and of years ; in proportion as the deſtruction of foreſts, devoured by the improvidence and prodigality of man, diminiſh the means by which nature carries back upon our ſoil the waters diſſolved in the atmoſphere, a portion of water carried off by evaporation from the ſeas and rivers, comes there to fix itſelf forever, and to add to theſe ſhapeleſs maſſes of ice, the ſolitary abode of ſilence and death. Or will you, upon another view of the picture, look over thoſe unfortunate lands which have loſt ſuch conſiderable maſſes of water? Behold thoſe burning deſerts which ſeparate Aſia from Africa ; ſee the mountful ruins of Balbec and Palmyra, there alſo, and forever, dwell death and ſilence ; where now are the innumerable palmtrees of ancient Tadmore? Where now are the fountains once ſhaded by their foliage? The ſorrowful eye perceives far around only an arid ſand, naked, unceaſingly furrowed by the winds ; never does the water of Heaven come there to refreſh the wandering traveller, and the earth, which he opens with his hands, offers, reluctantly, to his devouring thirſt but a few drops of water loaded with the bitterneſt ſalts ;—theſe are the only remains of the various treaſures which nature formerly ſpread ſo profuſely in thoſe places ; what ſcourges have deſolated theſe countries ſo populous of old ? In proportion as ſociety extended itſelf, the draining of ſtagnant waters and narrowing the currents of rivers, have diminiſhed the evaporation ; the trees cut down in theſe extenſive clearings, have ceaſed to attract to the earth the tribute of the clouds ; the ſources have dried up. In vain the induſtry of man ſtruggled for a time againſt the courſe of nature. In ſpite of the labors of the Palmyreans and of the Roman Emperors ; in ſpite of the magnificent aqueduct, which even at this day encumbers the parched land, the deſtructive dryneſs daily made more rapid progreſs, and theſe regions, once the glory of Aſia, are now tranſformed into frightful deſerts. Contraſt with theſe images, the aſpect of new lands, where the hand of man has never impoſed laws upon the elements. In the vaſt Savannahs of America, the water covers an immenſe portion of ſoil and ſeems diſpoſed to cloath it entirely. Foreſts of boundleſs extent bring back upon the ſurface of the earth all the fluid which has evaporated from it. The breadth of rivers, the extent and multiplicity of lakes and marſhes, the exuberance of vegetation, at every ſtep, are proofs of an enormous circulation of waters. An aſpect more pleaſing to the eye of civilized man, is that of a country where induſtry has been guided by prudence, avidity reſtrained by an intereſt wiſely conſulted, where the breadth of water courſes has been always reſpected, and the preſervation of large plantations of trees allied to the moſt extenſive agriculture ; the earth there enjoys an aſtoniſhing fertility, and nouriſhes an innumerable population ; the circulation of water, conſtantly maintained in a moderate degree, affects not the ſalubrity of the air, favors vegetation and the regularity of the ſeaſons, and gives to interior navigation the moſt proſperous activity."

After this intereſting picture the author concludes that a wiſe government cannot too much encourage the plantations and repreſs the deva[illegible] of foreſts ; he offers wiſhes for the republic, by the eſtabliſhment of canals ſimilar to thoſe of England. " It is then, ſays he, that France will unite to the riches of art, which belong to the moſt civilized ages, the treaſures of nature, which ſeem to belong truly to the infancy of the world."

It is not for us to decide, whether citizen Salverti has penetrated the ſecrets of nature ; but it may be permitted us to ſay, that he has found that of rendering ſcience attractive. The glow of his diction diſſipates the dryneſs of an abſtract ſubject, and we find in his manner of preſenting his conjectures, and applying his facts, a reſemblance to the ſtyle of Buffon, of which he has ſometimes the richneſs, and always the clearneſs.

In England, lately, a field preacher, who had been a printer, obſerved, in his uſual harangue, " that youth might be compared to a comma, manhood to a ſemicolon, old age to a colon ; to which death puts a period."

Copied from an Iriſh Provincial Paper.—" On Monday laſt a fire broke out in the houſe of Mr. John Fleming, of Arton ; it was making its way to the cellar, but was prevailed upon to ſtop in its courſe, and to take a copious draught of water, which not only allayed its thirſt, but cooled its courage, on which it went quietly to reſt."

The following advice was lately left by a miſer to his nephew :—" Buy your coals in ſummer, your furniture at auctions, about a fortnight after quarter day, and your books at the fall of the leaf."

A Germin has lately publiſhed a tract on National Oaths, which he enumerates. Thoſe of the Engliſh, according to this writer, amount to fifty ſix ; the French to two hundred and thirteen ?

A man named R. Birt, of the pariſh of Whitcumbe, was lately convicted by the Magiſtrates at Dorcheſter, on the oath of Mr. Sherren, Church Warden, in the ſeveral penalties of 1s. for abſence from Church, on Sunday the 17th inſt. ; 5s. for being drunk ; and 20s. for ſwearing 20 profane oaths !

If we may believe Mr. Carr, an Engliſh Author, " the dangerous but pleaſant" practice of bundling, which once prevailed in this country, was probably imported from Wales.

Bonaparte's mode of counſelling in marriages with his near relations, ſeveral noble (now royal) families of Germany, is a civil way of taking hoſtages for the fidelity to him of the heads of thoſe families.

Theatrical.—Cooke's arrival was on Monday whiſpered round the boxes, and we were happy to hear that the report was "Steady he goes—All's well!"

A letter from Hightſtown, New Jerſey, Nov. 4, ſays—" Yeſterday a Sow of mine had 19 pigs—they are all living to-day."

[The following production is copied from the "Northern Moments," publiſhed at Woodſtock, (Vermont) in which it is publiſhed as original. It is no ordinary ſpecimen of blank verſification ; and happily combines the ſublime morality of Cowper, with the life-giving fancy of Thompſon. Nor. Bug.

A WINTER PIECE.

' Dread Winter comes at laſt, to cloſe the ſcene.'

YES, Winter comes!
'Tis but a moment ſince the ſmiling Spring
On Zephyr's downy wing rejoicing came,
And op'd, and kiſs'd the cozy-bluſhing roſe.
Then nature from her ſleep awoke ſerene,
And dreſs'd herſelf anew.—At his approach,
Tall hill and low ſtood ſmiling to the ſun,
The lofty mountains rais'd their melting heads,
And in the face of Heaven, wept for joy!
The little rivulets ran to find the ſea,
And join to ſwell the thankful ſong of praiſe.
But, ah! their joy was ſhort! their lodge have ceas'd!
All nature ſleeps again;—ordered Winter's here.
The Lapland Giant comes with pendant ice,
Chill horror flouting from his gelid ſkin:
Nor lakes nor ſeas can ſtop his rough career;
He builds his bridge acroſs old ocean's breaſt.
Affrighted, Sol retires with haſty ſtrides,
And dares not, but obliquely, backward look,
On his once conquer'd, now his conquering foe.
The earth in all in weeks of mourning clad,
To wail the loſs of her departed friend:

This mirror paints the ſcene of changing life.
This mounds youth, with all its op'ning charms,
In playful mood, ſits laughing in his face!
His Dwelling heart anew beats with ſanguine hope
Of ſatisfying bliſs, and full-blown joy!
He leaps hamſtrid in this fantaſtic dream;
And thinks that naught can bluſt the vernal flow'rs
But, while anticipation glides the wing of hope,
The frigid hand of time, with ſtrokes deep,
His forehead ploughs, and blights the pleaſing view.
" Then in his ſtreet's ſeed in youth he ſwears;
" 'Twas prove an evergreen in hours age,
" And flouriſh in the manor of our years too.
" 'Twill waft us to the realms of peace at laſt,
" To taſte th' ecſtatic bliſs of times to come!
" Thus happineſs will ſpring without alloy,
" And ſwaths chaunt their never-ending ſtrains."

Law Deciſion.—Court of Seſſion, Scotland. Black v. the Owners of a coal-pit.—Black returning home on horſeback, in a dark night, by a road leading through the Defendant's eſtate, fell into a coal-pit, and was drowned. The pit had many years been abandoned and the mouth had been ſurrounded by a wall of ſtone and lime, which, at the time of the accident, was about eighteen inches high ; it lay about four feet from the road, which had been a road uſed by the proprietor when the coal-pit was formerly wrought, but which was alſo frequently uſed by the neighbourhood. The action was brought by the children of the deceaſed for reparation for the loſs ſuſtained by the death of their father. The Lords found the defendant liable in damages 800l. and expences 100l.

Breach of Promiſe of Marriage.—An action was tried before Sir Nath Grole, and a Special Jury, at Suffolk Aſſizes, in which Miſs Lydia Balls, daughter of Mr. Francis B. of Birton Mills, was Plaintiff, and Mr. John Gardener, a miller, miller, and brickmaker, at Lavenham, was Defendant. The cauſe occupied four hours, and created a great deal of intereſt, as many curious letters were read in evidence. The conduct of the Plaintiff throughout appeared to have been exemplary, and the Defendant, without being able to aſſign any cauſe for abandoning her, had married another woman. The Jury, after a few minute's conſultation, returned a verdict for the Plaintiff, with 300l. damages. (Lon. Pap.)

FRANCIS GORE Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers persons who were resident in the British Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of Separation in the year 1783, and who have resided in this Province ever since, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reside therein since that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the insertion of their Names on the U. E. List, or have been suspended from the same, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be bestowed by His Majesty on that meritorious class of subjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other persons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were also resident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have since died without having their Names inserted on that List, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwise would have derived from His Majesty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, as aforesaid, solicitous to promote the welfare, and happiness, of His Majesty's Subjects of every description in this Province, more especially of those who have so strongly manifested their attachment, and Loyalty to His Majesty; and also solicitous that the Children of such persons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. List, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers; Do, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of such persons who were resident in the British Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the Treaty of Separation in the year 1783, and who have resided in this Province, on, or before the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reside therein since that period, or may have been suspended from the U. E. List, may, upon application being made, and proof produced thereof, to the satisfaction of the Executive Government, be now inserted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and consent, further notify and declare, that the Names of such persons as are now deceased, who in their lifetime were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. List, and who were also resident in this Province, on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be also inserted in that List, to the end that the Children of such Loyal and faithful subjects may be made partakers of His Majesty's Bounty to its fullest extent.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31st day of October, in the 47th year of His Majesty's Reign and in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and six.

FRANCIS GORE, Lieut. Gov'r.

By his Excellency's Command.
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

LONDON, Nov. 1.

Yesterday morning, at four o'clock, Gen. Craufurd and suite left his house at Brompton, for Falmouth, to join the expedition of which he is to have the command. We understand that the expedition will set sail as soon as possible after the General goes on board.

In consequence of a requisition from General Beresford, at Buenos Ayres, the following force has been sent to him from the Cape of Good Hope, by Lt. Gen. Sir David Baird:—

Four Troops, 20th Light Dragoons.
Two Troops, 21st ditto.
One Company, Royal Artillery.
The 38th and 72d Regiments.

At the particular request of General Beresford, Major Trotter, of the 83d, a very able officer, has been sent to him by Sir David Baird, to act as Deputy Adjutant-General. In consequence of this pressing call for troops from the Cape, Sir David Baird has detained the 47th regiment at the Cape, which put in there on its way to India; and he intended to detain other regiments from England, if they touched at the Cape.

November 3.

On Saturday Lord Morpeth arrived in town from Hamburgh. He came over in the Ariadne frigate. His Lordship was accompanied by Messrs. Basilico and Teyers, the Messengers. Messrs. Wagstaffe, Mills, and Sylvester, remain at Hamburgh. We are glad to find that the report of two of our Messengers being taken by the French is unfounded.

Copies of the dispatches forwarded by Lord Morpeth, were on Saturday sent to the different Ministers. They unfortunately confirm the accounts of the battle of the 14th, particularly as to the disasterous consequences with which it has been attended. Lord Morpeth was at Weimar when the battle took place, and had considerable difficulty in making his way to Hamburgh.

Very little doubt is entertained that the King of Prussia will be compelled to conclude peace. The arrival of the French at Berlin was known at Hamburgh, previous to Lord Morpeth's departure.

Letters from Bremen, and also from Holland state, that the French troops from the latter have taken possession of Embden, and of the whole of East Frezeland. It is supposed that these territories will be annexed to Holland.

A letter from Stettin mentions the arrival of Lombard, the Prussian Counsellor; he is accused of having carried on a treasonable correspondence with the enemy.

November 6.

Last night, at a late hour, the Hamburgh mail due arrived in course.

The French entered Berlin upon the 24th. Marshal Davoust has his headquarters at Potsdam. The troops in Berlin are commanded by General Hulin. It is stated that 30,000 Prussian troops, under the Dukes of Weimar & Brunswick Oels, have passed the Elbe, at Havelberg, on their retreat towards the Oder; beyond which it appears that the Prussians mean to make a stand, and whether they expect to assemble a large force. We wish, however, this corps may not be in some danger of being intercepted by the French that have advanced to Berlin, and so on the road to Stettin. There is no mention of the result of any negociation, nor is it said that any negociation has been proposed by Prussia.

Bonaparte treated the Duke of Brunswick's request for the neutrality of his territory with the utmost insolence.

It is feared that Magdeburgh is not likely to sustain a long siege. It is not probable, however, that the Prussians will make a stand in that neighbourhood. It is supposed that some fighting has taken place not far from Stettin on the 27th, French troops were expected there.

The French have committed great excesses in different parts.

The neutrality of Saxony has been acknowledged.

The Letters from Dover state, that a firing was heard at Boulogne on Monday, supposed to be for some success, or perhaps the conclusion of peace.

November 8.

Yesterday three Gottenburgh mails arrived. They bring a letter from Lund in Scania, dated 23d October, stating that the Queen of Prussia, with her family, were then at Stralsund. This, however, we apprehend, is a mistake, as it is in general believed that the Royal family of Prussia were at Custrin about the 21st or 22d, and at that time had the intention of withdrawing, if necessary, to East Prussia.—The Gottenburgh mail brings no other intelligence, nor has any thing further been received. The reports of Bonaparte having refused to negociate with the King of Prussia is certainly destitute of foundation. If we may judge from the Bulletins, he rather seems desirous to gain the King of Prussia by insidious compliments.

Three Gottenburgh mails arrived yesterday morning, one of which contains the following extract of a letter from Lund, in Scania, dated Oct. 23, 1806:—

"I have to tell you sad news! The Prussian army is totally defeated; the Queen of Prussia and her children are at this moment in Stralsund, whither it is said the King of Sweden sent to invite her to come over and take refuge in this country."

The above letter evidently refers to the action of the 14th.

A letter from Hamburgh, dated November 1, says,—"the delay of the mails from Prussia and Russia threatens the most fatal consequences to our trade.—The merchants are in general consternation, and great bankruptcies must ensue in a short time. To day one house failed for 300,000 marks banco. The English goods in Leipic have not been seized: most were already gone, and the result was, that it was settled the city should pay a large contribution instead of it, which, as Saxony is neuter, was probably the whole intention."

FALMOUTH, Nov. 3.

General Craufurd arrived here (at Wayne's hotel) this morning, to take the command of the expedition. The regiments composing the force now embarked here are the following, viz:

The 6th Dragoon Guards, (or Carbineers) two Squadrons, commanded by Col. Kington.
9th Light Dragoons, Col. Mahon.
5th Foot, Col. Davie.
36th Foot, Col. Burne.
45th Foot, Col. Guard.
88th Foot, Col. Duff.
95th Foot, Major M'Leon.

The fleet will fail the moment the wind will admit of their getting out of the Roads. It has been unfavorable for some days, but is now North Westerly.—Some ammunition is expected from Plymouth, for the ships of war, and some of the transports which is hourly expected. Four 74 gun ships with the Nereide frigate, and probably another, it is thought, will constitute the naval force of the expedition. Sir Sidney Smith, in the Spencer, 74 guns, Capt. Stopford, is the senior Officer of the fleet. Nothing can exceed the satisfaction evinced by all ranks in the appointment of General Craufurd to the command of the expedition. It was that officer's intention, on his first arrival here, to personally visit every transport, in order to satisfy himself regarding the comfortable situation of the troops on board; but the unfavourableness of the weather prevented the possibility of his putting this intention in execution. The wants of every vessel, however, he has ordered to be supplied, and the fleet will sail completely with every thing that can render the troops comfortable for a long voyage.

Foreign News.—By the arrival yesterday of the British Packet Diana, 46 days from Falmouth, via Halifax and Bermuda, we have received our regular file of the London Morning Herald to the 9th of Nov. They are occupied principally with the disasters on the Continent. It does not appear there has been any battle of consequence since that of Jena. Bonaparte entered Berlin on the 25th of Oct. and has concluded a treaty of neutrality with the Saxons. The remnant of the Prussian army, thirty thousand in number, under the command of the Dukes of Brunswick and Weimar are expected to make a stand on the Oder, where they are to be joined by 200,000 Russians, commanded by the Emperor Alexander in person. On the 15th of October, the day following the battle at Jena, as Bonaparte was passing through Weimar, he was shot at from a window, but the ball missed him. He was so enraged that he ordered the town to be given up to fire and sword, and every building was destroyed.

Selected from London Papers to Sunday the 9th of November.

Hanover, Oct. 18.

A fire broke out at Salzdethended, on the 16th, which consumed eighty-three houses—From Brunswick we learn that the Duke has arrived at Blankenburgh, and that his wound is not dangerous. Prince Louis, who fell on the 10th, was buried by the French with great ceremony.

London, Oct. 31.

A legion, to be called the Legion of the North, to be commanded by a Polish Officer, and to consist of Poles, is about to be formed by Bonaparte. It seems highly probable that a kingdom of Poland is intended to be erected for Jerome, Murat, or some one of the family.

November 1.

General Simcoe, we regret to state, died on Sunday last, at Topsham, in Devonshire. He arrived at Torbay a few days before, and was conveyed from thence by water to Topsham.

Jena the scene of the late great battle, is within a few miles of Lutzen, where Gullavus Adolphus fell in the great battle of 1632. "Cousin," said he as he left the field, wounded, "look to the troops; I think I have enough."

Herald Office, Nov. 4, 2 o'clock, A. M.

Three Hamburgh mails arrived last night. Our papers were not delivered until this moment. It is not possible for us to enter into any commentary, nor in fact in the intelligence very material. The Duke of Brunswick is said to have obtained the neutrality of his territory. The King and Queen of Prussia were stated to be at Custrin. A Prussian force of 40 or 50,000 men is said to have assembled at Magdeburg, and a second battle was expected. The Prussian troops have, however, crossed the Oder, and broken the bridges to cover their retreat.

Yesterday about 4 o'clock, Mr. Kaye, the Messenger, arrived at Lord Hawick's office from the head quarters of the Prussian army. The messenger states that he saw his Prussian Majesty after the last battle, and that he was in good health. He brought letters for the Duke and Dutchess of York.

Frontiers of Saxony, Oct. 21.

The head quarters of the French army is at Dessau. The Saxon troops have left the Prussian army.

It is said that a column of Russians had arrived at Warsaw.

London, November 5.

The King of Prussia, it seems, did apply to Bonaparte, immediately after the battle of Auerstadt, for an armistice, which was refused. It is stated in a German paper, the reply of Napoleon was—"We shall think of that at Berlin."

The neutrality of the Elector of Saxony, we regret to state, can no longer be doubted. A treaty was concluded between his Highness and Bonaparte, on the 19th inst. in consequence of which the Saxons were withdrawn from the Prussian army. The Electoral Court remains therefore at Dresden, from which place it was expected it would have removed. Bonaparte loses no opportunity of testifying his jealousy of British Commerce, which in spite of all his efforts, he has the mortification to find still growing more prosperous and extensive. Soon after his troops entered Leipic he issued an order, that all English property in the place should be delivered to French Commissaries within four days.

According to letters from Berlin, dated the 22d ult. Prince Ferdinand, the King of Prussia's uncle, still remained there, with all the persons belonging to his court. His royal highness is said to have declared, that he was certain the French would respect the brother of the Great Frederick.

Some Dutch papers to the 2d, we understand, reached town last night.—They contain the 13th Bulletin of the French army, which we are informed, states, that the campaign is finished, and alludes to the application made by the King of Prussia for an armistice, as we have mentioned above. All the garrisons in Regal Prussia are marching to reinforce the army. Orders have been issued to the Jews not to leave their houses, and it is said that it is intended to subject considerable numbers of them to military service in the garrisons.

Letters from Paris, dated the 28th, in the German papers of the 28th, state, that Spain was about to declare war against Portugal; and that the Prince of Peace was to enter the latter country at the head of a large body of troops.

Trieste, October 6.

The French troops are daily returning from Raguia, Dalmatia and Istria, into the Friuli. The Russians are still in Cattaro; and the Austrians under General Bellegarde, encamped upon the Island of Curzula and Lesina.

Berlin, Oct 24.—General Rouvoi has his head quarters at Potsdam. General Hulin, who now commands here, was last year French commandant at Vienna.

Aachen, Oct. 28. The theatre of war, which was hitherto in the Mark, advances continually nearer to the Pomeranian frontiers. An action has taken place near Templin; a cannonade was heard to-day. A war chest has arrived here.

London, Nov. 7. We have this day given some extracts from the Hamburg papers of the 1st instant, though full of any details, are silent respecting the facts of which we are most solicitous to be informed. They do not assure us that the Prussian corps, which were not engaged in the action of the 14th, have actually crossed the Oder, in order to effect a junction with the troops which now surround their sovereign. We fearfully apprehend that the French division, which has pushed through Berlin to Stettin, will, by the rapidity of its movements, be enabled to prevent its junction.

Of the Russians we hear nothing but the repeated cry that they are on the frontiers of Silesia. We do not impute any blame to those honest but distant auxiliaries. Their main body was destined for Dresden. They would of course be appriled of the disastrous affair of the 14th, and would then have a long, and rather a retrograde tour to take, before they could effect a junction with the remains of what was called the Prussian army. We are not so sanguine as to expect any general good from this junction, if effected. The utmost that can be expected from it is, that the King of Prussia, whose faults, in our judgment, have been expiated by his confessions, may be enabled to make better terms with the Usurper.

Nov. 8.

Extract of a letter from Lund, in Scania, dated Oct. 23. 1806—"I have to tell you sad news; the Prussian army is totally defeated; the Queen of Prussia and her children are at this moment in Stralsund, whither, it is said, the King of Sweden has sent to invite her to come over, and take refuge in this country."

It is now ascertained fact, that when the Marquis Lucchesini was sent to the French head quarters with a commission to obtain peace on any terms, Bonaparte returned this insolent answer.—"Je ne connois pas le Roi des Prusses."—"I do not know the King of the Prussians."

NEW YORK, December 27.

Captain Campbell, of the Schooner Mary, arrived at Charleston from Montevideo, left that place on the 2d of October. He informs, that the city of Buenos Ayres, which was taken by the British under General Beresford, had been retaken by the Spaniards, after a long, but ineffectual resistance, in which a considerable part of the British troops were killed: and that the rest had surrendered prisoners of war. This took place about the middle of August. Sir Home Popham still remained with his squadron in the river La Plata. In his correspondence with the Governor of Montevideo, he had signified his intention of keeping that place under a rigorous blockade. In his last letter, he allowed all neutral vessels seven days to leave the port, allowing them to sail only in ballast, or with that part of their cargoes which they had brought into that port; at the expiration of which time, all vessels attempting to enter, or leave that port, would be captured.

Charleston Paper.

Riot.—A very serious riot took place in this city on Thursday evening. It originated, we understand, with a desperate allociation of unprincipled men calling themselves Highbinders, who, under pretence of demolishing houses of ill fame, commit the most disorderly practices upon peaceable and unoffending citizens. A party of the banditti, amounting to about 50, assembled on Christmas Eve, in front of the Roman Catholic Church in Barclay-street, with the expectation that certain ceremonies usual in Catholic countries, but generally omitted here, would be performed. The Highbinders insisted upon the Church doors being opened, and that the ceremonies should commence. A member of the corporation and of the Church prevailed upon them to retire; but they returned a second time, abused the watchmen, and did not disperse until a very late hour.

A number of the lower class of Irishmen, residing principally in Augustus, Cross, and Barley-street, enraged at this lawless attack upon their religion, collected on the following evening (Thursday) and serious riot ensued. The Captain of the middle watch, with 18 watchmen, hearing that some disturbance had broke out, immediately proceeded to Augustus street; but were dispersed by a large body of Irishmen who at a certain signal attacked them with their bludgeons, and struck at every man who wore a cap.

Christopher Newswanger, one of the watchmen chafed an Irishman armed with a club, overtook and knocked him down—another Irishman immediately followed and struck him a left hand blow with a sharp pointed weapon, which penetrated below the right pap, and from the semblance of the wound, it appears to have been made by a stiletto. The man fell instantly and expired without a struggle. The body was taken up immediately and carried to the Alms House. This circumstance, as may be reasonably supposed, exasperated the inhabitants beyond description, and the Irishmen were hunted down in all directions.

About this period the mob had collected to very considerable numbers, and even dispersed to pull down the houses inhabited by the Irish. Happily, the Mayor arrived, and with some others of the magistrates and officers of the police, succeeded in stilling the multitude. A second set of persons, Irish as well as others, was carried to Bridewell, and the several watch houses, and they yesterday underwent examinations. Six or eight only have been committed, the greater proportion being dismissed, as no evidence appeared against them. We are sorry to learn that the murderer has not yet been traced, but trust that he will not escape the hands of justice. The Mayor and magistrates did not leave the scene of riot until after 1 o'clock in the morning.

A letter dated Batavia, 14th Sept. 1806, say—"The Dutch Spice Fleet, from the Tolaccas, bound for this place, has been captured by an English Country ship and frigate. This fleet is valued at three or four million Spanish Dollars;—a loss which must be most seriously felt by the Company, at this moment."—Phil. Pap.

CURIOUS ADVERTISEMENT.

MADAM SPITFIRE, at the sign of the Furies, in Hackle-street, next door to the Cat's Paw Tavern; offers herself to the public, to teach the noble art of SCOLDING and QUARRELLING, in good or bad humour, in love or in spite; by the week, day, hour, minute or second; early or late; before or after meal; without regard to any person, in Dutch or English: She has discovered a new way for women to pull the hair and cap of their adversary. Scolding, &c. taught in the genteelest manner, to country women as well as town ladies.—Judges and Magistrates scolded in the neatest style. She has a very peculiar mode of scolding, adapted to every age and circumstance of life. Married women, taught to scold their husbands blind, deaf and dumb, in six weeks. As a proof of her abilities in this polite acquirement, she scolded eight husbands to death in three years time, and the ninth is far gone. She teaches how to make grimaces or furious faces; how to look sharp and Mary Magdalen like; sleepy husbands may have their wives taught to scold them awake. She scolded the teeth out of her head the first year she followed this noble business, which renders her incapable of teaching the art of biting; but, on the other hand, she is not afflicted with the tooth-ache, which is a great advantage.—She is well provided with needles and pins, to teach how to scratch faces, arms, hands, eyes, &c. Water changed into vinegar by scolding. Scolding done in the newest and most approved style, in black, blue, red, or any color, on the shortest notice.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, February 3, 1807

Monday last being the day appointed for opening the Provincial Parliament, his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor came in the usual state to the Legislative Council Chamber, and being seated on the Throne, with the accustomed solemnities, the Commons House of Assembly attending at the Bar, opened the Session with the following most gracious Speech to both Houses of the Legislature.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the Assembly,

IT is with great satisfaction I now meet you for the first time in Parliament. From the very short period of my residence in this Province, I shall not take upon myself to call your attention to any particular object of Legislation, convinced that your experience and knowledge of this Colony, will fully enable you to enact such salutary laws as will tend to its prosperity, and I have no doubt of your attention being directed to such Acts of the Provincial Parliament, as will necessarily expire unless continued by the Legislature.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I have ordered the proper Officer to lay the Provincial Accounts before you; and have given instructions that the unappropriated sums of money, raised under the authority of this Parliament, taken out of the Provincial Treasury, and applied to the payment of certain Public contingent Expenses in the year 1805, as stated in the Accounts laid before you, during the last Session of this Legislature, shall be replaced.—I am however fully confident that you will unite with me in sentiments of Loyalty and gratitude, while reflecting on the very liberal supplies, annually afforded to this Province, by the bounty of our parent state, for its necessary Expenditure—and it will be, for the House of Assembly to consider, whether some appropriation of Revenue ought not to be made on its part, to relieve (so far as its Resources will permit,) the Mother country from the burthen of the contingent expenses, incidental to the support of the Civil Government, and the Administration of Justice in this Province.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen,

I trust that your zeal for the Public good, will induce you to occupy your time in the faithful discharge of your duties, and be assured of my cordial co-operation, when you direct your attention to the welfare and happineſs of his Majeſty's Subjects.

On Wedneſday at 3 o'clock, the Honorable Legiſlative Council preſented the following Addreſs to the Lieutenant Governor, in anſwer to His Excellency's Speech at the opening of the Seſſion.

To His Excellency Francis Gore, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

We His Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects the Legiſlative Council in Provincial Parliament aſſembled, return your Excellency our thanks for your gracious Speech.

We beg leave to offer your Excellency our reſpectful congratulations on your being called by our moſt gracious Sovereign to the Government of this Province, and in every meaſure for its welfare, you may rely on our cordial ſupport and co-operation.

We ſhall be at all times diſpoſed to employ our experience and knowledge of the ſituation and circumſtances of this Colony, in framing ſuch Laws as ſhall appear to us to tend to its proſperity and it ſhall be our conſtant endeavour to promote to the utmoſt of our power, the welfare and happineſs of our fellow ſubjects.

By order of the Houſe,
(Signed) THOS. SCOTT,
Speaker.

Legiſlative Council Chamber, York, 3d February, 1807.

To which His Excellency was pleaſed to make the following anſwer.

Honorable Gentlemen,

I return you my thanks for this Addreſs, and for your congratulation on my being called upon by my Sovereign to the Government of this Province.

It affords me great ſatisfaction to find, that you are diſpoſed to employ your experience and knowledge of the ſituation and circumſtances of this Colony, in framing ſuch Laws as may tend to its proſperity, and the happineſs of his Majeſty's Subjects.

FRANCIS GORE Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the inſertion of their Names on the U. E. Liſt, or have been ſuſpended from the ſame, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be beſtowed by His Majeſty on that meritorious claſs of ſubjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other perſons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were alſo reſident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have ſince died without having their Names inſerted on that Liſt, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwiſe would have derived from His Majeſty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, as aforeſaid, ſolicitous to promote the welfare, and happineſs, of His Majeſty's Subjects of every deſcription in this Province, more eſpecially of thoſe who have ſo ſtrongly manifeſted their attachment, and Loyalty to His Majeſty; and alſo ſolicitous that the Children of ſuch perſons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers; Do, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the Treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province, on, or before the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period, or may have been ſuſpended from the U. E. Liſt, may, upon application being made, and proof produced thereof, to the ſatisfaction of the Executive Government, be now inſerted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and conſent, further notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons as are now dec'd, who in their lifetime were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, and who were alſo reſident in this Province, on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be alſo inſerted in that Liſt, to the end that the Children of ſuch Loyal and faithful ſubjects may be made partakers of His Majeſty's Bounty to its fulleſt extent.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31ſt day of October, in the 47th year of His Majeſty's Reign and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand eight hundred and ſix.

FRANCIS GORE, Lieut. Gov'r,
By his Excellency's Command.

FEMALE SCIENCE.

A learned lady once enquired, why chymiſtry, geography, algebra, languages, &c. were not as becoming in a woman as a man? I will not ſay, replied a wit, they are entirely unbecoming, but I ſhould think a very little would anſwer the purpoſe. A woman's knowledge of chymiſtry might extend to the melting of butter, her geography to a thorough knowledge of every hole and corner in the houſe; her algebra to the family expences; and for tongues heaven knows that one is quite ſufficient.

A young ſoldier was arraigned at the Aſſizes of Maryborough, in Ireland, on a charge of having married three wives in the ſhort ſpace of ten months. The priſoner on hearing the judge expreſs his ſurpriſe at the enormity of the offence, exclaimed, "My Lord, I am now ſorry for what I have done, but I was then on the recruiting ſervice."

WINTER EVENING.

I like to ſit in my ſtudy in a winter evening, when the wind blows clear and the fire burns bright. If I am alone, I ſometimes love to muſe looſely on a thouſand flits of the imagination; to remark the gentle agitations of the flame; to eye the moule, that liſtens at his knot-hole, and then runs quick acroſs the hearth; or dwell long on the finging of the wood, when the heat drives out the ſap. I believe that ſuch reverie ſoftens the heart, while it relaxes the body, for thus the ſenſes are gratified in miniature. In the fire I have the ſofteſt colors, and the ſweeteſt and moſt various undulations, and in the gentle muſic of the green ſtick there is melody for fairies. No tenſe is particularly excited by my ſilver grey, ſilken-footed, and crumb-nibbling animal; but perhaps he might teach me a leſſon of prudence, not to ſet out on a journey, till I have inquired the dangers and difficulties of the way. While I am in this ſtate of lonely muſing, I ſometimes lapſe unknowingly into grief; for my guardians are dead, and my friends are far from me, my years are haſtening away, "and evening with its hollow blaſt murmurs of pleaſures never to return." But this ſtate I do not like to indulge, for ſorrow grows by muſing; I therefore rouſe myſelf from tears that diſheartten, to ſtudies that ſtrengthen or exhilerate me, and when I have lighted a fegar, and put on more wood, I track Park to the banks of the Niger, or I mount the walls of Rome with "Bourbon & Revenge," and cloſe the evening with an act from Shakeſpeare, the beſt of poets and the wiſeſt of writers. [Anthology.

Society.—Man is inconſiderable by his ſingle exertions; it is only by uniting his efforts with thoſe of his ſpecies that he produces any thing of conſequence. The bee is a ſmall inſect, and the ant is ſtill ſmaller; yet by aſſociation they build themſelves a name and a monument more valuable than the ſolitary lion is able to boaſt.

The evils of diſregarding moral obligations.

The man who abandons himſelf to libertiniſm, becomes enervated and languid; he is no longer able to attend to his ſtudies or his buſineſs; he contracts idle and expenſive habits, which diminiſh his means of livelihood, his reputation and his credit; his intrigues occaſion him embarraſſments, cares, quarrels, and law-ſuits, not to take into the account heavy and grievous diſeaſes; the decreaſe of his ſtrength by an internal and ſlow poiſon; the ſtupefaction of his intellect by the exhauſtion of the nervous influence; and laſtly the premature infirmities of old age.

SOLOMON AND SHEBA.

I recollect a pretty ſtory, which, in the Talmude of Genava, some rabbin has attributed to Solomon.

At the foot of the throne stood the queen of Sheba; in each hand she held a wreath of flowers; the one composed of natural, the other of artificial flowers.—Art, in the labor of the mimic wreath, had exquisitely emulated the lively hues, and the variegated beauties of nature; so that at the distance it was deemed impossible for him to decide, to her question imported, which was the natural, and which was the artificial. The sagacious Solomon seemed puzzled: yet, to be vanquished, through a trifle, by a trifling woman, irritated his pride. The son of David—he who had written treatises on the vegetable productions, "from the cedar to the hyssop," to acknowledge himself outwitted by a woman, with shreades of paper and glazed painting! The honour of the monarch's reputation for divine sagacity seemed diminished, and the whole Jewish court looked solemn and melancholy. At length an expedient presented itself to the king; and it must be confessed, worthy the natural philosopher. Observing a cluster of bees hovering round a window, he commanded that it should be opened. It was opened—the bees rushed into the court, and lighted immediately on one of the wreaths, while not a single one fixed on the other. The decision was not then difficult; the learned rabbins shook their heads in rapture; and the baffled Sheba had one more reason to be astonished at the wisdom of Solomon.

This would make a pretty poetical tale. It would yield an elegant description, and a pleasing moral—that the bee only rests on the natural beauties, and never fixes on the painted flowers however inimitibly the colors may be laid on. This applied to the ladies, would give it pungency.

A travelling person coming into a country neighborhood where was a vacant school-house, offered himself as teacher. The neighbors convented to examine into his abilities. He was asked "What branches he could teach?" "Almost any," was the answer. He could instruct children to read without first learning them to spell; to write almost without making marks, and it was indifferent to him in what rule they first commenced arithmetic. "Are you acquainted with mathematics, sir?" was the next question. Supposing some great literary character was meant, the fellow assuming an air of importance, quickly replies—Matthew Mattox, sir? No sir, I am not acquainted with Matthew, but I know his brother Tom very well!"

MURDER OF PALM.

We present the reader with the following affecting letter, with the hope that it may make an impression too deep to be soon effaced. Let those who rejoice at the successes of Bonaparte, peruse it with due attention:—

Letter from J. P. Palm, to his Wife.

"In the Dungeon of the Military Prison of Brannau, August 26, 1806. Six o'clock in the morning.

"My dearest beloved—when you read these lines you are a widow, and our dear, dear children have no longer a father. My destiny is fixed; in five hours I cease to live. But though I die the death of a criminal, you know that I have committed no crime; I fall a victim of the purest calamitous times! times when an untimely end can neither dishonor a man, whose life has been irreproachable, nor throw a stain on his surviving family. In our miserable days what virtue has not expired by the hands of the executioner? Do not let your affliction for the fate of a husband, deprive you of firmness to support the duties of a mother. Our dear, dear babes (Oh, my God! I shall never more press them or you to my burning heart!) have now a double claim on your maternal love, as well as on your maternal tenderness. Implant in their tender minds all those virtuous sentiments which made their good mother so dear to their unfortunate father. I advise you to collect as soon as possible the wreck of our fortune (if any) and to retire with it to England or America. In those fortunate lands, innocence is still secure, and patriotism is yet revered.

"In my last fervent prayers, I recommend you all to the protection of an Omnipotent Providence, and to the compassion of all those contemporary patriots of all countries, whose noble bosoms sympathize with my own feelings, and deplore if not weep over the destruction of liberty in wretched Germany.

"Reward the friend who delivers this, and forgive, and teach our dear children to forgive my murderer.—May Heaven pardon him as much as I do. I cannot—I dare not say more—my breast is too full. Oh, my God! never—never more to behold and embrace them and you!—Almighty Creator bless and preserve you all until we meet in another and a better world to part no more. With my last breath, your ever affectionate husband.

JOHN P. PALM."

The fate of the late unfortunate Mr. Palm, cannot be read without emotion by those whose bosoms glow with sentiments of patriotism, justice, or humanity.

This man, a bookseller at Nuremberg, one of the free Imperial Cities of Germany, was suddenly seized by a detachment of French troops, dragged before a Military Commission assembled at Brannau, tried on a charge of having sold publications reflecting on the government of Bonapatte, condemned and executed. He was offered his life on condition of giving up the names of the authors whose writings had offended the despot; but he scorned the breach of confidence, and magnanimously sealed his faith with his blood, bequeathing to those whose lives he had thus saved, at the expense of his own, the task of recording to the world the history of this outrage on the rights of nations, this teeth violation of all those sacred ties, on which a ferocious Usurper has too long and successfully trampled.

Mr. Palm has left a disconsolate widow and five destitute children; by providing for whom, Britons will at the same time proclaim their admiration of the principles of this heroic Martyr, their detestation of the tyrant under whole murderous mandate he fell, and fulfil one of the noblest duties of humanity.

With these sentiments, a Subscription has been opened, and above 1000 guineas already subscribed.

LONDON POLICE.

Bow Street.—William Lyman, the son of the American Consul, about ten years of age, was at a school in the neighborhood of Hackney. On Monday one of the Ushers inflicted a very severe punishment upon him with a wanghee cane.—Early on Tuesday morning the youth made his escape from the school to his father's house, in Birchin-lane.

On his father's hearing his statement and examining his body, he came to the Office, and made application to Mr. Bond and Sir William Parsons, the Magistrates, who dispatched Ruett with a warrant, to a post-chaise, to bring the Usher before them. The officer returned with him with all possible speed. The Consul, with his son, and his Attorney, were in readiness.—The youth's back was shewn to the Magistrates, when it appeared to be nearly one general mass of bruises. The Magistrates censured very severely the conduct of the prisoner.

Sir William Parsons observed, that if it was possible for the youth to have committed an offence to call for such a violent punishment, the Master should have informed it, and not the prisoner; but reprobated such a mode of punishment very severely, recommended, as the most proper mode of punishing boys, to deprive them of play, make them do an extra number of lums, and learn extra talks.

The prisoner appeared penitent for what he had done, and begged pardon; but the Consul said he could not possibly accept of it. He should get a Surgeon to examine his son's body, and should prosecute the prisoner in the Crown Office. The prisoner was ordered to find bail for the affair.

ANECDOTE OF DR. WEBSTER.

The late Earl of D——d, who was extremely fond of Dr. Webster's company, and who used sometimes to question him respecting the extent of good works—their efficacy, &c.—Sitting on evening with that great and facetious clergyman,—he familiarly addressed him as "Sandy." (Alexander) "Well, my Lord," replies the Doctor, "I sometimes read the Bible, and I find it written, he that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord. Now, Sandy, I have bought a leaded pipe, with four sweet water from Pentland-hills to the poor's House in Edinburgh, at my own expence, of six hundred pounds; by which eleven hundred poor d——ls have abundance of the finest water in Britain. What think you of that good deed, Sandy?" "I have no doubt, my Lord," replied the Doctor "if it have proceeded from a good principle, and be intended for a good end, but you will have a reward fully worthy of your six hundred pounds." "I think" replied his lordship "I may at least have seven years's meat in heaven for it,—nay, I think I may say with Samuel Rutherford (a great but homely speaking divine in Scotland) I may ride through Hell on a Windle-straw, and not have a hair in my horse's tail singed!" "My Lord" replied the Doctor, taking his pipe out of his mouth, "you would not be the worse of taking your water pipe behind you, in case of accidents."

THE ORACLE.

YORK, February 14, 1807.

Saturday, 7th February, 1807.

At half past twelve o'clock this day, the House of Assembly waited on his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the following ADDRESS, in answer to his Excellency's SPEECH at the opening of the Session:

To his Excellency FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of UPPER CANADA, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE, his Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects the Commons of Upper Canada in Parliament assembled, beg leave to express to your Excellency our most sincere satisfaction in meeting you at this time in Parliament.

And although your Excellency hath only generally directed our attention to the welfare of the Province, we trust every exertion on our parts will be used in framing such Laws as will tend to advance the Agricultural and Commercial interests of this Province, as well as the prosperity of his Majesty's Subjects of every description.

We shall review carefully the expiring Laws, and adopt such as appear expedient to continue.

As soon as the Public Accounts, which we have no doubt will be exhibited in the most full and ample manner, are laid before us, our time shall be devoted to the investigation of them.

We cheerfully embrace the present occasion to express our full satisfaction of your Excellency's directions relative to certain Monies that have been taken from the Provincial Treasury without either the authority or concurrence of Parliament.

It has at all times been our earnest desire to offer to our most gracious Sovereign any money that could be spared from the Provincial Treasury; but our fears, from the unimproved state of this Province, are, that our resources must be appropriated to the internal improvement of itself; should it full appear to us on examination of the Public Accounts, that any sum of consequence remains in the Treasury worthy of being appropriated to his Majesty to relieve the Parent Country from the burthen and support of this Province, we shall consider it our first duty to crave our most gracious Sovereign's acceptance of it.

If zeal to discharge the important trust delegated to us were the only circumstance that impressed itself forcibly on our minds, our task would be easy; but when we consider that the welfare and happiness of his Majesty's subjects in this Province, depend on the salutary laws that may be passed, no sacrifice can be too great on our parts to effect this purpose.

Confiding in your Excellency's cordial support and co operation whenever the welfare and happiness of his Majesty's subjects of this Province are concerned, no effort of ours shall be wanting in the faithful discharge of our duty.

(Signed)

ALEXR. M'DONELL, Speaker.

From an ancient Engliſh Publication. The reader will perceive that the following beautiful Poem is built on the Text preſixed, and that the firſt line of each ſtanza is borrowed from it.

Behold, alas! our days we ſpend;
How vain they be, how ſoon they end!

BEHOLD,
How ſhort a ſpan
Was long enough of old
To meaſure out the life of man;
In thoſe well temper'd days, his time was thus Survey'd, caſt up, and found but threeſcore years and ten.
ALAS!
And what is that?
They come, and ſlide and paſs,
Before my pen can tell thee what.
The paths of time are ſwift, which having run
Their ſeven ſhort ſtages o'er; their three-ſcor'd talk is done.
OUR DAYS
Begins, we land
To ſleep, to antic plays
And boys, until the firſt ſtage end;
Twelve winning moons, twice ſive times told, we give
To nurecover'd loſs: we rather breathe than live.
WE SPEND
A ten year's breath
Before we apprehend
What 'tis to live, or fear a death;
Our childiſh dreams are fill'd with painted joys
Which pleaſe our ſenſe awhile, and waking, prove but toys!
HOW VAIN,
How wretch'd is
Poor man, that doth remain
A ſlave to ſuch a ſtate as this!
His days are ſhort at longeſt; few at moſt;
They are but bad at beſt, yet lavish'd out, or loſt.
THEY BE
The ſecret ſprings
That make our minutes flee
On wings more ſwift than eagle's wings!
Our life's a clock, and every gaſp of breath
Breathes forth a warning grief, till time ſhall ſtrike a death!
HOW SOON
Our new-born light
Attains to full-aged noon!
And this, how ſoon to grey hair'd night!
We ſpring, we bud, we bloſſom, and we bluſh
E'er we can count our days, our days they flee in haſt.
THEY END
When ſcarce begun;
And ere we apprehend
That we begin to live, our life is done.
Man count thy days; and if they fly too faſt
For thy dull thoughts to count, count every day the laſt.

The Helvetian's Farewell to his Country.

OH lovely Freedom, in theſe happy bow'rs
Exulting often have I trac'd thy flight,
And ſaw thy fair hand ſtrewing fragrant flow'rs
Along the vale, and on my native height.

Thy very ſhade is fled—no more I ſee
The form that charm'd me, or the ſmile that fir'd
A ſoul but fatal ſpirit chaſes thee
By crooſ thirſt of blood and pow'r inſpir'd.

Adieu, ſweet country, low'd, though loſt to me!
At thy deſerts, how warm this heart has glow'd
With gen'rous joy, when oft to Succour thee
My gallant children's precious blood has flow'd!

Oh friends, enſlav'd, but dear, I ſigh farewell!
An exile, ſeeking freedom o'er the wave;
Beneath the Gallic ſcourge I will not dwell:
But live with Liberty, or ſhare the grave!

FRANCIS GORE Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the inſertion of their Names on the U. E. Liſt, or have been ſuſpended from the ſame, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be beſtowed by His Majeſty on that meritorious claſs of ſubjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other perſons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were alſo reſident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have ſince died without having their Names inſerted on that Liſt, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwiſe would have derived from His Majeſty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, as aforeſaid, ſolicitous to promote the welfare, and happineſs, of His Majeſty's Subjects of every deſcription in this Province, more eſpecially of thoſe who have ſo ſtrongly manifeſted their attachment, and Loyalty to His Majeſty; and alſo ſolicitous that the Children of ſuch perſons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers; Do, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the Treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province, on, or before the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period, or may have been ſuſpended from the U. E. Liſt, may, upon publication being made, and notice of the ſame produced thereof, to the Lieutenant Governor of the Executive Government, be now inſerted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and conſent, further notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons as are now deceaſed, who in their lifetime were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, and who were alſo reſident in this Province, on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be alſo inſerted in that Liſt, to the end that the Children of ſuch Loyal and faithful ſubjects may be made partakers of His Majeſty's Bounty to its fulleſt extent.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31ſt day of October, in the 47th year of His Majeſty's Reign and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand eight hundred and ſix.

Prince of Wales' viſit to Liverpool.

The papers eſtimate the expence of the entertainment given by the corporation of Liverpool, to the Prince of Wales and his friends, at 10,000l.—The dinner was given at Lyllyman's Hotel, which was fitted up on this occaſion with uncommon celerity, and in a ſtyle of magnificence unparalelled in this part of the kingdom. The entrance floor, the ſtairs and paſſages, the drawing rooms the gallery, and eating room floors, were all covered with crimſon cloth, the drawing rooms were adorned with rich furniture, and lighted by elegant glaſs chandeliers. The extenſive gallery leading from the drawing room to the great dining room, was brilliantly lighted with five Grecian chandeliers, ſuſpended from the ceiling, and on each ſide were placed four large bronzed figures on marble pedeſtals, holding wax-lights; the windows, &c. were covered with rich crimſon curtains; and the whole of this gallery produced a moſt ſtriking and beautiful effect. The anti room to the eating room was taſtefully decorated with rich tracery in feſtoons, and lighted by a Grecian chandelier, and alſo by lamps in the niches, ſupported on elegant vaſes. The eating room preſented a ſcene of ſplendour difficult to deſcribe. It was richly furniſhed with crimſon curtains to the windows, and lighted by a prodigious number of wax-lights in large cut glaſs chandeliers and girandoles, which added to the lights in a vaſt number of ſilver branches over the tables, and the glitter of a magnificent ſervice of plate, gilt ornaments and candelabras, which covered the whole of the Prince's table, produced an effect that certainly never was exceeded out of London. The appearance of the muſic in the orcheſtra was excluded by a well-deſigned Freſco Painting of the Arms of his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, with the Plume of Feather. At the oppoſite end of the room over the entrance door, was placed the large and very excellent full length portrait of his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Clarence, which was preſented to the Corporation by the Merchants of Liverpool—for his Royal Highneſs's noble defence of the Slave trade!

Copy of a letter received by the Mayor of Liverpool, dated Knowſley, Sept. 20.

"Sir—I am commanded by the Prince of Wales to expreſs to yourſelf, and to the Corporation of Liverpool, the ſtrong ſenſe his Royal Highneſs entertained of the very ſplendid and magnificent reception he has met with in your opulent and populous town, I have to lament the inadequacy of my powers to convey to you, in the forcible language it requires, the feelings of his Royal Highneſs upon the occaſion. The heartfelt ſatisfaction which ſeemed to pervade all ranks of the people could not fail to excite in his Royal Highneſs's breaſt the moſt ſenſible emotion of affection and regard, the impreſſion of which will ever remain indeliable. His Royal Highneſs's repeated exclamation that "this is the proudeſt day of my life," will, I truſt, be ſufficiently concluſive to you of the grateful ſenſations of his Royal Highneſs.

"I am farther commanded to requeſt, that you will have the goodneſs to undertake the trouble of offering the ſubſequent bounties of his Royal Highneſs to the following Charities of Liverpool, viz.—100 guineas to the Inſtitution for the Blind, 50 Guineas to the Welch Charity, 50 Guineas to the Poor Debtors.

"The Prince of Wales begs that you will perſonally accept the conſideration of his high eſteem and regard.

"I have the honor to remain, &c.
(Signed)
"B. BLOOMFIELD."

Fire at Portſmouth.

Portſmouth, (N. H.) Dec. 24.

Meſſrs. Young and Minſhall,

A painful duty once more devolves on me. (Mr. P. wrote the account of the laſt fire) to give you an account of another diſtreſſing fire in this town, which at dawn of day this morning burſt from the ſtores of Benjamin Hill. Daniel Weeks, Stephen Little, and Walhington Peirce, all under one roof, in Bow-ſtreet; theſe ſtores were to completely involved in flames, and having great quantities of rum, brandy, gin, and cumbuſtible articles, the fire communicated with great rapidity to the adjoining ſtores of Nathaniel Adams and Son, on the weſt, and Ebenezer Thompſon on the eaſt, and from the latter to the adjoining ſtore of ſaid Thompſon, and improved by Nathaniel A. and John Haven and John Zindge; from theſe it communicated to C. Rimes ſhop, Abel and Robert Harris's ſtore, Edward Cutt's ſtore, improved by himſelf and brother George Cutts; from thence to James Day's dwelling houſe and work-ſhop; then to Chriſtopher Rimes and Samuel Cotton's dwelling houſes; then to St. John's Church, and the elegant three ſtory parſonage houſe, entirely new and nearly finiſhed; and to prevent further ravages, four ſtwelling houſes were pulled down, owned by John Staples, widow Tuttle, Mark Simes and George Wendell, and a work-ſhop of Mr. Giles. The fire was, by this means, got under about eleven o'clock, although much of the relicks are now in flames.

The loſs of property in goods and buildings is very great; but it is impoſſible to make an accurate ſtatement at preſent. It is ſuppoſed by ſome, to be one hundred and fifty thouſand dollars. The Meſſrs. Havens had one hundred hhds. of ſugar and rum in one ſtore, entirely conſumed: the Meſſrs. Harris's had a whole ſhip's cargo of flax ſeed and pot and pearl aſhes, nearly ready to take on board, beſides a large amount in other goods, entirely conſumed.

The principal ſufferers are N. A. and J. Haven, Abel and Robert Harris, Ebenezer Thompſon, Edward & George Cutts, Nathaniel Adams and Son, James Day, Stephen Little, Benjamin Hill and Walhington Peirce. Some of the above gentlemen loſt their books, notes and papers.

The following gentlemen ſuffered greatly in the removal of the goods from theſe ſtores, which were in imminent danger, viz. Jeremiah Libbey, Wm. Walker, Daniel Brown, B. and J. Weare, George and Jacob Wendell, William Thomas and Charles Neil, Mark Simes, and ſeveral others, whom my haſte will not admit of calling to recollection.

The fire, it is ſuppoſed, muſt have originated in the counting rooms of either Stephen Little or Benjamin Hill, as they adjoined each other, it was difficult to ſay which; the foundation of the chimney in theſe rooms being built on the firſt chamber floor, and there not being a ſufficient thickneſs of brick to prevent the heat penetrating to the floor, is conjectured to be the cauſe of this diſtreſſing calamity.

The above buildings were all wooden and almoſt all the ſtores burnt have been erected ſince the dreadful conflagration in this town four years ago to-morrow night. Only one brick petition wall completely ſaved a row of buildings. This, I think, ſhould moſt thoroughly convince the people not only of this, but every ſeaport town, of the utility and importance of building with brick. Had the ſtore been built of brick, with walls carried a ſufficient height above the roof, it would have been the only building deſtroyed. But to build with wood, in compact ſeaport places, is, to uſe the common proverb, "laying at the ſpiggot, and letting out the bung."

A friend, (in haſte,)
CHARLES PEIRCE.

BELISARIUS kept alive the laſt ſpark of Roman virtue, and with him it expired. I cannot forbear illuſtrating ſome hiſtorical ſketches relating to this hero:—

Belſarius was appointed by Juſtinian, to the command of the army deſtined for the African Vandalic war. Three months after his departure from Conſtantinople, he diſembarked on the African ſhore—his troops occupied a camp on the ſea ſide. The next morning after his encampment, ſome of the neighboring gardens were pilliged, and Belſarius, after chaſtiſing the offenders embraced the flight occaſion, but deciſive moment, of increaſing the maxims of juſtice, moderation, and found policy. "When I accepted the commiſſion of ſubduing Africa, I depended much leſs (ſaid he) on the numbers or even bravery of my troops, than upon the friendly diſpoſition of the natives, and their immortal hatred to the Vandals.—You alone can deprive me of this hope, if you continue to extort by rapine what might be purchaſed for a little money. Such acts of violence will reconcile theſe implacable enemies, and unite them in a juſt and holy league againſt the invaders of their country.

When Belſarius inveſted Naples, he gave audience to the deputies of the people, who exhorted him to diſregard a conqueſt unworthy of his army, to ſeek the Gothic king in arms, &c.—Belſarius replied, with an haughty ſmile, "when I treat with my enemies, I am more accuſtomed to give than to receive counſel; but I hold in one hand inevitable ruin, in the other peace and freedom, ſuch as Sicily now enjoys. The impatience of delay urged him to grant the moſt liberal terms—his honor ſecured their performance; but Naples was divided into two factions. They deliberated, but came to no concluſion. The patience of the army was almoſt exhauſted; and at the end of twenty days, Belſarius had reconciled himſelf to the diſgrace of abandoning the ſiege, and marching againſt the Goths. At laſt an Iſaurian, who explored the dry channel of an aqueduct, reported to the general, that a paſſage might be perforated to introduce a few armed ſoldiers into the city. When the work was executed, the humane general ſtifled the diſcovery of the ſecret, by a laſt and fruitleſs admonition of the impending danger. In the darkneſs of night, four hundred Romans entered the aqueduct, raiſed themſelves by a rope faſtened to an olive tree, ſounded their trumpets, ſurpriſed the centinels, and gave admittance to their companions, who ſcaled the walls and then open the gates of the city. Every crime which is puniſhed by ſocial juſtice, was practiſed as the rights of war. Belſarius alone, in the ſtreets and churches of Naples, endeavored to moderate the calamity he predicted. "The gold and ſilver," he repeatedly exclaimed, "are the juſt rewards of your valor; but ſpare the inhabitants. They are chriſtians—they are your fellow ſupplicants—they are now your ſubjects. Reſtore the children to their parents, the wives to their huſbands, and thew them by your generoſity of what friends they have diſſinated, deprived themſelves."

About the year 1538, a ſhip of 2000 tons, called la Grande Francoiſe, was built at Havre de Grace; its cables were in thickneſs at leaſt equal to the body of a corpulent man. In it was a tennis court, and it had likewiſe a wind-mill. It was deſigned for the Eaſt India trade; but, after taking up two tides, with much labor and difficulty, in getting to the pier-head, the officers of the navy were obliged to pull it down, and many houſes were built of the materials.—Journal du Marquis de Courtenvaux. [H Balance.

On the 16th inſtant, his Britannic Majeſty's ſhip Leopard, of 50 guns, arrived in Hampton Roads from Bermuda. On the 11th, Rear Admiral Sir Richard Strachan, in the Cæſar of 84 guns, accompanied by the Triumph of 74 guns and La Topaz frigate, all from Halifax, anchored in the Bay, and on the ſame day the Melampus frigate got under way from Hampton Roads, and went down to join the Admiral.

A good Thing.—Laſt ſummer, while the Britiſh ſhip Chicheſter, of 44 guns, was laying at anchor off Fort Jay, Doctor Morſe, of Elizabeth Town, coming in with a load of hay, hove about partly under the bowſprit of the ſhip, miſs-ſtayed, driſted foul of the 44, and the ſloop's ſhrouds got entangled in the ſhip's yards. The boatſwain of the Chicheſter ordered men aloft to cut away the ſloop's rigging, that the might drift from along ſide. The Doctor ſwore that if they cut him a drift, he would ſend them all to hell in a moment.—"You ſend us to hell," ſaid the officer.—"Yes, by G—d, I will," replied the Doctor.—"Go aloft and cut away," ſaid the boatſwain again.—"Boy, ſays the Doctor, go below and bring me a brand of fire; I'll be damn'd if I don't put fire to the hay."—The boatſwain flood amazed, and ſaid the man was mad. The Captain of the 44 was then called on deck. The Doctor told him he had had the misfortune to get foul of his ſhip, and that inſtead of affording him relief, one of his damn'd officers ordered his veſſel's rigging to be cut away, and that if that had been done, he was determined to make a bon-fire—the Doctor ſtill ſtanding with the brand of fire in his hand. The Captain of the ſhip, pleaſed with the Doctor's oddity, aſked him on board. They went below together, where the ſubject was renewed; and the captain aſked him if he would have put fire to his hay if the orders of his officer to cut away had been complied with—He ſaid he certainly ſhould—it was his unalterable determination. The captain of the frigate laughed moſt heartily—they breakfaſted together, and parted on good terms.

Fatal Accident.—We underſtand that the Muſeum at Boſton was burnt down on Thurſday night laſt; that, during the fire, one of the walls unexpectedly fell; that ſeven young gentlemen of the moſt reſpectable families in Boſton were killed, and between twenty and thirty others were wounded. This information we are told by a gentleman juſt arrived from Hartford, was communicated by a clerk in the Boſton poſt-office to his friend, a clerk in the poſt office, at Hartford.

Women are like Citadels—ſome are taken by ſtorm, others withſtand a long and vigorous ſiege. Sunday ſe'nnight, was married at Holywell, after a courtſhip of 21 long years, Mr. Chambers, artificial flower-maker, aged 45, to the agreeable and accompliſhed Miſs Louiſa Davis, at the blooming age of 76!!

"Did you marry your wife for her fortune?" ſaid ironically a gentleman to the husband of a rich lady with a diſagreeable countenance, and diſpoſition reſembling her face.

"Certainly not," anſwered he.

"Was it for the ſake of her beauty?"

"No; I cannot ſay it was," anſwered the husband.

"Did you marry her for the ſake of her temper?"

"Not in the leaſt."

"In the d——l's name, for whoſe ſake did you marry ſuch a woman?"

"I married her for God's ſake," anſwered the husband with reſignation.

SWINDLING.

The following act of Swindling, which for boldneſs and cunning, would not ſuffer by a compariſon with any which the city of London has afforded, was practiſed in this city the preſent week.

A genteel perſon, poſſeſſing all the exterior appearances of a gentleman, took lodgings, about a week ſince at a reputable houſe in King ſtreet. He ſtated that he was recently from the ſtate of Georgia, and that his name was Brown. On Monday morning he took a horſe and rode a few miles out of town, and meeting on the road three waggons, coming from the country, loaded with cotton, he ſtopped them, and told the drivers that he wiſhed to purchaſe their loading; he ſtated to them that the market price for cotton that morning was 19 cents per lb. but that, as he wiſhed to make up a parcel, he would give them 20 cents. A bargain was accordingly made, and he informed them that he was a partner in a certain houſe in King-ſtreet, where they were to deliver the cotton, and receive their pay in ſpecie. He then left the waggons, and came immediately to town, and going to the gentleman whom he had named to the waggoners as his partner, he informed him that he had three waggons then coming in, loaded with cotton, which he would ſell to him at a moderate price: The gentleman agreed to take it 19 cents. The waggons arrived, were unloaded, and the cotton weighed; when Browne made out the bill, amounting to about 1200 dollars, and received the money in bank bills. All this time, the gentleman purchaſing the cotton ſuppoſed Browne to be the owner of the waggons, while the unſuſpecting countryſmen ſuppoſed him to be a partner in the houſe. On receiving the money, Browne ſtepped out to waggoners, and ſhewed it to them, obſerving at the ſame time, that he had not the ſpecie in the Store, but, if they would wait, he would go down to the bank and bring it to them in dollars. Not harboring the moſt diſtant ſuſpicion of fraud the waggoners agreed to wait for him. But, inſtead of going to the bank, he made off, and has not ſince been heard of.

Fire at Portſmouth.

Portſmouth, (N. H.) Dec. 24.

Meſſrs. Young and Minſhall,

A painful duty once more devolves on me. (Mr. P. wrote the account of the laſt fire) to give you an account of another diſtreſſing fire in this town, which at dawn of day this morning burſt from the ſtores of Benjamin Hill. Daniel Weeks, Stephen Little, and Walhington Peirce, all under one roof, in Bow-ſtreet; theſe ſtores were to completely involved in flames, and having great quantities of rum, brandy, gin, and cumbuſtible articles, the fire communicated with great rapidity to the adjoining ſtores of Nathaniel Adams and Son, on the weſt, and Ebenezer Thompſon on the eaſt, and from the latter to the adjoining ſtore of ſaid Thompſon, and improved by Nathaniel A. and John Haven and John Zindge; from theſe it communicated to C. Rimes ſhop, Abel and Robert Harris's ſtore, Edward Cutt's ſtore, improved by himſelf and brother George Cutts; from thence to James Day's dwelling houſe and work-ſhop; then to Chriſtopher Rimes and Samuel Cotton's dwelling houſes; then to St. John's Church, and the elegant three ſtory parſonage houſe, entirely new and nearly finiſhed; and to prevent further ravages, four ſtwelling houſes were pulled down, owned by John Staples, widow Tuttle, Mark Simes and George Wendell, and a work-ſhop of Mr. Giles. The fire was, by this means, got under about eleven o'clock, although much of the relicks are now in flames.

The loſs of property in goods and buildings is very great; but it is impoſſible to make an accurate ſtatement at preſent. It is ſuppoſed by ſome, to be one hundred and fifty thouſand dollars. The Meſſrs. Havens had one hundred hhds. of ſugar and rum in one ſtore, entirely conſumed: the Meſſrs. Harris's had a whole ſhip's cargo of flax ſeed and pot and pearl aſhes, nearly ready to take on board, beſides a large amount in other goods, entirely conſumed.

The principal ſufferers are N. A. and J. Haven, Abel and Robert Harris, Ebenezer Thompſon, Edward & George Cutts, Nathaniel Adams and Son, James Day, Stephen Little, Benjamin Hill and Walhington Peirce. Some of the above gentlemen loſt their books, notes and papers.

The following gentlemen ſuffered greatly in the removal of the goods from theſe ſtores, which were in imminent danger, viz. Jeremiah Libbey, Wm. Walker, Daniel Brown, B. and J. Weare, George and Jacob Wendell, William Thomas and Charles Neil, Mark Simes, and ſeveral others, whom my haſte will not admit of calling to recollection.

The fire, it is ſuppoſed, muſt have originated in the counting rooms of either Stephen Little or Benjamin Hill, as they adjoined each other, it was difficult to ſay which; the foundation of the chimney in theſe rooms being built on the firſt chamber floor, and there not being a ſufficient thickneſs of brick to prevent the heat penetrating to the floor, is conjectured to be the cauſe of this diſtreſſing calamity.

The above buildings were all wooden and almoſt all the ſtores burnt have been erected ſince the dreadful conflagration in this town four years ago to-morrow night. Only one brick petition wall completely ſaved a row of buildings. This, I think, ſhould moſt thoroughly convince the people not only of this, but every ſeaport town, of the utility and importance of building with brick. Had the ſtore been built of brick, with walls carried a ſufficient height above the roof, it would have been the only building deſtroyed. But to build with wood, in compact ſeaport places, is, to uſe the common proverb, "laying at the ſpiggot, and letting out the bung."

A friend, (in haſte,)
CHARLES PEIRCE.

BELISARIUS kept alive the laſt ſpark of Roman virtue, and with him it expired. I cannot forbear illuſtrating ſome hiſtorical ſketches relating to this hero:—

Belſarius was appointed by Juſtinian, to the command of the army deſtined for the African Vandalic war. Three months after his departure from Conſtantinople, he diſembarked on the African ſhore—his troops occupied a camp on the ſea ſide. The next morning after his encampment, ſome of the neighboring gardens were pilliged, and Belſarius, after chaſtiſing the offenders embraced the flight occaſion, but deciſive moment, of increaſing the maxims of juſtice, moderation, and found policy. "When I accepted the commiſſion of ſubduing Africa, I depended much leſs (ſaid he) on the numbers or even bravery of my troops, than upon the friendly diſpoſition of the natives, and their immortal hatred to the Vandals.—You alone can deprive me of this hope, if you continue to extort by rapine what might be purchaſed for a little money. Such acts of violence will reconcile theſe implacable enemies, and unite them in a juſt and holy league againſt the invaders of their country.

When Belſarius inveſted Naples, he gave audience to the deputies of the people, who exhorted him to diſregard a conqueſt unworthy of his army, to ſeek the Gothic king in arms, &c.—Belſarius replied, with an haughty ſmile, "when I treat with my enemies, I am more accuſtomed to give than to receive counſel; but I hold in one hand inevitable ruin, in the other peace and freedom, ſuch as Sicily now enjoys. The impatience of delay urged him to grant the moſt liberal terms—his honor ſecured their performance; but Naples was divided into two factions. They deliberated, but came to no concluſion. The patience of the army was almoſt exhauſted; and at the end of twenty days, Belſarius had reconciled himſelf to the diſgrace of abandoning the ſiege, and marching againſt the Goths. At laſt an Iſaurian, who explored the dry channel of an aqueduct, reported to the general, that a paſſage might be perforated to introduce a few armed ſoldiers into the city. ANECDOTE of the late GENERAL WASHINGTON.

One Reuben Rouzy of Virginia owed the General about one thouſand pounds. While Preſident of the United States, one of his agents brought an action for the money; judgment was obtained, and execution iſſued againſt the body of the defendant, who was taken to jail. He had a conſiderable landed eſtate; but this kind of property cannot be ſold in Virginia for debts, unleſs at the diſcretion of the defendant. He had a large family, and for the ſake of his children, preferred lying in jail to ſelling his land. A friend hinted to him probably that General Waſhington did not know any thing of the proceeding, and that it might be well to ſend a petition, with a ſtatement of the circumſtances. He did ſo, and the very next poſt from Philadelphia, after the arrival of his petition in that city, brought him an order for his immediate releaſe, together with a full diſcharge, and a ſevere reprimand to the agent for having acted in ſuch a manner. Poor Rouzy was in conſequence reſtored to his family, who never laid down their heads at night without preſenting prayers to heaven for their beloved Waſhington. Providence ſmiled upon the labors of the grateful family, and in a few years, Rouzy enjoyed the exquiſite pleaſure of being able to lay the thouſand pounds, with intereſt, at the feet of this truly great man. Waſhington reminded him that the debt was diſcharged: Rouzy replied, that the debt of his family to the father of their country and the preſerver of their parent could never be diſcharged; and the General, to avoid the pleaſing importunity of the grateful Virginian, who would not be denied, accepted the money—only, however, to divide it among Rouzy's children, which he immediately did.

Demoſthenes is an immortal inſtance of the nobleſt perſeverance; the only virtue that is crowned. He was extremely affected with the honors which he ſaw paid to the orator Calliſtratus; and ſtill more with the ſupreme power of eloquence over the minds of men; and, not being able to reſiſt its charms, he gave himſelf wholly up to it, from thenceforth renounced all other ſtudies and pleaſures; and during the continuance of Calliſtratus at Athens, he never quitted him, but made all the improvement he could from his precepts. The firſt eſſay of his eloquence was againſt his guardians, whom he obliged to refund a part of his fortune. Encouraged by this event, he ventured to ſpeak before the people, but with very ill ſucceſs. He had a weak voice, a thick way of ſpeaking, and a very ſhort breath; notwithſtanding which, his periods were ſo long, that he was often obliged to ſtop in the midſt of them for reſpiration. This occaſioned his being hiſſed by the whole audience. As he withdrew hanging down his head, and in the utmoſt confuſion, Satyrus, one of the moſt excellent actors of thoſe times, who was his friend, met him, and, having learnt from himſelf the cauſe of his being ſo much dejected, aſſured him, That the evil was not without remedy; and that his caſe was not ſo deſperate as he imagined. He deſired him to repeat ſome of the verſes of Sophocles and Euripides to him; which he did. Satyrus ſpoke then after him; and gave them ſuch graces, by the tone, geſture and ſpirit with which he pronounced them, that Demoſthenes himſelf found them quite different from what they were in his own manner of ſpeaking. He perceived plainly what he wanted, and applied himſelf ſtrenuouſly to the acquiring of it. His efforts to correct his natural defect of utterance, and to perfect himſelf in pronunciation, ſeem almoſt incredible; and prove (as Cicero remarks) that an induſtrious perſeve-nnce can surmount almost all things. He stammered to such a degree, that he could not pronounce some letters; among others, that with which the name of "Rhetoric," the art he studied, begins. He was also short breathed, as above-mentioned. These obstacles he overcame at length, by putting small pebbles into his mouth, pronouncing several verses in that manner without interruption: and accompanying it with walking, or going up steep and difficult places; so that at last no letter made him hesitate, and his breath held out through the longest periods. He went also to the sea-side; and whilst the waves were in the most violent agitation, he pronounced harangues, both to strengthen his voice, and to accustom himself, by the confused noise of the waters, to the roar of the people, and the tumultuous cries of public assemblies. Demosthenes took no less care of his action than of his voice. He had a large looking glass in his house, which served to teach him gesture, and at which he used to declaim before he spoke in public. To correct a fault which he had contracted by an ill habit of shrugging up his shoulders, he practised standing upright in a very narrow pulpit, or rostrum, over which hung an halberd in such a manner, that if, in the heat of action, that motion escaped him, the point of the weapon might serve at the same time to admonish and correct him. His application to study was no less surprizing. To be the more removed from noise, and less subject to distraction, he shut himself up in a small room under ground, sometimes for months together; and there it was, by the light of his lamp, that he composed those admirable orations which were said, by those who envied him, to "smell of the oil;" to imply, that they were too elaborate. Demosthenes heard them; and only told them, in reply, "It is plain that yours did not cost you so much trouble." He rose constantly very early in the morning; and used to say, that he was sorry when any workman was at his business before him. We may further judge of his extraordinary efforts to acquire excellence of every kind, from the pains he took in copying Thucydides's History eight times with his own hand, in order to render the style of that great man familiar to him. And his labour was well bestowed; for it was by these means that he carried the art of declaiming to the highest degree of perfection of which it was capable; whence it is plain he well knew its value and importance.

From the Mercantile Advertiser.

A special Oyer and Terminer was held at Flatbush, in King's County on Tuesday and Wednesday the 16 and 17th instants, for the trial of William Cornwell and Martin Hill, two boys, the former about 14 years of age, and the latter about 12, on a charge of Arson, for burning the barn of Hendrick L. Suydam, in the town of Brooklyn, on the evening of the 16th November.

About 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Tuesday the grand jury brought in a bill of indictment against William Cornwell only for the arson, Martin Hill having been used as a witness.

They were both indicted for a grand larceny for stealing between 20 and 30 dollars from the store of Isaac Weeks on the same evening.

Soon after the grand jury came into Court, Wm. Cornwell was put to the bar and arraigned. He pleaded guilty, but his honor Judge Tompkins, who presided, out of tenderness to the prisoner, and desirous that he should have all the legal advantages which his youth could afford, directed the plea of not guilty to be recorded, which was accordingly entered. His honor then affigned as Counsel for the prisoner Mr. King and Mr. Clark.

Mr. Riker, the District Attorney then moved the Court that the trial should proceed, but on account of the lateness of the hour the court adjourned until ten o'clock the next morning.

On Wednesday at the opening of the court, the prisoner was again put to the bar. The jury were called, and five or six of the jurors were challenged by the prisoner's counsel, and set aside. After twelve jurors appearing and being sworn, the District Attorney opened the cause and stated to the jury minutely the facts which he should produce against the prisoner, to convince them as well that he had burnt the barn, as that he had the capacity to render him an object of legal punishment.

Mr. Suydam, the owner of the barn, was called as a witness, and proved that his barn, together with property to a great amount, and other buildings had been burnt on the night stated in the indictment.

Martin Hill was then called. The Counsel for the prisoner objected to him as an incompetent witness on the ground of infancy. On examination by the Court he manifested great discernment and talents, and appeared to have a just sense of the consequences of committing perjury, whereupon he was sworn.

He testified that he and Cornwell had first entered the store of Mr. Weeks, and forced open the drawer of the counter with a knife. That they took out between 20 and 30 dollars, & described the money with great exactness—He stated that they had concealed the money in Mr. Cornwell's cellar.

After this they concluded to set fire to some barn. He stated that they had before bought a candle to enable them to count the money, but the candle not burning well they had thrown it away and bought another of Mr. Rapp, where they also lighted it. He further mentioned that it went out several times & was as often lighted by Hill, the witness, at different places, which he particularly mentioned, and also the different periods of time. He said the last time the candle was lighted Cornwell went into Chichester's store and lighted it. He also mentioned several other facts, in all of which, he was supported by witnesses of the utmost respectability. Mr. Spragg saw the prisoner light the candle at Chichester's, and Justice Garritson saw him pass with a lighted candle in company with a boy about the size of Hill, who he had no doubt was Hill. The money was also found in the cellar of Cornwell's father, and was produced in court. It easily answered the description of that which had been stolen from Mr. Weeks.

Both Hill, the witness, and the prisoner, on being examined separately by the magistrates, had confessed their guilt.

Judge Furman and, the other magistrate, before whom the prisoner and Hill had been examined, moved in the fullest and most satisfactory manner that both the lads possessed great and unusual talents and cunning—such indeed, as is rarely met with in young men in ordinary life at 18.

Here the testimony against the prisoner closed.

The counsel for the prisoner produced only one witness—The mother of the prisoner. Her testimony however, rather established that he was above 14. Her distress, and the consequent effect it had upon the boy, produced a most affectionate scene. They both wept bitterly and sobbed aloud. For a few moments it interrupted the proceedings of the court.—Many of the bye-standers shed tears, and every countenance was marked with pity and compassion.

Mr. King, of counsel for the prisoner role, and addressed the jury in a speech of near an hour. He delivered himself with great force and eloquence, and defended the unfortunate lad with distinguished ability. He was peculiarly successful when he addressed the feelings of the jury.—Every man appeared deeply affected for the little culprit, on whose fate they were to pass their verdict.

Mr. King having concluded, the District Attorney role in reply.—After premising that it was one of the most painful duties which his official situation had ever imposed, that he felt the same sensibility which the jury had manifested, as well for the sufferings of the mother as the misfortunes of the boy; he proceeded to state the law upon the subject. He read several cases where infants under 14 had been punished in England with death, after which he went through the evidence minutely, and concluded with observing that in his opinion the law and the facts were conclusive against the prisoner, and that the jury must find him guilty.

His honor judge Tompkins delivered the charge of the court.

He began with cautioning the jury against indulging any prejudices which the enormity or danger of the crime might excite. To guard themselves against convicting for the sake of example, or on the grounds of policy, or because it might be essential to the safety of the community. He emphatically told them to be biassed by no such considerations, and that if the prisoner was not a fit object of legal punishment, or if they had a doubt on the subject, it was a solemn duty which they owed to their consciences and to the law to acquit.

His honor then recapitulated the evidence, and concluded with declaring the law to be, that a boy above the age of 14 is presumed in law capable to commit a felony, and is liable to suffer the same punishment as if he was of full age. That a boy under 14 years is presumed in law incapable to commit a felony, but that the presumption raised by the law out of tenderness to infants may be rebutted by proof. If therefore it should appear that an infant under the age of 14 and not less than 7, had very extraordinary discernment & cunning, so as to distinguish clearly between good and evil; and be fully conscious of what he did, and especially if he evinced more intelligence than boys usually do at fourteen, he might in law commit a felony, and be the object of punishment. That accordingly cases had been cited, where in England a girl of 13 had been burnt for killing her mistress—one boy of 10 and another of 9, who had killed their companion, had been sentenced to death, and he of ten years actually hanged, because one had hid himself and the other the body he had killed. And one boy of only 8 years was tried at Abingdon for firing two barns. He discovered great malice, revenge and cunning, was condemned and hanged accordingly. In modern times a boy of only ten years was unanimously adjudged by all the judges in England to be a fit object of capital punishment.

His honor, however, concluded by charging the jury, that in all such cases the evidence of that discernment and malice, which is to supply the want of age must be strong and clear beyond all doubt and contradiction.

The jury retired for about half an hour and brought in a verdict of—Guilty.

After this Martin Hill was arraigned for the Larceny, to which he pleaded not guilty. But the evidence against him was so full and clear, both as to his having committed theft and of his capacity, that the jury found him guilty after having been out of court about five minutes.

Cornwell was sentenced to the State Prison during life, and Hill for two years and an half.

At the same court one Mahon (a black) was convicted of a violent assault upon a young woman, with an intent to commit a rape. She was a white girl of fair and irreproachable character. He had in the struggle bruised her very much. A Mr. Woolsey, who lived in the neighbourhood, happened to pass near the place, and hearing her cries, went to her aid. Notwithstanding it was dark, he attacked the negro; who fled at first; but on being overtaken, made resistance. Mr. Woolsey, however, very much to his honor and bravery, marked the villain so as to know him, and shortly after secured him.

He was convicted and sentenced to the State Prison for three years, the utmost period allowed by law, with liberty to the master to transport him.

Some other business of less consequence was done, and the Court adjourned on Wednesday in the evening.

SNOW—AN IMPROMPTU.

THIS is January twenty,
When we should have sleighing plenty;
I am tired altogether,
Of such four, unpleasant weather;
Say 'tis to rain and blow—
Why is it so hard to snow?

See the Farmer, wet and weary,
Sallying o'er the plain, so dreary:
Oft he upwards turns his peepers,
Blinking like a chimney-sweeper's:
O'er he cries, enraged with woe,
"Why the d—l don't it snow?"

See the Merchant, sorry fellow,
With a face as pale as tallow—
Sick with grief, and quite bed-ridden—
All because there is no sledding!
Hear him cry, in accents flow,
"O! ye gods! why don't it snow?"

See the chapfall'n Tavern-keeper,
Voluntarily a weeper!
See his bar-room, once so cheery,
Now forsaken, cold and dreary!
Hear him cry, with spirits low,
"Curse the luck!—why don't it snow?"

Hear the sage Prognosticator
Blame these slip'ry tricks of Nature:
She so oft his judgment bothers,
That he knows no more than others:
Hear him roar with wrinkled brow,
"Curse my stars!—why don't it snow?"

Folks in ev'ry rank and station,
Join in fretful exclamation:
Tailors, tinkers, parsons, pedlars,
Sawyers, teamsters, smiths and fiddlers,
Rich and poor, or high and low,
Hop, and sweat—for want of snow.

For myself—tho' prest with sorrow,
Still, in hopes 'twill snow to-morrow,
To be patient I endeavor:
Faith! such times can't last for ever:
Hear the stormy south-east blow—
May it waft us hills of snow!

O! ye gods, who rule the weather—
Neptune—Jove—or both together—
Lend, for once, an ear propitious,
Hear our pray'rs, and grant our wishes;
Down your frosty blessings throw;
Cover—smother us—in snow.

Anecdote of the celebrated
COUNSELLOR CURRAN.

At the Assizes of Cork in Ireland, some years ago, a suit was commenced in the Court of Assize and Nisi Prius, by the Corporation of that City, against the Barrack Master, Mr. Lawe, to recover damages for having insulted the Mayor of the City, Sober Kent, Esq.—The fact was this:—

Mr. Lawe, after a convivial evening spent with the officers of the Garrison, prevailed upon the Commanding Officer to let him have the Regimental Band, in order to serenade some ladies of his acquaintance. After having done so, he patroled the streets with some friends, and the band playing different loyal tunes; they were met by his Worship the Mayor, who was a little in his cups, and attended by a few constables, &c. The Mayor desired Mr. Lawe and his friends to disperse, and ordered the band home to the barracks:—

After an able speech made by the lawyer employed for the Corporation, Mr. Curran got up, and addressing the jury, said:—"Gentlemen of the jury, I shall not take up much of your time, having very little to say; and all I will say is, That Lawe was illegal, and Sober was drunk." An immoderate laugh seized all the Court; the jury without retiring from the box, brought in a verdict of —ly six-pence damages.

FRANCIS GORE Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the inſertion of their Names on the U. E. Liſt, or have been ſuſpended from the ſame, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be beſtowed by His Majeſty on that meritorious claſs of ſubjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other perſons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and were alſo reſident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have ſince died without having their Names inſerted on that Liſt, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwiſe would have derived from His Majeſty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, as aforeſaid, ſolicitous to promote the welfare, and happineſs, of His Majeſty's Subjects of every deſcription in this Province, more eſpecially of thoſe who have ſo ſtrongly manifeſted their attachment, and Loyalty to His Majeſty; and alſo ſolicitous that the Children of ſuch perſons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers; Do, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the Treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province, on, or before the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period, or may have been ſuſpended from the U. E. Liſt, may, upon application being made, and proof produced thereof, to the ſatisfaction of the Executive Government, be now inſerted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and conſent, further notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons as are now deceaſed, who in their life time were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, and who were alſo reſident in this Province, on, or, before, the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be alſo inſerted in that Liſt, to the end that the Children of ſuch Loyal and faithful Subjects may be made partakers of His Majeſty's Bounty to its fulleſt extent.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31ſt day of October, in the 47th year of His Majeſty's Reign and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand eight hundred and ſix.

SELECTIONS FROM THE LATEST UNITED STATES PAPERS.

Boſton, January 28.

OF EUROPEAN NEWS.

The intelligent reader will find, that the Summary, in the laſt Centinel, comprized a full outline of all the European intelligence by the late arrival here. We have, notwithſtanding, given ſketches of all the French Army Bulletins, to No. 31.—Though, like the French account of the battle of Trafalgar, theſe bulletins may contain many falſehoods and exaggerations, yet the progreſs made by the French arms, added to a number of corroborating circumſtances—make it certain that the Pruſſian army was nearly annihilated: and that all the provinces of that kingdom would be over-run by the French. We have no doubt the French Head Quarters were at Warſaw, the firſt of December. The re-eſtabliſhment of the kingdom of Poland we think cloſed the campaign.

It is true, a Ruſſian force, (ſay from 100,000 to 150,000) had been advancing to ſuccour Pruſſia. But it is equally certain, that Bonaparte was on the march with more than 220,000 diſciplined troops to oppoſe them; leaving his conquered countries to the protection of the levies as they arrived from France;—and we ſee, by ſeveral capitulations, that to leave no force in his rear, he had ordered all the captured Pruſſian ſoldiers to be marched into France. The Ruſſians muſt therefore hazard a battle againſt fearful odds;—or have receded into their Empire; where we do not believe Bonaparte has followed them,—The King of Pruſſia, with a ſmall force, had retreated towards Pruſſia Proper.

Saxony, Heſſe, Brunſwick, Pomerania, and the Imperial cities, were in the power of the French. Denmark may eſcape for a yet further length of time.

The ſituation of Auſtria was critical. She was evidently only reſtrained by fear, from again oppoſing the French in arms.—She had a large force in the field, and a continual interchange of couriers was kept up between Vienna and Peterſburgh. But unleſs ſhe was certain ſhe could act in conjunction with the whole force of Ruſſia, and that force be at hand, and well ſupplied, ſhe muſt have been mad to attempt any thing like hoſtility againſt France.

In Great Britain the affairs of the continent were ſwallowed up in the buſtle of the Genetal Election. The ſtocks had not fallen much. On the 5th Dec. the 3 per cent. conſols were at 60 to 61, about the price they bore before the commencement of hoſtilities. The miniſterial papers pronounce an increaſed confidence of the people in the Miniſtry;—of their determination to reſiſt Gallic ambition;—that the public revenue was ſo abundant, that the loan for the year would not exceed twelve millions—a ſum much leſs than the laſt;—and that an effective war would be carried on.

Extract of a letter from Kingſton, Jamaica, dated Dec. 5.

"The Reſiſtance frigate, Captain Adam, arrived here lately, after having landed Don Mendoza, a Spaniſh Nobleman, at Carthagena. There are now on board her a Portugueze and an Engliſh merchant. They are to proceed in her to La Vera Cruz, and ballaſt her with dollars. Capt. Adam, is to receive 15,000l. Sterling, in lieu of freight, &c. There are many conjectures reſpecting this expedition. The Admiral does not know whether the money is for individuals, or for the Engliſh or Spaniſh governments."

Philadelphia, February 2.

Negociations with Great Britain.—The reported interruption of the negociation is ſaid to be devoid of authenticity—private letters from intelligent ſources in England, received both at Baltimore and Philadelphia, being entirely silent on the subject.—People's Friend.

Hartford, Feb. 4.

On Saturday last this town and neighbourhood were visited with the greatest deluge of rain, that has occurred in so short a time, within the memory of the oldest person amongst us. In the morning there was a prospect of a plentiful fall of snow, which was much wanted. About noon the rain began, and continued in one unremitting shower till about three o'clock on Sunday morning. By this time the Little River had risen ten feet above its ordinary height. The body of ice, of the thickness of two feet, which covered the river, rose with the water, and broke into large cakes, of four and five tons weight, which came down with this deluge bearing away every thing before it. About two o'clock the Great Bridge yielded to the shock, and fell with a tremendous crash.—The two side piers only are now standing.

Connecticut River rose to a great height, and on Sunday noon the ice in front of the city broke up and threatened the destruction of the shipping, which were frozen in. The ferrying across it is now as good as in midsummer.

The bridges over most of the streams we have heard from, are carried away. The damage sustained in mills and bridges, and other property, must be very great. The following are the losses we have heard of.

Six bridges on the Hockanum, in East Hartford, have been swept off. The grist-mills of Mr. Warburton, A. Bunkland, Mr. Rockwell, and the powder mill of Mr. John Mather, are carried off. A paper mill belonging to the editors of this paper (Messrs. Hudson and Goodwin) was very much injured. The ice was driven by the stream directly through the mill, carrying away paper, stock, moulds, and almost every thing in the lower part of the building. Almost every mill and dam on that stream is more or less injured.—Four bridges on that river between this city and West Hartford, are also carried off.

Three bridges on Willimantic river, are carried off; also a fulling mill of Mr. Wright in Coventry, and five bridges on Skunkamug river.

New York, Feb. 9.

Curracoa Tabra.—Captain M'Cullen who arrived last night in 23 days from the city of St. Domingo, informs, that the pilot-boat schooner Fair Play, formerly of New York, had a few days previous to his departure, failed for Curracoa, but returned in 3 days, with information, that that place was actually in possession of the British.—N. Y. G.

From the Halifax Royal Gazette of January 13.

The brig Adventure, Capt. Hill, has just arrived from Nevis, after a passage of 30 days. Capt. Hill brought no papers, but confirms the news of the arrival of 15,000 troops at Barbadoes, and the arrival of a packet from England, with the intelligence of the defeat of the French army by the Prussians and Russians. Capt. H. further states, that about 100 sail of vessels of war and transports, with troops on board had assembled at Dominica, and were hourly expected to go against Martinique.

Defeat of the French.

A report was received at London, December 28, viz. Elbing, that an action had taken place between the Russians and French near Posen, in which the latter were defeated with great slaughter. The Russian army was said to consist of 140,000 men—the French of 60,000.

On the 2d December, Mr. Schultz arrived in London with a confirmation of this intelligence. He left Edinburgh on the 15th of Nov. when the report was current there and generally believed.

A Russian courier who arrived at Gottenburgh on the 30th Nov. in ten days from St. Petersburgh, reported, that in passing through Stockholm, he was told that there had been an action between the French and Russians, in which the latter were completely victorious, but could not learn the particulars.

A further corroboration of this intelligence has been received at New-York from Trinidad, and from Martinique, where it is said to have arrived by express. The loss of the French is stated to have been in three different battles, 60,000 men, killed and taken.

There are several additional circumstances which gave a color of probability to this report.

Last night we received the following interesting news from New Orleans, by the brig Neptune:

That on the 6th ult. General Wilkinson received a letter from Burr, who was at Natchez, requesting to know if the General would suffer him to pass New-Orleans. The General put his determination to oppose Burr's passage on the coffee-house books, and at the same time requested the merchants to order their vessels down to Pruckamin, to prevent Burr from using them to aid his plans. The General's note on the coffee-house books threw the city into confusion.

The force which Burr had with him, was not accurately known—but it was said his advanced guard under Adair, consisted of 200 cavalry, and Burr was at the head of 600 troops, all arrived at Natchez.

All the gun-boats, two ketches, and the schooner Revenge, had sailed up the river under the command of Commodore Shaw.

The militia and volunteers were all put under arms the 6th ult. and were on duty when the Neptune sailed.

Mr. Ogden was in confinement at Fort St. Philip. Alexander had been sent of to Washington. Edward Livingston was at large—he was believed to be innocent.

Lieutenant Small, of the U. S. army and a Mr. Henderson, who had lately resigned his commission in the army, had been arrested as participators in Burr's conspiracy.—N. Y. Gaz. Feb. 3.

From the Baltimore Federal Gazette.

To the politeness of a gentleman, just arrived from St. Thomas, we are indebted for the latest intelligence from the Republic of Hayti. The papers furnished, contain an account of operations down to the 19th of December, inclusive—on which day the Republican Constitution was adopted. This constitution, and the spirited address, prefixed, shall be presented to the readers of the Gazette without further loss of time than is necessary for a correct translation. We have only time this evening to furnish the following.

On the 5th December, 1806, Gen. Christophe appeared on the heights of Port au-Prince, with an army of about 10,000 men, to complete the body of people assembled together, to frame a constitution, to appoint him Emperor of Hayti. On his arrival there, he sent in a flag of truce, and desired to have a conference with General Pichon, commander at Port-au Prince, who went out to meet him with what soldiers he had; and instead of a conference, as soon as Pichon came within gun shot of him, his men were fired on by Christophe; when a short engagement ensued, in which there were some officers and men killed on both sides. Pichon got in Port-au-Prince, and kept Christophe from committing any material depredations on the town: As his army was but few in number, he thought it most advisable to act only on the defensive; and next morning Christophe, after having driven his troops out of town at the end of which they had entered it.

Dispatches were immediately sent by Pichon to all parts of the country, where they had dominions, for troops, arms, ammunition and provisions, and on the day following, there was not a man to be found, or scarce a man that could bear arms, in the town of Jacmel—all had repaired to Port-au-Prince, to join Pichon's army, carrying with them provisions and ammunition for the occasion. Several skirmishes took place in the course of eight or ten days—during which time, Christophe's army was within two or three miles of Port-au-Prince, and had several times entered it, but was as often repulsed.

On the 10th of January, news was received at Jacmel, that Christophe had been defeated, and that the greater part of his soldiers revolted and joined the other side, that he had fled for his life; that Pichon's army were in pursuit of him, and no doubt prevailed, but they would overtake him—in which case, death would inevitably be his lot, as they were determined to behead him and establish a federal or republican government.

On the night of the 10th January, Jacmel was illuminated on the occasion.

From our correspondent at Baltimore we have received the new constitution of Hayti, including the report made to the constituent assembly on the 27th Dec. By this constitution, the government is divided into a popular branch, to be called the Constituent Assembly. The executive is to have the modest title of President; is to have the command of the army, and the power of nominating the officers of justice. He is chosen for four years. The report says...." It is by the division of power that the Americans have become numerous and flourishing, in such rapid progression, that the annals of no nation on earth can offer a similar example."

It is stated that a young Lady, the daughter of a noble Lord, was united in wedlock to a gardener a few days since. The bride was at a seminary for young ladies, in the New-road, Marylebone, and in taking her daily walks, she used to pass the nursery in which the gardener pursued his daily labour. She became enamoured of his person; a match was speedily formed, and they are now man and wife. The young Lady is considerably under age.

[Cross readings are generally labored and unsuccessful attempts at wit; but some of the following are of a superior cast. Edit. Bal.]

From the Emerald.

Thirty pipes cognac brandy—for four or five gentlemen of the court.

Many articles of foreign intelligence were unfortunately consumed by the fire.

Upland cotton—for the young ladies' academy.

Lost, supposed to be Stolen—five miles of the Newburyport Turnpike.

The senate yesterday by yeas and nays—took 3 few boxes of Hamilton's worm destroying lozenges.

An act to suspend the operation of any quantity of distilled spirits.

Several ladies of distinguished fashion—will be sold by public auction to the highest bidder.

Taken by execution—the new representatives to congress.

A wet nurse wanted—for the benefit of Harvard college.

The southern mail establishment—has been indicted for disorderly conduct.

The theatre during the season—has lost its main-stays and been in very leaky condition.

The third subscription assembly—contained many articles of no value, except to the owner.

A man was lately detected in—preaching to a large congregation.

THE GRATEFUL JEW.

A considerable Polish family, by some broils which had brought that country to the brink of ruin, had been plunged from rank and affluence into obscurity and wretchedness. An only only son was left, whom necessity had compelled to enter the service of a Polish nobleman, and change his name. As the latter was taking an airing about the country, his good fortune led him to a cabaret, or small inn, kept, as all those houses of accommodation are by a jew. The good Israelite having surveyed the youth with attention, civilly craved his name, which the other told him freely. But, said the host, though you go by that name, it is not your real one. Be sincere with me; I can trace in your face, features which I am forever bound to revere. If I mistake not, you are the son of the late worthy, but unfortunate prince Wornicelli. I own it, said the youth, but unable to support the title with its becoming splendor, I thought it prudent to conceal my birth. Heaven, I thank thee for the favor, exclaimed the Jew, now I have it in my power to requite on the son, part of my obligations to his parents. Yes, Sir, to your noble family I owe my existence. I long subsisted on their benevolence; Providence has blessed my endeavours, and I have in a few years amassed a considerable fortune, which it is my duty to divide with the representatives of my benefactor. To morrow your excellency shall be placed in a proper sphere. A state of servitude becomes you not; I should be a slave myself had I no other means left to release you from bondage.

The next morning a coach and six, with a suitable number of servants were provided, and having received from the grateful Israelite, a purse of 1000 ducats, the prince set of for Warsaw, where having made himself known, he in a few days was honored by the king with the badge of the first order of knighthood. The prince returned to the friendly Jew, who could not refrain from shedding those tears which are the bright effusions of sensibility.

—He had during the prince's absence, negociated a marriage between his excellency and a rich German heiress, which was consummated a few weeks afterwards, when her parents paid down 1,000,000 florins, with a promise of as much again on the birth of the first son. It would be a difficult matter to match such an instance of gratitude. "Go then, Corsithan, and do thou likewise."

Berlin, Nov. 8.

The Bavarian and Wirtemberg troops are drawing through Saxony to the Oder, and will form the corps of Prince Jerome.

South Prussia, Nov. 5.

The inhabitants of Kalitsch have disarmed the Prussian garrison in that place; and the Prince of Domoski has been received with acclamations in the ci devant Polish cities; and the Poles look forward with joy for the re-establishment of their kingdom, and the days of Casimer, and Sobiski.

London, December 4.

Bonaparte has ordered the Dutch troops to withdraw from Holstein (which Denmark, at the late dissolution of the German Empire claimed as hers) and threatens, if a single trigger be drawn against a French soldier, he will give up Altona to be pillaged.

Prince Jerome has been offered by his brother, in marriage, to a Princess of Saxony, but the Elector has refused his assent. The treaty lately on the tapis between Jerome and a Princess of Wirtemburg, is broken off.

A village in Saxony having refused a requisition of one of Bonaparte's officers, has been burnt to the ground.

We learn from Spain, that great armaments were making in that kingdom, and that 150,000 men were to be raised. This is doubtless one of the ramifications of Bonaparte's vast plan.

December 6.

The General Election is very nearly completed.—When the great number of members chosen, is contemplated, the contested elections will be found few. The friends of the Grenville interest have generally been successful:—And the strength of the Foxites appears to decline rapidly. Sir Samuel Hood, and Mr. Sheridan have been elected for Westminster; but the election of the latter will be contested in favour of Mr. Paul. Gen. Tarleton has lost his election for Liverpool; Mr. Tierney, for Southwark; and Sir Francis Burdett, for Middlesex.

The whole of our bodily perfections may be summoned up in two words, strength and beauty. As for the first, that is a poor qualification to boast of, in which we are, to say the least, equalled by the plodding ox, and stupid ass. Beside, it is but a few days sickness, or the loss of a little blood, and a Hercules becomes as manageable as a little child. Who then would boast of what is so very uncertain and precarious? As to beauty, that fatal ornament of the fair sex, which has exhausted the human wit in raptures to its praise, which so often proves the misfortune of its possessor, and the disquietude of him who gives himself to the admiration of it; which has ruined cities, armies, and the virtue of thousands; what is beauty? A pleasing glare of white and red, reflected from a skin incomparably exceeded by the glossy hue of the humble daisy in yonder field; the mild glitter of an eye, outshone by every dew drop on the verdant grass. It is inherent in the human frame? No: A fudden fright alarms her; a fit of sickness attacks her; the roses fly from her cheeks; her eyes lose their fire; the looks haggard, pale, and ghastly. Even in all the blooming pride of beauty, what is the heaven frame? A mass of corruption, filth and disease, covered over with a fair skin. When the animating spirit flies, and leaves the lovely tabernacle behind, how soon does horror succeed to admiration! How do we loathe to look from our sight the loathsome remains of beauty! Open the charnel house in which, a very little while ago, the celebrated toast was laid, who can move himself to look on that face, bewitched, ghastly, and loathsome, so lately the delight of every youthful gazer? Who could now touch her with one finger? her, whole very sleeps the enamoured youth would late have bribed! Can the lover himself go near without stopping his nose at her who used to breathe in his esteem all the perfumes of blooming Spring.

☞ ALL those Persons residing in the Country, who may in any wise be indebted to the Printer hereof for six months and upwards, are hereby informed that they will shortly be waited upon with their respective Accompts, when it is hoped they will be prepared for settlement.

FRANCIS GORE Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the inſertion of their Names on the U. E. Liſt, or have been ſuſpended from the ſame, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be beſtowed by His Majeſty on that meritorious claſs of ſubjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other perſons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were alſo reſident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have ſince died without having their Names inſerted on that Liſt, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwiſe would have derived from His Majeſty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, as aforeſaid, ſolicitous to promote the welfare, and happineſs, of His Majeſty's Subjects of every deſcription in this Province, more eſpecially of thoſe who have ſo ſtrongly manifeſted their attachment, and Loyalty to His Majeſty; and alſo ſolicitous that the Children of ſuch perſons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers; Do, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the Treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province, on, or before the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period, or may have been ſuſpended from the U. E. Liſt, may, upon application being made, and proof produced thereof, to the ſatisfaction of the Executive Government, be now inſerted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and conſent, further notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons as are now deceaſed, who in their life time were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, and who were alſo reſident in this Province, on, or, before the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be alſo inſerted in that Liſt, to the end that the Children of ſuch Loyal and faithful Subjects may be made partakers of His Majeſty's Bounty to its fulleſt extent.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31ſt day of October, in the 47th year of His Majeſty's Reign and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand eight hundred and ſix.

FRANCIS GORE. Lieut. Gov'r.

By His Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

A very affecting Anecdote.

An inhabitant of a village in the circle of Suabia was reduced to the moſt extreme poverty. For ſome days his family had ſubſiſted only on a little oat meal! and this being exhauſted, their miſery was extreme. A baker, to whom the father owed nine crowns, refuſed, with unrelenting cruelty, to ſupply them with any more bread, till this ſum was paid.

The cries of his wretched babes, almoſt expiring for want, and the tears of an affectionate wife, pierced him with unutterable anguiſh. "Dearеſt huſband," ſaid the diſtracted mother, "ſhall we ſuffer theſe miſerable infants to periſh? Have we given them birth, only to behold them die of hunger? See theſe poor victims, the fruits of our love! Behold their cheeks already covered with the palenels of death! For me I expire with grief and miſery. Alas! could I but preſerve their lives at the expence of my own! Run—fly to the next town,—ſpeak our diſtreſſes—let not a falſe ſhame conceal them!—Every moment you loſe, is a dagger to your dying family. Perhaps Heaven may yet be touched by our miſeries. You may find ſome good hearted perſons, who may yet relieve us."

The unhappy father, covered with rags, and more reſembling a ſpectre than a man, haſtened to the town. He entreated, he ſolicited, he deſcribed his wretched ſituation, with that affecting eloquence which the bitterneſs of anguiſh muſt inſpire. In vain he implored compaſſion. Not one would hear him. No one would aſſiſt him. Rendered deſperate by ſuch unexpected cruelty, he entered into a wood, determined to attack the firſt paſſenger. Dire neceſſity now appeared a law and an opportunity ſoon occurred. A pedlar paſſing by, he ſtopped him. He made not the leaſt reſiſtance, but gave up his purſe, containing twenty crowns.

No ſooner had the unfortunate man committed this robbery, than he felt the horrors of remorſe, and, returning to the pedlar, threw himſelf, all in tears, at his feet. "Take back your money," ſaid he;—"I believe how much "it has coſt me, before I could be reſolved to commit this crime. My "heart has been unuſal to guilt. "Come, I beſeech you, to my cottage. "You will there ſee the only motives "that could lead me to this action, and "when you view the deplorable con"dition of my family, you will for"give,—you will pity me,—you will "be my benefactor, my preſerver."

The poor honeſt pedlar raiſed the unfortunate man, and comforted him. Unable to withſtand his ſolicitations, or rather, yielding to the feelings of his own compaſſionate heart, he heſitated not to follow the peaſant. But what emotions did he enter the curious habitation! How moving every object! The children almoſt naked, lying on ſtraw, dying with hunger,—and the mother, a picture of the deepeſt diſtreſs.

The peaſant relates the adventure to his wife. "You know," he ſaid, "with "what eagerneſs I went to the town, "in the hope of finding ſome relief. "But ah! I met only hard hearts, peo"ple buſied in amaſſing riches, or in "diſſipating what they already have, "in luxury and idle expences. Re"fuſed by all—deſperate—furious—I "went into a neighbouring wood:—"Can you believe it?—I have dared "to lay violent hands on this good "man;—I have dared—Oh! I can "not tell you."

"Pity my poor babes," exclaimed the diſtracted mother looking with moving eagerneſs at the pedlar: "con"ſider our miſerable ſituation. Alas! "poverty hath not altered our ſenti"ments. In all our miſery we have "yet preſerved our honeſty. I be-

" feech your mercy for my husband ;
" —I implore your compaſſion for
" theſe wretched infants."

The good pedlar, melted by this melancholy ſcene, mingled his tears with thoſe of theſe poor people. " I " am your friend," ſaid he. " Take " theſe twenty crowns,—I inſiſt upon " it. Why is not my ability equal to " my good wiſhes for you? I grieve " that I cannot ſecure you a happi- " er lot for the future."—What !" anſwered the peaſant, " inſtead of treat- " ing me as your enemy, are you ſo " good as to be my protector?- Would " you be my preſerver ?—Alas ! my " crime renders me unworthy of this " goodneſs. No ; if I die with hun- " ger, I will not take this money."— The pedlar inſiſting ſtill, compels him to take it. The whole family kiſs the benevolent hand which had thus preſerved them from death. Tears on y on every face can ſpeak their grateful hearts, and the pedlar retires with that ſweet delight which benevolent minds alone can taſte.

Oh ye ! on whom fortune ſmiles, the gay, the proud, the affluent, the avaricious ! after this example of benolence in a poor pedlar, can your hearts be ever inacceſſible to pity ? Can you henceforth behold, unmoved, the ſufferings of your fellow-creatures ! Fortune is inconſtant. E joy her preſent favours ; but forget not this important truth,—that your ſuperfluities,at leaſt, are the patrimony of the poor.

Anecdote of the late King of Pruſſia.

His Majeſty ever anxious to keep good order among his troops, uſed frequently to diſ[illegible] himſelf, and viſit their nightly ha[illegible] to ſee their behaviour in their jolly hours : in one of theſe rambles [illegible] happened to come in the company o[illegible] huſſars, and ſeeing one of them buſily employed in ſhaping a bit of wood like a ſword, he aſked him what uſe that was for, the Huſſar anſwered him, that as he ſeemed to be a hearty fellow, (the King having treated them) he would tell him—but begged him to keep it a ſecret ; he then told the King that he had left the blade of his ſword in pledge for an ale-houſe ſcore, and the bit of wood he was cutting would ſerve inſtead of the ſteel blade, after he had painted and faſtened the hilt to it till he could raiſe the money to redeem it ; the King promiſed he would not reveal it, and after taking particular notice of the man, left them. The next day the King ordered his troops to be reviewed, and going down the ranks he obſerved the Huſſar : he then ordered the Provoſt to bring up a deſerter ; the man was brought, the King told him, that in order to ſtrike an example in the reſt of the ſoldiers, he would punith him with death, and that he ſhould prepare to meet his fate inſtantly ; he then ordered the Huſſar to be his executioner,by cutting off his head; the Huſſar begged his Majeſty to permit him to join in prayers with the criminal, which the King granted—he then knelt, and lifting up his hands, and turning his eyes up to heaven, he ſaid with ſeeming fervency, " Father of Mercies, behold a poor wretch commanded by his Sovereign to kill his fellow creature : grant I beſeech thee, when I lift up my hand to do the deed, that my ſword may be turned to wood, to ſave me from being a murderer,"— and drawing it with great reſolution, he aimed a blow at the ſoldier's neck, and to the great aſtoniſhment of moſt preſent, it was a wooden one. The King then pardoned the Soldier, told the Huſſar he was a clever fellow, and promoted him to the rank of an officer.

GEORGE III.

His Majeſty riſes every morning at ſix, breakfaſts at ſeven, and at eight attends divine ſervice in what is called the Private Chapel, in Windſor Caſtle, to which however, every perſon has access. On returning he reads diſpatches, and dictates anſwers, or ſees perſons upon buſineſs. He then rides out uſually with part of his family, and if there be time afterwards, plays a little at cheſs, eſpecially if General Fitzroy is in attendance.

At one the King's dinner is always ſerved. In the ſummer, this ſometimes conſiſts merely, for ſeveral days together, of fiſh, a cold ſurloin of beef, or neck of mutton, with a f[illegible]d and a pudding. In winter, a boiled leg of mutton with turnips, is often the chief diſh. The King eats heartily, drinks one or two glaſſes of wine, but no malt liquor. At three his M j ſty goes to the Queen's dreſſing, and it is here alone, that he takes any higher luxuries than his ſubjects, the fruit being always in great variety and perfection. After coffee with the Queen, the King ſometimes plays again at cheſs, with Gen. Fitzroy, but he uſually paſſes the whole of the evening with his family, and between nine and ten he retires to reſt.

MELANCHOLY CATASTROPHE.

On Thurſday her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, accompanied by Lady Sheffield and Miſs Cholmondeley, left Blackheath about two o'clock, on a viſit to Mr. Locke, at Norbury Park, near Leatherhead, with the intention of returning to dinner. The poſtillions drove with unuſual ſpeed, and the horſes were going at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, when, on turning a ſharp corner at the entrance of the town of Leatherhead, the carriage was overturned, and the affoilance of the town was called by the moſt alarming ſhrieks. Her Royal Highneſs, was taken out, her face was much cut, and ſhe was otherwiſe much bruiſed, but no bones appeared to be broken ; and ſhe was enabled, with much difficulty, to walk to the King's Head, Inn, near to which the accident happened. Lady Sheffied was much alarmed, but eſcaped unhurt. Miſs Cholmondeley, however, we are ſorry to ſtate, from a violent contuſion on the head, was taken up without the leaſt ſign of remaining life, and was carried to the King's head Inn.

Sir Lucas Pepys, who lives in the neighbourhood, was immediately ſent for, He pronounced her Royal Highneſs's misfortune ſuch as not to endanger her life ; no bones were broken or diſlocated—but Miſs Cholmondeley was dead ! A violent blow on her head, had occaſioned a copious diſcharge of blood from her noſtrils, her mouth and her eyes—and ſhe now remains a lifeleſs corpſe at Leatherhead.

This dreadful miſfortune took place between three and four o'clock in the afternoon. Her Royal Highneſs and Lady Sheffield, afterwards proceeded to Norbury Park, where they remained a few hours.

When recovered a little from their exceſſive terror, they returned in an agony of grief to Blackheath. We are happy to ſtate that they were both better on Friday ; and that no apprehenſion was entertained that either of them had received any material injury. The Princeſs is, however, much bruiſed. An expreſs was immediately ſent to Lady Willoughey, to apprife her of the melancholy accident, and her ladyſhip inſtantly communicated the diſmal tidings to Earl Percy, at Northumberland Houſe, through whom moſt of her other relatives and friends were made acquainted with the ſad ſtory.

Miſs Cholmondeley was daughter of the late Hon. and Reverend Robert Cholmondely, Rector of Hartford, Bury, and St. Andrew's Hertford, who was the ſon of the third Earl of Cholmondely, and under the preſent Earl Mis. Cholmondely, this lamented Lady's venerable parent, is living, and reſides at her houſe in Jermyn-ſtreet. From her very advanced age, and precarious ſtate of health, the moſt alarming conſequences are expected when ſhe learns the fatal accident.—Lady Bellingham, wife to Sir William Bellingham, Bart. of Caſtle Bellingham, Ireland, is now her only ſurviving daughter. Miſs Cholmondeley was about 42 years of age of moſt refined and elegant manners, and beloved by all who had the honour of her acquaintance.

Thurſday in the Court of Chancery counſel were heard on a Bill filed by Lord Viſcount Courtenay againſt Mr. Godfall, coach maker, in Long-acre, and againſt the Sheriff of Devonſhire, praying that the Sheriff may be reſtrained from ſelling the effects of his Lordſhip under a fieri facias iſſued by Mr. Godfall, and that the demand and accounts of the latter might previouſly be examined by a Maſter.—It was ſtated that Lord Courtenay had employed Mr. Godfall as his coach maker from 1789 to 1793, in which time Mr. G's bill amounted to 11,147l. and in one year exceeded 5000l. No leſs than 1683l. had been charged for one landau, and 1263l. for one coach ; 170 gs. for a hammer cloth, and 265l. for a ſet of harneſs. Theſe extraordinary charges, and the accounts never having been adjuſted, his Lordſhip's counſel contended, furniſhed ſufficient grounds for the injunction.—On the other hand, Mr. Godfall's counſel argued, that the amount of the charges furniſhed no ground for the application ; the carriages were lined with real gold and ſilver lace, had coronets of ſolid ſilver round the tops the embl[illegible]zonings were painted by the moſt eminent artiſts, with mottos even on the ſpokes of the wheels, and were every way furniſhed in the moſt ſumptuous and coſtly manner : that his Lordſhip had confirmed the fairneſs of the demand, by paying part of the money, and by giving ſecurity for the remainder ; and further by returning to employ Mr. Godfall in 1798. after he had quitted him for five years ; in reply to which, Lord C's counſel ſaid, his Lordſhip did not return as a volunteer, but from the apprehenſion of Mr. Godfall's taking out an execution againſt him. On which the Lord Chancellor remarked, that in this caſe his Lordſhip was a volunteer who had not a right to refign. The Chancellor added, he would give his opinion on the caſe ſome other day ; which he did, by refuſing the injunction.

VENETIAN STORY.

In the neighbourhood of St. Mark's in Venice, there reſided a paſtry cook, who became very rich in conſequence of ſelling ſmall meat pies, the flavor and reſt of which were uncommonly gratifying ; they were ſought for ſo eagerly through the republic that the man could not find materials to make a number adequate to the general demand. Various were the conjectures as to the contents of thoſe pies ; ſome thought they were veal, ſome ortolans ; & others imagined they might be a mixture of both ; every baker endeavored to make ſimilar luxuries, but all failed. During this man's culinary fame, it was obſerved, that many children had been loſt in the city, it was a matter at laſt of public conſternation ; the police did all they could to diſcover their retreat, but in vain, and the ſtreets were crowded with bewailing mothers.

At laſt it pleaſed Heaven to unravel the myſterious evil. One of theſe pies being opened at the table of a ſenator, the joint of a child's finger was found amongſt the paſtry. The diſcovery created a common horror ; and the ide inſtantly occurred, that the baker was the monſter who had entrapped and deſtroyed the miſſing infants ; a party of ſoldiers were immediately ordered to examine the premiſes, when after a long ſearch by torch light, they could find no other proof to juſtify the preſumed guilt, and were on the eve of departure ; when ſuddenly one of their party diſappeared, and they could not find where, until they ſeized the baker by the throat, and threatened him with inſtant death if he did not ſhew them where their companion was enveloped. The wretch complied, and led to a ſliding trap door ; which covered a deep and gloomy vault, on which he had heedleſsly ſtepped, and been ſwallowed up ; they deſcended by means of a bucket, and found the ſoldier, ſtretched upon the bodies of various dead children, recently maſſacred.

Immediately upon the unerring teſtimony of the diaboliſm, ſavageneſs, and enormity of the cook and his family, the ſenator ordered the doors and windows of the houſe to be chained and barred, and ſurrounded with the army ; who joyfully ſet fire to the building, which, with all in it, was conſumed to the ground, and an obeliſk raiſed upon the aſhes, ſignificant of the atrocity and the conflagration.

EPIGRAM.

At a tavern one night,
Meſſrs. More, Strange & Wright,
Met to drink, and good thoughts to exchange :
Says More, " Of us three,
The whole town will agree,
There is only one knave and that's Strange."
" Yes," ſaid Strange, (rather ſore)
" I am ſure there's one More.
A moſt terrible knave and a bite ;
Who cheated his mother,
His ſiſter and brother——;"
" O yes," replied More, " that is Wright."

FRIENDSHIP.

A friend ſhould always like a friend indire,
Speak as he thinks, and as he thinks ſhould write ;
Searching for faults, as he would beauties find,
To friendſhip true, but not to jaſtice blind.

A generous friendſhip no cold medium knows,
Burns with one love, with one reſentment glows ;
One ſhould our intereſt—one our paſſions be,
My friend ſhould fight the man that injures me.

TO THE GENIUS OF ODOURS;

BY SOCARES.

Tranſlated by SIR WILLIAM JONES.

What murky grove can now confine
Thy burniſhed traffic's ſilver twine,
While breathing beauty fills the vale,
And Mirra's ſkies greet the gale ;
Soft pow'r of ſweetneſs ! the ſhall rear
Forth ſpaces from thy hanging hair ;
Her ruby lip the odour breathes
Of Lara's choiceſt Caſſia wreaths.
Soft pow'r of ſweetneſs ! hither blow,
Mix with my goblets purple glow,
So ſhall the liquid bounties beat
Of Rafah's comb a Lover's treat ;
They ſtrained hands the garland bind,
To deck Somara's ſilken wind,
Which dares to reſt on Mirra's cheek,
When ſoft ſhe ſinging bluſhes break.
But do not touch thoſe piercing eyes,
Whence unrelenting lightning flies,
For ah ! ſwift ſhade death's dart before ſlies
The Bird of Araby expires ;
Amidſt thoſe flames again revives,
And, ſo ! a new-born Phœnix lives,
To ſeek thy bleſt falubrious Throne
And paſs a rapt'rous age alone.
Soft pow'r of ſweetneſs ! Mirra's breaſt
Shall bring thy balmy pinions reſt ;
Not always ſhall it ſhut'ring go,
But ſtop where love's young ſilver blow.
Viola re- ſtore— O ! quit reſtraint,
In life's delicious Eden faint,
While Alacy fans the gales employ,
And odours heighten Nature's joy.
Bleſs to the wild unconquer'd hands,
Who dwell on Arab's deſert ſands !
Who nobly feize, in gallant train,
Baſſora's merchants on the plain ;
May loaded Camels ſwell their ſtore,
And ſparkling gems, and valued ore !
For wealth Bocarra ne'er ſhall covet,
The plunder that he ſeeks—it lives.
Fair Selma walks the cifron brake,
When tuneful nightingales awake ;
She moves a note in all its change,
To win the warblers to her arms ;
They come amidſt her locks to hide,
Or ſeek her beauty's ſecreteſt pride ;
They talk her fragrant breath which pours
An amb'ry fountain's liquid ſtores.
Rich Ethiop myrrh Taloua bears,
And fondly ſeeks the roving airs,
Which bow in homage to the beam
That yonder violet-ſtuffed dream
Steals from the Moon, as ſlow ſhe glides
Her pearly bark acroſs the tides,
Which fill the blue expanſe of Heaven,
In many a ſhining current driven.
Velaya's ſmiles are all deceits,
And Sejma ſhews ſentious heat,
But Mirra is thy full-veiled bride,
Sultana Sear ! and ſlow'r's pride !
Where'er ſhe comes the grove to tread,
The bluſhing Loria lifts its head,
The Mabo's gawdy leaves unfold,
And fragrant Ancoa drops its gold.
Soft pow'r of ſweetneſs ! tell my fair,
The fierce conflaming flame I bear
Euphrates' waves could ne'er controul,
With all its full impetuous roll.
Faithful in love is ſtill my boaſt,
To love, of hoodwinked the moſt,
My wife a Houri's kiſs to try,
I live but on the hope to die.

FRANCIS GORE Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the inſertion of their Names on the U. E. Liſt, or have been ſuſpended from the ſame, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be beſtowed by His Majeſty on that meritorious claſs of ſubjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other perſons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were alſo reſident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have ſince died without having their Names inſerted on that Liſt, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwiſe would have derived from His Majeſty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, as aforeſaid, ſolicitous to promote the welfare, and happineſs, of His Majeſty's Subjects of every deſcription in this Province, more eſpecially of thoſe who have ſo ſtrongly manifeſted their attachment, and Loyalty to His Majeſty; and alſo ſolicitous that the Children of ſuch perſons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers; Do, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the Treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province, on, or before the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period, or may have been ſuſpended from the U. E. Liſt, may, upon application being made, and proof produced thereof, to the ſatisfaction of the Executive Government, be now inſerted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and conſent, further notify and declare, that the Names of ſuch perſons as are now deceaſed, who in their life time were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. Liſt, and who were alſo reſident in this Province, on, or, before, the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be alſo inſerted in that Liſt, to the end that the Children of ſuch Loyal and faithful Subjects may be made partakers of His Majeſty's Bounty to its fulleſt extent.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31ſt day of October, in the 47th year of His Majeſty's Reign and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand eight hundred and ſix.

FRANCIS GORE, Lieut. Gov't.

By His Excellency's Command,
WM. JARVIS, Sec'y.

Lateſt Intelligence.

New York, February 9.

The brig Emmeline, Capt. Stowell, arrived at Sandy-Hook on Saturday, in the remarkably ſhort paſſage of 32 days from Bordeaux. Captain Stowell ſent up his newspapers, ſhipping liſt, &c. by the pilot-boat Patriot; and the editor of the Mercantile Advertiſer has the pleaſure of laying before his readers, Paris dates to the 27th of December, London news to the 18th of that month and intelligence from the Grand Army to the 15th, incluſive.

The only intereſting information we have received is contained in the 39th Bulletin. We have tranſlated that and the 40th. The head-quarters of the French Grand Army on the 15th, were at Poſen. No action had taken place between them and the Pruſſians or Ruſſians, from the time Bonaparte entered Berlin. The French took poſſeſſion, without any oppoſition, of all the fortified places between Berlin and Poſen.

The Ruſſians and French had not come into contact. The former had declared war againſt the Ottoman Porte, and had left the King of Pruſſia to his fate. Our laſt accounts repreſent him to be at Koningsberg, verging rapidly towards the ſituation to which the French Emperor willed to reduce him.

LONDON, December 15.

On Saturday the following rear admirals of the red, were promoted to the rank of of vice-admirals of the blue: James Kempthorne, Eſqr. Sampſon Edwards, Eſq. George Campbell, Eſq. Henry Frankland, Eſq. Arthur Philip, Eſq. Sir G. W. Fairfax, Knt. Sir James Saumarez.

Sir James Saumarez is to hoiſt his flag in the Channel Fleet, under Lord St. Vincent, in the room of Sir Charles Cotton, who, it is ſaid, is to ſucceed Sir Erafmus Gower in the command at Newfoundland. We have not heard who is to ſucceed Sir James Saumarez in his command at Guernſey and Jerſey.

The King's Speech was finally ſettled and read to his Majeſty by Lord Grenville, on Wednesday laſt.

Houſe of Lords, Monday Dec. 16.

The Lord Chancellor informed the Lords aſſembled, that it was not in his Majeſty's power, for ſeveral reaſons, to be preſent at the meeting of Parliament, but that his Majeſty would, on a convenient day, ſtate his reaſons to Parliament for calling them together at this time.

Eight thouſand men, all picked ſoldiers, are expected to proceed in three detachments on Thurſday, Friday and Saturday next, to Paddington, in the vicinity of London, to be conveyed by the canal to Liverpool. The paſſage will take about eight days, after which they will be ſent with all expedition to Dublin.

17th. Five of the largeſt tranſports in Gen. Crawford's expedition, have been driven into Illracomb, and 1000 of the men have been marched to Barnſtable.

In conſequence of a new regulation in the Alien Department, brought forward by Earl Spencer, all ſtrangers before they embark for Great-Britain, muſt obtain a paſſport from the Britiſh Reſident in the country from which they are about to depart, and this document, on their arrival, muſt be countierſigned by the Miniſter from that country reſiding there. In caſes of neglect, of which due notice is immediately to be given to the Secretary of State for the foreign Department, thoſe who have not ſuch a teſtimonial to produce will be conſidered as objects of ſuſpicion, and will, of courſe, not be permitted to continue in the country.

The Dunlap, Rosindale, which arrived at Hull on Friday afternoon, left the Sound on Tuesday fe'nnight. The English ships at Dunkirk have all got out, ready to put to sea, in case the French reached that place. It is said they were in poss-ssion both of it and Tharn. At St. Petersburgh the Exchange with this country had fallen very greatly.

December, 19.

At four o'clock the Lord Chancellor the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lords Winchelsea and Spencer, took their seats in their robes, as his Majesty's Commissioners, and the Commons attending at the bar, the Lord Chancellor delivered, in his Majesty's name, the following Speech to both houses of Parliament:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"His Majesty has commanded us to assure you, that in the difficult and arduous circumstances under which you are now assembled, it is a great satisfaction to him to recur to the firmness and wisdom of his Parliament, after so recent an opportunity of collecting the sense of his people.

"His Majesty has ordered the papers which have been exchanged in the course of the late negociations with France, to be laid before you. His Majesty has employed every effort for the restoration of general tranquility, on terms consistent with the interest and honor of his people, and with that inviolable good faith towards his allies, by which the conduct of this country has always been distinguished.

"The ambition and injustice of the the enemy disappointed these endeavors, and in the same moment kindled a fresh war in Europe, the progress of which has been attended with the most calamitous events.

"After witnessing the subversion of the ancient constitution of Germany, and the subjugation of a large proportion of its most considerable states, Prussia found herself still momentarily threatened by that danger, which she had vainly hoped to avert by so many sacrifices. She was therefore at length compelled to adopt the resolution of openly resisting this unremitted system of aggrandizement and conquest. But neither this determination, nor the succeeding measures, were previously concerted with his Majesty; nor had any disposition been shewn to offer any adequate satisfaction for those aggressions which had placed the two countries in a state of mutual hostility.

"Yet in this situation his Majesty did not hesitate to adopt, without delay, such measures as were best calculated to unite their counsels and interests against the common enemy. The rapid course of the calamities which ensued, opposed insurmountable difficulties to the execution of this purpose.

"In the midst of these disastrous events, and under the most trying circumstances, the good faith of his Majesty's allies has remained unshaken. The conduct of the King of Sweden has been distinguished by the most honorable firmness. Between his Majesty and the Emperor of Russia, the happiest union subsists; it has been cemented by reciprocal proofs of good faith and confidence; and his Majesty doubts not that you will participate in his anxiety to cultivate and confirm an alliance which affords the only remaining hope of safety for the continent of Europe.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"His Majesty looks with confidence to your assistance in those exertions which the honor and independence of our country demand. The necessity of adding to the Public Burthens will be painful to your feelings, and is deeply distressing to his Majesty. In considering the estimates for the various branches of the public service, you will best consult his Majesty's wishes, by combining all practicable economy with those efforts which it is necessary to make against the formidable and increasing power of the enemy.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"The long series of misfortune which has afflicted the Continent of Europe, could not fail to affect, in some degree, many important interests of this country. But, under successive difficulty, his Majesty has had the satisfaction of witnessing an increasing energy and firmness on the part of his people, whose uniform and determined resistance has been no less advantageous than honorable to themselves, and has exhibited the most striking example to the surrounding nations. The unconquerable valor and discipline of his Majesty's fleets and armies continue to be displayed with undiminished lustre. The great sources of our prosperity and strength are unimpaired; nor has the British nation been, at any time, more united in sentiment and action, or more determined to maintain inviolate the independence of the empire, and the dignity of the national character.

"With these advantages, and with an humble reliance on the protection of the Divine Providence, his Majesty is prepared to meet the exigencies of this great crisis; assured of receiving the fullest support from the wisdom of your deliberations, and from the tried affection, loyalty and public spirit of his brave people."

Elections in Great Britain.—The city of Edinburgh, has returned Sir Patrick Murry; the county of Edinburgh, hon. R. Dundas; county of Lanarkgow, Gen. Hope; the borough of Southwark, Sir Thomas Turton and Henry Thornton; Mr. Tierney is rejected. The city of London, the lord mayor, Messrs. Price, Combe and Curtis; the city of Westminster, it was reported, would return admiral Sir Samuel Hood and R. B. Sheridan, the first certainly. Liverpool returned General Gascoyne and Mr. Ricroe; and Rochester, Messrs. Calcraft and Barnett; from Cambrige, gen. Finch and gen. Manners; from the University, lord H. Petty and lord Easton; from Windsor, col. Desbrow and R. Ramsbottom; from Arundel, Sir Arthur Pigot and col. Wylde; from Queenborough, Sir Samuel Romilly and Mr. Franklyn; from Wilmington, W. L. Huges and S. Benyon; from Gloucester, Henry Howard and Robert Morris; from Canterbury, John Baker and James Simmons; from Northampton, hon. Spencer Perceval and hon. Edward Bouverie; from Coventry, W. Mills and P. Moore; from Leicester, Samuel Smith and Thomas Babbington; from Lewes, Thomas Kemp and Henry Shelly; from Amersham, Thomas Drake, Tyrwhitt Drake and Tho. Tyr. Drake: from Reading, C. S. Lefevre and John Simeon.

"General Smith has this way received positive information from Washington, that the treaty between this country and England has been signed. Mr. Munroe will be the bearer of the same, and may be very soon expected out.—The Indian trade is placed on the same footing that was under Mr. Jay's treaty, and to the West-Indies, on that of the most favoured nation. Importation of produce from enemies colonies will be allowed to export in another vessel, after the duties have been secured and the property stored for one month. What relates to the seamen, it seems is not included in the treaty, but agreed on in an appendix; I am inclined to believe that England will not refuse to a general blockade of the ports on the continent, now that they have come to a proper understanding with this country,——at least I should suppose our negociations would not have done, if they had not been pretty certain that our trade to Europe would be left unmolested."

191 vefsels, chiefly square rigged, measuring, per register, 33,474 tons, from parts beyond sea, entered at the custom house of Quebec last summer. Exclusive of these a great number of coasters are continually employed, between Quebec and the Bay of Chaleurs, Gaspe, Coast of Labrador, the King's and other ports, within the gulph and River of Saint Lawrence.

A number of vefsels, for years past, have been built at Quebec and Montreal. Three new ships, the Dunlop, Roberts and Mary, each upwards of 300 tons, with several others, of a less size, sailed from Quebec, last summer and fall, which are not included in the above statement. A number of others are now on the stocks.

Let those who, from ignorance, or for reasons best known to themselves, affect, in a new publication, to sneer at men of busiuefs, and hold them up as inimical to the true interests of the country, contemplate the increasing wealth and prosperity of this happy province, notwithstanding our late bad crops, and other discouragements, and ask, What source do these blessings flow from? The answer will be from Commerce. Which animated by the industry of Gentlemen Traders and Merchants, is the real prop of Canada and its Government.

"There are no more useful members of Society in any country than merchants. They knit mankind together in a mutual intercourse of good offices, distribute the gifts of nature, find work for the poor, augment the wealth of a nation, and increase the comforts and conveniencies of life. How superior is such a man, in the eye of reason and of heaven, to him of a thousand years who has received his hereditary poffeffions without a single effort of his own."

No. 6. An Act to establish public Schools in each and every District of this Province.

No. 7. An Act to repeal the several Acts now in force in this Province, relative to rates and assessments, and also to particularize the property, real and personal, which during the continuance thereof, shall be subject to rates and assessments, and fixing the several valuations at which each and every particular of such property shall be taxed and assessed.

No. 11. An Act to establish the Fees of the Clerks of the Peace, and to regulate the fees in the several Courts of Quarter Sessions, throughout this Province.

No. 12. An Act for the preservation of Salmon.

After which his Excellency was pleased to make the following Speech to both houses of Parliament:—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly;

In closing this Session of the Legislature, I must express the sense I entertain, of the attention with which you have executed the important trusts, committed to your care.

I have with particular approbation assented in his Majesty's name, to the Act, whereby Public Schools will now be established in the different Districts of this Province, fully sensible of the importance of such institutions, to the education and morals of the rising generation in this Infant Colony.

In the profecution of this laudable object, you may rely on my attention and care.

The Regulations which have been enacted for increasing the Public Revenues, will I trust, produce that Salutary end. And I here must express my satisfaction when considering the liberal manner in which the House of Assembly has conducted itself, respecting the Revenues of this Province, entertaining the pleasing hope, that its Revenues may soon be more adequate to its necessities, and that it will at no very distant period be enabled to relieve our parent State, from part of the burthen, which it has on our account so generously sustained.

The other Bills which I have assented to, with I trust promote the end of all Legislation—The Public Good.

I now put an end to this Session of the Legislature, confiding, that in the different parts of this widely extended Province, to which you respectively belong, good order in Society, obedience to the Laws, and Loyalty to the King, will effectually be promoted by your influence and example.

Lieutenant Governor's Office.

The Dunlap, Rosdale, which arrived at Hull on Friday afternoon, left the Sound on Tuesday se'nnight. At St. Petersburgh the Exchange with this country had fallen very greatly.

December, 19.

At four o'clock the Lord Chancellor the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lords Winchelsea and Spencer, took their seats in their robes, as his Majesty's Commissioners, and the Commons attending at the bar, the Lord Chancellor delivered, in his Majesty's name, the following Speech to both houses of Parliament:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"His Majesty has commanded us to assure you, that in the difficult and arduous circumstances under which you are now assembled, it is a great satisfaction to him to recur to the firmness and wisdom of his Parliament, after so recent an opportunity of collecting the sense of his people.

No. 12. An Act for the preſervation of Salmon.

After which his Excellency was pleaſed to make the following Speech to both houſes of Parliament:—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly;

In cloſing this Seſſion of the Legiſlature, I muſt expreſs the ſenſe I entertain, of the attention with which you have executed the important truſts, committed to your care.

I have with particular approbation aſſented in his Majeſty's name, to the Act, whereby Public Schools will now be eſtabliſhed in the different Diſtricts of this Province, fully ſenſible of the importance of ſuch inſtitutions, to the education and morals of the riſing generation in this Infant Colony.

In the proſecution of this laudable object, you may rely on my attention and care.

The Regulations which have been enacted for increaſing the Public Revenues, will I truſt, produce that Salutary end. And I here muſt expreſs my ſatisfaction when conſidering the liberal manner in which the Houſe of Aſſembly has conducted itſelf, reſpecting the Revenues of this Province, entertaining the pleaſing hope, that its Revenues may ſoon be more adequate to its neceſſities, and that it will at no very diſtant period be enabled to relieve our parent State, from part of the burthen, which it has on our account ſo generouſly ſuſtained.

The other Bills which I have aſſented to, will I truſt promote the end of all Legiſlation —The Public Good.

I now put an end to this Seſſion of the Legiſlature, confiding, that in the different parts of this widely extended Province, to which you reſpectively belong, good order in Society, obedience to the Laws, and Loyalty to the King, will effectually be promoted by your influence and example.

Lieutenant Governor's Office.

York, 13th March, 1807.

FRANCIS GORE Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers persons who were resident in the British Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of separation in the year 1783, and who have resided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reside therein since that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the insertion of their Names on the U. E. List, or have been suspended from the same, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be bestowed by His Majesty on that meritorious class of subjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other persons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were also resident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have since died without having their Names inserted on that List, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwise would have derived from His Majesty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, as aforesaid, solicitous to promote the welfare, and happiness, of His Majesty's Subjects of every description in this Province, more especially of those who have so strongly manifested their attachment, and Loyalty to His Majesty; and also solicitous that the Children of such persons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. List, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers; Do, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of such persons who were resident in the British Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the Treaty of separation in the year 1783, and who have resided in this Province, or, or before the 28th day of July, 1798, and have continued to reside therein since that period, or may have been suspended from the U. E. List, may, upon application being made, and proof produced thereof, to the satisfaction of the Executive Government, be now inserted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and consent, further notify and declare, that the Names of such persons as are now deceased, who in their life time were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. List, and who were also resident in this Province, on, or, before, the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be also inserted in that List, to the end that the Children of such Loyal and faithful Subjects may be made partakers of His Majesty's Bounty to its fullest extent.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31st day of October, in the 47th year of His Majesty's Reign and in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and six.

FRANCIS GORE, Lieut. Gov't.

Lateft Intelligence.

LONDON, Jan. 6.

Sir Hanford Jones has brought the latefl accounts to Government from the Ruffian head-quarters. He had a full opportunity of feeing them with his own eyes, and we have his authority to fay, that he never faw an army in a higher ftate of difcipline, or more eager to meet the enemy a l'arme blanche. The two columns of the Ruffians, under Generals Benningfen and Buxhoeden, amount to 150,000 men, which muft have joined by the 9th.

January 8.

The Mails from Denmark, bring news to the 30th ult. All accounts agree in this, that the French army are in a moft direful ftate by dyfentery and other infectious diforders, produced by the feverity of the weather and the want of proper food—nearly the whole of the army being difabled.

The Danes, apprehenfive of French attempts to violate their neutrality, and force them into meafures inconfiftent with their intereffs, are making preparations to vindicate their rights, and have equipped feveral fhips of the line for the protection of their coaft and trade.

Sleſwick, Dec. 30.

We learn that Napoleon arrived at Warfaw on the 19th inftant, where Prince Murat was confined to his bed. Skirmifhes daily take place between the Ruffian and French out pofts.

Five hofpitals have been erected at Warfaw, Kofciufko, who left Paris the 13th, was expected at Warfaw, to put himfelf at the head of the Polifh Confederation.

Gen. Benningfen with 73,000 men, retreated before the French to Narew, deftroyed all the provifions, and took with him all the Poles who were able to ferve in the army.

Tonningen, Dec. 30.

All accounts agree that the French army are much reduced by ficknefs and fcarcity. The Empreſs Joſephine and the Queen of Holland have fled from the contagion.

General Benningfen, with 80,000 men, is near Warfaw, baraffing the French, whofe mifery and diftreſs give them no ſtomach for fighting. In truth, we are aſſured, that the affairs of Napoleon are deſperate.

Preſburg, Dec. 30.

We learn that the Ruſſians, 50,000 ſtrong, are poſted at Moldavia and Wallachia, as friends and allies to the Sublime Porte; that they have advanced as far as Widden, and united with 40,000 Servians, commanded by Czerni George.

Accounts from Berlin of the 16th ſtate, that the hoſpitals there and at Magdeburg, are full of ſick and wounded French, who arrived nightly by waggons full. Contagious fevers and flux prevail to an alarming degree. The phyſicians are put in requiſition.

Denmark, Dec. 30.

Accounts from Berlin of the 28th ſay, that the French army in Poland, has ſuffered ſo much from diſeaſe, occaſioned by a conſtant fall of rain, as not to be able to act in the offenſive with ſafety.

London, January 9.

The King of Pruſſia's head quarters have been tranſferred from Koningberg to Wehlyn. His army combined with the Ruſſian diviſion under general Toſtoy, amounts to 100,000 men. The Pruſſians are commanded by General Kalkreuth.

It is ſtated in a private letter, that two regiments of cavalry were cut to pieces by two Pruſſian regiments, the former having been drawn into an ambuſcade near Dantzic.—An application has been made to the Emperor of Auſtria, on the part of France, deſiring that he ſhould ſurrender Gallicia, if this ſhould be rendered neceſſary by any arrangement in Poland. To this demand the Emperor Francis is ſaid to have replied by a decided negative. There are ſeveral rumours of a general engagement, about the 25th ult. and of a pacification between Pruſſia and France. Both theſe reports we are ſtrongly inclined to diſcredit.

It now appears that General Benningſen, after laying waſte the country has taken up his poſition at Pultuſk, a town ſituated near the confluence of the Narew and the little river Roſſicka. It is ſaid to be a very ſtrong poſition, for all the country between the Narew and the Bug is extremely difficult, full of woods and marſhes, whilſt the open country between Pultuſk and the Viſtula has been ravaged and laid waſte.

Lower Elbe, Dec. 22.

Yeſterday morning all the phyſicians and ſurgeons of the French troops at Hamburg, received orders to proceed to Berlin and Poland; and the medical practitioners have been invited to join them. Many of theſe, particularly the Jews, have accepted the offer.

Dec. 28.

General Kamelkow was marching at the head of 80,000 men againſt Turkey, when being informed of the renewal of the treaty between Ruſſia and the Porte, he immediately proceeded, and put himſelf at the head of the Ruſſian grand army in Poland, which he reached on the 5th inſt.

CAPTURE OF CURRACOA.

KINGSTON, (Jam.) Jan. 24.

On Saturday night laſt arrived at Port Royal, his Majeſty's frigate Anſon, of 40 guns, captain Lydiard, from Curracoa, with 300 priſoners, and the colors captured at that iſland, which was taken in the moſt extraordinary and gallant manner, by a ſquadron of frigates, conſiſting of the Anſon, of 34 guns, capt. Briſbane; Latona 38, capt. Wood; Anſon 40, capt. Lydiard; and Fifgard 38, capt. Bolton.

For ſkill in planning, ſingular boldneſs in executing, this event will rank amongſt the firſt of heroic actions—it is indeed perfectly in unifon with every thing glorious in the paſt, and an example of every thing great to the future.

As our ſquadron did not poſſeſs the means of laying regular ſiege to the place, capt. Briſbane came to the determination of ſailing into the port, and forming forts hitherto conſidered as impregnable, or periſhing in the attempt, for retreat was impoſſible. The time choſen was day dawn on the morning of the firſt of January, when all the boats were hoiſted out, and the ſquadron ſtood in with a ſtrong breeze, the Arethuſa leading. The enemy were panic ſtruck at ſuch unexpected temerity, all was confuſion—here ſoldiers without officers—there officers without ſoldiers—alarm drums beating in all directions; a Britiſh ſquadron in their very harbour, and within piſtol ſhot of their batteries before fun riſe. Troops collected at Otra Brandy were prevented from croſſing the water, our ſhips engaging; not more than three broadſides were fired from our frigates when the ſhips companies and officers of the Arethuſa and Anſon, with the marines of the Latona, headed by capts. Briſbane and Lydiard, were landed, fort Amſterdam ſtormed, and all the out works had Britiſh colours flying before 8 o'clock, fort Republic on the hill, and Curaccoa fort excepted. The Fifgard had ordered to act againſt Otra Brandy, two batteries diſtant from the main fort, the took poſſeſſion of, in one of which the men abſolutely ſwam, the enemy being previouſly diſlodged. The guns of fort Amſterdam were fired but once; on our people ſtorming the place they did not act in a body, but retreated in confuſion, firing round corners and from houſes.—The militia, amounting to 3000, had not time to collect, nor could they croſs the water in boats. The Dutch frigate Kenau Hafdar, was boarded by captain Briſbane, the Latona warped alongſide and took poſſeſſion, when capt. Briſbane proceeded for the ſhore. The Surinam corvette was boarded from the larboard bow of the Anſon, while her ſtarboard guns were firing at the batteries. The Flying Fiſh, a large National ſchooner, was boarded by the boats of the Arethuſa; the officers and crews of theſe veſſels fought moſt gallantly; Commodore Cornelius Vertz was killed; the captain of the Surinam moſtally wounded, and the firſt lieutenant dangerouſly, beſides ſeveral others. The moment the town, fort Amſterdam, &c. were completely in captain Briſbane's poſſeſſion, a lieutenant of marines was ſent a flag of truce, requeſting fort Republic to ſurrender. The officer diſcontinued firing, but would not ſurrender without an order from Lieutenant General J. P. Changnion, the Governor, who was at this time a priſoner, with all the ſtaff in Fort Amſterdam. We underſtand that captain Briſbane deſired the Council to be collected, and gave them five minutes to capitulate for the whole iſland, but as they intreated for a longer period, it was extended to half an hour, in the mean time the moſt active preparations were made for forming this almoſt inacceſſible fort. The ſhip's company of the Fifgard, commanded by captain Bolton, were in boats ready to proceed by water. The marines of the ſquadron, with about 300 ſailors of the Arethuſa and Anſon, were prepared to advance by land, the remainder of the ſailors on ſhore, including an officer and ſixty men from the Latona, manned ſuch guns as could bear on the object of attack, every thing was ready on a ſignal being made, when a capitulation was ſigned, and the troops in fort Republic alone marched out with the honors of war, piling their arms and becoming priſoners. All private property is reſpected, and the troops to be ſent to Europe and exchanged. Capt. Bolton took poſſeſſion of fort Republic. Captains Briſbane and Lydiard landed nearly together, the former was the firſt man who ſcaled the wall, the latter the ſecond, cloſely followed and ſupported by their reſpective officers and ſhips companies. Capt. Wood remained aboat in the command of the ſquadron: about 300 of the enemy were killed; our loſs is very trifling; had our ſhips been half an hour later in the attack, the ſlaughter muſt have been dreadful, nothing could be better timed. The ci-devant governor comes a priſoner on his way to Europe.

Liſt of killed and wounded on board his Majeſty's veſſels.

Arethuſa—2 killed and 5 wounded.
Latona—1 killed and 2 wounded.
Anſon—none killed, 7 wounded.
Fifgard—none killed, none wounded.
Total—3 killed, 14 wounded.

We underſtand that there were upwards of fifty Spanish, French and Dutch veſſels, excluſive of ſix or ſeven Americans, lying at Curracoa when that iſland fell into our poſſeſſion :— ſome of them are ſtated to be of great value.

Six Commiſſioners have been appointed to inveſtigate prize concerns at Curracoa. Captain James Athol Wood, of the Latona frigate, is the Preſident.

La Superieure brig, of 14 guns, capt. Ruſhworth, ſailed on Tueſday morning for Great Britain, having on board captain Lydiard, of the Anſon frigate, the bearer of diſpatches to the Lords of the Admiralty, announcing the capture of the iſland of Curracoa.

The Princeſs Amelia packet, Stevens, ſailed the ſame morning with a mail for Great Britain, under the protection of a certain latitude of Le Goelan brig, of 16 guns, captain Clemont.

The brig Fair Creole ſailed the ſame morning for Charleſton, by the permiſſion of his honor the Lieutenant Governor.

The Arathuſa frigate of 38 guns, capt. Briſbane, arrived on Wedneſday in ſix days from Curracoa, with the following veſſels captured at that iſland, viz.—Dutch frigate Kenau Huſſar, of 36 guns and 170 men ; do. Corvette Surinam, of 22 guns and 90 men ; do. ſchooner Flying Fiſh, of 14 guns and 50 men ; and the Spaniſh armed ſchr. Maria, of 10 guns and upwards of 30 men. A great number of their men jumped overboard, and got on ſhore previous to their being taken poſſeſſion of. The frigate is a fine veſſel, only 5 years old, and built entirely of oak ; ſhe ſuffered much in her maſts during the action.

The Duch Governor and his family, the Fiſcal and Commiſſary, fifteen ladies, and 25 officers, arrived in the Arethuſa.

Captain Bolton, of the Fisgard, remains as Governor at Curracoa. Capt. Peebles, of the Royal Marines, is commander in chief of the forces, and lieut. Scott of the ſame corps, has been nominated to the ſituation of Town Major.

The Latona frigate of 36 guns, capt. Wood, was to leave Curracoa for this iſland on the 11th inſt. with 69 merchant veſſels that fell into the poſſeſſion of the captors.

The American ſchr. Felicity, from Baltimore bound to cape Francois, with proviſions, taken by a French privateer, and re-captured on the 10th inſt. by the Hebe frigate, arrived the ſame day.

BANKS OF THE MAIN, Dec. 20.

Only one of the Pruſſian fortreſſes in Sileſia, namely Great Glogau, has yet fallen. The others poſſeſſed by Pruſſia are Breſlaw, Schweidnitz, Silberberg, Glatz, Neiſſe, Brieg, and Cofel. According to letters from Ruſſia, above 100,000 recruits have been raiſed ſince the laſt Ukaſe, and the moſt extenſive military preparations are making throughout that extenſive empire.

NEW YORK, March 2.

A letter has been received in this city by the British Jamaify Packet, from a reſpectable mercantile houſe in London, ſtating that they had received letters from Hamburgh down to the 16th of December, by which it appears that the members of the Britiſh factory there, who had been put under arreſt by the French, were liberated, and the guards taken off their houſes ; and it was confidently hoped that matters would be adjuſted between the ſenate of Hamburgh and the French on terms infinitely more favorable than was at firſt apprehended ! This information may be relied on.—[Mer. Ad.

CIRCUMSTANCIAL EVIDENCE.

The following is a remarkable inſtance of the fallacioulneſs of circumſtancial Evidence, though of the ſtrongeſt nature :

Extraordinary Caſe of Jonathan Bradford, who was executed at Oxford, for the murder of Chriſtopher Hayes Eſq. in the year 1736.

Jonathan Bradford kept an inn in Oxfordſhire, on the London road to Oxford ; he bore an unexceptionable character. Mr. Hayes, a gentleman of fortune, being on his way to Oxford, on a viſit to a relation, put up at Bradford's. He there joined company with two Gentlemen, with whom he ſupped, and, in converſation, unguardedly mentioned that he had then about him a large ſum of money. In due time, they retired to their reſpective chambers ; the Gentlemen to a two-bedded room ; leaving, as is cuſtomary with many, a candle burning in the chimney corner. Some hours after they were in bed, one of the gentlemen being awake, thought he heard a deep groan in the adjoining chamber ; and this being repeated, he ſoftly awaked his friend. They liſtened together, and the groans increaſing, as of one dying, they both inſtantly roſe, and proceeded ſilently to the door of the next chamber, from whence they heard the groans ; and, the door being a-jar, ſaw a light in the room ; they entered, but it is impoſſible to paint their conſternation, on perceiving a perſon weltering in his blood in the bed, and a man ſtanding over him with a dark lanthorn in one hand, and a knife in the other. The man ſeemed as petrified as themſelves, but his terror carried with it all the terror of guilt ! The Gentlemen ſoon diſcovered it was the ſtranger with whom they had that night ſupped, and that the man who was ſtanding over him was their hoſt. They ſeized Bradford directly, diſarmed him of his knife, and charged him with being the murderer ; he aſſumed, by this time, the air of innocence, poſitively denied the crime, and aſſerted that he came there with the ſame humane intention as themſelves ; for that, hearing a noiſe, which was ſucceeded by a groaning, he got out of bed, ſtruck a light, armed himſelf with a knife for his defence, and was but that minute entered the room before them. Theſe aſſertions were of little avail ; he was kept in cloſe cuſtody till the morning, and then taken before a neighboring Juſtice of the Peace. Bradford ſtill denied the murder, but nevertheleſs, with ſuch an apparent indication of guilt, that the Juſtice hetitated not to make uſe of the extraordinary expreſſion, on writing out his mittimus ; " Mr. Bradford, either you or myſelf committed this murder."

This extraordinary affair was the converſation of the whole country. Bradford was tried and condemned over and over again in every company. In the midſt of all this pre-determination came on the Aſſizes at Oxford ; Bradford was brought to trial, he pleaded Not Guilty. Nothing could be more ſtrong than the evidence of the two Gentlemen ; they teſtified to the finding Mr. Hayes murdered in his bed ; Bradford at the ſide of the body with a light and a knife ; that knife and the hand which held it bloody, that, on their entering the room, he betrayed all the ſigns of a guilty man ; and that a few moments preceding, they had heard the groans of the deceaſed.

Bradford's defence on the trial was the ſame as before the gentlemen : he had heard a noiſe ; he ſuſpected ſome villainous tranſaction : he ſtruck a light —he ſnatched a knife (the only weapon near him) to defend himſelf ; and the tertors he diſcovered were merely the tertors of humanity, the natural effects of innocence, as well as guilt, on beholding ſuch a horrid ſcene ! This defence, however, could be conſidered but as weak, contraſted with the ſeveral powerful circumſtances againſt him. Never was circumſtantial evidence more ſtrong ! There was little need of comment from the Judge, in ſumming up the evidence, no room appeared for extenuation, and the Jury brought in the priſoner Guilty, without going out of the box.

Bradford was executed ſhortly after, ſtill declaring he was not the murderer, nor priſy to the murder of Mr. Hayes ; but he died diſbelieved by all.—Yet were theſe aſſertions not untrue ! The murder was actually committed by Mr. Hayes's footman ; who immediately on ſtabbing his maſter, rifled his breeches of his money, gold watch, and ſnuff-box, and eſcaped to his own room, which could have been, from the after circumſtances, ſcarcely two ſeconds before Bradford's entering the unfortunate gentleman's chamber. The world owes this knowledge to a remorſe of conſcience in the footman (eighteen months after the execution of Bradford,) on a bed of ſickneſs ; it was a death-bed repentance, and by that death the law loſt its victim.

It is much to be wiſhed, that this account could cloſe here ; but it cannot ! Bradford, though innocent, and not priſy to the murder, was nevertheleſs ; the murderer in deſign. He had heard, as well as the footman, what Mr. Hayes had declared at ſupper, as to his having a large ſum of money about him, and he went to the chamber with the ſame diabolical intention as the ſervant. He was ſtruck with amazement ! —He could not believe his ſenſes !—and in turning back the bed clothes, to aſſure himſelf of the fact, he, in his agitation, dropped his knife on the bleeding body, by which both his hand and his knife became bloody. Theſe circumſtances Bradford acknowledged to the clergyman who attended him after his ſentence.

A letter from Lisbon, dated January 12, ſays, General Craufurd's expedition ſailed Monday on the 7th December, all well. The object of it was not then known, but it is probable deſtined againſt the Mauritius, which has been a ſource of great annoyance to our Eaſt India trade.

January 13.

By information received from a ſecret but authentic ſource, we are compelled to believe that our ſuſpicions reſpecting the neutrality of the new American Treaty are not too well founded. We underſtand that by the proviſions of this treaty, the Americans are to be permitted to carry goods from the colonies of our enemies to France, Spain, &c. upon condition of their touching at an American port in their paſſage, and there paying a duty of two per cent on their cargoes. This being the caſe (truly happy ſhould we be to find it otherwiſe) all navigation acts, all our maritime code, all our right of ſeiſure may be conſidered as abrogated and abandoned ; for, from the moment this treaty ſhall be ratified, the whole becomes uſeleſs. From that moment we may be at war with France, Spain, and Holland, but with their colonies we ſhall be at peace. Their trade will be carried on with compleat ſecurity by the Americans : the circuitous route, by touching at an American port with the two per cent duty, will not produce a charge ſo heavy as our war inſurance ; and the enemy will thus retain in war the full benefit of their colonial ſyſtem except in the article of freight.

January 15.

We underſtand that ſubſidiary treaties have been entered into by our government, with the courts of Ruſſia, Sweden, and Pruſſia, by which we have engaged to furniſh them with ſix million pounds ſterling, to enable them to keep the field againſt the common enemy.

January 18.

A conſiderable inſurrection, if that epithet can be properly applied to an effort to ſhake off French tyranny, has broken out in the Heſſian territory. The inhabitants of that country, driven to deſperation by the exactions and vexations to which they have been ſubjected ſince the French took poſſeſſion of it, have come to a reſolution worthy of more ſucceſs than, we fear, will wards of fifty Spanish, French and Dutch veſſels, excluſive of ſix or ſeven Americans, lying at Curracoa when that iſland fell into our poſſeſſion :— ſome of them are ſtated to be of great value.

Six Commiſſioners have been appointed to inveſtigate prize concerns at Curracoa. Captain James Athol Wood, of the Latona frigate, is the Preſident.

La Superieure brig, of 14 guns, capt. Ruſhworth, ſailed on Tueſday morning for Great Britain, having on board captain Lydiard, of the Anſon frigate, the bearer of diſpatches to the Lords of the Admiralty, announcing the capture of the iſland of Curracoa.

The Princeſs Amelia packet, Stevens, ſailed the ſame morning with a mail for Great Britain, under the protection of a certain latitude of Le Goelan brig, of 16 guns, captain Clemont.

The brig Fair Creole ſailed the ſame morning for Charleſton, by the permiſſion of his honor the Lieutenant Governor.

The Arathuſa frigate of 38 guns, capt. Briſbane, arrived on Wedneſday in ſix days from Curracoa, with the following veſſels captured at that iſland, viz.—Dutch frigate Kenau Huſſar, of 36 guns and 170 men ; do. Corvette Surinam, of 22 guns and 90 men ; do. ſchooner Flying Fiſh, of 14 guns and 50 men ; and the Spaniſh armed ſchr. Maria, of 10 guns and upwards of 30 men. A great number of their men jumped overboard, and got on ſhore previous to their being taken poſſeſſion of. The frigate is a fine veſſel, only 5 years old, and built entirely of oak ; ſhe ſuffered much in her maſts during the action.

The Duch Governor and his family, the Fiſcal and Commiſſary, fifteen ladies, and 25 officers, arrived in the Arethuſa.

Captain Bolton, of the Fisgard, remains as Governor at Curracoa. Capt. Peebles, of the Royal Marines, is commander in chief of the forces, and lieut. Scott of the ſame corps, has been nominated to the ſituation of Town Major.

The Latona frigate of 36 guns, capt. Wood, was to leave Curracoa for this iſland on the 11th inſt. with 69 merchant veſſels that fell into the poſſeſſion of the captors.

The American ſchr. Felicity, from Baltimore bound to cape Francois, with proviſions, taken by a French privateer, and re-captured on the 10th inſt. by the Hebe frigate, arrived the ſame day.

BANKS OF THE MAIN, Dec. 20.

Only one of the Pruſſian fortreſſes in Sileſia, namely Great Glogau, has yet fallen. The others poſſeſſed by Pruſſia are Breſlaw, Schweidnitz, Silberberg, Glatz, Neiſſe, Brieg, and Cofel. According to letters from Ruſſia, above 100,000 recruits have been raiſed ſince the laſt Ukaſe, and the moſt extenſive military preparations are making throughout that extenſive empire.

NEW YORK, March 2.

A letter has been received in this city by the British Jamaify Packet, from a reſpectable mercantile houſe in London, ſtating that they had received letters from Hamburgh down to the 16th of December, by which it appears that the members of the Britiſh factory there, who had been put under arreſt by the French, were liberated, and the guards taken off their houſes ; and it was confidently hoped that matters would be adjuſted between the ſenate of Hamburgh and the French on terms infinitely more favorable than was at firſt apprehended ! This information may be relied on.—[Mer. Ad.

CIRCUMSTANCIAL EVIDENCE.

The following is a remarkable inſtance of the fallacioulneſs of circumſtancial Evidence, though of the ſtrongeſt nature :

Extraordinary Caſe of Jonathan Bradford, who was executed at Oxford, for the murder of Chriſtopher Hayes Eſq. in the year 1736.

Jonathan Bradford kept an inn in Oxfordſhire, on the London road to Oxford ; he bore an unexceptionable character. Mr. Hayes, a gentleman of fortune, being on his way to Oxford, on a viſit to a relation, put up at Bradford's. He there joined company with two Gentlemen, with whom he ſupped, and, in converſation, unguardedly mentioned that he had then about him a large ſum of money. In due time, they retired to their reſpective chambers ; the Gentlemen to a two-bedded room ; leaving, as is cuſtomary with many, a candle burning in the chimney corner. Some hours after they were in bed, one of the gentlemen being awake, thought he heard a deep groan in the adjoining chamber ; and this being repeated, he ſoftly awaked his friend. They liſtened together, and the groans increaſing, as of one dying, they both inſtantly roſe, and proceeded ſilently to the door of the next chamber, from whence they heard the groans ; and, the door being a-jar, ſaw a light in the room ; they entered, but it is impoſſible to paint their conſternation, on perceiving a perſon weltering in his blood in the bed, and a man ſtanding over him with a dark lanthorn in one hand, and a knife in the other. The man ſeemed as petrified as themſelves, but his terror carried with it all the terror of guilt ! The Gentlemen ſoon diſcovered it was the ſtranger with whom they had that night ſupped, and that the man who was ſtanding over him was their hoſt. They ſeized Bradford directly, diſarmed him of his knife, and charged him with being the murderer ; he aſſumed, by this time, the air of innocence, poſitively denied the crime, and aſſerted that he came there with the ſame humane intention as themſelves ; for that, hearing a noiſe, which was ſucceeded by a groaning, he got out of bed, ſtruck a light, armed himſelf with a knife for his defence, and was but that minute entered the room before them. Theſe aſſertions were of little avail ; he was kept in cloſe cuſtody till the morning, and then taken before a neighboring Juſtice of the Peace. Bradford ſtill denied the murder, but nevertheleſs, with ſuch an apparent indication of guilt, that the Juſtice hetitated not to make uſe of the extraordinary expreſſion, on writing out his mittimus ; " Mr. Bradford, either you or myſelf committed this murder."

This extraordinary affair was the converſation of the whole country. Bradford was tried and condemned over and over again in every company. In the midſt of all this pre-determination came on the Aſſizes at Oxford ; Bradford was brought to trial, he pleaded Not Guilty. Nothing could be more ſtrong than the evidence of the two Gentlemen ; they teſtified to the finding Mr. Hayes murdered in his bed ; Bradford at the ſide of the body with a light and a knife ; that knife and the hand which held it bloody, that, on their entering the room, he betrayed all the ſigns of a guilty man ; and that a few moments preceding, they had heard the groans of the deceaſed.

Bradford's defence on the trial was the ſame as before the gentlemen : he had heard a noiſe ; he ſuſpected ſome villainous tranſaction : he ſtruck a light —he ſnatched a knife (the only weapon near him) to defend himſelf ; and the tertors he diſcovered were merely the tertors of humanity, the natural effects of innocence, as well as guilt, on beholding ſuch a horrid ſcene ! This defence, however, could be conſidered but as weak, contraſted with the ſeveral powerful circumſtances againſt him. Never was circumſtantial evidence more ſtrong ! There was little need of comment from the Judge, in ſumming up the evidence, no room appeared for extenuation, and the Jury brought in the priſoner Guilty, without going out of the box.

Bradford was executed ſhortly after, ſtill declaring he was not the murderer, nor priſy to the murder of Mr. Hayes ; but he died diſbelieved by all.—Yet were theſe aſſertions not untrue ! The murder was actually committed by Mr. Hayes's footman ; who immediately on ſtabbing his maſter, rifled his breeches of his money, gold watch, and ſnuff-box, and eſcaped to his own room, which could have been, from the after circumſtances, ſcarcely two ſeconds before Bradford's entering the unfortunate gentleman's chamber. The world owes this knowledge to a remorſe of conſcience in the footman (eighteen months after the execution of Bradford,) on a bed of ſickneſs ; it was a death-bed repentance, and by that death the law loſt its victim.

It is much to be wiſhed, that this account could cloſe here ; but it cannot ! Bradford, though innocent, and not priſy to the murder, was nevertheleſs ; the murderer in deſign. He had heard, as well as the footman, what Mr. Hayes had declared at ſupper, as to his having a large ſum of money about him, and he went to the chamber with the ſame diabolical intention as the ſervant. He was ſtruck with amazement ! —He could not believe his ſenſes !—and in turning back the bed clothes, to aſſure himſelf of the fact, he, in his agitation, dropped his knife on the bleeding body, by which both his hand and his knife became bloody. Theſe circumſtances Bradford acknowledged to the clergyman who attended him after his ſentence.

A conſiderable inſurrection, if that epithet can be properly applied to an effort to ſhake off French tyranny, has broken out in the Heſſian territory. The inhabitants of that country, driven to deſperation by the exactions and vexations to which they have been ſubjected ſince the French took poſſeſſion of it, have come to a reſolution worthy of more ſucceſs than, we fear, will attend their present attempt. About ten thousand men, confisting principally of disbanded soldiers, and some peasants, assembled lately near Elchwedge, and, having nominated an officer of the regiment of De Wurmb, captain D'Uller, their commander, with the rank of Colonel, proceeded to organize themselves as a regular force. Those among them who had served as non commissioned officers, were appointed officers; and they armed themselves in the best manner they could, seizing all the arms, swords, &c. which they could find.—A Col. Schmidt, who had entered into the French service, and was at Elchwege for the purpose of forming a regiment out of the disbanded Hessian troops, was seized by the insurgents, and compelled to swear, on a Hessian standard, that he would renounce the service of Buonaparte. The insurrection, it is supposed, was not confined to the Hessian territory, but to have extended itself to Saxony and Hanover also.

Both the provinces of Mecklenberg, hitherto fertile and flourishing, are now literally a wilderness and desert!—Not a horse, sheep, cow, or article of food of any kind, is to be seen! Not a grain of seed corn has been put into the ground!

A gentleman who lately left Rome, declares that the reduction of Naples has cost France 35,000 men. Vast numbers of them have perished from the unwholesome vapours of the Calabrias; more, in fact, than have fallen by the swords of the Calabrese. In Naples, scarce a night passes without several Frenchmen being murdered.

King Joseph has not for many months ventured to sleep in the palace of Capo di Monte, whither he retires every evening.

Lucien Bonaparte lives in the neighbourhood of Rome, in a state of domestic but elegant retirement.—The large fortune which he amassed during his embassies to Spain and Portugal, enables him to do much good in his neighbourhood. He employs a great number of persons in making various improvements, which he and his wife daily inspect. He avoids all political society, and is very generally respected.

Altona, Jan. 2.

Accounts from Wurtaw, assert, that nearly one fifth of the French army is infected by contagious disorders.

Saxony.—A treaty of peace has been concluded between Saxony and France. Saxony joins the Rhenish confederacy; his electoral highness takes the title of king; Napoleon cedes to Saxony the Pulsnian circle of Cottbus; Saxony places at the disposal of Buonaparte a part of Thuringia, &c.

It is given to whom he pleases; Saxony is to assist France in case of future war with 20,000 troops; in the present war with 1500 cavalry, 12,000 infantry, 300 artillery, and 12 pieces of cannon.

New-York, March 7.

A letter from Commodore Rogers states, that after he had conveyed the Turkish Ambassador home, he heard observations from him, that induced him to apprehend a rupture between Tuais and America.

March 13.

A London paper of Jan. 28, says, "the report of the death of the Queen of Prussia is unfounded."

"It has been ascertained, says the same paper, that by the dreadful earthquake at Naples, in July last, upwards of 30,000 inhabitants lost their lives to the county of Molina."

TO THE PUBLIC.

From a variety of impediments the Editor is under the necessity of apologizing for the non appearance of the Gazette on Saturday last, and for its present emission upon a half sheet. He flatters himself that, on Saturday in the ensuing week, it will be issued of the size and form in which he intends to publish in future.

In the succeeding Numbers will be published weekly, provided more interesting matter should not occur, a series of Letters from Simon Solomon, a Missionary in the Sandwich Islands, and Stephanus Solomon, his brother, a Captain in the Otaheitan Navy, to Gabriello Pisces del Torpedo, a Chief of the Terra del Fuegans—wherein a more accurate description of the manners, habits and dispositions of these Barbarians are given, than in any other publication extant.

His Britannick Majesty's frigate Greyhound of 32 guns, and brig Harrier of 18, have captured a small Dutch squadron, in the Indian seas, after a gallant action. The action took place on the 6th day of July, between the small Dutch ports of Boutham and Bolacamba. The British ships were commanded by Capt. C. Elphinstone.

The prize proved to be the Dutch republican frigate Pallas of 36 guns, commanded by U.S. Admiral, a captain in the Dutch navy; the Victoria, a two decked ship of about 300 tons, commanded by Klaas Kenken, senior captain in the Dutch company's service; and the Batavier, a ship of about 500 tons, commanded by William Deval, a captain in the same service; both the company's ships are armed for the purposes of war, and richly laden with the produce of the Moluccas.

The ship which escaped was the republican corvette William, mounting twenty 24 pounders, and manned with 110 men.

The Greyhound and Harrier had 1 man killed and 11 wounded.

The Dutch ships had 10 killed and 39 wounded. The captain, pilot and 4 seamen of the Pallas, and 1 lieutenant and 1 seaman of the Batavier, afterwards died of their wounds.—Albany Gaz.

Captain Mefleveyz, who arrived at Marblehead on the 6th ultimo, from Bordeaux, informs that Bonaparte arrived at Paris about the 20th of January—that he was collecting more troops, and putting into requisition all the young men he could find—that 14000 men were required from Bordeaux to join the Grand Army in Poland; that there had been several recent actions with the Russians; and that in the last battle, when each army consisted of 140,000 men, the Russians gained the advantage.

BATTLE OF PULTUSK.

Russian Official Account.

Gen. Benningsen to the King of Prussia.

I have the happiness most respectfully to acquaint your Majesty, that I have succeeded in repulsing the enemy, who yesterday morning attacked me on every point near Pultusk. The main attack was made by General Souchet, at the head of 15000 men, on my left wing, near Pargowka, in the view of getting possession of that town; I had only 5000 men under Gen. Bagowout, to oppose the enemy on that side; they made a brave defence, until I sent a reinforcement of three battalions of reserve, and afterwards three more under Gen. Tolstoy, by which means the right wing of the French was totally defeated. The second attack equally brisk, was made on my right flank, where Gen. Barkeley de Tolly was posted with the van guard. The wing extended on the road towards Sergocyna to a small wood, where I had placed a covered battery, which the enemy attempted to turn. I therefore made a movement backwards on their right, which succeeded so well, that I not only frustrated the attempt of the enemy, but was also so fortunate as to reinforce Gen. Barkeley de Tolly, with three battalions, ten squadrons, and one battery to repulse the enemy; on which the enemy retreated from the wood.

The attack commenced at eleven in the morning, & lasted until dark. From the relation of all the prisoners, I was opposed by Murat, Davoust, and Lannes, with an army exceeding 50000 men. They have lost about 5000 according to their own account.

All my troops fought with the greatest bravery. The following Generals particularly distinguished themselves: Oderman, Tolstoy, Barkeley de Tolly, Prince Dolgorouky, Bagowout, Sommoi, and Sroff, of the infantry, also Colonels Davidduefsky and Gondosi &c. &c.

Field-Marshal Kumenskoy, departed from Pultusk for Ostrolenka, on the morning of the 26th Decem er, previous to the attack, and again gave the whole command to me, so that I have had the good fortune to command alone in this affair, and to beat the enemy.

I have to lament that the long expected succour of Gen. Buxhowden had not arrived, although he was but two German miles distant, and even halted half way. I should otherwise have been able to follow up my victory. I have further to lament that the total want of provisions and forage obliged me to retire with my corps to Rozaw; the enemy had not molested me in my retreat.

(Signed) BENNINGSEN.

Rozaw, 27th Dec. 1806.

The British Frigate Orpheus, of 32 guns, Capt. Briggs, was lost on the 23d of January, on a reef of rocks about five miles E. S. E. of Port Royal (Jam.) the crew saved.

The following account of the singular disorder which recent accounts state inflicts the French troops in Polina, is said to be taken from an Edinburgh Medical Work of respectability:

"The Plica Polonica or Plaited Hairs is known only in Poland and Lithuania, and consists of several blood vessels running from the head into the ends of the hairs; which cling together and hang from the head in broad flat pieces generally an ell in length, but sometimes much longer. They are painful to the wearer and odious to the spectator. At the approach of winter, an eruptive fever happens in these countries; the eruptions principally infest the head, and when at the height, an ichorous humour flows from them: this state they are too tend. admit of being touched, and the matter running down the hairs them together; the skin by degrees breaking the ramifications of the capillary vessels, following the course of the hair or prolonged out of the skin are increased to a vast length. No method of relief is yet known; for if the discharge be checked, or the vessels cut off, the consequence is an increase of more miserable symptoms, and in the end, death."

English January Commercial Report.—The woollen manufactures in the north and west of England are not materially injured by the recent events on the Continent. The home consumption increases; the commercial distribution of British woollen goods in the East Indies is every year extending; the Anglo Americans take off, every year, greater quantities than before; the trade of the Mediterranean, the Levant, and the Black Sea, opens still new marts for British woollens.

The trade in Welch flannels is thought to be, at this time, one of the most promising in which a mercantile man can hazard a speculation. It is, for London, principally in the hands of one or two houses, which have gained exceedingly by it, even within a very few years.

Such has been the general increase of the woollen trade of this country in the space of fourteen years, that the Easter returns to the justices of Pontefract of the quantity of the woollen manufactured in the riding of Yorkshire, in which it stands, were, in 1792, 101,832 pieces broad cloth, 150,066 pieces of narrow cloth; but in 1806, 320,237 pieces of broad cloth, and 165,847 pa. of narrow.

Our information respecting the cotton manufactures is not flattering. The home consumption is immense; but the sales for the French, Dutch and German markets are comparatively nothing.

The iron and copper works of Great Britain continue flourishing. The manufactures of Birmingham and Sheffield have of late had large orders for the South American market. Their manufactures still find their way, also to Paris, and over the Continent.

By our possession of Malta, a brisk trade, yielding quick returns, is now carried on to the ports of Italy. Malta is the emporium, the storehouse. From Malta we supply Leghorn, and other places under the power of the French. But the English goods are sold, even before they are landed, for ready money; and scarcely a pound's worth of British property is any moment hazarded where the French might seize it.

NOTICE

Is hereby given to all persons indebted to the estate of the late William Wesley, Esq. by Bond, Promissory Note, Account, or otherwise, that immediate payment is required. By a prompt compliance with this request, they will save the Executors the unpleasant trouble of publishing their names in the York Gazette, and of exposing the several claims upon them to sale at public auction, for the benefit of the creditors.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31st day of October, in the 47th year of His Majesty's Reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and six.

Extracts from London and Liverpool papers to 12th of February, received by the Liverpool Packet.

By the mail from Hufum, which arrived on Friday and brought letters from Hamburgh to the 22d January, and accounts from Wasaw of the 8th, the fact, that the French have sustained a signal defeat in Poland, is still farther confirmed.—All the accounts published in the Hamburgh papers, are, as might be supposed, entirely silent as to any defeat of the French; but the matter of a Danish vessel which arrived on Friday in the River, has affirmed, that before he sailed from Elsineur on the 21st, he saw a printed official account of the particulars of the victory obtained by the Russians. It was shewn to him by the commandant of the place, and agrees with the substance of the reports which have already appeared.—After the arrival of the mail on Friday, a note, of which the following is a copy, was circulated among the public officers.

"Jan. 30.—Various accounts received this morning confirm the defeat of the French at Ostrolenka, but the official details are not yet arrived. Letters from Dantzick mention, that 40,000 French prisoners are marched into Koningsberg. Bonaparte was at Warsaw on the 8th of January but the Russians have crossed the Vistula, and an engagement took place on the 7th January at Szakow, on the road to Polen, which is said to have terminated to the disadvantage of the French. Dispatches were also received on Friday from Mr. Adair, which intimate that a victory had been gained by the Russians after the 26th. The Russian General B. is said to have been bought by the French, and to have been elected by the general in chief, Kaminkoi, when on the point of leaving to the French the whole of the Russian magazines, by withdrawing the guard. Kaminkoi, it is said took his sword from him with his own hands and sent him in irons to St Petersburg, and the French, when they made their attack, experienced the formidable resistance, which ended in a compleat defeat. Great disorder is said to have prevailed in the French army, particularly amongst the Emperors guards, who infisted on winter quarters, and of five of the columns employed in the attack, three were defeated, and one had refused to advance.

FOR THE GAZETTE.

Simon Solomoni, to Gabriello Pisces del [illegible]

NO. I.

FRIEND GABRIELLO—

I heard of thy matrimonial connexion in [illegible] tive country, (Corſica) and that thou had [illegible] en unto wife a damſel from amongſt the gi[illegible] of thy nation. Although according to the [illegible] principles of faith, it is unſeemly to wed [illegible] the nobility of this world; (unſuch as I [illegible] unto appertaineth vanity and as the preacher [illegible] it, vexation of ſpirit) yet, ſeeing it hath ſo befal[illegible] len thee, it behoveth thee even now to affimilate thyſelf as much as in thee lieth, to the "ſtyle, manner, and education" of thy beloved; for [illegible] of cometh much good and edification to thyſelf, thy men ſervants, thy maid ſervants, and [illegible] thy houſehold. Now that thou haſt taken upon thyſelf the cares and management of a family, let me admoniſh thee with a fatherly admonition, to renounce the levity and follies of thy youth. Thou canſt not be inſenſible that thou haſt a perſon, fair and goodly to look upon, and pleaſing to the eye, which aided by thy virtuous mind, may be a paſſport to honours, wealth and to ure exiſtation. But let not this buoy thee up to vain things, for beauty is likened unto a ſhadow, which paſſeth away and ſcarce leaveth a trace behind it; truſt rather to the proper exerciſe of thy faculties, and the great powers, with which nature hath endowed thee; then verily mayeſt thou become great, yea and exceeding famous in the annals of thy country. That thou haſt a ſtrong deſire to become ſo, every act of thy life hath manifeſtly evinced, for when thou wert but as a ſtripling, thy towering mind gave an earneſt of what might be expected from its due cultivation and thy maturer years.

I have not as yet learned, whether in entering into the married ſtate thou didſt thirſtily attend to that material point, that one thing needful, which ſo powerfully aideth, yea verily, and abideth the happineſs of wedlock; or did thy beloved in becoming bone of thy bone, and fleſh of thy fleſh, bring thee aught but an honourable alliance, and the goodly reverſion of ſome pregnant expectation; for oft times it ſo happeneth, even to the mighty.

I have heard good report (by thyſelf) of thy great wealth and many poſſeſſions, and of thine inheritance in the land of thy forefathers, yet were not mine eyes greeted with their ſight, neither can mine ears bear witneſs to their mention, by any other ſave thee. Peradventure thy ſteward mangeth for thee in thine abſence and is faithful to thy many inevitable calls; for verily, I ſy unto thee, that to ſojourn in a ſtrange land, requireth both ſtaff and ſcrip, and that thy camels ſhould be laden, ſo that thou mayeſt not become a bye-word and a reproach amongſt the heathen; and that they may not ſay, behold he ſojourneth and hath not wherewithal. For it hath come to paſs, that word hath gone abroad in theſe our days, that the hour of thine exaltation draweth near, and that thou art to be appointed a magnifico of teſt- de- Fuego; and art to take up thy dwelling in a ſtrange country, and amongſt a people, to whoſe manner thou art an utter ſtranger, and whoſe idols thou canſt not worſhip. If peradventure it ſhould even ſo befal thee, ſtray not thy dwelling with gorgeous furniture, nor thy body with coſtly apparel, but carry thyſelf with meekneſs, and walk humbly amongſt them; neither hold thou their idols in deriſion nor make a mockery of their worſhip. In all things, appear thou, to conform to their doctrines and their cuſtoms, for thereby ſhalt thou gain favour, and be pointed at by the old men of the virgins, and they will ſay, he, the ſtranger [illegible] ſojourneth amongſt us is courteous, and is as one of ourſelves. Thou will be greeted in the [illegible] and in the ſtreet they will hold out the hand [illegible] thee, ſaying withal, peace, peace be upon [illegible] and thine houſehold. And in like manner [illegible] thou anſwer, and to their greetings add thy [illegible] ings, thereby begetting confidence, and good-[illegible] thus will thou win their affections, and what [illegible] thou deſireſt; and their voice will be with thee, and for thee. Then mayeſt thou rejoice with [illegible] exceeding great joy; inaſmuch as, thou will [illegible] cholen, and peradventure, exalted above the heads of the people, for thy name will be greatly magnified, and thy good deeds will ſpread abroad, and thy ſayings will be remembered, and be as proverbs throughout the land. But ſuffer not thine heart to ſwell within thee, nor thine head to wax giddy up with vain glory at the greatneſs of thine exaltation. For verily, favour is as a current of water and as the tide, which ebbeth and floweth, and thou knoweſt not the hour, when peradventure it may overwhelm thee, and doth thy body reſt on the rocks. Then might it be ſaid of thee ſcoffingly, behold he came amongſt us a ſtranger, and as civilly entreated him, and we ſaid unto him, tarry thou with us, and be thou as one of us; but he waxed weak with proſperity, he aſpired to be the chief [illegible] us; and of our ſons [illegible] daughters, our young [illegible] as maidens, would he [illegible] bonds men and bondsmaids. But lo, a judgment hath [illegible] him, and we are delivered from his bondage, and no man [illegible] him, for he beguiled us with words, and would have [illegible] our land for an inheritance [illegible] fingers. And thus, many [illegible] things would they in like manner ſpeak deridingly of thee.

Wherefore, my laſt day [illegible] ſalutes friend.

SIMON SOLOMONI.

Oneſtate, the laſt day of the firſt month.

TO THE PUBLIC.

EMBARKED in an undertaking, for which the habits of early life have not qualified me, to which my former views were not directed, nor my expectations evident my feeble powers and ſlender attainments are incompetent; reflecting upon its magnitude, and aware of the unpropitious circumſtances under which it is attempted I enter upon the arduous taſk with fear and trembling. In moſt things depending upon public patronage, and upon public opinion for ſucceſs, a practice exiſts as general as it is puerile—to promiſe much, attempt to pleaſe all, and ultimately perform nothing. The firſt and ſecond I utterly diſclaim; rejecting one for its triteneſs, the other as unattainable; the laſt muſt be teſted by time. Unconnected with the publication of my official intentions, I ſhould not have obtruded my own inſignificance upon the public, but in juſtice to them, (and for the information of ſuch as may be deſirous to know) I feel it incumbent upon me to avow that I am an enemy to intolerance, and an unbiaſed believer in the ſacred doctrines of Chriſtianity; that I am a firm and unchangeable Britiſh ſubject, not from a blind partiality, but from the fulleſt conviction of the ſuperior excellence of its government.

Although I do not promiſe, and cannot hope to pleaſe all, and although my labours may be eventually unſucceſsful, I ſtill think it my duty to ſtate the outlines of the plan on which my paper will be conducted. In doing which, I ſolemnly pledge myſelf that the following manly and generous ſentiment, ſhall be ever predominant with me, and its exemplification my invariable aim:

"Curſed be that line, how well ſo e'er it flow,
"That tends to make one generous man my foe."

Sooner would I ceaſe to exiſt, than proſtitute either time or talents to injure or depreciate the characters of amiable or upright individuals, whatever may be their weakneſs. Far be ſuch wantonneſs from me. But the reckleſs wretch, who, under the inſidious guiſe of philanthropy, labours to ſap the foundations of civil or ſocial order, or the happineſs of the community, ſhall not eſcape, unknown or unnoticed.

Daily experience confirms the melancholy fact, that publiſhers of newspapers too frequently loſe ſight of the moral reſponſibility of their vocation. I hope, I preſume, nay more, I aſſert that I have a true ſenſe of the evil effects which the circulation of an unchaſte and libertine paper muſt have upon the manners, morals, and opinions of ſociety. So deeply am I penetrated with this truth, and ſo oppoſite are my intentions to the inſertion of a ſingle line or ſentiment which might lead the innocent into error, the ignorant to falſe concluſions, the rigid to laxity, or the believer to ſcepticiſm; that my conſtant object ſhall be to combat their cauſes, and counteract the conſequences; to drag hidden iniquity from its lurking-place, to unmaſk hypocriſy, to hold up vice to public deteſtation, and expoſe villiany in its various gradations. In diſcharging this moral though painful duty, it begets another equally forcible and incumbent; a grateful taſk, which I ſhall ever perform with inexpreſſible pleaſure. No publick ſpirited undertaking, no generous action no exemplary conduct, no local inſtance of laudable or benevolent exertion for the general good ſhall paſs unrecorded, whilſt I publiſh this paper.

In a meaſure inſulated and but a miniature of Society, paucity of events, oppoſes an inſurmountable barrier to variety of publication, and affords but a ſlender proſpect to the publiſher; however, taking it for granted that, my friends will not think that time wholly miſſpent, which they may devote to objects of public good and inſtruction; I ſhall rely upon them for liberal contributions of genius, and miſcellaneous information.

The Province as yet affords but a ſmall field for Biography; ſtill, inſtances of departed worth are not wanting, highly deſerving to be recorded. The country can boaſt the paſt and preſent poſſeſſion of men, whoſe virtues, their ſucceſſors might imitate with pride, and whoſe memories poſterity will hold in the higheſt veneration. Communications on this ſubject, will be received with gratitude, and attended to with pleaſure. To profeſſional and literary gentlemen, I ſhall be particularly obliged for communications. Intereſting commercial and agricultural information will be thankfully received, and promptly inſerted. Advertiſements, and Notices generally, will be inſerted on reaſonable terms.

The Paper will be denominated the York Gazette, and iſſued on Saturdays, upon demy paper, price four dollars per annum, paid quarterly in advance; and from the regular correſpondence eſtabliſhed with the Federal Printers of the U. States, an early intelligence of continental and foreign events, will be obtained and publiſhed.

To my fair patroneſſes the Ladies of U-Canada, I ſhall be inexpreſſibly obliged for their written effuſions, and in return, will offer them excluſive of much fatherly admonition, devote the corner of a column, to detail the momentous changes, and important revolutions which agitate the boſſiness and manſtaumakers of the old continent.

Aware that the preſent undertaking, will be viewed by ſome through a falſe medium; for

"All ſeems infected, that the infected ſpy,
"As all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye."

The editor thus publicly declares that he directly and diſtinctly aſſumes all the moral, perſonal and legal reſponſibility of his publications. He views with the moſt indignant ſenſations, the baſe, unfounded falſehoods, circulated by a few malevolent defigning men; thoſe he will endeavor to trace to the polluted ſources from whence they iſſue, and hold up their vagrant authors, to the juſt reſentment of an inſulted, injured community.

With the ſolemn aſſurance that I ſhall endeavor to make the Gazette uſeful and entertaining, I am the public's humble ſervant,

THE EDITOR.

At length, after waiting till the anxiety and apprehenſions of the merchants in our ſea-ports had riſen to a height that could no longer be concealed nor ſuppreſſed, Mr. Jefferſon has condeſcended to iſſue his proclamation to ſuſpend the Non-Importation Act—an act never made, we believe, to be executed, and ſo happily drawn as to render its execution impoſſible.—New-York Herald.

The laſt London papers ſtate, that not only the regular men in all the royal navy yards are ordered to work double tides, but that freſh gangs of carpenters are ſent to all the merchant's yards; and a great exertion was making throughout the kingdom to equip for ſea every kind of veſſel calculated to carry troops; and that it was expected attempts would be made on various and diſtant quarters of France, while the French had ſo great an army in Pruſſia and Poland; and ſo many Pruſſian priſoners in France. The French troops which had paſſed the Oder, up to the 22d December laſt, amounted to 280,000 men.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in New-Orleans, to his friend in Baltimore, dated Feb. 15, 1807.

"I never thought we had much to fear from Burr; I think our danger is from the Spaniards.—Indeed for two years paſt I have ſuſpected that they meditated an attack, and could have taken the country, as they would have found no oppoſition; there being no effective force in the country. I hope, however, the meaſures of our government are openeſs, and that we ſhall have ſome protection afforded us. Confidence between man and man is nearly extinct, and property is very much depreciated, in conſequence of the proſpect of a Spaniſh war. We are fortifying the City.

It is hinted in a popular French Journal, that the three Hanſe Towns will have to pay a forced loan of 30,000,000 of franks, out of which Hamburgh alone is to contribute 15 millions!

Chronological Compariſon.—On the 14th of October, Frederick I. was ſurpriſed in his camp, near Hockerchen, by the Auſtrians, and on the ſame day his ſiſter, the Margravine of Bayreuth, to whom he was moſt affectionately attached, died. Ever after he uſed to ſay, "The fourteenth of October is an unlucky day for Pruſſia." But little did the Great Frederick then think of the terrible diſaſter that awaited his country on the ſame day in the year 1806, when the fatal battle of Jena was fought.

New Orleans, Feb. 12.

It is this morning reported, and we believe the report to be true, that Col. Burr is now confined in one of the U. States armed veſſels before Natchez.

From the New York Spectator.

The following communication was received this morning thro the poſt-office.

A literary gentleman lately arrived in this city from England, furniſhes us with the following curious information. On the ſixteenth day of June, 1796, one hundred young ſcientific gentlemen, who had then juſt finiſhed their education in the Colleges of England and Scotland, met by appointment at Yarmouth, where they reſolved, under the ſtricteſt injunction of ſecrecy, "that each of them ſhould, in order to obtain correct information of the world, and of the cuſtoms, manners and diſpoſitions of mankind, quit their native iſland, and reſide for ten years ſucceſſively in different foreign countries, particularly ſpecified; and that they ſhould on the firſt day of September 1807, again meet together in London for the purpoſes of reading over their different journals and of preſwing the fame for publication." This ſtrange reſolution was actually put in practice and on the firſt day of January, 18 7, it was known to ſome ſcientific men in London, that thirteen of the young adventurers had died and that the remaining eighty ſeven would certainly meet next ſummer according to agreement. It was ſaid that one of theſe adventurers had conſtantly reſided in the city of New York, where he had collected a moſt valuable maſs of information. .M.

from London and Liverpool papers received at the office of the Baltimore Federal Gazette, by the Hercules, capt. Bradford.

[London and Liverpool, both to February 12, inclusive.]

A debate of confiderable importance took place laft night in the Commons, on the fubject of the late order in council refpecting neutral commerce. Lord Howick, in a very able fpeech, explained the principles upon which government had determined to conduct itfelf towards neutral nations, in confequence of the violent and unjuftifiable meafures employed by France. Their great object he ftated was to break up the coafting trade of that country and its dependencies, but not to deprive neutrals of a commerce, the maintenance of which was productive of great advantages, even to the hoftile ftates. Should the meafures already determined on be found infufficient, government will not hefitate to have recourfe to more vigorous proceedi gs.

It was rumoured yefterday, that Auftria had declared war againft France, and that official advices of this important determination had been received by government. It would afford us the higheft fatisfaction to be able to confirm fo pleafing an article of intelligence; but we fear the French army in Poland is not yet fo much reduced as to encourage the court of Vienna to aflume a line of conduct which muft end in a war of extermination with France. However pacific the difpofition of the cabinet of Vienna may be, it is impoffible that Auftria can enjoy the bleffings of peace one year longer. If the Ruffians prove victorious, fhe muft make common caufe with them; fhould they unfortunately be worfted, fhe will have to fight for exiftence.

The exertions making by the emperor of Ruffia for the vigorous profecution of the war are every way worthy the magnanimity of that monarch, and the immenfe extent and phyfical refources of the country over which he rules. He has iffued an order for the eftablifhment of a militia for the defence of the country, in cafe of neceffity, over and above the regular army. Of the 42 governments into which Ruffia is divided, 33 of the moft populous and moft expofed have been ordered to embody this militia without delay, according to a plan fubmitted to them. The number of men thus to be armed and equipped, is 612,000; and the other ten governments not enumerated are to fupply provifions, arms and ammunition, according to their means.

Difpatches were received by his majefty's miniflers this morning, from brigadier general Crauford.

The Ganges, of 74 guns, and the Captain, arrived yefterday at Portfmouth from Porto Praya, in the iflund of St. Jago, one of the Cape de Verds, which they left on the 11th day of January on which day the Spencer, captain Stopford, and the Thefeus, with brigadier general Craufurds expedition, failed to the fouthward. The Nereide frigate, with the tranfports, having on board the 9th light dragoons, together with the merchant-fhips for the river Plate, failed on the 6th from the Cape de Verds. The Troops were extremely healthy, and only one man had died on the paffage. The Nereide had been informed by a Portugueſe veſſel, of the recapture of Buenos Ayres.

The Ganges and the Captain fupplied the fhips with all their provifions and ftores, except enough for five weeks, which obliged their crews to be on fhort allowance; they had feven days provifions on board when they arrived at Portfmouth.

The expedition arrived at St. Jago on the 14th December. General Craufurd is fuppoſed to be going round Cape Horn.

It is to be remarked, that the French fay the Ruffians had a great many generals killed and wounded; yet they do not give us the name of one of them, tho as they took all the hofpitals, according to their own account, they would have been able to have found out the names. But let us fee what the French fuffered in killed and wounded:

Gen. Fenerolles, killed.

Marfhal Lafnes, Generals Vedel, Claperede, Treihard, Boufard, and Rapp; Colonels Semele, and Barthelemy, wounded.

Barraw, aid-de-camp to marfhal Befnieres, wounded.

Boifon, aid de-camp to marfhal Lafnes, killed.

Curial, aid-de camp to gen. Suchet, killed; and Segur, C. M. to Bonaparte, made prifoner.

We are forry to fee by accounts from Duolin, that an intention feems to be entertained of preffing the difcuffion of the Catholic queftion again this feffion. When the Catholic queftion was brot forward in 1805, we deprecated the difcuffion of it: we equally deprecate it now, and we fhall think it our duty to fupport the miniflers in refifting every attempt that may be made to induce them to bring forward the Catholic queftion at prefent.

It is fuppofed that madame Bonaparte's return to Paris is the forerunner of Bonaparte's return. But we hardly think he will quit Warfaw or Berlin immediately. He is at prefent almoft as much occupied with negociations as with military preparations; every lure and inducement has been thrown out to induce the king of Pruffia to make a feparate peace. On a fudden his tone with refpect to that Monarch and his beautiful and virtuous Queen has changed. We find none of that courfe and unmanly abufe which he indulged in the firft moments of his triumph and his victory; and our readers did not fail to remark the compliment paid to M. De Zaftrow, the new Pruffian Miniſter for foreign affairs. The miſſion of Baron Vincent is fuppofed to relate to peace; and it is added that he has been directed by the court of Vienna to aſſume a tone of vigour and deciſion—to ſtate definitely, that the emperor Francis ſaw the preſent ſtate of his Poliſh ſubjects with juſt apprehenſions; and that nothing would ſo effectually tranquilize reciprocal fears of his majeſty and his faithful ſubjects, as ſome proof of the emperor Napoleon's moderation, in acceding to the offered negociation of his Pruſſian majeſty. Upon this rumour, however, we muſt obſerve, that his Pruſſian majeſty has pledged himſelf not to make peace but in concert with the emperor of Ruſſia, who does not ſeem diſpoſed at preſent to enter into any negociation.

RUSSIAN MANIFESTO.

"The events which have ſpread over Europe the horrors of bloodſhed and deſolation, from an inſatiable thirſt of conqueſt and aggrandizement in the preſent uſurped government of France, are manifeſt to the whole world. Our endeavours to ſet bounds to this evil, and to preſerve the tranquility and integrity of Powers in alliance with us by pacific meaſures, all proved ineffectual. The perfidy with which the common enemy violates the ſanctity of treaties and the rights of nations, threatening Europe with univerſal deſtruction, incited us at laſt to take up arms in ſupport of neighbouring kingdoms. The ſeries of diſaſters that befel the Auſtrian armies, obliged that monarchy to conclude a diſadvantageous peace, on terms dictated by the conqueror, and the dire neceſſity of circumſtances. After this, Pruſſia vainly attempting to check the miſchief by the eſtabliſhment of a general and ſolid peace, through the means of negociation, notwithſtanding all her ſacrifices for the ſake of preſerving an alliance with France, notwithſtanding all her compliances with the demands of this common enemy, could not long remain exempt from the calamities of war.—Lulled into a ſtate of deluſive ſecurity by the proſpect of a peace which ſhe vainly hoped to enjoy, and the miſtaken confidence ſhe repoſed in a treacherous ally, ſhe was ſuddenly plunged into the very abyſs of ruin. The armies of Napoleon, falling on the Pruſſian troops before they had been able to unite, defeated them, and made an eaſy conqueſt of the defenceleſs capital, and ſeized the greateſt part of the provinces of that kingdom.

"In ſuch a ſituation of affairs, ſeeing this neighboring power, which divided the weſtern borders of our empire from France, deſtitute of all further means of defence, it became indiſpenſably neceſſary for us to advance our armies, under the command of Field Marſhal Count Ramenſkoy, for the defence of our territories, menaced on that ſide with an hoſtile invaſion; and having implored the protection of the Almighty, who ever eſpouſes the cauſe of the juſt, we ordered every effort to be made for the defeat of this dangerous aſſailant, who, in the proclamations he has publiſhed, carries his audacity ſo far, as openly to threaten that he will extend his triumph even over our dominions.

"At the commencement of this inevitable war, the whole burthen of which, after the total overthrow of our allies, devolves upon our country, we conſider it our firſt duty to redouble our unceaſing efforts for the preſervation of the tranquility and integrity of our empire, by augmenting and collecting the armed force of a faithful, brave, and magnanimous people, entruſted to our adminiſtration by Almighty Providence. The miſeries which have ſo rapidly overtaken the neighboring powers, evince the neceſſity of recourſe to unuſual means, to great and vigorous meaſures, which can only be carried into effect by a zealous attachment to our country, by a manly firmneſs of ſpirit, and a true ſenſe of national honor. A people really inſpired and actuated by ſentiments of that deſcription, arming in a body, may raiſe an inſurmountable rampart againſt every hoſtile attack, however formidable. Neglect in providing for their internal ſecurity, by ſuch general armaments, during the preſent conteſt with France, in oppoſition to her ſyſtem of plunder and rapine, has been attended with the moſt pernicious conſequences to Auſtria, and not a little contributed to the downfall of Pruſſia. Their late was determined by the loſs of a few battles; after which the enemy meeting no obſtacle, and dreading no oppoſition from an unarmed populace, ſuddenly forced his way through the interior provinces, ſpread deſolation and terror by his rapid and viole depredations, deſtroyed the tered remains of a routed and effected a total over their empires. The br the Ruſſian troops, and th ries which their unexampl neſs, for the courſe of a paſt, has gained over eve eign foe, to the remoteſt the earth—the trophie exiſting in various parts of realms which have been ca by their atchievements—in recollection of the glory have thus acquired, affords us the ſtrongeſt ground to hope that on the preſent occaſion, under the diſpenſations of Providence, whoſe bleſſings attend the arms of the juſt, all the machinations of our enemies may be confounded, and that the only traces they leave behind them upon our ſoil will be their own graves.

"The immenſe tract of country upon which theſe armies muſt act, occaſioning many difficulties in the way of their ſpeedy and mutual co-operation for the defence of an extenſive frontier, the evident danger will it would ariſe in caſe (which God forbid ſhould happen) the enemy might penetrate into the interior of our empire, compel us to adopt the moſt efficacious meaſures to avert it, by the eſtabliſhment of a general temporary armament of militia, which may be ready in all quarters at a moment's notice, to ſupport the regular troops, and able to oppoſe to the enemy at every ſtep the invincible force of the true ſons of their country, united for the preſervation of their moſt valuable enjoyments.

"In ſuch arduous circumſtances we refer with the fulleſt confidence to the diſtinguiſhed order of the hereditary Nobility of our Empire, by whoſe faithful ſervices in the field of battle, and extenſive ſacrifices both of life and property, Ruſſia has been elevated to her preſent greatneſs, to that order which by examples of heroiſm, has on all occaſions animated and aſſiſted the ſubordinate members of the empire to participate in the ſalvation, defence, and glory of our country. The memorable proofs of patriotiſm and of loyalty diſplayed in ancient and in modern times by the nobility of Ruſſia, and their well known readineſs on every occaſion, where the common good require their exertion, to obey the ſummons of their ſovereign, and to meet with ſpirit every toil, and every danger for the ſervice of the empire, convince us how cordially, zealouſly, and efficacioufly, it will co-operate with us for the ſpeedy and ſucceſsful completion of ſuch a proviſional armament or militia, as is indiſpenſably required, and now ordained for public ſecurity, according to the regulations annexed hereto.

"We are likewiſe well aſſured that our faithful corporations, and every claſs of citizens, as well as the crown peaſants, and free boors through the country, will unite their efforts to beat the common burden of this important public duty, for the defence of our holy faith, and for individual preſervation.

"May the ſervants of the Church of God offer up in concert with ourſelves and all our faithful ſubjects, the moſt fervent prayers towards the Supreme Diſpoſer of events, that he may ſhed his divine favour on our efforts to avert the common danger, to vanquiſh, and exterminate the foe, and to reſtore the bleſſings of peace and tranquility to the heart of our Empire.

Latest Foreign Intelligence.

By an arrival at Boston.

Elbing, January 29.

The French Marshal Bernadotte marched from hence on the 24th, and Marshal Ney was advancing to form a junction with him, but the former has been defeated by a combined Russian and Prussian corps: 4,000 French were made prisoners, 10 pieces of cannon taken, 2 stands of colours, and the whole of Bernadottes baggage.— The Russian Lieutenant-General Von Anrepp was killed. Bernadotte was driven 20 leagues from Elbing. Ney retreated to Przansiez, in East Prussia. The former is surrounded, but the latter has joined Murat. The Russian army consists of 200,000 men, and is daily augmenting.

A letter from Counsellor Thevenß, dated Marienwerder, January 27, says the remains of Bernadottes army are cut off; that Murat has been wounded and taken; Bernadotte severely wounded; Ripp killed; Fouchier made prisoner; that the contributions of Elbing, 6,000 crowns, were taken; that Bonaparte was ill of a nervous fever at Warsaw; that the blockade of Graudenz is raised, that Lannes has lost both his legs; that 6000 French were killed, and 4 000 wounded; and that Gen. Victor had been made prisoner, and had arrived at Dantzic.

Warsaw, Feb. 2.

The Emperor continues frequently to make short excursions. An order has been issued at Polen to arrest all per ons who say any thing to the prejudice of the Grand army. This order is in consequence of the scandalous reports that get abroad.

The Polish army has marched against Dantzic, and are before that place.

The French have appeared in the vicinity of Stralsund.

Their Prussian Majesties are at Koningsberg. Their return thither is considered a proof of their confidence, that the French will not be able to advance.

The French have evacuated Elbing; also Ostrolenka, and some other places, confidered too far advanced from the main body.

Alcona, Feb. 13.

Bonoparte has offered to the Swedes, if they will make peace, to give them Norway belonging to the Danes!!! The Swedes refused the offer, and fent the letters to the Court of Denmark. The King of Sweden is ftated to have faid, "I fhall never, in my life, become the ally of fuch a robber as you."

Apprehenfions are entertained of a vifit from the Ruffians in Italy.

It appears that a battle which ended in favour of the Ruffians, took place at Mohringen, January 26. The Ruffians attacked the left wing under Ponte Corvo.

The Ruffian advanced poffs were at Culm, on the banks of the Viftula.

There cannot be the leaft doubt of the recent fuccefs of the Ruffians, as they abfolutely occupy places which have been in poffeffion of the French.

The 54th bulletin fays, Marfhal Ney advanced 20 leagues, & returned, without lofs.

The French are faid to be in great want of provifions.

London, Feb. 20.

Sir Home Popham has arrived from the River Plate: has been put under arreft, and muft be tried; but he is treated with much refpect. Government appears determined to try Buenos Ayres once more; but Monte Vieds will probably be firft attacked.

Sir H. Popham returned in an American fhip.

The queftion for emancipating the Irifh Catholics is to be again agitated in Parliament.

February 23.

The 55th bulletin is dated at Warfaw, Jan. 29. It gives an account of the battle of Mohringen, Jan. 25. The French were commanded by the Prince of Ponte Corvo. It fays the Ruffians were driven two leagues, loft 1200 killed, and 300 prifoners.

Some inhabitants of Polifh Pruffia have been ordered to be fhot for concealing deferters.

February 24.

It is faid the Ruffian Miniftry have protefted to the Engliih government, the draft of a commercial treaty, which puts the Britifh trade to the Baltic on a level with that of the native Ruffian merchant, from port to port. The greater part of the alien duties, as far as refpects Great Britain, are to be taken off; and it is even expected, that Ruffia will employ her mediation with the court of Denmark, to procure, in favor of England, a conliderable diminution on the duties paid at the Sound. The latter would be an ineftimable advantage to the Britifh mer hant.

Gen. Whitelock is to fail immediately for South America, with an expedition.

By accidents in the crowding of the extraordinary large mob, collected yefterday at the execution of two murderers, 24 men and 3 women were killed, thirteen men & three women wounded.

February 25.

The Ruffian official report of the battle of the 25th, between the Ruffians and Pruffians and Bernadotte's and Ney's divifions, has been received, and amply confirms us in the opinion we have invariably maintained, that the French were defeated. But the defeat appears to have been much more decifive than we were at firft induced to believe. That obfcure part of the 54th Bulletin which ftated Ney's divifion to have advanced twenty leagues from its cantonments, and to have returned without fuftaining any lofs, is now explained. Ney had marched to reinforce Bernadotte for the purpofe, as it fhould feem, of purfuing on to Koningfberg. But the Ruffians and Pruffians, by a rapid and maiterly movement, interpofed a ftrong column between them, drove back Ney, and prevented the junčti n. There appears to have been two battles. The 54th bulletin, in alluding to Ney's advance and retreat, does not inform us that there was any action—it merely fays, that the Ruffian army took the alarm, and made a movement on the right of Ney's divifion.—But we now find that on the 24th January, the Ruffians and Pruffians attacked Ney, near Mohringen, and compelled him to fall back to Pizaniez, in Eaft Pruffia, where he j ined Murat's divifion. On the next day the Ruffians attacked part of Bernadotte's divifion under Gen. Packot: Bernadotte himfelf then brought his whole divifion againft them. A defperate conflict enfued, which terminated in the defeat of Bernadotte, who loft 4,000 men made prifoners, and all his baggage.— The immediate conlequence of this victory was the evacuation of Elbing, by the remains of Bernadotte's divifion—indeed it fhould feem as if, after the battle of the 25th, Bernadotte had been unable to return to Elbing, for the official report of the Ruffians and Pruffians ftates him to have been driven into the foreft of Stratburgh, twenty leagues from Elbing, where his corps is completely furrounded, and it was fuppofed, would be completely cut off.

The confequences of the battle of the 25th are very important—the combined Ruffians and Pruffians have re occupied Elbing—the Pruffians are at Merienwerder, the Ruffians at Culm, on the banks of the Viftula—the blockade of Graudenz has been raifed, and the King of Pruffia, who had retired to Memel, has returned to Koningfberg.

The Editor thinks the manly energy and good fenfe, with the ftrong facts and their conlequence difplayed & laid down by Candidus in the following Letter to Counfellor Emmett, are the beft apology for his publifhing it in the Gazette. Bafe muft be the outcaft incendiary who attempts to confume the manfion opened as his afylum; or viper like fting the arm extended for his protection. After laying he hopes, thole remarks may never have a caufe to apply directly to any denizen of this happy country, the Editor forbears all further comment.

From the Morning Chronicle.

To Thomas A. Emmet, Efq.

Sir,

The conduct you have lately adopted, while it excites concern and deep regret in the bofoms of your friends, has occafioned furprize, and I muft add indignation in the community at large. From the tranquil citizen, the impartial individual, we have feen you transformed in an inftant to the brawling demagogue, the inflammatory fa&ionift.—Is this well done, Sir? Is this the department befitting a ftranger in our country, indebted to its courtefy, to its bounteous liberality for a fubfiftance? Perfecuted in your native land for your political opinions (or rather as I now fufpect, for your political intemperance) you took fhelter like many of your fellow countrymen on our friendly fhores.—The ftory of your fufferings had reached our ears; whether detailed with unvarnifhed fidelity, or artfully heightened by the hyperbole of party, I will not determine, it fufficed to excite an intereft in our bofoms, which are ever ready to fympathife with thofe who we think, have fuffered political oppreffion. With that unbefitating confidence in which my countrymen have often indulged to their injury, we hailed you on your arrival among us with the falutations of friendfhip, we extended to you the hand of unreferved cordiality, we overwhelmed you with kindnefs.—We did no Sir; we made the very laws of our country bend to your neceffities, we admitted you to the full enjoyment of profeffional powers, which our own citizens muft undergo a long and toilfome probation ere they can attain. You were in a manner adopted by the commonwealth, and participated in the advantages of its native children. Heaven preferve you from turning Jugartha and affailing the rights and intereits of your adopted brethren, from ferpent-like ftinging the bofom that cherifhed you. Accufe me not, fir, of trifling wildly or indulging in unreafonable apprehenfions, my fears are kindled by your own inflammatory conduct, by the hatdy ftcps you have already taken. Though fcarcely eftablifhed in our country, bef you can feel the local intere s of a citizen, and certainly before you can have acquired a correct idea of local politics and local intereits, you have rafhly entered into the conflicts of an unprincipled fa&ion and directed your blind and precipitate attacks at the characters of honorable individuals.

This conduct highly cenfurable as it would be in any perfon placed in your peculiar and delicate fituation, is the more reprehenfible coming from you, as it is entirely oppofite to that line of deportment you had marked out, and to which you pretended to adhere. You have effected to hold yourfelf aloof from party, to obferve a moft fcrupulous delicacy towards every queftion that might turn on political principles, and even to decline the exercife of your profeffion when politics might be involved in legal diicuffion. Such behaviour was highly laudable if adopted with fincerity and adhered to with firmnefs. It evinced at leaft that you knew the path of propriety that you left it was your duty to be filent on national inquiries of which you were but little informed, where delufion & mifreprefentation abounded, where truth was obfcured and error dangerous.

Was this all mere affectation and hypocrify, were then profeffions of impartiality all hollow artifices? Did you feek to win our confidence by your pretended candour and diiintereftedne's, that you might the eafier ftill us at an unguarded moment, and deal a deadly blow when we were unprepared to ward off your aflaults? I hope, I truft not—I would rather accufe you of a fickle mind, and inftability of opinion, than fo deplorable a want of fincerity and truth. What can have induced you fo fuddenly to change your character, and abandon the honorable independence you had aflumed! Was it the profufe promifes of a defperate fa&ion? Was it the golden vifions, the official dignities with which they regaled your imagination? I cannot confent to believe fo—Though irretrievably funk in my eftimation, yet I would rather accufe you of rafhnefs, than fubtle ambition, of habitual political turbulence, rather than unprincipled cupidity.

Why, Sir, have you worked up the paffions of your countrymen? Why have you addreffed them exclufively? Why have you endeavored to keep up a line of diftinction that will render them fe veral and feparate from their fellow citizens, that will diftinguifh them into an individual mafs actuated by fa&ion conliderations, and infenfible to the general intereits? Why have you in a manner elected yourfelf their chief, and attempted to put bridles in their mouths, by which they may be checked and guided and led at pleafure according to your fu ture? Why have you prefumptuoufly inftilled into their minds opinions derogatory to the characters and intereits of individuals who have ever been high in the eftimation and truft of their country, until you a ftranger in the land, have dared to affail them in their paternal manfions!

I again demand why have you addreffed yourfelf exclufively to your countrymen? Why have you artfully contrived to render a charitable aflociation fubfervient to the defigns of fa&ion? Do you wifh to attract to them the jealoufy of their fellow citizens? or do you with them to move together like a phalanx, intruding themfelves in a body in our public affairs, bearing down all oppofition by a dangerous confederacy, and reviving their fcenes of turbulence, of mob, of riot and confufion that once diftracted your unhappy country.

Under a government like ours, Sir, in a land fwarming with foreigners, you muft well know that there is nothing more obnoxious to public tranquility than national coalitions. If by your officious and mifguiding intermeddling you bring yourfelf and your coherents into odium, you will bitterly repent, when repentance can produce nothi g but upbraiding. If you intend to recruit your countrymen into a political band and place yourfelf at their head, if you with to eftablifh an Irifh intereft in this country that fhall be continually producing fchifms and diiturbances, it is the duty of every firm, reafonable, and patriotic citizen to oppofe himfelf openly to your hoftilities, and to thwart your incendiary defigns in every ftep of their development.

CANDIDUS.

Dear Sir,

WITH inexpreffible pleafure I learned that you had been e va es to a Chieftainfhip in the ifland of Terra del Fuego, where your late illuftrious relative once p efided with fo much dignity; and where the mildnefs and difintereftedne's of his adminiftration ftone with fuch refplendence. Thus it is with every admiiftration wherein "talent, manner and education" are leading features; under fuch, difcontents become quickly diffipated, malevolence fhrinks from the light, and turbulence is forced to fecrecy. I enjoin it upon you as a duty, of which I hope you will never lofe fight, to recal to your mind frequently the merits of that gre t man, which were fo highly appreciated, that not fuffering him, like a flower, to wafte his fweets in the defart, he was recalled to enjoy the laurels at his native home, which he had gathered abroad with fo much honor to himfelf and advantage to his country. Poffeffed of equal merit and greater enterprife, from your prefent honorable elevation, you may reafonably anticipate an equal refult. It is, in any event, not a dubious, but a bona fide, folid, and not unwelcome addition to your income and conlequence; and is withal a powerful incentive, and greatly extends the moral and political fphere of your action. That you will not neglect the proper application of whatever means are put in your power, I am fully confident, and being now with a regular income, aided by your patrimonial revenues, in a fituation to effect a diverfity of purpofes, to which you were inadequate before entering upon your eftate, and whilft ftruggling with the uncertainty of practice, much is to be "hoped for," and fomething muft be "effected." But I will drop your public to fay fomething of your private concerns; fince you are not exempt from common viciffitudes, and from your acceptance of a public employment, have virtually become public property; it conlequently follows, that you are in fome meafure tranfferrible and fubject to changes of refidence. You will, therefore, be aware of the impolicy of encumbring yourfelf with the fee fimple of a houfe, or fuperfluous chattels. A more prudent plan will be to feale a temporary dwelling at a cheap rate, and if poffible, ready furnifhed; which you may change as often as expedient, or whim may dictate. Should you be difpofed to give a preference, let it be to a widow, if any can be met with; for it is a duty incumbent upon every individual to fuccour, as much as in them lies, the fatherlefs and the widow, independent of thefe inducements, where duty and inclination are not at variance, not affect your intereits, it will be a pleafing thing to have it in your power to affift the helplefs. I fhall ther fore take it for granted, that you will feleft the houfe of fome widow for your refidence. But notwithftanding, let not a paroxifm of fudden or heated benevolence betray you into the inconfiderate and vulgar error of paying your rents in advance, for the ordinary conlequence of fuch premature payment is, as my brother Simon has expreffed it, "that thereby the landlady becometh lifted up, and peradventure, will carry herfelf lofftly towards thee:" in which cafe you become a party in, and if not the author, are neverthelefs the caufe of evil; a thing you fhould fedulouffy guard againft, always bearing in mind, that your moral obligations are equal, if not paramount to your written ones and oaths of office. Untimely inveftments are with! indifferent precedents, and hold up a bad example for imitation, which, as a Father and a Chieftain, you are equally bound to difcountenance. Early habits you know are generally lafting, and commonly adhere to us though life; it is therefore incumbent upon you to be diligent in inftilling into the mind of your hopeful offfpring, precepts of thrift and oeconomy in pecuniary concerns, particularly where d fburfements are the object. Your own folid judgement will p int out to you the juftice of thefe remarks, by what motives they were dictated, and the propriety of adopting them as a rule of conduct.

You will alfo readily forefee the manifeft inconvenience of being burthened with a redundancy of chattels; for, in the event or neceffity of a fudden removal, you would experience them to be a troublefome accompanyment; exclufive of the anxiety they would caufe, you would find that the unavoidable expence of tranfport would devour money with the voracity of a vulture.

Experience being beyond all argument, I cannot illuftrate in a more forcible manner the truth of this reafoning, than by quoting an appropriate inftance from my own and the recollection of many others:—"From a concurrence of circumftances truly unfortunate to this country, a gentleman found it neceffary to remove on a very fhort fummons. With equal judgement and prudence he forefaw and avoided the evi I am pointing out; by divefting himfelf of every thing cumbrous and unneceffary, he left Terra del Fuego without the folicitude, which muft be felt by every one who has property at the mercy of the elements or enemy. From well timed precaution he did not expofe his plate to corrofion by fea-water, nor his carriages to ruin by difmantling or repacking; whilft by a happy coincidence of exemplary prudence and judgement, his amiable better half preferved inviolate the unity of the peripherualia. Thus unencumbered, they with the other family addenda, travelled in all the quiet and carelefsfeels of elegant eafe, unexpoied to the negligence or piracy of domeftics and equally unaffected by the threatenings of the ftorm or apprehenfions of the foe."

I rely wholly upon your difcretion to provide for the paffage from Conlica to the place of deftination; with other fea ftock and a family medicine chefl, do not neglect good ftore of pig-tail and fpruces, for to forego luxuries (become neceffary from habit) is peculiarly irkfome at fea, where time in its higheft moments, hangs heavily upon all, but the mariner.

And let me enjoin upon you, as a matter of the utmoft importance to yourfelf and fociety, that in the unpleafant event of encountering an enemy upon the ocean, you be moft cautioufly guarded; beware of expofing yourfelf to the danger of death or mutilation, one is difagreeable, and the other difiiguring, none but the thoughtlefs and fool-hardy would be fo childifh as to act otherwife. Recollect at all times, and on fuch an occafion more particularly, that to throw your life away wantonly would be to rob the public irreparably. Venture not for any conlideration upon the gun deck or any other apochryphal part of the veffel, the cockpit is a more eligible fituation, where the fublimity of an engagement may be contemplated in all its grandeur, without interference or interruption. Reminding you that felfpreiervation is the firft law of nature, I will not for a moment indulge the uneafy apprehenfion that in fuch cafe you would act imprudently or illegally. With the aflurance that you fhall hear from me immediately after your arriva!,

I am with "high conlideration," your obedient fervant,
STEPHANUS SOLOMONI.

Come when it will, from Heav'n's all righteous hand,
To love, or to avenge, each injured land,

And France, unfetter'd, trample on his tomb.

But thee, loved Chief! what genuine griefs bemoan!
Fleets, cities, camps; the cottage and the throne!
Round thy throng'd hearſe, thoſe mingling ſorrows flow,
And ſeek faint ſolace in a pomp of woe!

Yet not the vows thy weeping country pays,
Not that decree, thy mourning Sovereign's praiſe;
Not that the great, the beauteous, and the brave
Bend, in mute reverence, o'er thy cloſing grave;
That with ſuch grief as bathes a kindred breaſt,
Collective nations mourn a death ſo dear;—
Not theſe alone ſhall ſoothe thy ſainted ſhade,
And conſecrate the ſpot where thou art laid!
Not theſe alone. But, burſting through the gloom,
With radiant glory from thy trophied tomb,
The ſacred ſplendour of thy deathleſs name
Shall grace and guard thy country's martial fame,
Far-ſeen, ſhall blaze the unextinguiſh'd ray,
A mighty beacon, lighting glory's way!—
With living luſtre this proud land adorn,
And ſhine, and ſave, through ages yet unborn!

By that pure fire, before that hallow'd tomb,
Heroes and chiefs in valour's opening bloom,
Frequent, in ſolemn pilgrimage ſhall ſtand,
And vow to prize, like thee, their native land;
With pious ardour thy bright courſe purſue,
And bid thy blended virtues live anew:—
Thy ſkill to plan; thy enterprize to dare;
Thy might to ſtrike; thy clemency to ſpare;
Thy zeal, in which no thought of ſelf had part,
But thy loved country fill'd up all thy heart;
That conſcious worth, from pride from meanneſs free,
And manners mild as guileleſs infancy;
The ſcorn of wordly wealth; the thirſt of fame
Unquenchable; the bluſh of generous ſhame;
And bounty's genial flow, and friendſhip's holy flame!

And ſure, if e'er the ſpirits of the bleſt
Still fondly cheriſh, in the realms of reſt,
Their human paſſions; thine are ſtill the ſame;—
Thy zeal for England's ſafety and her fame!
And when in after-times, with vain deſire,
Her baffled foes in reſtleſs hate conſpire
From her fair brow th' unfading wreath to tear,
Thy hand,—and hands like thine,—have planted there—
Thou, ſacred ſhade! in battle hovering near,
Shalt win bright victory from her golden ſphere,
To float aloft, where England's enſign flies,
With angel wings, and palms from Paradiſe!

Ceaſe then the funeral ſtrain!
—Lament no more,
Whom, ripe for fate, 'twere impious to deplore!
He died the death of glory!—
Ceaſe to mourn,
And cries of grief to ſongs of triumph turn!
—Ah, no! Awhile, ere reaſon's voice o'erpow'rs
The fond regret that weeps a loſs like ours,
Though thine own gallant ſpirit, wiſe as brave,
Begg'd of kind Heav'n the illuſtrious end it gave;
Though rival chiefs, waile fondly they recall
Thy ſtoried combats, and thy glorious fall,
Count with juſt pride thy laurels as they bloom,
But envy leſs thy triumphs than thy tomb;—
Yet, yet, awhile the natural tear may flow,
Nor cold reflection chide the chaſtening woe;
Awhile uncheck'd the tide of ſorrow ſwell:
Thou braveſt, gentleſt ſpirit! fare thee well!

LADIES.

(From the 11th number of Bell's monthly publication of la Belle Aſſemblee.

MORNING DRESS,

Of French cambric, made with a train; plain waiſt, rather high behind, and ſharply rounded at the cheſt; trimmed round the bottom with muſlin a la corkſcrew; long and very full ſleeves, edged at the hands with the ſame; a blue ribband round the waiſt, terminating with bows and ends on the right ſide. The cap a la claiſier, entirely concealing the hair, flowing looſe, and ſhading the face on the left ſide, gathered above the right eye-brow in a ſort of irregular noſe, and ſimply confined round the head with a blue ribband, which finiſhing behind with a bow, forms the crown, or cawl of the cap. A neckerchief, or ſhirt, fitting full in the front, and high towards the throat, with a deep falling collar, embroidered at the edge. Limerick gloves, and jean ſhoes.

Mourning full, or Opera dreſs.

A Spaniſh veſt and petticoat of Italian crape, worn over white ſatin, with a rich border of embroſſed velvet, terminating at the extreme edge with a narrow Vandyke, or fringe of bugles; the petticoat gathered in a drapery towards the right knee, with a chord and taſſels; the front of the veſt made high, and formed in irregular horizontal gathers; confined with two narrow bands of bugles, terminating at the corners of the boſom, where the veſt flows looſe, and forms the ſquare buſt, which is finiſhed with a pearl or diamond broach in the centre. A ſhort full twiſted, or ruckled ſleeves, bordered at the bottom ſimilar with the veſt. The hair in a plain band round the right temple, relieved, and terminated by looſe curls, which commence on the crown of the head, and flow in long irregular ringlets from the left eye-brow, ſo as to reach the ſhoulder. A plain lace veil, with ſlight border, faſtened on the crown of the head, falling over the right ſide of the boſom, and reaching below the waiſt. A pearl or diamond ornament, blended with the hair, over the left eye. Necklace, earrings, and bracelets to correſpond. White ſilk gloves, white ſatin ſhoes. Fan of Ebony, inlaid with ivory, and ſilver mounted.

General obſervations.

The mourning for the reſpected, and venerable Duke of Brunſwick, though principally deſigned for the Court, was, on its firſt commencement, a cuſtom very generally adopted by the multitude: and our public places in conſequence exhibited an aſpect of gloom and ſolemnity. The cloud has, however, begun to diſperſe; and the rainbow tints of faſhion and variety again call forth our obſervation, and attract us more immediately to admire thoſe graces they are deſtined to illuminate.

The fawn-coloured peliſſe, and mantle of keſſeymere velvet, or farinet in divers forms, have reſumed their popularity: nor do we recollect ever to have ſeen a colour ſo juſtly entitled to public ſuffrage; it is unobtruſively elegant, and attracts by its ſimplicity. The Ruſſian mantle, given in our laſt, is much in requeſt; alſo the plain keſſeymere coat, trimmed down the front, round the bottom, collar and cuffs, with Trafalgar trimming of the ſame colour; and is worn with a cottage bonnet, or yeoman hat, to correſpond. The velvet peliſſe, flowing open as a robe, and the Cardinal coat, are leſected by the moſt faſhionable females: but the moſt novel of this ſpecies of habiliment is the Roman mantle. It is compoſed of a long width of keſſeymere, and is trimed quite round, with a fue of the Leopard's ſkin. It is cut in the moſt fanciful form; wrapping round the figure in front, and falling in two points towards the left ſide, and behind; from which points are ſuſpended taſſels the colour of the mantle, which confine it alſo on the neck, it having no cape. A plain hat, of the ſame materials as the mantle, is uſually worn with it. It has a flat brim, which is gently turned up towards the left ſide, and lined with Leopard's ſkin. A ſilk chord round the crown, finiſhed with full ſilk taſſels in front, is its only ornament. The effect of this cuſtom on an elegant figure, is beyond deſcription attractive and ſplendid; but to be adopted with confidence requires the accompaniment of a carriage. We have obſerved a new and uſeful ornament in the ſtyle of a tippet, which we think worthy of deſcription. It is compoſed of velvet or twill farinet, cut in the form of a ſcarf, with ſharp rounded ends, reaching within a quarter of a yard of the feet. The back and ſhoulders are cut in the form of a coachman's mape, or in the ſhape of a tippet. The ſcarf is put in full on the ſhoulder, and is uſually lined through out with a coloured farinet, agreeably contraſted with the outſide; and is invariably trimmed with ſkin, either blue fox, ſquirrel, or leopard. The long ſcarf a la pariſot, compoſed of mohair, or thaw muſlin in imitation, is a moſt diſtinguiſhed ornament. Its colours are generally ſalmon, cream-colour, orange, and fawn. It has a rich border, happily contraſted with the ground; and on the latter are large variegated ſpots, where the gold coloured ſilk is chiefly predominant.

In the laſt weeks Gazette was given a letter from Candidus to counſellor Emmet, extracted from the New York papers, from the ſame ſource we give ſome further extracts. Happy to recognize in the true American ſpirit, the genuine deſcendants of a glorious anceſtry. We rejoice to ſee that no ruſtian fugitive, ejected from his native country for his crimes, will be tamely ſuffered to recommence his hoſtile and malevolent practices among them. We ſhould have preſumed, that from his having ſo nearly fallen a victim to his ſanguinary politics, the recollection could not ſo quickly have been obliterated from his mind, and that his widow-making patriotiſm, might have been ſtifled in Ireland, without willing a renewal on the ſcenes of a repetition of its effects in America. We are of opinion that, as his celebrity is on the wane, and as he is travelled in the vale of years, he ought to devote his remaining days to repentance, and the expiation of crimes, which has ſet ſore turbulence at work, and his rebellious conduct contributed to make p y. Quarrying with that of others, equally infamous, his inſidious and guileful "love for the people" (we beg pardon for uſing the proſtituted terms) led them firſt to diſcontent, from diſcontent to treaſon, and from treaſon to the perpetration of crimes, of which, the ſore recital begets horror.

Let it be remembered by the Britiſh reader, that this man is not yet a denizen of the United States, that his reſidence has been too ſhort amongſt them to entitle him to the franchiſes of a citizen; and that now, (hopeful coadjutor of Paine's) he is boldly employed in the diabolical toil of tormenting diviſions, eſtabliſhing factions, and all the unhallowed luxuries of diſcord and ſedition, and this in a country, whoſe altars of benevolence he has profaned, by ſacrificing to fell ingratitude, civil diſſenſion, and embryo rebellion. We devoutly wiſh that his miſguided emigrant countrymen may not through levity or a blind fatality, be deluded by him, or any other deteſtable demagogue a ſecond time, nor court a ſecond baniſhment, whilſt ſmarting under the ſting of the firſt. It is to be hoped that they have too juſt a ſenſe of their ſituation, and too great a portion of gratitude for American benefactions, to enter into his nefarious meaſures, or become dupes and victims to his unhappy propenſities, or treaſonable predilection. Happy is it for mankind, that nature produces few ſuch monſters; one alone, is a ſufficient curſe to a province, a ſtate, a nation, or an empire, may heaven preſerve us from a ſimilar ſcourge.

Thomas Addis Emmet.—It is with the deepeſt regret, we find this gentleman, who ſince he found an aſylum in our hitherto happy country, has until recently, conducted himſelf in ſuch a manner as to gain the confidence and eſteem of our citizens in general—it is with the utmoſt regret we now find him enliſting under the banners of the moſt unprincipled and inveterate cluſter of Jacobins that has ever reared its head in the American Republic. What motive can induce him thus to relinquiſh the tranquil walks of his profeſſional life? What can prompt him thus to relinquiſh the eſteem and the confidence of the beſt men in the community; and once more put his fame and his domeſtic comforts all at on the billows of revolutionary commotion?

At preſent, we ſhall ſay nothing of his inflammatory ſpeech on Thurſday laſt, to the Hibernian Society.

The following is a letter addreſſed by Mr E. to Mr King, through that vehicle of filth and falſehood, the Citizen:

To Rufus King Eſq.

Sir,

From certain paragraphs in the Evening Poſt, I apprehend that it may become neceſſary for me to ſolicit my caſe upon the public. As in that event I ſhould wiſh to derive ſome credit from the character of my adverſary, I requeſt to be informed whether you purpoſe ſubmitting to the world any explanation of your interfe ence with the Britiſh government reſpecting the Iriſh ſtate priſoners in 1798?

I put the queſtion in this way, becauſe I have not the honour of any perſonal acquaintance with you; becauſe I intend that every thing which may paſs between you and me on this ſubject ſhall be public, and becauſe I have been informed that private applications for an explanation of that tranſaction have been heretofore made to you by ſome of my fellow ſufferers from your conduct, and that you did not think fit to favor them with a reply.

I am, Sir, your moſt obedient humble ſervant,

THOS. ADDIS EMMET.

Citizen Genet.—It is ſaid and believed that this "man of notorious memory" has lately become a prominent tool of the Clinton faction. Indeed, from various circumſtances, he has long been viewed with a ſuſpicious eye. He has at length laid aſide the maſk, and aſſumed a bold and reſolute front; and it is believed by many, that he is not a ſecondary ſpring in the great machine.

Have the American people forgotten the conduct of this man, when he firſt landed on our ſhores? Have they forgotten his baſe attempt to involve our country in the war of Europe?—the proclamations he iſſued—the commiſſions he executed? Have they forgotten his appeal to the people, his attempt to ſever the affections of our citizens from their government, from the venerable Waſhington and his companions in council, when he found that he could neither perſuade nor drive the Adminiſtration into a compliance with his wiſhes? Have they forgotten that it was through the Jacobin Clubs throughout our country, and labored with the malign ty of a Robeſpierre to plant in its boſom the ſeeds of rank & perpetual diſcord? Have they forgotten the meaſures and the avowed principles of the faction to which Genet is allied by marriage, by habits and by feelings? Fellow citizens!—Review the columns of the Jacobinic print in this city, for years paſt. See the leaders of the party letting their faces like a flint againſt all appropriations for the defence of our city and harbor.—Hear them urge the means, that we want no other ſeparations than the unoffending ſimplicity of our manners. See them invite a French Army to land on our ſhores, to ſcour our ſtreets, and butcher our innocent and unoffending citizens. View this, and then tell us whether Genet is a mere cog wheel, or the prime mover, of the engine which is to barter down the freedom, tranquility and happineſs of our country.—N. Y. Spectator.

The York Gazette.

YORK, May 9, 1807.

The Editor is happy to announce that Mr. John Bennett, late publiſher of the Upper Canada Gazette, is now officially aſſociated with him in the publication of the Gazette. Their utmoſt efforts will be united to make it inſtructive and agreeable to their readers, ſubſcribers, and the community at large. With the hope that they may not be diſappointed, and the aſſurance that their endeavours will keep pace with public patronage, they will be ſtattered to receive orders and commiſſions in their line, addreſſed to Cameron and Bennett.

On Tueſday the 5th inſt. His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and his Secretary, Major Hilton, accompanied by Mr. Chief Juſtice Scott, a party of gentlemen from the garriſon, and the gentlemen of the Indian department at this place, proceeded to the River Credit, and the next day ſuperintended the innoculation of twenty-four perſons of the Miſſiſſagie tribe of Indians, with the vaccine matter. Mr. Kerbe of the 41ſt regiment performed the operation. A number more of Indians attended for the purpoſe, but from the want of matter, their inoculation was deferred until the 14th inſt.

Much is to be hoped from the mildneſs of the vaccine infection, as from their mode of living and inattention; the ſmall pox has hereſofore been very fatal among the N. A. Indians.

By a gentleman of this town, directly from the head of the lake, we learn that an attempt was made about the 4th inſtant, to commit murder in that neighborhood. We have not been able to aſcertain the names of the parties, one of which, with a wood axe, ſtruck the other two blows. The fate of the wounded man is uncertain, but it was ſuppoſed the conſequence would be death. Steps were taken to bring the offender to juſtice.

The crops of wheat in that quarter have the moſt promiſing appearance. The Meſſrs. Hatts, merchants of Ancaſter, have between two and three thouſand barrels of flour for export ation.

The Editor, having underſtood, that an individual applies to himſelf the character of del Torpedo, in the Oſnabrian letters already publiſhed; and having been informed that they diſpleaſe, where it is not his wiſh to offend; begs leave to acquaint his friends the ſubſcribers, and the public, that no more of the Letters will be publiſhed in the Gazette, but that it he is allowed to retain the preſs a ſufficient time, he will certainly publiſh them ſeparately. Aware that the ſource from whence he derives his preſent appointment, can annul or reſume it at pleaſure, he is far from wiſhing to ſacrifice it wantonly, or that any part of his conduct ſhould bring upon him, enmity or diſpleaſure, either individual or Collective. Still, feeling all the pride of an individual ever independent and liberal in principle, whole every act, knows no other origin or motive, he pledges himſelf to a generous public, that the future ſhall accord, with the honeſt part of his life, and that ſhould he to morrow be doomed to a perſon, he will preſerve his principles uncontaminated.

He regrets that, ſo immediately after publiſhing his intention, relative to the conduct of the preſs—he ſhould be under the neceſſity of reiterating the declaration, that, whilſt it is intruſted to him, he will be the avowed enemy, and unrelenting expoſitor of infamy and turpitude, and whilſt the priviledge of ſpeech is allowed (ſhould Heaven in its anger deny him all other means) he will hold up their puthors to deteſtation. If the Tree is known by its fruits, he can appeal to the experience of his Country for a proof of his principles; he can call upon his fellow ſubjects to pronounce, whether his attachment has been maſtifeſted by empty boaſts, by hollow profeſſions, or dubious effects. He can proudly anticipate their anſwer. The monuments of his principles, the memorials of his attachment, remain, and however painful the egotiſm and neceſſity of a ſtatement may be, the retroſpect is pleaſing and leaves to him,

"What nothing earthly gives or can deſtroy,"
"The ſouls calm ſunſhine and, the heartfelt joy."

DEPARTED this life, on the evening of Thurſday the ſeventh inſtant; Mrs. WILLCOCKS, the lady of W. WILLCOCKS Eſq. of this Town. Her maternal and amiable virtues, will cauſe her death, to be deeply regretted by the whole circle of her acquaintance.

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE ſubſcriber conſidering it a duty incumbent on him, offers his moſt ſincere thanks to his Friends and late Cuſtomers for the liberal Patronage and ſupport which he formerly ſo amply experienced; and begs leave to inform them, that he has now formed a connexion with Mr. John Cameron in Printing and publiſhing the YORK GAZETTE—earneſtly ſoliciting a further continuance of their friendſhip and ſupport, and hoping by his affiduity and attention, to merit a ſhare of the public confidence and favor.

An Act to Establish the Fees of the Clerks of the Peace, and to regulate the Fees in the several Courts of Quarter Sessions throughout this Province

WHEREAS it is proper to establish the fees of the different clerks of the peace in this province, and that provision be made for the payment of costs arising in the courts of general quarter sessions;

BE it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, an act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act the following fees shall be allowed to the different clerks of the peace in this province; for drawing the precept and attending commissioners to sign the same, and transmitting it to the sheriff, one pound; attending each quarter session, one pound and ten shillings; making up the records of each session, two pounds and ten shillings; notice of every appointment, one shilling; list of jurors, every one hundred names, two shillings and six pence; making up estreats of each session and transmitting the same to the inspector general, five shillings; to be paid out of the district treasury:—every recognizance for the peace or good behaviour, to be paid by the party bound, five shillings; for discharging the same, two shillings and six pence; subpoena, two shillings and six pence; bench warrant, five shillings; drawing indictment, ten shillings; allowance of certiorari, to be paid by the person applying for the same, five shillings.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when any person or persons shall be convicted before any court of quarter sessions in this province, of any assault or misdemeanor, such person or persons so convicted, shall pay the costs of such conviction and prosecution, that shall be allowed and taxed by the said court; and when such defendant or defendants shall be acquitted, the prosecutor, unless it shall appear to the said court that there were reasonable grounds for prosecuting, to be certified by the chairman, by indorsement on the back of the indictment, in open court, shall pay such costs of prosecution, as shall be allowed and taxed as aforesaid; Provided nevertheless, that when any defendant or defendants shall be tried on a presentment of the grand jury, and shall be acquitted, the costs shall be paid out of the district treasury; Provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act shall be construed to extend to deprive the clerks of the peace of such fees as are allowed by any act of parliament for other services.

An Act to regulate the payment of certain debts due by the Eastern District before the establishment of the District of Johnstown.

WHEREAS the present District of Johnstown was formerly a part of the Eastern district, and it appears that several orders were drawn upon the Treasurer by the Justices of the Peace in quarter sessions assembled, in the said Eastern District, previous to the establishment of the District of Johnstown, for the payment of money to individuals, which orders were not then paid for the want of funds, and which now remain unpaid; BE it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "an act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his majesty's reign, entitled, an act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province, and by the authority of the same; That from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful for the respective treasurers for the time being, of the said Eastern District and District of Johnstown, and the said treasurers are hereby required respectively, out of the money raised, or to be raised from the rates, to pay the one equal half of all sum or sums of money which are now due and owing upon any order or orders drawn upon the treasurer by the justices of the peace in quarter sessions assembled, in the said Eastern District before the first day of January which was in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred, to any person or persons to whom such order or orders were made payable, or to his her or their executors or administrators

From not having any communication with the Post Office at Niagara, during the last week, the Editors had it not in their power, to give an article of Foreign news.—In the pleasure of what they now have to announce, they presume the partial suspension will be speedily forgotten: from its IMPORTANCE, they hasten to give it in a Gazette extraordinary. Confident that the public will cordially participate with them, in events so glorious and interesting, to the friends and cause of order and humanity, and so deadly to the hopes of the Arch disorganiser Napoleon, and the fiends of minor note, the Editors, would not for a moment withhold, intelligence of such grateful import.

LONDON, March 8.

We have infinite pleasure in being able to announce the arrival of a messenger this morning from Petersburgh, with the official accounts of a succession of obtained by the Russians over the French, between the 1st and 12th of February.

Mr. Vlick, who is the bearer of these joyful tidings, left Petersburgh on the 18th of February, and Gottenburgh on the 1st inst. on board the Amity Packet, which was dispatched for his conveyance. From him we have the happiness to learn, that Gen. Benningsen has officially announced several Victories obtained by him over Bonaparte, in one of which the French lost upwards of 20,000 men, a large portion of their artillery, and twelve standards.

Six of these latter had been triumphantly exhibited on the parade of Petersburgh, previous to Mr. Vlick's departure.

A French General has deserted the sinking fortune of Bonaparte, and has arrived at St. Petersburgh. He reports, and his statement is confirmed from various quarters, that Bonaparte since his invasion of Poland, has lost upwards of 100,000 men.

Sunday March 8.

"A dispatch dated St. Petersburgh, 17th February, of which the following is an extract, was this day received from the marquis of Douglas and Clydesdale, his Majesty's ambassador and plenipotentiary at the Court of St. Petersburgh, by Lord Viscount Howic, his Majesty's principal Secretary of State for foreign affairs:—

"I have the pleasure of enclosing, for your Lordship's information, two papers, giving an account of a signal victory gained by the Russians over the French.

"Translation of a letter from General de Budberg, his Imperial Majesty's minister for foreign affairs, to his ex. the Marquis of Douglas and Clydesdale, (3)-16 February.

"General Boulberg, minister for foreign affairs, hastens to communicate to his excellency the ambassador of his Britannic Majesty, the following intelligence which arrived last night from the army.—

"General Benningsen, after having fallen back, for the purpose of choosing a position which he judged better adapted for manoeuvering the troops under his command, took up a position at Preussic Eylau. During four days successively, his rear guard, commanded by General Barclay de Tolly, had to withstand several vigorous attacks, and on the 26th January, (7th Feb.) at three o'clock in the afternoon, the battle became general throughout the whole line of the main army. The contest was destructive, & the night came on without the enemy having been able to gain ground. On the 27th Jan. (8th Feb.) early in the morning, the French renewed the attack, and the action was contested with great obstinacy on both sides; but towards the evening the enemy was repulsed on all sides, and General Benningsen took possession of the field of battle.

"Bonaparte commanded in person, and under him the marshals Angereau, D'Avoust, Soult, Ney, and Ballieres, at the head of the guards, who suffered the most. Our loss is from six to eight thousand men, whilst that of the enemy is estimated at from twelve to fifteen thousand. We have also taken 12 stand of colours, and about fifteen hundred prisoners, among whom there are thirty officers.

"The Courier who brought the dispatches having been sent off immediately after the battle, the Ministers of his Imperial Majesty do not know all the details of the above mentioned day.

"General Budberg has the honor to be, &c.

Translation of a letter from General the Baron de Benningsen, to his Majesty the Emperor of Russia, delivered by Lieut Col. Stavitski, and aid-de-camp to his Imperial Majesty.

On the Field of Battle.

Preussich Eylau, Feb. 8.

"SIRE—I am truly happy to have it in my power to inform your imperial majesty that the army, the command of which your Majesty has deigned to confide in me has been again victorious. The battle which has just taken place has been bloody and destructive. It began on the 26th Jan. (7th Feb.) at three o'clock in the afternoon, and lasted until six o'clock in the evening of the 27th Jan. (8th Feb.)

"The enemy was completely defeated;—one thousand prisoners, and twelve stand of colours, which I have the honor herewith to transmit to your Majesty, fell into the hands of the conquerors. This day Bonaparte attacked me with his best troops, on my centre, and on both wings, but were repulsed and beaten on all sides. His guards repeatedly attacked my centre without the smallest success. After a very brisk fire, they were repulsed at all points by the bayonet, and by charges of the cavalry. Several columns of infantry, and picked regiments of cuirassiers, were destroyed.

"I shall not fail to transmit to your majesty, as soon as possible, a detailed account of the memorable battle of Preussich Eylau.

"I think our loss may perhaps exceed six thousand men, and I certainly do not exaggerate, when I state the loss of the enemy at considerable more than 12 thousand men."

March 14.

The Juno, Thomson master, which has arrived in the River from Memel, has brought a copy of the public notification of the battle of Eylau, which was posted in that town, announcing the result to the public. The following is a translation:

PROCLAMATION.

"The Governor and chamber of Magistracy, have to congratulate their fellow citizens, that official accounts have this day been received, that after repeated battles from the 3d to the 8th, the combined armies of Russia and Prussia had obtained a complete victory over the French. The result of the victory has been twenty Eagles 7 fourteen of which had been awarded to Gen. Benningsen and the Russian army: the remaining six had been presented to his Majesty the King of Prussia. The French had lost twenty thousand men, who were dead on the field of battle.

"The contest had been so obstinately maintained on both sides, that both the French and Russians had refused to accept of any quarter from each other. A body of 1500 French, who had been cut off during the battle of the 7th, had been surrounded on the 8th by the whole of the Russian army—they refused to lay down their arms or accept of quarter; but General Benningsen, after a sharp attack, made them sensible of their fruitless resistance, and ruinous desperation, and induced them to surender at discretion. These are the only prisoners taken. The Russians remained encamped on the field of battle on the 10th; the French had retreated two leagues. Gen. Benningsen expected a strong reinforcement of Cossacks, and the junction of the Silesian Levy, when, it is supposed, that he will pursue his victory.

By order of the Chamber of Magistracy.

H. KLOPSTOCK.

March 17.

A letter from Rotterdam, of the date of Wednesday last, states, that Bonaparte was daily expected at Paris, having left the command of the army to Messena. His imperial majesty is said to be severely indisposed.—A report also prevailed at Rotterdam, that an Austrian army was in full march towards Saxony.

The captain of a vessel arrived on Friday in the river, in ten days from Dantzic, states, that a short time before he sailed, accounts had been received, that the French had been again defeated by the Russians, with a very great loss, and that a great number of prisoners had arrived at Koningsburg; in consequence of the above news, the rejoicings at Dantzic had continued for three days. A gentleman just arrived from Hamburgh also reports, that the French are on full retreat, and are already 100 English miles this side of Prussian Eylau.

ST. PETERSBURGH, Feb. 15.

On the 8th of this month, the Russian army gained a splendid victory over the French at Eylau. The French army, on this occasion, consisted of more than 120,000 men;—the Russians, of Gen. Benningsen's division, and of that which was formerly commanded by General Buxhoveden. The battle began on the 7th of February, at three o'clock in the afternoon, & continued until six o'clock on the evening of the 8th. Bonaparte renewed the attack eight different times, and was as often repulsed.

It is said that a great part of the French army (chiefly chosen troops) were fairly cut down by the Russians; and that, on the Russian side, four generals were killed. It is remarked, that in case Bonaparte's design had succeeded, it would have been conclusive of the campaign; he knew that general Benningsen's division was stationed at Mohringen, and general Essen's at Wiloke Malewick; and as they were consequently at a great distance from each other, he threw himself with his whole force between these two divisions, in a right line with Konigsburg in order to separate them, or cut them off from each other, and fall with more effect upon the weaker part, but the success of this plan was prevented by general Benningsen's operations and rapid movements.

Towards the conclusion of the battle, there was a want of cartridges on both sides: and therefore recourse was had to the bayonet, which caused great carnage.

March 11th.

Sir Home Popham has been honorably acquitted.

Blennerhasset, the ally of Burr, is acknowledged by Thos. Addis Emmet as his friend and relation. This is a connexion which he has not boasted in his letter to Mr. King. As he appears vain of having his name "embodied" in the history of one conspiracy, perhaps he may be gratified by having it recorded in another.

And whereas, as well with reference to the interest of his majesty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majesty's subjects resident within this province, it hath been ascertained that there exists immediate occasion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after specified.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, February 24.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The following list of the Staff of the South American Army is handed about in military circles. Probably it is not quite correct: we shall present it more so, soon.

Commander in Chief, Lt. Gen. Whitelocke, 89th reg. second in command, Major Gen. Gower, 63d reg. Brigadier Generals, Acland, Foot Guards, Beresford, 88th reg. Sir S. Achmuty, 20th Foot, Lord Blayney, 87th reg. Crawford, 60th, Dep. Adj. Gen. Lieut. Col. Torrens, 89th reg. Assistant do. Major Trotter, 83d, Dep. Q. M. Gen. Major Putzler, 7th Foot, Assistant do. Major Tucker, 23d Foot, Inspector of Hospitals, Dr. Gordon, Dep. Com. Gen. Major Lindsay.

Capt. Hill, of the 89th, is appointed one of the Aids de-Camp to Gen. Whitelocke.

The Paymaster General, Military Secretary, Majors of Brigade, and some of the Aids de Camp, are not yet appointed.

That fine corps, the 95th, commanded by Colonel Lord Blayney, as well as the Troop of Horse Artillery, were yesterday embarked at Portsmouth. The baggage of the Commander in Chief was likewise sent on board yesterday, from the Isle of Wight. Under an officer of such activity and enterprise as General Whitelocke, we are confident there will be no delay. Detachments and recruits for the 28th, 40th, 47th, 83d, 87th, and 88th were yesterday embarked for South America.

The army of South America now will consist of

The Royal Engineers and Artificers, a detachment.
The Royal Horse Artillery, 1 troop.
The Royal Artillery, 4 companies.
The 9th Light Dragoons, commanded by

	Hon. Col. Mahon.
17th do.	Lieut. Col. Lloyd
21st do. 2 troops	Major Drake
5th Foot	Lieut. Col. Davie
36th Foot	Burne
38th Foot	Vassal
40th Foot	Browne
45th Foot	Guard
47th Foot	Backhouse
[illegible]	[illegible]
71st Foot	Lieut. Col. Pack
63d Foot	Major Trotter,
87th Foot	Lt. col. Sir E. Butler
88th Foot	Lieut. Col. Duff
89th Foot	Col. Lord Blayney

95th Rifle Corps, 5 coms. Major M'Leod
And a detachment of the Royal Waggon Corps.

We hear that a Field Officer of the Royal Engineers, as well as of the artillery, will accompany General Whitelocke.

It is now thought that the 8th, 13th, and 63d, which at one time were intended to go to join the South American Army, will not now proceed there, General Whitelocke having declared that he waited only for the 89th in addition to the force already out, and that he conceives this formidable force sufficient for any service there.

March 8.

Yesterday we received Dutch and French papers by the American ship Medford, arrived in the River from Rotterdam, which have furnished us with some articles of importance Government at the same time received dispatches from the Continent by the Dorset Packet, arrived at Harwich. The latter are stated to announce another action between the Russians and French, in which the Grand Duke of Berg was killed. We have before us an extract of a letter received by a merchant in the city, from his brother at Warsaw, mentioning Murat's death, and that the body had been received in that city with great pomp, and, as we understand, buried there. We incline, however, to think, from some allusion to the scene of action, that Murat, should he have fallen, must have been killed in the battle of Eylau, or in some affair immediately following it.

Letters were yesterday received in town from Dantzic, which, on Thursday arrived at Hull, bringing accounts from thence to the 20th ult. of great rejoicings having taken place there, on occasion of the victories obtained by the Russians over the French, in Warmia, up to the 11th. The left and centre of the Russians were then posted on the Lakes, and the right extended beyond the Alle.

The French corps under General Lefevre, has been defeated by a body of Prussians near Marienwerder.

Gen. Lefevre is stated to have attacked a Russian and Prussian corps at Marienwender, on the 11th February; but the result of the contest, as whence the allied troops came, is not mentioned.

Although the French have succeeded in restoring tranquility in Hessia, insurrections appear to have broken out in various other parts of Germany, which cannot fail to embarrass Bonaparte, either in exposing his supplies from France to danger, or in requiring for their protection, a greater force than, in his present circumstances, he can afford for such service.—Wittenavia and the Banks of the Main are in the hands of the insurgents; and in Weimar, Gotha, Coburg and most of the neighboring Duchies, an extensive and organised system of revolt prevails.

The Austrian army in Gallicia comprises upwards of one hundred thousand men, and the frontiers of Moravia and Bohemia are crowded with troops, who have cut off all communication with Saxony, Silesia, &c.—The export of provisions to the French army in Poland has been discontinued, and some Jewish merchants and others, by whom it was carried on, have been arrested and sent in chains for trial. This measure is stated to have been adopted on a strong remonstrance from the Russian minister.

All officers in the Austrian service on leave of absence, &c. have received orders to join their respective corps.

On the departure of Bonaparte from Warsaw, Baron Vincent announced to Talleyrand his intention to return to Vienna, and was with difficulty induced to prolong his stay in Poland for another fortnight. The Baron's mission, independent of the restoration of Brannau, had for its object to demand from Bonaparte an explanation as to his intentions in regard to Poland, and a revocation of the promises held out to the inhabitants of that country by Dombrouskv. Bonaparte has evaded the discussion of these points; and in one of his interviews with Baron Vincent, he warmly expressed impatience and offence at the Baron's importunity on the subject.

The Russians continue to advance in Turkey almost without opposition. It appears by letters from Pantcova of the 28th of Jan. that the advanced corps of the Russian army had already penetrated into Albania, and that the mountaineers of Rascia, Podrina, &c. had joined him in immense numbers. The islands of Curzuolo, Braffa, and Lissa, have fallen into the hands of the imperialists, and Lessina has been invested, Bulgaria, Servia, and Albania, as well as Moldavia and Wallachia, are now in the virtual occupation of the Russians. The Turks are not capable of opposing any serious obstacles to the progress of the Russians; their army is an undisciplined insurgent mob, more dangerous to the generals appointed to conduct it, than to the enemy to whom it is to be confronted.

The blockade of Venice has exposed the inhabitants to the greatest distress. The principal supply of fuel was heretofore brought from Dalmatia, but the British and Russian vessels before the port will not allow a barque of any description to enter, and the winter had, at the date of the last accounts, set in with great severity.

March, 14.

Government has ordered the mouths of the Elbe, Ems, and Weser to be declared in a state of blockade.

A letter from Brest announces the arrival of Admiral Williamez in the Foudroyant at Brest, from Havana.

Capt. Whitby, of the Leander, from which ship the American was shot some months since, whose death occasioned so much agitation in America, is to be tried by a court-martial at Portsmouth on Monday next. The trial has stood over for some time, in order to afford the parties interested for the deceased, who were apprized of the intention to bring this officer to trial, to sustain the accusation if they thought proper. But no evidence appears against the accused.

Massena has arrived at Warsaw, but there is no mention of Bonaparte's quitting the army.

March 16.

Mr. Pierrepoint, who arrived on Friday from the Continent, brought with him, we understand, the copy of a treaty of Alliance between the Courts of Prussia, Sweden, and London. Mr. Pierrepoint came direct from Memel, and is supposed to have brought the latest intelligence from the theatre of war. The Russians, it is said, began to fall back from Prussian Eylau on the evening of the 9th, an operation in which there was no attempt on the part of the enemy to molest them. On the following day they encamped within two German miles of the scene of action, had by the 12th crossed the Pregel. —During their movements part of the garrison of Koningsburg marched out to a distance of twelve miles from that city, and having their flank covered by the Prussian main army, which it defeated, and returned, with an Eagle, and 500 prisoners. Their Prussian Majesties were at Memel, in the neighborhood of which about 40,000 Prussian troops were assembled, and confederative stores both of corn and forage collected. It was the general opinion both at Koningsberg and Memel that the French intended to abandon the Upper Vistula and Narew, and to concentrate themselves between Thorn and Mortenwerder. The out-posts on the latter river, had all been called in; and Savary, after his ineffectual attempt upon Von Ellen's corps, retreated from Ostrolenka to Serac; where it was supposed he would endeavour to maintain himself until the hostilities at Warsaw were cleared. General Von Ellen, was it is said as far advanced as Dobrin on the Lakes, the 18th, in his way to the main army. The junction of his corps we hope, give the Russians such a superiority as would enable them to resume their system of operations which they have found successful.

A general salute was fired from the batteries along the French coast on Thursday. It is not unlikely but the salute may have been occasioned by the return of Bonaparte to the capitol.

SECOND EDITION.

Traveller Office, 3 o'clock.

A mercantile houte in the city, has just received advices from Lisbon, by a merchant ship, that Monte Video has been taken possession of by a British force. We have no doubt of the fact. It will be remembered that the first accounts of the re-capture of Buenos Ayres reached us by the way of Lisbon much earlier than by any other channel.

In our eagerness to communicate this pleasing intelligence we have not been able to ascertain the period at which it was taken.

PRUSSIAN ACCOUNT.

"MORIENWERDER, Jan. 27.

"On the 23th and 25th January, two actions took place at Mohringen, in which the divisions of Ney and Bernadotte were almost entirely destroyed or dispersed and the remains of the latter officer's corps is cut off. Murat is wounded and taken; Bernadotte severely wounded, Rapp killed, and General Fournier made prisoner.

"The contributions of Elbing, amounting to sixty thousand crowns, are retaken at Mohringen, with the entire equipage of Bernadotte.

"The first are at Morienwerder; the Russians are at Culm; the blockade of Grondenz is raised; the bridge of Thorn has been carried away by the ice, which renders the passage of the French across the Vistula very difficult.

"Lannes has lost both his legs: six thousand French are killed, and four thousand wounded. The victory was obtained by the arrival of the two corps of Bennigsen and L'Estocq. A general Victor, who has been made prisoner, arrived at Dantzic."

The Resistance frigate, Capt. Adam, from the West Indies, is arrived at Portsmouth, having on board upwards of four million of dollars, which she brought from Vera Cruz, by permission of the British and Spanish governments.—The Resistance sailed from Vera Cruz on the 14th of January. She continued off that port ten days, during which time no intercourse was permitted between the vessel and the shore.

We yesterday stated that Bonaparte had issued a fresh decree for the immediate sale of the confiscated property at Hamburgh, and in the Hanseatic towns. We have since been favored with a copy of this unprincipled Decree, of which the following is a translation:

Art. II. An inventory must be made, and presented to our Intendant General, who will immediately transmit it to our Minister of Finance.

The Austrian regiments in Bohemia have received orders to put themselves in motion; among these are the light horse of Rosenberg, and the Uhlans of Schwarzenberg.

Lemberg, Jan. 18.

General Kamenskoi, with the main body of the Russian army, is posted behind the river Nur. The head quarters are in a small village of the same name. Auxiliaries arrive for the Russian army from the farthest parts of the empire in Asia. The first corps of Reserve is near Byalystock, where there is a large magazine; a second army of reserve is at Grodno, and a third at Dubno. The recruits, who are numerous, are trained and exercised, fit for the ranks in fourteen days. Dubno and Nisewiels are both strongly fortified. In the former place the French prisoners are kept, previous to their being carried further into the interior. To animate the courage of the Russian soldiers, the Emperor has promised to promote every officer who shall distinguish himself, besides a grant of crown lands, &c. The wounded privates are also to receive pensions, and their widows and orphans to be provided for.

Vienna, Jan. 28.

The Austrian prisoners of war who have returned from France, have given their Sovereign a striking proof of their attachment; for in spite of all they have suffered on the road, and the seductions to which they were exposed in all the states through which they passed, particularly on the borders of the Rhine, where they were obliged to remain some months, out of 36,930 men who went to France, 36,000 have actually arrived upon the Austrian territory. These faithful soldiers chaunted hymns of joy upon their arrival in Austria.

The day before yesterday a courier brought very important dispatches from Baron Vincent, at Warsaw, in consequence of which the Minister of State had a private conference with the Sovereign. The army cantoned near the Carpathian Mountains, advances gradually towards Gallacia. The English squadron near Constantinople is on outlacle to the arrival of Turkish troops from Asia.

From the Main, Feb. 3.

The Austrian regiments in Bohemia have orders to march. A third part of the war contribution imposed upon Munster has been remitted.

Feb. 7.

A number of French troops are proceeding by forced marches to Italy. It is reported that the troops of the Rhenish Confederacy are to take the same route.

We read in the Journal of Frankfort, that the Court of Vienna having acquitted itself of its debt to France, has demanded of the Emperor Napoleon, the evacuation of the fortrels of Braunau by the French troops; and that four regiments had already received orders to put themselves in motion towards Upper Austria, to take possession of that fortrels.

Bucharest, Dec. 31.

On the 12th, 1200 Turks, under Mehemet Bairaktar, arrived here. On the 13th the Russian Consul was brought to Kudschuck. On the 14th and 15th, 20,000 Turks arrived here and immediately advanced against 15,000 Russians at Fockfan. On the 23d they came to an action at Grodan, in which the Turks lost 600 men; and on the 27th the Russian General Michelson, and Prince Ypsilante, entered the city. On the 29th, General Michelson broke up from hence to march to Albania by way of Widdin.

Turkish Frontier, Jan. 10.

The Russians under Gen. Michelson have taken possession of Moldavia, Bessarabia, and Wallachia. They drive all the Turks they meet before them. It seems as if the Russians intend to pass the Danube near Kenjowa, and establish themselves in Servia. The Turks in Bosnia have already taken up arms against the Russians. The Servians evacuated the Austrian War Hand, upon the Danube, on the night of the 6th.

Norfolk, April 8.

The information received by the Louisa, from Jamaica, although coming in a circuitous direction, is later than any thing which we have received from Barbadoes and Trinidad. It appears that the Rochefort fleet is out, and destined for Martinique. The British force consists of the five sheps of the line mentioned under the Jamaica head. The Romilies of 74 guns, had also arrived at Barbadoes, and will, if necessary, be added, which will make the two fleets equal in number, in which case the event of a battle may be calculated upon with certainty. It is not without the scope of probability, that the Rochefort fleet may make its app arance off our Capes, with a view to relieve the Patriot and Cybelle, now blockaded by the British force in the bay.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, February 24.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The following list of the Staff of the South American Army is handed about in military circles. Probably it is not quite correct: we shall present it more so, soon.

Commander in Chief, Lt. Gen. Whitelocke, 89th reg. second in command, Major Gen. Gower, 63d reg. Brigadier Generals, Acland, Foot Guards, Beresford, 88th reg. Sir S. Achmuty, 20th Foot, Lord Blayney, 87th reg. Crawford, 60th, Dep. Adj. Gen. Lieut. Col. Torrens, 89th reg. Assistant do. Major Trotter, 83d, Dep. Q. M. Gen. Major Putzler, 7th Foot, Assistant do. Major Tucker, 23d Foot, Inspector of Hospitals, Dr. Gordon, Dep. Com. Gen. Major Lindsay.

Capt. Hill, of the 89th, is appointed one of the Aids de-Camp to Gen. Whitelocke.

The Paymaster General, Military Secretary, Majors of Brigade, and some of the Aids de Camp, are not yet appointed.

That fine corps, the 95th, commanded by Colonel Lord Blayney, as well as the Troop of Horse Artillery, were yesterday embarked at Portsmouth. The baggage of the Commander in Chief was likewise sent on board yesterday, from the Isle of Wight. Under an officer of such activity and enterprise as General Whitelocke, we are confident there will be no delay. Detachments and recruits for the 28th, 40th, 47th, 83d, 87th, and 88th were yesterday embarked for South America.

The army of South America now will consist of

The Royal Engineers and Artificers, a detachment.
The Royal Horse Artillery, 1 troop.
The Royal Artillery, 4 companies.
The 9th Light Dragoons, commanded by

	Hon. Col. Mahon.
17th do.	Lieut. Col. Lloyd
21st do. 2 troops	Major Drake
5th Foot	Lieut. Col. Davie
36th Foot	Burne
38th Foot	Vassal
40th Foot	Browne
45th Foot	Guard
47th Foot	Backhouse
[illegible]	[illegible]
71st Foot	Lieut. Col. Pack
63d Foot	Major Trotter,
87th Foot	Lt. col. Sir E. Butler
88th Foot	Lieut. Col. Duff
89th Foot	Col. Lord Blayney

95th Rifle Corps, 5 coms. Major M'Leod
And a detachment of the Royal Waggon Corps.

We hear that a Field Officer of the Royal Engineers, as well as of the artillery, will accompany General Whitelocke.

It is now thought that the 8th, 13th, and 63d, which at one time were intended to go to join the South American Army, will not now proceed there, General Whitelocke having declared that he waited only for the 89th in addition to the force already out, and that he conceives this formidable force sufficient for any service there.

March 8.

Yesterday we received Dutch and French papers by the American ship Medford, arrived in the River from Rotterdam, which have furnished us with some articles of importance Government at the same time received dispatches from the Continent by the Dorset Packet, arrived at Harwich. The latter are stated to announce another action between the Russians and French, in which the Grand Duke of Berg was killed. We have before us an extract of a letter received by a merchant in the city, from his brother at Warsaw, mentioning Murat's death, and that the body had been received in that city with great pomp, and, as we understand, buried there. We incline, however, to think, from some allusion to the scene of action, that Murat, should he have fallen, must have been killed in the battle of Eylau, or in some affair immediately following it.

Letters were yesterday received in town from Dantzic, which, on Thursday arrived at Hull, bringing accounts from thence to the 20th ult. of great rejoicings having taken place there, on occasion of the victories obtained by the Russians over the French, in Warmia, up to the 11th. The left and centre of the Russians were then posted on the Lakes, and the right extended beyond the Alle.

The French corps under General Lefevre, has been defeated by a body of Prussians near Marienwerder.

Gen. Lefevre is stated to have attacked a Russian and Prussian corps at Marienwender, on the 11th February; but the result of the contest, as whence the allied troops came, is not mentioned.

Although the French have succeeded in restoring tranquility in Hessia, insurrections appear to have broken out in various other parts of Germany, which cannot fail to embarrass Bonaparte, either in exposing his supplies from France to danger, or in requiring for their protection, a greater force than, in his present circumstances, he can afford for such service.—Wittenavia and the Banks of the Main are in the hands of the insurgents; and in Weimar, Gotha, Coburg and most of the neighboring Duchies, an extensive and organised system of revolt prevails.

The Austrian army in Gallicia comprises upwards of one hundred thousand men, and the frontiers of Moravia and Bohemia are crowded with troops, who have cut off all communication with Saxony, Silesia, &c.—The export of provisions to the French army in Poland has been discontinued, and some Jewish merchants and others, by whom it was carried on, have been arrested and sent in chains for trial. This measure is stated to have been adopted on a strong remonstrance from the Russian minister.

All officers in the Austrian service on leave of absence, &c. have received orders to join their respective corps.

On the departure of Bonaparte from Warsaw, Baron Vincent announced to Talleyrand his intention to return to Vienna, and was with difficulty induced to prolong his stay in Poland for another fortnight. The Baron's mission, independent of the restoration of Brannau, had for its object to demand from Bonaparte an explanation as to his intentions in regard to Poland, and a revocation of the promises held out to the inhabitants of that country by Dombrouskv. Bonaparte has evaded the discussion of these points; and in one of his interviews with Baron Vincent, he warmly expressed impatience and offence at the Baron's importunity on the subject.

The Russians continue to advance in Turkey almost without opposition. It appears by letters from Pantcova of the 28th of Jan. that the advanced corps of the Russian army had already penetrated into Albania, and that the mountaineers of Rascia, Podrina, &c. had joined him in immense numbers. The islands of Curzuolo, Braffa, and Lissa, have fallen into the hands of the imperialists, and Lessina has been invested, Bulgaria, Servia, and Albania, as well as Moldavia and Wallachia, are now in the virtual occupation of the Russians. The Turks are not capable of opposing any serious obstacles to the progress of the Russians; their army is an undisciplined insurgent mob, more dangerous to the generals appointed to conduct it, than to the enemy to whom it is to be confronted.

The blockade of Venice has exposed the inhabitants to the greatest distress. The principal supply of fuel was heretofore brought from Dalmatia, but the British and Russian vessels before the port will not allow a barque of any description to enter, and the winter had, at the date of the last accounts, set in with great severity.

March, 14.

Government has ordered the mouths of the Elbe, Ems, and Weser to be declared in a state of blockade.

A letter from Brest announces the arrival of Admiral Williamez in the Foudroyant at Brest, from Havana.

Capt. Whitby, of the Leander, from which ship the American was shot some months since, whose death occasioned so much agitation in America, is to be tried by a court-martial at Portsmouth on Monday next. The trial has stood over for some time, in order to afford the parties interested for the deceased, who were apprized of the intention to bring this officer to trial, to sustain the accusation if they thought proper. But no evidence appears against the accused.

Massena has arrived at Warsaw, but there is no mention of Bonaparte's quitting the army.

March 16.

Mr. Pierrepoint, who arrived on Friday from the Continent, brought with him, we understand, the copy of a treaty of Alliance between the Courts of Prussia, Sweden, and London. Mr. Pierrepoint came direct from Memel, and is supposed to have brought the latest intelligence from the theatre of war. The Russians, it is said, began to fall back from Prussian Eylau on the evening of the 9th, an operation in which there was no attempt on the part of the enemy to molest them. On the following day they encamped within two German miles of the scene of action, had by the 12th crossed the Pregel. —During their movements part of the garrison of Koningsburg marched out to a distance of twelve miles from that city, and having their flank covered by the Prussian main army, which it defeated, and returned, with an Eagle, and 500 prisoners. Their Prussian Majesties were at Memel, in the neighborhood of which about 40,000 Prussian troops were assembled, and confederative stores both of corn and forage collected. It was the general opinion both at Koningsberg and Memel that the French intended to abandon the Upper Vistula and Narew, and to concentrate themselves between Thorn and Mortenwerder. The out-posts on the latter river, had all been called in; and Savary, after his ineffectual attempt upon Von Ellen's corps, retreated from Ostrolenka to Serac; where it was supposed he would endeavour to maintain himself until the hostilities at Warsaw were cleared. General Von Ellen, was it is said as far advanced as Dobrin on the Lakes, the 18th, in his way to the main army. The junction of his corps we hope, give the Russians such a superiority as would enable them to resume their system of operations which they have found successful.

A general salute was fired from the batteries along the French coast on Thursday. It is not unlikely but the salute may have been occasioned by the return of Bonaparte to the capitol.

SECOND EDITION.

Traveller Office, 3 o'clock.

A mercantile houte in the city, has just received advices from Lisbon, by a merchant ship, that Monte Video has been taken possession of by a British force. We have no doubt of the fact. It will be remembered that the first accounts of the re-capture of Buenos Ayres reached us by the way of Lisbon much earlier than by any other channel.

In our eagerness to communicate this pleasing intelligence we have not been able to ascertain the period at which it was taken.

PRUSSIAN ACCOUNT.

"MORIENWERDER, Jan. 27.

"On the 23th and 25th January, two actions took place at Mohringen, in which the divisions of Ney and Bernadotte were almost entirely destroyed or dispersed and the remains of the latter officer's corps is cut off. Murat is wounded and taken; Bernadotte severely wounded, Rapp killed, and General Fournier made prisoner.

"The contributions of Elbing, amounting to sixty thousand crowns, are retaken at Mohringen, with the entire equipage of Bernadotte.

"The first are at Morienwerder; the Russians are at Culm; the blockade of Grondenz is raised; the bridge of Thorn has been carried away by the ice, which renders the passage of the French across the Vistula very difficult.

"Lannes has lost both his legs: six thousand French are killed, and four thousand wounded. The victory was obtained by the arrival of the two corps of Bennigsen and L'Estocq. A general Victor, who has been made prisoner, arrived at Dantzic."

The Resistance frigate, Capt. Adam, from the West Indies, is arrived at Portsmouth, having on board upwards of four million of dollars, which she brought from Vera Cruz, by permission of the British and Spanish governments.—The Resistance sailed from Vera Cruz on the 14th of January. She continued off that port ten days, during which time no intercourse was permitted between the vessel and the shore.

We yesterday stated that Bonaparte had issued a fresh decree for the immediate sale of the confiscated property at Hamburgh, and in the Hanseatic towns. We have since been favored with a copy of this unprincipled Decree, of which the following is a translation:

(COPY.)

(Extract from the Minuter of the Secretary of State.)

"Palais, at Warsaw, Jan. 25, 1807.

"Napoleon, Emperor of the French and King of Italy.

"Since our Decree of the 21st of Nov. ordering the confiscation of all English merchandize, in whatever hands they might be lodged:

"Since our Decree of the 15th Dec. ordering that all English merchandize and property at Hamburgh, and in Hanseatic Towns, should be sent to France, we have decreed, and do decree as follows:

Art. I. The merchandize, subject to confiscation in pursuance of our decree of the 21st Nov. shall be deposited in a special magazine, and placed under the care of the French agent.

Art. II. An inventory must be made, and presented to our Intendant General, who will immediately transmit it to our Minister of Finance.

Art. III. The colonial produce, the articles chiefly necessary in the manufactures, the fine cloths, and the works in silks, must be sent to France, subject to the authority of our Minister of Finance, and placed in his depository.

Art. IV. The goods, the spirits, cloths proper for the service of the army, and other articles capable of being rendered useful, must all be placed in the military magazine.

Art. V. The coarser description of merchandize, such as iron, wood, coals, beer, potash, &c. must be sold upon the spot where they have been sequestrated.

Art. VI. The produce of the sales in the territory occupied by the army must be placed in the fund of general contributions, and that of the sales in France in the Bank.

Art. VII. Our Minister of Finance, and our Intendant General, are charged with the execution of the present decree.

(Signed) NAPOLEON.

On the part of the Emperor, the Minister Secretary of State.

HUGUES R. MARET.

Erlangen, Feb. 3.

The Austrian regiments in Bohemia have received orders to put themselves in motion; among these are the light horse of Rosenberg, and the Uhlans of Schwarzenberg.

Lemberg, Jan. 18.

General Kamenskoi, with the main body of the Russian army, is posted behind the river Nur. The head quarters are in a small village of the same name. Auxiliaries arrive for the Russian army from the farthest parts of the empire in Asia. The first corps of Reserve is near Byalystock, where there is a large magazine; a second army of reserve is at Grodno, and a third at Dubno. The recruits, who are numerous, are trained and exercised, fit for the ranks in fourteen days. Dubno and Nisewiels are both strongly fortified. In the former place the French prisoners are kept, previous to their being carried further into the interior. To animate the courage of the Russian soldiers, the Emperor has promised to promote every officer who shall distinguish himself, besides a grant of crown lands, &c. The wounded privates are also to receive pensions, and their widows and orphans to be provided for.

The Austrian prisoners of war who have returned from France, have given their Sovereign a striking proof of their attachment; for in spite of all they have suffered on the road, and the seductions to which they were exposed in all the states through which they passed, particularly on the borders of the Rhine, where they were obliged to remain some months, out of 36,930 men who went to France, 36,000 have actually arrived upon the Austrian territory. THE Revised STATUTES of the Province, Bank CONVEYANCES, MEMORIALS, BONDS, POWERS OF ATTORNEY, ARBITRATION BONDS, AWARD, &c. &c.

An Act for applying certain sums of Money therein mentioned to make good certain Monies issued and advanced by His Majesty, through His Honor Mr. President Grant, in pursuance of two addresses.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WHEREAS in pursuance of several addresses of your Commons House of Assembly to His Honor Alexander Grant, Esquire, late President administering the government of your Province of Upper Canada, bearing date the first and third of March one thousand eight hundred and six, last passed, in the forty-sixth year of your Majesty's reign, several sums of money, amounting in the whole to the sum of one hundred and fifty-one pounds, two shillings and six pence halfpenny, have been issued and advanced by your Majesty, through His Honor Mr. President Grant, to the Clerks and other Officers of the two Houses of Parliament, for certain contingent expences attending the last session of Parliament;—May it therefore please your Majesty that it may be enacted,—and be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province, and by the authority of the same; That out of the surplus of any fund or funds subject to the disposition of the Parliament of this Province, now remaining in the hands of the Receiver General unappropriated, there shall be issued and applied the sum of one hundred and fifty-one pounds, two shillings and six pence half penny, to make good the said sum of money which has been issued and advanced in pursuance of the aforesaid addresses.

WHEREAS the several Acts now in force in this Province to encourage the destruction of Wolves are not found beneficial in proportion to the expence incurred by them;—Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same,—that an Act passed in the thirty-third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act to encourage the destroying of Wolves and Bears in different parts of this Province," and also an Act passed in the forty-third year of his present Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act for further altering and amending an Act passed in the thirty third year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act to encourage the destroying of Wolves and Bears in different parts of this Province," be repealed, and the same are hereby repealed accordingly. E. List, or have been suspended from the same, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be bestowed by His Majesty on that meritorious class of subjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other persons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were also resident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have since died without having their Names inserted on that List, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwise would have derived from His Majesty's Bounty.

And whereas, as well with reference to the interest of his majesty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majesty's subjects resident within this province, it hath been ascertained that there exists immediate occasion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after specified.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.

British Naval Operations in India.

Capt. Vi Bry, from Batavia, has furnished from his private journal, the following particulars of British Naval Operations in India. —On the 28th Oct. 1806, the British frigate Caroline, of 36 guns, capt. Ranier, came into Batavia roads, and after having taken two small Dutch vessels, attacked and took the Dutch frigate Maria Reygersbergh, of 44 guns.—Captain Ranier did not fire a gun until within half pistol shot of his enemy, nor did he pay the smallest attention to the fire from the shore, and the other Dutch ships; most of which flipped their cables, and ran ashore. None of the American ships received any injury, though the shot flew very thick amongst them. On the 27th November, alarm guns were fired at Ouruſt; shortly after an English squadron appeared in ſight, ſome of which immediately ſilenced the fort at Ouruſt, and took poſſeſſion of it, and a corvette lying there.—All the Dutch ſhips, and one Pruſſian, ſlipped their cables, and ran aſhore. The Powerful, of 74 guns, captain Plampin, chaſed to the eaſtward, and the Sea flower brig, of 14 guns, chaſed ſome Dutch ſhips from Samarang. The Engliſh line of battle then came in, as follows:—Terpſichore, 32 guns, capt. Lye, Culloden 74 guns, Rear-Admiral Sir Edward Pellew, Drake, capt. Pellew, Ruſſell 74, capt. Couſfield, Brilliquex 64, capt. Byng and a corvette and brig, captured the day before. The Engliſh ſquadron then came to anchor, in proper ſtations, and commenced a heavy cannonading on the fort and ſtranded ſhips, and at two o'clock, the boats of the fleet were manned, and ſent in, under cover of the fire of the ſhips, to burn the veſſels, which was effected with very little loſs.

Dutch National veſſels burnt.

Frigate Phœnix, 32 guns.
Brig, Adventurier, 20 guns.
Brig Zeaploeg, 14 guns.

Company's ſhips.

Frigate Arneſteyn, force unknown.
Ship Patriot, 18 guns.
Brig Ceres, and Brig Snolbeyd.

Private Ships.

Ships Deugdzaamhayd; Eaſt-Indian, and Zuider Pole, (Pruſſian) and four or five others, names unknown. On the eaſt ſide the Andromeda and Debora, two fine Java ſhips, and another large ſhip, were alſo burnt

Towards Evening the firing ceaſed.—During the night the ſky was awfully illuminated by the blaze of 18 large ſhips: and the blowing up of ſeveral of them, when the fire reached their Magazines, added to the grandeur of the ſcene.

The next day they burned at Ouruſt, the Zeboltower and Beſchemer, Dutch Eaſt-Indiamen.

BOSTON, April 28.

Capt. Orcutt, arrived at Penobſcot, from Dominique, which he left the 11th March, informs, that five fail of the line, with 3,000 troops, had arrived there from Great-Britain, and that Martinique and Guadeloupe were conſidered in a ſtate of blockade.

According to the beſt accounts, the following Gen. l Officers have been killed and wounded, in the late battles in Poland and Eaſt Pruſſia;

Ruſſian—killed—Prince Repnin; Prince Italinſki (Suwarrow;) and one other, whoſe name has eſcaped us.

French—killed—Major Gen. Hauteoult, Generals, Dalhamn, Campana, and Corbineau—Wounded—Marſhal Angereau, Gen. Desjardins, Lochet, Rigaud, Heudelet, Latour Maubourg and Gardanne, aid de-camp to Bonaparte.

CAPTURE OF MONTE-VIEDO.

Capt. Ruſſell, arrived from St. Salvador, at Providence, which he left on the 5th March, informs, that on the morning of the day on which he ſailed, an Engliſh veſſel arrived there from the River of Plates, in 36 days, bringing intelligence, that the Engliſh had captured Monte Viedo; that the place ſuſtained a cloſe ſiege of ſix days, and was at length carried by ſtorm; when the violence committed on the Engliſh, at Buenos Ayres, was retaliated. The capture muſt have been made between the 10th and 20th January. The veſſel was diſpatched to St. Salvador for proviſions.

Salem, May 1.

The Turkiſh War.—By Capt. William Cook, who arrived here on Wednesday night from Palermo in Sicily, we have ſome additional particulars reſpecting the new war which has been ſo furiouſly commenced between the Turks and Ruſſians, which is likely ſoon to aſſume a high degree of intereſt and importance. The Turks are doubtleſs conſidered as acting a part aſſigned them by Bonaparte; and, as was to be expected, the Britiſh have made common cauſe with the Ruſſians againſt them. We have already had ſome reports of the progreſs of the Ruſſian arms, under General Michelſon, in the direct route for Conſtantinople. Capt. C. further informs, us of the co-operation of a Naval force in the expedition againſt the Ottoman capital. Diſpatches had arrived at Sicily, with orders for Sir Sidney Smith to join Admiral Duckworth, and ſail with all poſſible ſpeed for the Dardanelles, to act in concert with the Ruſſians againſt the Porte; and they failed, in conſequence, on the 29th of January. We do not know the amount of the Britiſh force. The Ruſſians were ſtated to have 25 ſail of men of war in the Mideterranean, on board of which was a conſiderable number of troops; and it was expected that in conjunction they would attack the Dardanelles, and paſs up to Conſtantinople. In the mean time, feats were entertained for the ſafety of Admiral Louis, who with a ſmall ſquadron, was, by the laſt advices, at Conſtantinople, and who might therefore be arreſted on his return into the Archipelago, if the Turks ſhould be apprized in the ſeaſon of hoſtility of Great Britain.

New-York, May 1.

By the arrival of the ſhip Pallinurus, in 26 days from Plymouth, we have been put in poſſeſſion of London papers to the 22d March, being two days later than before received by the Gold Hunter, from which the following articles are extracted.

LONDON, March 22.

The duke of Portland, who, at his Majeſty's command, has undertaken to form a new adminiſtration, continues occupied in that important, and we are inclined to think, arduous arrangement. Lord Hardwicke yeſterday attended his majeſty at Windſor; and in the evening a meeting of the new cabinet took place at Burlington houſe, to receive the further communication of the royal pleaſure.

It has been attempted to reconcile the diſcordant feelings of lords Sidmouth and Melville; and we underſtand Lord Eldon, in communicating to the king the difficulty which occurred on this head, enquired if his majeſty was deſirous that lord Sidmouth ſhould continue in his Cabinet. The reply is ſtated to have been, "It is matter of perfect indifference to me." We have reaſon to believe that the duke of Portland has in conſequence made his election of Lord Melville, and that the admiralty is again to have the benefit of his lordſhips active and liberal adminiſtration.

A French ſquadron, conſiſting of 3 ſail of the line and a frigate, which, for ſome time, had been lying in the outward harbor of Breſt, ready for ſea, appears, by letters which reached town from Plymouth, to have eſcaped through the paſſage Du Raz. It is conjectured that they are bound to America, to relieve the two ſhips blockaded there by the Britiſh cruizers. The facility with which the French ſhips have of late arrived at Breſt, or failed from thence, proves one of two things—either that the project of blockading that harbor is abſurd, or that there is criminal neglect in the execution of it.

The blockade of Trieſt has been raiſed for the preſent, in conſequence of a conference between the governor and the Britiſh commodore; the port, however, continues ſhut againſt the Engliſh and Ruſſian veſſels, and if that unwarrantable ſyſtem of excluſion is ſtill perſiſted in, the blockade will of courſe be reſumed.

Several Huſum and two Gottenburg mails are now daily and hourly expected at the poſt office.

Diſpatches are daily looked for at the admiralty from the Rio Plato. A report was aſloat yeſterday, that accounts had been received of the taking of Monte Viedo—but ſtatement was at leaſt premature.

March 19.

One of the French Bulletins, it will be recollected, ſtated, that three thouſand Ruſſian priſoners had been releaſed by a thouſand Koſacks, at Willemberg; but not a word has ſince been ſaid, where theſe Kozacks came from—how they paſſed by Bernadotte's corps; or what became of the French guards, &c. No matter—three thouſand of Gen. "Bulletin's" priſoners are thus accounted for.—The 24 cannon taken by the ſame General at Eylau, are to be melted down to make a ſtatue for General Houſtoult—thus they will be accounted for.

The 64th Bulletin tells of Bonaparte's being on the field of battle, ſeveral days after the affair at Eylau, ſhuddering at the horrid ſights which it afforded.—" A ſpectacle" the bulletin adds, " calculated to inſpire Princes with the love of Peace, and the horror of War." And it might alſo have added, to make Bonaparte ſeriouſly inquire, "What brought him thither?—Perhaps the ſight did inſpire him with thoughts of the neceſſity of peace; and was the cauſe of his retreat towards the Viſtula.

The Saxon contingent furniſhed to the French army, have reinforced the corps under Marſhal Lefebre.

The French army in Poland, and particularly in Eaſt Pruſſia, continued to be reinforced with French conſcripts, and the contingents furniſhed by the States forming the Confederation of the Rhine. On the other hand, the Ruſſians continued to receive numerous reinforcements from the interior.

The Engliſh goods ſeized in Hamburgh, are ſaid to exceed two millions and an half of dollars.

The King and Queen of Pruſſia were at Memel at the laſt dates.

Though the Bulletins mention that Bonapante never loſt a piece of cannon in Italy, Egypt, Auſtria, Moravia, Pruſſia, or Poland, yet whoever will view our arſenals, will find that all the cannon he had in Egypt are now in our poſſeſſion.

British Navy.—The following is a ſtatement of the diſtribution of the Britiſh Naval force up to the 1ſt of March: At ſea eighty ſix ſail of the line; ſeven ſhips from 50 to 44 guns; 115 frigates, 152 ſloops and 188 gun brigs and ſmaller veſſels, making a total of 542 ſhips of war. The number in commiſſion is 135 ſail of the line, 13 from 50 to 44 guns, 155 frigates, 152 ſloops, &c. and 182 gun brigs, making a total, at ſea and repairing of 738.

The Britiſh Navy Liſt, publiſhed in Oct. laſt, enumerates the following Officers, viz.

Admirals of the Red	21
Admirals of the White	15
Admirals of the Blue	17
Vice-Admirals of the Red	17

The following account of a moſt awful explaſion of gunpowder, on board a veſſel in the Rapenburgh canal, at Leyden, in Holland, is from a late Engliſh paper:

AWFUL EXPLOSION.

SHIEDAM, (Holland,) Jan. 13.

Laſt night, about five o'clock, the inhabitants of this city were alarmed by a moſt violent concuſſion, proceeding, as it was thought, from the North Weſt. The windows of ſeveral houſes were forced open by the ſhock. At firſt it was imagined that the powder Magazine at Delft had blown up; but after the ſtaple of a few hours, it appeared that all was tranquil in that city. To-day we learn, with horror and aſtoniſhment, that the moſt magnificent part of Leyden was the ſcene of this terrific explaſion. It ſeems that a veſſel laden with 200,000lbs. weight of gun powder from Amſterdam, deſtined for Delft, and then lying in the Rapenburgh canal, there, by ſome means took fire, and inſtantly blew up, deſtroying all the houſes on the ſuperior of the canal, and occaſioned the premature death of ſeveral thouſand of the inhabitants. When this account was written the flames were ſaid to be ſtill raging. Of 60 children in a boarding ſchool, five or ſix only are ſaid to have been ſaved, but ſcorched dreadfully. Some ſay that the Univerſity is nearly deſtroyed, and that the Jewiſh Synagogue is reduced to aſhes. Of the veſſel on board of which were the owner's two ſons and a ſervant, not an atom is viſible.

January 20.

It is our melancholy taſk again to adver't to the diſmal cataſtrophe which occurr d at Leyden on Monday the 12th inſtant, and to confeſs that no pen can exaggerate the horrors of that mournful ſcene. We are credibly informed by eye witneſſes, that ſcarcely a ſingle houſe or building has eſcaped without damage: and that on the Rapenburgh, where the deplorable event occurred, the houſes to a large extent are levelled with the ground. At the awful moment many families were ſitting at dinner with their friends, and thus periſhed without warning; fathers, mothers, children, ſervants and ſtrangers. Many of the unfortunate victims were torn to pieces by the explaſion, and their limbs ſcattered in every direction. Of 60 children in a boarding ſchool, only 5 are ſaved. Of the number of wounded various conjectures have been formed; many reſpectable perſons have been dug out, and others are ſtill known to be in the ruins. Among the dead are ſeveral of the moſt reſpectable families in the city, and many ſtrangers. Preſſing in a large amount has been put in a veſſel, which is irreparably loſt, many of the goods ſaved from the flames have been ſtolen, and the confuſion conſequent on ſo dreadful a cataſtrophe has given full ſcope to plunderers and robbers, every thing has ſince been ſent from the Hague and other cities to aſſiſt and relieve the wretched ſufferers.—A few have had wonderful eſcapes; while others, on the point of being reſcued, which bleeding providence for their preſervation, while proceeding onward to their deliverers, were crushed to death by ſudden falling of the beams impenetrably reſting on or withheld by obſtacles which had been removed.

Cloſe to the veſſel which blew up, by a grachi, on board of which were fifteen or twenty perſons, not a veſtige of whom was to be found. The cauſe of this dreadful cataſtrophe no one can aſcertain or even conjecture. The quantity of powder on board is eſtimated at about 40,000 lb weight, of which was totally and unaccountably conſumed to the care of two young men, brothers, and a ſervant man.

Two preſidents of the univerſity are ſtated to have been killed, and ſeveral other perſons in that celebrated ſeminary being fortunately vacation, great numbers of the ſtudents were abſent; and thoſe who were preſent are ſaid to have eſcaped.

The King, with the particular goodneſs which characteriſes him, repaired for the ſecond time to Leyden on Friday laſt, viſited the wounded and maimed, attended the ruins, met with the laborers there, and encouraged them to perſevere in their unwearied diligence.—On receiving the thanks of the magiſtrates and clergy, he returned them the moſt ensible anſwers, offered after individual loſſes, and left them with their wonted: "The dead I cannot reſtore to you; that is above human power; but all that I can, will I do for your city." His majeſty made an offer at the Palace in the Wood to ſuch reſpectable perſons as had been deprived of their habitations, or which were rendered uninhabitable; an offer which has likewiſe been accepted with gratitude.

His majeſty has empowered the magiſtrates of this unfortunate city to make a general collection throughout the whole kingdom, and ordered that 100,000 guilders, out of the treaſury, be left to the diſpoſition of the Miniſter of the home department for relieving the moſt preſſing neceſſities of the poor, and thoſe who have loſt their all.

Several perſons have been taken out alive from under the ruins; but ſome expired almoſt immediately after words. Great numbers ſtill lie buried, the rubbiſh forming ſuch vaſt heaps that a conſiderable time will be required to clear them.

After the explaſion, which was awful in the extreme, ſeveral fires broke out by the ſcattering of the lighted turf and coal in the hearths; and the calamity unfortunately drew off, for a while, the attention of the citizens to their ſuffering fellow-creatures, pitying and lamenting beneath the ruins of their habitations, but ſhortly before the heat of hilarity and of feaſtive converſe.

A Jewiſh ſchool ſuffered conſiderably; ſeveral children in it are ſaid to have loſt their lives. A charity ſchool near it met the ſame fate. Dead bodies or children near the ſpot are diſcovered from time to time. Fifty children at a boarding ſchool narrowly eſcaped by the cuſtom of two walls, which ſtood cloſe to them, and roof two, however, were crushed to death and a third died ſhortly afterwards in his father's arms. Thoſe who were ſaved, rufhed into the court-yard, where they were ſhortly after wards joined by their eager but trembling parents, and there ſeized a ſcene of tenderneſs which may be imagined, but cannot be deſcribed.

SEMLIN, Feb. 20.

The capture of Schabets, which has ſo often been announced and contradicted, is at length confirmed. This fortreſs, after having been bombarded without intermiſſion, from the 25th January to the 4th February, under the direction of the Servian commander Czerne George, capitulated the 5th. The following is the tenor of the capitulation:

1ſt. The Turks at Schabetz ſhall give up the fortreſs to the beſiegers, with all the property of the Sultan, which may be found in it,

2d. The women and children of the garriſon ſhall retire without obſtacle to Boſnia.

3d. The garriſon which is to leave the fortreſs on the 7th of this month, ſhall lay down their arms immediately before the gate called Wallewa, and ſhall paſs unarmed, through two lines of Servians.

4th. The garriſon ſhall obtain, in filing off for its ſafety, an eſcort to the river Drina. The Pacha may, if he judges proper, go to Boſnia, by the Auſtrian territory.

5th. The keys of the gate of the fortreſs ſhall be delivered by the Aga of the Janiſſaries.

The Servian commander of Belgrade has driven off all the Jews of the city and ſuburbs, and ſaid no individual of that nation ſhall be permitted in Servia. The Jewiſh community of Belgrade, compoſing in all 2000 individuals, has taken refuge in Boſnia, part by Brannat, part by Hungaria.

Naſſau, (N. P.) April 6.

The Mediator frigate, of 36 guns, captain Wiſe, arrived at Port Royal, Jam. on the 4th March, from a cruize. On the 12th ult. in the Mona Paſſage, the ſell in with La Bacchante, of 20 guns, captain Dacres, and off Cape Santaſia, on the 14th, they deſcried a ſail, on which they immediately went in purſuit, and after four hours chaſe, came up with and captured her, when the proved to be the national ſchooner Dolphin, of 1 long 19 pounder and two ſixes, which they threw overboard in endeavouring to eſcape. She was underſtood from her crew, that ſhe had a few days before taken the Britiſh ſchooner Loyalty Laſs, Rodgers, from New York, bound to this iſland, and the American ſhip George Waſhington, from Cape Francois, to New-Orleans, and that they were ſent to Samaná Bay. Captain Dacres, on receiving this information immediately determined to make for that port and endeavor to cut them out. On the 18th, they arrived abreaſt of the fort, when the Dolphin was immediately manned with ſeamen and marines from the frigates, and the command of her given to the firſt lieutenant of La Bacchante, with directions to ſtate, on being hailed from the battery, that ſhe was a national ſchooner with two prizes, (the Bacchante and Mediator being diſguiſed as ſuch.) The enemy, however, ſoon diſcovered the impoſition, and opened a heavy fire upon our veſſels, which was as briſkly returned; and after four hours engagement, they were ſeen flying in all directions, the battery being totally demoliſhed. Captain Wiſe then landed and ſpiked ſeveral guns, and threw the [illegible] into the ſea, and took poſſeſſion of the [illegible]ively Laſs and George Waſhington, [illegible] French ſchooners, all of which came [illegible] port with her. La Bacchante parted company the day after the attack.

The Mediator had four men killed, and twelve wounded, four of whom, we are ſorry to add, were obliged to undergo amputation.

MISCELLANY.

ADVICE TO MARRIED WOMEN.

By Mrs. Bennington.

REMEMBER, infallibility is not the property of man, ſo you may entail diſappointment on yourſelf, by expecting what is never to be found. The beſt of men are ſometimes ſo inconſiſtent with themſelves, they are liable to be hurried by ſudden ſtarts of paſſion, into expreſſions and actions which their cooler reaſon will condemn. They may have ſome oddities of behavior, ſome peculiarities of temper, be ſubject to accidental ill-humour, or whimſical complaints; blemiſhes of this kind often ſhade the brighteſt characters, but are never deſtructive of mutual felicity, unleſs made by ſome improper reſentment, or, an ill-judged oppoſition.—Reaſon can never be heard by paſſion, the offer of it only tends to inflame the more; cooled to his uſual temper, if wrong, the man of underſtanding will ſuggeſt to himſelf all that can be urged againſt him. The men of good nature unupbraided, own an error; contradiction at the time, is therefore wholly unlawful, and highly impudent, and after repetition equally unneceſſary and injudicious. Any peculiarities in the temper or behavior ought to be properly repreſented, in the tendereſt and moſt friendly manner; and if done diſcreetly, will be generally well taken. But if they are ſo habituated as not eaſily to be altered, ſtrike not too oftenupon the unharmonious ſtring, rather let them paſs unobſerved; ſuch a cheerful compliance will cement your union, and they may be made eaſy to yourſelf, by reflecting on the ſuperior good qualities, by which theſe trifling faults are ſo generally overbalanced.

Nothing is more vain than for a woman to deny her age—ſhe cannot deceive herſelf, who is the only perſon concerned about it. If a man diſlikes a woman, becauſe he thinks her of the age ſhe is, he will only diſlike her the more by being told ſhe is younger than ſhe ſeems to be, and conſequently looks older than ſhe ought to do. The anno domini of her face will weigh more than that of her regiſter.

Fawcett, the player, having called for pipes and tobacco at a tavern, the waiter brought ſome, and in laying them down broke moſt of them. Fawcett ſwore a great oath, that they were made of the ſame metal with the commandments. "Why ſo," ſays Suet, "becauſe they are ſo ſoon broken."

EXECUTION OF THE MURDERERS, AND MOST DREADFUL ACCIDENT.

Holloway and Haggerty, for the Murder of Steel—and Elizabeth Godfrey, for the Murder of Prince.

The concourse of people that assembled this morning to witness the execution of the murderers was immense. By six o'clock every house and avenue was crowded. At five minutes past eight o'clock, they were brought out of prison.—Haggerty came first—Holloway next, and Elizabeth Godfrey, for the murder of Richard Prince, last. Haggerty was dressed in a light colored great coat, such as is worn by soldiers—Holloway in a jacket. Haggerty appeared deeply affected, and mounted the scaffold with an uniformly flop and pale countenance. Holloway behaved with much effrontery; seemed regardless of the horrors of his situation, looked round him with unconcern, surveyed the multitude with as much indifference as if he had been one of the spectators, and bore no marks on his countenance either of fear or contrition. Haggerty seemed to shrink from his hardened associate. The poor woman was deeply affected; they were attended by two clergymen, a Protestant and a Roman Catholic. Haggerty being a Roman Catholic.—The Catholic Priest prayed by Haggerty, who joined in fervent prayer.—The Protestant clergyman prayed with Elizabeth Godfrey. Haggerty refused to join. Almost as soon as they came upon the scaffold, Holloway turned to the multitude and said with a loud voice. "Gentlemen, I am innocent." This he repeated three times—He then spoke to Haggerty, and said to him, according to the account given by those who were nearest the scaffold; "take no notice of the clergyman." Haggerty seemed to pay little attention to him. Whilst the rope was fixing round their necks, Holloway preserved his usual effrontery: Haggerty trembled—the countenance of the poor female assumed a deathlike paleness, but there was on her features a mixture of remorse and resignation.—Twice or thrice Holloway was invited to pray—he invariably refused, and with a look of impatience.

We have not heard whether either of the men confessed their guilt, though it is reported that Haggerty did.—About ten minutes after they had been on the scaffold, the clergymen descended—the signal was given, and they were launched into eternity.—Haggerty struggled for some minutes—Holloway scarcely moved—the sufferings of the poor female seemed to be short.

A most dreadful scene now took place—never, as we have already said, was there such a crowd assembled to witness a public execution. Streets, lanes, houses, all were crowded almost to suffocation. After the murderers had been hanging about five minutes, the pressure of the crowd above the platform, and near the Skinner-street side, was so great, that some persons in the midst of the crowd, overcome by fatigue, fell down—to raise them was impossible—they were instantly trampled on:—others fell—to extricate them was equally impossible—They were trampled on also.—Screams were heard from the poor sufferers, and from the persons who witnessed the scene from the different windows.—Help was called for; but the crowd was so great, that no person could penetrate it for some time. About fifty persons in all were trampled under foot, ten of them women—a considerable time elapsed before the constables could clear the way; at length they effected a passage; on rising up the poor sufferers, some were found with broken limbs; others with dreadful bruises; some were quite dead.—It is said that six were killed; other persons state that 30 were killed.—All the sufferers were immediately conveyed to St. Bartholomews' Hospital, where surgical assistance was administered to those to whom it could be of any use; the dead were deposited in one of the Wards, till their friends or relations take them away.

One o'clock.—On further enquiry we are sorry to find the above account does not state the calamity to its full extent. Twenty-seven persons lay dead at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, the gates of which are shut against the populace; four lay dead in the yard of the Saracen's Head; three in St. Sepulchre's Church; and two or three in other places.—In the Hospital there are three women, a child or two, and several young men apparently clerks. Some persons in business, who have missed their clerks this morning, have been to examine the dead bodies; but we do not find that any of them have been owned.

This dreadful accident seems to have risen from nothing but the pressure of the crowd. Some say a pyeman with a basket overset, and others fell over him; others say that persons having got up into carts without paying were pushed out, fell down, and others trampled over them; but neither of these seem to have been the fact. The accident occurred in more than one place. On the side of the platform next Ludgate hill, about seven fell down, and were trampled to death; but the chief scene of the calamity was on the side of the platform next St. Sepulchre's Church, about fifty yards from the platform. When the criminals came out for execution, the hue of that fact ran instantly and generally about. Those who were on Snow Hill, in Newgate-street, and towards Ludgate Hill, who could not see, pressed forward in enormous masses, and with irresistible force. Persons within twenty or thirty yards of the platform were squeezed, till with fear and pressure they could not breathe; it was extremely warm—the weakest fainted and dropped, others fell over them; the shrieks and confusion were tremendously horrible. It was as much as the strongest could do to support themselves—the doors of some houses in the street were burst open, hundreds rushed in, sweating, panting, speechless, and almost expiring.—There was no possibility of assisting those who dropped, and near forty were trampled to death, besides hundreds who were bruised, some more or less, limbs broken, the flesh torn off the legs of others, &c. &c. When the mob was cleared away, several hundred pairs of shoes were picked up in the streets, with boots, cloaks, bonnets, &c.

When Holloway and Haggerty came into the press yard for execution there were many Noblemen and Gentlemen of distinction.—Holloway went on his knees on the pavement to protest his innocence, expressing confidence that he would be forgiven his sins in heaven.—Haggerty also protested his innocence, but did not go on his knees. On the platform each addressed the populace, protesting his innocence, even while the caps were pulling over their faces. Holloway was attended by the Rev. Mr. Knight, of Rowland Hall's Chapel—Haggerty by a Roman Catholic Clergyman.

York, 30th April, 1807.

NEW-YORK, May 9.

For these two days past, (says the Norfork Herald of April 30,) a report has been current in this place, that the ship Two-Brothers, in 27 days from Liverpool, was boarded going up the bay to Baltimore, by a boat belonging to one of the British vessels in Lynhaven Bay, the Captain of which informed the boarding officer, that accounts were received at Liverpool of a terrible battle having been fought on the first of March by the French and Russians, in which the former were totally put to the rout, and that in consequence there had been very splendid illuminations all over England.

There are two letters in town (says the Richmond Gazette of May 2) from Holland to merchants here, one dated 22d March from Amsterdam, and the other of the 21st from Rotterdam, both stating that the French army had recently received a serious defeat from the Russians.

Late and Interesting.—By the arrival this morning of the brig Bedford, Captain Dunbar, in 39 days from Liverpool, we have received our regular files of London papers and Lloyd's Lists to the 27th of March inclusive. The papers furnish late and interesting intelligence from the Continent. A letter from Altona, (which will be found in the succeeding column, under the London date of March 27) states that a continued series of battles were fought from the 26th of Feb. to the 8th of March, in which the Russians were victorious. A letter from Thorn states that the French lost 13,000 men, 5 generals, 47 pieces of cannon, and 15 eagles.

In the Commercial Advertiser of this evening, we have given as copious extracts as the late hour at which we received the papers would permit.

The papers are principally devoted to parliamentary and editorial discussions respecting the change of the British Ministry.—The new Ministry has commenced its career under very unpromising circumstances. Already the strength of parties has been tried in Parliament, when the new Ministers found themselves in a minority of 93—and an immediate dissolution of Parliament is mentioned as probable. The catalogue of new Ministers was not completed on the 27th. The following received the Seals of office on the 25th and 26th. The resignation of their predecessors having been accepted on the 25th.

Earl Westmoreland, Lord Privy Seal.

The Duke of Portland, First Lord of the Treasury.

Lord Hawkesbury, Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Mr. Canning, Secretary of State for the Foreign Department.

Viscount Castlereagh, Secretary of State for the War and Colonial Department.

Earl Elgin, Lord Lieutenant of Fifeshire.

Earl of Selkirk, Lord Lieutenant of Kirkcudbright Stewarty.

Earl Camden, President of the Council.

Lord Mulgrave, First Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. R. S. Dundas, President of the board of Controul.

Earl Chichester, one of the Post-Masters General.

Earl Bathurst, President of the board of Trade, and Master of the Mint.

Lord Charles Somerset, and Mr. Long, Joint Paymasters of the Forces.

Marquis of Titchfield, one of the Lords of the Treasury.

Lord Lovaine, a member of the Board of Controul.

LONDON, March 24.

Early yesterday morning, Capt. Beaufort, of the Woolwich Fireship, arrived at the Admiralty, with dispatches from the Cape of Good Hope. Intelligence of a most satisfactory nature has been received by this opportunity respecting the advantages obtained by our cruisers in the Indian Seas over the enemy. The Maria, a Dutch frigate, and two brigs, have been cut out of Batavia by his Majesty's frigate Carnatic, after a spirited and desperate contest. By all accounts this was as daring and gallant an enterprize as any which has signalized the present war.

Another fortunate bar berg obtained, which promises no less fame, and far more advantage to those by whose bravery and skill it has been atchieved. The Piston, a Dutch frigate has been captured in the East Indies, by the Greyhound of 32 guns, Captain Elphinstone, and the Harrier brig, Capt. T. Troubridge. Take it in the richest prize that has been made this war. She had a million of dollars on board, besides a most valuable cargo. The respective shares of the Admiral, Sir Thomas Troubridge, and the Captains of the Greyhound and Harrier, it is supposed, will amount to 30,000l. each.

March 25.

Further advices have been received from the Continent of a very late date. They furnish intelligence of very great importance indeed, of which we have only time to give the principal heads.

The head quarters of the French army were about to be transferred to Berlin, and Bonaparte was expected in that city at the end of last week. General Blucher, who has been exchanged for General Victor, was about to set off to take the command in the Prussian army.

The Prussian Insurgents on the right bank of the Oder are become so formidable, that the communication between Stettin and Thorn is almost entirely cut off.

Several corps of French, worn down by famine and fatigue, among the rest a considerable part of Oudinot's division, are reported to have laid down their arms.

General Benningsen, subsequent to the battle of Eylau, received a reinforcement of 60,000 Regulars, and thirty pulks of Cossacks, of 500 men each. On that memorable occasion the Russian army, according to the official statement, was only seventy thousand strong.—The French were calculated at one hundred thousand at least.

The want of forage is so great in that part of Poland occupied by the French, that they have been under the necessity of taking the thatch coverings off the houses, to supply their horses with provender.

March 26.

The Mail due on Sunday, arrived yesterday evening, and brought intelligence of great importance:—Reinforced and supplied with every necessary, the Russians are again assuming the offensive, and advancing against the invincible Bonaparte—who no longer finding his seat of repose in the Vistula, is fallen back to Berlin.—Though his head quarters were stated to be at Osterode on the 8th, he is said to have been seen on that day at Thorn. The foreign Ambassador at Warsaw—the whole tribe of envoys and Ministers from the subject princes and allies of France, have been ordered to follow Talleyrand to Berlin. It is said even, in private letters, that the Russians have pushed their advanced posts to Warsaw, and that the French have sustained another defeat near Thorn. Want and dissatisfaction are also operating in support of the Russians, and a whole division of grenadiers, said to be Oudinot's is fluted to have gone over to the Russians. They had been peremptorily ordered by Bonaparte to make an attack when they had not had any sustenance for 36 hours.

The action of Braunsberg, on the 26 h, was followed by others most obstinately contested—the town was often taken and retaken—it was at last burnt—it covered the left wing of the French and prevented it from being turned. These actions are said to have taken place on the 27th, 28th, and 29th. The Cossacks did eminent service. On one of those days they cut to pieces a whole division of French cavalry of 4000 men.

Magdeburgh is to be immediately supplied with provisions and necessaries for a long siege.—On this look like Bonaparte's being at Peterfburgh by May-day? In the rear too of the French positions, insurrection is gaining strength and confidence daily.

When tyrants meet with a reverse of fortune, suspicion always haunts them.—The invincible Napoleon imputing his want of success to his officers, is said to have accused several of them of Treason—his former favourite Duroc is reported to have incurred his displeasure, and to have been sent back to France under an escort of gens d'armes.

It is imagined in the best informed naval circles, that the French squadron, of three sail of the line and a frigate, full of troops, which escaped a few nights since out of the outer road of Brest, are gone to the East-Indies.

March 27.

Two Gottenburgh Mails arrived this morning, and two bags from Hutum.—They have brought great and most favorable intelligence.

FRESH VICTORIES OVER THE FRENCH.

ALTONA, March 20.

[EXTRACT OF A PRIVATE LETTR.]

"The advices that have been received here since my last, from the combined Russian and Prussian armies, are of the most gratifying nature. The French, if things go on as they have begun, will have no further occasion to issue their bulletins, to impose the credulous part of the public, as they will be obliged to retreat much quicker than they came.

"On the 18 inst. General Benningsen's head-quarters were at Heilfperg, the chief town of Ermeland, in East Prussia, situate on the river Allee, where he had received the insignia of the order of St. Andrew, as a token of the great satisfaction that his Sovereign feels for his signal services, and this mark of distinction was accompanied by an addition to his salary of 12,000 roubles. He had broken up from Koniisberg already on the 24th ult.—The Prussians under General Lestocq, were on his right wing. General Lestocq's head quarters were at Peterswald. On the 26th ult. the French gained an advantage over the Russians, and occupied the town of Braunsburg on the Baltic, from whence they dislodged the Russians; but the latter returned to the attack on the 27th ult. when both parties became alternately masters of the place, and alternately lost it again. Those conflicts were most bloody; and the bravery and lion like courage, and perseverance of the Russians, after daily battles with the enemy, from the 26th ult. to the 8 h inst. maintained the field of Braunsberg, which was seen in flames on the 8th instant.—In this place and near Heilfperg, the French left near fifteen thousand dead on the field. Near the latter place the French General Lefevre is said to have been taken prisoner with 6000 men. Napoleon's head quarters were expected at Thorn on the 9th instant; and though the French had a considerable force, consisting of their own troops, and the German and Polish troops at Elbing, yet, by the latest accounts, they have been driven back, and General Benningsen kept continually advancing. The Russians are about to receive two great reinforcements, each of 80,000 men, one of which will be under the command of the Grand Duke Constantine. A private letter from Berlin, of the 14th inst. says, that Talleyrand, besides a great number of the diplomatic corps, returned thither via Breslaw, in Silesia, thinking the other no longer safe. Bonaparte was daily expected."

HAMBURGH, March 18.

Extract of a private letter from Altona, dated the 17th March,

"The situation of affairs in Poland and East Prussia has assumed a more favourable aspect; the French have found it necessary to rest and are seeking safety in Brandenburg and Berlin, where the head quarters of Napoleon are said to be transferred. If report speaks true, in the memorable battle of Eylau, Bonaparte was wounded in the back; and although his quarters were pretended to be at Osterode on the 8 h, there are persons here who actually saw him at Thorn.—He is said to be at variance with most of his general officers, several of whom have left the army in disgust with his proceedings. On the night of the 9th instant, a close carriage passed through Magdeburgh, which it is reported contained Marshal Duroc, whom the Emperor Napoleon had accused of traitorous practices with the Austrian General Baron Vincent.

"This evening private letters have been received, which state that the Russians have their advanced posts at Warsaw, and that the French have been completely defeated near Thorn, by the combined Prussian and Russian army; the latter is said now to consist of 100,000 men.

"The Russian army has, since the battle of Eylau, been increased to near 300,000 men."

The ansuel Spanish Ship, from Manilla to Amoy, has been captured by the British frigate Phaeton, capt. Wood. The prize is valued on a moderate computation at 250,000 sterling. [N. Y. Merc. Adv.

NEW-YORK, May 9.

For these two days past, (says the Norfork Herald of April 30,) a report has been current in this place, that the ship Two-Brothers, in 27 days from Liverpool, was boarded going up the bay to Baltimore, by a boat belonging to one of the British vessels in Lynhaven Bay, the Captain of which informed the boarding officer, that accounts were received at Liverpool of a terrible battle having been fought on the first of March by the French and Russians, in which the former were totally put to the rout, and that in consequence there had been very splendid illuminations all over England.

There are two letters in town (says the Richmond Gazette of May 2) from Holland to merchants here, one dated 22d March from Amsterdam, and the other of the 21st from Rotterdam, both stating that the French army had recently received a serious defeat from the Russians.

Late and Interesting.—By the arrival this morning of the brig Bedford, Captain Dunbar, in 39 days from Liverpool, we have received our regular files of London papers and Lloyd's Lists to the 27th of March inclusive. The papers furnish late and interesting intelligence from the Continent. A letter from Altona, (which will be found in the succeeding column, under the London date of March 27) states that a continued series of battles were fought from the 26th of Feb. to the 8th of March, in which the Russians were victorious. A letter from Thorn states that the French lost 13,000 men, 5 generals, 47 pieces of cannon, and 15 eagles.

In the Commercial Advertiser of this evening, we have given as copious extracts as the late hour at which we received the papers would permit.

The papers are principally devoted to parliamentary and editorial discussions respecting the change of the British Ministry.—The new Ministry has commenced its career under very unpromising circumstances. Continuation of latest Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, March 24.

In consequence of important dispatches which Government have received from the Commanders of the squadrons off Brest, Boulogne, and Rochefort, the Admiralty, it is said, is about to change the system of blockade; and on the suggestion of Earl St. Vincent, to adopt a measure of more efficacy and less peril. It has now been proved by experience, and particularly by some recent incidents, that the system of blockade is not calculated to answer its purpose; and we understand the substance of the dispatches to be, that the Admirals and Commodores on the several stations can no longer be responsible for the execution of their orders; that his Majesty's vessels, according to a late examination, have suffered the most serious injury on this service; and that the consequent expence to the country, and the extraordinary wear and tear of the Navy, were in value infinitely beyond any partial settlement on the ships of the enemy.

It is farther stated, that the utmost vigilance of our Commanders is unequal to prevent the escape of the enemy; that, in the long period of the equinoctial winds, during the whole of the spring and winter, and the greater part of the Autumn, they entered and departed at their pleasure; and that his Majesty's ships had the frequent mortification to see them in the act of preparation, and with their sails and yards set, without any possibility of preventing their purpose. So persuaded were the enemy that they possessed this full liberty of leaving their ports at their discretion, that a general sailing order appears to have been issued to every public port in France; and that they were executing it as fast as the opportunity presented itself. A squadron of three ships, two frigates, and five sloops of war, has escaped from Brest; and a much stronger squadron had nearly effected the same purpose from Rochefort—they had already cleared the harbour, when an easterly wind suddenly arose and compelled them to return. These are but two among many similar instances; but as they have occurred at the same time, they have imprelled themselves very forcibly upon the consideration of the Admiralty.

(EXTRACTS OF LETTERS.)

"After the battle of Pultusk, where we kept our ground, the French suffered every where, till driven nearly to the borders of the Vistula, when they found themselves in so difficult a situation, that they would have been obliged to retreat, had the corps of Benningsen and Lestoco been strong enough to have covered the whole ground. The French manœuvring their army most adroitly marched on in the rear of the Russians and Prussians towards Konigsberg, and reached Hesilberg.

"Generals Benningsen and Lestoco here gained the greatest credit by their expert manœuvres; they effected a junction of their corps, and took an advanced position at Eylau, before the French were aware of it. General Lestoco's corps formed the right wing, whole army occupied an excellent position on a ridge of mountains, the front towards Eylau.

"On the 7th, the firing of the light troops began, by which nothing was gained, and the night was passed under arms. On the 8th, in the morning, the French began by a heavy cannonade, still, however, delaying the attack. General Benningsen remained firm in his position. At one o'clock the first attack was made on the right wing, from whence General Lestoco had marched; and as the French attacked with their whole force, fo the whole was repulsed. Nothing scarcely was to be seen but horses, from which the riders had been cut down. The horse grenadiers of Bonaparte advanced at a steady pace between the Russian columns, unperceived for some time, owing to the smoke; they were, however, recognised between a regiment of hussars and a regiment of dragoons, and were charged by them with the greatest fury. This was exactly what the grenadiers wished; they intended to turn about and fall back, in hopes of being pursued by the Russian cavalry, in disorder, thereby affording an opportunity for the whole of the French cavalry to charge them; for which purpose they were already moving down the hill. General Benningsen not suffering a single regiment to break the line, the French cavalry turned about again, except the grenadiers, who literally were cut to pieces; not a single man escaped. The attack lasted till three o'clock, and ten Eagles and seven stand of colours were brought to Benningsen. The French aware of the weakness of the left wing, directed their whole force there. Lestoco still not appearing, the French commenced the attack. Benningsen ordered the left wing to retreat in hour's march, which the cavalry covered in a masterly manner. At one, Lestoco re appeared. He pushed on with his small force, which were Lithuanians, in a very gallant manner, and repulsed all that oppoled him. He had already been engaged with Bonaparte's corps, in the rear of the Russian army, through which he cut his way, and decided the fate of the battle. Benningsen afterwards retreated with his army to this place, in order not to lose the fruits of his victory; and has taken up a position at Konigsberg, to furnish himself with a fresh supply of ammunition, and have care taken of the sick. The French, under Bonaparte, were 90,000 strong; the Russians and Prussians only 70,000; since that time, a reinforcement of 30 pulks of Cossacks, and 50,000 men, the corps of General Essen, have joined them. The French are still pursued.—Worn out with sickness and fatigue, they are confined to a tract of ground twice walked already by the Russian and French armies, and where it is likely they will be wholly deltroyed. Bonaparte sent his most cunning negociator, General Bertrand, to the King of Prussia. To-day he had a private audience, to which he went in good spirits, but returned quite dejected. He departed this evening.—What the result of this will be, God knows. The Russians and Prussians are in very good spirits under their present leaders. Lestoco receives a reinforcement of 17,000 men, 6000 of which are cavalry, and have joined him already, according to the latest Bulletin of February 12.

"Yesterday official accounts was brought, that a party of Cossacks had cut to pieces fifteen squadrons of the enemy. To-day Standards and Eagles were again sent to Petersburgh. I have seen myself those that were taken in the battle of Eylau. There are really so many prisoners of war that there is no room to keep them.

BANKS OF THE ELBE, March, 18.

Notwithstanding the lofty language still held by the French in their Bulletins and rapports, it is generally believed here, that we shall soon be convinced of their falsehood, and indeed, one or two circumstances already intimate as much. That the corps Dumonatique has left Warsaw is now admitted, and we are assured, from good authority, that at Stetin the general Post-office has refused to receive any more letters from Thorn.

According to letters from Berlin, Bonaparte is expected this week in that city, together with his guard. It is supposed that he will have no further object than to support himself during the reft of the winter on the Oder, the military position of which is also interesting as it respects Austria.

A variety of reports, concerning the real issue of the various engagements since the battle of Eylau, are in circulation; the most plausible of which is, that 12,000 of the French were reduced by hunger to lay down their arms and beg for bread. This news is brought from Kiel. General Blucher is said to have confirmed it, adding, that it was the corps under Oudinot. But I cannot pledge myself for the truth of it.

It is further laid, that the French have been trying to persuade the Emperor of China, to declare war against the Russians, but without success.

Banks of the Elbe, March 17.

All persons belonging to the foreign Embassies at Warsaw have been requested to repair to Berlin, for the purpose of continuing their negociations there, and awaiting more favorable times. They were informed it would be useless for them to remain longer at Warsaw, as the Prince of Benevento has received orders to proceed to the Imperial Head Quarters.

They write from Stettin that the course of the posts between that town and Thorn is interrupted.

The army having quitted the countries situated between the Pregel and the Passarge, they have been occupied by small corps of Russian light troops; we are still however unapprized of that army having made any movements in advance.

Letters from Memel announce that 20 Prussian battalions are organizing.

CAPTURE OF MONTEVIDO.

Yesterday se'nnight arrived at Providence, (R. I.) the ship Favorite, captain Jonathan Russell, in 55 days from St. Salvadore, a Portuguele settlement on the coast of Brasil. Captain Ruffell communicates the following interesting intelligence:

"On the 14th of December left an English squadron of 21 sail arrived at Rio de Janeiro, among which were the Ardent, of 64 guns, Commodore Donelly, Unicorn frigate, and a sloop of war, the reft transports. The troops on board were commanded by Gen. Auchmuty, an American by birth, and Gen. Lumney; the first was authorised to act as Governor of the district of Montevido, should it be under the dominion of the English. The number of troops was reported to be 6-000, but from a variety of circumstances it is probable they did not exceed 3000. Great dispatch was used in watering, and the squadron failed for the River Plate on the 22d December. The ardor of the troops was highly excited at the recital of the cruelties perpetrated by the Spaniards upon the English prisoners at the re-capture of Buenos Ayres, and a spirit appeared to be universal among them for taking ample vengeance. The Favorite failed from St. Salvadore on the 5th of March, on the morning of which day an arrival from Rio Grande, in a passage of 36 days, brought intelligence, that Montevido was in the hands of the English. By comparing dates, it is probable that it fell between the 10th and 20th of January. The news of the capture of this place was brought to Rio Grande by an English veffel, which was dispatched there by the conquerors for provisions. The private letters received at St. Salvadore, mention that the place sustained a close siege of fix days, and was at length carried by storm. They also implied, that the violences committed at the capitulation of Buenos Ayres were fully retaliated. It would seem, from the want of provisions, the English suffered after the fall of Montevido, that their power could not extend far into the country. The Spaniards were extremely exasperated against the Americans, on account of the part acted by certain individuals in the conquest of Buenos Ayres, and an American veffel arrived from Montevido while the Favorite lay at Rio de Janeiro, which had been permitted by the English to proceed to the former place; the gave information, that on her approach to the batteries she was brought to, and a boat dispatched to inform her, that if she continued within reach of the guns another hour, they would certainly sink her."

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE CAPTURE OF MONTEVIDO.

From a Barbadoes paper of the 11th April.

The following particulars of this event will be found highly gratifying, being given with an accuracy which does not admit of a doubt, and upon which further proof of the valour, discipline, and enterprize of the British arms, we pay a most willing tellimony. The account is received from the American brig Troy, John Hazard, 44 days from Rio Grande, bound to New-Orleans; spoke by his majesty's ship Jalon, arrived this morning from a cruize, and communicated to us from the first authority.

"Gen. Auchmuty, with a reinforcement of 4 or 5000 men, about the 7th of January last, arrived at Maldonada, and after having embarked all our troops then there, proceeded on the river towards Montevido, landed at Point Cartas, (about three miles from the town) the 19th, and immediately attacked and routed a body of Spaniards collected to prevent their landing, taking from them a field piece. The English then marched and took possession of a weaving place, about a mile from the town. On the 23d, the Spaniards came out of Montevido with 3000 men to attack them. The English immediately decamped, and formed an apparent retreat, till they got three miles from the town, when they halted—the Spaniards, who supposed them flying, pursuing in a most furious manner, huzzing, &c. During this retreat, a party of 300 cavalry, with some infantry, were landed between the enemy and the town, from our ships. On being attacked, the enemy made a very feint refistance, and acted in the greatest confusion, only 340 Spaniards getting back to the town. The Victors with 100 men efcaped into the country.—Our troops then proceeded to invest the town; and on the 2d February, having made a feint at the Harbour (or North) Gate, which drew the enemy's attention to that part, the English army entered by the Se Gates, which they faced, and after a great carnage, took poffeffion of the town.

When the Troy left Rio Grande, the English were preparing to proceed for Buenos Ayres.

General Beresford was still a prisoner about ten leagues from Buenos Ayres, and the English prisoners (said to be about 300 deficient of their original number) are dispersed about the country.

The following article appeared in the Richmond Enquirer of the 5th ult.

Reports.—It is reported that the British Minister Mr. Erskine, has been recalled—and that an express has been sent to Hampton Roads, to stop the Wasp, now on its way to England. This report comes by a gentleman by the last evening's stage from Washington. By "recalled" we presume it is to be understood, that Mr. E. is to be superceded by another minister. But this was to have been expected upon the late change of the ministry in England.

Mr. E's recall would certainly be no very favorable symptom of the friendly disposition of the present cabinet towards us; as he is married to an American woman; is a man of liberal sentiments, and the son of the celebrated Erskine, the friend and toadjutor of FOX.

An ACT for granting to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the uses of this Province, the like duties on goods and merchandize brought into this Province from the United States of America, as are now paid on goods and merchandize imported from the United States of America into the Province of Lower Canada.

[Passed 10th March, 1807.]

WHEREAS by articles of provisional agreement made and entered into at Montreal, on the twenty-eighth day of January in the thirty-seventh year of his present Majesty's reign, by commissioners nominated and appointed on behalf of the Province of Upper Canada, under and by virtue of an Act of the Legislature thereof, passed in the thirty-sixth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act to authorize the Lieutenant Governor to nominate and appoint certain commissioners for the purposes therein mentioned, and commissioners nominated and appointed in behalf of the Province of Lower Canada, by an Act of the Provincial Parliament thereof, passed in the thirty-sixth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act for appointing commissioners on behalf of this Province, to treat further with commissioners on behalf of the Province of Upper Canada, for the purposes herein mentioned," it was amongst other things agreed, that the Legislature of Upper Canada, should impose and levy upon all articles subject to duties in Lower Canada, which shall be brought into Upper Canada from the United States of America, without passing through Lower Canada, duties equal to those that were or should be imposed and levied on similar articles when brought from the United States into Lower Canada, and that the Legislature of Upper Canada should take the most effectual measures that their local situation would admit of, for enforcing the collection of such duties. And whereas by an Act of the Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada, passed in the forty fifth year of the reign of his present Majesty entitled, "an Act to provide for the erecting of a common Gaol in each of the Districts of Quebec and Montreal respectively, and the means for defraying the expences thereof," it was amongst other things enacted, that from and after the passing of that Act there should be raised, levied, collected and paid, for and upon the respective goods, wares and merchandize thereinafter mentioned, which should be imported or brought into any part of that Province, from any place or places from whence the same might be legally imported, over and above all other duties then charged and payable thereon in that Province, by any Act or Acts of the Parliament of Great Britain, or of the Provincial Parliament of that Province, the several rates and duties therein mentioned, that is to say, for every pound Avoir-du-pois weight of Bohea Tea, two pence; secondly, for every pound like weight of Souchong or other black Tea four pence; thirdly, for every pound like weight of Hyson Tea, six pence; fourthly, for every pound like weight of all other green Teas, four pence; fifthly, for every gallon English measure of all spirits or other strong liquors, three pence; sixthly, for every gallon like measure of all wine, three pence; seventhly, for every gallon like measure of all molasses and syrups, two pence, and after those rates for any greater or less quantity of such goods respectively.

And whereas it is expedient in conformity to the said provisional agreement before mentioned, that the like duties, should be raised, levied, collected and paid upon the respective goods, wares and merchandizes above recited, which should be imported or brought into any part of this Province from the United States of America, over and above all other duties now charged and payable thereon, as are now imposed on similar articles brought from the said United States of America into Lower Canada: Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign entitled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, there shall be raised, levied, collected and paid for and upon the respective goods, wares and merchandizes hereinafter mentioned, which shall be imported or brought into any part of this Province, from the United States of America, over and above all other duties now charged and payable thereon in this Province, by any Act or Acts of the Parliament of Great-Britain, or of the Provincial Parliament of this Province, the several rates and duties following, that is to say: For every pound avoir-du-pois weight of Bohea, two-pence; secondly, for every pound like weight of Souchong or other black Tea, four-pence; thirdly, for every pound like weight of Hyson Tea, six-pence; fourthly, for every pound like weight of all other green Teas, four-pence; fifthly, for every gallon, English measure of all Spirits or other strong liquors, three-pence; sixthly, for every gallon like measure, of all Wine, three-pence; seventhly, for every gallon like measure of all Molasses and Syrups, two-pence, and after those rates for any greater or less quantity of such goods respectively.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the several rates and duties herein before recited, shall be raised, levied, collected and paid in the same manner and form, and under the same rules and regulations, penalties and forfeitures as are by Law now established in this Province, for the levying and collecting of other rates and duties.

III. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That this Act shall continue to be in force to the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and nine, and no longer.

An Act to revive and continue an Act passed in the forty-second year of his present Majesty, entitled, "an Act to enable the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to appoint one or more additional Port or Ports, Place or Places of Entry within this Province, and to appoint one or more Collector or Collectors at the same, respectively."

WHEREAS an Act passed in the forty second year of his present Majesty, entitled, "an Act to enable the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to appoint one or more additional Port or Ports, Place or Places of Entry, within this Province, and to appoint one or more Collector or Collectors at the same, respectively," which was to continue in force for three years, and no longer, is expired, and it is expedient that the same should be revived and continued.

BE it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, entitled, "an Act to make more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That the said Act shall from and after the passing of this Act be revived, and the same is hereby revived, and shall continue in full force and effect for two years and no longer.

An ACT to authorize Practitioners in the Law in this Province, to take such a number of Clerks as is therein mentioned.

[Passed 10th March, 1807.]

WHEREAS it is necessary to facilitate the Education of Youth in this Province, to the profession of the Law; Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intitled, "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intitled, "an Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province;" and by the authority of the same; That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for all and every person now authorized to practice the Profession of the Law in this Province, or who shall be hereafter duly authorized to practice as aforesaid, to take and have four Clerks at one time, and no more, any former Law or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding.

Continuation of latest Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, March 31.

An account from the feat of War, received through a moft refpectable channel, adds conſiderable weight to the ſtatements we have already given of the deplorable ſituation of the French army. It is deſcribed as retreating with great rapidity, and in much confuſion; and ſo daily harraſſed by the Coſſacks, that numbers continue to be made priſoners. It is added, that when Bonaparte's propoſal for an armiſtice, was rejected, he really ſent to General Benningſen, to requeſt that a ſpecies of warfare leſs ſevere might be adopted. This extraordinary meſſage is ſuppoſed to have originated in the remonſtrances of ſome of his Generals, owing to the French army having been no leſs than eight days without bread!!

At the Court of the Queen's Palace, March 30, 1807, preſent the King's moſt excellent Majeſty in Council.

This day the Right Honorable Sir James Pulteney, Bart. was, by His Majeſty's command, ſworn of His Majeſty's moſt honorable Privy Council, and took his place at the Board.

His Majeſty having been graciouſly pleaſed to deliver the cuſtody of the Seals of the duchy and county of Palantine of Lancaſter, to the right hon. Spencer Perceval, the Oath of Chancellor of the duchy of Lancaſter was this day by His Majeſty's command, adminiſtered to him accordingly.

His Majeſty, in Council was this day pleaſed to order, that in the abſence of the right hon. Henry Earl Bathurſt, the right hon. George Role ſhould be Preſident of the committee of Privy Council appointed for the conſideration of all trade and foreign plantations.

April 2.

Yeſterday at twelve o'clock, his Majeſty came from Windſor to the Queen's palace. About half paſt one his Majeſty gave audience to Lord Erſkine, when his Lordship delivered up the Great Seal. At 2 o'clock, his Majeſty held a private levee; at which the following had the honor of kiſſing his Majeſty's hand upon their ſeveral appointments:

Lord Eldon, on being appointed Lord Chancellor.

Mr. Robert Ward, on being appointed a Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. S. Bourne, on being appointed Lord of the Treaſury.

The Duke of Richmond, on being appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Lord Sydney, on being appointed Ranger of Hyde and St. James' Parks, in the room of the Earl of Euſton.

Admiral Gambier, on being appointed a Lord of the Admiralty.

Major Gen. the hon. John Ambercrombie, on being appointed to the command of the 53d regiment.

Lord St. John reſigned his ſtaff of office, as captain of the Band of Gentlemen Penſioners.

His Majeſty held a Privy Council, when Lord Eldon was ſworn in Lord High Chancellor.

We daily expect to receive intelligence of a battle, which may eventually decide whether Bonaparte is to remain beyond the Viſtula, or whether he is to haſten his retreat to the Rhine. Both parties, after the late tremendous trial of ſtrength at Eylau, where nature turned pale at the ſight of ſo much deſtruction, are bringing up their reinforcements. We have already mentioned, that the intention of the French is to turn the left wing of the Ruſſians. But this intention is underſtood: Eſſen is oppoſed to Maſſena, with a ſuperior force; and unleſs the latter be defeated, this laſt combination is diſconcerted, and Napoleon muſt retire.

We have ſeen ſome letters reſpecting the battle of Eylau, which throw new lights on the circumſtances leading to that tremendous conflict. Bernadotte, alias Ponte Corvo, being greatly preſſed, ſent for reinforcements. His courier was intercepted; and Bonaparte, advancing to Konigſberg, found himſelf in front, not of a Ruſſian detachment, but of the main army. A battle was then unavoidable; and it exceeded, thoſe letters ſay, all that has ever been heard of, or read in hiſtory. The number of the killed and wounded amounted to no leſs than 55,000 men.—Of thoſe put hors de combat 15,000 were Ruſſians, and 40,000 French. The greater loſs of the latter aroſe from their advancing upon the moſt fortified part of the Ruſſian line, where almoſt every diſcharge fell. They ſuffered alſo in another way. The Gens d'Armes a Cheval made their way through the Ruſſian wings; they were there met by the cavalry or reſerve, and but 16 out of 500 men returned to "the Grand Army." The Ruſſians formed a compact maſs—a column of granite, as the French would expreſs it; but before night arrived, the appearance of the Pruſſian Army, which had been fighting all day, paſt an end to the conflict, and cruſhed the French to retreat.

Sir Richard Strachan has ſailed from Plymouth, in the Caeſar, to take the command of the ſquadron off Rochefort.

April 7.

Government has determined to give to Ruſſia every poſſible ſupport, and forty thouſand ſtand of arms will be ſhipped off with the utmoſt diſpatch. They were on Saturday morning, and will be conveyed in two ſloops of war. They are to be followed by a proportionate quantity of ball cartridges. Upwards of three thouſand ſtands, which had been previouſly ſhot with ball cartridges, has reached Memel, and are at this moment very likely employed with forces againſt the common enemy.

April 8.

Lord Cathcart is, it is ſaid, to have the command of the troops going to the continent. They are to be aſſiſted by Sir Moore, and to join the Ruſſian army as ſoon as poſſible. Three battalions of the foot guards are to be ſent.

April 14.

PEACE between ENGLAND, RUSSIA and TURKEY.

We (Courier) had the ſatisfaction to announce, yeſterday, the glarious intelligence received from the Dardanelles.—Government have not yet received the official diſpatches from Sir John Duckworth or Mr. Arbuthnot; but they are in poſſeſſion of other advices, to which, we underſtand, they attach implicit credit—Indeed the Dutch papers to the 6th, which have arrived, render the intelligence very probable. The Vienna Court Gazette of the 21ſt of March, contains the following paragraph.

"Admiral Louis's ſquadron, cruiſing off Tenedos, was reinforced between the 16th and 18th of February, by four three-deckers, and ſeveral frigates and corvettes; and on the 21ſt the Engliſh forced the ſeven forts which protect the paſſage of the Dardanelles, burnt a ſhip of the line and alſo deſtroyed four Turkiſh frigates in the channel. In conſequence, freſh negociations and propoſals for accommodation took place, and were continued when the laſteſt accounts came away."

The intelligence which Government has received is more particular, as well as more recent. Admiral Louis remained off Tenedos, cruiſing between that iſland and the iſland of Lemnos, till he was joined by Sir J. Duckworth—they then forced the paſſage of the Dardanelles amidſt a tremendous fire, which, however, did little damage to our ſhips. The fire from the Old Caſtle on the north ſide of the Strait, is ſaid to have been for a ſhort time, peculiarly heavy, but it was ſoon ſilenced by the Britiſh thunder, and the fort is ſaid to have been nearly demoliſhed to a heap of ruins. The Turkiſh ſquadron oppoſed an unavailing reſiſtance. It is ſaid that the number of ſhips taken or deſtroyed, was much greater than the Vienna Gazette ſtates—the number is reported to have been ten ſail of the line. The vigour of our proceedings, in conjunction with the Ruſſian ſquadron, ſpread univerſal conſternation and diſmay. Proceeding through the Dardanelles into the ſea of Marmora, we prepared to carry our force before Conſtantinople, but before any thing was attempted againſt that city, a meſſenger was ſent off to the Divan, offering terms of peace. The Divan, after a ſhort conſultation, acceded to them, and the following is the ſubſtance of the conditions we dictated in concert with our Allies to the Porte.

"That the Engliſh ſhould retain poſſeſſion of certain of the Turkiſh fortreſſes till a general peace, as a ſecurity for the fidelity of the Porte."

The firſt and immediate conſequence of this act of vigour, was the diſſolution of the French influence.—Sebaſtian was ordered away from Conſtantinople, in 24 hours.

STATESMAN OFFICE, Two o'clock, P. M.

We ſtop the preſs to announce the report of the arrival of a meſſenger at the Admiralty from Admiral Louis, fully confirming the accounts relative to the forcing the paſſage of the Dardanelles, and the ſubſequent treaty with the Porte.

The Park and Tower guns are expected to be fired on the occaſion.—We are ſorry to ſtate the loſs of his Majeſty's ſhip Ajax, which run aground, but all the crew were ſaved.

DECLARATION April 11.

Of the Engliſh Ambaſſador, Mr. Arbuthnot, to the conference at Conſtantinople, Feb. 23.

"The Sublime Porte, which has never ceaſed to manifeſt partiality for the French, has more particularly ſince the arrival of the French Ambaſſador, General Sebaſtiani, in that capital, changed its principles and ſyſtem towards its ancient allies.

"The ſaid Ambaſſador ſome days after his arrival having given us a note containing certain threats, the Sublime Porte ought to have returned it to him, and ſent him off from the confines of the Sublime Porte, on the contrary, received the note favourably, and ſignified to him, that the ſhips of war would not be ſuffered to paſs the canal of the Black Sea.

"On the occaſion of the diſcontentment of the Inhabitants of Moldavia and Wallachia, which took place in conſequence of preceding circumſtances, the Porte ought immediately to have conſidered, that the delay of their puniſhment which was not given till three weeks afterwards, when the Ruſſian Ambaſſador had formally demanded it, was a proof of the ſecret wiſhes and conſent of the Porte. The Engliſh agent had accepted. The Ruſſian and Engliſh troops therefore have agreed that the troops ſhould from theſe forces enter the Turkiſh territory, and the latter a fleet to the capital of the Ottoman Empire. Should the Porte proceed to receive in alliance with Ruſſia and England the ancient friendſhip, and obſerve the laſt French Ambaſſador from the capital, ſhe was will immediately ceaſe; but if ſhe be not diſpoſed, a breach will be forthwith with King and will be inevitable.

"To carry this plan into execution, England will ſend a well-appointed fleet, before the ſquadron now ſtationed off the mouth of Toulon. The Britiſh fleet will join us in the ſame ſeas, to meet or paſs oppoſite the ſtrait at the Dardanelles.

"Should the Porte be inclined to give a negative anſwer to the preſent propoſals, the Ambaſſador will ſend back to their country all the Engliſh merchants in the Ottoman ſtates, and remain himſelf here to receive the ſame propoſal, and come with reinforcements under the command of a well-appointed maritime force ſhall have formed a junction in the vicinity of this capital."

Whitehall, March 31.

The King has been pleaſed to continue and appoint his grace William Henry Cavendiſh Duke of Portland, Knight of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, the right hon. Spencer Perceval, William H. C. Scott Bentinck, commonly called Marquis of Litchfield, the hon. Wm. Elliot, and Wm. S. Bourne, Eſquire, to be commiſſioners for executing the office of the Treaſurer of His Majeſty's Exchequer.

The King has alſo been pleaſed to grant to the right hon. Spencer Perceval, the offices of the Chancellor and United Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Exchequer.

The King has alſo been pleaſed to grant to Lieutenant General Earl of Chatham, Knight of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, the office of Maſter Gen. of His Majeſty's Ordnance of the United Kingdom.

The King has alſo been pleaſed to grant to the hon. Wm. Wellefley Pole, the office of Clerk of the Ordnance of the United Kingdom. The King has alſo been pleaſed to grant to Mark Singleton, Eſq. the office of Rore keeper of the Ordnance of the United Kingdom. The King has alſo been pleaſed to grant to the hon. Croply Ashley, the office of Clerk of the Deliveries of the Ordnance of the United Kingdom.

The King has alſo been pleaſed to conſtitute and appoint the right hon. Lieut. Gen. Sir James Pulteney, Bart. to be his Majeſty's Secretary at War.

DOVER, March 30.

By a ſhip which arrived in the Roads this afternoon from the Texel, we learn that accounts had reached Holland of the Auſtrians having taken the field againſt the French, and that the latter were retreating out of Poland in all directions. It was aſcertained that the Diplomatic Corps had already arrived at Berlin, and had brought miſerable accounts of the ſtate of the French army.

By an arrival at Philadelphia, from Londonderry.

EAST PRUSSIA, March 18.

The Imperial French head-quarters were ſtill at Oſtrode yeſterday. The corps of Marſhal Meſſena is in Motion, and important operations are expected.

Extract of a Diſpatch from Gen. Benningſen.

"KONIGSBERG, Feb. 10 (22) 1807.

"General Sedmoratzky, who has juſt effected a junction with my army, has brought with him 1400 Pruſſian Priſoners, from 2 to 300 Frenchmen, and a great deal of baggage, which he has taken from the enemy. The retrograde of Bonaparte rather reſembles a flight than a retreat. It is ſolely to the ſwiftneſs of our Coſſack's horſes that we are indebted for the enormous quantity of priſoners that have been daily made ſince the battle of Eylau. The day before yeſterday they took 200, yeſterday 150, and to-day 383, 4 officers, baggage waggons, forage and proviſions. Every thing that we can come up with is taken. The French ſoldiers, dying with hunger and fatigue, no longer feel a diſpoſition to defend themſelves.—At the mere ſight of our troops they throw away their arms and demand quarter. My advanced Poſts are at Liebſtadt. My head quarters alone remain at Konigſberg, as my ill health, and the extreme fatigue I have undergone, compel me to take a few moments of repoſe here.

I ſet out to morrow. The Pruſſian diviſion commanded by gen. Plaetz, and the extremity of my right wing on the heights of Bonnenberg. General Sedmoratzky, and General Lefloco, form together the left wing. The Grand army is in the centre; and in this order we advanced towards the Viſtula, embracing Thorn on one ſide, and Elbing on the other. I hope my left wing will ſoon chaſe themſelves on the other ſide of that River. In the mean time, my advanced guard, reinforced by General Platow's Coſſacks, a conſiderable part of which have already reached their deſtination, purſue the enemy without relaxation, and harraſs them by their hetty warfare, which is as ſtrange to them as it is advantageous to us."

YORK, JUNE 13, 1807.

We are indebted to an obliging correſpondent from the Niagara ſide, for the following communication, which from its tenor, we infert with peculiar pleaſure.

NIAGARA, 5th June, 1807.

His Excellency Lieut. Governor Gore having perſonally announced his intention of celebrating His Majeſty's Birth Day at this place, concerted with Mrs. Gore and ſuite early on Tueſday morning,

The Meſſengers the 3d a numerous and ſplendid aſſemblage of Ladies from various and diſtant parts of the Diſtrict, and Gentlemen from the Garriſon and neighbourhood, with all their moſt elegant and faſhionable wives, daughters and ſiſters, who reſpected the Birth Day the Militia began to aſſemble in Line on the Flatts for the Review of his Excellency, who expreſſed the higheſt ſatisfaction at their correct and appropriate

Previouſly to joining the Militia, his Excellency on horſeback, and attended by his Aid-de-Camps, Lieutenant Gore of the 49th Regt. appeared to the Garriſon Parade during his Royal Salute in honor of the day, and at Town viſited both a Review of the Commanding Officer's Quarters, ſeveral parts of the Diſtrict, not before intimated, were propoſed.

The Ball commenced about 8 o'clock in the Council Houſe which was fitted up, and lighted in an elegant manner, with an Orcheſtra for the charming Band of the 49th Regt.

A temporary building was alſo erected for the uſe of ſupper, with a number of Tables to accommodate 200 perſons at ſupper, and this building was connected with the Dancing Room by a covered way.

Mrs. Gore, and the Hon. Robert Hamilton led off the firſt dance, and about 50 couple of ſpirited dancers were on the floor till one o'clock, when they retired into the ſupper Room, where a moſt ſumptuous Entertainment ſmiled on all with true Regal & elegance was provided. Every thing was good and was found on the ſuppreſſable Board, are the wines of Champaign and Burgundy, ſtrewed to the mirth the ravaged ſpirits, and called for a renewal of the dance, which was kept up till after day light, when the company ſeparated, highly gratified with their princely entertainment.

On the whole, the Birth Day was celebrated with a ſplendor and magnificence hitherto unknown in this country.

We loſt.—It is with ſome difficulty we have been able to obtain information of the rapid movements of his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, ſince the celebration of the Birth Day.

On the night of the day and the late hour when he retired with Mrs. Gore from the Ball-Room, did not prevent his being on horſeback the next morning, when he proceeded to Chippewa, where he dined and ſlept. On the 4th dined and ſlept at Fort-Erie, and on the following morning was entertained on board his Majeſty' Snow, Camelia, with his ſuite and other gentlemen of the place and neighborhood, where a break-faſt was provided by capt. Cowan, and ſet out with great ſtate and elegance (but his Excellency's obſervation was chiefly directed by his ſtrict regularity and diſcipline, and he believe, he expreſſed the higheſt ſatisfaction to his commander.

When his Excellency came on ſhore he viſited the new Pilot-works, and from ſome returned to Queen-ſtore, where he dined with the Agricultural Society, at the Hon Robert Hamilton's, where a ſumptuous entertainment was prepared for a large company.

Mrs. Gore we underſtand intended to accompany the Governor to Fort Erie, but her exertion on the night of the Ball by her rendered her incapable of proceeding further than Chippewa, where ſhe remained until his Excellency's return.

This little tour augurs favorably for the Province, every part of which we are told his Excellency means to look into, and make ſuch regulations, as from his own obſervations, ſhall neceſſary for the welfare of the colony.

Much-ſuch we are told, is his next object, from whence it is ſaid he means to proceed to St. Joſeph's, and finiſh the tour, returning by the Lakes at Huron and Erie.

We have received official accounts of the capture of Monte Video, by the forces under the command of Sir S Auchmuty, and regret that we cannot give the detail of that brilliant atchievement in this number.

The French are loſing ground in all quarters—at the dreadful battle of Pruſſian Eylau, they loſt between 40 and 50,000 men in killed and wounded, exclaſive of priſoners. Between them and the Swedes, now acting on the offenſive, various ſkirmiſhes have taken place.

It was rumoured in New-York, but with little apparent foundation, that the Cape of Good Hope had been taken by the French.—It is alſo reported that the Germans are about to commence hoſtilities againſt the French.

A paſſenger in the ſchooner Amazon, that arrived yeſterday forenoon in 21 days from Trinidad, informs, that a few days before they ſailed, a flag of truce arrived at Trinidad from the Main, with an account of the death of the Prince of Orange, occaſioned by a kick from a ſtone horſe of his high ſpirited charger. The news was received direct from Madrid—Mer. Adv.

MR. CARY,

I am one, who having ſpent a few years of the earlier part of my life, at a time when good folks were ſcarce, in the Indian country, obtained, through the influence of friends, a reſpectable ſituation in the management of the fur trade; and ſoon after my advancement returned to this country, with my head filled with more high notions of my own importance, than my pockets were with pelteat. So conceited was I of myſelf, on my firſt introducing my innocent countenance, like Lord Chatterfield, upon his entering the world, with all his ſchoolaſtic roll about him, I imagined none equalled me in ſenſe, learning, or accompliſhments. And whereever I arrogated to public, I found every eye was fixed upon me, in admiration, wonderment and admiration. Experience has ſince taught me, Mr. Editor, (for a conſiderable time has elapſed) that we are too apt to think highly of ourſelves; and that the greateſt part of our ſelf conceit is ever proportioned to our ignorance of the manners and cuſtoms of the world. The truth of this obſervation I long felt on taking a journey to London, when I did not attempt to paſs many days, when the illuſive phantoms of falſe greatneſs vaniſhed from my mind. For in that grand city the connections which had procured me conſequence on this ſide of the Atlantic, were little known, and leſs regarded; and, if by chance, I attracted a ſmall portion of the public remark, it was owing merely to the ſhowiſhip of my appearance, and not to the ſentimental ſtuff I may have had a reverſion. Mortified at this ſtubby reception, on that great theatre of buſtle and miſe, and determined to become, in reality, what my fond imagination had painted me, a man of the world, and a great man, I hurried back to this happier clime, where I have ſtaid ever ſince, courting the graces, and ſtudying the art of diſſimulation. In the moſt faſhionable circles, and attending to my buſineſs with a few grim plodding lines of waſte-book and ledger.—As I launched into ſociety with the prejudices of Lord Chatterfield, and have ſtudied him with ſo much aſſiduity, I flatter myſelf, you will not find me a man of the world; though nothing will ever alter my being a man of the world; though nothing will ever alter my being

ANECDOTE OF BONAPARTE.

The Emperor Napoleon riſes early in the morning, for he ſleeps very little, not more than three or four hours a night. After having taken his coffee, of which he is very fond, as he never drinks leſs than thirty cups a day, made very ſtrong, he goes to his bath, the water of which is mixed with ſome medical preparation, to cure the effects of the impurity of his blood, which is viſible upon his ſkin. As he never can be a moment idle, and makes the moſt of his time, he is attended by a perſon who underſtands the Engliſh language perfectly, and has the ability of tranſlating it without heſitation into French. He therefore reads the Engliſh newſpapers to the Emperor, as if he had a French paper in his hands. This he calls his hour of amuſement, and ſometimes laughs at the abſurdity and ignorance of the Engliſh writers, as he calls their contents. The perſon who reades to him, is inſtructed not to paſs by any expreſſions, or to ſoften them; he muſt read as he meets them; for he likes to know what the enemy think and write of him. After having bathed, he dreſſes himſelf and goes to his chamber, where he has always ſome one to attend him, his miniſters or officers have the preference, next his private Secretary. He is called at the hour of dinner, and but half an hour is occupied with that meal, for he eats very little; and has almoſt never any appetite, on account of the quantity of coffee which he drinks from time to time. In the afternoon he is as buſy as in the morning, but allows himſelf, ſometimes thrice a week, an hour, to go to ſome theatre or other; but it is never known when he goes, or which theatre he means to viſit; he very ſeldom knows it himſelf till dinner time, when he inquires for the different plays which are to be given to the night. The Empreſs accompanies him always; ſhe is fond of him, and he is very much attached to her. He is always attended by Roſtan, a Mameluke, who is very much attached to him. He was a common man, whoſe family and relations ſuffered greatly in Egypt; Bonaparte, when in that country, took a fancy to him, and, after having proved his fidelity, employed him in his ſervice; he tailed him from time to time, and he is now a Colonel. He is not only with him every where in the day time, but in the night he is the neareſt to his perſon; Madame Bonaparte does not ſleep with him. Roſtan ſleeps before the door of his bed-chamber, ſo that it is impoſſible it can be opened without diſturbing him. When he is upon his poſt, the Emperor thinks himſelf late; but he relies much more upon his Mameluke, than upon all the pages, guards, and watchmen, that are placed in the different avenues of his bed room.

Dean Swift tells us that the names of Patriot, riot, took its riſe in his time, from a party turbulent demagogue called PAT RI OT. It is ſaid the members of the Irish Directory claim him as their common anceſtor.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the inſertion of their Names on the U. E. Liſt, or have been ſuſpended from the ſame, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be beſtowed by His Majeſty on that meritorious claſs of ſubjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other perſons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were alſo reſident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have ſince died without having their Names inſerted on that Liſt, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwiſe would have derived from His Majeſty's Bounty.

THE ADELPHIAD—No. 130.

The information which Mr. Carr communicates respecting the Bogs of Ireland, is extremely curious and interesting. He fays they " at firſt ſeemed to b· a ſubject of little intereſt ; but as I enquired, and reflected, I found them a ſource of uncommon ſurpriſe, curioſity and amuſement." The Bog of Allen is the largeſt in Ireland, and has the appearance of a large brown lake. It contains 300,000 acres, and croſſes ſeveral counties. The air near the Bogs is perfectly ſalubrious, and ſome cattle feed on the ſcanty crops of graſs they produce. The country people preſerve their butter and eggs in the Bogs, which have the power of counteracting thoſe changes, and that putrefaction, which are produced by the operations of the elements. " Dr. Campbell obſerves, that he has ſeen a ſhoe, of one piece of leather, neatly ſtitched, taken out of a Bog, where it was ſuppoſed from its faſhion to have lain for centuries, entirely freſh." The ſame Gentleman had alſo ſeen butter, in a tolerable ſtate of preſervation, taken out ten feet under the ſurface of the Bog, conſequently it muſt have lain there for ages. A cobler, it ſeems, had been overwhelmed by a ſtuating Bog, and " when found, he had the appearance of having been enbalmed, and a ſhoe and ſome leather, which lay by his ſide, were in a perfect ſtate of preſervation."

At a conſiderable depth below the ſurface of the Bogs, whole foreſts of fallen trees have been found, apparently burnt off from the roots, which roots remain faſt in the ground. The antiſeptic nature of the Bog keeps the fineſt oaks, firs and yews, in ſo perfect a ſtate of preſervation, that the Bog timber is preferred to that hewn down in the foreſts. The writer of this article has ſeen a ſtatue of Robert Duke of Normandy in the Cathedral Church at Glouceſter (one of the moſt ſuperb edifices in England) made from the Irish Bog oak, which is not perceptibly found, and nearly as ſonorous as metal, although it is ſix hundred years old. Very beautiful ſtairs, banniſters and other articles, are made from it in Ireland ; it makes a very brilliant fire.—In ſome places, by digging to a great depth, recumbent foreſts upon foreſts, with a layer of earth between, have been diſcovered—; ſort of vegetable Herculaneum. The learned Gen. Vallancy, in his collectanea, ſays, " that the " late Mr. Evans, engineer, informed him, " that in cutting the line of the Royal Canal through the Bog of Cappagh, between " Dublin and Kilcock, at the diſtance of " twenty-ſix feet, he met with ſir trees which " apparently, had been planted in avenues ; " and at this depth he found a lump of tal- " low, weighing about two hundred weight ; " that he ſunk fourteen feet below theſe " trees in Bog, and came to a hard bottom, " on which were oak trees proſtrated." The Bog of Monela has been opened to a ſufficient depth for the diſcovery of three tiers of wood, one below the other ; at the diſtance of ſeveral feet from each other.

In theſe Bogs, at a great depth, veſtiges of arable land have been diſcovered ; alſo wooden paliſadoes, pondrous, and elegant " ornaments of gold and ſilver, ſuch as fibulae, claſps, buckles, bracelets, ankle-s, frontlets, lunettes, plates of gold, braſs weapons, &c. many of which are of elegant workmanſhip, and give a high idea of the ſkill of the ancient Iriſh."—Bugleherns, made of copper, have been found, lapped over and riveted with copper nails very ingeniouſly. Theſe horns produce a loud wild note. " The art of ſo doting does not appear to have been diſcovered, when theſe precious remains of antiquity were firſt formed." They were united by beating and twiſting them together.

Horns of the moole deer have been found in the Bogs ; which is a farther demonſtration of their great antiquity, as that animal had been many ages extinct in Ireland.

Mr. Carr obſerves, " how Bogs have been produced, is a ſubject which, like the attributable cauſe of moſt phenomena, it hw lued in philoſophical conjecture." Affuredly the circumſtances of whole foreſts having been burnt off near the roots is extremely difficult of ſolution. It might, however, have been done in very remote ages of antiquity, by a people who were not acquainted with the uſe of iron ; and had neither axes, ſaws or other inſtruments, which would fell a tree. To this day ſome of the peaſants in Sweden burn down their woods in the ſame way—it is eaſier than felling them, though not ſo expeditious a method.

In regard to the alternate ſtrata of wood and ſoil or vegetable matter, which conſtitute the Bogs of Ireland—it is not difficult to account for them on the hypotheſis that the various parts of our earth have been alternately ſea and land. In periods which have been long obſcured in the miſt of antiquity, were buried in the grave of time, it is as poſſible that Ireland was ſubmerged by the ſea, as that the eſtates of Horſman ſhould become the Zuyder Zee—or thoſe of Godwin, Earl of Kent, the Goodwin Sands in later periods. It might happen alſo that Ireland was thus ſurpaſſed, after ſome of its foreſts had been proſtrated by fire, and that in the great convulſion, the trees in queſtion might be ſo covered by ſoil, as to prevent their floating on the water. It might happen that Ireland, by ſome great convulſion of nature, ſhould again emerge from the ſea, as well as the many iſlands which have appeared or re-appeared in the Mediterranean, Iceland, and other parts of the world during the laſt century. After her reſurreƈtion from the ſea, new foreſts might ariſe, which might in their turn be overthrown by ſimilar diſaſters; and ſo this way it would not be difficult to account for the Iriſh Bogs, which appear to be inſcrutable by any other mode of conjecture. Ireland and its vicinity bear all the marks of having been the theatre of vaſt convulſions. The interior parts of the iſland are not deſtitute of the appearance of volcanic mountains, whoſe ſmoke no more aſcends and whoſe thunders have long ceaſed to ſhake or to diſturb the country. The Giant's Cauſeway conſiſts chiefly of thoſe baſaltae, which are generally formed in the cavels of volcanoes—and it is poſſible that the mountains which once covered thoſe ſtupendous and amazing ruins, have ſuffered the fate of rocks.

Torn from the thund'ring ſide of Etna, or Pelorus.

and have hid their cloud capped ſummits in the boſom of the ſea. Corj ſtures have been formed that England and Ireland, and the other Britiſh iſles, were formerly part of the vaſt Atlantic-iſland or continent, concerning which we have received many, by ſome ſuppoſed fabulous, hints from the m ſt ancient writers.—That iſland is ſaid to have been ſwallowed by the ocean ; and ſome modern believers in the reality of its exiſtence, ſuppoſed that they have diſcovered parts of it s ruins in the ſoundings which are found all the way from Ireland to the banks of Newfoundland. But without wandering into this groundleſs field or ocean of ſpeculation and inquiry, it is ſufficiently evident that Ireland has been the ſcene of great natural convulſions—and it is highly probable that her Bogs could be formed no where but in the ſea. In confirmation whereof we may particularly obſerve that one quality they poſſeſs in common with the ſea, that is, they preſerve bodies from putrefaction and corruption ; * which is a quality I ſhould ſuppoſe they could not have derived from any other quarter.—Timber and other ſubſtances will ſoon rot in ſwamps, morraſſes and other wet ſituations, which are formed by freſh and ſtagnant water. That the vaſt body of matter which covers the timber in theſe Bogs cannot be collected on dry land, is the more probable from the conſideration that vegetation is extremely ſcanty in their neighborhood, and it would require countleſs ages to form a body fifteen or twenty feet thick, over the trees.

I will conclude this eſſay by remarking, that the Bog turf is cut into the ſhape of bricks by proper inſtruments ; and when dried it makes tolerable fuel. When reclaimed, or brought into a ſtate of cultivation, the Bogs make excellent land. Z.

* What ſeems to ſtrengthen this conjecture is the conſideration that no iron is found in the Bogs—an article which ſoft will corrode and conſume. All the metals hitherto diſcovered are gold, ſilver, copper and braſs.

CAPTURE OF MONTEVIDEO.

London, (Downing ſtreet,) April 12.

A diſpatch of which the following is a copy, was received this morning at the office of Viſcount Caſtlereagh, one of his Majeſty's principal ſecretaries of State, from Brigadier General Auchmuty, to the right hon. William Windham :

Montevideo, Feb 6, 1807.

SIR,—I have the honor to inform you, that his Majeſty's troops under my command have taken by aſſault and after a moſt determined reſiſtance, the important fortreſs and city of Montevideo.

The Ardent, with her convoy, arrived at Maldonado, on the 5th Jan. and I immediately took under my orders the troops from the Cape, commanded by lieutenant col. Backhouſe. On the 15th, I evacuated that place without opposition, leaving a ſmall garriſon on the iſland of Gorriti.

On conferring with rear admiral Stirling, it was determined to attack Montevideo ; and I landed on the point of Theiabih, to the weſtward of the Caretas Rocks, in a bay of bay, about nine miles from the town. The enemy were in great force, with guns on the heights, when we diſembarked ; but they did not advance to oppoſe us, and ſubſiſted for ſome time, about a mile from the ſhore. A ſkirmiſh taking commence, and ſome firing at the enemy's ſhipping on the ground, and continued occaſionally during our day on the ground.

On the 19th we moved towards Montevideo. The right column, under the hon. brigadier general Lumley, was to oppoſite. Lieut. colonel Pack, of the enemy's forts occupying the heights to his front and right. As we advanced, a ſharp fire of round and grape ſhot opened upon us, which ſoon changed to bomb, from the light battalion under lieut. colonel Browning, who turned the corps oppoſed to him with the aid of a gun. The enemy on the hill took the ſame manner, but retreated. They continued retiring before us, and purſued us, without any further opportunity, except without commander, to take up a poſition about two miles from the ſame. Our advanced poſts occupied the ſame night. Some ſmall parties were poſted cloſe to the works ; but in the evening the principal part of the ſchools was withdrawn.

The next morning the enemy came out of the town, and attacked us with their whole force, about ſix thouſand men and a number of guns. They advanced in two columns ; the right conſiſting of cavalry, to turn our left flank, which the others, of infantry, attacked the left of our line. The latter poſted on our advanced poſts, and preſſed ſo hard on our pickets at once, that colonel Browning, who commanded on the left, ordered three companies of the 38th, under Major Campbell, to their ſupport ; theſe companies met in with the head of the column, and very bravely charged it ſo gallantly received, and gave ſuch a fire on both ſides ; at length the column began to give way, and it was ſeaſonably and impetuouſly attacked in flank by the rifle corps, and the 40th regiment, which I ordered up, and directed to the particular point. The column then gave way on all ſides, and were purſued with great ſlaughter and the loſs of a gun to the town. The right column, obſerving the fate of the it companions, rapidly retired, without coming into action.

The loſs of the enemy was conſiderable, and has been eſtimated at 1500 men ; theſe I think might be ſomewhat leſſened two and three hundred ; we have taken the ſame number of priſoners, but the principal part of the wounded got back into the town ; I am happy to ſay, that ours was comparatively trifling.

The conſequences of this affair were greater than the ſtation itſelf. Inſtead of finding ourſelves ſurrounded with hoſtile, and a petty warfare as our poſts, many of the inhabitants of the country ſeparated, and returned to their ſeveral villages, and we were allowed quietly to ſit down before the town.

From the beſt information I could obtain, I was led to believe that the defences of Montevideo were weak, and the garriſon by no means adapted to make an obſtinate reſiſtance ; but I found the works truly reſpectable, with 150 pieces of cannon ; and they were ably defended.

The enemy being in poſſeſſion of the iſland of Ratona, commanded the entrance of the port ; I was aware that ſome gun-boats would annoy us as we approached. A two gun battery was conſtructed on the 23d to keep them in check, and our poſts were extended to the harbour, and completely ſhut in the garriſon on the land ſide. Their communication was thus however open by water, and their boats conveyed to them troops and proviſions ; even water for the garriſon was obtained by this means ; for the wells that happily there were in our poſſeſſion.

On the 25th we opened batteries of five 24 pounders and two mortars, and all the triggers and ſmaller veſſels came in as cloſe as they could with ſafety, and cannonaded the town. But finding that the garriſon was not intimidated into a ſurrender, I conſtructed on the 28th, a battery of ſix twenty-four pounders within a thouſand yards of the loweſt part of the citadel, which I was informed was in ſo weak a ſtate that it might eaſily be breached. The parapet was not in ruins, but the transports received little injury, and I was ſoon convinced that my means were inadequate to a regular ſiege ; the only proſpect of ſucceſs that preſented itſelf was to attempt a breach as ſoon as poſſible to a wall by the fouth gate, that joins the works to the ſea, and endeavor to ſtorm it. This was effected by a ſix gun battery, within 600 yards, and though it was expoſed to a very ſuperior fire from the battery, which had been unſilenced during the whole of the day, a breach was reported practicable on the 2d inſt. Many reaſons induced me not to delay the aſſault, though I was aware the troops would be expoſed to a very heavy fire in approaching and mounting the breach. Orders were given for the aſſault an hour before day-break the enſuing morning, and a ſummons was ſent to the governor in the evening to intimidate the town. To this meſſage no anſwer was returned.

The troops deſtined for the aſſault, conſiſted of the 88th corps under Major Gardiner, and Light Infantry under Lt. Col. Browning and Major Trotter, the grenadiers under Majors Campbell and Tucker, and the 38th Regiment under Lieut. Col. Vallai and Major Nugent.

They were ſupported by the 40th Regiment under Major Darly-mple, and the 87th under Lt. Col. Bell and Major Miller. The whole were commanded by Lt. Col. Brown. The remainder of my force, conſiſting of the 17th light dragoons, detachments of the 20th and 21ſt light dragoons, the 47th regiment, a company of the 71ſt, and a detachment of 700 marines and ſeamen, were encamped under Brigadier General Lumley, to protect our rear.

At the appointed hour the troops marched to the aſſault. They approached our breach before they were diſcovered, when a deſtructive fire from every gun that could bear upon it, and from the muſketry of the garriſon, opened upon them. Heavy as it was our lots would have been comparatively trifling, if the breach had been open ; but during the night and under our fire, the enemy had barricaded in with beams as to render it nearly impracticable. The night was extremely dark. The head of the column miſſed the breach, and when it was approached it was ſo ſhut up, that it was impoſſible for the unbroken wall. In this ſituation the troops remained under a heavy fire for a quarter of an hour, when the breach was diſcovered by Captain Renny of the light infantry, who pointed it out, and gloriouſly led us to the aſſault. Our gallant ſoldiers ruſhed to it, and, diſtinct as a wreath of aſhes, forced their way into the town. Colonel Vallancey at the head of the principal ſtreets, and their fire for a ſhort time, was deſtructive : but the troops advanced in all directions, clearing the ſtreets and batteries with their bayonets and overturning their cannon. The 40th regiment, with col. Browne followed. They alſo miſſed the breach, and were paſſed through the fire of their batteries before they joined us.

The 87th regiment were paſſed near the wall, and when the troops who entered at the breach were in poſſeſſion, but their number was ſo great they could not walk. They ſcaled the walls and entered the town at the ſame moment approached it. At this light every thing was in confuſion except the citadel, which made aſhew of reſiſtance, and ſoon ſurrendered, and early in the morning the town was quiet, and the troops were generally quarting themſelves.

The gallantry diſplayed by the troops during the aſſault, and the ſubordinance and orderly behaviour in the town, ſince, do juſtice in their praiſes, that it is unneceſſary for me to ſay how highly I am pleaſed with their conduct. The ſeveral corps have been engaged in ſince we landed, has been ſucceſsful, every thing I wiſhed has been effected with order and ſucceſs.

Our loſs during the ſiege was trifling, particularly as we were protected by approaches, and the enemy's fire of ſhot and ſhell was inceſſant. But it is painful for me to add, that it was great at the aſſault. Many and valuable officers are among the killed and wounded. Major Dalrymple of the 40th was the only field officer killed. Lieutenant Colonel Vallancey and Browning and Major Tucker, are among the wounded. I am deeply concerned to ſay, that the two former are dangerouſly ſo. The enemy's loſs was very great, about 800 killed and 500 wounded, and the Governor Don Ruſſell Rafe Huidobro, with upwards of 1000 officers and men, are priſoners. All of 1500 ſhipped in boats or ſtores were, as I am informed, taken.

From Brigadier-General the hon. W. Lumley, and from Colonel Browne, I have received the moſt able and the moſt zealous aſſiſtance and ſupport. The former protected the line from the enemy during the ſiege. The latter conducted it with great judgment and determined bravery.

The diſtinguiſhed reputation of the Royal Artillery has been fully ſupported by the company under my orders, and I conſider myſelf much indebted to Captains Walſon, Dickſon, Carmichael and Wiſeman, for their zealous and able exertions. Capt. Faulkner of the Engineers was equally zealous, and though young in the ſervice, conducted himſelf with ſuch propriety that I have no doubt of his proving a valuable officer.—Owing to great fatigue he was taken ill in the midſt of our operations, and captain Dixon readily undertook his office, and executed it with the greateſt judgment.

From the heads of corps and departments, from the general ſtaff of the army, from the medical, and from my own perſonal ſtaff, I have received the moſt prompt and cheerful aſſiſtance.

It is ſufficient to ſay, that the utmoſt cordiality has ſubſiſted between Rear Admiral Stirling and myſelf ; I have received from him the moſt friendly and polite attentions, and every thing in his power to grant.

The captains and officers of the navy have been equally zealous to aſſiſt us ; but I feel particularly indebted to captain Donnelly and Palmer for their great exertions. They commanded a corps of marines and ſeamen, that were landed, and were eſſentially uſeful to us with the guns, and in the batteries, as well as in bringing up the ordnance and ſtores.

This diſpatch will be delivered to you by Major Tucker who was wounded at the aſſault ; and as he has long been in my confidence, I beg leave to refer you to him for further particulars.

I have the honor to be, &c.

S. ACHMUTY,

Brigadier-General Commanding.

To the Rt. Hon. Wm. Windham, &c. &c.

P. S. I am extremely concerned to add, that Lieutenant Colonel Vallancey and Browning both ſince yeſterday of their wounds. I had flattered myſelf with hopes of their recovery, but a rapid mortification has deprived his Majeſty of ſo many gallant officers.

A. WATSON, Capt. Com. Artillery.

LONDON, April 15.

Government, it is ſaid, received authentic advice yeſterday, by way of Hamburgh, that 11 Turkiſh ſhips of the line had been burnt in the Dardanelles, by the boats of the Britiſh ſquadron.

According to accounts from Dantzic, dated the 27th of March, the French have cut off all communication between that place and Konigſberg. At firſt a bombardment was feared, and a corps was formed, intended in that caſe, to protect the rich magazines, which for the moſt part are ſituate cloſe to each other. Thoſe which were at Koſlin have been removed to Thorn.—Gen. Kalkreuth, according to the ancient cuſtom of war, announced his arrival at Dantzic to the French General, the latter replied to this politeneſs by teſtifying a wiſh that ſome accommodation might be agreed on between them to ſave the city from the horrors of bombardment ; but the Ruſſian General returned for anſwer, that he was determined to bury himſelf under the ruins of the city, rather than ſurrender it.

Letters from Wallachia ſtate, that the Turkiſh garriſon of Rajova Braila ſurrendered to the Ruſſian troops, after a ſiege of 8 days and a terrible bombardment : and that Giurgewo has been taken by the Ruſſians, by aſſault, at the head of 24,000 men. The garriſon was entirely cut to pieces, for the Ruſſians had expreſs orders to give no quarters.

Vienna Court Gazette, March 24.

It was upon the 18th February, in the afternoon, while the Turks were celebrating the Feaſt of the Grand Bayram, that the Engliſh Admiral Duckworth, with the Royal George of 110 guns ; the Windſor Caſtle, of 110 guns ; the Canopus, Admiral Louis ; and the Pompey, Admiral Sir Sydney Smith, of 84 guns each ; the Active, the Standard, the Repulſe and Thunderer, of 74 guns each ; the Endymion, of 50, three frigates, and ſeveral fire ſhips and bomb veſſels, penetrated through the Dardanelles, under the favor of a ſtrong ſoutherly wind, notwithſtanding the fire of the forts, and almoſt without receiving any damage from it. The reſt of their fleet remained off the Cape of Tenedos. After having attacked and deſtroyed the ſmall ſquadron which was at anchor at the entrance of the canal, the fleet caſt anchor on the evening of the 20th, within cannon ſhot of the Capital, between the Seraglio and the ſeven Towers. Meſſages were immediately ſent off on both ſides. The negociations ſtill continue, although on the evening of the 27th there was a fight engagement with a diviſion of the Turkiſh gun-boats, which were repulſed by the Engliſh, and either burnt or driven on ſhore. The Porte continues its preparations of defence with additional ardour. Numerous batteries are eſtabliſhing along the European and Aſiatic coaſts, on which ſeveral hundred pieces of cannon will be placed. Every great officer of the Porte, even the Reis Effendi, has his poſt aſſigned to him in the line of defence. The Grand Signior has perſonally repaired to the works, to animate the laborers by his preſence. The Captain Pacha, and the Seraſkier of the Marine, have been diſplaced and baniſhed to Ro Folio. Hadſchi-Ibrahim Effendi has been appointed firſt Secretary of the Admiralty. The Boſphorus ſquadron has been recalled. Every veſſel in the Arſenal fit for ſervice, has been ſent to Topham, to be got ready for ſea. For want of ſeamen, crews are to be got from among the Janiſſaries.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, March 26.

The fire by which his Majesty's ship Ajax has been destroyed was merely accidental. It took place below deck, and after burning for some time, reached the magazine, when she blew up. Capt. Blackwood, who had ascended to the spritsail yard, had just escaped before the explosion took place. The ship was cruising in the Archipelago at that time.

March 28.

The following intelligence, dated the 3d of March, has been received from Constantinople. On the 28th of February, the English attempted a landing on Prince's Island, but it miscarried. Their loss on the occasion is stated at 400 killed and wounded, and 200 taken prisoners. The following day the fleet weighed anchor, and proceeded to the Dardanelles.

The number of Turks who took up arms in Constantinople and its vicinity, amounted to 100,000. Public order was not in the least disturbed in that city. The Grand Signior had not shown the slightest disposition to leave the place, as had been falsely asserted.

April 11.

Expedition to the Continent.—It is reported that the principal command of the expedition, for the conveyance of which a considerable number of transports were taken up last week, is to be conferred on lord Cathcart. It is to be composed of the whole of the German Legion, at present near 18,000 strong, and a British force nearly as numerous. Should the events which in all probability have taken place before now in Poland, prove greatly in favor of the allies, the whole of this force it is expected will make its appearance on the Baltic, in a few weeks. Some accounts say, that besides the German legion 20,000 men will be compaised in this expedition. Sir J. Stuart is said to have been offered the second command; but has declined any professional employment at present, on account of his health. The general sustained a blow by the fall of his horse, which was wounded under him on the memorable 4th of July, from the effect of which he is still a sufferer.

Lord St. Vincent has resigned the command of the channel fleet, which has been given to Lord Gardner.

A letter from a British field officer serving in the Russian Army, dated the 6th ult. estimates the loss which the French have sustained since the battle of Eylau, in killed, prisoners and deserters, at 19,000 men; and states is as the general opinion, that since they first crossed the Vistula, they have not lost less than 80,000 men; his letter adds, that general Beningsen had been actually joined by 25,000 fresh Cossacks, who were constantly harrassing the flanks and out posts of the French, and cutting off their supplies and convoys. The writer considers the French cavalry as almost annihilated. The Prussians had greatly recovered their spirits.

The Emperor Alexander, accompanied by his brother the Grand Duke Constantine, has set off from St. Petersburgh to join the armies, and of course, we presume, to take the command into his own hands.

April 12.

Expeditions.—The 1st battalion of the 6th regiment, 1200 strong; the 13th and 1st battalion of the 16th regiment, and now in Deal barracks, have received orders to hold themselves in readiness for embarkation early in the ensuing month.

The 7th battalion of the King's German Legion, at Ramsgate, and the 8th, at Margate; the two corps of German cavalry, at Canterbury; and, in fact, all the divisions of the legion have received orders to prepare for the continental duty.

The 2d battalion of the 2d regiment of Guards, and the 1st battalion of the 3d, now at Chatham; the 1st battalion of the 43d, now at Hythe; the 12th, 23th, and 14th Light Dragoons, with the Blues, Oxfordshire, and Inniskillens, are amongst the corps under orders for the continent.

To Morrow, the 2d battalion of the 50th regiment, will leave Horsham for Portsmouth there to embark.

The 2d battalion of the Scotch Royals, 34th and 55th Regiments, with reinforcements for all the regiments in India, are under orders for embarkation.

The transport board is in treaty for transports for the conveyance of the troops to the Cape, the West-Indies and Halifax, as well as to the continent.

Retreat of the French across the Vistula.—

This morning, lieut. Von Petersdorf arrived at Mr. Canning's office, with dispatches from the Prussian head quarters; he left Memel, we understand, on the 24th ult. and arrived at Gottenburgh on the evening of the 29th, and sailed the morning following in the Lord Nelson packet.

Lieutenant Von Petersdorf has brought the important intelligence that the enemy was, at the date of the latest accounts from the Russian head quarters, retreating across the Vistula, while the greater part of the Russian army had advanced beyond the Pallarge.

Several smart actions had taken place between the advanced corps of the hostile armies, invariably terminating to the disadvantage of the narrified and dispirited enemy, but no result of substantive importance had been attained.

April 17.

What relates to the re-establishment of peace is the most important part of Bonaparte's message to the Senate. Bonaparte, who is become wonderfully pacific of a sudden, thanks to the valor of the Russians, and the skill of their commander, offers peace to England and Russia upon the conditions which they lately rejected. It seems he is even disposed "to restore tranquility to the eight millions of people he has conquered, and to replace the King of Prussia in his capital." We suppose there is some allusion in this to the terms lately offered to his Prussian Majesty, and which he is said to have rejected.

"Though at present, (says this message) we ask for new sacrifices from our people, in order that we may obtain a greater extent of force, it is not that we should abuse this power for the purposes of prolonging the war. Our policy is invariable.—We offered peace to England before the fourth coalition had shewn itself; the same peace we offer to England still. The principal Envoy which England employed in those negociations has made the most public declarations, and in the most unequivocal terms, that the peace would have been both honorable and advantageous to England: thus he has made the justice of our cause appear evident. We are ready to conclude a peace with Russia, upon the same conditions as were signed by her negociator, but which were rejected in consequence of the arts and intrigues of the English. We are ready to restore to the eight millions of inhabitants whom we have conquered, their tranquility, and to restore to the King of Prussia his capital.

"But though so many traits of moderation, already so often renewed, have not been able to prevail over the deceptions to which England, enslaved as it is by its passions has had recourse, that Power cannot see the possibility of peace but in our annihilation; nothing, therefore, remains for us but to bear the calamities of war, and to throw the flame and odium of it upon that nation which continues to purchase its monopoly with the blood of the continent. We shall in the resources of our own mind, in the courage, devotion, and the power of our people, find certain means to render all the efforts of that nation, formed of hatred and injustice, null and void, and to turn them to the disgrace of their authors. Frenchmen, we brave all dangers, for the glory and tranquility of our children."

FRONTIERS OF ITALY, March 6.

The greatest part of the French troops intended for the Turkish expedition, have been assembled since the 13th of January, in the Venetian territory. Some detachments have set out for Istria and Dalmatia, where they will go into cantonments until the arrival of the remainder of the army.—The court of Vienna granted without hesitation a passage through its territory to these troops; they take the usual route, which passes within a quarter of a league of Trieste. It is said that Marshal Brune has been named by the Emperor, commander in chief of this army, which already consists of 40,000 men, and will, as we are informed, be augmented to 60,000, by means of the reinforcements which are on their march, as well from the departments of France as from the Kingdom of Naples. The French troops which are already in Dalmatia, under the orders of Gen. Lauriston, will preserve their particular destination, and will not be united to the expeditionary army.

ANCONA, March 7.

The Russian commanders of Cattaro and Corfu, have addressed proclamations to the Greek inhabitants of Albania, the Morea, &c. calling upon them to take up arms in defence of their religion, for the re-establishment of their ancient liberty, and to make a common cause with the Russians; but the pachas are on their guard; they strictly observe their conduct; and I have declared, that they will punish in the severest manner every insurrectional movement.

ST. PETERSBURGH, February 28.

On the 22d February, at 11 o'clock at night, M. de Now 212 left set out for the army.—The million is said to be of a pacific nature. Lieut. General Prince Bagration arrived here on the 23d from the army, and left town on his return thither on the 26th.

From a London Paper.

A circumstance of the most unparalleled cruelty has excited the just indignation of the inhabitants of St. George's fields, against the perpetrator, who is a baker in that neighborhood. This man having had a quarrel with a neighbour, caught a ferret dog of his in his yard, and after tying it up for some time, ordered his men to bring it forward to the oven, which they no sooner heated, and he would throw them some pork. He then took the dog, and threw him in. The men expostulated with him in vain; he flew into a passion, and swore, if they prevented him, he would serve them the same. The barbarian stood at the mouth of the oven to prevent the poor animal's escape, and waited till it was literally reduced to a skeleton. The matter will shortly come before a court of justice, where, it is hoped, for the honor of human nature, he will meet with due punishment due to his crime.

BOSTON, May 8.

In the Lydia, capt. Hall, from the North West coast of America. John Rogers Jewet, and John Thompson came passengers. They are the only survivors of the crew of the ship Boston, capt. John Salter, the rest having been murdered by the natives on the coast. We have received a very detailed account of the loss of the Boston and the recovery of the above two seamen; which shall be given in our next paper. Captain Hall was in Columbia river, on the Pacific Ocean, after captains Lewis and Clark left it on their return home; and saw some of the medals sent by them with the Indians.

Captain Smith, arrived at this port from Londonderry, states, that "on Friday morning last, off Sandy Hook, he experienced a heavy shower of rain, with great quantities of small fish, which came down like hail!"

N. Y. Herald.

A letter from Port-au-Prince, dated the 2d April, says—That a few days previous, an engagement had taken place between the rival chiefs Petition and Christophe, in which the former had the advantage.—Christophe's men were daily coming over to Petion. The writer adds as his opinion, that the reign of Christophe will soon be terminated.

Within the last year, it is said, not less than 220,000 young men of France, have been conscripted, (a French term for impressed) and taken from workshops and friends, and marched into Poland, to supply the numbers occasioned by the numerous French enlistments and to extend the conquests of a Monarch who fights merely to give liberty to his country; and not to aggrandize himself or family.

Boston Centinel.

CHARLESTON, May 23.

All accounts by the Republic, concur in stating, that unless the British shortly receive powerful reinforcements, they will not be able to extend their conquests to any considerable distance from Montevideo.—The fate of Buenos Ayres was doubtful; and if the governor, or commander of the Spanish forces at this latter place, follow the example of the governor of the former, in defending the city to the last extremity, the small number of British troops which could be spared from the garrison of Montevideo, would encounter great difficulties in carrying the city.

We are pleased in observing, that the British have not, as was previously reported, retaliated upon the vanquished Spaniards, the cruelties practiced upon the prisoners captured with Gen. Beresford. War is, of itself, sufficiently distressing—but the spirit of retaliation and revenge, once admitted, its horrors are increased a thousand fold.

All the inhabitants who had left Montevideo before and on taking the place; had leave to come in, within one month after; and by taking the oath of allegiance, they might enjoy their property as before; but all those who did not come in, their property was to be confiscated. Several flags of truce have been sent to Buenos Ayres, the purport of which was not known; but report says, they were determined to hold out and not give up the place without fighting hard.

On the 8th of March, about 1,000 troops embarked on board the transports to take the Colonia, a small place about 30 leagues to the westward of Montevideo, on the north side of the river, and nearly opposite to Buenos Ayres; they having previously taken possession of St. Lucia, a small village on the river, eight leagues from Montevideo.

Gen. Beresford, with Col. Pack of the 71st regiment, had made their escape from the country, a distance above Buenos Ayres; they procured a boat near the city, which conveyed them down the river on board the Charwell sloop of war, which at that time was cruising off Colonia, a little below Buenos Ayres, and brought them down to Montevideo about a fortnight after the place was taken.

YORK, June 27. 1807.

We are happy at having it in our power to gratify the wishes of our Yonge Street friends, by assuring them, that His Excellency's Mandamus excursion will take place the 2d of next month, should no unforeseen circumstances intervene to prevent it. We congratulate our fellow subjects at large, upon having a Chief, determined to form his judgment upon his own observation, and we enjoy heartfelt pleasure, to think that His Excellency will see the flourishing state and prosperity of this part of the province, and enjoy that in reality which he already does in anticipation. If the weather is favorable to his intentions, we believe he will proceed to St. Joseph's, and, if we are right in our conjectures, a principal object with him is to ascertain the practicability and advantages of diverting the North West business to this channel of communication.

The Honorable ALEXANDER GRANT, late President, arrived in town yesterday morning, in apparent good health.

To Correspondents.

"Had anne fear me, Donald," is received—the same considerations which induced us to decline the publication of "Mock Mastify," operate with us in the present instance — Setting all personal views aside, our constant aim shall be to entertain, not to abet dissension in society. We are not think misconception an unpardonable sin, and we recommend to the Correspondents to compose his feelings, and place the mistake to the right account.

The Verses (in the Port Folio) commemorating the loss of the Schooner Speedy, handed us by a subscriber, we consider in the light of an Eulogy on Mr. Gray. We admire the benevolence which dictated, and the piety to manifest in them; but as we propose treating the subject at length hereafter, we for the present decline their republication.

Biographical sketches, of the valuable lives lost on that occasion, is intended by the Editors, and they look to their friends for assistance in the discharge of that melancholy duty.

In a former number was announced the regular association of Mr. Bennett with me in the publication of the Gazette; since then I have seen an unsigned and undated instrument, purporting to be the prospectus of a paper to be printed by Mr. Bennett in conjunction with a "gentleman of respectability," which Mr. Bennett has publicly disowned. What means will be next resorted to for the infamous purpose of misleading the public? What can be augured from a proposed establishment, whose prefatory act is a falsehood and forgery, if a painted paper circulated by stealth, without date, signature, or place of publishing, can be called so?

Long have I wished to see a free press established in this province; whilst there was one conducted by a man of virtue and abilities, upon fair and honorable principles, and open to candid and temperate discussion, I was no sparing contributor to its columns.

I feel indignant at the recollection that an ungrateful country should have suffered its able and liberal minded publisher to linger out years of penury among them, and ultimately drive him to seek the means of subsistence in another.

I feel that the martyred name of Sybester Tiffany will be an indelible and everlasting reproach to the inhabitants of Upper Canada.

I feel now as I then felt, all the pride of a freeman, and I glory in being a subject of the freest government on earth, under which I feel myself protected in person, property and the fullest enjoyment of my moral and political sentiments.

I feel all the relative dignity which the proud appellation of a British subject confers, and I feel a glowing and unalterable attachment to the liberty of its constitution, which it shall ever be my pride and glory to support, against the infamous agents of disaffection, and the vile influments of disunion. The diabolical machinations of a desperate rebel, have split the United States, that late flourishing and happy country, into such factions that an invading enemy would be but faintly and partially resisted—and with reluctant conviction, I feel that the aim of a few desperadoes is to reduce this province to the same forlorn condition.

J. CAMERON.

From Europe.—Captain Riley of the ship two Mary's arrived this morning in 38 days from Newry, informs us, that London papers to the 25 h of April, (which he took with him, but which he gave to the commander of an English armed vessel) contained some additional accounts of the movements of the Grand Armies up to the 31.—The French Imperial Head Quarters were still at Osterode. Marshal Mortier had moved forward ten German miles with the right wing of the Grand army. No general battle had taken place since that of Eylau. Both armies continued to receive powerful reinforcements; and the Emperor Alexander was on his way to take the command of his immense army, which, it was said, amounted to three hundred thousand men.

A magnificent statue of peace, to be placed in Napoleon's Hall of Audience, now occupies the time and talents of an eminent Parisian artist. The goddess is represented in a sitting posture, on a bale of bronze, richly ornamented with rich gold, and a variety of emblished figures, emblematical of commerce and agriculture. The height of the figure is almost seven feet, and said to be computed of solid silver. A galloon of guld, faltened with silver studs, adorns the back part of her robe. The laces of her buskins, and the prickly crown of Mala, which invests her temples, are of solid gold. In one hand the goddess holds a cooucous of silver, inlaid with guld, and in the other a cornucopia of the same costly material. This elegant figure was designed by Chaudet, and is to be executed by Charet.

TRAFALGAR.

Cease, vain Frenee, ill manner'd railer,
Fellow freemen, left to me
Bejoins hear a British tailor,
Sing the strains of victory.
Yet while verse thall tell the story,
What bold tongue speak NELSON'S praise,
Whole bright hour, has fet in glory,
Leading ocean with bravery.
Long our tars had kept their Nation,
Long insulting foes dethed,
Spare or all the Gallic nation,
Dutch bravado, Spanish pride.
To thole who swore our land to plunder,
Thole who do our rights defpife,
We're, once more, repar'd to thunder,
While They threaten. We chaftife.
France and Spain, with hopes fcarce fabed,
Stung with hate of Neilon's name,
Chole the moe-neath of Octobre,
To immortalize his fame.

When he faw their colours flying,
When he faw their forts crumble,
Bull, methinks, I hear him crying
"Follow boys I—they all are mine."
Ye the fire with forbearing,
Lingered to the twenty firft,
As if with fad anticipation,
Thole vaunting heroes near'd that work,
The twenty firft of March had into them,
What our lads on land could be,
Another twenty- firft fet them,
Yielding or our lads at fea.
Hath! they're joined—the battle rages,
Expectation holds her breath;
Britain her hate rejects engages,
France for plunder, blood and death.
Thirty thore our chief oppoling
Twenty-feven, the Britith lion,
"They fhrink!" he cries, while life is ebbing,
"Heaven! the prafe be only thine."

Lateſt Intelligence.

The arrival at Boſton of the ſhip Sarah & Eliza, captain Holland, in 38 days from Liverpool, has furniſhed us with the following late and intereſting articles:

LONDON, April 27.

The Lord Chancellor in His Majeſty's name, delivered the following ſpeech this day to both houſes of Parliament:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"We have in command from his Majeſty to inform you, that his Majeſty has thought fit to avail him of the firſt moment which would admit of the interruption of the ſitting of Parliament, without a material inconvenience to the public buſineſs, to cloſe the preſent ſeſſion: And that his Majeſty has therefore been pleaſed to cauſe a Commiſſion to be iſſued, under the Great Seal, for proroguing Parliament.

"We are further commanded to ſtate to you, that his Majeſty is anxious to recur to the ſenſe of his people, while the events which have recently taken place are yet freſh in their recollection.

"His Majeſty feels that in reforting to this meaſure, under the preſent circumſtances, he at once demonſtrates in the moſt unequivocal manner, his own confcientious perſuaſion of the rectitude of thoſe motives upon which he has acted; and affords to his people the beſt opportunity of teſtifying their determination to ſupport him in every exercife of the prerogatives of his own crown, which is conformable to the ſacred obligations under which they are held, and conducive to the welfare of his kingdom, and to the ſecurity of the conſtitution.

"His Majeſty directs us to expreſs his entire conviction, that after ſo long a reign, marked by a ſeries of indulgences to the Roman Charholic Subjects, they, in common with every other claſs of his people, muſt feel aſſured of his attachment to the principles of a juſt and enlightened toleration; and of his anxious deſire to protect equally and promote partiality, the happineſs of all deſcriptions of his ſubjects."

"Gentlemen of the Commons,

"His Majeſty has commanded us to thank you, in his Majeſty's name, for the ſupplies which you have furniſhed for the public ſervice.

"He has ſeen with great ſatisfaction, that you have been able to find the means of defraying, in the preſent year, thoſe large but neceſſary expences for which you have provided, without impoſing upon his people the immediate burthen of additional taxes.

"His Majeſty has obſerved with no leſs ſatisfaction the inquiries which you have inſtituted into ſubjects connected with public economy. And, he truſts, that the early attention of the new Parliament, which he will forthwith direct to be called, will be applied to the proſecution of theſe important objects.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"His Majeſty has directed us moſt earneſtly to recommend to you, that you ſhould cultivate, by all means in your power, a ſpirit of union and harmony and good will amongſt all claſſes and deſcriptions of his people.

"His Majeſty truſts that the diviſions naturally and unavoidably excited by the late unfortunate and uncalled for agitation of a queſtion ſo intereſting to the feelings and opinions of his people, will ſpeedily paſs away; and that the prevailing ſenſe and determination of all his ſubjects to exert their united efforts in the cauſe of their country, will enable his Majeſty to conduct to an honorable and ſecure termination, the great conteſt in which he is engaged."

The ſituation in which the military affairs of the continent ſtood at our laſt dates, renders it pretty certain, that a great and deciſive battle has taken place ere this. Report is buſy in ſtating the fact, and numbering the loſs of the French, in killed alone, to 60,000 men; but this we do not credit. Rumor alſo ſtates, that Jerome Bonaparte, has been ſurpriſed and taken priſoner by the Pruſſians.

The houſes of Hope, Willinck & Co. have agreed to furniſh the Dutch Government with a loan of 40,000,000 of ducats. The contractors, it is ſaid, will be permitted to carry on a trade with England, in certain articles of commerce, hitherto prohibited by the government of Holland.

COPENHAGEN, April 7.

On the 8th of this month, an Engliſh veſſel of war arrived in this road from the North Sea. Yeſterday, two other ſhips of war of the ſame nation alſo anchored here, all three failed this morning for the Baltic. A Swediſh ſhip of the line, and two other armed veſſels of the ſame nation, having on board land forces, from Lauscrona, have alſo failed ſince the 8th, for the Baltic.

NANCY, April 21.

We wait with patience for the news of peace or of a great battle; every thing is ready; a ſingle look of the Emperor will determine. We are informed that the Ruſſians have divided their army into three grand diviſions; one will be commanded by the King of Pruſſia, the centre by Prince Conſtantine, and the right wing by Bennigſen.

NEW-YORK, June 13.

Foreign News.—Letters by this morning's Eaſtern Mail, ſtates that the ſhip Eliza and Sarah has arrived at Boſton in a ſhort paſſage from Liverpool. She brings London papers to the 28th of April, 5 days later than before received.

Theſe papers contain French Bulletins to the 4th of April—at which time there had been no recent general battle.

Government had received intelligence of the Britiſh fleet having left the Dardanelles; and had diſpatched an Ambaſſador to Conſtantinople.

The Engliſh Government it is ſaid, appear friendly diſpoſed towards the United States.

A private letter dated Hamburgh, April 17th, received at Philadephia, by the ſhip Eclipſe, ſtates, that the Swedes had obtained a ſignal and deciſive advantage over the French at Stralſund.

The ſame letter ſtates, that a powerful Britiſh armament, conſiſting of 40,000 men, was expected in that quarter.

The above articles correſponds to the laſt advices from England (21ſt of April) when an expedition for the continent was fitting out.

June 15.

A gentleman who came paſſenger in the ſhip Thomas arrived at Boſton, from Marſeilles, laſt from Malaga, ſtates, that the American Conſul at the latter place informed him of official accounts having been received, that peace had taken place between the Ottoman Porte and Ruſſia and England; that this event was however, not effected until after a ſevere and deſtructive battle between the Engliſh and Turkiſh fleets, in which the former victorious, but with the loſs of a great many killed and wounded, and the blowing up of one of their largeſt ſhips of war.

The Britiſh Packet, with the April mail, arrived at Halifax on the 1ſt inſtant.

June 18.

Laſt evening arrived the Britiſh Packet Princeſs Mary, Pocock, 49 days from Falmouth, via Halifax, 9 days from the latter, with the April mail. The following is an extract of a letter received by her from Halifax, which we have copied from the Coffee-Houſe deſk. Ev. Poſt.

IMPORTANT.

"With pleaſure we ſend you the following extract of a letter juſt received from a very reſpectable merchant of this town, now on a viſit at Pictou, of the correctneſs of which we entertain not the ſmalleſt doubt."

"PICTOU, June 3, 1807.

"A brig arrived here laſt evening in 34 days from London, and brought news that Bonap. at length entirely defeated, his army cut up, and flying in all directions before the Ruſſians." [We have London dates to the 2d of May, three days later, which make no mention of any recent action between the French and Ruſſians in Poland... The rumor from Antwerp is all we have on this ſubject—ſee Boſton head. Albany Gazette.]

BOSTON, June 10.

We have a rumour by the ROXANA, which failed from Antwerp on the 4th of May, that there has been a recent engagement between the French and the Ruſſians, in which the latter claimed the victory.

A letter from the banks of the Elbe, dated April 1, contains the following paragraph:

"One of our Journals ſays, that the laſt intelligence from Ojaca is, that on the invitation of the French commiſſaries to the Emperor of China, to make war with Ruſſia, after a conſultation and deliberation of ſix days, he gave for anſwer, "We maintain ourſelves honeſtly, and ſtay at home."

The York Gazette.

YORK, JULY 4, 1807.

In our laſt we ſtated that his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor's intended excurſion to Matchidaſh, would take place on the 2d inſtant, unleſs ſomething material occurred to prevent it, which has been the caſe, and it is in conſequence deferred until Friday the 10th.—The many Land applicants, together with others, from the extremities of the province, who attended purpoſely to procure patents for former grants, induced his Excellency to ſuſpend his tour, and make his private gratification and the other objects he had in view, yield to the more immediate one, of not detaining a number of people at the expenſe of money and time, whoſe agricultural intereſts at this particular ſeaſon of the year, require their attendance at their homes.

The danger in Biography is, of being led by partiality to ſay too much, or by prejudice to ſay too little:—in the following brief ſketch I have endeavored to avoid both, and merely pourtray traits of character as they occurred to my obſervation, and without prejudice or prepoſſeſſion to give them as I found them—equally an enemy to fulſome unfounded panegyric, doubtful ſilence, and extenuat eadem, and pleaſed to do that juſtice to the dead, which I never, even in idea, withheld from the living, I have to encounter the mortifying certainty, that my opinions will now, as they ever have done, differ widely from the generality, and that to the medium through which they are viewed, will they be indebted for their relative acceptance with the public.

The late ANGUS M'DONELL, Eſq Repreſentative for York, was born in North Britain, of parents more conſpicuous for reſpectability than wealth, yet of eaſy circumſtances. They emigrated to America previous to the American revolution, during which Mr. M'Donell commanded a company in the Royal army, and died poſſeſſed of the rank of captain.

Of three ſons, Angus, the ſubject of this memoir, was the eldeſt. He received his education in the beſt ſeminaries which Canada furniſhed, and was bred a Roman Catholic, but without being a zealot, his opinions reſted at the happy point, betwixt bigotry and licence, and ſo far as a judgment could be formed, from an intimate acquaintance with his ſentiments, he was a ſerveni, tho unoſtentatious adorer of the Deity. If it be admitted that religion can be eſtimated by the eſſentials of moral conduct, his may be pronounced the true, whom, I ſincerely believe, was never guilty of intentional injury or offence, unleſs the latter was extorted. Poſſeſſed of great natural talents, improved by literary acquiſition, he was qualified to reflect light and luſtre upon whatever ſubject he applied his ſtudies to. His genuine wit was equal to his good nature, and his good nature was proverbial. The utmoſt his enemies (for who is without) could charge him with, was habits of indolence, and procraſtination—but their remembrance is loſt in the numberleſs good qualities he poſſeſſed. His irreſiſtible and enthuſiaſtic fondneſs for chemical and mineralogical purſuits, occupied his mind at all times in reſearch; and eſtimating the intentions of others by his own, he was frequently deceived by their deſigning relations. When theſe were detected, his native benevolence impelled him to forgive the cheat—and he often diverted his friends with ludicrous narratives of his own credulity. Without a ſettled averſion to matrimony, he lived ſingle, determined to avoid legal reſponſibility, and excluſive attachment. Educated without a view to any particular profeſſion, his expanſive mind was left for a time to range at large in the field of ſcience, in queſt of thoſe intellectual pleaſures which demonſtration and voluntary ſtudy alone can beſtow. He was at different times concerned in different manufactures, all of which he improved, and to him the world are indebted for the perfection to which one in particular has attained. After the diviſion of Canada into two Provinces, he ſelected the Upper as a reſidence, and applied himſelf to the ſtudy of the law, for which nature and education had eminently qualified him; his ſucceſs as a practitioner juſtified the choice he had made, and opened to him a proſpect of eaſe and independence. He held different offices under the colonial governments, and when diveſted of them, he attained a ſituation wherein a wider field was opened for the diſplay of his abilities. Elected by the unanimous voice of his country to a ſeat in the Provincial Legiſlature, his labours were well directed and inceſſant, and his fidelity unimpeached and exemplary, whilſt every part of his legiſlative conduct manifeſted the perfect union of loyalty and patriotiſm, and evinced that manly liberality, which knows not the exiſtence of an indidious or ſeparate intereſt in the relations of prince and peaſant, or to diſtinguiſh between the proſperity of the political head and the political body. His conciliatory diſpoſition, and the mildneſs of his manners, rendered him a moſt agreeable and inſtructive companion. In perſon he was of the middle ſize, and in his youth he was conſidered handſome. Of a verſatile genius, and unſhackled mind, he was little qualified for, and leſs diſpoſed to a punctilious obſervance of preciſeneſs, the hypocriſy of prudery, or the ſtarch of undigniſied and repulſive formality. The ſovereign contempt in which he held the inoxious opinions of the monitory many, who are often indebted to inſenſibility for diſcretion, was ſtrongly evinced by the whole tenor of his life. Although his acquaintance was general, the friends of his choice were few, and ſimilitude governed the ſelection. He ſtemmed the torrent of prejudice, and his intrinſic worth, forbearance and perſeverance, enabled him to emerge from its vortex when partially overwhelmed. The friend, who forſook him not in the moſt unpropitious hour, offers this tribute to his unconſcious memory. With ſtore of ideas, he ſpoke and wrote with equal facility. The wanton and treacherous attack made by the Count de Puiſaye, not only upon the means, but in the mind of that Being, upon his exiſtence itſelf, brought forth a written reply, which for elegance of compoſition, and arrangement of matter, if not unrivalled, has rarely been ſurpaſſed. His attempts in poetry were equally happy; in our next we ſhall preſent our readers with a ſpecimen.

FOR THE YORK GAZETTE.

Niagara, 5th June, 1807.

Meſſrs. Printers,

It is a matter of ſurpriſe to me that the publication of the Journals of the Provincial Parliament ſhould have been fruſtrated. I would fondly be a partizing circumſtance to every honeſt member of that reſpectable body, to ſhew his conſtituents in what manner he voted and conducted himſelf in the houſe. It is indeed a piece of injuſtice to the Province at large, as well as to every elector, to withhold the neceſſary information from them. By what ſtandard are people to point out their repreſentatives, when they do not poſſeſs a knowledge of their legiſlative conduct? It muſt be evident that whoever would oppoſe the publiſhing of their tranſactions in the aſſembly, would alſo with his deeds to ſhun the light. And on the other hand, whoever wiſhes and eſteems himſelf, would with that not only his conſtituents, but the all the world ſhould bear witneſs to his honeſty and patriotiſm.

If to their publication it ſhould be objected that there is an inſufficiency of funds, I think that I ſpeak the ſentiments of every man in the country, when I aſſert, that there is not one who would not cheerfully put an additional tax of one penny monthly, to defray the expence, and the aggregate would form an ample fund for the purpoſe.

We ſhall not have perſons to diſpenſe and expound the laws to us when paſſed and in force, but it is to the Journals alone we muſt recur to know what part our repreſentatives have taken in their formation and object. By inſerting this I ſhall know whether my correſpondence is agreeable or not.

I am yours, &c.

AN ELECTOR.

To the Printers of the York Gazette.

It cannot have eſcaped the obſervation of any perſon acquainted with the river Don, that at times, and in all high winds, it is impoſſible to get to or from the town with craft of any deſcription, through the preſent channel. Whereas if nature's hand was improved, I mean the break which took place three years ago) the navigation would be made ſafe and practicable at all times, and without any of the inconveniences attending the old, the new channel would ſhorten the diſtance from York to the Don Mills upwards of a mile. It would alſo by being properly opened, do more towards draining the Marſh than a large ſum of money laid out in any other poſſible way. If permiſſion could be obtained from the Governor and Council for the purpoſe, the few feet to be cut for opening the new channel would be done by ſubſcription. Added to its other general advantages, it would be a great object to the owners of caſtle, and others, who do not poſſeſs paſture ground in the neighborhood.

A COUNTRY SUBSCRIBER.

The editors agree perfectly in opinion with this correſpondent, and if permiſſion ſhould be obtained, (which they think ought to be applied for by petition) they will gladly contribute towards accompliſhing an object of ſuch obvious utility. Seeing all the advantages which would reſult from the execution of the propoſed plan, they will cheerfully ſecond with their beſt endeavours, every thing tending to local improvement or public advantage. They would be happy to ſee ſome public ſpirited perſon ſet on foot a ſubſcription for the purpoſe of erecting a bridge over Franks Creek, and the repairs of the road way leading to Yonge Street.

We are authoriſed to ſtate to the public, that the project of opening a communication with the Lakes, to important to our city and ſtate, is poſtponed for a few days only.—It will be revived ſhortly. In the mean time ſuch farther obſervations on its great commercial and political importance will be made as ſhall be convenient for our columns.—In this enterprize the public cannot take too lively an intereſt. The public and private benefits which muſt neceſſarily reſult from a prompt and thorough execution of the plan, are incalculable. Let the example of Baltimore, as ſtated in the Commercial Advertiſer of Monday, excite emulation and awaken public ſpirit in the citizens of New-York.

N. Y. Spectator.

[For the honor of American enterpriſe, and the good which muſt reſult to both countries, we wiſh the moſt hearty ſucceſs to this undertaking.]—Editors.

A paſſenger in the Vigilant, from New-Orleans, informs, that a few days previous to his ſailing, General Wilkinſon had diſpatched major Sparks, with a detachment of troops for Fort Stoddard;—but the Spaniſh commandant would not permit them to paſs the Mobile, and General W. had ordered them to return.—*N. CAPTURE OF ALEXANDRIA.

D WHING STREET, May 9.

A dispatch of which the enclosed is a copy, has been received this day at the office of Viscount Castlereagh, from Major General Fraser, dated Alexandria, 25th March, 1807, addressed to the right honorable W. Windham.

ALEXANDRIA, March 25, 1807.

SIR,

It is with much satisfaction I have the honour to inform you, that in the afternoon of the 29th current, the town and forts of Alexandria, with two Turkish frigates and a corvette, surrendered to his Majesty's arms by capitulation; and that they were taken possession of on the memorable morning of the 21st, by the troops under my command. You are already apprized of my having been detached on this service, with a body of troops from Messina, by his Excellency gen. Fox, under convoy of his Majesty's ships Tigre and Apollo; and the Wizard sloop was sent forward by captain Hallowell, to get intelligence from Major Misset, whom I had been, by my instructions, directed to consult, as to the best plan of operations for effecting the purpose of the expedition. I have now to acquaint you, that on the 7th inst. (the day after we sailed) the Apollo stretched, with 19 transports out of 33 which conveyed the troops, parted company, and that the other 14, with the Tigre, came to an anchor to the westward of Alexandria, on the 16th. On our getting near the land, we saw the Wizard, and captain Palmer, immediately brought me the intelligence he had received from major Misset, together with a letter from him, stating that he had not come off himself thinking his presence in Alexandria absolutely necessary to counteract the intreagues of the French Consul, who was endeavouring to prevail upon the governor to admit a body of Albanians from Rosetta, to assist in the defence of the place. He earnestly recommended me to land the troops immediately, as the inhabitants were well affected towards us, and that he had sanguine hopes we should be able to get possession of it without firing a single shot.

Before I determined however, upon this measure, I deemed it prudent to acquaint major Misset with the very diminished state of my force; and I therefore sent in my aid-de-camp, Captain A'Court of the 31st regiment with a flag of truce to him, with a detailed account of it; and at the same time a Maniffesto to the governor and inhabitants (a copy of which I enclose) which had not the desired effect, but on the contrary, was treated by the governor with contempt. The Major, however, in reply, strongly urged my immediate landing; still repeating that we should not meet with any resistance, and that my doing so would be the only means of preventing the garrison being reinforced by the Albanians, who had actually been sent for, and might be expected in the course of twenty-four hours. Their considerations led me to follow his advice; and accordingly, I landed that evening (the 17th) as many troops as our small number of boats could convey, a few miles to the eastward of Marabout, without opposition; though I could only take up a position for the night, as, before the next landing could be effected, such a surf had arisen on the beach, as totally to prevent the second division from approaching the shore.—The next morning, however, with infinite difficulty and risk, they were landed; but finding my situation now, from the increased height of the surf and appearance of the weather, to be very precarious, both with respect to getting provisions or stores on shore or having any communication with the transports, I determined, at all hazards, to force my way to the western side, where I could receive supplies from Aboukir Bay; at the same time resolving to attempt (in passing) to get into the town even with the small force I had, and push my way, if possible, into the forts that commanded it, a matter I had reason to believe, from Major Misset and others would not be very difficult to accomplish.

I therefore moved forward about 8 o'clock in the evening of the 18th, and in our way forced a palisaded intrenchment, with a deep ditch in front of it (that had been thrown up by the Turks, as a defence against the Mamalukes and Arabs on the western side,) stretching from Fort des Bains to Lake Mareotis, strengthened by 3 batteries mounting 8 guns, exclusive of Fort des Bains on its right flank, mounting 13 guns:—This we effected with very little loss, though under a heavy fire of cannon and musketry, and proceeded within a few yards of Pompey's Gate, where we found the gate barricaded and the walls lined with troops and armed inhabitants: this, added to the smallness of my force, (not exceeding 1000 men of all descriptions) led me to think the risk too great and I determined to proceed to the westward, as I had originally intended, where I arrived on the morning of the 19th, and took up my position on the ground the British troops occupied in the action of the 21st, immediately sending detachments to take possession of Aboukir Castle, and the cut between the lakes Maadie and Mareotis, by which communication the reinforcement of Albanians was expected in Alexandria; in both these attempts we succeeded.

The next day, the 20th, I sent in by a friendly Arab that had stolen out of the town and joined us) a manifesto, addressed to the inhabitants, warning them of the danger of implicating friends and foes, in the event of taking the place by assault, and urging them to force the Government to capitulate. This had the desired effect; a flag of truce was sent out, and a capitulation (of which I herewith include a copy) was agreed to and signed.—Although this service has not been of long duration, yet, from the fort itself of our numbers, and the scarcity of all sorts of supplies, as well military stores as provisions (which the boisterous state of the weather, completely prevented our receiving,) our situation was for some time, rather critical; and I am happy to have it in my power to bear testimony to the patience and cheerfulness with which the troops bore every privation, and the order and spirit they shewed on the attack of the enemy's works, as well as the inclination and with they displayed to storm the place, had I deemed that step advisable.—To Major General Wouchope, Brig. Gen. Stuart, and Col. Oswald, who landed with and accompanied me, I feel myself under great obligations, for their exertion and assistance in carrying on the service; and I am much indebted to lieut. col. Airye, acting as deputy adjutant general, and capt. Green, acting as deputy quarter master general, for the great attention and zeal shewn by them in forwarding and executing the duties of their respective departments: and I think it but justice to Captain Pym, and to the officers and men of the detachment of the Royal Artillery that was with me, to mention the very great zeal and alacrity which they displayed on every occasion, which I am confident would have been equally conspicuous on the part of captain Burgoyne and the officers of the Engineers, had circumstances permitted them to have acted.

To Capt. Hallowell, and the officers and seamen of his Majesty's ship Tiger, I cannot sufficiently express my acknowledgements for the assistance they afforded me, and for the readiness with which they flood forward on all occasions. Capt. Hallowell landed and matched with me to the attack of the enemy's entrenchments, and to the very gates of the city, and remained on shore until the place surrendered: from his advice and local knowledge, I derived much useful information. Captain Withers of the Royal Navy, agent of transports, is also intitled to praise, for his activity in landing the troops, and for supplying them with provisions.—I send you herewith a return of the killed, wounded and missing, together with returns of prisoners made, and of the public stores of different descriptions found in the several batteries and magazines.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) A. M. FRASER, Maj. Gen.

Gold Mine in India.—The fund of the rivers of Pomacer, Palaur, and Cargoory, in India, has long been celebrated for the quantity of gold found in it, to abundant in fact, that after heavy floods, grains of gold were constantly found in the eats of paddy, on the banks of the rivers:—Representations on the subject having recently been made to the Madrafs government, they sent lieut. J. Warden to Chicotto, to survey that District, and the result has been the discovery of a tract about forty-five miles in length, along the Yena Batterine Conda Hills, abounding with gold.—*Lond. YORK, JULY 11, 1807.

To the obliging correspondent who favored us with a detail of the civic movements at Niagara, we at this late hour return our warmest acknowledgments. Had he in addition to the favor obliged us with his name and address, we with much pleasure would have made our thanks the subject of a letter; but as he has not, we beg him to accept this public tribute. His kind performance being in its nature solely descriptive, afforded not a latitude for the pathetic or the sublime, and has met with much severe verbal criticism.—We feel ourselves too much flattered, and too sensibly obliged by the communications of our friends, to add were we cannot see additions necessary, to retrench where we see not perceive a fault. Thinking as we do, not without endangering our literary reputation, we could undertake (and we now volunteer the task) to carry this anonymous communication through all the patent machinery and laboratory of criticism, and to save it harmless from the collective disapprobation of the Inquisition and the Sorbonne. Solicitous for candor to depart from the intellectual regimen, to which we have hereto close confined ourselves, we beg leave to tender a column in our gazette to any Commentator on the subject.

J. ELMSLY, ESQ.

THIS gentleman was descended from a family of great respectability in North Britain, and if our information is correct, was born in Baltimore, where his father was established in trade. From thence he removed to England, and became a bookseller and stationer, and his succeeful industry enabled him to give a genteel education to his family. After a regular course, and finishing his travels, the present subject was entered of the Middle Temple, but we cannot state positively what length of time he practiced before he was appointed Chief Justice of this province. We believe him to have been a correct lawyer; as a judge, upright and impartial, and every way worthy of the emblematical ermine he wore. In him, study had neither blunted the disposition, nor communicated a misanthropic cast to the mind; but, with the becoming formalities of his station, and acquirements of the lawyer, was most happily blended the manners of the gentleman, and ease of the man of fashion. The French and Latin languages he spoke with facility and classical elegance. In person, he was above the middle size, and inclined to corpulency, his complexion was fair, his countenance benevolent and prepossessing, and his whole exterior graceful and commanding; his conversation was polite and gaily, and he abounded in anecdote made interesting by his relation: his voice had a pleasing harmony in it, which added to his manner of expression and uncommon affability, made every thing he said peculiarly interesting and engaging. From a communicative disposition, he gave his opinions of men and manners unreservedly, and his discrimination flamped them as generally just. With a mind ever occupied for the public good, every degree of local knowledge he acquired, was applied to the advancement of the colonial interests. Whilst he presided in this province it may be presumed that there were more happy individuals in it. Poffeffed of an income adequate to his general purpofes, an increasing family, and revered by his friends, he faw with dilated fatisfaction the effects of a beneficent policy, and the colony profperous, flourishing and happy. Nor do we believe his ear was often falutedwith the unwelcome plaint of delayed, circuitous, or dilatory juftice, or the moft diftant murmur of diffatisfaction at his public or private conduct. When he took his farewell of the province, it was with the moft vifible reluctance, and a prefentiment it would be his laft, he faw with inexpreffible anguifh the profpective feverfal of his genial wifhes, and he deprecated the probable confequences. For men in his fituation could have committed fewer errors, either of head or heart. His partiality to this province was extreme, and to York and its vicinity in particular. Has anxiety to devife and promote whatever could benefit or improve the town and its neighborhood, is ftill treth in the memories of its inhabitants—and his liberal patronage and contributions to every thing of a public nature, will leave impreffions of gratitude on their minds which no length of time can efface. In him, Upper Canada loft a true friend, an uncorrupted, enlightened and incorruptible judge, and a moft amiable man. Alive to the fineft feelings of fenfibility, he appeared to poffefs a warmth of temper, which induced many to fuppofe him paffionate; we ever entertained the oppofite opinion, founded upon the many inftances of importunity, with which we have known him perfecuted in land bufinefs, and other caufes of official application, thefe, however at ill-timed, unreafonable or irregular, he bore with exemplary patience and compofure, and it afforded him that pleafure, known only to fuch a mind as he poffeffed, to inftruct the perfons applying in the neceffary modes of proceeding, whilft his own benevolent and voluntary agency was ever ready to facilitate the attainment of their reafonable object. He was uncommonly warm in his attachments, and it is generally fuppofed that warmth of attachment is accompanied by ftrength of enmity: without attempting to prove or difprove the pofition, or difcuffing the juftice of the principle, let it fuffice to fay, that inftances are not rare, where individuals have been at uniform variance, in whole leading principles and purfuits, and in whofe habits, difpofitions and ultimate objects, not a fhade of difference could be traced. A trifling mifunderftanding, which it may be the intereft of cevert meanneis to augment, and latent malice to aggravate, can under fuch management be nurfed into a fettled inveteracy. Without fearching into the caufes, or applying the teft in the preferit inftance, we cannot think there was any thing inimical, vindictive or malevolent in Mr. Emfley's nature: the reverfe under a variety of circumftances, and from the refults of the moft oppofite caufes, was the eftimate we had formed of him, living, we refpected, approved and admired him—dead, we revere his memory and name.

Whofoever has viewed with tafte the picturefque fcenery around the head of this Lake, will read with fympathy the following verfes by the late Mr. Angus Mc. Donell.

NEAR yonder folitary bower,
Loue glooming moft the mony light
I roam at midnight's fpecftered hour,
And climb the wild majeft'c height
Lo! to the mountain let me rev'rent bow,
Where ancient virtue taught its founts to flow.

Pale on a rock's afpiring fteep,
Behold a Sachem his fortune;
Tho' the hallow'd phantom weep,
I hear his reed of forrow moan.
The varith'd grave provokes his deepeft figh,
And fields laid open to the gazing eye.

Permit me, Sachem, here to ftray,
And ponder much thy drear retreat,
To wail the folitary way.
Where wildom held her hallowed feat.
Here let me roam in fpite of toils toilin
A profane pilgrim o'er each prieft's pile

Poor ghoft, no more the Indian race
Shall here the pipe of peace retune,
No more their council fire fhall burn,
Nor that of feaft difperfe the gloom.
Lo! fnakes obfcure, along the profpect creep,
And owrn o'er each warfhipp'd facrde ftorp.

No more along the golden brook
The trackers of the chace fhall fall;
Time treats alike the ftrub and oak,
Whofe power at length fhall crufh the ball.
Led by the morning hours with magic mein,
Gigantic change nows treads the weeping fcene.

No more the brave in ftrains fublime,
Their feats of hardihood proclaim,
To refcue from the rag of time
The high glorious deed approv'd by fame.
Deep in the duft laid each bow unftrung,
And mute, for ever dopp'd each warrior's tongue.

Here Wifdom—Virtue's awful voice
Infpired the youth of former days,
With fuch no more thefe hills rejoice,
But echo plodding labour's lays.
Whate Melancholy in you mouldering bower
Sits inftructing to Oratorio, diftant roar.

Let others heedlefs of the hill,
With eye incurious, pafs along,
My mufe with grief the verfe fhall fill,
And fweil with fighs the lingering long.
Ah! paufed each reftlefs manfion to explore,
Where unfhorn'd wafte on dwells, but dwells no more. M

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers perſons who were reſident in the Britiſh Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of ſeparation in the year 1783, and who have reſided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reſide therein ſince that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the inſertion of their Names on the U. THREE THINGS
A GOOD WIFE SHOULD BE LIKE;
WHICH THREE THINGS
SHE SHOULD NOT BE LIKE.

A WIFE domeftic, good and pure,
Like SNAILS, fhould keep within the door;
But not like SNAILS, in fheer'd trunks,
Place all her wealth upon her backs.

A WIFE fhould be like ECHO true,
And fpeak, but when fhe's fpoken to;
But not like ECHO—ftill be heard,
Contending for the laft word.

Like a TOWN CLOCK a WIFE fhould be—
Keep time and regularity;
But not like CLOCKS—harangue fo clear,
That all the town her voice might hear.

YOUNG MAN! if thefe leffons ftrike—
She whom as bride you'd hail,
Muft poffefs like, and juft unlike
An ECHO, CLOCK, and SNAILS.

FROM THE BALANCE.

ADDRESS TO MY SEGAR.

COME, thou nice though fimple roll,
Rich fource of pleafure to my foul!
Expend with me this evening dear,
And aid to banifh grief and fear.

When ftarp Misfortune's clouds arife
And tears of forrow fill my eyes:
Then is the time thy prefence kind,
Pours peace within my anxious mind.

When Winter's chilly blafts draw near,
And howling winds ftill the ear:
Mid' beating rain or driving ftorm,—
With thee I cannot think of woe.

Such thy pow'rs, O fweet Segar!
That Sorrow's tides I view from far,
Arthe' perhaps, they round me roll,
And bet for thee would rend my foul.

Why is it, then, thy worth's abus'd,
And thou, thy life, by me refus'd?—
Were I to grant but this requeft,
Reafon affents, I yield the reft.

For this intent were thou defign'd
Therefore it ought to fuit the mind;
Since if thy life is not deftroy'd,
Thy grand defign is "null and void."

COPY OF A LETTER

Written during the late Rebellion in Ireland, by Sir————, an Irifh member of Parliament, to his friend in London.

"MY DEAR SIR,

"Having now a little peace and quietneſs, I ſit down to inform you of the dreadful battle and confuſion we are in, from theſe blood thirſty rebels, moſt of whom are, however, thank God, killed and diſperſed.

"We are in a pretty meſs; can get nothing to eat, nor any wine to drink except whiſky; and when we ſit down to dinner, we are obliged to keep both hands armed—whilſt I write this letter, I hold a ſword in one hand and a piſtol in the other. I concluded from the beginning, that this would be the end of it, and I ſee I was right, for it is not half over yet. At preſent there are ſuch goings on, that every thing is at a ſtand. I ſhould have anſwered your letter a fortnight ago, but I only received it this morning. Indeed hardly a mail arrives ſafe without being robb'd; no longer than yeſterday the coach, with the mail from Dublin, was robb'd near this town; the baggage has been judiciouſly left behind for fear of accidents, and, by good luck, there was nobody in it but two outſide paſſengers, who had nothing for the thieves to take.—Laſt Thurſday, notice was given that a gang of rebels were advancing hither under the French ſtandard; immediately every man in the place, including women and boys, run out to meet them. We ſoon found our force much too little, and they were far too near for us to think of retreating—death was in every face—but too it we went and by the time our little party was killed, we began to be all alive. Fortunately the rebels had no guns, but piſtols, cutlaſſes and pikes; and, as we had plenty of muſkets and ammunition, we put them all to the ſword. Not a ſoul of them eſcaped, except ſome that were drowned in an adjacent bog; and in a very ſhort time, there was nothing to be heard but ſilence.—Their uniform was all of different colours, but moſtly green. After the action, we went to rummage a part of a camp they had left behind; all we found was a few pikes without heads, a parcel of empty bottles full of water and a bundle of blank French commiſſions filled up with Iriſhmen's names. Troops are now ſtationed every where round the country which exactly ſquares with the ideas.

"I have only leiſure to add that I am in great haſte, your truly,

J. T.

"P. S.—If you dont receive this in courſe it muſt have miſcarried; therefore I beg you will immediately write to let me know."

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

Ruſſian Armies.—As the Coſſacks form ſo conſiderable a part of the Ruſſian army, and particularly in the new raiſed militia, it cannot but be intereſting to our readers to learn the character and ſtrength of this component part of an army and a nation on which the hopes of the Confederated Powers muſt now, in a conſiderable degree, reſt. The name of Cozacks in general, is applied to all thoſe tribes, which follow the ſame irregular and almoſt optional method of warfare. The particular bodies of the Cozacks are diſtinguiſhed from each other, not by the different nations which compoſe them, but by the places they reſpectively inhabit. Thus the Don Cozacks take their name from the river Don: the Ouralian Cozacks from the Ouralian mountains: the Cozacks of the Ukraine from the name of the country; and the Zaporavian Cozacks from the cataracts of the Dneiſter, as the word Zaporavian, or more properly, Zaporogzi, ſignifies in the Ruſſian language, "people living beyond the cataracts." The two former are chiefly the coloniſts of Great Ruſſia, and the two latter are formed of Malo Ruſſians, theſe wear no beards.—The Zaporavians ſhave even their heads, and leave only a ſmall piece of hair upon the crown, long enough to reach the noſe, and pride themſelves upon every thing that is oppoſite to civilization, and to the common feelings of man!! There was a time when no woman whatever was permitted to live in their ſociety, and though they began lately to have more intercourſe with the ſex, ſtill they retain ſtrongly the marks of their former ferocity. They may be called, with great propriety, a gang of deſperate outlaws, of robbers, and all ſorts of public offenders, who are ſuffered to exiſt merely on account of the miſchief they do to an enemy.

The Cozacks of the Ukraine and the Don Cozacks, are more advanced in civilization; the latter are leſs ſometimes with and ſometimes without beards; but the former exiſt now merely in name, applied indiſcriminately to all the inhabitants. Excepting the Cozacks of the Ukraine and the Zaporavians, the Tartars and Calmucks are ſo interſperſed with all other Cozacks, that they form the moſt conſpicuous and prominent feature in them. The Calmucks ſeem to be the real deſcendants of the ancient Scythians, who dwelt on the borders of the Don (Tanais).—Their features are broad and flat, with a pair of ſmall, fiery, piercing eyes. They are of ſmall ſtature, very robuſt and active, and expert in the uſe of the bow and arrow, which they ſtill uſe. They are extremely ſkilful in managing unruly horſes, and are hired expreſſly for the purpoſe, by horſe contractors for the army, who have to chuſe theſe animals out of the wild ſtuds bred chiefly by the land proprietors in Little Ruſſia. A Calmuck rides ſtraight into the midſt of theſe ungovernable creatures, and after the horſe is fingled out which is to be taken, he throws a loop round his neck with ſuch dexterity, that, though the reſiſtance is conſiderable, (as the ferocious animal will not ſuffer any one to approach near him) he ſeldom miſſes his aim. No ſooner does the loop fall upon the horſe's neck, than the Calmuck faſtens with amazing rapidity the other end of the rope to the ſaddle he ſits upon, in ſuch a manner as to prevent all poſſibility of the horſe's eſcaping.—The unruly ſavage, thus ſurpriſed, ſtruggles hard, but the horſe which the Calmuck rides, takes ſuch a poſition by the direction of the rider, that the ſtrength of the captive is exhauſted, and he, at length, ſuffers himſelf to be led away, and is ſoon tamed. The Tartars, who are like Calmucks in their perſons, are ſo intermixed with them as to be ſeen always together. They devour raw, whatever animal food comes in their way, or they eat their ſpare horſe carcaſſes, without any other preparation of the fleſh than warming it under the ſaddle of the horſe they ride upon. They have generally ſeveral horſes with them, ſo that their proviſions, and the means of travelling, proceed with them without any incumbrance. Both theſe nations or tribes are extremely numerous among the Don Cozacks, and altogether form thoſe terrible warriors, whoſe aſpect alone is ſufficient to diſmay an enemy not accuſtomed to the ſight of ſuch hordes of ſavages.

The Coſſacks are a neceſſary appendage to the Ruſſian regular army; they are its guides and ſatellites. It is their particular buſineſs to obtain intelligence from the enemy, which they do ſometimes in the manner that a Calmuck takes a wild horſe. As ſoon as a Coſſack comes near enough to the object of his ſearch, he throws a loop round his waiſt, faſtens it to his ſaddle, and gallops off with the priſoner. In this way alſo they tranſport their priſoners, and drag them through the rivers they have to croſs. All the outpoſts are formed chiefly of the Coſſacks. They are conſtantly upon the look out, and cut a conſpicuous figure in ſkirmiſhes. Their delight in blood and love of booty form the main ſpring of all their actions, and the Coſſack ſeldom heſitates to attack friend or foe if he ſees the probability of plunder.—They are armed with a long lance, a gun, a brace of piſtols and a ſword, reſembling in the ſhape of a Turkiſh ſabre. Though in their military appearance, they preſerve a certain degree of uniformity, ſtill as their dreſs is according to their fancy or means, the ſcene, whenever they march in a body is truly grotteſque and variegated. Their horſes which are ſo diminutive and apparently weak that they ſeem more calculated to be carried than to carry, are a race altogether anomalous, for whether fed luxurioufly or ſparingly, they maintain invariably the ſame ungainly appearance, and, like the Ruſſian ſoldier, can exiſt almoſt upon nothing. The Coſſacks are allowed to preſerve their own government, and they in return ſtipulate to furniſh the Emperor at their own expence, with whatever number of men he may require, on the condition of being allowed to make booty!—Such is their thirſt for war as the means of plunder, that when the number required is inconſiderable, ſo that they muſt caſt lots who ſhould go, a ſerious quarrel is generally the conſequence in not being included in the number. He that returns home without booty, or has not been in action, is viewed by the women in a deſpicable light; ſo that their manners and mode of living all tend to make them a terror to the peaceful and helpleſs, and the moſt deſtructive warriors that can be let looſe upon a civilized people, as death and deſolation follow in their train, and every thing that is valuable they remove or deſtroy.——They even think it charity to kill their comrades, when wounded paſt recovery, or likely to fall into the hands of the enemy. They diſperſe in ſuch ſmall parties that it is almoſt impoſſible to ſtop their incurſions, and for this reaſon, they are the moſt dangerous ſet of men that can enter an hoſtile country.—Nor are they leſs ſo to a routed enemy; for, though they do not fight in the line, they are the firſt in purſuit of him, and the laſt in deſiling from it. They reſide in Poland, in Turkey, and in Italy, under the command of Suwarrow, will not ſoon be forgotten.

SUCCINCT ACCOUNT

Of the progreſs of the Britiſh at the conqueſt of Monteviedo, communicated for the Federal Gazette by Captain Bunbury, of the ſhip Mary.

1807 Jan. 17. Ninety-ſix ſail of Britiſh veſſels, ſhips of war and merchantmen, appeared off the Port of Monteviedo.

15. The town ſummoned to ſurrender; which was refuſed.

17. 6000 men, including ſeamen, landed from the ſquadron, with little reſiſtance, four leagues eaſt of the town.

18. Britiſh army took poſſeſſion of the heights, one league from the town.

19. The Spaniards, amounting to 2200 men, formed out ſide of the town, when they engaged the Britiſh. After a cloſe action of 50 minutes, the Spaniards retreated having loſt 500 men, killed, wounded and priſoners. At the firſt ſhock the Britiſh gave way; but the Spaniards, without experienced officers, fought without order. The loſs of the Engliſh was conſiderable. Spaniſh infantry retreated to the town, while their cavalry fled to the country, where they continued.

20. Britiſh commenced an attack on the town from two batteries; one of two 24 pounders, and one of 4 ditto. At the ſame time the ſhips attacked; but were beat off.

21. Continued the cannonade from the batteries, which was returned from the citadel.

22. Land and ſea attack; ſhips compelled to ſtear off.

23. Cannonade continued. Britiſh having prepared ſome mortars, began to bombard the town, which was promptly returned. Cannonade and bombardment continued until the 27th, when another battery of 6-24 pounders opened againſt the town, at a half mile diſtance. All the batteries kept up a heavy and inceſſant fire, which was well returned, both ſides.

28. Cannonading and bombardment on both ſides, from 5 a. m. till 7 p. m.

29 and 30. Continued the ſame.

31. Britiſh opened their 5th battery (of ſix 24 pounders) one fourth of a mile eaſt of the town. At 11 o'clock, all the batteries played, the ſhips commenced a heavy fire: they were beat off, and all the batteries ſilenced.

MARCUS.

February 1. Cannonade and bombardment till 8 p. m.

2. At day light commenced a cannonade unuſually heavy. 5 p. m. Britiſh general ſummoned the town to ſurrender, which, from miſunderſtanding, was treated with contempt. This was occaſioned by the governor's tranſlator having been killed, and the ſummons being miſtranſlated. Britiſh effected this day near the E. gate, which is ceaſed till the 3d, 1 a. m. paſt 2 A. A. M. when the Britiſh ceaſed firing. Quarter before 3 they marched to the aſſault in three diviſions; one at the breach, 2d to the weſt of the N. gate, and the third to the S. E. of the town; each diviſion conſiſted of 1000 men. At 6 A. M. flag of truce hoiſted on the citadel. At 7 A. M. Britiſh flying on the citadel and at fort St. Joſeph. The killed and wounded was great on all ſides. The Britiſh loſt at the aſſault upwards of 400 men. The hoſpitals, which are large and bomb proof, would not contain the wounded of both armies. The citadel was uſed as a hoſpital by the Britiſh and Spaniards in common.

The town contained, at the attack, 2027 men able to bear arms, including 240 regulars. Great pains were taken to aſcertain the number killed on both ſides. Which amounted, from the firſt landing, to 947 Britiſh, 1168 Spaniards. The Britiſh had 30 officers killed at the aſſault. The Spaniards loſt their beſt officers—among them were, Colonel Mordet, a Frenchman; Captain Columbo, of artillery; and Don Francisco Matielle.

A certain cure for the Meaſles in Swine.

It frequently happens that ſwine are killed when diſordered by the Meaſles, which are eaſily diſcovered by the meat or fleſh containing ſmall globules, red or white puſtules, of different ſizes, varying according to the different degrees of the diſeaſe; which originate from their being fed with ſuſty, damaged corn, or ſome unwholeſome food, or from its being boiled in lead and copper veſſels, in which it hath lain too long; or from their being kept in a wet and dirty pen; either of which cauſes tends to obſtruct the free circulation of the fluids: hence ariſes thoſe globular puſtules, which are the juices rendered viſcid and congulated. About once a week, mix two ſpoonfuls of madder in their food, which prevents obſtructions, acting as a diuretic, and is at the ſame time an aſtringent. And on ſome other day in the week, give a ſpoonful or two of an equal quantity of flour of ſulphur and ſaltpetre, well pounded and mixed, which purifies and cools the blood. All theſe different articles added to each pail of food in the morning, on ſeparate days, prevent the meaſles, keep the ſwine extremly healthy, and faſten them more expeditiouſly.

EXTRAORDINARY INSTANCE OF SAGACITY.

An individual, who once retired from the ſmoke and buſtle of a city, to hold ſpiritual intercourſe with zephyrs and whip-poor-wills, has diſcovered his near relation/hip to a very near repreſentative of a very great family, who very lately left France under William the Conqueſor.—A little more very deep research into Iſraelitiſh lore, may, by a parity of aſſimilation, (for aught the gentleman knows) trace his original to the ſapient Solomon, the warlike David, and the meekly Jeſſe, and for aught I know, he may divide the triumph of victory with the conqueror of Goliah, the downfall of Jericho, with the ſon of Nun, patriotiſm with the Maccabees, or memorable atchievement with Iſcariot.—Nothing more eaſy than by the amalgam of expediency, to incorporate affinity with every ſon of fame, from Cain to Napoleon; the interſtices of time, may be filled by the cement of oblivion, or may diſappear in derivative or collateral honors. No doubt is entertained, but the fruits of his truly wonderful diſcovery will be manifeſted in the reluctant, though condeſcending acceptance of fillets of veal, hecatombs of chickens, and the eſculent ſpoils of the kitchen garden—pigmy compenſation for admitted conſanguinity and titillating intimacy. ! ! !

Appian Way.—From Oſwego (115 miles from Newburgh) to the moſt ſouthernly extremity of the Lake Michigan is 1200 miles by water, navigable for veſſels of 8 or to feet draft, excepting a carrying place of 8 miles at Niagara falls,. From Oſwego to the mouth of the river St. Lewis, on Lake Superior, is 1500 miles by water, navigable for veſſels of 8 or 10 feet draft, excepting at Niagara and the portage of St. Mary's. The lakes are about three times as large as the Baltic Sea. The lands ſouth and adjoining theſe vaſt ſheets of water, are of a deep, rich and fertile ſoil; and the lake-markets will unqueſtionably command, in that direction, the ſurplus of more cultivatable acres than give life and activity to the three reſpectable nations of Denmark, Sweden and Ruſſia united. And to think, the mildneſs of its climate juſtifies the expectation, that the ſoil in that region will produce more of the ſtaples of a much lower latitude on this ſide the Alleghany mountains. A ſample of the rice of the Lakes, which glows ſpontaneouſly, we have in our poſſeſſion, for the inſpection of any who have the curioſity to examine it.

The extraordinary VISION of Nathan Collover, a native of the ſtate of New-York—the ſingular circumſtances attending it, can be well atteſted by many people of undoubted veracity and reſpectability, and the ſubſequent events, which occurred in the exact order of the illumination, prove inconteſtibly, that it was an undoubted ſpiritual viſitation, and not the chimera's of infatuation or a diſordered mind. In the confidence that it will produce many good effects, it is earneſtly recommended to the attentive and ſerious peruſal of every pious perſon in this province—their piety it may tend to improve and confirm—and to the thoughtleſs and profane, it may be the happy though humble means of conveying a ſenſe of their ſituation. LONDON, Downing ſtreet, May 16.

The right honourable George Canning, his Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has this day notified to the Miniſters of Friendly and Neutral powers reſident at this court, that in conſequence of the recent hoſtile proceedings of the Ottoman Court, his Majeſty has judged it expedient to direct that the blockade of the Straits of the Dardanelles, and the port and harbor of Smyrna, already conſtituted by his Majeſty's naval forces and thoſe of his Allies, ſhould be maintained and enforced, in the ſtricteſt manner, according to the uſages of war acknowledged and allowed in ſimilar caſes.

This Gazette likewiſe contains an order of the Privy Council for laying an embargo upon all ſhips and veſſels be-longing to the Grand Seignior.....Likewiſe an order permitting his Majeſty's ſubjects to trade with Montevideo and its dependencies, and 22 addreſſes thanking his Majeſty for refuſing to agree to the Roman Catholic Bill, propoſed by the late adminiſtration.

Some intelligence has been received in town of the fleet of Lord Collingwood off Cadiz. It ſtates in ſubſtance that the combined French and Spaniſh fleet had of late evinced no intention of forcing their paſſage. The French Admiral had, indeed, ſome weeks ſince, made one attempt... but having learnt the defeat of his countrymen in the battle of Eylau, he had returned into the harbor, firing his minute guns and hoiſting every ſail.

The ſecret expedition now fitting out, it is ſaid, will conſiſt of from 15 to 20,000 men. The German legion, four companies of artillery, the rifle battalion of the 80th regiment, beſides ſome other regiments, are to form a part of the force employed in this expedition.

Two reports have been in circulation for the laſt two or three days, for which we fear there is ſcarcely any foundation...one, that a ſerious negociation for peace has actually been begun on the continent...and the other, that Buenos Ayres has been recaptured.

May 11.

Dutch papers to the 5th inſt. have been received. They are barren of news. The Ruſſian army of reſerve of Lithuania, which has broken up for the head quarters, comprize 90,000 men.

It is believed that Auſtria, which has an effective army of 250,000 men, will take an immediate part in the war againſt France.

The Allied Ruſſian and Pruſſian Army.

The centre is under Benningſen, commander in chief, where the Emperor of Ruſſia has his H. Q.—General Blucher (who has lately been exchanged, and who fought ſo deſperately after the battle of Jena) commands the right, where the king of Pruſſia has his H. Q.—The left is ſaid to be commanded by general Ruchel, (General Von Eſſen being ill) where the prince Conſtantine has a command.

The French right is commanded by Marſhal Maſſena; the centre by Murat, left by Bernadotte; the emperor overleeing the whole, Memel (Pruſſia) April 10.

On the 2d his imperial majeſty Alexander arrived here from Peterſburgh. Our king met him at Polangen, and accompanied him into this city. At night there was a grand illumination. On the 4th, his imperial majeſty, and our monarch and queen ſat out for Gottenburgh, in the vicinity of the grand army.

On the 6th and 7th the guards, under the grand duke paſſed the Neimen. They were juſt in time; as on the next day the thaw, wind and rain had rendered the river impaſſable. The gallant Lord Hutchinſon followed their imperial and royal majeſties.

The Mayne (Germany) April 28.

Auſtria has undertaken to mediate between France and Ruſſia; and Ruſſia is to invite England. It is propoſed, that the congreſs is to be aſſembled at Prague in Bohemia. Auſtria is certainly taking powerful meaſures, by the augmentation of her revenues and army, to make her mediation reſpected. The archduke Charles has formed a plan of military conſcription, ſimilar to that of France.

Vienna, (Germany) April 18.

According to the lateſt accounts, a bloody engagement took place between the Servians and Turks not far from Niſſa. The inſurrection which broke out in Servia has extended to Boſnia. The French army of obſervation in the Frioul, is in march to the aſſiſtance of the Turks—and the advanced corps have already arrived at Boſnia.

St. Peterſburgh. (Ruſſia) March 6.

Since the departure of the imperial guards, our city has been garriſoned by the militia. The troops that now arrive here are all Aſiatics.

The Pruſſian fortreſſes in Sileſia held out with wonderful conſtancy. Their garriſons made frequent ſorties, and their return gave opportunity to the French to repreſent them as having been vigorouſly repulſed.

IMPORTANT.

Extract of a letter from Providence, (R. I.) dated June 26th, 1807. to a mercantile houſe of the firſt reſpectability in this city, received by this morning's eaſtern mail.

" The Ship Hazard, captain Elderkin, has arrived in the river from Amſterdam in a ſhort paſſage. She left the Texel on the 18th May, at which time it was reported that there had been two general battles fought between the two grand armies—the firſt on the laſt of April, and the ſecond on the 8th of May. The Ruſſians were ſaid to have gained a complete victory."

" Our letters ſtate that the markets are extremely depreſſed in Holland."

Extract of a letter from a mercantile houſe in Philadelphia, to their correſpondents in this City, dated June 26.

" We have a veſſel juſt arrived from Liſbon—the captain of which tells us he ſpoke the ſhip Hazard yeſterday week, 38 days from Amſterdam. The captain told him that there was a moſt dreadful engagement on the 2d of May, between the Ruſſians and French, in which the latter were ſeverely beaten. Bonaparte loſt an arm, and otherways ſeverely wounded."

It is notorious that Bonaparte's reputation as a general has ſunk conſiderably ſince the battles of Pultuſk and Eylau, and nothing is more probable than that he may attempt ſomething deſperate in order to retrieve it. The following anecdote, which we have derived from a highly reſpectable ſource, will ſhow that his hitherto ſucceſsful opponent has never ſeen much to fear in his military talents:—

" About two years and an half ago, General Benningſen dined at Wilna, with Dr. Franck, a celebrated phyſician reſiding in that city.—The converſation having turned upon the abilities of Bonaparte, General Benningſen obſerved, that he had attentively ſtudied his different campaigns, that he had traced that General throughout the plans of all his battles, and that it appeared to him they were generally almoſt the ſame. " He copies him-too much," ſaid Benningſen; " and were I ever to command againſt him, I ſhall flatter myſelf (without incurring the imputation of vanity) that I ſhould be able to contend with him. It is a circumſtance which can never take place." ſaid he, " I ſhall never be in that ſituation; but I feel a conviction that I ſhould be able to defeat this terrible antagoniſt." That this was not an ebullition of raſhneſs or preſumption, the events of the late three months have well proved. During the greateſt part of that time, General Benningſen has been frequently engaged with Bonaparte, without ſuffering the latter to obtain any advantage. His ableſt manoeuvres have been counteracted; and at Eylau, where he attempted to put in practice the grand movement, to the ſucceſs of which he owed his victories at Auſterlitz and Jena, namely, that of bearing, with irreſiſtible force, upon a particular point, it was rendered abortive by the vigilance of the Ruſſian commander, and the unexampled ſteadineſs and bravery of his troops. It is well known that Bonaparte made ſix or eight vigorous, though ineffectual efforts, to burſt through the centre of the Ruſſian army.

The York Gazette.

YORK, JULY 25, 1807.

It is with the moſt lively regret, we learn that a diſagreeable occurrence has taken place off the coaſt of Virginia, between an Engliſh 50 gun ſhip (the Leopard) and an American Frigate (the Chelapeak) wherein three of the frigates crew were killed and eighteen wounded.—It is to be feared there was too great tenacity on the one ſide, and precipitancy on the other, and devoutly to be hoped, that a friendly inveſtigation and diſcuſſion of the points, will prevent, their intereſts, ſo intimately blended, from rupture, injury or diminution. The difference originated in a demand, of ſome deſerters from the Britiſh Navy—but in the firſt alarm which the unexpected event has excited, it is impoſſible to obtain ſuch a diſpaſſionate relation of the circumſtances as will juſtify us in forming concluſions, or making further remarks.—It is however, to be apprehended, that the precipitate rejection of the Treaty by Mr. Jefferſon, was an unadviſed and unconciliatory meaſure, and as little politic, as complimentary on his part, to the American Miniſters who concluded it.

We underſtand that a ſhort time ſince, a Captain Hoyk of the Bay Quinte, ſhot himſelf. Being a man in eaſy circumſtances, and apparently eaſy in mind. The cauſe of Suicide is unaccounted for.

We ſincerely compliment the Country, that at the laſt General Quarter Seſſions, ſo little was to be done, and that, the Houſe of Correction has remained ſo long unoccupied by, either Miſfortune, or Irregularity. The proſpect is truly gratifying to every benevolent mind, and a ſubject of peculiar pride to the Home Diſtrict.

FOR THE GAZETTE.

Meſſrs Printers,

Amongſt the ſubjects requiring legiſlative interference in this country, I ſee none at this moment which demands it more ſeriouſly than the number of Batchelors with which the province is infeſted. In antient Rome honors were judiciouſly attached to the married, and withheld from the unmarried; I could with to ſee ſtronger and more efficient diſtinctions in this enlightened age, and beſide being taxed for every year they may have attained above twenty five, and paying a conſiderable fine, all old Batchelors ſhould be obliged to take out a licence, and according to Dean Swift's plan of ſpecifying the paupers in Ireland, they ſhould have a diſtinguiſhing badge, ſuch as might be deviſed by a committee of ladies, formed for the purpoſe. The licence might be in the following words, viz. To whom it may concern, the bearer hereof, A. B. having attained the full age of twenty-five years, and refuſing to enliſt under the banners of the Serene Hymen, notwithſtanding the exigency of the times, has commuted for one years delinquency, by paying his fine and meſſment; This is therefore to forbid that he the ſaid A. B. be moleſted by any lady, combination of ladies, or any other perſon or perſons whomſoever, during the ſpace of one year from the date of theſe preſents.

Yours, &c.

LETITIA.

The repreſentation of this fair correſpondent is ſo juſt, and the ſubject of compliment ſo general and malignant, that we would be pleaſed to ſee the Batchelors quarters handſomely beat up. If fining was inſufficient, imprifonment might be added. Were female beauty or female excellence rate in the country, the ſcarcity might be pleaded in extenuation; but, the reverſe being the caſe in an uncommon degree, there is neither excuſe or palliation. The legiſlature might with great propriety extend the ſame bounty for deſtroying an old Batchelor (we mean converting him into a married man) that they allow for the deſtruction of a wolf, and we think the certificate ſhould alſo be made a legal tender in the diſcharge of aſſeſſments.

To His Fetruginous Highneſs Prince Vulcan the great Grand ſire of Anvils.

The Petition of the confederated democracy of Fithes, moſt reverently portenteth, that your Petitioners, before and ſince the days of James and John and Zebedee and Mathew, have been moſt inhumanly perſecuted as well by Fowls of the Air and Beaſts of the ſhores, as by the common deſtroyer man. From him it is that they ſuffer moſt, for what with Nets and Weirs, and Hooks and Spears, ſo great is the deſtruction of their numbers, that their bodies are made a traffic of, and many of their Tribes are in danger of extinction. Your Petitioners view with gratitude that ſomething is done for the preſervation of one of their principal Tribes. They in conſequence pray your Highneſs to interdict the uſe of Iron and Steel alſo, they beſeech your Highneſs to conſider, that from the barbarous mode of ſpearing practiced upon their innocent Generation, altho one in three may not become the prey of their purſuers—yet from being mutilated, they ſurvive but a ſhort time, and dying in their native element, their putrefaction follows, to the great impurity of the waters and the terror and offence of the ſurviors. They ſuggeſt to your Highneſs, that the Net is more adapted to the preſervation of their ſpecies than the Spear, they being of cleanly habits, ſeek the pureſt ſtreams as much for their own healths and gratification as for the ſake of their tender offspring. That as they travel in Caravans, and at ſucceſſive ſeaſons, the ſecond, meeting with the mangled and putrefcent bodies of the firſt, retire from the ſcene with precipitation and diſguſt. They therefore pray that, if of two Evils they are condemned to ſuffer one, you will in the plenitude of your Iron mercy decree, that it be the leaſt, and that the Net be tolerated rather than the Spear.

TROUT.

THOMAS PAINE.

This monſter lately leaſed a piece of ground and ſmall houſe in New Rochelle, ſtate of New-York; the leſſor, a decent man, who held the principles of his tenant in the utmoſt abhorrence and deteſtation, took the opportunity, whilſt Paine was indulging in his ſublime meditations and whiſky at a mean dirty tavern in the neighborhood, to enter into poſſeſſion. He then threw the Philoſophers moveables, (conſiſting of a little ſiſthy trumpery) out of doors. On his return in the evening, and witneſſing the revolution in his domeſtic arrangements, and his own theory of the Rights of Man, reduced to practice, he beſeeched the landlord to ſuffer him to remain there for the night. The Landlord was inflexible, and refuſed even that ſmall boon; in ſorry plight he next applied at the Gin ſhop he had ſo recently quitted, where the refuſal was equally peremptory. After many other unſucceſsful applications, he met with a poor man leſs obdurate, who afforded him ſhelter on the expreſs condition of departing with the morning light, which condition, neceſſity obliged him to comply with; and the celebrated Creator of the Age of Reaſon, now vomits the laſt dregs of his popular poiſon, from a Coblers Stall in the City of New York—and aſſiſted by Emmet, Cheetham and ſother reſpectable Europeans, the produce of their hallowed labors, is one of the moſt ſcandalous, Libellous, and infamous Prints on the Continent.

Among the numerous anecdotes related of Peter I. the moſt characteriſtic is that of this prince being in London, and running ſhort of cash, which ſome merchants came to offer him, on condition that he ſhould allow them the privilege of ſelling tobacco in Ruſſia, which, they ſaid, would there meet with the moſt grateful reception, becauſe the Ruſſians being forbidden the uſe of tobacco by a religious precept, were uncommonly fond of the pipe. This prohibition was ſo much the more felt by them, that the patriarch had excommunicated all who ſmoked; for this reaſon, that the Mahometans, enemies to the chriſtians, and more particularly to the Ruſſians, uſed the pipe.

The popes of Ruſſia, in the pulpit, continually oppoſed this pretended abomination; and notwithſtanding this prejudice, the Czar granted the priviledge, and undertook to make the popes themſelves ſmoke.

A certain Clergyman who had been once involved in a fray, had obtained the name of the Bruſing Parſon. Being examined at the Old Bailey, on ſome future though ſimilar occaſion, the counſel, according to the illiberal cuſtom of the Court, attempted to browbeat him " I think you are the Bruſing Parſon," ſaid he, " I am," replied the divine,—" and if you doubt it, and will come out of Court, I will give it you under my hand."

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

"Of thofe men who have overturned the Liberties of Republics, the greateft number have begun their career by paying an obfequious court to the people—commencing DEMAGOGUES, and ending TYRANTS."

HAMILTON.

We will for the following extract of a fpeech of MR. PITT, in the Houfe of Commons, how much he and MR. HAMILTON, (that ornament of the United States) thought alike.

IN the firft place we fee, as has been truly ftated, a change in the defcription and form of the fovereign authority. The various inftitutions, republican in appearance, have given place to the abfolute power of one man, and differing from other monarchs only in this, that he wields a fword inftead of a fceptre. What then is the conftitution we are ordered to fwear from the hand of the government, or from the character and pofition of the perfon who is now the abfolute ruler of P.ris? conduct of the perfon who is now the abfolute ruler of France? Are we talking of a ftranger of whom we have heard nothing? No, for, we have heard of him; we, and Europe, and the world, have heard both of him and the latefhes by whom he is furrounded. Would it have been poffible for miniflers to difcharge their duty in offering their affent to their fovereign, without taking into their account the reliance to be placed on the difpofition and the principles of the perfon, on whofe difpofition and principles the fecurity to be obtained by treaty muft, in the prefent circumftances, principally depend? What opinion, then, are we led to form of the pretenfions of the Conful to fhake particular qualities for which, in the official note, he a perfonal character is reprefented, and to us, as the fureft pledge of peace? We are told this is his fecond attempt at general pacification. Let us fee, for a his fecond attempt at general pacification. moment, how this attempt has been conducted. We thought fit to decline altogether the propofal of treating, under the prefent circumftances; but, at the fame time, we exprefsly ftated, that, whenever the moment fhould arrive, we would in no cafe treat, but in conjunction with our allies. What was the propofal contained in his laft note?—To treat for a feparate peace between Great Britain and France. Such for a feparate peace between Great Britain and France. Such was the fecond attempt to effect general pacification; a propofal for a feparate treaty with Great Britain. What had been the firft?—The conclufion of a feparate treaty with Auftria. This very treaty of Campo Formio was oftentatioufly profefied to be concluded with the emperor, for the purpofe of enabling Bonaparte to take the command of the army of England, and to difplace a feparate peace with this country on the banks of the Thames. He fent his two confidential friends, Berthier and Monge, charged to communicate to the directory the treaty of Campo Formio, then ratified on this occafion, the memorable words, "The kingdom of Great Britain and the French republic cannot exift together." So much for his difpofition towards general pacification; let us look next at the part he has taken in the different ftages of the French revolution, and let us bee judge whether we are to look to him, as the fecurity againft revolutionary principles. When the confulate or the third year was eftablifhed under Barras, that conftitution was impofed by the arms at Bonaparte, then commanding the army at the Tuileries. To that conftitution he then fwore fidelity. How often he has repeated a fimilar oath I know not; but twice, at leaft, we know that he has not only repeated it himfelf but required it to others, under circumftances too ftriking to be ftated. The 18th of Brumaire cannot have forgotten the reſolution of the 4th of September, which produced the difmiſſal of Lord Malmſbury from Lille. How was the refolution procured? It was procured either by the promife of Bonaparte, (in the name of his army) decidedly to fupport the directory in thofe meaſures which led to the infringement and violation of every thing that the authors of the conftitution of 1795, or its adherents, could conſider as fundamental. Immediately before this event, in the midſt of the defolation and bloodſhed of Italy, he had received the ſacred preſent of new banners from the directory; he delivered them to his army with this exhortation:—"Let us ſwear, fellow ſoldiers, by the manes of the patriots who have died by our ſide, eternal hatred to the enemies of the conſtitut on of the third year." That very conſtitution which he ſoon after enabled the directory to violate, and which at the head of his bayonets, he has now finally abrogated. That oath was again renewed, in the midſt of that very ſcene to which I have laſt referred; the oath of fidelity to the conſtitution of the third year was adminiſtered to all the members of the aſſembly then ſitting, (under the terror of the bayonet) as the ſolemn preparation for the bulletin of the day; and the morning was ushered in with ſwearing attachment to the conſtitution, that the evening might cloſe with its deſtruction. If we carry our views out of France, and look at the dreadful catalogue of all the breaches of treaty, of the acts of perfidy at which I have only glanced, and which are preciſely commenſurate with the number of treaties made by the republic (for I have fought in vain for any one which it has made, and which it has not broken); if we ſelect thoſe which have been accompanied by the moſt atrocious cruelty, and marked the moſt ſtrongly with the character dis features of the revolution, the name of Bonaparte will be found alſo ſtand at the head of more than that of any other that can be handed down in the hiſtory of the crimes and miſeries of the laſt ten years. His name will be recorded with the horrors committed in Italy, in the memorable campaign of 1796 and 1797, in the Milaneſe, in Genoa, in Modena, in Tuſcany, in Rome, and in Venice. His entrance into Lombardy was an Rome, and in Venice. His entrance into Lombardy was an unmixed be a ſolemn proclamation, iſſued on the 27th of April, 1796, which terminated with theſe words; "Nations of Italy; the French army is come to break your chains, the French are the friends of the people in every country, your religion, your property, your cuſtoms, ſhall be reſpected;" this was followed by a ſecond, in nearly the ſame words, to fulfil the ſolemn pledge reſpecting property, this very proclamation impoſed on the Milaneſe a proviſional contribution to the amount of twenty millions of livres; and ſucceſſive exactions were afterwards levied on that fingle ſtate in the ſhort ſpace of ſix months, of near ſix millions ſterling. The regard to religion and to the cuſtoms of the country, was manifeſted with the ſame ſcrupulous fidelity.—The churches were given up to indiſcriminate plunder. Every religious and charitable fund, every public treaſure was confiſcated. The country was made the ſcene of every ſpecies of diſorder and rapine. The tombs, the eſtabliſhed form of worſhip, all the objects of religious reverence, were openly inſulted by the French troops; at Pavia, particularly, the people flew to arms, furrounded the French garriſon, and took them priſoners, but carefully abſtained from offering any violence to a ſingle ſoldier. In revenge for this conduct, Bonaparte, then on his march to Mantua, inſtantly returned, collected his troops, and carried the extremity of military execution over the country. He burnt the town of Benaſco, and maſſacred eight hundred of its inhabitants; he marched into Pavia, took it by ſtorm, and delivered it over to general plunder, and publiſhed, at the ſame moment, a proclamation, of the 26th of May, ordering his troops to ſhoot all thoſe who had not laid down their arms, and taken an oath of obedience, to burn every village where the tocſin ſhould be ſounded, and to put its inhabitants to death. The tranſactions with Mantua were on a ſmaller ſcale, but in the ſame character; Bonaparte began by ſigning a treaty, by which the Duke of Modena was to pay twelve millions of livres, and neutrality was promiſed him in return; this was ſoon followed by the perſonal arreſt of the Duke, and by a freſh extortion. Nearly at the ſame period, in violation of the rights of neutrality, and of the treaty which had been concluded between the French republic and the Grand Duke of Toſcany, in the preceding year, and in breach of a poſitive promiſe given only a few days before, the French of a poſitive promiſe given only a few days before, the French army forcibly took poſſeſſion of Leghorn, for the purpoſe of ſeizing the Britiſh property which was ſuppoſed there, and confiſcating it as prize; and ſhortly after, when Bonaparte conſidering it as prize; and ſhortly after, when Bonaparte conſidering it as prize; and ſhortly after, when Bonaparte conſidering

More foon retires, her feeble pow'r

And gentler, in benignant hour,

Thus on affliction's fable bed,
Deep furrows rife, of faddeft hue,
Condenfing round the mourner's head,
They bathe the cheek with chilly dew.
Tho' pity fhow's her fairer form Heav'n,
When kind the points affiftance near;
To friendfhip's fon alone 'tis given,
To footh and dry the mourner's tear.

MISCELLANEOUS.

APICIUS was a great epicure, according to the low and vulgar fenfe of the word; but Apicius was not a Pliny, and yet Apicius had his pleafures. He had eaten, it feems, of a certain fifh a t Minturna, in Campania, but he was told that the fpecies was much larger in Africa. Upon this he immediately equipped a veffel, and fet fail for that coaft. The navigation was difficult and dangerous; but what will not hunger do? Apicius was a man of pleafure and appetite; every league he travelled increafed the neceffity of gratification. When they arrived on the coaft of Africa, feveral fifhing boats, already apprifed of his voyage, came to him, and brought him fome of the fifhes in queftion; when how great was his furprife and chagrin, to find they were not at all bigger than thofe of Minturna! Inftantly therefore, without being touched with the rational curiofity of feeing a country he had never vifited before, without any regard to the prayers of the people in his train, who wanted the refreihments of the fhore, Apicius ordered his pilots to return to Italy, and thus ended his memorable adventure.

THERE was an uncivil fellow, who did nothing all day long but rail againft Pericles, the famous Athenian, in the market-place, and before all the people; and though he was at that time the public magiftrate, yet he took no notice of it, but all the while diſpatched fundry matters of importance, till night came; and then with a fober pace went home towards his houſe, this varlet following all the way with abuſe. Pericles, when he came to his houſe, it being dark, called for his ſervants to light the fellow home.

MONSIEUR SEDAINE informs us, that a certain gentleman of rank loſt a friend, who at his death left debts unpaid, and two children very young. The ſurviving friend was immediately obſerved to retrench his houſehold, his equipage, and take lodgings in a ſmall houſe; from whence he walked every day to the palace, followed by one footman, and performed the duties of his poſt. He was inſtantly ſuſpected of avarice, and of bad conduct, and underwent a variety of calumnies. At the end of two years, however, he re appeared in the world, having accumulated the ſum of 20,000 livres; which he applied to the ſervice of his deceaſed friend's children, and thus reſcued a worthy memory from ſhame, and a helpleſs offſpring from miſery and ruin.

JULIUS DRUSUS, a tribune of the people, had a houſe that in many places lay open to the eyes of the neighborhood. There came a workman to him, and told him, that at the price of five talents he would ſo alter it, that it ſhould not be liable to that inconvenience. "I will give thee ten talents, (ſaid he) if thou canſt make my houſe conſpicuous in every room of it, ſo that all the city may behold after what manner I lead my life."

SOCRATES—This philoſopher having at one time received a blow on the head, obſerved, that it would be well if people knew when it were neceſſary to put on a helmet. Being kicked by a boiſterous fellow, and his friends wondering at his patience, "What ſaid he, "if an aſs ſhould kick me, muſt I call him before a judge?" Being attacked with opprobrious language, he calmly obſerved, that the man was not yet taught to ſpeak reſpectfully.

PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE.

Lower Elbe, (Germany) May 13, 1807.

Contrary to all expectations, we are ſtill without certain intelligence concerning the events which in all probability have already taken place in the north. One thing is certain that Dantzic is the point of attack and defence. The papers preſſed into the ſervice of France tell us, that the ſiege of that city is carried on with vigour; they inform us, that the garriſon makes perpetual ſorties, and add, of courſe that all theſe ſorties are very unfortunate for the beſieged; and they ſoretel the ſpeedy ſurrender of the town. But theſe ſame accounts do not conceal the determination of the Pruſſians to defend the place to the laſt extremity, and the writers, by their laborious attempts to ſhow the probability of a ſpeedy capture, betray rather their own ſenſe of its importance than prove the probability of the event. The Altona Mercury of yeſterday relates, in a ſecond edition, that on the 20th ult. at night the French made three attempts to take the place by ſtorm but in vain; after which an armiſice of 4 hours was granted for burying the dead. It is ſaid that ſhips, which paſſed on the 5th inſtant, heard a violent cannonade from the city. This laſt intelligence diſcredits a report which two days ſince had gained great ground that the ſiege was raiſed. It was added, that the Saxons had deſerted to a man; that an attack was made by accord at the ſame inſt. from the garriſon in the city, and the Engliſh frigates before it, upon the French works; and that after an obſtinate conteſt, the enemy was forced to yield his poſitions, heavy artillery, &c. This account is ſtill credited here, and the deſertion of the Saxons is ſaid to have been acknowledged by the French miniſter Bourienne.

In the mean while it is evident that Bonaparte ſeriouſly purpoſes to remedy the fault he has committed in the eyes of military men, by advancing ſo far into Poland, while Stralſund, Colberg, and Dantzic remain in the power of an enemy who has alſo the command of the ſea. Every thing ſhows that he has reſolved to act for a time on the defenſive. He has taken a ſtrong poſition in Pruſſia, by means of which he hopes to repel the attacks of the great Ruſſian army, which lies before him; and he in the mean while, orders the ſiege of the maritime fortreſſes in the Baltic. Hence the waſte of blood before Dantzic. In one night three ineffectual attempts to ſtorm the fortreſs! Every one knows the immenſe loſs which ſuch an attempt cauſes, even when ſucceſsful; but this is indifferent to a general, whoſe diſregard for the lives of his men is beyond all precedent.—After Bonaparte's famous firſt campaign in Italy, he was aſked as to the expence.—"Jai depenſé dixmille hommes par mois," ("I ſpent 10,000 men every month,") he replied. It ought not to be forgotten, that he then commanded only Frenchmen. Now he has allies; and he will be ſubject to no ſlight embarraſſment in the choice of his aſſailants. What troops for inſtance were employed in the threefold attack on the 29th? Il Germans, how naturally muſt the thought occur to them. "We are the choſen victims!" Such a ſuggeſtion would fly in every quarter of the grand Army; and a defalcation, dreadful and deciſive, might be the reſult.

But to come nearer home in my remarks. While the ſiege of Dantzic is carried on with fury, that of Colberg, repoſes for a moment, and attempts are induſtriouſly made to diſengage the King of Sweden from the coalition; but to no purpoſe. This monarch has renewed his treaties with the King of Pruſſia; all animoſity between theſe two ſovereigns is forgotten; and 6000 Pruſſians are on their paſſage to Stralſund, under Generals Blucher and Tauenzien, while the Diplomatic relations between the two courts are reſtored.

Here we ſee a monarch, who has already loſt the greater part of his ſtates, and the remainder of which are actually attacked by the enemy, ſending his generals, with a conſiderable force, to defend the dominions of a ſovereign but lately his adverſary, who threatened by the common foe. An incident like this may allow us to hope that the ſpirit of a generous and wiſe coalition is not yet every where extinct. Were every enemy of France to act thus, Europe might ſtill be ſaved from impending bondage.

Sweden having been found indeſtructible it is now deemed neceſſary to collect a large force on this frontier of Germany. On Sunday laſt, Marſhal Brune received, by a courier from Finkinſtein, the command of all the forces in Lower Saxony, which, united with the troops coming from Italy, are to form an army of obſervation againſt the Swedes and Engliſh; and at the ſame time, cover the operations of the grand army. The Marſhal was to ſet out from Hamburgh this morning, on his way to Schwerin; and a part of the garriſon has already left that city. A number of camps are to be eſtabliſhed in Mecklenberg and Pomerania.

I have endeavoured to repreſent what I thought here to be the military plan of the enemy. This ſketch, if not quite correct, juſtifies the remarks of one of our journaliſts, that the late events in Poland, have reſtored the art of war to its former credit. How much, how incalculably much, is gained if an enemy can be compelled to proceed cautiouſly and ſlowly, and all whoſe victories have hitherto been a ſeries of coup de main. Surely, when Auſtria at length ſees that the allies are able to hold France at bay, its energy will revive once more. The transactions at the laſt diet at Hungary certainly entitles us to form the moſt lively hopes and expectations.

BOSTON, July 18.

According to a new cenſus, Auſtria, now contains 16,6 8 ſquare leagues; and a population of twenty three and a half millions of ſouls; of which 17,553,800 are Catholics; 1,050,000 Lutherans; 1,8 0,000 of the reformed church; 263,000 Greeks; 43,000 Unitarians; 3,500 Menonnits, and 435,000 Jews. The nobility form about 600,000 ſouls; and the clergy 90,000 individuals. The revenue of the ſtate amounts to 103 millions per annum, and the debts to 112 millions of florins.

We have received from Mr. Scollay, late of this town, the Proſpectus; and the firſt number of "The Southern Star," edited by that gentleman, at Monte Video, in the River Plate, being the firſt paper ever printed there.—It is publiſhed in Engliſh and Spaniſh, in alternate correſponding columns; and has a reſpectable appearance. There are advertiſements in it, of John Robinſon, Arthur Crutchett, and Co. Bleth, Morſon and Co. James Barton, and Co.

Monte Video, (S. A.) May 10, 1807.

We have the pleaſure to announce the arrival of his Majeſty's ſhip Thiſtle, having on board General Whitelocke, Commander in Chief of his Majeſty's forces in South America, and Staff; to be followed by large reinforcements of troops of every deſcription, which the General left at ſea. A company or artillery has diſembarked this afternoon from the Thiſtle.

May 23.

His Excellency Governor Whitelocke, has by Proclamation, ordered, that all perſons who are not Spaniards, or South American ſubjects, who reſided in Monte Video, previous to its capture, or who do not belong to Merchant ſhips, do give in their names & reſidences at the Carvildo's office, before the 28 h, under penalty of forfeiting the protection of the Britiſh Government.

The following is a liſt of the General's Military Staff here, viz. Lt. Gen. John Whitelocke, Commander in Chief; Major-General Leviſon Gower, ſecond in command; Brig. General Sir Samuel Auchmuty; Brigadier General Wm. Lumley, and Brigadier General Ackland. Lt. Col. Torrens, 8th regt. Military Secretary. Lt. Col. A. Cadogan, Captains J. Brown, and J. R. Foſter, and Enſ. Fermantle, Aids de-Camp to the Commander in Chief. Lt. Col. Bradford, 87th, Deputy Adj. General; Lt. Col. Bourke, D. Q. Maſter General; Colonel Browne, 40th, Commandant of the town.

From Montevideo.—On Wedneſday arrived in Boſton, Mr. Morris, who was a paſſenger in the Swift, at Newport, and left Montevideo on the 1ſt of June. The Britiſh had extended their conqueſts on the north ſide of the River Plate, as far as oppoſite Buenos Ayres, but had made no attempt on that place—not intending to undertake that enterpize until the arrival of the expected reinforcements, General Whitelocke had land at Montevideo, and taken the command; the troops that failed from England with him were parted with at ſea, but were momently expected. General Caldwell had reached the Cape of Good Hope, where he found orders to proceed to La Plata.—When the whole force is collected, the Britiſh will have about 16,000 ſoldiers.—The Spaniards at Montevideo appear to be well ſatisfied with being under the Engliſh—and a pretty briſk trade was carried on with the natives.—The Britiſh and American veſſels would make better voyages than was expected.—The Britiſh were civil and obliging to Americans there. A ſpirit of independence appeared to be prevailing the Spaniards and Portugueſe in South America—and it was thought that Spain would certainly loſe her colonies whether they ſubmitted to the Britiſh or not.—General Beresford had failed for England. Mr. White, his late fellow priſoner, was at Montevideo. A paper in the Engliſh language, edited by Mr. Scollay, of this town, has been commenced at Montevideo. We have been favored with a letter from the editor, inclofing the proſpectus and firſt number.

As our paper was going to preſs we were politely favored with the Boſton Reporter of the 21ſt ult. from which, ſnatch a variety of pertinent and not unintereſting matter, we have extracted the following—It ſpeaks a language which ſpeaks from a people of reaſoning and reflective circumſtances, we would not have aſſed, but, it is the language of reaſon, of patriotiſm, and of truth—in a general point of view it beſpeaks parliamentary which will ultimately prevail with the advocates of common ſenſe and reaſon, the defendants of Republicaniſm—and a people who cannot be ſo far blinded by falſe policies—ingratitude by French agency, or temporary infatuation, as to ſacrifice the intereſts of a growing empire, and the happineſs of a generous nation, to (perhaps) the ambition or avarice of two naval officers, whoſe names will be the laſt to be remembered.—We are politically unknown beyond the offers wherein their commiſſions are regiſtered, or the ſhips by which they had the command.—

FROM THE BOSTON REPERTORY.

Perhaps no paragraph that has at any time appeared in the National Intelligencer ever excited half ſo much intereſt, as that we republiſhed in our laſt. Indeed among the merchants in this town, it was raiſed to a conſiderable amuſement. To ſee themſelves admoniſhed in the government paper to lay an embargo on their own veſſels, and run hazard their property at ſea, for ſix months, could not fail to produce very anxious ſenſations; as to a conſiderable proportion of theſe gentlemen in commerce, ſuch an unexpected ſtagnation of buſineſs would bring in its train inevitable ruin. And why muſt they ſuffered their commerce? Becauſe it was probable that the Britiſh miniſtry might obſtinately perſiſt in refuſing to inſert the article in the Treaty, for the lack of which, it was rejected by our Executive, without being ſubmitted to the conſideration of the Senate. The recent outrage, committed on the Chelapeak, might or might not have proceeded from the authority of the Britiſh government, but thus ſeemed to be a ſecondary conſideration, as the probability of a fixed opposition of views, with regard to the principles, which decided on the fate of the treaty,—on the right of proteſting ſubjects of all nations, as peculiarly as our own, by our flag, proved as well as unfriendly. It was plain to thoſe who read the paragraph attentively, if it was written by authority, and it had a very diſtinctive tone, that Mr. Jefferſon has it in contemplation to bring forward his new principle, under an expectation, that in the preſent ſtate of general irritation, any claims he may advance will be backed and ſupported by the body of the people. But wait probable that the extract from the Intelligencer was from the pen of Mr. Samuel H. Smith, or Mr. Jefferſon? This important queſtion, no one could ſolve.

We are left to conjecture—and our conjectures is this That the ſentiments, whoever might have been the writers, emanated from Government. That the Executive had abſolutely determined to make the conceſſion of ſuch an article the only condition of peace or war; but that indirect mode was adopted for ſounding the public mind. There was no doubt it would arreſt attention, and without pledging government for any meaſures, the diſpoſition of the people would be as readily aſcertained by a ſpeculation of this kind, from ſuch a quarter, as from a more official appeal, which, across the water, would be regarded in a more ſerious light. But whether the intimation that we might calculate on a liberal and underſtanding, between the two governments on that point, was a reverie of Mr. Smith, or a vane erected by the Preſident, to try the public temper, it cannot be aſcertained that the ſenſe of the nation muſt be now expreſſed. For that purpoſe, the Newspapers offer a ready medium of communication, and it is certainly expedient, at this critical moment, that they ſhould be thus employed.

In the Gloſgow Courier of May 2. is an account of a meeting of the Iriſh Roman Catholics, in the city of Dublin, on the occaſion of the late change of the Miniſtry, as well as on the conduct proper to be purſued under the exiſting circumſtances, in relation to the Catholic petition. The Earl of Fingal was called to the chair. The buſineſs of the meeting was opened in a long ſpeech from Mr. Keogh. In ſpeaking of the Iriſh Catholics who acted under Abercrombie, Nelſon and Smith, he ſays—"Yet when thoſe gallant ſoldiers have expended their vigor, their energy and their blood in defence of a conſtitution to which they are aliens, and return to die in their native fields, their relatives will have the mortification of having a ſavage merriment expreſſed by the liberal and enlightened Proteſtant neighbors. I perceive that my alluſion is not underſtood, and I could with it were equally unintelligible in every other part of the iſland; but what will you think when I tell you, that at Enniſcorthy it is become a ſettled cuſtom to ſound a folemn toll upon the death of a Proteſtant,—whereas the bell rings out a merry peal when a Catholic has given up the ghoſt! But I hear ſome enquire if it be poſſible, with a kind of incredulity. I know not, my Lord, if it be poſſible, but I ever it as a fact. The following anecdote, which I have from a Mr. Young, a reſpectable man, and of the ſtricteſt veracity, will evince the truth of what I have advanced. Upon hearing the bell toll, he enquired who had died, when one of the countrymen anſwered him, that he did not know, but that it was a Proteſtant. 'You do not know who is dead (ſays Mr. Young) then how the devil can you gueſs at his religion?" "Oh, Sir, (replied his informer) we know it by the ringing of the bell; it always ſounds quick and merrily when a Catholic is dead." What, my Lord, muſt be the idea of thoſe poor men, whoſe conduct is more directed by the impulſe of their immediate feelings, than of calm reflection—what muſt be their idea of thoſe who have eſtabliſhed ſo cruel, ſo inſulting a diſtinction: who not content with indulging the ſpirit of religious intolerance towards their living brethren, invade the ſad immunities of the grave, and exerciſe their tyranny over the very dead."

This is as groſs an impoſition as ever was palmed upon a country; and ſhews to what relources men are driven when they with to carry a point. That the trick ſhould not have been detected by the Proteſtants, of Ireland or England may be accounted for from their ignorance of the ſubject. The truth is that the mode of ringing for dead Proteſtants is by ſlow and deliberate ſtrokes of the Bell-clapper, which is called tolling. On the contrary, the Catholic knell is of a lively nature, reſembling much the mode of ringing, in England, at Baptiſms and on holidays. It is any thing but ſolemn. This cannot fail of being known to every Engliſhman of the leaſt obſervation, in this country. It has often been matter of converſation to the editor of this paper.—Quebec Mercury.

The juſtneſs of the preceding remarks muſt be obvious to every perſon. Were editors generally endowed with equal capacity, or actuated by the ſame honorable philanthropic endeavors, that the Mercury editor is, newspapers would become (what they ought to be) vehicles of truth and inſtruction.

It is rumoured and believed that, the order for holding a court of enquiry into the conduct of commodore Barron has been revoked, or at leaſt indefinitely poſtponed.—In conſequence, Capt. Chauncy has paſſed through this place on his way to New York to take command of the gun boats there.—this looks ſuſpicious. I fear all is not well. Are the government afraid to have the orders of Commodore Barron made public, or they muſt be in caſe of an enquiry? The indiſpoſition of Commodore Preble is no ſufficient reaſon for the delay. There are other captains who might without delay be called to Wahington for the purpoſe; and the country are beginning to grow impatient to know ſomething of the merits of an affair which has excited ſo much ſenſibility.—They with to know where the fault lies; and we ought to hope that the government has no intereſt in withholding the information.

WHAT time the Highest, chafe a Shepherd Swain,
O'er Israel's Kingdom, and its Hosts to reign,
That time the Muse ariseth soon, can would Sing,
And trembling, fear on doubtful Epic Wing,
Ere yet the Light had dawn'd on darken'd Man,
And Hea ben Kines, through hellish Worship ran,
Ere Love evolve, to him had been revere'd,
Or endless truth, a Sentence mod had feal'd.
Whilst yet the Al od, in Structure unexplain'd,
And he'l-expanded, Realm dwelt enchain'd,
Blind to one fellow I with untried pride,
And each rude impulse, seem'd the only guide.
Ere Gothick truth, triumphant know-ege spread,
On Heaven-born Science, its broad Lidht shed,
Which Heaven restores, its decrees reform'd,
Or finely then, to Reveren d Seers explain'd,
Jeffe' God asks for, yet gude the sacred page,
Agreat Example, in that Omen'd age!
When Force was Law, when right was undefin'd
Justice disconcerted, Era equal to kind,
Hordes of power, left to public good,
The Social tie, scarce known, or understood,
And bodies but crude de redeem'd, the grace,
Buts off to Regs, Rites, Obations, Sacrifice.
Doctrine alarm'd to the untaught mind,
Rome's Vocal Temple, form'd alike to blind,
Her Hillside Votaries, and her Rites Bare,
And gorge he wealth, her jogging worship craves.
Oh hapless Rate, where guiltless blood is fold,
And Maiden bartered, for a Calfen Gold.
Hence Justice fled the Executive Land
And Ah hom forms, her late mental hand;
Where with P ad's Scales, and ever equal Laws
She weighs a Monarchs, or a Peasants cause.
In fact deficit, the bright fucention runs,
And hence the guide s her translatlantic Sons.
Return my Muse, this gracious subject quit,
To whence thy gift more distant scene was laid,
To that bleft, envied, soft and promised Land!
Where patience, Modesty a Robert's Band,
Benighted ftill, unbroken ftill thy chain,
And mad Extremes, and barbarous holy reign,
Where dread Contagion and foul Error runs!
Impute thy Daughters, and unbleft thy Sons.
With horrid Rites, and equal warmth ador'd,
The Serpent's wound'd, and the Bull who gor'd.
For Faith I repugnant to the flickering Mind,
Oh race degenerate and to Reason blind!
Or ruft, or funk, in everafting Night,
There worship some, the Eternal Source of Light,
Or fabled Gods, such as foul Luft approves,
Form'd by their Terrors or to suit their Loves!
There urg'd by Difcord, and infatiate Fate,
Inceftuous Wars, Uncovered Nations wage.
Some hail perchance, beyond its horne who stray'd,
Some Chief, als rolling Eyeball bravely'd,
Some Combat chanting Deprivate Battle join'd;
Or ang'd by force, or Lamb by fraud purbon'd,
Or Bound encurbed, or some barter'd field,
Or harmful Fame, Fair Pride forbids to yield.
Or from life's sale, Contention mounts her Car,
And dire ful Spreads, the crimfon rage of War;
Orphans deploring, or their wonted Roam,
And to the Grave, hallowing the Hoary Head!
Hu ful sound'd, unrag'd the ejected Ere,
The Grim unbroken, and unpity'd the Sneer.
The Steed curris'd, his native freedom feeks,
Or on the Fur, the Warriors Vengeance wreaks.
No more the Flocks, rejoice the gladden'd Plain,
No more the Herds, their household Looks retain,
But madden'd all, the Forefts depths they fean,
Ormid ft th' approach of savage Man.

FROM THE ALBANY CRISIS.

THE ALARM, No III.

Let none confirue any thing I have faid, or may fay, into a with for war; and particularly with Great Britain. Far the reverfe in my intention. It is to prevent war with this, or any other nation. Peace is always defirable when it can be had upon honorable terms; and an unneceffary war with Great Britain, would be impolitic, ruinous, and ex remely to be deprecated. Thofe who foster prejudices againft that nation, who are continually calling for the fpirit of '76, and who, on the prefent occafion, ufe reproachful and provoking epithets, difcover neither the temper of chriftianity, nor the maxims of an enlightened policy. They, and all mankind ought to ftand with us upon equal ground, and to be held "enemies in war, in peace friends."

How far the fpirit which fome of our people have fhown in refenting the Britifh aggreffion actually prevades the nation; how long it will laft; and what will be its termination, would be very difficult to tell. A nation long flattered with the profpect of eternal peace, intent on amaffing wealth, torn with party fpirit, and having fubmitted to repeated infults, without effectual endeavours to repel them, are not eafily roufed to a fenfe of impending danger. They are more likely gradually to lofe fight of national independence and glory, and to adopt the maxim, "Millions for peace, but not a cent for defence."—Admitting, however, that the fpirit which has been fhown, is univerfal and great, where are the means by which it is to produce an effect? Can one hundred thou and men on land, drive an enemy's veffel from our coafts? Can they prevent the total ruin of our commerce? Can they fave our fea port towns, even with the affiftance of fortifications and gun-boats, from terror, it may be deftruction? The thought muft appear idle to any rational man acquainted with martial time operations. The ships of war pafs the places of defence. What is to be done then? They fuddenly move from one place to another. Are the detachments from the militia at the ftation, and prepared to act?

Suppofe the militia fo arranged as to guard every point of attack, will they continue from their homes, and fubmit to the hardfhips of a military life, for a confiderable time? Let thofe who were witneffes of the American revolution anfwer the queftion. The militia are excellent on certain emergencies, and have performed wonders; but they are not calculated for a long and conftant warfare. By a reliance on them, and on fhort enliftments, the United States neatly loft their independence.

If this reafoning have any force, it will be feen that a fmall navy is our only competent defence. It will be forever to be regretted if the prefent alarm fhould be without a provifion of that kind. Nothing then but national difhonor, and final fubjection to fome foreign power can be expected to enfue. Better to have tamely fubmitted to the feizure of the Chefapeake, and furrendered her whole crew, than to have made a noify and unavailing bluffer. In the one cafe, we would have manifefted fomething like a meek and pacific difpofition; in the other, we will proclaim ourfelves boaftful cowards, and juftly incur the contempt of all nations.

Why fhould we have a navy, fay fome, when our fituation, and the intereft of foreign powers fecure us from any attack? Let fuch be afked, Have thefe things fecured us? Have we not felt repeated infults and injuries? In the prefent ftate of Europe, is it not reafonable to think that we muft, in a degree, be fubjected to aggreffions? Is it not wifdom to provide againft thefe? The dream of peace which we have indulged, is the dream of a delirious and not of a found mind. The millenium has not yet commenced; whenever it does, we can eafily turn a few fhips of war into merchantmen; "beat our fwords into plough-fhares, and our fpears into pruning hooks." The whole matter is reducible to this fingle point; in the prefent ftate of the world, either we muft have a ftrong navy, fuch as we can eafily and fpeedily furnifh, or we muft fubmit to infult, oppreffion, tribute, and to be reckoned the offcouring of the earth.

Orders have juft been given at Plymouth, to difpatch to fea without delay all the fhips in that port, which are in readineſs for failing. It is aſſerted that government has received intelligence that a French fquadron had left Breſt, and eſcaped the vigilance of our cru zers, which a great part of the Channel fleet had put into Torbay.

Mr. Thornton has juſt ſet off on board an extraordinary packet diſpatched for Tonningen. It is generally aſſerted that the ob ject of his miſſion is important, which may be judged of from the quickneſs with which he is ſent off. It is ſaid he is going to Memel in order to make remonſtrances to the Pruſſian cabinet relative to the negociations which have been opened. The conduct of the King of Sweden is alſo more than conſpicuous.

It is reported that the ſubſidies required the preſent campaign by Pruſſia and Ruſſia, amount to ſeven millions.

The time when the large expedition now preparing will actually ſail, depends on the contingencies which may reſult from the preſent ſtate of affairs upon the Continent—but we are aſſured that Miniſters are indefatigable in their different departments, and that ſuch activity has been employed, that every thing will be ready in fourteen days from this date.

An immenſe number of tranſports are hired; Ordinance, military and medical ſtores, have been embarked, and a large body of troops was in the neighbourhood of the points of embarkation; ſo that on the firſt receipt of expected intelligence from the Continent, the troops will be hurried on board, and ſail without a moment's delay.

In addition to the quantity of ſtores now on board the tranſports, 30,000 ſets of accoutrements were ordered from a houſe in the city within theſe few days.

A deciſive victory was gained by the forces of Algiers over the troops of the Bey of Tunis about the 15th of May, in the neighborhood of Conſtantine—three of which occaſioned great rejoicings at Algiers.

Sidi Soliman Mifi Mifi was at Gibraltar, and part of his buſineſs appeared to be the purchaſing of military ſtores for his maſter, one cargo of which he had ſent for Tunis.

All the Portugueſe ſquadron that was ſtationed at Gibraltar, with the exception of a ſloop of war, one brig and a ſchooner, had gone off Algiers, probably with a view of cooperation with Tunis.

All the ports of Naples, occupied by the enemies of his Sicilian majeſty, are declared in a ſtate of blockade. This has been officially notified by the marquis de Circello, miniſter for foreign affairs to the king of Sicily.

From a Halifax paper of July 7.

His M jeſty's ſloop of war Columbine, Captain Bradſhaw, arrived here on Saturday laſt from the Cheſapeak, after a paſſage of 19 days, with diſpatches to the Honorable Vice-Admiral Berkeley. Theſe diſpatches relate to an unpleaſant conteſt, which has taken place between the United States frigate Chefapeake, Commodore Barron, and his M jeſty's ſhip Leopard, Captain Humphreys. As this is an event of the utmoſt importance to two nations, whoſe beſt intereſt it is to be in a ſtate of peace with each other, we have endeavoured to collect as far as poſſible the intereſting particulars. The order of Vice Admiral Berkeley, with which we have been favored, will ſhew the ground of difference;—the propriety of the order given;—and that part of the order which gave to Commodore Barron, the reciprocal right of ſearch, muſt ſhew to every candid mind, a ſincere diſpoſition to avoid wounding the feelings of the Commodore, or of bringing the queſtion to this painful iſſue.

The manner in which Captain Humphreys carried into effect the Admiral's order, will fully appear in the ſubſequent intereſting letter from an officer belonging to the Leopard, and reflects the higheſt honor on Captain Humphreys who has ſhewn, on the one hand, the moſt gallant forbearance; and on the other, the moſt inflexible determination to do his duty.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman on board his Majeſty's ſhip Leopard, dated Cheſapeak Bay, June 25, 1807.

"We arrived here on the 21ſt inſt. and, agreeably to the orders of the Hon. Vice Admiral Berkeley, (on the event of meeting the United States frigate Chefapeake, to ſearch her for deſerters, of whom we had information) the next morning, the ſignal was made from the Bellona to proceed to ſea, which we did at 90'clock this morning: the Chefapeake was then paſſing the Bellona, about 3 miles within us—We ſtood to the S. E. with a wind at S. W. until eleven, when it ſhifted to E. which retarded the progreſs of the frigate, being obliged to beat—we kept on a wind under eaſy ſail, until the got within two miles of us, when ſhe ſhortened ſail, and we bore down to her, we were about 13 or 14 miles from the land; when ſufficiently cloſe, the captain hailed, and ſaid he had diſpatches from the Britiſh commander in chief—the anſwer was, "ſend them on board, ſhall heave too," which he did accordingly—I was ſent on board with the Admiral's order, and a letter from captain Humphreys, ſaying, he hoped to be able to execute the Admiral's order in the moſt amicable manner; and, after the Commodore read the order and letter, he told me, his orders from his government were moſt peremptory in not ſuffering any foreigner to muſter his ſhip's company, but that he would write an anſwer to capt. Humphrey's letter, if I would be the bearer of it to him—after having anſwered in the affirmative, he wrote, ſaying, that he had no deſerters, and that his inſtructions prevented his allowing the Cheſapeake to be ſearched.—I returned with this anſwer, after being on board 4 minutes. As the Admiral's order was poſitive, there was no alternative but force—ſo we edged down to her, and captain Humphrey's hailed, and ſaid, that Commodore Barron muſt be aware that the order of the Britiſh commander in chief muſt be obeyed, the only reply, (which was thrice repeated) was, "I do not underſtand what you ſay"—now as we were to windward, and heard diſtinctly his anſwers, it was evident he alſo muſt have heard what captain Humphreys ſaid—orders were then given to fire a ſhot across her bows from the lower deck after a moment's another; and, in two more, no ſatisfactory anſwer being given, captain Humphreys ordered the fire to be opened on her, begin ning with the foremoſt gun, and in ſucceſſion after; but as the order was not perfectly underſtood, a broadſide was poured into her; Commodore Barron then hailed, when orders were given to ceaſe firing, but as he only ſaid he was going to ſend a boat on board, and as they were preparing to return the fire, it was ſuppoſed an artifice to gain time, and orders were again given to fire—two broadſides more were the reſult, when ſhe ſtruck. Two lieutenants, with ſeveral midſhipmen, went then on board the Cheſapeake to ſearch for deſerters, and after being there three hours, returned with four—3 belonging to the Melampus, and one to the Halifax; the latter is the fellow who abuſed Lord James Townſend at Norfolk.—Commodore Barron wrote to Captain Hump hreys, ſaying, that he conſidered the Cheſapeake as his prize, and that he was ready to deliver her up to any perſon authorized to receive her; Captain Humphreys replied, that as he had executed the orders of the Commander in Chief, he had nothing more to do with her; that he muſt forthwith join the reſt of the ſquadron, and that he not only lamented moſt ſincerely, the neceſſity that compelled him to violent meaſures, but that if he could render the Cheſapeake any ſervice, he would cheerfully do it. In ſhort, Captain Humphreys had conducted himſelf throughout the whole of this unpleaſant tranſaction, in the moſt praiſeworthy manner, as an officer and gentleman—he has more humanity in his compoſition than moſt mankind; you may then ſuppoſe his feelings were none of the moſt comfortable on this occaſion. The Cheſapeake returned but a few ſhot.—they were ſcarcely prepared when we began, and were thrown in ſuch confuſion that the greateſt part of the people deſerted their quarters.

"The number killed on board the Cheſapeake, according to their own ſtatement, was 6—and 23 were wounded.

"Twenty ſix ſhot went through the hull, five between wind and water; the ſails were completely riddled, and I have not a doubt but that in to minu es more ſhe would have gone down, the ſea being ſo much in every ſhot told after the firſt broadſide, which was chiefly at the rigging.

"Commodore Barron was ſlightly wounded in the leg by a ſplinter—he behaved in the coolеſt way imaginable, and ſtood at the open gang-way the greater part of the time."

If any thing can place this matter in a ſtronger light, we need only compare the aſſurances of Commodore Barron, with the truth: of the deſerters claimed, ſix were taken out of the frigate, upon the ſearching her, two were killed, and one jumped overboard. The gunner of his M jeſty's ſhip Chicheſter, who lately deſerted his country's flag, was found dead, aſting in that ſtation, on board the American frigate, and many others were left by Captain Humphreys, becauſe they couldn't be refound.

Accounts have reached the city of Waſhington, dated late in June, that the Spaniards at Mobile have ſeized 200 ſtand of arms, and a quantity of ammunition, belonging to the United States, deſtined from New Orleans to Fort Steddart. This ſeizure was made by the Spaniſh commandant at Mobile, and afterwards approved by the governor general of the Floridas.

ANECDOTES.

The late vice-chancellor of Oxford, who was remarkable for a vain diſplay of hard and pompous words, being one day diſappointed of a peale pudding, with a leg of pork, called for the cook, and angrily aſked him the reaſon; telling him at the ſame time, that he was a blockhead, and to take care how he always had the proper concomitant. The cook underſtanding the vice chancellor to mean a peale-pudding by the word concomitant, next day, when he had a boiled turkey on the table, ſent one up with it, of an enormous ſize. The vice chancellor again ſent for the cook, and reprimanded him for not ſending the proper concomitant, as there was no oyſter ſauce. "Sir" ſaid the cook, "you told me yeſterday, always to ſend you a peale pudding, and I thought I had ſerved you up one to-day, big enough for half the college."

Captain Chriſtie, an Iriſh officer, who ſerved with conſiderable credit in America, had the misfortune to be dreadfully wounded in one of the battles there. As he lay on the ground, an unfortunate ſoldier, who was near him, and was alſo much wounded, made a terrible howling, when he exclaimed, "D—n your eyes, what do you make ſuch a noiſe for, do you think nobody is killed but yourſelf."

An Attorney, if ys an ingenious writer, is the ſame thing to a barriſter that an apothecary is to a doctor, with this difference, that the former does not deal in ſcruples!

At a late muſical meeting, in the country, a vocal performer, who was rather thinly dreſſed about his ſmall cloaths, being complimented on the power of his voice, vainly threw up his head and replied: "O Lard, ſir, I can make any thing of it."—"Can you indeed?" ſaid a wit in company, "why, then I'd advife you to make a pair of breeches of it."

It would be a pity not to preſerve the following Anecdote, which diſplays ſo much of that accuracy of obſervation which is known to be one of the characteriſticks of our red brethren of the Weſt.

An Indian upon his return home to his hut one day, diſcovered that his veniſon, which had been hung up to dry, had been ſtolen. After taking his obſervations upon the ſpot, he ſet off in purſuit of the thief, whom he tracked through the woods. After going ſome diſtance he met ſome perſons of whom he enquired if they had not ſeen a little old white man, with a ſhort gun, and accompanied by a ſmall dog, with a bob tail? They replied in the affirmative, and upon the Indian's aſſuring them that the man thus deſcribed had ſtolen his veniſon, they deſired to be informed how he was able to give ſuch a minute deſcription of a perſon whom it appeared he had not ſeen. The Indian anſwered thus—"The thief I know is a little man by his having made a pile of ſtones to ſtand upon in order to reach the veniſon from the height I had hung it, ſtanding on the ground; that he is an old man, I know by his ſhort ſteps, which I have tracked over the dead leaves in the woods; and that he is a white man I know by his running out his toes when he walks, which an Indian never does. His gun I know to be ſhort by the mark which the muzzle made by rubbing the bark of the tree upon which it had leaned; that his dog is ſmall I know by his tracks; and that he has a bob tail, I diſcovered by the mark it made in the duſt where he was ſitting at the time his maſter was taking down the meat."

The following lines, he added as by a friend into whose hands they accidentally fell, were not intended for public view; but the subject, and the pen from which they flowed, are a pleasing inducement to us, to add to the stock of brilliant gems which adorn the present Mrs. Chambers] in every respect a striking resemblance now, of what her amiable mother was.

Loveliest of thy sex! distinctly fair!
Thy angelic form, thy graceful air,
Have me inspir'd to admire! but not to love.
In these to trace, the every feature,
Adorn'd with every grant of Art and Nature;
"Tis fenced—by the Powers above!

No more shall Envy pale, with haggard Mein,
Lift her dire head, with eyes of green,
Nor shall the fay, thy fame if not divine!
Nor shall the fay, thy spotless soul
Cannot give Ladies to the World, the whole!
Thou envy of thy sex! Thou pride of mine!

THE VICISSITUDES AND VANITY OF ALL SUBLUNARY ENJOYMENTS.

WHAT is this fleeting life of Man?—
The scanty measure of a span,
A bubble, or a dream;
With sharp corroding cares perplext,
To fin and death itself annex'd—
Ah! melancholy theme!

Behold the infant on the breast,
His little peevish soul opprest
With grief and empty tears.
We read his passion in his eyes;
He spends his breath in sobs and cries,
And bathes himself in tears.

Few years revolv'd, he's sent to school,
Where taught to think and live by rule,
What disconcert he bears!
Whilst book and pen his time employ,
There's none so wretched as a boy,
Nor so unvex'd in cares.

Anon, extravagant desires,
Tumultuous thoughts, and aspirings fires,
Within his bosom rage!
There restless long alleys to tame,
By dread of pain, and worse, and shame,
And endless wars they wage.

But time, at length, like fate prevails,
The' Reason, Love's great daughter, fails,
And life grows more sedate;
What once he made the total sum
Of all delight, is now become
The object of his hate.

Now happiness is drawn from gold,
And in the shining idle world'd,
Of honor, wealth, and fame;
For this he toils, for this his days
Are spent; by this he hopes to raise
A grand immortal name.

But gold has wings, and will not stay,
Man would pursue, but feels decay
The fond pursuit restrain;
And now wherein the hand of death
He sinks, and yields, with grief, his breath,
Which yet he drew in vain.

He, he alone can life possess,
Whom smiling HOPE shall deign to bless,
For daughter of the skies!
A friend to Virtue's friend alone,
The worlds above are all her own,
And there enjoyment lies.

DEFAMATION.

There is a town in Warwickshire of good note, and formerly pretty famous for much animosity and dissention, the chief families of which have now turned all their whispers, backbitings, envies, and private malices, into mirth and entertainment, by means of a prevish old gentlewoman, known by the title of Lady Blaremanile. This heroine had for many years together outdone the whole sisterhood of gossips in invention, quick utterance, and unprovoked malice. This good body is of a lasting constitution, though extremely decayed in her eyes, and decrepid in her feet. The two circumstances of being always at home from her lameness, and very attentive from her blindness, makes her lodgings the receptacle of all that passes in town, good or bad; but for the latter, the seems to have the better memory. There other thing to be noted of her, which is, that as it is usual with old people, she has a livelier memory of things which passed when she was very young, than of late years. Add to all this, that she does not love but hates every body. The statute in Rome does not serve to vent malice half so well, as this old lady does to disappoint it. She does not know the author of any thing that is told her, but can readily repeat the matter itself; therefore, though she exposes the whole town, yet the offends no one in it. She is so exquisitely restless and peevish, that she quarrels with all about her, and sometimes, in a freak, will instantly change her habitation. To indulge this humour, she is fed about the grounds belonging to the same house she is in, and the persons to whom she is to remove, being in the plot, are ready to receive her at her own chamber again. At stated times the gentlewoman at whose house she supposes she is at the time, is sent for to quarrel with, according to her common custom. When they have a mind to drive the jest, she is immediately urged to that degree, that she will board in a family with which she has never yet been; and away she will go this instant, and tell them all that the rest have been saying of them. By this means she has been an inhabitant of every house in the place, without staying from the same habitation; and the many stories which every body furnish her with to favor that deceit, make her the general intelligencer of the town of all that can be said by one woman against another. Thus grandels stories die away, and sometimes truths are smothered under the general word; When they have a mind to discountenance a thing. Oh! That is in my lady Blaremanile's memoirs.

Whoever receives impressions to the disadvantage of others without examination, is to be had in no other credit for intelligence than this good lady Blaremanile, who is subject to have her ears imposed upon for want of other help to better information. Add to this, that other scandal bearers suspend the use of those faculties which she has lost, rather than apply them to do justice to their neighbors; and I think, for the service of my fair readers, to acquaint them, that there is a voluntary lady Blaremanile at every visit in town.

LONDON, June 4.

A letter from an officer at the Cape of Good Hope, dated March 26, says, "I embrace the opportunity of the Theseus, which is ordered home, to give you the news of this place:"—

"The arrival of General Craufurd's force here has made a great deal of bustle.—Many of the officers of this expedition who had been at this place before, were astonished at the great improvements which the Dutch had been making, and which are now carrying on with great spirit. The appearance of the town is now really grand; every thing is beauty and regularity. We have abundance of all provisions and liquors, and there is a most excellent and well governed police. The Dutch seem happy under our government, and copy all our manners and dress. We have a paper published weekly in English & Dutch. We have not yet established any public amusements, but we intend soon establishing a theatre. We are to have races in a few weeks, and balls of course. We have got our first division of prize money for the capture of this place; Sir David Baird, it is thought, will have altogether, about 40,000l. Field officers have already received 540l. captains, 75l. and the subalterns 45l. each. It is thought that the field officers will have in all nearly 3000l. captains, 450l. and subalterns 350l. each; when the unsold stores, &c. have been disposed of."

An order has been issued by the Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, prohibiting British officers and soldiers from marrying in Dutch families. This regulation is a grievous disappointment to the vrows of the settlement, who had hopes, in their turn, to subdue their conquerors.

General Beresford, it is said, is to return to the South American Army.

The recall of the Swedish Minister is at his own request, but his Excellency will not leave this country before the arrival of M. D'Adlerberg, who is appointed his successor, and who was at Gottenburgh, preparing to embark for this country when the last mail came away.

The race of Elephants, it is said, lately increased to such a degree in Sooloo, as to threaten to depopulate the province. At the close of the last harvest the natives assembled from all quarters, for the purpose of destroying them, and during a short period killed several thousands.

Sir Arthur Paget and his suite, consisting of no less than thirty four persons, sailed yesterday afternoon in the Montague, of 74 guns, Admiral Martin, for the Mediterranean.

By the Diomede, we learn that our troops at Monte Video, were well supplied with provisions, fruit and vegetables of every description. The importation of wine and spirits, by neutrals, had been permitted on the payment of a duty of 6 1-2 per cent. more than British subjects.

Extract of a letter received by the Diomede, dated Monte Video, March 22.

"The Spaniards at Buenos Ayres, are distracted by party spirit, which appears momentarily likely to burst into a flame. Liniers, a Frenchman, Commander in the Navy, is Governor of Buenos Ayres, and the Viceroy is in prison, strongly guarded."

We have read with considerable attention the accounts which the Bulletins have furnished of the reception of the Persian Embassy, at the head quarters of Buonaparte, and can assure our readers, that the Ambassador will return to his Master with an impression of the power and magnificence of Napoleon, infinitely inferior to that which is entertained in Persia, of the splendor and resources of this country.

Another fire has happened in the West of England; the village of Hatch, near Langport, in Somersetshire, is almost totally destroyed; scarce any house is left but the parsonage. It was with great difficulty that the town of Langport escaped.

All our late letters are calculated to prepare us for news of a general battle which is expected to take place between the 10th and 15th of June. Bennington is said to be ill. The Prussian Major General Lauren was killed at Dantzic. General Essen has quitted the Russian army on account of illness.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

The great quantity and variety of matter in the French papers oblige us to condense a part of it.

RUSSIANS and TURKS.

The war between the Russians and Turks, and between the latter and several bodies of insurgents, appeared very much to interest the French; and the Paris papers were replete with articles, on the subject. It appeared, that the Russians, in order to strengthen their Grand Army, had neglected that of Michelson, which had advanced into Turkey as far as the Danube, and had invested Ismail, near the mouth of that river. In the mean time, the Ottoman Empire assumed great activity. Vast numbers of troops were levied, and led against the Russians by French officers.—The army of the Grand Vizier was put in motion; and on the 30th April, was advancing from Adrianople for the Danube. Other corps advanced upon Michelson, who, it was said, had raised the seige of Ismail, and had retreated to Bendar, on the Dniester, after experiencing a loss of 2150 men killed, 930 men wounded, some artillery, two generals, gun-boats, &c. taken by an attack on his rear by the Governor of Ismail. Another corps, which had advanced to Giurgevo, on the Danube, near Bulgaria, had been obliged to evacuate that city, and to retire from Walachia to Moldavia. The Turks were pursuing. It was also stated, that the Turks, excepting in one instance, had been successful against the Servians, Montenegrins, &c. in different parts of the Empire—In one battle (of Nissa, fought April 22) the Servian loss was stated at 4830 killed, 7285 wounded, and 800 prisoners; and the Turks loss at 2450 killed, 3768 wounded, and 160 prisoners. It was likewise stated, that the insurgent Czerni Georges had been defeated by the Turks, with the loss of 8000; and that to assist the Turks, Gen. Marmont, from Dalmatia, with 20,000; and General Lannais, from Raguse, were on the march.—Add to this, it is said, the Turkish fleet had gained a victory over the Russian squadron in the Black Sea. Thus stood affairs in Turkey, at the last dates according to the French accounts. The Persians too were said to be in arms against the Russians, stimulated by French officers.

The English Admiral Craig (we never before heard of this Admiral) it was said, had demanded a contribution of 9 0,000 ducats from Salonica, and had been refused.

The affairs of the English in Egypt were represented as highly critical.—That General Frazer had been defeated by the Turks and Arnauts, and that he had demanded succour from Sicily and Malta.

THE TALK OF PEACE,

Had not subsided; and the efforts of Austria to effect it, were said to be unceasing.—The last accounts stated, that she had again invited England to send a Minister to a pacific Congress, to be held at Prague or Berlin.

Washington, July 31.

A communication was made in June, by the Marquis de Circello, prime minister to his majesty the king of Sicily, to Mr. Gibbs, American consul at Palermo, announcing to him that his majesty had declared every part of his dominions then in possession of his enemies, in a state of blockade.

It is said an attempt will be made on Naples by his Sicilian majesty shortly, as there are but few French troops now in that city, and as his party there still remains strong notwithstanding the rigid means that have been used by the present government there to reduce their number.

On the 16th of May, about 40 sail of Sicilian transports failed under convoy from Messina for Palermo, for the purpose of taking troops.

The British and Sicilian troops possess a small part of Calabria Ulterior. The rest is occupied by the French troops.

Norfolk, July 29.

The brig Flora, capt. Benthall, arrived this morning from Charante and Madeira, left, June 5, in Rochefort Roads, 1 French line of battle ship of 130 guns, 4 of 84 2 frigates, and 4 brigs, blockaded by 6 English 74's, at anchor off the mouth of the harbor, said they expected the French out every day.

New York, August 4.

All aback.—By the arrival this forenoon of the schooner Huldah and Anna, in 48 hours from Norfolk, we have received Norfolk papers to Saturday August 1, inclusive. They do not contain one single syllable on the subject of an engagement between the United States frigate Constitution and an English ship of war, [in the Mediterranean] as reported yesterday by capt. Story. Nor do the papers even mention an arrival there from Malta.

The British officers and seamen that were lately taken at Lynhaven Bay have been given up and sent on board the ship they belonged to.

August 7.

Capt. John Abeel, from Kingston, (Jam.) informs, that the British frigate Mediator had just arrived there from La Vera Cruz, with one million of dollars; and that the frigate Diana, Maling, had arrived at Jamaica from England, and proceeded for Vera Cruz, with the son of Sir Francis Baring, of London, on board.

Boston, July 31.

More vexation.—We have been a letter from a very intelligent American in London, which states that Mr. Armstrong had left Paris, to wait on Bonaparte, at his head quarters—that our difficulties at the courts of St. Cloud and Madrid became more and more involved; and that it was evident Talleyrand intended no accommodation should take place between us and Spain.—Repertory.

The York Gazette.

YORK, AUGUST 22. 1807.

From Halifax—American gentlemen recently from that place, that the affair between the Leopard and Chesapeake is differently represented here, from what it has been in the United States.—Admiral Berkeley has alledged in writing that "His orders were not issued until every application to restore the mutineers and deserters had been made by his Britannic Majesty's Minister, Consul, and other officers, and had been refused by the government of the United States." He added, "that the Captain of this American frigate positively asserted, that no deserters composed a part of his crew, though the officer enlisted them avowedly at first, and was one of his lieutenants. The men were afterwards actually found on board the frigate." One of the killed on board the Chesapeake was said to be a warrant officer of the British ship Chichester, who had been enveigled from his duty.

Boston paper.

By the official report of the distribution of the British Naval Force, down to the first of June, it appears that there are now at sea Five Hundred and Twenty-three Ships of War of that nation.

WE are authorized to state upon the authority of a respectable gentleman of this Town, that Lime-juice is a Sovereign remedy in Bilious complaints—from the result of repeated experiments made in his own Family, all equally successful and efficient. We have no hesitation in recommending it. It must occur to every one, that the liether it can be procured the better, and the more certain the effects—On our own part and on the part of the public, we tender thanks for the kind communication.

It is stated in a Pittsburgh paper, that the British merchants at Michillimakinac refuse purchasing any articles of country produce from the Americans, and are preparing to remove their effects from our territory.—It is further stated, that the difficulties with the Indians on that frontier are such, as to render it unsafe to travel from Chicago to Detroit by land.

From a London Paper of May 18.

The report which was spread yesterday of an order, which it was pretended had been given by the Admiralty to seize all the American vessels which were in our ports, was without foundation. But we believe that instructions have been given to our cruisers to detain hereafter such American vessels as shall not be destined for England, or for the ports of which the British Government has not expressly interdicted the entry to their vessels by these instructions.

Further, the Government of the United States appear to yield at this moment and to shew amicable rather than hostile dispositions. President Jefferson has lately issued a proclamation, prolonging the importation of British goods, to the second Monday in December next. The Treaty concluded between Great Britain and the United States, has been sent back by the American government, to be revised, and submitted to a new discussion; and there is great appearance, that the difficulties will be amicably adjusted between the two nations.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas great and weighty matters claiming the consideration of the Congress of the United States form an extraordinary occasion for convening them, I do by these presents appoint Monday the twenty-fixth day of October next, for their meeting at the city of Washington, hereby requiring the respective Senators and Representatives then and there to assemble in Congress, in order to receive such communications as may then be made to them, and to consult and determine on such measures as in their wisdom may be deemed meet for the welfare of the United States.

In testimony whereof, I have caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed, and signed the same with my hand. Done at the city of Washington, the thirteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, and in the thirty-second year of the independence of the United States.

PROLOGUE.

WHEN round the Globe, our Tutor bade us stand,
I mark'd with various marks of fire and land,
How Europe flome resplendent as a Star,
The world's great architect in peace and war.
While further South, Ham's burning fort appears
To cherish darkness, as it grows in years,
No natural beam illumes the circling coast,
Which boodom, arts, and learning, once could boast.
Lo! Afia, too, where science first was bred,
Letter-us in tears her noblest genius fled;
While there, our infant climes, juft ftarch'd from night,
Emit from lavour'd corners borrow'd light.
What Europe claims where her fober-train,
This Britain claims from Europe's wide domain.
Behold the fail, that taught Numantia's race
To hurl on bloody Rome defer'd difgrace,
Where ftill fome gen'rous hearts fweet virtue prize,
In fpite of fuperftition's black difguife,
Producing flaves that foreign chains endure,
Of crouching vaffals of a defpot's power.
That fickle race impatient ftill to pleafe,
The foes of wrinkled care, the friends of eafe,
By novelty befot-'d, muft needs dwell,
A ftate of freedom clear of all defect;
Vain is the toil when wifdom drops the reins,
Their bounding fouls fweet liberty difdains.
Immerf'd in crimes they feek her hallow'd fane,
The Goddefs flies, they feel a Monfter's reign.
His iron fway reminds of happier days,
Confcn'd in ignring, and receiving praife,
When fimple villagers in troops advance,
To cure at eve, their labours in the dance.
Alas! how chang'd, the Maidens meet in vain,
And aged Parents weep their Children ftain.
While Europe crufh'd by lawlefs rapine groans,
And all her monarchs fit on tott'ring thrones;
While upftart villains, foes to all the good,
Are rais'd to power by ftredding guiltefs blood,
See glorious Britain heaven's high cares the trace
Laughs at his rage, and blafts the threaten'd blow.
I read methinks, th' hiftorian's future page,
Which gives the hope of this eventful age,
His heart exults at Britain's noble ftand
Againft the Gallic tyrants' rude command.
Fix'd on her rock, the heard his fouith bouft,
To land his cruel legions on her coaft;
She bade him come, the happy day fhould bound,
His guilty life, if met on Britifh ground:
The tyrant pale the bloody conteft fear'd,
And o'er a weaker for his triumph rear'd.
Lo! juftice, liberty, and equal laws,
Their voices raife in Britain's glorious caufe;
The fuff'ring nations for her fuccefs pray,
The laft fond hope to wipe their tears away;
For ever did the fons of freedom wage
A jufter war in any former age.
Sweet independence, free from haggard fear,
The facial joys that render life fo dear,
The blood of Martyr's reeking in their gore,
Shed at the nod of mad defpotic power;
The rights of nations ready to expire,
And virtue's groans inflame the patriot fire;
Religion at the war before to frown,
And grantcher aid to pull the tyrant down.
The noble fire which pallet Britain's lots,
In kind affection on her children glows;
Her gen'rous hand their various wants fupplies,
Though far remov'd is cold or burning fkies.
Yes! on the Eaft, where Brahma's guilty power
And Mecca's Lord with thick'ning darknefs lour,
Where tyrant-fofism cloth'd in terror reigns,
And fuperftition forges baneful chains;
Where hope itfelf to genius is denied,
And dauftard men to ftavith cafte are tied,
That Albion fmiles, the hands of fcience rife,
To cheer the foul beneath thefe orient fkies.
Her pow'rful viceroy, HASTINGS, leads the way,
For radiant truth to gain a fpiritual fway;
The arts and fciences, for ages loft,
Roof'd at his call, revifit Brahma's coaft:
Peace, liberty, and juftice, meet the view,
That wait on knowledge through this rich domain;
Dark fuperftition trembles at the light,
Mahomet ftrikes, and ftarts, the hated fight.
Accomplish'd JONES fupports the glorious caufe,
And to fupport it pleads for equal laws,
He brings religion firft from Heaven above,
The precious boon of everlafting love;
To reafon purified he joins its rays,
The clouds of darknefs melt before the blaze,
Freed fet'pent' fear, oppreffion's iron race,
The lore of truth, the artifts of diftrefs,
The favith nations ope their wond'ring eyes,
A new creation forgot at once to rife.
O JONES! the friend of liberty and truth,
Sweet nature's darling from thy earlieft youth,
Thy comprehenfive genius fcorn expire'd
The learning vaft which former times had ftor'd.
The ftrady juftice that in Britain reigns,
By the tranfported charm'd the Eaftern plains;
The luft of fhameleft rapine rag'd no more,
Cold av'rice fhunn'd thy looks, and fled the fhore,
Thy facred power commercial fury crufh'd,
And reft'd the natives fuppliant from the duft.
Long fhall thy death the fimple Ind'ans mourn,
And at thine honor'd tomb fweet incenfe burn;
Long fhall the wife and great revere thy name,
And hand to future times thy fpotiefs fame.
As fcience ftill was ftatt'ring in the fky,
Some rude convulfion foon would make her fly;
No fplendid halls prefent a fafe retreat,
Where independence guards the mufly gate,
Till ifle'ral WALLACE'S fpy the ftrady foe,
Of un'reals vile, that fink the mind fo low,
Spurn'd av'rice' grinning threats with juft difdain,
And in Calcutta bade fair fcience reign.
At his command thefe fplendid ftructures rife,
Around the Bramins ftand in vaft furprife;
Oft fhall the founder's praife thefe halls engage,
And all his glory lifts through ev'ry age.

War on the Eaft alone fome Britain fmiles,
Her ftrong affection warms this Weftern ifle;
Lo! Seizure rifing in thefe gloomy clouds,
Begins to diffipate the lowring clouds,
And many proudly in her fervice glow,
As hope we hope by faid proofs to fhow;
To-day we'll lead her radiant courfe begin,
Yet much remains for fome afpiring fon
Whofe lib'ral ftud from that defect removes,
Which gains for WELLESLEY all lafting crowns,
Some gen'ral ftudture in their wifts to rear,
Where ev'ry art and fcience may appear.
O happy GOAL! the prized diftinction won
Thy path's acceptance back'd by ev'ry Muft.
Thofe feelings too which joyful fancy knew,
When learning's gems firft ope'd to thy view,
Bid you to thoufands fmooth the thorny road,
That leads to gracious fcience' bleft abode:
O! think what honors pure fhall gild thy name,
Beyond the fleeting room of vulgar fame,
When kings, and haughty vithors caufe to raife
The fecret murmur, or the venal praife,
Perhaps thy name when Europe's glories fade,
Shall often cheer this academic fhade,
And Bards exclaim, on rough Ontario's fhore,
We found a WELLESLEY, and JONES, in CORE.

LONDON, May 24.

COLONEL VASSALL'S DEATH.

Copy of an intereſting Letter from his Orderly Serjeant to an Officer of diſtinction.

SIR—Pardon me for taking this liberty, as the gratitude I owe to my ever-lamented and beſt friend, Colonel VASSELL, obliges me to give you and his friends an authentic account of his laſt; I being his orderly ſergeant, and the chief perſon to witneſs his bravery, and the gallant manner in which he acquitted himſelf in doing his duty, on the unfortunate hour in which he fell. On our approach to the walls, we miſſed the entrance of the breach; and the grape and muſkery flew ſo hot as to drive the men into confuſion, and numbers of them were about to retreat, but for his exertions. When he obſerved any of them ſtop or flinch, he cried out as loud as poſſible, "Damn it, men don't flinch; every bullet has its billet; brush on, follow me, Thirty-eighth!". He rallied them repeatedly in this manner, until he got them inſide of the breach, when he immediately directed a party to take poſſeſſion of the corner battery next the ſea, which was done in a few minutes; and another party under the command of Mr. Roſs, to advance to the Great Church, and was advancing himſelf, when a grape ſhot broke his left leg, and as ſoon as he fell, he cried out, "Puſh on, my good ſoldiers, charge them, never mind me, ſome body will take me up; its only the loſs of a leg in the ſervice." He cried all the time of the action, "I don't care for my leg, if my regiment do their duty, and I hope they will." As ſoon as the town ſurrendered, and he heard the men cheer, he joined them, in as great ſpirits as if nothing had happened, and called to me to have him carried to the head of his regiment. I feel to the heart for his loſs to his family; I could wiſh to have fallen with him, ſooner than part with a man who was ſo good a friend to me. At half paſt 3 on the morning of the 3d, he received his wound, and at one o'clock on the evening of the 7th, he departed, and at eight on the ſame evening was interred, at the entrance of the Great Church, with all the Military honors.

B. MATHEWS.

Monte Video, 12th February, 18.7.

June 20.

The firſt diviſion of the expedition ſailed yeſterday morning from the Downs for Struſſund. It conſiſted of the 6th, 7th, and 8th regiments of infantry of the German Legion. The diviſion that has failed is under the command of General Dreckfel. A ſecond embarkation will take place in a day or two.

We have extracted from the foregoing papers ſome intelligence relating to the movements of the Servian and Turkiſh armies. The affairs of the former are not quite ſo deſperate as they are repreſented in the Moniteur. The Inſurrection of Michelſon, and the Ruſſians, we are in hopes, will prove not to be worſe than that of their allies.—The retreat from the Danube was abſolutely neceſſary on his part. The principal Turkiſh army inſtead of proceeding to attack him, marched towards Iſmail, which was far in the rear of one of his wings. Had they reached that point, the ſafety of the whole of Michelſon's corps would have been endangered.

Admiral Sir Thomas Duckworth attended yeſterday at the Admiralty, and had a long conference with the Lords.

The Marquis of Huntly does not go with the Grand expedition; that gallant Nobleman is now appointed on the Staff of the army in the Mediterranean, in the room of Major-General Wauchope, who fell in Egypt.—Capt. Johnſton, of the 42d regiment, we hear, is to go as his Lordſhip's Aid-de-camp.

We are concerned to learn, that the inſpection of Sir Sidney Smith, is ſuppoſed proceed from a blow, which he received from an Arab horſe, when riding in the neighborhood of Alexandria, in company with ſome Arabs. The animal on which Sir Sidney was riding was attacked by another horſe, which had broken looſe, and which according to the practice of theſe animals when fighting, reared up, and ſtruck Sir Sidney with one of his fore feet; Sir Sidney's horſe having reared to return the attack, he was compelled to diſmount immediately, and thus avoided further danger.

The King.—For the laſt ſix weeks or two months, his Majeſty's ſight has been in a ſtate of gradual decay. The moſt eminent of the faculty have had frequent conſultations upon the ſubject of performing an operation; it was not determined on until the laſt week. The operation of couching will take place on the eye, and the greateſt hopes are entertained of its ſucceſs.

The eye, in its preſent ſtate, is eclipſed about three-fourths. The operation takes place in about a fortnight. If every thing ſucceeds agreeably to the preſent ſanguine expectations of the medical attendants, the King will ſoon depart for Weymouth. In every other reſpect we have the heart-felt ſatiſfaction to ſtate, his Majeſty never was in better health and ſpirits; his appetite is excellent, and his complexion florid and good.

June 22.

We underſtand that the King of Sweden has ſent a notification to the French General, that the armiſtice will terminate at the ſtipulated period. Ten days was the time firſt fixed, but it was afterwards extended to a month. The command of the Pruſſians who are to co-operate with the Swedes has been given to General Blucher. He has publiſhed a ſpirited proclamation to his troops, and tells them that they are about to commence their operations againſt the enemies of their country. This Pruſſian and Swediſh force is to be ſtrengthened by the German Legion from this country—and the aggregate amount of the whole will be little leſs than 50,000 men.

The Vienna Court Gazette, draws a very different picture of the ſtate of affairs in Turkey from the French and Dutch papers.—The blockade of the Dardanelles and of the Canal of Conſtantinople, has reduced the capital to great diſtreſs. The Captain Pacha, ſeems unwilling to quit the ſecurity of the ſea of Marmora, and the Turkiſh ſquadron which entered into the Black Sea, has been driven out of it by the Ruſſians. General Michelſon's poſition remains nearly the ſame. He has not evacuated Moldavia and Wallachia, and has lately received conſiderable reinforcements.

It is reported that a change has taken place in the Ruſſian Miniſtry: that Baron Budberg his reſigned, and M. Nowoſilzoff receives the port folio of foreign affairs, and that count Romanzow has been ſucceeded by Count Strogonoff, in the Commercial Department. The latter not long ſince left this country, and his appointment will, it is ſuppoſed, be extremely favourable to this country. Holland is at preſent ſtrangely ſituated—ſhe is apprehenſive of an invaſion, and ſhe is without a chief Magiſtrate.—Louis Bonaparte, according to private letters from Holland, has abdicated the throne in conſequence of a miſunderſtanding with his Brother.—His conduct, though grateful to the people becauſe it favored their commerce, diſpleaſed Napoleon.—The will of the letter is to diſtreſs the Engliſh trade by all poſſible means. Does he ruin his Ally or his dependent by carrying his wiſhes into execution—this is to him a matter of indifference.—Private letters ſtate, that as ſoon as Louis Bonaparte was placed upon the throne he ſaw the ruin which his brother's ſyſtem was bringing upon the country—he people approached him with repreſentations of their common diſtreſs, and implored him to abrogate that prohibitory commercial ſyſtem, which, by cutting off foreign communications, intercepted all foreign demand, and thus ruined a country which could only ſupport itſelf by means of its richer neighbours.

Letters have been received from the fleet under Vice-Admiral Lord Collingwood, off Cadiz, dated about twelve days ſince, all of which agree that the combined ſquadron about twelve or thirteen ſail of the line, are ready for Sea, and it is ſuppoſed if our fleet were by accident driven off their ſtation, they would endeavour to make a grand puſh out to ſea, through the Gut of Gibraltar, and endeavor to form a junction with the Carthagenia or Toulon ſquadron, or perhaps with both—but Lord Collingwood is ever on the alert, and his cruiſing frigates from a line of communication from off Cadiz Bay to his fleet in the offing, for the purpoſe of communicating information directly by telegraphic ſignals.

June 23.

The new Swediſh Miniſter, M. Adlerbert, the ſucceſſor of Baron Rehaeſen, came over in the Packet with a Pruſſian officer, with diſpatches from General Blucher to our Government.

It is ſaid that a Meſſenger was ſent off laſt night, from Lord Caſtlereagh's Office, with diſpatches for the Commander of the German Legion, with orders to ſail from the Downs without delay. The Legion conſiſts of about 17,000 men. The whole force to be employed in the expedition, will amount to 40,000 men. The Britiſh troops will follow the German Legion as ſoon as poſſible. There is to be a Brigade of Huſſars, conſiſting of the 7th, or Lord Paget's Regiment, the 10th, or Prince of Wale's, and the 15th, or Duke of Cumberland's, under the command of Lord Paget. A detachment of the King's Own (Blues) it is ſaid will form part of the cavalry. The whole force, we underſtand, will be at the diſpoſal of the gallant King of Sweden.—Lord Cathcart is to be under the command of his Swediſh Majeſty.

Yeſterday, Wm. Marſden, Eſq. reſigned his ſituation as Secretary to the Admiralty, and is to be ſucceeded by Mr. W. Pole, brother to the Marquis Wellesley.

Accounts from Paris, of the 16th ult. mention, that the Union fleeched put back, after a trifleſs cruiſe.

Copenhagen, June 9.

According to letters from Koningsberg of the 18 laſt Gen. Gravert is returned from Fahrwaſſer to Pillau.—The ground activity is now uled in putting the fortifications of Koningsberg in a ſtrong ſtate of defence. A particular corps of 20 men is collected in and near that city. The report of a general armiſtice is not yet confirmed. Great difficulties ſtill obſtruct our hopes of peace.

The Emperor of Ruſſia and the King of Pruſſia were at Bartenſtein on the 28th ult. General Kalkreuth arrived at Konigſberg on the 3d, and the Garriſon of Dantzic was expected at Pillau on the 4th and 5th.

ELSINEUR, June 12.

Private letters—A report is in circulation, that a battle has been fought between the Ruſſian and French armies, in which the latter were defeated—we are without any certain information on this ſubject, but our beſt hopes are for its confirmation.

The York Gazette.

YORK, AUGUST 29, 1807.

FOR THE YORK GAZETTE.

Meſſrs. Printers,

AS a friend to truth, I am induced to requeſt that you will inſert in your Gazette for to-morrow the incloſed Declaration of a number of the moſt independent Electors of the Counties of York, Durham and Simcoe.

E. HALE, High Conſtable, Home Diſtrict.

York, 28th Auguſt, 1807.

WE, the undernigned Freeholders, Electors and inhabitants of the Town of York and its vicinity, weighing the violence and indignation of Truth, to the Public, and our individual feelings, by the publication at Niagara in a paper calling itſelf the Upper Canada Guardian, of a Meeting ſaid to have been held in the Town of York on the 24th July laſt, and on an Addreſs to the Hon. Mr. Juſtice Thorpe, ſaid to have been framed at the ſaid meeting by the independent Electors of the Counties of York, Durham and Simcoe, do ſolemnly declare that we do not know any thing of ſuch meeting; that we did not hear of the intention, or taking place of any ſuch meeting—that, after very diligent enquiry, we do not believe ſuch meeting ever was contemplated, or did take place.

WE, the undernigned Freeholders, Electors, and Inhabitants of Yonge Street and its vicinity, having noticed in the Niagara paper an Addreſs to the Hon. Judge Thorpe, and his anſwer, ſaid to have been unanimouſly agreed to at a meeting of the independent electors of the Counties of York, Durham, and Simcoe, and ſaid to have been held in the town of York, on the 24th of July laſt; Do ſolemnly declare, that no previous notice was given to the public, reſpecting ſuch intended meeting and, after the ſtricteſt enquiry, we cannot aſcertain that ever ſuch a meeting did actually take place at York—therefore duly appreciating the important advantages reſulting from the celebration of a day of union, we conſider it a duty we owe to the public, and to our individual feelings, to ſtate, that if any meeting of the kind did take place, it was without our knowledge or conſent, and preſumey to our wiſhes—and if a private meeting did then and there take place, the perſons preſent could not have been duly authoriſed, or rightly qualified to expreſs the public will.

By His Excellency FRANCIS GORE, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS in and by an act of the parliament of this province, made and paſſed in the year of our Lord one thouſand eight hundred and ſeven, entitled, "an act to revive and continue an act paſſed in the forty-ſecond year of his preſent majeſty, entitled, "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or perſon adminiſtering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the ſame, reſpectively, after reciting that an act paſſed in the forty ſecond year of his preſent majeſty, entitled "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or perſon adminiſtering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry, within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the ſame reſpectively, which was to continue in force for three years, and no longer, was expired, and it was expedient that the ſame ſhould be revived and continued—it is enacted that the ſaid act ſhould, from and after the paſſing of that act, be revived, and the ſame was thereby revived and continued in force and effect for two years, and no longer.

And whereas, as well with reference to the intereſt of his majeſty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majeſty's ſubjects reſident within this province, it hath been aſcertained that there exiſts immediate occaſion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after ſpecified.

JOS. CODY.

Yonge Street, 13th July, 1807.

LONDON, July 2.

By the mail from Tonningen, a letter was received from Altona, written by the British Envoy Mr. Thornton, dated June 23, which contains the following important intelligence —" Lord ought we were informed by an Estafette from Vienna, which place he left the 17th, that the Turkish Emperor had been forced to refign his throne in favor of his Nephew, who has avowed himself friendly to the English interest, and that all his ministers had been murdered. What has brought about this sudden event and what will be the ultimate effect, remains to be explained to us."

The same communication adds, " that no French accounts of been received for 48 hours, and a notion was prevalent, that the affairs of the battle were widely different from their report "

Other letters from Hamburgh respecting the insurrection of Turkey state, that peace had been offered to Great Britain and Russia, and that Sebastiani had been obliged to leave Constantinople dreading the fury of the populace, which was vehemently directed against the French influence.

Government received dispatches from general Lord Hutchinson which state, that the battle of Friedland was nearly a drawn battle, that the lolles on both sides were very equal, and that the two armies remained in nearly the same position after the battle.—Private letters received yesterday from the Continent corroborate this account.

Extract of a letter dated Hanks of the Elbe, June 24.

" A report is in circulation which, though I cannot trace it to any satisfactory authority, is to important, that I muft relate it as I have received it. A revolution, inftigated by the Janiffaries, is faid to have taken place in Conftantinople. It is further ftated, that the Sultan, his fon, and all the immediate Miniflers, have fallen victims to the popular fury ; and that the nephew of the late Sultan has been proclaimed fucceffor.

" Others add, that the French Minifter Sebaftiani, and many French, are among the killed.

" I underftand that 400 waggons have been put in requifition in order to tranfport the divifion of Molitor and Boudet to Eaft Proffia. This circumftance, and the filence of the Hamburgh papers this morning, has raifed our fpirits".

The intelligence of a revolution at Conftantinople, received by the mail yeflerday, is liable to much doubt. The report, however, was thought of fufficient conlequence to be inlluded in the difpatch of the Britifh Envoy at Altona to Government. Some private letters from Hamburgh go fo far as to ftate, that Peace had been offered to Great Britain and Ruffia, by the Porte ; and that Sebaftiani had been obliged to leave Conftantinople, dreading the fury of the populace, which was vehemently directed againft French influence.

We have made fome extracts relating to the military operations in the Turkifh provinces. It appears from thefe that the offi-cial reports in the French papers of the victories obtained by the Turks over the Ruffians and Servians are a tiffue of falfehoods. So late as the end of May the Grand Vizer had not been able to advance farther than Adrianople. His army was inconfiderable, inlufficiently provided with arms, and in want of almoft every neceflary requifite for entering upon a campaign. The Ruffians, far from abandoning Wallachia, as it was ftated, had advanced their head quarters from Boucharefl to the Danube. There was every probability that Widden would be fhortly in their poffeffion, as it was approached by a ftrong Ruffian corps on one fide, while the Servians were advancing in force againft it from an oppofite direction. We with the profpect in Poland was as cheering as it is on the Banks of the Danube. As foon as the fortreffes on that river fhall have fallen, we fhall be furprifed if the war in that quarter continue a month afterwards.

We have juft been favored with the fight of a letter from Koniglberg of the 19th of June, received by a gentleman of the firft refpectability, on whom we can fully rely. It places the battle of the 14th in a very different point of view from the French account. So far from being a defeat, and in favor of the French, it ftates, with confidence, that the conlequences of the battle, which was very bloody on both fides, will in the end be to the advantage of the allies ! that only a part of the Ruffian army was engaged ; that they fell back as a matter of prudence, not from defeat ; that many French prifoners were brought into Koniglberg on that day, and that at the departure of the letter, they had no fears for the perfect fafety of the town. [If the above letter is correct, it fhews that Koniglberg was not taken on the 15th of June, and that there had been no battle to that date, fubfequent to that of the 14th. It will alfo create a belief that no negociations for a continental peace had been commenced—as fo important a fact would certainly not have been omitted.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

The Lord Chancellor, the Archbifhop of Cantebury, Lord Dartmouth and Lord Ayrefford, took their feats as Commiffioners immediately below the Throne, & the Commons being a few minutes after in attendance below the Bar, the Lord Chancellor read the following Speech :—

My Lords and Gentlemen.

We have it in command from his Majefty to ftate to you, that, having deemed it expedient to recur to the fenfe of his people, his Majefty, in conformity to his declared intention, has loft no time in cauling the prefent Parliament to be aflembled.

His Majefty has great fatisfaction in acquainting you, that, fince the events which led to the diffolution of the laft Parliament, his Majefty has received, in numerous addreffes from his fubjects, the warmeft aflurances of their affectionate attachment to his perfon and Government, and of their firm refolution to fupport him, in maintaining the juft rights of his crown, and the true principles of the Conftitution ; and he commands us to exprefs his entire confidence, that he fhall experience in all your deliberations, a determination to afford him an equally loyal zealous, and affectionate fupport under all the arduous circumftances of the prefent time.

We are commanded by his Majefty to inform you, that his Majefty's endeavours have been moft anxioufly employed for the purpofe of drawing clofer the ties by which his Majefty is connected with the Powers of the Continent : of abfifting the efforts of thofe Powers againft the ambition and oppreffion of France ; of forming fuch engagements as may enfure their continual co operation ; and of eftablifhing that mutual confidence and content, fo eflential, under any courfe of events to the reftoration of a folid and permanent peace in Europe.

It would have afforded his Majefty the greateft pleafure, to have been enabled to inform you, that the mediation undertaken by his Majefty for the purpofe of preferving peace between his Majefty's ally the Emperor of Ruffia and the Sublime Porte had proved effectual for that important object ; he deeply regrets the failure of that mediation, accompanied as it was by the difappointment of the efforts of his Majefty's fquadron in the Sea of Marmora, and followed as it has fince been by the loffes which have been fuftained by his gallant troops in Egypt.

His Majefty could not but lament the extent of hoftilities in any quarter which fhould create an diverfion in the war fo favorable to the view of France ; but lamenting it efpecially in the inftance of a Power with which his Majefty has been fo clofely connected, and which has been fo recently indebted for its protection againft the encroachments of France, in the ftgnal and fucceflful interpofition of his Majefty's arms.

His Majefty has directed us to acquaint you, that he has thought it right to adopt fuch meafures as might beft enable him, in concert with the Emperor of Ruffia, to take advantage of any favorable opportunity for bringing the hoftilities in which they are engaged againft the Sublime Porte, to a conclufion, conliftent with his Majefty's honor and the intereft of his Allies.

Gentlemen of the Houfe of Commons,

His Majefty has ordered the eftimates for the current year to be laid before you, and he relies on the tried loyalty and zeal of his faithful Commons to make fuch provifion for the public fervice, as well as for the further application of the funds who h were granted in the laft Parliament, as may appear to be neceflary. And his Majefty, bearing conftantly in mind the neceflity of a ftrict and economical adminiftration of the pecuniary refources of the country, has directed us to exprefs his hopes that you will proceed, without delay, to the purfuit of thofe enquiries connected with the public economy, which engaged the attention of the laft Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

His Majefty commands us to ftate to you, that he is deeply impreffed with the peculiar importance at the prefent moment of cherifhing a fpirit of union and harmony amongft his people ; fuch a fpirit will moft effectually promote the profperity of the country at home, will give vigor and efficacy to its councils and arms abroad, and can alone enable his Majefty with the blefling of Providence to carry on fuccefsfully the great conteft in which he is engaged, or finally to conclude it to that termination which his Majefty's moderation and juftice have ever led him to feek—a peace in which the honor and intereft of his kingdom can be fecure, and in which Europe and the world may hope for independence and repofe.

Vienna, June 6.

The Court Gazette of this day contains the following from Turkey :—

" The Grand Vizier proceeded with his advanced guard, on the 4th of May, from Adrianople, towards the Danube.

" On this occafion the fpirit of inlurrection manifefted itfelf among the troops. On the 8th of May, Huffein Effendi, Director-General for provifioning the army, was murdered in the middle of the camp ; the treafurer would have fhared the fame fate, had he not faved himfelf by flight. Radi, Pacha of Conga, was alfo murdered by his troops, while upon the march ; he was one of Peyflitoupli advorates for the new European tactics.

" The late advantages of the Servians have difpleafed the Porte in the utmoft degree, and in a fitting of the Divan, on the 11th of May, it was determined to fpare neither age nor fex among thofe rebels ; thofe that remain after battle, are to be made ll ves."

Pillau, (Pruffia) June 7.

" We have an expreft from Koniglberg, and announce that the left wing of the Ruffian Grand Army has attacked the French, on the 5th June, had killed many, prifoners (they had taken 1500, and made them retreat two German (or two English) miles. General Ney's baggage was taken."

Koniglberg, June 9.

" The Divifion of Marfhal Ney is deftroyed, and the Marfhal of Gaflock, whom the Ruffians found great Mafter of the French left many men killed, and more wounded ; many men were taken prifoners, among whom is Gen. Ney. This happened on the 5th. On the 6th, the Ruffians attacked a ver general more advantage, fo that they have now more than three thoufand prifoners, and advanced to Infterburgh."

Quebec, July 13.

A party of the Canadian Fencibles, was laft week, fent from Three Rivers in queft of two deferters from the 49th Regiment.— They difcovered them in a barn, in that diftrict, and fommoned them to furrender. One of them, of the name of Campbell, who was armed with a gun, for fome time refufed, threatening to fhoot the firft man that approached him. After a fecond fummons, when time was given him to conlider of it, he promiled to give himfelf up. In conlequence two of the party advanced, when he fired, fhot one of them dead, and fled, with his companion into the woods, where they have been fince taken, and are committed to Three Rivers gaol, for trial.

NEW YORK, Auguft 19.

By the Ship Sufan and Sarah, Capt. Henry arrived laft night from London, papers have been received to the 29th of June. The principal article in thefe papers is the King's Speech at the opening of Parliament.

His Swedifh Majefty has declared the city of Dantzic in a ftate of blockade.

The Sunday Monitor of the 28th June, ftates, that the Britifh force employed in the projected expedition to the Continent, would not leave England till government had received difpatches from Lord Cathcart, who had fet off to take the chief command of the German Legions, which had failed. In the mean while every exertion was uling to get the troops in readineis for embarkation.— The remainder of the German Legions have been embarked and failed. The firft divifion of the expedition which failed for Stralfund, was however feen off Yarmouth the 4th.

Rumours of the firft engagement between the French and Ruffians, are ftated in the fame paper—though nothing of the general action of the 14th June.

The new miniftry have a majority in the Houfe of Lords of 93 —in the Commons of 195.

General Moore was ordered to Egypt with reinforcements.

General Crawford's expedition has failed from St. Helens bound to Rio de la Plata.

HORRID MURDER BY THE INDIANS.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in Augufta, to his friend in Virginia.

" Dear Sir,

" On the night of the 3d February laft, arrived in this place in a deplorable condition, Mrs. Mary Jordan, who, in January laft, was carried away captive by the Indians. Mrs. Jordan has furnifhed me with the following melancholy account.

" On the night of the 2nd January, 1807, we were fuddenly awakened from ilumber by the hideous yells of favages, who before we could put ourfelves in a ftuation to oppofe them, fucceeded in forcing the doors of the houfe.—They were to the number of forty or fifty, frightfully painted, and armed with tomahawks and fcalping knives.—My hufband met them at the door and in their own tongue aflked them what they wanted—' the fcalps of your family ?' was their anlwer.— My hufband entreated them to have compaflion on me and his innocent children, but his entreaties availed nothing ; we were dragged naked out of the houfe, and tied feverally with cords.—By order of one who appeared to be the chief, about 20 of the Indians took charge of us, who were ordered to conduct us with all poflible difpatch to their fettlement (about 300 miles diftant,) while the remainder were left to pillage and fire the houfe.— We commenced our journey about midnight through an uncultivated wilderneis at the rate of nearly four miles an hour. If either of us through fatigue ftackened our pace, we were moft inhumanly beat and threatened with inftant death.

After a tedious travel of more than forty miles, the favages halted in a fwamp —here for the firft time from the time of our departure, we were permitted to lay down—the Indians kindled a fire on which they broiled fome bear's flefh, of which they allowed us but a fmall portion.

After they had refrefhed themfelves and extinguifhed their fires, we were again compelled to purfue our journey. We travelled until funfet, when the Indians again halted, and began to prepare a covering for themfelves for the night. My poor children complained much of their feet being fwollen, but I was not permitted to give them any relief, nor was their father allowed to difcourfe with them. As night approached, we fhook each other by the hand, expecting never again to witneis the rifing fun. Contrary to our expectations however, we had a tolerable night's reft, and on the fucceeding day, though naked and half ftarved, travelled with much more eafe than on the preceding one. The Indians occafionally allowed us a little raw food fufficiently only to keep us alive—we this day travelled according to the reckoning of the Indians, nearly 40 miles, and were about fun fet joined by the remaining favages who were left behind ; they were loaded with the fpoils of my hufband's property, among other articles, they found a keg of fpirits of which they drank plentifully, as they became intoxicated, they exercifed the more cruelly towards us—they beat my poor children fo unmercifully that they were unable to ftand on it feet the enfuing morning.—The Indians attributed their inability to wilfulnefs, and again renewed their acts of barbarity, beating them with clubs, cutting and gafhing them with their knives and fprinkling their naked bodies with brands of fire. Finding that their hellifh plans had no other effect than to render the poor unhappy fufferers lefs enabled to travel, they came to the refolution to butcher them on the fpot.

" Six holes were dug-in the earth of about five feet in depth, around of which fome dried branches of trees were placed.—My hufband at this moment filled with horror at what he expected was about to take place, broke the rope with which he was bound, and attempted to efcape from the hands of the unmerciful cannibals ! he was, however, clofely purfued, foon overtaken and brought back —he paffed me he caft his eyes towards me and fainted—in this ftuation he was placed erect in one of the holes. The woods now refounded with the heart piercing cries of my poor children—' Spare, O fpare my father !" was their cry—' have mercy on my poor children !" was the cry of their father —it availed nothing—my dear children were all placed in a ftuation fimilar to that of their father—the youngeft (only 9 years old) broke from them and ran up to me, crying " don't mammy pray don't let them kill me !"

Alas, O Heavens, what could I do ? In vain did I beg of them to let me take my dear child's place ! by force it was torn from me, in an hour when I could afford it no protection.

Having placed the poor unfortunate victims in the manner above defcribed, they tied them in a ftanding poftition by replacing the rope, which burned them nearly to their necks !

The inhuman wretches now began their hideous powows, dancing to and fro around the victims of their fortunes, which they continued about half an hour, when they communicated fire to the fatal piles ! Heavens only knows what my feelings were at this moment ? As the flames increafed the fhrieks and dying groans of my poor family were heightened ! thank Heaven their fufferings were of fhort duration ; in lefs than a quarter of an hour from the time the fire was firft communicated, their cries ceafed, and they funk into the arms of their kind deliverer.

The callous hearted wretches having fufficiently feafted their eyes with the agonies of the unfortunate fufferers, retired to regale themfelves with what liquors remained —they drank freely and foon became ftupid and fenfelefs ; with one of the tomahawks, I might with eafe have difpatched them all, but my only defire was to flee from them as quick as poflible. I fucceeded with difficulty in liberating myfelf by cutting the cords with which I was bound, on which I bent my courfe for this place. A piece of deer's flefh which I fortunately found in one of the Indian's packs, ferved me for food. I travelled only nights, in the day time concealing myfelf in thick fwamps, or hollow trees. A party of Indians paffed within a few rods of the place of my concealment the fecond day after my departure, but did not difcover me they undoubtedly were of the fame party from whom I had efcaped, in purfuit of me. Two days after I was met by an Indian of the Shawanefe nation ; he proved friendly, and conducted me to a white fettlement ; without his aflifance I muft have again fallen into the hands of my favage foes."

YORK, September 5, 1807.

We believe, the Editor of the Republican Critic, is miftaken, both with refpect to our Lieutenant Governor's Title, and his being a political writer in the Canadian Prints ; We can pofitively affure that Gentleman, that the Lieutenant Governor's difpofition is the moft conciliatory, that he efteems the American People ; and would deprecate a rupture with them, as much as any man living

We witneis with pleafure, that, His Majefty's choice of Miniflers accords fo peculiarly with the National wifh.— From fuch an Union in Council, the moft happy prefages may be drawn.

Great Britain and the United States.—The late papers fhew that the prefent Britifh Miniflers are anxious for the preferv ation of peace with America. Report ftates, that negociation on the return treaty was in favorable train ; but we fhould imagine our privacy would feel obliged to wait for the particular inftructions fent by Mr. Parvance in the Wafp. Bofl Pall.

On the great topic in controverfy between the U. States and Great Britain, we have made diligent fearch and enquiry. We cannot find or learn any thing in the proceedings of the Englifh Government, or conduct of the Englifh people, that does not bear the moft pacific afpect towards this country. A war with us is deprecated by all orders of men ;—and every thing but the facrifice of the national honour, or prefervation of the national honor, would be conceived to preferve a good underftanding. And we are affured from good authority, that all the treaty differences in difpute will be amicably and fatisfactorily adjufted, if the government of the United States will be a friendly adjuftment. —This difpofition, we are affured, did not arife from any fear of the conlequence of war but from a defire to promote the bleflings of peace and good will. Boflon Centinel

A letter from London, of July 2d, fays, that a body of merchants had waited on Mr. Monroe to enquire whether he conceived it fafe to continue to make fhipments to America. He replied in the affirmative ; and added that a treaty comformable to his inftructions from Mr Jefferfon was progreffing, and he had no doubt would be agreed upon in a few days. This information proceeds from a highly refpectable fource Mer. Adv.

EXTRACTS.

To the Memory of the

RIGHT HONORABLE

WILLIAM PITT AND VISCOUNT NELSON.

" Fortunati Ambo! si quid mea carmina possunt,
" Nulla dies unquam memori vos eximet ævo."

Oh happy pair! if verse like mine can give
Eternal fame, for ever shall ye live.

Now mourn indeed, those infulated Land,
Where freedom makes her himself — final ftand!
Loft, Loft to ev'ery ear the fpear and fhield—
Loft to the Country—Hero of the Field—
NELSON and PITT! the Glory of the Age!
The bold Warrior and the wiseft Sage!
The world's Wonder! Pitt's Ev'ry Nation's Pride!
The State's Sheet-Anchor and the Helm's fure Guide.

But mourn not, void of hope; for why defpair?
Britannia ftill in Heaven's peculiar care,
Yet many a PITT with Patriot Zeal fhall fpring
To cour'fe her beloved—his gracious King;
Yet many a NELSON on the enfeigned Main,
Shall ftr the defiants of France and Spain;
Contending Parties cordially unite,
T' illume the Senate or conduct the fight:
While Albion ftall exchange her tears for fmiles,
And reign unrival'd Empreis of the Iles!

Hiftory to late pofterity fhall tell
How NELSON fought—how gloriouſly he fell;
What honors Britain to her Champion paid,
What funeral pomp aton'd his mighty fhade.
Shall not like honors to the grave attend
The dear remains of his departed friend?
(For what he well performed his pattern plain'd—
This the keen head, and That th' effective hand!

No—On his Tomb this ſimple Truth be writ;
" Here lies the mortal part of WILLIAM PITT:"
Fame's bright Talifman, while millions gaze,
Shall make each letter like a Sunbeam blaze;
Nor ſhall the ſuffrage of that Name expire,
Till Trebia are burſting and the world's on fire!

WHILST fortune ſmiles, and plenty fills your board,
Whilſt copious draughts your cheering vanity afford,
Whilſt roſy health ſupports the human frame,
Whilſt credit laſts, and ſtill exiſts your fame,
Whilſt you're a plenty, and have cath to ſpend,
So long you're known, ſo long you have a friend.
But change the ſcene—let fickle fortune frown,
You ſtand forſaken, and alas unknown!
Let wretched poverty and hunger preſs,
Let want hang out the enſigns of diſtreſs!
Let fore affliction ſink your feeble frame,
Let cruel ſlander wound your honeſt fame;
Let neighbors ſlight ye, and let creditors fail,
Let ſheriffs come, and creditors aſſail;
Where's then your friends? alas! you ſearch in vain;
Self intereſt ſways, unheeded you complain.
Alas! how oft, in friendſhip's garb array'd,
Deception triumphs, baſeſt man's betray'd;
Pretended friends in ev'ry clime abound,
But real friends are " rare as comets" found.
Ye who pretend the human heart to know,
Shew me a friend, and I'll an angel ſhow

Thoughts on Popularity.

FAME is ſo capricious a goddeſs, and I muſt own I have ſuch an indifferent opinion of the vulgar, that I am led to ſuſpect that merit which raiſes their ſhout; at leaſt I am certain to find thoſe great, and ſometimes good men, who find ſatisfaction in ſuch acclammations, made worſe by it; and hiſtory has too frequently taught me, that the head which has grown this day giddy with the roar of the million, has the very next been fixed on a pole.

An inſtance of this occurred as Alexander VI. was entering a little town in the neighborhood of Rome, which had been juſt evacuated by the enemy. He perceived the townſmen buſy in the market-place in pulling down from a gibbet a figure which had been deſigned to repreſent himſelf. There were ſome alſo knocking down a neighboring ſtatue of one of the Orſini family, with whom he was at war, in order to put Alexander's effigy in its place. It is poſſible that a man who knew leſs of the world, would have condemned the adulation of thoſe barefaced flatterers; but Alexander ſeemed pleaſed with it at firſt, and turning to Borgia, his ſon, ſaid with a ſmile, Videt, mi fili, quam leve diſcrimen pulchrum inter patrum. "You ſee my ſon, the ſmall difference between a gibbet and a ſtatue." If the great could be taught any leſſon, this might ſerve to teach them upon how weak a foundation their glory ſtands, which is built upon popular applauſe; for, as ſuch praiſe what ſeems like merit, they as quickly condemn what has only the appearance of guilt.

The report of James II. abdicating the throne of Great Britain, occaſioned the lighting of many bon-fires, a ſecond report of his eſtabliſhment upon it the next day, produced the ſame effects.

The following ſtory is much to my preſent purpoſe. A Chineſe, who had long ſtudied the works of Confucius, who knew the characters of fourteen thouſand words, and could read a great part of every book that came in his way, once took it into his head to travel into Europe, and obſerve the cuſtoms of a people whom he thought not very much inferior, even to his own countrymen, in the arts of refining upon every paſſion. Upon his arrival at Amſterdam, his paſſion for letters naturally led him to a bookſeller's ſhop; and, as he could ſpeak a little Dutch, he civilly aſked the bookſeller for the works of the immortal Xixofou. The bookſeller aſſured him he had never heard the book mentioned before. "What have you never heard of that immortal poet?" returned the other much ſurpriſed, "that light of the eyes, that ſun of kings, that roſe of perfection! I could have ſuppoſed you know nothing of the immortal Fipfihihi, ſecond couſin to the moon?" "Nothing at all, indeed Sir," returned the other. "Alas!" cries our traveller, "to what purpoſe, then, has one of theſe ſellers to death, and the other offered himſelf up as a ſacrifice to the Tartar enemy, to gain a renown which has never travelled beyond the precincts of China?"

So prevalent is this, that there is ſcarce a village in Europe, and not one univerſity, that is not thus furniſhed with its little great men. The head of a petty corporation, who oppoſes the deſigns of a prince, who would tyranniſically force his ſubjects to ſave their beſt cloaths for Sunday; the puny pedant, who finds, who undiſcovered property in the potype, or deſcribes an unheeded proceſs in the ſkeleton of a mole; and whole mind, like his microſcope, perceives nature only in detail; the rhymer, who makes ſmooth verſes, and paints to our imagination, when he ſhould only ſpeak to our hearts: all equally fancy themſelves walking forward to immortality, and deſpiſe the crowd behind them to look on. The crowd takes them at their word. Patriot, Philoſopher, and Poet, are thruſted in their train. "Where was there ever ſo much merit ſeen? No times ſo important as our own; ages, yet unborn, ſhall gaze with wonder and applauſe!" To ſuch praiſe, the impatient bigotry moves forward, buſtling and ſwelling, and aptly compared to a puddle in a ſtorm.

How vain and unſtable is popularity! I have lived to ſee Admirals and Generals who once had crowds hollowing after them wherever they went, who were praiſed by newſpapers and magazines, thoſe echoes of the voice of the vulgar, and yet they have long ſunk into merited obſcurity, with ſcarce even an epitaph left to flatter. A few years ago the herring fiſhery employed all Grub-ſtreet; it was the topic in every coffee-houſe, and the burden of every ballad. We were to dry up oceans of gold from the bottom of the ſea; we were to ſupply all Europe with herrings upon our own terms. At preſent we hear no more of all this. We have diſhed up very little gold that I can learn; nor do we furniſh the world with herrings, as was expected. Let us wait but a few years longer, and we ſhall find all our expectations in herring-fiſhery.

I ſhould not at all wonder if the caprice of the populace which made the ſkies ring with the name of a Keppel, ſhould repeat, if poſſible, louder huzzas at the advancement of his adverſary.

SCOTS COLONY.

An article in the Foreign papers dated St. Peterſburgh, May 4, ſays:—" His Imperial Majeſty has been pleaſed to grant a very remarkable charter to the colony of Scotchmen who have been ſettled for the laſt four years in the mountains of Caucaſſus. The charter ſets forth the privileges accorded to the Scotchmen, who form a detached ſettlement in a diſtrict ſo thinly peopled, and bordering on the territories of ſo many uncivilized tribes of Mahometans and Heathens, are intended to increaſe their activity in extending trade and manufactures, and to place them, in reſpect to their immunities, on the ſame footing with the Evangelical Society in Sarepta. They are to have the requiſite additional allotments of land as near as poſſible to the village which they have already founded. Of theſe his Majeſty ſecures to them the perpetual poſſeſſion, promiſing that no part of the tract allotted to their community ſhall ever paſs by ſale, mortgage, or bill of emption, or any other pretence, into the occupation of ſtrangers. They are exempted from all imports or burthens for thirty years; at the end of which period they are, inſtead of poll-tax, to pay their proportion of land tax, but to be exempt from all other imports, from the civil and military ſervice of the ſtate, and from the billeting of ſoldiers in any of their villages. The free exerciſe of their religion is confirmed to them, and the internal rules and police of the ſettlement ſhall forever be adminiſtered by a magiſtrate choſen from among themſelves. His paſſports will be a ſufficient authority for them to travel and traffick in every part of the Empire, but not for leaving the country. The chief Magiſtrates is not, without ſpecial permiſſion, to admit to the privileges of a colonift any Ruſſian ſubject, but is at liberty to receive as ſettlers, Kabardans, Circaſſians, and every other deſcription of Mahometans and Heathens, being freemen, and taking the oath of allegiance to his Maj. ty. They may alſo become converts to the religion of the Colony. The Coloniſts may alſo buy and keep Kabardan, Circaſſian and other Mahometan and Heathen ſlaves. They may freely exerciſe every ſort of trade, art or manufacture and within their own limits, diſtill and vend their ſpirituous liquors. The Colony is placed under the ſpecial protection of the civil Government of Caucaſſus."

July 2.

In the afternoon of yeſterday, a general ſunſhine burſt into the gloom.—Diſpatches were laid to have been received from Lord Hutchinſon, repreſenting that the battle was ſo obſtinate, that both parties remained after the battle nearly in the ſame poſition as before it, and that it was to be conſidered as a battle in which neither could claim a decided victory. In the evening we were favored with a peruſal of ſome letters received by a Nobleman of illuſtrious rank, which ſtated, that no confirmation had been received at Hamburgh of the rumour of the capture of Konigſberg—that on the 22d and 23d inſt. ſeveral couriers had arrived direct from the French army, but that the intelligence both by them was not ſuffered to tranſpire—that it was reported another battle had been fought on the 16th, in which the French had been beaten.

British Houſe of Commons, July 1.

Vaccination.—Mr. Huſkiſſon reminded the houſe, that an addreſs had been voted to his majeſty in the laſt ſeſſion, on the motion of the noble lord (lord H. Petty) who was then one of his majeſty's miniſters, that he would be graciouſly pleaſed to direct the Royal College of Phyſicians of London, to inquire into, and report the ſtate of Vaccination in the United Kingdom. That reſpectable body had enquired into the ſubject, with all the zeal and diligence which the importance of the ſubject required, and had confirmed the ſtatement of the utility of this valuable diſcovery. Men of ſome liberal education as thoſe who compoſed the college, muſt have been free from the influence of any prejudice againſt an improvement in the practice of the profeſſion they belonged to, but muſt be ſuppoſed at the ſame time to have inveſtigated ſo very important a ſubject with all that jealous caution which the nature of ſuch a diſcovery called for. They had made this enquiry; and he was happy to ſtate to the houſe, that the reſult of their inveſtigation was ſuch as to warrant them in making a report, that vaccination was an effectual and certain preventative againſt the Small Pox. It was under theſe circumſtances of the higheſt importance, that their report ſhould be given to the public, not only for the benefit of this empire, but for the advantage of the whole human race.—He ſhould at preſent confine himſelf to moving that an Addreſs ſhould be preſented to his Majeſty, that he would be graciouſly pleaſed to direct "that there be laid before the houſe, a copy of the Report of the Royal College of Phyſicians reſpecting the ſtate of Vaccination in the United Kingdom."

Frankfort, June 22.

It is aſſured that in conſequence of a private treaty, his Eminence the Prince Primate has ceded the city of Ratiſbon to his Majeſty the King of Bavaria. The ſame advice ſay the Prince Primate will be indemnified by an extent of territory much to his convenience.

Letters from Berlin ſay that they have received there the news that the anſwer of the Engliſh Government, relative to the propoſitions which have been made it for opening of negotiations of peace, is at length arrived at the Ruſſian and Pruſſian quarters general, and that it had been tranſmitted to the Emperor Napoleon. It is added that the Cabinet of London declares in this anſwer, that it is ready to enter upon negociations in concert with its allies—that it relinquiſhes the manner of opening theſe negociations entirely to the pleaſure and will of the Emperor of Ruſſia. It is aſſerted alſo, that a correſpondence relative to the important object is eſtabliſhed between the Court of Rudberg, the Ruſſian miniſter of foreign affairs who is at Konigſberg, and the Prince of Benevento.

It is known beſides that the direct communications between the two Quarters General are very frequent. The French and Ruſſian aid-de camps daily paſs from one army to the other with diſpatches. In general, all theſe circumſtances are conſidered at Berlin as being of favorable augur to the iſſue of the negotiations; the more ſo, ſince it is known that the Plenipotentiary of the meditating power, Mr. de Saint Vincent, is expected from Warſaw at the French General Quarters.

The greateſt uncertitude prevails reſpecting the opening of the military operations. The ſituation of things has not undergone the leaſt change ſince the reduction of Dantzick. The different corps of the army remain quiet at their cantonments, and the Emperor continued at Dantzick at the departure of the laſt poſt.

MONTE VIDEO.

Extract of a letter dated March 22.

"Every thing remains in profound myſtery in this quarter. The Spaniards at Buenos Ayres are diſtracted by party ſpirit, which appears momentarily likely to burſt into a flame. A few days ſince they attempted to detain by force a boat belonging to his Majeſty's ſhip Charwell, having at the ſame time a flag of truce flying, and the matter proceeded to ſuch lengths as to occaſion blows to paſs between the Spaniſh officers. Liniers, a Frenchman, commander in the navy, is Governor of Buenos Ayres, and the Viceroy is in the fortreſs, ſtrongly guarded. Mordelle, another Frenchman, who, from having loſt an arm, was better known by the name of Manco, and was an artful villain, was unqueſtionably killed during the ſtorming of the town. We are in an anxious ſtate of expectancy relative to Buenos Ayres. From the circumſtance of ſeveral officers having lately been up with flags of truce, we may form an opinion ſomething is on the tapis.—Again, from the circumſtance of the 9th regiment of light dragoons, who arrived ſome time ſince, not being yet diſembarked; from ſeveral ſchooners and gun-boats being fitted out, and battering cannon and ſhores, &c. being ſhipped on board tranſports, and tranſports got ready for the immediate reception of troops, it is natural to conclude offenſive meaſures is to be adopted.——It is utterly impoſſible for veſſels, even frigates, to proceed higher up the river.——Of our proſpect of ſucceſs, it would be wrong to haz rd a doubt.——One thouſand men, with the ſupport of the men of war, would be ſufficient to retain Monte Video, which would with the brigade of ſeamen and royal marines, leave near five thouſand five or ſix hundred, ſay near ſix thouſand diſpoſable forces, to act againſt Buenos Ayres.—Exclu-ſive of an armed mob or rabble, divided into ſeditious parties, not more than 2000 or 1500 regular troops are in Buenos Ayres. The inhabitants of Monte Video are daily returning to their houſes, and begin to feel full confidence in the Engliſh.——Our commander, Sir Samuel Achmuty, is much beloved, and has proved himſelf worthy the command entruſted to him. The Brigade of cavalry, under the command of the hon. W. Lumley, remains in camp about a mile from the town. Several troops of the 17th and 20th and 21ſt, are mounted, but, contrary to expectation, very indifferently; however, horſes are daily procured. Our army is in general, very healthy, and our wounded recovering; it is a charming climate, and very plentiful. Our beef, very good meat, is about a farthing per pound, of a dollar the carcaſe; fiſh is in abundance; poultry is beginning to find its way to market, but has hitherto been ſcarce and dear. Our Engliſh merchants are daily arriving, but complain at preſent of a glut of European goods; however, very ſhortly, when an intercourſe with Buenos Ayres, and the interior is accompliſhed, an extenſive and moſt lucrative trade muſt be opened.

"We are extremely active in ſhipping the prize goods, of which very large quantities continue hourly to be diſcovered on board of prize ſhips, fifty ſeven of which were found in the harbor, and have been moſt ſcrupulouſly examined, as well to determine their qualities as to aſcertain their cargoes and to prevent any concealment. We underſtand they will proceed ſhortly, under convoy of the Lancaſter to England.

"2 The Olympia cutter has arrived, and a multiplicity of reports are in circulation.—Colonel Craufurd, with 300 troops, may be hourly expected.—London Paper.

National Civility.—Capt. Woodriffe, who ſo gallantly defended the Calcutta, belonging to the Eaſt India Company, and who was taken priſoner and ſent to Verdun, has recently returned to England. The manner of his enlargement is ſingular. Capt. W. had made ſeveral applications to Talleyrand to procure his releaſe, but without ſucceſs. Some time in the laſt month, however, he received an order ſigned by Bonaparte, in Poland, directing him to proceed immediately to England and to take the route of St. Maloes, a town which no Engliſhman is permitted to enter. On Captain W's. arrival at that place, he found his letter forwarded, by the French Government, which had been directed to Verdun. At St. Maloes Capt. W. proceeded to engage a veſſel, or cartel, to convey him to England, for which he expected to pay 40 or 50 guineas; but was then told that a veſſel was provided by the French Government, free of every expence whatever. Our Government, not to be out done in this unexpected generoſity on the part of the enemy, immediately releaſed a French officer of equal rank with Capt. W. who has been ſince returned to France, on terms of equal liberality. ib.

Miranda once more. This gentleman, who figured for ſome time ſo largely in our papers, has ſcarcely been mentioned ſince his failure on the Spaniſh main. It is ſtated in a late paper that he is ſtill at Trinidad, and profeſſes an intention of renewing his attempt. as ſoon as he obtains a ſuitable force from England.—Briſtol Pal.

A Mr. Gilleſpie, of England, has invented what he calls a Revolving Impregnable Battery. We have ſeen no deſcription of it; but it is ſaid a few men in the Battery would be ſufficient to work it, who, while remaining in perfect ſecurity themſelves, would inevitably cauſe the utter deſtruction of an invading foe! ib.

CHARACTER OF LOUIS XII.

KING OF FRANCE.

It is the unanimous opinion of the French hiſtorians that more royal virtues, with fewer defects, were never more conſpicuous in any of their princes, than in this monarch. France was never happier, richer, or more tranquil than under his reign. Juſtice was never better adminiſtered, wiſer laws were never enacted, and ſcarcely any ever ſo well executed. Military diſcipline was never ſo exact or ſo ſevere; but at the ſame time the troops were punctually paid. In ſucceeding time it was conſidered a grievance to quarter them in the Provinces, but in the time of this Prince, the people requeſted they might be quartered among them.—His family and his court, the nobility and people, equally admired him, and called him their Father; the title with which he was moſt pleaſed, and which he made it the ſtudy of his life to deſerve. He began his reign by abolishing imports; and at the time of his death, he had diminiſhed half of them. He was obliged ſome times to uſe extraordinary taxes, but when he ſigned the edicts, it did it with tears. His misfortunes endeared him to his ſubjects; for he might have maintained his conqueſts in Italy, if he would have raiſed large ſums upon his people. But he thought any loſs light, when compared with that of the loſs of their affections. He was thought a little too ſaving, and in the beginning of his reign, his ſubjects took the liberty of expreſſing this in Satires, and even of ridiculing it on the ſtage. The King knew it very well; but it gave him no offence. He ſaid upon that occaſion what ought ever to be remembered; "I had rather my ſubjects laugh at my parſimony than weep at their own diſtreſs." How are times changed!!!

Thomas Ballie, the Iriſh rebel, after an impriſonment of nine een months in the Temple at Paris, has recently been eſcorted by the Gens d'armes, who never loſt ſight of him until he was ſhipped to Bordeaux for America; and very many of his countrymen, of the ſame deſcription, have lately taken he ſame voyage. Lon. Pap.

The following conciſe and whimſical account of England was given by Count Oxenſtern, after his departure from London: "England is really the queen of iſles—the metropolis and arſenal of Neptune—it is the treaſury of Europe—the kingdom of Bacchus—the ſchool of Epicurus—the academy of Venus—he country of Mars—the receſs of Minerva—the ſupport of Holland—the ſcourge of France—he purgatory of thoſe who are advocates for ſlavery—and the paradiſe of thoſe who are lovers of liberty."

ODE TO POPULARITY.

O Popularity, thou giddy thing!
What grace or profit doft thou bring?
Thou art not honefty, thou art not fame;
I cannot call thee by a worthy name,
To fay I hate thee were not true;
Contempt is properly thy due,
I cannot love thee and defpife thee too.

Thou art no patriot, but the varieft cheat
That ever traffick'd in deceit;
A ftate empiric, bellowing loud
Freedom and plenty to the mobbing crowd;
And what can'ft thou, if thou can'ft raife
Illuminations and bonfires,
Tho' heat the city flank in one bright blaze?

A patriot! no; for thou doft hold in hate
The very peace and welfare of the ftate;
When anarchy affaults the Sovereign's throne
Then is thy day, the night thy own;
Then is thy triumph, when the fon
Levels fome dark inhidious blow,
Or ftrong rebellion lays the country low.

Then can'ft affect humility, to hide
Some crep arrear of monftrous pride;
Connivance and charity pretend,
For compaffing fome private end;
And in a canting converfation note
Long fcripture paffages can'ft quote,
When perfecution rankles in thy throat.

Thou haft no fenfe of nature at thy heart,
No ear for fcience, and no eye for art,
Yet coolly intrify doft decide at once
This man a wit, and that a dunce;
And (ftrange to tell) how'er unjuft,
We take thy dictates upon truft,
For if the world will be deceiv'd, it muft.

In truth and juftice thou haft no delight,
Virtue thou doft not know by fight;
But, as the chemift by his ftill,
From drofs and dregs a fpirit can diftill,
So from the paffions, or the ftews,
Bullies, blafphemers, cheats, or Jews,
Shall turn to heroes, if they ferve thy views.

Thou doft but make a ladder of the mob,
Why-why to climb into fome courtly job;
There fafe repofing, warm and fnug,
Thou anfwer'ft with a patriot ftrug,
Miferants, begone! who cares for you,
Ye bafe-born, brawling, clamorous crew,
You've ferv'd my turn, and, vagabonds, adieu!

MESSRS. PRINTERS,

IT has often been remarked that the generality of females have many admirers, and at the fame time, few or no lovers; and they wonder at it:—but the reafon is obvious if they thought.—but thinking is become quite unfafhionable. "Ah!" find a venerable Virgin, lamenting the degeneracy of the age, "Courting is nothing to what it was when I was young! The Ilirts now-a-days, make the fellows fo fawcy, that there is hardly to be found a refpectable lover."

The obfervation was juft.—The woman of the laft age were more refpectable, becaufe they were more reftrved; for want of a proper referve, they are treated with indifference, which is nearly allied to contempt; they make themfelves too cheap to keep up their conf equence, without which, they can never be refpectable.

Flirtifh, ofpecially, a woman muft repel before fhe can attract. All this advice muft ftand oddly to a female ear! but fhe who laughs at it, pays no compliment to her underftanding.

Ovid, who knew human nature tolerably well, difcovered not a little penetration, when he made Daphne fly to laft from her laureled lover, for his paffion was increafed by the purfuit.

Our modern Daphne's, Meffrs. Printers, are quite another fort of people. Inftead of flying from, they run into the arms of their Apollo's, and are afterwards furprifed that they grow cool to their charms. Lovers are like fportfmen, to whom the poffeffion of the game is nothing to the pleafures of the chafe. If women would ftudy lefs to pleafe, they would give more pleafure; this is a paradox, which thofe for whom I throw out thefe reflections cannot comprehend, and until they can, they will never make their fortunes by their faces. The rofes of youth are not long in bloom; and when time has torn them away, there's an end of love at firft fight, and no fmall fhare of the fweets, by their manner of fetting themfelves off, chiefly to depend.

The modern hoe ladies carry their heads well, I muft own, and have fine fweeping trails; but when a man of fenfe would chufe a wife, he expects other good qualities than thofe which might well recommend a ftuffe!

To be ftared at a few fcabies, and neglected, and in a few more fink into oblivion, is the lot of a thoufand fawcy girls, who have only external appearances to recommend them; without prudence and deference, even the moft fubftantial ornaments, though they excite admiration, will never produce esteem.

Prudence is fuperior to Pearls, and there is no kind of comparifon between diamonds and difcretion. Fools may be caught with the firft, but the man, worth having, will make the gem the object of his attention.

" What is the world to them,
" Its pomp, it's pleafures, and it's nonfenfe all!
" Who in each other clafp whatever fair
" High fancy forms, or lavifh hearts can with?"

BATCHELOR.

Important in Aftronomy.—We announce from a refpectable fource, the difcovery of another Planet, by Olbers, a German Aftronomer. A gentleman in Boſton received the information from the obfervatory of Marſeilles, where they had not obferved it, becaufe they had not yet the elements of its orbit. This is the fecond planet difcovered by Olbers. The firſt he named Pallas, though a great many aftronomers called it Olbers. This information will doubtleſs be received with as much pleaſure as admiration; and the diſcovery will confer additional luſtre on the name of Olbers, already ſo famous.—N. Y. Spectator.

Boſton, September 2.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

By the arrival of the ſhip Sally, capt. Lewis, 42 days from Liverpool, we have received our London files complete to the 17th July. They furniſh much highly intereſting news; and we have endeavored to give under our foreign head, a general ſketch.

An Armiſtice was agreed upon between the Emperors Napoleon and Alexander, at Tilſit, the 21ſt June; and Treaties of Peace are ſaid to have been ſigned between Ruſſia, Pruſſia, and France, the 28th of the ſame month. The negociation had been conducted with the ſame ſpeed as the marſh of the armies of thoſe powers. The particulars of the negociation, and the terms of the treaties, have not tranſpired;—except indeed, the reported ones mentioned in the Rotterdam article.

The report of a revolution in Turkey is confirmed;—Muſtapha IV. a couſin of Selim, has ſucceeded to the throne.

The Britiſh were apprehenſive that Denmark would be compelled by France to ſhut up the Sound; and were about ſending a ſtrong fleet into the Baltic, to ſhew both Denmark and France that neither of them have the right nor the power to exclude her.

The expeditions which had failed from England for Stralſund, had not been recalled.

The Waſp, which carried out Mr. Purviance, with the rejected Britiſh treaty, from this country, had arrived at Yarmouth; and Mr. Purviance reached London the 15th July. We ſee no particular obſervation, either in the Britiſh Parliament, or of the London Editors, which tend to ſhew otherwiſe than that the negociation of our miniſters was in amicable train.

The French army occupies all the Thalweg of the Niemen, ſo that there only remains to the King of Pruſſia, the town and territories of Memel.

From the Mercantile Advertiſer.

Capt. Bourne, who left Montevideo on the 23d of June, informs us, that the Britiſh fleet, with a reinforcement under Admiral Murry, from the Cape of Good Hope, conſiſting of 5000 troops, ſailed from Montevideo two days before the Whampoa, for Buenos Ayres, for the purpoſe of retaking that place, which they expected to accomplith with little trouble.

The whole force was ſaid to conſiſt of 10,000 men, under the command of Gen. Whitelocke.

The following articles are copied from a file of Montevideo papers to the 20th of June, with which captain Bourne has favored the Editor of the Mercantile Advertiſer:—

MONTEVIDEO, June 23.

Head Quarters, Montevideo, June 19, 1807.

Laſt night a diſpatch was received by his Excellency, Lieut. Gen. Whitelocke, from Col. Pack, commanding the troops at Colonia, with the important and gratifying intelligence, that he had obtained a complete victory over the Spaniſh army, conſiſting of upwards of two thouſand men, under the command of col. Elio, and ſtrongly poſted at St. Pedro.

The enemy had his front and flanks, ſtrongly ſecured by a deep and marſhy river, and defended by ſix pieces of cannon. The difficulties of the poſition were, however, overcome by the bravery of the Britiſh troops, conſiſting only of nine hundred and fifty men; and they completely ſucceeded in routing the enemy, with the loſs of one hundred and twenty killed, and 3 great many wounded, leaving in our poſſeſſion, 2 ſtandard, ſix pieces of ordnance, near three hundred ſtand of arms, with a quantity of ammunition and ordnance ſtores, and one hundred and five priſoners.

The ſecond in command, (Lieut. Colonel Juan Baptiſt Raymond) one Major, two captains, and two lieutenants, are among the priſoners.

The Britiſh in this affair, had only two men killed, and twenty-three wounded.—But we are ſorry to add, that Major Gardner and aſſiſtant Surgeon Turner were ſlightly wounded by the explofion of an ammunition cart, after the action was over.

The extent of France (as eſtimated before the revolution) is, in Engliſh acres 95,000,000; and before the revolution, the country was ſtated to contain 28,000,000 of inhabitants. Great Britain and Ireland contained as many inhabitants, in proportion to their extent, (and this proportion at leaſt, they are capable of maintaining) the population of thoſe Iſlands would amount to four millions and one third more than its preſent number.—The population of the Britiſh Colonies is very great:—The dominions of the Britiſh crown in Aſia alone, contain not ſhort of double the number of the inhabitants, that conſtitute the Britiſh and Iriſh nations.

In March laſt, the Britiſh navy in commiſſion, conſiſted of 135 full of the line;—13 ſhips from 50 to 44 guns;—135 frigates;—52 ſloops of war;—and 182 gun-briggs and ſmaller veſſels; amounting to 637 veſſels of war;—and theſe 542 were in ſea:—and the whole amount of the public ſhips of war, at home and repairing, was 738.—In the beginning of the year 1805, the Britiſh navy conſiſted of 628 veſſels of war of every deſcription.

HENRY THE FOURTH OF FRANCE.

"No perſon," ſays Perefixe, "was ſo fitly fed with the peace of Vervins as this excellent Prince, who had this ſpeech continually in his mouth. "That, it being contrary to the laws of nature and of Chriſtianity to make war but for the love of war, a Chriſtian Prince ought never to refuſe to make peace, unleſs it was entirely to his diſadvantage." The Duke of Sully aſked this prince one day, what revenue his ſubjects were worth to him. "Exactly what I pleaſe, Sir," replied Henry; "becauſe, pleaſing the good will of my ſubjects, I can have whatever I pleaſe from them; and if God is ſo good as to continue my life a few years longer, I will ſo manage matters that every peaſant in my dominions, ſhall have his fowl in his pot on a Sunday; and I ſhall be rich enough, without applying to them for money, to pay my ſoldiers who are to keep in order all thoſe who ſubmit to my authority." To the intendants and governors of provinces, he uſed occaſionally to write: "Take great care of my people, they are my children; God has entruſted them to my keeping; I am reſponſible to him for them. "One of the great changes that was made in France," ſays Peefefix, "by the firſt eſtabliſhment of this great Prince upon his throne, was the abolition of idleneſs. All the drones in his kingdom," adds he "were turned into bees, and made excellent honey. Idleneſs became diſgraceful, and was looked upon as a crime, in the true ſpirit of the old proverb, which ſays that "idleneſs is the mother of all vice." A mind that will not like pains to occupy itſelf ſeriouſly, is uſeleſs to itſelf and pernicious to the public; for this reaſon the officers of the police, to be their ſearch after the idle and the diſſolute, the vagabonds, and men without any regular calling, and ſent them off to ſerve his majeſty in his galleys, and obliged them to work in the very dreſſe of themſelves."

ORIGIN OF THE GAME OF CHESS.

A young and mighty monarch of India was remarkable for a certain ferocity, a certain haughtineſs, which threatened deſtruction both to himſelf and his ſubjects. It was in vain to repreſent to him, that all the ſtrength, all the power of a ſoveteign, depend upon the love of his ſubjects: every remonſtrance of this kind was the certain forfeiture of a cruel death to the author of it.

At length a certain Brahman, in the view of inculcating to him this truth, without expoſing himſelf to the ſame danger, contrived the game of chefs; in which the king, though the moſt important of all the men, is yet unable to attack his enemies, or even to defend himſelf from them, without the aſſiſtance of his ſubjects. Struck with this uſeful leſſon, the monarch preſently relinquiſhed his former conduct, and thereby prevented much impending miſchief. In order to evince his gratitude, he left it to the Brahman to name his reward; and he deſired to have as many grains of corn as every cheſt in the exchequer would hold, each grain to be multiplied ſixty four times progreſſively. The king readily promiſed to grant all his demand. Upon calculation, however, it was found that not all the dominions of his majeſty were ſufficient to fulfil his engagement. On this, the politic pher took occaſion to repreſent to his ſovereign, of what importance it is to kings to remain confidently upon their guard againſt thoſe who ſurround them; and what danger there is, if their beſt intentions ſhould be abuſed.

IMPORTANCE OF GIBRALTAR.

The very name of Gibraltar revives in the breaſt of every Britiſh tar the ſpark of military ardor. It is juſtly conſidered as the brighteſt jewel of the Britiſh crown; which no boon, however ſplendid and valuable, could induce the nation inglorioufly to barter. The poſſeſſion of this fortreſs yields indeed to Great Britain, not only ſignal political, but great commercial advantages. It is reckoned by Europe the key of the Mediterranean ocean, and conſequently of ſingular benefit in carrying on the trade of the Levant. In its remaining ſubject to the Britiſh Empire, therefore, not only the Britiſh nation, but every northern maritime power of Europe, is greatly intereſted; for under the batteries of the garriſon, the veſſels of all nations find at all times a ſafe and ready aſylum, either in their diſtreſs to, or egreſs from the Mediterranean ſea.

Were this fortreſs ſubject to Spain, there can be no doubt but the caſe would be very different. The impoſition of heavy duties at the port of Gibraltar would have a fatally deſtructive operation upon the trade of the Mediterranean; and every maritime nation would be, with reſpect to that trade, at all times in the power of Spain. To the poſſeſſion of Gibraltar there are therefore attached great commercial benefits as well as military ſplendor; the united conſiderations of which muſt at all times ſtimulate the nation to preſerve it as one of the moſt valuable appendages to the Britiſh Empire.

FOR THE YORK GAZETTE.

A caution to amateurs in the fine arts.

THE preſent unſettled ſtate of Europe, having deprived me of a wiſhed for opportunity of viſiting the Continent, on has taught me to hold in the higheſt eſtimation; I have been induced to make a tour of this Weſtern world; chance conducted me, the other day, into an auction room, where for rents were the only articles telling.—I, however, ſoon diſcovered them to be a collection of caricatures, maſticully deſigned and portrayed by the pen it of poetic ſpirit, and was juſt quitting the room, when the collection of the Patriotiſm in Roman feeling".—My veneration for any thing Roman, induced me to bid up for this gem, as the auctioneer emphatically termed the Picture. At laſt it was knocked down to me, and I was permitted to bear off my prize thro' the crowd, which attended the ſale, with a kind of affability and condeſcenſion, bordering, as I then thought, rather a hit upon the knee! This idea touched my pride as an amateur, and therefore, the moment I got to my lodgings, I examined my purchaſe with attention, and ſuſpecting it was not right, I acquired a compoſer which ſoftens diſcoloured drawings has preſented to me, whole ſtighteſt touch he aſſures me, would infallibly bring out the genuine lines and true outlines of the paintings of every deſcription. My Patriot ſoon paſſed my teſt over the canvas half a dozen times, when I diſcovered Patriotiſm in Roman feeling to be a mere dash in fine, artfully laid on in glowing colours, to catch the eye of the multitude, and ſerved as a cover to another Portrait, which now appeared conſpicuous enough on the canvas. This ſecond picture, (a modern Republican Patriot) I ſhall forbear deſcribing, leſt my friends are too benevolence. Yet how to account for my Patriotiſm! my Gem! diſappearing ſo ſuddenly, was to me an inexplicable enigma, a deceptio viſus entirely beyond my comprehenſion. At length, however, at the diſcovery of a Patriot ſo ſome former delufion lurking behind, I once more had recourſe to my teſt; on this ſecond eſſay, the features of my modern dignified character, underwent a remarkable alteration indeed, for inſtead of Juſtice and benevolence, I now beheld the countenance of an ambitious and diſappointed ſpirit, artfully tempered with a ſhade of adulation, and ſtudied to court Popularity, for no other purpoſe than that of ſupporting his tottering fortunes & fame. Upon a third trial of my teſt, I found thoſe laſt were the genuine tints and real outlines I had paid my money for, as the colours now appeared fixed & permanent. In order however, to leave neither doubt or perplexity hanging over my Picture, I even analyſed the very colours themſelves on which it had been painted, this proceſs proved, that inſtead of thoſe genuine true colors, which in the hands of a correct and chaſte painter, would produce the happy & deſirable effect of harmonizing and uniting, my Patriot or Patriotiſm in Roman feeling, had actually been touched with Cauſtic, flamed with Ink and daubed over with a liquid compoſition of Sulphur, Soot and Charcoal. Diſguſted and mortified at having been the dupe of my own vanity in commencing Amateur in the Fine Arts, I haſtily threw my Inflamable Picture into the fire, at the ſame time, ſecretly congratulating myſelf, that no other perſon had conſidered me that real Patriotiſm is a Gem which can neither be bought or ſold.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

Meſſrs. Printers,

By giving the following a place in your next Gazette you will oblige a conſtant reader.— QUERY.

Why were not the initials of Mr. Q. St. G. inſerted in the black letter'd liſt which ſo gracefully embelliſhed the laſt week's Guardian, for undervaluing the brilliancy of a "Gem" offered for ſale at the late auction of Pictures?—Surely ſome cauſe muſt exiſt!

And, why did not the initials of Mr. J. W. alſo adorn the above liſt? he having rendered himſelf conſpicuous in the annals of hiſtory; a number of his exploits are ſtill freſh in the memories of his fellow citizens—he could not but be conſidered as a valuable acquiſition to the gallery of Portraits, and is undoubtedly entitled to ſome note in the Heathen Mythology.

YORK:—PRINTED BY CAMERON AND BENNETT, PRINTERS TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

To the Gem of Patriotiſm in Roman Setting---The Detected Spy in Groteſque, ſends Greeting:---

SIR—For ſome months paſt your name has rarely paſſed my lips, when it did, it was with ſenſations ſuch as I conceive muſt accompany Blaſphemy, or any thing elſe of equal horror. When I walked into my friends garden to gather a few currants, I was not aware that I was breathing the ſame atmoſphere with ſuch a maſs of turpitude; I had been occupied at that paſtime about ten minutes before the ſound of your voice announced your proximity. I then raiſed my head, and ſaw you in the act of addreſſing your fauſs culottes. The only part of your converſation I heard, (none of which I wiſhed to hear) was your ſaying ſomething muſt be paid, I know not whether your Laundreſs's Bill, or one of the numerous ones, decorated with the ſubjunctive "In Teſtimonium Veritatis." Judge then, Sir, whether I was acting as a ſpy. I am the deſcendant of a perſon who fought and bled to wreſt the land we inhabit from the enemies of our country, nor do I know that I am obliged to retire from any part of it at your awful approach.

Neither was I acting as a Spy, the memorable day your coherent MOVEABLES (abſolute phenomena) were landed on our ſhores; when my aſtoniſhed Optics were arreſted by the novel view, the unlumbered and elite appearances of three protruded ſplint Baſkets, remarkable and marvellous only, for the Paucity, Shabbineſs and Filthineſs of their contents, which were guarded by a ſqualid Female, a figurative Noli me tangere, and emblem of every thing unlovely. Transfixed by aſtoniſhment, my ſituation might readily be conſtrued into pragmatic deſign, or impertinent eſpionage. Neither was I acting as a Spy, when fatigued with the diverſion of ſhooting, I repoſed myſelf under a ſmall tree at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, in a part of the Diſtrict little frequented, but, by the Naiads, where I had been but a ſhort time, when two Females paſſed within two paces without diſcovering me; their Cheeks glowed with a genial tint of Crimſon, tranſcending the moſt elaborate and topical applications of Art; their be drabbled appearances exhibited the moſt fulſome and finiſhed picture of two battered Harridans I ever beheld, and painful to relate, nor was their geſtures, or converſation leſs groteſque than their factitious vivacity.

Neither was I acting as a ſpy, when thoſe Paragons, in ſpeaking of myſelf and a friend, uttered indelicacies, from which the moſt voluptuous obſcenity of Sterne, hides its diminiſhed head; (a repetition, ad verbatim, will hereafter depend upon themſelves.)

I once, Sir, did for the protection of my property, act as a ſpy, not upon yourſelf, but upon your hopeful ſon. After ſuffering an uninterrupted piracy upon my hen-rooſt for ſix weeks, out of tenderneſs, to what in another, would be a ſanctity of ſituation, I deſired my people to remonſtrate in the moſt delicate manner with the youth, upon the impropriety and injuſtice of his conduct; this was repeated without effect; I then, Sir, reluctantly acted the ſpy, and detected the Embryo Gem, the Heir apparent of Patriotiſm in Roman Setting, in the faſt—after ſome wholeſome admonition, and threatening a little gentle caſtigation, I diſmiſſed him with a remark that the County Treaſury had now enabled his Papa to procure ingredients for cuſtards on more honorable terms. This ſample of the opening bloom of his genius, was ſucceeded by his ſwindling, with a more than juvenile avidity, a child of my houſehold, out of a ſet of Counters, which your Cherub miſtook for guineas. It is with much reluctance on my part, that you have dragged me into the mention of yourſelf or your Family appendages; but yourſelves, ſlaves to your unhallowed predelition for ſocial Arſon, have extorted it. The deference due to the female character, yours have forfeited, they have cancelled all obligations of delicacy by their unreſtrained depravity, and if further cauſe be given, no ſenſe of it ſhall ſuppreſs the voice of Truth. Rancour itſelf, I thought, could not have taught, to ſhake the hoary honors of Mr. R—— clothed with the panoply of all that is admirable in man, and reverential in dignified age, the ſhafts of blackeſt malice have ever fallen harmleſs, when aimed at him; yet could he not eſcape the aſſaſſin eſſay of your fable-minded, harpy houſehold hydra.

You, Sir, doubtleſs conceive yourſelf ſhrouded from harm, by cauſing yourſelf to be ſupplicated to preſerve, anon, that valuable life, from the inſidious attacks of private as well as public enemies: Sink of hypocriſy and effrontery, let me remind you, that if the ſeat of that valuable life be your poſteriors, an organ remains to perform the ſame office on them that it did upon the ruſſian bully, your predeceſſor and pioneer in popular miſchief. The terrors of his haggard conſcience, tranſported him, Nebuchadnezzar like, to roam the foreſts in brutal madneſs, and if you can feel compunction, what muſt ſhortly be your ſituation!

In the face of Heaven and the world, I declare the wretch who dared to invent, advance, or propagate the falſehood reſpecting me, a recreant liar, and baſe aſſaſſin, and if he dare avow himſelf, I will prove him ſo; and "the Detected Spy in Groteſque," will in the face of day, prove him a villain in the face of his God and his country. Your ſophiſtry, however ſilken, is a deluſion too groſs, and a veil too flimſey, to impoſe much longer upon ſo many honeſt, upright and worthy men as you have done. You will ſhortly be unmaſked, and if a leſs inglorious deſtiny than a trip to Port Jackſon, or having your Gem reſet in Cannabis, awaits you, it will be a ſecond time I have been miſtaken in you.

Un Eſp[illegible] a Découverte en Groteſque.

Proclamation.

By His Excellency FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS in and by an act of the parliament of this province, made and passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, entitled, "an act to revive and continue an act passed in the forty-second year of his present majesty, entitled, "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same, respectively, after reciting that an act passed in the forty second year of his present majesty, entitled "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry, within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same respectively, which was to continue in force for three years, and no longer, was expired, and it was expedient that the same should be revived and continued—it is enacted that the said act should, from and after the passing of that act, be revived, and the same was thereby revived and continued in force and effect for two years, and no longer.

And whereas, as well with reference to the interest of his majesty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majesty's subjects resident within this province, it hath been ascertained that there exists immediate occasion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after specified.

That I FRANCIS GORE, Lieutenant governor of this province, in exercise of the power and authority so vested in me, in and by the said recited act, by and with the advice of the Executive Council of the said province, do hereby declare and appoint, that in addition to the ports of entry and clearance established by and under the authority of a certain act of the said provincial parliament, passed in the forty first year of his majesty's reign, entitled, "an act for granting to his majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the uses of this province, the like duties on goods and merchandize brought into this province from the United States of America, as are now paid on goods and merchandize imported from Great Britain and other places," and also by and under the authority of the above in part recited act, passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, the places herein after described and specified, that is to say, the village of St. Joseph, on the island of St. Joseph, and the eastern extremity of the carrying place, and on the north side of the river St. Mary, at, or near the Falls of St. Mary, in the Western District, shall from the Eighteenth day of this present month of May, severally and respectively, be and the same are by these presents severally and respectively established and proclaimed to be ports and places of entry and clearance for all goods and merchandize, not being entirely prohibited, and for the payment of all duties liable to be paid for all goods and merchandize brought into this province from the United States of America, imposed and established by virtue of the said act, to passed in the forty-fifth year of his said majesty's reign, and according to the direction of the same.

VALETTE, (Malta) April 16, 1807.

"On Saturday the 4th April, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, this city was alarmed by a most daring mutiny in the regiment of Froberg, consisting of foreigners of every defcription, quartered in the fortrefs on the opposite fide of the harbor at Valette, called the Rivoffoli.

"Adjutant Swartz, on being advifed of the intended mutiny, fallied out with other officers, determined to quell it in its infancy, but did not fuccede; himfelf and captain Whitefield fell victims in the attempt—the major fell and others were wounded.

"In the fortrefs, on duty, was a part of the royal Britifh artillery, commanded by captain Fade, who were immediately difarmed and remained under the controul of the mutineers, and compelled by them to load the cannon and mortars and point them towatd the city of La Valette, or wherever otherwife they thought proper to order them. The foldiers of the regiment who were not of the number of the mutineers, embraced the opportunity that offered to effect their efcape, and a great number accomplifhed it, though many of them were fhot at by the mutineers in making the attempt; feveral of thofe unfortunate men were wounded, and others fhot dead. The ring leaders on the 3d day, poffibly with a view to get fupplies of provifions, opened the great gates of the fort, placing centinels in the ufual order, of which opportunity on the 5th day, about 300 availed themfelves, taking with them the major of the regiment wounded, in a litter, and the officers, together with captain Fade and the artillerymen, and all the Engliih women with their children. Thefe two centinels attempted to oppofe this party, who were immediately fhot dead by them.

"In this fortrefs was a large powder magazine, containing about 500 barrels of gunpowder, at which an artillery man was placed centinel, from whom the mutineers demanded entrance into the magazine, which he boldly refufed at the expence of his life, as they put him to death.

"The number of the mutineers, in the fort, in confequence of the continual defertions, was reduced to a few, on Friday the 10th inft. at 6 o'clock in the afternoon they fired two bombs at this city, which happily did no injury. It was refolved to ftorm the place at day break the next morning, and take them by furprife, ere they could have time to put in execution their threatened purpofe of blowing up the powder magazine.

"The walls were fcaled, but a dog giving the alarm, fruftrated the plan. Six of the 8 remaining, retired to the magazine; the other two were cut off from the magazine. They, however, fired two bombs towards the city, which, providentially did no injury.

"On Sunday evening, at 10 o'clock, the fix refolved to blow up the magazine in order to make their efcape, which they effected.

"In the magazine were from 4 to 500 barrels of powder, which made a moft tremendous explofion; fortunately, the plan was fufpected, and only a fmall number of troops were therefore placed in the fort to watch their motions and prevent their efcape, and fo furprife them if an opportunity offered; happily, therefore, only 3 foldiers became their victims, and 2 or 3 wounded.

"The fhock of the explofion did infinite damage to the windows.

"The mutineers fled into the interior of the ifland, and are ftnce taken. The laft of them (a Black) was taken this morning, difguifed in women's clothes, on whom fell the lot to blow up the magazine.

"On Monday laft a court-martial was held at the Town-houfe, on 25 of the mutineers, fuppofed to be ring leaders, one of whom at the gallows was refpited, the others executed—ten hanged and 14 fhot."

From Malta to June 8, 1807.

An account of the death, by difeafe of rear-admiral Sir Thomas Louis, bart. was received at Malta. This leaves the Britifh fquadron in the Archipelago without any Admiral—Duckworth and Sir Sidney Smith having previoufly failed for England.—Louis was one of the beft officers in the fervice. He was with Nelfon at the battle of the Nile; and had been invefted with feveral orders of knighthood.

Neapolitan ports Blockaded.

Mr. Abraham Gibbs, the American viceconful at Palermo, under date of May 25, 1807, has officially notified the American at conful at Gibraltar, that his Sicilian Majefty had declared all the ports of the kingdom of Naples, occupied by the French, &c. to be in a ftate of blockade.

ASSAULT.

WILSON V. BARBER.

Mr. Garrow ftated this to be a very ferious cafe, requiring the attention of the Jury, and in which a leffon ought to be held out to a certain clafs of men, whofe infolence nothing could fuppreis, but fmart damages for their mifconduct. The Plaintiff was an Hair dreffer in Canon-ftreet, in the city of London; the Defendant, a Sheriff's officer, a great Buck, and addicted to fafhionable amufements, for he kept a hunter and three Ladies, of which he boafted. His elegance required the aid of an hair-dreffer, in which capacity the Plaintiff had the honor of ferving him; but, like many other men of fafhion, he did not pay his debts until certain fuggeftions came from a Court of Juftice. The Plaintiff caufed him to be arrested, on which his brother officer obferved the civility that was ufual when fuch a Gentleman was to be arrefted; he allowed him to be at large, inftead of locking him up, on which he determined, as he faid, to go and thrath both the Plaintiff and his Lawyer. Come Kit, faid he to his boy, we will go and have fome fun; accordingly, he went with the boy to the Plaintiff's houfe, and found him cutting the hair of a gentleman—calling him down, accufed him as a falfe fwearer, ftruck him on the breaft, and as he was opening his mouth to fpeak, the Defendant fpit in it, and aflaulted the Plaintiff again; and, on the remonftrance of a gentleman in the fhop, threatened to take him to the Compter, taking out his ftaff to fhew his authority for the purpoie; and when he was told that his conduct frightened the woman in the houfe, Mrs. Wilion and a vifitor, he faid, damn the women, I have three wives myfelf, &c. The Plaintiff ufed no provocation whatever to the Defendant.

This cafe being clearly proved, and there being no anfwer to it in evidence, the Solicitor General addreffed the Jury for the Defendant, and treated the matter lightly.

Lord Ellenborough regarded this as grofs mifconduct in the Defendant towards the Plaintiff, who had only purfued a legal courfe for the recovery of his debt; for this outrage, he had appealed to the laws of his country, and the Jury would take care that his Appeal fhould not be made in vain.

Verdict for the Plaintiff—Damages £200.

DEATH PREFERRED AT AN INN.

Were I in a condition to ftruggle with death, as I am at this moment with my apothecary, I fhould certainly declare againft fubmitting to it before my friends; and, therefore, I never ieriouily think of the mode and manner of this great catafirophe, which generally takes up and torments my thoughts as much as the catafirophe itfelf, but I confiant y draw the curtain acrois it with this wifh—that the Difpofer of all things may fo order it, that it happen not to me in my own houfe, but rather in fome decent inn, at home—I know it—the concern of my friends, and the laft fervices of wiping my brows and fmoothing my pillow, which the quivering hand of pale affection fhall pay me, will fo crucify my foul, that I fhall die of a diftemper which my p yfician is not aware of: but in an inn, the few cold offices I wanted would be purchaied with a few guineas, and paid me with an undifturbed, but punctual attention.

THE LAST SPEECH OF JOHN CAMPBELL

Who fuffered with Joieph Emmanuel, at Three Rivers, on Monday the 10th of Auguft, 1807, for the Murder of Jean B. C. Deicheneau.

GOOD CHRISTIAN PEOPLE,

You fee here two of your unhappy fellow-creatures juft ready to leave this world of trouble and forrow. In a few moments we fhall be feparated from you; we fhall be launched into eternity, and fhall appear before the awful tribunal of that God unto whom all hearts are open, from whom no fecrets are hid; and who alone is the righteous unerring Judge of the Univerfe. To thofe who have witneffed againft me, and upon whofe evidence I have been condemned to die, it does not become me to impute any motives of refentment or revenge. I fincerely forgive them, and patiently fubmit to the fentence of the law; yet I have a confident hope that I fhall not appear fo guilty before Almighty God as it is my prefent misfortune to appear before you. I am now a dying man; and therefore, hope you will believe me when I declare to you, that I have not been led to this melancholy end by any former courfe of wi kednefs:——, excepting fuch ordinary failings and offences as are common to men (of which I moft heartily repent.) I have nothing to reproach myfelf with but my late acceiiion from the 49th Regiment, of which the original cauie (I forbear to mention it) was not imputed to me. And now permit me with my laft breath, to aflure you, that I am not guilty of the murder laid to my charge; and that I had no defign whatever of killing any man. It is true, I was in the barn when my fellow-fufferer fired the fhot; which he did with no defign to kill, but only to frighten away our partners, and fo to effect our efcape. But, it was the will of God that we fhould be taken:—and it is His will that we fhould now fuffer. Far be it from us to blame any perfon concerned in our apprehenfion and punifhment. We are, both of us, heartily forry for the death of the poor unfortunate man who fell; and we pray that both he and we may find mercy with God; and meet, with joy, in a better world. As to myfelf, whatever I may think of man's judgment, I cheerfully accept what I am about to fuffer from the hands of God, confeiling myfelf to be a miferable finner: and as our bleffed and adorable Savior was content to die for our offences, that he might redeem us to God by his precious blood; fo we defire now to yield up our lives according to God's good pleafure.

Good Chriftian people, pray for us, that our repentance may be accepted; and that, by the grace of God, we may find an everlafting reft and peace in Heaven. Amen!

Montreal Pap.

The above was delivered by Campbell to the fheriff at the place of execution; and was, at his particular defire, read to the fpectators there aflembled.—Mr. Brown is requefted to give it a place in the Canadian Gazette; which will oblige many of his fubfcribers. A. B.

Quebec, Auguft 31.

The following is from the Berkfhire Reporter of Auguft 18. printed at Pittsfield, Maffachufetts.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Montreal to his friend in this town.

"Montreal, 16th July, 1807.

"We have no news—a general apathy feems to pervade all orders in fociety in this fine province, and all for want of enterprife in our great men—they feem afraid of their own fhadows; a fingle inflammatory paragraph in a paper printed in the States, is enough to give them a fit of the gripes—in fhort there is a general apprehenfion that we fhall fhortly be conquered by the Yankies!! and for this very reafon landed property is not half its intrinfic value!"

The following ftatement may ferve as an anfwer to the foregoing.

The unhappy differences with the United States rendering it neceffary to put the province in as refpectable a ftate of defence as poffible, great activity has, for fome time paft, been fhewn, and is ftill in operation, by the troops of this garrifon, under the orders of Col. Brock, for the purpofe of giving confidence to its defenders, by every addition to its natural ftrength, fuggefted by fcience, judgment and prudence.

By daily practice the Royal Artillery have acquired an expertnefs and precifion in firing fhot, not to be furpaffed.

To fecond the efforts of the regulars, much alertnefs has alfo been fhewn by great numbers of the militia, for qualifying themfelves for fervice, by the ufe of fire arms, as well great guns, as fmall arms.

At the beginning of the paft week an order iffued, from his Honor the Prefident, for drughting, by ballot, or otherwife, a fifth part of the whole militia of the province, who are to hold themfelves in readinefs to march, whenever it may be found expedient.

The firft draught was, in confequence, made, on the Efplanade, from the firft battalion of the Canadian militia, on Tuefday; from the fecond battalion on Friday, and from the Britifh battalion, by ballot, yefterday. We fhould be wanting in juftice to our compatriots did we fay lefs than that, never, on a fimilar occafion, could there be manifefted more cheerfulnefs, alacrity and zeal, than were fhewn on thefe occafions, as well by the Canadians as by the Britifh. Numbers volunteered their fervices. The Artillery company, the two ftaff companies, and Capt. Burns's battalion company, who are the ftrongeft and beft difciplined of the Britifh, have, to a man, formally tendered their fervices. Sums of money were offered by individuals, for prize tickets, for fuch the tickets were called which, in balloting, were for fervice. Some young batchelors propofed prize tickets for the married men, who had drawn for fervice; but the greater part of the latter infifted on keeping their tickets, notwithftanding that offers of exchange were made to them by other batchelors.

Too much praife cannot be given to the animating language of the field-officers and others, in their fpeeches, addreffed to the different battalions and companies, on the occafion. The whole has been attended with much feftivity and hilarity.

We hear that equal cheerfulnefs and ardour have manifefted themfelves in the different country parifhes.

At a meeting of the Magiftrates held at Three Rivers on Wednefday the 12th of Auguft, 1807—

Refolved,—That the following communication be made to Lt. Col. SHANK, commanding the Canadian Fencible Regiment, on the occafion of the departure of the laid regiment from this town, and that the fame be prefented to him by the Clerk of the Peace for this Diftrict.

SIR,

The Magiftrates of Three Rivers have learned with fincere regret, that his Majefty's Canadian Fencible Regiment, under your command, are under orders to leave this town. They feel it to be a duty incumbent on them, to affure you before your depar ure, that every clafs of the inhabitants of this place are fully fenfible of the obligations due, for the alacrity and zeal which have invariably been fhewn by all the officers, non-commiffioned officers and privates of the regiment, when ver their aid has been required. And the Magiftrates have great fatisfaction in being able to add, that they have been highly gratified in witneiling, at all times, the exemplary good conduct of the Canadian Regiment, which, dur ng the time of its being here, has promoted the fecurity and tranquility of the inhabitants of the town, and therefore believes their moft fincere acknowledgment. The Magiftrates have to requeft, Sir, that you will communicate thefe fentiments to the regiment, and that you will alfo accept the aflurance of their moft cordial wifhes for every thing which can tend to promote your profperity and happinefs.

By order of the Magiftrates.

CHS. THOMAS, Clk. P. Diftrict of Three Rivers.

ANECDOTE.

How feldom do we profit by advice, but when it coincides with our own prepoffeffions or prejudice!——A certain widow was feized with a violent longing for the reenjoyment of the comforts of Matrimony; and John, her trufty fervant, was the happy object of her choice. In doing this the heard, or thought fhe heard them inceffantly repeat to her, Marry thy man John—Marry thy man John.—She accordingly did marry John; and bitterly fhe repented of it.—"How," cried fhe to the Curate, among other reproaches, "could you leave me to fo ludicrous an oracle as the bells?"

TOTAL NUMBER

To the GEM of Patriotiſm, &c.—A ſecond Greeting.

SIR—However chequered my former life may have been by misfortune or venial follies, no man will truſt, nor ſhall with impunity, charge me with the moſt diſtant ſemblance of baſeneſs; to you and yours was reſerved the welcome taſk, and to you and yours I ſhall make ample retribution. It is better my with nor province to attempt a juſtification of the unaſſailable and ſacred characters of ſome whom your undiſcriminating malignancy has attempted to wound and lacerate, but to my own injured feelings, the incendiary attempt made to ſink my character, and at the altar of truth I ſtand pledged to chaſtiſe this wholeſome ſcourge. Upon our firſt acquaintance, whilſt I thought you entertained ſentiments honorable to yourſelf and of propitious promiſe to the colony, I reverenced you in a more than ordinary degree, but when I witneſſed your apoſtacy, and that the fair ſemblance of virtue and patriotiſm in you had degenerated into intoxication with that evaneſcent potion, Popularity, my opinions were altered, and I ſighed in ſecret at the humiliating fact, for I had with all the warmth of untempered conſcience, combated the intuitive opinions of others, who had penetrated your genuine character at a firſt view. Shame, Sir, is a principle implanted by heaven in the human breaſt, as a barrier between good and evil—it ſeems wholly to have deſerted yours, or never to have inhabited it. Its abſence there, and that of every other reſtraining or virtuous principle, has rendered you obnoxious to the indelicacy of the cauſtic juſtice with which I ſhall henceforth unceremoniouſly treat you. Ere I had aſcertained the ſtandard of your principles, I degraded myſelf by accepting your invitation to a dinner, and the memorable occurrences of that day wrought a revulſion in my ſentiments, perfect as ages could produce. To refreſh your memory, I ſhall ſtate to you the few of them that are freſh in mine. In the courſe of our converſation you complained of the difficulty of procuring ſervants—I intimated that on application to Col. P——r, you might probably be accommodated—your anſwer was, that he was ſuch a maſs of ignorance, ſtiffneſs and vulgarity, that you would neither be obliged to nor by him, that he was a perfect contraſt to his brother W——m, who was one of the beſt creatures living, perfectly good natured, who ſung a good ſong, occupied an almoſt conſtant place at your table, and was a perfect convenience to diſpel the tedium of a long evening. The next ſubject of comment was the preſent organ and principal emunctory of your peſtiferous ſpleen. You obſerved that he was a mighty good young man, whoſe hobby was his horſe and his hounds, that he was a good ſportſman, and furniſhed you with abundance of wild ducks and veniſon, but that he did not poſſeſs a ſufficiency of brains to bait a mouſe trap. I muſt confeſs that the freedom you uſed with the capacities of your intimates, ſhocked me a little. A tradition to the national character of the Americans, was your next ſubject, and your illiberal and acrimonious attack upon them, from your previous knowledge of my being an American, I conceived a groſs, cruel and unmanly breach of hoſpitality, yet unwarranting a breach of good manners in me your gueſt.

That character ſir, you pourtrayed as the baſeſt amongſt the nations of the earth, the Scotch excepted, whom you aſſerted to be a nation of plodding knaves and peddling politicians, which had never given birth to one man of genius or abilities. I took the liberty of inſtancing the lord's Mansfield and Melville as men of accredited genius and univerſally acknowledged abilities, but you ſcouted the idea and depicted them as two errant formal blockheads. Meanly exulting in your triumph over decency and truth, you remarked that, you ſuppoſed Mary M'G—— little Johnny Sc——t and Gutty G——t were admitted to be men of abilities in this country, but that they were the mereſt old women you had ever ſeen, and fitter to deliberate on the price of apples or oyſters, than the affairs of a Province.

The incredible rapidity with which you traverſed the nomenclature, or amazed at your levity, but left me undecided whether to be moſt aſtoniſhed at your diſingenuouſneſs or amazed at your levity, but when ſpeaking of the revered and venerable Mr. R—— whom you diſtinguiſhed by the appellation of Gripus, you appeared to me in all the horrors of an inhuman barbarian, not the enlightened benevolent patriot, but the ſlave of envy and dupe of your own inordinate and rankling malevolence, with a judgement ſo perverted by malignity, that you would not admit one ſingle trait of worth, one ſolitary claim to merit in the irreproachable men, whoſe characters although unknown to you, you ſo baſely attempted to mangle and vilify. The only inference I could draw from what I then ſaw of your true character was, the moment of ſeparation would ſubject me to the effects of your dark brooding and baleful ſhot providentially innoxious hatred. I left your houſe with the blended emotions of humiliation and horror, determined to withdraw myſelf from the acquaintance and countenance of a being of ſuch malignant aſpect, with whom compact would be pollution, and further intimacy, an exceſs of criminality. I ſhall drop you for the preſent, and in my next, without aſſuming the province of an inquiſitor, may put a few interrogations to you, which in this land of liberty, you will be free to anſwer or paſs over in ſilence.

Proclamation.

FRANCIS GORE Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING :

WHEREAS there are divers persons who were resident in the British Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of separation in the year 1783, and who have resided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reside therein since that period ; but have neglected to obtain in due time the insertion of their Names on the U. E. List, or have been suspended from the same, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be bestowed by His Majesty on that meritorious class of subjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other persons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were also resident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have since died without having their Names inserted on that List, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwise would have derived from His Majesty's Bounty.

NOW KNOW YE, that I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant Governor, aforesaid, solicitous to promote the welfare and happiness of His Majesty's subjects of every description in this Province, more especially of those who have so strongly manifested their attachment and Loyalty to His Majesty ; and also solicitous that the Children of such persons, who, when alive, were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. List, but are now removed by death from being admitted to that privilege, may reap the fruits of the Loyalty of their Fathers ; DO, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of this Province, hereby notify and declare, that the Names of such persons who were resident in the British Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of separation in the year 1783, and who have resided in this Province, on or before the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reside therein since that period, or may have been suspended from the U. E. List, may, upon application being made, and proof produced thereof, to the satisfaction of the Executive Government, be now inserted thereon.

And I hereby, with the like advice and consent, further notify and declare, that the Names of such persons as are now deceased, who in their life time were entitled to have been placed on the U. E. List, and who were also resident in this Province on or before the 28th day of July 1798, may, upon due proof thereof to the Executive Government, be also inserted in that List, to the end that the Children of such Loyal and faithful Subjects may be made partakers of His Majesty's Bounty to its fullest extent.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms in Council at York, this 31st day of October, in the 47th year of His Majesty's Reign, and in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and six.

Proclamation.

By His Excellency FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS in and by an act of the parliament of this province, made and passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, entitled, "an act to revive and continue an act passed in the forty-second year of his present majesty, entitled, "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same, respectively, after reciting that an act passed in the forty second year of his present majesty, entitled "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry, within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same respectively, which was to continue in force for three years, and no longer, was expired, and it was expedient that the same should be revived and continued—it is enacted that the said act should, from and after the passing of that act, be revived, and the same was thereby revived and continued in force and effect for two years, and no longer.

And whereas, as well with reference to the interest of his majesty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majesty's subjects resident within this province, it hath been ascertained that there exists immediate occasion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after specified.

Be it therefore known, to all whom it may concern. That I FRANCIS GORE Lieutenant governor of this province, in exercise of the power and authority so vested in me, in and by the said recited act, by and with the advice of the Executive Council of the said province, do hereby declare and appoint, that in addition to the ports of entry and clearance established by and under the authority of a certain act of the said provincial parliament, passed in the forty first year of his majesty's reign, entitled, "an act for granting to his majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the uses of this province, the like duties on goods and merchandize inwards into this province from the United States of America, as are now paid on goods and merchandize imported from Great Britain and other places," and also by and under the authority of the above in part recited act, passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, the places herein after described and specified, that is to say, the village of St. Joseph, on the island of St. Joseph, and the eastern extremity of the carrying place, and on the north side of the river St. Mary, at, or near the Falls of St. Mary, in the Western District, shall from the Eighteenth day of this present month of May, severally and respectively, be and the same are by these presents severally and respectively established and proclaimed to be ports and places of entry and clearance for all goods and merchandize, not being entirely prohibited, and for the payment of all duties liable to be paid for all goods and merchandize brought into this province from the United States of America, imposed and established by virtue of the said act, so passed in the forty-first year of his said majesty's reign, and according to the direction of the same.

GIVEN under my hand and seal at Arms at York, this second day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, and in the forty seventh year of his said Majesty's reign.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS—FRIDAY, JULY 10.

Defence of the Country.

Lord SIDMOUTH rose and observed, that he had attended the House for two days past in the expectation of seeing in his place a Noble Lord, whose official situation enabled him to answer a question he wished to put. He was desirous of knowing, whether it was the intention of his Majesty's Government to propose, during this session of Parliament, any measure connected with the Defence of the Country. He had it in view to call their Lordships' attention to this subject, independent of any reference to recent events; but the information which had just been received, rendered its consideration more indispensable. It was his wish to be informed, whether his Majesty's Ministers intended to carry into full execution the Acts already passed for arming the people, or whether they had some more extensive measure in contemplation. He understood there would be a full attendance of their Lordships on Monday next, and he should take that opportunity of asking the question he had just mentioned.

Monday, July 13.

Military State of the Country.

Lord SIDMOUTH rose, and expressed himself happy to see a Noble Lord (HAWKESBURY) in his place, from whom he felt desirous to obtain an answer to a question, respecting which his uneasiness every day increased. The object of that question was to learn from the Noble Lord, if it was the intention of his Majesty's Ministers to propose any new measure for the defence of the country, or to follow up on a more extended scale that system that had already been adopted, so as to make it bear some proportion to the increasing dangers of the Empire. Should he have the satisfaction to receive such an answer as he expected, then he should have to request the Noble Lord to state the time when it was likely such a proposition could be brought forward, adding his wish that it might be on an early day; for as the danger increased every hour, he thought it a matter of the most urgent importance, that it should be provided against without delay.

Lord HAWKESBURY was happy to be able to assure the Noble Viscount and the House, that the subject of the Military State of the Country had occupied the attention of Ministers from their very entrance into office. It might not be proper at the present moment to enter into any explanation of the principle, or of the details of the measures they should have to propose, but the day was not distant when such an explanation should be amply given, and when reasons should be adduced for having deferred it until now. Indeed, on this very day it was expected that a notice would be given in another place, of the introduction of the measure to which the Noble Viscount alluded.

Lord SUFFOLK intimated the necessity of doing now much more than had as yet been attempted, toward the defence and security of the country. He had observed, with the greatest satisfaction, that on the part of the coast which he had lately visited, the system of the Martello Towers had been considerably increased.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—JULY 16.

State of the Nation.

Mr. WHITBREAD, in pursuance of his motion, rose to submit his motion to the House. He was not altogether unaccustomed to address that House upon interesting and important questions, and he had, during the number of years that he had enjoyed the honor of a seat in Parliament, proposed many matters of moment for its consideration. Some of the propositions which he had the honor to originate, had met with a favorable reception from that House, but much the greater number of them had been rejected. On these occasions he had never thought it right to trespass upon the time of the House by any apologies for his own insufficiency, or the inadequacy of his abilities to the satisfactory performance of the duty he had undertaken. It had ever been his opinion that it was much better to leave the proposition he had to submit to the support of such arguments as he could urge in its favor, or to be borne out by its own intrinsic value, than to make any attempt to conciliate by such means the attention of the House. But, on the present occasion, whether from that diffidence which must be produced by the doubts and suspicions that prevailed in the public mind as to the motives of public men;—whether from the nature and effect of these debates that had lately taken place in that House, which were so little calculated to exalt the character of Parliament in the estimation of the public; whether from the difficulties and dangers of the circumstances of the times, or the gloomy and disastrous situation of public affairs;—whether from any one, or from a combination of all these causes, it was impossible, he confessed, that he had never proceeded, he confessed, that he had never felt the same diffidence in addressing the House, nor the same sense of the necessity of soliciting its indulgence. The proposition which he had to make was one that would tend to restore the gravity of debate, which which had of late been so much departed from in that House, to call them back from that personal acrimony, and those mutual recriminations which, without promoting the interests of the public, were so little creditable to the character of Parliament, and to direct their attention to the means of averting the dangers that threatened the country, and of retrieving the sinking fortunes of this great empire.—Hear.

Mr. D. BROWNE moved the standing order for the exclusion of strangers, in consequence of which the gallery was immediately cleared, and strangers were not re-admitted during the remainder of the debate.

We are however informed, the Mr. WHITBREAD took afterwards a comprehensive but aggravated view of the internal and external situation of the Empire; and after dwelling at great length upon all the various topics which so large a question afforded him an opportunity of touching upon, the hon. gentleman concluded by moving,

"That a Committee be appointed to inquire into the State of the Nation."

Mr. MILNES, we understand, answered Mr. WHITBREAD. He stated that the proposed inquiry would be vague and delusive; that it was an attempt to censure the late change of administration, and to embarrass the measures of government; that many of the grounds which had been urged by the hon. gentlemen for going into the committee, had equally existed during the continuance of the late administration, when no such notice had been made by the hon. gentleman or his friends; Mr. Milnes represented the state of the Country, to be such as required the exertions of the united energies of all descriptions of its subjects, which it was the object of this motion to distract. Looking to our resources, to the patriotism and valor of the country, he saw nothing to fear but much to expect. Were we to countenance the exertions of our Allies by examples of British valor—were we to evince by our conduct a conviction of the fact that the way to peace was only to be found under the arch of victory, he had no doubt but the ultimate issue of the contest would be honorable to the country. With a conviction of these truths on his mind, and for a variety of reasons, which he alleged with great eloquence, he was so far from giving his support to the motion, that he should move that "this House do now adjourn."

Sir Arthur Pigot answered Mr. Milnes, and was followed by Mr. Henry Smith, and Mr. Montague.

House of Lords, July 15.

Lord Suffolk took occasion to advert to the necessity of cultivating a friendly disposition with America. He was proceeding to remark on the inconsistencies which the Americans sustained from impressing their crews on the high seas when he was, for a moment, interrupted by Lord Hawkesbury, who said, that he conceived the Noble Lord from the line of observation he was pursuing, supposed the Bill now before the House to be the American intercourse Bill, whereas that had already been read a third time, and was sent down to the other House.

Lord Suffolk said, he was aware of the nature of the Bill under discussion, and thought that as it had a reference to the American Treaty, his observations were not improperly applied.

LONDON, July 20.

The Gazette of Saturday contains the official account of the second disastrous affair in Egypt; according to which, new severity appear, in a great measure, to have arisen from the disappointed expectation of being joined by the Mamelukes Beys.—Whether our proposals were not thought sufficiently advantageous to them, we know not; but it seems that they have made peace with the Viceroy of Egypt.—Alexandria, of course, as we all along anticipated, must be evacuated.

July 23.

NEW MILITARY PLAN.

The sketch we gave yesterday of Lord Castlereagh's plan was correct.—The following is a more detailed account of it:

That the regular Army shall be increased from the Militia in these proportions, viz.—

From the Militia of England - -	21,000
Ireland - -	7,000
	28,000

His Majesty is at present empowered to call upon the Counties to Ballot for a Supplementary Militia, amounting to 20,000 men for England, and 4,000 for Scotland.—But his Majesty's Ministers propose that his Majesty shall be empowered to call upon the Counties for a Supplementary Militia and a half, making

For England - - - - -	36,000
Ireland - - - - -	8,000

This, allowing for the usual waste, will add at least 38,000 men to the Militia, & 28,000 to the regular force of the Country, and will leave with the Militia a large body of supernumeries, sufficient for a long period, to release the standing army from the substitutments which a Ballot must occasion.

That the Management of the Enlisting of Men out of the Militia be entirely under the controul of the Militia Officers, for 80 days, and the officers of the Army to have no concern in it, during that time.

The Commissioners are to be given for raising men out of the Militia, in the following manner, as if it were done by ordinary recruiting, giving an option to the men whether they will enlist for a term of years or for life.

That if the Volunteers should be diminished in numbers in any County, power be given to the Lord Lieutenant of that County, to raise by Ballot, a Local or County Militia, to the extent of the particular deficiency—but to be confined in their own respective County, unless in case of Invasion or Rebellion.

Such are the heads of the plan, and it must be confessed that one more likely to be efficacious, without being too oppressive, could not have been devised. The Bill is ordered for a second reading in the House of Commons, on Monday next.

July 24.

From the Dutch papers we have extracted the eighty-fifth and eighty-sixth Bulletins, not on account of the matter which they contain, as it is not new, but as they are probably the winding up of the series. The antics and grimaces played of in each other's presence, by the two Emperors, from day to day, are nearly as ridiculous as those described by Rabelais, which took place between Panurge and Thoumast, in the presence of Pantagruel.

July 25.

An unexampled activity prevails, at the present moment, to procure seamen. The ships in the different ports are entirely stripped of their hands, without regard to protections of any description; and the streets in the seaports, and on the banks of the River, are entirely deserted by every person having the least resemblance of a seaman, such of them as have hitherto escaped having retired to hiding places. In consequence of its being reported that great numbers are concealed in the City, the Lord Mayor has been applied to, to break open warrants.

July 27.

A gentleman lately from France, is ready to attest, that no less than 113 American vessels, all in ballast, and many of them of very considerable size and burthen, arrived in L'Orient, from the 5th to the 25th of May. The people of L'Orient talk publicly that these ships were employed for particular purposes by the French government.

July 29

A vessel has arrived from the Mediterranean, with letters from the city of Algiers to the 5th ult. inclusive. They communicate the intelligence, that a vigorous war was carrying on between the Algerine and Tunisian States. In the latter end of May, a general battle was fought, which lasted the whole of the day. At length the Tunisians gave way, and were pursued in their flight by the Algerines, who made dreadful slaughter among the fugitives. The Algerines were wound up to the highest pitch of confidence from their success, and when the last advices came away, they were preparing to march in full force against Tunis, which was expected to fall an easy prey.

A considerable number of merchants, engaged in trade to America, yesterday assembled at the London Tavern for the purpose of entering into a confederation of the probable effects which the late action between his Majesty's ship Leopard, and the Chesapeake American frigate, may produce upon the commerce with the United States. Mr. Sheriff Shaw, who was called to the chair, informed the company, that he had been favored with an interview with the Secretary of State, (Mr. Canning) on the important subject which had occasioned the present meeting, and it was with much pleasure he stated, that the honorable Secretary manifested an earnest desire to preserve the most amicable relations between the two countries; but that as no authentic particulars had been received of the circumstance of government respecting the late unfortunate transaction, it was impossible to enter into any discussion as to its probable consequences. Mr. Sheriff, however, could not but lament the infatuation of adding, that in order to maintain a friendly disposition, Mr. Canning had already had an interview with Mr. Monroe, the American Minister, at which it was mutually agreed, that if the conduct of either of the countries should be found reprehensible, the aggrieved State, should receive all proper reparation from the other. This information was highly gratifying to the company, and must operate beneficially on the public at large, who might be assured that ministers will neither compromise the honor of their country, nor give any sanction to a wanton attack upon any ships with which we are in amity.

July 31.

The House of Commons, with a liberality worthy the Representatives of the British Nation, last night voted an addition of 20,000l. to the sum formerly given to Dr. Jenner, for the discovery and application of the Vaccine System.

Lord Collingwood, in the Ocean, with a strong detachment of his fleet, had proceeded, we understand, with Sir Arthur Paget, our new Ambassador for Constantinople.

Extract of a private letter from Gottenburgh.

"All the reports you have had in England of the shutting of the Sound, have been grounded, and the Danes have not yet taken a single hostile step against England."

August 3.

Early on Saturday morning a gentleman arrived at Mr. Secretary Canning's office with dispatches from the Continent, which were taken into consideration at a Cabinet Council held at one o'clock. The Council sat till near six o'clock, when Mr. Mills, the Messenger was ordered to hold himself in readiness to leave town at an hour's notice for the Continent.

The expedition which sailed from the Downs on Friday, under the command of Lord Ludlow, it is stated, had on board about 15,000 men.

Admiral Essington sailed yesterday morning from Yarmouth, with the second division of the Baltic fleet, consisting of his Majesty's ships Montreux, (Admiral Essington) Majestic (Admiral Russel) Resolution, Agamemnon, Mars, and several smaller vessels. He is to call off the Humber, for the German Legion, which embarked at Grimsby.—Transports are waiting at Hull, for the 7th and 8th regiments, which are on their march from Ireland. Ministers sent orders on Thursday for several ships who are acquainted with the navigation of the Cattegat and the Baltic, to be in readiness at Hull. The Trinity House at Hull immediately issued the necessary directions.

Dispatches were received last night from Admiral Gambier, who, we understand, was about to put to Sea when they were sent off. Our readers know, by the Tonningen mail which arrived on Friday night, that Bernadotte had set off with great haste for Copenhagen, with a message from Bonaparte.—The object of it is believed to be to induce Denmark to declare against this country, menacing her with overrunning Holstein, if she refuses. Admiral Gambier, however, we should suppose will take effectual steps for preventing the Danish fleet from falling into his hands.

No intelligence has yet been received from the second expedition—but a very short time will elapse before intelligence arrives of a decisive nature. A letter from an officer on board one of the transports says,

"You will soon hear of us, and I am confident, hear of once most important and glorious accounts. We are bound in the most profound secret that ever was kept by any British Ministers."

August 4.

The differences with America are likely to be adjusted. The right of searching ships of war has never, is is said, been insisted upon by our ministers.

August 7.

We understand that orders have been issued to Liverpool and other ports, from the Alien Office, desiring that all passports granted before and since the embargo be considered as null; and that no foreigners be permitted to leave the country.

There is strong reason to believe that the sudden reconciliation between the Emperor Alexander and Bonaparte, and the interchange of their respective orders which followed, have created almost as much surprise and disapprobation in Russia, and in the Russian army, as in this country. When the Emperor Alexander re-crossed the Niemen, and joined his army, decorated with the Cordon of the Legion of Honor, he was not only received without the usual demonstrations of attachment, but there were even strong expressions of dissatisfaction.

August 8.

It was yesterday strongly reported that the Swedes and the German Legion had made a sortie from Stralsund, and killed, wounded, and made prisoners, 5000 Dutch and Spanish troops.—Government have received no accounts with respect to the sortie, and no advices have been received from the Continent this morning.

It was reported last night, that accounts had been received via Portugal, of an attack having been made upon Buenos Ayres, which had failed. We trust the rumour will prove unfounded.

It was reported yesterday evening, that a general embargo had taken place. The American captains caught the alarm, and no less than twelve of them cleared out their vessels in ballast, and dropped down the river immediately. The rumour is unfounded.—It is perfectly true however that no passports are granted, and no foreigners permitted to leave the country.

August 9.

Up to this hour no advices have been received from either the one or the other division of our fleets, which have proceeded on the expeditions.

Yesterday the funds experienced a trifling advance, in consequence of the receipt of the Russian Treaty, which, it had been reported, contained articles hostile to the interests of this country. Mr. Jackson's mission to the Continent, we are informed was in consequence of the 13th article of this treaty, which propoises the mediation of Russia to promote a peace between Britain and France. Our Ministers, it is stated, have professed their desire for a permanent and equitable peace.—Mr. Jackson is instructed to inquire the basis on which France is disposed to treat with us, to enter into explanation of the views of our Cabinet, and to create, by every honorable means, facilities to negociations. The Emperor Alexander, we are assured, has renewed to our cabinet, declarations of the most cordial and animated friendship.

Nothing transpired yesterday respecting the expeditions—the wind having changed to the northward, intelligence of their progress is hourly expected from Ministers. The troops which embarked at Hull and Grimsby, still remain there; other corps have been ordered to join them, and they are expected to sail the latter end of the week.—Observer.

We are still without any further accounts of the progress of our Grand Expedition, towards which public expectation is now so anxiously directed. The promptitude and vigour with which it has been sent on its important destination, are we believe unexampled.—For what remains to be done, we are to look to British valor and enterprise; and in this view experience forbids us to apprehend any disappointment.—Englishman.

Yesterday a bag of letters was received at the post office from Rotterdam, with letters dated on Saturday last. The Expeditions from this country occasioned much speculation and alarm in Holland. The garrisons of Alkmar, Medinblick, &c. had been marched to the Helder, and the troops at Flushing had, in like manner, been reinforced by drafts from the neighboring garrisons, under an apprehension that those places were the objects of our attack.

Dispatches were yesterday afternoon received at the Foreign Office from the Court of Sweden.—Their contents have not transpired.

The expected embargo on American vessels has not yet been adopted, but we are without the means of judging of the cause of this forbearance. We are informed that the American Ministes yesterday communicated to our Cabinet the Proclamation of the American Executive.

"HARWICH, August 2.

"The embarkation of troops, which has been going on here for some days past, was completed yesterday morning, and fifty-four transports got under weigh yesterday morning about noon a whole, with a fine wind for Yarmouth, under convoy of the Comus, the Church having previously joined with Lord Rivelyn and him. In getting out of the harbor, three of the transports got on shore, but floated off with the following tide.

"About 5 P. M. Mr. Bolton, a King's Messenger, arrived here from London, with dispatches for the Commander in Chief of the Expedition, and as he had sailed, the dispatches were sent after him in a fast sailing cutter.—The troops embarked are about 7000 men.

"Sir Home Riggs Popham is Commander in Chief. General Grosvenor and Ward accompany him."

YORK, OCTOBER 3, 1807.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, returned from Niagara on Thursday the 1st inst.

With the learned and Reverend Gentlemen who, in his reader entrance for my last week's impression, deplored that want of "Space" which cut me to the publication of back "a week," as the loose, declaimers of the sublime Sermon at the head of the Letter, I am deprived my general want of "Space."—But when that want is supplied with that publication, it is a great measure allowed to the printer's to the printer, and I will profit accordingly, (if not knowingly) by that, if the good gentleman regarded a matter, I would in charity hope that, he criticised without reading that composition. It has been pronounced by me, whom, I conceive to be competent judges, to be elaborately, learnedly, forcibly and highly poetical, and fortunately for my friend, he left a literary reputation behind him, which neither prejudice can tarnish, nor the credulous or unsuspicious conclude from it. The affection I entertained for him, does not render me blind to his imperfections, nor improperly prepossessed for his performances: their merits will secure them against the censure of thinking of every or ignorance, and a lasting praise with men, whose opinions are deserving or valued. With the concurrence of my employer, I republished the Ode, to refresh in your minds, and as a remark to the gentleman of my friend; the first impression having become rare, and the original not in my possession.

J. CAMERON.

Since our last, we have to announce the death, in this Town, of Mr. ABIJAH JONES, Fourth Magistrate of Markham—and Postmaster, a very man of colonel.

For the York Gazette.

Messrs. PRINTERS,

WHEN travelling, it has always been customary with me to take notes of every thing I conceive worth noting, and in the latter part of the month of July, 1807, I passed through the Town of York on my route to the northern Provinces, and must sincerely, was highly delighted with its situation and manner as well as external appearance. In commerce and navigation, considering the infancy of the settlements appeared to be flourishing in the extreme.—Roads were opening and repairing, and buildings increasing in a considerable degree; one of the latter, however, attended my particular attention, not merely for its structure, but on account of the regulation and government thereof, I allude to the Church, for you must know, Mssrs. Printers, I have from my infancy, been in the habit of attending a place of Divine Worship, and particularly the Church of England whose Worship, and others immediately connected therewith, appear according to my observation and information to have omitted, or rather misunderstood a very material part of their duty.

My veneration for that Supreme Being, who is the dispenser of all things, as well as my inclination, induced me, during my short stay in York, to visit this hallowed place of Worship after my entrance. I was not a little surprised at finding there were no Pews, benches or any other such necessary appendages for Strangers or transient persons of decent appearance, to sit in, but were reduced to the unpleasant necessity, during the service, either of standing as a public spectacle, or of leaving myself among the military who compose the garrison. From your knowledge of Church government, Mssrs Printers, however superficial it may be, you cannot be ignorant that in all the principal cities in England, Ireland Scotland and America, the various Churches are carefully and properly provided with comfortable seats for Strangers of every description.—Why this is not the case in the capital of Upper Canada remains to me a mystery; I confess I am, however, that considerable number of religious and well-disposed inhabitants, whose present circumstances will not enable them to rent or purchase pews, are thereby deprived of the benefits derived from the preaching of the Gospel, which my ultimately lead the unwary into vicious and unproved habits not easily to be eradicated, and probably end in their total destruction.

According to my observation, this deficiency did not appear to arise from a want of room, the building being sufficiently spacious for the purpose, nor the refusal of my requisites seats me to think, from no inobservance of build.

I was credibly informed this Structure was chiefly raised and completed by voluntary contributions from the citizens and inhabitants of and its vicinity, some of whom, in moderate circumstances, liberally subscribed from ten to twelve dollars, and yet a number of these very people are, in a manner, excluded from their whole attendance, for, I presume not from motives of self-interest, as in all probability, a number of years will elapse before I revisit your place, and the polite attention I experienced while among you, will leave an indelible impression on my memory.

Should this hint, Mssrs. Printers, be productive of the desired effect, an investigation of the matter, and a remedy of the evil, my intention will be fully achieved.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

E. Liſt, or have been ſuſpended from the ſame, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be beſtowed by His Majeſty on that meritorious claſs of ſubjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other perſons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were alſo reſident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have ſince died without having their Names inſerted on that Liſt, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwiſe would have derived from His Majeſty's Bounty.

YORK:—PRINTED BY CAMERON AND ENNETT, PRINTERS TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT AJESTY.

TO THE PRINTERS.

GENTLEMEN,

A S the Wise, or would-be-Wits of your State, are incessantly exhausting every nerve with Brethren upon the variety and modification of our Senate. I have ventured to take up the pen, not in our defence (as I expect we are sufficiently enough to justify the jokes with which we were overwhelmed) but to retort, in some degree, upon those Lords of the Creation, who, before they meddle with the beasts in our Creation, who, before they meddle with the beasts in our Creation, would attempt to unmask the motes from their own. And alike! I am not accustomed to write for public inspection, I shall, in the present instance, be as methodical as I have been. Ergo, then I shall begin with the head, that seat of sense.—then, I presume, the seat of its absence; but to my text.—All mankind are Parricides, more or less distinguished by the formal curl, and rigid gravity, now cut, shaved, and barbarized in what I think the Mathematicians, Logicians, or some of the lines of Science call an inverted cone; the longest base now digesting the finest, which, a-mong, formed the rear guard, and most supient ornament of the hinder part. Its fate is truly to be deplored, which depending with such flute and graceful ease, formed a very rich fur to the judgment and the man, whose age and quality were also generally denoted by its length and other physical dimensions.—The curl that once threw haunted three-fourths dignity, is, alas, no more. After fashioning an empire for four centuries, with other great and learned inhabitants, its honors are laid low in the dust, and it is now only known to none, equally disregarded by beaux, Rakehells, Barristers and divines; into the furore for such a desertion!!! Thofe decent and venerable modes of dreffing the hair, and the tender and affectionate manner in which it was for long dealt with, have yielded, to what? why on a rage, an absolute mania for having every hair at variance with its fellow, a supply-furry turmoil, and ridiculous confufion, figurative of the irregulare which its threatening afpect, and formidable out-works conceal from mortal view. Such a modern fcaramouch toupee, with the addition of muftachoes, is highly becoming the military cherubim, and emblematical of martial ferocity and great courage, and befide, thought fo very neceffary to the prefent tactics, that no man, to whom nature has admonished hair with a fpirit of bearing, will be fuffered to be admitted into the German Legion, or amongft the Fencibles. They might alfo be becoming enough to a fierce little Wife of a fellow, either for matches or regulated Soldiers, to the aid of factitious terfers, is perfonable in an object not very terrible in itfelf; but I really think them fuperfluous in men of ordinary ftature and appearance. I have conferred with fome of the learned upon the dereliction of the ancient curl; their general opinion was, that the caufe originated in their frequent expofure to derangement, through the ire of an angry helpmeet, and that the perfect mode of dreffing the hair, agreed in appearance with that, which fuch an amiable remonstre, might be fuppofed to leave the hair poffeffed of. Conclufive I ever replied as to the matter, but how could the rule apply to bachelors, whofe heads exhibited a ftill more daring appearance. I was anfwered, that the bachelors of this metropolis, being generally in point of age, nearly marriageable, had adopted the great political maxim, that a time of peace was the only and proper time to prepare for war: this, Meffrs. Printers, may be a good maxim, I did not think fo, but as you know we are all fond of fpeech and back-ward in argument, I always dropped it at this point. And let you men lay what you will, there are many of your fashions neither more rational, more genteel or more convenient than ours, for a modern beau in the very tip top of the fafhion, looks as if he had juft undergone the operation of having his ears bored.

I fhall barely hint at wigs, articles of prime neceffity to fuch as have no hair to madden, and at the fleek ear lock, late white indicative of the pert clerk, and the little out-rigger or queeze, pointed horizontally, in form like the anterior of a buck's horn, and in appearance, like a wounded finger in a black cot, both obfolete, or nearly fo, except with reftricted Bedagogues, or veterans on half-pay. And as to your hats, their forms have undergone more revolutions than the French government in the fame number of years. The numerals excepted I remember to have been carried with the French Convention, the fubfequent changes any child may recollect. I now proceed to collars, puddings and cravats, and ftuff with the gentlemen if there is one amongft them, who can afford either cravat or collar to their linen (perhaps their flannel fubftitute) who is not puddered and creamed to the ears and collared to the eyes. How unlike the neat little ftock, and sweeter little collar of half a century ago!

Should one of the Sages of that day arife from the dead, and put into abode a modern city or village, he would fuppofe a that, three-fourths of the males were affected with inflammatory fore throat, or fome dire contagion. Grandfathers in fuch a fuppofed cafe, might fly their grand-children, terrified of consumption, and grandmothers fhrink at the fight of a grandfon's head, and the bolftered bulk and fufpicious appearance between his head and his fhoulders; for you know, Meffrs. Printers, our fex will fhriek when frightened. Dear me, when I fee how much I have wrote, and what little progrefs I have made, I am ready to fhriek, and for fear I fhould outright, I will defer my intentions to fome future day, fo am your humble fervant till then.

For the York Gazette.

MESSRS. EDITORS,

AS the time is approaching when our Legiflature will be convened, I have thrown together a few hints, which I wish to make public through the medium of your Gazette.

The inefficiency of our prefent Militia Laws is fuch, as in a great meafure to render the inftitution itfelf a nullity. Our militia are certainly formidable as to numbers, and poffefs the fpirit and determination to defend their properties to the laft inch of ground; but, unarmed, undifciplined and unorganized, how are they to act when their fervices may be required. From the trifling attention which in the province has been heretofore paid to their inftruction in difcipline, or to cherishing a martial fpirit amongft them, the people, in my opinion, have little confidence in themfelves, and lefs in the individuals legally appointed to direct their local and difcipline operations, not from any want of refponsibility in their gentlemen, but from the general laftitude of the ftatutes refpecting the militia. If inftead of calling them out twice a year, (one of the times at the moft inclement and improper feafon that could have been deviled) they were called out and exercifed by companies monthly or twice a month, during the moderate weather, and by battalions quarterly, fomething might be hoped from the change, but in the ftate which they at prefent are, nothing can reasfonably be expected.

The next general want which occurs to me to be of a particular and preffing nature, is that of a regular communication by Poft or Couriers through the Country. I know not whofe province it is to fearch out or apply the remedy, but it certainly is the province of fome one, of of fome department, and the neglect I conceive to imply no fmall degree of criminality, be it whofe it may. The want is too obvious to need enlarging upon, and fuch as to preclude the neceffity of further comment.

I know the talk of inveighing againft meafures to be invidious in the extreme—yet as the free enjoyment of opinion is the birthright of a Britifh fubject, I will with your concurrence, express my candid sentiments refpecting the money voted by our Houfe of Affembly for the fupport of public fchools.

The aftonifhing changes of European connexions and relations, follow each other with fuch rapidity of fucceffion, as to prepare the human mind for any thing which may take place, however unaccountable, unnatural or improbable. This confidered, we know not what moment thofe ligatures and bonds of amity and intereft, which have fo long united ours with the Ruffian empire, may be broken or diffolved. Indeed recent events neither generally expected, with them much fanguine prefage or flattering anticipation. Does it not then behove us to guard againft the poffibility; is it not our duty, independent of our intereft, to leffen or avert the evil by every mean within our compafs? We know that our greateft, and in fact our fole dependence, under the DIVINE PROTECTION, is our Navy; we know how neceffary to that Navy is HEMP; and we alfo know that our principal fupplies have heretofore been derived from Ruffia. Now with a foil more grateful than the Ruffian, with Rivers as navigable for tranfport, and with equal and better directed induftry, why fhould we not (connected and component) make fome great efforts to fupply the want, which in all human probability will be too foon, perhaps too fatally experienced by the Mother Country.

I, Meffrs. Printers, an individual lefs interested probably than moft others, have feen with pain and indignation, a few feeble and impotent attempts to introduce the culture of Hemp in thefe Provinces. It is not the ftale and unavailing trick (it deferves no other name) of offering premiums for famples, nor the puppet-fhew antics of oftentatious and uninterefted focieties, which will induce the farmer to undertake it. Where but one can hope to fucceed, let me afk how many will contend for the prize. No Meffrs. Printers, let the cultivator be interefted, and he will engage in the cultivation with fpirit and avidity; infure him a generous price, infure him a regular and permanent market, but do not confine him, do not oblige him to depend upon a mercantile commiffioner, a folitary one to each Diftrict, and do not reftrict him to the fpecific number of pounds he is to offer for fale. Heaven avert the young induftry of this country from fuch dreary and difcouraging reftrictions. The penurious want of fpirit and enterprife in its merchants, and the want of a more liberal and diffufive policy in its representatives, are reftraints fufficiently grievous and deftructive to that induftry, without the impofition of legal ones.

Had even the fmall fum appropriated to fchools (unite as it was) been applied to the purchafe, or held out as an additional inducement to the growers of Hemp, it would in its diftribution have ftimulated numbers to have made a beginning. I have lived long in Upper Canada, I know its inhabitants well, know the modes and fprings of their induftry, and I know what is required to direct it to its proper objects and in its proper operations.

Had the ever to be regretted, the patriotic and benevolent ELMSLY, whofe ample means and ampler mind, were inceffantly directed to this great national object, continued with us, this Diftrict alone, would at this time have fhipped from fifty to one hundred tons of Hemp annually. Alas it was ordered other wife!!! Of the dead and abfent, their prevantive patriotifm, and probatory policy, charity permits me the bare mention.

I fpeak, Meffrs. Printers, the language of temperance and freedom, but it is the language of genuine love to my country, the language of one who feels deeply interefted in the exemplary and immortal ftruggle which our parent ftate is making for exiftence, for every thing dear, momentous or defirable, and the language of one who would fain affift in that ftruggle, not only by contributing his counfel, his prayers and perfonal fervices, but by his unceafing endeavors and earneft hope to divert, the public induftry to that more vital channel whence it can efficiently aid the glorious cauſe of the empire and enrich this diftant part of it. This part, where Heaven in its kindneſs has once more ſtationed us with the heart-cheering ray, with the happy earneſt of increaſed and increaſing confidence; we are again placed under a direction, where neither reſtrictions upon induſtry nor juſtice are known; where a deſire for the country's proſperity is fully manifeſt from its every meaſure, from his earneſt wiſh to become acquainted with its wants, its claims and its inhabitants, and not one of whoſe meaſures but has ſtamped aſperſion with infamy, and left calumny to prey on its Authors; where ſubjects of munificence and juſtice are eagerly ſought and diſcriminated; where the predominant and governing principle is to ſeek the object and deviſe the moſt grateful manner of attaching and rewarding merit, cherishing patriotiſm, ſtimulating enterpriſe, encouraging harmony, promoting union, and every thing elſe which a great, a good and an energetic mind can embrace. I have long wiſhed and waited to ſee theſe and other ſubjects treated by ſome able hand, which deſpairing of, I have ventured to addreſs you under the ſignature of

MONITOR.

Boſton, Sept. 23.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

Yeſterday the arrival of the John Adams, Callender, from Liverpool, and the New-Galen, Hinckley, from London, furniſhed our regular files of London prints to the 15th of Auguſt.

The intelligence from the Britiſh Northern Expedition by theſe arrivals, is not ſo recent as that given below from Elſineur. It was generally conjectured in England, that Admiral Gambier had orders to act as circumſtances might require, againſt any Confederacy hoſtile to Great Britain.

The Britiſh Parliament was prorogued the 12th Auguſt, and it was ſaid would not again convene until after Chriſtmas. The uſual ſpeech on the occaſion was pitched to a war note, and from its tone, there did not appear any diſpoſition in Great Britain to avail itſelf of the Ruſſian mediation. The whole language of the Britiſh Miniſters in Parliament towards America continued conciliatory; and the papers and private letters from London ſay if war ſhould come, it muſt come from the American ſide of the Atlantic. The arrival of the Revenge was impatiently expected. She probably did not arrive until the 24th Auguſt.

The French Senate have congratulated Jerome Bonaparte on his creation to the kingly dignity. He was to take poſſeſſion of his new kingdom the 30th July; and the Princeſs of Saxony having refuſed her hand to the King Jerome, he was to have been married to the Princeſs of Wirtemberg the 15th Auguſt.

The French papers ſay, an army of 40,000 men was expected near Bayonne, to compel Portugal to ſhut her ports againſt the Engliſh.

The French Emperor has graciouſly given to that part of Poland, now called the Duchy of Warſaw, a new conſtitution, from the manufactory of the Abbe Sieyes—thus have thoſe Poles changed their maſter; and are now ſubjects of the King of Saxony, who is a ſubject of Bonaparte; and thus ends the French farce of the Reſtoration of Poland.

The Duke of Wurtzberg is to be created King of Franconia.

From the North of Europe.

By a gentleman who came paſſenger in the Perſeverance, arrived here from Ruſſia, we learn that on the 6th Auguſt, (a late date from that quarter) twelve ſail of the line, under Admiral Gambier had paſſed the Sound, and were taking in water at Elſineur, and that in the Cattigat other ſhips bound up were met with:—That none were permitted by Admiral Gambier to land on the Daniſh ſhore, excepting one or two of the Chief officers:—That no expectations were entertained at Copenhagen or Elſineur, of an attack of the Engliſh, on the Daniſh poſſeſſions, and that the object of the expedition was kept a profound ſecret:—That Stralſund ſtill continued in the hands of the Swedes, and that no new military event had occurred in Pomerania:—That the Emperor Alexander had arrived at Peterſburg, from the army, with the tidings of peace; but that very few demonſtrations of joy were ſhewn, the people being indifferent to political events:—That General Benningſen had been removed from the command of the Ruſſian army, and another (a Ruſſian) appointed in his place;—That this event was ſuppoſed to have been occaſioned by Benningſen's oppoſition to the peace; and that his celebrity as an officer continued very great.

Later from Elſineur.

Capt. Stickney, of the ſhip America, arrived laſt evening in 36 days from Elſineur, informs, that a Britiſh ſquadron lay there of the 8th Aug. conſiſting of about 20 ſail of the line, from 15 to 20 frigates, a large number of ſhips and brigs, bomb veſſels, fire ſhips, &c. 200 ſail of tranſports, with 40,000 troops. Many of the veſſels were loaded with ordnance. Capt. S. further informs, that a Britiſh miniſter landed at Elſineur and proceeded to Copenhagen, to enquire of the Daniſh government, whether they intended to ſide with the French or Engliſh; and that the anſwer was, that they intended to preſerve their neutrality.

LONDON, Auguſt 14.

HIS MAJESTY'S SPEECH.

Parliament was prorogued this afternoon with the following ſpeech from his Majeſty's commiſſioners:—

My Lords and Gentlemen,

We have it in command from his Majeſty to expreſs the ſatisfaction with which he finds himſelf enabled to give you that reaſe which, after the great and diligent exertions, which you have made in the diſpatch of public buſineſs, muſt at this advanced ſeaſon of the year be particularly deſirable.

His Majeſty has been graciouſly pleaſed to direct us to return his thanks for the ſteady loyalty and attachment to his Perſon and Government, and zealous devotion to the public ſervice, which have characteriſed all your deliberations, and moſt eſpecially to thank you for the ſeaſonable exertions which you have enabled him to make for the augmentation of the military force of his kingdom.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

His Majeſty has commanded us to return you his earneſt thanks for the ſupplies which you have granted him with ſo much cheerfulneſs for the current year; and when he conſiders the proviſion which you have made for thoſe contingent and unforeſeen ſervices, which the events of the war may render neceſſary, his Majeſty has the greateſt ſatisfaction in recognizing the wiſdom wherewith, in a time of extraordinary difficulties, you have anticipated the poſſible demands which thoſe difficulties may occaſion.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

His Majeſty commands us to aſſure you, that he deeply deplores the unfortunate iſſue of the war on the continent.

The immenſe extenſion of the power and influence of France, and the undiſguiſed determination of the enemy to employ the means and reſources of thoſe countries which he poſſeſſes or controuls, for the purpoſe of effecting the ruin of this kingdom, undoubtedly preſent a formidable view of the dangers and difficulties which the country has to encounter.

But his Majeſty truſts that the loyal and brave people over whom he reigns are not to be daunted or diſheartened.

From the recollection of thoſe diſſic .. under which his people have ſucceſsfully ſtruggled, and of thoſe dangers which they have happily ſurmounted, his Majeſty derives the conſolation of believing, that the ſame ſpirit and perſeverance which have hitherto remained unbroken will continue to be exerted with unabated vigor and ſucceſs.

And while his Majeſty commands us to repeat the aſſurances of his conſtant readineſs to entertain any propoſals that may lead to a ſecure and honorable peace, he commands us at the ſame time to expreſs his confidence, that his parliament and his people will feel with him the neceſſity of perſevering in thoſe vigorous efforts which alone can give the character of honor to any negociation, or the proſpect of ſecurity or permanency to any peace: His Majeſty, therefore, truſts that his people will always be ready to ſupport him in every meaſure which may be neceſſary to defeat the deſigns of his enemies againſt the independence of his Majeſty's dominions, and to maintain againſt any raſhne pretenſions, and againſt any hoſtile confederacy, thoſe juſt rights which his Majeſty is always deſirous to exerciſe with temper and moderation, but which, as eſſential to the honor of his crown, and true intereſts of his people, he is determined never to ſurrender.

A moſt wicked and diabolical conſpiracy (ſays the London Courier of July 20) has lately been diſcovered in the 28th regiment of Foot, ſtationed at Maiden, in Eſſex. The conſpirators having heard that many of our ſoldiers on their return from Egypt, were affliſted with a diſorder called the Opthalmia, which has occaſioned blindneſs, originated a report that the complaint was infectious, and that about three hundred of that regiment had experienced its dreadful effects. Many of the men exhibited every appearance of this alarming calamity. Some were totally blind, and others had ſuffered the loſs of one eye. Government became much alarmed at the affair, and ſurgeons of eminence were ſent down to inveſtigate the diſorder. Some of the men were in conſequence diſcharged, and others were penſioned and ſent to Chelſea.—One man expreſſing a with to be ſent home to Ireland, was allowed a guide to attend him. At length it appears by the confeſſion of one, who became an evidence againſt the reſt, that the blindneſs was temporary, and cauſed by application of a certain ointment to the eyes. In general the blindneſs did not continue longer than three weeks, unleſs to continue the deception a repetition of the ointment was adopted.

Every man uſing the ointment was bound by a particular oath deviſed for the occaſion, not to diſcover the ſecret. This man ſtated that this ſtrange and abominable ſcheme was engaged in for the purpoſe of procuring diſcharges, or being ſent to Chelſea, &c. Mr. Graham the Magiſtrate, and Mr. Stafford, Unier Clerk of Bow ſtreet, to whom the public is already ſo much indebted, have attended ſeveral examinations of the culpritis at Maldon. The laſt took place on Friday, when the witneſs depoſed, that the ointment was uſed by nearly 300 men; ſome cauſed both eyes to be affected, and others thought it ſufficient to become blind in the ſtretock eye only. The witneſs alſo ſtated, that on a certain morning after one of his comrades had uſed the pernicious ointment, he met him and ſaid, "How do you do.—?" "By J—, charmingly (ſaid he) for I am quite blind of one eye, and devil a muck can I ſee with the other." The oath was proved againſt twenty-eight who were committed to Chelmsford gaol, and will take their trials on Tueſday next for a conſpiracy, under the Mutiny Act, which declares, that "any perſon being legally enliſted for his Majeſty's ſervice; and ſhall, either by maiming himſelf, or cauſing himſelf to be maimed, for the purpoſe of obtaining his diſcharge, is liable to be tried by the Civil Power, and tranſported for life." The others implicated, as far as regards the ointment, will be tried by a Court Martial, as ſoon as it can be aſſembled in the Eaſtern Diſtrict.

DOCTOR J. GLENNON,

RESPECTFULLY begs leave to inform the Public and the Inhabitants of York in particular, that he has commenced buſineſs at the houſe of Mr. Paul Marian. He flatters himſelf that the opportunity he has had of acquiring a knowledge of his profeſſion, at one of the firſt Colleges in Europe, will enable him to merit the approbation of thoſe who may be pleaſed to favor him with their commands.

YORK, OCTOBER 10, 1807.

Nothing in our laſt London dates (Aug 15th) had tranſpired, reſpecting the Grand Expedition to which the national attention was ſo anxiouſly directed.—Our difficulties with the Americans appear to us to be in an amicable train of adjuſtment, the impoſſibility to equal to the inquiry of a ſtripe. No is to afford, what would either gain by it, the ſatisfaction is obvious. God forbid that ſuch an Anti-chriſtian ſpirit ſhould prevail with the Rulers of the two countries as to engage in a conteſt, which, however ſucceſsful either would be unſatisfied, without the poſſibility of advantage to either. The feeling mind revolts from the idea.

We are ſorry to learn, that the Emperor of Auſtria, and other diſpoſſeſſors of that Empire, (in which exertions, ſtark great hopes were entertained,) have accepted thecondolence by the remaining members of Bonaparte's Legion of Honour, the iſſuing of Brown's and aſſaſſins.

It is impoſſible to ſay, where Bonaparte will next eſtabliſh kingdoms for his relations and relations; the probability is, that he may turn his eyes to Spain and Portugal.

Col. Burr has been requeſted upon the charges of high treaſon and miſdemeanors againſt the United States.

The ſquirrels, mice and jays have committed very conſiderable depredations upon the crops in this diſtrict.

The ſpecie collected in the Pruſſian territories, and transmitted to Paris, ſilled forty-ſive waggons—Rotzd. Corſier.

An explofion of 30,000 lbs of powder, at Luxemburg, has ruined upwards of 200 families.

By an arrival from Halifax, we learn that two others of the privateers taken out of the Chelapeake, have been ſentenced to receive 500 laſhes. One is ſaid to have been born in the Weſt-Indies, (probably Martin.) Boſt. Pal.

About to be publiſhed by Van Benthuyſen & Wood, in the city of Albany, a weekly Literary and Miſcella neous Paper to be entitled "THE GUARDIAN." The very intereſtable opinion expreſſed of ſuch an eſtabliſhment in that city, ſeems our earneſt intreaty to ſucceed, and the encouragement of its papers.—Subſcriptions will be received at this Office, where the proſpectus may be ſeen.

HALIFAX TRIAL.

Copies of the Trial, at Halifax, of one of the Men (WILSON,) taken from the Chesapeake, have been received in town.

Letter from the Commander of the Leopard, to the Commander of the Chesapeake, previous to the attack.

"The Captain of his Britannic Majesty's ship Leopard, has the honor to enclose the Captain of the United States frigate Chesapeake, an order from the hon. Vice-Admiral Berkeley, Commander in Chief of his Majesty's ships on the North American station, respecting some deserters from the ships (there in mentioned) under his command, and supposed now to be serving as part of the crew of the Chesapeake.

"The Captain of the Leopard will not presume to say any thing in addition to what the Commander in Chief has stated, more than to express an hope, that every circumstance respecting them may be adjusted, in such a manner, that the harmony subsisting between the two countries, may remain undisturbed."

The boat after an absence of three quarters of an hour, returning with the following answer.

"I know no such men as you describe; the officers that were on the recruiting service for this ship, were particularly instructed by the government, through me, not to enter any deserters from his Britannic Majesty's ships; nor do I know of any being here.

"I am also instructed never to permit the crew of any ship that I command, to be mustered by any other but her own officers; it is my disposition to preserve harmony; and I hope this answer to your dispatch will prove satisfactory.

(Signed) JAMES BARRON.
Commander of the U. S. ship Chesapeake.

Copy of a letter from Commodore Barron to Capt. Humphreys, after the Chesapeake had struck.

"Sir,

"I consider the frigate Chesapeak as your prize, and am ready to deliver her to any officer authorized to receive her.—By the return of the boat I shall expect your answer; and have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BARRON.

ANSWER.

His Majesty's ship Leopard at Sea, 22d June, 1807.

SIR,

"Having to the utmost of my power, fulfilled the instructions of my Commander in Chief, I have nothing more to define; and must in consequence, proceed to join the remainder of the squadron; repeating, that I am ready to give you every assistance in my power, and do most sincerely deplore, that any lives should have been lost in the execution of my service, which might have been adjusted more amicably, not only with respect to ourselves, but to the nations, to which we respectively belong. I have the honor to be Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

S. P. HUMPHREYS.

Extract from the Trial.

"The prisoner was called upon for his defence: having been told, at the examination of each witness, that he might ask any question he pleased.—After retiring for a short time with the Judge Advocate, he returned into court and stated—that the evidence brought against him was so strong, there was but little left for him to say in his defence: but that the reason for his hiding in the coal hole, was for fear of the Americans making him fight against his country, which he declared he would not do on any account; that he, with all the men who deserted from the Halifax, were perfuaded by the boatswain to enter for the Chesapeake, to protect themselves, which they did: Lt. Sinclair asked them if they had not a second name. About 30 men went with him in the first draft to the Chesapeake, when Captain Gordon mustered them, and they were mustered again in Hampton Roads by the Commodore. He requested leave to call one evidence in again—to ask his officers for a character, and then threw himself at the mercy of the court."

The following are from the observations of the President of the Court-Martial in pronouncing the sentence:—

"You have now heard the awful sentence of the court—You have been found guilty of deserting from the service of your country, which at all times is highly criminal; if it was possible to make it more so, it is at the present crisis, when Great Britain is struggling for her very existence.

"Your deserting from the Halifax, and entering into the American Navy, has been attended with most serious and unfortunate consequences, affecting the peace of both countries."

Extract from Remarks subjoined at Halifax to the Trial.

"When the Chichester left the West Indies—four men, two belonging to the Royal Artillery, one of the 15th regiment, and one to the 37th—who had been unwell, but were getting into a state of convalescence, were sent on board of her, that in a voyage to the States, their recovery might be perfected.—These men deserted from the Chichester, and, with their British uniforms on, entered into the American service.—They were seen on shore after they had entered, by the Serjeant of Marines of the Chichester, and one of them had the impudence to offer to shake hands with them, but he rejected his offer with becoming contempt.

These men were applied for by captain Douglas, the Commanding officer of the squadron in the Chesapeake, and the answer he received was, if any such men had enlisted they were gone up the country with a detachment. * * * *.

The American sloop of war Wasp, which sailed the beginning of June, with the President's objections to the pending treaty, as an additional proof of friendly intention, carried with her three British deserters. * *

It doubt can still remain in the mind of any person whether commodore Barron knew that the men who were taken out of his ship were British deserters, we copy the following extracts from their own voluntary confessions:—

John Strachan, after giving an account of his defertion from the Melampus, the first of Feb. in company with Ware, Mattin, and Little, says "that they went to Norfolk, where he, Martin and Ware, entered for the Chesapeake—that he knew the faces of several Englishmen on board the Chesapeake, but did not know their names—that Commodore Barron promised to protect him."

William Ware says "that when they came before Commodore Barron at the Navy-Yard at Washington, he promised to protect them although they were deserters from a British man of war."

Jenkins Ratford, before his execution, acknowledged, "that he was born in London, and that he voluntarily entered into his Majesty's service."

FOR THE YORK GAZETTE.

GENTLEMEN,

YOUR prompt insertion of my first, has encouraged me to address a second letter to you upon subjects of public interest.

The Provincial Squint, relative to the caption of debtors, has heretofore been offered upon agreeably to a judicial contribution, which however continues to the spirit, is directly contrary to the letter of that statute, which to plain an law gauge can make it. This fact established (I believe no one can doubt it) the immediate necessity of a new statute expressive of the intention; judicial influence, or party differences, however expedient, cannot be paramount to positive Law, and its operation in the case assigned as, however innocent or beneficial, is yet a precedent dangerous to precedent. The changes and conflicts difference (often in the same person) of judicial as well as moral opinion, may limit future day, perhaps nor a different one, reverse the confidence under which that is done now operates, and open a wide field for carrying complaint and uncertainty. As an individual, I am certainly as great an enemy to vexatious arrests, as any person can be, and appreciate the value of perfect liberty as its highest price; yet I am an equally interested advocate for general justice. I hope I may never for dissipating the conduct of the Legislature, a matter of fashion or inclination, that it may be expressed into a weapon of impudence, or wielded for purposes of perfection or malignancy. The system which is left to itself and subject but to the moral interest of moral consideration, might if operative to the rigours of the latter, become in the hands of a litigious or malicious person, a source of incessant and inquisitive torment. Whenever we speak of the law, we speak of the only determining medium, in severely fierce, and it is to be considered, that there are few of us who are the most favoured in points of circumstances, who are not indebted in small sums; the pride or fortune, the difference of avocations, and the ordinary relations of life, beget in ordinary conciliations and render confidence and general dependence necessary, and from a principle, if not primitive bond of union. These things premised, it follows that bailiffs or pleaders will find imitations of the order converted to change of dress, from one to other importance, as often as inclination or ability may require; in such case would it be expedient, would it be just, or would it be just, that at circumstance strike most worthy, or undignified moments, a person at refreshment and property should be arrested in his progress or lawful pursuits, for a sum publicly barely sufficient to pay for a Cyprus, when perhaps three or four times as much was subject to a counter-claim of account; surely not, or should the industrious and established farmer, who in seeking a market for his produce, might be obliged to pass the provincial limits, be detained by a proclivity to all likelihood, by the vagrant who had labored a single day in his harvest field. Impossible, no Legislature could become an intentional or voluntary party to such oppression; such outrage upon moral or physical justice, if it was unquestionably intended, primarily, to operate beneficially, by duly modified it would, and become one of consequence and utility to the community. I will offer, and may be one may be ruthy proves, that has it been, what it ought to have been, this province would be 50,000l. richer than it at present is, it never could have intended to apply equally and indiscriminately, or to aggrieve the wholesome and established settler, whether farmer, merchant or mechanic, in his application to the contrary, as the settlements in this country are nearly all or wholly transient ones, they are subject in a peculiar and distressing degree, to depredations from the vagrants and truculent persons of all countries, whether Europeans or upwards on hundreds of pounds. The magnitude of the evil and the facility with which thefts can escape to a territory, where our justice cannot overtake them, are doubtless considered by the framers of the act; it is charitable and the only inference, which can be drawn from the act itself be just; its misfortune, its glaring deficiency is, that it contains no specific provision, to whom it shall or shall not apply, or wherefore its intent; principle, it was designed to apply generally or of all. In its present form and operation, it must either remain on the footing of a dead letter or letter without spirit, or whole spirit is neither defined nor understood; 4 week commencements in my frail opinion, yet the only ones it is entitled to!!! That it should have been suffered to remain so long, in a time of doubtful policy and of relationship construction, has excited astonishment in me. If as I have first hinted, the judicial construction accords with the spirit, (which I very much doubt,) wherein which I am the first to lament the strongest possible reason, for its amendment or repeal. The possibility of providing specific statutes for specific crimes is admitted, and as every crime has its branches, its shades and gradations of guilt, a great deal will be left to construction, which must appropriate itself to the criminal considerations; but, that a positive statute, plain, literal and obvious, should remain subject to the fallacy or inconsistency of construction, is unincongruity in a British Legislature, which their forefathers will hardly believe. The assumption of a construction, or a dispording power by the judiciature, would upon a statute framed for an ordinary purpose, however differently enacted, would urge me, were I a member of the Legislature, to move for the repeal of the act itself, or to an attempt to simplify and elucidate its spirit, beyond the reach of vague inference, the concourse of judicial opinion, or the perversion of its principle.

This review leads me into a strange digression, and to ask the following question, wholly unconnected with the preceding subject; what can be the general opinion of a man who is an acknowledged subject, claiming the protection of the laws, and the immunities of a denizen, possessed of landed and moveable property, and boasting allegiance, and who, from innate malignity, ill-appointed ambition, or selfish motives, has adopted a direction of a foreign emissary, openly and grossly attempts to disaffect the people to the government, to alienate their confidence from their paternal public functionaries, not only by the whole tenor of his private conduct, but by the audacious publication of the most nefarious falsehoods; by charging every man who has sufficient merit to obtain the confidence of a public employment, with oppression, peculation, venality, and the want of every virtuous principle and estimable quality.—Our government Messrs. Printers, is renowned for its liberal policy, in attaching its ministerial favourites, by its munificence and the certainty of progressive elevation; but the servant who is sullied into office with no other moral or physical claim, than that of having been procreative or bully to some superior (unless he be possessed of greater merit than genuine of such honorable gainings ordinarily are) may, from the rewards of his patron, calculate his ways, with all his facility and certainty, an advancement can an eclipse. The viper Messrs. Printers, which has made its lodgment in the bosom, is more dangerous than that, which is but preparing to leap, in the proportion that the domestic is more dangerous than the foreign enemy. Our preferrers may Messrs. Printers, has neither to struggle with the imbecility of age, nor contend with the regular recurrence or relentless dominion of natural pain; his sentiments and opinions just and genuine in themselves, cannot be warped nor wrought upon by the impetuosity of unbridling headlands or armed malcontents, why, were there both, (which thank HEAVEN there is not,) to unsheath the sabre; with a rule of conduct founded upon unerring data, he can never be betrayed or intimidated into appointments which his judgment disapproves; and I will venture to predict, that he will not violate the laws of decorum, nor insult any district of this province, by appointing to an office of trust and confidence, any man's mental whether as he be a judge's son's or a grandson's. This sentimental digression Messrs. Printers, has led me from my subject, I shall resume it partially by suggesting to the legislature, that a short committee from both houses might not be unprofitably employed, in revising the provincial statutes and expunging upon them from beginning to end, all so terms of the nature mentioned in the Assembly; I will suggest them from their apparent and intended situations, when opposite or ill-digested to practical land-holders, for their consideration, rather than to legislate.

I am Gentlemen,
MONITOR.

York, 17th Oct. 1807.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.

The following well written remarks from Bell's Weekly Messenger, a London paper, will be read with much pleasure, by every real friend to the United States.

CONSEQUENCES AND IMPOLICY OF A WAR WITH AMERICA.

The intelligence of the week has produced one event upon which it is impossible to remain without a sentiment of imagination. The intemperance of one of our admirals has nearly involved us in a war with America. The intemperance of the party-writers at home has hurried them not only to approve of the conduct of our officers, but to make the unqualified assertion, that a war with America would be an undoubted good—an absolute advantage to us.

A war with America is an undoubted good!—We really with that these advocates for war would consult the merchants of London, Liverpool and Bristol. They would soon be compelled into other conclusions.

America, by these advocates, monopolizes the whole of our colonial carrying trade. This is a manifest injury to British commerce. Indeed! Why is it, good friends, that our merchants prefer the Americans as carriers to carriers of their own nation? For no other reason, but because as a neutral, America can afford to take their commodities at a lower freightage—and is not this an indispensable advantage both to the individual merchant and to the general commerce of the country? Are not our commodities thus enabled to come cheaper to market, and thereby ensure a more certain and more speedy sale.

It appears, therefore, in this point of view, the carrying trade of America is of real benefit to the general commerce of England.

But the shipping trade, says the party-writers, must proportionately suffer—Certainly. But it will not, we hope be contended, that the interests of the general commerce are to be sacrificed to one particular branch—the shipping or country trade.

There are, indeed, certain advantages, which are essential to neutrals, and which no belligerent power should grudge to its neutral neighbor, inasmuch as they themselves participate in the benefit. Commerce would not only languish, but, in many respects would be totally extinguished, if these neutral mediums were to be prohibited.

In what manner, for example, is it, that our colonial produce obtains admission into France and Germany, in despite of all the oppressive regulations of the French Emperor? It is only through these neutral mediums. In a word, what America takes with one hand, she gives us tenfold with another. She is above a carrier or an agent. Her flag covers the English as well as the French manufactures. She has no partiality but that of gain, and as this may be procured equally on both sides, fo will America be found equally advantageous to both.

If America were to be cut off from the carrying trade, say the party writers, the British merchant would be compelled to employ his own countrymen.

We have already answered this argument. The employment of the neutral medium is of benefit to the general commerce, and the interests of one branch must not be consulted at the expense of the whole. The merchants must not lend their commodities into foreign markets, at a price amounting to a prohibition of all purchase, for no other purpose but that they would employ their own countrymen. They must not pay convoy and insurance on commodities (sugars, for example) which will scarcely pay the simple freightage.

A very shallow objection is here made.—These commodities, say they, are articles of necessity; the buyers must have them, and will therefore pay the price, be it what it may.

In the first place, other commodities will enter into competition with them, and tho' not so good, the difference being more than compensated by the inferior price will effectually find the preference.

In the second place, in the circumstance of any advanced price, even the necessary buyers take a less quantity than what—But this diminished consumption is so much dead loss to the merchant and manufacturer. It will not, we hope, be contended, that there is a new thing in the advance of price which can indemnify him for his diminished sale. The advanced price is but the defrayment of his advanced expende. If he add any thing beyond it, in a forced augmentation of his profits beyond their natural level, it of course subjects him to be undersold by those who will sell at a fair profit. By carrying on this, therefore, as we have above said, by his advanced price, and therefore must necessarily lose by his diminished sale.

Such, then, would be the necessary effects of forcing trade into an unnatural channel—of compelling our merchants, in event, and under every circumstance, to employ only British shipping, and dismiss the neutral medium.

Our commerce would suffer, and ultimately our shipping. We should shortly have more ships, but fewer commodities. The ship builders would then have just cause of complaint, that had employed their capitals in building vessels, which have only to rot in the docks.

The result is, that nothing is to be gained by a war with America. In her carrying trade the carries for us, and the carries for our enemy. It would be a manifest injury to our general commerce to deprive her of the former, and with respect to the latter, we should not gain that of which we should deprive America. We could not supply her place by becoming carriers to the enemy; neither should we much distress the enemy by cutting off his mean of conveyance—we should only throw this carrying trade into another channel—whilst the Danes are neutral, it would be to no purpose to cut off the neutral medium of America.

We might add, that we perhaps gain as much on one hand as we lose on the other by this neutral communication—America carries English manufactures as often at half as she carries French—we might almost say, that in her character as a neutral trader she carries scarcely any thing else but English goods.

We have entered into some detail upon this subject, as there seems to be a strange misconception upon the very first principles of political economy.—It is contended, for the first time, that the merchant will lose nothing by being compelled to sell dear; and that it is a matter of perfect indifference in commerce, whether the commodity reaches its market by a direct road, and therefore at a natural price, or through all the obstacles of possible interruption, and therefore at a very disproportionable and a very unnatural price.

"The only difference would be," say they, quoting the words of Mr. Randolph, an American senator, "that the Americans will give a Joe for a commodity, where they formerly give a dollar."

This might be the difference to such a man as Mr. Randolph, who could equally afford to have the commodity, whether it cost a Joe or a dollar. But it would be very different with respect to the Americans in general. Every one could not purchase at a Joe who purchased at a dollar. Some would endeavor, therefore, to do without it, others would begin to think of substitutes. Necessity is the mother of invention. Let us not drive the Americans to resources from which if may be afterwards very difficult to recal them.

GEN. BENNINGSEN'S DISPATCHES.

BATTLE OF FRIEDLAND, &c.

Copies of Dispatches from General Benningsen, to the Emperor Alexander.

Head-Quarters at Wehlau, June 3—15.

The enemy having immediately directed the whole of his force from Heilsberg towards Friedland and Wehlau, with an intention to cut off my army from the Pregel, I humbly beg leave to inform your Royal Majesty, that I could not from any position at Schippenbeil, but made a forced march to Friedland on the 1—13th instant.

The advanced detachment, which I sent forward to occupy that town, found the place at 3 P. M. in the possession of four squadrons of the enemy, which were, however, driven out immediately.

In order to keep possession of the town, that my troops might rest from their fatigue, I sent some infantry to the left bank of the Alle during the night.

But in the morning at break of day, the enemy attacked my advanced posts, and at half after five the cannonade commenced. I therefore sent another division of my army across the river, to support the other troops, as I had reason to suppose that the enemy's was only had some up.

The enemy was repulsed at every point, and the troops fought for fourteen hours together with the greatest bravery, and were crowned always victorious. General Oudinot, whose division formed the right wing of the enemy, attempted to make an attack with the bayonet; but my left wing eagerly advanced upon him, and destroyed an entire column. Another column was routed. The cavalry of my right wing, also made an impetuous and successful attack upon the enemy's cuirassiers, pursuing them as far as Heinrichsdorff, which village supported the left wing of the enemy.

At three in the afternoon, Bonaparte arrived in person, with the rest of his army, and sheltered by a wood he reinforced his right wing in such a degree, that at 6h, when he commenced a fresh attack and opened upon my left wing a masked battery of four pieces of cannon, I was under the necessity of resolving to commence my retreat, which was effected in the best order, and my rear stopped the whole force of the enemy, until all my troops had crossed the Alle. Although my loss during a battle which lasted 16 hours, and from my army's being obliged to file off over a bridge which was exposed to the enemy's artillery, cannot be inconsiderable, the enemy must have lost an equal number at least, since the attack with the bayonet, and that of the cavalry, it caused him a great loss, and as in the former we took from him the Eagle of the 13th regiment of the line. Nor has the enemy taken any of our prisoners but such as were dangerously wounded, and which could not be removed from the town, and only some dismounted pieces of cannon belonging to the regiments, with a few which could not be removed, because the horses attached to them had been shot, fell into his hands. On the other hand, all our pieces of camp artillery were got off safe. I am now taking with my army a position behind the Pregel, near Wehlau, causing all the passes of that river, as far as Koningsberg and Insterburg, to be occupied by my troops, in consequence whereof I have re-opened a communication with General L'Estocq. If the enemy should venture to cross the Pregel, I shall attack him immediately, and the reinforcements with are already on their march, will soon supply my loss, and enable me once more to cope with the enemy.

(Signed) BENNINGSEN.

ANOTHER DISPATCH.

From the Camp at Schillupischken, June 5—17.

After the surrender of Koningsberg, my position at Wehlau, was no longer tenable, and having informed general L'Estocq that I should make my retreat on the road of Tilsit, I requested him to follow me; I commenced the retreat yesterday. I am happy, most humbly to inform your Royal Majesty, that I have this day formed a junction with general, and that my army besides, has this day received a reinforcement of 3000 men.—Moreover, the division from Cow, will pass the frontier to morrow, consequently my loss will not only be replaced in a very short time, but I shall even be stronger than I was before the battle of Friedland. Thus of all the results of that loft battle, the surrender of Koningsberg, proves the worst; for unless the enemy pursue me with too great a superiority of numbers, and provided be allow me a sufficient time to draw towards my reinforcements, I shall directly advance and I hope to receive from the enemy the advantages which he has obtained.

(Signed) BENNINGSEN.

WILLIAM GRAHAM.

Yonge Street, 14th 1807.

LONDON, August 29.

With respect to the great object of national expectation, dispatches from Admiral Gambier, and the proceedings of the British fleet before Copenhagen, no fresh intelligence had been received at a late hour last night.

A letter from Yarmouth had reached the city by express, which mentions that a merchantman had put into that port, bringing intelligence of her having been actually present at the commencement of the bombardment of Copenhagen on the 17th.

An expedition more formidable for mischief of any kind was never fitted out by this kingdom. The Danes have summed all their batteries, and are prepared to resist; unless we anticipate them here, we might as well have stole at home. Whatever you do, strike the blow! You have gone too far for negotiation to do you any good.

The foreign news of the week is not of much interest. The king of Sweden still keeps up a bustles war in Pomerania, and Strallsund still resists. It is a matter of regret that so much courage and military skill as the Swedish troops possess, should be suffered to evisperate in an enterprise which neither conduct nor courage can lead to any advantageous result. Brick and mortar have only a certain power of resistance; when that power is abated or overcome, the Swedish troops must bear from their ruins, and leave them to their enemies.

The French papers contain little news worthy of a comment. All the French marshals are to be created Dukes, and provided for in Germany and Poland. Talleyrand is to figure in the office of secretary of State, and become the second man in the empire. The peace of Tilsit is likely to give both himself and his master the ottium cum dignitate.

Dispatches were on Thursday received from Gen. Frazier, at Alexandria, dated May 30. He had been reinforced by two regiments from Sicily, the 52d and another.—Provisions were abundant, and the enemy had shown no disposition to attack Alexandria, the fortifications of which had been considerably strengthened. They had collected, however, between 7 and 8000 men near Roletta. Our prisoners at Cairo, it is said, were in general in good health, and treated with kindness. Several meffages had paffed between General Frazer and the Pacha respecting them.

Sir James Craig, who is going out as commander in chief of the British colonies in North America, we understand, will take three regiments with him, of which the 52 (or Old Buffs) is to be one.

SEIZURE OF COPENHAGEN.

Our formidable expedition to the Baltic has now reached its destination and its object. It appears that a demand was made by Mr. Jackson, the British Negociator, of the Prince Royal of Denmark, the substance of which was as follows:—"That the late perfect disunion of the continent it was impossible to distinguish any longer between a neutral and an enemy, but by her becoming an ally or an open foe;—that something therefore was now indispensably necessary for the future security and real disposition of every State; and that, whilst the influence of an implacable enemy predominated over every power within his reach, and either submitted or consented into immediate hostility every engagement or inclination unfavorable to his interests, it was impossible to consider the ordinary covenants of any neutral nation under as a sufficient security for her own independence, or for those who confide in her neutrality. It became the duty of England therefore, to discriminate, in these circumstances, between rights paramount and irritable handling upon all States, and rights which might be suffered to relax and yield to that flate of expediency in which a certain course of measures might involve the existence of a nation.

"In this light, therefore, it was dangerous to Great Britain, and therefore ceased to be her duty, to recognise any longer the neutrality of Denmark, without a sufficient pledge—that this pledge was a permission to garrison the fortresses which command the passage of the Sound and the navigation of the Baltic, together with the free use of the Danish ports for her shipping, until such times as the present circumstances cease, the exigency on the part of Great Britain should likewise determine."

It is scarcely to be doubted, but that the Prince Royal was fully prepared with this demand. He is said, however, to have replied with great calmness and intrepidity. "That the courts of conduct required of Denmark was not of a neutral or even of an ally, but of a belligerent. He was bound therefore, in all feats of dignity, to repel the demand made upon her—and it remained for England to seek for her justification to the general judgement of Europe, which would determine on which fide the neutrality of the two kingdoms was first violated. Denmark has now no chance but to resist; while England had that of honor and a reserve."

CINCINNATI, Aug. 24.

A correspondent informs, he received the following information from one of Burr's followers who has lately returned to this neighborhood from the abortive golden expedition, viz. that most of their boats had false bottoms, in which were concealed arms and other warlike preparations—that to the bottom of other boats were attached boxes painted and made water tight, and so ingeniously contrived, that by a touch they could be disengaged and precipitated to the bottom of the river, for their better concealment in case of danger of discovery—that such boats were also filled with provisions, &c. that the number of muskets, excluding of field ordinance, exported down the Mississippi, amounted to many thousand of Bonds. Being asked if they did not amount to 30,000, he reserved, they far exceeded that number. The men observed, that the followers of Burr, were left in the greatest distress, for want of the means of returning to their respective homes; that he overtook thirty of them on the road, sick, without money and unable to proceed; that Morgan Neville, one of Burr's aids, had gone up the Arkansa river. He observed further, that Burr's paymaster, Ursin de Lacy, a lawyer from Kentucky, had given him ten dollars, on account of pay, which was all he ever received of him.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.

Captain Parkard, in a letter from Martinico, informs, that the British Squadron had arrived at Barbadoes at that place, and the Swift boat remained there when he left, waiting for dispatches to come—that the Belleisle, Capt. Bingo, had sailed for the Chesapeake, and that a frigate was ordered to sail for Halifax, the ships of war to come always, on account of the gathering of fever transports, with troops on board, prepared for London.

The York Gazette.

YORK, OCTOBER 17, 1807.

Sir James Craig, K. B. who is appointed Captain General, Governor and Commander in Chief of British America, and who was to have sailed for that station in the early in August last, may be expected to have arrived at Quebec before this time.—We understand the Acting General of this Province comes by the first route and conveyance

A strong military force is also under way, or is raised. To give a faithful account of the preparations and the resources for the respective forces, of parties Provence has a respectable force of defence. Should an attempt be made, where we hope will not be the case, the capture of the British possessions in America, would not be a matter of so much easy accomplishment. The British Ministry continue (August 25th) to manifest the most decisive efforts, to bring war to a speedier issue with the Americans or an amicable one.

COMMUNICATION.

The Chief Justice arrived here on Saturday last, from the London and Western Circuit; we are much gratified at hearing that, the Affizes in both places were Maiden.—We do not find that the public mind (in those Districts) has been agitated by the machinations of address-mongers, whose progress at the preceding Affizes, was so grossly marked by fowing the seeds of popular delusion and who, in the mockery of Form were passing a way for the introduction of Tragedy.

Proclamation.

By His Excellency FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS in and by an act of the parliament of this province, made and passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, entitled, "an act to revive and continue an act passed in the forty-second year of his present majesty, entitled, "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same, respectively, after reciting that an act passed in the forty second year of his present majesty, entitled "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry, within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same respectively, which was to continue in force for three years, and no longer, was expired, and it was expedient that the same should be revived and continued—it is enacted that the said act should, from and after the passing of that act, be revived, and the same was thereby revived and continued in force and effect for two years, and no longer.

And whereas, as well with reference to the interest of his majesty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majesty's subjects resident within this province, it hath been ascertained that there exists immediate occasion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after specified.

YORK:—PRINTED BY CAMERON AND BENNETT, PRINTERS TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

FOR THE YORK GAZETTE.

Niagara, 12th October, 1807.

MESSRS. PRINTERS,

YOUR insertion of my letter of 5th June, I noticed, and should have troubled you sooner with a second, but indispensable business in the Lower Province (from which I have just returned) prevented me. I perceive with some mortification and more contempt, that my letter has been republished and commented upon on this side, (I cannot forget the mock Election at York A.D. 1800, when the author of the comments upon my letter, was, at the price and expense of public liberty, driving to —— himself into notice, and Mr. ——'s good graces—yet, now has the effrontery in the face of the same public, to dile himself Patriot, Guardian, &c. &c. how long the public are to be thus gulled, God knows) but of such mock pretentions as I pretenders hereafter. That the publication of the Journals should have been so long suspended is astonishing, for it is certainly withholding from the constituents not only an obvious piece of justice, but a constitutional right. If the constituent has no claim to a direct knowledge of what his delegate has done, who in the name of common sense has—or to what purpose is the delegation made. Is there a parent or guardian who would send a child to school without at times reviewing its progress—the case is nearly a parallel one, the reasoning in both cases will at least hold good and apply perfectly. I have attended the Session of the Assembly, and have frequently heard the yeas and nays on interesting questions called for and recorded—to what purpose, let it be asked, if the Journals are to be hidden, or is it merely for the occasional recurrence of the members, themselves, as artificial aids to their memories, or to enable them to adhere to consistency in future discussion? I should be ashamed to attribute such contracted motives and selfish policy to the gentlemen of the Assembly, for I have an unshaken confidence in their intentions and patriotic views, and to those with whom I am in habits of intimacy, (nearly the whole) I have a particular personal regard.—So far from indulging one moment the apprehension, that any constituent reason of the nature alluded to, operates with that body to prevent the publication of their corporate records. I believe most solemnly that there is not one of its members who does not act upon the broad basis and pure principle of political rectitude and public advantage—and I believe them to be individually animated and emulated to advance the provincial interest as well in their public as private capacities.—Thus actuated I should suppose it would be a subject of singular pride to them separately and collectively, to have their parliamentary conduct so public that those who "run may read." In another point of view, the not publishing their Journals, is a palpable piece of injustice to themselves: Rumor ever busy, and often aberrant, attributes to some what others are entitled to the credit of, and vice versa, it often misrepresents the most patriotic motions, expressions and conduct in the house, a grievance irremediable in any other way, than by publishing the Records. I cannot reasonably conceive that economy can be opposed as a bar, I am sure expediency cannot. When we reflect for a moment that the written copies, reduced I believe to three in number, (although in different deposits,) are all, alike subject to conflagration, and innumerable other casualties. It is really amazing, that they should be left so long to the fate of bantlings, neglected, disregarded and disowned.

That an accident has not happened, does not argue the non existence of danger, nor prolong the period when it may; and in whatever point the subject can be viewed, it occurs to me as one of great interest, and meriting an earnest and early consideration. As an Elector, I am alive to the reputation and conduct of the man who represents me in my Country's councils, and I am confident that he never engaged in a measure in that capacity, but what he would avow with pride, and support to his latest breath, with all his energy. And I have no reason to entertain a different opinion of the others. Under these impressions (I think the Gentlemen will conceive them well formed, conclusive and just,) I shall look forward to the ensuing Session with anxiety, and a hope, that the subject will be taken up with that spirit which characterises the Representatives of a British Province, jealous of their reputation, and sensible of the sacred trust reposed in them by their Constituents.

I am, Gentlemen, &c.

AN ELECTOR.

London, August 11.

Some interesting conversation on the subject of our relations with Foreign States, took place last night in the House of Commons.—Mr. Canning, in reply to some questions put to him by Mr. Whitbread, relating to the professed mediation of Russia, and the disputes with America, gave all the information to the House consistent with present points that could have been expected. He stated that a direct communication had been received from Russia on the 2d instant, on the subject of the mediation of that power for peace; but as that communication was not accompanied by a copy of the Treaty concluded with France, only a conditional answer could be given.—The misunderstanding with America, he thought, had no connexion with the particular views of the present Ministers, who, on entering into office, endeavored to give full effect to the Treaty concluded by their predecessors, whatever might be their sentiments respecting it; and as they had transmitted no fresh orders to our Commanders on the American Station, the translation which had recently occurred could not be attributed to their instructions.

September 24.

Extract of a letter from Amsterdam, dated in the beginning of August.

"The present Emperor of Austria is in future to be King of Bohemia, and the Arch Duke Charles is to be King of Austria, the Arch Duke Constantine, brother to Alexander, comprehending Moldavia and Walachia, and part of Poland; the present King of Prussia to have part of his dominions restored to him; Murat, duke of Berg, to be King of Poland; Jerome Bonaparte to be King of Westphalia, and to marry the daughter and only child of the King of Saxony, Jean Beauharnois, son of the present Empress Josephine, to be King of Holland. Louis Napoleon retiring.) Joseph Bonaparte, present King of Naples, to be King of Italy; and Ferdinand the former King to be restored; the present confederation of the Rhine to remain, and a confederation of the North to be formed under the patronage of Alexander, whose sister the Emperor Napoleon is to marry after repudiating his present wife."

September 28.

From Monte Video.—The Ship Bolton, captain Peterson, arrived at Baltimore on Friday last, in 75 days from Monte Video. At the time she left there (20th July) there were, beside Americans, about 80 sail of British merchant ships, principally loaded with British manufactures, for which there was no vent, waiting for the capture of Buenos Ayres. The reports were that a British army consisting of 10,000 men, had landed about thirty miles from Buenos Ayres, on the 21st of June, and on the 5th of July were within two leagues of the outworks, which the Spaniards had thrown up near that city for its defence.

Sept. 29.

The following is the most authentic article on the subject of the English expedition, that is to be found in the late British prints:

HULL, Aug. 11.

"The expeditions which have left our ports are now so far advanced in their voyage, that we consider ourselves no longer precluded from communicating that intelligence of their destination, which we have received from officers and others of the first rank and information, and which, in our own mind, amounts to positive and absolute certainty. We believe our armaments to be neither gone to Boulogne, Antwerp, Flushing, nor the Helder. Boulogne is impregnable, without prodigious risk and loss, and Antwerp, is surrounded by a most difficult country. The embarkations are not calculated for what military men term coup de main:—Enormous mortars, and cannon of the largest calibre, with immense stores for sieges, and near 1000 artillerymen, are embarked. We know that an escort of Engineers, of rank, was sent for from Woolwich, and employed merely from his local knowledge of the place of attack.

"The grand object of our expedition, and a glorious one it is, we therefore confidently pronounce, from information that never yet has deceived us, is solely and exclusively to take possession of the Island of Zealand, of Copenhagen, and of the whole Danish fleets and arsenals.

"In possession of Zealand, we have the key of the Baltic, so long as it remains unfrozen, in our uncontrouable possession, and no vessel can stir out or in, without our permission. Should Bonaparte prevail upon the Emperor Alexander to act hostilely to our maritime interests, with this island in our hands, we may bid defiance to all the leagues and confederacies of the powers of the Baltic."

JAMES-TOWN, (Va.) August 24.

An awful and melancholy instance of the omnipotent power of the Almighty God, in punishing with exemplary vengeance, the presumptuous wretch, who dares to bid defiance to HIM, by whose permission he lives, moves, and has his existence, having just taken place here, a relation of the circumstance may not be considered uninteresting to a portion of your patrons, and perhaps may afford such a lesson, as will be the means of restraining many a wicked thought, and blasphemous expression, so often given way to, and so derogatory to the character of every human being; at least to all such as are within the power of example to reform.

A young man wished to join a company of volunteers, now enrolling themselves, for the purpose of offering their services to the President of the United States, and yesterday being Sunday, he was at a neighbor's house, with some other young persons, a part of whom were remonstrating against his intention. He swore he would join in spite of all the friends he had, and said he did not believe it was in the power of God Almighty to prevent him!—This dreadful expression had scarcely escaped his lips, when he fell a lifeless corps at the feet of his advisers, and never breathed more! Before that period he enjoyed a perfect state of health.

Hallow Intelligencer.

By Virtue of a precept of the Secretary of the Navy, of the 12th inst. a court of enquiry will be held at Norfolk on the 5th of October, in the case of Commodore Barron. The court will be composed of the following officers, viz.

Capt. Alexander Murray, President.
Capt. Isaac Hull, and Capt. Isaac Chauncey.

These gentlemen are the same with those previously appointed, with the exception of Commodore Preble, whose long illness and consequent death prevented the Court from sitting at an earlier period.—Nat. Intell.

WARNING TO FARMERS.

THE following singular fact is related in the Dauphin (Pen.) Guardian:—"About the middle of June, a Mr. Bowman had put into the mow of his barn, about 20 tons of hay principally clover. The weather not proving favorable for hay making, when considering it safe to—they ventured to put it in pretty green, on the supposition of safe doing what remained to be done by the sun.—To effect this, he put about half a bushel of salt to every load—but all did not do—a strong fermentation took place, and the whole center of the mow, about seven weeks after, was found to be in a highly inflammable state resembling that of a coal pit on fire. On exposing the hay to the external air, it immediately burst into a flame; but, by the vigilance, and good management of Mr. Bowman's family and a few neighbors, the flame was kept under, by throwing water on the hay, and confining it from air, as much as possible, until morning, by which time they had collected more assistance.—They then undertook to remove the inflammable hay which was effected, by hauling it out on waggons into the adjoining fields; this however was done with much difficulty, as it burned with great rapidity, when exposed to the air, in spite of every precaution they were able to take. They were even obliged to overset the waggons once or twice, to prevent them from being burned.

If two negatives make an affirmative, what will half a dozen negatives make?—A market woman going over Roxbury Neck, observing a boy at some of the shops in town, the lid only being left in the cart. She bid her husband back to enquire among a few shops where the mutt have left it. With an anxious inquisitive countenance he asked several grocers—Nobody don't know nothing about no hut that nobody left here, unit no hiver or, at nobody knows on, dont there?—Think.

From the New-York Spectator.

Opinion abroad.—We have just received, (says the Boston Gazette) by the last arrivals from England, several interesting Pamphlets on the political and commercial relations between Great Britain and America. Selections from these papers; and such comments attached thereto, as may be deemed salutary and useful. In the preface of one of these pamphlets, entitled "A True Picture of the United States of America, in their conduct towards Great Britain, from the Peace of 1783, to the present time," the author remarks:—"It would be unjust not to avow, that amongst the present minority, (a minority indeed) of the people of America, there are characters who would do honor to any country.—It does not, however, diminish the charges against the majority, to say, that the efforts of the Adamses, the Ameses, the Trumbulls, the Kings, the Morrises, the Pinckneys, the Smiths, and the Rutledges, have been unavailing. America has been "deaf to the voice of the charmer, charm he never so wisely." Since the death of the illustrious WASHINGTON, and the destruction of his system of government, Heaven's, to her irreparable, may be well described in the words which the elegant Tacitus applies to Germanicus—"In dolore exitus nationes reputare; tanta illi comitas in fortuna manifestudo in hostes; vitusque et vaditu juxta venerabilis, cum magnitudinem et gravitatem summæ fortunæ retinebat, invidiam et arrogantiam effugerat."

EXTRACT.

"It will be necessary in entering upon our work, to take notice of the great ignorance which prevails in this country, relative to the American disposition and character.—This has, however, arisen from representations coming in such a way, and through such respectable channels, that it is more to be regretted, than difficult to be accounted for.—It has been an amiable error on the part of the people of this country: it has never, (which been an error, and a great one. But it is one which will speedily be developed; It is one which has been felt and dreaded by the few discerning men in that country, from the earliest periods of the French revolution. The mania for French connection; the attachment, through all the scenes of blood carnage, and devastation, to the perpetrators of those scenes of blood, carnage, and devastation; the palliation of every atrocious act of the more atrocious convention; the avowal with that has at all times existed, and, by the great majority of the people been expressed, for the subjugation of Great Britain, and the domination of France; the patronage granted for the past six years to every one who could bring proofs of his having rebelled against his king, or plotted the devastation of his country,* all these loud-and declared facts, have been so notorious, that to doubt the settled, the inveterate hostility of the American people, were to doubt the most self evident proposition in nature."

* The law which requires a residence of five years to obtain the rights of citizenship, was dispensed with in the case of Thomas A. Emmet.—He was admitted to the bar in New-York, as a barrister, within two years from his discharge from confinement in Dublin, as a subject. The "no quarter" proclamation, was doubtless of assistance to him in America.

A letter from Calcutta, dated the 25th January, says, "The Board of Trade has been much gratified by an official report lately made of the improved and extended cultivation of Hemp, on this side India; immense crops are expected of a quality equal or superior to any imported from Europe."

Bonaparte, not content with revolutionising the Continent, appears now resolved to revolutionize the Heavens; the University of Leipsic has resolved that the Stars in the head and girdle of Orion, shall be, in future called the "Stars of Napoleon." Orion is one of the brightest constellations in the firmament.

Extraordinary Case.—A few weeks since, the wife of a labourer after being brought to bed and safely delivered, was friend with an insatiable appetite for food. Her husband being incapable of supporting her unnatural craving, obtained admission for her into St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where the remains at present in a most dreadful situation. She eats incessantly, and is supplied with three pounds of beef, a quarter's loaf, and a proportionable quantity of drink. On one occasion the Surgeons ordered her to be kept without eating one hour, and the consequence was, she raised the most shocking cries until her craving was satisfied. She retains her senses, and constantly requests those about her to bear with her unnatural behaviour, until she is cured by medical assistance, or death puts an end to her sufferings. Previous to this singular propensity, the unfortunate woman was known to be a very moderate eater.—Lon. Pap.

PICTURE OF A WIFE.

The wife Theognis told his countrymen, that, that man was the richest and most happy who had found an amiable and virtuous wife. Socrates, however, was of a very different opinion. A young man once consulted him to know, whether he would advise him to marry or not; to whom Socrates thus replied, 'Young man, which ever of the two evils you choose, you will most certainly have cause for repentance. If you should prefer celibacy—you will be solitary on the earth, you will never enjoy the pleasures of a parent; with thee will perish thy race, and a stranger will succeed to thy property. If you marry, expect constant chagrin and quarrels without end.—Your wife will be constantly reproaching you of the dower she brought thee; the pride of her parents and the garrulity of her mother will become insupportable. The gallantries of your wife will torment you with jealousy, and you will have reason to doubt the father of your reputed children. Now young man, advise if thou canst, and choose if thou darest.' This anecdote of Socrates I give on the authority of Valerius Maximus. Socrates was probably suffering from the stings and arrows of outrageous Xantippe, he was writing under the pangs of despised love, when the young man unfortunately went to ask his opinion, & therefore it is not entitled to much respect.

We agree with the wife Theognis and acknowledge, that in the wide range of the bounties of Heaven, there is no gift bestowed on man, deserving so much thankfulness, as that of a good wife. But what do you call good? Here is the difficulty—this is the knot—this the perplexity. I cannot tell what you and other men would like, but know exactly what would please such a curious kind of a being as myself. I would never marry for money; for contracts of bargain and sale in matters of matrimony were invented by infernals to be the deep damnation of men; they are legislations of wrong, and in dentures of infamy. I should like well enough that my wife might be handsome, though this is a minor consideration; for real beauty is not to be found, and I care not to be hunting for it through city and country all the days of my life. The mild lustre of Phosphor is not seen in the face of the daughters of Eve, and where is the being that sheds soft beams from her eye, like those of the planet of evening? Let her person have the form of elegance, and the sweetness of purity; her dress should be full of taste, and let her manners be those of a gentlewoman, for country simplicity is merely country awkwardness, and that I cannot away with. If her ancestors were not illustrious, I should hope that her family name might be respectable.

Her disposition, I insist on this, must be gentle and soft, like the dew in the vallies of Languedoc, like the midnight music of a nightingale from the battlements of Udolpho.—She shall not be churlish, and peevish, and fretful, and scolding; but let her have good nature in full abundance, and kind words, and looks, and smiles, plentiful and pleasing, as thick ripe wheat in autumn. Then her mind must be cultivated. This too is essential. She must love to read; she must be able to think, and have opinions of her own. I wish that she may relish the poets of England, love the morality of Johnson, and the courtly sense of the Spectator, and that her soul may be attuned to the sweetest melody, by the will warbling of the bard of Avon.—She should read and remember the historians of Great Britain, and know what may be chiefly known of her own country. Lastly, and above all, she must study the Bible, be a christian, and reverence her God.

The York Gazette.

YORK, OCTOBER 23, 1807.

His Honor the Chief Justice arrived from the General Circuits on Wednesday last, in perfect health.

Our Minister at the Court of Denmark has submitted to guarantee to his Sovereign complete INDEMNITY for any damage which might be sustained by confining for a time, the production of its ports and navy to the British government—thickening been rejected, political neutrality has led to the result we now announce. The Emperor of Russia we learn, still retained by French intrigues and influence, may have expected himself able to finish during mediation of a further nature. England, possessed of means to control the navigation of the Baltic, will not make out, who claims the due proportion they were allotted—and Bonaparte may be again obliged to make a new more contracted arrangement.

Postscript.

After our paper was put to press, we were obligingly favored with a paper, from which we extract the following highly important intelligence.

New-York, October 9.

A passenger in the Arcturus, from Bordeaux, informs, that the day before he failed, he received a letter from his friend in Paris, stating that news had reached there, that Copenhagen had surrendered to the British.

Capt. Patrig, who arrived at this port yesterday from Cape Francois, informs, that Gen. Christophe left the Cape about the 4th Sept. at the head of ten thousand men, for Port de Paix, to give battle to Gen. Petion.

Capt. Pratt, who arrived at Boston on Monday last, in 38 days from Amsterdam, informs, that Copenhagen was surrendered to the British on the 20th August, without resistance.

Mr. Munroe had advised that American vessels in Holland, ready for sea, should go north about, and others should remain a short time to see the issue of our negociations in England.

Married, yesterday the 22d October, Mr. William Wallace, Carpenter, to Miss Hannah Buck, both of this place.

FROM THE BALANCE.

TO A HAPPY FRIEND.

"O for where true contentment reigns,
I turn to gitnlore, wealth and pow'r;
My eyes are fill'd with happy flowers,
But ah! they cannot soothe the pains
Which make them high enjoyments sour.

From thefe, dear friend, I turn to thee,
Mo marthal founds proclaim thee high'd,
No pomps I view, but ftill I fee
Such figns of blifs as well agree
With the fweet tenants in your breaft.

Could riches purchafe fuch a gem,
And wre its real value known;—
How foon would Kings their crowns contemn,
And griping mifers yield, like them,
Their all, this priceleis gem to own.

Your make's ambrofial fimiles you reap,
Your lovely countenance thro' the year;
No trouble dims your eyes to weep;
Tranquil awake, ferene in fleep,
Your hear'ty ftate commences here.

Ah, few the creatures here below
Who fuch a fterling portion own;
Does but one breaft with raptures glow
To counterpoife thy blifs with woe,
Ten thoufand hearts with anguifh groan.

Whence comes it then, that thou could'ft boaft,
A treafure by fo few poffeft'd;
But that, altho' a worm is moft,
Thou glor'eft like the heavenly hoft,
To ferve the greateft and the beft.

Fair virtue's footftcps ftill purfue,
Still will your cup of life be fweet,
Your path with flow'rs ftill will ftrew,
And when you bid this world adieu,
She'll lead your foul to blifs complete.

An IRISH GRACE.

An Irifh felf-taught poet, being afked to fay grace over a fmall piece of beef, and a few potatoes, rather of the dwarfifh fize, pronounced it thus extempore:

Oh! Thou that haft'd the leaves and fifhes,
Look down upon this fcore poor difhes:
And though the tatoes are but fmall,
Oh make them large enough for all;
For if they do not relifh fully
'Twill be a kind of miracle.

Greenock, Auguft 14.

The following inftance of daring gallantry in a Britifh ferjeant of marines, may not prove unacceptable to our readers. The facts may be relied on, as they are certified by his commanding officer, who was prefent, and an eye witnefs of them:—"On the 4th of July, 1807, the barge belonging to his Majefty's fhip Melpomene, chaced a large French fettee off Genoa, until the fhip and other boats were out of fight. The fettee being armed with four 6 pounders, 12 mounted mufketoons, and twenty mounted mufkets, fired on the barge as it approached, and killed Lieutenant Thomfon, the commanding officer, and five feamen. Others were alfo feverely wounded, and feveral more flightly. Serjeant Milligan, being in the bow of the barge, was the firft man that boarded the fettee; and, on his leaping on the deck, fix mufkets were prefented to his face, the fatal effects of which he avoided, by throwing himfelf at once into the midft of the enemy's crew. Owing to the number killed and wounded in the barge, and the fettee continuing under fail, only five men were able to follow the ferjeant, and, after fome refiftance, the enemy were obliged to retreat and difperfe, and fix of them leaped into their own boat, carrying their arms and ammunition with them. Serjeant Milligan purfued; and fearing that they might do confiderable mifchief, if they pulled away from alongfide, with their mufkets with them, and knowing that the barge could not follow, he jumped down into the middle of them. He was inftantly feized and thrown overboard; but in the ftruggle, grappled and carried one of the enemy with him, whom he killed in the water with his cutlafs. When oppofition no longer appeared, every exertion was made from the boats of the Melpomene to fave Serjeant Milligan, who was feen fwimming after the fettee, apparently very faint, having received feveral wounds during the action. One of the Lieutenants of the fhip feeing an oar clofe behind him, called to Milligan to get hold of it, in order to receive fome aflifance till the boat could get up to him, which afterwards picked him up. On his being aflked, when fafe on board, if he had gained the aflifance of the oar, he replied, "No, Sir; I did not know if the enemy had all furrendered; and I could not bear the idea of turning my back on an enemy's veffel."—The Patriotic Fund rewarded this brave fellow with 40 pounds.

QUEBEC, 14th September.

On Saturday laft, after high mafs, at the Roman Catholic Church in this city, notice was given that at three o'clock in the afternoon a TE DEUM would be fung, in thankfgiving for the new marks of divine goodnefs to this country in infpiring its inhabitants with the moft favorable difpofitions for the King's fervice and the defence of the country.

At the above mentioned hour, Col. Brock, commanding his Majefty's forces in the Canadas, entered the Church accompanied by a number of officers of rank, foon after feveral companies of militia under arms marched in, to the found of warlike mufic. The concourfe of people was exceedingly numerous. The ceremony opened by the reading of a Mandement of the Bifhop. It was well calculated to fecure the attention of the whole audience, &c. had that effect—It began by ftating reafons of attachment to the Sovereign, founded on precepts of the Gofpel and the example of the early chriftians, obedient and faithful for conficience' fake under the moft cruel tyrants. It pointed out particular motives of attachment to our auguft fovereign, founded on the happinefs which we enjoy under his government; a happinefs more valuable when contrafted with the fituation of fo many chriftians ftill groaning under oppreffive laws. It then proceeded to the expreffion of the moft lively gratitude that the inhabitants of this province, yielding to a fcene of fo many benefits received, to their duly and dearefl intereft, have teftified their readinefs to encounter every danger rather than be expofed to a change of government, & the lofs of the advantages they enjoy under it. The Mandement concluded with a wifh that the difpofition fhown on the late occafion, may ever be that of the inhabitants of this province, at the fame time, proffering the moft ardent prayers, that the Almighty may difperfe the nations who feek war and take away from their minds every hoftile project. Such were, in part the affecting and ftrongly expreffive fentiments which were heard with vifible marks of pleafure and approbation, after the reading of the Mandement was over, the TE DEUM was fung accompanied by the mufic and alfo the Pfalm Exaudeat repeating feveral times the verfe Domine falvum, &c.

The whole of the ceremony was grand and affecting. The doctrine laid down in the Mandement has always been the true doctrine of the Catholic Church. "The fpirit of the Church" fays an eloquent writer is utterly averfe to thofe feditious maxims which led to infurrections to which the people are too naturally prone; fhe has always taught her children that they muft not return evil for good; that they muft yield to the wrathful, and not refent violence; give to every one according to his due honor, tribute fubmiffion; obey magiftrates and fuperiors, even when injuft; becaufe we muft refpect in them the power of God who fent them over us."

A TE DEUM is alfo to be fung in every church throughout the province.

Bairdftown (Kent) Sept. 1.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at New-Orleans, dated July 19, 1807, to a gentleman of this place:

"I have juft returned to this place, after an excurfion of 21 days, in the Spanifh dominions. I took water at the Bayouk of St. John, croffed the lake Ponchartrain, then down the Gulph of Mexico to Pascagoula; where I arrived there the Commander was abfent; the corporal of the place told me I could not pafs until a commander came; I remonftrated with him, but to no purpofe. I was detained until the next day, when one of the Dons arrived with his fuit. I waited on and informed him, I wifhed to pafs through the country: he afked me if I had a paffport, which I had not; after fome time he told me, I had the appearance of a gentleman, and that he fhould fuffer myfelf and boy to pafs without further inquiry; but that there had been confiderable alarms fome time paft, but he hoped and believed it was over. He then afked me to dine with him, which I did; after dinner I fet out, down fea-board, about 4 miles, where I met the principal commander; he received me very politely, I remained with him three or four days, during which time, he talked freely and openly with refpect to the fituation of both countries.

"He is decidedly of opinion, that a war muft take place between the two countries; that the Spaniards are only waiting for Bonaparte to get a little leafure, fo that he can turn his attention to this country, and then they will take poffeffion of Louifiana; that the Spaniards will enter into no negociations that will be binding upon them, but will inful, negociate and infult, until Bonaparte is ready, and then him and he Spaniards can have a pretence to declare war. The French in this country are not, nor will they ever be attached to the American Government. They think it too weak and flimfy, indeed it has that appearance here; they neither love nor refpect the governor, and he has not firmnefs enough to enforce either. They (I was informed by this commander) have petitioned Bonaparte to take them under his protection again; that they were and would at all times be ready to join him; he anfwered that their wifhes fhould be fulfilled, fo fo foon as Europe was quiet: that he would ftrictly comply with every promife he had ever made to them, &c."

The following information is derived from a very refpectable fource; and the reconciliation of Bonaparte with Moreau,—together with the well known fact of the latter being now actually employed by the American Government, leave no room to doubt, that the outline of the plan is correctly given; tho' the vigilance of the Britifh Government may eafily deftroy it in the bud—or completely deftroy its accomplifhment.—

PARTITION OF AMERICA.

"The Correfpondence of Talleyrand and General Moreau, which caufed fuch furmifes at New-York in February laft, is at length developing; and we can fcarcely be furprifed at the events which have fince followed:—

"Bonaparte and Moreau are reconciled.

"If Moreau can perfuade America to break with England, ten thoufand French troops are in conjunction with the Americans, to drive the Englifh from the continent.—Canada and Nova-Scotia are to be erected into a Monarchy; and Moreau to be crowned king of Acadie and both the Canadas. America is to have the Floridas, as well as Louifiana; and the Iftand of Porto Rico, or fome other valuable Weft-India Iflands to be given up to them.

"The Government of America not having fufficient energy, by the prefent conftitution, the Prefident to be fuperfeded in his endeavors to change it, & a new form of Legislature adopted; in which the Chair is to be affumed for life.

"The only difficulty is ftated by the American government to arife from the northern ftates; who might be averfe to fuch a neighbor as the King of Acadia and Canada, governed by a Frenchman, but this may poffibly be overcome—if the war with England can be made a popular one.

"The authenticity of this intelligence cannot be doubted; and the Americans who are now loudeft crying out for a war with England, may know how completely they have been made the tools of France and its penfioners.—Quebec Mer.

The account given in the Hamburg papers of Bonaparte's behavior at Dreften is amufing:

"When he arrived at Dresden, he was dreffed in a green uniform, with the infignia of the Legion of Honour. He haftily mounted the ftaircafe, with his hat in his hand, the King befide him, &c. On the 18th he rode out with a few attendants, and he rode fo much before the guard that every body could eafily fee him. He was in a plain uniform, his hat without any lace or feather. The populace fhouted as he went along, and he nodded graciouflly all round to them, but did not take off his hat, except when he paffed the guard. He examined the fortifications, &c. in the afternoon he was in the Picture Gallery with the King, where there was a numerous party. He examined the pictures with great attention.

"On Sunday the 19th, after having been engaged in conference with different Miniflers, he appeared at church with the Royal Family. They came in about half paft eleven, at the end of the credo. He led in the Queen. He was in an infantry uniform, with white breeches and waiftcoat, white filk ftockings, and a plain hat under his arm, with the cordon of the Legion of honor over his coat. He took his ftation before the window, near the grand altar, the chief place. The King and Queen knelt befide him. He continued ftanding, however, with his hat under his arm, often taking fnuff from a fnuff box he held in his left hand. He was eternally in motion, like one who is in a hurry to be off (" comme un homme qui eft preffe de s'en aller") When they came to fing the Sanctus, he knelt with the reft, and read in a little book which was befide him. He foon rofe up and continued till the end of mafs, ftanding as he was before" &c. &c.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.

In the laft claffs, or that relating to Colonies and Trade, a filver medal was delivered to Mr. Wm. Bond, of Canada, in North America, but now in England, for his model of a fimple machine to be worked by a ftream of water, and removed before the froft fet in, for beating and preparing hemp; alfo for his ufeful information refpecting the timber and warren rabbits of the Britifh Colonies in Canada. His Grace the Prefident obferved, that the prefent ftate of Europe made the timber and hemp of Canada appear objects of greater probable importance to this country than heretofore.—London paper.

MARRIED.

Lately at Ellesmere, in England, Mr. John Hughes, an old batchelor of 85 years of age, who had been bellman of the fame place upwards of 60 years, to Mrs. Anne Dodfon, of the fame place, a widow, aged 82. The groom's man was 78; the bride's maid 75; making a total of 320 years. The novelty of the fcene brought together a vaft concourfe of people; the church yard was crowded while the ceremony was performed, and the happy couple were met at the church door by three violin players, playing "Come hafte to the Wedding."—The whole concluded with a ball at night, which was opened by the bride and bride's maid.

YORK:—PRINTED BY CAMERON AND BENNETT, PRINTERS TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

To the Gen.ᵉ Parvalfin,—at Rome.—following—

SIR,

WHEN I firſt addreſſed you, it was under an impreſſion that I might not, do it again; reaſons, however, which can intereſt no one but myſelf, have prevailed with me, and as this in all probability will be the laſt time, whichever ſentiments of you may be cloathed in a public garb, I give them to you freely in doing which, I ſolemnly declare that, I think you one of the meaneſt, weakeſt, and worſt of mankind, a ſocial monſter, a diſgrace to your ſtation in life, and an enemy to the human race. You Sir, are in a high official ſituation, to which honor, emolument and reſpect, are legitimately attached; I in an humble one, from which I ſhortly may be removed, or obliged to withdraw. Whatſoever may now be at iſſue between us, is unrelative to official conſiderations, it involves no political queſtion; it is wholly individual, and unconnected with any man's opinions. In your Gazette the Guardian, you eſſayed to degrade me in the eyes of the public, by inſinuating, that I had been acting in the character of a Spy, next to the one you are acting in (that of a public incendiary) the moſt odious and deteſtable. The injuſtice and inſult, unprovoked on my part, induced me to with the puniſhment perſonal, but as you were public, I claim an equal right; thank not Sir, that I am, (ſcribbling to the prejudices of men or fiends, I thank God for creating me with principles which will for ever ſtir, (unſubſcribe the number of mine). The child of miſfortune, or perſecution has few, I know not how many I can number, of the few, ſome are abſent, the others I wiſh not to intereſt in my behalf. Without the ſhadow of a cauſe, and with the views of an aſſaſſin, you aimed at diſgracing me publicly, Heaven knows I did not deſerve it—I here paint you in colours which are true once, and which Heaven knows you do deſerve. That you may not have ground to retreat, or that you may have ground whereon to rebut theſe charges; let this, let thoſe which I have previouſly published, be tranſcribed and in your name preſented to me, in the preſence of few or many of your adherents, my ſignature and ſeal ſhall be affixed. I have never Sir, been aſked to recall an aſſertion, or retract what I have advanced; my opinions (in your caſe excepted), and the impulſes from which I have acted, have neither led to pain or degradation. My perſonal avowal depending entirely upon your will; unprotected and defenceleſs, I offer myſelf to the utmoſt effects of your reſentment, I am open to any plan of recourſe you pleaſe to purſue, whether judicial, the dagger of the aſſaſſin, or the deleter as potion. This is what I ſhould anticipate if any, and what has perhaps been already adminiſtered with fatal ſucceſs. Humble by nature, humble in pretenſions and more humbled by miſfortune, without titled alliance as you have to ſhield, or weight of ſituation to ſcreen me, or without preſuming after your example, to enliſt and arm the country in a private difference, I bluſh not to ſay, that a reverend Father, carried a muſket in his Majeſty's ſervice, he carried it with honor, he was invelled with a ſword, he retained it with dignity, and whilſt exerting himſelf in the cauſe of his country, the opportunity was loſt, to form the minds of his offſpring as his affection prompted, or his parental intereſt ſuggeſted; of the few homely maxims he inculcated, one was, that I ſhould reverence virtue though in rags, and deteſt vice though glittering in diamonds. I reverence your fituation, but ſome parts of your conduct are ſo ridiculous, that it is impoſſible not to treat you with levity, whilſt other parts of it, inſpire hatred and abhorrence. When you figured the pageant of a cavalcade, to pull your neighbor's Houſe, did you feel yourſelf to be an emanation from the bottle conjurer? Or was your conduct more exemplary, than the Ruffian's who expoſed his poſ——rs, carved and tendered at a ſhilling per view, under the nominal exhibition of a bonaerges, Oh Gem, Oh Gem, Oh peerleſs, whether would leather ſpectacles, a ſtrait jacket, the ſtocks, the gallows or the carts tail, beſt accord with your various merit?

The deteſtation in which I hold your principles, I cannot diſguiſe, although I had determined conditionally, to deſiſt you in ſilence hereafter. I have no further intereſt in the cauſe of the many you have attempted to inſult, than the ſhock which every one muſt feel at violated decency, but recollect this, T. B. G. is my friend, and abſent. To your deſcribed gift, you call him a ſtained character, and W. W. Eſq. a victim to a vote! —recall the lying inſinuation! T. B. G. has a character unſullied, unſtained, and ſtainleſs, a ſoul pure as the crimſon which ceaſes to be an emblem on your robe. In his inſulted name, I call upon you to ſummon all your malice; I call upon the whole public to produce a ſtain, or to affix a ſtain or the reſemblance of a ſtain upon him. To diſprove your other inſinuation, would be to prove more than I with myſelf, I pity the frailties of others.

Unfortunate man, (ſole artificer of the contempt you are held in,) what emotions can a reroſpect of your conduct, produce in you, is the reflection not mortifying, that when you enter this town, the only compaſſion who recognizes you, is the foundered, living tumbril, the renowned Captain W. D——t, who has never been convicted by the juſtice of this country, of treachery, m——, polygamy, (to the extent of four living wives, and a barefaced attempt to acquire a fifth in this place,) &c. &c. &c.. He the very focus of elegance, a gem of larger dimenſions, and almoſt equal brilliance with yourſelf, is every way worthy your ſympathy, eſteem, and confidence, and here let me aſk you for ſome extraneous information; when he was wont to adorn the head of your table, how did he combine matters with that exultation, which renders him ſuch a delectable companion? How exquiſite muſt have been the olfactory enjoyments of your family? How gifted, how invaluable the inmate who ſheds odours and incenſe ſponteneouſly!!! Intenſe obſerver as you are, and ever laboring for the public good, deign to inform us, whether he muſt indulged in aſtringents or diuretics. You will ſurely not withhold the knowledge of what may be neeſt others ſuffering under ſimilar afflictions.

Did any one of your principles, or any one part of your practice, agree with any two in one of your popular profeſſions, I ſhould be left ſurpriſed at your ſucceſs in popular deception. Here let me contraſt the ſimple diſplay in your Gazette of what you have attempted to do, with what you have done; you, (as you call yourſelf in that vehicle) a true man, have given the public a true ſample of your true and ſtrong beneficence, and how greatly precious their money was in your eyes, by putting the only part of it within your graſp, into your pocket. You Sir, are the firſt member for the Houſe Diſtrict, mean and degraded enough to accept the pittance aſſigned by law, under the ſynonyme denomination (in this caſe) of wages, that much for a ſubſtantial proof of your great love for the people, and ſtill greater love for their coin. Through the ſame chanle channel of communication, you conſole with your ſubalterns upon the moral privation of your unhallowed preſence and more unhallowed labours, and in the black, though vain attempt to blaſt the integrity and exertions of the C——y——e, and to impreſs upon the public, that oppreſſion and injuſtice reſulted in his ruin—you were great, brutal, and I will add ludicrous, villainous, and traiterous to your country. I will now put the interrogatories, and draw a ſubſtrict (thank heaven I cannot a parallel) between his conduct and yours, and let the inſulted public judge for themſelves.

Did you not, Sir, ſhortly after your arrival in the Province, propoſe to an individual to form a combination againſt the Executive Council, to diſplace its members, and ſubſtitute yourſelf, a boy, &c. &c. and declare to that individual that his ruin would follow his non-compliance? Did you not (yet a ſtranger yourſelf) arrogate the province of pointing out to another ſtranger (whom it were doubly criminal to deceive) who of the public characters he could confide in—and named one only beſide your officious ſelf? Did you not on your arrival declare your opinion of the country to unfavorable, that you would neither purchaſe nor poſſeſs a foot of land in it? This fact (of ſubſequent eſtabliſhment) I have recorded as one truth you have told ſince our acquaintance.

On your firſt appearance amongſt us you thought a lanrimonious and farcical attendance upon religious worſhip neceſſary to your latent purpoſes. Is it becauſe you have inſulted the irreproachable parſon and his family, that you have withdrawn yourſelf from the ſacred ordinances, and do you blend your hatred of the expoſitor with your neglect of the ſacred doctrines—is this alſo a feature of your harmonious ſyſtem. Is your miſanthropy acquired, or is it the curſe of your being. What renders you ſo inveterate and ſinimical; is it becauſe you, an animated E——, collected upon the wheels of government, cannot become a wheel yourſelf, or fear to be ſhaken off by the fame motion which produced the conteſt? Conſummation moſt devoutly to be wiſhed!!! Did you not practiſe upon the credulity of an unwary ſtranger, in a manner, which in another country, would have procured you a birth in the ſ——p——a. Have you not declared yourſelf poſſeſſed of an intereſt, through which, under the vain promiſes of proveſion, you have duped a number of reſpectable perſons, one of whom, no longer to be duped, figures in your catalogue a "Joſeph Surface."

I will now, Sir, modify my queſtions, and aſk you this—has the C——f J——e as you have done, by falſe preſences, nearly allied to ſwindling, ſhocked the mercantile credit of any man, to an extent which may ultimately ruin him and involve others in diſtreſs. Has he as any time (a Juſtice of the King's Bench) attempted to withhold from a poverty ſtricken waſherwoman, as you have done, the hard-earned pittance upon which her helpleſs infants depended for bread. He, Sir, laborious and patient in the cauſe and adminiſtration of juſtice, did not on his Circuits, as you did, diſtate addreſſes of abuſe and diſaffection, and cajole the unſuſpecting to ſubſcribe them. He did not attempt, as you did, to diſturb the aſhes of the unoffending dead, nor villify the meritorious living. He did not, as you did, make fulſome harrangues upon his love of harmony, peace, and the people, whilſt guileſully abetting a duel. He neither fomented the difference of the parties, nor ſtimulated the doubtful courage of one to aſſume a borrowed guiſe and deſperate form, whereby his life was loſt and other valuable lives endangered. He, Sir, without diſgracing the ſolemnity of the judicature by blending with it the rant of the theatre, made acquittal as joyful to the culprit as if pronounced by the teſty-chep'd "Gem of Patriotiſm." He did not, as you did, inſult the good ſenſe of the diſcerning, nor impoſe upon the ſecurity of the unwary, by affiliating ſocieties, formed oſtenſibly for patriotic purpoſes, but which, analyſed, are fabrics of malignity to the country, reared upon the baſe of deep-rooted hatred and deſperate ambition. Has he, Iago like, as you have done, ſown the ſeeds of diſtruſt in an huſbands breaſt, and planted an envenomed dagger there, which no mortal human can extract, and whoſe wound no remedy can reach. Has he, as you have done, poiſoned the ſprings of happineſs in two young people, and by his barbarities driven an inexperienced and injured female to deſpair and intellectural deranagement. Has he, Sir, as you have done, declared a liſt to be inſtituted on which you were to decide, openly prejudged it, and pronounced the iſſue unfavorable to the defendant. Has he, Sir, as you have done, drawn from the ſelf-needed fund of ill-health affected ſtranger, medicines without payment, to barter for popularity. Was it in character for you, holding the ſituation you do, to intimate in a court of juſtice, nay more, to threaten (in a language not to be miſunderſtood) that the peace of the country ſhould be involved in your inſolence and private quarrel:—But of all the acts which conſpire to render your reſidence in this country memorable, the aggravated crime of inducing ſeveral unreflecting individuals to depoſe as they did at the election, is the moſt terrifying: I repeat inducing, leſt you might miſtake my meaning—and can you, Sir, either upon your oath or upon your hon or, ſay that if thoſe depoſitions were not ſubarned, they were not proximate. When I heard your appeal to the voter, in ſeveral inſtances, and on which you grounded the teſt, electrified with horror, I fled from the huſtings.

The juggling which you have practiſed upon many well meaning people in this country exceeds the faſcination of the calenture, but like it, the duration can be but tranſient. The taliſmanic chord on which you ſound your inſidious notes, is the ſufferings of the Loyaliſts—I Sir, am one of theſe, and ſympathiſe with my fellow ſufferers more than you poſſibly can, and are you yet to be inſtructed that half the Executive Council are alſo of the ſame deſcription. When the general diſtribution of lands and other donations took place, there were four places appropriated, (now the four Provinces) and the loyaliſts were allowed to ſelect as they pleaſed; they did ſo.—Yet of thoſe whom you have attempted to render clamorous, I can prove many to have removed to the United States, where ſhunning the ſin of democracy, they a ſecond time revelled upon that property which government had already paid them for under the general head of loſſes. Others I can prove to have ſo far renounced their allegiance, as to have reſided there, to have reſided there for years, to have filled offices, and to have complied with every condition required by the American government of its ſubjects, but now become, under your tuition, the moſt ſturdy claimants!!! With ſuch of my fellow ſubjects as went to Nova Scotia, and diſappointed in the ſoil, have ſince moved to this country, I moſt ſincerely ſympathiſe, and as ſincerely hope that a benevolent C——— will warm in their behalf, and pray his ſovereign's indulgence in their favor. I think this hope, I believe it to be in train of fulfilment.

I will now Sir, before parting with you, point out the tendency of your conduct in this country. You have endeavored, whilſt preaching and prating upon harmony and union, to fill one claſs of ſubjects with enmities againſt another, to fill them with ſoul ſuſpicions of every man in office but yourſelf, and to deſtroy that original confidence ſo neceſſary to the exiſtence of civil ſociety. You have endeavored to immolate the peace of the public (ſo far as your baleful ſphere extended) upon the altar of your undiſtinguiſhing malice, and infatuated ambition.—What can have been your aim, is an inſoluble enigma. May heaven protect the country from your deſigns, and diſgorge you from its ſoil—ſo prays "The Detected Spy in Groteſque."

By His Excellency FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS in and by an act of the parliament of this province, made and passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, entitled, "an act to revive and continue an act passed in the forty second year of his present majesty, entitled, 'an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same, respectively,' after reciting that an act passed in the forty second year of his present majesty, entitled "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry, within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same respectively, which was to continue in force for three years and no longer, was expired, and it was expedient that the same should be revived and continued—it is enacted that the said act should, from and after the passing of that act, be revived, and the same was thereby revived and continued in force and effect for two years, and no longer.

And whereas, as well with reference to the interest of his majesty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majesty's subjects resident within this province, it hath been ascertained that there exists immediate occasion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after specified.

Be it therefore enacted, to all whom it may concern. That I FRANCIS GORE, Lieutenant governor of this province, in exercise of the power and authority to vested in me, in and by the said recited act, by and with the advice of the Executive Council of the said province, do hereby declare and appoint, that in addition to the ports of entry and clearance established by and under the authority of a certain act of the said provincial parliament, passed in the forty first year of his majesty's reign, entitled, "an act for granting to his majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the use of this province, the like duties on goods and merchandize imported into this province from the United States of America, as are now paid on goods and merchandize imported from Great Britain and other places," and also by and under the authority of the above in part recited act, passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, the places herein after described and specified, that is to say, the village of St. Joseph, on the island of St. Joseph, and the eastern extremity of the carrying place, and on the north side of the river St. Mary, at, or near the Falls of St. Mary, in the Western District, shall from the Eighteenth day of this present month of May, severally and respectively, be and the same are by these presents severally and respectively established and proclaimed to be ports and places of entry and clearance for all goods and merchandize, not being entirely prohibited, and for the payment of all duties liable to be paid for all goods and merchandize brought into this province from the United States of America, imposed and established by virtue of the said act, so passed in the forty-first year of his said majesty's reign, and according to the direction of the same.

GIVEN under my hand and seal at Arms at York, this second day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, and in the forty seventh year of his said Majesty's reign.

FRANCIS GORE,
Lieut. Governor.

By his Excellency's Command,
Wm. Jarvis, Secretary.

ADDRESS.

MY YOUNG FRIENDS,

THE patient attention which this very refpectable audience has paid to your examination, and the ſhare which two learned gentlemen have kindly taken in conducting it, afford me the greateſt ſatisfaction. For your preſent appearance muſt diſcover not only the great utility of your ſtudies, but alſo the progreſs you have made; nor will any one preſent fail to be convinced, that this public exhibition is not a matter of form, much leſs of oſtentation, but a trial well calculated to encourage the diligent and to rouſe the indolent.

On former occaſions of this kind, I did not think it neceſſary to cloſe the buſineſs of the day with any particular addreſs, becauſe we all expected to meet again, but as ſeveral of you now finiſh your education and are about to enter the world, a few parting obſervations from one ſo much intereſted in your future proſperity, will neither be uſeleſs nor unſeaſonable.

I begin then with an obſervation, which to many of you, will appear not a little extraordinary, it is this: That one of the greateſt advantages you have derived from your education here, ariſes from the ſtrictneſs of our diſcipline. Thoſe of you who have not already perceived how much your tranquility depends upon the proper regulation of the temper, will ſoon be made ſenſible of it as you advance in years; you will find people who have never known what it is to be in habitual ſubjection to precepts and juſt authority, breaking forth into violence and outrage on the moſt frivolous occaſions. The paſſions of ſuch perſons quickly become ungovernable, and that impatience of reſtraint, which they have been allowed to indulge, embitters every moment of their lives. They deſpiſe the barriers erected by reaſon, and they ruſh forward to indulgence, without regarding the conſequences, hence flows much of that wretchedneſs and diſorder to be met with in ſociety. Now the diſcipline neceſſary to correct the temper, is often found no where but in well regulated ſchools, for tho' it ſhould be the firſt care of parents, they are too apt to be blinded by affection, and to grant liberties to their children which reaſon diſapproves.

We ſhould not forget that the ſituation of human affairs never allows any one to be at all times his own maſter. Many reſtraints are impoſed by neceſſity, to which we muſt all ſubmit, or be totally ruined. What man is exempted from the reſtraints of the law of the land and the government under which he lives? The fear of diſeaſe reſtrains one from unlimited indulgence. The expences of another, are reſtrained by the fear of want. A third is more careful of his behaviour from his reſpect to friends, to ſociety, or eſtabliſhed cuſtoms. In a word, we are reſtrained on every ſide by limits, which we cannot or ought not to paſs. That diſcipline, therefore, which you may have ſometimes thought irkſome, will henceforth appear in a very different light. It will appear the teacher of a habit of the greateſt conſequence to the regulation of your future conduct; and you will value it as the promoter of that decent and ſteady command of temper, ſo very eſſential to happineſs, and ſo uſeful in our intercourſe with mankind.

Next to the melioration of the temper, which we very juſtly reckon one of the moſt important advantages reſulting from a well regulated education, we place thoſe habits of diligence and application to which you have been accuſtomed in the proſecution of your ſtudies. Theſe habits are of the greateſt uſe at every age, but if they are not acquired in youth, they are very ſeldom attained. They are certainly the foundation of all future excellence, for how can any perſon advance in his profeſſional ſtudies, or tranſact buſineſs with correctneſs and diſpatch, unleſs he be accuſtomed to application. Never did any one gain preeminence without exertion. The memorable example of Demoſthenes has become trite, becauſe ſo frequently mentioned, but read the private hiſtory of any of thoſe men, who have riſen above their fellows, and you will find that they commonly obtained this diſtinction by vigorous application.

In conducting your education, one of my principal objects has always been, to fit you for diſcharging with credit, the duties of any office, to which you may hereafter be called. To accompliſh this, it was neceſſary for you To be accuſtomed frequently to depend upon and think for yourſelves. Accordingly, I have always encouraged this diſpoſition, which when preſerved within due bounds, is one of the moſt advantageous that can poſſibly be acquired. To enable you to think with advantage, I not only regulated your taſks in ſuch a manner as to exerciſe your judgement, but extended your views beyond that meager routine of ſtudy uſually adopted in ſchools. For in my opinion, ſeveral branches of ſcience may be taught with benefit, at a much earlier age than is generally ſuppoſed. We made a myſtery of nothing, on the contrary, we entered minutely into every particular, and patiently explained by what progreſſive ſteps, certain reſults were obtained. It has ever been my cuſtom before ſending a claſs to their ſeats, to aſk myſelf, whether they had learned any thing, and I was always exceedingly mortified if I had not the agreeable conviction, that they had made ſome improvement. Let none of you however, ſuppoſe that what you have learned here is ſufficient, on the contrary, you are to remember that we have laid only the foundation; the ſuperſtructure muſt be raiſed by yourſelves. The time allowed at ſchool in a new country like this, is farce'y ſufficient to ſow the moſt neceſſary ſeed, very great progreſs is not therefore to be expected. If the principles are properly ingrafted, we have done well. The mathematical ſtudies in which you have been engaged, will in a great meaſure produce that correctneſs of thinking, which we reckon to grand a ſtep towards mental improvement. A maſs of information on a variety of ſubjects, huddled up together in a mind not accuſtomed to correctneſs of thinking, is of little uſe. When the poſſeſſor is called up on to put this intellectual wealth into current coin, he ſtands confuſed, he knows not how to begin; a thouſand different plans offer themſelves to his fancy, all equally defective; he ſees nothing clearly, and if he be forced to attempt any thing, it is miſerably executed. A man with half his knowledge well arranged, can turn it eaſily into immediate uſe. Such a perſon performs without embarraſſment what the occaſion requires. He has been accuſtomed to ſtudy accurately, the ſubject he profeſſes to know and can anſwer theſe queſtions that are put to him. He requires no tedious preparation, no painful attention to ſeparate what thoughts he wants from the chaos, which turmoils them in the heads of leſs accurate ſtudents. Be careful then my young friends in the proſecution of your profeſſional ſtudies, to improve upon theſe three advantages, which you have in a great meaſure acquired. Be patient, diligent, and methodical and you will make rapid and profitable progreſs; it is to the want of a ſyſtematic education, to a confuſed method of thinking, eaſily acquired and never thoroughly removed, that we muſt attribute theſe numerous inconſiſtencies & confuſion of ideas, which we find to generally among thoſe we converſe with. The opinions of perſons of credit, are frequently taken up without examination, or deduced from principles in themſelves erroneous, becauſe they have never given themſelves the trouble of fitting them to the bottom. How contemptible, rath opinions unſupported by ſolid reaſons muſt appear to an accurate thinker, though delivered with fluency or even elegance of language, it is eaſy to imagine; it is not by flying from ſubject to ſubject and ſkimming the ſurface of ſcience, that much knowledge is gained, but by proceeding ſlowly and correctly, and never leaving any ſubject till it be thoroughly underſtood. By encouraging you to think accurately and to exerciſe induſtry and application, we have endeavored to protect you from this rock, and to give ſolidity to all your future acquiſitions. It is only the man, who is not afraid to decide for himſelf, that can diſcharge any office he may hold with probity and honor.

While you are qualifying yourſelves, to diſcharge with dignity, the duty of your profeſſions, you muſt not forget that ſomething more is neceſſary to render bulineſs pleaſant. In order to do this, you muſt behave in a kind of affectionate manner to all who have intercourſe with you; a miniſter of treatment, a condeſcenſion to inferiors, a ready obedience to the juſt commands of ſuperiors; contribute in a remarkable degree to make a man content and uſeful in ſociety. Theſe qualities make us amiable, we may be ſure of buſineſs, we may diſcharge with fidelity the duty of our ſtation, and yet become diſagreeable, we may treat people with ſuperciliouſneſs or neglect, we may indulge a moroſeneſs of diſpoſition, which ſhall diſguſt where we meant to pleaſe, and raiſe up enemies, where we wiſhed for friends. Theſe and ſeveral other faults ariſe from a want of conſideration, for they are as diſagreeable to the perſon guilty of them as to thoſe with whom he is connected; it muſt be obvious to you all, that I do not recommend that artificial politeneſs which decorates the countenance with a ſmile, while the heart is rankling with malice, and which will diſcover to the wicked and the proud, when occaſion ſuppoſes, the cruelty of ſentiments which I would recommend to you as the heart, and intimately connected with all the other diſpoſitions that can adorn human nature; it conſiſts in having a proper regard for the feelings of others, and in endeavoring to make them pleaſed with themſelves and their ſituation, in ſo far as virtue admits. The beſt obſervers of good breeding is good-ſenſe, which always regards the ſubject, and diſregards the means of making yourſelves agreeable.

At the ſame time that you are animated with the laudable ambition of excelling in your profeſſions, and endeavoring to deſerve applauſe by your amiable exertions, do not neglect to improve thoſe correct principles of religion and virtue which muſt ever conſtitute your moſt valid merit. In your cloſets, the ſolemn and affecting truths of the preſence of your God, our friends, our benefactors, the certainty of death, and that it is only by imitating his moſt perfect example, that we can render ourſelves worthy of the reaſon we boaſt in the poſſeſſion of beings, and enjoy ſolid contentment in this world, the hope of which is to come; but having exhorted you at home, and in another place always to cherish true religion, I ſhall ſay any thing further on that preſent.

Suffer me however, to remind you, that he who would be a good man and rife in moral excellence, muſt begin by being a dutiful child. Obedience to parents, on account of its intimate connection with the firſt principles of virtue, and the ſentiments, are indications of an amiable and generous heart, it may attract to great perfection. This may be a transient conſideration ſome, the moſt ſolemn, and ſerious, and affecting, but it has no value. I will boldly affirm, that the man who does not look back with delight at every preſent he receives from his parents, who looks not a moſt ſignificant ſmile upon the recollection of his exertions to render them happy, and who experiences no compunctions for acts of diſobedience or neglect, can never feel much ſatisfaction either in this world or the next; cherish in your boſoms this tender ſenſe of affection, it will protect you from vice, though for remembrance of your families and your homes. When you are aſſaulted by temptation, when the wicked and profligate are ready to draw you into their ſnares, and to corrupt the pure and amiable principles you have imbibed, when your reſolutions ſtaggers and begins to give way, the tender remembrance of your parents, ſhall riſe to your minds and ſtrengthen your reſolution. What you will aſk in your hearts, would they to your friends ſay were they preſent at this moment. Would they be pleaſed with what I am going to do? Would they approve? Such wickedneſs; it was not that, that they conſidered as the moſt affectionate farewell; they conjured me with tears to adhere to virtue and to fly temptation. This recollection will help to get the allurements of vice and enable you to eſcape their ſnares. Moreover, obedience to parents is the foreruner of obedience to God. In him we behold a parent ſtill dearer than our earthly parents, whole commands are all calculated to make us execute our moſt lively gratitude and joy.

These affections, which I hope you have all diligently cultivated, and which muſt render you kind and affectionate to your brothers, ſhould be extended to all mankind. In attending to theſe, we may certainly look for conſiderable returns, does not the kind benignity muſt forever flow from the boſom of the man in which moſt of the heart. True enjoyment is ſtudied from the ſource of exterior grandeur, or in the exerciſe of power. It is not to be purchaſed with riches, with hearing or abilities, but proceeds from the exerciſe of the benevolent and moral virtues, in that active benevolence which God has diſpoſed as a means to mitigate the numerous afflictions to this tranſitory life. By imparting this ſpirit to your minds, you will diſcover every one to be your friend, indeed the noſtruction you have already received, induces me to cherish the hope, that you will become worthy members of ſociety, for the well informed mind cannot be long without a ſource of enjoyment. He can at all times diſtinguiſh the lights by which he is ſurrounded, and that which is againſt the darkneſs of it. If there be ſome miſchief in ſight many a thing, ſee and ſtrange, and unaccountable, which is frequently renewed, he feels himſelf with humility, he is degraded in his own eyes, and while he ſmiles at the ſame eſteem, it is feeble that he no longer attributes the object of others.

Before I conclude, allow me to recommend the cultivation of friendſhip. The connexions formed at ſchool, are moſt likely to continue during life. This union if founded on virtue, and nourished by ſimilarity of diſpoſition and congenial habits, will be the delight of your future lives. With what tranſports do we recollect the companions of our early years, with what emotion do we look back to their mutual endearments, and to bruſh us to one another, to the noble reſolutions we have ſometimes formed, and our determination to continue the friendſhip of youth and truth. Their are things which give us one of the moſt agreeable pleaſure, when moſt of the other enjoyments of this tranſitory life, have ceaſed to delight.

Clothed in virtue, and inſpired with the moſt pure reſolutions, you may proceed boldly in your journey through life, and the conduct you will purſue, will amply reward the tender and affectionate care of your parents; they will behold their offſpring ſtand their age, the bleſſed, which ſhall illuminate their evening days. Nor will your tutor view your progreſs in virtue and happineſs without emotion, as next to your parents, he will claim to your affection and gratitude, for to him next to them, anxious for your ſucceſs. When his mind ſtooped with a laborious employment, agitated perhaps by diſtreſſing unexpected negligence or officious interference, and was ſoothed to the diſſipation of his ſituation, he is animated with the pleaſing hope, that all his exertions will not be loſt, that ſome of his pupils will ſtill retain a deep ſenſe of the inſtructions, that ſome of them will be of him honor, become the boaſt of their country, and the delight of all their friends.

Go then my young friends, the knowledge you have acquired and the correct habits you have formed, will lead you to your proper path through life, to contrive all thoſe innocent ſchemes of pleaſure, which dignify the human character, and even to make it ſubſervient to our, the reſpect you entertain for every thing ſacred and holy. It is this conduct and theſe ſentiments that will endear you above the rivalſhip, the intrigues and flattery by which you will be ſurrounded. It is this conduct that will ſecure to you a mind full of peace, contention and diſtreſſes, and enable you to look forward to the future, with joy and expectation to that better country beyond the grave.

WILLIAM GRAHAM

Yonge Street, 14th Oct. 1807.

New-York, October 19.

By the brig Sally Tracy, from Bayonne, we have received intelligence that 50,000 troops were to be at Bayonne on the 17th of September; and that Bonaparte was to meet them there on the 20th, previous to their march for Portugal, that government having agreed to put itſelf under the protection of the Engliſh.

Capt. Reynolds, of the ſhip Factor arrived at this port yeſterday, left St. Peterſburg on the 9th of Auguſt, paſſed Copenhagen the 22d, and left Elſineur on the 23d. Capt. R. informs, that when paſſing Copenhagen, he was boarded by three officers from the Engliſh men of war, who were then waiting for an opportunity to get their ſhips into the inner roads of Copenhagen for the purpoſe of commencing the bombardment, the troops having been previouſly landed. On the 23d when Captain Reynolds was at Elſineur, 30 miles from Copenhagen, he heard the commencement of the bombardment, as he ſuppoſes, of Copenhagen—by ten o'clock, the fire became general and tremendous, and continued till between 3 and 4 in the afternoon, when it ceaſed. Capt. R. having but little wind, was at 9 o'clock where he might have heard the firing, had it recommenced. The impreſſion on Capt. R's mind is, that Copenhagen has ſurrendered.

On Monday laſt the ſhip Tom, Capt. Seward, arrived at Portſmouth, in 49 days from Elſineur. Capt. S. ſtates, that Copenhagen had ſurrendered to the Engliſh.

The Boſton Gazette ſays—It was conjectured at Gibraltar when the Waſp and Conſtitution left that place, that an attempt would be made on the fortreſs by the French; and that the aſſembling of the troops at Bayonne, was intended as a preparatory ſtep towards that object. Great preparations were accordingly making to put the fortreſs in the higheſt poſſible ſtate of defence.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Boſton.

"I have juſt ſeen letters from our friend in London to the 7th of September. He has Mr. Munroe daily. Mr. Munroe had not then ſent in any official Note—he and Mr. Pinckney are fully ſenſible of our folly in wiſhing for war, and will do all they can by delay to give time for all parties to cool. Their interviews with Mr. Canning, convinced them that he was well diſpoſed. The Revenge will probably not be diſpatched until the 1ſt of October."

A letter from Liverpool, dated Sept. 9, received at Boſton, ſays:—"An Embargo is laid on all the ports in Holland, even ſhifting boats, and ſmall craft."

The lateſt letters from London ſay, that the ſtory of the American Negociation being limited to four days is untounded: and that after our Plenipotentiaries had made their communications, affairs wore a pacific aſpect.

The Britiſh having accommodated their diſpute with the Chinele, ten ſhips fully laden, under convoy of the Lyon of 64 guns, had ſailed for England.

From late London Papers.

THE SOLDIER'S HARP.

Charles the XIIth, in his deſcent on Copenhagen, near a century ſince, landed at the ſame ſpot where our Britiſh lately debarked their troops. Charles himſelf, eager to reach the iſhore, leaped into the ſea, ſword in hand, where the water roſe above his middle. His example was followed by all his officers and ſoldiers, who quickly put to flight the troops that attempted to oppoſe the debarkation. Charles never had never before been preſent at a general diſcharge of muſqets loaded with ball, when a Britiſh officer who ſtood near him, what occaſioned that whiſtling which he heard? Being informed that it was the ſound of the bullets, the King exclaimed—"This ſhall henceforth be my muſic."

COAST OF DENMARK.

The harbour of Copenhagen is circular, and the entrance into it from the ſea, a channel or gut, the middle of which only is navigable. The water on each ſide is very ſhallow, and is defended by a peculiar kind of military work, called Nival Horns, the nature and ſtrength of which merit a more detailed explanation.

They are made of large timber beams from fifteen to thirty feet long, ſhod with iron, and put together like Chevaux de Friſe. They are then put on flat bottom veſſels, and ſunk three, four, and five feet beneath the ſurface of the water. In the Belts, and other paſſages, particularly in the narrow Channels, where the water has neither tide nor current, they are eaſily laid down and taken up. The Swedes were the firſt who made uſe of theſe works, and they have ſubſequently been adopted both at Cronſtadt and Copenhagen.

FATE OF PORTUGAL.

The detention of the Portugueſe veſſels by Bonaparte, ſeems ominous of much danger to the future independent exiſtence of that nation. It cannot, with juſtice, be regarded as a meaſure of precaution, calculated to enſure compliance with the demand of the French government to exclude Britiſh commerce from the Tagus. The enormous power of one party, when contraſted with the imbecility of the other, leaves no room to doubt of immediate and ready compliance with ſuch a demand. We can only therefore ſuppoſe the meaſure to intimate, that Portugal comes within the limits of thoſe vaſt plans of territorial changes entertained by our enemy. Plans which, ſo far from being impeded by the hoſtility of other powers, have hitherto been moſt rapidly carried into effect during a ſtate of warfare.

PRINCE ROYAL OF DENMARK.

The circumſtances of the Prince Royal of Denmark having committed the defence of Copenhagen to General Peymann and retired to Holſtein, has led many to imagine he has given up all hopes of ſucceſsfully defending the place againſt the attacks of The Engliſh. This may be found not to be the caſe: it is very probable that his journey to Holſtein is for the purpoſe of deviſing means to ſend ſuccours to the beſieged; for, in ſtormy weather, our veſſels of war cannot completely guard the paſſage of the Belts; and it would be practicable, at leaſt, to land officers and engineers, which, we underſtand, conſtitute the principal wants of the Danes. If landed, though not able to enter Copenhagen, they might organize the militia of the iſland, and with them make a powerful diverſion.

MELANCHOLY REFLECTION.

We have ſeldom read any thing more affecting than the deſcription of the eſcape of the Daniſh Monarch across the Great Belt, on the night between the 12th and 13th ult.—Our feelings are excited when we reflect on his age—the heavy affliction under which he has for many years laboured—and the circumſtance of his being obliged to be conveyed in diſguiſe, and in the night, from his capital. A ſtriking inſtance of the inſtability of all human grandeur is here diſplayed. In the recollection of many, this aged and helpleſs Monarch, who is now repeteledly ſtealing in the night from his capital, was in ſcarce any attendants but an affectionate and dutiful Son, was, in this country, ſhining in all the pomp of Royalty, the envy and admiration of all who law him.

PROCLAMATION

Issued on the 5th of August at Zealand.

By ADJUTANT GENERAL DRUCKATHCART, Commander in Chief of His Majesty's forces by Sea and Land, employed in the Expedition.

WHEREAS the present treaties of peace, and the changes of government and of territory acceded to by so many powers, have so far increased the influence of Francein the continent of Europe, as to render it impossible for Denmark, though it desires to be neutral, to preserve its neutrality, and absolutely necessary for those who continue to resist the French aggrandizement, to take measures to prevent the arms of a great power from being turned against them.

In this view the King cannot regard the present position of Denmark with indifference, and His Majesty has sent negociators with ample powers to his Danish Majesty, to request, in the most amicable manner, such explanations as the times require, and a concurrence in such measures as can alone give security against the further mischiefs which the French meditate through the acquisition of the Danish navy.

The King, our Royal and most gracious master, has therefore judged it expedient, to desire the temporary deposit of the Danish ships of the line, in one of his Majesty's ports.

"That regard shall be had to the indispensably necessary, under the relative circumstances of the parties and belligerent powers, that no hostile act shall be committed by the subjects of his Majesty, to injure the territories or property of his Danish Majesty, and that the property, ships, and effects taken as aforesaid, shall be restored to the proprietors, or their agents, in the same plight as they shall be found at the time of delivery, and that adequate compensation shall be made for the loss of the use of the same, in the event of any unnecessary detention.

"We cannot, however, conceal from you, that the Emperor of Russia was in possession, but by fair dealing, of the confidence of those who have in their hands the means of Europe, from whom alone the force of your navy is to be taken.

"We have also deposited with your court full security for the restitution of the same, to be given by the Emperor of Russia, as a pledge has been offered to your government, and is hereby required in the name, and at the express command of the King our master, that all our demands be punctually complied with, every ship belonging to Denmark, both at the conclusion of a general peace, be restored to her, in the same condition and state of equipment as when received under the protection of the British flag.

"It is in the power of your government, by a word, to breathe our swords, and to voluntarily draw against you; but if, on the other hand, the machinations of France tender you deaf to the voice of reason and the call of friendship, the innocent blood that will be spilt, and the horrors of a besieged and bombarded capital, must fall on your own heads, and on those of your cruel advisers.

"His Majesty's seamen and soldiers, when on shore, will treat Zealand, as long as your conduct to them in general is on the footing of a province of the friendly power in full alliance with Great Britain, whose territory was the unfortunate to be the theatre of war.

"The persons of all those who remain at home, and who do not take an hostile part, will be held sacred.

"Property will be respected and preserved, and the most severe discipline will be enforced.

"Every article of supply furnished or brought to market, will be paid for at a fair and settled price; but as immediate and extraordinary supplies, especially of provisions, forage, fuel, and transports, are necessary to all armies, it is well known that requisitions are unavoidable and must be enforced.

"Much convenience will arise to the inhabitants, and much confusion and loss to them will be prevented, if persons in authority are found in the several districts to whom requisitions may be addressed, and through whom claims for payment may be settled and liquidated.

"If such persons are appointed, and discharge their duty without meddling in matters which do not concern them, they shall be respected, and all requisitions shall be addressed to them, through the proper channels and departments of the navy and army; but in furtherance on the part of the inhabitants is essential to the principle of their arrangements, it is necessary that all manner of civil persons should remain at their respective habitations, and any persons, or other persons, found in arms, singly, or in small bodies, or who may be guilty of any act of violence, shall expect to be treated with rigour.

"The government of his Danish Majesty having hitherto refused to treat this matter upon an amicable way, part of the army has been disembarked, and the whole force has adopted a hostile attitude; but it is yet not too late for the voice of reason and moderation to be heard.

Given on the ground, under our hands and seals, this 26th day of August, 1807.

Halifax, October 18.

Yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, William Conon and Mounsey Tinning, two of the unfortunate men who were sentenced to death on the 27th ult. for mutiny on board of his Majesty's frigate Jason, were executed at the fore-yard arm of that ship.—Campbell, Bond, Brown, and Denen, alias Matthews, the also sentenced to death, were respited after they had ascended the platform.

As a justification of their conduct these men had agreed together to permit in a charge of cruelty against their officers, under the idea that such a conduct would excite a compassionate sensation in their favor, as would ultimately lead to their pardons, and to general had been the compassion excited, that a petition had been preferred in their behalf by the Marine Humane Society.—That execution was in consequence delayed, and the Britfish enquiries "minuted, until the Commander in Chief had become fully satisfied of the falsehood of the charge, and of the great criminality of Cann and Tinning, in particular, that mercy could not, without injury to the service, be extended to them.—All of the men were leaving the cabin to attend the execution, the whole list expecting to suffer, hardened scars, some without any the Reverend Gentlemen who attended them, that nothing could not bear to go out of the world with a lie in their mouths.—That the charges they had framed against their officers were not true, and had only been made in them in hopes so extend compassion.—They acquitted those Gentlemen to commit in writing, this their dying declaration, and then would all fight. This was accordingly done. They also at the awful moment of their departure, declared, that they, with the men recommended to mercy, had combined to criminate their officers. They asked pardon of their officers for their injurious conduct in aspersing their characters, and exhibited strong marks of penitence and contrition.

Boston, October 16.

A gentleman has arrived in town from Halifax, and informs, that the English September Packet had arrived there from England, bringing London papers to the 9th Sept. and letters to the 5th. The letters mentioned that Admiral Berkley had been recalled, but that the order was countermanded soon after the dispatches received by the Revenge was made known—and that 6000 troops were ordered out to Nova Scotia. He also observes, that orders had been received from England, for organizing the militia, that several companies had been muttered previous to his leaving Halifax; and that the people there were very averse to a war with the United States. Two of the Jason's mutineers had been hung at her yard-arm, and the remainder deprived. The Triumph and the Leopard, had arrived from the Capes of Virginia.

A letter dated at Cape Cayes the 9th Sept. received at Philadelphia, says—General Xaros, is no more; he was killed by his own soldiers as he was urging them to fight against Petion.—We hear also that Gen. Lamarre has been Christophe, and in all probability he will be taken, and then we shall once more be at peace.

By a French decree, now in force, all foreigners are prohibited from landing in France any black, mulatto, or other person of colour of either sex.

New-York, October 19.

On Monday last the ship Tom, Capt. Seward, arrived at Portsmouth, in 40 days from Elsineur. Capt. S. states, that Copenhagen had surrendered to the English after a short siege, the end of last August, a gentleman in London, dated September 5, to his correspondent in Boston, says, without hesitation, that "Copenhagen has surrendered to the British forces on the 29th of August."

From the United States Gazette.

Lower Sterling.—We have taken some pains to ascertain the truth of a story which has been in circulation since yesterday, related to the purloining of a packet of letters. The following appears to be the prominent facts. Some time yesterday, one of the branch mails came up to town with a package of letters which he had received from a British armed schooner off the Capes of Delaware, and which he was to deposit in the post office. The package was enclosed, according to custom, with the name of vice admiral Berkley, and addressed to Mr. Erskine, the British minister, at Philadelphia.

The pilot instead of taking the package to the post office, delivered it to a person whose name he will not at present mention, who undertook to have it taken care of, and who, as he says, was on his way to the post office to deposit it, when he met with another person, who for the present shall also be nameless. This man, who is attached to the Aurora office, seeing the package, took the person who had possession of it into the office, and the packet was first into a back apartment. After a little while Duane came forward and told the person that he need give himself no further trouble about the package, for that he (Duane) would take care of it. The person demanded that it should be delivered to him, but was refused. Afterwards the package was demanded in form by the British consul, or by his orders, but Duane answered that it was no longer within his control; that it had been put under cover and sent to Washington. Upon inquiry at the post office, however, it was ascertained that nothing of the kind had passed through the office.

These facts may be relied upon as substantially correct. Comment upon such a transaction would be entirely superfluous to men who have any of the most common notions of morality or honor.—As an appeal will probably be made by the injured party to the laws of the land, it would be improper at present to discuss the subject in the Gazette.

YORK:—PRINTED BY CAMERON AND BURNET, PRINTERS TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Washington City, Oct. 27, 1807.

This day, at 12 o'clock, the President of the United States, communicated by Mr. Coles, his Secretary, the following Message to both houses of Congress.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States.

Circumstances, of serious character, which deeply concerned the peace of our country, both abroad and at home, have rendered it my duty to call you together, at an earlier period than was contemplated when you parted from your homes. Those circumstances, which have been developing themselves in the course of the present year, and which have been communicated to you from time to time, as they came to my knowledge, will have prepared you for the consideration of the measures which the state of our country may require. The interests which are staked on the issue of your deliberations are of the highest order. They involve the honor, the independence, and the essential rights of the nation; and it is our sincere prayer, that the result may be such as the love of our country, enlightened by the love of peace, will dictate. Happily, the subjects which will demand your attention, though numerous and highly important, are not of a nature to require long discussion; and I trust that the progress of public business will not be delayed beyond the period to which, by the constitution, you may prolong your session.

The love of peace, which has so long been the characteristic principle of the United States, and which has been cherished by the whole tenor of our conduct, will, I am sure, be found to have lost none of its influence on the present occasion. Whatever may be the decision of others, it will be productive of none on our part, which will not be clearly called for by our honor and our interests. Those, which we have already manifested, have been unequivocally such as to command the confidence of the world, that we are not unmindful of either. Our moderation and forbearance under wrongs and provocations, which have been accumulating for years, have been pushed to the very limit of what the most sensitive honor will justify. Indeed, the character of that honor will be sought, rather in the light which reason sheds on the circumstances of the case, than in the heat which they are calculated to excite. Posterity will be our judges; and by posterity we are willing to be judged.

Our differences with Spain remain still unsettled, no measure having been taken on her part, since my last communication to Congress, of any change in her conduct towards us. But certain facts and considerations, which have since occurred, make it my duty to state, that the state of things, which may force us into war, is not altogether of her conduct towards us. Formerly, indeed, she was unjust, in omitting to restrain her own people from committing depredations on our property, by reason of her incapacity to do it. But now she is unjust, in omitting to restrain them, from the want of the same incapacity. Formerly she omitted to do us justice, from her inability to meet the power which was injuring us. Now she omits it, from her inability to withdraw from the alliance of that power. Formerly she omitted it, because she could not; now, because she will not. Whether the refusal to do us justice, proceeds from the one cause or the other, from the want of power, or the want of will, the effect upon our rights is the same. Nor is it certain, that the causes are unconnected with each other. Spain may have refused to do us justice, in the hope that the power to which she is allied, would avenge her wrongs. Be this as it may, the fact is certain, that the conduct of Spain is influenced by that of France, and that we have no evidence, that the influence will not be exerted to our injury. Add to this, that the principles of France, which place commerce under the power of force, and exclude neutral nations from the intercourse of belligerent ports, are principles which we cannot admit, and which we are bound to oppose. Spain, therefore, in refusing to us the rights of neutrality, takes part with France against us, and indicates the spirit in which she will conduct herself towards us, should we be forced into war with France. Her colonies, from their vicinity, will be the first victims of her hostility. Our trade to the Mediterranean has been subjected to the same fate, by the same power. Our coasting trade, and even our fisheries, are in the same predicament. Our seamen are wanted, and our property is wanted, by the belligerent powers, and will be taken, as far as they can be found, and as they can be reached by the means of force. Our ports and our waters will be the scene of violence committed on our vessels, and on the persons of our citizens. Our rivers, which penetrate our country in every direction, will be penetrated by the armed vessels of the belligerents, and our citizens will be exposed to the same violence, from the same quarter, as on the ocean. Such is the relative situation of the United States and Spain, and such the reasons which place us in the power of France, and compel us to consider the conduct of Spain towards us, as influenced by that of France.

The communications, which I have received from our ministers at London and Madrid, since the period of my last communication to Congress, will be laid before you. They will show the state of our negotiations with those governments, and the grounds on which they have been suspended. Whether they will be renewed hereafter, and with what prospect of success, time only can decide. Our ministers have been authorized to enter into amicable discussions, and to make arrangements, on every subject, which might lead to a settlement of our differences, and to the accommodation of our mutual interests. They have been authorized to make satisfactory arrangements for the payment of the debts due to our citizens from Spain, and for the payment of the claims of our citizens on the government for spoliations committed on our commerce. They have been authorized to enter into arrangements with Spain, relative to the navigation of the Mississippi, and to the boundaries of Louisiana and Mexico. They have been authorized to arrange amicably, and definitively, our claims to the Floridas, and to the navigation of the rivers which run through them. They have been authorized to purchase the Floridas, and to give, for the same, a sum proportioned to the importance of the object to the United States, and to the circumstances which might render it necessary. And they have been authorized to arrange our boundaries, in every direction, on the most liberal principles of compromise, and on the principle of equivalents. It has been thought better to apply the sums then given towards the defence of New York, Charleston and New-Orleans chiefly, as most open, and most likely first to need protection, and to leave places less immediately in danger, to the provisions of the present session.

The gun-boats too, already provided, have on a like principle been chiefly allotted to New-York, New-Orleans and the Chesapeake. A further gun-boat establishment was recommended by a view of our seaport towns and harbors, and the facility with which additional stations might be created, and added to those we have. Some position in the neighborhood of Norfolk, perhaps at the mouth of Elizabeth River, will be eligible for the first station. Gun-boats calculated for the navigation of that river, and the waters of Albemarle Sound, would be necessary for the second. Launches, carrying a single gun, and occasionally a brace of guns, would be proper for the third establishment. Another position, perhaps at the mouth of Pamlico river, will be desirable for the fourth. The fifth and sixth might complete the system for the present time, at the entrances of Delaware bay and river. The seventh and eighth might be applied to the waters of Long Island Sound. The ninth and tenth to Portsmouth and Boston. The eleventh and twelfth to Newport and Providence. The thirteenth and fourteenth to Portland and Passamaquoddy. Vessels of this size, and number, will be sufficient for the harbors, inlets, and waters, exposed to them. Should war arise, they will be ready to meet the dangers at the moment of their approach. While they will relieve the main force destined for the defence of our seaport towns, they will be ready to proceed wherever else they may be necessary, and will be entitled to the aid of the militia in manning them. Reasonable appropriations will be requisite for defraying the cost of those formerly provided, and for such as may be found necessary for the gun-boats now directed. Experience has proved the advantage of floating batteries for the defence of harbors and waters assailable by large ships of war. Their use for other purposes is rather precluded than recommended by the circumstances which render them necessary. Taking into view the whole extent of our seacoast, I have not thought that more than one half of that species of force, which is deemed sufficient for the principal stations, ought to be now provided. Some of the stations, requiring them, may be but temporary, changing with the course of events; others will require them permanently. Allowing for these circumstances, a competent provision for the whole may be made in the course of two years. The first appropriation, and the annual expenditure, will be lessened in proportion to the extent of the provision to be made the first year. Presuming that you will supply the deficiencies of the present appropriations, I have not thought it necessary to ask any thing more than the difference between the sum unexpended of the last appropriation, and the sum proposed for the present year.

The arrangements of the treasury department during the present session of congress, will be rendered more convenient by the fifth day of December, being then the first day of a session of the legislature. Estimates will be transmitted from the Secretary of the war department, and from the Secretary of the navy, as soon as they can be obtained, that the receipts have been equalled to the expenditures of the year, and that the sum which will be in the treasury at the beginning of the year, will be sufficient, after meeting the current demands, and the interest incurring, to leave a surplus of upwards of two millions of dollars, to be applied to the principal of our funded debt. These payments with those of the preceding five and six years, have exhausted of the funded debt, twenty five millions and six tenths of a million, being the sum which could be paid or purchased within the limits of the law and our contracts, and have left us in the treasury, eight millions and an half of dollars. A portion of this sum may be considered as a commencement of accumulation of the surpluses of revenue which will be paying the instalments of debt as they shall become payable, will remain without any special object. It may partly, indeed, be applied towards completing the defence of the exposed parts of our country, on such a scale as shall be adequate to our principles and circumstances. This object is doubtless, among the first entitled to attention: in such a state of our finances; and it is one which, whether we have peace or war, will provide security where it is due. Whether what shall remain of that, with the future surpluses, may be usefully applied to purposes already authorised, or more usefully to others requiring new authorities, or by the whole body shall be disposed of, are questions calling for the voice of Congress, unless indeed, they shall be superseded by a change in our public relations now awaiting the determination of others. Whatever be that determination, it is a great consolation that it will become known at a moment when the supreme council of the nation is assembled at its post, and ready to give the aids of its wisdom and authority to whatever course the good of our country shall then call on us to pursue.

Matters of minor importance, will be the subjects of future communications; and nothing shall be wanting on my part, which may give information or dispatch to the proceedings of the Legislature, in the exercise of their high duties, and at a moment so interesting to the public welfare.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Bordeaux, to his father in this city, dated September 8, 1807.

"The Emperor of France leaves no stone unturned to ruin Great Britain. There are at present no less than 100,000 men marching through this place on their way to Portugal.* I think Spain is included in their object; and shall be much surprised if the present king is not dethroned. It appears that Lucien is to be king of Navarre, which will comprehend Biscay, Navarre and Catalonia; Portugal to be given to Spain in lieu. It will not end there."

Norfolk, Oct. 19.

By Captain Cropley, from St. Croix, we learn, that on the 5th instant two British frigates and a schooner, cut out all the vessels at West-End, and sent them to Tortola, except the brig Enterprise, Lovell, of Boston, which vessel carried out a cargo of timber—she had taken in 13 hhds. of rum, which was taken out by the British. The whole island was considered in a state of blockade; and the inhabitants were removing their property into the interior. The schooner Silenus, Field, from St. Croix for New-York, was captured by a British cruiser, and sent into Tortola.

A letter from Halifax, Oct. 9, says, the militia have been turned out this day to receive arms from the King's Stores.—A letter of Oct. 13, mentions a report from Newfoundland, of the surrender of the Danish fleet at Copenhagen to the English, after an obstinate resistance.

Extract of a letter from Halifax, dated October 9.

"We received here by the packet, account of the arrival in England of the United States schooner Revenge, with the instructions relative to the Chesapeake affair. Our apprehension of war still continues. It is said our governor has received orders to embody 2000 militia; also three regiments of regular troops for this place had embarked from Cork; and that six of the regiments now at Copenhagen are under orders to proceed hither. The measures of the British relative to Canada and Nova Scotia, appear to indicate suspicions that our government has determined on hostilities, and that ordinary precautions may not avert them.

Our affairs with England.—Great complaints have been made, and with great justice, of the unfounded secrecy of the government, in regard to our relations with Great Britain. Notwithstanding the millions of property at hazard, and notwithstanding the perplexing embarrassments which necessarily result from the present equivocal state of things, by which every one is deterred from entering into any extensive commercial speculations, the merchants have not been able to obtain so much as a hint from the government as to the probable result of the pending negociations, nor any intimation of the course of conduct which it would be prudent for them to adopt. This system of secrecy, however, is not without exceptions. Though no information is given to those most deeply interested in receiving it, to those who the president knows he communicates. Within the present month of October he has written to THOMAS PAINE at New-York, that nothing decisive has occurred on the subject of our affairs with England; but that all little circumstances which have come to the knowledge of the government were unfavorable to their wishes for peace.

Our readers may rely upon the authenticity of this statement. It comes to us through such a channel that we cannot be deceived; and we challenge a contradiction.—United States Gazette.

A respectable gentleman of Philadelphia, has received a letter from an intelligent friend in Dublin, of the 20th of September, which states the situation of Ireland as being perfectly tranquil. The same letter adds, that the general opinion was the resistance of the Danes would be much more obstinate than had been at first imagined.

A letter from London of the 5th September, to a respectable merchant in Philadelphia, states, on the authority of Samuel Williams, Esq. late Consul of the U. S. at London, that the answer to Mr. Munroe's communication, on the subject of the Chesapeake, was of so satisfactory a nature as to do away the apprehension of war between the U. States and Great Britain, unless the war should be fought here.—Phil. Pol. Reg.

Extract.—Sometime ago, a woman passing through one of the streets of Bordeaux, was suddenly attacked with a fit of fainting, turning at that moment a child of his months old in her arms. Such a distressing situation speedily attracted a crowd of spectators, who were, however, unable to afford the sufferer any relief. At that moment a young sailor breaking through the crowd, called for the gains of tough fish, which he forced into the woman's mouth. This immediately had the effect of restoring the woman's respiration and speech; and her convulsions were immediately stop ed. The young sailor, who had been at his occupation, told, that he threw low this remedy, having seen persons attacked with fainting fits according to practice.—Baltimore Paper.

Proclamation.

FRANCIS GORE Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c, &c. &c.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME—GREETING:

WHEREAS there are divers persons who were resident in the British Colonies in America, before the breaking out of the American War, who joined the Royal Standard previous to the treaty of separation in the year 1783, and who have resided in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, and have continued to reside therein since that period; but have neglected to obtain in due time the registration of their Names on the U. E. List, or have been suspended from the same, and are thereby deprived of the advantages intended to be bestowed by His Majesty on that meritorious class of subjects.

AND WHEREAS there are other persons, who in like manner did join the Royal Standard, and who were also resident in this Province on, or before, the 28th day of July 1798, but have since died without having their Names inserted on that List, whereby their Children become deprived of the privileges that they otherwise would have derived from His Majesty's Bounty.

Proclamation.

By His Excellency FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS it is and by an act of the parliament of this province, made and passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seven, entitled, "an act to relieve the province an act passed in the forty-second year of his present majesty, entitled, "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same, respectively, after reciting that an act passed in the forty second year of his present majesty, entitled "an act to enable the governor, lieutenant governor, or person administering the government of this province, to appoint one or more additional port or ports, place or places of entry, within this province, and to appoint one or more collector or collectors at the same respectively, which was to continue in force for three years, and no longer, was expired, and it was expedient that the same should be revived and continued—it is enacted that the said act should, from and after the passing of that act, be revived, and the same was thereby revived and continued in force and effect for [illegible] years, and no longer.

And whereas, as well with reference to the interest of his majesty's government of this province, as to the convenience of importers of goods and merchandize, and of the merchants and others, his majesty's subjects residents within this province, it hath been ascertained that there exists immediate occasion for appointing two additional ports and places of entry and clearance at the places herein after specified.

Be it therefore known, to all whom it may concern. That I FRANCIS GORE, Lieutenant governor of this province, in exercise of the power and authority so vested in me, in and by the said recited act, by and with the advice of the Executive Council of the said province, do hereby declare and appoint, that in addition to the ports of entry and clearance established by and under the authority of a certain other of the said provincial parliament, passed in the forty first year of his majesty's reign, entitled, "an act for granting to his majesty, his heirs and successors, to and for the use of this province, the [illegible] on goods and merchandize [illegible] into this province from the United States of America, as [illegible] paid on goods and merchandize imported from Great Britain and other places," and also by an act under the authority of the above in part recited act, passed in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and two, the places herein after described and specified, that is to say, the village of St. Joseph, on the island of St. Joseph, and the eastern extremity of the carrying place, and on the north shore of the river St. Mary, at, or near the Falls of St. Mary, in the Western District, shall from the Eighteenth day of this present month of May, severally and respectively, be and the same are by these presents severally and respectively established and proclaimed to be ports and places of entry and clearance for all goods and merchandize, not being entirely prohibited, and for the payment of all duties liable to be paid for all goods and merchandize brought into this province from the United States of America, imposed and established by virtue of the said act, so passed in the forty-first year of his said majesty's reign, and according to the direction of the same.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT.

New-York, Nov. 11.

The fast sailing ship Swallow, Captain Stevens, arrived below at a late hour last evening, in 36 days from Plymouth in England. She left there on the 5th ult. and to captain Stevens and capt. Doane, passenger, the editor of the Mercantile Adverufer is indebted for Briftol papers to the 4th of October, Liverpool papers to the 1th, and London papers to the 30th of September, and a number of valuable marine articles.

Captain Doane informs us, that he left London on the 2d October, at which time the United States Schooner Revenge had arrived at Portsmouth from Falmouth, to take on board Mr. Munroe, who was expected there in a few days, and whose baggage had been packed up a week before. It was rumoured, capt. D. adds, that the right of search, as it was called, would not be relinquished by the British government, either as it respected merchant vessels or ships of war; and that the prospect of an accommodation between Great Britain and the United States was gloomy. The former had issued orders to detain all American vessels bound to or from the ports of an enemy; and had raised the blockade of the Ems, Weser, and the Elbe, about the 20th of Sept. He flats also, that the expedition to Madeira had not failed, but was rendezvouſed on Cork; and that another expedition, to conſiſt of 20,000 troops, was fitting out, deſtined (as was ſuppoſed) for South America.

The latter conjecture is in a great meaſure confirmed by an article in the London Star of the 28th September, which notices the meeting of a cabinet council on the Friday preceding, which continued in cloſe delibe-ration until three o'clock in the morning. The proceedings had been concealed with great care; but it was rumoured, that, among other meaſures decided upon, was the recapture of Buenos Ayres, as indiſpenſably requiſite to wipe off the ſtigma brought upon the Britiſh arms by the ſurrender and evacuation of their conqueſt in that quarter. For this purpoſe the expedition mentioned by capt. Doane was fitting out, that the conqueſt might not be attended with procraſtination. One great cauſe of the ſlowneſs of their military operations hitherto, is ſaid to be the arithmetical nicety with which the force has been calculated for the accompliſhment of the intended object—not allowing a ſingle man more than was thought indiſpenſably neceſſary. This ſyſtem, in the preſent inſtance, is to be abandoned; and this government is encouraged to adopt vigorous operations from the ſucceſs which has attended their operations before Copenhagen.

Mr. Hawker, a merchant of London, writes to capt. Stevens under the date of 13th September. "Although Mr. Munroe's departure for America may look like hoſtility, yet this is not the caſe; Mr. Pinckney will act in his ſtead. I learn that this government have determined to ſearch all neutral ſhips for Britiſh ſeamen; and it is ſaid a proclamation will be iſſued in a day or two to that effect." This proclamation, however, had not appeared on the 30th.

We collect from our London and Briſtol papers that the Dutch government have interdicted all intercourſe with England. Regulations are drawn up with that ſeverity and thriftneſs which characteriſe every proceeding dictated under the influence of the emperor Napoleon in matters relative to Britiſh commerce. The deſign of the emperor is to exclude England entirely from the continent of Europe; and no choice appears to be left her but to fight her with his own weapons, and deſtroy at once every veſtige of a ſyſtem of neutrality, and this it is underſtood is the determination of the Engliſh government.

"We are informed," ſays the Star of the 8th, "and we believe our information is correct, that our government has reſolved to retaliate on France by a proclamation, exactly on the model of the French decree of blockade. Not only the coaſts of France and Italy, but of every European ſtate under the influence and controul of Napoleon—as alſo all foreign dependencies in circumſtances, will be declared in a ſtate of blockade, and all veſſels going to or coming from any of them, will be declared legal prizes.

"The laſt Lisbon mail brought intelligence of the intention of the Portugueſe Government to emigrate to the Brazils. It is reported that an application has been made to Government to aſſiſt them in executing their deſign."

General Whitelocky is to be tried by a court martial for the ſurrender of Buenos Ayres. He was on his paſſage to England in the Medusa frigate.

Accounts from Egypt repreſent the Arabs as extremely friendly to the Engliſh, and the Mamelukes had explicitly offered to join in expelling the Turks from that country.

Copenhagen ſurrendered to its invaders on the 7th of September. The articles of capitulation ſurrender the whole of the Daniſh ſhips and veſſels of war of every deſcription, and the poſſeſſion of the dock-yards and ſtore-houſes, to the forces of his Britannic Majeſty; within ſix weeks from the date of the capitulation, or ſooner if poſſible, the citadel of Copenhagen and the iſland of Zealand were to be evacuated; and the priſoners taken on both ſides to be unconditionally reſtored. The loſs of the Danes in killed and wounded, it is ſaid, exceed 6000 perſons; the priſoners, at the time of the ſurrender of the city, amounted to 3000; and the number of the houſes deſtroyed, 250.

The Dey of Algiers has ceded the Coral Fiſhery on the coaſt of Barbary to the Engliſh.

It was ſuppoſed the French mediated an immediate attack upon Sicily.

LONDON, Sept. 9.

EXPEDITION AGAINST MADEIRA.

A force, it is ſaid, is to be immediately diſpatched from this country to take poſſeſſion of Madeira. It is to conſiſt, we underſtand, of 3000 men, to be commanded by Gen. Beresford.

The 34. 25th, 82d and 91ſt regiments are mentioned as being intended for this ſervice.

A number of tranſports which are the to be victualled for three months, have been ordered to aſſemble at Portſmouth, where the embarkation is to take place. The troops are likewiſe to be furniſhed with camp equipage. A deputy Adjutant-General, inſpector of Hoſpitals, two Phyſicians, and two ſurgeons, are to be part of the ſtaff. This expedition is expected to ſail in the courſe of next week.

The expedition, it is believed, has been reſolved on in conſequence of intelligence received by government of the hoſtile deſigns of France and Spain againſt Portugal and its poſſeſſions. It is of importance not only to our ally, but to our Eaſt India and other ſhips which call there, that the iſland of Madeira ſhould be preſerved from the gripe of Napoleon.

A proclamation has been iſſued at Hamburgh, prohibiting all Engliſh goods from being introduced into Holſtein, unleſs they can be accompanied with original certificates that they are on neutral account, and are imported from neutral ports.

We underſtand that upwards of 10,000 men had volunteered from the militia regiments into the line before the firſt of Sept. the period at which the volunteering was to begin regularly.

The Daniſh Government it is ſaid, was juſt on the point of concluding a treaty with France by which the latter would have obtained poſſeſſion of all the naval force of the former, and the iſland of Zealand, at the moment our forces arrived.

September 12.

The following bulletin was ſent from the Admiralty to the Lord Mayor, and by his order, poſted on the Manſion Houſe, and communicated to Lloyd's:

Downing-Street, Sept. 12

"Lord Caſtlereagh has the honor to acquaint the Lord Mayor, that diſpatches have been received from Lieut. General Whitelocke, dated July 10, by which it appears, that in an attack upon the town of Buenos Ayres, his Majeſty's troops experienced ſo much reſiſtance from the tumultuous force of the enemy, that after gaining poſſeſſion of part of the town, with ſevere loſs, on the 5th July, the Lieut. General thought it prudent to enter into a negociation with Gen. Liniers, who commanded the enemy's forces, by which he agreed to evacuate South America within two months, upon conditions that all priſoners taken in the attack, as well as thoſe captured at the ſurrender of Buenos Ayres, ſhould be reſtored. The total loſs amounts to killed 317, wounded 679, miſſing 208.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE, Sept. 12.

CAPTURE OF HOLIGOLAND.

Letter from Admiral Russell, to the Secretary of the Admiralty, dated,

MAJESTIC, off HOLIGOLAND, Sept. 5.

I beg you will be pleaſed to acquaint my Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, that I arrived at this iſland, and anchored off the town, on the 4th inſt. at half paſt two, P. M. but did not, as I expected, find the Expedition, the Windſor, or the Exertion, with which their Lordſhips had intended to reinforce me.—(Since arrived).

Having found that Lord Falkland had, with his uſual zeal and promptneſs, ſummoned the garriſon on the 30th ult. and that his propoſals were rejected by the Governor, I was making my arrangements to form him with the marines and ſeamen of the Squadron, if he did not inſtantly ſurrender, for at this time the value of the iſland to us is immenſe.

At ſix P. M. however, he ſent out a flag of truce, deſiring that an officer might be ſent in the morning to treat on articles of capitulation; I ſent, accordingly, at day light yeſterday morning, diſpatched Lord Viſcount Falkland and Lieutenant D'Auvergne, (both of this ſhip) on that ſervice.

At two P. M. the deputation returned with the articles of capitulation, which I immediately ratified.

With a ſmall expence this iſland may be made a little Gibraltar, and a ſafe haven for ſmall craft even in the winter; it is a key to the rivers, Ems, Weſer, Jade, Elbe, and Eyder, the only aſylum at preſent for our cruizers in theſe ſeas.

I have appointed Lieut. D'Auvergne as acting governor of it until their Lordſhips' pleaſure is known, and I beg leave to add, that, from his perſect knowledge of both ſervices, his zeal and loyalty and a high ſenſe of honor, I know no ſeaman more competent to the truſt.

(Signed)

T. MACNAMARA RUSSELL.

BARBADOES, Oct. 6.

GALLANT ACTION.

The capture of the enemy's privateer Jenna Richard, by the Windſor Caſtle Packet, mentioned in our paper of Saturday on which day they arrived, will in a comparative degree, ever rank among the moſt gallant atchievements of our navy and truly deſerves every encomium that can be beſtowed upon it. The diſparity of force between the two veſſels, puts this brilliant action in the cleareſt point of view, and ſerves further to eſtabliſh the general reputation of our ſeamen; while its reſults reflects great credit upon the cool collected courage of Mr. Rogers acting captain, as well as the ſteady good conduct and diſcipline of his crew. The Windſor Caſtle carries four 6 & two 4 pounders, and 28 men; the privateer 6 9's and one 12 pounder amidſhips, waiked on a triverſe, and 98 men. The action, from its commencement (which was on the part of the enemy at long ſhot) to its cloſe, was nearly three hours, but it was by a hard fight of about twenty minutes, yard arm and yard arm that the victory was gained. The enemy run on board the Packet, and hung on by her grapnals, and with her muſketry and traverſe gun did her much injury, but capt. Rogers availing himſelf of the height of his quarters, kept up ſo galling a fire of muſketry, that the enemy was foiled in every attempt to throw his men on board, numbers of whom were piked from her ſhrouds and netting in their efforts to get over. One of the quarter deck guns of the Packet being alſo brought to bear fore and aft on the enemy, the capt. ordered it an additional charge of two muſket balls, which was pointed in upon her with ſuch dreadful ſlaughter, that her deck was inſtantly covered with killed & wounded, and ſuch a general panic given the whole crew, that the remainder fled from their guns etc. Captain Rogers with equal preſence of mind and promptitude, ſeized the occaſion, and with five men only, leaped on board the enemy, who were inſtantly ſecured by battening down the main hatch, and grapling the fore hatille; from whence, after Muſkett ſhaking the enemy's colours, they were ordered up one at a time; and diſarmed with their own irons, which they were compelled to produce. The loſs of the Packet in this gallant affair, was three killed and ten wounded; that of the enemy, 23 killed and 31 wounded; which even ſtill gave her a ſuperiority of numbers over the original complement of the Packet, and more than double of that which remained after their ſurrender!—The unſeaſonable of the Windſor Caſtle is totally diſabled, and her ſails and rigging much cut up; the privateer is but little injured in either hull or rigging, and is a remarkable fine ſchooner and has been one of the moſt ſucceſsful of the enemy's cruizers.

Boſton, Nov. 9.

On Thurſday capt. Stanwood arrived here from Gottenburg, which he left the 13th Sept.—He brings authentic accounts of the ſurrender of Copenhagen to the Britiſh forces, on the 7th September. The reported terms of capitulation, as far as capt. Stanwood can recollect them, were, that the Daniſh fleet, conſiſting of twenty ſeven ſail of the line, and thirty frigates, ſhould be dismantled in one of his Britannic Majeſty's ports, to be reſtored at the concluſion of a general peace; that the Britiſh army ſhould not enter the city of Copenhagen, but ſhould re-embark and leave the iſland of Zealand in ſix weeks; and that all merchants ſhips and property taken, ſhould be reſtored. The effect of this news at Gottenburg, was, that a Britiſh ſquadron which had arrived there with reinforcements for the Engliſh army, had not proceeded on their deſtination.

It was reported at Gottenburg that a ſerious miſunderſtanding had ariſen between the Ruſſian Emperor and his Senate, on the ſubject of the Treaty of Tilſit; and that the Senate had not ratified that inſtrument.

The Swedes remained zealous in their co-operation with the Engliſh to oppoſe French domination; and were fitting out nine ſail of the line with all poſſible expedition. Capt. S. heard nothing of any threats from the Ruſſian Court againſt Sweden. The King had returned to Sweden.

It was underſtood at Gottenburg that the Ruſſians were ſtill favorably diſpoſed towards the Engliſh.

The York Gazette.

YORK, DECEMBER 8, 1807.

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, has been pleaſed to appoint Lieut. Col. Æneas Shaw, to be Adjutant-General to the Militia forces in this Province.

The family of the late Mr. Juſtice Thorpe, left this Province we underſtands about eight days ſince, for Europe.

Our readers will appreciate juſtly the acquiſition of the Danish Marine, that the truſt will be preſerved inviolate by our Government, we cannot doubt; to preſerve them from the graſp of Napoleon, was the object in view, and it has been fully accompliſhed: we regret to ſay, not without bloodſhed on the part of the Danes. The ſtrongeſt probability exiſts, that a war muſt take place between Ruſſia and France; the latter ever faithleſs to treaties and ever aiming to overreach the power with which ſhe treats, although the may have lulled the Ruſſian Monarch into temporary ſecurity, has yet much to do before her continental ſyſtem can be perfected. The peace of Tilſit we underſtand, is not ratified on the part of Ruſſia, nor likely to be, the conſequences cannot be predetermined. The ſituation of Spain which has long ceaſed to be an independent Kingdom is not more enviable, than that of Portugal, whoſe Court it is expected, will remove to America. Our letters at Buenos Ayres, are hopes, will be ſhortly reſtored, as an expedition was fitting out, and ere this, probably ſailed, againſt which, reſiſtance we truſt, will be fruitleſs, and which will ſpeedily determine the fate of Spaniſh America.

The gallant king of Sweden, contending againſt diſproportionate odds—ſtill maintains a warfare with the tyrant and his hoſts, of which it is impoſſible to predict the reſults; if he cannot command ſucceſs, his efforts nevertheleſs deſerve it. The energies of Britain fully located and equal to every emergency, leave her ſubjects no room for apprehenſion; added to union and vigour in the departments of ſtate, the loyalty and attachment of her hardy ſons, is the ſacred pledge of her glory and independence, and the guardians of that proudly ſtationed devotion, which the hoſts amongſt the nations of the earth.

Departed this life on Tueſday the 24th ult. Capt. JOSEPH BRANT, aged 65 years. This celebrated chief, from profeſſing many virtues, has left a chaſm in ſociety which his family and friends muſt long and deeply regret.

ABSCOND.

A certain attorney happened to be at a tavern with his honeſt landlord, and was facetious at the counſeyman's expence. They even wrethelled agreed to try for a bottle of wine, who could make the beſt rhyme. The lawyer enquired the landlord's occupation, who cheerfully informed him he was a weaver, upon which the lawyer wrote theſe lines:

The world, this large, is but a ſpan,
It takes nine weavers to make a man.

The weaver, in his turn, inquired the lawyer's occupation, and being informed, I thought, ſaid he, you were of the law by the glibneſs of your tongue; but ſince you have rhymed about the world, ſo I will too, and then he wrote:

"The world is wide, and full of evil,
"And half a lawyer makes a devil."

THE ſubſcriber begs leave to inform the public, that he has at preſent, and ean at ſhort notice procure, a number of Gun Mill on the Blue Mountains, and hopes in a ſhort time to have a ſecond pair. He flatters himſelf, that from his experience in eſtabliſh manufacturing Mills, (heretofore ſo much wanted in this neighbourhood, his ſupport will be ſhared, and that he will give the moſt general ſatisfaction, as he will ſtrictly attend to have juſt proportioned and conſiſtent work done. He has at preſent a conſiderable quantity of Lumber and Boards on hand and will be happy to receive orders for thoſe articles. All work will remain with thanks and punctuality for the perſon, he requeſts them to be addreſſed to himſelf at the Meadow, or left at the Printing Office to WILLIAM COOPER

XII. XXII. That the perſons called Quakers, Menonifts and Tunkers, who from certain ſcruples of conſcience, decline bearing arms, ſhall not be compelled to ſerve in the ſaid militia, but every perſon profeſſing that he is one of the people called Quakers, Menonifts or Tunkers, and producing a certificate of his being a Quaker, Menonift or Tunker, ſigned by any three or more of the people (who are or ſhall by them be authorized to grant certificates for this or any other purpoſe, of which a paſtor, miniſter or preacher ſhall be one) ſhall be excuſed and exempted from ſerving in the ſaid militia, and inſtead of ſuch ſervice, all and every ſuch perſon or perſons, that ſhall or may be of the people called Quakers, Menonifts or Tunkers, ſhall pay to the lieutenant of the county or riding, or in his abſence to the deputy lieutenant, the ſum of twenty ſhillings per annum in time of peace, and five pounds per annum in time of actual invaſion or inſurrection, upon producing ſuch certificate, and being thereby exempted from ſuch ſervice as aforeſaid, and if any ſuch perſon or perſons being of the people called Quakers, Menonifts or Tunkers, and producing a certificate as aforeſaid, ſhall omit or refuſe to pay the ſum of twenty ſhillings per annum in time of peace, and five pounds per annum in time of actual invaſion or inſurrection, inſtead of ſuch ſervice, it ſhall and may be lawful, upon the oath of any one credible witneſs, of ſuch omiſſion or refuſal before any juſtice of the peace, for ſuch juſtice to iſſue his warrent to levy the ſame by diſtreſs and ſale of the offenders goods and chattels, returning ſo much of the ſaid diſtreſs as ſhall exceed the ſaid ſum of twenty ſhillings per annum in time of peace, and five pounds per annum in time of actual invaſion or inſurrection, after deducting the expences of levying the ſame, to the perſon or perſons upon whom ſuch diſtreſs ſhall be made. VIII. That if any perſon be wounded, and ſhall be diſabled upon any invaſion, inſurrection, or rebellion, he ſhall be taken care of, and be provided for by the public, during the time of ſuch diſability.

P. 159, Sec. I. That when any perſon ſhall have been convicted of any offence againſt any of thoſe laws, which offence is not now puniſhable by impriſonment, and ſhall refuſe to pay the fine, forfeiture or penalty impoſed on ſuch offender, it ſhall and may be lawful for the juſtice or juſtices before whom ſuch perſon ſhall have been convicted, to commit ſuch offender to the common gaol of the diſtrict, until he ſhall pay and ſatisfy ſuch fine, forfeiture or penalty, together with the reaſonable charges attending ſuch conviction. Provided nevertheleſs, That no perſon or perſons ſo committed ſhall in any caſe be detained in cuſtody longer than the ſpace of one calendar month.

II. That no perſons who have been diſcharged from his Majeſty's ſervice as non commiſſioned officers ſhall be obliged to ſerve in any ſtation in the militia of this Province inferior to that which they held in his Majeſty's ſervice, unleſs having been non-commiſſioned officers in the ſaid Militia, they may have been reduced according to law.

III. That the exemption extended to the ſeveral perſons ſtated in the twenty-firſt clauſe of an Act paſſed in the thirty-third year of his Majeſty's Reign, intituled, "An Act for the better regulation of the Militia of this Province" ſhall extend to all Militia Officers having ſerved under and by virtue of a commiſſion from any of his Majeſty's Governors or Lieutenant Governors in America.

LONDON GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY.

Downing-ſtreet, Sept. 16.

Diſpatches of which the following are extracts have been received by Lord Viſcount Caſtlereagh, one of his Majeſty's principal ſecretaries of ſtate, from admiral Gambier & lieutenant general the right hon. Lord Cathcart, K. T. commanders of his Majeſty's naval and military forces in the Baltic Sea.

Prince of Wales, Copenhagen Road, Sept. 7.

My Lord—My letter of the 5th inſt. will inform your Lordſhip of the progreſs of the operations of his Majeſty's forces againſt Copenhagen to that period. I have now the honor and ſatisfaction to add, that previous to the hour intended for the opening our batteries that night, an officer with a flag of truce came out of the town with propoſals for an armiſtice, to ſettle terms of capitulation. This was accordingly done, after a correſpondence between the Daniſh General and Lord Cathcart and myſelf, of which I tranſmit a copy; and your Lordſhip will be informed of the ſtipulations agreed upon by the incloſed copy of the articles. Our army has accordingly been put in poſſeſſion of the citadel and the arſenal, and the moſt vigorous exertions are commenced for equipping and ſending to England the Daniſh navy.

I have the honor to be,

J. GAMBIER.

To Lord Viſcount Caſtlereagh, &c. &c. &c.

Citadel of Copenhagen, Sept. 8.

My Lord—It has fallen to my lot to have the great ſatisfaction of forwarding to your Lordſhip the ratified capitulation of the town and citadel of Copenhagen, including the ſurrender of the Daniſh fleet and arſenal in this port, which are placed at his Majeſty's diſpoſal.

The object of ſecuring this fleet having been attained, every other proviſion of a tendency to wound the feelings or irritate the nation has been avoided; and, although the bombardment and cannonade have made conſiderable havoc and deſtruction in the town, not one ſhot was fired into it till after it was ſummoned, with the offer of the moſt advantageous terms; nor a ſingle ſhot after the firſt indication of a diſpoſition to capitulate; on the contrary, the firing, which had laſted 3 nights from his Majeſty's batteries, was conſiderably abated on the ſecond, and was only renewed on the third to its full vigour, on ſuppoſing, from the quantity of ſhells thrown from the place, that there was a determination to hold out.

On the evening of the 5th of September, a letter was ſent by the Daniſh general, to propoſe an armiſtice of twenty-four hours, for preparing an agreement on which articles of capitulation might be founded. The armiſtice was declined, as tending to unneceſſary delay, and the works were continued; but the firing was countermanded, and lieutenant colonel Murray was ſent to explain, that no propoſal of capitulation could be liſtened to, unleſs accompanied by the ſurrender of the fleet.

This baſis having been admitted by the ſubſequent letter, on the 6th, major-general A. Welleſley, whom I had ſent for, for this purpoſe, from his command in the country, where he had diſtinguiſhed himſelf and ſo advantageous to the public, was appointed, with Sir H. Popham and lieutenant colonel Murray, to prepare and ſign articles of capitulation; and theſe officers having infiſted on proceeding immediately to buſineſs, the capitulation was drawn up in the night between the ſixth and ſeventh.

The ratification was exchanged in the courſe of the morning, at four in the afternoon of the ſame day. Lieutenant general Burrard proceeded to take poſſeſſion.

The Britiſh grenadiers preſent, with detachments from all the other corps of cavalry and infantry, under the command of colonel Cameron, of the 79th regiment, with two brigades of artillery, marched into the citadel; while major general Spencer, having embarked his brigade at the Kalk Beandle, landed at the dock-yard, and took poſſeſſion of each ſide. Nine of battle ſhips, and of all the ſtorages; the Daniſh guards withdrawing when thoſe of his Majeſty were ready to replace them, and proper officers attending to deliver thoſe, as far as inventories could be made up.

The town being in a ſtate of the greateſt ferment and diſorder, I moſt willingly acceded to the requeſt that our troops ſhould not be quartered in it, and that neither officers or ſoldiers ſhould enter it for ſome days, and having command of poſſeſſion from the city de[illegible] whenever it might be neceſſary to uſe it, I had no objection of leaving the other gate in the hands of the troops of his Daniſh Majeſty, together with the police of the place.

The amount of the garriſon of the town is not eaſily aſcertained. The regular troops were not numerous; but the number of batteries which fired at one time, together with the floating defences, prove that there muſt have been a great number of militia and burghers, with other irregular forces; and the ordnance well ſerved.

Conſidering the advanced poſition in which his Majeſty's troops have been placed for the laſt fortnight, our loſs (highly as I prize the value of every officer or ſoldier who had fallen or been wounded) is comparatively ſmall. [Here follows an eulogium on the ſeveral officers and men engaged on the expedition, alſo acknowledging his having received the moſt prompt and beneficial aſſiſtance from the fleet.]

I ſend this diſpatch by lieutenant Cathcart, who has become for ſome time my firſt aid-de-camp, who has ſeen every thing that has occurred here & at Stralſund, and will be able to give any further details that may be required. I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) CATHCART.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleaſed to appoint Wedneſday, the 20th day of January, 1808, for the meeting, in the Town of York, of the Provincial Parliament, for the Actual Diſpatch of Public Buſineſs.

From the early call of the meeting of the provincial Legiſlature this year, we preſume that with other objects, the ſafety and accommodation of Members from the diſtant and remote parts of the Province was conſidered.—Formerly, their ſole concern in their homes was reduced precautions, by being underſtood at a ſeaſon, when the roads were in their worſt ſtate.

We announce with much pleaſure, an acquiſition to Society to this place, by the arrival of F. Selby Eſq. and Miſs Selby.

We beg leave to ſtate, that in our laſt weeks paper, we did not wiſh to have Mr Thorpe's ſervices inferred, by calling him "the late Mr Joſiah Thorpe"; our intention was to have been underſtood, Mr. Thorpe, late of this Province.—We underſtand he left Albany in Patton's Steam Boat.

To ſuch of our Yonge Street friends, as feel themſelves intereſted in its improvement, and who can foreſee the advantages of turning the North-Weſt communication into this channel, we recommend induſtry and alacrity. We beg leave to remind them, that as the firſt year will produce a general Reſiſtion, the enſuing ſeaſon will be this proper time to petition for a Turn-Pike, for the obvious reaſon, that the perſons Houſe of Aſſembly will be ſtruck, by ſupporting ſuch a beneficial and praiſe-worthy meaſure, to leave a great and laſting monument to their ſucceſſors, for imitation.

From the People's Friend, of the 4th Nov.

"Letters from Baltimore, dated on Wedneſday morning, and received by yeſterday's mail, mentioned that the United States ſchooner Revenge, with Mr. Munroe, the American Miniſter, from the Court of London, was in the Bay, coming up."

THOSE Gentlemen who wiſh to ſubſcribe to the York Aſſembly for this ſeaſon, are hereby informed, that the Subſcription Liſt is left with Mr. D. Cameron, and that W. Allan, Eſq. the Treaſurer, will receive the Subſcriptions and give Tickets of admittance. The firſt Aſſembly to be on Thurſday evening the 17th inſt. and the dancing to commence at 7 o'clock.

He has alſo received from New-York, a variety of Bonnet Ribbons, of the neweſt faſhions, and a general aſſortment of Millinery, among which are elegant and the moſt faſhionable Oſtrich Feathers, &c. &c. The length of time he has been detained at Montreal in the purchaſe of ſeaſonable goods, has enabled him to lay in his goods, that year, on the moſt favorable terms, and he can ſupply Country Store-keepers more advantageouſly to them than if they made their purchaſes here.—He propoſes to receive in payment and barter for Goods, the following articles, to ſuch as his ſtores will be found for their reception, viz:—Flour, Wheat, Indian Corn, Oats, Pork and Pork. None of theſe articles will be received unleſs they are of prime quantities, and he hopes none other will be offered; the Pork muſt be well cured and packed in ſufficient barrels, and not exceed twelve months; the barrel marked with the venders name, and date of delivery

Caſh advanced, or ſold on account of Sterling Bills, which he will receive in payment from his regular Cuſtomers at par, although ſubject to a large diſcount in other places. His ſtore is at Niagara, under the care of Mr. Fenton, contains nearly a ſimilar aſſortment with the one at York.

Impelled by motives of gratitude and eſteem for Meſſrs. Boucherville and Mr. Daniel, (his late Clerks) Mr. St. George has eſtabliſhed them at Amherſtburg. All ſuppers and favors ſhown them by his friends and the public, will be conſidered as perſonal obligations by him

DECLARATION OF THE KING OF ENGLAND.

His Majesty owes to himself and to Europe a frank exposition of the motives which have dictated his late measures in the Baltic.

His Majesty has delayed this exposition only in the hope of that more amicable arrangement with the court of Denmark, which it was his Majesty's firm wish and endeavour to obtain, for which he was ready to make great efforts and great sacrifices; and of which he never did fight even in the moment of the most decisive hostility.

Deeply as the disappointment of this hope has been felt by his Majesty, he has the consolation of reflecting that no exertion was left untried on his part to produce a different result. And while he laments the cruel necessity which has obliged him to have recourse to acts of hostility against a nation with which it was his Majesty's most earnest desire to have established the relations of common interest and alliance; his Majesty feels confident that, in the eyes of Europe and of the world, the justification of his conduct will be found in the commanding and indispensable duty, paramount to all others amongst the obligations of a sovereign, of providing, while there was yet time, for the immediate security of his people.

His Majesty had received the most positive information of the determination of the present rulers of France to occupy with a military force, the territory of Holstein—for the purpose of excluding Great Britain from all her accustomed channels of communication with the Continent; of inducing or compelling the court of Denmark to close the passage of the Sound against the British commerce and navigation; and of availing himself of the aid of the Danish Marine for the invasion of Great Britain and of Ireland.

Confident as to his Majesty was of the authority of the sources from which this intelligence was derived, and confirmed in the credit which he gave to it, as well by the notorious and repeated declarations of the enemy, and by his recent occupation of the ports and territories of other neutral States, as by the preparations actually made for collecting a hostile force upon the frontiers of his Danish Majesty's continental dominions, his Majesty would yet willingly have forborne to act upon this intelligence, until the complete and practical disclosure of the plan had been made manifest to all the world.

His Majesty did forbear, as long as there would be a chance of the urgency of the danger, or a hope of an effectual counteraction to it, in the means, or in the dispositions of Denmark.

But his Majesty could not but recollect that when, at the close of the former war, the Court of Denmark engaged in a hostile confederacy against Great Britain, the apology offered by that court for so unjustifiable an abandonment of a neutrality which his Majesty had never ceased to respect, was founded on its inability to resist the operation of external influence, and the threats of a formidable neighbouring power. His Majesty could not but compare the degree of influence which at that time determined the decision of the court of Denmark, in violation of positive engagements, solemnly contracted but six months before, with the increased operation which France had now the means of giving to the same principle of intimidation with the kingdoms prostrate at her feet, and with the population of nations under her banners.

Nor was the danger less imminent than certain. Already the army destined for the invasion of Holstein was assembling on the violated territory of neutral Hamburgh. And Holstein were occupied, the island of Zealand was at the mercy of France, and the navy of Denmark at her disposal.

In a state a British force might have found its way into the Baltic, and checked for a time the movements of the Danish Marine. But the season was approaching when this precaution would no longer have availed; and when his Majesty's fleet must have retired from that sea, and permitted France, in undisturbed security, to accumulate the means of offence against his Majesty's dominions.

Yet, even under these circumstances, in calling upon Denmark for the satisfaction and security which his Majesty was compelled to require, and in demanding the only pledge by which that security could be rendered effectual—the temporary possession of that fleet, which was the chief inducement to France for forcing Denmark into hostilities with Great Britain; his Majesty accompanied that demand with the offer of every condition which could tend to reconcile it to the interests and to the feelings of Denmark.

It was for Denmark herself to state the terms and stipulations which she might require.

If Denmark was apprehensive that the future order of her fleet would be referred by France in an act of connivance; his Majesty had prepared a force of such formidable magnitude, as must have made concession justifiable even in the estimation of France, by averting resistance altogether unavailing.

If Denmark was really prepared to resist the demands of France and maintain her independence, his Majesty proffered his co-operation for her defence—naval, military, and pecuniary aid; the guarantee of her Kingdom, of her territories, and the security and extension of her colonial possessions.

That the sword has been drawn in the execution of a service indispensable to the safety of his Majesty's dominions, is matter of no ordinary and painful regret to his Majesty. That the state and circumstances of the world are such as to have required and justified the measures of self protectation, to which his Majesty has found himself under the necessity of resorting in a truth which his Majesty deplores, but for which he is in no other degree responsible.

His Majesty has long carried on a most unequal contest of scrupulous forbearance against unrelenting violence and oppression. But that forbearance has its bounds. Where the design was openly avowed, and already but too far advanced towards its accomplishment, of subjecting the powers of Europe to one universal usurpation, and of combining them by terror or by force, in a confederacy against the maritime rights and political existence of this kingdom, it became necessary for his Majesty to anticipate the success of a system, not more fatal to his interests than those of the powers who were destined to be the instruments of its execution.

It was time that the effects of that dread which France has inspired into the nations of the world, should be counteracted by an exertion of the power of Great Britain, called for by the exigency of the crisis, and proportioned to the magnitude of the danger.

Notwithstanding the declaration of war on the part of the Danish government, it still remains for Denmark to determine whether we shall continue between the two nations. His Majesty still proffers an amicable arrangement. He is anxious to terminate the war, which he has been most reluctantly compelled to draw. And he is ready to demonstrate to Denmark and to the world, that having acted solely upon the score of what was due to the security of his dominions, he is not desirous from any other motive, or for any object of advantage or aggrandizement to carry measures of hostility beyond the limits of the necessity which has produced them.

LONDON, OB. 13.

An article from Kell would have us believe, that the Danish Government wished to destroy rather than surrender the fleet, and that it had actually transmitted orders to that effect, which we intercepted.

We are not able yet to state who her the report transmitted from Memel, of Bonaparte having sent a requisition to the court of Petersburgh, to shut its ports against this Country, be true or not.—It is highly probable—Remarkable, the Russian Prime Minister is understood to be decidedly hostile to this Country:—But the hostility of Mentchikow is not participated by the rest of the Russian Nobility, and the increasing unpopularity of the Treaty of Tilsit, and of its effecting the Armistice with Turkey, is understood to have greatly strengthened the English party.—Prince Mentchikoff has been charged with an important mission to this Country, and the friends of England consider this as a favorable prognostic.

October 20.

A report is current that on the part of the English, an application has been made to the king of Sweden to deliver up his fleet, which is now rigging and getting ready for sea in Carlscrona, as a deposit to the English. On Langeland, as well as Fremen, several English seamen attempted to effect a landing, but were repulsed.

Halifax, Oct. 10.

At the desire of his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, a meeting of the principal inhabitants of the town was held at the Court House on Friday afternoon last, to consider of a request made by Major General Hunter, to his Excellency, for 200 militia men, duely to assist in repairing the fortifications.—As soon as the object of the meeting was explained, the Artillery, Grenadiers, and Light Infantry Volunteer Companies, tendered their services for immediate duty, until an arrangement could be made for drafting proportionably, from the several Militia Companies, the number of men required.

Bath, November 13.

By the Francis, Captain Curtis, arrived at Tuckay hill, from Liverpool, our London dates are brought down to the 12th inst.

On the subject of our affairs with Russia, there appears nothing further than that Mr. Munroe was to return home, leaving, however, Mr. Pinckney, as an accredited Minister and Plenipotentiary to the Court;—That not having sufficient powers to conclude a Treaty; or, in other words, to settle certain points, in controversy with the two countries; there arose an absolute necessity for further correspondence between the respective governments; and that therefore, some considerable delay would necessarily ensue, before an ultimate decision could be made on them. To this situation, the public is fixed at the date of our last advices. The particular point, which has obstructed the operations of our Ministers, is said to be that relating to search for [illegible], on board private armed vessels:—Our government asserting and the British maintaining the right. As Mr. Munroe may be hourly expected at the seat of Government, as well as the dispatches which our accounts state to have been forwarded by the British cabinet to their Minister here, we may yet hope, that such a spirit of accommodation will prove to be manifested by the two parties, as shall avert the unnatural state of hostility, which must otherwise take place.

The London papers by the Francis do not contain a word on the subject of any British order of council, relating to Bonaparte's blockading decree.

From the Mediterranean.

Capt. Williams, arrived at Salem from Leghorn, confirms the account of the capture of that city by the French; of their laying an embargo, which continued until the 16th September, when it was taken off. He informs, that Lord Paget, the English Minister was negociating at Constantinople, with a prospect of success;—being backed by lord Collingwood, with fifteen sail of the line; who had taken the island of Tenedos (recently restored to the Turks by Russia), with six or seven sail of the line:—That a French army of 60,000, which had been on the march to Naples, supposed to be ultimately destined against Sicily, had halted; and this halt was attributed at Leghorn to appearances unfavorable to the French in other parts of Europe:—The discontents at Petersburgh it was expected would produce a change there in favor of the war party; and it was confidently believed that England would [illegible] be able again to combine both Austria and Russia against France, to which the powerful diversion the last made at Constantinople, would probably contribute. Such was the view of affairs at Leghorn, the 28 October.

Lord SIDMOUTH's Speech on the probability of Invasion.

[The following extract from the Speech of this gentleman is delivered in the British Parliament, a short time previous to its late prorogation, will be read with no little interest. We have not seen the whole Speech, but will judge from this portion of it, that his lordship was an able advocate for the contemplated measure of encreasing the regular force to the utmost military of the country.]—Boston Gazette.

"But my lords, is the chance of invasion of more probability? Where we look at the extension of the resources of France, at the means of recruiting her navy, which she has acquired by her continental conquests, it would be blindness not to perceive, that her naval power must soon become far more formidable than it has ever yet been. France is now in possession of the finest forests in Europe, and of countries capable of affording ample supplies of every naval store, she may command the services of all the seamen which the Continent can afford from Memel to Cadiz—Is it the part of a prudent politician, under such circumstances, to overlook the possibility of our navy being swelled. This my Lords, is an event for which we ought to be prepared; and fortunately there is room to hope that we shall have sufficient time to prepare against it. But any one who considers well what the State of this country would be, if the French had obtained a superiority at sea, will certainly not be disposed to think, that we can begin too soon to provide against such an emergency.

"In those who shut their eyes against the danger of immediate invasion, there is something like absolute infatuation. Because one enemy is at a distance and has Constantinople. We may look too to the prospect, that the whole energy of the French government will now be directed to this object: we know in fact, that during all the pressure of their continental wars, the most active exertions in ship building have never been discontinued in their naval arsenals, they have now no other object to divide their attention; and we may be well assured that all the ability of the ruler of France will now be turned to naval affairs. The same genius which has created such an astonishing change in the discipline & science of the French army, will now be unremittingly employed in the improvement of their navy, and if we recollect how little disorganized bands which a few years ago, were flying before Suwarow out of Italy, are now the victorious legions of Austerlitz, of Jena, and of Friedland, we shall not be disposed to underrate the change, which the same genius may effect in the navy of France. We have therefore every reason to believe, that the naval prosperity of England, much ere long be exposed to a more severe contest, than any which it has recently had to maintain—I never confidence one may entertain in the and skill of our seamen, it is put for a while his back turned to us, we have to imagine, that he can never again threaten our shores. His army indeed will now on the banks of the Vistula; but have we forgot the rapidity with which he moved from the Rhine to Berlin? Nor are France and the adjacent provinces left so entirely of troops but that a week or two perhaps, would be sufficient to collect again at Boulogne, such a force as might be sufficient for the invasion. Even before the winter sets in, it is not impossible that a French army may be on English ground; & if the blow be attempted, it will only be that it may be defeated with greater certainty. Under these circumstances, not only is the nation sunk in security, but the ministers, setting the example of blind infatuation, are not ashamed of bringing forward such a proposition as the bill before us, telling the nation that 20 or 30 more troops are to secure their fe if ever, my lords, there was an example of that infatuation which seems to be the natural forerunner of the fall of Empires, is not this one? In what are we more wise than the Prussians, when, a year ago, reduced to dwelling on definitions, we would not believe in the possibility of defeat? They thought that the legions of the Great Frederick were invincible, as we seem now to think that the conquest is an inevitable matter. Will no experience teach us wisdom? And is England destined to afford us another terrible example that "quos Deus vult perdere, prius dementat."

"Let us rouse, my lords from this fatal security; let us rush no longer to a barrier that may be overcome. It is not to the Channel that we must look for security, but to the hands of Englishmen fighting for their liberties, for the glory and independence of their country. To put our trust in the sea, if it were not the extreme of folly, would be the extreme of cowardice! Shall the descendants of the men, who conquered at Agincourt and Cressy, acknowledge that they cannot meet the army of France hand to hand, and that it is only at sea that we can cope with our enemies? Away with the base idea, that England must entrench herself behind a miserable ditch, instead of coming into the field! Perpetual fortification is the refuge to the Americans, that their vessels have not suffered any detriment or delay in her mission, by weakening her crew."

October 8.

At the levee yesterday, Mr. Munroe, the American Ambassador, was presented to his Majesty, by the master of the ceremonies. His Excellency took leave of his Majesty, previous to his departure for America. Mr. Munroe is succeeded in his Embassy, by Mr. Pinckney.—Previous to the levee, Mr. Munroe had an interview with Mr. Canning. (The above ceremony is generally disposing with, when Ministers leave the British Court dissatisfied.)

October 9.

Mr. Munroe, the American Minister, had his final interview with Mr. Canning on Wednesday. His departure is in no respect connected with the dispute with America. The final answer of our government on that subject has already been sent off to Mr. Erskine.

Instructions it is said, have been sent out to India, to impose an additional duty on neutral vessels trading there.

It is reported that the next French legislative body will be composed of two chambers viz. an upper chamber, in which will sit and vote all the princes, dukes, counts, marquisses, and barons, lately created; and a lower chamber, composed of deputies from all the departments, each of which will have an attendant and parliament.

The Bourbon king of France, (Louis XVIII) and suite, are momently expected in England.

Great apprehensions were entertained at Constantinople, that the British squadron at the mouth of the Dardanelles would attempt to force that passage.

From a London paper of October 3.

The blockade, which was so arrogantly and absurdly announced by the French Government against this country, and which is now carrying into the most rigorous execution in Holland, has, at length we understand, determined his Majesty's Ministers, in return to a measure of retaliation, which must be severely felt by France and the countries under its dominion. It is a deplorable consideration that the interests and happiness of France and so many states on the Continent, should be thus dependent on the will of an individual, who is evidently resolved to disregard every feeling of justice and humanity, in order to gratify his rancour against Great Britain. Britons may hence infer what they would suffer, if by a defection of their own rights, or a negligence of supporting them, they should ever fall into the power of so violent and unrelenting an enemy. But while we are disposed reluctantly to preserve the blessings we enjoy, we may bid defiance to all his menaces; and our naval strength gives us a full opportunity of inflicting upon him and his high-flown states, that blockade which he has ridiculously awarded against the British Empire. It is now said to be determined, that no vessel shall enter a port of France or of any state under its controul. We feel much concern at the necessity of thus throwing any obstacle in the way of that commercial intercourse which is so advantageous to Europe in general, and upon which such wide and complicated interests depend; but it is necessary to convince Bonaparte that we can really inflict that evil which he has unjustly threatened; and though we are almost hopeless of facing any effectual endeavour, on the part of the people of France, or of any other state governed by France, to throw off the authority which so much oppresses them the authority which so much oppresses them we are absolutely driven by France, nay we are absolutely driven to a state of their wrongs. Nothing short of a total revolution shall we have to find it so, how much a revolution shall we have to reject, that while we reserved to the experiment of a safe retaliation, which our national pride as well as national interest had rendered unavoidable, we at the same time consulted to effect the restoration of Europe from a shameful subjection and dependence on the arbitrary will of an imperious enemy, whose all-enthusing elevation has absolutely intoxicated his mind, and made him a fiver of his own goddess, while he tyrannizes over to his own goddess, while he tyrannizes over every part of Europe but this country, whose judgement he cannot deceive, and whose spirit he never will subdue.

Copenhagen, Sept. 23.

The Danish ships have all their lower guns on their poops, quarters and main decks. The floors in the arsenals are beyond calculation; it will take two months to get them on board; the piles of shot are immense. Examples of the floors dropped on board the chiefs of the fleet, transports, the men of war, both English and Danish, it is said, are loaded to the bends.

Fifteen sail of the line, besides frigates, are in the roads. The carpenters are putting to pieces the old on the Rocks, and ship timber. In a few days, 150 vessels with flores. (40 of them sail cloth) will be under way for England. The whole convoy will exceed 300 sail.

Copenhagen, Sept. 29.

"The Danish Crown Prince, it is said, will not recognize the Capitulation of Copenhagen. By not complying he may bring great calamities on the inhabitants of Zealand. One fact has roused the public indignation against the Danish government, towards which we, in Sweden, were disposed to feel nothing but commiseration.—It is that of having caused the Skaw Lights to be put out. Some American vessels which lately entered our port, were thrown into great embarrassment by this fraudulent piece of puerile malice, which endangers the lives of neutrals and friends, as well as foes. Candids like this, envenoms the hostility between nations at war, and helps to hinder a return to the barbarism of the middle ages."

New York, Nov. 23.

Capt. Somnis, from Halifax, informs, that he left that port on the 8th November, that just as he was getting under way, the British Packet Packet arrived there in 23 days from Falmouth, and that he was informed by the passengers, that all Arragers in England, they could not give a satisfactory account of themselves had been put under arrest; and that the British government had prohibited all neutrals from trading to any of their enemy's ports.

The following vessels have arrived at Quebec from Halifax, with troops for the defence of that Province: Ship Marlfield, with 7 officers and 207 privates: brig Angelina, with 164 officers and privates: ship Perigon, 8 officers and 222 privates: schr. Nancy, 88 officers and privates: schr. Sally, from Prince Edward Island, with 56 officers and privates: schr. Chance, from St. Johns, with 49 men of the Newfoundland regiment.

November 26.

From Europe.—The foreign articles presented in our last (says the Boston Gazette of the 23d inst.) were to October 12. morning. Since which a London paper has been received, dated on the evening of the same day. It announces, that Mr. Erskine, who never resides in this country, as an accredited Minister from England, was to be recalled by his government, and a new Minister to be appointed in his stead. No reasons are assigned for this measure; nor is the name of the gentleman contemplated to fill his office, mentioned; that the British Cabinet had given definitive answers to all the demands of our Ministers; that Mr. Munroe had taken his passage on board of a private ship, which was expected to sail for America in the course of all October. Although the alarm of war with this country had nearly subsided, still there was experienced much difficulty and embarrassment in procuring those ready freights, which a few months since were general, throughout all the ports in England. A number of American vessels detained, and carried into their ports, had been liberated, on paying salvage, costs, &c.

On Wednesday evening last, (says the Londonderry Journal of August 25.) a sailor belonging to the American ship Hannah, fell from the fore-yard on the deck, and was killed instantly. He lived but a very short time after. About two hours previous to the melancholy accident, a female passenger left out of the boat into the water, instead of tempting to go on to the ship's side, when the deceased immediately threw off his jacket and boots, leaped to and rescued her from a watery grave. This generous and heroic act not only acquired him the esteem and regard of his messmates, but the universal admiration of the passengers on board, who, in order to evince their gratitude, eagerly prefied forward to treat him, by which means it is said, he got himself intoxicated, which circumstance unfortunately led to the catastrophe. The next day his remains, accompanied by all the sailors in harbor, who walked in solemn procession, and many respectable citizens, were decently interred in the Church Yard, where an appropriate funeral oration was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Hyp. Never, indeed, have we heard a service more appropriate the occasion or which seemed to make a more deep impression, and we sincerely hope a lasting one, in the minds of the those present. What a warning to the unfortunate victims of intemperance, who sacrifice health, substance, life itself, and what is still worse than all, the prospects of hereafter, to the wretched pleasure of drinking a slow but sure poison, prepared by a process to evaporate the faculties of soul and body, and pave the way for the commission of every heinous crime.

The York Gazette.

YORK, DECEMBER 23, 1807.

The York Assembly, which commenced on Thursday the 17th inst. was honored by the attendance of His Excellency Governor Gore, and a respectable number of the Members of Parliament for the City of London, formed as Commissioners Council to the army in America, having satisfy the object of the American war, and finally accompanied them to meet the Duke of York, to Holland, in the same capacity.

Our State papers detail the particulars of an engagement between a collection of Indians on the Missouri, and an escort of American troops, with 60 s. count of the killed and wounded of the latter, judging from the various reports respecting the affair of the Chesapeake, our impression is, (or hesitation) that we may still take place between Britain and America; it is at present refused for the latter to decide, and we perceive there is sufficient perception in their national legislators to command the illiberal line in their executive; a flood there will determine. The French and Spanish continue their depredations upon the American commerce with unceasing vigor.

The English papers announce letters from Lord Collingwood, informing of the capture of 8 Turkish, 1 Venetian, 3 French, and 17 Spanish vessels.

The British Captains Hunter, Otway, Sir S. Hood, Sawyer, Keats, Pender, Lumsdale, Nicholls and Gould, have been appointed Rear Admirals.

A letter from Gottenburgh of the 29th September, mentions that the unfortunate Lewis XVIII. is about to seek an asylum in England.

FIRE—At Spa, (in Germany) 195 houses, valued at 380,000 dollars, was destroyed in September last.

The operation of the Non-Importation Law, which, if not repealed, will go into force the 18th December, is feared to be the event which will put an end to all the negociations for Peace, and make a War inevitable. From several quarters we learn, that petitions are signing, praying Congress to repeal that law. Those, therefore, who wish for Peace, and think this repeal likely to effect the continuation of it, ought to be speedy in transmitting their petitions to Congress.—Boston Gazette.

INTERESTING TO COMMERCE.

The last London papers contain the following article, interesting to our merchants who trade to India.—"Intentions, we understand have been lest to India, to impose an additional duty of 20 per cent on all neutral vessels trading to all ports of that country, within British jurisdiction.—Boston Centinel.

The Merchants and Traders of Philadelphia, have signed a Memorial to Congress, praying a repeal of the Non-Importation act; as they confider it in its application to this country as extremely embarrassing, and in its operation on the government and people of Great Britain, as irritating and inefficient." The same measure is suggested in the Boston papers to be purfued by the merchants of that town. Albany Gaz.

Dr. Mitchell, in a speech in Congress on the subject of further security for our ports and harbors, and to which he admits that the States of the West and the South are as proper objects of the care of government as those of the East and the South, communicates the following very unpleasant intelligence—"That the murder and murderous Scene were actually at Wabash as on the Mississippi; and that a state of commotion formerly high than a war and long existed in Michigan.

Chambersburg, (Penn.) Nov. 24.

On Thursday last, the celebrated general Moreau, passed through this place, on his way to Pittsburg, from thence he proceeds visiting New-Orleans. As this great military character has lately made his peace with Bonaparte, his intended visit will no doubt give rise to some speculation.

Mr. William Bates, (of the Bench) the family and friends have experienced an afflicting loss in the death of Mrs. W. who departed this life on the 17th inst.

Died, in London, at an advanced age, Sir Brooke Watson Bart. Alderman of Farringdon's Ward, and for several years Member of Parliament for the City of London. He served as Commissary General to the army in America, during the whole of the American war, and finally as Commissary to the army under the Duke of York, in Holland, in the same capacity.

By the KING. A PROCLAMATION.

For recalling and prohibiting British Seamen from serving foreign Princes and States.

GEORGE R.

Whereas it hath been represented to us, that great numbers of mariners and seafaring men, our natural born subjects have been enticed to enter into the service of foreign states, and are now actually serving as well on board the ships of war belonging to the said foreign states, as on board the merchant vessels belonging to their subjects, notwithstanding our former proclamation recalling them, contrary to the duty and allegiance which our said subjects owe unto us, and to the great disservice of their native country; we have therefore thought it necessary at the present moment, when our kingdom is menaced and endangered, and when the maritime rights on which its power and greatness do mainly depend, are disputed and called in question, to publish by and with the advice of our Privy Council, this our Royal Proclamation: We do hereby strictly charge and command all masters of ships, pilots, mariners, shipwrights and other seafaring men, being our natural-born subjects, who may have been inticed into the pay or service of any foreign state, or do serve in any foreign ship or vessel, that forthwith they and every of them do (according to their bounden duty and allegiance, and in consideration that their native country hath need of all their service), withdraw themselves, and depart from, and quit such foreign service and do return home to their native country; or do enter on board such of our ships of war as they may chance to fall in with, either on the high seas, or in any rivers, waters, havens, roads, ports or places whatsoever or wheresoever.

And for the better execution of the purpose of this our Royal Proclamation, we do authorize and command, all captains, masters and others, commanding our ships and vessels of war, to stop and make stay of all and every such person or persons (being our natural born subjects) as shall endeavor to transport or enter themselves into the service of any foreign state, contrary to the intent and command of this our Royal Proclamation, and to seize upon, take, and bring away all such persons as aforesaid, who shall be found to be employed or serving in any foreign merchant ship or vessel as aforesaid;—but we do strictly enjoin all such our captains, masters and others, that they do permit no man to go on board such ships and vessels belonging to states at amity with us, for the purpose of seizing upon, taking and bringing away such persons as aforesaid, for whose discreet and orderly demeanor the said captains cannot answer; and that they do take especial care that no unnecessary violence be done or offered to be done to the vessel, or to the remainder of the crew, from out of which such persons shall be taken.

And in case of their receiving information of any such person or persons being employed, or serving on board of any ship of war belonging to such foreign state at amity with us, we do authorize & command our captains, masters, and others, commanding our ships of war, to require of the captain or commander of such foreign ship of war, that he do forthwith recall and discharge such person or persons being our natural born subject or subjects; and if such release & discharge shall be refused, then to transmit information of such refusal to the commander in chief of the squadron under whose orders such captain or commander shall be then serving, which information the said commander in chief is hereby strictly directed and enjoined to transmit, with the least possible delay to our minister residing at the seat of government of that state to which the said foreign ship of war shall belong, or to our Lord High Admiral, or Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty for the time being, in order that we, being apprized of such proceeding, may forthwith direct the necessary steps to be taken for obtaining redress from the government to which such foreign ship of war shall belong, for the injury done to us by the subornation or detention of our natural born subjects in the service of a foreign state.

And whereas it has further been represented unto us, that divers mariners and seafaring men, our natural-born subjects, have been induced to accept letters of naturalization, or certificates of citizenship, from foreign states, and have been taught to believe that, by such letters or certificates, they are discharged from that duty of allegiance, which as our natural born subjects, they owe to us; now we do hereby warn all such mariners, seafaring men, and others, our natural-born subjects, that no such letters of naturalization, or certificates of citizenship, do or can, in any manner, dissolve our natural-born subjects of the allegiance, or in any degree alter the duty which they owe to us, their lawful Sovereign. But, in consideration of the error into which such mariners and seafaring men, as aforesaid, may have been led; we do hereby publish and declare our free pardon to all such our subjects, who, repenting of the delusion under which they have acted, shall immediately upon knowledge of this our royal proclamation, withdraw themselves from foreign service, and return to their allegiance to us; and we do declare that all such our subjects, who shall continue in the service of foreign states to disregard and contempt of this our royal proclamation, will not only incur our just displeasure, but are liable to be proceeded against for such contempt, and shall be proceeded against accordingly; and we do hereby declare that if any such natives of ships, pilots, mariners, seamen, shipwrights, or other seafaring men, (being our natural-born subjects) shall be taken in any foreign service by the Algerines, or other Barbary Powers, and carried in to slavery, they shall not be reclaimed by us as subjects of Great Britain.—And we do further notify, that all such our subjects as aforesaid, who have voluntarily entered, or shall enter, or voluntarily continue to serve on board of any ships of war belonging to any foreign state at enmity with us, are and will be guilty of high treason.—And we do by this our royal proclamation, declare, that they shall be punished with the utmost severity of the law.

Given at our Court, at the Queen's Palace, the 16th day of October, 1807, and in the 47th year of our reign.—God save the King.

LONDON, Oct. 25.

The American ship Fegou, capt. Colfert, it arrived at Yarmouth from St. Petersburg, which place the left the 25th, and Cronstadt the 27th ult. The captain states, that at his departure, much uneasiness was manifested at both those places, in consequence of a report confidentially circulated, that Lord Collingwood had received orders to possess himself of the Russian fleet in the Mediterranean.

The appointment of Mr. G. H. Rose, who killed hands yesterday, is not to succeed Mr. Erskine as Minister to the United States. It does not interfere at all with that Gentleman's Mission. Mr. Rose is going on a special Mission.

The object of Mr. Merry's mission, which we now understand to be Sweden, is as report further states, to sound the inclinations of that Court, as to the future occupancy of Zealand? whether his Swedish Majesty may be disposed to defend, or abet in defending it against the French, during the ensuing winter.

October 28.

Gen. Walterstorff, one of the persons appointed by the Governor to accede to the articles of capitulation at Copenhagen, was put under arrest by the Crown Prince, as soon as he landed at Hoffman.

It is now generally believed that the British forces will not evacuate Sicily if of Zealand until the month of December, and that, in consequence of the movement of Denmark, the Crown Battery, and some Danish fortresses in the neighborhood, will be destroyed.

We announce, with pleasure, that official accounts have been received of the differences which lately subsisted between the India Company's Servants at Canton and the Chinese, have been amicably adjusted.

The Little Belt convene, the hull of the Danish fleet, and three transports, laden with naval stores, from Copenhagen, have arrived at Yarmouth, under convoy of the Calypso sloop of war. The rest of the fleet is hourly expected.

His Majesty, Louis XVIII. is hourly expected at Yarmouth, either in the Arcadne or in a Swedish frigate. His removal from the Russian dominions was one of the disgraceful stipulations imposed on the Emperor Alexander, by the Treaty of Tilsit.

Four waggons loaded with specie, taken on board some Spanish vessels lately captured by the Folgard frigate, were conveyed to the Bank on Monday, under an escort.

His Majesty held a Privy Council, at which the Earl of Chatham took the oath of Governor of Jersey and Guernsey.

October 31.

According to letters received from our squadron off Rochefort, 9000 French troops marched on the 15th inst. through Vera to Portugal.—We have had accounts from Bilbon of the 15th which stated that the French had not broken up from Bayonne.

Another expedition is reported to be in contemplation, the command of which is to be given to Sir Sidney Smith. It could not be better bestowed. Several transports have been taken up by government within these few days, and the return of the expedition from Zealand will afford numbers an ample supply both of men and ships.

"FALMOUTH, October 29.

"By the arrival of the Wallingham from Lisbon this morning, all the doubts relative to that city are cleared up. On the 25th ult. Lord Strangford, our Charge d'Affaires, and Mr. Gambier, our Consul there, called a meeting of the Factory, and acquainted its Members that the ports of Portugal would shortly be shut against the British, or rather that the country would be invaded by the French.

"Of the intention of the Portuguese government with respect to embarking for the Brazils, nothing certain was known, but it was generally understood that the three men of war which had drop down to Belem, together with several frigates and corvettes, were intended to take the Royal Family, in case of necessity, to that country. This idea was strengthened by the payment of the bills on the Exario being postponed for three months, and also by the erection of a very strong fortification at Peniche, on the coast of Portugal, mounting 200 pieces of cannon, as I was informed by gentlemen, from whence it was supposed the court would embark, to avoid any opposition from the populace by attempting to embark at Lisbon.

"There was, however, still a ray of hope entertained by the Portuguese, that the Court of the Continent would be appeased, when he found the English had quitted Portugal, and that the fear of having their property confiscated, and their persons seized, would prevent their return and consequently, that the departure of the Court, from its hereditary seat, would not be necessary. This hope they cherished the more, as it was known at Lisbon that the French and Spanish Ministers had only proceeded a few leagues from the city, and were still halted at a small village in its vicinity."

Great preparations are making at Vienna for the Emperor's nuptials. The Jewels of the late Empress have been valued, and their estimated worth has been divided among the Archduchesses her daughters, and the jewels themselves will be given to the new Empress.

Lisbon, Oct. 9.

The following communication to the Royal Board of Commerce, Agriculture, Manufactures and Navigation of Portugal, was sent by the Secretary of State—

"Our Sovereign, the Prince Regent, has it not in his power to prevent the departure from this city of his Catholic Majesty's Ambassador, and of the Charge d'Affaires to his Majesty the Emperor and King; he has confidingly, well grounded hope, that their absence will only be temporary, and that it will not be followed up by any hostilities on the part of the above Sovereigns, with whom it is his Royal Highness's wish to maintain that good harmony and correspondence which his subjects fulfilled between them; which I think proper to have to your knowledge, that you may make the same known to the Royal Board of Commerce, to be by them published wherever it may be necessary."

New-York, Dec. 4.

Capture of the Russian Fleet.—Captain Burker, who arrived at this port yesterday from Bordeaux, informs, that on the 22d October, in lat. 41. long. 7. he was boarded by the British frigate La Resolution, then in company with the Pomone frigate, who having hoisted several signals, informed captain B. that the telegraph of the frigate intimated the capture of 12 sail of the line of the Russian fleet, off the Dardanelles.

Captain Whipple, arrived at Savannah from London, was boarded off the Orkneys by a British frigate, one of a fleet of three sail of the line and two frigates. The boarding officer informed, that they were preparing an expedition 40 barges one of the largest ships of war ever built by the Spaniards, then on the stocks at Cape Ortugal. "In the latitude of Bermuda, captain W. was boarded by the Theseus frigate, captain Cochrane, who had on board the crew of an American schooner, wrecked the night before.

A letter from Newfoundland, dated October 31, says "the brig Rambler of Leith with passengers, from Pharso in the Orkney Islands, bound to Pictou, was totally lost in the night of the 28th inst. and every person on board perished, excepting six men and one woman. I understand, from the fisherman who picked them up, that there were 250 souls on board at the time of the accident, and that the coast about Toads cove is covered with the dead bodies of men women and children.

We are authorised to say, says the editor of the Baltimore American, that the Secretary of State has received a letter from Mr. Patterson, consul at Nantz stating that a merchant of that city had just received information from high authority at Paris, that count Tournay had arrived and had offered the mediation of Russia to effect a peace between France and Great Britain: that it was believed that such an offer would not have been made unless the Emperor Alexander had previously known, that it would be well received by both parties; and further, that Russia was determined against every act of hostility with Great Britain. It was believed at Paris, that Lord St. Helens was already appointed by his government, to proceed to that city.

The York Gazette.

YORK, DECEMBER 30, 1807

We are indebted to the proprietors of a gentleman of this town, (D. Boston, Esq.) for files of papers from Albany, containing several papers containing English news to the 28th ult. from which we have extracted a Proclamation by His Majesty, treating on his determination to have no connexion with foreign powers. This interesting news notwithstanding a thousand reports, the wildest and contradictory views of our government. The coming in of the French, and confining it to the immediate attachment of its happy subjects, it professes a resumption of glory to surrounding nations, and whilst extending to America the offers of friendship and amity, founded upon the basis of mutual interest, and common rights, it feels that the idea of a war to be unaccompanied with terror or doubt. What but that ultimately arose Portugal, would be performation in every point of view, however, in discarding the connexion of the Italy, if Bonaparte should remain for any length of time his partial power and amount of ambassadors. Portugal will gratify every part of Europe from Italy's influence and independence would be never turn his arms against it, must constitute its property and future safety under the protection of its possession to the American government, we are not disposed to think it premature, but rate for the making the many debates to the nation, for, viewing France under its present state, as a political whole, which is at once and amicably with equal force, every Russ which can be made to bear its hostile influence (and what Russ does not) must become its ally, its friend, or its declared enemy. The expedition and of Louis the Eighteenth, in England, indicates, we conceive, new Continental combinations:—Russia and Italy, besides all her maritime superiority, resolved on a fresh effort, are deeply willing to repair the errors of her last unprovided campaign, and the more depressing Peace of 1806, has chafed the Royal Spirit, to develope her superiority on the Baltic Colonies, and counter new efforts of aggression against the Common Enemy. It is impossible that Russia can long submit to the intolerable tyranny of the temporary despot of mankind, shake off his humiliating yoke, and to all human probability, the crimes of his family, whose unnatural elevation from the lowest obscurity to dominion, has been marked by so much debasement and horror, will be exhibited upon the Scaffold. Indistinct accounts of the evacuation of the River Plate, and revolution in New-Grey, continue from the private correspondents in the United States, against the Non-Importation Law, had been forwarded to Congress;—we cannot form of their effects of great warmth. It is not improbable but that General Miranda will be called to the helm of Buenos Ayres, who would of course carry on his first open operations in that quarter.

Letters are said to have been received in Town, which state, that Buonaparte has intimated to the American Government, the necessity of espousing the cause of some one of the belligerent Powers.——Not having been favoured with a sight of the letters, nor any communication from the persons, who are stated to have received them, we cannot vouch for the correctness of the report.

At a meeting of the Agricultural and Commercial Society, holden at Moore's, 28th Dec. 1807—Resolved, That notice be inserted in the Gazette that the annual general meeting will be on the second Saturday in the sitting of the Legislature.

At a meeting held on the 4th Nov. 1806—Resolved, That each member pay their annual subscription of two dollars on or before the next quarter meeting after it becomes due, or they will be considered as having relinquished the society.

 At the meeting first above mentioned, it was discovered that the Funds of the Society had found their way into the hands of the most able and upright President, who in the multiplicity of momentous concerns in which he was engaged, forgot to remind the society where its cash was deposited. It is characteristic of a truly great man (such as he was) to be superior to little considerations or minutiæ in money matters; the sublimity of his genius, soaring above the groveling level of ordinary mortals, declares not to consider twenty pounds as a subject worth the mentioning. This declaration of our treasury we should have supposed connected with another patriotic act, namely, the liquidation of his late section accounts, did not the lamentation of Martin Holder & Co. deny that supposition.
