There has not been a winter remembered in this country to changeable as the present. So many heavy rains, frosts, some hail and snow, thunder and lightning, sometimes mild and sometimes severe—in the night between the 7th and 8th inst. a gust of thunder and lightning passed over this town, attended with a heavy shower, a mixture of hail and rain—the lightning was very brilliant and vivid in different directions, and the thunder distinctly to be heard for a considerable time. Next day clear—at 2 o'clock P. M. mercury up at 46.

A few days in the December were so remarkable for their severity, as also for their mildness so immediately after, as to appear worthy of notice.

P. S. Agreeable to an account from the Indians, the snow is from 5 to 6 feet deep about 80 miles north of this place—it is probable while we have had those heavy rains, it has been snow with them.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Title to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authoriſed to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came on the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

The Engliſh and Turkiſh armies in Egypt, live together on very diſagreeable terms. The Mamelukes are in great force about Ghiza, and have defeated the Turks in ſeveral ſevere ſkirmiſhes, with conſiderable loſs. Captain Sargent, from Malaga and Cadiz, arrived at Boſton, was informed by the Conſul at the former place, that two Tripoline corſairs were off Alicant, and had captured a Sweediſh veſſel in ſight of the ſhipping there. At Cadiz, great preparations were making to celebrate the marriage of the Prince of Peace. The merchant ſhips were ordered from before the town, and the men of war brought out of dock to fire ſalutes.

We have to acknowledge our obligation to a friend, for the following important information:

"A ceſſation of hoſtilities has taken place between the King of Sweden and Bey of Tripoli for ſix months. It is expected a permanent peace will ſhortly be agreed on."—Alex. Paper.

"Being preſent this morning at the Intendant's office, when the original of the following Royal Order was tranſcribed, I ſeize the opportunity of procuring a copy, and have tranſlated it in a hurry, under the hope that it will be acceptable to you.

"The Miniſter of War has communicated to me the following:—"In a letter of the 15th inſt. Don Pedro Cevallos, informs me as follows: Whereas his Majeſty has ceded to the French Republic, the colony or province of Louiſiana in all its preſent extent and as it was held by the French when ceded to his Majeſty, I adviſe you thereof, by his royal order, that you make the neceſſary arrangements for the delivery of it to the French Commiſſioner or Commiſſioners, who being duly authorized by the government, may preſent themſelves for the purpoſe. In addition to the above we can ſtate, on the authority of a gentleman who left Paris on the 9th of October, that the ceſſion was univerſally there known to have taken place; that companies formed for the purpoſe had purchaſed large tracts of land in the territory, of the French government, and had opened ſubſcription books at various places in Paris, to obtain purchaſers who were to embark for, and become ſettlers in the territory.

A very ſingular occurrence lately happened in Weſt Cheſter County. A labourer's wife in attempting to draw water from a well about ten feet deep, unfortunately fell into it. Her huſband inſtantly ran to the well, and ſeeing part of her cloaths, immediately went down, drew her from the water, and by aſtoniſhing exertion brought her up without any aid. Having then obtained aſſiſtance, he carried her into the houſe, and laid her (apparently lifeleſs) body on a bed before the fire, which was rubbed for nearly an hour before any ſymptoms of life appeared. Finally, however, ſhe began to reſpire, and the circulation of her blood recommenced; but the pains of returning, were far greater than thoſe of departing life. Her ſcreams and convulſions at firſt were great, but ſoon after the became more compoſed, and in a day or two was able to attend to her concerns, as before this almoſt fatal accident.—(Daily Adv.

Extract of a letter of the 10th January, from Lexington, (Virg.)

"I have now to mention a moſt unfortunate circumſtance: Waſhington Academy took fire after ten o'clock laſt night, and is deſtroyed—nothing remains but the bare walls. This muſt have happened, it is apprehended, from the fire taking from the top of the chimney, or otherwiſe, communicated thro' ſome ſmall opening in the chimney to the roof. The library was chiefly ſaved; there is a conſiderable loſs ſuſtained in the philoſophical apparatus; the ſtewards were all in bed, and moſtly aſleep. The fire was diſcovered by ſome of them, who gave the alarm in time for all them to get out ſafe, with the moſt of their property. The Academy was fortunately inſured but ſix or eight weeks before the burning. The truſtees have it in proſpect to procure houſes in Lexington to anſwer the purpoſe till the Academy can be repaired; the improvement of the ſtudents will not be obſtructed."

CHARLESTON, January 10.

Nothing has occurred for a long time paſt, that appears more to have intereſted the public attention, than the late attempt to rob the Bank of South-Carolina. Curioſity is awakened, and every man ſtands on the tip-toe of expectation to learn ſome further particulars of this extraordinary undertaking. The conſequence of which is that many idle tales are afloat; and to obtain correct information, it is neceſſary to trace a thouſand little tales, moſt of which are indebted for their origin merely to the genius of invention!

In addition to the particulars publiſhed on Saturday, we cannot at preſent only add, that Withers ſtates, that on the night of the 9th October, he entered the drain in Queen ſtreet, whence he proceeded as far as the grating in Broad-ſtreet, where he was furniſhed by his accomplices with the neceſſary tools; and nightly ſupplied with proviſions.—It appears ſcarcely poſſible, and yet we are told no doubt remains of the fact, that this wretched being remained immured in the ſubterraneous paſſage he had formed, ſeven feet below the ſurface of the earth, for the ſpace of three months, during all which time he never ſaw the cheering light of day. It adds a ſtrong confirmation to the many proofs already adduced of the powers of the human mind, when bent upon the accompliſhment of any fixed object.—his perſeverance is truly aſtoniſhing.

We hope to be able in ſome future number, to detail the minutæ of the proceedings of this moſt extraordinary man.

On Monday laſt, the trial of William Weathers and William Bonner came on in the Court of Seſſions, charged with an attempt to rob the South-Carolina Bank. As no perſon lived in the Bank Houſe, the Attorney-General could only indict them for a miſdemeanor.—The trial took up upwards of eight hours; the jury remained out for a conſiderable time on Monday night, and yeſterday morning returned a verdict of William Weathers, guilty; William Bonner, not guilty. We underſtand that an arreſt of judgment will be moved in favor of Weathers, on the ground that the verdict is contrary to Law.

Abner Robinſon, who was apprehended on ſuſpicion of being an accomplice, was diſcharged, nothing having appeared againſt him on which an indictment could be founded.

MISCELLANY.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS OF AN AMERICAN GENTLEMAN IN EUROPE, TO THE EDITOR OF THE PHILADELPHIA GAZETTE.

Glaſgow.

GLASGOW is a conſiderable town, bearing the appearance of a great ſtir of buſineſs, and a thronged population. It is rapidly advancing in manufactories, and conſequently, commercial importance. The old town bears but a ſmall proportion compared with the buildings erected within the laſt 20 or 30 years. The modern houſes are built in a ſtyle of ſuperior elegance. There is one whole ſtreet, the houſes of which conſiſt of wrought ſtone, each about 50 feet front, with columns from the baſement ſtory, and pediments after the beſt Grecian and Italian models.

The cotton manufactories have done wonders for this place. I was this morning admitted to examine one of the largeſt of theſe eſtabliſhments, the property of a Mr. Patterſon. The impelling force of their machinery is derived from a ſtream, which is capable of working thirty-two thouſand muſle-ſpindles, and gives employment to 700 people. To behold this vaſt congregation of machinery all at one time in operation, is a ſublime ſpectacle, calculated to excite the moſt exalted ideas of the powers of human invention.

Edinburgh.

IN proceeding from Hull, we were induced by a wiſh to ſee the celebrated Iron Bridge over the River Wier, to take Sunderland in our courſe. On its firſt opening to our view, the ſight was at once a matter of aſtoniſhment and delight. Its immenſe arch, its light conſtruction, and extraordinary height from the water, gave it the appearance of a bridge hanging in the air. The arch is 236 feet in the clear, and the under ſide of the crown 100 feet from the water. Three large brigs, with all their maſts up, were lying under it at the time.

At Edinburgh we were gratified by many objects of magnificence and curiosity. The hange of scenery, which is different from every other city in the world, the immense height of the houses, which are all of stone, and appear as if you saw the hill to be built one upon the other, with their gable ends to the streets, would lead us to suppose that we were in another world. The street where we are, exhibits a range of bodies three quarters of a mile in length, with uniform fronts of hewn stone, in the most elegant style of workmanship, having rustic calements and areas, and palisadoes in front. The pavements are laid with flag-stones, about twelve feet wide. It is as handsome a street as any London can produce.

The castle at this place is a very ancient fortress. Every part of it is in a high state of preservation, and kept in excellent order.—The 42d Highland regiment are now quartered here. This is the regiment who did themselves so much honor in Egypt, by destroying Bonaparte's Invincible Legion, and capturing their colours. They are indeed a fine brave set of soldiers.

We next made an excursion through Holyrood house, formerly the place of the Kings of Scotland, and of the unfortunate Queen Mary. Here is a long gallery of paintings of the hundred and ten kings of Scotland, from the foundation of monarchy to the last of the Stuarts. We were shewn the drawing room and bed chamber, occupied by Queen Mary, with all the original furniture as she brought it from France. We were also in the room where Queen Mary and her favourite Rizzio were at supper when Darnley and his companions broke in and stabbed Rizzio, in her presence. There are stains remaining on the floor said to be of Rizzio's blood.—At present this gorgeous palace is occupied by the Duc d'Artois, brother to the late King of France. It is said the English court allows him 12000l. a year. He is held in high estimation throughout Edinburgh, for his conciliating and correct deportment.

The ladies of Edinburgh have fine healthy complexions, but are not remarkable for elegance of person or the display of taste in their dress. They are extremely modest, domestic, easy in their manners, affable, intelligent—and an uncommon proportion of them possess highly cultivated minds, and are extensively acquainted with literature.

EPIGRAM
ON A BULL AND NO BULL.

From an European Publication.

"A Wig having waged with Teague half a crown,
About how many figns of the Bull were in town:
Teague fwore there were three—which was flatly denied,
And to point out a Bull more than two was defied:
When he thus began to count—"There's the Black Bull in Foregate,
That's one; then the fecond's the white Bull in Norgate;
And as for the next, which makes three you'll allow,
In the very next lane, there's the little brown Cow."
"A right ftinking blunder!" fays each ftander by.
"And the bet you have loft"—"Tut" fays Teague "that's a lie!
I'll be bound, ftead of loling my wager I win it,
For that blunder's a BULL, or the Devil is in't!"

Epitaph on a gentleman, more remarkable for his loquacity than his veracity, written in the fifteenth century:

Here's old Johnny Anderfon lying in duft,
Or lying old Anderfon, chufe which we truft:
To fay he lies dead, can do him no wrong,
For we all know old Johnny lied all his life long.

BON MOT.

The late Lord KELLY, who was very remarkable for the rubicundity of his nofe, having fpoken very difrefpectfully of a gentleman in the army, an Irifhman prefent obferved, "That if any man that ever lived, or ever had lived, or ever could live, had faid the fame, he would have pulled him by the nofe."—"Yes," replied FOOTE, "I dare fay you would, but in the prefent cafe that would not do—there are ways enough of revenging an infult, without running one's hand in the fire!"

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intituled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the taking thereof, was empowcted to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the laſt three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the laſt Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, to the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

Juſtice is adminiſtered with no leſs purity in the colonial dependencies of Great Britain, than in the Courts of Weſtminſter Hall. The following curious report is extracted from "The Government Gazette of Madras." The caſe originated from a perſonal inſult and injury, ariſing from the arbitrary exerciſe of a well known cuſtom among mariners when they have on board an ill-fated paſſenger, who has never croſſed the line. The argument of the Counſel for the proſecutor, and the opinion of the learned Recorder muſt ſatisfy every well governed mind. The ſailor is uſually a generous, nay an amiable character. He has a tear for pity, and a heart, open as day to melting charity. But when from a ridiculous precedent, he aſſumes the right of drenching with filthy water and thavving with a jagged blade, it is right and decorous that this Tarpaulin tyranny be overthrown by the Laws.]

Lately came on to be tried in the Honorable the Court of Recorder of Bombay, before Sir William Syer, Kt. Recorder, Edward Atkins, Eſq. Mayor, and Alexander Adamſon, Eſq. Alderman, a cauſe wherein Nathaniel Caſſleton Maw was Plaintiff, and Charles Learmouth and other Defendants.

This was an action of aſſault and battery brought by the plaintiff, a lieutenant on the military eſtabliſhment at Bombay, againſt the defendants, two of whom are officers, and the reſt ſeamen of the ſhip Scaleby Caſtle of that port.—The caſe was as follows:

When the Scaleby Caſtle on her paſſage from England to Bombay croſſed the line, the ſailors according to cuſtom, inſiſted that the whole of the paſſengers, ſhould undergo the ceremony of ſhaving and ducking. The plaintiff being averſe to the ceremony, declared he would do his utmoſt to reſiſt it, at the ſame time offering to purchaſe his exemption, but his offers were refuſed, and he was compelled to ſubmit to the operation.

Mr. Threipland for the plaintiff, in a very able ſpeech which occupied the attention of a crowded court for upwards of an hour and an half, after making many ingenious obſervations on this abſurd cuſtom, which was "much more honored in the breach than the obſervance," ſaid, that if the proceedings on board the Scaleby Caſtle on the 28th of September 1801, had been kept within reaſonable bounds, had Neptune, as he was called, and his attendant Deities confined themſelves to throwing a few pails full of their own element about the ſhip, or exacted any moderate fine or forfeit from thoſe who were landſmen, enough to prefer the comforts of a dry ſkin, theſe proceedings would never have been the ſubject of complaint—but when amuſement degenerates into brutality, when under colour and pretext of ſport, proceedings take place revolting to every man of common ſenſe and feeling, when young gentlemen, paſſengers on board a merchant veſſel, and intitled to reſpect and attention, are not ſuffered to purchaſe their exemption from injury and outrage, but are forced, at the point of naked cutlaſſes, to ſubmit to both, it was high time for the country to interfere, and to teach thoſe who were ignorant of it before, that it extends its protecting arm to thoſe who travel by water, as well as thoſe who journey by land.

Mr. Threipland then drew the attention of the Court to the character and general conduct of his client, inſiſting that in proportion as his mind and manners, his habits and his rank in life intitled him to reſpect and attention, in that proportion was the aggravation of the injury of which he complained.

He then deſcribed the treatment his client had met with, and which was the ſubject of the action. It appeared that the plaintiff had made repeated offers both of money and ſpirits to the men, on condition that they ſhould not moleſt him, and finding theſe offers contemptuouſly rejected, ſhut himſelf up in his cabin, which he barricadoed in the beſt manner he was able, and took the further precaution of lowering his port, to prevent intruſion from without—A gang, however, whoſe characters had been previouſly caſt, began attempting to force open the door, but not ſucceeding in this ſo eaſily as they expected, they all, with one accord, went on deck, as if for further orders—accordingly, Mr. Raymond, the third mate, deſired ſome of them to go below and take the door off the hinges, and ſuggeſted that others might get in at the port; while one party went down with the carpenter for the firſt of theſe purpoſes, a ſailor of the name of Edwards was let down the ſide of the ſhip, brandiſhing a naked cutlaſs in one hand, while he held a bludgeon in the other. By the aſſiſtance of the latter weapon, the plaintiff's port was lifted up, and Edwards ſtretching the arm which held the cutlaſs into the cabin, made thruſts in every direction, which the plaintiff for ſome time parried with his ſword, but abſtained from doing Edwards any injury. He at length got into the cabin, his aſſociates at the ſame inſtant ruſhing in at the door, they then preſſed round the plaintiff, wreſted his ſword from him, and dragged him upon deck—There he clung for ſome time to the poſt of the cuddy door, and ſeeing no hopes of protection, but the contrary, from the firſt and third mates, who were upon deck, called out for the captain of the ſhip, but from the tumult of the moment, and from the circumſtance of the door of his apartment being ſhut, he heard nothing, as he afterwards declared, of this appeal to his protection, which otherwiſe there could be no doubt from his diſapprobation of the proceedings, when informed of them, would not have been made in vain.

Such was now the agitation of the plaintiff's mind, that he actually made an attempt to eſcape from farther outrage by throwing himſelf overboard, and would have effected his fatal purpoſe but for the active humanity of a friend—He was at length dragged along the quarter-deck to the waiſt, and forcibly fixed in a boat half full of ſalthy wate', his eyes were bandaged with a dirty napkin, a nauſeous compoſition of tar and pitch was rubbed over his face, and taken off again by means of part of a rufty hoop, partaking more of the nature of a few than of a razor—He was then puſhed back with violence in to the boat, and there held ſtruggling for ſome ſeconds, with his head under water—In conſequence of this treatment, the plaintiff was to ill as to require the aſſiſtance of the ſhip's ſurgeon.

Evidence was adduced in ſupport of the plaintiff's caſe.

Mr. Dowdeſwell, for the defendants, obſerved, that no particular injury was proved to have been done to the plaintiff, that the other paſſengers voluntarily underwent the ceremonies of the day, and conſidered them as a joke.—The cuſtom had ſo long prevailed, that if it did not juſtify the defendants, it would, he truſted, exempt them from the payment of large damages. General notice had been given by captain Gardiner, that if any paſſenger diſliked to partake of the paſtimes of the day, he might go into his (captain Gardiner's) cabin. The plaintiff, inſtead of availing himſelf of ſuch protection, had come upon deck, armed with a cutlaſs and piſtols, bidding defiance, by ſuch defiance he had brought the injury, if he could be ſaid to have ſuffered any, upon himſelf—It was the character of Britiſh ſailors to revolt at ſuch defiance—In reſpect to the two mates, Mr. Learmouth and Mr. Raymond, they were mere paſſive ſpectators, and had not to anſwer for a neglect of duty to a ſuperior officer.

Mr. Dowdeſwell then ſtated ſome further circumſtances in extenuation of the conduct of his clients, and in mitigation of damages.

The Recorder, in delivering judgment, ſaid, the Court HIGHLY APPROVED of the plaintiff's conduct in bringing the preſent action. When the indulgence of one man's mirth is made the medium of violence or injury to another, it was highly proper that it SHOULD BE RESTRAINED—ſomething had been ſaid of juſtifying or at leaſt extenuating the proceedings complained of, on the ground of cuſtom and uſage, but he hoped it never would be ſuppoſed that THAT COURT WOULD entertain the idea, THAT CUSTOM OR USAGE, COULD LEGALISE OR JUSTIFY OPPRESSION OR INJUSTICE OF ANY KIND. The proceedings in the preſent inſtance had been carried much beyond even former uſage. It did not indeed appear that the plaintiff ſuffered greater violence than the other gentlemen, or that he received any very important perſonal injury, but the dirt and filth to which he was ſubjected, was extreme in the higheſt degree, and added to injury, the greateſt INSULT TO THE FEELINGS OF A GENTLEMAN.

The Court were of opinion that the charge was brought home to the defendants Learmouth and Raymond, it was ſufficient that they were privy to, and preſent, and concurring in the general deſign.

With reſpect to the other defendants, the Court ſaw no reaſon to acquit any of them, they all ſeemed to have formed part of Neptune's Gang, and to have taken more or leſs active parts in the tranſaction.

The Recorder lamented that the defendants were ſo numerous; encouraged by their officers, the blame imputable to the men was comparatively ſmall, but on that ground the Court could not ſever the damages, or apportion them to any particular perſon's guilt—The damages given muſt be entire. The plaintiff might however do, what the Court could not—he might levy them on which of the defendants he pleaſed, leaving it to them to call on the others to contribute their proportion, ſo that the damages would ultimately fall where they ought.

With reſpect to the quantum, the defendants did not appear to be in a ſituation to pay very heavy damages, it was however proper that the plaintiff should be reimbursed all the expences of the suit, and that the damages should not only be sufficient for that purpose, but such as MARKED THE DISAPPROBATION OF THE COURT OF THE PROCEEDINGS of the DEFENDANTS, and would prevent a repetition of similar practices in future.

The Court gave the plaintiff 430 DOLLARS DAMAGES.

STATISTICAL REMARKS.

THE number of the inhabitants of a country or city is almoft renewed every thirty years; and, in a century, the human race is renewed three times and one third.

If we allow three generations for a century, and fuppofe the world to be only five thoufand feven hundred years old, there appears to have been one hundred and feventy-one generations fince the creation of the world to the preſent time, one hundred and twenty-four fince the deluge, and fifty-three fince the Chriſtian æra; and as there is not a family that can prove its origin even ſo far back as the Emperor Charlemagne, it conſequently follows that the moſt ancient families are unable to trace their origin farther b[illegible] than thirty generations. Very few indeed can trace ſo far, without diving into fiction.

Out of one thouſand infants, who are nurſed by the mother, about three hundred die; of the ſame number, committed to the care of ſtrange nurſes, it is calculated that five hundred periſh.

Among the one hundred and fifteen deaths, there may be reckoned one woman in child-bed; but only one of four hundred dies in labour.

The ſmall-pox, in the natural way, uſually carries off eight out of one hundred.

By inoculation, one dies out of three hundred.

It is remarked, that more girls than boys die of the ſmall-pox in the natural way.

From the calculations founded on the bills of mortality, only one out of three thouſand one hundred and twenty ſix reaches the age of one hundred.

More people live to a greater age in elevated ſituations than in thoſe which are lower.

The probability is, that a new-born child will live to the age of thirty-four years and ſix months.

The proportion of the deaths of women to thoſe of men is, one hundred to one hundred and eight; the probable duration of a man's life is fifty years.

Married women live longer than thoſe who are not married.

By obſervations made during the ſpace of fifty years, it has been found that the greateſt number of deaths has been in the month of March; and next to that, the months of Auguſt and September. In November, December and February, there are the feweſt deaths.

Some ſmall quantities of Staves and Oak Timber, not exactly aſcertained.

Of thoſe Articles, the following quantities were received from Niagara and the Head of Lake Ontario

4,161 barrels of Flour
96 barrels of Pot and Pearl Aſhes,
320 lbs Butter—112 lbs. Cheeſe.
350 lbs. Hams—6 barrels of Pork.
18,576 feet of Black Walnut Boards and Planks, and 435 barrels of Pork; were alſo furniſhed at Kingſton, for the uſe of the Troops.

The following was communicated by a gentleman of the firſt reſpectability in the Weſtern Diſtrict, to his friend in this Town.

"The firſt year's experiment in the culture of Hemp, on the River Thames, in the Weſtern Diſtrict, has moſt decisively aſcertained the advantages and profits which every Farmer in the country may command if he pleaſes; for I do not imagine there is a farm in the Province, in which eight or ten acres, fit for the cultivation of this article, may not be found.

"Mr. FREDERICK ARNOLD and his ſon CHRISTIAN, began on the firſt of May to plough and prepare twelve acres for Hemp, in drills, eighteen inches apart, and they have furniſhed me with an account of the labour employed upon it, as underneath—viz:

9	Days work,	a Man & a pair of Horſes, Ploughing.
1	Do.	a Man & a pair of Oxen, Harrowing.
4	Do.	three Men, with pair Horſes, Seeding.
58	Do.	three Men, Weeding & Pulling Hemp.
11	Do.	one Man, Cutting the Seed Hemp.
4	Do.	one Man and a pair of Horſes.
18	Do.	one Man, Threſhing & Cleaning Seed.

The Seed Cleaned, and fit for Sale, Meaſured 148 Buſhels.

"The above account was accompanied with a certificate, that the ground on which the Hemp grew was in Lot No. 3, firſt Conceſſion, of the Townſhip of Howard, the property of F. Arnold.

"To the above account is to be added the labour of rotting, breaking, and preparing the Hemp for ſale, which, by the calculation given me, will amount to fifty-four dollars for every ton of merchantable Hemp.

"Mr. Arnold ſays he expects five tons clean Hemp, the produce of the above-mentioned twelve acres.

"The account will ſtand thus, allowing a dollar a day for each man, and a dollar a day for each pair of horſes or oxen:—

HEMP ACCT. DR. | CONTRA. Cr.

	Dollars.		Dollars.
To 93 days labour, with men and cattle,	93	By 148 buſh. Seed, at 2½ dollars,	365
To rotting and breaking Hemp, and preparing it for market, at the rate of 54 dollars per ton on five tons,	270	By 5 tons Hemp, at 200 dols. only,	1000
		By Prov. bounty on 5 tons,	125
	363	Dollars,	1490
Balance, profit to the Farmer,	1127
Dollars,	1490

"Here appears a ſum of 1127 dollars profit on the cultivation of twelve acres of Hemp.

"To clear that ſum in the cultivation of Wheat, it would require ſixty-five acres or thereabouts, allowing a produce of twenty-five buſhels to each acre.

"Let it not hereafter be ſaid, that the expence of raiſing Hemp is more than that of Grain; for it is evident, that the labour required to cultivate ſixty five acres of Wheat, is twice as much as is required to cultivate twelve acres of Hemp—and yet the produce of theſe twelve acres in Hemp, is equal to what may reaſonably be expected from ſixty-five acres in Wheat, after the labour is deducted from the produce of the latter, which I have calculated at eleven dollars per acre, including the Seed.

"It is alſo neceſſary to obſerve, that when Mills are eſtabliſhed for breaking the Hemp, (which at preſent is done by hand) the greateſt part of the labour will be avoided, and the expence conſequently ſaved."

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, And Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

AFTER ſo very long an attendance upon your Parliamentary duty, it becomes neceſſary and expedient to cloſe the preſent Seſſion.

I truſt that when the Laws which you have been occupied in framing ſhall be publiſhed, His Majeſty's Subjects of Upper-Canada, will form a due eſtimation of the importance of the different topics, which have principally engaged your attention in the diſcharge of your public duty.

A very ſhort experience has evinced that the induſtry which has already been exerted in the export trade of the country, has even in the preſent infant ſtate of the Province, produced advantages beyond the moſt ſanguine expectations, and no doubt can be entertained, but that a ſteady perſeverance in that induſtry, and an aſſiduous attention to the facilitating the mode of tranſport to the Lower Province, will eventually and rapidly raiſe this part of His Majeſty's Dominions to a ſtate of opulence and importance, and I truſt that the culture and exportation of Hemp will be found, to be among the objects moſt worthy your future attention.

I cannot diſmiſs you without ſtrongly recommending and urging to you the neceſſity of promoting by your own example in your reſpective Counties and Diſtricts, habits of Sobriety and Morality, as the ſureſt foundation of the future welfare of the Province, for whatever found and wholeſome Laws may be paſſed for the government of a people, yet the wiſdom and experience of ages has taught, that a virtuous and religious example in the higheſt orders of ſociety, is indiſpenſibly eſſential to the giving due effect to thoſe Laws, and the introduction of good order and decorum among the great body of the people.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation,

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower-Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, a Proclamation was iſſued, bearing date the ninth day of July, in the forty firſt year of His Majeſty's Reign, whereby the Honorable JOHN M'GILL, one of the Executive and Legiſlative Councils, and the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, Eſquire, one of the Executive Council, and then Speaker of the Houſe of Aſſembly, were nominated and appointed Commiſſioners for the purpoſe of purchaſing and diſtributing of Hemp Seed gratis amongſt the Farmers, and alſo for the payment of Premiums and Bounties to the deſerving cultivators of Hemp in this Province, by virtue of the authority veſted in the Lieutenant Governor, by a reſolution in that behalf entered into by the ſaid Houſe of Aſſembly—AND WHEREAS, the abſence of the ſaid DAVID WILLIAM SMITH renders it expedient that another Commiſſioner, together with the ſaid JOHN M'GILL and DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, ſhould be appointed, for the better effectuating of the purpoſes aforeſaid—NOW know all men, that I, PETER HUNTER, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province, by virtue of the authority ſo veſted in me as aforeſaid, DO hereby nominate and appoint THOMAS SCOTT, Eſquire, His Majeſty's Attorney-General in and for the ſaid Province, (together with the ſaid JOHN M'GILL and the ſaid DAVID WILLIAM SMITH) a Commiſſioner for the purpoſe of purchaſing and diſtributing Hemp Seed gratis amongſt the Farmers, and alſo for the payment of Premiums and Bounties to the deſerving cultivators and exporters of Hemp, according to the true intent and meaning of the ſaid reſolution of the ſaid Houſe of Aſſembly.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Second Day of March, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Three, and in the Forty Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

P. HUNTER, Lieut. Govr.

By His Excellency's Command,
WILLIAM JARVIS, Secretary.

QUEBEC, 8th Feb. 1803.

This day his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor went in ſtate to the Legiſlative Council, and being ſeated on the Throne with the uſual ſolemnity, the Uſher of the Black Rod was ſent with a meſſage from his Excellency to the Houſe of Aſſembly, ſignifying his pleaſure, that they ſhould immediately attend him in the Council Chamber. The Aſſembly being come thither accordingly, his Excellency was pleaſed to make the following Speech.

Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

THE official communication of the ratification of peace, received ſince I laſt met you in this place, affords me a renewed occaſion of congratulating you upon an event, in which every friend to humanity cannot but rejoice.

The termination of thoſe ſanguinary conteſts, which ſo long baraſſed the world, and the re-eſtabliſhment of general tranquility, might well have compenſated for ſome conſiderable declenſion of that commerce which had been rapidly advancing in this part of his Majeſty's dominions during the war.

With what ſatisfaction therefore, muſt we look to the happy ſituation of this province, with what affection to the ſoſtering kindneſs of the Parent State, with what gratitude to the protecting hand of Providence, when we find that ample ſource from which we have derived ſo many benefits continuing to riſe, and to extend itſelf, under circumſtances by which, it has been heretofore found, to be reſtricted and depreſſed, when to the ineſtimable bleſſings of peace are added the diffuſive advantages of a ſtill increaſing commerce.

I think it proper to inform you that preſentments from the Grand Juries of Quebec and Montreal have been laid before me, which very clearly demonſtrate the inſufficiency and inſecurity of the preſent gaols, and the urgent neceſſity for providing houſes of correction in their reſpective diſtricts.

At Montreal the gaol is altogether inadequate to the ſafe cuſtody of the priſoners; at Quebec it is unequal to the furniſhing ſuch accommodations as both humanity and policy require.

This ſubject demands your immediate and ſerious attention.

I am perſuaded you will agree with me, that the beſt ſecurity againſt the perpetration of ſuch crimes as moſt deeply affect the peace of ſociety, is to be found in the regular application of the laws to the correction of minor offences: that the preſervation of the public morals is a primary object of Legiſlation, and that theſe important ends can never be attained until a ſuitable proviſion be made for fit and ſufficient gaols, and for houſes of correction in the different diſtricts of the province.

Feeling as I do the great utility of the Militia Acts, I cannot but alſo feel it incumbent upon me to remind you that they will expire with the preſent ſeſſion, and to recommend an early renewal of their ſalutary proviſions.

The experience which you have had of their important advantages, will I am confident induce you not only to make a timely proviſion for their continuance; but will ſuggeſt alſo ſuch improvements as may enlarge their beneficial tendency, ſo as fully to meet any future emergency.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

I ſhall order ſtatements of the civil expenditure of the laſt year and of the provincial revenue of the Crown to be laid before you; and I cannot but obſerve with peculiar ſatisfaction the augmentation which has been effected in the latter.

Gentlemen of the Legiſlative Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Aſſembly,

To recommend to you a hearty zeal for the public ſervice and a vigorous proſecution of ſuch objects as may promote the true intereſts of the province, is in effect, nothing more than to recommend a ſteady perſeverance in the ſame line of conduct that you have hitherto laudably purſued.

I ſhall therefore only remark to you, that the activity and attention, ſo eſſential to the due diſpatch of public buſineſs, will bring with them the additional advantage, of enabling you to return at an early period to the occupation and comforts of your reſpective private ſtations.

NEW YORK, February 16.

LATE FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE,

Received by the arrival at this port of the ship Delaware, Beche, 36 days from Greenock, & the Packet Queen Charlotte, from Falmouth.

LONDON, Dec. 13.

The Financial statement of the Minister, on Friday, afforded so flattering a prospect of our national prosperity, as to cause a rise in the funds of upwards of two per cent. on Saturday. It appears that both our import and export trade are regularly on the increase, that in consequence, our revenue is augmenting in the same proportion, and that the equalization of the yearly income of the nation to its expenditure is speedily approaching. The clear distinct manner in which this statement was made out by the minister, appears to have had such an effect on the house that not a whisper of discontent was heard from the opposition.—We cannot help remarking upon the spirited manner in which Mr. Addington has, for the first time, replied to the attacks which have been so repeatedly made upon him. He does not reply by retorting invective, but by a statement of incontrovertible facts; and surely we can demand no better testimony of a Minister's abilities, than that the nation flourishes beyond all precedent under his administration.

The Dey of Algiers is stated to have had an interview, some time since, with the British Consul and Sir Hugh Dalrymple, when he demanded a change of the British passports, and the payment of a debt which he asserted to be due him, to the amount of 500,000l. sterling, threatening war, in the case of a refusal, or of delay beyond the close of the present year.

It is the general opinion at Gibraltar that Malta will be retained, for the present at least, by the British government, and that the troops preparing to leave Alexandria, will probably be sent to strengthen the garrison of La Valette.

From Lisbon, under date of the 2d inst. we learn, that a convention has been signed at Madrid between the Agents of America and Spain, for the appointment of commissioners, to sit at Madrid, for the indemnification of those who have suffered losses or injuries in consequence of excesses of individuals of either nation during the late war, contrary to the existing treaty, or the law of nations. It is added, that five Tripolitan vessels were at Ferrol recruiting against the American trade.

The Dutch mail of the 8th inst. arrived yesterday, and Paris Journals to the same date have also come to hand. By a letter from Petersburgh, it appears that the shock of the late earthquake, which is reported to have destroyed a great part of Constantinople, was felt on the same day at Warsaw, Moscow, and the Russian capital. Though the effects of this dreadful convulsion of nature may have been greatly exaggerated, we, nevertheless, fear its ravages will prove to have been very considerable.

December 20.

The accounts from Constantinople inform us, that the Turks in Egypt, unable to make a stand against the Mamalukes, and defeated in seven engagements, implored the assistance of the British troops, who rescued them from total destruction.

The letters and papers by the Dutch mail mention, that advices have been received at the Hague, dated on the 23th of August from the Cape, stating the arrival of several ships of war and transports with troops, to take possession of that settlement. It was to be restored to the Dutch three drys after the date of these letters.

December 22.

His Excellency Count Woronzow, Ambassador from the Emperor of Russia to this country, landed on Monday at Dover. His Excellency arrived at London on Tuesday.

Government on Tuesday received dispatches from Malta and Egypt, bro't by Captain Pasham, of the 28th regiment of foot, and Mr. Rooke. They left Egypt on the 16th of October, at which time the British remained at Alexandria, and the Beys, continuing to increase in force, were the undisputed masters of the rest of Egypt.—The contents of the dispatches from Malta have not yet transpired.

December 27.

The Emperor of Morocco lately sent a vessel of 16 guns to Lisbon, to demand from the Portuguese government a number of cables and anchors, which were of necessity, immediately furnished.

December 28.

A private letter from Paris says, that a new expedition of not less than 20,000 men, are about to be sent from France to St. Domingo.

The special commission for the trial of Colonel Despard, and the other prisoners, in custody on a charge of high treason, &c. is now passing the Great Seal, and will be opened on or about the 20th of January, when copies of the indictment will be given to the respective prisoners, with a list of the witnesses and jurors, ten days (exclusive of Sundays) before their trials.

AFFAIRS OF EGYPT.

The following are extracts from a letter, written by an Officer belonging to the British Army at Alexandria, of date September 20.

"We did expect that the arrival of General Stewart from Constantinople, which took place the 27th of last month would have decided the period for our evacuating this country. But no communication has come from him on the subject; nor do we know for what purpose we have remained here so long. The conjectures are various; some imagine that we are to keep possession of the country, and that the garrison is to be re-inforced; while others think that we are only waiting for vessels to convey us home. Something, however, is going forward, the object of which we do not know.

"General Stewart, immediately on coming here, sent off Lord Blantyre, his Aid de-Camp, to Cairo, with dispatches to Achmet Pacha, by whom he was kindly received. The Pacha feasted him, and the officers who accompanied him, each with an elegant sabre, and sent a guard of Turkish soldiers to escort them down the Nile, on which several pirate-boats had made their appearance since the overflowing of that river. They were fired upon by one of these boats without sustaining any injury. His Lordship then ordered the men in the boat to fire over the pirates, upon which they fled, and the party were not disturbed during the remainder of the journey.

"On the return of Lord Blantyre to Alexandria, I learned the following particulars relative to the war that has for some time been carried on between the Turks and the Mamalukes in Upper Egypt. Both parties having several severe skirmishes, and being extremely harassed, they mutually agreed upon an armistice for some days. In this interval the perfidious Turks, disregarding the solemn engagement they had entered into, formed the design of entering the camp of the Mamalukes by night, and putting every man of them to the sword. In the mean time the Mamalukes were informed of the whole plan by an Arab; and as soon as the night appointed for this work of treachery arrived, they silently retired from their camp, and formed an ambuscade. When the Turks arrived, and found the camp deserted, they immediately began to plunder. During that scene of disorder and confusion, which soldiers so employed must necessarily be in, they were attacked by the Mamalukes, and not a soul of them escaped. There were not twenty of the assailants killed. The Turks acknowledged the loss of 2000; but it is thought that this falls far short of the real number destroyed on the occasion. This disaster, together with the report that the English were going to declare war against them, has very much damped the spirits of the Turks at Cairo.

"Alexandria is very quiet at present. The English and Turks agree very well. They are, however, full jealous of stopping here; but they dare not molest us. No vigilance or precaution is wanting on our part.—About three weeks ago, several vessels with Turkish troops on board came to the harbour. The troops, however, were not suffered to land; the vessels were ordered out; and guards were stationed at different places, to prevent Turkish soldiers from entering into Alexandria without a pass.

"The Nile has not risen within several feet of its usual height this season, it is now on its fall; in consequence of which, an embargo is to be laid on the exportation of grain from the country. Provisions of every kind are to be got in abundance here, and cheap; but all foreign articles are immensely dear, particularly English, such as cheese, butter, porter, wine, and all articles of wearing apparel.

"We learn by letters from Malta, that Lady Elckerton, who had just arrived there, met with very uncivil treatment in France, through which she passed. Before the embarked for Malta, all her baggage and effects were searched, lest she should carry any papers or Gazettes out of that country.—Such is the reason assigned for the ungallant behaviour. Sir Richard Bickerton is gone on a cruize, with four or five ships from Malta, but to what place is not known.

GREENOCK, January 4.

A Dutch Mail arrived on Friday morning, but it does not bring any intelligence of importance. Paleown Oglou is conducting himself with the greatest fidelity to the government; but a new adventurer has started up, who has assumed the title of Sultan—he is the son of a Pacha, but his forces are not very numerous.

Another expedition has sailed from Brest for St. Domingo; it consists of four sail of the line and two frigates—but the number of land forces is not mentioned. They are commanded by General Bideu.

FIRE AT HAMBURGH.

On the night of Thursday, 7th Dec. between twelve and one o'clock, the whole town of Hamburgh was alarmed by a violent conflagration breaking out in a sugar baker's, in the Herren Graben, which in the course of two hours destroyed that and part of two adjoining houses, and from the magnitude of the damage, became an object of public comment during the whole of the succeeding day; when, strange to relate, on the very night after, of the Friday, at the same hour, the drums and alarm bells again woke the whole city, and called the Senators together to the Town house, another sad fire having broke out in the identical street, within ten doors of the preceding night's conflagration. The lower part of the house being first in flames, the family who slept above, not being able to penetrate thro' the smoke below stairs, presented a most melancholy spectacle from the window of the second story, from whence the proprietor and his wife at length precipitated themselves in despair into the street; the former breaking both his legs, and is since dead of the bruises. The servant maid was unfortunately burnt to death in the premises. A young Frenchman, 18 years of age, who was on a visit to the house, and intended in a few days proceeding to England, is likewise missing. Still more melancholy is the fate of another countryman of his, named Le Sueur, by profession a painter; this artist lodged in the house, and escaped safe on the first alarm into the street, half naked: when looking round him, and not perceiving his wife, he immediately dividual to go again through the burning house to seek her up stairs, not aware that she had already found her way out of the premises. Distracted at not meeting with her in the apartment, he rushed down again amidst the scorching fire, and had strength to gain the street a second time, when he fell down a miserable and mangled victim to the impulse of conjugal affection. A fireman while boldly directing his engine pipe, from the top of some rafters, likewise unfortunately perished, by the wood burning from under him, and precipitating him into the dreadful volcano, in full view of the shuddering multitude below. The pecuniary damage sustained upon this occasion is considerable.

Extract of a letter from Montreal, to a gentleman in this Town, dated the 27th February, 1803.

"The detention of the Courier from Burlington, which ought to have arrived here on the 26th inst. will plead my apology for addressing a few lines to you, with some hints of news. A person arrived last week from New-York, which place he left on the 13th inst. and brought us news by the British Packet to the 16th of December, and arrivals from Glasgow to the 4th of January. Parliament had adjourned to the 3d of February, having completed the business of the House in regard to the supplies for the year, and the establishment of the Army and Navy, both on a large scale, the latter to consist of 50,000 men. The following is extracted from a Glasgow paper of the 4th January.—A private letter from Paris says, "Some very important changes, definitive as every change here is said to be, are on the eve of being carried into effect. They are said to be founded on the last Constitution: but they can be reconciled with that or any other Constitution. It would be difficult to explain the question, and has been for some days before the Senate, which after long discussion, has come to an affirmative resolution, on the propriety of changing certain denominations." This resolution may be said to have passed with unanimity, as the Senator Sanguinati stood alone in resisting the innovation.

"The object is, to proclaim the First Consul 'EMPEROR OF THE GAULS'—the Cisalpine, or Italian Republic, being to form an integral part of his Empire. Cambaceres is to be named Grand Chancellor; and another high office, not yet specified, is to be conferred on the Third Consul. There are to be many subordinate changes, the particulars of which have not yet transpired; the plan is announced from the Bureau of the Council of State, and from those of the different Ministers. It has occasioned a lively sensation even in the languid bosoms of the Parisians. The opinions are different on the subject, but, generally speaking, the measure is received with approbation.—The rich Proprietors and Creditors of the State, see more stability in the title of Emperor than in that of Consul.—The mass of the people are pleased with the novelty, and the BEAU MONDE anticipates the splendors of the new appointment. Some profound politicians seem to think also, that the respect will be given to title which has been refused to talent.

"It appears also by the Glasgow papers, that the First Consul means to annex Switzerland to his Empire, in two departments. A large armament is fitting out at Brest for St. Domingo, said to be 20,000 men—about 3000 men have arrived there lately from Toulon.

"In consequence of the appearance of the continuation of peace with France, Stocks had rose in London on the 1st of January, 3 per cent. Conf. for Acc. 73 3-8 to 1-4; 3 per cent. red. 71 5 8 to 3-4; Omnium 4 1-4 Disc. Corn-Exchange, Dec. 29th.—Wheat, 43s. 47 and 56s. per quarter; Fine, 57 to 58s. per quarter."

AN ACT

To Explain and Amend an Act, passed in the Forty-First Year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, "An Act for Granting to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, to and for the Uses of this Province, the like Duties on Goods and Merchandize brought into this Province from the United States of America, as are now Paid on Goods and Merchandize imported from Great Britain and other Places, and to Provide more effectually for the Collection and Payment of Duties on Goods and Merchandize coming from the United States of America into this Province," and also to Establish a Fund, for the Erection and Repairing of Light-Houses.

WHEREAS, the Laws at present in force, for the securing the due collection and payment of the Duties on Goods, Wares and Merchandize brought into this Province from the United States of America, have been found inadequate to the purposes for which they were intended, it is therefore become expedient to amend such Laws, and to provide additional remedies and security against the evasion of such Duties; Be it therefore enacted, by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act, passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North-America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province," and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, whenever any ship or vessel, from whatever port or place she may have sailed, containing Goods, Wares or Merchandize, shall arrive at any port or ports of entry or clearance in this Province, the cargo or load whereof is intended to pass by such port or ports without breaking bulk there, in order to pass to some other port or ports of entry in this Province, and there to break bulk; or, in order to pass through the Province, without breaking bulk, into some part or parts of the United States, the Master, or other person having the charge or command of such ship or vessel, or the Agent or Agents for the Proprietor or Proprietors of such cargo or load, or the Consignee or Consignees thereof, shall forthwith, upon arrival at any port or ports of entry or clearance as aforesaid, make a report and declaration thereof to the Collector or his Deputy stationed at such port or ports of entry, which report and declaration shall state the particulars specified and directed to be contained in the report and declaration which Masters and Commanders are required to make, by an Act passed in the forty-first year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, "An Act for granting to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, to and for the uses of this Province, the like Duties on Goods and Merchandizes brought into this Province from the United States of America, as are now paid on Goods and Merchandize imported from Great Britain and other places," and which report and declaration shall be verified upon oath or affirmation, in like manner and under the like pains and penalties as in and by the said Act of this Province directed; and in case such Master or Commander shall not intend to break bulk within this Province, then such declaration shall so state, and shall also state to what place in the said United States it is intended that such cargo or load shall be transported or conveyed, and in cases in which it is intended that ſuch cargo or load ſhall paſs to ſome other port or ports of entry and clearance in this Province, and then break bulk, ſuch declaration ſhall ſtate the particular port or ports, place or places of entry or clearance at which it is intended ſuch bulk ſhall be broken; and as well in thoſe caſes in which it ſhall be declared it is intended to break bulk at ſome other port or ports of entry and clearance in this Province, as in caſes in which ſuch declaration ſhall ſtate that it is intended to paſs into, and tranſport and convey ſuch cargo and load into ſome part or parts of the United States, without breaking bulk in this Province, the ſaid Maſter or Commander, or the Agent or Agents of the Proprietor or Proprietors of ſuch cargo or loads, or the Conſignee or Conſignees thereof, ſhall, and he and they is and are hereby required to enter into Bond, in a penalty of double the amount of the Duties with which ſuch cargo or load would, if for conſumption in this Province, be charged or chargeable, which Bond ſhall be conditioned not to break bulk, or ſuffer bulk to be broken, till the arrival of the ſhip or veſſel at the port or place at which ſuch declaration ſhall ſtate that ſuch bulk is intended to be broken, and conditioned alſo for producing the permit herein after mentioned, at every port of entry or clearance at which ſhe ſhall arrive, or through which ſhe ſhall paſs, till ſhe ſhall arrive at her ultimate port or place of deſtination.

II. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That after ſuch Bonds ſhall have been ſo given as aforeſaid, it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Collector or his Deputy, who has taken ſuch Bond, to give and grant to the Maſter, Owner or Commander of ſuch veſſel, boat, raft or carriage, a Permit to proceed upon his voyage, by virtue of which ſuch Maſter, Owner or Commander ſhall and may, and he is hereby authorized to proſecute his voyage with the ſaid cargo and loading, and to paſs unmoleſted to the next port or place of entry or clearance, where he ſhall be entitled, in caſe the condition of the ſaid Bond ſhall not have been broken, and his voyage ſhall not be completed, upon preſentation of ſuch Permit as ſhall have been obtained under the authority herein before ſpecified, to demand and receive another Permit, and in like manner ſhall continue to apply for and receive Permits at every place or port of entry or clearance, till he ſhall arrive at his ultimate deſtination, any thing in the ſaid recited act of this Province, or any other law or uſage to the contrary notwithſtanding. And provided alſo, That whenever any ſhip or veſſel paſſing the port of Niagara on her way to Queenſtown, ſhall come to an anchor in the intermediate diſtance between the ſaid ports, ſhe ſhall not unlade or break bulk, until the Maſter or Commander of ſuch ſhip or veſſel ſhall have reported as aforeſaid to the Collector of the port or place of entry then neareſt to where ſuch ſhip or veſſel ſhall then be.

V. And be it further Enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That from and after the paſſing of this Act, it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government of this Province, at any time when it ſhall be found neceſſary, by and with the advice and conſent of the Executive Council thereof, to expend at each, every or any of the port or ports, place or places of entry and clearance within this Province, ſuch reaſonable ſum or ſums of money out of the proceeds of the Duty collected, or to be collected, under the authority of the ſaid recited Act of this Province, or any other Act of the Province, or any future Acts to be paſſed for the purpoſe of laying Duties on imported Goods and Merchandize, as ſhall be deemed ſufficient for the purpoſe of erecting Cuſtom-Houſes and Store-Houſes, for the ſtoring the Goods, Wares and Merchandize liable to pay ſuch Duties as aforeſaid, and for the accommodation of the Collector or Deputy at ſuch port or ports, place or places of entry and clearance, and for the tranſacting of all buſineſs relative to the collecting and ſecuring the due payment of ſuch Duties: Provided nevertheleſs, that the ſums to be expended in any one year on the erection and repairing of Cuſtom-Houſes and Stores, ſhall in no one year exceed one-fourth of the amount of the preceding year's collection of the ſaid Duties within this Province.

PARLIAMENT OF THE UNITED KINGDOMS

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

SPEECH of the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Houſe of Commons, Dec. 2, in reply to Mr. T. Grenville, on the report of the Vote on the Navy Eſtabliſhments.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer.—I truſt the Houſe will do me the juſtice to believe, that I do not aſſe, in conſequence of the menace with which the Right Hon. gentleman has concluded, to ſupport a propoſition which is founded on the recommendation of His Majeſty's Speech. The right Hon. gentleman has charged Miniſters with a diſpoſition to treat the Houſe with diſreſpect, but I have no doubt that ſuch a charge will meet the fate of ſimilar charges from the ſame Bench. If there was any criminality in the ſilence which prevailed in the Committee yeſterday, that right hon. gentleman who complains of it, was himſelf an acceſſary—for he was preſent, he never attempted to diſturb that ſilence, to aſſert the diſgrace, which, in his apprehenſion, it muſt attach to this Houſe. After the confident expectations of ſecurity which His Majeſty's Speech was calculated to excite, was not the propoſition of a conſiderable force naturally to be expected. Such was the object of the Speech, ſuch its legitimate meaning, and ſuch, according to the right hon. gentleman's own ſtatement, the country looked for. But the right hon. gentleman and his friends vary their charges ſo frequently, that one is ſcarcely heard, when it is deſtroyed by another. Some time ſince it was argued that a large eſtabliſhment in the navy and army was indiſpenſibly neceſſary, and it was aſſerted that Miniſters had moſt improvidently reduced the public force, though in point of fact the navy now actually retained exceeded that in the firſt year of the laſt War, as in June 1793, the Houſe voted only 45,000 ſeamen, for gentlemen, in their ardent anxiety to abuſe, could not ſtop to examine facts. The right hon. gentleman could not complain of want of time to examine the eſtimates. They were ſome days on the table, and due notice was given of the day the reſolution he now objects to was to be propoſed. But the right hon. gentleman is highly diſcontented that his objections were not adverted to one day ſooner, & he vents his anger upon Miniſters. I did expect the right hon. gentleman's Speech yeſterday. I looked for ſome queſtions from himſelf or his friends, and was fully ready to anſwer them. I was perfectly prepared to enter into the diſcuſſion. I appeal to the Houſe whether Miniſters have, upon any occaſion, indicated the leaſt wiſh to evade the inveſtigation of any meaſure they propoſed, or to give the moſt ſatisfactory explanation? Did Gentlemen mean to ſupport this propoſition—that Miniſters loſt ſight of their duty, becauſe they declined to enter into the explanation of a neceſſity which all men admitted, and which they themſelves were particularly anxious to diſlate upon, and too often forward to exaggerate? Could ſuch ſilence be conſidered as a breach of the privileges of the Houſe of Commons by a diſſertation on the ſtate of Europe, in order to prove that which was obviouſly right and proper, namely—that we ſhould provide for our own defence? Indeed the chief doubt of the right hon. gentleman ſeemed to be, whether our naval force ſhould not be greater, elſe why ſuch pains taken to alarm the Country by deſcriptions of danger? If they believed in their own deſcriptions, the force I propoſe requires no juſtification, to them, at leaſt. With reſpect to the right hon. gentleman's alluſion to the peace of 1783, though His Majeſty's ſpeech of that day ſpeaks confidentially of peace, yet 26,000 ſeamen were voted for the navy. [Hon. Mr. Addington detailed the different changes made in the amount of the army and navy, from the ſigning of the preliminaries to the concluſion of the definitive treaty in 1783, and added] I contend that theſe reductions, comparing the difference of the periods, as to the relative ſtate of England, were made upon the ſame principles of policy. I truſt it will never be maintained by impartial men that the preſent government have ſhewn any want of proper firmneſs or attention, or becauſe they were not diſpoſed to give way to a too precipitate ſenſe of danger, they ſhould be thought too credulous in the pacific deſigns of France. The grounds upon which the right hon. gentleman oppoſes the preſent vote, are rather ſingular, conſidering his frequently expreſſed deſire to keep up a ſtrong defenſive force. Such is alſo the deſire and purpoſe of government, but reduction would be thought unadviſable for ſome time, and in a few days my right hon. friend (the Secretary at War) will ſubmit a propoſition to the Houſe for a larger eſtabliſhment for the army than ſeems to be in the contemplation of ſome gentlemen—an eſtabliſhment beyond any thing ever known in time of Peace. I am not diſpoſed to ſhrink from the declaration, that in the preſent ſituation of Europe, ſuch an eſtabliſhment is neceſſary—that it is neceſſary to maintain a ſtrong defenſive ſyſtem. Does the right honorable gentleman ſuppoſe that I would repoſe implicit reliance on the peaceful aſſurances of France? My opinion is, as it ever has been, that we muſt beſt conſult our ſafety by providing for our defence, that our beſt ſecurity will conſiſt in the ſufficiency of our ſtrength. On that principle I have acted, and with that view I propoſed this vote, an explanation of which, the right hon. gentleman ſays, ſhould be forced from us. I hope the Houſe will bear teſtimony that no force has been found neceſſary to obtain any information required by the Houſe from His Majeſty's Miniſters. The right hon. gentleman demands an explanation, yet as, upon his own admiſſion, more ſhould not be voted, unleſs for war, and he would not go with me in that, it follows, that 50,000 men are juſt enough in his conception. With reſpect to the manner in which this number of ſeamen is to be engaged, I beg to remark that our fleet in the Weſt-Indies, which muſt be occaſionally relieved, and which could not prudently for ſome time to be reduced, will require a great proportion of this force; but I wiſh to reſt the juſtification of this vote on a broader principle; the opinion of expediency, the propriety of adopting defenſive meaſures, on ſuch a ſcale, as to be prepared for any emergency, and to afford the country the faireſt proſpect of the permanency of peace. I have no objection to follow the right honorable gentleman in his review of the ſtate of Europe. In the firſt ſtep, however, as to Peterſburgh, the right honorable gentleman will pardon me, if I decline to give him any preciſe anſwer on that ſubject; I ſhall give no poſitive contradiction to what he has ſtated: but I will ſay, that the right honorable gentleman ought to have conſidered and inquired a little further before he hazarded a poſitive aſſertion, which muſt be heard from him with ſurpriſe and regret. The right honorable gentleman has miſconceived the ſtatement of my noble friend, on a former day, reſpecting the victory of Copenhagen. He did not ſay, as the right honorable gentleman aſſerted, "that that victory created the difficulties of the negotiation with the Northern Confederacy," but, "that even after that victory, which never was ſurpaſſed in full ſea bravery, or the beginning of its conſequences, many difficulties remained to be adjuſted—that that victory did not get rid of the difficulties;" Such were the words really uttered by my noble friend. The right honorable gentleman has objected to the activity of the Dutch to recruit their navy—And is that a matter of wonder, that a power which, at one period of the war, muſtered a reſpectable fleet, and which, at the termination of the war, only retained 16, ſhould be anxious to repair her fleets? Though the increaſe of every fleet likely to any period to be employed againſt us, may be ſubject of lamentation, yet it formed no ground of complaint againſt Miniſters, unleſs that degree of exertion in foreign powers ſhould be met by ſimilar meaſures on our part—But was that the caſe? Could any ſuch imputation attach? I feel confident that it cannot. The right honorable gentleman was in error when he ſtated, that the navy of France and the navy of Europe were ſynonymous terms. He certainly was not juſtified in conſulting the navies of Ruſſia, Sweden and Denmark, with that of France. I admit that recent experience and preſent appearances naturally induce the belief that thoſe of Spain and Holland are intimately attached to France; but whatever be their force, connection or activity, are we unable or unprepared to meet them combined? Have Miniſters neglected their duty ſo far as to omit any exertion to eſtabliſh and to maintain our ſuperiority? No.—For the inſult to the Britiſh officer, in the port of Liſbon, to which the right honorable gentleman has alluded, the moſt ample and complete ſatisfaction was readily given; the perſons who offered that inſult were immediately impriſoned and puniſhed. No diſtinction was ſhewn on the part of the Portugueſe government to make the fulleſt amends for the honor of the Britiſh officer; and in proof that the atonement was deemed ſufficient, no complaint has been ſince made. In further corroboration of the ſuperiority of our fleet to any that is ready to ſail from the ports of the combined powers, I have to ſtate, in contradiction to rumours circulated by ſome from ignorance, by others from fear, and by others perhaps from worſe motives, that Admiral Bickerton, who is at preſent commands on ſail of the line in the Mediterranean, writes home that there are only five ſail of the line ready for ſea in the port of Toulon; from which reports have for ſome time ſtated, that a conſiderable fleet was about to be diſpatched. The Admiralty alſo ſtated, that a ſtill inferior force appeared in the harbor of Car bagena—ſo much for our ſecurity in the Mediterranean. Now I beg to correct a miſtake of the right honorable gentleman as to Malta. I never did ſay that Ruſſia would guarantee the independence of Malta—I only ſaid that it was to expected. The right honorable gentleman has taken a view of our external dangers and internal ſtrength—I ſhall follow him; but I will be more minute, and I hope more ſatisfactory to the Houſe, in my detail. The fleets of France, Spain and Holland, ſtood thus at the beginning of the war: France, 105 ſail of the line; Spain, 79; and Holland, 27.—What was the relief of thoſe wars, which covered this country with ſo much glory? Why, that thoſe fleets which conſiſted of 200 ſail of the line at the beginning of the war, were reduced to 123, and a comparatively greater reduction took place among their frigates and ſmall craft. What increaſe their powers may have ſince made in their naval force, by building new ſhips, I am not prepared to ſay; but their actual ſtate at the concluſion of the war, was what I have ſtated—France 30, Spain 68, and Holland 18. What addition there can have been made, by building new ſhips, to ſuch a force, to exceed the higheſt ſtate in the breaſt of an Engliſhman, when I ſtate that we have at preſent upon ſail of the line, 109 frigates, 129 ſloops, and 243 ſmaller craft; in all 773 ſhips of war. With an exceſs then, of 60 ſail of the line, above the combined fleets of France, Spain and Holland, what have we to fear, and what apprehenſion can be felt for our ſafety, when it is known, that by the prudent and wiſe conduct of our laſt Lord of the Admiralty, ſuch arrangements are made, that in caſe of the renewal of hoſtilities, fifty ſail of the line can be prepared for ſea, within one month, and even a larger number, ſhould the exigency be preſſing? Thus are we ſituated, ready for any event. Whether this ſtate of preparation proves inexpenſive, inactivity, and lethargic torpor, proves that want of vigor and energy on the part of adminiſtration, which the right honorable gentleman and his friends would not have to them. I shall leave it to the friends and the country to determine; and whether they deserve the foul, opprobrious epithets, and the diabolical accusations which are frequently printed at their expence. It is our business with cool resolution to maintain peace; but if the honor of the country should be torn asunder, or its security endangered, it is our duty to be unanimous, and determined to meet the enemy with firmness. This is the manner with which we demand this vote, and that the purpose to which we shall, if necessary, apply it. Is that a satisfactory answer to the right honorable gentleman's question? We shall be prepared to meet war if unavoidable; and we shall meet it without apprehension. Our idea of the necessity for precaution, and for this vote, does not arise out of the exaggerated accounts of danger with which the right hon. gentleman and his friends have so long agitated the public, nor from such views of the country as are only calculated to terrify and dismay, but from a sober, just, and attentive consideration of all the circumstances of Europe. I recollect what I did say in reply to a gentleman on the other side of the house, that the peace establishment would consist of a some-thing between, but I recollect also, that I said so with such reserve and qualification, as any man incapable of fixing into futurity ought to have done. I hope that this establishment I now propose will not long exist—I should be sorry to consider it in the permanent peace establishment. When the circumstances of England shall render it proper to reduce our force to the most economic standard, I shall feel most inwardly happy, but the arrival of that period, and the security of peace, will depend much on the acquiescence of the house in this vote. Having stated so much as to the grounds of this proposition, I hope I have given full satisfaction to the right hon. gentleman and his friends. Such I assure them is my wish; but least they should suppose that the force proposed is with any view to a war establishment; or tend to put the country, in that state from which they were so unwilling to have it released; or that the expence being so considerable, parliament and the country might the more easily be persuaded to accede to the renewal of hostilities, I beg to undeceive them, for our only object is to be enabled, on any sudden emergency, to put forth such a force, as might be sufficient to avert all danger, to the w our power and might if necessary, render to keep that power on such a solid foundation, as should never be shaken. I feel that I owe no apology to the house for so long trespassing on their time, to define a necessity which seemed to be generally admitted, and to advocate a proposition which seemed to be generally called for; but the right hon. gentleman has endeavoured to impute a motive to my actions which I never entertained, which, like other imputations from this same quarter, I hope the house will bear me out in saying, had no pretensions to justice, had no foundation in fact.

LONDON, December 8.

A letter from Paris, dated Dec. 2, states as follows:—

"A dreadful circumstance took place here yesterday. The lots have lately been drawn to determine which of the Conscripts should join the armies in the ensuing year. The new regulations respecting the Conscripts are so various, and encumbered with so many forms, that the difficulties are almost insuperable. A number of young men were yesterday collected at the Hall of the Municipality. They demanded loudly a more practical method of providing substitutes, and from clamours were proceeding perhaps to violence, when the order was given for calling in the Ministerial Guard. The Conscripts being enraged, seized on the desks, tables and chairs of the Halls, and piled them up as a barricado. From behind this they insulted the dragoons, and threw at their heads the books, the inkstands, and the fire-wood. The dragoons, being incensed in their turn, rushed in upon and tore down the barricado, and then fell on the unarmed Conscripts with their sabres. No less than eight of these unfortunate young men were literally cut to pieces."

The following is an extract of another letter from Paris, of the same date:

"Yesterday I was witness to a most melancholy scene, but which, in this country, is passed over very slightly.—A young man, who had been drafted among the Conscripts, wished to find a substitute—This produced some altercation between him and one of the Serjeants; the latter, in a rage, thrust him through the body. The rest of the Conscripts, of whom there was a large party, instantly dispatched the Serjeant. A conflict ensued between the Conscripts and the Military. The Guards were called, who fell upon the Conscripts with great fury, and cut them down. Five-and-twenty were killed, besides several wounded. Two or three of the Guards likewise lost their lives. This took place in the public street, in la Rue St. Martin.—'Tis yours to comment—I only state facts."

December 10.

Yesterday we received Paris papers to the 7th instant.

Lord Whitworth presented his Letters of Credence at the Diplomatic Audience of the First Consul, on Sunday, and at the same time presented thirty-six English Noblemen and Gentlemen. Mr. Merry likewise delivered his Letters of Recall, and had his Audience of Leave.

In consequence of the late affray between the Conscripts and the troops of the line, the recruiting service is conducted with more care and vigilance.—The prefect now presides in person during enrollment, and the drawing of lots is carried on under his immediate superintendance, or that of the Mayor of Paris.

The Deputation of the Empire held its thirty-first Sitting on the 25th ult. and was to assemble again on the 27th, when it was expected to adjourn for some time. The Definitive Conclusum of the Deputation has been published, which, after recapitulating the various events which have taken place respecting the indemnities, finally adopts the general plan, with its subsequent modifications.

There is little intelligence of moment from Switzerland. Tranquility, such as it is, has been generally re-established in that country. The Cantons of Uri and Schwitz have not yet proceeded to the nomination of Deputies to the Helvetic Consulta. The Elections in the other Cantons are complete.

"It is reported, that during the visit of the Chief Consul at Havre, one of the soldiers in the corps of Mamalukes, made an attempt to assassinate him; the soldier is stated to have nearly drawn his sword, when his arm was arrested by some of the attendants of the Chief Consul—the fellow was hurried to a dungeon, and Bonaparte is stated to have directed that no mention should be made of the occurrence.

A Dutch mail arrived on Friday, but brought no intelligence of importance. General Victor and Caesar Berthier have arrived with orders from the First Consul, for the expedition fitting out in the ports of that country, to sail immediately; but it is presumed that it cannot put to sea for a fortnight.

Dispatches have been received at Constantinople from the Pacha of Cairo, who states, that he has defeated the Beys, and blocked them up in Upper Egypt, where, from the want of provisions and the great ravages which the plague is making amongst their troops, he expects they will soon be compelled to surrender.

OSNABURGH, Nov. 12.

Our fate is at length decided, and our wishes accomplished: this country passes under the sovereignty of the King of England. On the 8th of this month, Col. Hassel, at the head of a battalion of Hanoverian Infantry, entered our city with two pieces of cannon, and lighted matches; two squadrons of cavalry were placed at Belm, a league from thence. The next day the citizens appeared under arms, to receive Mr. D'Arnswaldt, Minister of the Cabinet. The Burgomaster at the head of the Senate, received him at the gate of the city, addressed him, and presented him with the five keys of the city. The Minister accepted them, and immediately returned them, saying, that the Magistrates would guard them with as much honor as they had hitherto done.

His Royal Highness the Duke of York, has published a manifesto, by which he renounces in favor of his august Father, the Sovereignty of the country of Osnabugh.

BRIGHTON, Dec. 27.

The weather here yesterday was unusually tempestuous throughout the day and the greater part of last night. A brig, in great distress, was observed in the offing, about ten o'clock A. M. but the sea ran too high for any assistance to be afforded them from the shore.—The vessel at length, after firing many guns to obtain relief, anchored in the midst of the breakers, at three P. M. about half a mile to the west of the harbour's entrance of New Shoreham. A boat, containing 14 men, was soon after put off, which reached the shore in safety; but a second with three men only, following the example of the first, was not fortunate; it was presently overwhelmed, and those on board perished; seven others, who remained in the vessel, were preserved. The ship proves to be French, had left Dunkirk but the day before, with ammunition and artillery stores for Louisiana.

By His Excellency's Command,

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorised to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Case heard and decided upon; but that after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Parties who shall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grossly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

January 8.

The trial of Col. Despard and his associates, will commence about the 20th next month, at the new Session House, Newington. A commission for that purpose is now making out, and will pass the Great Seal in a few days. Lord Chief Justice Ellenborough, it is supposed, will preside on the occasion, assisted by the Judges Lawrence, Le Blanc, Chambre and Thompson.

England is wisely endeavouring, before she orders her troops to evacuate Egypt, to procure the adoption of such a system as shall prevent any foreign power from attempting to wrest that province from the Porte. Letters from Constantinople of the 14th of November, the contents of which are given in the Paris papers to the 31st ult. which we received this morning, state, that Lord Elgine has proposed a triple alliance between Turkey, Great Britain and Russia, the principal object of which shall be to prevent a descent upon Egypt, and to stipulate that the Porte shall not grant permission to any power to send troops thither. Russia is said to be friendly to the proposition. But the Porte hesitates, through fear of giving offence to France. If Russia, however, who must always possess the most influence at Constantinople, be really desirous that such a treaty should be concluded, the Turkish government must of course accede to it.

It was believed at Ratisbon, on the 20th ult. that the Convention relative to the Grand Duke of Tuscany's indemnities, had been ratified by His Imperial Majesty.

The French funds are 56.

This morning arrived a mail from Hamburgh. Letters from Constantinople, dated November 25, state, that the Porte has received intelligence from Egypt, that the Beys of Upper Egypt lately attempted to break the line of Turkish troops, by which they were surrounded, and to join the English; but that the Pacha of Cairo successfully resisted their enterprize.

Colonel Sebastian takes the title of Envoy Extraordinary of the French Republic for the whole Levant.

These letters are silent upon the subject of the triple alliance said to have been propoled to the Porte by Lord Elgine.

Mr. Merry, our late Ambassador to the French Republic, arrived yesterday at Dover.

The Journal des Defenseurs, of Tuesday last, contains the following article, which appears to bear a relation to what has been stated in private letters from Paris, with respect to the inauguration of Bonaparte as Emperor of the Gauls.

There is now preparing in the Palais de Justice, in the ground saloon formerly called Des Libraires, where the Grand Judge is to sit, a Chapel placed at one of the extremities, opposite the stairs, according to the Tribunal of Correction. Amongst its decorations are four ionic columns, which have been restored for this purpose. This vast hall is divided in the middle by arcades, which are covered with superb tapestry from the manufacture of the Gobelins. The place is the same where formerly was celebrated the mass, known by the name of La Mass Rouge. A place is prepared in the same hall for the purpose of containing a great number of Musicians. In that part of the hall which belonged to the Tribunal of Appeals, opposite to the seats, there are a number of ascending judges, evidently reserved for the constituted authorities, to be invited to a ceremony, which, judging from the preparations that have been made, will be heightened by a degree of pomp suited to its importance.

A new treaty of amity and commerce, calculated still further to unite the Cabinets of London and Petersburgh, is confidently spoken of.

PARIS, Dec. 10.

We learn from the Hague, that the embarkment of the 5th and 17th demibrigades of French troops, destined for Louisiana, will take place immediately, that already forty vessels for transports, have arrived from Dunkirk at the mouth of the Meuse, to take them on board and carry them to the place of destination.

The citizen Muller, of Mulbee, has been acknowledged by the court of Vienna, in quality of Charge des Affaires of the Helvetic republic, and Mr. Dreffbach who still withed to be acknowledged as the representative of the Swiss confederation, has been dismissed and obliged to depart for Vienna.

LONDON, November 23.

Dreadful Shipwreck.—The following letter, respecting the loss of the Dutch Transport the Vreide, is written by a young gentleman residing at Folkstone, dated November 24:—

"Yesterday I witnessed a most melancholy and distressing sight. About seven o'clock in the morning, I beheld the waves running mountain high.

"About one o'clock I observed many casks floating, and the people running along the beach towards the rock, to procure whatever might fall in their way; before I could get to the point, the body of a fine young woman was driven upon the rock, she was entirely naked except one stocking and a leather garter, which was buckled below her knee.

"About a quarter of an hour after another female came in, with many different articles, such as cartouch boxes, puncheons, canteens, and soldiers' caps. I heard that the wreck was at a place called Brookman's Barn, between Hyrth and Dimchurch. I rode over there, and beheld such a spectacle as I hope I never shall witness again—The ship had passed Dimchurch about 8 o'clock in the morning, though the sea was dreadful, and appeared to be all well: about half an hour after, she was driven on shore upon the land, where she stuck fast, and almost instantly parted. There were upwards of 400 souls on board, out of which (dreadful to relate) only nine were saved, one of whom died yesterday evening, and three others were not expected to recover.

"I rode for two miles along the coast from the wreck, towards Sandgate, which was covered with puncheons, musical instruments, muquets, &c. as also dead bodies of fine handsome men—the soldiers appear principally to be marines. There has been a great number of them carried away to the Church: in a mile and a half's ride I counted the bodies of 120. The seamen were observed handing seven or eight females up the shrouds, the most probable means of saving them, but shortly after the mast went by the board, and they were all plunged in the devouring element. There were near 100 poor fellows on a piece of the wreck, and very near shore, when a most tremendous sea came and swept every one off. A Mr. Kemp, of Hythe, saved one of them from death, by running into the sea.—He was very near an officer, and had just got hold of him, when he perceived an amazing swell approaching, with a large piece of the wreck, and had only time to save himself, for immediately the timber knocked out the brains of the officer. On my return to Folkstone, I found two more women, and two or three infants, had come ashore; I also saw a sweet little girl, this morning, about 8 months old. Not an officer or female is saved; every person here is busy on the beach picking up what they can; some find watches, money, skins, &c.

"It is astonishing that every woman who came on shore are all quite naked."

Another letter on this melancholy subject, dated Dover, November 25, states as follows:—

"The Dutch Indiaman Vreide, formerly the Melville Castle, an old crazy ship, which passed Dover Roads in distress on Monday evening, having lost her mainmast, made signals for assistance, but the pilot-boat which put off never reached her, as it came on dreadfully thick and tempestuous, so that she was soon lost sight of. In this helpless situation the crew were unable to keep her off the land, and about one in the morning she was driven on shore near Hythe, by the fury of the wind. It is supposed that out of the whole number on board, most of which were troops, and which amounted with the crew to above 400, not more than 73 have been saved. Every officer has perished; the floating bodies of the sufferers are as distressing to the eyes as their shrieks during a dark and stormy morning, were to the ear of humanity; and no attempt could be made to save them, that was not certain to involve in a similar fate all who should undertake it. The captain's wife was on board, and perished with her husband.

"The following list of the crew is taken from one of the survivors:—Soldiers, 320; Officers, 42; Seamen, 61; Women, 22; Children, 7; Passengers, 20—Total, 472."

STORM AND INUNDATION.

The tempestuous weather experienced from Wednesday night until late on Thursday, together with the heavy and unremitting rain during that period, have produced various disastrous occurrences near this city. The backs, weirs, &c. at Old Bawn paper mills, are entirely swept away: the works, which were very extensive, it is feared will be stopped, and the people ruined. Nearly an acre and a half of Mr. Wildridge's meadow, adjacent to the mills, has been severed from the rest by the violence of the flood, and carried completely off.

At Ringsend, the bridge, a fabric apparently of very solid and judicious construction, has yielded to the impetuous force and accumulated weight of the waters, the centre arch and that next the city being destroyed, excepting so much on the side towards the docks, as to admit of foot passengers.

Last night, a little after ten, the bridge at the Coal-quay gave way. Providentially no perſon was paſſing at the moment. Two of the arches were torn from the centre before eleven o'clock, and by morning the remainder was nearly deſtroyed. Watchmen were ſtationed at both ſides the water to prevent accidents.

The bridges of Lucan and Celbridge have been alſo deſtroyed.

This day various articles of houſhold furniture, implements of huſbandry, &c. were ſeen floating down the river.

The parts of the town ſituated within the influence of the Poddle-ſtream, were yeſterday inundated at an early hour, to a conſiderable depth, Patrick-ſtreet and its vicinity in particular. In the former ſtreet ſeveral boats were employed till evening; and though the inhabitants had anticipated the event which took place, they nevertheleſs have ſuſtained ſerious injury, from the impracticability of removing the entire contents of their ſtores and cellars.—The flood extended to New ſtreet, the Coombe, Black Pits, Cork-ſtreet, &c. and frightful torrents diverged from Patrick-ſtreet into Bride's-alley, Dull alley and the lanes lying on a ſimilar level.

Much diſtreſs was alſo experienced, though not in the ſame degree, by the inhabitants of other parts of the city.

The lower Caſtle-yard was rendered impaſſible to any but horſemen, high carriages, and even to thoſe with difficulty. Through Palace-ſtreet a torrent ruſhed across Dame-ſtreet into Crampton-court, which cauſed cars, gingles, &c. to ply there for hire; in that immediate neighbourhood, and as far as College-green, the kitchens were inundated to a conſiderable depth, and ſimilar inconvenience was experienced in ſome degree in every quarter of the city, but to-day the inundation has entirely ſubſided.

The damage ſuffered at ſea, we fear, will ſwell the catalogue of calamity to a moſt affecting degree.

BOURDEAUX, Dec. 8.

The frigate Furieuſe, and other veſſels, have left the port of Breſt, to join the naval expedition deſtined for Louiſiana; ſhe has on board a number of perſons who are to be employed in that colony.

Foreign accounts ſtate that Conſtantinople was almoſt entirely deſtroyed by an earthquake on the 26th Oct. laſt.—The ſeraglio and a great part of the city are ſtated to have been ſwallowed up. The earthquake was productive of the moſt extenſive miſchief in ſeveral parts of Turkey, particularly in Wallachia and Romelia.

PARIS, Jan. 16. The ſquadron which ſailed from Toulon, viſited St. Domingo, has on board 3000 Poles, 1800 Infantry, two companies of riflemen, two companies of Hanoverians, and a detachment of artillery.—All theſe troops have been in the war of Italy. Troops in ſeveral ports of France are getting ready to ſail for the Weſt Indies.

AN ACCOUNT OF MULY MOLUC.

When Don Sebaſtian, King of Portugal, had invaded the territories of Muly Moluc, Emperor of Morocco, in order to dethrone him, and ſet the crown on the head of his nephew, Moluc was wearing away with a diſtemper which he knew was incurable. However, he prepared to meet ſo formidable an enemy. He was indeed ſo far ſpent with his ſickneſs, that he did not expect to live out the whole day, when the laſt deciſive battle was given, but knowing that fatal conſequences would happen to his children and people, in caſe he died before he put an end to the war, he commanded his principal officers, that if he died during the engagement, they ſhould conceal his death from the army, and that they ſhould ride up to the litter in which he was carried, under pretence of receiving orders from him as uſual. Before the battle begun, he was carried through all the ranks of his army in an open litter, as they ſtood drawn up in array, encouraging them to fight valiantly in defence of their religion and country. Finding afterwards the battle to go againſt him, though he was very near his laſt agonies, he threw himſelf out of his litter, rallied his army, and led them on to the charge; which afterwards ended in a complete victory on the ſide of the Moors—He had no ſooner brought his men to the engagement, but finding himſelf utterly ſpent, he was again replaced in the litter, where laying his finger on his mouth to enjoin ſecrecy to his officers, who ſtood about im, he died in that poſture.

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, APRIL 2, 1803.

Among the moſt important tranſactions of the American Congreſs was the authorizing a detachment of 80,000 militia for the Miſſiſippi ſervice; for which a million and a half of dollars are appropriated: and 25,000 dollars for building arſenals on the Weſtern waters.

Bills of Indictment for high treaſon were found on the 20th January, againſt Col. Deſpard and 12 others charged with a conſpiracy, their trials were to take place on the 5th and 7th February.

FROM THE BALANCE.

A COMPARISON.

NOW cheering Autumn leaves the plain,
And dark December's gloomy reign
Commences o'er our land;
No more the fanning zephyrs blow,
The bubbling fountains ceaſe to flow
At Winter's loud command.

The beardleſs ſtalks—the naked trees,
And ſailing fort declare,
They ſhrink before the ſhivering breeze,
Beneath the piercing air.

Ah! who can view
The ſad adieu
Of Nature, without pain;
Who would not here
Indulge a tear,
And wiſh her back again.

Cold as December's Wintry Skies,
And dreary, all my proſpects riſe;
Oh! when will genial Spring,
With ſmiles allay ſtern Winter's wrath,
And ſtrew with flowers my thorny path;
And new enjoyments bring.

The Sun-ſhine of my early days
No more illumes my way;
But clouds obſcure the vernal rays,
And chace their light away

Kind hope, to thee
I bend the knee,
Imploring ſtill thy aid,
Leave not this breaſt
Devoid of reſt,
Where grief too long has prey'd

THE RIVER ST. LAWRENCE.

NATURE has formed America, particularly with reſpect to rivers, on a much larger ſcale than the other quarters of the globe. Among its moſt noble rivers is that of St. Lawrence. This river, beginning at Lake Ontario, and extending to the ocean, is ſeven hundred and forty-three miles in length—At its mouth, it is ninety miles wide. At Cape Cat, which is one hundred and forty miles from its mouth, the St. Lawrence is thirty miles wide. At Quebec, which is four hundred miles from its mouth, it is five miles wide. Up to this diſtance from the ocean, the river is navigable by ſhips of the line. At and near Kingſton, which is ſituated at the ſource of the St. Lawrence, that is, ſeven hundred and forty three miles from the ocean, the river is ſaid to be from two and a half to ſix miles wide. The channel of this river, it is reported, is better now than it was when the river was firſt diſcovered by civilized people. During the ſpring-floods, the waters from Lake Ontario ruſh down with ſuch rapidity and irreſiſtible force, as to remove the beds of gravel and even large ſtones in the St. Lawrence; whereby its channel is gradually cleared, extended and deepened.

When the lands on either ſide of this vaſtly extenſive river ſhall be cultivated, immenſe will be the quantities of produce which it will waft to the ocean.

The mode of Preſerving Butter in Turkey.

"The butter, which is moſtly uſed in Conſtantinople, comes from the Crim and the Cuban. They do not ſalt it, but melt it in large copper pans over a flow fire, and ſcum off what riſes; it will then preſerve ſweet for a long time, if the butter was freſh when it was melted. We preſerve butter moſtly by ſalting. I have had butter, which, when freſh, was melted and ſcummed in the Tartar manner, and then ſalted in our manner, which kept two years, good and fine taſted.

Waſhing does not ſo intirely free butter from the curd and butter-milk, which it is neceſſary to do in order to preſerve it, as boiling and melting; when, then, ſalt is added to prevent the pure butyrous part from growing rancid, we certainly have the beſt proceſs for preſerving butter. The melting or boiling, if done with care, does not diſcolour or injure the taſte."—Balance.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners; to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts.—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Case heard and decided upon; but that after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Parties who shall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grossly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

London and Greenock papers to the 22d ult. were yesterday received in this city by the arrival of the ships Jesse, Boag, from Greenock, and Washington, Noyes, from Liverpool.

Accounts from the Hague state, that the most active exertions are making to complete the expedition of Louisiana, and that a number of additional transports have been engaged. Gen. Caffy Berthier is appointed chief of the staff on this expedition.

Madam Le Clerc, and the body of her husband, had arrived at France.—The First Consul put on mourning, which he was to wear ten days. He received compliments of condolence from all the constituted authorities and foreign ambassadors.

An English paper of the 17th ult. says, the Chief Consul is certainly going to the Netherlands almost immediately, and a camp of 12,000 men is to be formed in the vicinity. The object, a secret.

The general constitution for Switzerland has been adopted by the consulta at Paris. It was the result of one day only. Switzerland is so completely subjugated, that it is deemed unnecessary to preserve even the forms of free deliberation upon a question the most interesting that can be submitted to a people or their representatives.

A report was in circulation in London on the 12th of January, that a Spanish officer had repaired to the English settlement in the Bay of Honduras, and made a formal demand of its surrender in the name of His Most Catholic Majesty. It was not publicly known whether any notification of this demand had been made by the court of Spain to the British Cabinet. Some points of serious importance are said to remain unadjusted between the two courts; and this circumstance, it is added, retards the nomination of Ambassadors, and the conclusion of the treaty that has been long in discussion.

The First Consul, it is said, lately sent some French engineers to examine the Bay of Tetuan, and ascertain the practicability of converting it into a harbour, with a design of purchasing it from the Moors as a check upon the British commerce in the Mediterranean.

A violent gale the beginning of January had occasioned considerable damage in the channel. The Hindostan East Indiaman was totally lost in Queen's Channel, Margate Roads. The Hindostan was 1248 tons burthen, destined to Madras and China, it was her fourth voyage, and the first of her commander, Captain Bilton. She had on board private bullion to the amount of 45,000 ounces, and was one of the finest ships in the service. Three midshipmen and about twenty seamen were drowned or frozen to death, the remainder of the crew, about 120 in number, were rescued by boats; fortunately few of the passengers were on board, many were waiting at Deal, and others had gone to Portsmouth to embark. The Active, West Indiaman was lost at the same time, within two miles of Margate, and 7 or 8 persons on board were drowned.

LONDON, January 23.

The States of Barbary have agreed to surrender three of their ports to the French.

All the French officers of rank in Holland, have repaired to Paris, in order to assist at something important which is soon to go forward.

A new conspiracy is reported to have been discovered against the First Consul. Several persons have been arrested. Fouche is implicated. When the First Consul went to the theatre the guards were doubled.

The inhabitants of Hamburgh, celebrated this year, the thousandth anniversary of the existence of that place as a free commercial city.

The body of George Foster, who was executed on Monday last for murder, was conveyed to a house not far distant where it was subjected to the Galvanic process, by professor Aldini, under the inspection of Mr. Keate, Mr. Carpue, and several other professional gentlemen. Mr. Aldini who is the nephew of the discoverer of this most interesting science, shewed the eminent and superior powers of Galvanism to be far beyond any other stimulant in nature. On the first application of the process to the face, the jaw of the deceased criminal began to quiver, and the adjoining muscles were horribly contorted, and one eye was actually opened. In the subsequent part of the process, the right hand was raised and clenched, and the legs and thighs were set in motion.—It appeared to the uninformed part of the by standers as if the wretched man was on the eve of being restored to life. This, however, was impossible, as several of his friends who were under the scaffold had violently pulled his legs in order to put a more speedy termination to his sufferings. The experiment in fact, was of a better use and tendency. Its object was to shew the excitability of the human frame, when this animal electricity is duly applied. In cases of drowning or suffocation it promises to be of the utmost use, by reviving the action of the lungs, and thereby kindling the expiring spark of vitality. In cases of apoplexy or disorders of the head, it offers also most encouraging prospects for the benefit of mankind.—The professor, we understand, has made use of Galvanism, also in several cases of insanity, and with complete success. It is the opinion of the first medical men, that this discovery, if rightly managed and duly prosecuted, cannot fail to be of great, and perhaps, as yet, unforeseen utility.

The total loss by the late fire at Gottenburg, amounts to little less than 500,000l. sterling.

Yesterday we received Paris Journals to the 19th inst. from them we select the following articles:—We hear from Genoa, that the Polish brigade, which is there, expecting to embark for Saint Domingo, is about 2800 strong.

Letters from Berne, of the 7th Jan. state, that information had been received there from Paris, relative to the future fate of Switzerland—but nothing had transpired. Attempts at destroying houses and property are renewed in several cantons. A burning engine was found some days ago; it was immediately sent to the regency, on account of the singular ingenuity with which it was constructed. This event excited much alarm. Great quantities of gun powder are every day carried clandestinely away from the magazines by the disaffected.

Two blacks of consequence passed through Dijon on the 14th, under the escort of a captain of Gendarmerie, who was conducting them to Besançon; it is presumed, they were of the number of Toussaint's superior officers.

Madame Le Clerc was every day expected at Dijon, in her way to Paris. Orders have been issued to have a guard of honor ready to receive her. This lady, who has all along been one of the most affectionate wives ever known, cut off her hair on the death of her husband, to be bound round his body, and received in return that of the deceased.

Very important changes are effected in the administration at Vienna. The Archduke Lewis is to have the government of Bohemia; the Archduke Victor Antony, the government of the Venetian states; and the Archduke Charles is to assume the title of Prime Minister. The Archduke Regnier is to embrace the ecclesiastical state, in expectation of hereafter being raised to the dignity of Coadjutor of the elector Arch Chancellor and of the Teutonic Grand Master.

The King of Prussia intends visiting his new and former possessions in Westphalia early in the ensuing spring. The cabinet of Berlin proposes to erect a line of fortresses on the frontiers.

From Rastadt, 9th inst. we learn, that it is still in agitation to unite the canton of Lemain, and a part of that of Basle to France.

The Pope held a Secret Consistory on the 20th ult. at which it was proposed to nominate to several episcopal sees in Spain, Portugal, France, Italy, Spanish America, and the East Indies. The College of Cardinals has lost another of its members, in the person of Cardinal Martiniano, Bishop of Velletri.

The Hereditary Prince of Orange has in his new official style, assumed the style and title of reigning Prince of Fulda, Corvey, &c.

General Menou is appointed Director General of Piedmont, in the room of General Jourdan, now a Counsellor of State.

On the 27th of Nov. it was decreed, that every year there shall be produced, at the expence of the French Government, four historical paintings, and two statues. The subject of the paintings shall be some part of the French history, to be fixed on by the French Government. The statues are to represent such Frenchmen as have rendered important services to their country, and the individuals to be thus represented are to be named by the French Government.

Drama at Paris.—Seventeen theatres open their doors every evening for the entertainment of Paris, where the population does not exceed 628,000 souls. It may be calculated that the spectacles of the city occupy, on an average, the leisure of 20,000 individuals, or nearly one thirtieth part of the whole.

From Constantinople, Dec. 8, we learn, that the Reis Effendi has just had two conferences with the English Ambassador; that it was generally believed that it related to the evacuation of Egypt by the English troops;—but that Great Britain before it evacuates that province, demands from the Porte a reimburtement of the expences incurred in conquering Egypt by the English troops, which it makes to amount to 36,000,000 piastres.

DUBLIN, November 27.

INTERESTING CASE.

Thomas Edward Bellamy, found guilty of passing to a Mr. Sparrow, a bill on Messrs. Cox and Greenwood, of London, army agents, for 30l. sterling, with the names of their gentlemen forged, as acceptors to it, was put to the bar to receive sentence. He appeared strongly affected—and holding up a written paper, intreated the court would permit their officer to read it aloud, as from the agitated state of his feelings, he was incapable of addressing the bench himself. The paper, with consent of the court, was read by the acting clerk of the crown. Its contents were to the following effect:

"That the culprit had been justly found guilty of a crime, which distressed in his family, almost unexampled, had, in a moment of despair, compelled him to commit—that he entered the army as commissioned officer in the year 1794, in which he remained in active service, principally in Ireland, till the heads of the late rebellion were crushed—that he became acquainted with his present afflicted wife in this country, and from a mutual attachment which ensued, married her; that a growing family was the consequence, for whose support, he, for a long time, used every honest and active exertion in his power: finding the army too expensive, he quitted his regiment to seek some decent civil employment, the highest object of his ambition.—For this purpose he procured letters of recommendation to Lord Westmorth, and to Mr. Hawkins Brown, in England, a distant relation of his wife. In several applications he made for employment, he uniformly failed, and from his repeated disappointments his family had been involved in new scenes of calamity and distress—he was at length obliged to accept an ensign's commission in a sensible regiment, in which he remained for some time, struggling with fresh trials of adversity, and increasing accumulated debts, which the necessary support of his family induced; when, to avoid the horrors of a prison, which he saw inevitable, he quitted the army again, and was thrown on the world, without a single guinea or a single friend. The distresses of his family were such, that they were obliged to live for a considerable time deprived of all sustenance except what they could derive from scanty and precarious meals of bread and tea—that the last time his wife was so fixed in child-bed, a single shilling she did not possess. Lodging in an obscure garret, she was delivered without surgical aid, and destitute of every species of those conveniences almost indispensable with females in her condition, being herself without clothes, and to procure a covering for her new-born infant, all their resources were exhausted. In this situation his wife and child must inevitably have starved, were it not for the loan of five shillings, which he walked from London to Blackheath to borrow; he made a most solemn appeal to heaven, as to the truth of every particular he stated—and that so far from wishing to exaggerate a single fact, he suppressed many more instances of calamity scarcely to be paralleled, which delicacy forbad him to mention, however excusable the relation of them might be in his present situation—that after the disgrace brot upon himself by this single transaction, life could not be a boon he would be anxious to solicit, but that nature pleased in his breast for a deserving wife and helpless child!—It was not from a principle of ill-timed pride that he was obliged to declare she was a gentlewoman reared in affluence, with refined sentiments and every amiable propensity—she was at present so far advanced in her pregnancy, as to expect to be delivered in February next—he therefore, humbly supplicated the humane interposition of the court, at least to have the execution of his sentence suspended until after that event, as otherwise he had just reason to apprehend that the lives of his unhappy partner, from the state of her spirits, and unborn babe, would also become sacrifices for his crime."

Mr. M'Nally, as counsel for the crown, addressed the court on behalf of his client, Mr. Sparrow, who instructed him to avail himself of the first opportunity of stating to their Lordships, that a sense of public justice alone had compelled him to institute this prosecution; that he felt for this unhappy gentleman's distresses, which he knew to have been such in life as few in life encounter, and that this statement of them was far short of his actual sufferings of his unfortunate family.

At the reading of this calamitous case, their Lordships seemed in a peculiar manner to be struck with that sympathy which the subject had universally excited. Judge Finucane addressed the prisoner in a very feeling style, informed him, that the court felt it their duty not only to forward to government for his Majesty's pardon, the recommendation of the jury in his favor, but the affecting statement of his case, together with the representation which Mr. M'Nally made from the prosecutor—He hoped he would be more fortunate than others in similar circumstances had been, in applying for Royal Mercy in Great Britain, where the crime of forgery is held in particular abhorrence. He exhorted the prisoner, however, to prepare for the worst, and lamented the necessity of pronouncing the fatal sentence of the law, which was death.

The prisoner's whole demeanor was truly affecting. He had the address of a gentleman, and the aspect of one whose heart and feelings were borne down by compunction and adversity.

It will no doubt afford some relief to our readers to learn, that the worthy and benevolent Colonel Latouche, called at the New Prison, Dublin, some days before the execution of Mr. Bellamy, (a gentleman, says an Irish paper, the crime for which he suffered excepted, formed for all the elegant offices of life) and desired to be communicated to Mr. Bellamy, with a view to add to the resignation he shewed to his fate, that he (the Colonel) and his family, would take care that Mr. Bellamy's wife and children should be provided for. On hearing this, Mr. Bellamy uttered with inexpressible joy, an ejaculation of thanks to God, and prayed for blessings on that family, exclaiming, "that now his consolation was complete." He was only 27 years of age, and of very gentlemanly manners.

From a late London Paper

REVENUE.

It is with peculiar satisfaction we learn, that at no preceding period of either Peace or War, was the Revenue of the Kingdom in so flourishing a state as during the present year. The following account will substantiate these assertions.

Exports of British Produce & Manufactures.

1801.	REAL VALUE.
Quarter ending 5th April,	£.4.716.416
Do. ending 5th July,	4,024 414
1802.
Quarter ending 5th April,	8,343.961
Do. ending 5th July,	5.678 446

Exports of Foreign Merchandize.

Quarter ending 5th April,	£1,109.608
Do. ending 5th July,	1,161,814
Gross amount for six months of home and foreign produce,	£3,712,250
1802.
Quarter ending 5th April,	1,782,067
Do. ending 5th July,	1,369,756
Gross amount for six months of home and foreign produce,	£7,174,230

Thus we see that the value of British and Foreign Produce, exported for the last half year, ending the 5th of July, amounts to above Seventeen Millions—a period that comprehends the commencement only of our happy æra of Peace. What may we not expect will be the increase of our commercial prosperity, as Peace continues to expand her golden pinions.

Imports into the Port of London.

Half year, ending 5th of July.	£.4.427,776

From the foregoing statements we may perceive, that the unprecedented largeness of our exports, for the short interval specified, is not the only circumstance in the account that affords cause of proud exultation to every real friend to his country's welfare.

The Excise has been productive in a proportionate degree. During the last two months, it has averaged Two Hundred and Seventy Thousand Pounds per week, being at the rate of above Fourteen Millions a year. We hope this statement will not be prohibited in the French newspapers.

☞ THE Subscriber returns his most sincere thanks to those Gentlemen who have so kindly favored him with their custom and support, and humbly solicits a continuance of their favors.

He requests all those in arrears, either for Newspapers, Books, or otherwise, whose Accounts ought long since to have been paid, to prepare for settlement. Evasive measures (although current) will not be considered by his Correspondents as Cash, or enable him to carry on business with any degree of credit. The articles necessary for Printing, must be paid for at stated periods, either in Cash or good Bills, without which the Press cannot move with its wonted celerity.

Produce will be received as payment from Country Subscribers, if more convenient to themselves.—It is therefore hoped, that the present notice will have the desired effect.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing "the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—803.

At JOHNSTOWN for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

LONDON, December 1.

The Members of the secession who are, it is rumoured, to pass from the opposition side of the House and to join Mr. Addington, are Messrs. Grey, Tierney, and Erskine. Mr. Fox remains neutral, excepting only as to his support of the Peace. Earl Moira, it is understood, is to join the party of the Minister in the House of Lords.

So splendid are the Consular Apartments in the Thuilleries at Paris, that in the bed-room of Bonaparte, an Englishman observed, the only thing that had an appearance rather mean, was the bed-carpet, which was of crimson velvet edged with a deep fringe of gold! The wash hand basin, and every utensil for personal use, was formed in the Grecian taste, and of solid gold. In the Petits Apartments de Madame Bonaparte, is a bathing vessel of silver; the pipes which conduct the water are of the same precious metal, and the cocks of solid gold. If the Consul imitates Alexander in his battles, he does not fail to emulate Solomon in his Palaces.

A new silver coinage has just been issued in France. On one side the figure of Hercules is placed between those of Liberty and Equality, with the surrounding inscription, "Union et force." On the reverse is merely the value of the coin, viz. "5 francs," and underneath, "L'An 11," neatly encircled with a laurel wreath.—"Republique Francaise."—Round the edge are the words, "Garantie Nationale."

Some of the letters add, that Breda, Bergen op zoom, and some other fortresses in Holland, had been taken possession of by the French troops.

January 1.

All doubts whether the Cape has or has not been surrendered, have been removed by a letter we received from Holland this morning.

Our private correspondent at the Hague has informed us, that a letter has been received from the Dutch Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, assuring the government that the colony was restored, as indeed all the other Dutch and French colonies have been, in the most flourishing condition.

A new treaty of amity and commerce, calculated still further to unite the Cabinets of London and Petersburgh, is confidently spoken of.

It was yesterday reported, that Lord Hawkesbury was forthwith to be called up to the House of Peers. If this should turn out to be the fact, it would serve to explain the doubt that hangs over the political arrangements of the day.

January 13.

A letter has been received from our settlements in the Bay of Honduras, to the following effect:—"The Spaniards have suddenly warned the British settlers in the Bay of Honduras and the other parts adjacent, to quit their settlements immediately, adding, that but little time will be granted for carrying this order into full effect; and that orders had already been given for the erection of a large battery, from which force would be used to carry this order into full effect."

The letter concludes by recommending that no more stores be sent to that quarter for the present.

January 14.

A Cabinet Council sat on Friday or Saturday last, on business of great importance, according to the whispers in the upper circles. Whether the subject of its deliberations was intelligence received from Holland, or the news from Honduras, we know not. Important private advices from Holland were received last week, respecting the designs of Bonaparte on that Republic; and we know, the first of the letters from Honduras, which was received in London more than a week ago, has been laid before Ministers.

January 15.

Among other reports, it is said, as soon as Bonaparte shall be declared and established Emperor of the Gauls, he will be divorced from Madame Bonaparte, on the plea of state necessity, namely, that it is necessary to preserve the peace of his Empire that the succession should be settled. With a view of having an heir to the Imperial throne, he will marry a daughter of the Prince of Baden, a most beautiful girl. By this means he will become brother-in-law to the Emperor of Russia, who is married to one of the Princesses of Baden; and through the Wirtemberg family, he will be even related to the King of Great Britain. Bonaparte will royalize himself most wonderfully by this match. With regard to Madame Bonaparte, she will be provided for in the handsomest manner. She will probably be made a Princess, or rather, perhaps a Countess of Liguria, the Valais, or some other little Republic.

A very extraordinary and important article of intelligence has been received from Milan. It states, that after the departure of the King of Etruria, a Tuscan deputation waited upon the French General Clark, at Florence, to express the wish of the country, that they might be allowed to receive again the Grand Duke, as their Sovereign, or if that could not be complied with, that the First Consul would be pleased to place himself at the head of the Government of Tuscany, in the same manner as he is in the Italian Republic. General Clark is said to have received this deputation very favorably, and to have assured them that he would transmit their wishes to the First Consul. If this intelligence be true, Etruria will either be annexed to France or to the Italian Republic. We recollect that private accounts from Paris some months ago, mentioned the Chief Consul was not satisfied with the conduct of his Etrurian Majesty.

GREENOCK, January 21.

The Porte has received the melancholy news, that the Turkish army in Egypt, which was under the command of the Pacha of Cairo, has been entirely defeated by the Beys. The accounts which the Government and the Embassador Lord Elgin, have received from Egypt, come down as late as the 2d of November, and confirm the intelligence.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 14.

To-day we have received advices from Egypt, that a French frigate and corvette has arrived at Alexandria. On board the frigate was the well-known Colonel Sebastiani, who was lately sent from Paris to Constantinople and Algiers. Immediately after his landing he had a conference with the English General Stewart, to whom he declared, that he had it in commission from the First Consul to enquire into the situation of affairs in Egypt, and that he wished to be informed of the reason why the fulfilment of the Treaty of Amiens, by the evacuation of Egypt by the British troops, was delayed?

To this General Stewart answered, that political zealous and motives were no part of his business; that he waited for orders from his Government, and when they arrived he should obey them.

Citizen Sebastiani immediately dispatched the corvette to France, with the answer of the English General, and proceeded himself to Cairo.

GIBRALTAR, November 3.

Yesterday being the Anniversary of his Royal Highness the Duke of Kent's Birth-day, it was celebrated with uncommon demonstrations of joy by all ranks of people here. Numerous entertainments were given on the occasion, and in the evening the whole town was illuminated, with a degree of splendor never before remembered; every individual seemed to vie in their endeavours to manifest their affection for a Prince under whose mild government and fostering hand this place bids fair to attain a degree of prosperity superior to any thing it has ever hitherto experienced.

The conduct of his Royal Highness since his arrival among us, has been marked with great judgment, moderation and integrity; and no means could have been adopted so likely to contribute to the welfare of the town, as the measures pursued by him. Every inhabitant, whilst obedient to the laws, now enjoys all the freedom and protection he could wish, and is subject to no constraints but such as are unavoidable in every garrison town.

Passports to travel into Spain or Barbary, either for business or pleasure, can at all times be obtained, signed by his Royal Highness himself, without delay, or without any fees of office being taken, as was the custom formerly.

The trade of this place has been freed from all restraints, and wisely left to its own natural channel, as the most likely means of promoting its increase. Permits for loading or shipping goods are indeed required, to ascertain the annual amount of the exports and imports, but they can always be had, gratis, at the Secretary's Office, the instant they are applied for.

The beneficial consequences of his Royal Highness's Government have already strongly manifested themselves in an astonishing increase in the value of landed property, and the avidity with which people from all quarters solicit permission to settle here; and such are the happy effects of a free Government, when administered with justice, that on this barren rock there is not a foot of ground in the town fit to build upon, that does not bear at least double the price the same quantity of ground would sell for in the neighbourhood of Grosvenor-Square.

IN TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the great seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed :—Witness our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire our Lieutenant Governor of our said province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this ELEVENTH Day of APRIL, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and forty-third of our reign. Proclamation

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them ; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard ; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years ; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all ; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1809.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1809.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1809.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1809.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1809.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1809.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1809—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1809.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Case heard and decided upon; but that after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Parties who shall then neglect to bring in their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grosly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

LONDON, February 9.

The Moniteur of the 5th, contains an official paragraph, which, to those which know the fact, will excite considerable surprize. It is a statement that on the news of Le Clerc's death and the neceſſity of reinforcements, no leſs than 60,000 veterans volunteered to go to St. Domingo. Theſe brave veterans formerly were quit for the thanks of the government, as it ſeems 15,000 men have already failed. The veterans appear to have been much leſs alarmed at the news from St. Domingo than the Conſcripts, who, by the accounts in the Moniteur a few days ago, had ſhewn no ſmall averſion to Weſt-India ſervice.

Citizen Briſt, ex-deputy of the Council of Five Hundred, is appointed Commiſſary General of the Iſle of Elba.

The Emperor of Ruſſia has given orders for equipping two veſſels to ſail in a few weeks on a voyage of diſcovery. The object of this voyage is particularly to make diſcoveries on the northern coaſts of Aſia and America.

Admiral De Winter is to go to Liſbon after a ſhort ſtay at Toulon, about the beginning of February; there he is to finiſh his cruiſe, and to return home—He obſerves that the coaſts of Italy are entirely abandoned by the Barbary pirates. The Batavian flag has been highly diſtinguiſhed by the Archipelago.

There is a report in the Italian papers, that unleſs the Britiſh troops immediately evacuate Malta, freſh troops were to march to Naples. It is by no means improbable that the French would employ ſome method of this kind to compel us to abandon their deſtined prey. We do not believe, however, that any ſuch meaſure was in contemplation. Naples is too nearly connected with the imperial family, to be at this moment attacked.

February 7.

A letter from Vienna ſtates, that a Courier had paſſed through that city, on his way to Conſtantinople, with inſtructions to General Brune to demand of the Porte that it ſhould cauſe Egypt to be evacuated by the Engliſh.

It is ſaid that Sir Sidney Smith and another gentleman, are ſhortly to be ſent to Egypt with a ſpecial commiſſion.

M. Otto has, it is ſaid, declined the Embaſſy to the United ſtates of America, in conſequence of which General Bernadotte has been appointed in his ſtead, who will ſet out immediately.

February 10.

The trial of the other priſoners finiſhed at eight this morning, when the following were found guilty: John Francis, John Wood, Thos. Broughton, Thomas Newman, Daniel Tindall, James Sedgwick Wrantten, William Lander, Arthur Graham, John M'Namara.

Col. Deſpard was brought into Court, and ſentence paſſed upon him, and the other 9 convicted. A few minutes after 3 o'clock the Court broke up.

Jan. 27. The following is at preſent the military poſition of the French in Switzerland:—Gen. Nay, Commander in Chief and French Miniſter, with 2000 men in the city of Berne, 1000 more in its dependencies; General Serrars, with 2000 men in the Canton of Lucerne; General Boneau, with 4000 men in the Canton of Zurich, 4000 more in the Pays de Vaud, and 2000 in the North of Switzerland; ſingle battalions occupy Baſle, Friburgh, and Soleure; and the Helvetic troops are under the direction of the French, and chiefly employed in levying contributions.

Numberleſs applications for legal paſſports are made every day to Citizen Mour, miniſter for foreign relations at Berne. Amongſt others were preferred, on the 13th of this month, applications from four families of the Pays de Vaud, who are leaving their country for America. In the number were heads of families of both ſexes, of the age of ſixty.

The Chamber of Commerce of Hull has, to the ſurpriſe of the mercantile and ſhipping intereſts, ſignified that it is adverſe to any abolition of the Tonnage Duty.

February 1.

There is certainly a negociation relating to the final and ſatisfactory adjuſtment of objects which have been rather vaguely arranged by the treaty of Amiens, now on the tapis between our government and that of France. The return of Mr. Benjaſield, from Paris, has not, we learn, been cauſed by ill health; he was charged with important diſpatches for Lord Hawkeſbury, and the ſubject of them was diſcuſſed in a Cabinet Council, held laſt Saturday.

Both Houſes of Parliament will meet this week, more pro forma, than for the diſpatch of important buſineſs—One of the principal attacks to be brought forward by the Grenville party, will, it is underſtood, relate to the finance of the country. An attempt is to be made to refute Mr. Addington's late ſtatement reſpecting the flouriſhing ſituation of our revenue and commerce.

A violent eruption lately proceeded from Mount Ætna, which cauſed much damage in the neighbouring country of Catania, and much terror in Meſſina.

The Britannia, of Liverpool, from Demerara, with 200 of the 21th Weſt-India regiment on board, was wrecked the 23d of Dec. on Hog-John Point.—All the lives, ſhip and cargo, loſt.

The Legiſlature of Nova-Scotia have enacted, that any perſon convicted of ſtealing from any veſſel wrecked on the coaſt of that province or the Iſle of Sable, or of obſtructing any perſon of ſuch veſſel in attempting to ſave his life, ſhall ſuffer death. They have alſo declared it felony, without benefit of clergy, for any perſon willfully to caſt away or deſtroy a veſſel.

From the Baltimore Federal Gazette.

A very important, and no leſs ſingular than important, occurrence took place at the Cape of Good Hope, previous to the ſailing of the ſhip Portſmouth, which arrived on the 15th inſt. and it is not a little ſurpriſing that it ſhould not have been tranſmitted a little ſooner to the public. We have it upon the beſt authority, that although the Dutch governor was by capitulation to have had poſſeſſion of the Cape on the 18th of January, the Britiſh troops had, notwithſtanding, poſſeſſion of the place at the time of the Portſmouth's ſailing.

The circumſtances were theſe:—The commander of the Britiſh forces had propoſed that the Dutch governor ſhould take poſſeſſion of the forts and works on the 20th of December. As, however, the firſt day of the New Year was at hand, the latter preferred poſtponing to that day, expecting probably that the feſtivity of the moment would give an eclat to his new government among the peoples. In the mean time, the Britiſh troops, to the number of 1600, had all embarked, except one company left on ſhore as a reſerve guard, and to take care of the works till the Dutch, who were then landing, to the number of 2500, ſhould march into them. As fate would have it, however, on the night of the 31ſt of December, a veſſel arrived with diſpatches from England, enjoining it upon Gen. Dundas, if he had not ſurrendered the place to the Dutch, to retain poſſeſſion of it. A great buſtle immediately took place in the fleet; and early on the morning of the 1ſt of January, the day when the Dutch troops were to have entered the works, the Britiſh forces were ſeen debarking with all the expedition in their power, and marching with fixed bayonets back again to the fortifications, of which they took poſſeſſion, and kept out the Dutch. This manœuvre occaſioned, it may be ſuppoſed, no ſmall conſternation to the Dutch governor, whoſe imprudent procraſtination may be attended with the final loss of the colony to his country.

How far this occurrence may have connection with the recent declaration of war by Algiers against France, and be the precursor of a renewal of hostilities in Europe, is left to the speculation of our readers.

POETRY.

FROM THE BOSTON WEEKLY MUSEUM.

THE EYE.

WHEN the tongue dares not speak, not cold language impart,
Each tender emotion that glows in the heart,
When the whole look be mute, that the bosom beat high,
How expressively eloquent then is the Eye.

The letter may paint forth a moment of mirth,
Elegize or loosen the flame to rehearse;
I with neither (excuse me) poem, nor
I read volumes at once in a glance of the Eye.

When Phillida sings, and the dulcet strain drown
From each auditor's lips unbounded applause,
I envy her not, not to rival her try,
When I fing my reward in a glance of the Eye.

In whatever I fay, in whatever I do,
This fliftful reward I keep in my view,
And when I do right, how delighted am I,
To read approbation in ——— 's Eye.

When the glafs paffes round, and the fpirits are gay,
When on Pleafure's light pinions old times flit away,
I juft touch the glafs, but I pafs the wine by,
I drink draughts of delight from a glance of the Eye.

'Tis my hearty confolation, my joy and delight,
Its memory oft cheers the drear hour of night,
But whither for comfort or joy fhall I fly,
When unkindness no more by a glance fram the Eye ?

[The following beautiful Lines, tranflated from the German of LESSING, are extracted from the Port. Folio.]

I ASK'D my fair, one happy day,
What I fhould call her in my lays—
By what fweet name, from Rome or Greece,
Thalestris, Delia, Chloris, Lesbia, Lalage, Delia, Doris,
Dorothea, or Lucatee?

Ah! replied the gentle fair,
Beloved, what are names but air?
Take thou whatever fuits the line,
Celia, Amaryllis, Chloris,
Lalage, Lesbia, Delia, Doris,
But don't forget to call me—thine.

INK.—Mr. W. CLOSE has made a great variety of experiments, in order to afcertain the beft method of making Ink, which fhall not be difcharged by time or chemical proceffes, as the refult of his enquiries, he recommends for Black Ink—"2 Oil of lavender 200 grains, copal in powder 96 grains, lamp black from two and a half to three grains: with the affiftance of a gentle heat diffolve the copal in the oil of lavender, in a fmall glafs phial, and then mix the lamp black with the folution upon a marble flab or other fmooth furface." The compofition is to be put in a bottle, and kept from the air. If, after a few hours, it be found too thick, it muft be diluted with a little oil of lavender, oil of turpentine, or alchol. For Red Ink—"Take of oil of lavender 120 grains, copal powder 17 grains, red fulphuret of mercury 60 grains." Both thefe compofitions poffefs a permanent colour; the oil of lavender being diffipated with a gentle heat, colour is left on the paper furrounded with copal, a fubftance infoluble in water, fpirits, acids, or alkaline folutions. A manufcript written with them, may therefore be expected to the procefs commonly ufed for reftoring the colour of printed books, without the fmalleft injury to the writing; and, in this manner all interpolitions with common Ink may be removed. [Lond. Pap.]

A RECENT INVENTION

FOR RENEWING THE VIGOUR OF FRUIT-TREES.

A compofition has been invented for regenerating fruit trees, by which they will bear fruit of the moft delicious flavor. This compofition has alfo been applied to oaks and other timber. An experiment has been recently made upon a particular cherry tree in Kenfington Gardens, from which his Majefty remembered to have gathered cherries when very young, of the flavor of which he was very fond. This tree, which had been brought into England in the reign of King William, had borne very little fruit, and appeared almoft dead. It was, by the King of England's command, dug round, and one or two roots, with a piece of the bark about three inches in breadth, were found alive. By cutting away the decayed parts and applying the compofition to the found, this tree in three years bore as well as any other tree in the garden, and the fruit was of a moft delicious flavor, and appeared remarkably fine.

The inventor of the above is a Mr. Forfythe, who has got from the S. A. Four Thoufand Guineas for the invention. The whole is communicated to the public in a book written by Mr. F. and now in the poffeffion of many gentlemen in America.

Latest Intelligence.

[Received at New-York, by the arrival of the ship Two Friends, Captain Vose, in 29 days from London.]

EXECUTION OF THE CONSPIRATORS.

Yesterday morning at four o'clock, the drum beat at the Horse Guards, as a signal for the cavalry to assemble, and no less than four regiments of different descriptions are stated to have shortly after assembled. As soon as day light appeared the military took their different stations.—Two troops of horse were stationed at the Obelisk. Others intended the roads from the Obelisk to the Elephant and Castle, and down the Borough road. About five o'clock the populace began to pour in numbers along the Westminster and City Roads to Horsemonger-lane, and by six the lane was completely crowded. There were few houses in front of the prison, but of them, however, were filled with spectators.—The Dyer's Ground to the left of the prison were gradually filled, till at last all the parts that had a view of the scaffold were completely crammed. We suppose that 20,000 persons might be assembled. At five o'clock St. George's bell began to toll, and continued for about an hour. At half past six the prison bell rang, the signal for the unlocking of the cells. Mr. Wintworth, the clergyman of the prison, and Mr. Griffith, the Roman Catholic Priest, the same gentleman who attended Quigley when he was executed, came to the prison, and were immediately admitted to the prisoners. At seven o'clock 6 of the prisoners, Broughton, Francis, Graham, Wood, & Wintworth, went into the chapel; Colonel Despard refused to attend, remaining in his cell; and Macnamara, being a Roman Catholic, prayed in his cell with the Friests. The five former conducted themselves with much decorum in the chapel. They attended to the prayers with great earnestness, but at the same time without seeming to lose that firmness which they had displayed since their trial. Before they received the sacrament, four of them confessed they had done wrong, but not to the extent charged against them in the evidence. The fifth, Graham, said, he was innocent of the charges brought against him; but that he had attended two meetings, the second at the instigation of Francis. It was Emblyn, he added, who called on him, to take him to the meeting, by Francis's desire. For some time the Clergyman resisted to administer the sacrament to Francis, because he persisted in declaring that he had been guilty of no crime. The Clergyman said to him, "You admit you attended meetings." He replied, "Yes." "You know they were for the purpose of overturning the Constitution and Government of the Country. I by no means wish you to enter into acknowledge generally." Francis then smiled, and answered, "Ladmit I have done wrong in attending those meetings." The Clergyman then asked each of them "how they found themselves?" Francis, Wood, Broughton, and Wintworth, replied, "they were never happier in their lives." Graham remained silent. The sacrament was then administered to them. The service in the chapel lasted three quarters of an hour. Before it was over, Colonel Delpard and Macnamara were brought down from their cells. Their irons were knocked off, and their arms and hands bound with ropes. Delpard walked up and down before the chapel door, but did not enter the chapel. Macnamara walked about in earnest conversation with the Roman Catholic Priest, and with a book in his hand. Whilst Despard was at the door of the chapel, the High Sheriff, Mr. Peppen, addressed himself very humanely to him, and asked him if he could render him any service? The Colonel thanked him, and replied that he could not. The Sheriff added something in a low tone of voice, which we believe, but are not quite certain, related to Mrs. Delpard. Whilst the Clergyman was gone out of the chapel to prepare for the sacrament, the five prisoners in the chapel rose, on hearing the Colonel's irons being knocked off near the door. They asked each other "Where is he?" and seemed anxious to see him. After they had received the sacrament they were brought out of the chapel, and their irons were knocked off. The execution then tied their arms and hands in the same manner as he had before bound Colonel Delpard and Macnamara.

Notice was then given to the Sheriff that they were ready. Colonel Delpard who stood the first, retired behind, and made a motion to Francis, who was making way for him, to go before him. The hurdle had been previously prepared in the outer court-yard. It is the body of a small cart, on which two trusses of clean straw are laid. It was drawn by two horses. The procession moved in the following order:—

The Sheriff of Surrey.
The Clergyman in his robes.
Mr. Ives, the keeper, with a white wand.
High Constable,
Other Constables,
The Executioner with a drawn sword.

Macnamara and Graham were first put into the hurdle, & drawn to the Lodge where the inner gates were opened, and they were conveyed to the Scaffold, that leads up to the Gallows. The hurdle then returned and brought Broughton and Francis.

Then Wood and Francis.

Last of all Colonel Delpard was put to to Graham.

Macnamara formed Latent upon the book in his hand. Graham remained silent. Broughton just said how the hurdle shifted, and looked up to the Scaffold. Wood and Francis both smiled, and all of them, throughout the awful scene with much composure. Delpard took hands with a gentleman, as he got into the hurdle, and looked up to the Scaffold with a smile on his face as they had all been instructed in the hurdle to the hurdle that leads to the scaffold, they were removed by one by one in the order before mentioned.—The Sheriff, Sir Richard Ford, the Clergyman, Mr. Wintworth, the Roman Catholic Clergyman, Mr. Griffith, preceding them. Seven coffins, of sheets, which had been previously placed in a room under the scaffold, were brought up and placed on the platform on which the drop is erected. A bag of saw-dust, to catch the blood when the heads were severed from their bodies, was placed before them. The block was near the scaffold. There were nearly one hundred persons on the platform, including the magistrates and officers. The greatest order and silence was observed.

As soon as the prisoners were placed on the hurdles, St. George's bell tolled for half an hour. It was nearly three quarters full eight, when the first procession was brought up to the scaffold, the rest followed slowly. When the cord was fastened round the neck of the first, the second was brought up, and so on till the cord was round the neck of all the sufferers. Macnamara and the first brought up a book in his hand, and when the cap was placed round his neck, he continued with the greatest devotion, "Lord Jesus have mercy upon me. Christ Jesus look down with pity upon me." Graham came second. He looked pale and ghastly, but spoke not. Wretches was the third; he ascended the scaffold with much firmness.—Brought on the fourth, fainted as he ran up the scaffold stairs, but as soon as the rope was fastened round his neck, he turned pale and fainted no more. He joined in prayer with much earnestness.—Wood was the fifth, Francis the sixth. Francis ascended the scaffold with a composure which he preserved to the last.—Wood and Broughton were equally composed. Of all of them Francis was the best looking, tall, handsome and well made. He and Wood were dressed in the uniform of the Foot Guards, and Francis, when he came on the scaffold, had on his full regimental cap. The rest were in colored clothes.—Colonel Despard was brought up the last, dressed in boots, a dark brown great coat and red waistcoat, his hair unpowdered.—He had previously desired to speak with the Sheriff and Sir Richard Ford, to whom he communicated his wish to address the spectators. They told him they had not the least objection to his carrying that wish into effect. The Colonel ascended the scaffold with great firmness. His countenance underwent not the slightest change while the awful ceremony of fastening the rope round his neck, and placing the cap on his head, was performing. He looked at the multitude assembled with perfect calmness. The Clergy—— who attended the scaffold after the prisoners were tied up, spoke to him a few words as he passed. The

the place of execution at a very early hour in the morning. About six the Horse Guards fell into rank, and marched to the place of execution. The Bow-street mounted troops, a strong body of constables, took their stations in the avenues leading to the scaffold, while a long train of carriages, filled with distinguished company, were admitted to inclose the area. At half past seven o'clock Mr. Jervis arrived at Newgate, and soon after the Sheriffs, attended by their officers, proceeded to the room where the unfortunate men were confined, and demanded them of the Keeper. They were brought down stairs, and placed in the carriages, attended by the Ordinary, Mr. Cotton, and Mr. Wontner, the Governor's secretary. A procession of Horse Guards, with a kettle-drum and trumpet, then, amid the loud acclamations of the populace, proceeded to the Old Bailey, where they were joined by the Sheriffs' officers, and the whole proceeded at a slow pace to Tyburn. The Sheriffs' carriages were followed by those of the Aldermen, and other distinguished persons. On the road, one of the Sheriffs' carriages broke down, and another division of the Horse Guards was ordered to attend the procession. The whole formed an interesting and impressive spectacle to a humane mind. Proclamation

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued, for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all: So that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the refpective Diftricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Cauſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt and Intitled to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

AN ACT

For the better preventing of Clandeſtine Marriages.

'WHEREAS great miſchiefs and inconveniences have ariſen from clandeſtine marriages;' for preventing thereof for the future, Be it enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the advice and conſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the authority of the ſame, That from and after the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and fifty-four, all banns of matrimony ſhall be publiſhed in an audible manner in the Pariſh Church, or, in ſome public Chapel, in which public Chapel banns of matrimony have been uſually publiſhed, of or belonging to ſuch Pariſh or Chapelry wherein the perſons to be married ſhall dwell, according to the form of words preſcribed by the rubrick prefixed to the office of matrimony in the Book of Common Prayer, upon three Sundays preceding the ſolemnization of marriage, during the time of morning ſervice, or of evening ſervice (if there be no morning ſervice in ſuch Church or Chapel upon any of thoſe Sundays) immediately after the ſecond leſſon: And whenſoever it ſhall happen that the perſons to be married ſhall dwell in divers Pariſhes or Chapelries, the banns ſhall in like manner be publiſhed in the Church or Chapel belonging to ſuch Pariſh or Chapelry, wherein each of the ſaid perſons ſhall dwell; and where both or either of the perſons to be married ſhall dwell in any extraparochial place, (having no Church or Chapel wherein banns have been uſually publiſhed) then the banns ſhall in like manner be publiſhed in the Pariſh Church or Chapel belonging to ſome Pariſh or Chapelry adjoining to ſuch extraparochial place: And where banns ſhall be publiſhed in any Church or Chapel belonging to any Pariſh adjoining to ſuch extraparochial place, the Parſon, Vicar, Miniſter or Curate, publiſhing ſuch banns, ſhall, in writing under his hand, certify the publication thereof in ſuch manner as if either of the perſons to be married dwelt in ſuch adjoining Pariſh; and that all other the rules preſcribed by the ſaid rubrick concerning the publication of banns, and the ſolemnization of matrimony, and not hereby altered, ſhall be duly obſerved; and that in all caſes where banns ſhall have been publiſhed, the marriage ſhall be ſolemnized in one of the Pariſh Churches or Chapels where ſuch banns have been publiſhed, and in no other place whatſoever.

II. Provided always, and it is hereby further enacted, That no Parſon, Vicar, Miniſter or Curate ſhall be obliged to publiſh the banns of matrimony between any perſons whatſoever, unleſs the perſons to be married ſhall, ſeven days at the leaſt before the time required for the firſt publication of ſuch banns reſpectively, deliver or cauſe to be delivered to ſuch Parſon, Vicar, Miniſter or Curate, a notice in writing of their true Chriſtian and Surnames, and of the houſe or houſes of their reſpective abodes within ſuch Pariſh, Chapelry or extraparochial place as aforeſaid, and of the time during which they have dwelt, inhabited or lodged in ſuch houſe or houſes reſpectively.

III. Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That no Parſon, Miniſter, Vicar or Curate ſolemnizing marriages after the twenty-fifth day of March, one thouſand ſeven hundred and fifty four, between perſons, both or one of whom ſhall be under the age of twenty one years, after banns publiſhed, ſhall be puniſhable by Eccleſiaſtical cenſures, for ſolemnizing ſuch marriages without conſent of parents or guardians, whoſe conſent is required by law, unleſs ſuch Parſon, Miniſter, Vicar or Curate ſhall have notice of the diſſent of ſuch parent or guardians; and in caſe ſuch parents or guardians, or one of them, ſhall openly and publicly declare, or cauſe to be declared in the Church or Chapel where the banns ſhall be ſo publiſhed, at the time of ſuch publication, his, her, or their diſſent to ſuch marriage, ſuch publication of banns ſhall be abſolutely void.

IV. And it is hereby further enacted, That no licence of marriage ſhall, from and after the ſaid twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thouſand ſeven hundred and fifty-four, be granted by any Archbiſhop, Biſhop, or other ordinary or perſon having authority to grant ſuch licences, to ſolemnize any marriage in any other Church or Chapel, than in the Pariſh Church or public Chapel of or belonging to the Pariſh or Chapelry, within which the uſual place of abode of one of the perſons to be married, ſhall have been for the ſpace of four weeks immediately before the granting of ſuch licence; or where both or either of the parties to be married, ſhall dwell in any extraparochial place, having no Church or Chapel wherein banns have been uſually publiſhed, then in the Pariſh Church or Chapel belonging to ſome Pariſh or Chapelry adjoining to ſuch extraparochial place, and in no other place whatſoever.

V. Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That all Pariſhes where there ſhall be no Pariſh Church or Chapel belonging thereto, or none wherein Divine Service ſhall be uſually celebrated every Sunday, may be deemed extraparochial places for the purpoſes of this Act, but not for any other purpoſe.

VI. Provided always, That nothing herein before contained ſhall be conſtrued to extend to deprive the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his ſucceſſors, and his and their proper officers, of the right which hath hitherto been uſed, in virtue of a certain Statute made in the twenty-fifth year of the reign of the late King Henry the Eighth, intituled, An Act concerning Peter Pence and Diſpenſations; of granting special licences to marry at any convenient time or place.

VII. Provided always, and be it enacted, That from and after the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, no Surrogate deputed by any Ecclesiastical Judge, who hath power to grant licences of marriage, shall grant any such licence before he hath taken an oath before the said Judge faithfully to execute his office, according to law, to the best of his knowledge, and hath given security by his bond in the sum of one hundred pounds to the Bishop of the diocese, for the due and faithful execution of his said office.

VIII. And whereas many persons do solemnize matrimony in Prisons and other places without publication of banns or licence of marriage first had and obtained; Therefore, for the prevention thereof, Be it enacted, That if any person shall, from and after the said twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty four, solemnize matrimony in any other place than a Church or public Chapel, where banns have been usually published, unless by special licence from the Archbishop of Canterbury; or shall solemnize matrimony without publication of banns, unless licence of marriage be first had and obtained from some person or persons having authority to grant the same, every person knowingly and wilfully so offending, and being lawfully convicted thereof, shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and shall be transported to some of his Majesty's Plantations in America for the space of fourteen years, according to the laws in force for transportation of felons; and all marriages solemnized from and after the twenty fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, in any other place than a Church or such public Chapel, unless by special licence as aforesaid, or that shall be solemnized without publication of banns, or licence of marriage from a person or persons having authority to grant the same first had and obtained, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

IX. Provided, That all prosecutions for such felony shall be commenced within the space of three years after the offence committed.

X. Provided always, That after the solemnization of any marriage, under a publication of banns, it shall not be necessary, in support of such marriage, to give any proof of the actual dwelling of the parties in the respective Parishes or Chapelries wherein the banns of matrimony were published; or where the marriage is by licence, it shall not be necessary to give any proof that the usual place of abode of one of the parties, for the space of four weeks as aforesaid, was in the Parish or Chapelry where the marriage was solemnized; nor shall any evidence in either of the said cases be received to prove the contrary in any suit touching the validity of such marriage.

XI. And it is hereby further enacted, That all marriages solemnized by licence, after the said twenty fifth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and fifty four, where either of the parties, not being a widower or widow, shall be under the age of twenty-one years, which shall be had without the consent of the father of such of the parties, so under age (if then living) first had and obtained, or if dead, of the guardian or guardians of the person of the party so under age, lawfully appointed, or one of them; and in case there shall be no such guardian or guardians, then of the mother (if living and unmarried) or if there shall be no mother living and unmarried, then of a guardian or guardians of the person appointed by the Court of Chancery; shall be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

XII. And whereas it may happen, 'that the guardian or guardians, mother or mothers, of the parties to be 'married, or one of them, so under 'age as aforesaid, may be Non compos mentis, or may be in parts beyond the 'seas, or may be induced unreasonably, and by undue motives to abuse 'the trust reposed in him, her, or 'them, by refusing or with holding 'his, her, or their consent to a pro'per marriage;' Be it therefore enacted, That in case any such guardian or guardians, mother or mothers, or any of them, whose content is made necessary as aforesaid, shall be Non compos mentis, or in parts beyond the seas, or shall refuse or with-hold his, her, or their consent to the marriage of any person, it shall and may be lawful for any person desirous of marrying, in any of the before-mentioned cases, to apply by petition to the Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal of Great Britain for the time being, who is and are hereby impowered to proceed upon such petition, in a summary way; and in case the marriage propoted shall upon examination appear to be proper, the said Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal for the time being, shall judicially declare the same to be so by an order of Court, and such order shall be deemed and taken to be as good and effectual to all intents and purposes, as if the guardian or guardians, or mother of the person so petitioning, had consented to such marriage.

XIII. And it is hereby further enacted, That in no case whatsoever shall any suit or proceeding be had in any Ecclesiastical Court, in order to compel a celebration of any marriage in facie Ecclesiæ, by reason of any contract of matrimony whatsoever, whether per verba de præsenti, or per verba de futuro, which shall be entered into after the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

XIV. And for preventing undue entries and abuses in registers of marriages; Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on or before the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, and from time to time afterwards as there shall be occasion, the Churchwardens and Chapel-wardens of every Parish or Chapelry shall provide proper books of vellum, or good and durable paper, in which all marriages and banns of marriage respectively, there published or solemnized, shall be registered, and every page thereof shall be marked at the top, with the figure of the number of every such page, beginning at the second leaf with number one; and every leaf or page to numbered, shall be ruled with lines at proper and equal distances from each other, or as near as may be; and all banns and marriages published or celebrated in any Church or Chapel, or within any such Parish or Chapelry, shall be respectively entered, registered, printed, or written upon or as near as conveniently may be to such ruled lines, and shall be signed by the Parson, Vicar, Minister or Curate, or by some other person in his presence, and by his direction; and such entries shall be made as aforesaid, on or near such lines in succesive order, where the paper is not damaged or decayed, by accident or length of time, until a new book shall be thought proper or necessary to be provided for the same purposes, and then the directions aforesaid shall be observed in every such new book; and all books provided as aforesaid shall be deemed to belong to every such Parish or Chapel respectively, and shall be carefully kept and preserved for public use.

XV. And in order to preserve the evidence of marriages, and to make the proof thereof more certain and easy, and for the direction of Ministers in the celebration of marriages and registering thereof, Be it enacted, That from and after the twenty fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, all marriages shall be solemnized in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, besides the Minister who shall celebrate the same; and that immediately after the celebration of every marriage, an entry thereof shall be made in such register to be kept as aforesaid; in which entry or register it shall be expressed, That the said marriage was celebrated by banns or licence; and if both or either of the parties married by licence, be under age, with consent of the parents or guardians, as the case shall be; and shall be signed by the Minister with his proper addition, and also by the parties married, and attested by such two witnesses; which entry shall be made in the form or to the effect following; that is to say,

A. B. of [the / this] Parish and C. D. of [the / this] Parish

Letters from Hague mention, that M. Schimmelpenninck, the Ambassador to our Court, has received instructions relative to the negociation of a Commercial Treaty between this country and Holland. The Dutch are also negociating a Treaty of Commerce with the French. At present the duties upon goods exported from Holland to France are enormously high, and the Dutch have almost abandoned the Commercial Navigation of the Rhine, on account of the extraordinary custom duties demanded by France. That navigation is now almost wholly in the hands of the Prussians, who are more favoured than the Dutch.

This report is not entitled to much credit. The instructions taken out by the Donnegal could only be communicated to the Admiral on that station, and were certainly unknown to the Captain and Officers of the ship. NEW-YORK, April 2.

ROBBERY.

The following interesting account of a most barbarous and atrocious robbery has been communicated for publication by a respectable gentleman from Wilkinsport, Pennsylvania.

The unhappy sufferer is a young lady, about eighteen years of age, by the name of Esther M'Dowell. The history of her misfortune is thus related by our correspondent.

Miss M'Dowell is the daughter and only child of Dr. John M'Dowell, who, about three years since, removed from Montreal to Kentucky, where he has purchased an estate. He left this daughter to reside with an aged aunt who has since died and left her niece heir to a considerable property. Upon the death of her aunt, the young lady expressed to her father a wish to remove and reside with her parents in Kentucky. Accordingly he sent a man, who had been brought up from infancy in his family, and in whose fidelity and honor he had the most implicit confidence, to conduct her home. She proceeded with him from Montreal, and arrived in the neighbourhood of Williamsport on Monday evening the 21st of March last. During the day the villain had taken pains to avoid observation as much as possible, by leaving the public road and passing through obscure and unfrequented paths. They continued to travel till about ten o'clock in the evening, when he suddenly dismounted, dragged the lady from her horse, and presenting a pistol to her breast, demanded her money, and threatened to murder her if she attempted to give an alarm. She implored his mercy, offering him all she possessed upon the condition of sparing her life. At that instant he tore off her bonnet, and gagged her mouth, to prevent her from speaking. He then proceeded to strip her of every article of cloathing, and tying her hands behind her, made her fast to a tree while he packed up her apparel in the saddle bags. Having done this, he removed her to a more distant part of the woods and tying her fast to a tree in a close thicket, made off with the horses and all the property that she had with her.

In this deplorable situation she remained entirely naked, exposed to the severe cold of the night until about the break of day, when, by her struggles she loosened herself from the tree, and with much difficulty made her way through the woods to a house about eighty rods distant, where she was kindly received, and supplied with such things as were immediately necessary. It was not until after a considerable time that she was able to speak and relate the particulars of the disaster.

She is now, as our correspondent informs, at the house of the Rev. Isaac Grier, who lives near the place where the inhuman crime was perpetrated.—Though nearly a hundred persons have been engaged in pursuit of the villain, we are sorry to say that no certain intelligence has been obtained. A description of the perpetrator, and of the property lost will be found in the following advertisement:

200 Dollars Reward for apprehending
BENJAMIN CONNET.

He is about 22 years of age [illegible] middle size, swarthy complexion [illegible] long black hair, tied with a ribbon [illegible] a very notable large mole above his left eye-brow, which he takes pains to conceal by suffering his hair to grow long upon his forehead; had on a light coloured great coat, fawn-down jacket, light coloured cassimere pantaloons; took with him two horses, one of which is grey, the other black, and about four years old; a woman's saddle new, with a piece of bear skin fastened to the seat, and two portmanteaus, or saddle-bags, in one of which were upwards of one thousand guineas. He took also a gold watch with the owner's name Esther M'Dowell, at full length on the inside of the case, and the initial letters of her father's name J. M. on the outside.

Any person that will apprehend the villain and secure him, so that he may be brought to justice, shall receive the above reward and all expences paid by ESTHER M'DOWELL.

STATE PRISON, APRIL 5, 1803.

Mr. Coleman,

Agreeably to your request, I send you the following account of the Riot which took place in the Prison.

JOHN PRAY, Keeper.

Monday, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, word was brought to the keeper of the back door, by Jacob Barnet, a convict, that a riot had begun in the yard, and that the prisoners were attempting to scale the walls of the prison; this was communicated to the front, and the alarm bell was rung.—The following are the particulars relating to the riot, as reported by the keepers of the different halls and workshops. Daniel Thorne, keeper of hall No. 5, reports as follows: "That the rioters locked the door leading from the dining hall into the large room, and to prevent the alarm being given at the front, contrived to get the black boy, who was employed there, into the large room; this gave no suspicion, until Donald M'Donald (having on a keeper's watch coat) came to him and said, we are determined to have our liberty, or die in the attempt; therefore, take care of yourself, and make no opposition, and you shall not receive harm, and then called upon some person to take charge of me, upon which two or three persons stepped up and offered their service; these men were friendly, and opposed the rioters."

The keeper was then escorted to the large prison room at the west end of the south wing, where he was defired to remain quiet. Abraham Burlingame, John Hollenbeck, and many other prisoners who refused to join the riotous party, were driven into the room with the keeper, and the rioters (supposed to be about forty in number) remained in possession of the large working hall. Some of these fell back from their purpose, but about thirty repaired to the yard; soon afterwards, some returned from the yard and imperiously commanded every man in the hall to go down and join the disaffected party, but could prevail upon none. Comfort Carpenter, prisoner for life, was seized by two of the rioters, who insisted he should join the party, but he broke their hold, and [illegible] a skirmish of the parties was prevented. Some of the rioters set fire to the beds and bustks in two of the rooms, with intent to burn the prison, which was, however, extinguished by the well-disposed prisoners.

Stephen Baker, keeper in the workshops in the yard, reports as follows—That Donald M'Donald, Benjamin Nicholson, Oliver Sprung, and several others, came into the yard with drawn knives, upon which Jesse Smith, prisoner for life, gave him the alarm: he then repaired to the yard, and addressed the rioters to know their business, upon which they directed him to go with them to hall No. 5; he accompanied them near to the door, and then attempted to go to the front, but was prevented by some of them, who, with dreadful imprecations, threatened his life; he then returned to the shops, which he traversed to the lower end, and was soon after confined with two other keepers, who were forbid to remove from their stations.

After the keepers were confined, the rioters (about twenty) proceeded to erect a scaffold, in order to scale the wall. The alarm at this time became general, the great bell was rung, the centuries fired in the air, and immediately afterwards, the soldiers appeared and repeatedly called on the rioters to desist, but they answered by throwing stones, hammers, &c. upon which the guard fired on them; one man, but not a rioter, was killed on the spot, and four very dangerously wounded; the riot was then quelled, and the rioters retreated to the shops for shelter. Thomas Hartly, a keeper, requested to be heard, and addressed them to the following effect: "Let me entreat you to desist from further violence; consider the danger you are in; you are spoiling away your lives as of no value; see that poor unhappy being, who is now apparently breathing his last, and who was with you a few minutes ago; put a stop to your hazardous attempt now, and it may be a means of alleviating your future punishment."

The bell in the yard, which is used every evening to call in the prisoners, was soon after rung, when the prisoners repaired to their different halls, and quietly suffered themselves to be locked in their rooms.

Thomas Hartly further reports, that Daniel Smith threatened to take his life, but Maffenburg stepped up and declared he would protect him, and that he would risk his life in his defence.—He adds, that James Weatherly, a prisoner for life, gave him the first intimation of the riot.

John Bailey, keeper in the workshops, reports, that three of the convicts, viz. Daniel Callahan, George Thompson, and James Dougherty, told him that they would stand by him, and as far as was in their power, prevent him from receiving any injury.

The rioters called on the men in the lower shops to join them, who all refused, except John Smith, John Farmer, William Merchant, and Felix Connor, and remained remarkably peaceable and quiet, and offered freely to protect the keepers—Connor was violently outrageous.

The following prisoners set fire to the prison:—Oliver Sprung, William Straight, and Moody Duston.

Isaac Lytle, jun. a flipper-maker in the work shops in the yard, went to shops, merely from curiosity, and was there killed on the spot. He was uniformly a well behaved man, and did not discover the least disposition to join the riot, or to have any kind of concern with the rioters.

Henry Maffenburgh, John Farmer, Jedediah Gilbert, and David Brith, were dangerously wounded, and Farmer died this morning.

On the first notice of the alarm, the assistant keepers were stationed in different parts of the prison, and were exceedingly active and alert throughout the whole, and manifested a steady and firm determination to do their duty.

After making the strictest enquiry, it does not appear that there were more than about fifteen prisoners who came from the south wing, and four or five who joined them from the shops in the yard, who were actively concerned in the riot; although there were in the south wing about ninety men, and in the hops in the yard nearly two hundred.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued till the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in THE Province; but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Courts of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

III. Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That no Parſon, Miniſter, Vicar or Curate ſolemniſing marriages after the twenty-fifth day of March, one thouſand ſeven hundred and fifty four, between perſons, both or one of whom ſhall be under the age of twenty-one years, after banns publiſhed, ſhall be puniſhable by Eccleſiaſtical cenſures, for ſolemniſing ſuch marriages without conſent of parents or guardians, whoſe conſent is required by law, unleſs ſuch Parſon, Miniſter, Vicar or Curate ſhall have notice of the diſſent of ſuch parents or guardians; and in caſe ſuch parents or guardians, or one of them, ſhall openly and publicly declare, or cauſe to be declared in the Church or Chapel where the banns ſhall be ſo publiſhed, at the time of ſuch publication, his, her, or their diſſent to ſuch marriage, ſuch publication of banns ſhall be abſolutely void.

IV. And it is hereby further enacted, That no licence of marriage ſhall, from and after the ſaid twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thouſand ſeven hundred and fifty-four, be granted by any Archbiſhop, Biſhop, or other ordinary or perſon having authority to grant ſuch licences, to ſolemnize any marriage in any other Church or Chapel, than in the Pariſh Church or public Chapel of or belonging to the Pariſh or Chapelry, within which the uſual place of abode of one of the perſons to be married, ſhall have been for the ſpace of four weeks immediately before the granting of ſuch licence; or where both or either of the parties to be married, ſhall dwell in any extraparochial place, having no Church or Chapel wherein banns have been uſually publiſhed, then in the Pariſh Church or Chapel belonging to ſome Pariſh or Chapelry adjoining to ſuch extraparochial place, and in no other place whatſoever.

V. Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That all Pariſhes where there ſhall be no Pariſh Church or Chapel belonging thereto, or none wherein Divine Service ſhall be uſually celebrated every Sunday, may be deemed extraparochial places for the purpoſes of this Act, but not for any other purpoſe.

VI. Provided always, That nothing herein before contained ſhall be conſtrued to extend to deprive the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his ſucceſſors, and his and their proper officers, of the right which hath hitherto been uſed, in virtue of a certain Statute made in the twenty-fifth year of the reign of the late King Henry the Eighth, intituled, An Act concerning Peter Pence and Diſpenſations; of granting special licences to marry, at any convenient time or place.

VII. Provided always, and be it enacted, That from and after the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, no Surrogate deputed by any Ecclesiastical Judge, who hath power to grant licences of marriage, shall grant any such licence before he hath taken an oath before the said Judge faithfully to execute his office, according to law, to the best of his knowledge, and hath given security by his bond in the sum of one hundred pounds to the Bishop of the diocese, for the due and faithful execution of his said office.

VIII. And whereas many persons do solemnize matrimony in Prisons and other places without publication of banns or licence of marriage first had and obtained; Therefore, for the prevention thereof, Be it enacted, That if any person shall, from and after the said twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, solemnize matrimony in any other place than a Church or public Chapel, where banns have been usually published, unless by special licence from the Archbishop of Canterbury; or shall solemnize matrimony without publication of banns, unless licence of marriage be first had and obtained from some person or persons having authority to grant the same, every person knowingly and wilfully so offending, and being lawfully convicted thereof, shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and shall be transported to some of his Majesty's Plantations in America for the space of fourteen years, according to the laws in force for transportation of felons; and all marriages solemnized from and after the twenty fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, in any other place than a Church or such public Chapel, unless by special licence as aforesaid, or that shall be solemnized without publication of banns, or licence of marriage from a person or persons having authority to grant the same first had and obtained, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

XI. And it is hereby further enacted, That all marriages solemnized by licence, after the said twenty fifth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, where either of the parties, not being a widower or widow, shall be under the age of twenty one years, which shall be had without the consent of the father of such of the parties, if under age (if then living) first had and obtained, or if dead, of the guardian or guardians of the person of the party so under age, lawfully appointed, or one of them; and in case there shall be no such guardian or guardians, then of the mother (if living and unmarried) or if there shall be no mother living and unmarried, then of a guardian or guardians of the person appointed by the Court of Chancery; shall be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

XIII. And it is hereby further enacted, That in no case whatsoever shall any suit or proceeding be had in any Ecclesiastical Court, in order to compel a celebration of any marriage in facie Ecclesiæ, by reason of any contract of matrimony whatsoever, whether per verba de præsenti, or per verba de futuro, which shall be entered into after the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

XIV. And for preventing undue entries and abuses in registers of marriages; Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on or before the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, and from time to time afterwards as there shall be occasion, the Churchwardens and Chapel wardens of every Parish or Chapelry shall provide proper books of vellum, or good and durable paper, in which all marriages and banns of marriage respectively, there publish ed or solemnized, shall be registered, and every page thereof shall be marked at the top, with the figure of the number of every such page, beginning at the second leaf with number one; and every leaf or page to numbered, shall be ruled with lines at proper and equal distances from each other, or as near as may be; and all banns and marriages published or celebrated in any Church or Chapel, or within any such Parish or Chapelry, shall be respectively entered, registered, printed, or written upon or as near as conveniently may be to such ruled lines, and shall be signed by the Parson, Vicar, Minister or Curate, or by some other person in his presence, and by his direction; and such entries shall be made as aforesaid, in or near such lines in succession order, where the paper is not damaged or decayed, by accident or length of time, until a new book shall be thought proper or necessary to be provided for the same purposes, and then the directions aforesaid shall be observed in every such new book; and all books provided as aforesaid shall be deemed to belong to every such Parish or Chapel respectively, and shall be carefully kept and preserved for public use.

XV. And in order to preserve the evidence of marriages, and to make the proof thereof more certain and easy, and for the direction of Ministers in the celebration of marriages and registering thereof, Be it enacted, That from and after the twenty fifth day of March, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, all marriages shall be solemnized in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, besides the Minister who shall celebrate the same; and that, immediately after the celebration of every marriage, an entry thereof shall be made in such register to be kept as aforesaid; in which entry or register it shall be expressed, That the said marriage was celebrated by banns or licence; and if both or either of the parties married by licence, be under age, with consent of the parents or guardians, as the case shall be; and shall be signed by the Minister with his proper addition, and also by the parties married, and attested by such two witnesses; which entry shall be made in the form or to the effect following; that is to say,

NEW YORK, April 9.

The ship Washington, capt. Liddle, arrived here yesterday from London, brings papers to the 4th of March.

It is stated, that a Frenchman, by name Bournais, left returned from England, with a number of his accomplices, has been arrested in France, charged with a conspiracy against the government, and to assassinate the Chief Consul. They were sent off from Rouen to Paris, in irons, under a guard of 30 gendarmes.

All officers belonging to the staff of the English army in the West Indies, have been ordered to repair to their respective quarters with all possible dispatch.

A private letter from Paris, mentions, "that all officers of the French army on leave of absence; and all those of that nation in the pay of Spain, have received directions, the former to join their respective regiments immediately, the latter to return to France for the purpose of serving their native land.

Five thousand Polish troops in the French service had arrived at Genoa, to embark for St. Domingo.—Ten thousand more were daily expected for the same service. Great discontent prevailed in the first detachment, and numbers deserted.

Upwards of 100 dwellings, with out houses, and the Parish church, were destroyed by fire at Wardter in Westphalia.

Letters from Dunkirk state, that the epidemic malady which prevail there, is supposed to be the yellow fever, imported from St. Domingo. Three-fourths of the town are ill of the disease. Fourteen or fifteen die daily.

Price of Stocks at London, on the 3d March at 1 o'clock—Consols 73 1-8 1-4. Red shut. Omnium 3 3-4 dif.

☞ The greatest obstacles oppose at this moment thro' the Republican territory, the execution of the laws relative to the conscripts, and great numbers of those who have been called upon to join the armies carrying to conceal themselves, take refuge in other departments, or fly entirely from France.—Many, whose superior circumstances have enabled them to escape from their country, and live independently elsewhere, are now in London. The dread of a campaign in St. Domingo, has been the chief cause of this determined resistance.

Articles of agreement concluded the 30th day of December, 1802, between Colonel Hamilton, deputy quarter master general, and John Pringle, Esq. commissary general, duly authorized for that purpose by their Excellencies Lieutenant General Dundas, and Vice Admiral Sir Roger Curtis, Baronets, on the part of his Britannic Majesty; and Rear Admiral S. Decker, commander in chief of the Batavian fleet for this land forces, and Colonel Henry, commander of the Cape garrison, also duly authorized by his Excellency the Commissary General De Mist, on the part of the Batavian Republic.

Article I. Every thing shall be considered as remaining on the same footing that was discussed by mutual advice this morning before the arrival of the orders of his Britannic Majesty.

Answer.—The Lieutenant Governor agrees to this proposition, without any prejudice, however, to the full exercise of his authority in all points whatever, according to the orders he has received.

Article II. The Commissary General De Mist shall be at liberty to encamp or cantone the Batavian troops in the neighbourhood of Cape Town, and to select for that purpose the most convenient position for the health, safety, and accommodation of their troops.

Answer.—They shall encamp or canton in the neighbourhood of Wynberg, and it is to be understood they are not to move from thence beyond the usual distance allowed in the camp, without the knowledge and concurrence of the Lieutenant Governor.

Article III. Their Excellencies shall not hinder the free transport of baggage, arms, and every thing else necessary for encamping or cantoning the troops.

Answer.—Agreed to, provided that not more than eight field pieces (six pounders) shall be carried to camp.

Article IV. A free communication shall be allowed with the Batavian ships, whether of war or transport, now in the bay, or which may arrive hereafter; and no impediment shall be made to the disembarkation of any troops that may still arrive, or to their arms, ammunition, and baggage.

Answer.—Agreed to in consequence of the orders received from his Britannic Majesty to avoid any possible thing which could lead to even the appearance of an hostile motive, but only in so far as relates to the troops intended for the garrison of the Cape.

Article V. All Batavian ships, whether of war, transports, or commerce, shall have permission to proceed to their respective ports, or to return to Europe, conforming to the orders they have on this subject, and which the Commissary General shall deem necessary to give them.

Answer.—Agreed to.

Art. VI. In case his Excellency Lieutenant General Dundas should receive any orders from Europe relative to the present state of affairs, he shall communicate them to the Commissary General; and in the event of these orders tending to acts of hostility, he engages to give the Commissary General eight days previous notice, in order that he may take such measures, either for remaining in, or leaving the colony, with every person and thing under his orders as may be necessary, engaging himself to act reciprocally in this respect towards his Excellency.

Answer.—Agreed to. It being clearly understood, that the privilege of either staying in, or leaving the colony, with every thing belonging to his Majesty or individuals, is equally low to the option of their Excellencies.

Art. VII. The only object of the present agreement being the maintenance of good order, the Commissary General of the Batavian Republic promises to do every thing that depends on him to prevent disturbances, or any act which might disturb the public [illegible] in the district where the troops may be stationed.

Answer.—Their Excellencies will most cordially concur in carrying into effect the object of this article.

Article VIII. To ensure the fulfilment of the troops of the two nations, the Lieutenant Governor shall in no manner hinder the sipply of the Batavian troops, as the Commissary General of the Batavian Republic on his part will in no way interfere or prevent supplies from the interior going into Cape Town.

Answer.—Agreed to on the terms of the preceding article.

Article IX. None of these arrangements shall be interpreted at any time against the Batavian Republic, or against the Commissary General, as abandoning in any shape the clear right that the power of America has on them to the cession of this colony.

Answer.—Certainly not.

Article X. Sending detachments to hinder any disturbances in the neighbourhood of the camp, or to succour the Hottentots, as well as for the escort of provisions, either to the Batavian camp or to Cape Town shall not be considered as moving the troops from the position fixed upon.

The Batavian troops shall not return to Cape Town during this agreement, neither shall the English troops take up any position out of the camp, by which can result the Batavian camp in any manner.

Answer.—Agreed to, provided such disturbances either threaten or have actually taken place, and that the safe-guards for waggons, &c. do not exceed what is usual for such purposes.

Article XI. In case of any doubts or difficulties arising concerning the true meaning of the present agreement, they shall be explained in the most advantageous manner for carrying into effect the salutary motives which have induced their Excellencies and the Commissary General of the Batavian Republic to enter into it; and more especially for ratifying to the Commissary General, the Governor, and Generals in Chief, and the Officers Civil and Military, the greatest security, liberty, and independence. The whole in order to cement more strongly the good intelligence to happily establishes between their Excellencies and the Commissary General of the Batavian Republic.

Answer.—Fully agreed to.

GIBRALTAR, Jan. 10.

The behaviour of the garrison since the late disturbance, has been more exemplary, and every thing now goes on with the usual regularity and sobriety.

Ten men of the 25th regiment, besides the three who were executed, were condemned to death, but pardoned by his Royal Highness the Duke of Kent.

If you had as many absurd stories written home, as have been propagated here, you may have thought the garrison in great danger.——Among other rumours it was currently reported and believed, that the Spaniards had marched 3000 men down to the lines, and had sent spies to offer a large sum of money and a pension for life to every soldier who would give up the garrison. An offer was in consequence sent into Spain to examine if the Spaniards were making any extraordinary movements, but he found as few Spaniards as usual, and in their lines, both guards and centries asleep!

Capt. Von Ehrag, of the Swedish service, has invented a machine for swimming and floating on the water without danger of drowning. As a reward for this discovery, his Swedish Majesty has granted him a sum of 8000 rix dollars, and also an exclusive privilege for 25 years, to execute and sell this swimming machine to his private emolument.

THE ORACLE.

YORK, SATURDAY, May 14, 1803.

This morning arrived at the Garrison the Duke of Kent from Kingston, having on board a detachment of His Majesty's 49th Regt which is to do duty here in place of the 41st Regt. ordered to Lower Canada.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them ; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard ; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years ; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all ; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, to the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer ſhortly after he entered the Houſe, placed himſelf at the Bar, and brought up the following meſſage from his Majeſty:

GEORGE R.—His Majeſty thinks it neceſſary to acquaint the houſe of commons, that as very conſiderable military preparations are carrying on in the ports of France and Holland, he has judged it expedient to adopt additional meaſures of precaution for the ſafety of his dominions. Though the preparations to which his Majeſty refers, are avowedly directed to colonial ſervice, yet as diſcuſſions of great importance are now ſubſiſting between his Majeſty and the French Government, the reſult of which muſt at preſent be uncertain, his Majeſty is induced to make this communication to his faithful Commons, in the full perſuaſion that, whilſt they partake of his Majeſty's earneſt & unvarying ſolicitude for the continuance of peace, he may rely with perfect confidence on their public ſpirit and liberality to enable his Majeſty to adopt ſuch meaſures as circumſtances may appear to require, for ſupporting the honor of his crown, and the eſſential intereſts of his people. G. R.

As ſoon as the Meſſage was read from the Chair,

The Chancellor of the Exchequer obſerved, that he thought it his duty to abſtain at preſent from any particular reference to the gracious Meſſage which he had juſt delivered to the houſe from his Majeſty, and that he merely roſe to move that the houſe do take it into conſideration to-morrow morning.

March 10.

Notice was given laſt night by the Miniſter that 10,000 additional ſeamen would be propoſed to be voted to-morrow. The preſs warrants have obtained a very large ſupply of prime ſeamen.—The Mauſion houſe was clouded with ſailors yeſterday and this morning, all eager to enter. In the courſe of Tueſday night upwards of 3000 men were procured. Preſs warrants have alſo been ſent to all our ports.

On Tueſday night large parties of ſeamen from the different ſhips at Spithead were ordered on ſhore for the purpoſe of impreſſing ſeamen for the fleet, and every man was indiſcriminately taken from on board colliers and other ſhips.

The ſame activity prevailed yeſterday, and a great number of hands were obtained. The ſame meaſures have been ordered to be adopted at Plymouth, Yarmouth, Falmouth and the other ports. Several frigates and gun brigs have failed for Guernſey and Jerſey with warrants to impreſs ſeamen. Recruiting parties for the marines have been ordered out, and five guineas bounty is to be given to men entering. At the Admiralty all is vigilance and activity. The board ſits to a late hour every day, & the clerks are kept at work all night, to forward the diſpatches and orders to the different ports.

Orders were laſt night diſpatched to Chatham to get ready for ſea, as quickly as poſſible, every ſhip at that place, that can be equipped for ſervice.

Orders have alſo been iſſued for the artificers in his Majeſty's dock yards, to work as much extra time as they poſſibly can, in completing the repairs of the ſhips of war now in dock, and of thoſe ordered into dock, when there may be room to receive them.

Naval officers have been flocking to the admiralty; above 300 captains have been there within theſe two days. Many of our great admirals have been ſent for. Lords Nelſon and Keith have both had long conferences with Earl Saint Vincent.

Diſpatches have been ſent to Portſmouth to be forwarded to the Mediterranean. In the frigate which is to carry out theſe diſpatches, Captain Dodd, aid-du camp to his Royal Highneſs the Governor of Gibraltar, goes out again to that garriſon. He carries with him diſpatches to his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Kent.

Military preparations are carrying on with the ſame vigour and diſpatch.—The Militia are to be called out, orders have been iſſued to increaſe the army; and to facilitate this object, his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York has intimated to the proper officers, his Majeſty's command, that the ſtandard for the recruits that may be hereafter enliſted for the infantry of the line ſhall be reduced to five feet five inches; that the levy money for men of that height ſhall be raiſed to ſix guineas, of which the men are to receive five guineas in money & for boys for general ſervice ſhall be raiſed to four guineas, of which they are to have three guineas in money and neceſſaries.

March 11.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer yeſterday delivered the following Meſſage from his Majeſty to the Houſe of Commons:

GEORGE R.

In conſequence of the preparations carrying on in the ports of France and Holland, while important diſcuſſions are ſubſiſting between his Majeſty and the French government, his Majeſty thinks it due to the care and concern which he feels for his faithful people, to omit no means in his power which may contribute to their ſecurity.

In purſuance, therefore, of the acts of Parliament enabling his Majeſty to call out and aſſemble the militia of the United Kingdom, his Majeſty has thought it right to make this communication to the Houſe of Commons, to the end, that his Majeſty may cauſe the ſaid militia, or ſuch part thereof as his Majeſty ſhall think neceſſary, to be forthwith drawn out and embodied, and to march as occaſion ſhall require. G. R.

Yeſterday we received Paris Journals to the 11th inſt. inclusive.

They contain nothing; indeed it could not be expected that they ſhould contain any thing relative to the points in diſcuſſion, and the oſtenſible meaſures of defence and precaution adopted by the reſpective governments.

Two proclamations were iſſued yeſterday afternoon; the one for encouraging ſeamen and landmen to enter themſelves on board his Majeſty's ſhips of war; and the other for recalling and prohibiting ſeamen from ſerving foreign princes and ſtates, and for granting rewards for diſcovering ſuch ſeamen as ſhall conceal themſelves.

Mr. Wickham gave notice in the Houſe of Commons yeſterday of his intention to move this day, for leave to bring in a bill to regulate the mode of calling out the militia in Ireland. The militia eſtabliſhment of that part of the United Kingdom will be enlarged, ſo as to place a conſiderable addition of effective force at the diſpoſition of Government.

A ſyſtem, which has long been digeſted, has been completely prepared for arming the country from one end of it to the other. We do not ſuppoſe that his Majeſty's Miniſters will feel it neceſſary to carry it into execution immediately, having ſo large a diſpoſeable force at their command. But we underſtand that the nature of this ſyſtem is ſuch, that a ſhort period only would be neceſſary to make the whole country an armed nation. This is indeed to be vigorous.

Yeſterday General Andreoſſi, M. Schimmelpenninck, and the Spaniſh Miniſter, waited on Lord Hawkeſbury, at his Office, and had a conference with his Lordſhip upon the meaſures and preparations now making by this country. Soon after the conference each of the Ambaſſadors diſpatched a courier to his reſpective Government.

Ten thouſand additional ſeamen are to be voted to-day by Parliament—and it is probable that ſome debate will take place in both Houſes upon the ſtate of the country. Ten additional ſail of the line are to be put in commiſſion with all poſſible ſpeed. In a fortnight, we have no doubt, that 60 ſail of the line, completely equipped, will be riding in our ports.

In all probability fleets of obſervation will inſtantly be ſent out. Lord Nelſon, of courſe, will have the command of one of them. It is a very fortunate circumſtance that various cauſes have delayed the ſailing of the French ſquadrons in the ports of Helvoetſluys and Dunkirk. The Louiſiana expedition has been delayed, firſt, by the failure of a houſe at Paris, which had the contract for ſupplying it with neceſſaries; and ſecondly, by the froſt, which ſet in with great ſeverity in Holland.—Our correſpondent at the Hague has informed us, that it is to ſail the end of this month. But if theſe preparations in the French and Dutch ports have given cauſe of juſt alarm and ſuſpicion to our Miniſters, they will not of courſe, we ſhould ſuppoſe, permit theſe fleets to put to ſea.

General Decaen is arrived at Breſt, and is going out with the expedition preparing for the Eaſt Indies, as Captain General of the French ſettlements in that quarter. The events that have occured within theſe few days, will, in all probability, prevent this and the other expeditions in the Dutch & French ports from ſailing quite ſo ſoon as was expected. A frigate and two corvettes have lately ſailed for America—perhaps to require the formal ceſſion of Louiſiana.

The French ſeem to be adopting every meaſure for increaſing their naval force. Large falls of timber have been ordered in the great foreſt of Soignes, the timber is to be ſent to Breſt, Havre, Dunkirk, and L'Orient. It was from this foreſt that the Dutch uſed, when the Netherlands were in the poſſeſſion of Auſtria, to obtain great ſupplies for their navy.

March 14.

We communicate, without any comments, the following article, which we have copied from a Plymouth paper.

"A circumſtance has lately come to light, that is no leſs matter of ſurpriſe than of concern to us. It appears, by the papers of an officer in the Britiſh ſervice, who died a few days ſince, that he has maintained a correſpondence with Bonaparte, which was brought down nearly to the time of his death. What was the exact nature of this correſpondence was, we have not been able to learn. The diſcovery was conſequent on the death of the perſon alluded to. His papers have been put into the hands of Government.—Portſmouth Gazette.

March 16.

Yeſterday forenoon, another meſſenger arrived with diſpatches from Lord Whitworth, and a Cabinet meſſenger left Paris, the Meſſage of his Britannic Majeſty to Parliament was known, but not generally, on that day. The diſpatches of Lord Whitworth muſt therefore have been written after the Chief Conſul knew the ſtep the Engliſh Government has taken; but we believe nothing has occurred of that importance, arbitrary, and deciſive nature, which many expecting from the character of Bonaparte. No peculiar alarm is yet given at the complaints alluded to in the King's Meſſage. They will probably be made the ſubject of negociation. Menacing and arrogant language to Lord Whitworth is ſaid to have blown into a flame the embers of diſcord ſtill left by the Treaty of Amiens. Lord Whitworth anſwered in a firm and manly tone, ſuch as became the Ambaſſador of the Britiſh nation. There is reaſon to ſuppoſe that Bonaparte now regret his violence.

Two French meſſengers arrived, one on Monday, one yeſterday, with diſpatches from Andreoſſi, who in conſequence, waited on Lord Hawkeſbury, with the deſign of explaining, we preſume.—The reſult of the Cabinet Council yeſterday was laſt night diſpatched by a meſſenger to Lord Whitworth.—It is ſuppoſed, Bonaparte will attempt a protracted negociation, the reſult of which may be doubted; but Miniſters, we are happy to learn, intend preſſing him to an immediate deciſion. Nothing is more plain, than that unleſs Bonaparte wiſhes to provoke a rupture, with the deſign of invading this country, he will even make conſiderable ſacrifices to preſerve peace. He may have been betrayed into intemperance like the Emperor Paul; but he has, at the ſame time, great coldneſs and cunning, and will not put an intereſt tenfold now may induce France to carry the ſtipulations of that Treaty into effect. A war at preſent would completely ruin the maritime and colonial proſperity of France, while ſhe could derive no poſſible advantage from it. She could not meet us at ſea or in any of the colonies; we could not attack her on the continent. If Bonaparte thinks he can ſucceſsfully invade this country at preſent, (and he can make no other upon us but by invaſion) then war is inevitable; but muſt have determined upon it before the Britiſh Cabinet got roſe the alarm. That the ſuppoſition and riſe of this country are the objects he aimed his heart, we would venture to affirm; had it not been ſo, why M. Peltier's trial, that France is on friendſhip and amity with Great Britain. Admitting, however, that Bonaparte has it in contemplation to attack and invade England, the peace has not been of ſufficient duration to enable him to prepare a ſufficient force.

March 17.

Some of the papers have treated lightly the intelligence we communicated yeſterday of the veſſel having run on Sheppey. They aſſert that the was a French national brig, called Le Voltaire, bound from Dunkirk to New-Orleans, with arms on board; that ſhe was ſtranded ſo long ago as the 26th of December, nearly three months, and that the crew had remained on board ever ſince. We muſt remark, that it ſeems ſtrange for a veſſel to have been to long on board without ſome attempt having been made to get her off, or even, on a ſtill more ſtrange, to lighten her cargo.

That the ſhip might have her papers and invoices appear to be bound for New Orleans, is by no means improbable. If her deſtination were really for Ireland, her papers would not of courſe be permitted to be delivered to her. It has been aſſerted alſo, that the colours were only ſuch as ſhe was warranted in keeping on board. Notwithſtanding theſe aſſertions, we adhere to the account we gave yeſterday, which will be found in moſt of the material points to be correct.

Before the crew deſerted the veſſel, which we underſtand they did as ſoon as they were informed of the preparations making by this country, they threw a large box overboard, which, to their great diſappointment, did not ſink, but floated on ſhore near Sheerneſs, and was conveyed to the Admiralty. It was found to contain cocoa-nuts, and the uſual ſhip coals, not the tri-coloured Standards to be diſplayed on the forts of Louiſiana, or New-Orleans, but Colours of Green, with the words, "Union—France and Ireland," in the centre.

As the crew, when they deſerted the veſſel, made their eſcape on ſhore, it has been ſuſpected that they were not French ſailors, but Iriſh or Engliſh traitors, who ſuppoſed to evade puniſhment by the difficulty of their detection after their landing.—What grounds there are for this ſuſpicion, we know not.

Upon the whole, the circumſtance is a moſt extraordinary one. An intelligent morning paper ſhrewdly obſerves, that nothing is more likely than that Bonaparte would ſend a veſſel with arms, &c. apparently for the Iriſh rebels, but really deſtined to walk into our hands to create alarm, and have an influence on the negotiations. We know of no diſpoſition on both ſides to break off, and to convince us that the preſervation of peace was impoſſible.

We ſhall conclude our remarks with reminding our readers of a paragraph which we inſerted ſome days ago, and which ſtated that Government had diſcovered printed addreſſes from Arthur O'Connor, circulating in Ireland, in which he juſtified his conduct Supplement to the Upper-Canada Gazette..... May 21.....No. 4....Vol. 13.

...of conference, [illegible] of emancipation to this country. We understand that Lord [illegible] besides his Majesty's Ministers, are in possession of their credentials.

The funds experienced a further and unexpected rise yesterday. They opened on Exchange and continued to rise all about two o'clock, when they rode in a short space at time to 93¾. It was said that the French courier, Chanut, had brought very favourable intelligence—that the subjects of Malta had been amicably adjusted. The French Ambassador's visit to Court was conducted in a favourable circumstance. Of course as long as he remains in England he will go to Court. But it would be absurd to draw from such an event an inference that all the disputes between the two countries have been settled. It has been suggested that Bonaparte does not find this the proper moment for going to war, and that he will postpone his designs.

Londo et compono que mox deprenmere pollen.

But it is not merely by the expedition of a pacific disposition on the part of France that we shall be published. All the points in dispute must be satisfactorily and indefinitely arranged. We must not defer that settlement to a future opportunity. Bonaparte will of course wish to put us to the expence of arming and disarming every three months. But shall we be lucky enough to permit him to gratify that wish?

In the mean time, activity and vigour are still the order of the day.

March 18.

The contents of the dispatches brought by Mr. Cooper-thy, have not transpired; but it is said, that they are not to a decisive nature. Private accounts enable us to state the effect which our preparations have made upon the Chief Consul. They seem to have entirely deprived him of his accustomed caution and reserve; and to have inspired him to a degree of irritability and anger which he cannot conceal.

When he entered the audience chamber on Sunday last, his features were menacing, and his whole frame seemed violently agitated. Lord Whitworth was at the audience. The First Consul addressed him immediately upon his entrance; observed with warmth, that a war had now defeatured Europe for fifteen year, and asked whether it was now to be renewed? adding, that if it was, it might again last for as long a period. To which Lord Whitworth calmly replied, that if it was renewed, it would not be the fault of Great Britain. Bonaparte then went amongst the ladies, but soon after returned to Lord Whitworth, and vehemently declared, that the armaments now preparing in the ports of France were destined only for the Colonies, in the preservation of which England was as much interested as he could be. This no answer was made. He soon afterwards quitted the room, calling on God and man to witness, that he hoped vengeance would be inflicted on that Power, which, by a violation of Treaty, should cause the renewal of hostilities. All accounts agree that his countenance was throughout almost disfigured by passion; and his tone was so loud and vehement, that at least half the company present must have heard all that passed on this extraordinary occasion.

The conduct of Lord Whitworth affords a striking contrast to the demeanor of the Chief Consul—it was firm, but temperate—dignified, without being haughty—and moderate, without being submissive.

Yesterday was full of rumours—It was said, that M. Talleyrand had been dismissed from the post of Minister for Foreign Affairs, and that he had been succeeded by M. Otto. Another rumour was, that M. Talleyrand had poisoned himself immediately after his dismissal. We need scarcely state that both these rumours are unfounded. A third report was, that the press warrants had been called in; we noticed and contradicted this report yesterday. It was asserted also, that the difference with France would be amicably adjusted; and that the First Consul's tone was mild and conciliatory.—How mild and conciliatory we have already shewn.

We had hoped that a positive answer would have been received from France before this time. A lingering negotiation, which will afford the First Consul time to take such steps, and to make such preparations as he may deem necessary, would on our part be the height of impolicy. Already has the Batavian Expedition sailed from Brest; and may be here that the sailing of the Louisiana squadron, from Hellevoetsluys and Dunkirk, will be accelerated as much as possible.

Soon after the arrival of the messenger from Paris yesterday, the Funds rose; the 3 per cents. whence were at 64¾, rose to 65, but fell back again at the close of the market to 65. The ride was in a great measure occasioned by the knowledge that the French Funds had not experienced any depression on Saturday: but the message and our preparations were not published in the Paris papers till Sunday and Monday. On the prices on Monday last we are not informed; it was said that the Funds rose 3 per cent. on that day—a rumour to which we cannot attach the slightest credit.

In the mean time every exertion is making in all our ports to fit out ships and procure seamen.

Rear-Admiral Hallowray left town last night for Portsmouth, where he is to hoist his flag as Assistant Port-Admiral to Lord Gardner.

Admiral Cornwallis will command the Channel fleet in case of war, but it will be fitted out under the orders of Lord Gardner, who will afterwards proceed to take the chief command at Cork.

Our Dover letter states, that the general opinion at Paris is in favour of the maintenance of peace.

March, 19.

This morning we received Paris papers of Tuesday last.

All the reports of the great fall of the French Funds are mere fabrications. On Monday last they fell two per cent. from the noon, but recovered again, and left off 65. Many persons who form their opinion upon the state of the Funds, will infer from the above fact, that there was to be no war. We conclude, that we do not draw such an inference therefrom.

Their papers contain no news of much importance. The Civil Code occupies the attention of the Legislature and the colonial affairs of the Monitteur.

The Swiss Senate has been dissolved. By last all was quite won TNY of the cause—it supported, it issued a decree expressive of its gratitude to Bonaparte for his mediation.

The Court of Vienna has formally adhered to all the dispositions of the general Recess of the Deputation without any exception.

General Lauos sailed from Rochelle for Lisbon on the 5th.

The Cape of Good Hope is still in our possession. Dispatches were received yesterday by the Lingeest sloop of war of 18 guns. The Lingeest was dispatched from this country last October, with directions not to give up the Cape till further orders. It was a fortnight expected that she would arrive time enough to prevent the surrender; but fortunately she had a very quick passage, and reached the Cape just six hours before the Dutch were to take possession of the Settlement. This event will of course have a considerable influence on the pending negociation.

The following is a letter we have received from a Gentleman at the Cape:—

Cape Town, January 4.

"I have just time to tell you, that on the very day intended for our departure, a sloop of war arrived with orders for us to keep the Cape till further advices from England. What can be the cause, you best know on your side of the water. God send us home safe and soon. Adieu."

A Cabinet Council sat several hours yesterday, and a Messenger, we understand, was dispatched to Lord Whitworth as soon as the Council broke up.

We communicated yesterday, the substance of the conversation that passed between Bonaparte and Lord Whitworth on Sunday last—the menacing looks, the agitated manner, the angry tone of the former—the cool dignity, the firmness, and the moderation of the latter.—That our readers may not misapprehend our procured our information from a source not perfectly authentic, we think it necessary to state here, in the most distinct manner, that that intelligence was upon the strongest foundation, and that it is accurate in every part. We are enabled to make this assertion, by letters from two English Gentlemen who were present at the audience on Sunday, who heard the conversation, and watched the looks and gestures of the First Consul.

As he retired from the audience chamber, he invoked in a loud tone of voice, the vengeance of God on that power which should be the cause of the war; and having uttered these words, he burst in the greatest rage through the folding doors of the chamber, before one of his pages could open them for him.

It appears from all the accounts that have been received from Paris, that Bonaparte was by no means prepared to expect such vigorous preparations on our part. As soon as the Message arrived, a Council of State was called, which sat from seven in the morning till eleven at night. Couriers were immediately dispatched to Vienna, Berlin, Petersburgh and Italy.

Government, we have been informed this morning, expect to receive a definitive answer from Bonaparte to-night or to-morrow morning, that will finish the question of peace or war.

Should war be declared, Government of course will not let a French ship [illegible] of any of the French ports.

The shipwrights & sailors employed in the merchants' yards in the river, have made an offer to the Admiralty of their services, to be employed in any yard their Lordships may direct, to assist in equipping the fleet. This offer is not accepted, the artificers in the yards being to do all the duty.

Lord Keith arrived at Plymouth on Thursday morning, and immediately hoisted his flag on board the Caledonia of 74 guns.

An English vessel arrived on Wednesday night from La Hogue. She sailed from thence last Sunday evening, in consequence of the battle and confusion that was going on at La Hogue and Cherbourg. She was about to load oysters for London, and was having out ballast for that purpose; but from the warlike appearance of affairs in that neighbourhood, the Captain thought it most prudent to leave it as early as possible. Tickets were leaving at the houses of all those connected with the army, and the utmost confusion seemed to prevail.

The following notice was yesterday published by Mr. Erving the American Consul:

AMERICAN CONSULATE.

London, March 18.

Official notice has been received from Lisbon, that his Royal Highness the Prince Regent of Portugal has issued unlimited orders for the admission of foreign flour into the ports of that country, on paying a duty of 40 rees per alquier, or four hundred and eighty rees, equal to 60 cents per barrel; and that vessels with clear bills of health, & whose crews are free from any sickness, shall no longer be subjected to quarantine.

The following extract of a letter from an Officer just arrived from Carthagena is important at the present crisis:—

"The Spaniards are laying up and dismantling all the ships of war that were at Carthagena. Five sail of the line, one of which is a fine first rate, called the Indian, are laid up as above, and a fine first rate called the Prince, had failed for Ferrol to be laid up there. The magazines at Carthagena are without stores of every description; scarce a coil of rope, a bolt of canvass, or spar that would make a lower yard. The artificers were discharged for want of money to pay them. Certificates were given to them, as well as to the seamen, for the balance of the wages due to them which they sold for what they could get, about one half of their stated value."

Courier Office, Three P. M.

We have just heard a rumour, which is in circulation in this city—It is, that an embargo has been laid upon our ships in the French ports.

We mention the rumour; but have not been able at this late hour to ascertain whether it be authentic or not. It produced some effect upon the funds—the 3 per cents. which were at 65 for money, and 66 for account, fell to 64 1-2 for money and 65 1-2 for the account.

Traveller office, London, March 19, half past three o'clock.

We stop the press to state, that intelligence has just reached us of an embargo having been laid upon all the British vessels in the ports of France.—We do not pledge ourselves for the authenticity of this intelligence.

By a vessel arrived at Plymouth from Cherbourgh, an account is received of orders having reached that place on Sunday last from Paris, for all waggons, carts, carriages and horses, to be put in requisition, for the purpose of transporting troops and baggage; in consequence of which the greatest bustle and confusion prevailed at that place.

March 20.

We are assured, in an authority on which we confidently rely, that our government, satisfied by the evidence of past experience, that further concession, instead of consolidating the peace, would only weaken its foundation and invite aggression, have resolved to meet the torrent of Republican domination, and to try the issue of another war, should their appeal to the justice and policy of France prove unsuccessful. Should the dispute be amicably adjusted, the concession must proceed from France.

On the arrival of the courier announcing to Bonaparte the King's message to Parliament, the Consul immediately sent for General Duroc, (distinguished by his successful embassy to the Prussian Court) and after an audience, which continued the greater part of the night, Duroc was dispatched on a secret mission to Berlin; and it is understood that Bonaparte waits the result of this measure, previous to his definitive reply to the remonstrances of our Cabinet.

It is stated that a vessel has arrived at Plymouth, announcing that an embargo had been imposed on all British vessels in the French ports; but this report is obviously incorrect, although some interruption to the sailing of vessels, with particular freights may have occurred, as is said to have been the case at Calais; but the intercourse by packets, &c. continues for some part.

A letter by the Lisbon mail announces the arrival of General Laines at his former hotel; it adds, that at the instant of his arrival he wrote to the Prince regent, informing him that he came to resume his former functions; but that he could not appear at any levee till all the ministers who had formerly given him offence were dismissed. Extraordinary as it may appear, the Prince is said to have complied with this request.

Such is the present scarcity of cash in the city, and such the desperate extent of speculation, that more than 50 per cent. is paid for money for the continuation on Omnium from Friday till Tuesday next.

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, MAY 21, 1803.

It appears that the military preparations carrying on in the ports of France and Holland, although avowedly colonial, have been extensively exercised by His Majesty's Ministers, and precautionary measures adopted by Government to counteract any difficulties that may arise therefrom.—It further appears by his Majesty's Message, that great and important disputes are at present pending between the two countries, of which the result is uncertain; yet His Majesty's solicitude for the continuance of Peace, as expressed in his Message to Parliament, affords reason to hope, that the measures to which he is now induced to adopt, will forcibly operate as a means of preserving that blessing.—Hopes may yet be entertained that a proper understanding will ultimately be brought about between the two governments.

His Majesty in his Message to Parliament does not hesitate to refer to its wisdom, and the feelings of his people, in relying with confidence (in the event of those dissentions what it may) on their liberality and spirit, in pursuing such measures as shall be best calculated to insure the support of his crown & dignity, and the essential interests of the British nation.

Measures of activity have already taken place in the principal ports of Great Britain. The ships ready for sea at Portsmouth, are ordered to Spithead, and a fleet of observation will shortly cruize in the Channel.

Died at Montreal, on the 23d ult. after a lingering illness, age 62, Joseph Frobisher, Esq. formerly Captain in the late corps of Canadian Volunteers, and many years deputy Paymaster of the District of Montreal.—By his death His Majesty has lost a faithful servant, and a truly loyal subject, who during a course of 44 years filled a variety of public stations in Canada, with indefatigable zeal for the service, and with the strictest honour.

...of conference, [illegible] of emancipation to this country. We understand that Lord [illegible] besides his Majesty's Ministers, are in possession of their credentials.

The funds experienced a further and unexpected rise yesterday. They opened on Exchange and continued to rise all about two o'clock, when they rode in a short space at time to 93¾. It was said that the French courier, Chanut, had brought very favourable intelligence—that the subjects of Malta had been amicably adjusted. The French Ambassador's visit to Court was conducted in a favourable circumstance. Of course as long as he remains in England he will go to Court. But it would be absurd to draw from such an event an inference that all the disputes between the two countries have been settled. It has been suggested that Bonaparte does not find this the proper moment for going to war, and that he will postpone his designs.

Londo et compono que mox deprenmere pollen.

But it is not merely by the expedition of a pacific disposition on the part of France that we shall be published. All the points in dispute must be satisfactorily and indefinitely arranged. We must not defer that settlement to a future opportunity. Bonaparte will of course wish to put us to the expence of arming and disarming every three months. But shall we be lucky enough to permit him to gratify that wish?

In the mean time, activity and vigour are still the order of the day.

March 18.

The contents of the dispatches brought by Mr. Cooper-thy, have not transpired; but it is said, that they are not to a decisive nature. Private accounts enable us to state the effect which our preparations have made upon the Chief Consul. They seem to have entirely deprived him of his accustomed caution and reserve; and to have inspired him to a degree of irritability and anger which he cannot conceal.

When he entered the audience chamber on Sunday last, his features were menacing, and his whole frame seemed violently agitated. Lord Whitworth was at the audience. The First Consul addressed him immediately upon his entrance; observed with warmth, that a war had now defeatured Europe for fifteen year, and asked whether it was now to be renewed? adding, that if it was, it might again last for as long a period. To which Lord Whitworth calmly replied, that if it was renewed, it would not be the fault of Great Britain. Bonaparte then went amongst the ladies, but soon after returned to Lord Whitworth, and vehemently declared, that the armaments now preparing in the ports of France were destined only for the Colonies, in the preservation of which England was as much interested as he could be. This no answer was made. He soon afterwards quitted the room, calling on God and man to witness, that he hoped vengeance would be inflicted on that Power, which, by a violation of Treaty, should cause the renewal of hostilities. All accounts agree that his countenance was throughout almost disfigured by passion; and his tone was so loud and vehement, that at least half the company present must have heard all that passed on this extraordinary occasion.

The conduct of Lord Whitworth affords a striking contrast to the demeanor of the Chief Consul—it was firm, but temperate—dignified, without being haughty—and moderate, without being submissive.

Yesterday was full of rumours—It was said, that M. Talleyrand had been dismissed from the post of Minister for Foreign Affairs, and that he had been succeeded by M. Otto. Another rumour was, that M. Talleyrand had poisoned himself immediately after his dismissal. We need scarcely state that both these rumours are unfounded. A third report was, that the press warrants had been called in; we noticed and contradicted this report yesterday. It was asserted also, that the difference with France would be amicably adjusted; and that the First Consul's tone was mild and conciliatory.—How mild and conciliatory we have already shewn.

We had hoped that a positive answer would have been received from France before this time. A lingering negotiation, which will afford the First Consul time to take such steps, and to make such preparations as he may deem necessary, would on our part be the height of impolicy. Already has the Batavian Expedition sailed from Brest; and may be here that the sailing of the Louisiana squadron, from Hellevoetsluys and Dunkirk, will be accelerated as much as possible.

Soon after the arrival of the messenger from Paris yesterday, the Funds rose; the 3 per cents. whence were at 64¾, rose to 65, but fell back again at the close of the market to 65. The ride was in a great measure occasioned by the knowledge that the French Funds had not experienced any depression on Saturday: but the message and our preparations were not published in the Paris papers till Sunday and Monday. On the prices on Monday last we are not informed; it was said that the Funds rose 3 per cent. on that day—a rumour to which we cannot attach the slightest credit.

In the mean time every exertion is making in all our ports to fit out ships and procure seamen.

Rear-Admiral Hallowray left town last night for Portsmouth, where he is to hoist his flag as Assistant Port-Admiral to Lord Gardner.

Admiral Cornwallis will command the Channel fleet in case of war, but it will be fitted out under the orders of Lord Gardner, who will afterwards proceed to take the chief command at Cork.

Our Dover letter states, that the general opinion at Paris is in favour of the maintenance of peace.

March, 19.

This morning we received Paris papers of Tuesday last.

All the reports of the great fall of the French Funds are mere fabrications. On Monday last they fell two per cent. from the noon, but recovered again, and left off 65. Many persons who form their opinion upon the state of the Funds, will infer from the above fact, that there was to be no war. We conclude, that we do not draw such an inference therefrom.

Their papers contain no news of much importance. The Civil Code occupies the attention of the Legislature and the colonial affairs of the Monitteur.

The Swiss Senate has been dissolved. By last all was quite won TNY of the cause—it supported, it issued a decree expressive of its gratitude to Bonaparte for his mediation.

The Court of Vienna has formally adhered to all the dispositions of the general Recess of the Deputation without any exception.

General Lauos sailed from Rochelle for Lisbon on the 5th.

The Cape of Good Hope is still in our possession. Dispatches were received yesterday by the Lingeest sloop of war of 18 guns. The Lingeest was dispatched from this country last October, with directions not to give up the Cape till further orders. It was a fortnight expected that she would arrive time enough to prevent the surrender; but fortunately she had a very quick passage, and reached the Cape just six hours before the Dutch were to take possession of the Settlement. This event will of course have a considerable influence on the pending negociation.

Cape Town, January 4.

"I have just time to tell you, that on the very day intended for our departure, a sloop of war arrived with orders for us to keep the Cape till further advices from England. What can be the cause, you best know on your side of the water. God send us home safe and soon. Adieu."

A Cabinet Council sat several hours yesterday, and a Messenger, we understand, was dispatched to Lord Whitworth as soon as the Council broke up.

We communicated yesterday, the substance of the conversation that passed between Bonaparte and Lord Whitworth on Sunday last—the menacing looks, the agitated manner, the angry tone of the former—the cool dignity, the firmness, and the moderation of the latter.—That our readers may not misapprehend our procured our information from a source not perfectly authentic, we think it necessary to state here, in the most distinct manner, that that intelligence was upon the strongest foundation, and that it is accurate in every part. We are enabled to make this assertion, by letters from two English Gentlemen who were present at the audience on Sunday, who heard the conversation, and watched the looks and gestures of the First Consul.

As he retired from the audience chamber, he invoked in a loud tone of voice, the vengeance of God on that power which should be the cause of the war; and having uttered these words, he burst in the greatest rage through the folding doors of the chamber, before one of his pages could open them for him.

It appears from all the accounts that have been received from Paris, that Bonaparte was by no means prepared to expect such vigorous preparations on our part. As soon as the Message arrived, a Council of State was called, which sat from seven in the morning till eleven at night. Couriers were immediately dispatched to Vienna, Berlin, Petersburgh and Italy.

Government, we have been informed this morning, expect to receive a definitive answer from Bonaparte to-night or to-morrow morning, that will finish the question of peace or war.

Should war be declared, Government of course will not let a French ship [illegible] of any of the French ports.

The shipwrights & sailors employed in the merchants' yards in the river, have made an offer to the Admiralty of their services, to be employed in any yard their Lordships may direct, to assist in equipping the fleet. This offer is not accepted, the artificers in the yards being to do all the duty.

Lord Keith arrived at Plymouth on Thursday morning, and immediately hoisted his flag on board the Caledonia of 74 guns.

An English vessel arrived on Wednesday night from La Hogue. She sailed from thence last Sunday evening, in consequence of the battle and confusion that was going on at La Hogue and Cherbourg. She was about to load oysters for London, and was having out ballast for that purpose; but from the warlike appearance of affairs in that neighbourhood, the Captain thought it most prudent to leave it as early as possible. Tickets were leaving at the houses of all those connected with the army, and the utmost confusion seemed to prevail.

The following notice was yesterday published by Mr. Erving the American Consul:

AMERICAN CONSULATE.

London, March 18.

Official notice has been received from Lisbon, that his Royal Highness the Prince Regent of Portugal has issued unlimited orders for the admission of foreign flour into the ports of that country, on paying a duty of 40 rees per alquier, or four hundred and eighty rees, equal to 60 cents per barrel; and that vessels with clear bills of health, & whose crews are free from any sickness, shall no longer be subjected to quarantine.

The following extract of a letter from an Officer just arrived from Carthagena is important at the present crisis:—

"The Spaniards are laying up and dismantling all the ships of war that were at Carthagena. Five sail of the line, one of which is a fine first rate, called the Indian, are laid up as above, and a fine first rate called the Prince, had failed for Ferrol to be laid up there. The magazines at Carthagena are without stores of every description; scarce a coil of rope, a bolt of canvass, or spar that would make a lower yard. The artificers were discharged for want of money to pay them. Certificates were given to them, as well as to the seamen, for the balance of the wages due to them which they sold for what they could get, about one half of their stated value."

Courier Office, Three P. M.

We have just heard a rumour, which is in circulation in this city—It is, that an embargo has been laid upon our ships in the French ports.

We mention the rumour; but have not been able at this late hour to ascertain whether it be authentic or not. It produced some effect upon the funds—the 3 per cents. which were at 65 for money, and 66 for account, fell to 64 1-2 for money and 65 1-2 for the account.

Traveller office, London, March 19, half past three o'clock.

We stop the press to state, that intelligence has just reached us of an embargo having been laid upon all the British vessels in the ports of France.—We do not pledge ourselves for the authenticity of this intelligence.

By a vessel arrived at Plymouth from Cherbourgh, an account is received of orders having reached that place on Sunday last from Paris, for all waggons, carts, carriages and horses, to be put in requisition, for the purpose of transporting troops and baggage; in consequence of which the greatest bustle and confusion prevailed at that place.

March 20.

We are assured, in an authority on which we confidently rely, that our government, satisfied by the evidence of past experience, that further concession, instead of consolidating the peace, would only weaken its foundation and invite aggression, have resolved to meet the torrent of Republican domination, and to try the issue of another war, should their appeal to the justice and policy of France prove unsuccessful. Should the dispute be amicably adjusted, the concession must proceed from France.

On the arrival of the courier announcing to Bonaparte the King's message to Parliament, the Consul immediately sent for General Duroc, (distinguished by his successful embassy to the Prussian Court) and after an audience, which continued the greater part of the night, Duroc was dispatched on a secret mission to Berlin; and it is understood that Bonaparte waits the result of this measure, previous to his definitive reply to the remonstrances of our Cabinet.

It is stated that a vessel has arrived at Plymouth, announcing that an embargo had been imposed on all British vessels in the French ports; but this report is obviously incorrect, although some interruption to the sailing of vessels, with particular freights may have occurred, as is said to have been the case at Calais; but the intercourse by packets, &c. continues for some part.

A letter by the Lisbon mail announces the arrival of General Laines at his former hotel; it adds, that at the instant of his arrival he wrote to the Prince regent, informing him that he came to resume his former functions; but that he could not appear at any levee till all the ministers who had formerly given him offence were dismissed. Extraordinary as it may appear, the Prince is said to have complied with this request.

Such is the present scarcity of cash in the city, and such the desperate extent of speculation, that more than 50 per cent. is paid for money for the continuation on Omnium from Friday till Tuesday next.

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, MAY 21, 1803.

It appears that the military preparations carrying on in the ports of France and Holland, although avowedly colonial, have been extensively exercised by His Majesty's Ministers, and precautionary measures adopted by Government to counteract any difficulties that may arise therefrom.—It further appears by his Majesty's Message, that great and important disputes are at present pending between the two countries, of which the result is uncertain; yet His Majesty's solicitude for the continuance of Peace, as expressed in his Message to Parliament, affords reason to hope, that the measures to which he is now induced to adopt, will forcibly operate as a means of preserving that blessing.—Hopes may yet be entertained that a proper understanding will ultimately be brought about between the two governments.

His Majesty in his Message to Parliament does not hesitate to refer to its wisdom, and the feelings of his people, in relying with confidence (in the event of those dissentions what it may) on their liberality and spirit, in pursuing such measures as shall be best calculated to insure the support of his crown & dignity, and the essential interests of the British nation.

Measures of activity have already taken place in the principal ports of Great Britain. The ships ready for sea at Portsmouth, are ordered to Spithead, and a fleet of observation will shortly cruize in the Channel.

Died at Montreal, on the 23d ult. after a lingering illness, age 62, Joseph Frobisher, Esq. formerly Captain in the late corps of Canadian Volunteers, and many years deputy Paymaster of the District of Montreal.—By his death His Majesty has lost a faithful servant, and a truly loyal subject, who during a course of 44 years filled a variety of public stations in Canada, with indefatigable zeal for the service, and with the strictest honour.

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them ; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard ; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years ; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all ; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the FORTY-THIRD Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

GREENOCK, March 18.

Extract of a letter from Liverpool, received in town yeſterday.

"We have had a ſtrong intereſt of failers laſt night and to-day, which is alarming. All is at a ſtand here for the preſent, and not a man can be had to go to ſea, as every ſhip is inverted as they go out and ſtrict of their hands—ſo ſtrict are the orders."

GREENOCK, March 22.

On Sunday a gentleman in this town received a letter from London, having the following poſtſcript:

"Bonaparte has humbled himſelf to Great Britain—of courſe our preparations will not lead to a new war."

It is ſingular however, that the private letters from Paris, of which a number are ſaid to have been received in London on Thurſday, generally agree in giving the following curious—

POLITICS OF THE THUILLERIES.

"On Sunday laſt, at Madame's Drawing-room, which was crowded with ſtrangers, the Conſul put ſo little reſtraint on his conduct, that ſomething like the following converſation was audible to the greateſt part of the promiſcuous aſſemblage:—

Bonaparte entered, with an unuſual alertneſs of manner, and, after ſaluting the company, he addreſſed himſelf to Lord Whitworth, in a tone ſufficiently loud to be heard by all who were preſent—"You know, my Lord, that a terrible ſtorm has ariſen between England and France."

Lord Whitworth—"Yes, General Conſul, but it is hoped that this ſtorm will be diſſipated without any ſerious conſequences."

Bonaparte—"It will be diſſipated when England ſhall have evacuated Malta. If not, the cloud will burſt, and the bolt muſt fall. The King of England has promiſed, by treaty to evacuate that place, and who is to violate the faith of treaties?"

Lord Whitworth (ſurpriſed at finding himſelf queſtioned in this manner, and before ſo many perſons)—"But you know, General Conſul, the circumſtances which have hitherto delayed the evacuation of Malta. The intention of my Sovereign is to fulfil the Treaty of Amiens, and you alſo know——."

Bonaparte—"You know (with impetuoſity) the French have carried on the war for ten years, and you cannot doubt but that they are in a condition to wage it again. Inform your Court, that if, on the receipt of your diſpatches, orders are not iſſued for the immediate ſurrender of Malta, then War is declared. I declare my firm reſolution is to ſee the Treaty carried into effect, and leave it to the Ambaſſadors of the ſeveral Powers, who are preſent, to ſay who is in the wrong. You flattered yourſelves that France would not dare to ſhew her reſentment whilſt her ſquadrons were at St. Domingo. I am happy thus publicly to undeceive you on that head."

Lord Whitworth—"But, General the negociation is not yet broken off, and there is reaſon to believe——."

Bonaparte—"Of what negociation does your Lordſhip ſpeak? Is it neceſſary to negociate what is conceded by treaty—to negociate the fulfilment of engagements and the duties of good faith.—(Lord Whitworth was about to reply, Bonaparte made a ſign with his hand, and continued in a leſs elevated tone.)—My Lord, your Lady is indiſpoſed.—She may probably breathe her native air rather ſooner than you or I expected. I with moſt ardently for peace, but if my juſt demand be not inſtantly complied with, then war muſt follow, and God will decide. If treaties are not ſufficient to bind to peace, then the vanquiſhed muſt not be left in a condition to offer injury."

Here this unexpected converſation terminated, if that term be allowed, where the diſcourſe was almoſt wholly on one ſide.

Another letter gives the following leſs preciſe account of this extraordinary colloquy:—

"The Firſt Conſul appeared in a ſtate of evident irritability. When he approached the Engliſh Ambaſſador, he obſerved with warmth, that a war had now deſolated Europe for fifteen years, and aſked whether it was now to be renewed: adding, that if it was, it might again laſt for as long a period? To which Lord Whitworth calmly replied, that if it was renewed, it would not be the fault of Great Britain. Bonaparte then went amongſt the ladies, but ſoon after returned to Lord Whitworth, and vehemently declared, that the armaments now preparing in the ports of France were deſtined only for the Colonies, in the preſervation of which England was as much intereſted as he could be. To this no anſwer was made. He ſoon afterwards quitted the room, calling on God and man to witneſs, that he hoped vengeance would be inflicted on that Power, which, by a violation of treaty, ſhould cauſe the renewal of hoſtilities. All accounts agree that his countenance was throughout almoſt diſfigured by paſſion: and his tone was ſo loud and vehement, that at leaſt half the company preſent muſt have heard all that paſſed on this extraordinary occaſion."

We know not why the foregoing ſhould not be credited to the fulleſt extent; for we remember to have heard that the Chief Conſul in a diſcuſſion between him and the Portugneſe Ambaſſador, actually clenched his fiſt at him, and frightened the poor Ambaſſador very nearly out of his wits.

March 22.

The public expectation of war was greatly increaſed on Saturday. Every circumſtance ſhews Miniſters are preparing for a ſyſtem different from that they have hitherto purſued. Colonel Philips has juſt been appointed deputy Adjutant General at Malta; an office which has been vacant nine months, & which it was ſuppoſed would never have been filled up. Several other officers have been appointed to complete the ſtaff of that iſland, and hence we perceive there is no expectation of evacuating it ſoon.

A private letter from Paris ſays, the troops of the republic are concentrating on various points. In the firſt Military Diviſion (round Paris) there are forty-two thouſand men. The naval officers have received orders to join at Breſt, Havre, &c. The works of the port of Boulogne are carrying on with great activity. In faſt, the preparations making in the ſeveral ports are of a nature by far too extenſive to be intended for the colonies, and can have no other object than a maritime war.

A letter from Verona, dated Feb. 18, ſays the movements of the French troops towards the ports of the Mediterranean, have a reference to the iſland of Malta, which they will, doubtleſs, endeavor to re-take, if matters ſhould not be accommodated.

March 23.

We underſtand that ſeventeen ſail of the line are getting ready with all poſſible expedition in the inner road of Breſt. On Monday ſe'nnight there was a requiſition at Cherburgh for men, and the officers were ſending them off in waggons from that and the neighbouring place for Breſt, with the greateſt expedition.

It was confidently reported yeſterday in the city, on the authority of the French intereſt, that there will be no war; and every circumſtance ſhews that Bonaparte does not wiſh for a rupture, that the French people ſtill leſs deſire it.

LONDON, March 23.

Downing Street, March 22.

By diſpatches received this morning from the Earl of Elgin, His Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary at Conſtantinople, dated January 15, 1803, it appears that the differences which had ſubſiſted between the Sublime Porte & the Beys of Egypt, have ſatisfactorily arranged, through the medium of His Majeſty's Ambaſſador.—Lond. Gaz.

Our preparations have produced the effect of ſtopping the ſailing of the Louiſiana expedition, and of the Dutch ſquadron, under Vice Admiral Hartſinck. On Friday laſt, a Courier arrived at the French Ambaſſador's at the Hague, with orders, that the Squadron for Louiſiana ſhould remain in Port, & that the troops ſhould be cantoned at Helvoet till further orders. The expedition was to have ſailed to-day.

The Dutch funds continue falling.

Admiral Lord Gardner arrived at Portſmouth yeſterday, and is to hoiſt his flag to-day on board the Neptune.

Admiral Lord Keith is very actively employed at Plymouth in ſuperintending the fitting out of the ſhips. A great number of prime ſeamen have entered within theſe few days.

It has been rumoured, that in conſequence of the Firſt Conſul's behavior to Lord Whitworth, at the audience on Sunday ſe'nnight, his Lordſhip has intimated to the Miniſter for Foreign Affairs, that he ſhall not attend the Conſular Levees, without a proper explanation of the events of that day. His Lordſhip acts with proper ſpirit. An inſult to our Ambaſſador, is an inſult to the Britiſh nation, and an ample apology ought to be demanded for it.

A Cabinet Council ſat ſeveral hours yeſterday upon the diſpatches received from France.

LEYDEN, March 18.

The French troops deſtined for Louiſiana, are all embarked on board the tranſports at the mouth of the Meuſe. They conſiſt of 4000 infantry, a detachment of the 13th regiment of dragoons a detachment of artillery, &c. The expedition is to put to ſea in a few days.

From a London Paper of February 5.

We are happy in being able to preſent to our readers, a narrative from authority, of the movements of the 42d Regiment on the 21ſt of March, 1801. We rejoice, and we doubt not, every loyal Briton will rejoice with us, at this opportunity of twining on the brows of our brave and deſerving countrymen, thoſe laurels, which have been endeavoured to be wreſted from them by malignant ſlander. A plain and direct ſtatement of facts, is the only anſwer, which conſcious honor deigns to make, to the violent and outrageous declamation of unprovoked malice. Let the chief propagator of the calumny expreſs his contrition for his former abuſe, and by this means, endeavor to deprecate the indignation of the public, at this, and other inſtances of virulent falſehood with which he has abuſed the indulgence of this country.

INVINCIBLE STANDARD.

Narrative (by authority) of the movements of the 42d Royal Highland Regiment, on the 21ſt Mar h, 1801.

On the morning of the 21ſt March, the piquets of the reſerve had given their fire and retired, when Brigadier General Oakes ordered the left wing of the 42d to advance. Major Stirling, who commanded this wing, gained the left of the redoubt, in which the 28th regiment had taken part and were engaged, when he immediately encountered the epemy in front. They were at this time endeavouring to force the redoubt, the ruins and the corps which communicated from thence to the ſea. To the left of the Major's poſition, the road from Alexandria to Aboukir, paſſes through a conſiderable hollow which ſeparated the 42d from the guards; a ſpace which was unoccupied by any troops in the firſt line. On this road the officers of the light company deſcried and gave information of a column of the enemy directing its march upon their flank, and having with them a ſtandard and field piece. The Major himſelf ſoon after aſcertained the column to be French, and directed the officer commanding the light company to be ready to form front to his flank, in caſe any attempt ſhould be made to turn it. The firing, at the time, was very ſmart, both in his front and on the right.

Paſſing by the rear, he had juſt reached the right of the wing he commanded, when he heard a diſcharge of grape and, on returning rapidly to the left, ſaw a French battalion in his rear, with a field-piece and ſix horſes, and two loaded camels behind them. Conceiving himſelf likely to be placed between two fires, he did not heſitate to order the wing to face to right about and charge—The order was obeyed with a ſpirited promptneſs, which enſured the diſcomfiture of a part of this corps, & obtained poſſeſſion of the gun. The head of the enemy's column, followed by Major Stirling, directed it movements to the ruins, and was met by the right wing of the 42d, under Lieut. Col. Alexander Stewart, who here joined in the conflict.

Thus preſſed, a part of the column ſought ſhelter in the ruins, which they entered, receiving the fire of ſome companies of the 58th regt. The 42d at this time cloſed in with them, and their ſtandards was taken from the bearer by Major Stirling, who conſigned it in charge, to a non-commiſſioned officer. The ſurvivors of the enemy immediately ſurrendered, and were marched priſoners to the Beach by Enſign Hillas of the 42d regt.

Both wings of the 42d now quitting the ruins, formed a battalion under the orders of Lieut. Co'. A. Stewart, and proceeded to the ground which the left wing had occupied at the commencement of the action, on the left of the 28th redoubt.

Along with the 28th, the regiment was now engaged in oppoſing the repeated attempts of the enemy to force the redoubt; attempts repeated alſo, in the ſame manner, by freſh bodies endeavouring to come round to left, apparently to break the line of the 42d, and ſurround the redoubt.

The column in front kept up a heavy fire, advancing at the ſame time, when Sir Ralph Abercromby coming up to the 42d regiment, gave orders that the enemy ſhould not be allowed to gain the height. Orders were at that moment given by Lieutenant-Colonel A. Stewart to charge, which was inſtantly done, and the French infantry were driven down the declivity in a conſiderable diſtance in front, and left of the poſition of the reſerve. They retreated through the intervals of their cavalry, who were now obſerved, as the ſmoke cleared away, ſtill to the left of the 42d.

The exertions of this charge had diſordered the line, and Lieut. Col. A. Stewart, judging that the enemy's cavalry were preparing to charge in, ordered the 42d to form quickly on their ground, and prepare to receive them. This manœuvre was effected by the enemy for a deſperate charge. It was doubtleſs a moment, in which a regiment, preſſing cloſe on a retreating enemy, cannot be ſuppoſed to be correctly in line. The charge of the cavalry was made on maſſes, and in ſome places penetrated the intervals which had been occaſioned by the movement to form on the grenadiers; an order which, in the continued firing of muſquetry, could not be diſtinctly heard by the whole battalion; the right were protected by the fire of the 28th on the redoubt, and Brigadier-General Stewart bringing up his brigade at this critical moment, his own regiment gave the enemy a cloſe and well directed fire, which allowed time to the 42d to join their efforts to thoſe of the reſt of the reſerve and of the foreign brigade, in repulſing the cavalry—this ſervice was ſpeedily accompliſhed with the effect ſtated in the diſpatches of the Commander in Chief; the reſt of the action conſiſted in cheering and encouraging, as ſtated in the ſame diſpatches.

The non-commiſſioned officer (Serjeant Sinclair), to whom the Standard was given in charge, was wounded in the rear of the regiment, and by him the Standard was loſt.

The 42d reflect with great ſatisfaction on the prompt and effective ſupport they received from the 28th regiment, the flank companies of the 79th regiment, the 58th regiment, and Queen's German regiment, with whom they were immediately acted.

The above narrative was drawn up from information furniſhed by the officers concerned, and at their deſire, it has been ſubmitted to our inſpection; and we declare it conformable to our beſt obſervation and recollection of the facts.

YORK: SATURDAY, MAY 28, 1803.

The reports reſpecting the Declaration of War between Great Britain and France appear ſo contradictory, that no implicit degree of confidence can be placed in them.

It is ſtated on the authority of an arrival at Baltimore from Europe, bringing intelligence to the 1st of April, that War had actually been declared.—By information received at Boſton from Liverpool to the 21 May, it appears no Declaration of War had taken place as late as the 28th March; at that time, the confidence with which it was expected was rather diminiſhed.—We hope, ere long to be able to lay before the public more authentic [illegible] relative to this important ſubject.

Died lately at Niagara, on his way to Detroit, after a lingering illneſs, Mr. Hugh Heward, formerly Clerk in the Lieut. Governor's Office, and a reſpectable inhabitant of this town.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects might assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Case heard and decided upon; but that after they have so done, such Commissioners, or any other Commissioners, will never more sit again in the execution of the said Commission, and the Claimants who shall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have lost all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they so grossly neglected their own Interest, and omitted to avail themselves of that indulgence so repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

LONDON, March 26.

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY OF ST. PATRICK.

Yesterday being St. Patrick's Day, the benevolent Society that takes its names from this illustrious Saint, held its anniversary meeting at the London Tavern. Lord Moira presided as the representative of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Earl of Tipperary. He was supported by Lord Hutchinson, Lord Granard, and many other distinguished Noblemen and Gentlemen more immediately connected with West-Britain.

On account of the House of Commons, a considerable number were prevented from attending; but this unforseen occurrence did not obstruct the stream of their benevolence, or injure the interests of the Society. The company amounted to between five and six hundred, and nothing could exceed the harmony and convivality that prevailed during the evening.

When the cloth was removed, Lord Moira gave—

The King
The Queen
The Prince and Princess of Wales
The Duke of York and the Army
The Duke of Clarence and the Navy,

And several other loyal and constitutional toasts. An excellent band of music followed up each with an appropriate air.—Before giving "The Prince of Wales," Lord Moira observed, that his Royal Highness, with his usual munificent attention to the Society, had authorized him to continue his subscription for One Hundred Guineas (great applause). His Lordship, after a suitable preface, in which he intimated, that there were 25 children more upon the list than any former year, gave

The benevolent Society of St. Patrick.

Which was drank with three times three. He next gave

'His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the President.'

Who was received with every mark of respect.

Lord Granard said he was commanded by his Royal Highness, to express to the Society his deep regret that he was not able to attend in person, and to assure the company that no one had its prosperity more nearly at heart.

Mr. Alderman Rowcroft then observed, that he rose to propose the health of the Noble Lord, for whom he was sure every one present entertained the highest admiration and the warmest regard. At the present crisis there were many to whom the country would look to with confidence; but on the talents and gallantry of this illustrious commander, they no doubt in an especial manner relied. His past victories were an earnest of his future success. After this preface it was scarcely necessary to mention

'The Lord Viscount Hutchinson.'

The toast being drank with the greatest enthusiasm,

Lord Hutchinson spoke nearly as follows:—I return you my most sincere and hearty thanks for the flattering honor you have just done me. I regret that my professional avocations have prevented me from attending the meetings of this Society; but no one more warmly approves of its object, or takes a deeper interest in its prosperity. The worthy Alderman has greatly overrated my services. Little indeed was left for me to do. The noble veteran who conducted the expedition, himself gained the decisive advantages, and I had afterwards only to follow the example which he had set, and to execute the plans which he had concerted. The soldiers under my command shewed such perfect discipline, and such steady bravery, that no extraordinary exertion was required on my part. The event is a bright subject of exultation, as it affords a convincing proof that the valour of our troops is undiminished, and that our ancient spirit still beats high in our bosoms. We may be again called forth into the field:—our ancient foe is at our gates—but we will make a worthy resistance:—we will remember that we are contending for every thing that is dear to us as men and as citizens. While we have such Generals as my noble friend (Lord Moira) of tried abilities, with the public esteem, and with the affection of the army, we can be in no danger.—You have received from your ancestors a proud and an honorable name. I call upon you to transmit it to your posterity pure and unsullied.

We need not state how this address was received.

The children then walked through the room in procession, and the Secretary opened the budget. It appeared that for the service of the present year there had been subscribed and collected 1,504l.

Colonel Bagwell said, he should propose the health of a Nobleman who had ever shewn himself a virtuous patriot, a true friend to Ireland, and a most munificent benefactor to that institution—The Earl of Moira.

The applause was continued long beyond the ninth peal. When it had at last subsided,

Lord Moira observed, that on a day like this, and at a crisis like the present, particularly when their hearts were still glowing with the heroic sentiments expressed by his gallant, but too partial friend, he should not detain them by any acknowledgement for the manner in which they had drank his health. No expatiation upon his sensibility could do justice to his own feelings, and he considered it better to leave it to the company to define them by what he ought to feel. He had to speak of a more pleasing object than himself. This was not merely a meeting for the purpose of charity; it might this day produce benefits infinitely higher than would arise from alleviating the wretchedness of individuals. An impression would be made upon Ireland from the sentiments that were found to prevail in that room.—Politics were banished from the Society, both as they might damp conviviality, and sow permanent division. But what he was going to say he knew would meet with the approbation of every individual present. You must all be in unison, he exclaimed, with regard to the support to be given to the empire. You have much in your power. You are in some sense a representative body. Your countrymen at home will say, "Here is a collection of men, of men under no ministerial influence—unbiassed by hopes—unawed by fears—nearer the sources of information than we are, and whose interests must be inseparably united to ours.—Let us look to them." I desire them, then, to consider the policy of that nation on which some of them have in an evil hour relied for protection.—Has it not been to create dissention and discord in the countries whose subjugation was determined upon? What can be hoped from France? Popery? The army in Egypt, destroyed by my noble friend, made it their boast that they overturned the power of the Pope, and annihilated his influence. Protestantism? It was Christianity itself that they gloried in having laboured to extirpate. Property? Look to the forced loans in Holland. Independence? Weep over the fate of Switzerland. Civil Liberty? Consider with amazement the situation of France herself—groaning under the most galling and degrading yoke ever imposed upon the neck of any nation. Is it possible that any heart, nurtured by the liberal air of these Islands, should long for French protection? Is it possible that there is any head so bewildered not to perceive that French protection is another word for oppressive chains? I do not sound the trumpet of war. No one detests war more than I do, Soldier as I am, and though ready at all times to serve my Country, I do not yet call upon you to grasp the spear, but to put on the armour of hearts, warmed with true patriotism, and souls undaunted by the prospect of danger. Danger is a giant to those who fear it, but a pigmy to those who meet it with resolution. His Lordship went on to compliment Lord Hutchinson in a very high strain, and concluded with a most eloquent exhortation to cordiality and affection between the different parts of the United Kingdom.

The healths of Lord Granard, Col. Bagwell, &c. were afterwards drank, and the company was entertained with a variety of excellent songs from amateurs and professional men. Lord Moira and the Vice Presidents retired about 10 o'clock, amidst bursts of applause.

EAST INDIES.

From the Calcutta Gazette.

Extract of a letter from an officer of Major General Baird's army, to his friend at Bombay, dated Giza, opposite Grand Cairo, May 18, 1802.

"On the 15th inst. Major Genl. Baird, preparatory to the march of the army across the Desert to Suez, paid a visit of ceremony to his highneſs the Pacha of Egypt in Grand Cairo.

" The General, attended by his Staff and other officers, with an eſcort of the 8th dragoons, croſſed the river to Cairo ſide in the morning; where a Turkiſh guard of honor, conſiſting of horſe and foot were drawn up to receive him. On landing, the General was met by the Pacha's Chief Secretary and Dragoman (interpreter.)

" After the uſual compliments and honors being paid, the guards moved off in front, at a ſlow pace, towards his highneſs's palace, the kettle drums and other muſic of the Turkiſh horſe playing during the proceſſion, while the Heralds proclaimed the approach of the Britiſh General.

" On coming near the Palace (formerly Gen. Kleber's, and in which he was aſſaſſinated) we found the ſtreets lined with the Albanian guards, up to the ſteps of the great ſtaircaſe. The appearance of the ſoldiers was more ſanguinary than martial, every man, beſides his muſquet and bayonet, being armed with a brace of piſtols, a dagger and a ſword. Having arrived at the palace, the general diſmounted, when he was received by the officers of ſtate, and conducted to the chamber of audience. Here the Pacha met the General at the door, and received him in the moſt flattering and diſtinguiſhed manner. After being ſerved with coffee, ſherbet, &c. and the compliments cuſtomary on ſuch occaſions had paſſed, as well as converſation of ſome length relative to the march of the army acroſs the deſert, in the forwarding of which his Highneſs offered in the moſt unreſerved manner every aſſiſtance in his power, the general roſe to take leave: when the Pacha requeſted his acceptance of a war horſe fully capariſoned, and a ſword, adding, they were the gifts of eſteem and friendſhip. The ſtaff and other officers of the General's ſuite received alſo each a ſword.

" The General was requeſted by the Pacha, as a particular honor, to mount the horſe on leaving the Palace, which he accordingly did, and was ſaluted with nineteen guns on paſſing through the great ſquare.

" We then returned home in the ſame manner we came, amidſt an immenſe concourſe of people, and, as is uſual in moſt Muſſelmen countries, were importuned for Bucchees (money or all ſides.)

" The ſaddle and furniture preſented to General Baird muſt be of great value, the former being ſolid ſilver gilt, and the latter of crimſon velvet ſtudded with ſtars and crelents of the like metal. The horſe was one of the moſt beautiful animals I ever beheld, and of the fineſt breed in Turkey. The General's ſword was no leſs coſtly, the ſcabbard and mounting being of entire gold, and the blade one of the true Damaſcus. We afterwards learnt, that the whole had been ſent by the Grand Signior to the Pacha, on raiſing him to his preſent high ſituation in the Empire.

" Two days afterwards the Pacha returned the General's viſit, his highneſs came to the Giza ſide of the River in his ſtate barge, attended by a great number of others full of grandees, janiſſaries, attendants, &c. The morning being remarkably fine, heightened the intereſt of the ſcene. The effect of the Turkiſh muſic on the water, with the gay appearance of the various flags and pendants, was truly ſtriking.

" The Pacha on landing was received by two of the General's Staff. A ſalute of cannon immediately commenced, the troops formed in a ſtreet, preſented arms, the bands began to play. His Highneſs ſeemed highly pleaſed, bowed to the officers as he paſſed with much urbanity, and frequently remarked to the Pacha of the Albanians, and the other great officers of his ſuite, the fine and martial appearance of the ſoldiery; the Sepoys attracted much attention. A few yards from head quarters (formerly the country houſe of Murad Bey) the General accompanied by the principal officers of the army, met the Pacha, and after welcoming him to the garriſon, and the uſual compliments having paſſed, the whole proceſſion entered the grand ſaloon, which had been previouſly ornamented in the Turkiſh ſtyle, with divers carpets &c. Here the officers formed a circle, and coffee, ſherbet, &c. were ſerved up to his Highneſs in the haſtern ſtyle; the band of the 68th regiment played all the time. We remarked that the tambourin and triangle, being nearly Turkiſh, afforded him much pleaſure, eſpecially in the battle of Prague, in which Korſwarrow has introduced one of their national airs as the quick ſtep. The eyes of the Janiſſaries kindled at hearing their favorite call to battle.

" After being entertained for a conſiderable time in this manner, and many civilities exchanged on both ſides, the Pacha roſe to take leave. The General then requeſted his Highneſs, and his principal officers to accept of ſome arms of Engliſh workmanſhip, conſiſting of fuſees, piſtols, &c. and he alſo preſented the Pacha with ſome jewels ſet in the Eaſtern mode.

" On his Highneſs leaving the gateway, the General having ordered two of the Mocha to be there, begged his acceptance of them. This laſt preſent the Pacha ſeemed highly pleaſed with, as the breed is unknown in Turkey. The humps on their ſhoulders occaſioned many obſervations from the attendants.

" The General having accompanied the Pacha a few yards towards the river, his Highneſs requeſted he might go no farther; he expreſſed himſelf highly gratified with his reception, and again repeated his profeſſion of friendſhip, and anxious wiſh to aſſiſt the army in their march across the Deſert. He then embarked under the former honors and ſalute.

" The General, on this particular occaſion, and at compliment to the Pacha, wore the order of the Creſent and Diamond A grette preſented him by the Grand Signior. The officers of the army likewiſe wore ſilver medals.

" Having thus detailed to you this ceremony, I ſhall not intrude longer on your patience, and only add, that from the cordial and friendly diſpoſition of the Pacha, I think we ſhall accompliſh this arduous march across the Deſert to Suez without leſs or difficulty; and unattended by thoſe fatigues and hardſhips ſo ſeverely felt, yet ſo nobly ſurmounted, by our brave fellows in the former ordeal from the ſhores of the Red Sea across the arid and burning Deſert of the Thebaid."

DEATH OF A SINGULAR CHARACTER.

During the courſe of laſt week died at Plymouth, POLL WELLS, a character well known amongſt ſeamen at the different ſea-port towns. In the naval action of the 1ſt of June, Poll fought bravely on board the Marlborough, where, from a principle of attachment, ſhe refuſed to part from the ſailor ſhe was with, but actually bore the horrors and confuſion of the battle, fighting at a gun with all the reſolution of a hardy veteran. In the ſcene of carnage on board that ſhip, Poll ſtood firm, and after the event had proved ſucceſsful, her humanity and attention were of the higheſt utility to the unfortunate wounded. When ſhe arrived in Plymouth ſhe received 3l. her ſhare of prize-money; ſince that period ſhe has been engaged in various battles, in the moſt of which ſhe came off victorious.—London Paper.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation.

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Eſquire,

Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authoriſed to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period; and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the refpective Diftricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Cafe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
Friday, March 25.

Loan of Four Millions.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer gave notice, that he would, to morrow, in the committee of ways and means, move for a loan of four millions, to be raiſed by Exchequer bills.

LONDON, March 27.

The reports of yeſterday were of a more than ordinarily pacific complexion, and we announce with pleaſure the occurrence of ſome circumſtances which afford ſome degree of warranty to them. Among ſt others, the admiralty board yeſterday iſſued orders for granting protections to the crews of all veſſels indiſcriminately that have cleared out at the cuſtom-houſe againſt impreſs; the application for protection is to be accompanied by the certificate of clearance, in order that the benefit may be confined to thoſe veſſels in readineſs for ſea.

A letter from Berne, to an eminent commercial houſe in Hamburgh, ſays, "We are now virtually Frenchmen, & are perfectly ſenſible of the degradation of our ſituation: the government which has been impoſed on Switzerland is offenſive to the great majority of the people, and they look forward with impatience for a fafe occaſion to ſhake it off. The internal relations of France are of ſuch a nature, as muſt, within the period of a few years, produce great and wonderful changes."

Letters from Venice, and Trieſte, &c. mention that a great number of French troops were on their march to Lower Italy;—Theſe accounts add, that they are to embark for Malta and Egypt, in the event of the Engliſh delaying to evacuate them.

On Thurſday night new preſs warrants with urgent orders were ſent off in different directions, many more ſhips are ordered into commiſſion; orders have been given for all the three-deckers to be got ready for ſea ſervice as ſoon as poſſible, in preference to every other rate. From the reports yeſterday we learn, that at Portſmouth orders are received to fit for a ſtate of commiſſioning, without delay, all the line of battle ſhips at that port, not in need for repairs.

All the gun and flat bottomed boats, as well as ſmall craft, there, are ordered into a ſtate of readineſs.

The ſtock jobbers and ſpeculators in the funds were on Friday more induſtrious than uſual in circulating rumors of an alarming tendency.

The ſhips deſtined to protect the entrance of the Thames are getting ready as floating batteries with all poſſible diſpatch. They will occupy at the Nore the cuſtomary ſtation calculated for that object.

Friday Lord Nelſon had a long interview at the Admiralty with Earl Saint Vincent.

It is ſuppoſed that the Juno frigate, captain Richardſon, which ſailed from St. Helens laſt Tueſday, is deſtined to cruize off the coaſt of France. She is ſo be attended by three ſail falling cutters.

Among the reports which can be traced to that ſource only, it was aſſerted that Lord Whitworth was on his way from Paris; and that an extraordinary courier had arrived in the morning with poſitive orders from the Firſt Conſul for General Andreoſſi to return to France with all poſſible diſpatch. By ſome it was confidently maintained that a change of Miniſtry had been finally ſettled, and that the new appointments would be announced in the evening's Gazette. A third rumour ſtated that his Majeſty had been interrupted on his way to Windſor, in the morning by a Meſſenger, charged with a moſt important expreſs from Mr. Addington; and it was advanced in a fourth, that the French Funds had fallen ſo very conſiderably as to give unequivocal denotation of the renewal of hoſtilities.

Every one of theſe reports, we have no heſitation to declare, is abſolutely falſe. Lord Whitworth has not left Paris; no diſpatches whatever were yeſterday morning received from his Government by Gen. Andreoſſi; his Majeſty did not return to Buckingham-houſe after he had let out for Windſor, nor have the French Funds experienced any decline depreſſion.

With reſpect to the ſtatement of the King's return, the fact is, that his Majeſty did intend to go to Windſor, and was on the point of getting into his carriage about 8 o'clock in the morning, when a meſſenger arrived from Mr. Addington, with a letter, which was ſoon after followed by the appearance of the Miniſter himſelf. A conference then took place between his Majeſty and Mr. Addington, at the Queen's houſe, which laſted until nearly 12 o'clock. The ſubject of the conference was, no doubt, of conſiderable importance, and probably related to the diſpatches brought on Thurſday from Naples, by Mr. Perry, the Meſſenger, who paſſed through France.

Notwithſtanding the induſtry with which the rumours we have noticed were circulated, they did not produce any ſenſible effect on the funds. A great deal of buſineſs was done in the Stock Exchange in the courſe of the day, and after many fluctuations, the 2 per cent. conſols were, at the cloſe of the market, but one per cent. lower than at the opening. They ſtood at 63 1-2 diſcount. Whatever may be the iſſue of the negociation, Government relaxes nothing in the activity and extent of its preparations. We learn, with great ſatisfaction, that according to the laſt returns made at the Admiralty, only a few hundreds remain to be raiſed of the ten thouſand additional ſeamen voted by Parliament; and that no leſs than 20 ſail of the line will be ready for ſea at Plymouth, Portſmouth, Chatham, and Sheerneſs, in the courſe of the next week.

Orders have been given for all the three deckers to be got ready for ſea ſervice as ſoon as poſſible, in preference to every other rate: and an order has been iſſued for re-eſtabliſhing the ſignal ſtations along the coaſt, and Lieutenants have been appointed to ſome of them.

It appears from a commiſſion granted by the French Government to ſupport from the Republic to the Weſtindiſ Iſlands, ſo large a quantity of flour as 192,166 cwt. that no hopes are entertained of procuring ſupplies of that article from the Continent of America.

Hely Hutchinſon, late Provoſt of Trinity College, and father of Dublin, on his firſt introduction into the Iriſh parliament, delivered a ſpeech of conſiderable length on the rapid increaſe of the proſperity of Ireland.—Counſellor Caſtello, a member of the ſame parliament, liſtened with great attention to the young orator's flowery declamation, and when he had done, the counſellor got up, and expreſſed the ſatisfaction he felt on hearing that his native country was in ſuch a flouriſhing ſtate.—"When," added he, "that youthful ſenator got up to ſpeak, I had three half-pence in my pocket, and I am ſure they muſt be three guineas now!—Let me ſee."—On which he put his hand into his pocket, pulled them out, and, having looked at them for a moment, exclaimed, "Oh, by my ——, they are half-pence ſtill!"

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

Loan of Four Millions.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer gave notice, that he would, to morrow, in the committee of ways and means, move for a loan of four millions, to be raiſed by Exchequer bills.

LONDON, March 27.

The reports of yeſterday were of a more than ordinarily pacific complexion, and we announce with pleaſure the occurrence of ſome circumſtances which afford ſome degree of warranty to them. Among ſt others, the admiralty board yeſterday iſſued orders for granting protections to the crews of all veſſels indiſcriminately that have cleared out at the cuſtom-houſe againſt impreſs; the application for protection is to be accompanied by the certificate of clearance, in order that the benefit may be confined to thoſe veſſels in readineſs for ſea.

A letter from Berne, to an eminent commercial houſe in Hamburgh, ſays, "We are now virtually Frenchmen, & are perfectly ſenſible of the degradation of our ſituation: the government which has been impoſed on Switzerland is offenſive to the great majority of the people, and they look forward with impatience for a fafe occaſion to ſhake it off. The internal relations of France are of ſuch a nature, as muſt, within the period of a few years, produce great and wonderful changes."

Letters from Venice, and Trieſte, &c. mention that a great number of French troops were on their march to Lower Italy;—Theſe accounts add, that they are to embark for Malta and Egypt, in the event of the Engliſh delaying to evacuate them.

On Thurſday night new preſs warrants with urgent orders were ſent off in different directions, many more ſhips are ordered into commiſſion; orders have been given for all the three-deckers to be got ready for ſea ſervice as ſoon as poſſible, in preference to every other rate. From the reports yeſterday we learn, that at Portſmouth orders are received to fit for a ſtate of commiſſioning, without delay, all the line of battle ſhips at that port, not in need for repairs.

All the gun and flat bottomed boats, as well as ſmall craft, there, are ordered into a ſtate of readineſs.

The ſtock jobbers and ſpeculators in the funds were on Friday more induſtrious than uſual in circulating rumors of an alarming tendency.

The ſhips deſtined to protect the entrance of the Thames are getting ready as floating batteries with all poſſible diſpatch. They will occupy at the Nore the cuſtomary ſtation calculated for that object.

Friday Lord Nelſon had a long interview at the Admiralty with Earl Saint Vincent.

It is ſuppoſed that the Juno frigate, captain Richardſon, which ſailed from St. Helens laſt Tueſday, is deſtined to cruize off the coaſt of France. She is ſo be attended by three ſail falling cutters.

Among the reports which can be traced to that ſource only, it was aſſerted that Lord Whitworth was on his way from Paris; and that an extraordinary courier had arrived in the morning with poſitive orders from the Firſt Conſul for General Andreoſſi to return to France with all poſſible diſpatch. By ſome it was confidently maintained that a change of Miniſtry had been finally ſettled, and that the new appointments would be announced in the evening's Gazette. A third rumour ſtated that his Majeſty had been interrupted on his way to Windſor, in the morning by a Meſſenger, charged with a moſt important expreſs from Mr. Addington; and it was advanced in a fourth, that the French Funds had fallen ſo very conſiderably as to give unequivocal denotation of the renewal of hoſtilities.

Every one of theſe reports, we have no heſitation to declare, is abſolutely falſe. Lord Whitworth has not left Paris; no diſpatches whatever were yeſterday morning received from his Government by Gen. Andreoſſi; his Majeſty did not return to Buckingham-houſe after he had let out for Windſor, nor have the French Funds experienced any decline depreſſion.

With reſpect to the ſtatement of the King's return, the fact is, that his Majeſty did intend to go to Windſor, and was on the point of getting into his carriage about 8 o'clock in the morning, when a meſſenger arrived from Mr. Addington, with a letter, which was ſoon after followed by the appearance of the Miniſter himſelf. A conference then took place between his Majeſty and Mr. Addington, at the Queen's houſe, which laſted until nearly 12 o'clock. The ſubject of the conference was, no doubt, of conſiderable importance, and probably related to the diſpatches brought on Thurſday from Naples, by Mr. Perry, the Meſſenger, who paſſed through France.

Notwithſtanding the induſtry with which the rumours we have noticed were circulated, they did not produce any ſenſible effect on the funds. A great deal of buſineſs was done in the Stock Exchange in the courſe of the day, and after many fluctuations, the 2 per cent. conſols were, at the cloſe of the market, but one per cent. lower than at the opening. They ſtood at 63 1-2 diſcount. Whatever may be the iſſue of the negociation, Government relaxes nothing in the activity and extent of its preparations. We learn, with great ſatisfaction, that according to the laſt returns made at the Admiralty, only a few hundreds remain to be raiſed of the ten thouſand additional ſeamen voted by Parliament; and that no leſs than 20 ſail of the line will be ready for ſea at Plymouth, Portſmouth, Chatham, and Sheerneſs, in the courſe of the next week.

Orders have been given for all the three deckers to be got ready for ſea ſervice as ſoon as poſſible, in preference to every other rate: and an order has been iſſued for re-eſtabliſhing the ſignal ſtations along the coaſt, and Lieutenants have been appointed to ſome of them.

It appears from a commiſſion granted by the French Government to ſupport from the Republic to the Weſtindiſ Iſlands, ſo large a quantity of flour as 192,166 cwt. that no hopes are entertained of procuring ſupplies of that article from the Continent of America.

Hely Hutchinſon, late Provoſt of Trinity College, and father of Dublin, on his firſt introduction into the Iriſh parliament, delivered a ſpeech of conſiderable length on the rapid increaſe of the proſperity of Ireland.—Counſellor Caſtello, a member of the ſame parliament, liſtened with great attention to the young orator's flowery declamation, and when he had done, the counſellor got up, and expreſſed the ſatisfaction he felt on hearing that his native country was in ſuch a flouriſhing ſtate.—"When," added he, "that youthful ſenator got up to ſpeak, I had three half-pence in my pocket, and I am ſure they muſt be three guineas now!—Let me ſee."—On which he put his hand into his pocket, pulled them out, and, having looked at them for a moment, exclaimed, "Oh, by my ——, they are half-pence ſtill!"

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, JUNE 11, 1803.

The latest dates from London in our possession are down to the 28th March. They do not throw any decisive light on the important question of peace or war.—At that period the Admiralty Board had issued protections to the crews of all vessels indiscriminately, that had cleared out at the custom-house, against impress; the protection was confined to vessels in readiness for sea. This indicates a pacific disposition on our part, and it was generally believed in France that war would not take place; nevertheless, the most active preparations continue in all our ports.

Saturday last being the anniversary of his Majesty's Birthday, the customary rejoicings took place here;—at noon a Royal Salute was fired at the Garrison, intersected at every seventh gun, by a volley of small arms from the detachment of the 49th Regiment on duty there.—We are pleased to say, the 49th Regiment made a very martial appearance, and went through the different military manœuvres and evolutions with a regularity and promptitude which does them much honor.

On Wednesday last departed this life, Mr. Joseph Ketchum, aged 82 years. His remains were interred on the following day.

Proclamation.

GEORGE the Third, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:—

WHEREAS, by our Proroga-tion bearing date the eleventh day of April last, we thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the eighteenth day of this present month of May, at which time in Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the twenty-fifth day of June next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the great seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire our Lieutenant Governor of our said province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this fourteenth Day of MAY, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and forty third of our reign.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intituled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds of Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province but so the All the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that if such gross negligence and mistaken is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in affording to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Nagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

LONDON, April 6.

A bridge of boats is erected over the Thames, from Tilbury Fort to Graveſend; in conſequence of which the Governors of Trinity-houſe have given notice to all captains of veſſels not to come to an anchor within half a mile above or below Graveſend; which diſtance is marked out with White Nun Buoys on both ſides the river.

April 7.

Lord Hutchinſon received the freedom of the city and a ſword of 100 guineas value, on Tueſday laſt.

The bridge of boats ordered to be erected at Graveſend, is to leave an aperture in the centre of the river, ſufficient for veſſels of any burden to work through upon tacks, and which can be cleared by boats that will lay at anchor cloſe by, in a few minutes.

Captain Seymour is appointed to the command of the Ville de Paris, captain Grindal to the Prince, and captain Spicer to the San Joſef.—All officers appointed to ſhips are ordered to join immediately.

April 12.

This day we received Paris Journals of the 8th and 9th inſt. Their contents are comparatively unimportant. It is obvious that the French with to narrow the offenſible points of diſpute, and to put every thing out of view except Malta, conſidered as a prominent feature in the treaty of Amiens; and many of our cotemporaries ſeem to take this French view of the queſtion. We do not pretend to a knowledge of the preciſe points under diſcuſſion, but we know that in the face of Europe, France has given ſuch cauſe of provocation and alarm, as to convince every perſon who does not wilfully cloſe his eyes, that the treaty of Amiens was no treaty of peace to this country. A miniſterial paper of this morning preſents us on this ſubject the following paragraph:

"Some of our cotemporaries are ſtill weaving fine ſpun ſpeculations upon the ſubject of the cauſes of the preſent differences between this country and France, and arraigning the conduct of miniſters, becauſe it does not happen to verify their conjectures. We ſhall only ſay in anſwer, that no real information has yet tranſpired upon the ſubject, and that it is but common juſtice to wait with candor and patience till the concluſion of the negociation enables miniſters to lay the reſult and the documents relating to it before the public; when we have no doubt that their conduct will not only give the lie to all the conjectural terrors with which they are charged, but will alſo be found perfectly juſtifiable, and highly honorable to themſelves and to their country."

April 18.

Fourteen thouſand French troops have already entered Holland.

The bulk of the French troops ſent to Holland will be proviſionally ſtationed in garriſon, or cantoned in Breda, Bergen-op-Zoom, Bois-le-Duc, Huiſden, Gertruydenberg, and in the environs of thoſe frontier places, and will not march into the interior of the Batavian Republic, except in caſe of an actual war with England.

PLYMOUTH, April 4.

The Tonnant, of 80 guns, capt. Sir E. Pellew, is completed for ſea, and the moment the wind is favorable, ſhe will go out of harbour, and join the ſquadron in Cawſand Bay.

CHATHAM, April 5.

The commanders of the Ardent, Thunderer, and Utrecht, have received orders to join the ſquadron in Cawſand Bay as ſoon as poſſible; it is expected they will leave the Nore on Sunday.

VIENNA, APRIL 2.

The Imperial Ambaſſador at the Court of London, has ſent a Courier, to announce to our Court, the miſunderſtandings which has recently occurred between England and France, in conſequence of which our government has reſolved, in caſe of war, to obſerve the moſt ſtrict neutrality with regard to the Auſtrian ports and countries bordering on the Adriatic ſea. The French Ambaſſador, Champegny, has ſent a Courier to Paris to adviſe his Government of this event. It is believed that our Court will not interfere, in any manner, with the differences between France and England: but as France is ſending conſiderable reinforcements into Italy, we think the ſame precautionary meaſures ought to be adopted on our part; and that the troops which occupy the neighbouring garriſons, ought to be in readineſs to march to their proper deſtinations.

The Ruſſian Ambaſſador Raſumowſky, and the Engliſh Miniſter Arthur Plagel, had obtained leave of abſence for ſix months, but they have determined to make no uſe of it while the preſent unſettled ſtate of affairs exiſt.

FRANKFORT, APRIL 10.

Colonel Erſkine has paſſed thro' our city from Vienna, in great haſte for London. It is ſaid he is charged with diſpatches of the higheſt importance.

HAGUE.

The Belgic papers have announced, that in caſe of war, the Batavian government would fit out 12 ſhips of the line, 6 frigates, and ſome ſmaller veſſels. This meaſure would be without effect, ſeeing, that if a rupture ſhould take place, our ports would be blockaded by a fleet much ſuperior to ours. Beſides, the armament of 12 ſhips of the line, in the critical ſtate of our finances, would be extremely difficult.

ROTTERDAM, April 8.

We now know, that the armament for Tobago, now in the port of Dunkirk, has 2000 men on board. It has been already announced that General Cæſar Berthier is at the head of that armament, as Governor-General of the colony of Tobago.

April 12.

By an expreſs order from the Firſt Conſul, the Louiſiana expedition is definitively ſuſpended. The French General began the day before yeſterday to debark the troops that were on board the veſſels; they will proceed, with the other troops newly arrived in this Republic, to different deſtinations both on the frontiers and elſewhere. In ſeveral of our towns, among others at Nimeguen and Grave, their entrance was at firſt oppoſed by the commandants of the Dutch garriſons; but after an ulterior explanation, theſe commandants thought fit to yield to neceſſity and force. Perſons of good information of what is paſſing, and who have acceſs to all the principal functionaries of the government, ſtate as a matter of certainty, that among the 12 members of the Government, there is a party that has abſolutely proteſted againſt the meaſure of France; in conſequence of which the French troops have, in ſuch great numbers, entered our territory. The majority has, however, judged that proteſtation to be, in our preſent circumſtances, impolitic.

From a Paris Paper of the 23d April.

BRUSSELS, APRIL 15.

All the French troops from Antwerp have entered the fortifications which border on the frontiers of the Batavian Republic, where they are waiting for orders.

The whole of the troops deſtined for Louiſiana, have been diſembarked.

NEW YORK, May 28.

Capt. Skinner, of the ſhip Iris, who arrived laſt evening in 27 days from London, has brought papers to the 24th of April inclufive, 17 days later than we had before received.

Nothing deciſive yet appears on the ſubject of war. Vigorous preparations are ſtill going forward both in England and France. No change has yet taken place in the Britiſh Miniſtry.

The Firſt Conſul has expreſsly ordered a definitive ſuſpenſion of the expedition to Louiſiana.

The correſpondence which has paſſed between the Miniſter ſent by the new Grand Maſter of Malta and Sir A-

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

[FROM THE NEW-YORK SPECTATOR.]

THE ADIEU.

LAURA! the sighs must now no more
My suffering deep denote;
Nor dare I hang thy sorrows o'er,
Nor chase their dust in vain.

Yet while thy bosom heaves that sigh,
While tears thy cheek bedew,
Ah think! that doom'd from thee to fly,
My heart speaks no adieu.

Thee would I bid to check those sighs,
If thine were heard alone;
Thou would I bid to dry those eyes,
If tears for me in my own.

One last long kiss, and then we part—
Another—and adieu!
Remember all thy lover's heart
For mine is breaking too.

Perhaps there is no part of the Husbandman's care which has been so much neglected in this country as the management of "his FRUIT TREES. Pudendum from the hand "of Nature, all the requisites of soil and climate to "make our orchards the pride of vegetation, and "the source of numbered comforts and wealth, "we should have aided her kind arrangements, and "cultivated, with grateful offerings, the choicest of "her gifts; but the very reverse of this has been "our practice. The wretched appearance of our "orchards in general; their scanty benefits, their "sickly and unfavorg fruits; their frequent blights, "and their early decays, prove the existence of some "radical evil in their management, and loudly call "for the consulting hand of the skilful Husbandman. "To teach him this duty in its most improved form, "and to lead him to a practical acquaintance with the "character and cultivation of FRUIT TREES, is "the design of this publication. The best judges of "the subject in this country have pronounced it a "work of unequalled merit and importance."

GEORGE the Third, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:—

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the fourteenth day of May last, we tho't fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this present month of June, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the third day of August next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the great seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire our Lieutenant Governor of our said province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this twenty-first Day of JUNE, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and forty-third of our reign. UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

ST. MICHAEL'S CAVE.

Among the natural curioſities of Gibraltar and its vicinity, the Cave of St. Michael holds a diſtinguiſhed rank. Superſtition has made it the ſcene of many ſtrange occurrences, and tradition has connected with its hiſtory adventures ſuited only to the fictions of romance. The ſanguinary conteſts that formerly ſubſiſted between the Moors and the Spaniards, abounded in events which, with a little coloring from fancy, are ſuppoſed to have originated theſe tales.

The following deſcription is from the journal of an American gentleman, by whom it has been lately viſited.

"The entrance into St. Michael's Cave is about 11 feet wide and 9 high, immediately opening into an irregular circle, the diameter of which is probably 60 feet, height 70. From your firſt entrance you deſcend an inclined plane 25 or 30 feet, by ſteps formed from the clay of the cave—here you view huge columns ſuſpended from the top of the cave, formed by the inceſſant dropping of the waters, and which being highly charged with calcarious matters petrifies as it falls, giving a variety of duſky ſhades to the maſſy ſupporters of the roof. One of theſe columns muſt have been at leaſt 40 feet in length and 20 in circumference, and in whoſe formation the tardy hand of petrifaction might vie with the moſt ſkilful architecture; whilſt their beauty not only defies, but is heightened by the ravages of time. The columns of the Saint's Cave alone riſe ſuperior to this common deſtroyer. Nearly in the centre of the firſt apartment we found a vaſe handſomely formed, and filled with remarkably fine water, which, filtering through, and dripping from the upper part of the rock, becomes perfectly pure and cold, affording a delightful refreſhment. 'Tis thus that nature, even in her moſt ſportive moments, evinces her friendſhip for the curious and enterprising. Many ſmall arched chapels are ſeen on either ſide of the apartment, and the gloomy magnificence of the whole was much increaſed by the reflection from the light of our torches.

"My imagination carried me into the mouldering ruins of a gothic cathedral, where, againſt that column which now ſupported me, the enthuſiaſt has opened her nightly oriſons; but the exceſſive damps chilled my fancy, and powerfully affailed my piety, forcing me to acknowledge my unwillingneſs to attend veſpers with my imaginary NUNS.

"After refreſhing ourſelves, we found to the eaſtward a ſecond entrance, ſimilar to the one in which we had been admitted. Our journey was ſoon interrupted by diſcovering that we were on the very brink of a precipice, which preſented to our view (by the aſſiſtance of large rolls of greaſed paper lighted, and thrown down) a ſecond circular room; its perpendicular deſcent about 25 feet. On returning, we diſcovered a ſmall opening in the rock, which admitted but one perſon to creep in: it was with difficulty and danger we purſued this narrow winding paſſage for about 30 feet, (in ſome places 3 or 4 feet perpendicular) when we were received into the apartment we had juſt been viewing from above. This was alſo handſomely arched, and curiouſly wrought, but preſented few columns; its length 50 feet, breadth 30, heighth 35 or 40. At the ſouthern extremity, we were again carried into a third narrower entrance, which alſo led to a precipice; its depth unknown; the light of our torches and fire-balls of greaſed paper, gave us a view of almoſt 90 feet perpendicular. On our return from this narrow paſſage, we diſcovered two pools of water, the largeſt about 9 feet in diameter, depth uncertain: the chryſtal ſtreams of the golden age could not have ſurpaſſed them in purity.

"From this ſecond apartment we deſcended into a third, by a perpendicular deſcent of about 10 feet, length 20 feet, breadth 12, height 12 or 15. From this we returned to our firſt ſtarting place; and after having viſited the friendly vaſe, and poured libations to the Naiad of the fount, we purſued our journey ſouthward, deſcending into ſeveral ſimilar chambers; but, the offenſive and humid atmoſphere—the difficulty in deſcending, and the certainty of not being able to penetrate much deeper without ſtrong and lengthy cords, induced us to return. In all of the chambers we found innumerable quantities of bats.

"At 6 P. M. we left the Cave of Saint Michael, reſolving to pay it a ſecond and more ſatisfactory viſit when we ſhould be better prepared to explore its receſſes."

The Double Diſappointment.

Johnſon tells us, in his life of the great Frederic of Pruſſia, that his Majeſty was particularly attached to his tall regiment—and that if he met with a woman of more than common height, he conſigned her to Berlin, and married her to one of his giants, intending thereby to propagate procerity, and procure heirs for the father's habiliments. The following circumſtance proves the truth of this pompous paragraph. As the King was one day travelling incognito through Brandenburgh, arrayed in a blue coat, little hat and worſted ſtockings, he caſt his eyes upon a young woman who was near ſeven feet high. Such a ſight as this never eſcaped him, and he alighted from his horſe, and cauſed her to be brought before him—when, finding that ſhe was a poor ſhoemaker's daughter, unmarried, unengaged, and only nineteen years of age, he immediately wrote a letter to the Col. of the royal regiment of grenadier guards at Berlin, commanding him to cauſe the bearer to be inſtantly married to the talleſt man in the corps, and to be preſent at the ceremony. This letter he delivered to the girl, without informing her of the contents, but making her a handſome preſent, enjoined her to carry it as directed, deliver it into the colonel's own hand, and wait for an anſwer; this done he proceeded on his journey. The wench having never been at Berlin, and not ſuſpecting the rank of the perſonage who gave her the letter, bargained with a little old woman in the neighbourhood to carry it. The deputy was true to her truſt, and delivered the letter as directed; but the colonel, on reading it, was ſurpriſed; however, his Majeſty's orders were peremptory, and muſt be obeyed; the parties met, and were married; and the affair remained a myſtery, until the king's return to the capital: when the firſt perſons he wiſhed to ſee, were his handſome new married couple. He was aſtoniſhed at the ſight of the bride, and in great wrath demanded how ſhe came to practice ſuch an a-

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

ST. MICHAEL's CAVE.

Among the natural curioſities of Gibraltar and its vicinity, the Cave of St. Michael holds a diſtinguiſhed rank. Superſtition has made it the ſcene of many ſtrange occurrences, and tradition has connected with its hiſtory adventures ſuited only to the fictions of romance. The ſanguinary conteſts that formerly ſubſiſted between the Moors and the Spaniards, abounded in events which, with a little coloring from fancy, are ſuppoſed to have originated theſe tales.

The following deſcription is from the journal of an American gentleman, by whom it has been lately viſited.

"The entrance into St. Michael's Cave is about 11 feet wide and 9 high, immediately opening into an irregular circle, the diameter of which is probably 60 feet, height 70. From your firſt entrance you deſcend an inclined plane 25 or 30 feet, by ſteps formed from the clay of the cave—here you view huge columns ſuſpended from the top of the cave, formed by the inceſſant dripping of the waters, and which being highly charged with calcarious matter, petrifies as it falls, giving a variety of duſky ſhades to the maſſy ſupporters of the roof. One of theſe columns muſt have been at leaſt 40 feet in length and 30 in circumference, and in whole formation the tardy hand of petrifaction might vie with the moſt elegant architecture; whilſt their beauty not only defies, but is heightened by the ravages of time. The columns of the Saint's Cave alone riſe ſuperior to this common deſtroyer. Nearly in the centre of the firſt apartment we found a vaſe handſomely formed, and filled with remarkably fine water, which, filtering through, and dripping from the upper part of the rock, becomes perfectly pure and cold, affording a delightful refreſhment. 'Tis thus that nature, even in her moſt ſportive moments, evinces her friendſhip for the curious and enterprizing. Many ſmall arched chapels are ſeen on either ſide of the apartment, and the gloomy magnificence of the whole was much increaſed by the reflection from the light of our torches.

"My imagination carried me into the mouldering ruins of a gothic cathedral, where, againſt that column which now ſupported me, the enthuſiaſt has opened her nightly oriſons; but the exceſſive damps chilled my fancy, and powerfully affailed my piety, forcing me to acknowledge my unwillingneſs to attend veſpers with my imaginary NUNS.

"After refreſhing ourſelves, we found to the eaſtward a ſecond entrance, ſimilar to the one in which we had been admitted. Our journey was ſoon interrupted by diſcovering that we were on the very brink of a precipice, which preſented to our view (by the aſſiſtance of large rolls of greaſed paper lighted, and thrown down) a ſecond circular room; its perpendicular deſcent about 25 feet. On returning, we diſcovered a ſmall opening in the rock, which admitted but one perſon to creep in: it was with difficulty and danger we purſued this narrow winding paſſage for about 30 feet, (in ſome places 3 or 4 feet perpendicular) when we were received into the apartment we had juſt been viewing from above. This was alſo handſomely arched, and curiouſly wrought, but preſented few columns; its length 50 feet, breadth 30, heighth 35 or 40. At the ſouthern extremity, we were again carried into a third narrower entrance, which alſo led to a precipice; its depth unknown. The light of our torches and fire-balls of greaſed paper, gave us a view of almoſt 90 feet perpendicular. On our return from this narrow paſſage, we diſcovered two pools of water, the largeſt about 9 feet in diameter, depth uncertain: the chryſtal ſtreams of the golden age could not have ſurpaſſed them in purity.

"From this ſecond apartment we deſcended into a third, by a perpendicular deſcent of about 10 feet, length 20 feet, breadth 12, height 12 or 15. From this we returned to our firſt ſtarting place; and after having viſited the friendly vaſe, and poured libations to the Naiad of the fount, we purſued our journey ſouthward, deſcending into ſeveral ſimilar chambers; but, the offenſive and humid atmoſphere—the difficulty in deſcending, and the certainty of not being able to penetrate much deeper without ſtrong and lengthy cords, induced us to return. In all of the chambers we found innumerable quantities of bats.

"At 6 P. M. we left the Cave of Saint Michael, reſolving to pay it a ſecond and more ſatisfactory viſit when we ſhould be better prepared to explore its receſſes."

The Double Diſappointment.

Johnſon tells us, in his life of the great Frederic of Pruſſia, that his Majeſty was particularly attached to his tall regiment—and that if he met with a woman of more than common height, he configned her to Berlin, and married her to one of his giants, intending thereby to propagate procerity, and procure heirs for the father's habiliments. The following circumſtance proves the truth of this pompous paragraph. As the King was one day travelling incognito through Brandenburgh, arrayed in a blue coat, little hat and worſted ſtockings, he caſt his eyes upon a young woman who was near ſeven feet high. Such a ſight as this never eſcaped him, and he alighted from his horſe, and cauſed her to be brought before him—when, finding that ſhe was a poor ſhoemaker's daughter, unmarried, unengaged, and only nineteen years of age, he immediately wrote a letter to the Col. of the royal regiment of grenadier guards at Berlin, commanding him to cauſe the bearer to be inſtantly married to the talleſt man in the corps, and to be preſent at the ceremony. This letter he delivered to the girl, without informing her of the contents, but making her a handſome preſent, enjoined her to carry it as directed, deliver it into the colonel's own hand, and wait for an anſwer; this done he proceeded on his journey. The wench having never been at Berlin, and not ſuſpecting the rank of the perſonage who gave her the letter, bargained with a little old woman in the neighbourhood to carry it. The deputy was true to her truſt, and delivered the letter as directed; but the colonel, on reading it, was ſurpriſed; however, his Majeſty's orders were peremptory, and muſt be obeyed; the parties met, and were married; and the affair remained a myſtery, until the king's return to the capital: when the firſt perſons he wiſhed to ſee, were his handſome new married couple. He was aſtoniſhed at the ſight of the bride, and in great wrath demanded how ſhe came to practice ſuch an a-abominable deceit? The woman told him the truth, and lifting up her eyes to the ceiling, acknowledged "the kindness of Providence in bringing about such a wonderful work of charity, by such unexpected means."

CURIOUS SOLILOQUY.

The following jeu d'esprit is from the pen of Garrick. It is well known that his friend and fome time competitor, the famous Quin, was a very diftinguifhed epicure. As a connoiffeur of wines, and an admirer of high living, he held an elevated rank among the bon vivants of the day. It is true that Quin was not one of your ftupid gormandizers, or vapid carouſers, but a wit of the true attic ſort; and, at the entertainments he gave, Apollo, as well as Bacchus, might with pleaſure have preſided.

Quin is ſuppoſed to have uttered the following ſoliloquy on ſurveying the body of Duke Humphrey, embalmed in the church of St. Albans:—

"A plague on Egypt's arts, I ſay;
Embalm the dead! on ſenſeleſs clay,
Rich wines and ſpices waſte!
Like ſturgeon or like brawn thall I,
Bound in a precious pickle, lie,
Which I can never taſte?
"Let me embalm this fleſh of mine
With turtle fat and Bordeaux wine,
And ſpoil the Egyptian trade.
Then good Duke Humphrey, happier I
Embalm'd alive; old Quin ſhall die
A mummy ready made."

The following anecdote of Sir Sidney Smith is related by a gentleman who attended him in Egypt:—At that important moment, when the French were driven from the walls of Acre, the Pacha, in the firſt paroxiſm of joy and ſurpriſe, exclaimed, "Sir Sidney Smith ſhall be King of Acre." That gallant officer, ſeizing the opportunity, claimed the fulfilment of his promiſe, by requiring the reins of Government for one day only. This requeſt was granted, and Sir Sidney devoted that day to opening the priſons, and liberating a number of unhappy victims of Turkiſh barbarity, who had long languiſhed in thoſe loathſome dungeons.

The following is recommended as a cure for the ague and fever—3 1-2 drachms Jeſuit bark, 1 1-2 do. Venus Treacle, the juice of two ſmall lemons, 1 1-2 gills Port wine, mix them well in a bottle—take one third in the morning, one third at noon, and the remainder in the evening, the day the fit is to come on.

CULTURE OF POTATOES.

Extract of a letter from Joſeph Bartel, Eſq. to the correſponding ſecretary of the Maſſachuſetts Agricultural Society.

Pleaſant Hall, Jan. 1, 1803.

"I have, for ſeveral years, made experiments on potatoes (ſome of which I communicated to the ſociety) and from them I am fully convinced, that ſmall potatoes are as good for ſeed as large, that three in a hill are better than a larger quantity, that cut potatoes are better than whole, and that the eyes are beſt of all.

"The paſt ſeaſon I planted my potator fields chiefly with eyes, and had, in ſome parts, a prodigious increaſe, and in the field throughout, full as large a crop as any of my neighbours, although they planted from eight to ten buſhels on an acre; and I planted a ſhort half buſhel on an acre, and if I had cut the eyes carefully, I am ſure there would not have been a peck to an acre. In this method there will be an immenſe ſaving of more than nineteen-twentieths of the ſeed, which is well worth the attention of every farmer who dares to differ from the practice of his father. My overſeer, wanting faith in this method, planted a ſingle large potatoe, with many eyes, in a hill, and it produced only thirty-four potatoes of all ſizes." [Balance.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, Eſquire, Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper-Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, for any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

We [illegible] its reſutation for the information of the pu[illegible].]

LONDON, APRIL 7.

We have, in a ſubſequent part of our paper, given a copy of the Conſular Manifeſto, alluded to in our laſt, and which, from the circumſtances under which it has been publiſhed, may be conſidered as the formal anſwer of Bonaparte to the late Meſſage of his Britannic Majeſty to both Houſes of Parliament. The mean and unworthy expedient to which the Conſular Agent has had recourſe to obtain the inſertion of this farrago in the Hamburgh Journal, has already been ſtated by us; and a proceeding more diſgraceful to its author, but rarely occurs in the annals of ancient or modern times. It is a violation of every principle of independence, equity and decorum, and an abominable attempt to deprive the preſs of every feature of freedom, and render it entirely ſubvervient to the moſt vile and pernicious purpoſes. So deſpicable a trick, ſo degrading a ſtratagem, muſt greatly leſſen the character of the Chief Conſul in the eyes of mankind, who will now view the political Coloſſus of Europe, as through an inverted teleſcope, diminiſhed, "almoſt too ſmall for ſight."

The Manifeſto itſelf is of ſo contemptible a nature, as ſcarcely to require refutation: nor ſhall we occupy the attention of our readers by paſſing in minute review, a production, in which ſound uſurps the place of ſenſe, words appear inſtead of reaſon, and aſſertions are paſſed for argument. A ſlight peruſal of it will be ſufficient to detect the fallacy and abſurdity of the whole, and excite the indignation of every liberal and enlightened mind. Whatever poiſon it may contain, carries with it a ſufficient antidote. The arguments are all hackniſd, and have long ſince been combated with ſucceſs; the language, like all the other effuſions of the Conſular ſcribes, is pettiſh and puerile; and the invective, particularly as far as regards one of the moſt amiable and virtuous Sovereigns of the age, at once baſe, unmanly, and infamous. The liberties of Europe are ſpoken of by a deſpot, whoſe leading principle it has been to enſlave every nation on earth; and the moſt unfounded aſſertions are brought in aid of the moſt flagrant outrages that ever diſgraced the chief of any government. In the irritableneſs of his diſpoſition, in the violence of his anger, he ſeems, indeed, to have loſt his reaſon; and, compared with this Manifeſto of Bonaparte, the memorable challenge of Paul becomes dignified and rational. The converſation at the Thuilleries, which we were the firſt to preſent to the public, is not only admitted to have taken place, but is attempted to be juſtified. It appears to have been intended to anticipate the labour of a formal appeal to the different Powers of the Continent; but having failed of the deſired effect, it is now publiſhed with a commentary more freteful than the text, which can produce no other ſenſation than that of univerſal contempt. The Manifeſto, among other abſurdities, boldly aſſerts, that ſhould war be renewed, the financial ſyſtem of France will be found more ſimple and ſolid than that of England.—Upon ſo extraordinary and unfounded an aſſertion, we cannot help making one ſhort remark.—During the late conteſt, France may be ſaid to have raiſed the neceſſary ſupplies from the Continental Powers then in hoſtility with her. In a war with England alone, France muſt depend upon her own internal reſources, which were ſo lately found inadequate to that purpoſe, or cruſh altogether thoſe Powers whom ſhe has already ſo grievouſly oppreſſed. But to conclude, we are, on the whole, of opinion, that Bonaparte, notwithſtanding the peeviſhneſs of the wretched farrago in queſtion, is by no means inclined to appeal at preſent to the ſword. He betrays evident ſymptoms of impotence throughout;—though he ſometimes ſtorms, he whines in the very ſame breath; and feeling his incapacity for war, he may be induced to yield, while he has an opportunity of ſo doing, without the appearance of ſubmiſſion.

[FROM A GLASGOW PAPER.]

EXTRAORDINARY CHARACTER.

A ſhort time ſince died at Hornchurch, in Eſſex, Edward Nokes, aged 66, by trade a Tinker, which he followed zealouſly till about ſix weeks before his death. His apartments pourtrayed ſymptoms of the moſt abject poverty, though at his death he was found to be poſſeſſed of property to the amount of between Five and Six Thouſand Pounds. He had a wife and ſeveral children, which he brought up in the moſt parſimonius manner, often feeding them on grains and offals of meat, which he purchaſed at reduced prices. He was no leſs remarkable in his perſon and dreſs; for, in order to ſave the expence of ſhaving, he would encourage the dirt to gather on his face, to hide in ſome meaſure this defect.

He never ſuffered his ſhirt to be waſhed in water. His coat, which time had transformed into a jacket, would have puzzled the wiſeſt philoſopher to make out its original colour, ſo covered was it with ſhreds and patches of different colours, and thoſe ſo diverſified, as to reſemble the trophies of the different nations of Europe, and ſeemed to vie with Joſeph's "coat of many colours."

The intereſt of his money, together with all he could heap up from his penurious mode of living, he uſed to depoſit in a bag, which bag was covered up in a tin pot, and then conveyed to a brick kitchen; one of the bricks was taken up, and a hole made juſt large enough to hold the pot; the brick was then carefully marked, and tally kept behind the door, of the ſum depoſited. One day his wife diſcovered this hoard, and reſolving to profit by the opportunity, took from the pot one out of ſixteen guineas, that were then placed there. Her huſband ſoon diſcovered the trick, for when he came to count the money, and finding it not agree with the tally behind the door, which his wife did not know of, he taxed her with the theft, and to the day of his death, even to his death bed, he never spoke to her without adding the epithet Dear, to every expression.

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

In his younger days, he used at the death of any of his children, to have a little Deal box to put them in, and without undergoing the solemn requisites of a regular funeral, he would take them upon his shoulders to the place appropriated for their reception, where, once interred, he seemingly reconciled with the old adage, "out of sight, out of mind," and went home as unconcerned as if nothing had happened.

A short time before his death, which he evidently hastened by the daily use of near a quart of spirits, he gave a strict charge that his coffin should not have a nail in it, which was actually the case, the lid being fastened, its hinges made of cord; there was no plate on the coffin, but barely the initials E. N. cut out of the lid. His shroud was made of a pound of wool; the coffin was covered with a sheet instead of a pall, and was carried by six men, to each of whom he left half a crown; and all his particular desire, not one who followed him to the grave wore mourning; but on the contrary, each of the mourners seemed to try who should be most strikingly the Undertaker even being habited in a blue coat and scarlet waistcoat. He died without a will, and his fortune was equally divided between his wife and family.

INDUSTRY THE CURE FOR POVERTY.

Begging being a trade, and a very beneficial one, no person who observes the astonishing increase of that profession in this quarter will hesitate to believe. And how can it be remedied? is the general question, to which no one gives an answer. Not easily by any measures of police certainly; but I will venture to suggest a cure in one word, and that a pretty effectual one—a work house!

I remember to have heard of an old justice of the peace, who lived in a village in the vicinity of a large town, who, from his knowledge of the almost invincible aversion of the begging tribe from regular labour of every kind, long contrived to have his forecourt and garden weeded gratis, by itinerant beggars. As he had a handsome house near the road, it naturally drew the attention of the mumping fraternity. On their application for charity, he constantly asked them the usual question, "Why don't you work?" To which the usual reply was always made, "So I would, God bless your worship, if I could get employment." On this, muttering a rebuke, as if inclined by charity, he would set them to weed his court or garden, furnishing them a hoe and a wheel-barrow, and promising them a shilling when the job was completed. To work they would go, with much seeming gratitude and alacrity.—The justice having by them, or visited them from time to time till they had performed two thirds of their task, he then retired to a private corner or place of ejital, in order to prevent them from stealing his tools, and there waited for what constantly happened the moment he disappeared, which was the elopement of his workmen, who, rather than complete the unfinished third of his work, chose to give up what they had done.—This method, with scarce one disappointment, the old justice long practised; till at length his fame having gone forth among the mendicant tribe, he was troubled with no more applications for charity.

The Destruction of Lives by the French Revolution.

Predhome, a zealous revolutionist and jacobin, who, as he was no inconsiderable actor in the horrid cruelties of the French revolution, can no wise be suspected of exaggerating those bloody scenes, has in a late publication stated, that the victims of the revolution in six years and about four months, that is, from June 1789, to October 1795, amounted to the number of two millions twenty-nine thousand six hundred and six: that twelve hundred and sixty five women and children were thrown into the sea at Toulon: that nine hundred thousand perished in La Vendee; fifteen thousand of whom were women, and twenty-two thousand were children: that thirty-two thousand were adjudged to death at Nantes, by Carrier; among whom, five hundred children were shot to death, and fifteen hundred were drowned; and two hundred and sixty-four women were shot to death, and five hundred were drowned; and that a hundred and twenty four thousand whites, including women and children; and sixty thousand blacks and people of colour, of each sex and all ages, were destroyed at St. Domingo.

France, during several years of the revolution, resembled an immense volcano, that disgorges its lawa upon the adjacent territories. Her armies poured over and laid waste the neighbouring countries of Holland, Flanders, Germany, Switzerland and Italy; marking their progress with havoc and producing unutterable misery, wherever they bended their courses. But the immense destruction of lives and property abroad is not included in the aforementioned computation of Predhome. He mentions only those who perished in the revolution, within the territories of France and her dependencies; and makes the amount almost equal to half the number of the inhabitants of the United States.

GEORGE the Third, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS

GREETING.

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the fourteenth day of May last, we tho't fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this present month of June, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the third day of August next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

In TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the great seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire our Lieutenant Governor of our said province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this twenty-first Day of JUNE, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and forty-third of our reign. UPPER CANADA.

Proclamation

PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for vesting in the Tiles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in, manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, or the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissioners were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is overlooked in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extension of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Cafe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo grofsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

LONDON, April 30.

A private letter from Hamburgh ſtates, that in conſequence of diſpatches recently received at Berlin from Peterſburgh, a change highly favourable to the intereſts of Great Britain has taken place in the ſentiments of his Pruſſian Majeſty. The Emperor Alexander is ſaid to have communicated his reſolution to mediate, in conjunction with the Cabinet of Berlin, between Great Britain and France.

A moſt ſingular diſcovery was lately made at Deptford. While a number of ſailors and others were buſily employed in unloading the cargo of the Admiral Aplin, an Eaſt Indiaman, which arrived at the above place a fortnight ago, from Madras, (laden with ſugar, ſalt-petre, and ſome bale goods,) then being in the act of dragging out of the hold ſome bags of ſugar, they diſcovered from a board in the hold of the ſhip, a green ſnake, of an amazing ſize, whoſe appearance was ſo terrible that it gave a general alarm, and it being well known that its bite is inſtantaneous death, it was found neceſſary to procure weapons for its deſtruction, which they completed by tying a ſpade to the end of one of the oars of the boat, by which they caught it by the neck, and confined it till they ſevered the head from the body. It was as green as graſs, 15 feet long, and 18 inches in circumference. It is ſuppoſed that this animal, in the night time, found its way on board the ſhip while lying at Madras, by the means of concealing itſelf in one of the bags of ſugar, or ſtanding on one of the planks into the hold following the ſcent of the ſugar. Its bite is always underſtood to be more venomous than the bite of a rattle ſnake.

The French papers to the 25th inſt. are received. In the Moniteur of the 25th we are preſented with an article from Toulon, ſtating the arrival of the ſquadron which had conveyed the French Ambaſſador, Brune, to Conſtantinople. Admiral Leiſſeignes, after landing the Ambaſſador, proceeded to Alexandria; on his arrival there, he found that it had been evacuated by our troops about the middle of March. On his arrival at Malta he anchored amidſt ten of our ſhips, and then he was informed that the troops had reached the iſland, and were then performing quarantine at the Lazaretto: of the truth of this intelligence we ſee no room for the ſmalleſt doubt.

May 1.

Yeſterday was productive of numerous reports, all concurring as to the probability of war, and the conſequence was a further depreſſion at the Stock Exchange. Conſols opened yeſterday morning at 64½; on the arrival of the French mail they fell half per cent. but preſently roſe to 64½; they again declined to 63½; and about two o'clock were down at 64½; they however cloſed at 63. The other Funds were likewiſe ſubject to rapid fluctuations; but their loſs in the day's account did not exceed one eighth per cent.

It was ſtated, with much confidence, that the Chief Conſul had indignantly rejected the ultimatum of our Cabinet.—Our Miniſters are ſaid to have required that the French troops ſhould be withdrawn from Holland, and the Batavian Republic rendered independent of France, as the only conditions on which they would conſent to forego the advantages which the poſſeſſion of Malta gave them in the Mediterranean—but theſe terms conceded, that they would inſtantly evacuate the iſland.

With equal confidence it was aſſerted, that the Dutch Miniſter at Paris had repreſented to the Conſular Cabinet, the hoſtile appearance of a Britiſh ſquadron cruiſing off the Batavian coaſt, and requiring from France the auxiliary force, which by treaty each Power is bound to render to the other in the event of actual or threatened invaſion.

A liſt of ſeventeen additional ſhips of war, of various force, was yeſterday exhibited at Lloyd's, ſaid to have been ordered in the courſe of the day for commiſſion.

The troops quartered in the Iſle of Wight were yeſterday, according to report, ordered to embark on board the frigates and tranſports lying there, and to ſail immediately for Malta.

The Emperor Alexander has made aſſurances to the Hanſe Towns, that he will protect their neutrality, in the event of a war between England and France.

The propoſal that the Iſland of Malta, after the departure of the Engliſh, ſhall be occupied only by Ruſſian troops, has not been accepted at St. Peterſburgh.

Our laſt accounts from Malta, (ſays a letter from Gibraltar) ſtate that the indignation of the Maltеſe was ſo great on the arrival there of the Commiſſioner from the Grand Maſter, that he ran ſome riſk of being torn to pieces by the populace, had he not taken ſhelter at the French Miniſter's houſe. In a few hours afterwards, bills were privately ſtuck up all over the town, declaring that the inhabitants were reſolved to put the Grand Maſter to death ſoon after his arrival, if he ſhould preſume to land in the Iſland—and that they were determined never to ſuffer any foreign Power but the Britiſh to have poſſeſſion of that place.

SWEDEN and RUSSIA.

A miſunderſtanding has ariſen between the Courts of Sweden and Ruſſia, reſpecting the right to a bridge across a river near their lines. It has become ſo ſerious, that the Ruſſian Emperor has ordered the equipment of ſeveral veſſels of force, gallies, &c. and ſeveral regiments to be held in readineſs to march. But the pacific characters of the two monarchs will hardly allow a belief in the occurrence of war.

POSEN, April 17.

One half of Poſen is in aſhes. Yeſterday afternoon a fire broke out here, which deſtroyed 283 houſes, and many public buildings. The damage is not to be eſtimated. Moſt of the inhabitants of the houſes conſumed have ſaved nothing.

HAGUE, April 24.

According to letters from Nimeguen, a number of French troops are expected there this day and to morrow. Quarters have already been provided for them. Theſe troops, it is ſaid, will form a camp in the neighbourhood of the city, and in caſe of an unexpected rupture, are deſtined for Hanover.

We learn from Helvoetſluys that ſeveral of the French ſhips lying there, and belonging to the expedition deſtined for Louiſiana, have ſuffered conſiderable damage by late ſtorms.

Newly Diſcovered Iſlands.

We have received ſome important communications from Port Jackſon, conſiſting of obſervations made in the North and South Pacific by Mr. Simpſon, commander of the Nautilus. This gentleman has diſcovered in S. lat. 12 deg. 17 min. and E. long. 167 deg. 30 min. an iſland which he has called Kennedy's Iſland. From its beautiful appearance, united to its being well inhabited, Mr. S. is of opinion that it may prove a valuable acquiſition to our new colony, particularly as it produces hogs in abundance.

The Iroquois [illegible] are savage, artful, and treacherous upon Dexter's Group, or Duff's Group, which obliged me to be upon them; and this may be a necessary precaution to any person, who may chuse to land upon those islands.

"Upon the island Disappointment, I landed, saw goats; sowed several sorts of seeds, and put some plants to the ground. In two previous voyages I passed this island, without the precautions of looking for land, as I am sure many other navigators have done. We found upon it the remains of a very large lowet mast, most the keel; which led us to think some large Spanish ship had been wrecked upon it: but it must have been long since, as the timber was greatly decayed.

"Though these islands are thinly inhabited, we scarcely saw one in the whole of this group but had natives upon it; and when our distance sunk the reefs below the horizon which extend from island to island, the natives, as they crouled from one to the other, prefented the appearance of a regiment of soldiers marching round the horizon on the surface of the sea. All the islands are exceedingly low, and shew at first, like all the rest in this labyrinth, a few scattered trees above the horizon. This circumstance will demonstrate their danger to a seaman; who cannot be too much on his guard on so perilous a navigation. I am fully perfuaded that not one hundredth part of them are known to navigators. They appeared to us to be formed of coral and sand, lightly covered with a thin black soil; the trees on the shore had the appearance of having been burnt, they were black, potous and light."

BOSTON, JUNE 6.

A London paper of April 26, states that the preparations for war were profecuted with renewed activity; but these were presumed to be occasioned by the consideration of the possible, rather than the probable result of the negociation.

The French papers complain of some improper visits paid to their vessels on the ocean by British cruizers.

The new Spanish Minister has arrived in England.——

[ORIGINAL LETTER.]

From Mr. Garrick, to the Collector of the Customs.

Dear Sir,—

Not Rachel weeping for the children could shew more sorrow than Mrs. Garrick—not weeping for the children—she has none—nor indeed for her husband; thanks be to the humour of the times, she cannot be as philosophical upon that subject as her betters. What does she weep for then? Shall I dare tell you? It is—it is for the loss of a chintz bed and curtains. The tale is short, and is as follows:—I have taken some pains to oblige the Gentlemen of Calcutta, by sending them plays, scenes, and other services in my way; in return, they have sent me Madeira, and poor Rachel the unfortunate chintz. She has had it four years, and upon making some alterations in our little place at Hampton, she intended to shew away with her prohibited present.—She had prepared paper, chairs, &c. for this favorite token of Indian gratitude. But, alas! all human felicity is frail. No care having been taken on my wife's part, and some treachery being exerted against her, it was seized, the very bed, "by the coarse hands of filthy dungeon villains, and thrown among the common lumber."

If you have the least pity for a distressed female, any regard for her husband (for he has had a bad time of it) or any wishes for the environs of Bushy Park to be made tolerably neat and clean, you may put your finger and thumb to the business, and take the thorn out of Rachel's side.

I am, dear Sir, your's,
D. Garrick.

Mavius, the first Bishop of Lausanne, speaking of the small-pox variola, in the annals of his own time, observes that it principally attacked horned cattle. This was in the year 570; and it does not appear to have attacked mankind until the year afterwards. It will turn out very singular, if the same animal which first had this disease, should furnish man with the best preventative of this dreadful malady.

GEORGE the Third, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith:—

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the fourteenth day of May last, we tho't fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the twenty-fifth day of this present month of June, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the third day of August next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the great seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire our Lieutenant Governor of our said province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this twenty-first Day of JUNE, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and forty-third of our reign. UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the Space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the Space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the first unprepared manner in had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in affenting to such repeated extentions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to

Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Cafe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by ſuch means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at York, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

LONDON, May 3.

Laſt night in the Commons, Mr. Addington expreſſed his hope to be able to lay before the Houſe ſome communication on the negociation with France, by Monday next (the 9th).

In the Navy Department the preparations for war are carrying on with more vigour than ever.

May 4.

Lord Whitworth has notified the French Government, that he ſhall not tarry in Paris after the 9th inſt. unleſs he is enabled to ſend over the Chief Conſul's unqualified acceptation of the ſole conditions upon which the armament will be ſuſpended, and offenſive meaſures delayed.

The preſs on the river was laſt night renewed with great heat.

The exportation of ſalt petre is prohibited. It appears, that Ruſſia will not accept the propoſition of ſending troops to Malta.

May 5.

The Lord Mayor has juſt received the following, directed to him:—

"Downing Street, 8 o'clock, May 5, 1803.

"Lord Hawkeſbury preſents his compliments to the Lord Mayor, and has the honor to acquaint his Lordſhip, that the negociation between this country and the French Republic is brought to an amicable concluſion."

This letter bore all the marks of officiality.—His Lordſhip immediately ſent copies of it to Lloyd's Coffee-Houſe, and Stock Exchange. The joy of the citizens was outrageous—The news flew like lightning. The Stocks, which before had been at 64, roſe rapidly to 71, and were looking up when the following Meſſage from the Treaſury was received:—

"Treaſury, May 5, 1 o'clock.

"SIR—I have to acquaint you, that the Meſſage which was ſuppoſed to have been ſent this morning from Lord Hawkeſbury to the Lord Mayor, ſtating, that the negociations with France had terminated amicably, was a fabrication, and totally deſtitute of proof.

"J. SARGENT."

It is impoſſible to deſcribe the conſternation which this notice produced.—The 3 per cents. immediately fell to 62.—All negociations made ſince the impoſition were declared void: means were taken to detect the forger, and a reward of 3000 guineas was offered for the diſcovery.

May 6, 1803—At Night.

Mr. Addington has juſt declared in the Commons, that he expects Lord Whitworth's return ſpeedily; and that the French Ambaſſador had applied this morning for paſſports. He, however, made no other communication; and moved, that the Houſe adjourn to Monday—when, as he had before intimated, he hoped to be able to make a communication. This motion was oppoſed by Meſſrs. Fox, Grey, and Canning, and ſupported by Lord Hawkeſbury, and was not decided when the Courier was put to preſs.

May 5.

Mr. King, the American Miniſter, had a private audience, and took leave of his Majeſty, previouſly to his leaving this country.

IRELAND.

BELFAST, May 10.

Belfaſt News Letter Office,
May 10th, 10 o'clock, A. M.

We ſtop the preſs to ſtate the arrival of the London papers of Friday laſt (May 6th). In a ſecond edition of the Courier we find the following moſt important, though moſt unwelcome intelligence.

WAR.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, QUARTER BEFORE 5 O'CLOCK.

Mr. Addington has juſt declared to the Houſe, that he expects Lord Whitworth in this country very ſpeedily, and that General Andreoſſi has applied this morning for paſſports for his return. At the ſame time Mr. Addington ſtated, that the official communication could not be made to this Houſe till his Lordſhip's arrival in this country. He then moved, that the Houſe at its riſing ſhould adjourn to Monday.

Mr. Fox objected to this motion—he thought, under the circumſtances of the country, the Houſe ought to meet to-morrow.

Lord Hawkeſbury could not conceive that any injury would ariſe from the delay propoſed.

Mr. Grey moved an amendment, "that the Houſe ſhould only adjourn till to-morrow, inſtead of Monday."

Mr. Canning ſupported Mr. Grey's amendment.

The Houſe is ſtill ſitting, and there is likely to be a diviſion.

The funds on Friday morning experienced great fluctuations. They opened at 63, roſe to 65, fell back to 64, and at 12 o'clock, were as low as 62 3-4.

Every means is taken to diſcover the author of the forged letter ſent to the Lord Mayor on Thurſday—and the Sun mentions a report that the perſon who had committed the fraud had been diſcovered, and the ſeal found upon him.—

NEW-YORK, June 16.

We lay before the readers of the Mercantile Advertiſer this day, European intelligence of "great pith and moment."

The ſhip American, captain Thompſon, arrived at quarantine yeſterday afternoon, in 28 days from Londonderry. She left there on the 15th May, and has furniſhed us with Iriſh papers to the 10th. We have verbal information from captain Thompſon and Mr. Wm. Sterling (who came paſſengers in the American) that the North and Channel Fleets were out, and had received orders to blockade the French ports; that Lord Whitworth and General Andreoſſi were preparing to return home, in conſequence of inſtructions from their reſpective Governments; that the impreſſment of ſeamen in England and Ireland was carrying on with unabated vigour, and extended in many caſes to perſons of 60 years old; and that every appearance indicated that France and Great Britain would ſpeedily "cry Havoc, and let flip the Dogs of War."

The Firſt Conſul is ſaid to have obſerved to Lord Whitworth, at a late levee of Madame Bonparte's, that he expected no ſucceſs in a maritime war with England, and that hoſtilities muſt neceſſarily be directed againſt her in her own iſland; in which caſe he ſhould feel it his inevitable duty to conduct the inviſion in perſon.

Touſſaint Louverture, the celebrated African Chief, is dead. He died in priſon at Belancon, without a friend to cloſe his eyes, and without ever having been viſited in his impriſonment by his wife and children, who were taken with him from St. Domingo.

By the Britiſh ſchooner Betſey, Captain Kelly, in 10 days from Halifax, we have received papers from that place as late as the 11th inſt. We find, by letters from St. Johns, that the arrival of the ſhip Lord M'Cartney furniſhes nothing later from London than the 4th ult. of courſe, the news ſaid to have been brought by her falls to the ground. But, Captain Hill, of the ſchooner Succeſs, who arrived at Halifax on the 10th inſt. from St. Johns, informs, "that three or four days previous to his ſailing, a brig arrived there, in ſeventeen days paſſage from Plymouth, England—This veſſel might have brought accounts to the 7th or 8th of May from London; but all that we have been able to learn, is, that the preſs was hotter than ever—and that war was ſuppoſed to be inevitable."

[This veſſel muſt have left Plymouth about the 12th of May, and if at that time the "preſs was hotter than ever, and war ſuppoſed to be inevitable," it is pretty evident that nothing of a pacific nature had occurred ſubſequent to Mr. Addington's communication to Parliament on the 5th ult. Therefore, in our opinion, the probability of war increaſes.]

In our Halifax papers we find two extracts of letters from St. Johns, noticing the arrival of Lord M'Cartney. One of these letters says, "The channel fleet had failed, under the command of Admiral Lord Nelson.—A Manifesto was said to be preparing, explanatory of the conduct and intentions of his Majesty's Ministers; and another Meffage, it was expected, would soon fix the business."

The other letter observes, "It was expected, that on the 6th of May, Ministry would make the long looked for communication to Parliament;—and Mr. Addington having declared in the House on the 2d, that the feelings of the Nation would be deeply interested in the said communication, and from all circumstances taken together, I am far from thinking it settled that we are not to have war."

June 25.

The English paragraphists are quite witty on the subject of the threatened invasion. In one of their jeu d'esprits is the following, "Bonaparte, it is said, intends to compliment us with an army of picked men. He need not be so nice, as we are prepared to take them as they come!

"Should the First Consul honor this kingdom with a visit, of which he has graciously raised our expectation, his reception will be of the most splendid and dignified nature.—His Majesty himself will advance to welcome him; his squadrons will be received by our jolly Tars, with bonfires, and the most heartfelt rejoicings; a concert of Ancient Music will attend his landing; the Militia will be drawn out for his Amusement, the Guards, the Line, the Fencibles, will jointly salute him; both Lords and Commons will be unanimous in a dressing; and our principle Generals will give him a route in the true Egyptian style, before he gets half way to the Metropolis!

"If the Bank be Bonaparte's first object, we trust he will receive a sufficient check to satisfy him before he reaches it."

By the arrival of the Mary, captain Briggs, at Boston, from Nantz in 33 days, which place she left the 10th of May, the following extract of a letter, received at the former place by the above arrival, contains some particulars worthy of notice:—

NANTZ, May 10.

"When the last mail from Paris left that place, the English Ambassador had his guards ready to accompany his coaches, to which his trunks were fixed; but just as he was ready to start, he received dispatches from his Cabinet, which led him to wait a short time.

"The English are before every one of our ports.

"The fishermen are detained at Havre and Dieppe;—yet our government takes no measures of defence; this circumstance induces our merchants to think, that war will not take place."

June 27.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Montreal to a merchant in this city, dated 10th inst.

"On the 7th at noon, we were alarmed by fire in the St. Lawrance suburbs, when I went, and was sorry to see many inhabitants in distress. The alarm was again rung for a fire in the jail; I returned to the city and found the Jesuits and Protestant churches on fire, and in the course of the evening, was witness to a terrible scene—two churches,—one college, and twenty-seven houses on fire; the jail burnt to the ground—and I believe, had it not been for the plentiful supply which the Montreal water works produced, the greater part of the city would have been laid in ashes. We are now making a collection for the relief of the distressed. The Trustees of the Seminary are now engaged in providing a suitable house for the purpose of continuing the school."

There is a mighty difference between a good reputation and a bad reputation. How is that? Why, the prudent, discreet dairy woman, keeps her cream clean and cool, and her churn as sweet as a rose—her butter is well worked, and freed from every drop of buttermilk—it is well packed in a clean firkin, so as to exclude all air—her butter goes to market, and brings sixteen or eighteen cents the pound—she does the same, year after year, till the reputation of her butter gives it six, eight, ten cents, extra value!—This is a good reputation!

The lazy housewife! ah, how shall she be described—and her butter too! A streak of white, and a streak of yellow! a little butter and a little milk, curdled, peppered with a variety of darker substances! Sent to market in an open veffel—sprinkled on the top with dust, chips, feathers, hair, &c.—Such butter brings four cents, six cents, and possibly, seven!—This is the effect of a bad reputation—it is a trifle, to be sure, in one firkin of butter; but in one's life—it is a little estate! Yes, a great estate!—Think of that, ye butter makers—and ye cheese-makers, take the hint! (Spectator.)

"Every effort to improve the Agricultural interests of our country, must be important in the estimation of its citizens. Perhaps there is no part of the Husbandman's care which has been so much neglected in this country as the management of his FRUIT TREES. Possessing, from the hand of Nature, all the requisites of soil and climate to make our orchards the pride of vegetation, and the source of unnumbered comforts and wealth, we should have aided her kind arrangements, and cultivated, with grateful affiduity, the choicest of her gifts; but the very reverse of this has been our practice. The wretched appearance of our orchards in general; their long neglected state; their sickly and unfavory fruits; their frequent blights, and their early decays, prove the existence of some radical evil in their management. We fondly look for the correcting hand of the skilful Horticulturist. To teach him this duty is the most approved form; and to lead him to a practical acquaintance with the character and conftitution of FRUIT TREES, is the design of this publication. WAR.

WE are at length enabled to relieve the public mind from that state of suspence under which it has for some time laboured. The arrival of the ship John Morgan, Capt. Howard, from London, has furnished us with a regular series of London papers to the 20th May. On the 16th an Order of Council, directing letters of Marque and Reprisal against the ships, effects and goods of the French Republic, and another laying an Embargo on all vessels belonging to the citizens of the French and Batavian Republics, were issued by the British Government. The reasons for adopting these measures are explained in the following official Declaration.

Mr King, our Ambassador to the Court of St. James' came passenger in the John Morgan.

Mr. King informs us, that Louisiana, including New Orleans, is absolutely ceded to the United States by France. What are the boundaries of the territory ceded, and what the conditions of purchase, is not precisely known.

HOUSE OF LORDS, May 16.

Lord Pelham brought down the following Meffage from his Majesty, which was read first by the Lord Chancellor from the Woolsack, and next by Mr. Rose, the clerk at the table:

"G. R.

"His Majesty thinks proper to acquaint the House of Peers, that the discussions which he announced to them in his Message of the 8th of March last, as then subsisting between his Majesty and the French government, have been terminated; that the conduct of the French government has obliged his Majesty to recall his Ambassador from Paris, and that the Ambassador from the French Republic has left London.

"His Majesty has given directions for laying before the House of Peers, with as little delay as possible, copies of such papers as will afford the fullest information to his Parliament at this important juncture.

"It is a consolation to his Majesty to reflect, that no endeavors have been wanting on his part to preserve to his subjects the blessings of Peace; but under the circumstances which have occurred to disappoint his just expectations, his Majesty relies with confidence on the zeal and public spirit of his faithful Commons, and on the exertions of his brave and loyal subjects, to support him in his determination to employ the power and resources of the nation, in opposing the spirit of ambition and encroachment which at present actuates the Councils of France, and in upholding the dignity of his Crown, and in asserting & maintaining the rights and interests of his people."

LONDON, May 17.

His Majesty's Message delivered to both Houses of Parliament yesterday afternoon, puts an end to the uncertainty which many were under respecting the issue of the negociation which was carrying on between this country and France.

At the Privy Council which sat at the Queen's House yesterday, &c at which his Majesty presided, the Message to Parliament was settled, and orders issued to the Lords of the Admiralty to grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal against all vessels belonging to the French and Batavian Republics, and to lay a general embargo on all ships bound to any of their ports.

The renewal of war between this country and France, has proved of essential service to America. Private letters from Paris state, that the American Minister, Mr. Munroe, has completely succeeded in the object of his mission, and that within these three days the French government has ceded to the Americans the possession of Louisiana.

It is further stated upon the same

In our Halifax papers we find two extracts of letters from St. Johns, noticing the arrival of Lord M'Cartney. One of these letters says, "The channel fleet had failed, under the command of Admiral Lord Nelson.—A Manifesto was said to be preparing, explanatory of the conduct and intentions of his Majesty's Ministers; and another Meffage, it was expected, would soon fix the business."

The other letter observes, "It was expected, that on the 6th of May, Ministry would make the long looked for communication to Parliament;—and Mr. Addington having declared in the House on the 2d, that the feelings of the Nation would be deeply interested in the said communication, and from all circumstances taken together, I am far from thinking it settled that we are not to have war."

Private letters from Paris state, that the American Minister, Mr. Munroe, has completely succeeded in the object of his mission, and that within these three days the French government has ceded to the Americans the possession of Louisiana.

It is further stated upon the same respectable authority, that a sum of 60000 dollars, due from France to individuals of the United States, to obtain the payment of which was one of Mr. Munroe's principal objects, has been given up by the latter, the American Minister having consented, that the government of the United States shall take that debt upon itself.

May 19. Lord Whitworth and his suite arrived last night at Whitehall at eleven o'clock, in two coaches and four, and two chaises and pair, with four out-riders.

General Andreossi left Dover at 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

May 20. The Freya, Captain Fiords, from Cueta, with Wine & Brandy for Amsterdam, is taken by the Viper gun vessel, and sent into Dover.

DECLARATION.

His Majesty's earnest endeavors for the preservation of peace having failed of success, he entertains the fullest confidence that he shall receive the same support from his Parliament, and that the same zeal and spirit will be manifested by his people which he has experienced on every occasion when the honor of his Crown has been attacked, or the essential interests of his dominions have been endangered.

During the whole course of the negociations which led to the preliminary and definitive treaties of Peace between his Majesty and the French Republic, it was his Majesty's sincere desire, not only to put an end to the hostilities which subsisted between the two Countries, but to adopt such measures, and to concur in such propositions, as might most effectually contribute to consolidate the general tranquility of Europe. The same motives by which his Majesty was actuated during the negociations for Peace, have since invariably governed his conduct. As soon as the Treaty of Amiens was concluded, his Majesty's courts were open to the people of France for every purpose of legal redress; all sequestrations were taken off their property; all prohibitions on their trade which had been imposed during the war were removed, and they were placed, in every respect on the same footing with regard to commerce and intercourse, as the inhabitants of any other State in amity with his Majesty, with which there existed no Treaty.

To a system of conduct thus open, liberal, and friendly, the proceedings of the French Government afford the most striking contrast. The prohibitions which had been placed on the commerce of his Majesty's subjects during the war have been enforced with increased rigidness and severity; violence has been offered in several instances to their vessels and their property; and, in no case, has justice been offered to those who may have been aggrieved in consequence of such acts, nor has any satisfactory answer been given to the repeated representations made by his majesty's ministers or ambassador at Paris. Under such circumstances, when his Majesty's subjects were not suffered to enjoy the common advantage of peace within the territories of the French republic, and the countries dependant upon it, the French Government had recourse to the extraordinary measure of sending over to this country a number of persons for the general purpose of residing in the most conspicuous seaport towns of Great Britain and Ireland, in the character of commercial agents or consuls. These persons could have no pretensions to be acknowledged in that character, as the right of being so acknowledged, as well as all the privileges attached to such a situation could only be derived from a commercial treaty; and as no treaty of that description was in existence between his Majesty and the French republic.

There was consequently too much reason to suppose, that the real object of their mission was by no means of a commercial nature, and this suspicion was confirmed, not only by the circumstance that some of them were military men, but by the actual discovery that several of them were furnished with instructions to obtain the soundings of the harbours, and to procure military surveys. His Majesty felt it to be his duty to prevent their departure to their respective places of destination, and represented to the French Government the necessity of withdrawing them; and it cannot be denied that the circumstances under which they were sent, and the instructions which were given to them, ought to be considered as decisive indications of the dispositions and intentions of the Government by whom they were employed.

The conduct of the French government, with respect to the commercial intercourse between the two countries, must therefore be considered as ill suited to a state of peace, and their proceedings in their more general political relations, as well as those which immediately concern his Majesty's dominions, appear to have been altogether inconsistent with every principle of good faith, moderation and justice. His Majesty had entertained hopes, in consequence of the repeated assurances and professions of the French Government, that they might have been induced to adopt a system of policy which, if it had not inspired other powers with confidence, might at least have allayed their jealousies. If the French Government had really appeared to be actuated by a due attention to such a system; if their dispositions had proved to be essentially pacific, allowances would have been made for the situation in which a new government must be placed after so dreadful and extensive a convulsion as that which has been produced by the French revolution. But his Majesty had unfortunately had too much reason to observe and to lament that the system of violence, aggression and aggrandizement which characterized the proceedings of the different Governments of France during the war, has been continued with a little disguise since its termination. They have continued to keep a French army in Holland, against the will, and in defiance of the remonstrances of the Batavian Government, and in repugnance to the letter of three solemn treaties. They have in a period of peace, invaded the territory, and violated the independence of the Swiss nation, in defiance of the treaty of Lunerille, which had stipulated the independence of their territory, and the right of the inhabitants to choose their own form of government. They have annexed to the dominions of France, Piedmont, Parma, and Placentia, and the island of Elba, without allotting any provision to the King of Sardinia, whom they have despoiled of the most valuable part of his territory, though they were bound by a solemn engagement to the Emperor of Russia, to attend to his interests, and to provide for his establishment. It may, indeed, with truth be asserted, that the period which has elapsed since the conclusion of the definitive treaty, has been marked with one continued series of aggression, violence and insult on the part of the French Government.

In the month of October last, his Majesty was induced, in consequence of the earnest solicitation of the Swiss nation, to make an effort, by a representation to the French Government, to avert the evils which were then impending over that country. This representation was couched in the most temperate terms, and measures were taken by his Majesty for ascertaining, under the circumstances which then existed, the real situation and wishes of the Swiss Cantons, as well as the sentiments of the other cabinets of Europe. His Majesty learned however, with the utmost regret, that no disposition to counteract these repeated infractions of treaties, and attack violence was manifested by any of the powers most immediately interested in preventing them; and his Majesty therefore felt, that, with respect to these objects, his single efforts could not be expected to produce any considerable advantage to those in whose favor they might be exerted.

It was about this time that the French Government first distinctly advanced the principle, that his Majesty had no right to complain of the conduct, or to interfere with the proceedings of France, on any point which did not form a part of the stipulations of the treaty of Amiens. That treaty was unquestionably founded upon the same principle as every other antecedent treaty or convention, on the assumption of the state of possession and of engagements subsisting at the time of its conclusion; and if that state of possession and of engagements is materially affected by the voluntary act of any of the parties, so as to prejudice the condition on which the other party has entered into the contract, the change, to made, may be considered as operating virtually as a breach of the treaty itself, and as giving the party aggrieved a right to demand satisfaction or compensation for any substantial difference which such acts may have effected in their relative situations; but whatever be the principle on which the treaty is to be considered as founded, there is indisputably a general law of nations, which, though liable to be limited, explained, or restrained by conventional law, is antecedent to it, and that law or rule of conduct which all sovereigns & states have been accustomed to appeal, where conventional law is admitted to have been silent. The treaty of Amiens, and every other treaty, in providing for the object to which it is particularly directed, does not therefore imply an indifference to all other objects which are not specified in its stipulations, much less does it adjudge them to be of a nature to be left to will and caprice of the violent and the powerful. The justice of the cause is alone a sufficient ground to warrant the interposition of any of the powers of Europe in the difference which may arise between other states, and the application and extent of that just interposition is to be determined solely by consideration of prudence. These principles can admit of no dispute; but if the new and extraordinary pretension advanced by the French Government to exclude his Majesty from any right to interfere with respect to the concerns of other powers, unless they made a pacific part of the stipulations of the treaty of Amiens, was that which it was possible to maintain, those powers would have a right at least, to claim the benefit of this principle, in every case of difference between the two countries. The indignation of all Europe must surely then be excited by the declaration of the French Government, that, in the event of hostilities, these very powers who were no parties to the treaty of Amiens, and who were not allowed to derive any advantage from the remonstrances of his Majesty in their behalf, are nevertheless to be made the victims of a war which is alleged to arise out of the same treaty, and are to be sacrificed in a contest which they not only have not occasioned, but which they have had no means whatever of preventing.

His Majesty judged it most expedient, under the circumstances which then affected Europe, to refrain from a recurrence to hostilities on account of the views of ambition and acts of aggression manifested by France on the continent; yet an experience of the character and dispositions of the French Government could not fail to impress his Majesty with a sense of the necessity of increased vigilance in guarding the rights and dignity of his crown, and in protecting the interests of his people.

Whilst his Majesty was actuated by these sentiments, he was called upon by the French government to evacuate the island of Malta. His Majesty had manifested, from the moment of the signature of the definitive treaty, an anxious disposition to carry into full effect the stipulations of the treaty of Amiens relative to that island. As soon as he was informed that an Election of a Grand Master had taken place, under the auspices of the Emperor of Russia, and that it had been agreed by the different Priories assembled at St. Petersburgh, to acknowledge the person whom the Court of Rome should select out of those who had been named by them to be Grand Master of the order of St. John, his Majesty proposed to the French government, for the purpose of avoiding any difficulties which might arise in the execution of the arrangement, to acknowledge that Election to be valid: And when, in the month of August, the French government applied to his Majesty to permit the Neapolitan troops to be sent to the island of Malta, as a preliminary measure for preventing any unnecessary delay, his Majesty consented without hesitation to this proposal, and gave directions for the admission of the Neapolitan troops into the island. His Majesty had thus shewn his disposition not only to throw no obstacle in the way of the execution of the treaty, but, on the contrary, to facilitate the execution of it by every means in his power. His Majesty cannot, however, admit, that at any period since the conclusion of the treaty of Amiens the French government have had a right to call upon him, in conformity to the stipulations of that treaty, to withdraw his forces from the Island of Malta.

At the time when this demand was made by the French government, several of the most important stipulations of the arrangement respecting Malta remained unexecuted; the Election of Grand Master had not been carried into effect.

The tenth article had stipulated, that the independence of the Island should be placed under the guarantee and protection of Great Britain, France, Austria, Russia, Spain and Prussia. The Emperor of Germany had acceded to the guarantee, but only on condition of a like accession on the part of the other powers specified in the article. The Emperor of Russia had refused his accession, except on the condition that the Maltese Langue should be abrogated; and the King of Prussia had given no answer whatever to the application which had been made to him to accede to the arrangement. But the fundamental principle upon the existence of which depended the execution of the other parts of the article, had been defeated by the changes which had taken place in the constitution of the order since the conclusion of the treaty of peace. It was to the order of St. John of Jerusalem, that his Majesty was, by the first stipulation of the tenth article, bound to restore the Island of Malta.—The order is defined to consist of those Langues which were in existence at the time of the conclusion of the treaty: the three French Langues having been abolished, and a Maltese Langue added to the institution. The order confisted therefore, at that time, of the following Langues, viz. the Langues of Arragon, Castile, Germany, Bavaria, and Russia. Since the conclusion of the definitive treaty, the Langues of Arragon and Castile have been separated from the order by Spain, a part of the Italian Langue has been abolished by the annexation of Piedmont and Parma to France. There is strong reason to believe, that it has been in contemplation to sequestrate the property of the Bavarian Langue, and the intention has been avowed of keeping the Russian Langues within the dominions of the Emperor.

Under these circumstances the order of St. John cannot now be considered as that body to which, according to the stipulations of the treaty, the Island was to be restored; and the lands indispensably necessary for its support, and for the maintenance of the independence of the Island, have been nearly, if not wholly, sequestered. Even if this had arisen from circumstances which it was not in the power of any of the contracting parties to the treaty to controul, his Majesty would nevertheless have had a right to defer the evacuation of the Island by his forces, until such time as an equivalent arrangement had been concluded for the preservation of the independence of the order and of the Island. But if these changes have taken place in consequence of any acts of the other parties to the treaty; if the French government shall appear to have proceeded upon a system of rendering the order, whose independence they had stipulated, incapable of maintaining that independence, his Majesty's right to continue in the occupation of the Island, under such circumstances, will hardly be contested. It is indisputable that the revenues of the two Spanish Langues have been withdrawn from the order by his Catholic Majesty; a part of the Italian Langue has been abolished by France thro' the unjust annexation of Piedmont, Parma and Placentia, to the French territory. The Election of Bavois has been instigated by the French government to sequestrate the property of the order within his territories; and it is certain that they have not only sanctioned but encouraged the idea of the propriety of separating the Russian Langues from the remainder of the order.

As the conduct of the governments of France and Spain have, therefore, in some instances directly and in others indirectly, contributed to the changes which have taken place in the order, and thus destroyed its means of supporting its independence, it is to those governments, and not to his Majesty, that the non-execution of the tenth article of the treaty of Amiens must be ascribed.

Such would be the just conclusion if the tenth article of that treaty were considered as an arrangement by itself. It must be observed, however, that this article forms a part only of a treaty of peace, the whole of which is connected together, and the stipulations of which must, upon a principle common to all treaties, be construed as having a reference to each other.

His Majesty was induced by the treaty of peace to consent to abandon Malta, to restore to the order of St. John the Island of Malta, on condition of its independence and neutrality. But a further condition which must necessarily be supposed to have had considerable influence with his Majesty in inducing him to make so important a concession, was the acquiescence of the French government in an arrangement for the security of the Levant, by the eighth and ninth articles in the treaty, stipulating the integrity of the Turkish Empire, and the independence of the Ionian Islands. His Majesty has however since learnt, that the French government have entertained views hostile to both these objects; and that they have even suggested the idea of a partition of the Turkish Empire.—These views must now be manifest to all the world, from the official publication of the report of Col. Sebastiani; from the conduct of that officer, and of the other French Agents in Egypt, Syria, and the Ionian Islands, and from the distinct admission of the First Consul himself, in his communication with Lord Whitworth. His Majesty was therefore warranted in considering it to be the determination of the French government to violate those articles of the treaty of peace, which stipulated for the integrity and independence of the Turkish Empire, and of the Ionian Islands, and consequently would not have been justified in evacuating the Island of Malta, without receiving some other security, which might equally provide for these important objects. His Majesty accordingly feels that he has an incontestible claim, in consequence of the conduct of France since the treaty of peace, and with reference to the objects which made part of the stipulations of that treaty, to refuse, under the present circumstances, to relinquish the possession of the Island of Malta.

Yet notwithstanding this right so clear and so unquestionable, the alternative presented by the French government to his Majesty, in language the most peremptory and menacing, was "THE EVACUATION OF MALTA, OR THE RENEWAL OF THE WAR."

If the views of ambition and aggrandisement, which have thus been manifested by the French government since the conclusion of the treaty of peace, have, in so very particular a manner, attracted the attention of his Majesty, it has been equally impossible for him not to feel, and not to notice, the repeated indignities which have been offered by that government to his Crown and to his people.

This report of Col. Sebastiani, contains the most unwarrantable insinuations and charges against his Majesty's government, against the officer who commanded his forces in Egypt, and against the British army in that quarter. The paper cannot be considered as the publication of a private individual; it has been avowed, and indeed bears evidence upon the face of it, that it is the official report of an accredited agent, published by the authority of a government to which it was addressed, who thereby have given it their express sanction.

This report had been published a very short time, when another indignity was offered to this country in the communication of the First Consul of France to the Legislative body. In this communication he presumes to affume, in character of Chief Magistrate of that country, that Great Britain cannot singly contend against the powers of France; an assertion as unfounded as it is indecent, disproved by the events of many wars, and by none more than by those of the war which has been recently concluded. Such an assertion, advanced in a most solemn official act of a government, and thereby meant to be avowed to all the powers of Europe, can be considered in no other light than as a defiance publicly offered to his Majesty, and to a brave and powerful people, who are both willing and able to defend his just rights, and those of their country, against every insult and aggression.

The conduct of the First Consul to his Majesty's Ambassador, at his audience, in presence of the Ministers of most of the Sovereigns and States of Europe, furnishes another instance of provocation on the part of the French government, which it would be improper not to notice on the present occasion, and the subsequent explanation of this transaction may be considered as having the effect of aggravating, instead of palliating, the affront.

At the very time when his Majesty was demanding satisfaction and explanation on some of the points above mentioned, the French Minister at Hamburgh endeavoured to obtain the insertion in a Hamburgh paper, of a most gross and opprobrious libel against his Majesty, and when difficulties were made respecting the insertion of it, he availed himself of his official character of Minister of the French Republic to require the publication of it by order of his government in the Gazette of the Senate of that town. With this requisition so made, the Senate of Hamburgh were induced to comply; and thus has the independence of that town been violated, and a free state made the instrument, by menace of the French government, of propagating throughout Europe, upon their authority, the most offensive and unfounded calumnies against his Majesty and his government.

His Majesty might add to this list of indignities, the requisition which the French government have repeatedly urged, that the laws and constitution of his country should be changed relative to the liberty of the Press. His Majesty might likewise add the calls which the French government have on several occasions made upon him, to violate the laws of hospitality with respect to persons who had found an asylum within his dominions, and against whose conduct no charge whatever has at any time been substantiated. It is impossible to reflect on these different proceedings, and the course which the French government have thought proper to adopt respecting them, without the thorough conviction that they are not the effect of accident; but that they form a part of a system which has been adopted for the purpose of degrading, vilifying, and insulting his Majesty and his government.

Under all these insults and provocations, his Majesty, out without a due sense of his dignity, has proceeded with every degree of moderation to obtain satisfaction and redress, while he has neglected no means, consistent with his honor and the safety of his dominions, to induce the government of France to concede to him, what is in his judgment absolutely necessary for the future tranquility of Europe. His efforts in this respect have proved abortive. He has therefore judged it necessary to order his Ambassador to leave Paris.

In having recourse to this proceeding, it has been his object to put an end to the fruitless discussions which have too long subsisted between the two governments, and to close a period of subsance peculiarly injurious to the subjects of his Majesty.

But though the provocations which his Majesty has received might entitle him to larger claims than those which he has advanced, yet anxious to prevent calamities which might be thus extended to every part of Europe, he is still willing, so far as is consistent with his own honor and the interests of his people, to afford every facility to any just and honorable arrangement, by which such ends may be averted. His Majesty therefore, no difficulty in declaring to all Europe, that notwithstanding all the changes which have taken place since the Treaty of Peace, notwithstanding the accession of the power of France, in consequence of the Treaty, and to the spirit of Peace itself, his Majesty still sees real benefit of these circumstances, to demand in compensation all that he is entitled to require, but will be ready to concur, even now, in the arrangement by which satisfaction shall be given to him, for the indignities which have been offered to his Crown and to his People, and substantial security offered against further encroachments on the part of France.

His Majesty has thus distinctly and unreservedly stated the reasons of these proceedings, to which he has found himself compelled to refort. He is actuated by no disposition to interfere in the internal concerns of any other State; by no prospects of conquest and aggrandizement; but solely by a desire of what is due to the honor of his Crown, and the interests of his People, and by an anxious desire to obstruct the further progress of a system, which if not resisted, may prove fatal to every part of the civilized world.

PRESENT,

The King's most Excellent Majesty in Council.

WHEREAS, in consequence of the repeated insults and provocations which his Majesty has experienced from the Government of France, his Majesty finds himself compelled to take such measures as are necessary for vindicating the honor of his Crown, and the just rights of his subjects; his Majesty, therefore, is pleased, by and with the advice of his Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, that general reprisals be granted against the ships, goods, and subjects of the French Republic, to that as well his Majesty's fleets and ships, as also all other ships and vessels that shall be commissionated, by Letters of Marque, or general reprisals, or otherwise, by his Majesty's Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain, shall and may lawfully take all ships, vessels, and goods belonging to the French Republic, or to any persons being subjects of the French Republic, or inhabiting within any of the territories of the French Republic, and bring the same to judgment in such Courts of Admiralty within his Majesty's dominions, as shall be duly commissionated to take cognizance thereof; and, to that end, his Majesty's Advocate General, with the Advocates of the Admiralty, are forthwith to prepare the draft of a Commission, and present the same to his Majesty at this Board, authorizing the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or any person or persons by them empowered and appointed, to issue forth and grant Letters of Marque and Reprisals to any of his Majesty's subjects, or others whom the said Commissioners shall deem fitly qualified in that behalf, for the apprehending, seizing, and taking the ships, vessels, and goods belonging to the French Republic; and that such powers and clauses be inserted in the said Commission, as have been usual, and are according to former precedents; And his Majesty's said Advocate General, with the Advocate of the Admiralty, are also forthwith to prepare the draft of a Commission, and present the same to his Majesty at this Board, authorizing the said Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, to will and require the High Court of Admiralty of Great Britain, and the Lieutenant and Judge of the said Court, his Surrogate or Surrogates, as also the several Courts of Admiralty within his Majesty's dominions, which shall be duly commissioned to take cognizance of, and judicially proceed upon all and all manner of captures, seizures, prizes, and reprisals of all ships and goods that are or shall be made, and to hear and determine the same, and according to the Course of Admiralty and the Laws of Nations, to adjudge and condemn all such ships, vessels, and goods as shall belong to the French Republic, or to any persons being subjects of the French Republic, or inhabiting within any of the territories of the French Republic; and that such powers and clauses be inserted in the said Commission, as have been usual, and are according to former precedents; and they are likewise to prepare and lay before his Majesty at this Board, a draft of such instructions as may be proper to be sent to the said several Courts of Admiralty, as his Majesty's foreign governments and plantations, for their guidance therein; as also another draft of instruction for such ships as shall be commissionated for the purpose above-mentioned.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR'S OFFICE, 21st June, 1803.

NOTICE is hereby given, that regular attendance for the transaction of the Public Business of this Province, will in future be given at the Office of the Secretary of the Province, the Executive Council Office, and the Surveyor General's Office, every day in the year, (Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day only excepted) from ten o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and from five o'clock in the afternoon until seven in the evening.

By Order of the Lieutenant Governor,

JAMES GREEN, Sec.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

The conduct of the First Consul to his Majesty's Ambassador, at his audience, in presence of the Ministers of most of the Sovereigns and States of Europe, furnishes another instance of provocation on the part of the French government, which it would be improper not to notice on the present occasion, and the subsequent explanation of this transaction may be considered as having the effect of aggravating, instead of palliating, the affront.

At the very time when his Majesty was demanding satisfaction and explanation on some of the points above mentioned, the French Minister at Hamburgh endeavoured to obtain the insertion in a Hamburgh paper, of a most gross and opprobrious libel against his Majesty, and when difficulties were made respecting the insertion of it, he availed himself of his official character of Minister of the French Republic to require the publication of it by order of his government in the Gazette of the Senate of that town. With this requisition so made, the Senate of Hamburgh were induced to comply; and thus has the independence of that town been violated, and a free state made the instrument, by menace of the French government, of propagating throughout Europe, upon their authority, the most offensive and unfounded calumnies against his Majesty and his government.

His Majesty might add to this list of indignities, the requisition which the French government have repeatedly urged, that the laws and constitution of his country should be changed relative to the liberty of the Press. His Majesty might likewise add the calls which the French government have on several occasions made upon him, to violate the laws of hospitality with respect to persons who had found an asylum within his dominions, and against whose conduct no charge whatever has at any time been substantiated. It is impossible to reflect on these different proceedings, and the course which the French government have thought proper to adopt respecting them, without the thorough conviction that they are not the effect of accident; but that they form a part of a system which has been adopted for the purpose of degrading, vilifying, and insulting his Majesty and his government.

Under all these insults and provocations, his Majesty, that without a due sense of his dignity, has proceeded with every degree of moderation to obtain satisfaction and redress, while he has neglected no means, consistent with his honor and the safety of his dominions, to induce the government of France to concede to him, what is in his judgment absolutely necessary for the future tranquility of Europe. His efforts in this respect have proved abortive. He has therefore judged it necessary to order his Ambassador to leave Paris.

In having recourse to this proceeding, it has been his object to put an end to the fruitless discussions which have too long subsisted between the two governments, and to close a period of unparalleled injustice on the subjects of his Majesty.

But though the provocations which his Majesty has received might entitle him to larger claims than those which he has advanced, yet anxious to prevent calamities which might be thus extended to every part of Europe, he is still willing as far as is consistent with his own honor and the interests of his people, manifest every facility to any just and honorable arrangement, by which such ends may be averted. His Majesty thinks, no difficulty in declaring to all Europe, that notwithstanding all the changes which have taken place since the Treaty of Peace, notwithstanding the extension of the power of France, in repugnance to this Treaty, and to the spirit of Peace itself, his Majesty does not avail himself of these circumstances, to demand in compensation all that he is entitled to require, but will be ready to concur, even now, in the arrangement by which satisfaction shall be given to him, for the indignities which have been offered to his Crown and to his People, and additional security obtained against further encroachments on the part of France.

His Majesty has thus distinctly and unreservedly stated the motives of those proceedings, to which he has found himself compelled to resort. He is actuated by no disposition to interfere in the internal concerns of any other State; by no prospects of conquest and aggrandizement; but solely by a desire of what is due to the honor of his Crown, and the interests of his People, and by an anxious desire to obviate the further progress of a system, which if not resisted, may prove fatal to every part of the civilized world.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE, May 19.

PRESENT,

The King's most Excellent Majesty in Council.

WHEREAS, in consequence of the repeated insults and provocations of which his Majesty has experienced from the Government of France, his Majesty finds himself compelled to take such measures as are necessary for vindicating the honor of his Crown, and the just rights of his subjects; his Majesty, therefore, is pleased, by and with the advice of his Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, that general reprisals be granted against the ships, goods, and subjects of the French Republic, to that as well his Majesty's Subjects and Ships, as also all other Ships and vessels that shall be commanded by Commissaries of Marque, or general reprisals, or otherwise, by his Majesty's Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain, shall and may lawfully seize all Ships, vessels, and goods belonging to the French Republic, or to any person being Subjects of the French Republic, or inhabiting within any of the territories of the French Republic, and bring the same to judgment in such Courts of Admiralty within his Majesty's dominions, as shall be duly commissionated to take cognisance thereof; and, to that end, his Majesty's Advocate General, with the Advocate of the Admiralty, are forthwith to prepare the draft of a Commission, and present the same to his Majesty at this Board, authorizing the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or any person or persons by them empowered and appointed, to issue forth and grant Letters of Marque and Reprisals to any of his Majesty's Subjects, or others whom the said Commissioners shall deem duly qualified in that behalf, for the apprehending, seizing, and taking the ships, vessels, and goods belonging to the French Republic; and that such powers and clauses be inserted in the said Commission, as have been usual, and are according to former precedents; And his Majesty's said Advocate General, with the Advocate of the Admiralty, are also forthwith to prepare the draft of a Commission, and present the same to his Majesty at this Board, authorizing the said Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, to will and require the High Court of Admiralty of Great Britain, and the Lieutenant and Judge of the said Court, his Surrogate or Surrogates, as also the several Courts of Admiralty within his Majesty's dominions, which shall be duly commissioned to take cognizance of, and judicially proceed upon all and all manner of captures, seizures, prizes, and reprisals of all ships and goods that are or shall be made, and to hear and determine the same, and according to the Course of Admiralty and the Laws of Nations, to adjudge and condemn all such ships, vessels, and goods as shall belong to the French Republic, or to any persons being subjects of the French Republic, or inhabiting within any of the territories of the French Republic; and that such powers and clauses be inserted in the said Commission, as have been usual, and are according to former precedents; and they are likewise to prepare and lay before his Majesty at this Board, a draft of such instructions as may be proper to be sent to the said several Courts of Admiralty in his Majesty's foreign governments and plantations, for their guidance herein; as also another draft of instructions for such ships as shall be commissionated for the purposes above-mentioned.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a regular attendance for the transaction of the Public Business of this Province, will in future be given at the Office of the Secretary of the Province, the Executive Council Office, and the Surveyor General's Office, every day in the year, (Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day only excepted) from ten o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and from five o'clock in the afternoon until seven in the evening.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the District of Newcastle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1802.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland District, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN for the District of Johnstown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eastern District, on the First Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the District of London, at the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Western District, also at the time of the Assizes, which will be held for that District in the said Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Persons interested will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the respective Districts—And His Majesty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that such Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commissioners will continue to sit till they shall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Cafe heard and decided upon; but that after they have fo done, fuch Commiffioners, or any other Commiffioners, will never more fit again in the execution of the faid Commiffion, and the Parties who fhall then neglect to bring in their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loft all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they fo grofsly neglected their own Intereft, and omitted to avail themfelves of that indulgence fo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thoufand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty Third Year of His Majefty's Reign.

Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON, May 18.

Hoſtilities have already, we have no doubt, commenced by ſea; it was rumoured yeſterday, that we had taken a French frigate, but the rumour is unfounded.

Admiral Cornwallis ſailed on Monday from Torbay, with a ſquadron, conſiſting of the following ſhips:—

Ships.	Guns.	Commanders.
Dreadnought,	98	Adm. Cornwallis, Captain Murray.
Neptune,	98	—— Drury.
Albion,	74	—— Ferrier.
Minotaur,	74	——
Ardent,	64	—— Winthrop.
Cullodon,	74	R. Ad. Campbell, Captain Lane.
Venerable,	74	—— Searle.
Sceptre,	74	——
Thunderer,	74	—— Bedford.
Ruſſell,	74	—— Williams.

The remainder of the ſhips in Cawſand Bay are nearly ready for ſea, and want but few men to complete their complement. They will be ready to follow Admiral Cornwallis in 24 hours. He will then have a fleet of between twenty and thirty ſail of the line. Breſt is probably by this time blockaded, or at leaſt not a veſſel dare venture out.

In the North Seas we ſhall have a ſtrong ſquadron in a few days. Lord Keith received his commiſſion yeſterday, as Commander in Chief on that ſtation.

Lord Nelſon has probably by this time, ſailed for the Mediterranean, where we have a fleet, which the French are utterly unable to cope with. Fortunate is it for them, that the ſquadron which carried General Brune to Conſtantinople, has returned ſafe to port.

The mouths of the Meuſe and Helvoetſluys, are cloſely watched by Rear Admiral Thornborough.

The great point in diſpute between the two countries, was Malta. The leſſer ones, Switzerland, Holland, and the Sardinian Indemnity. By thoſe upon whoſe information we depend, we have been informed, that Bonaparte peremptorily and poſitively declared, that we ſhould not have an inch of territory in the Mediterranean. With reſpect to the guarantees, about which he appeared to be ſo anxious, it will, we underſtand, be found, that whilſt we were inviting the European Powers to become guarantees, France withheld all inſtructions to her Ambaſſadors to ſupport our demands.

But this is not all. The Chief Conſul, in his fondneſs for legiſlating for other countries, wanted to new model our Conſtitution; that is, to deprive it of its vigour and manlineſs of form, and to make it like that ſhrunk and ſhapeleſs ſkeleton, the French Conſtitution. Our readers will hardly believe us when we aſſert, that he wiſhed to prohibit the publication of all Parliamentary diſcuſſions relative to the affairs of France.

On Monday was the fulleſt attendance in the Houſe of Commons that has been known ſince the memorable period of the Regency. When the King's Meſſage was read, there were nearly 500 Members preſent.

An article from Stockholm, dated April 22, and inſerted in the Paris papers received laſt night, ſays, "The departure and arrival of Ruſſian couriers is very frequent, as are the conferences between the Ruſſian Charge d'Affaires, M. D'Alopeus, with our Miniſtry. But in general, we are here without the ſmalleſt anxiety with reſpect to the reſult of our differences with Ruſſia, and we look on the affair as having already reached to an amicable termination."

May 20.

The French fleet from St. Domingo have orders, if they do not reach the French coaſt before the 12th of May, that they ſhould ſteer for any port in Spain or Portugal they could make with ſafety.

A letter from on board the ſhip St. Vincent, from the iſland of St. Vincent. Sunday, April 10, 3 A. M. lat. 30 26, long. 61 25, ſtates—"A French veſſel hailed us, and the Captain aſked, if 'bound to Europe?' He repeated ſeveral times with great earneſtneſs this requeſt—that immediately on our arrival we would certify (for the French Papers) where we had met him; that his name was Defcartes, his ſhip La Belone, and that he came from Havre de Grace for St. Domingo!" He alſo acknowledged that he was an expreſs veſſel, commiſſioned by the French Government. By the moon-light the appeared to mount ſix guns on each ſide. It is to be hoped that our Government will avail themſelves of this information, ſo as to intercept the return to France of the ſhips of war and merchantmen ſo eagerly expected.

The grand chain of communication along our entire line of coaſts, is now completely eſtabliſhed by means of ſignal poſts.

Lord Nelſon on Wedneſday hoiſted his flag on board the Victory, of 110 guns, at Portſmouth.

Capt. Ginger Murray is appointed firſt captain under Vice-Admiral Lord Nelſon's flag.

The embargo is taken off coaſting veſſels.

We underſtand advice is received of the French having ſeized 18 out of 26 Engliſh oyſter ſmacks, in Cancalle Bay.

We yeſterday ſtated the arrival of Lord Whitworth in London on Wedneſday night.—He landed at Dover about twelve on the preceding evening. His Lordſhip was treated on his departure from Calais, with every demonſtration of reſpect by the people, as well as by the Municipal Officers and the Military. He was ſaluted by a diſcharge of guns, and all parties ſeemed to regret the occaſion of his departure. On his arrival at Dover, where he found General Andreoſſi, who had received ſimilar honours, his Lordſhip ſent a meſſage to the French Ambaſſador, importing a deſire to have an interview with his Excellency, before he left this country, and requeſting that the latter would point out the mode for the accompliſhment of that purpoſe.—Gen. Andreoſſi returned an anſwer expreſſive of high reſpect and acquieſcence, but leaving the arrangement to Lord Whitworth. It was then determined that neither ſhould meet the other at their reſpective hotels, and an interview was held at a third place.—What paſſed at this interview we do not pretend to ſtate. After this meeting, each of the Ambaſſadors viſited the other at their hotels, and both expreſſed their ſtrong ſenſe of the treatment which they had received in their reſpective countries, and their anxious hopes that all cauſes of national differences would ſoon be removed. Gen. Andreoſſi then took his leave, with every teſtimony of public and private reſpect. He embarked on Wedneſday morning at 7 o'clock.

May 15.

Bonaparte, in referring the Ultimatum to his Council, has fought to avoid the odium of the War; but the people, who know how his Council is conſtituted, will not fail to aſcribe the calamity to its real author.—The aſſertion which he made in full Aſſembly to our Ambaſſador, that he would ſacrifice 100,000 men to invade Britain, is ſtated to have produced ſtrong ſenſation and indignation in the army.

May 19.

We have already ſtated that Admiral Cornwallis had ſailed from Torbay.—The Noble Admiral got under way on Monday afternoon, and was out of ſight at eight o'clock the ſame evening. Beſides the ten ſhips of the line, there were three frigates and a cutter.

Signal poſts have been eſtabliſhed all round the coaſt, in order that a chain of communication may be kept up throughout the Kingdom.

Admiral Sir James Saumarez has been appointed Commander of the ſhips and veſſels ſtationed off Guernſey and Jerſey, to watch the motions of the French, and intercept their ſhips in that quarter.

Thirty-five cutters have been engaged by the Admiralty inſtead of twenty, as formerly ſtated.

Lord Keith left town yeſterday noon for Sheerneſs, at which place his Lordſhip is to hoiſt his flag on board the Edgar frigate.

Government has, we underſtand, received intelligence that Holland has been required by France to provide ſubſiſtence for 50,000 troops, and to provide twelve ſail of the line to aſſiſt her in the war againſt Great Britain.—She has not yet complied, and wiſhes to avoid hoſtilities: but ſhe will be unable.

General Andreoſſi, before his departure, wrote a very handſome letter to Lord Hawkeſbury, expreſſing, in the ſtrongeſt terms, his regret at the renewal of hoſtilities between the two countries, his ſenſe of gratitude for the attention he had experienced from his Majeſty, as well as from all ranks of people, ſince his arrival here; his admiration of the inſtitutions of the country; and his hope that the miſunderſtanding would be of ſhort continuance. It is remarkable, that both he and his predeceſſor ſhewed a marked attachment to this country, and to its Government.

At the moment of the renewal of war, we are happy to hear good tidings of our means of defence. We are aſſured the returns of ſeamen, volunteers and impreſſed, that have been added to our navy, have not been leſs than an average of 1000 per day for the laſt fortnight. In addition to the 40,000 militia now actually embodied, as we have yeſterday, 30,000 more remain to be called out whenever his Majeſty ſhall think proper. Indeed, about 10,000 of theſe are now aſſembling.

PLYMOUTH, May 16.

The preſs was again very hot, both on Saturday and Sunday night. Boats from the different ſhips, manned and armed with their Officers, went into Yealm River: ſome boats up Catwater, landed at Oreſton, and ſearched the villages of Lower and Higher Hooe, Plympſtock, Stoddiſcombe, and the Hamlets round; while other boats landed at Saltram Quay, and proceeded to the villages round there. Several hands were picked up, and ſent on board the Admiral's ſhip in Hamoaze. There was alſo, this afternoon, a very hot preſs in Sutton Pool, amongſt the Colliers at this port and Catwater, and in the old rendezvous at Caſtle Rug.—Many concealed ſeamen were diſcovered, and ſhipped in the different boats for the flag ſhip. While the Hunter, of 18 guns, Capt. Inglefield, was at Dartmouth, her boat was aſhore preſſing; but the mid'ſhipmen and crew were ſo roughly handled by the women with brickbats, that they were glad to retire to their boats, and row off to the Hunter, where they arrived with broken heads and a few bruizes.

LONDONDERRY, May 10.

While the ambition and arrogance of the Firſt Conſul excite the indignation of the French people, whom he has ſucceeded in degrading to the condition of ſlaves, at the moment they imagined they were fighting for liberty, every true friend to our amiable Sovereign and enviable Conſtitution, has reaſon to rejoice at the unanimity and zeal manifeſted by all ranks of people throughout our United Empire, in the common cauſe. It is not by ignominious compulſion, as is in France, that our defence is conſtituted; ſentiment, pride, and the imperative neceſſity of ſelf-preſervation, have touſed the loyalty of every deſcription of our people—they come forward every where with one voice, reſolved, ſhould Bonaparte, intoxicated with his good fortune, determine for war, to aſſociate and to arm in ſupport of a paternal King, and a mild and equitable Government—in ſupport of every thing that can be dear to man—liberty, property, morality, and public order.—Theſe are the bleſſings we all aſpire to preſerve, and of which Bonaparte vainly meditates to deprive us, as long as we are actuated by thoſe loyal and honourable principles ſo unanimouſly and unequivocally avowed through every part of Great Britain.

A coinage has at length appeared with the image of Bonaparte; as the French have now put a price upon his head, his situation is become critical indeed.—His price, however, is only four and two pence, for such is the value of the five franc piece.

RELIGIOUS ANECDOTE.

"During the late unhappy commotions in Ireland, a private soldier in the army of Lord Cornwallis, was daily observed to be absent from his quarters and the company of his fellow soldiers. This gave rise to a suspicion that he withdrew for the purpose of holding improper intercourse with the rebels. The poor man was brought to trial, and by a Court Martial was condemned to suffer death. The Marquis hearing of this, wished to examine the minutes of the trial; and not being satisfied, sent for the condemned prisoner to converse with him. Upon being interrogated by his Lordship, he solemnly disavowed every treasonable practice or design, declared his sincere attachment to his Sovereign, and his readiness to live and die in his service stood affirmed, that the real cause of his frequent absence was for the purpose of secret prayer, for which his Lordship knew he had no opportunity among his profane comrades, who, on account of his religious profession, had become his inveterate enemies. This, he informed his Lordship, was the whole defence he made on his trial; but the officers judging it very improbable, paid no attention to it.

"The Marquis, in order to satisfy himself as to the truth of his defence, observed, that if so, he must have acquired some considerable aptness in the exercise of prayer.' The poor man replied, that he could not boast of his ability in that exercise. The Marquis then requested him to kneel down and pray aloud before him; which he did, with such copiousness, fluency, and fervour, as fully satisfied the Marquis, that no person could pray in that manner, who did not live in the habit of daily intercourse with God. The Noble Marquis then took him by the hand, revoked his sentence, and placed him among his personal attendants.

English manner of Mowing Wheat.

(Mr. De Lille introduced in England, the Mowing of Wheat, according to the following method.)

THE Scythe is at least six inches shorter in the blade than the common scythe; and instead of a cradle, has two twigs of osier put semicircular wise into holes made in the handle of the scythe, near the blade, in such a manner, that one semicircle intersects the other.

By this method of mowing wheat, the standing corn is always at the left hand. The mower mows it inward, bearing the corn he cuts on his scythe, till it comes to that which is standing, against which it gently leans. After every mower follows a gatherer, who being provided with a hook or stick, about two feet long, gathers up the corn, makes it into a gavel, and lays it gently on the ground. This must be done with spirit, as another mower immediately follows.

STAINS, occasioned by fruit, are readily removed from the clothes, by wetting them, and placing them near lighted brimstone; a few matches will answer the purpose. The sulphurous gas extracts the mark.

"Every effort to improve the Agricultural interests of our country, must be important in the estimation of its citizens. Perhaps there is no part of the Husbandman's care which has been so much neglected in this country as the management of his FRUIT TREES. Forbidden, from the hand of Nature, all the requisites of soil and climate to make our orchards the pride of vegetation, and the source of unsurpassed comforts and wealth, we should have aided her kind intentions, and cultivated, with grateful affection, the choice of her gifts; but the very reverse of this has been our practice. The wretched appearance of our orchards in general; these scarce heavily clad fickle and unfixery fruits; their frequent blights, and their early decays, prove the existence of some radical evil in their management, and loudly call for the controlling hand of the skilful Husbandman. To teach him this duty in its most improved form, and to lead him to a practical acquaintance with the character and cultivation of FRUIT TREES, is the design of this publication. The best judges of the subject in this country have pronounced it a work of unequalled merit and importance."

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the ſaid Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majeſty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

Received by the Ship Diana, Capt. Hunter, in 38 days from Dublin.

DUBLIN, May 28.

Laſt night arrived the London papers of Tueſday, which are almoſt entirely occupied with the debates in the Houſe of Lords on his Majeſty's Meſſage.

By ſome regulations which took place in the Houſe of Commons, we are prevented from laying their proceedings before the public as full as we could wiſh; but the Sun has given an account which is as follows:

"We ſhall ever lament the circumſtance which deprived our reporters of obtaining ſeats yeſterday in the Houſe of Commons. This was in conſequence of a new regulation with reſpect to the time of opening the gallery door, the inconveniencies & miſfortune of which, as far as the reporters and the country are concerned, we have reaſon to believe will not occur again. The excluſion however, was common to all the papers, and in conſequence no part of the proceedings of that houſe has appeared in any morning paper of this day.

"Mr. Pitt's ſpeech, which has been noticed to us by ſeveral members of Parliament, laſted about an hour and an half, and is admitted by perſons of all parties, to have exhibited one of the greateſt efforts of the human mind ever witneſſed within the walls of the Senate. It was heard throughout with the moſt anxious attention, and the applauſe it received in every part was only interrupted by the eager deſire univerſally felt that not a ſyllable ſhould be loſt. At the cloſe of his ſpeech, the houſe gave vent to their feelings, and loud and repeated ſhouts of applauſe continued for ſome time after he ſat down.

"The line Mr. Pitt took was that of proving in a variety of influences, that from the ſignature of the treaty of Amiens to the preſent time, a hoſtile mind had been ſhewn by France to this country; that the Government there had manifeſted one continued ſyſtem of inſult towards us, and that the papers preſented to Parliament, fully juſtified the war. He ſpoke entirely upon the point of the cauſe between the two countries, carefully avoiding ſaying any thing as to the conduct of his Majeſty's Miniſters, which he conſidered as a ſubject of a ſeparate inquiry. He repreſented the preſent as the greateſt and moſt awful criſis the nation ever witneſſed, and called upon the country for the exertion of all its energies; but he ſtated that we poſſeſſed means which, if properly called forth, would ſave us, but which only could ſave us, from all the dangers and difficulties with which we were threatened. We ſhall ever conſider it as the greateſt miſfortune to the country, if this ſpeech ſhould not yet be given to the public through the medium of the preſs.

"Mr. Grey ſpoke next, and moſt judiciouſly began his ſpeech, by ſtating the great diſadvantages under which he roſe, after the ſtrength of argument and burſt of eloquence which the houſe had juſt heard.

"The ſpeakers were Lord Hawkeſbury, who moved the addreſs, Mr. Erſkine, Mr. Pitt, Mr. Grey, who moved an amendment recommending the ſeizing the firſt opportunity of again making peace, Lord Caſtlereagh, Mr. Wilberforce, Mr. C. Yorke, Mr. W. Smith, then moved to adjourn."

After this a converſation took place reſpecting the excluſion of the reporters, who, it was underſtood, were to be admitted this day into the gallery in the uſual manner. This converſation was introduced by Mr. Sheridan. The Speaker ſtated the requeſt made to him, upon which he had ſounded his order for the gallery door not being opened till after prayers, but expreſſed his readineſs to adopt any meaſure that ſhould ſeem to meet the concurrence of the Houſe. The debate was adjourned at twelve o'clock, to this evening.

Notice has been given from the Admiralty office to all ſea officers, who are abſent from Britain with leave from the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, that it is their Lordſhips direction they return to England within ſix months after the 21ſt inſt. and that in failure thereof they will forfeit all the half pay that may be due to them.

LONDON, May 24.

A courier arrived this forenoon, at eleven o'clock, at Lord Hawkeſbury's office, with diſpatches from Paris, the nature of which has not tranſpired.

This morning arrived a Hamburgh mail, by which we received the following letter from Stockholm, dated May 3—"Baron Eſtaparre, who arrived here yeſterday from Peterſburgh in five days, has brought intelligence that a convention has been ſigned between the two courts, by which the frontiers are for the preſent left in the ſame ſituation as before. All preparations for war were immediately put a ſtop to.

The Vienna letters by the Hamburgh mail ſtate, the Emperor of Germany has repeated to our Ambaſſador his determination to remain neuter.

CAPTURES.—A letter from Plymouth, dated the 22d inſtant, ſays,—"Laſt night was ſent in here the French brig La Margaretta, Faures, from Bourdeaux for St. Maloes, captured by the Ship Acaſta, of 38 guns, in the Bay of Biſcay. She alſo captured a Dutch dogger, but parted company with her two nights ago. It appears a great number of privateers are fitting out in France, eſpecially at Bourdeaux, and many of them are nearly ready for ſea. Among them is the famous ſhip privateer Brave, which was ſo uncommonly ſucceſsful during the laſt war."

Sir Sidney Smith has taken a very rich French merchantman, and ſent her into the Downs. Three large Dutch ſhips from Surrinam for Amſterdam, have alſo been captured and ſent into port. The De Jong William Ling, from Amſterdam for Rouen, has been taken and ſent into Yarmouth.

NEW YORK, June 8.

From the time war was declared between the two great European powers, every poſſible exertion has been made by both to encreaſe the means of annoyance and defence. The French ports are cloſely blockaded by the Engliſh cruizers, who had captured and ſent into Plymouth and the Downs 12 merchant veſſels, belonging to France and Batavia, one of them a valuable Indiaman. The army intended for Louiſiana has been incorporated with the French troops in Holland, and augmented to 80,000 effective men, under the command of General Victor.

Maſſena, it is ſaid, will have the command in Italy, Moreau in Germany, and Macdonald in Batavia.

The Court of Vienna has addreſſed a declaration to the Engliſh and French miniſters in that capitol, ſtating that his Imperial Majeſty had decided to preſerve the moſt ſtrict neutrality in the event of hoſtilities between France and England. The Emperor of Ruſſia has profeſſed the ſame ſentiments, and has offered to interpoſe his powerful and pacific mediation to accommodate the differences which have ariſen between the two nations.

The Britiſh ſloop of war Drive, Fane, from Halifax, in 12 days, arrived within the Hook laſt evening, ſhe was diſpatched from Portſmouth on the 21ſt May, with the news of war between France and England, and with inſtructions to the commanders of veſſels on the Halifax ſtation. She is now on a cruize.

July 13.

We have been favored with the St. Vincents Gazette of the 25th June, by a reſpectable merchant of this city, from which we extract the following:

Kingſtown, (St. Vincents,) June 25.

It is with extreme pleaſure we have to announce the capture of St. Lucia, on Thurſday laſt, by our troops under the command of Lieut. General Grinfield, after a very obſtinate and bloody conflict, in which we loſt in killed and wounded about 300 men: [This is incorrect, as only about 100 were killed and wounded, and few of the former, ſo that the loſs on the part of the Engliſh is not great.] The loſs of the enemy is not known, but it is ſaid ſcarcely a man eſcaped the bayonet.—A Lieut. Col. is reported to have been killed—ſuppoſed to be the Hon. Col. Packinham, of the 64th Regiment.

The expedition left that Iſland on the ſame day, ſuppoſed for Tobago, which Iſland no doubt will ſoon be in our poſſeſſion.

The above information was brought by a Spaniſh ſchooner, which arrived here yeſterday.

We underſtand ſix ſmall veſſels were captured a few days ago off Martinique, by the Emerald frigate, and ſent into Dominique.

On Wedneſday laſt arrived in this Bay, the French brig L'Eole, a prize to his Majeſty's ſloop of war Drake and Nettley Schooner.—She was taken two leagues to the windward of the Diamond Rock, off Martinique. Her Cargo is ſaid to be very valuable.

Extract of a Letter from a Correſpondent at New Orleans, dated 13th ult. received by the Ship Mary, Capt. Sinclair.

"The noted Bowles was brought priſoner to this city, three days ago, eſcorted by ten Indians. It is underſtood, that ſome time ſince the Governor promiſed an Indian, then at this place, a reward of 3000 Dollars to apprehend Bowles, and in caſe of his being put to death, to bring in his head. The wiley Indian, acquainted with Bowles and his haunts, accoſted him, and requeſted to be ſupplied with ſome milk, which was in a ſmall adjacent houſe. As ſoon as Bowles entered the houſe, eight other Indians ſtarted from their lurking places, ſurrounded the ſpot, made him priſoner, and embarked him immediately on board a canoe, and brought him to Penſacola, from whence they conveyed him to this place. It is reported that he will be ſent in the courſe of a few days, to the Havanna, which probably will terminate the career of this ill-fated man."

A letter from Barbadoes, dated June 16, ſays—"Two French ſhips, bound to Martinique, with troops and warlike ſtores, (6000 barrels of powder) are brought in here by the Siam frigate."

Extract of a Letter, received by the John Morgen, from an American Gentleman of Boſton, at preſent in London, dated 16th May, 1803.

"The following is a curious and important fact, which I have from good authority, and which I rather think has not reached you. Early this ſpring, a certain gentleman was inſtructed to negociate with Louis the XVIIIth, for a complete renunciation of his right to the kingdom of France. (in favor of Bonaparte) and for the use of his influence to induce his brothers and relatives to sign the same deed of renunciation, the offices held out to him to do it were powerful and splendid. A full, complete, adequate, and permanent establishment was to have been given him, and he was to be made King of Poland. Russia and Prussia were not to be backward in the plot, they would give up some of their spoils of Poland to the new King, and in consequence Prussia was to be recompenced with Hanover and some few imperial cities. Russia was to have some of the fine fruitful Provinces of Turkey; and France, out of the wreck of the Ottoman Empire, was to take Egypt. The offer was made Louis XVIIIth, and he rejected it with disdain and contempt. I think you may firmly depend on the main fact, and the circumstances are not far from the truth."

From Cap'. Pierce, of the Ichr Seaflower, in 18 days from Port Republican, we learn, that the Gen. Rochambeau, his lady, &c. and about 800 troops on board, were departed for the Cape: that Port au Prince, Mirebalais, and other places were evacuated, and great preparations were entertained for the taking of the Croix des Bouquets. General Kerverau, who commands the Spanish part, had sold his life dear for reinforcements; and General Brunet, who commands the French, was fearful that he should soon be obliged to evacuate Aux Cayes.

Extract of a Letter from Antigua, dated June 19.

"War against France has been proclaimed here. It is probable Tobago has already been taken. All the troops have been drawn from this Island to Barbadoes, where 8 ships are assembled; and as soon as the Royals arrive, who are momently expected, will begin their operations."

The Courageaux, with the Regiment of Royal-Irish, sailed from England on the 17th of May.

Two French transports, one with 332 soldiers on board, the other with 160 hounds, to the West Indies, have been taken by Commodore Hood, and sent into St. Vincents.

HABEAS CORPUS.

IT was not till the year 1679, that the important act of Habeas Corpus was passed in England. By this act it was prohibited to send any one to a prison beyond sea. No Judge, under severe penalties, must refuse to any prisoner a writ of habeas corpus, by which the goaler was directed to produce in court the body of the prisoner (whence the writ has its name) and to certify the cause of his detainer and imprisonment. If the goal lie within twenty miles of the judge, the writ must be obeyed in three days; and to proportionably for greater distances: every prisoner must be indicted the first term after his commitment, and brought to trial in the subsequent term. And no man after being enlarged by order of court, can be re-committed for the same offence."

Previous to the period aforesaid, people were liable to be sent to distant prisons by the civil authority of England; and to be detained in prison a long time, and even during life, without ever being brought to trial: they were also liable after a regular discharge to be recommitted, at pleasure, for the same offence.

IN the 15th century the Portuguese at the time of their conquests in America, were besieged by the Indians in a city of the new world. A Portuguese, by the name of Rodriguez, took a barrel of powder in his arms, and crying to his companions, "take care, I carry my death, and that of others," he threw himself into the midst of his enemies, with a lighted match in his hand. He immediately fired the barrel, the explosion of which, threw into the air, and destroyed more than one hundred of the natives. Rodriguez, by an astonishing good fortune, escaped alive from this perilous enterprize, and continued to give fatal marks of his valour.

THE DANGER OF EXPOSING TOO MUCH.

AS Tray one day drolled down the street,
Famished, and lean, and sought to eat;
And wishing (was he hap to find
A Bone to know of any kind.
As by a splendid house he past,
His eyes he toward a window cast,
A glorious feast, spread bearing out,
Whereat he paus'd, and raised his snout;
Treated in spots, in spots 'twas blue,
Tray mark'd it with a curious eye,
Then wore a grunt was heard to cry,
That really it would not do.
And long he eat'd, till hunger led him on,
Poor man, bought he, I better sure than none
He broke in there, but I'm deceived a tell blow,

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:—

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the twenty-first day of June last, we thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the third day of this present month of August, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the tenth day of September next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the great seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire our Lieutenant Governor of our said province, and Lieutenant General commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, at York, this first Day of AUGUST, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and forty-third of our reign. NOTICE is hereby given, that regular attendance for the transaction of the Public Business of this Province, will in future be given at the Office of the Secretary of the Province, the Executive Council Office, and the Surveyor General's Office, every day in the year, (Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day only excepted) from ten o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and from five o'clock in the afternoon until seven in the evening.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY
PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,
Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant-General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

COUNCIL CHAMBER, 10th Nov. 1802.
UPPER-CANADA.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council, hereby gives Notice, to all whom it may concern, That no Leaſes which have been, or ſhall be granted, or pretended to be granted, by or under the authority of any Indian Nation, will be admitted or allowed of—And this Public Notice is given in order that no perſon may pretend ignorance of the ſame.

By Command of His Excellency,
JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.
York, 13th Nov. 1802.

From the Bridgetown (B.) Official Gazette, of the 26th June.

BRIDGETOWN, (Barbadoes) June 26.

At eight o'clock this morning arrived the ſchr. Supply, expreſs from St. Lucia, with diſpatches from Lieut. General Grinfield, announcing the important conqueſt of that iſland, which is communicated from the Lieut. Gen. in a letter to his Excellency the Right Hon. Lord Seaforth, from which the following is an extract:—

"ST LUCIA, 22d June, 1803.

"I am ſure it will give your Lordſhip pleaſure to hear that St. Lucia eſt a nous, and taken in the moſt handſome manner within 12 hours after the landing.—We laſt night drove in the enemy's out poſts and took the town of Caſtries.—I then offered the commandant a capitulation, which he refuſed as a ſoldier and a man of honor.—This morning at four the aſſault began, and before five we were in poſſeſſion of Morne Fortune. Our loſs in officers wounded, particularly of rank, has been great, but I hope many, if not all, will be reſtored to a ſervice, to which they have added luſtre."

Without entering into a circumſtantial detail of the debarkation of the armament, and its advance to the poſition of Morne Chabot; ſuffice it to ſay, that the greater part of the troops being landed at about four o'clock in the afternoon at Choque Bay, immediately proceeded to occupy the poſts contiguous to Morne Fortune, and about five o'clock, having driven the advanced poſts, got poſſeſſion of the town of Caſtries.

In this attack the Lt. Gen. himſelf led the column, and drove the French before him from Morne Chabot to Caſtries, down to a road that lay open to all the guns of the fort.

The commander of the forces wiſhing to prevent an effuſion of blood, ſent a ſummons to the commander of Morne Fortune, which not being acceded to, it was determined to commence operations againſt the Morne before daybreak the next morning. The firſt column commanded by Brig. Gen. Prevoſt, began its march at half paſt one o'clock; the 2d column, commanded by Brig. Gen. Berreton, moved from the town a half paſt two; and a detachment under Lt. Col. Shipley, marched by another road, to divert the attention of the enemy by a feint attack.

The columns nearly arriving at the ſame time at the ſeveral points of attack immediately puſhed forward to ſtorm the works of the fortreſs, which were carried in leſs than three quarters of an hour, notwithſtanding the reſiſtance of the French (animated by the example of their commandant, General of Brigade Nogues) was moſt ſpirited and obſtinate.

Great credit muſt attach to thoſe who by their prompt and deciſive meaſures, have thus carried into immediate execution the wiſhes of his Majeſty's Miniſters, and gained ſuch an acquiſition to their country by their unconditional conqueſt of an iſland of ſuch importance.

SUMMONS.

Caſtries, St. Lucia, June 21.

The forces of his Britannic Majeſty, now landed in this iſland, being ſo ſuperior to that of the French Republic, that all reſiſtance muſt be not only unneceſſary, but an actual unneceſſary profuſion of the lives of men; the naval force is ſo ſuperior to that of the French that no hope of ſuccour can poſſibly be entertained. The commanders both of the Britiſh army and navy, being fully ſenſible of their ſuperiority, offer to the French commanding officer to accept of any reaſonable conditions he may think proper to propoſe, premiſing that the French troops muſt be priſoners of war, and ſent to Europe, and that all public property is to be at the diſpoſition of the captors.

The officers who have the honor to preſent this will wait one hour for an anſwer.

We have the honor to be, &c.
(Signed) W. Grinfield, Lieut. Gen.
Sam. Hood, commodore, &c.

To the Gen. or officer commanding The French forces in St. Lucia.

ANSWER.—(Tranſlation.)

Morne Fortune, 2d Meſſidor, 11th year of the French Republic.

The General (Lieutenant to the Captain General of Martinique) at Saint Lucia, to his Excellency General Grinfield and the Commodore Hood.

Gentlemen,

The military advantages which I have at my diſpoſal will not permit me to ſubſcribe to the terms offered and contained in your meſſage, this inſtant received.

Like you, gentlemen, I am actuated by the principles of humanity, and the preſervation of our reſpective forces; but it is a duty I owe to the honor of the French arms, to defend Morne Fortune as long as the means I have will enable me to keep it militarily.

Receive, gentlemen, the homage of my ſalutations, and aſſurance of my high conſideration.

(Signed) NOGUES.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head Quarters, Caſtries, St. Lucia, June 22, 1803.

The commander of the forces has the honor to congratulate the troops under his command, for the gallant attack and capture, by aſſault of the fortreſs of Morne Fortune, and the unconditional ſurrender of the iſland of St. Lucia.

If any thing could reconcile to the officers and ſoldiers who have been wounded, and to the friends of thoſe who have been killed, it will be the reflection of their moſt extraordinary gallant, and ſoldier-like behaviour.

The commander of the forces ſhall have particular ſatisfaction in repreſenting to his King the readineſs with which the troops who formed the expedition were embarked on the ſhorteſt notice; he muſt particularly ſpeak of the gallant behaviour of the 2d battalion of Royals, and the 54th regiment, and he is very ſorry that the 68th regiment, by its being in the reſerve under Brig. Gen. Picton, was not in the action, otherwiſe there could have been no doubt, but that the conduct of that regiment would have merited an equal report, as was evinced from a ſmall detachment of that regiment in a feint attack under the command of Lieut. Col. Shipley.

To the ready attention of commodore Hood, and to the accommodation afforded to the troops in the men of war, and to the exertions and arrangements of Capt. Halſewell in their embarkation and diſembarkation, may be juſtly attributed the ſucceſs of the expedition of this iſland.

To the cool and determined conduct of Brig. Gen. Prevoſt, and Brig. Gen. Berreton, who led the two columns of attack, may be attributed the ſucceſs of the action; but to Brig. Gen. Prevoſt muſt be acknowledged, that to his conduct and arrangements, the commander of the forces attributes the glory of the day.

To Lt. Col. Parkenham and Lt. Col. M'Donald, both ſeverely wounded, their reſpective corps are indebted for their ſpirited behaviour.

To Lt. Col. Shipley and the Royal Engineers he is indebted in a high degree for aſſiſtance and profeſſional advice.

To Lt. Col. Morden (ſeverely wounded) he is indebted for his ſpirited offer and good conduct in leading the column to the aſſault; and the conduct of Major Sir George Richardſon, (alſo ſeverely wounded) was particularly noticed by Brig. Gen. Prevoſt.

It would be of too great length to inſert the names of every officer whoſe courage and behaviour on this day has deſerved to be marked; the commander of the forces can aſſure them that the ſatisfaction expreſſed by Brigadier General Prevoſt and Brig. Gen. Berreton, gave them the higheſt credit.

The commander of the forces would be unpardonable was he not to expreſs, that the General of Brigade, Negues, the commanding officer of the forces of the French Republic, and the troops under his command, made a moſt gallant defence for their country, and highly honorable to themſelves.

By their Excellencies Lieut. General Wm. Grinfield, and Commodore Samuel Hood, Commanding in Chief the Land and Sea Forces of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, employed in reducing ſaid Iſland, &c. &c.

ALTHOUGH the ſaid Iſland of St. Lucia was taken by aſſault, and without any capitulation or ſtipulation whatever, yet their Excellencies, from a deſire to tranquilize the inhabitants and proprietors with reſpect to their actual ſituation, have thought proper to declare, and do hereby declare, that the laws exiſting at the time the ſaid Iſland was under his Majeſty's government immediately previous to its laſt ceſſion, ſhall continue in full force until his Royal Pleaſure ſhall be made known; and all the conſtituted authorities are required to take notice of this proclamation, and conduct themſelves accordingly.

NEW-YORK, July 15.

The brig Quantibaycook, Webb, of this port, from Martinique for New-York, with French paſſengers and property on board, has been captured by an Engliſh lugger, and ſent into Tortola.

Accounts have been received in town, by an arrival in 12 days from St. Thomas, ſtating, that poſitive accounts had been received there of the blockade of Guadaloupe by an Engliſh ſquadron—and that war was proclaimed at St. Thomas' againſt the Spaniards.

Alſo, that Tortola was full of Daniſh veſſels, which had been ſent in by Britiſh cruizers.

FROM CAPE-FRANCOIS.

Captain Frederick King, who arrived here yeſterday, in a remarkable ſhort paſſage of eight days from Cape-Francois, informs the Editors of this Gazette, that juſt before he ſailed, letters were received at that place from Cape-Nichola-Mole, ſtating that a French frigate of 44 twenty four pounders, bound from Port au Prince for Aux-Cayes, with a number of reſpectable perſons as paſſengers, fell in with an Engliſh 74 gun ſhip, off the Mole, and poured two broad ſides into her before the Engliſh had time to open their ports. After which, the 74 having prepared for action, returned a broadſide, which killed ſeventeen men and wounded twenty-two. The French frigate then bore away, and ſailing faſter than the 74, got ſafe into Cape-Nichola-Mole, from which place this account was received.

We are further informed by Captain King, that there had been a general embargo at the Cape, which, however, had been taken off American veſſels; and it was hourly expected that the Britiſh would blockade that port.

A French frigate sailed from the Cape in very great haste on the 2d of July.—There was still at the Cape three French frigates, two 74's, and a number of privateers, taking in provisions.

From the same source we further learn, that Martinique was closely blockaded by an English squadron.

The news of war at the Cape, caused the greatest consternation amongst the white inhabitants. The blacks continued to be very troublesome, were daily making encroachments, getting nearer to the town, and burning and destroying all before them.

July 18.

Captain Irvin, of the sloop Sally, in 46 days from Antigua, has furnished us with the following information :—On the 20th June, the British brig Busy, mounting 16 guns, captured a French ship from the Coast of Guinea, with 337 slaves, 120 boxes of gold dust, and 480 elephants teeth, and carried her into Antigua. On the 22d of the same month, a French sloop, laden with coffee in bulk, and bound for a port in the United States, was captured by the same brig, and carried into Antigua.—On the 28th, the Captain of the Busy sent his boat, well manned, into St. Pierres (Martinique) and cut out a large French merchant ship, coppered to the bends, and carried her safe into Antigua. On the 29th, five sail of the line, two frigates, two sloops of war, three transports, with 7000 troops on board, proceeded from Antigua on an expedition against Martinique, with the intention of reducing that Island.—When the intelligence of war reached Antigua, three or four French vessels were lying there, which put to sea on the following night, having considerable property on shore.

A fleet of seven sail of the line and four transports had arrived at Barbadoes, and had captured ten French transports on their passage.

The Emerald, Centaur, and Blenheim, of 74 guns each, and the Venus frigate, had cut out of St. Pierres and Port Royal 32 sail of French merchant vessels.

American flour at Antigua, 10 dollars per barrel, pork 16, beef 13, lumber 55 dollars per thousand.

Captain Stewart, of the British armed schooner John, from Montego-Bay (Jam.) informs us, that the armed brig Hunter arrived at Port-Royal the 25th June, with dispatches from the British Government, announcing the renewal of hostilities. It was said she had captured a French merchant vessel on the passage, and had carried her into Port-Royal. On the 15th June, the English fleet of merchantmen, consisting of 43 vessels, sailed for Europe, under convoy of eight sail of the line, two of which were to proceed to the end of the voyage, and the remainder to return to Jamaica. About eleven ships of the line, besides a number of frigates and smaller vessels, were at Jamaica when Captain Stewart sailed.

A British sloop of war that put into Curracoa the 25th June, was detained by the Dutch, although no information of actual war had been received.

We are just favoured with the Saint Christopher's Advertiser Extraordinary, of the 22d ult. printed at Basseterre, from which we extract the following copy of a Circular, from the British Government.—Rel's Gaz.

COPY.—CIRCULAR.

Downing street, 16th May, 1803.

SIR,

I have received the King's commands to acquaint you, that, in consequence of the unfavourable termination of the discussions lately depending between his Majesty and the French government his Majesty's Ambassador left Paris on the 13th inst.

In consequence of this event his Majesty has been pleased to order that letters of marque or commissions for privateers should be issued with all dispatch in the usual manner.

I am now to signify to you the King's commands that you do immediately cause the above intelligence to be made as public as possible in all places within your government, in order that his Majesty's subjects may both be enabled, by this early notice, to prevent any injury which they might otherwise receive from the French, and that they may likewise be prepared to do their utmost within their several stations to distress and annoy them by making captures of their ships and destroying their commerce.

In the mean time you may give assurances to the owners of all armed ships and vessels that his Majesty will consider them as having a just claim to the King's share of all French ships and property which they make prize of.

Under these circumstances it will be advisable that the homeward bound merchant ships should wait until such time as they may have an opportunity of being conveyed home.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient humble serv't.

LONDON, May 31.

On Saturday night, at twelve o'clock, the Duke of Kent arrived at his Apartments in Windsor Castle, in order to pay his respects as soon as possible after his arrival to his Royal Parents. His Royal Highness landed at Falmouth on Thursday night.

The Gazette of Saturday contains a Proclamation for increasing the Militia. The men are to be enrolled on or before the 16th July.

The Hon. Gen. Dundas, late Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, his Staff, a number of Officers, with Mr. Barnard, and several Passengers, landed at Portsmouth on Sunday.

Major General Moore, is appointed to the command of the troops on the Kentish Coast. Lord Chatham is to command the troops to be stationed at Canterbury.

The account transmitted a few days ago from Plymouth, of so many of our Artificers and Seamen being employed at Brest, if true, is of the most melancholy and alarming nature. It would certainly be becoming in Parliament to investigate the original cause of this National misfortune.

NEW YORK, JULY 27.

Captain Fanning, arrived at Boston from Halifax, informs of the arrival there of a brig from St. Peters, near Newfoundland, with the French prisoners taken with that Island and Miquelon. It was reported 20 French vessels were captured there. The expedition was commenced and conducted by inhabitants of Newfoundland.

HALIFAX, JULY 11.

The frigates Boston, Andromache, and Cambrian, have lately sailed from hence on a cruize. There remain in port the Thunderer, a 50 gun ship, and the Pheasant, sloop of war.

The French are loud in their denunciation of Great Britain for not fulfilling the Treaty of Amiens; and call upon the world to judge between her and France.—But when the world reflects how much the British have surrendered since the Treaty; without retaining an inch of French land, while France has added whole nations to the number of her dependants; the decision will not be in unison with that of Bonaparte. For the benefit of those who have short memories we mention, that since the Definitive Treaty, which was not signed until the 27th of March, 1802, Great Britain has surrendered to France, Martinique, Tobago and St. Lucia, in the West-Indies; St. Pierre and Miquelon, near Newfoundland; Pondicherry, and all its dependencies, in the East-Indies; Foul Point, in the Island of Madagascar, the Isle of Goree, on the Coast of Africa; and the Isle of St. Marcou, on the Coast of France.—She has also given up to the Batavian Republic, which cannot be considered any other than a French colony, Malacca, in the East-Indies, with all its dependencies; the important colony at the Cape of Good Hope; the Islands of Amboyna, Banda, and Ternate, in the East-Indies the valuable colonies of Demarara, Essequibo, Berbice and Surrinam, and the Island of Curracoa, in the West-Indies—And added to these, she has also surrendered to Spain the interesting station of Minorca.—After the ready sacrifice of these Peace offerings, the world will not very easily assent to the charge of non-fulfilment of Treaty; even if urged with all the vehemence of French oratory.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

House of Commons, Friday May 27.

MEDIATION OF RUSSIA.

Mr. Fox said, he considered the question he was about to bring forward, as important as any that had ever come before the House. With respect to the general question of war or peace, he should have no objection to discuss it now, if he had not already done it; his opinion on that subject was well known, with that opinion the majority of the House differed; the country was at war and every measure which was calculated to render that war successful, should have his support. Every one, however, must agree in the propriety and expediency of any measure which was calculated to bring that war to a termination as soon as possible. The object of this motion was, to terminate it by a measure perfectly practicable in itself, and likely to be attended with the most beneficial consequences. It was to advise his Majesty to avail himself of the disposition which it was understood the Emperor of Russia had shewn to mediate between the two countries; the advantages of such a mediation, it was not necessary to point out. The mediation of a great Power was always of use, even when it did little more than lend its name, as a name thus given to a treaty, might give it a sanction in the eyes of Europe, which it would not otherwise possess. The mediation proposed in this case, was of a very different nature. If a mediation had been offered by the Emperor of Russia, and if, as it was understood, it had been accepted by the enemy he could not avoid considering the advantages which would accrue from the acceptance of it on the part of this country; and who so proper to mediate upon this occasion as Russia, who had been applied to to become one of the guarantees of the island of Malta, which was the principal subject in dispute? He thought, however, that the mediation of Russia would go a great way further; he thought that from his power, his general character, and from a variety of other circumstances, the Emperor of Russia was the fittest Sovereign to undertake a mediation of this nature, not only with a view to the general points to which that mediation might be applied, but also to those particular points which formed the subject of dispute between this country and France.

With respect to the general character of that Sovereign, from all they were able to collect, the Court of Petersburgh had given proofs of an eminent desire to preserve the tranquillity of Europe, and that France and England, and all the lesser powers, might be at peace. Every circumstance tended to prove the great and strong desire of the Government of Russia for peace, and it was also stated to have expressed a strong disapprobation of the conduct of France in various instances. Now if they were to look for a mediation, there were two qualities extremely essential, which in case existed in all their force. In the first place, he found on the part of Russia an eminent desire of peace; and, in the second, a great disapprobation of the conduct of France, which was in a great measure connected with the circumstances out of which the dispute with this country had arisen. If such a mediation should be successful, and he confessed he was extremely sanguine in his expectation as to the result, it might lead to a much larger system, and might have an extremely favourable influence upon the general state of Europe. If it was put to him, was he sure that this would produce peace, he should say, that he certainly could not be sure, but he never looked forward to any result with a more sanguine expectation than to the result of the mediation, of which he proposed that we should avail ourselves. He thought he should not differ from any one member when he said, that of all the circumstances in the state of Europe, that which gave most cause for lamentation, was that we had not the power of protecting others, and that we must continue the contest, with the certainty that France would use the power which she possessed for the purposes of ulterior agrandizement, and of oppressing those states which were unable to resist her. He hoped then, that the mediation of Russia would have the effect of preventing those lamentable conſequences. What power poſſeſſed ſo fair a right, as it were, to preſcribe peace to Europe? Beſides; the Emperor of Ruſſia, from particular circumſtances, might be enabled to uſe ſtrong language to Bonaparte.

The late Emperor had a diſpute with this country, which had been ſince amicably ſettled, and there was not the leaſt reaſon to ſuppoſe that the preſent Emperor would wiſh to renew that diſpute; but as it was ſaid with reſpect to the treaty of Amiens, that there were many points in it unſatisfactory to this country, ſo in the arrangement with the Emperor of Ruſſia, there were ſome points perhaps unſatisfactory to that Court. The Emperor might therefore ſay to this country, if you will be bound by your treaty, I will be bound by mine. When, however, he came to talk to the enemy, the Emperor had ſtill ſtronger grounds. He underſtood that a part of his Majeſty's declaration alluded to a propoſal made by France to Ruſſia, for the diſmemberment of the Turkiſh Empire. Ruſſia it was well known was always the enemy of the Ottoman empire; its Princes had almoſt an hereditary deſign upon Turkey, and if by diſmemberment of that empire was to take place. Ruſſia muſt neceſſarily gain the largeſt ſhare; but the Emperor of Ruſſia might ſay to the Firſt Conſul, if I abſtain from all deſigns of that ſort, do you alſo abſtain, and a ſyſtem might then be formed and carried into effect, by which no power in Europe could be enabled to injure the Ottoman Empire. The Emperor of Ruſſia would alſo join this country in any propoſition for the better protection of the ſecondary powers of Europe from the oppreſſion of France. It might be ſaid that France would accede to ſuch a propoſition only to gain time; it might be ſo, but that would anſwer his (Mr. Fox's) purpoſe, as the effect would be poſtponement of the conteſt. If Ruſſia propoſed any meaſure tending to the ſecurity of the Turkiſh empire, it muſt be acceded to by France. It might be ſaid that France might accede and afterwards break the treaty; it might be ſo, but if this was the caſe, there was an end of all treaties whatever. This advantage would however reſult, that if France broke a treaty thus made, it would not be Great Britain only that would be engaged in the conteſt, but Great Britain and Ruſſia conjointly.—Much had been formerly ſaid upon the ſubject of Continental Alliances, they might be prudent or not, according to circumſtances; but if alliances were neceſſary, there was no power ſo competent as Ruſſia to reduce the power of France. He aſked whether we had not a better chance of obtaining the cordial co-operation of Ruſſia after ſuch a mediation had been tried and failed, than at the preſent moment? He conſidered the preſent as a happy opportunity, which if not ſeized, it might be afterwards much to be lamented. He aſked any man, whatever might be the power of France, if, when it ſaw Ruſſia and Great Britain united, the boldeſt Government of that country would not ſhrink from the conteſt? The only poſſible caſe of oppoſition to ſuch an union was, that Auſtria and Pruſſia joining France, but this was ſo extremely improbable, that it was not worth conſidering.

The general policy of the Court of Berlin, was pacific; in Auſtria the ſame opinion pretty generally prevailed which reſulted in a great meaſure, from the change of Councils and the prevalence of the Archduke Charles, who although not ultimately ſucceſsful in the late conteſt, had obtained by his conduct the greateſt glory, and who appeared to conſider that glory as an additional motive to peace. Thus with a pacific Court of Berlin, of Vienna, and of Peterſburgh, there was every advantage to be gained by the propoſed mediation, from whence, in the event of its failure, a ſubſequent co-operation of the Court of Peterſburgh might be inſured. They would, at leaſt, if ſuch a mediation failed, enliſt the good opinion of mankind in the proſecution of the war, whilſt the Houſe and the country would be better ſatisfied, & a ſtrong and unanſwerable caſe would be made out on the part of Great Britain.—By refuſing that mediation, we might be enabled to prevent aggrandizement of France. If it was ſuppoſed the mediation of Ruſſia was only offered to conceal a friendſhip for France, then his Majeſty's miniſters had a ſolid and unqueſtionable right to refuſe it, but he did not believe that ſuch was the caſe, nor did he believe that there was any ſuch ſuſpicion. The mediation came at a late period, but he truſted his Majeſty's miniſters would not heſitate to put an end to the conteſt as ſoon as they could, conſiſtent with the honor of the country. If peace was the effect of the mediation a more ſolid and firm league might be made; it would not merely be a guarantee for Malta, but a guarantee for Europe. The tranquillity of the continent might be preſerved, and all thoſe exchanges and ceſſions prevented, which might be contrary to the intereſts of other nations, and a ſyſtem might be eſtabliſhed, by which thoſe nations which had ſuffained loſſes might be prevented from receiving further injuries, and thoſe who had gained might be induced to be ſatisfied with their gains, and thus all further encroachments might be prevented, and a fair proſpect of a long and uninterrupted peace might enſue. He concluded by moving "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, praying that his Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed to avail himſelf of the diſpoſition manifeſted by the Emperor of Ruſſia to mediate between his Majeſty and the Government of France, for the purpoſe of terminating the war, if it could be effected conſiſtent with the honor of his Majeſty's Crown, and the intereſts of the country." He alſo moved, "That his Majeſty's Declaration ſhould be read," which was accordingly entered as read.

Lord Hawkeſbury ſaid, he was glad the Honorable Gentleman had moved that his Majeſty's declaration ſhould be read, as by that it appeared that his Majeſty was diſpoſed to enter into any arrangement which was conſiſtent with the honor of his Majeſty's Crown, and the intereſts of his people. He ſhould have hoped that that very paſſage in the declaration would have convinced the Honorable Gentleman that his motion was unneceſſary and ill-timed. To the motion itſelf he had two objections; firſt, that no Conſtitutional or Parliamentary ground had been laid down in ſupport of the motion; and ſecondly, that it appeared that there exiſted no ſuch ground whatever for the motion. All the arguments, on the contrary, bore on the other ſide; and he was ſure that if no Parliamentary ground exiſted for the motion it could produce no good, and might produce harm. He truſted that he reſpected enough the valuable privileges of that Houſe, to be convinced that they had no right to interfere and give their opinion with reſpect to the conduct of his Majeſty's Government, and more eſpecially upon that moſt important queſtion of Peace or War. But whilſt he admitted this, he contended that the Conſtitution, having wiſely inveſted his Majeſty with the prerogative of negociating, and of declaring Peace or War, ſome ſufficient grounds ought to be made out for interfering with the conduct of his Majeſty's Government in that reſpect. One was, that his Majeſty's Government had been guilty of neglect, and that it ought or ought not to have done ſome particular act, becauſe ſuch and ſuch conſequences might or might not have reſulted from it, in which caſe it was certainly open to the Houſe to ſay that it ought to be done. The other was, where, without any ſuch neglect, the ſyſtem laid down by his Majeſty's Miniſters was ſuch, that it did not include ſome particular point, or various points, in which caſe, it was perfectly competent for the Houſe to ſay, that ſuch points ought to have been included in that ſyſtem. But in every caſe of this kind, a fair and ſtrong ground ought to be made out. In this caſe no fair ground had been brought forward in ſupport of the motion.—The meaſure which the Houſe were called upon to accede to, had not been neglected by his Majeſty's Miniſters, neither did the ſyſtem they had laid down preclude that meaſure.—If any caſe ſhould happen in which ſuch a meaſure ſhould be rendered neceſſary or expedient, it was already provided for. Upon this it would indeed be neceſſary for him to add no more than to refer to the laſt paragraph but one of his Majeſty's declaration, in which, having ſtated all the grievances of which he had complained, and the neceſſity of recalling his Ambaſſador from Paris, and of having recourſe to arms, his Majeſty ſays to all Europe, "That he will be ready to concur even now, in an arrangement, by which ſatisfaction will be given to him for the indignities which had been offered to his Crown and to his People, and ſufficient ſecurity offered againſt further encroachments on the part of France."—What was this but to ſhew his Majeſty's ſincere diſpoſition for peace, and he would aſk, whether, after that, any Adminiſtration could adviſe his Majeſty to refuſe to liſten to any reaſonable, fair, practicable propoſition for peace, if peace could be obtained conſiſtently with the honor of this nation? Now as to the latter part of the Hon. Gentleman's ſpeech on the policy of Europe, and of Continental connexions, he ſhould not take up the time of the Houſe, more eſpecially ſince there was ſcarcely a principle laid down by the Honorable Gentleman in which he did not completely agree, and he concurred with him, that the only mode of leſſening the progreſs of that ſyſtem, the fatal effects of which had been felt for the laſt 10 years war, and felt as much ſince the concluſion of peace, was, by the union of the Independent States of Europe, on broad, liberal and fair motives, and not on intereſted or ſelfiſh principles; on a general and a liberal underſtanding of what truly compoſes the public policy of Europe.—He agreed alſo that the power to which the Honorable Gentleman referred, namely, Ruſſia, was the power, of all others, which if was the intereſts of this country the moſt to conciliate; as being the beſt capable of forming the baſis of a proper general arrangement to give us peace, and upon a ſyſtem which the Honorable Gentleman had ſtated, and on which the Honorable Gentleman felt as he did.—Now, without going into ſubjects not neceſſarily connected with that, and on which there might be ſome diviſion of opinion growing out of a debate, he would ſay, that the circumſtance which weighed moſt upon his mind with reſpect to the late peace was, that it had not afforded us any ability to arreſt the progreſs of France; but the peace was made with a view of enabling us hereafter to oppoſe a barrier to the encroachments of France; but he could ſay moſt ſincerely, from the hour of the concluſion of that peace to the preſent day, no efforts had been wanting on the part of his Majeſty's Government, to form ſuch a concert (not with a view of renewing the war, but with a pure defenſive view) to oppoſe a barrier againſt further encroachment; and whatever diſpoſition there might be in ſome part of that Houſe not to do juſtice to his Majeſty's Government, yet he could ſtate moſt confidently, no efforts had been wanting on their part, which, if ſucceſsful, moſt probably, and perhaps he could ſay, almoſt certainly, the circumſtances of which were not now to be debated, would have anſwered the purpoſe for which they were intended, ſo that the Houſe would not be now debating on the ſubject before them, but he ſaw not, either in the commencement of hoſtilities, or the courſe which had been taken, any thing which could render that mediation inefficient now, if there was that diſpoſition on the part of the other powers of Europe to render it effectual, and this brought him to that part of the ſpeech of the Right Honorable Gentleman, which related to the offer of the Mediation of Ruſſia, at a period of the Negociation which was ſtated to be, with a view to the ſettlement of the differences between his Majeſty and France. With reſpect to any offer that had been made of ſuch mediation, unqueſtionably if his Majeſty's Government had been diſpoſed to exclude all conſiderations, or were not diſpoſed to explain fully to the Ruſſian Government; and even at the preſent criſis, he ſhould have tho't that the powers of Europe would be acting unwiſely in offering a mediation after a critical Negociation for ſeveral weeks. After the ſituation in which this country was placed, after the moſt full, frank, and explicit declaration on the part of his Majeſty, and after the evaſions and delays on the part of France, which nobody could diſpute, the only purpoſe for which they could negociate was, that if the two countries had any difficulty, they might, for their ſeparate advantage, refer to the Emperor of Ruſſia, for his good offices to terminate their differences. Now he would aſk the Houſe, whether his Majeſty's Government would have been juſtified on fair grounds to do—What? to ſay, "we are not ready to enter into the diſcuſſion with you, we know our own views, but your's are to delay the iſſue." It was the intereſts of this country that the queſtion ſhould no longer be left undecided, he therefore ſaid that the intervention came under circumſtances in which it did not appear to his Majeſty's Government to be wiſe to alter the inſtructions which they gave to my Lord Whitworth, to bring the Negociation to a criſis; for it appeared under all the circumſtances to be only calculated for delay on the part of France. The Honorable Gentleman had ſtated what great advantages there would be, both with reference to carrying on the War, or the ſettlement of Peace, in conſequence of our accepting the mediation of Ruſſia. He agreed with the Honorable Gentleman in this particular, and he ſtated the circumſtances which were concluded in the year 1781, relative to the right of Navigation; and he ſaid, that the Emperor of Ruſſia might ſay, that although ſuch concluſion of the point might be ſatisfactory to us, it might not be ſo ſatisfactory to Ruſſia; and that Ruſſia, on ſome future occaſion, might form an expectation to recur to their ancient ſyſtem on the ſubject of Neutral Navigation. Now, he would ſay, there certainly were individuals in Ruſſia attached to that ſyſtem of Navigation at that time; he would not ſay there were none of them now; but this he would obſerve, that the great majority of the moſt intelligent perſons in Ruſſia, and even in the Ruſſian Government, were formerly convinced, that upon this ſubject the intereſts of Ruſſia were correſpondent with the intereſts of Great Britain; they were clearly convinced that the contrary opinion, which was taken by the late Empreſs, who, though moſt certainly a great Princeſs, had been influenced by the vanity of being at the head of a Confederacy in ſupport of that opinion, but now, the moſt intelligent perſons in Ruſſia were well convinced of the weakneſs of that opinion, and upon the beſt foundation, becauſe it was manifeſt that Ruſſia had little or no mercantile marine whatever, nor could have any, as all her commerce is carried on in the veſſels of other countries, ſo that the intereſts of Ruſſia correſpond with thoſe of Great Britain. If the queſtion decided in favour of Great Britain on the ſubject of Neutral Navigation, in 1781, not to be acted on, Ruſſia would loſe its trade in the Baltic; and this was the conviction of all the intelligent perſons now in Ruſſia, but he would not put the queſtion on this narrow ground; it was moſt unqueſtionably true, that by a connection between Ruſſia and Great Britain we could beſt ſet a barrier to France, without this, or ſome ſuch concert, no hope could be entertained of peace upon a ſolid foundation to this country and to Europe, which muſt be had on juſt and honorable terms; but it muſt not be done by crippling our exertions in the meantime, limiting our powers, or paralyſing our ſtrength. Any meaſure that could have ſuch a tendency was inexpedient; his objection therefore to the motion of the Honorable Gentleman was, that he laid no adequate ground for it.—Had he not ſhewn to the Houſe that his Majeſty's Miniſters had manifeſted a diſpoſition to peace, but, on the contrary, it appeared from the declaration, an extract from which he had read, that they even now were in their ſentiments and wiſhes conformable to thoſe which had been expreſſed by the Honorable Gentleman himſelf, which were for peace, conſiſtently with the ſecurity and repoſe of Europe. He could not aſſent to this motion, becauſe it would imply a belief that Government were not actuated by that which had actuated them. He thought alſo, that the motion might have the effect of unhinging the minds of the people, of checking their exertions, and diſappointing their expectations, which he hoped were well founded; theſe were the reaſons which occurred to him to object to the motion of the Honorable Gentleman. It was not to the general ſentiments of the Hon. Gentleman he objected, but he ſaw no neceſſity for the motion under the preſent circumſtances, he therefore begged leave to move the previous queſtion.

Mr. Fox ſaid a few words in explanation.

New York, July 27.

By the ſchooner Liberty from Barbadoes and Trinidad, we learn, that the French troops which were taken at St. Lucia, arrived at Barbadoes about the firſt of this month, in the Courageux, a Britiſh 74—and that on the 3d, they were put on board of three tranſports as priſoners of war, and were to ſail for England on the 6th.

We alſo learn, that part of the 9th and 12th Weſt India regiments, which troops were at the taking of Tobago, arrived at Trinidad on the 7th inſtant. The Britiſh had only two men killed in taking this iſland.

Captain Dorgan has favored us with Trinidad papers to the 7th inſt. The ſubſequent articles appear in the laſt paper:

Trinidad, July 6.

We hear that his Excellency Colonel Fullarton received on Sunday laſt, a letter from Captain Columbine, of his Majeſty's ſhip Ulyſſes, dated at Tobago, acquainting him with the capture of that iſland, and fourteen ſhips and a corvette lying there—and that Brigadier General Picton was appointed by their Excellencies the commanders in chief as governor thereof.

A frigate has been ſeen ſince yeſterday in the Gulf, ſuppoſed to have come direct from England; but when this paper was put to preſs was further off than when ſhe dropped anchor laſt night.

New York, July 30.

Captain Calvert, arrived at Philadelphia in 32 days from Liſbon, informs that a day or two before he ſailed, a Britiſh packet arrived, the captain of which mentioned the loſs of two Britiſh frigates, one by capture, the other being drove aſhore in a gale. He alſo mentioned the capture of a French frigate by the Britiſh, but the name of either is not remembered.

It was currently reported at Liſbon, that the French had taken and held poſſeſſion of Bremen.

Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the Firſt Conſul, who arrived at the city of Waſhington from the Weſt Indies, ſailed from St. Domingo for France in a French frigate. A Britiſh frigate fell in with her and chaſed her into Martinique, where he took a paſſage in an American veſſel for this country, from which he propoſes getting home ſafe.

FROM THE BOSTON CENTINEL, JULY 30.

Lateſt from Europe.

An arrival at Salem, from Rotterdam, has furniſhed a paper of that city of the 8th June—which is the lateſt from Europe. It does not appear that the French had then taken poſſeſſion of Hamburgh; tho' a large French force from Holland was advancing towards that rich city; and had taken poſſeſſion of Quakenburgh, in the Biſhoprick of Oſnaburgh, on their way to Hanover. The march will be but a ſhort one from Hanover to Hamburgh. War had not been declared between England and Holland, though Mr. Liſton, the Britiſh Miniſter at the Hague, had demanded his paſſports.—This looks like a ſpeedy rupture.

Captain Nichols, who has arrived at Salem from Rotterdam, has furniſhed the Editor of the Salem Gazette with a paper of that city of the 8th June—from which ſome tranſlations have been made. The orders, which had been iſſued in Ruſſia, for the troops to hold themſelves in readineſs to march, had been countermanded.—Accounts from Berlin, of May 28th, mention, that Pruſſia and another German power, were concerting meaſures to be taken in caſe the French enter the North of Germany. They add, "It is alſo extremely probable, that though Hano-and should he believe us fate, Pesaro will, however, cover the remainder of the North of Germany, particularly the Weser and the Elbe, and the cities of Hamburgh and Bremen."

Letters from Hanover, announce active preparations to defend the Electorate against the French.

Interesting.

HALUS, JUNE 4.

The Bishoprick of Osnaburgh has surrendered to the French by capitulation. On their approach, the Hanoverian garrison evacuated the country. The French, in three columns, are in full march for Hanover. They have a park of 50 pieces of artillery.

Mr. Liston (English Minister) has demanded his passports.—He will leave a Charge des Affaires."

ROTTERDAM, JUNE 7.

"The number of French troops which entered Quakenbrugh, in the Bishoprick of Osnaburgh, amounted to 6000."

FROM GIBRALTAR.

We yesterday received, by the Pembroke, the Gibraltar Chronicle of the 16th June—It is principally filled with the English State Papers, which have been published here. It however contains the following paragraphs :—

GIBRALTAR, JUNE 16.

"The Victory came in on Sunday evening. She has taken, on her passage from home, the French frigate L'Ambuscade, and two West-Indiamen; but these prizes, which she left behind, are not yet arrived.

"The Dutch brig Bonaparte, from Cette, for Hamburgh; the Two Brothers, from Cette, for Leghorn; and the Swedish ship Hoppet, from Cette, for Stockholm, have been sent in here for examination, on suspicion of the cargoes being French property."

FROM LISBON.

We learn, that immediately on the receipt of the news of War between Great Britain and France, the French Ambassador at Lisbon, required the Government to declare War against England within 48 hours. We have not learnt the result

FROM HAVANNA.

"By recent arrivals from Cuba we learn, that American property to a large amount had been seized there, as being smuggled; and the Intendant, who was suspected as being interested in an illicit trade carried on with the citizens of the United States, had been ordered to Spain. The noted Bowles was at Havana, but it was expected he would be exchanged."

FROM MARTINIQUE.

Accounts from the West-India Islands daily become more interesting. We have accounts from Martinique as late as the 9th inst.—It was then closely blockaded by a strong British squadron. The French shipping were at Fort-Royal. The French garrison was said to be 3000 strong. The English residents had been ordered to quit the Island, and had proceeded to Dominica. The French daily expected an attack, and were preparing for a gallant defence.

"A Treatise on the Culture and Management of Fruit Trees, &c." by Wm. Forsyth, Gardener to his Majesty, at Kensington and St. James's, is now in the press of Messrs. D. and S. Whiting, Albany, and will be published in ten or twelve weeks, at the reduced price of one Dollar and a half.—This valuable work will be comprized in a handsome Octavo Volume of about 300 pages, exclusive of 13 well executed Copper-plate Engravings, and will be neatly printed, bound and lettered.

"Every effort to improve the Agricultural interests of our country, must be important in the estimation of its citizens. Perhaps there is no part of the Husbandman's care which has been so much neglected in this country as the management of his FRUIT TREES. Possessing, from the hand of Nature, all the requisites of soil and climate to make our orchards the pride of vegetation, and the source of unnumbered comforts and wealth, we should have aided her kind arrangements, and cultivated, with grateful affection, the choicest of her gifts; but the very reverse of this has been our practice. The wretched appearance of our orchards in general; their scanty harvests; their sickly and unfavory fruits; their frequent blasts, and their early decays, prove the existence of some radical evil in their management, and loudly call for the correcting hand of the skilful Husbandman. To teach him this duty in its most improved forms, and to lead him to a practical acquaintance with the character and conformation of FRUIT TREES, is the design of this publication. The best judges of the subject in this country have pronounced it a work of unequalled merit and importance."

JAMES GREEN, Sec.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

House of Commons, Friday May 27.

MEDIATION OF RUSSIA.

(Concluded from our last.)

Mr. Pitt said he certainly did not mean to trouble the House for more than a single moment. He rose only to state what he hoped on the present occasion, and to observe, that for the first time in the recollection of any who heard him, for at least a long period of years in that House, there was very little reason to suppose, although the subject was most important, there was any real or radical difference of opinion; he rose, he said, to express a hope that the House would not be brought to a division on the Hon. Member's proposition, whatever the House might think of the propriety of the motion as an address of advice to his Majesty. He perfectly agreed with the hon. gentleman in much of what he had expressed; in most of the general principles laid down by him he was perfectly ready to concur. He had heard that hon. gentleman with infinite satisfaction; and that satisfaction had been greatly increased by hearing from his noble friend so much approbation of such principles, and which left no room to doubt, that in the judgment of government (who in the first instance, had constitutionally the duty of advising his Majesty) these principles ought to be their guide, and that no opportunity of acting upon them would be lost. As to the principles themselves, it would be strange indeed if he had any unwillingness to avow them. They were the principles which in the best part of the history of our country, had been applied to our situation on the most important occasions; principles which had so often contributed to our protection, or the protection of our country, and also a successful resistance against encroachments, against principles which had been upheld in opposition to France so frequently, upon points of national rivalry, that they had led us to consider that nation almost as a natural enemy; principles which are deemed to be liberal and prudent upon all occasions, ever since this country interfered with effect in the affairs of the continent; principles which led us to watch the power which threatened, in the first place, the independence of Europe; and, secondly, connected with the first, the security of Great Britain; principles which he had often maintained, and in which he had often the misfortune to be opposed by that hon. gentleman, with a zeal and vehemence which he was happy to find he did not now employ, but used arguments which amounted almost to a contradiction of his former speeches; but he most sincerely rejoiced that these principles were adopted by that hon. gentleman, for they certainly were the principles which had contributed most to the establishment of the character of this country, and were the foundation of its greatness, as appeared in several periods of its history, but never more conspicuously than in the last war.—They were principles so deeply rooted in his mind, that it was not until the moment he had despaired of any further continental connection, that he thought it would be fitting to look for terms of separate pacification. They were principles on which it was fit to judge of the government of which he had made a part, when it became often his duty to submit to the house expensive and great subsidies, on which the interests of this country were hazarded, and in some instances almost sacrificed to the idea of general security to be obtained, not by a question of terms or expence as to England, but with a general view of security to the continent. They were the principles which led him to believe, that when we had no longer a chance of obtaining the best means of security, of rendering Europe safe against the ambition manifested by France, we were justified in looking for security for ourselves alone, and which satisfied him that when we were making terms for ourselves alone, that we were more at liberty to make concessions calculated to prevent the evils of protracted war, than when our interests were involved with those of an ally. He was anxious to speak sincerely upon the points, and he declared it was not for the purpose of referring to those times when differences subsisted between him and the hon. gentleman upon these subjects, or with any wish to renew the discussions upon them at present, but he trusted that the country would, upon this occasion, have the benefit of the authority of the hon. Gentleman, to silence those who, pushing his arguments to extremes, yet sheltering themselves under his authority, declaimed against the impropriety and impolicy, at any time, or under any circumstances, of making British sacrifices for continental purposes. He did not mean to contend that continental connections would justify us in always interfering in the events which occurred on the continent, but on the other hand, he was sure he should not be contradicted, when he asserted that no great and essential change could take place in the relative situation of the powers on the continent, the effects of which would not be material to Great Britain. It, however, by no means followed from that position, that we were bound, with our own separate force to resist the aggressions against other states, or to avenge their wrongs, if other powers did not feel themselves bound by interest or inclination to join us; but it did not follow that whether we were enjoying the advantages of peace, or engaged in the prosecution of a war; whether we were negociating for the purpose of preventing a war, or for the purpose of concluding a peace, that it must be the duty of Government, when they saw a favourable opportunity, to avail themselves of the disposition of great and respectable Continental Powers, to act in concert with them, for the attainment of those objects.—The hon. Gentleman had properly abstained from in any degree detailing his view of the application of this mediation to the principal object in dispute. He was glad that the hon. Gentleman had done so, and he would adhere to his example. He only wished to say, what perhaps might appear a little whimsical from him, and might seem as if he wished to limit the possible application of the continental principles laid down by the Hon. Gentleman, and that he was more inclined to contend for separate British interests than the hon. Gentleman himself—he was willing to admit, that if there could arise out of the proposal of Russia, any solid ground to hope for, or if there could be engrafted upon it, any chance of producing a system that might restore peace, accompanied with powerful and respectable guarantees, not only of the present object in dispute, but of what remained of the present state of Europe, that object would be in itself so desirable and so important, that he could even conceive that some arrangement, which taken separately might be less useful to ourselves, might yet be admissible. But upon this no distinct opinion could be given beforehand, because it must depend upon a comparison of the circumstances presented to their choice. Upon this point they were all agreed, that this country ought not to separate itself unnecessarily from this continent, on the contrary that we ought to take every opportunity of connecting and linking ourselves with it upon fair and honorable grounds.—But after the experience that we had had, that without any fault of our own, without any departure from the Treaties we had made, without any failure of the engagements into which we had entered, we might still be left to struggle alone with France, upon our own resources and upon our own means.—If we did know, by clear evidence, of the hostile views of France against us, and that we had at the same time in our hands the means of resisting that particular danger, it would become us to know, that what we received as a substitute for it should be great and sufficient indeed, before we suffered a doubt to arise in our minds upon the subject—before we parted with that security which British valour had gained, and which it only required British prudence and perseverance to retain. By the acquisition of alliances on the continent, we should always gain an accession of power, but at the same time, he could not give up solid and separate security for continental alliances. He thought it necessary to make these distinctions, that we might not at once adopt those opinions which had begun to be prevalent in the minds of some persons, viz. that we ought at once to abandon continental connexions altogether, but he was equally anxious to avoid the contrary extreme, and that we should not indulge prematurely in the dream looking on the continent for the security, on points in which the continent was not concerned.

On the points in which the interests of the Continent were not involved, our own interests, our own security, must be prosecuted and maintained with vigor and with firmness, unless we were content to be reduced as low in rank and power as some states, whose situation every one concurred in lamenting. This subject might be carried much further, and many observations upon it naturally suggested themselves to his mind; but he would not now trespass any longer upon the house, because he had set out with declaring that he would not occupy much of their time, and because, upon general principles, there appeared to be no difference of opinion. Feeling therefore the justice of the principles which the Honorable Gentleman had in his mind, and which he had urged upon this occasion, he was inclined to hope that he would not persevere in pressing his motion, because in that case one of the two things must happen, if it should be rejected, or if the previous question should be put upon it (which he should think the more conformant to the rules of Parliamentary proceeding) it might be a subject of misconstruction elsewhere, and it might be said, "you were less anxious than France for the establishment of a system which afforded the best prospect for maintaining the security of Europe." If, on the other hand, the motion should be carried, great weight would necessarily result from its being a vote of the House of Commons, and, besides unhinging the public mind, it would make that appear to be a forced measure, which would certainly have more effect if it came as a voluntary Act of Government. Parliament would, (he hoped) at all times, exercise the constitutional right which it possessed over these subjects; but cases of war and negociation (unless where there were grounds to suspect abuse) ought to be left to Ministers, with that responsibility necessarily attached to their situation. Upon these grounds he hoped the Honorable Gentleman would not persist in his motion.

Mr. Fox said, he was sorry the Right Hon. Gentleman had referred to topics which included the sentiments maintained by each of them in the late war: the discussion he had no inclination to renew, but in the course of which he believed he had not been so fortunate as to be well understood. He had been of opinion in that war, not that we should have no Continental Alliances, but that our Continental Alliances in the last war had been misapplied; and of that opinion was the Right Honorable Gentleman at the conclusion of the war, when we were left without Allies. He did not affect any superior sagacity, but he happened to be two or three years beforehand with the Right Hon. Gentleman in opinion upon that subject. He supported the treaty of Amiens, on the principle that the events of the war, and the injudicious principles of the war, had produced the effect of making our influence on the Continent absolutely void: he thought it necessary to say this, in answer to the observations of the Right Hon. Gentleman. As to the object of security to be taken for the continuance of peace, he foresaw a good deal of difference between the Right Hon. Gentleman and himself, and therefore when a treaty of peace came to be offered, that would be matter for discussion. On the value of the security when offered, the mode to judge would be by comparison, what we sacrificed with the security we received.

Having said this upon the two general topics introduced by the Right Hon. Gentleman, he could assure him and the House, that he had no wish for a division; but notwithstanding that disposition of his to give way, he did not know, how far he might not be driven to it by the course which might be followed by the Noble Lord. He considered the right of the House of Commons, to advise the Executive Power upon all subjects of public policy, to be such as not to be even so much as disputed. He did not charge Ministers with any negligence of their duty, but all he understood was, that a mediation had been offered; now it was equal to him whether that mediation was accepted or was about to be accepted—if he heard from the Noble Lord there was any disposition to accept of that mediation of the Emperor of Russia at this moment, he should withdraw his motion, but otherwise he would not very well consent to that course. As to unhinging the public mind, it was needless for him to say he had no such object, neither did he see that was likely to be the effect of what he was now doing. He had no other wish than that the mediation might be adopted, because he had no doubt it would be effectual. On the subject of the war he should not enter, because nothing could be offered but general arguments on the state of Europe: but as to the hopes of mediation the House was agreed, he believed, that if it be but a vision, it was a vision which we all wished to see realized. He admitted that the mediation did not secure to us an object, but would certainly further the change of gaining it; and therefore he had no wish for a division. If he was given to understand that the mediation would be accepted. The Noble Lord stated, that the proposition of the Russian Minister had been communicated, and that was a great deal. Whoever looked at this matter, and saw how the proposition of accommodation was made on the part of Russia, would be led to wish that it had not been made by the one and avoided by the other of the parties. If, instead of being stated by the English Ambassador to the French Ambassador, or by the French Ambassador to the English it had been stated to each of them by Count Markoff at Paris, or Count Woronzow in London, the Negociation would not have taken the turn it did; of that he was perfectly sure. He did not know why that proposition for the mediation of Russia should not, even now be adopted. He did not know how far French accounts might be depended upon, but they certainly did state the disposition of his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia to offer his mediation, in a much broader way than any thing we had heard of in London. If the Noble Lord gave him assurance that the mediation would be acceptable, he should withdraw his motion. It might be said, that if he had no doubt of the disposition of his Majesty's Ministers, why should he bring forward such a motion as this? Why did he not confide in them? To which he would answer, that although he had no idea it would so happen, yet it might happen that the advantage of the mediation now offered might be lost, and lost by the fault of Ministers, a loss that would be irreparable, and then he would have to reproach himself for not calling upon the House of Commons to admonish Ministers to do their duty, by availing themselves of this most propitious offer. Information whether this mediation would be accepted or not, was all he desired, in the first instance, and what he desired much more than he should success to his motion in the second. He was happy also to observe, that whatever variety of opinion there might be in the House on some topics, they were all agreed on this.

Lord Hawkesbury rose to explain.—He said that with regard to the mediation of which the Honorable Gentleman had spoken, and the way in which it came to his Majesty's Minister between London and Paris, and the state of things at the time, made it impossible for Ministers to be acquainted with the nature of the mediation immediately after it was offered by his Imperial Majesty. Certainly the sense in which he understood the mediation, it was of the slightest species of assurance of mediation, if indeed it could be so called; in that sense he understood it then, and in that sense he understood it now. His Lordship then stated the contents of the communication, to the following effect:—"The Cabinet of St. Petersburgh, though there appeared a reluctance in the two parties, offer mediation, which was meant with a view to be offered by the Minister in London and Paris, to give you the assistance you may desire, and the Emperor will be ready to exert his good offices to adjust the points in dispute between the two countries."—Under these circumstances, the mediation being so general and so loose, and coming at such a moment, his Majesty's Government thought they had no alternative than to say they had stated the terms on which they were ready to continue at peace, and probably at this time that Lord Whitworth had left Paris; and therefore looking at that intervention, (whatever effect it might have at the beginning) it being so general, and coming at such a time, and being so loose, it was in the judgment of his Majesty's Ministers inadmissable; but at the same time they had no disposition to conceal from the Government of St. Petersburgh, or from the House of Commons, that they are ready to enter into any explanation to the Government relative to the difference between this country and France, and to concert means that may lead to the restoration of peace as soon as possible.

Mr. Fox, "Upon the Mediation of Russia?"

Lord Hawkesbury. "That his Majesty's Ministers are ready on the mediation of the Court of St. Petersburgh—on that ground to receive from that Court, whatever their ideas may be, and the ground of their judgment on the subject of arrangement; on that Ministers themselves are ready to state explicitly to the court of St. Petersburgh their ideas upon that subject. That there shall not be any question of etiquette whatever to impede this purpose, his Majesty's Ministers are prepared to come to a frank and explicit declaration of their views; but until effect shall have been given to these views, until an adjustment had taken place, they do not consider it consistent with their duty to advise his Majesty to withhold any exertions which the circumstances may offer to terminate the contest."

Mr. Fox observed, that the Noble Lord having stated it to be the intention of his Majesty's Ministers to leave the Negociation to Russia, that they have no unwillingness to receive or to originate terms or views on which peace may be restored, and that it shall be under the mediation of that illustrious Prince, he had no difficulty to withdraw his motion.

BRIDGETOWN, (Barb.) JULY 9.

SURRENDER OF TOBAGO.

This important event has been just announced to the public by Royal Salutes from Pilgrim and Charles Fort, his Excellency Lord Seaforth having received official information of the same from Lieutenant General Grinfield.

Extract of a Letter from his Excellency Lieutenant General Grinfield, to the Rt. Hon. Lord Seaforth, dated Centaur, Courland Bay, Tobago, July 3, 1803.

I have again the satisfaction of addressing myself to you, and to announce to you the surrender of this Island by capitulation, with no loss on our side, and very little on that of the French.

Immediately on landing on the 30th June, the two leading columns pushed into Mount Grace, in sight and within little more than two miles of Fort Scarborough; the summons was then sent to the French General, who returned answer by offer of capitulation. The terms were finally settled about four in the morning of the first, and at eleven we took possession of Fort Scarborough, and the French, consisting, sailors and all, of 228, laid down their arms.

(Signed) W. GRINFIELD.

In the course of yesterday, his Excellency Lord Seaforth was pleased to issue the following orders to the garrison at St. Ann's.

GOVERNOR'S ORDERS.

Pilgrim, 8th July, 1803.

PAROLE—TOBAGO.

The Governor has again to congratulate the garrison on the success of the army and squadron under the command of Lieut. Gen. Grinfield and Commodore Hood, in the acquisition of the Island of Tobago, without the loss of a man on the side of the British.

The Commandant will please to order an extra allowance of rum to each man this afternoon, to enable them to drink the health of their gallant commander and their brother soldiers, and their speedy return to head quarters.

(Signed) SEAFORTH.

Upon the arrival of the armament at Tobago, the Commanders issued the following

PROCLAMATION.

By their Excellencies Lieut. Gen. William Grinfield and Commodore Samuel Hood, Commanders in Chief of the Forces by Land and Sea, of his Britannic Majesty, in the Leeward and Windward Islands, and the Island of Trinidad.

The forces of his Britannic Majesty are come, immediately on the breaking out of the war, to relieve the English inhabitants of Tobago from the galling yoke of France; it is impossible they can so soon forget the mild government of the mother country, to which only it is the design of this armament to restore them.

It cannot enter into the minds of the British commanders, that the people of Tobago will take arms with the enemies of their mother country, against their friends, and perhaps their relations; nor can it be believed but they will join the British forces, for their future security, happiness and prosperity.

Given on board his Majesty's ship Centaur, this 30th day of June, 1803.

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the first day of August last, we thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the tenth day of this present month of September, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving Subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the eighteenth day of October next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

NOTICE is hereby given, that regular attendance for the transaction of the Public Business of this Province, will in future be given at the Office of the Secretary of the Province, the Executive Council Office, and the Surveyor General's Office, every day in the year, (Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day only excepted) from ten o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and from five o'clock in the afternoon until seven in the evening.

By Order of the Lieutenant Governor,
JAMES GREEN, Sec.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, at any time during the space of three years from the passing thereof, was empowered to issue Commissions, and the Commissioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Cases in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not issued—AND WHEREAS, Commissions were accordingly issued, and the Commissioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon some of the Claims that came before them; but many Persons, during the space of the said three years, neglected to come forward and give the necessary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the said Commissioners to prosecute such Claims, or came unprepared with the necessary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof essential to the establishment of their said Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Person or by Agent, or to take any proper steps for ascertaining their Titles in manner by the said Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding such manifest inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majesty's Subjects, the said Act was, by another Statute passed in the Year One Thousand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but such indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of those for whose benefit the Law was passed.

AND WHEREAS, in the last Session of the Parliament of this Province, the Legislature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may assert their Claims, in all Cases where the Faith of Government stands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not issued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commissions were issued, and the Commissioners duly attended at the respective times when the Assizes were held for the several Districts in this Province, but some of the Parties, who had given notice of asserting Claims, came in the same unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; so that, if such gross negligence and inattention is persevered in, the salutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in assenting to such repeated extensions of so indulgent a Law, will be altogether disappointed and frustrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commissioners named in the several Commissions, issued under the Authority of the last mentioned Statute, will, for the purpose of deciding on all such Claims as aforesaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home District, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the First Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the District of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

HANOVER, May 27.

A ſucceſsful experiment has been made to inundate the environs of Hamelen. The moſt ſpirited exertions are making to increaſe our forces.—The force deſtined to the frontiers, excluſive of the cavalry, conſiſts of three trains of artillery, and two of riding artillery, and 24 battalions of infantry. An advantageous poſition will be taken, for the purpoſe of ſtopping the progreſs of the French. All the battalions of infantry are augmented from 500 to 900 men.

NEWBURYPORT, July 30.

FROM LABRADOR.

Arrived here laſt Saturday, from Labrador, 13 days paſſage, ſchooner Amazon, Captain Gerriſh, with 110,000 Fiſh.—Six hundred ſail of American veſſels had paſſed through the Gut of Canſo, entered in the public office and paid their fees.—This ſeaſon it is calculated that there is in all the ports on that coaſt, upwards of 900 ſail, conſiſting of ſhips, brigs, ſnows, barques, ſchooners and ſloops, from 30 to 200 tons, which muſt employ in the fiſhery at the loweſt calculation, upwards of 9,000 men and boys. Fiſh was very plenty. On the ſtation there is a Britiſh 44 gun ſhip, and a ſloop of war—the Americans were treated by the officers with every mark of civility.

NEW YORK, Auguſt 6.

Captain Ingerſoll, arrived at Salem from Martinique, informs, that the Iſland was blockaded by the Britiſh, but it was not expected they would commence operations againſt it ſeriouſly till after the hurricane months—That it is probable it would fall an eaſy prey, as the inhabitants preferred the government of the Engliſh, and as the Iſland was in a weak ſtate for defence, the number of troops not certainly exceeding a thouſand or twelve hundred.

Auguſt 9.

The Britiſh Packet Townſend, Capt. Dodds, arrived at this port yeſterday from Falmouth. She left there on the 13th June, and brings London papers to the 9th. They contain no intelligence particularly important.

It was reported at Falmouth the day before the Packet ſailed, that the Britiſh frigate Doris, Capt. Pearſon, had fallen in with and engaged two French frigates, one of which he captured after a very ſevere action. Captain P. loſt his arm and 28 men. The Doris had taken in the Britiſh Channel a few days before, the French frigate Sylph, from St. Domingo for France, and ſent her into Plymouth.

A Proclamation has been iſſued at Halifax, for continuing the uſual intercourſe between Nova-Scotia and the United States.

The Iſland of St. Martins, it is ſaid, was taken by the Britiſh about the laſt of June.

We underſtand by the late accounts from China, that a dreadful action was fought near Hue, in December laſt, between the Imperial troops and the army of the Tontuneſe, which terminated in the total defeat of the latter; 12,000 of the inſurgents are ſtated to have been killed, and many were driven into the river and drowned. Previous to this deciſive engagement, the Emperor ordered 200 rowing gallies, and 800 gun boats to intercept the veſſels belonging to the inſurgents, and the day before the action the Emperor ſaw the whole of their armament in a blaze of fire, conſiſting of 200 gun boats and 50 gallies. The enemy covered an extent of ſix miles. The Emperor, after this action, determined to march to Tonquin, with 3000 men, in order to be publicly crowned, and at the ſame time he iſſued a general amneſty to all thoſe who ſhould ſurrender. The object of the rebels was to have ſeized the king and queen, and this they had nearly accompliſhed, by the means of one of the chief mandarins which attended at the Emperor's court: the conſpiracy having been found out, this mandarin, a man of letters, named Ong Thong Thew, was inſtantly beheaded, with 84 others. In the above action the Emperor fought himſelf, ſword in hand.—[NAT. INTEL.]

Extract of a letter from an American reſident at Rotterdam, to a houſe in Baltimore, received via Salem, by the ſhip Active, direct from Rotterdam, dated June 6.

"Great Britain is capturing all the Dutch Eaſt and Weſt India ſhips—every finger is a hook, and we have daily accounts of their moſt valuable ſhipping being carried in.—Bonaparte has begun to threaten Great Britain with an invaſion; but the beſt informed think a ſucceſsful invaſion impracticable. The ſeas and channel are covered with Britiſh ſhips of war, and every port in France and Holland is blockaded; ſo that they cannot get a ſhip in or out.—Mr. Liſton, the Engliſh Ambaſſador, is ſtill at the Hague—but report ſays he leaves there in the morning for ſome part of Germany. It is ſaid to be Mr. Liſton's opinion that the war will have a very long continuance. Should France endeavor to ſhut the neutral ports of Hamburg and Bremen againſt the Engliſh ſhips, it is conjectured in that caſe that Ruſſia will come forward in ſupport of their neutrality and protection of Hanover.—She is recruiting her armies, and arming and commiſſioning her ſhips, and every thing that ſeems to indicate a movement from that quarter. The King of Pruſſia lately reviewed an army of 30,000 men, which he ſtill keeps in the field. A Ruſſian Ambaſſador has arrived at Hanover, and it is conjectured Mr. Liſton is going on to meet him. Every thing wears the appearance of a continental war. The commerce of the United States muſt flourith, if the wiſdom of our government keeps us out of the ſcrape. The Dutch have embargoed four Engliſh packets here, at the inſtance of the French, and impriſoned the agents of the packets."

Extract of a letter from our correſpondent at Cape Francois, dated July 15.

"This colony is in the greateſt diſorder, expecting war every moment.—Three 74's & ſix Engliſh frigates blockade this port, and take every French veſſel bound in or out. The duty is taken off all American produce, and a few importations. There is two 74's and 4 frigates in this port, preparing to leave this for France; a hot preſs has taken place, both on ſhore and in the harbour, for to ſupply the French ſhips in this port, which I underſtand will ſail in four or five days, when I expect to hear of a hot engagement. All the French ſhipping have been cut out of Jeremie, and ſent to Jamaica. The French frigate Creole has been captured by an Engliſh 74, and ordered for Jamaica the 5th inſt. She was off the Mouta when captured, in company with a ſloop of war, which got into the Mouta with the loſs of her main maſt.

Hoſtile preparations are making here and ſhould war commence, it is determined not to give up the place until overpowered by ſuperior force. They are fitting out four privateers in this port which are now manned and only wait for orders.

A number of brigand barges are out, which makes it dangerous for unarmed veſſels to go up the Bite—not a French veſſel can go out.

The Court of Ruſſia, it was underſtood, had declared to the French miniſter Colbert, that it ſhould not ſee without concern the ſeizure of Hanover and the ſhutting the navigation of the Elbe and Weſer; but that, with reſpect to any thing elſe, it would obſerve the ſtricteſt neutrality, and would interpoſe its mediation for reſtoring the tranquility of the continent.

A ſhip arrived at Hamburgh on the 27th May, in 10 days from Peterſburg, with accounts that the whole Ruſſian fleet at Cronſtadt and Revel was ready for ſea, and might ſoon be expected in the Baltic.

John Bolton, Esq; of Duke-street, in Liverpool, has proposed to raise and clothe a regiment of volunteers (to consist of 600 men) at his own individual expence, for the protection of that town and neighbourhood, an offer which has been accepted by his Majesty in the most gracious manner.

LIVERPOOL, June 2. "The King having been pleased to approve of Mr. Bolton's offer, to raise and clothe, at his own expence, a regiment of volunteers, consisting of ten companies, for the protection and defence of the town of Liverpool, and its neighbourhood, Tuesday and Wednesday last were appointed for enrolment. Nothing could be more gratifying to the inhabitants than the zeal and loyalty displayed on the occasion. The meeting was in the Exchange. The mayor and many of the merchants, attended to give it their sanction and support. Mr. Bolton, in a short address, explained the motives which, at this critical period had induced him, thus particularly, to give support to government, and to contribute to the defence of the country; and, in two hours, the whole number of the ten companies was more than complete.

Fifteen millions of dollars, (the price of Louisiana) calculating more than a ton to every waggon, would require 375 waggons to carry it; and (allowing four horses to each team) it would require fifteen hundred horses, they would make a string of five miles in length. The money would support 25,000 soldiers for seven years and a half, pay at 40 shillings a month.

In the debate in the British House of Commons, the 24th May, Mr. Whitbread asked, "For what purpose they were going to war?" In answer Mr. Dundas said, "We are going to war for Malta—not for Malta only, but for Egypt—not only for Egypt, but for India—not only for India, but for the integrity of the British empire—not only for the integrity of the British empire, but for the cause of justice, good faith, and freedom all over the world."

Mr. PICTET, of Geneva, in his account of a late visit of three months to Great Britain and Ireland, has astonished the people of the Continent, with the following power of English industry:—"There is," says he, "a cafe in which a raw material, value one half-penny, is raised by manufacture to the worth of 35,000 guineas!"—This takes place in the art of a watch spring maker. A pound of crude iron only costs a half-penny; it is converted into steel, that steel is made into watch springs; every watch-spring is sold for half a guinea, and weighs only one tenth of a grain. There are in a pound weight 7,000 grains; it, therefore, affords steel for 70,000 watch-springs. The value of all these, at half a guinea each, is 35,000 guineas.

A HOT DAY.

WRITTEN IN A HOT NIGHT.

WHAT a plague's a Summer Breakfast,
Eat whate'er you will?
Bread and Butter's a nasty thing;
That is nather still.

Then how to pass the time away
Till Dinner-time's the doubt?
You're hot if you stay in the house,
You're hot if you go out.

When Dinner comes, Lord help us all!
Such frying, such a stew;
You're hot if you don't touch a bit,
You're hotter if you do.

When after dinner what to do;
No knowing where to move!
The Gentlemen are hot below,
The Ladies hot above.

And now the kettle comes again,
That's not the way to cool one:
Tea makes an empty stomach hot,
And hotter still a full one

But then an evening's walk's the thing—
Not if you're hot before—
The man who sweats when he sits still,
Will, when he moves, sweat more.

Well, now the Supper's come—and comb
To make bad worse, I wot;
For Supper, when it heats the cool,
Will never cool the hot.

And bed, which cheats the cold man's heart,
Helps not the hot a pin;
For he who sweats when out of bed,
Sweats ten times more when in.

A Father's Dying Advice to his Son.

Sir William Penn, who was an Admiral of the British navy, during the protectorate of Cromwell, and in the reign of Charles II. gave the following as his dying advice to his son, William Penn, the celebrated founder of Pennsylvania.

"Three things (said the dying Admiral) I commend to you.

"1. Let nothing tempt you to wrong your conscience: If you keep peace at home, it will be a feast to you in a day of trouble.

"2. Whatever you design to do, lay it justly, and time it seasonably; for that gives security and dispatch.

"3. Be not troubled at disappointments: if they may be recovered, do it; if not, trouble is vain.

"These rules will carry you with firmness and comfort through this inconstant world."

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 18. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is empowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 108. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 807. Page 119. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 807. Page 117. This Section has been altered, to as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,
During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 127, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagement to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Proclamation

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all; ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

JAMES GREEN, Sec'y.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE.

At the Court at St. James's, 1ſt day of June, 1803.

Preſent the King's Moſt Excellent Majeſty in Council.

This day the Right Honorable George Tierney, Treaſurer of His Majeſty's Navy, was, by His Majeſty's command, ſworn of His Majeſty's Moſt Honorable Privy Council, and took his place at the Board accordingly.

LONDON, June 7.

A French mail reached town on Saturday, and regular official intercourſe is to be continued; the Government of each country having declared, that under exiſting circumſtances, it will not be the firſt to interrupt it. This fact we exclufively announced ſome weeks ago.

The Packet which brought Saturday's mail likewiſe brought over Mr. Talbot, Secretary to the late embaſſy, & Mrs. Luſhington and her two daughters. A ſecond packet arrived at Dover, having on board near one hundred female paſſengers. All the Engliſh ladies are to be liberated, and only the men to be conſidered as priſoners of war. The detention of the two Engliſh packets at Calais is aſcribed to accident, but they have not yet been liberated.

Our late letters ſtill preſent a pleaſing liſt of captures from the enemy. A French corvette of 14 guns, from Goree, has arrived at Plymouth; & our account from Falmouth ſtates, that a French brig of 16 guns, was ſeen with the Engliſh colours over the French.

In addition to thoſe noticed in our late letters, we have the pleaſure to announce ſeveral more. Intelligence has reached town, that La Penſee, a French frigate, of 44 guns has been taken on her return from St. Domingo. She was chaſed by the Minotaur and Thunderer, detached on that ſervice from the fleet under the command of Admiral Cornwallis. L'Impatiente, corvette, of 18 guns, from Senegal, was alſo captured off Breſt on the 29th ult. by the Naiad frigate, who alſo took ſeveral merchantmen. A ſmall privateer, with 22 men, has been taken off Portland.

June 11. Some official intelligence has been received by the French Government reſpecting Admiral Linois' expedition. That ſquadron has been met by a veſſel beyond the line; and the Admiral had then been joined by the cutter which was ſent out to give him information of the King of England's Meſſage.

Captain General Decan, and all the troops on board the ſquadron, were in the beſt ſtate of health; and it is probable they have now been landed in the Iſle of France.

Laſt night in the Houſe of Commons 40,000 ſeamen and marines were voted, being 100,000, including 60,000 for the Peace eſtabliſhment, and 10000 voted when the armaments began. From the Miniſter's account 70,000 are now in ſervice; and we underſtood that 30,000 was the number required for all the ſhips already put in commiſſion.

HOUSE of ASSEMBLY—(Lower Canada) Thurſday, 11th Auguſt.

The Houſe being met, a meſſage was received from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor by the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod requiring the attendance of Mr.

Speaker & the Members in the Legislative Council Chamber. The House went up accordingly when his Excellency was pleased in His Majesty's name to sanction several Bills.

His Excellency then made the following Speech to both Houses:

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

It is but a few days since I met you in this place, to communicate to you an event the most interesting to every British subject, and to point out to you what appeared to me to be the most effectual means of insuring the internal security of the Province. I have now to thank you for the zealous alacrity with which you have adopted those means which I then so particularly recommended to your consideration; I cannot sufficiently express the gratification I derive from this proof, not only of your confidence in me, but also of the high sense you entertain of the various blessings you enjoy under the mild and paternal government of our most Gracious Sovereign.

The accounts which have reached us of the early success obtained by the British forces in the West-Indies, are the more interesting to you, as forming an additional security to his Majesty's possessions in this part of the globe.

It is impossible for me to refrain from expressing the satisfaction I have derived, from observing so full and respectable a meeting upon such an important occasion; and I willingly avail myself of it to remind you how much will depend, in such times as these, upon your unremitting exertions to disseminate throughout the colony, those principles of loyalty by which you have yourselves been actuated.

After which, the Honorable the Speaker of the Legislative Council said, that it was his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor's will and pleasure that this Provincial Parliament be prorogued to Friday the 16th September next, to be then and there held, and it is accordingly prorogued to Friday the said 16th day of September next.

MONTREAL, August 15.

About six o'clock on Saturday morning a quantity of live coals were found upon a shelf in the corner of an out-house at Mr. Langan's, which had communicated, & would in a few minutes more (had not the interposition of Providence prevented) have laid waste that part of the Town which escaped the former ravages of that devouring element. The Magistrates are taking the necessary steps to detect the perpetrator of this horrid attempt. We are not at present enabled to give our readers the result of their enquiries, which, however, we cannot but hope, will ultimately lead to a discovery.

QUEBEC, August 13, 1803.

By the Justices of the Peace in Special Sessions Assembled.

DISTRICT OF QUEBEC. } WHEREAS many destructive Fires have lately occurred at Montreal, and there is great reason to apprehend from the Proclamation of his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and the Advertisement of the Magistrates at Montreal, that the same have not arisen from accident but through design; and a great number of the inhabitants of the city having expressed a desire that they may be authorized to form a Night-Watch, in order to guard against the diabolical designs of all evil disposed persons; the Justices, equally desirous to contribute to the safety of the Town, and to meet the laudable wishes of their fellow citizens, having waited on his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and obtained his approbation of the measure, do hereby invite all House-keepers and other persons of respectability in the Town and Suburbs, to repair to the Justice's Room in the New Court-House, and there subscribe a Book, opened for the purpose, and which will remain there, in presence of one of the Justices, from nine of the clock in the forenoon to three in the afternoon, daily, for one week, to commence on Monday next, obliging themselves to attend when called upon, and to take their tour of duty in patroling the Town and Suburbs nightly, under such regulation as may be made and published for that purpose.

By order of the Justices,
GEORGE PYKE,
Clk. of the Peace.

DISTRICT OF QUEBEC. } THE Magistrates of Quebec, in their own name and that of their fellow citizens, do hereby offer a reward of One Thousand Dollars to any person who may discover the incendiary or incendiaries, if any, concerned in the late destructive Fires at Montreal—payable by the Clerk of the Peace on the conviction of any such incendiary or incendiaries.

By order of the Justices,
GEORGE PYKE,
Clk. of the Peace.

QUEBEC, ss. } FROM some recent circumstances which have happened, there is reason to believe that there are now lurking in this city some incendiary or incendiaries; against the attempt of such persons the public are hereby cautioned, and the utmost vigilance is most strongly recommended.

By order of the Magistrates of the week,
GEORGE PYKE,
Clk. of the Peace.

DISTRICT OF MONTREAL.

SESSIONS HOUSE,
Montreal, Sunday, 7th Aug. 1803.

AT a Meeting of the Magistrates of the said District, it was this day Resolved—

That whereas from the repeated and destructive Fires which have lately happened in the city of Montreal, and particularly that of this day, there is great reason to apprehend that the same have been the effect of design, and not of accident; In order to bring the perpetrator or perpetrators of so heinous an offence to condign punishment, a Reward of TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY POUNDS or ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, is hereby offered to any one who shall discover the person or persons guilty of the said crime, to be paid upon conviction of the offender or offenders, by the Clerk of the Peace.

By order of the Justices,

THE ORACLE.

YORK, SATURDAY, SEPT. 10, 1803.

On Sunday morning last arrived here His Excellency Lieut. General HUNTER and Suite, from Quebec.

The Metropolitan Church at Quebec, it is said, will be consecrated about the ensuing Christmas; and will be perhaps, the most superb structure of the kind in America. A harmony of design, and a superior Style of execution, render it a most pleasing object to all beholders.—It is accommodated with an excellent Organ, a Choir of Singers; and nine Bells are to chime for devotional preparation.—The Honorable Henry Caldwell, Esq. Receiver General of Lower Canada, has, we understand, made a donation of 500 guineas for the erection of a monument within its walls, to the memory of the gallant WOLFE!

The frequent Fires which have lately happened in Lower Canada, have given just grounds to suppose them to be the effect of design, and not of accident. In consequence of which, the Lieutenant Governor in Council has issued his Proclamation, enjoining and commanding all ranks and descriptions of his Majesty's faithful Subjects to use their utmost endeavors in discovering the incendiaries; offering a Reward of Five hundred Pounds, to be paid upon conviction thereof, His Majesty's unconditional pardon, if the person or persons giving information shall have been an accomplice or accomplices.

The Magistrates of Quebec in their own name, and that of their fellow citizens, have offered a further Reward of one thousand dollars for the conviction of the offenders.—The Citizens will henceforth patrol the streets nightly, in order to frustrate the diabolical designs of those foul incendiaries.

☞ The Printer begs leave to inform the Public that the Printing Office is now removed to the two story House next to Mr. Henderson's Brewery, where the business in future will be carried on in all its branches with accuracy and dispatch.—Advertisements, Letters, Communications, &c. &c addressed to the Printer and left at St. George & Co's. or Scholfield & Morley's Stores will meet with due attention.

Advertisements omitted this week will appear in our next.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the fifth day of August last, we thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the tenth day of this present month of September, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving Subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the eighteenth day of October next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 18. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5 Page 13.

Sec. 609. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 607. Page 134. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 603. Page 117. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,
During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

---

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 127, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
21st June, 1803.

NOTICE is hereby given, that regular attendance for the transaction of the Public Business of this Province, will in future be given at the Office of the Secretary of the Province, the Executive Council Office, and the Surveyor General's Office, every day in the year, (Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day only excepted) from ten o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and from five o'clock in the afternoon until seven in the evening.

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant Governor of the said Province of Upper Canada, Lieutenant General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, by a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, paſſed in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Seven, intitled, "An Act for Securing the Titles to Lands in this Province," the Lieutenant Governor, or Perſon Adminiſtering the Government, at any time during the ſpace of three years from the paſſing thereof, was empowered to iſſue Commiſſions, and the Commiſſioners therein named, were authorized to hear and decide upon all Claims to Lands within this Province, in all Caſes in which the Faith of the King's Executive Government had been pledged, and in which the Deeds or Letters Patent of the Crown had not iſſued—AND WHEREAS, Commiſſions were accordingly iſſued, and the Commiſſioners therein named duly attended, and proceeded to decide upon ſome of the Claims that came before them; but many Perſons, during the ſpace of the ſaid three years, neglected to come forward and give the neceſſary notice to intitle them to have their Claims heard; and many others gave notice of their Claims, and either altogether neglected to attend before the ſaid Commiſſioners to proſecute ſuch Claims, or came unprepared with the neceſſary Documents, Proofs and Evidence, and although warned and made fully acquainted with the nature of the Proof eſſential to the eſtabliſhment of their ſaid Claims, altogether neglected to attend again, either in Perſon or by Agent, or to take any proper ſteps for aſcertaining their Titles in the manner by the ſaid Statute directed.

AND WHEREAS, notwithſtanding ſuch manifeſt inattention and negligence, in order to accommodate and indulge His Majeſty's Subjects, the ſaid Act was, by another Statute paſſed in the Year One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Ninety-Nine, extended and continued for the further term of two years; but ſuch indulgence failed to produce that activity and exertion which was expected, and ought to have marked the conduct of thoſe for whoſe benefit the Law was paſſed.

AND WHEREAS, in the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of this Province, the Legiſlature again extended the time within which the King's Subjects may aſſert their Claims, in all Caſes where the Faith of Government ſtands pledged, and the Deeds or Letters Patents have not iſſued for the further term of two years from that period, and Commiſſions were iſſued, and the Commiſſioners duly attended at the reſpective times when the Aſſizes were held for the ſeveral Diſtricts in this Province, but ſome of the Parties, who had given notice of aſſerting Claims, came in the ſame unprepared manner as had before been experienced, and many more never attended at all: ſo that, if ſuch groſs negligence and inattention is perſevered in, the ſalutary and benevolent intentions of the Crown, in aſſenting to ſuch repeated extenſions of ſo indulgent a Law, will be altogether diſappointed and fruſtrated.

BE IT THEREFORE KNOWN, TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, That the Judges of His Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, with the other Commiſſioners named in the ſeveral Commiſſions, iſſued under the Authority of the laſt mentioned Statute, will, for the purpoſe of deciding on all ſuch Claims as aforeſaid, attend at the following times and places—Viz.—

At YORK, for the Home Diſtrict, on the Twenty-Third Day of December next, on the Firſt Day of February, on the Twenty-Fourth Day of March, and on the Twentieth Day of July—1803.

At NIAGARA, for the Diſtrict of Niagara, on the Twenty-Fifth Day of April—1803.

At NEWCASTLE, for the Diſtrict of Newcaſtle, on the Twenty-Third Day of May—1803.

At KINGSTON, for the Midland Diſtrict, on the Second Day of May—1803.

At JOHNSTOWN, for the Diſtrict of Johnſtown, on the Seventeenth Day of May—1803.

At CORNWALL, for the Eaſtern Diſtrict, on the Firſt Day of June—1803.

At CHARLOTTEVILLE, for the Diſtrict of London, at the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the Year 1803—and

At SANDWICH, for the Weſtern Diſtrict, alſo at the time of the Aſſizes, which will be held for that Diſtrict in the ſaid Year 1803.

Previous to which, all Perſons intereſted will give Notice, according to Law, in the Offices of the Clerks of the Peace of the reſpective Diſtricts—And His Majeſty's Subjects are hereby required to take Notice, that ſuch Claims will then be called on for hearing, and the Commiſſioners will continue to ſit till they ſhall have afforded opportunity to the Parties of having every Caſe heard and decided upon; but that after they have ſo done, ſuch Commiſſioners, or any other Commiſſioners, will never more ſit again in the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, and the Parties who ſhall then neglect to bring on their Claims to hearing, will for ever have loſt all opportunity of acquiring, by any means, a legal Title to their Property, and will have to regret that they ſo groſsly neglected their own Intereſt, and omitted to avail themſelves of that indulgence ſo repeatedly in vain held out to them by the Crown.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Ninth Day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thouſand Eight Hundred and Two, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majeſty's Reign.

LONDON, JUNE 17.

WAR WITH HOLLAND.

Lord Hawkeſbury, at the Bar of the Houſe, preſented the following moſt gracious Meſſage from his Majeſty:—

GEORGE R.

His Majeſty thinks it right to inform the Houſe of Commons, that, from an anxious deſire to prevent the calamities of war being extended to the Batavian Republic, he communicated to that Government his diſpoſition to reſpect their neutrality, provided that a ſimilar diſpoſition was manifeſted on the part of the French Government, and that the French forces were forthwith withdrawn from the territories of the Batavian Republic. This propoſition not having been admitted by the Government of France, and meaſures having been recently taken by them, in direct violation of the independence of the Batavian Republic, his Majeſty judged it expedient to direct his Miniſter to leave the Hague; and he has ſince given orders that Letters of Marque and general Reprizals ſhould be iſſued againſt the Batavian Republic and its ſubjects.

His Majeſty has, at all times, manifeſted the deepeſt and moſt lively intereſt for the proſperity and independence of the United Provinces. He has recourſe to theſe proceedings with the moſt ſincere regret; but the conduct of the French Government has left him no alternative; and in adopting theſe meaſures, he is actuated by a ſenſe of what is due to his own dignity, and to the ſecurity and eſſential intereſts of his dominions.

G. R.

[After the Meſſage was read, an Addreſs of thanks for the communication paſſed nemine contradicente.]

JUNE 18.

HOUSE of COMMONS.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer delivered a Meſſage from his Majeſty to the following effect:—

"GEORGE R.

"His Majeſty thinks it proper to acquaint the Houſe of Commons, that for the more effectual defence and ſecurity of the United Kingdom againſt the avowed attacks of the enemy, he deems it important that a large additional force ſhould be raiſed and aſſembled forthwith. His Majeſty recommends this neceſſary meaſure for the public ſecurity to the ſerious conſideration of his faithful Commons, relying upon their concurrence and ſupport, in order that it may be carried into effect with the leaſt poſſible delay."

Mr. Addington moved, that his Majeſty's moſt gracious Meſſage ſhould be referred to a Committee of the Houſe on Monday next, which was agreed to nem. con.

JUNE 30.

We are extremely happy to find the unjuſtifiable proceedings of the French Government in the ſeizure of Hanover, have at length induced Miniſters to adopt that ſpirit and deciſive line of conduct, which can alone put a ſtop to aggreſſions, which would otherwiſe know no end. The following was ſtuck up at Lloyd's yeſterday:

"Laſt night Lord Hawkeſbury communicated to the Foreign Miniſters, that his Majeſty had determined, that the entrance of the Elbe ſhould be blockaded in the ſtricteſt manner."

ARMY.—Beſide the encampments at Brighton, Coxheath and Whaley, two others are forming near Harwich and Bradfield on the Eſſex coaſt. The Derbyſhire militia is ordered for Coxheath. Every regiment is to be furniſhed with field pieces and a detachment of artillery.—It is reported that the ſecond field officers of the old militia will be poſted to the ſupplementary regiments.

JULY 5.

From the London Gazette, July 2.

DOWNING-STREET, June 28.

The King has been pleaſed to cauſe it to be ſignified by the Right Honorable Lord Hawkeſbury, his Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to the Neutral Powers reſiding at this Court, that the neceſſary meaſures having been taken by his Majeſty's command for the blockade of the entrance of the River Elbe, in conſequence of the forcible occupation of parts of the banks of that River by the French troops; the ſaid River is declared to be in a ſtate of blockade; and that from this time all the meaſures authorized by the law of nations, and the reſpective treaties between his Majeſty and the different Neutral Powers, will be adopted and executed, with reſpect to all veſſels which may attempt to violate the ſaid blockade. Lord Hawkeſbury has been further commanded by his Majeſty to ſignify to the Miniſters of the Neutral Powers, that whenever the French troops will evacuate the poſitions which they now occupy on parts of the Elbe, and will remove to ſuch a diſtance from them as to leave the courſe of that River perfectly free and ſecure to the veſſels of his ſubjects, as well as of other nations, his Majeſty will immediately direct his ſhips of war, which may be ſtationed at the mouth of the River Elbe, for the purpoſe of blockading the ſame, to be withdrawn.

Our preſent military force in Great Britain compriſes ſixty three battalions of the line, and eighteen regiments of Cavalry, independent of the troops in Ireland. The Militia of the Empire amounts to ninety ſeven thouſand men; and a few weeks will add fifty thouſand more to our ranks—theſe, with our volunteer and other ſupplementary force, will conſtitute an army of nearly three hundred thouſand men.

JUNE 18.—The Duke of Cambridge, late Lieutenant General in the Hanoverian ſervice, is appointed to the like rank in the Britiſh ſervice.

It is ſaid an expedition will be ſent back from Malta to re occupy Alexandria, and thus ſecure the excluſion of the French from Egypt.

PLYMOUTH, JUNE 22.

By the Colombe French corvette, which arrived here yeſterday, it appears, that ſhe was the forerunner of a fleet conſiſting of one ſhip of 74 guns, two frigates, and ſix tail of merchant ſhips—She left them in the morning of the 18th inſt. and was making for Breſt, when the Endymion of 44 guns, and Dragon of 74, fell in with and captured her in the afternoon of that day, about 20 leagues S. W. of Uihant. The Dragon inſtantly made ſail for the Channel fleet, and joined them next morning; and on communicating this glorious intelligence, they immediately diſperſed in all directions in queſt of them; and there ſeems to be very little doubt that the greater part, if not the whole, may find their way to Britiſh ports.

BOSTON, AUGUST 10.

The moſt active preparations for a vindictive and ſanguinary war were making in France, Holland, and Great Britain. In France nothing appeared to be talked of but an invaſion of England.

In England, the Government does not appear to pay the ſmalleſt regard to the French threats. It, however, is augmenting its naval force with the utmoſt vigour. The ſeamen are to be augmented to 120,000 men; and ſuch has been the late unparalleled ſucceſs of their cruizers, that ſailors enter in great numbers. In one day only, twenty-two prizes arrived at Plymouth, nine of which were French, and ten Dutch; the other three were neutrals suspected of having French or Dutch property on board.—The Parliament had granted the usual war taxes; and Addresses to the King, approbatory of the war, were signing in all parts of the Kingdom—in these Addresses the city of London had taken the lead. The war appeared popular with the British people; and the same windows which sixteen months since beamed with "Peace and Plenty," on the proclamation of peace; blazed, on the late celebration of the King's birth-day, with representations of "Bellona's Car," and "Britons Strike Home."

From a number of circumstances, it was apparent the mediation of some of the Northern Powers to effect a peace, was in activity; but from the temper shewn by the Belligerent Cabinets, there was very little prospect of its success.

"It was reported, that France had demanded that Denmark should prevent English vessels passing the Sound.

NEW-YORK, AUGUST 23.

Captain Smith, who arrived at Baltimore on Thursday, in the brig Hunter, from Gibraltar, furnishes the following information:—Previous to the sailing of the Hunter from Gibraltar, arrived there a Portuguese 64, from a cruize off Algiers, where she sunk an Algerine cruizer, and picked up 140 of the crew and 16 Neapolitan prisoners that were on board.—Lord Nelson was off Toulon with 14 sail of the line. The Victory, of 98 guns, took on her passage from England to Malta, the French frigate Ambuscade, and several merchantmen from St. Domingo. The British cruizers out of Gibraltar have sent in several Danes, Swedes, &c. on suspicion of their cargoes being French property. The Emperor of Morocco has six cruizers ready for sea, it is thought to cruize against the Americans, Dutch, and those nations who latterly have neglected to send him presents. Arrived at Tangiers, a Danish frigate, with presents for the Emperor of Morocco. The day the Hunter sailed, the Revolution, English frigate, cut out two French ships from under the Spanish batteries. The French made a demand of 14 sail of the line from the Spaniards, to be got in readiness immediately. Lucien Bonaparte was expected hourly at Madrid. The ports of Leghorn, Genoa and Cette, are to be blockaded by the British. The French have possession of Hanover, Bremen and Hamburgh. Sir Sidney Smith has been blockading Calais at the same time Bonaparte was there.

WM. JARVIS, Sec'ry.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24TH MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in case where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 607. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 609. Page 117. IIId. chap. 90 § 127, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

suspected of having French or Dutch property on board.—The Parliament had granted the usual war taxes; and Addresses to the King, approbatory of the war, were signing in all parts of the Kingdom—in these Addresses the city of London had taken the lead. The war appeared popular with the British people; and the same windows which sixteen months since beamed with "Peace and Plenty," on the proclamation of peace; blazed, on the late celebration of the King's birth-day, with representations of "Bellona's Car," and "Britons Strike Home."

From a number of circumstances, it was apparent the mediation of some of the Northern Powers to effect a peace, was in activity; but from the temper shewn by the Belligerent Cabinets, there was very little prospect of its success.

"It was reported, that France had demanded that Denmark should prevent English vessels passing the Sound.

NEW-YORK, AUGUST 23.

Captain Smith, who arrived at Baltimore on Thursday, in the brig Hunter, from Gibraltar, furnishes the following information:—Previous to the sailing of the Hunter from Gibraltar, arrived there a Portuguese 64, from a cruize off Algiers, where she sunk an Algerine cruizer, and picked up 140 of the crew and 16 Neapolitan prisoners that were on board.—Lord Nelson was off Toulon with 14 sail of the line. The Victory, of 98 guns, took on her passage from England to Malta, the French frigate Ambuscade, and several merchantmen from St. Domingo. The British cruizers out of Gibraltar have sent in several Danes, Swedes, &c. on suspicion of their cargoes being French property. The Emperor of Morocco has six cruizers ready for sea, it is thought to cruize against the Americans, Dutch, and those nations who latterly have neglected to send him presents. Arrived at Tangiers, a Danish frigate, with presents for the Emperor of Morocco. The day the Hunter sailed, the Revolution, English frigate, cut out two French ships from under the Spanish batteries. The French made a demand of 14 sail of the line from the Spaniards, to be got in readiness immediately. Lucien Bonaparte was expected hourly at Madrid. The ports of Leghorn, Genoa and Cette, are to be blockaded by the British. The French have possession of Hanover, Bremen and Hamburgh. Sir Sidney Smith has been blockading Calais at the same time Bonaparte was there.

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24TH MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in case where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 607. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 609. Page 117. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY.

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 127, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Lateſt Intelligence.

LONDON, June 18.

The new plan of defence is to procure an addition of 50,000 men to the land forces of the country. Of this augmentation of the army, the mode to be adopted in its levyings is in the proportion of—

31,000 for the Counties of England,
5,000 for London and the Tower Hamlets,
6,000 for Scotland, and
10,000 for Ireland;

who are all to be choſen by ballot.—This diſpoſable force is to be liable to ſerve in any part of Great Britain and Ireland, or in the Iſlands of Jerſey and Guernſey. It is to be raiſed by a ballot, on the principle of the militia ballot. Every man from 18 to 45, with certain exceptions, is to be liable to the ballot, and ſubſtitutes allowed.—The army is to be put under the command of officers appointed by his Majeſty. The officers are to be taken from the half-pay liſt; and when that is exhauſted, from the marines, from Eaſt-India officers, and fencible officers.

The Britiſh frigate Reſiſtance, of 36 guns, was loſt on the 31ſt ult. off Cape St. Vincent. Happily the crew were all ſaved.

July 1.—By the excluſion of ſtrangers from the Houſe of Commons yeſterday evening, the public are deprived of the arguments which were uſed both for and againſt the Bill for raiſing the Army of Reſerve—The motion of the Secretary at War, which led to that excluſion, was, no doubt, dictated by motives of the greateſt prudence, as it was perfectly known, that Colonel Crawford, who had then commenced his ſpeech, intended to enter minutely into all the means of effecting the invaſion of this country which the enemy could exerciſe. After the gallery was cleared, the principal Speakers were the Secretary at War, Lord Hawkeſbury, Mr. Windham, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Mr. Windham attacked the meaſures of Government with great aſperity, and was, we underſtand, anſwered in a very able and ſpirited manner by Mr. Addington and Lord Hawkeſbury. The Bill was read a third time and paſſed.

A letter from a merchant at Hamburgh, ſays, "It is juſt now ſaid, that Ruſſia has declared war againſt France; we wiſh for the confirmation of it."

BREST.

No ſhip of any deſcription has been able to come out of Breſt or go in ſince Admiral Cotnwallis's fleet has been on that ſtation. We underſtand—that the French have in that port 23 line of battle ſhips, completely ready for ſea, beſides a number of gun and flat-bottomed boats.

A great number of French and Dutch fiſhing boats have been captured and brought into our ports. The French will probably exclaim againſt this ſpecies of hoſtility, which was abſtained from during the late war, but we are driven to this ſtep by the avowed intention of the enemy, of making uſe of ſuch craft, for the moſt ready purpoſe of invaſion.

From papers received by the ſhip Atlantic, Capt. Chew, in 42 days from Liverpool.

JULY 2.

A Sea-Fencible eſtabliſhment, upon a very extenſive ſcale, for the protection of the coaſt of Great Britain, is immediately to be adopted. It is to comprize all fiſhermen, and all other perſons occupied in the ports, and upon the coaſt, but who are now, from the very nature of their occupations protected from the impreſs. Theſe are to be claſſed in diſtricts, and put under the command of proper naval officers, and are to act as the emergency of the moment may require, aſhore or on float. A hundred poſt-captains and commanders, with a proportionate number of lieutenants, are already appointed to this ſervice. We cannot too much commend this plan, which brings into the ſervice of their country a great number of very uſeful hands, without diſturbing the ſettled habits of their uſual occupations. We would venture to ſuggeſt the policy of a ſimilar plan for the ſouthern coaſts of Ireland, to which at preſent theſe appointments do not extend.

July 5—The great object of Bonaparte's tour to the coaſt, is to aſcertain not only the ſtate of the military force and the naval equipments, but the ſentiments of the people with reſpect to an invaſion of this country. It was his original intention to have viſited only the Belgic departments, but as ſoon as war was declared againſt England, he altered his plan, and determined to viſit the French, Dutch and Flemiſh ports firſt.

[The Editor, in treating of the threatened invaſion of England, concludes with the following obſervations.]

We would have this country accuſtom itſelf to the idea of an invaſion; to imagine that the French will not only accompliſh their wiſh of a fair wind, and thirty ſix hours,* but that they will be able to elude (a very improbable ſuppoſition, we confeſs) the vigilance of our ſailors, and effect a landing upon the iſland. Soon, we are convinced, would they have ample cauſe to regret that they had ever travelled the road to England,† and that the wind had been favorable for thirty-ſix hours. The united vigor and valour of the country would convert the firſt ground they encamped upon into their graves. In Egypt Engliſhmen have tried their ſtrength againſt a ſuperior number of the French and have conquered. Never then, ſhall it be ſaid, that they ſhewed leſs energy in defending their own native country, than in refcuing from the fangs of France the territory of an ally. It is not the common language of war and hoſtility that France uſes. She has abandoned all ideas of making peace upon terms reciprocally honorable and advantageous. She muſt eſtabliſh the freedom of the Seas, that is, ſhe muſt ruin the navy of England—She muſt dictate the peace, and dictate it where?—In the capital of the Britiſh Empire—in the Palace of our Gracious Sovereign. This ſhe avows to be her intention—This is the language of her firſt magiſtrate—This is the burthen of the addreſſes of departments and cities, of all the prieſts, prefects & parafites throughout France.

Let him come then, this Corſican Conſul, if he dare. An iſland gave him birth—It may be the fate of another iſland to provide him a burying place. Let him come with his battles of Lodi, of Pavia, of Marengo inſcribed on his colors. We will meet him on the Beach with the recollections of our fame at Croſſy and Agincourt—with the remembrance of our atchievements on the 1ſt of June, at Camperdown, off St. Vincent and at Aboukir—of our defeat of his beſt troops, led on by himſelf at Acre, and of our victory over his invincibles in Egypt. We will meet him with a deep ſenſe of the bleſſings we enjoy under the mild Government of the BRITISH CONSTITUTION, and with a full knowledge of the miſeries in which every country has been involved that has been viſited by the arms of France. We will meet him too, in the manner of ſome of the ancient republics, when they went out to battle, chaunting that ode which has been left us by one of the beſt of our poets, as well as one of the beſt of our countrymen;—

What conſtitutes a ſtate?
Not high-rais'd battlement or labour'd mound,
Thick wall or moated gate;
Not cities proud, with ſpires and turrets crown'd:
Not bays and broad arm'd ports,
Where, laughing at the ſtorm, rich navies ride;
Nor Parr'd and ſpangled courts,
Where low-brow'd baſeneſs wafts perfume to pride.
No; Men, high-minded men,
With pow'rs as far above dull brutes endu'd
In forefi, brake or den,
As beaſts excel cold rocks and brambles rude:
Men who their duties know,
But know their rights, and, knowing, dare maintain,
Prevent the long aim'd blow,
And crush the Tyrant.

When Bonaparte left Calais, he proceeded to Dunkirk, Neuport and Oſtend from whence he will go to Ghent and Antwerp.—The French are extremely irritated at the capture of their fiſhing boats.—The Moniteur has inſerted an article from Boulogne upon that ſubject. We informed our readers ſome days ago, that theſe fiſhing boats were ſuffered to purſue the occupation of fiſhing without moleſtation, till it appeared that they were furniſhed with arms and boarding pikes, with which they boarded ſmall Engliſh merchantmen off the coaſt, and carried them into the ports of France. It would therefore have been the height of folly to have ſuffered them to have purſued this ſyſtem of operations with impunity.

We hope it is true that government intend to encourage a number of rifle companies, as they are calculated to annoy an enemy more in this country then men imagine. The hedges and ditches with which this country is encloſed form fortifications, and the proper troops to man them are rifles; the Mamelukes & Arabs were ſure to deſtroy any French detached from the main body, and this obliged them to keep in a body. The ſame might be done in this country by rifles; and the French, if they land, might be compelled to keep in a body, not daring to ſend out any foraging parties, or parties to gain intelligence.

The Volunteer corps in the maritime counties, ſhould all be turned into rifles, as from their local knowledge of the country, they would be able to gall the enemy extremely.

July 12.

A Court of Aldermen was held yeſterday, at which it was reſolved to arm, in every ward, all men between the age of 18 and 45—and to embody all men above the age of 45 in corps to ſerve as Conſtables.

The negociation which has for ſome weeks been carrying on, through the mediation of Ruſſia, for reſtoring peace between this country and France, has been brought to a cloſe. It has produced nothing: indeed hardly any one expected it would. The Secretary of the Ruſſian Embaſſy, at Paris, is now in London. He brought the diſpatches which announced the failure of the negociation. It remains to be ſeen what part the Court of St. Peterſburgh will take in conſequence.

The Bruſſels papers contain ſome important intelligence from Hanover and the Elbe. It ſeems that the French ſeem determined to croſs that River, which the Hanoverians ſeem as determined to oppoſe. The oſtenſible object for the advance of the French army across the Elbe, is to diſarm the Hanoverian army, in fulfilment of the treaty of Sublingen; but we preſume they muſt have more important objects in view, as they mediate the croſſing at three different places. The next accounts from that quarter will be intereſting.

July 13.

A Bill was laſt night brought in by the Lord Mayor, for raiſing an additional military force by the city.

PLYMOUTH, July 3.

In the beginning of war, perhaps a more gallant buſineſs has not been performed than was atchieved this week, by the boats of La Loire, of 48 guns, captain Maitland, off the Iſle of Bas, on Tueſday laſt.—La Loire was diſpatched about a fortnight ſince from this port on that ſtation, to intercept any veſſel on that part of the coaſt of France: cruizing in ſhore, captain M. ſaw a fine gun brig at anchor under a battery, and finding La Loire draw too much water to go near her with effect for her deſtruction, had all hands turned up, and aſked who would volunteer to cut her out. Immediately 70 ſeamen and royal marines puſhed aft to offer their ſervices. A launch and a cutter were immediately manned and armed, under the command of Lieutenants Temple and Bowen. The boats puſhed in briſkly, and were fired at by ſome heavy guns from the French brig; the ſhot paſſed over them, on which the boats crew gave three cheers; on nearing her another round was fired, which alſo paſſed over their heads a ſecond time: the jolly tars and royal marines gave again three cheers, were ſoon along ſide, and after a terrible conflict on both ſides, Lieutenants Temple and Bowen, with the boat's crews, boarded the gun brig, fought and puſhed their way aft, and having killed 3 men and wounded 10, our gallant lads ſtruck her colours; on the part of La Loire's boats four Britiſh ſeamen and royal marines were wounded—they are now in the Royal Navy Hoſpital for cure, and will receive every attention incident to that eſtabliſhment. The 1ſt and 2d Captains of the brig were killed, and many officers wounded. La Loire arrived yeſterday with the prize, which is a very formidable veſſel of her claſs, being a gun brig of four long 18 pounders, and ſix 36 pounders, is manned with 80 men; is called the La Venteaux. She went up the Harbour immediately.

PORTSMOUTH, July 9.

Arrived the Dart, national brig, from Martinique for Havre, taken by his Majeſty's ſhip Apollo. The following were paſſengers:—Mons. Ferriere, Madame Duplefſis and a ſervant boy, Monſieur Pierre Bonen, Mademoiſelle Tachee de la Pagerie, and Monſieur Tachee de la Pagerie. The two latter are couſins to Madame Bonaparte.—The Dart, after being captured, was engaged by three different privateers, keeping up a running fight all the time. Mr. Little was wounded in the right hand.

The Falcon cutter, which arrived here this morning, brings intelligence of the loſs of his Majeſty's ſhip Minerva, of 44 guns, commanded by Captain Brenton. She went on ſhore in a very heavy fog, on a rock near Cherbourgh, cloſe under two batteries, which, the moment the fog cleared away, began a very heavy firing. Captain Brenton, finding reſiſtance ineffectual, was under the painful neceſſity of ſurrendering.—None of the officers or men were killed or wounded. Immediately on their landing they were made priſoners, and marched into the country.

ZOLLENSPIEKER,
On the Elbe, 9 miles from Hamburgh,
June 30.

Every thing indicates that the Hanoverians will oppoſe the paſſage of the Elbe, and that, too, in the moſt determined manner. Behind Geeſthacht, in the country of Lunenburgh, they have a battery which commands the Elbe and the ſurrounding places. They will be in no want of ammunition and cannon; but, perhaps, of proviſion and forage.

NEW YORK, Auguſt 25.

Captain Story, from Halifax, put into Proſpect July 27, was informed that the Britiſh Packet Lady Hobart, was loſt on the Banks of Newfoundland. The paſſengers and crew all ſaved and arrived at Halifax.

Laſt evening arrived the ſhip Caledonia, from Liverpool. By her London dates are received to the 13th July—They contain little intereſting matter.

The expedition againſt England, it is ſaid, will conſiſt of 500,000 men, in five diviſions, to be commanded by Bonaparte, Moreau, and Bournonville; of which it is calculated that 200,000 will be deſtroyed in the attempt, and that the remainder will be a force ſufficient to conquer the Iſland.

In the event of invaſion, the King, it is ſtated, will take the field in perſon, and will be aſſiſted in the conduct of the war by a Military Council. His Majeſty certainly will, in the courſe of the autumn, review the various camps near London.

The British Government have received authentic information that the wishes expressed by the Court of Madrid to preserve a ſtrict neutrality, have been completely fruſtrated by the poſitive injunctions of Bonaparte, who requires every poſſible exertion on the part of Spain to co-operate in his views againſt that country, by the aſſiſtance of her navy. In conſequence of the above information, Letters of Marque and Reprizals were momently expected to be iſſued againſt Spain.

Admiral Cornwallis is cruiſing off Breſt with 16 ſail of the line—and Sir Edward Pellew has blocked up the port of Rochefort.

Verbal intelligence had arrived at Falmouth, of the capture of the convoy from St. Domingo, including the men of war, by Admiral Cornwallis.

Captain Nichols, from Cape-Francois, informs, that on the 28th July, off that port, in ſight of a great number of ſpectators on ſhore, an Engliſh friguate of 20 guns attacked a French 74, and a running fight continued for ſome time, when a 44 came up, poured a broadſide into the 74, and the immediately ſtruck—Another 74 and a friguate were in company, but they crowded all ſail and made off, the Britiſh purſuing them.

SUMMARY
Of laſeſt Intelligence.

GREAT BRITAIN never before ſhewed ſuch an union of ſentiment and ſpirit. Her meaſures are calculated for the greateſt ſecurity by land, and victory at ſea. The Government are continually receiving addreſſes in ſupport of the war, &c. from every part of the United Kingdom, from all ranks and conditions in ſociety, breathing nothing but manlineſs and vigor. The following extract from ſundry reſolutions adopted on the 11th July, by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, will ſhew in miniature the ſpirit that pervades every part of Great Britain:—"Reſolved unanimouſly, That this Court, feeling with indignant pride the inſulting VAUNTS of inordinate AMBITION (though at the ſame time ſenſible how painful the neceſſity has been of engaging this Kingdom in a deſtructive war, yet as this awful criſis exhibits to the view of the PEOPLE, FREEDOM or SLAVERY, EXISTENCE as an INDEPENDENT NATION, or EXTIRPATION and ANNIHILATION), ſolemnly call upon their Fellow-Citizens, and every individual INHABITANT, within the Metropolis, to enroll himſelf, in one of the claſſes hereby recommended and ſpecified, in order that ALL may be PREPARED, and PARTICIPATE in the honor of chaſtiſing the inſolence of an implacable FOE, ſhould he ever dare to venture upon BRITISH GROUND. The Court takes this opportunity of congratulating the Country upon the preſent happy extinction of PARTIES, and upon the HARMONY and UNANIMITY now exiſting in all ranks, being convincing proofs of the zeal and affection ſhall orders for our beloved King and glorious Conſtitution, which muſt ever place the ſubjects of theſe realms above the MENACES of any POWER that ſhall preſume to give laws, or preſcribe limits to the POLICY and INTERESTS of this NATION.

Robert Aſtlett, late aſſiſtant to the principal Caſhier of the Bank of England, had his trial on the 8th July, for embezzling property belonging to the Bank to the amount of 200,000l. ſterling, and was acquitted without examining the witneſſes, on the ground that the Exchequer Bills alledged to have been ſtolen had not been formally ſigned by the authorities conſtituted in the act by which they were iſſued. He was, however, remanded to priſon for a civil debt due to the Bank of upwards of 100,000l.

The number of French priſoners in England the laſt of June, exceeded 3000—On the 5th July it was more than 5000.

In the New-York papers is publiſhed a Liſt of the Names of Perſons who have fell victims "to the prevailing malignant fever" in that city, from the 29th July to the 26th Auguſt, with their places of reſidence. From which it appears, that the number of deaths, in any one day, has not exceeded nine—and that the total number is 113. This Liſt is from official ſource, and unqueſtionably correct.

MONTREAL, Auguſt 8.

We are ſorry again to announce to our readers the deſtruction made during the laſt week in this city, by that devouring element, Fire: on Monday morning laſt, a little after one o'clock, the houſe of Mr. Langley the hatter, was perceived to be a-fire, and notwithſtanding very great exertions were made to prevent the conflagration ſpreading, that houſe, with his neighbour's, Dr. Selby, were entirely conſumed—the former being abſent from home, the greateſt part of his effects were burnt. The following day, about 6 o'clock A. M. a fire broke out in Mr. Lagan's ſtable, ſuppoſed to have been cauſed from ſome ſparks that might have lodged there from the fire the preceding day; it being ſo late in the day time, and aſſiſtance ready, the buildings being pulled down and every combuſtible removed by the uncommon exertions of every individual, the fire was extinguiſhed without extending any farther, although much damage was occaſioned by the hidden removal of effects, &c. &c. Agitated as the public mind naturally was, the alarm of fire again the ſucceeding day did not ſerve to appeaſe it—On Wedneſday morning about ten o'clock, ano her fire was diſcovered in a houſe occupied by Mr. Higar, which communicated to the houſe of Mr. Breckenridge, and altho' the houſe adjoining was pulled down, the flames very ſoon caught the houſe of Mr. Dunlop, which, although conſidered fire proof, was, with its contents, entirely, with the other houſes, reduced to aſhes—Mr. Dunlop's loſs is to a very great amount. The Hoſpital, Mr. Stanfield's and Mr. Leſeuvre's houſes were on fire ſeveral times, but by the very wonderful exertions of every denomination of perſons, they were ſaved—the loſs to various individuals muſt have been very conſiderable. It was by exertion only, that the whole Lower Town was ſaved from the mercileſs element. As various reports had been circulated, and with ſome reſemblance of truth, that theſe recent fires did not been accidental, detachments of the militia have ſince patrolled the ſtreets, but no certain diſcovery has yet been made.

Since the above was prepared for preſs, we lament that we have occaſion to inform our readers, that about 3 o'clock yeſterday afternoon, another fire broke out oppoſite to the Recollet Barracks, in an out-houſe, which, with ſeveral others and two dwelling houſes, were conſumed; ſeveral other dwelling and out-houſes were pulled down, and effectually prevented the extenſive conflagration, which from the peculiar ſituation of the place where the fire was firſt diſcovered, and its vicinity to the Powder Magazine, gave every reaſon to apprehend.

☞ The Printer begs leave to inform the Public that the Printing Office is now removed to the two ſtory Houſe next to Mr. Henderſon's Brewery; where the buſineſs in future will be carried on in all its branches with accuracy and diſpatch.—Advertiſements, Letters, Communications, &c. &c. addreſſed to the Printer and left at St. George & Co's. or Selſhield & Moſley's Stores will meet with due attention.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deſerters to ſerve abroad as Soldiers (a ſervice to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary courſe of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in caſes where Death may be thought too great a punithment, to ſentence a Deſerter to Tranſportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the ſentence, a Soldier ſo Tranſported ſhall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majeſty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Tranſported, or without ſome other Lawful cauſe, every ſuch perſon being convicted thereof, in the ordinary courſe of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will ſuffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5 Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the caſes of Deſertion, or of any other Capital Offence, ſhall have given a ſentence of Death, his Majeſty is impowered, if he ſhall think fit, to order that puniſhment to be changed for Tranſportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majeſty ſhall ſeem meet; and the puniſhment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by ſuch order of his Majeſty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 116. Perſons harbouring, concealing, or aſſiſting Deſerters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, inſtead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 607. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deſerters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the aſſiſtance of a Civil Officer, is now eſtabliſhed.

Sec. 609. Page 117. This Section has been altered, ſo as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final deſtination, are obliged to receive Deſerters into their cuſtody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deſerters are conveyed by virtue of a Magiſtrate's Warrant, or under Military Eſcort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,
During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec 16. Page 84. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary courſe of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in conſequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 157, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to ſentence Deſerters belonging to thoſe Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be ſent out of Great Britain) to ſerve in his Majeſty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of ſervice.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
21ſt June, 1803.

NOTICE is hereby given, that regular attendance for the tranſaction of the Public Buſineſs of this Province, will in future be given at the Office of the Secretary of the Province, the Executive Council Office, and the Surveyor General's Office, every day in the year, (Sundays, Good Friday and Chriſtmas Day only excepted) from ten o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and from five o'clock in the afternoon until ſeven in the evening.

By Order of the Lieutenant Governor,
JAMES GREEN, Sec.

ENGLAND.

Private letters from Paris, June 29, ſtate—" Every day couriers arrive from the Firſt Conſul, and couriers are diſpatched to the Firſt Conſul: as Talleyrand has not yet left Paris, and the daily conferences continue between him and Coont Markoff, many flatter themſelves with the hope that the mediation of Ruſſia may not be ineffectual; perſons in the intereſt of the Conſular Government deſire this opinion to gain ground, no doubt to quiet, during Bonaparte's abſence, the public, very much exaſperated with the war.

" From our ſea-ports we continue to hear of nothing but captures, loſſes and failures; of a total ſtagnation in trade, and a great ſcarcity of money, of miſtruſt, diffidence, and deception.—Government encourages as much as poſſible, plays and pantomimes, in which England is degraded, and the Engliſh nation abuſed. In every city where the Conſul ſtops, theatrical dullneſs aſſiſts departmental meanneſs, to flatter the Great Man, and to calumniate Great Britain.

" Notwithſtanding all the active endeavours of our Government, the building of gun boats goes on but ſlowly, and the ſubſcriptions for building are ſo trifling, that it would be a diſhonour to publiſh them, even in the official Moniteur—We are generous only in words, and liberal only in our addreſſes; ſo far we repay our rulers in their own coin. On the 24th of June, after the maſs, the Firſt Conſul left St. Cloud for Brabant, and no ſooner was he gone, than all the legions of the Police Agents and Spies here were put into conſiderable activity.

" The Guards are doubled every where, and a company of the Conſular Guards placed to protect the Telegraphe.—General Junot, the commander at Paris, has been ordered by the Conſul to head the patrol himſelf, every night, during the Conſul's abſence. Domiciliary viſits were made laſt night in the Palais-Royal, and in all the hotels of the neighbouring ſtreets, and ſeveral ſuſpected perſons were taken and ſent to priſon. Theſe meaſures of terror have been adviſed by the Grand Judge, and the Senators Lucien Bonaparte, Fouche, Roederer, and Le Feve, on a pretended diſcovery of the united efforts of the Royaliſt and Jacobin factions to ſpread diſcontent, and to propoſe a new Revolution. The Senator Sieyes was told, on the 20th inſtant, by the Firſt Phyſician to the Firſt Conſul, that a viſit to Spa, for ſix weeks, would be very uſeful to his health, and he left Paris, immediately, to drink the Spa waters.

" General Andreoſſi has been ordered by the Government to remove ſixteen leagues from the capital. He incurred the diſpleaſure of the Corſican, upon his honeſt refuſal to become the medium of the moſt groſs and infamous falſehoods reſpecting the ſituation of affairs in Great Britain. It is confidently ſaid at Paris, that Joſeph Bonaparte was very anxious to avert the renewal of hoſtilities with Great Britain, and after many vain exhortations to his brother, concluded with ſolemnly predicting, that if the latter obſtinately perſevered in reviving the war with England, there would not be a Bonaparte alive in France in the courſe of ſix months."

NAPLES, June 22.

The new Miniſter of his Britannic Majeſty to our Court, arrived here laſt Friday, eſcorted by the ſhip of Lord Nelſon (who left England on the 22d of May, on board the Victory). Reciprocal diſcharges of artillery were made on his arrival.

BRUSSELS, July 7.

An Engliſh ſquadron, with land troops, has arrived at Naples; its object is ſuppoſed to be to take poſſeſſion of the iſlands Procida, Capri, and Ischia. The garriſon in Fort St. Elmo has been reinforced.

CUXHAVEN, July 11.

Seven Engliſh frigates and a cutter have taken ſuch a poſition at the mouth of the Elbe, that no ſhip can go up the river; the greater part of the neutral ſhips have returned back to the vicinity of Tonningen.

From a London Paper of July 15.

Grand Canal.—A meaſure, in which the trade and navigation of this country are incalculably intereſted, received laſt night the moſt willing concurrence of a Committee of the Houſe of Commons. On the motion of Mr. Hawkins Browne, in the Committee of Supply, 20,000l. was granted towards making a navigable Canal through the Highlands of Scotland, from ſea to ſea. The extent is 59 miles, 29 of which are occupied by Lakes of unfathomable depth.—The remaining are to be twenty feet deep, and of a proportionable breadth, ſo that ſhips of the line may paſs from the Baltic to the Britiſh Channel. This will obviate all the difficulties of going round about by the Shetland and Orkney Iſles; a paſſage of 14 days in the calmeſt weather, and which, in the windy ſeaſon, is rarely effected in leſs than three months: while, by the propoſed Canal, the paſſage in the moſt unfavorable weather, will not occupy more than 12 days, and frequently little more than half that period. It is calculated, that the whole expence of this Canal will not exceed the loſs ſuſtained by ſhipwrecks, in the preſent courſe of navigation, in five years.

BOSTON, August 31.

London accounts a few days later than by the John Adams, have been received at New York.

Preparations in England and France continue to portend a bloody and vindictive war. To annoy as well as to defend, is the avowed reſolution of the Britiſh Miniſtry. To this end, the nation en maſſe is to be armed and diſciplined, and an Army of Reſerve is to be raiſed for home defence; whilſt the floating caſtles of Britain are to wait the Regular troops to attacks on diſtant French poſſeſſions. Across the Channel too, every thing wears a hoſtile front;—the addreſſes of Clergy and Laity; the public harangue and the convivial ſentiment, all breathe the Inviſion of England; and all ſpeak of it as feaſible.—Bonaparte's calculations thereon are the leaſt favourable to the enterprize.—The French invading army, it is ſaid, will compriſe 500,000 men! divided into legions of 100,000 each, to be headed by Bonapatte, Moreau, Bournonville, and other Generals of celebrity in the annals of carnage. If the meaſure is to be attempted, it muſt be ſoon; or the elements will aſſiſt the fleets and armies of England.—Every league of water on the French coaſt, has its cruizers and look-out veſſels; whilſt ſtrong ſquadrons of the line block the important depots of Breſt and Rochefort.

Upwards of 500 Scotch emigrants have lately arrived in Nova Scotia, from Scotland; and many more are expected—amongſt whom is Lord SELKIRK and family. They are principally farmers, of induſtrious habits, and correct morals.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.

We learn by letters from France, (ſays a Baltimore paper) that Havre and Antwerp are declared in a ſtate of blockade by the Britiſh.

Intelligence is received at N. York from St. Thomas', of the capture of the Iſland of Curracoa by the Britiſh.

SEPTEMBER 2.

By the attention of a friend who came paſſenger in the Pigou, we are in poſſeſſion of copious files of papers to the 22d of July inclusive, from which we extract various articles of important intelligence.

Nothing ſo much engages the attention of the government and people of Great Britain, as the expected invaſion. A very intereſting and ſpirited debate was had in the Houſe of Commons, on the 20th and 21ſt July, on a Bill for "arming the people for the general defence of the country."

In every part of the Kingdom vigorous preparations are ſaid to be making to give the Firſt Conſul and his army a reception moſt conſonant to the honor and glory of the Britiſh nation. It is ſaid, that government had received certain intelligence, that the deſign of the enemy was to attempt a deſcent upon Jerſey and Guernſey. In conſequence of this intelligence, the whole of the regular force of the Iſle of Wight had been ordered to proceed to Jerſey; and both Iſlands are ſaid to be placed in the moſt formidable ſtate of defence.

The merchants, underwriters and ſubſcribers at Lloyd's, have ſet on foot a general ſubſcription, on a very extenſive ſcale, for the relief of thoſe who are engaged for the defence of the country.

Voluntary aſſociations are forming in every part of the Kingdom. The young men of family and faſhion in the metropolis have ſet the example, by forming themſelves into an equeſtrian corps, which will amount to one thouſand, and are to hold themſelves in readineſs to ſet off at an hour's notice, mounted on the fineſt horſes in the Kingdom.

Large corps of volunteer cavalry and infantry are raiſing in Bath.

Three troops of cavalry and a corps of infantry are nearly completed at Briſtol.

All the principal officers, and the whole body of clerks, belonging to the Cuſtom Houſe in London, from the age of 18 to 45, have volunteered their ſervices to government, to ſerve in any part of the metropolis, and their offer has been accepted. The above gentlemen amount to above 500. And the Board of Cuſtoms have ſelected 330 of their interior officers to mount a ſpecial guard day and night at the Cuſtom-Houſe, in caſe of any diſturbance.

The Lieutenancy and Magiſtracy of Greenwich, have adopted a reſolution to form a voluntary corps; as have the inhabitants of the Parish of St. George, Hanover-Square. At Haſtings a large meeting has been held, for enrolling the names of fiſhermen and ſea faring men, as Sea Fencibles.—At this meeting about 140 had voluntarily come forward with the offer of their ſervices, and great numbers, who were abſent from the meeting, afterwards did the ſame.

Earl Kingſton has made an offer to government, of raiſing, within a given time, on his eſtates in Ireland, a regiment of 2000 men, and after that ſhall have been completed, another of equal force.

At Liverpool, a large ſociety of independent gentlemen have enrolled themſelves into a body to conſtitute a company of Riflemen. And all the boat men, riggers and others, to whom protections have been granted, have come forward with a tender of their ſervices.

Several encampments have been formed on the eaſtern coaſt, and not a ſpot in the Kingdom appeared to be without its apprehenſion, or neglectful of the means to ſecure its ſafety and that of the country.

HALIFAX, (N. S.) August 4.

PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE.

On Thurſday laſt his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, attended as uſual, proceeded to the Council Chamber—where being ſeated, a Meſſage was diſpatched to the Repreſentative Body, requiring its attendance.

The Speaker and Members attended accordingly; when, on preſenting the Bill for appropriating the Supplies granted during the Seſſion, the Speaker addreſſed his Excellency as follows:—

May it please your Excellency,

It is my duty, on behalf of his Majeſty's faithful Commons of this Province, to preſent for your Excellency's aſſent, a Bill appropriating the Supplies granted to his Majeſty the preſent Seſſion.

I feel an honeſt pride in addreſſing your Excellency in behalf of a people, who, in times when they were ſurrounded with temptations and dangers, remained true to the King; and, by the liberal Supplies they have granted to his Majeſty the preſent Seſſion, have afforded a ſtrong proof, that their loyalty is undiminiſhed.

If the Houſe of Aſſembly has encountered difficulties in appropriating the Supplies of the preſent Seſſion to purpoſes of the firſt importance to the Province, it has, at leaſt, manifeſted its prudence and moderation, in making its feelings a ſacrifice to its wiſhes to preſerve harmony in the ſeveral Departments of his Majeſty's Government; and, I am convinced that the people of this Province will patiently wait a more favorable opportunity to accompliſh the numerous objects that yet remain unattained.

Notwithſtanding the limited ſphere to which our actions are confined, we are ſenſible that it is not ſafe, in the preſent times, to indulge ſpeculative opinions;—we feel the arduous conteſt in which our King and Country are engaged—we know, that the perſonal exertions of every man, worthy of the Name of an Engliſhman, will be wanted; and, we flatter ourſelves with the hope, that, when our's are called for, your Excellency will find, that the hardy Sons of Nova Scotia have not degenerated; and, that every man is ready with his arms to ſupport the Conſtitution, which it is our duty to defend, and our glory and happineſs to enjoy.

I ſhould feel that I had omitted a part of my duty, was I to fail expreſſing on this occaſion, how much of our preſent happineſs we owe to the mild and moderate government of your Excellency: we are ſenſible, that you have the true intereſts of the Province at heart; and hope you are convinced, that the people will be ever mindful of the great obligations they owe to you.

I cannot conclude without expreſſing to your Excellency, my humble thanks for the ready attention you have always given to the numerous repreſentations it has been my duty to make to your Excellency; and I can, with confidence, aſſure your Excellency, that the people of this Province well know the value of Britiſh freedom, and are not afraid to die in its defence.

His Excellency then gave his Aſſent to

" An Act for applying certain monies therein mentioned, for the ſervice of the year One Thouſand Eight " Hundred and Three; and for appropriating ſuch part of the Supplies " granted in this Seſſion of the General Aſſembly, as are not already appropriated by the Laws of the Province."

After which his Excellency was pleaſed to deliver the following Speech to both Houſes:—

Mr. President,
And Gentlemen of the Council—
Mr. Speaker,
And Gentlemen of the Aſſembly,

The public buſineſs, after the matureſt conſideration, being thus far advanced, it remains with me to return my thanks, for the Supplies granted for the ſupport of his Majeſty's Government, and for improvements of Roads, Bridges, and Public Buildings throughout the Province—Theſe uſeful meaſures ſhall be faithfully executed, as far as depends upon me.

Great Britain, our Parent State, being again involved in war, through the inſatiable ambition and implacable hatred of the French Government, it is incumbent upon us to be prepared for events, which proper caution leads us to expect—You will, therefore, Gentlemen, in your different Diſtricts, exert the greateſt vigilance to repel every attempt, not only of hoſtility, but alſo thoſe that may ſecretly tend to diſcourage or diminiſh our animated efforts of defence and ſupport of his Majeſty's Government—toward which the unceaſing practices of inſidious enemies are always directed.

Herein, Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the Aſſembly, I receive particular comfort, that the proffered diſplay of your liberality, in behalf of your Conſtituents, may furniſh me an ample reſource to apply for the defence of this his Majeſty's Province, ſhould any ſudden emergency ariſe to make it neceſſary. I hope, however, that the protections, of our Parent State, hitherto ſo effectual, will, under the bleſſing of Providence, ſtill preſerve us from the calamities of war in this country.

It is now my duty, with pleaſure to meet the united wiſhes of both Houſes for a receſs—which I cordially pray may be attended with individual health and proſperity.

The Preſident of his Majeſty's Council, by his Excellency's command, then ſaid—

Gentlemen,

It is his Excellency's will and pleaſure, that this General Aſſembly be prorogued unto Thurſday the firſt day of December next, to be then here held; and this General Aſſembly is accordingly prorogued unto that day.

HALIFAX, August 4.

LOSS OF THE LADY HOBART PACKET.

On the 22d of June, the Lady Hobart ſailed from this port for Falmouth—On the 26th, ſaw a large ſchooner, under French colours, standing towards her; being full of men, Captain Fellows prepared for engaging her; but, on her near approach, and receiving a ſhot from the Lady Hobart, ſhe ſtruck her colours: ſhe was taken poſſeſſion of, and given in charge to Lieutenants Little and Hughes, two gentlemen of the navy, who were paſſengers in the Packet, with directions to take her to Falmouth; ſhe was laden with fiſh, and ſome wine.

On the 28th, at one o'clock in the morning, the weather being hazy, and at intervals a thick fog, and the ſhip going at the rate of 7 miles an hour, ſhe ſtruck againſt an iſland of Ice, with ſuch violence as to throw ſeveral of the crew out of their hammocks—the helm was immediately put hard a-port, when ſhe ſtruck a ſecond time about the chewtree, and then, ſwinging round on her heel, ſtove in the ſtern-poſt, and carried away the rudder. The iſland of Ice appeared to hang quite over the ſhip, and was ſuppoſed to be twice the height of her maſt-heads. The water ruſhed in ſo as to fill the hold in a few minutes: the guns were thrown overboard—the anchors cut from the bows—both pumps were manned—men were ſet to bailing at the hatchways, and two ſails were got under her bottom—notwithſtanding which, in leſs than a quarter of an hour, ſhe ſettled down to her fore chains in the water.

The neceſſity of quitting the ſhip becoming quite apparent, Captain Fellows (after conſulting Capt. Thomas of the navy, who was a paſſenger on board, and Mr. Barpus, the maſter, who were both of opinion that no time was to be loſt) ordered the boats to be hoiſted out. The weight and ſize of the mail was ſuch as to preclude the poſſibility of taking it into either of the boats, without excluding ſome of the people, it was therefore judged prudent to ſink it.—The ladies, who were paſſengers, were then placed in the boats, and the reſt of the paſſengers and crew immediately followed. Some bread, with a ſmall quantity of wine, rum and water, were taken in the boats, with a quadrant and compaſs.—Scarcely were theſe arrangements made, when the ſhip took a heavy lurch to port, and immediately went down, head foremoſt, and ſo near were the boats, that they narrowly eſcaped being carried down by the water. Little more than an hour eſcaped from the ſhip's ſtriking till her foundering.

At the time the ſhip foundered, Captain Fellows ſuppoſed her to be in lat. 46 33. N. long. 44. o, W. St. John's, Newfoundland, bearing W. 3-4 N. diſtant 350 miles.—The whole number embarked in the boats conſiſted of 29, and all the proviſions ſaved from the ſhip was between 40 and 50 pounds of biſcuit, two demijohns of water, conſiſting of five gallons each—one demijohn of rum, and part of a ſmall barrel of ſpruce beer, and a few bottles of wine; and as it was a ſeaſon of the year when the weſterly winds are moſt prevalent, it became neceſſary to huſband this ſmall ſtock with great economy—St. John's being the neareſt land they would expect to make.

On the 1ſt July, the boats encountered a gale of wind, parted from each other, and continued ſeparated two days, and it may be considered an uncommon circumstance, that after sailing many leagues on the open ocean, they again fell in with each other, and continued together till they reached Conception Bay on the 4th July, and entered a place called Island Cove.—They had been 7 days and 6 nights constantly wet, and cold, and with no other subsistence than a quarter of a biscuit and a glass of liquor for 24 hours; and during the whole period they were in the boats they never once saw the Sun, except on the first day, or a Star, to enable them to take an observation.

Not a single person was able to walk from the boats without assistance, on their arrival at the Cove—But they were received with the utmost kindness and hospitality by the inhabitants, who cheerfully rendered them all the assistance in their power to afford. Before their arrival, the intellects of several began to be affected. The master of the French vessel they had captured, in a fit of phrenzy, threw himself suddenly overboard, and instantly disappeared. The legs of all them were much swollen—they were becoming uneafy and restless, and growing very weak: a few hours more would, in all probability, have brought on all the consequences of despair and madness. They reached St. John's the 7th July—here they experienced the most hospitable treatment from Gen. Skerret, who not only paid every attention in his power to Captain Fellows and the passengers, but gave quarters to the crew, and issued rations for their support.

Mr. Jenkins, the master's mate, and 25 of the crew, arrived here on Saturday evening, in 16 days.

Most of the crew are still in a feeble situation; several are frost-bitten, two of them severely.

Captain Fellows, Mrs. Fellows, Col. Cooke of the Guards, Capt. Thomas of the Navy, and Mr. Burgus, master of the Lady Hobart, have taken passage at St. John's, in a brig bound for Oporto.

On Monday arrived the American ship Charlotte, Hutton, in 56 days from Hamburgh, bound to Philadelphia: the want of provision obliged her to put into this port. She has 170 passengers: several of them having manifested a wish to be landed here, the ship has come up to Town, and we doubt not but every encouragement will be afforded to settlers of so useful and valuable a description.

AUGUST 11.

This morning arrived the brig Britannia, Capt. Nicholson, from Whitehaven, which place she left the 11th of June; she put into Lochrien the 23d, and sailed again the 27th, in company with the brig Clyde, Captain M'Coll, bound to St. John's, Newfoundland.—The Captain has furnished us with the following paragraph:—"Previous to his leaving England, upwards of 300 prizes had been captured, among which were eight Dutch Indiamen; that our cruizers had commenced the capture of Spanish vessels, and a British squadron was off Cadiz, for the purpose of intercepting the Spanish homeward bound ships; that several Danish and Swedish merchantmen laden with naval stores, bound to France, were captured and sent into England."

A new and valuable Styptic, which will stop Bleeding, even of the greatest Blood Vessel.

Take brandy or common spirits two ounces, caustic soap two drachms, pot-ash one drachm; scrape the soap fine and dissolve it in the brandy, then add the pot-ash and mix it well together, and keep it close in a phial—When you apply it, warm it in a vessel, and dip pledges of lint in it, and the blood will immediately congeal upon the application. It operates by coagulating the blood, both a considerable way within the vessels, as well as the extravasated blood, as restraining at the same time the mouths of the vessels. A few dressings of this medicine may be necessary if the wound is very deep, or when a limb is cut off.

GEORGE the Third, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

TO ALL OUR LOVING SUBJECTS,

GREETING:—

WHEREAS, by our Proclamation bearing date the first day of August last, we thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to prorogue our Provincial Parliament until the tenth day of this present month of September, at which time in our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear:—But we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving Subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you, and each of you, of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking, and by these presents enjoining you, and each of you, that on the eighteenth day of October next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament, in our Town of York, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper-Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary: Herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY whereof, we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed:—Witness our trusty and well-beloved PETER HUNTER, Esquire, our Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Lieutenant General Commanding our Forces in our Provinces of Upper and Lower-Canada, at York, this third day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty third year of our Reign.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE ON THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out, to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 12, 13. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad, as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Where a Court Martial, either in the case of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13.

Sec. 609. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 607. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Office, is now established.

Sec. 607. Page 117. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY, During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary courts of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 127, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
21st June, 1803.

NOTICE is hereby given, that regular attendance for the transaction of the Public Business of this Province, will in future be given at the Office of the Secretary of the Province, the Executive Council Office, and the Surveyor General's Office, every day in the year, (Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day only excepted) from ten o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and from five o'clock in the afternoon until seven in the evening.

COUNCIL CHAMBER, 10th Nov. 1802.

UPPER-CANADA.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council, hereby gives Notice, to all whom it may concern, That no Leaſes which have been, or ſhall be granted, or pretended to be granted, by or under the authority of any Indian Nation, will be admitted or allowed of—And this Public Notice is given in order that no perſon may pretend ignorance of the ſame.

By Command of His Excellency,
JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

York, 13th Nov. 1802.

From a late London Paper.

Every poſſible means are employed to render the war popular in France, & reconcile the ſoldiery to the perils which an hoſtile force would unavoidably have to encounter either from the elements or the Britiſh fleets, in any attempt to invade this country. A dialogue between a Frenchman and an Engliſhman, on the ſubject, appears in one of the late Paris Journals, obviouſly deſigned to do away thoſe terrors which the vaſt ſuperiority of the Engliſh navy, coupled with the poſſible hoſtility of the elements, may be naturally ſuppoſed to give birth to. The Frenchman is made to ſum up induſtriouſly every inſtance in which an invading force had ſucceeded in effecting a landing from the time of William II. to that of William III. without any obſtruction from tempeſts or the Britiſh fleet. Theſe events in far other times are aſſumed as certain grounds of ſucceſs on the preſent occaſion. The ſtate of the country, the diſpoſition of the people, and above all the enormous acceſſions to the naval power of this country, are left entirely out of the queſtion. The firſt ſhip of the Royal Navy was built at Briſtol in the reign of Henry VII. called the Great Harry, and deſtined for a voyage of diſcovery to the new world, and therefore the ſucceſs of an attempt of invaſion, when no royal navy exiſted, cannot juſtly be made the ground of well-founded expectation, when the Britiſh fleet ſweeps the ocean. The firſt attempt of an hoſtile force on the ſhores of Britain, after the naval power of England began to become formidable, was in the reign of Elizabeth. The fate of that expedition is well known. William III. effected a landing without oppoſition, but he had left Holland avowedly for the purpoſe of making a deſcent upon France, and having thus deceived the Engliſh Government, landed in the country, where he was received by the unanimous wiſhes of the people. Bonapaſte contrived to elude the Britiſh fleet in the Mediterranean, and invaded Egypt, but the poſſeſſion of the ſea by the Engliſh and the bravery of Engliſh troops expelled his army thence: a fine army was ſent to St. Domingo, and compelled, while the Engliſh fleet was neuter, to abandon it by the deſperacy of the blacks. Is it poſſible then, that any ſerious hopes of ſucceſs can be entertained by the French Government, againſt a great population determined to periſh in defence of its conſtitution and rights; againſt the troops that beat its army out of Egypt, and a fleet that rides triumphant in every branch of the ocean.

An Oration, delivered by a graduate in the arts, in the Univerſity of Pennſylvania, on the 29th of July, 1789, and lately republiſhed in the Philadelphia Gazette, contains the following affecting ſtory, which is earneſtly recommended as a ſolemn warning againſt the common and murderous practice of dueling.—Edit. Bal.

Two young gentlemen of amiable characters and manners, formed a moſt intimate friendſhip for each other during their ſtudies in Trinity College in the city of Dublin. After they had taken their degrees, one of them invited the other to his father's in the country, where he became ſtrongly attached to the ſiſter of his friend, a young lady of great beauty, and many fine accompliſhments.—Equality of rank and fortune, invited to a match on both ſides, and after a few viſits, the day was fixed upon for their marriage. The evening before this event was to take place, the young gentleman who was to be married, invited the brother of his intended bride, and a few more gentlemen, to a neighbouring tavern, in order to take leave (as he ſaid) of his batchelor's life. At ſupper a diſpute took place between the two friends upon a trifling ſubject. This diſpute aroſe gradually to ſuch a height as to intereſt their paſſions. The reſt of the company, as is too often the caſe, were ſilent liſteners to the controverſy. At length, the intended groom contradicted his friend in a tone of voice, which one of the company interpreted into giving the lie. The friend would have paſſed it by, but the company inſiſted on its being an affront, and with one accord, ſaid it required ſatisfaction. He was forced to challenge him—which he did by throwing him a glove across the table. His intended brother-in-law, returned a glove, and ſeconds were immediately choſen to fix the time, place and weapons, for a duel. They met the next morning at ſix o'clock, at the place appointed. The ſeconds examined and loaded the piſtols, and afterwards marked the diſtance from which they were to fire.

The two friends are fixed by their ſeconds ten feet from each other. The word of command, to FIRE, is given, but no diſcharge of piſtols is heard.—A ſecond time they are commanded to fire; but a ſolemn ſilence ſtill continues. At length, one of the ſeconds cries out, "Coward, both by ——," mentioning the name of the Supreme Being. A third time they are commanded to fire.—The piſtol of the intended groom was alone diſcharged, and unfortunately lodged its contents in the breaſt of his intended brother in-law. He ſaw him fall, and ran to embrace him. He preſſed him to his boſom—he received his laſt look, full of anguiſh and affection—and felt his breaſt beat for the laſt time, in his arms! The agony of the miſerable ſurvivor, could not be deſcribed. He attempted ſeveral times to put an end to his exiſtence, and was with difficulty prevented from doing ſo, by the interpoſition and pious advice of Dr. Berkley, then Biſhop of Cloyne. By the advice of his friends, he was prevailed upon to undertake a voyage to England, in order to be out of the way of thoſe ſcenes, which kept alive the anguiſh of his mind.

But the diſtreſs of this duel did not end here—The lady to whom the ſurviving friend was engaged to be married, was ſo much affected by the death of her brother, by the means of her intended huſband's hands, that ſhe loſt her reaſon, and died ſoon after in a mad houſe—her afflicted father and mother died in a year after her from broken hearts. The miſerable author of their deaths was no leſs happy in this reſpect than either of them. He lived twenty years afterwards in obſcurity, in the city of London; and declared to a friend not long before he died, that he had never put out his candle a ſingle night after he went to bed, without fancying he ſaw his bleeding friend, his diſtracted miſtreſs, and their heart-broken parents, around his bed, all reproaching him with being the author of their miſeries.

[From the Balance.]

LORD LYTTLETON'S VISION AND DEATH.

THE hardened monſter, who is to the habitual practice of corrupting female innocence, is no better than a murderer. The victims of his ſeductive arts frequently ſuffer ſhame and wretchedneſs worſe than death; while a wound, that can never be healed, is inflicted on the hearts of their neareſt relations. To many a loſt girl, and to the family whereto ſhe belonged, it would have been comparatively a mercy if ſhe had died, while undebauched, by the hand of an aſſaſſin. And as the murderer, ſo the ſeducer, has ſometimes been viſited in a ſingularly awful manner by the hand of Heaven.

The death of Lord Lyttleton was a remarkable inſtance of the interpoſition of Divine Providence, in the puniſhment of a moſt notorious debauchee and ſeducer.

Lord Lyttleton the elder, was diſtinguiſhed for learning, taſte and piety.—His lady was among the moſt excellent and amiable of her ſex. Their ſon, the heir to the family eſtate and title, breaking through the reſtraints of a virtuous education, and ſpurning the counſels of the beſt of parents, was remarkable for the atheiſm and lewdneſs of his character, and as a deſtroyer of female virtue.

Near Hagley Park, in Worceſterſhire, the ſeat of Lord Lyttleton, there lived, in the year 1779, a widow lady, "of exalted underſtanding and great dignity of manners," and, together with her three daughters, the eldeſt nineteen, the next ſeventeen, and the youngeſt fifteen—her huſband, and their father, a very reſpectable gentleman, having died the year before.—Theſe young ladies the nobleman had marked as his prey. Accordingly he was aſſiduous in his viſits and attentions to the family: the gratitude of the girls he won by a new-year's preſent; and with a view to ingratiate himſelf with the mother and to lay her ſuſpicions aſleep, he wrote her a letter, in the ſcripture ſtyle, that was filled with virtuous leſſons of advice to herſelf and daughters. Theſe arts of infernal hypocriſy ſucceeded.—The girls were all decoyed from the boſom of their mother; and took up their reſidence with his Lordſhip, at Hagley-Park.

In the month of September, ſoon after their elopement from their mother's houſe, the ſecond daughter accompanied his Lordſhip to Ireland; and, on their return, the other two, who had remained at Hagley-Park, met them at the place of their landing; and they all came up together to his Lordſhip's ſeat, in Hill-Street, Berkley-Square, London, where they continued till November.

"On the 26th of that month, about two in the morning, Lord Lyttleton was awakened by ſomething like the fluttering of a bird among the curtains of his bed, which ſuddenly eſcaped, and the figure of a woman of majeſtic aſpect (the very figure of the mother of the young ladies, as declared by his Lordſhip) made her appearance, and told him to prepare for his departure for another world, for that within three days he ſhould be with her in the ſtate of the dead. This moſt extraordinary occurrence making a deep impreſſion on the mind of Lord Lyttleton, he, early in the morning, communicated it to the ladies, who ridiculed what appeared to them the effect of an heated imaggination; and to divert his gloom, proposed a visit to Epsom, where his Lordship had a seat that he won from Lord Foley. Here they spent the night, and the following day returned to Hill-Street, where a party was invited to meet them. Not all the jocularity exerted on the occasion could dissipate the anxiety of his Lordship, though he affected to treat the circumstance with contempt; and exclaimed, upon returning, "If I live over to night, I shall jockey the ghost."

"The young ladies accompanied his Lordship to his room, to notice some paintings, and presently retired; when, before they were undressed, a servant ran hastily to their door demanding admittance, and declared that his Lordship was dying. Before the ladies could reach his room his Lordship was speechless, and on their entry expired in great agonies. What rendered the circumstance still more remarkable is, that the next post brought the young ladies an account of their mother's death, who departed precisely at the time when Lord Lyttleton saw the vision."

This extraordinary narrative is more fully and circumstantially given in a late London paper; and is confidently declared to be authentic.

WOOL.

Extract from Sir John Sinclair's Essays.

"The Wool of England, in the reign of Edward III. is generally supposed not to have exceeded in quantity one hundred and fifty thousand sacks, of 360 pounds weight each, which is equal to 225,000 packs, of 240 pounds according to the packages of these days. In later times computations have greatly varied. According to Davenant, there was in England alone, at the commencement of the last century, about 400,000 packs, worth 5l. each; which, when manufactured, produced eight millions in value. Trowel, in his plan for preventing the clandestine running of wool, printed anno 1733, supposes 800,000 in England and Ireland, and about 525,000 packs in the three kingdoms. Others, about the same time, computed the number of packs at one million two hundred and seventy four thousand. Mr. Arthur Young calculates the number of sheep in England alone at nearly 29,000,000, and the value of the whole growth and labour of the wool of Great Britain and Ireland, at 695,520l. furnishing employment to about a million and a half of people. We shall suppose, however, that there are only 28,800,000 sheep in the whole island of Great Britain, producing at an average 5lb. weight of wool each, or 144,000,000 pounds in all, equal to 600,000 packs, and worth, at the rate of 8l. per pack, 4,800,000l. If the value of the raw material is quadrupled by the labour that is bestowed on it, the growth and labour will amount to 19,200,000l. to which, if there is added the value of the wool imported from Spain, and labour employed upon it, it will make a total of about twenty millions.

ANECDOTE.

At the close of the American war, a noble Lord of high naval character was returning home to his family, after various escapes from dangers, he was detained a day at Holyhead by contrary winds. Reading in a summer-house, he heard the well known sound of bullets whistling near him; he looked about, and found that two balls had just passed through the door close behind him; he looked out of the window, and two gentlemen, who were just charging their pistols again; and as he guessed that they had been shooting at a mark upon the door, he rushed out, and very civilly remonstrated with them on the imprudence of firing at the door of a house, without having previously examined whether any one was within side. One of them immediately answered, in a tone which proclaimed at once his disposition and his country—"Sir, I did not know you were within there; and I don't know who you are now; but if I've given offence, I am willing," said he, holding out the ready charged pistols, "to give you the satisfaction of a gentleman—take your choice."—With his usual prefence of mind, the noble Lord seized hold of both the pistols, and said to his astonished countryman, "Do me the justice, Sir, to go into that Summer-house, shut the door, and let me have two shots at you, then we shall be upon equal terms, and I shall be quite at your service to give or receive the satisfaction of a gentleman."

There was an air of drollery and of superiority in his manner, which at once struck and pleased the Hibernian. "Upon my conscience, Sir, I believe you are a very honest fellow," said he, looking him earnestly in the face, "and I've a great mind to shake hands with you. Will you only just tell me who you are?"

The nobleman told his name—a name dear to every Briton, and every Irishman!

"I beg your pardon, and that's what no man ever accused me of doing before," cried the gallant Hibernian, "and had I known who you were, I would as soon have shot my own soul as have fired at the door. But how could I tell who was within side?"

"That is the very thing of which I complain," laid his Lordship.

His candid opponent admitted the justice of the complaint, as soon as he understood it, and he promised never more to be guilty of such a practical bull.

THE DISCONSOLATE....A SONG.

[BY PETER PINDAR.]

How dark is the hour while my love is away!
I sleep not at night, and I sigh thro' the day:—
Now the grotto I haunt, which her footsteps have prest,
Like the spectre, the ruins where once it was blest!

Now I pause on the sod that supported the fair,
And gaze on the woodbine, the chilf of her care;
Forlorn seems the sod—and the woodbine reclin'd,
Seems to lose all its sweets, and be dead to the wind.

Lo, the birds that hopp'd round us no longer appear,
But fly to the bushes and hide with a fear;
E'en the riv'let that prattled when CHLOE was nigh,
And the zephyr that wanton'd, move on with a sigh.

In her presence I felt not the cold, nor the rain,
The flood seem'd a rill, and the mountain a plain:
Then how short were my journies, when blest in her smiles,
But now a few paces are more than a mile.

To our groves and our grottos, and riv'lets that mourn,
Ah, when will the Loves and the Graces return?
When are to our groves and our rivulets shall strays,
Who brought them all hither and led them away.

THE SHOE PINCHES.

A SONG OF SHOE MAKER WILLIAM.

FROM ROTHERHAM.

THOUGH idlers riot, eat and drink,
And on soft downy pillows sink,
They are not free from woe:
For every man must have his share
Of trouble, and must know best where
The shoe does pinch his toe.

When rainy, wife men boots will wear,
But those put on when all is fair,
And take times as they go;
No man that ever wore a shoe
Will say if he be fair and true,
It never pinch'd his toe.

We are sorry the non arrival of our American papers prevents us this week from laying before the Public any particulars relative to the Invasion of England.—It is natural to suppose, if any thing serious was meditated, of which there appears little doubt, that something decisive would have taken place ere this time.—We hope shortly to be enabled to throw some light on this interesting and important subject, and to relieve the public mind from that state of suspence which such an undertaking is calculated to excite.

Dr. Baini has discovered that the strength of gunpowder can be considerably encreased by the addition of about one fifth part in weight of pulverized quick lime. No preparation is necessary but to shake the whole together until the white colour of the lime disappears.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FOR M YEAR 24TH MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to (sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 6. Page 11.

Sec. 609. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 607. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 607. Page 117. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,
During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary courts of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the grants given by the 8th 43d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 127, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to Deliquent Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain), even in his Majesty's Regiments without limitation as to the period of place of service.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,

ANECDOTES OF BONAPARTE.

FOR the following anecdotes we are indebted to a Gentleman, lately from Paris, and who had good opportunities of ascertaining their truth. Our readers may rely on their authenticity.

The Consul is in general very cold and reserved: he is so much dreaded, that his appearance throws a gloom over the circles at St. Cloud. The Ladies sit, and all the Gentlemen stand. When card parties are formed, it is not allowed to play for money. This is a singular piece of affectation, when we consider that gambling is allowed all over the Republic, and that a duty of 20 per cent. on gambling tables is appropriated to the support of the Consul's Lady. One evening's conversazione may serve for a sample. The company was just entering on that easy chit-chat so natural to the French, and were forming into little groups for the purpose, when the Consul appeared. Hush—was every breath: every party dispersed.—The ceremonial was over. Madam Bonaparte did every thing she could to keep up conversation, but all in vain. A dry Yes or No was all she could obtain. Then the Consul took one of his General's apart and conferred long on politics. The company sat mute till eleven, when the ladies being completely tired with the scene, made signs to each other, but none had courage to break up. At length Madam put her fingers on her eyes, which the Ladies understanding as the approach of Morpheus, got up, and with many curtsies retired in silence.

One Lady had appeared in an elegant Indian muslin, which was admired by every body. Bonaparte entering, observed, with a sneer, that it was a very good morning dress. On Court day all must appear in sumptuous silks, satins, embroidery, jewels, &c. Gentlemen wear the bag, chapeau de bras, and sword.

A Gentleman received notice that he must hold himself in readiness to depart on a secret mission; but being for several reasons very averse to such an office, he wished, but knew not how, to decline it. A Lady who was daily at Court, undertook to prevail on Madam Bonaparte to deliver a letter to her husband on the subject. The Gentleman wrote his letter of thanks and of refusal, in the most submissive terms. This letter, his friend gave to the Consul's Lady, as agreed, begging her to deliver it when she could find her husband in good-humour. But having mentioned this step to a General in the immediate confidence of Bonaparte; "What have you done, Madam?" said he. "You know not what an impetious Master we have got to deal with. If your friend refuses any one post that is offered him, he is undone forever. Take my advice; lose no time to see Madam Bonaparte, and beg her to return you the letter, if not too late." The Lady accordingly did wait on Madam, who received her very graciously. "I know what you want," said she; "Here is your letter again. I could have delivered it, but I know the General too well; and I was sure, that on second thoughts, you would approve of my conduct."

One of the first noblemen in France, who had saved a very large fortune, notwithstanding his great losses in the revolution, returned to Paris from England, on being erased from the list of Emigrants. He was living in stile, dreading no evil, when all at once he received orders to retire 40 leagues from Paris, and to signify to the Grand Judge the place he chose for his residence.—He immediately waited on the Grand Judge, and expressed his astonishment at an order which he had not the least idea how he had deserved. The Grand Judge finally told him, it was because he was suspected of having a pension from England. The nobleman positively denied the charge, and wondered how it could be supposed that a man of his appearance needed to stoop for the pittance of a monthly guinea to any one. Being asked if he would give his word of honor to that effect, he readily assented; and even gave a written declaration, asserting upon his honor, that he never received any pension from England, or any where else. With this declaration, the Grand Judge ventured to wait on Bonaparte, and to remonstrate. But his Consular Majesty flying into a passion, dismissed him with this reply, "When I give orders, I expect to be obeyed." Quand je donne des ordres je veux qu'on obeisse—And obeyed he was, for the poor ex-noble was obliged to move.

One day on a hunting party, Bonaparte, offended at some trifling circumstance, struck with his whip at one of the guards de chassee, who, by the bye are generally the same that were employed in the days of Royalty—the chasseur very properly resented the insult, saying in a tone of reproach: "Jamais le ci de vant ne m'a traite comme cela," and clapping spurs to his horse, contemptuously rode past the Consul. It is added, that the latter cooling soon after, rode up to the man and apologized. For the latter part I cannot vouch.

The Consul is so gloomy and distrustful, that every one of his household dreads and hates him; while at Malmaison none of the guards or servants could pass or repass within the house, without tickets; and Madame Bonaparte, who is good natured and obliging, was applied to for those cards. But often the sentinels disputed her authority. She is treated most despotically, and never interferes in politics, but the domestics would go through fire and water for her.

EXTRAORDINARY SUCCESSION OF ILL FORTUNE.

AN unbroken series of misfortunes runs through every scene of the lives of some men: others have periodical returns of sunshine and of shade. The following anecdote, which we believe to be authentic, shows such a rapid succession of ill fortune, as is not often known. It teaches an useful lesson of patience, and its fortunate conclusion will furnish an antidote to despair.—Some time since, a respectable tradesman and ship-owner of Sunderland sailed from Hull, in one of his own ships, for Memel, where the ship was burnt. He then took passage for Leith, in a vessel which was cast away on Memel bar. He engaged another passage in a third vessel, which, to his great disappointment, sailed without him. He embarked in a fourth vessel, and arrived at Eisineur, where, owing to some accident, he was again left behind.—From Eisineur he sailed in the fifth ship, which was captured by the French, who landed him at Mendal, in Norway. Fearful of again sailing into the hands of the enemy, he applied to Captain Gunter, who generously gave him a passage in the Nautilus, which was wrecked in Filey bay. Thus, in about three months, he ran through as many adventures, and experienced as many disappointments, as are sometimes strewed over a whole life.

CURIOUS INSTANCE OF SWINDLING.

A shop-keeper in Edinburgh, having retired to his back shop, left the charge of the front apartment to a faithful dog. A genteel dressed woman soon after entered, and, without ceremony, laid hold of a parcel, which had been left to be called for by a customer. The dog, true to his charge, with as little ceremony, laid hold on the thief, who dropped the parcel, and screamed aloud. The shop-keeper instantly came forward, beat the faithful guardian of his property, released the woman, and, satisfied with some trifling question, which the put as an excuse for her call, politely apologized for the rude reception she had experienced. More civil still, observing the parcel on the floor, he requested to know whether she had dropped it. Receiving, of course, an answer in the affirmative, the parcel was politely delivered to her, received with equal politeness, and, with many expressions of thanks, the lady walked off, unmolested, with her booty.

[LONDON PAPER.]

THE following article will operate as a TONIC to the drooping mind.—"If it were necessary to find any new instance in support of the precept, that man should never despair, the history of Barthelemy would afford it. After living to the age of forty, amidst all the conveniencies and luxuries requisite to one born and educated in the first class of gentlemen; after a residence at the court of London, first as Secretary and then as Charge des Affaires for the King of France, he negociated at Basle the peace with Prussia, and was then elevated (if elevation it can be called) to a place in the Directory of the French republic. Amidst the pomp of this unhappy greatness, this miserable grandeur, he was seized on the 4th of September, 1797, by order of his colleagues, and others, and on the 8th was placed in an iron cage on a carriage something resembling a gun carriage, and was thus removed, with several other persons, in seventeen days, to Rochefort, passing the night in the worst dungeons of the towns in which they stopped.

"The next day, they were forced into the hold of a small vessel, and, when thirty six hours had elapsed since they had eaten or drank, a pail of water was let down amongst them, accompanied with two of the crew's loaves.—Barthelemy, with three others, were afterwards placed in a mere dungeon of this hold, infected with exhalations, without a hammock to lay their heads upon, though unable to keep themselves upright. Their food, during a whole voyage, which carried them across the Atlantic, was refuse biscuit, with boiled gourganes, or beans, without seasoning, and in such insufficient quantities, that, at times, when they were not effected with sickness, they felt the most excruciating torments from hunger. One of his companions, the unfortunate Desfonville, uttered such cries of rage, that, says Ramel, "we were afraid he would bite us."

"On their arrival at Cayenne, Barthelemy and his companions were confined in a prison in the dungeon of Sinnamary, each having a hammock to himself, but neither table, chair, or any piece of furniture, or utensil. Their food was prepared by a cook, taken from the house of correction, who twenty times threatened to poison them, and their bread was often too full of worms and ants to be eaten. Their days were over-run with scorpions, centipedes, gnats, musquitoes, and many other species of insects and reptiles, not excepting serpents. They were tormented also with a species of bug, called Chicha, which enters the pores of the skin, and if not carefully removed, breed there, and destroys the flesh so rapidly, as to render amputation necessary. Their whole prospect, even from the ramparts of the fort, was a vast and impenetrable forest. The mournful howlings of tygers, that came within musquet shot of the fort, the shrill and piercing screams of monkies, the discordant notes of parrots and the croaking of venomous toads, of which the fosses and the muddy banks of the river were full, rendered this scene a wilderness of horror." 'Here died the brave General Murinais, one of his companions, a man of the most accomplished character, and of a large fortune, all sacrificed in a Revolution, which he himself had promoted, in its first stages. Here "Barthelemy, tho' so fickly, and so ailing, that his existence was a miracle, in the continuance of which he had himself believed as little as his prescribers, possessed an internal principle of life and a strength of mind, which the calmness of his external appearance would scarcely have given room to suspect; but which shewed itself with energy on every occasion."

In this prison Francon de Coudray and Lafond, two of the 'deported,' were poisoned. These two victims lay in the same room to their hammocks, which were their death-beds, opposite to each other. "The cries, their tortures forced from them, re-echoed to our rooms and far beyond them. Nothing could appease their fatal vomiting. Lafond cried out with vehemence; he raised his hand towards heaven, and called aloud upon his wife and children. Their torments continued twenty-five days, at the end of which they expired;" and when the others complained to Aime, the commander, who, before the Revolution, had been a footman, he told them, "they ought to know they were not sent to Sinamary to live to eternity."

The preceding circumstances are collected from the narrative published by General Pichegru, who was transported at the same time with Barthelemy, and who with him effected an escape, of which an account was published some years since. It is sufficient to the purpose of this article to add, that on the 20th of September, 1798, one year from the commencement of this series of sufferings, Barthelemy entered the British Channel; that he was protected for some time in England; and that after being restored to his native country, he is now in one of the best situations which it affords, and may thank GOD, that his "principle of life and his strength of mind" never were subdued by despair. POETRY.

BRITAIN'S TREE OF LIBERTY.

BY MR. BRAINE, OF GREENWICH.

I sing the Tree of Liberty,
Believe me, 'tis no joke, Sir,
The best e'er found on English ground—
I mean the Tree call'd Oak, Sir;
The body fine—I do compare,
Unto our Gracious King, Sir,
The limbs so great—the Lords of State,
If I'm allow'd the thing, Sir.

The branches long—so stout and strong,
Represent the Legislature,
The leaves so gay—I'm proud to say,
The People of the Nation;
It's pond'rous root—each way doth shoot,
The body to protect, Sir;
The fibrous claws—I term the Laws,
Which some folks much neglect, Sir.

Some Scions too—of potsmous hue,
Have dar'd to grow around, Sir,
This goodly Tree of Liberty,
To stab with deadly wound, Sir;
But Providence—our great defence,
With merciful prevention,
And mighty stroke—prefer'd this Oak
And blighted their intention.

Your glasses fill—and with good will,
Each drink the following Toast, Sir,
May this Oak Tree—for ever be
Each honest Britain's Boast, Sir;
May this Tree last, without a blast,
Till time's great Revolution,
May God descend unto the end
Our King and Constitution.

WAS I RIGHT, OR WAS I NOT?

A SONG.

WAS I right, or was I not?
Tell me girls, and tell me true;
You, I mean, who've husbands got,
Was I wrong to go to sea?

No—I'm sure to die a maid
Ne'er was meant to be my lot;
Mamma said, and I obey'd,
Was I right, or was I not?

When the youth, that pleas'd my mind,
Told his love, in language sweet,
Could I see him, fond and kind,
Sigh and languish at my feet?

No, no, no—it was in vain,
Frowns and threats were quite forgot,
Soon at church I say'd his pain,
Was I right, or was I not?

This, I know, a single life
Never was design'd for me;
No, no, no—'tis nought but strife
That you surely will agree.

Girls, get married—that's your plan,
Cupid will assist the plot;
Then, like me, secure your man—
Was I right, or was I not?

Proclamation.

PETER HUNTER, Esquire,
Lieutenant Governor of His Majesty's Province of Upper-Canada, and Lieutenant Governor commanding His Majesty's Forces in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

WHEREAS the Lieutenant Governor in Council has granted Leases of several Tracts of Land, part of which was of the Reserves of the Crown, and other part was of the Lands set apart and reserved for the use of a Protestant Clergy, AND WHEREAS, upon such Leases, certain Rents were reserved to his Majesty and made payable by the Lessees, at days limited and particularly specified in each respective Lease, and the rents upon some of such Leases have already accrued due.

And whereas the Sheriffs of the several Districts of this Province have been appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to receive all Rents due or to accrue due on all such Leases, as well on the Crown as the Clergy Reserves.

And whereas in pursuance of the Commands of the Lieutenant Governor, Shedules have been transmitted to the respective Sheriffs of the different Districts of this Province; in which Shedules are particularly set forth the names and descriptions of the Lessees, together with the Concession, Township, County and District in which such Lands so held under such Leases respectively lie and are situate, with a statement also of the particular Rent reserved on every such Leafe, and the days and times on which such Rent already has accrued or will hereafter become due.

NOW THEREFORE be it known to all whom it may concern, That all and every person and persons, now holding any such Leafe or Leases as aforesaid, is and are required to make payment of the Rents, relieved and made payable, either on Leases granted of the Reserves of the Crown, or of the Reserves set apart for the use of a Protestant Clergy, to the different Sheriffs of the respective Districts within which all such Lands severally lay or are situate at the times and periods on which such Rents are reserved, in strict conformity with the covenants and stipulations entered into by the said several Leffees with his Majesty, and that in default of such payments being punctually and regularly made, his Majesty's Attorney General will be instructed forthwith to institute proceedings against every such Leffee for enforcing such payment and for refuming the Lands, in respect of which such default shall be made, into the hands of the Crown, such being the conditions upon which the Lands have been demifed, and such conditions having been particularly specified in all the Leafes which have been granted.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms at York, this fourteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and three, and in the forty-third year of his Majesty's reign.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24TH MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve as broad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorised, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return home or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

YORK:—PRINTED BY JOHN BENNETT,
BY THE AUTHORITY OF HIS EXCELLENCY PETER HUNTER ESQUIRE, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

Sec. 9. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 60. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 607. Page 172. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 609. Page 217. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

(a) This does not interfere with the power given by 55th Geo. IIId. chap. 92 § 157, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) into the Army in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

UPPER-CANADA.

Proclamation,

BY HIS EXCELLENCY

PETER HUNTER, ESQUIRE,

Lieutenant-Governor of the said Province, and Lieutenant-General Commanding His Majesty's Forces in Upper and Lower-Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS, a Proclamation was issued, bearing date the ninth day of July, in the forty first year of His Majesty's Reign, whereby the Honorable JOHN M'GILL, one of the Executive and Legislative Councils, and the Honorable DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, Esquire, one of the Executive Council, and then Speaker of the House of Assembly, were nominated and appointed Commissioners for the purpose of purchasing and distributing of Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and also for the payment of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving cultivators of Hemp in this Province, by virtue of the authority vested in the Lieutenant Governor, by a resolution in that behalf entered into by the said House of Assembly—AND WHEREAS, the absence of the said DAVID WILLIAM SMITH renders it expedient that another Commissioner, together with the said JOHN M'GILL and DAVID WILLIAM SMITH, should be appointed, for the better effectuating of the purposes aforesaid—NOW know all men, that I, PETER HUNTER, Esquire, Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, by virtue of the authority to vested in me as aforesaid, DO hereby nominate and appoint THOMAS SCOTT, Esquire, His Majesty's Attorney-General in and for the said Province, (together with the said JOHN M'GILL and the said DAVID WILLIAM SMITH) a Commissioner for the purpose of purchasing and distributing Hemp Seed gratis amongst the Farmers, and also for the payment of Premiums and Bounties to the deserving cultivators and exporters of Hemp, according to the true intent and meaning of the said resolution of the said House of Assembly.

GIVEN under my Hand and Seal at Arms, at YORK, this Second Day of March, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Three, and in the Forty-Third Year of His Majesty's Reign.

Lateſt Intelligence.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE of LORDS, Friday, Aug. 12

At half after three o'clock his Majeſty having taken his ſeat on the throne, the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod was deſired to require the attendance of the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons. The Speakers attended accordingly and read the following addreſs:

"Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"Your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the knights, citizens & burgeſſes, of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament aſſembled, have at length completed the ſupplies granted to your Majeſty for the ſervice of the preſent year—a period memorable for the events which it has produced, and awful for thoſe which may be yet to come.

"In granting thoſe ſupplies, your Majeſty's faithful Commons have conſidered that a criſis, without example, demanded unexampled efforts—and by reſolving to raiſe annually, a large proportion of the ſupplies for the current year, ſo long as the war endures, they have given to all the world a ſolemn pledge of their inflexible determination to render the public credit unaſſailable.

"They have alſo proceeded to revive the ſyſtem of your Majeſty's permanent revenue. By conſolidating the duties in each of its principal branches, they have ſimplified its operations, and at the ſame time they have endeavored to render its preſſure leſs burthenſome by regulating its mode of collection.

"The commercial intereſts of this country, to which our attention was called by your Majeſty's gracious commands at the commencement of the preſent ſeſſion, have been maturely conſidered; and meaſures have been taken for affording material accommodations and facilities to mercantile tranſactions, by rendering our principal ports free for all nations to import, depoſit and re-export their merchandize, without toll or tax, unleſs voluntarily brought into our own market for home conſumption.

"Nor have we forgotten to beſtow our earneſt and ſerious thoughts upon the ſafety and efficacy of our Church eſtabliſhment in every part of the United Kingdom. Upon this ſubject, as comprehending all that conſecrates our rational hopes, morals and policy, we have deliberated with peculiar care and anxiety: and we preſume to believe, that the important laws which have been paſſed in aid of our Church eſtabliſhment, will materially ſtrengthen and gradually extend its influence thro' ſucceeding ages.

"But, Sire, theſe were cares and objects belonging to times of Peace. Wiſe, politic and deſirable as they might be, nevertheleſs, called upon now by your Majeſty's commands, we have, without heſitation, turned all our thoughts and efforts to meet the renewal of war, perſuaded that your Majeſty's paternal care preſerved to us the bleſſings of peace ſo long as they could be retained with ſafety and honor, and confident that ſince they have been openly attacked, and the juſtice of our cauſe has been made manifeſt to the world, our appeal to arms will not be in vain.

"This war we ſee and know to be a war of no ordinary character. We feel that our religion, laws and liberties, & exiſtence as a nation are put to the iſſue, and we have prepared for the conteſt accordingly. Beſides the ſupplies of money, we have augmented, beyond all former example, every ſpecies of Military force known in this country—we have met rebellion with prompt and neceſſary laws—and for the defence of a Sovereign endeared to us by long experience of his Royal virtues, and commanding not allegiance alone, but our hearts and affections, the whole nation has riſen in arms.

"May then the God of our fathers go forth with us to battle, and bleſs our cauſe, and eſtabliſh with Victory that Throne which we revere as the bulwark of our liberties; and ſo thrill other nations at length, learn that a free, valiant and united people is inconquerable, and able to ſet laſting bounds to an empire of violence, perfidy and unrelenting ambition.

"To the Bills which we now humbly preſent to your Majeſty, your Commons, with all humility, entreat your Majeſty's Royal Aſſent."

His Majeſty then, in a firm and audible tone, addreſſed the following ſpeech to the Lords and Commons aſſembled:—

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I am at length enabled, by the ſtate of public buſineſs, to releaſe you from your long and laborious attendance in Parliament.

In cloſing the ſeſſion, I have the utmoſt ſatisfaction in expreſſing the ſtrong ſenſe which I entertain of that zealous and unwearied regard for the welfare and honor of your country, which has diſtinguiſhed all your proceedings.

During the continuance of peace, your conduct manifeſted the juſt view which you had taken of our actual ſituation, and of the dangers againſt which you were peculiarly called upon to provide; and ſince the recurrence of hoſtilities you have diſplayed an energy & promptitude which have never been ſurpaſſed in the means which you have ſupplied for the defence of the country, and for the vigorous proſecution of the war.

Your proceedings, in conſequence of the late treaſonable and attrocious occurrences in Ireland, will, I truſt, have the effect of preventing any further interruption of its internal tranquility, and of convincing my loyal ſubjects in that part of the United Kingdom, that they may confidently rely on that protection to which they are ſo juſtly entitled.

In the midſt of the deliberations, which were occaſioned by the immediate exigency of the times, you have not been unmindful of other objects, to which I had directed your attention; and I have great ſatisfaction in obſerving, that you have completed a ſyſtem for conſolidating the duties, and regulating the collection and management of the ſeveral branches of the revenue; and that you have adopted meaſures which are calculated to afford material accommodation to the mercantile part of the community, and to encourage and extend the navigation and commerce of my dominions.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I return you my particular thanks for the liberality and readineſs with which you have granted the ſupplies for the public ſervice.

It is painful to me to reflect, that the means of neceſſary exertion cannot be provided without heavy preſſure upon my faithful people: But I cannot ſufficiently applaud that wiſdom and fortitude which have led you to overlook conſiderations of temporary convenience, for the purpoſe of preventing a large accumulation of debt during the continuance of the war. You may be aſſured that there ſhall be as ſtrict an attention to economy on my part as may be conſiſtent with thoſe preparations and exertions which will be beſt calculated to fruſtrate the deſigns and to weaken the power of the enemy, by whoſe arrogant pretenſions and reſtleſs ambition alone theſe ſacrifices have been rendered unavoidable.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I am fully perſuaded that, during the ceſſation of your Parliamentary duties, you will continue to be actuated by the ſame ſpirit which has been uniformly diſplayed in your councils. It will be your duty to aſſiſt in carrying into effect thoſe important meaſures which your wiſdom has matured for the defence and ſecurity of the Realm; and particularly to give the moſt beneficial directions to that ardour and enthuſiaſm in the cauſe of their country which animate all claſſes of my people.

Juſtly ſenſible of the ſtate of preeminence, in which it has pleaſed the Almighty to ſupport us for ſo many ages, amongſt the nations of Europe, I rely with confidence, that, under the continuance of his Divine Protection, exertions of my brave and loyal ſubjects will prove to the enemy and to the world, that an attempt to ſubvert the independence, or impair the power of the United Kingdom, will terminate in the diſgrace and ruin of thoſe by whom it may be made, and that my people will find an ample reward for all their ſacrifices, in an undiſturbed enjoyment of that freedom and ſecurity, which, by their patriotiſm and valour, they will have preſerved and enſured to themſelves and their poſterity.

Then the LORD CHANCELLOR, by his Majeſty's command, ſaid:—

My Lords and Gentlemen,

It is his Majeſty's Royal will and pleaſure, That this Parliament be prorogued to Thurſday the ſixth of October next, to be then here holden; and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued to Thurſday the ſixth day of October next.

LONDON, AUGUST 13.

Diſpatches have been received at the Admiralty, which ſtate the following important particulars reſpecting the ſtrong head at Dover off Boulogne.—Six gun-boats came out of Boulogne harbour full of troops. They were attacked by the Sulphur boats, who drove them back into the harbour with great ſlaughter. Some of the boats are ſaid to be ſunk. In the mean time other boats full of troops, came out of the harbour, and attacked another of our veſſels. They were alſo forced under the guns of the battery, with the loſs of a great number of men. We conſider this as an attempt ordered to be made by the French government, to aſcertain whether the gun-boats could reſiſt our ſhips of war of a ſmall ſize.—The ſpecimen we have affforded them will not, we ſhould think, diſpoſe them to make another ſuch trial.

Great activity reigns in the Cabinet of Vienna. Extenſive preparations are making, and it is believed "that the government are negociating with certain great powers, upon objects of the higheſt importance."

AUGUST 19.

The North of Ireland continues to be perfectly tranquil, and the ſovereign of Belfaſt has publiſhed a proclamation for taking off ſome of the reſtrictions he had found it expedient to impoſe.—He confirms the opinion we have invariably expreſſed, that the Rebels are connected with French emiſſaries.

An encampment of 15000 men is to be formed near Limerick.

Preparations for an expedition in the North Seas are now making in ſeveral of our ports. Gun boats are equipping at Sheerneſs, which are to aſſemble in the Downs; and it is ſaid they will be commanded by Sir Home Popham, who will alſo have the ſuperintendance of the embarkation of troops.

Government has ordered lines of defence to be drawn on the eaſtern ſide of London. Platforms are immediately to be conſtructed by a very conſiderable number of artificers, capable of mounting 108 pieces of cannon of 24 pounders, and 156 of 12 pounders.—The lines and platforms will, it is ſuppoſed, be completed in the courſe of one month.

Some of our cruizers on Tueſday looked into Dunkirk. The preparations in that port were confined to the equipment of a few privateers. The troops, it was ſaid, had ſuddenly been withdrawn from the coaſt, and were, it was reported, concentrating in the neighbourhood of Paris.

The Eaſt India Company have made a patriotic offer, which has been accepted by Government. They are to furniſh ſix ſhips completely manned, for the ſervice of the ſtate.

The following Reſolutions were entered into by the Company at Lloyd's, [illegible] Eſq. was Chairman:—

"RESOLVED, That to give more effect and energy to the meaſures adopted by government, for the defence of our liberties, our lives and property, to add weight to thoſe perſonal exertions, we are all readily diſpoſed to contribute, it behoves us to hold out every encouragement to our fellow ſubjects, who may be in any way inſtrumental in repelling or annoying our implacable foe, and to prove to them that we are ready to drain both our purſes and our veins in the great cauſe which imperiouſly calls on us to unite the duties of loyalty and patriotiſm, with the ſtrongeſt efforts of zealous exertion.

RESOLVED, That to alleviate the efforts of our defenders by ſea and land, it is expedient to raiſe, by the patriotiſm of the community at large, a ſuitable fund for their comfort and relief—for the purpoſe of aſſuaging the anguiſh of their wounds, or palliating, in ſome degree, the more weighty misfortune of the loſs of limbs—of alleviating the diſtreſs of the widow and orphan—of ſmoothing the brow of ſorrow for the fall of their deareſt relatives, the props of unhappy indigence or helpleſs age—and of granting pecuniary rewards, or honourable badges of diſtinction, for ſucceſful exertions of valour or merit:

RESOLVED, That a ſubſcription, embracing all the objects in the foregoing reſolution, be now opened; and to take an example to the public bodies throughout the united kingdoms and its dependencies, and to our fellow ſubjects of every claſs and denomination, that, independently of our individual contributions, the ſum of twenty thouſand pounds three per cent. Conſolidated Annuities, part of the funded property of this ſociety, ſhall be appropriated to this purpoſe."

An Engliſh paper in ſpeaking of the promiſing harveſt, ſays, the crops of grain in Yorkſhire and the adjoining parts of Nottinghamſhire, are abundantly great; and the wheat and rye in great forwardneſs.

The Invaſion of England.

The following is the opinion of the famous Gen. Dumouriez upon this ſubject:

"Should this expedition, (ſays the Gen.) be unſucceſsful, which is very poſſible; ſhould the invincible Britiſh fleet gain a deciſive victory over the French, Spaniſh and Dutch fleets, whether combined or ſeparate; ſhould the Engliſh nation, proud and energetic as the French, equally animated by patriotiſm and national diſlike, repulſe the French army ſoon after it was landed; ſhould they deſtroy it, force it to re-embark with loſs, and cut off its communication with the ſea; ſhould they weaken, harraſs, or reduce it to famine, and render this great expedition abortive, which on a large ſcale can only be attempted, and may partially, or altogether, fail in the execution, then France is totally ruined; all her laurels are withered; her allies will abandon her, and turn againſt her; the other powers of Europe will attack her on every ſide; ſhe will have loſt the power of her warriors and the reputation of her arms; ſhe will be without money, and internal diſcord will complete her deſtruction.

"It is at Paris her diſappointed and indignant ſoldiery will ſeek the rewards and plunder promiſed them in London. The Generals themſelves will either be the firſt victims of the execrable fury of the troops, or will partake of their indignation, and then revolt."

From Madeira.

Capt. Woodward of the brig Joſeph, arrived at Charleſton, left Madeira on the 8th of Auguſt. On the 27th July a fleet of merchantmen, in ten days from London, arrived there—and on the day capt. W. sailed another fleet, under convoy of a 44 gun frigate, arrived from Cork, in 12 days passage. Capt. W. was informed by the officers of both fleets, that Lord Nelson had captured a French frigate of 34 guns, coming down the Mediterranean, bound to Brest, having on board eight hundred thousand dollars.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.

By the arrival last evening of the ship Merchant, capt. Lord, in 42 days from Liverpool, we are put in poffeffion of London dates to the 29th of July.—A ſerious rebellion broke out in Dublin on the 23d of July. Early in the evening inflammatory proclamations were diſtributed in every part of the city, calling on the people to unite in oppoſition to the government, and about 8 o'clock the mob aſſembled and forced their way into the Lord Mayor's houſe and ſecured all the arms and pikes that were there. About ten o'clock a general engagement took place, and laſted until four the next morning, when the inſurgents were at length defeated, and 300 made priſoners.—D. E. Poſt.

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1803.

 The CHIEF JUSTICE has appointed the Sittings for the Home Diſtrict, for Monday, the twenty-fourth day of October inſtant.

The late hour at which we received our American Papers, prevents us from making very copious extracts for this day's Gazette.—They contain a variety of important matter, but it does not appear that any improvements of moment had been made by the French towards invaſion, at the date of our laſt accounts from Europe.—We have however, ſelected as much of the moſt intereſting parts as the limits of our time would admit of.—

☞ The Printer begs leave to inform the Public that the Printing Office is now removed to the two ſtory Houſe next to Mr. Henderſon's Brewery; where the buſineſs in future, will be carried on in all its branches with accuracy and diſpatch.—Advertiſements, Letters, Communications, &c. &c. addreſſed to the Printer and left at St. George & Co's. or Schofield & Muſley's Stores will meet with due attention.

ANECDOTE OF SIR P. SIDNEY.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY was conſidered as one of the brighteſt ornaments of Queen Elizabeth's court: his virtues as a man could only be equalled by his abilities as a general; and he was at once the pride of his family and an honour to human nature; and the magnanimity of his conduct in the battle near Zutphen, was a complete diſplay of diſintereſted valour. He had (ſays the hiſtorian) two horſes killed under him, and whilſt mounting the third, was deſperately wounded in the thigh by a muſket-ball, which ſhattered the bone in a moſt dreadful manner, and gave him the moſt inconceivable torture.—In this ſituation he returned to the camp (which was about a mile and a half diſtant), tortured with agony, exhauſted with fatigue, and abſolutely parched with thirſt. His firſt requeſt to thoſe around him, upon his arrival at his tent, was a glaſs of water, and even that was with difficulty procured; at length it came, and juſt as the generous hero raiſed it to his lips, a dying ſoldier, borne between his comrades, was carried cloſe to where the general lay. The valued beverage caught his languid eye, which, with an anxious gaze, was fixed upon it. The noble Sidney ſaw the wiſhful look, and, ſtretching forth his feeble trembling hand, ſaid, "Take it, my friend; thy wants are more preſſing than mine." Immediately after the memorable deed he was removed to Arnheim, and hopes were entertained of his recovery; but the ſurgeons not being able to extract the ball, a mortification ſoon took place, and he calmly prepared his mind for that event which was to terminate his career of earthly glory, and crown his virtue with immortal honours. A few minutes before his death, he called his brother to the bed-ſide, and preſſing him affectionately by the hand, took leave of him in the following affecting terms: "Love my memory; cheriſh my friends, for their fidelity to me may convince you they deſerve it; but above all, govern your will and affections by the will and words of your Creator: in me behold the ends of this world, and all its vanities."

(BY AUTHORITY.)

MUTINY ACT,

FOR THE FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 809. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 809. Page 120. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 807. Page 117. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During abscondment for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 18. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

---

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 137, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

COUNCIL CHAMBER, 10th Nov. 1803.

UPPER-CANADA.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council, hereby gives Notice, to all whom it may concern, That the Executive Government of this Province will not allow or admit that certain persons now claiming right to the soil of Grand Isle, have any claim or title whatsoever thereto—And that the said Executive Government will cause measures forthwith to be pursued, for the purpose of recovering the said Island from those who have possessed themselves of the same.

LONDON, Aug. 3.

YORK COUNTY MEETING.

The most numerous and respectable meeting of the County of York, ever known, was held on Thursday last, when an address was agreed to unanimously, to be presented to the King, assuring his Majesty of the firm support of the County of York, in the present crisis. Mr. Stanhope spoke in a style of such plain good old English, that we must ask, what can be the reason that you refuse the services of the Heir Apparent? Is he too old? Is he too young? Did you make him a Colonel twenty two years ago by way of douceur; as a little pecuniary aid? Is he not known to be in the very prime of life; at the very period man is capable of the utmost energy? I expect from Ministers the reason he is thus treated, and to tell the country.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in answer, said, "No man is more ready to bear attestation to the feelings so worthy of the rank and character of the illustrious personage alluded to, than I am. Having made this declaration, I must here pause, and declare that nothing more of commands of the King, and the united authority of this House, shall in future ever compel me to say one word more on the subject."

Mr. Calcraft (after some observations on the utility of a Military Council, alluding to the subject of the Prince of Wales) said, The Prince of Wales has been a Colonel in the army from the year 1802. His brother is a Field-Marshal and Commander in Chief. Three younger brothers are Lieutenant Generals—And you leave the Heir Apparent to the Monarchy, to fight for that Crown he is one day to wear, as a Colonel of a Regiment, under the command of a Major-General, his own Equerry!

No reply was made to this, and Mr. Fox's motion for an address for a Military Council, was negatived 63 to 38. The cause assigned by the opposers of the motion, was, that it was an interference with the Executive prerogative; and an indirect attack upon the management of the army, as directed by the Duke of York.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

AUGUST 2, 1803.

PRINCE OF WALES.

In a debate on the subject of the national defence, Colonel Crawford was surprized Ministers had not had recourse to such a measure of defence as the service of the Prince of Wales would be, which he had offered, but which he understood they had declined. He also proposed that a General Council of War should be appointed.

Mr. Barham expressed his astonishment that Ministers should have advised his Majesty to decline the services of the Heir Apparent, for whose birthright, combined with his own independence, we have now to contend.

Mr. Tyrrwhitt.—Mr. Speaker, An illustrious personage, in whose family I have the honor to be placed, having been so directly alluded to, I can no longer be silent. The Prince, from the very commencement of the war, has manifested an anxious wish to be placed in any military situation to which his Majesty might be pleased to call him, which wishes have been made known to his Majesty's Ministers. I esteem it my duty, Sir, here to declare (deprecating any imputation which might be thrown upon a character of such value to us all to preserve unsullied) that if the services of the illustrious personage alluded to have been rejected, I have proof the fault does not lay at the door of the Commander in Chief.

Mr. Chapman (a Welsh Member) said, nothing could invigorate the inhabitants of Wales so much as being, as in times of old, headed by such an illustrious Prince.

Mr. Fox (alluding to the subject of the Prince of Wales) asked, what can be the reason that you refuse the services of the Heir Apparent? Is he too old? Is he too young? Did you make him a Colonel twenty two years ago by way of douceur; as a little pecuniary aid? Is he not known to be in the very prime of life; at the very period man is capable of the utmost energy? I expect from Ministers the reason he is thus treated, and to tell the country.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in answer, said, "No man is more ready to bear attestation to the feelings so worthy of the rank and character of the illustrious personage alluded to, than I am. Having made this declaration, I must here pause, and declare that nothing more of commands of the King, and the united authority of this House, shall in future ever compel me to say one word more on the subject."

Mr. Calcraft (after some observations on the utility of a Military Council, alluding to the subject of the Prince of Wales) said, The Prince of Wales has been a Colonel in the army from the year 1802. EAST INDIA NEWS.

BOMBAY, Feb. 19.

On Thursday last, a most dreadful alarming fire broke out in our crowded and popular Bazar, the ravages of which though it is not yet quite extinguished, it is impossible to relate:—the extent of the devastation may be somewhat conjectured by those who are acquainted with Bombay when we say, that about three-fourths of the Bazar are destroyed, including perhaps, 1000 houses, and when the nature of these dwellings is considered, having many families under one roof, the number of the unfortunate sufferers must be proportionably great. We are at a loss to state with certainty where the fire originated—it is said, to have been in a stable on the morning of Thursday, where some valuable horses became its first victims—unfortunately the wind continued rather high the whole day, which increased the flames in the progress of its direction with astonishing rapidity, and so great and violent was the conflagration at sunset, that the destruction of every house in the fort was to be apprehended.—All the records and papers in the secretary's office were early removed, and the houses of business followed the example—indeed every inhabitant, however remote, took the precaution to remove his furniture and effects.

Beyond the Bazar the flames extended to the King's barracks, which are mostly destroyed. The custom-house also is in ruins, proceeding from those to the range of houses called the Tank Barracks, where it was stopt by the prudent precaution of firing artillery to beat down the contiguous buildings. During the whole continuance of this awful destruction every effort was used to oppose its progress, but the fury of the flames aided by the wind, rendered all attempts vain.

The utmost exertion to stop the progress of the flames proving of no avail, nothing remained but to allow it to take its course; every mind viewing at awful distance the prospect which threatened to involve the garrison, and every soul within it, in one common ruin, from the course in which the wind drove the conflagration being in an immediate line with the arsenal; for however secure the magazines might be from their construction, and in spite of the reliance all placed in the precautions which the established activity of the commissariate department, we were assured would adopt to provide against the impending destruction, one could not divest oneself from that serious contemplation which the dreadful scene irresistibly produced; for every hope to avert the progress of the all destroying flames by any human means had been denied us, and our reliance depended upon the intervention of Providence alone; at about midnight, this general gloom was dissipated—the wind abated, the conflagration wholly decreased in the quarter whence alone the danger threatened, and receding from the arsenal, every mind became calmed.

Vice Admiral Rainer, whose humane zeal led him immediately to the spot, with all the captains and officers of his squadron, from whose active interference in assisting and directing the bold and spirited efforts of their crews, much of the wide spreading calamity was prevented; General Nicoll also attended, and assiduously directed the exertion of the military to the same end; while every officer and gentleman of the settlement contributed their generous aid on this distressing occasion; and we are truly concerned to add, that Captain Mackintosh of the country service, in conducting one of the engines to a particular spot, with Captains Elliot and Lane, was overwhelmed by a falling wall, which broke his leg and arm, but of his recovery we are truly rejoiced to hear there is the greatest hope. Some of the seamen, we are also informed, have been buried in the ruins; but the particulars are not yet fully ascertained. Such was the active ardor displayed on the first alarm by the fire bell and the beat of the drum, that every one flew to lend his assistance in extinguishing the flames; but the dryness of the season, the narrowness of the streets, and above all, the very combustible materials of which the houses in that quarter of the town are constructed, aided by a strong wind from N. W. rendered all endeavours vain to stop the progress of the flames, though they succeeded in moderating their fury.—We cannot pretend to describe the horror, dismay and consternation which pervaded the unhappy sufferers—thousands of poor natives, endeavouring to save their little property, were seen thronging in all directions, bewailing their unhappy fate, and thrown at once, destitute of home and shelter, were obliged to seek the repose of exhausted nature, in the streets or fields.

The damages sustained by individuals some of whom were opulent native merchants, cannot well be estimated; but we trust that this event will not long be remembered to their prejudice in the prosecution of their business and that no more material, that it may tend to reconcile the mind to such arrangements respecting this extensive bazar as shall the most effectually guard against the recurrence of so dreadful a calamity.

New York, September 18.

A fleet of 18 sail of English vessels, under convoy of the Blanche frigate, having on board the 25th regiment, arrived at Barbadoes on the 28th August. On the 30th an expedition left there for Demerara under the command of Lieutenant General Grinfield and Commodore Sir Samuel Hood.

An ex-priest, named Thuring, died lately at St. Servan, whose life had been marked by an adventure that might appear extraordinary, even to such as read only romances, and see only Melodrames. Thuring had been, on his return to France, with his wife and two children, and a considerable property, which he had acquired in New England, but suffered shipwreck within sight of the coast of Britany, and swam a-shore alone. Not doubting that the sea, which he saw covered with the ruins of his fortune, had also swallowed up his wife and children, he battened to bury his despair in a monastery which attracted his notice. His penitence discovered in him some talents for pulpit, and sent him on a mission to preach in the neighbouring cities and villages. He was preaching one day, precisely the same, on which five years before he had suffered shipwreck, in the city of Oroise, on the instability of human affairs, a text which gave him an opportunity of quoting the tale of his own misfortunes as an example. He had scarcely finished his interesting picture, when a female who had listened with particular attention, screamed and fainted. Being removed into security, she recovered just as the sermon had ended, and the first object she perceived was father Thuring, who attributing her a visit. The female was his wife, whom some fishermen had bro't off the rock when the vessel sunk.

The husband retained his cowl, the wife took the veil in a neighbouring convent, and both found, in religion, consolation which prolonged their existence.—London paper.

When the fleet left the West Indies an expedition was gone against Martinique, but a reinforcement was daily expected from England, there was no doubt but that last event would take place immediately: the fleet had collected a large army of veterans from the different English Islands who are certainly employed at this time in reducing the Dutch possessions in that quarter; Demerara will be one of the first that will fall an easy conquest as well as Essequibo, &c. &c.

A late London Magazine contains the following melancholy account of a dreadful explosion by Powder.

"An explosion of several barrels of gun powder, lately took place at Inverness, Scotland, which was attended with very serious consequences. Not a single house escaped its effects in a greater or lesser degree. The houses next adjoining were razed to the very foundation, others were entirely unroofed and the walls drawn in and the windows shattered in a thousand pieces! Several persons were blown away! among whom were the two Miss Frasers, as they passed along the street, and three women and two children were buried in the ruins of one house. The materials of the house which contained the powder having been blown to an immense height in every direction, fell with dreadful violence and a great number of people! The roofs of houses at a considerable distance were also greatly damaged, and the shock was felt for many miles round the town."

SHERIDAN'S ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

Our King! our Country! and our God!

"My brave all-ciates—partners of my toil, my feelings, and my fame!—can words add vigour to the VIRTUOUS ENERGIES which inspire your hearts?—NO—YOU have judged as I have, the folhies of the crafty plea by which these bold INVADERS would delude you.—Your generous spirit has compared, as mine has, the motives which in a war like this, can animate their minds, and ours.—THEY, by a strange frenzy driven! fight for power, for plunder, and extended rule—we, for our country, our altars, and our homes.—THEY follow an ADVENTURER, whom they have tried obey a power which they hate—we love a monarch whom we love, a God whom we adore.—Where'er they move in anger, desolation tracks their progress!—Where'er they pause in amity, affliction mourns their friendship!—They boast, they come but to improve our state, enlarge our thoughts, and free us from the yoke of error!—Yes—they will give enlightened freedom to our minds, who are themselves the slaves of passion, avarice, and prides!—They offer us their protection!—Vile protection of ushers, give to lambs—covering and devouring them!—They call on us to barter all of good we have inherited and proved, for the desperate chance of something better which they promise.—Be our plain answer this: The throne WE honor is the PEOPLE'S CHOICE—the laws we reverence are our brave father's legacy—the faith we follow teaches us to live in bonds of charity with all mankind, and die with hopes of bliss beyond the grave. Tell your invaders this, and tell them too, we seek no change; and least of all, such change as they would bring us.

"R. B. SHERIDAN."

FROM JAMAICA.

Kingston, July 30.

Yesterday arrived at Port Royal, his Majesty's ship Vanguard, of 74 guns, Captain Waller, with her prize Le Duquesne, of 74 guns, captured on St. Domingo, the 25th inst. after a chase of 22 hours, and a short action; in which one seaman was killed and one wounded on board the Vanguard. A Lieutenant, a Prussian young man, was fortunately the only one hurt in boarding our the boats to take possession. Le Duquesne sailed from Cape Francois in company with the Duguay Trouin, of 74 guns; came out of Cape Francois in a heavy squall, 28 Sepes of sail sailing to France; but when the squall cleared up they were discovered by our squadron; and when the Vanguard left the west, the Elephant, of 74 guns, was engaged with the Duguay Trouin.

The French naval force at Cape Francois the 25th, was composed of the following ships:—

ships.	guns.	commanders.
Le Duguy Trouin	74	Lt. Lamarre Tavelle.
Le Duquesne, (taken)	74	Com. Rosnegal.
La Surveillante,	50	Com. Serre.
Le Guerrier,	50	Capt. Boisnard.
La Clorinde,	44	Capt. Bilard.
La Vilaut,	40	Capt. Manlon.
La Valeur,	16	Capt. Fayet.
Le Cerf,	14	Capt. Balon.

Four schooners, of 14 and 10 guns, and two privateers, of 22 guns each.

A flag of truce arrived yesterday at Port Royal, in the French schooner Deux Amis, from Port au Prince. A deputation from the principal planters and merchants of that place arrived in her, for the purpose of waiting on his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, to represent their miserable situation to him, and to request that he would either take measures to possess himself of that place, or permit the wretched inhabitants to take an asylum here, being in a state of absolute starvation, and seemingly abandoned to their fate by their mother country.

Jacquemel, Aux Cayes, and Port au-Prince, appear to have been deserted.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general,

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 to 14. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 7. Page 24. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is empowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 69. Page 108. Persons harbouring, concealing, or aiding Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 80. Page 124. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

Sec. 80. Page 121.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, (to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, August 28.

The funds yesterday experienced a trivial advance, in consequence of a very prevalent rumour, that another revolution had been effected in Paris. It was stated, that the Raisonable, of 64 guns, was boarded off Goree, by a Dutch officer, who informed Captain Hotham, that Gen. Moreau, and the greater part of the army in the neighbourhood of Paris, had hoisted the Royal Standard, and dissolved the Consular government. Capt. Hotham sent the Jackall gunbrig off with the intelligence, and on Friday evening returned himself to the Downs. The communication in question was doubtless made to Capt. Hotham, and derived some degree of credit from the previous knowledge of the state of parties, and of public opinion in France.—Should such an event, however, have taken place, it is strange that the account should first have reached this country by the circuitous route of Holland, or that Gen. Moreau should allow public report to anticipate the communication, which, it is reasonable to suppose, he would have made to the French Princes, had he atchieved the important service ascribed to him.

The rumour adds, that after Moreau had declared against Bonaparte, and had been joined by the troops and generals in Paris, deposed the three Consuls, & proclaimed the abolition of the consular government; he immediately published an address to the people, in which after enumerating the acts of ambition and cruelty committed by Bonaparte, he invited them to return to that monarchical system under which alone they can expect permanent prosperity and repose.

That Bonaparte, fall when he will, and that he will fall we have no doubt, will sink unmourned and unlamented, we believe; that the people of France would willingly return to the ways of monarchy was strongly suspected.

NEW-YORK, September 21.

A number of young English ladies who had been at boarding school at Rouen, were prevented embarking from Calais on their return; the First Consul desiring that they might be detained till the English government sent back Mister and Miss Lapagerie nephew and niece to Madame Bonaparte, who are prisoners in England.

Sixteen transports had arrived at the Motherbank from Alexandria, via Malta and Gibraltar, with the 8th, 23d, 25th and 28th regiment, and the 26th of dragoons.

Schimmelpennink, it was said, was to be placed at the head of the Batavian government.

Accounts from Copenhagen stated that the Danish court had directed its minister at London to protest against any Danish vessels being brought into English ports.

Signals were established along the coast of England between the forces on shore and the ships of war, by which means immediate notice could be given of an enemy's approach. Chains of signal posts were erected to establish communication, and the steeples of churches were converted into signal towers.

A squadron, consisting of the Kent, Donegal, Superb, Triumph, Monmouth, Gibraltar, Agincourt, Belleisle, and Renown, ships of the line, the Medusa, Amphion, and Termagant frigates, and the Weasel gun-brig, were cruising off Toulon, and every day within two miles of the enemy's fleet, consisting of nine sail of the line and five frigates, one of them a first rate. Lord Nelson had joined them in the Amphion, and was to hoist his flag in the Renown.

October 7.

London dates to the 5th of September are received. It does not appear that any thing of moment had transpired since our last accounts from that quarter. The communication between Calais and Dover having been shut for some time, nothing with certainty had or could be ascertained respecting the continental powers. Private letters however from France, chiefly from the towns on the coast of the neighbourhood of Calais, state that great exertions are making there to place the navy establishment on a respectable footing. Four sail of the line, of at least 74 guns, were on the stocks in the dock-yard of that place, and the keels of half a dozen large ships had been ordered to be laid down at Toulon. Report says, that France has consented to withdraw her troops from the borders of the Elbe and the Weser. Letters of marque and reprisal were expected to be issued by the British Government against Spain every day. Ireland continues quiet, and every precaution is taken to guard against the disaffected.

There are now building in France, Holland, on the Elbe and Weser, four thousand flat-bottomed boats, for the purpose of the invasion of England:—These boats are built on three or four different constructions, but all calculated to draw as little water as possible. There is one kind rigged into brigs, carrying from 4 to 6 guns, 18 and 24 pounders, besides a number of swivels. Another kind without any deck, carrying one 18 pounder forward, and another aft, rigged into a lugger—and another kind with upwards of 100 feet keel, but built flat like a skiff, or batteau. These are to carry cavalry and artillery.

BOSTON, October 8.

European Affairs.—The Minerva, Capt. Clements, from London, has furnished papers three days later than before received; but no articles of very interesting news. The threatened invasion of Great Britain appeared to occupy all the attention of English politicians.

At our last dates the atmosphere of the North of Europe was far from clear but whether the appearances were merely evanescent, or the storm of war were brewing, was uncertain. We still retain the opinion, that the Northern Powers will not join Great Britain against France. They are too jealous of the maritime superiority of England, to wish to strengthen her. The rumour of an offered alliance of Russia had subsided; and the so much talked of Russian squadron was quietly pursuing its voyage of discipline. It is said, in a Paris paper of some authority, and of a recent date, that France had empowered Russia and Prussia to act as mediators between her and England; and that they had accepted the appointment. How far the refusal of Great Britain (and she must refuse them if they are not of a nature to prescribe limits to the inordinate ambition of France) to accept their mediatorial propositions, will influence their future measures, time must determine. Russia is said to have offered a project for the guarantee of Malta.

The armed myriads of France appeared in constant motion in various parts of the Republic. It is very evident the meant to strike home-strokes somewhere.—Besides England and Ireland, Egypt, Gibraltar, and Malta, have been named as the suppositious objects of attack. A considerable force was in the vicinity of Jersey and Guernsey, which it was thought would probably receive the first onset of the Gallic legions.—The First Consul, in one of his replies to his addressors, having declared, they "should form a buttress of a bridge to England."—We do not think, while Lord Nelson remains in the Mediterranean with the strong fleet he now commands, that an expedition will proceed for Egypt from any of the southern parts of France.—The French have experienced his vigilance and activity: And Gibraltar and Malta are strong fortresses, calculated to bid defiance to any thing which can be brought against them. We, therefore, are of opinion, Bonaparte will confine his measures to an attack on the British Isles.—He has given the challenge, and it has been accepted.

Great Britain presents one vast field of bayonets and lances; whilst her coast is surrounded with mounted cannon and floating castles. To the numerous and varied preparations for defence and offence, fifteen hundred gunboats and batteaux had been added, which, under the direction of Lord Keith and Sir Sidney Smith, were stationed on the English coast opposite France and Holland—in which an army of sea-fencibles were daily exercised; and which were destined to meet the French flotillas on their passage, and to try the true of war on the favourite element of Britain. The men in arms in the British Isles were estimated at nearly one million: This may be exaggeration; but it is fact, on the 26th August, the military corps which had volunteered their services were so numerous, that the King, by proclamation, had suspended the act for training and exercising the population of the Kingdom; and the offers of several corps had been refused; those corps have already exceeded the amount of six times the militia.—These volunteer corps were independent of the regulars, militia, and army of reserve. We mention it, as an instance of zeal, that some of the inland parishes had resolved, if musquets could not be furnished them in season, to take the field against the French armed with long pitch forks. If reliance may be placed on addresses, solemn resolutions, voluntary offers of service, and real sacrifice of property at the altar of patriotism, England and Scotland may be said to be united to a man in the resolution vigorously to oppose and chastise their threatening invaders; if not to spread, in their turn, the terrors of invasion in France.—In this resolution Christians and Jews, tories and whigs, loyalists and oppositionists, high and low, rich and poor, seemed cordially combined; and the only contest appeared to be, who should be foremost in exhibitions of unequivocal evidence of the sincerity of their professions.—The language of the people too, appeared to have acquired a new tone; and all the addresses, resolutions, harangues, and songs, were in a language unusually elevated and energetic.—The noblest feelings of a great and mighty people, had been roused with a warmth and zeal equal to the subjects that inspired them—public safety and national glory.—The "nation of shop-keepers" had become a nation of soldiers.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

On Saturday, about two o'clock, an accident happened, which, for a time, threatened the destruction of that magnificent and venerable structure, Westminster Abbey. The square tower in the centre of the cross aisles, over that part of the choir which is between the pulpit and the altar, was discovered to be in flames; this part of the roof, which is flat, supported by braces of timber and plaister, most curiously gilt, was in a short time in a blaze. From the great height it was impossible to carry water speedily to it; to obviate this difficulty the soldiers and volunteers ranged themselves from the Abbey to the water side, and a number of buckets were procured, which they filled, and handed from one to another, and afterwards raised to the top by means of hoses. The fall of the melted lead, and of the half burned timber, was most tremendous, and would soon have laid the whole choir in ashes but for the exertions of the engines, which arrived in time to play upon and extinguish the burning wood as it fell, and we are happy to state that the organ and the choir, between it and the pulpit, and the monuments in general, have escaped with very little damage, except what the water from the engines may effect. We were concerned to observe the sad and rapid effect of the torrents of water which the engines, stationed without to supply those within, occasioned to the floor, which was presently sunk a foot or more over a considerable part of the cross aisles, and even in the nave, the sandy soil in which the bodies are interred, from never having been settled for centuries, settled so much, that it will be well if some of the piers, against which deep graves have been constructed, do not settle and damage many parts of this fine and venerable building. The tremendous fall of the burning wood and materials, the loud and confused noise of the engines and people, amidst the monuments of mortality which we have been so long accustomed to contemplate in silence, excited the most uncommon and awful ideas.

Detachments of horse and foot soldiers were timely ordered out, and kept the avenues clear; and the St. Margaret's and St. John's Association were mustered, and did duty at the doors and within side the church; they were of the most essential service, in preserving the monuments from damage, by persons prefling against or climbing on them.

By six o'clock the fire was completely extinguished, without extending to any other part of the roof or building, except the top of the tower in which it began. We are much surprised to observe, that none of the large timbers which fell, struck the screens which part the choir from the cross aisles, and they remained to the last nearly unhurt. One of the firemen had a narrow escape of a fall from the top of the tower, as he was employed with a hook detaching the burning wood. The flames ascended a great height above the tower, and soon attracted the notice of spectators in every part of the town.

Among those who shewed the greatest interest were the Duke of York, who rode down from the Horse Guards, dismounted in King-street, and entered the Abbey, encouraging the firemen to exert themselves. Prince William of Gloucester was also a witness of the conflagration. He went into the Abbey by the Poet's corner, and remained some time. We were also extremely happy to see some of the most distinguished members of parliament taking the lead, and sharing all the dangers and difficulties of the firemen in their endeavours: among them Mr. Windham was peculiarly conspicuous. Nothing escaped him; and his activity was such, that one could hardly distinguish his clothes from those of a common labourer after the bustle was over, in consequence of his active exertions. Lord Westmoreland, the Lord Chancellor, and the Dukes of Gloucester and Norfolk attended.

Among the Parisian refugees who lately came to Dieppe, in their way to England, was Monsieur D——, who arrived at the above port late in the evening, and finding the packet would not sail until early the ensuing morning, he sent his trunk on board and retired to rest at his inn, with a promise from the captain that he should be called previous to the sailing of the vessel. In the hurry, however, poor Mon. D—— was forgotten, and the packet of course got under way without him. It was day-light before he awoke, when, on inquiry he found, to his inexpressible mortification, that the packet was full three hours. He ran immediately to the beach, but the extreme thick fog, which prevailed, utterly prevented his even obtaining a transient glimpse of her sails. Notwithstanding it raised to a most violent degree, a universal uneasiness, some additional reward, to follow the packet to about two leagues distance from Dieppe the boat came along side of her, and poor Monsieur D—— immediately got on board, completely wet to the skin, as if he had been duck-ed! How d——

The captain on seeing him enter the cabin was thunderstruck with his appearance, and requested to know how in the name of wonder he came from land? Monsieur D. insisted that he swam on board, and shewed his wet clothes in proof of his assertion. The captain in vain attempted to discover the boat, which was returning, on account of the fog which still continued. After complimenting his passenger on his extraordinary abilities as a wonderful swimmer, he waved taking the sum agreed on for his passage, and in due time they landed at Brighton. The following day the captain dining with a party of gentlemen, the conversation happened to turn on swimming, and one of the company offered a bet of two hundred guineas that he had a servant would beat any man in England at the exercise: the wager was immediately accepted by the commander of the packet, who went in search of Monsieur D. He started at the proposal, conscious that he could not take a single stroke: understanding, however that the wager was play or pay, and that if he succeeded he should have one hundred guineas for himself, he consented, and the following morning at 5 o'clock was fixed for trial of skill. All parties were at the place by the time appointed, except Monsieur D. After waiting some minutes they observed him striding towards them in an enormous pair of fishermen's boots, drawn close round his thighs, a large oil-skin great coat, strapped about his waist, and his hat tied under his chin with a silk handkerchief, and under his right arm he carried a small box. On their desiring him to draw off his boots and undress, he replied, 'Veritable me will not, I do alwaise take the long journe in de boots and des habit.' 'The devil you do!' exclaimed his opponent.—'Let him alone (replied the captain of the packet) I have been a witness to what he can perform.'—'But surely he does not mean to swim with the box too?'—'Begar, but me do,' was the answer, 'vat you take me for one great fool, to swim all de way from Brighton to Dieppe, without eat or drink,' and opening the box discovered to the no small amazement of all present, a cold roasted chicken, a pint of wine and a French roll. On seeing this, his opponent positively declined the contest, swearing that he could be no man, but the devil himself in disguise, and if he ventured would certainly drown him.

TO HOPE.

"Ah, why in me from day to day
I drag a life of pain and sorrow;
Yet still, Sweet Hope, I hear thee say
"Be calm, thine ills will end to-morrow."

"The morrow comes, but brings to me
No charm dispels or grief relieving!
And I am ever doom'd to see,
Sweet Hope, thy promises deceiving!

"Yet false, and cruel as thou art,
Thy dear delusion will I cherish;
I cannot, dare not, wish thee part,
Since I, alas! with thee must perish.

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pt. 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. Page 23. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, at his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 60. Page 112. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 60. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 60. Page 112. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

---

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

From an Irish Paper.

DWYER—the Irish Rebel Chief.

This very extraordinary man, who ever since the late rebellion has maintained himself and his gang in the recesses of the Wicklow mountains, constantly refusing all offers of amnesty or pardon, and mocking and baffling all attempts to take or destroy him in consequence of the great rewards offered by Government, now becomes more than ever an object of public attention and curiosity in the united country.

The humble and obscure history of the early life of this desperado presents nothing worthy of notice. Born in the wilds of Wicklow, his first situation in life was that of a cow-boy, and afterwards employed in tanners yards, until the breaking out of the late rebellion; at which time, being about six or seven and twenty years of age, he ranged himself, with enthusiasm, under the banners of insurrection; and tho' always foremost in danger, had the good fortune to retire unhurt through all the battles of that deplorable contest.—When the rebellion was put down, and most of the leaders, with their partizans, hastened to avail themselves of the act of amnesty, Dwyer rejected the merciful offers of the Government, and withdrew, accompanied by a chosen band, into the fastnesses of his native mountains, where he has since kept his ground, bidding defiance to all the parties sent out from time to time against him. There is not one more extraordinary in what relates to this man, than his surprising means of obtaining secret information.

On a certain night three men who had before, we believe, been privates in the Meath militia, and one of whom was the first that administered to his then chief, the oath of an United Irishman, suddenly deserted from his gang. Dwyer instantly concluded that he had been tempted by the reward to betray him, of which he not only soon after received a confirmation from his emissaries, but also intelligence of the night on which they were to set out for the purpose of securing him. Being, as they thought, well acquainted with all his haunts, they made little doubt of their success, but were waylayed by Dwyer, who put them to death with his own hand, not suffering his companions to interfere in what he considered, or at least represented to be his just and personal revenge. After this, however, he became more wary & suspicious of some of his associates, and therefore inviting those on whom he could least rely, to a dinner in a distant quarter, he after the feast was over, told them that as there was no longer any chance of French assistance, and the people in general seemed disposed to submission, he found it in vain to hold out any longer; he must, of course dismiss them, and advised them to disperse, and return to their families, but never again to appear in the vicinity of those mountains. The whiskey punch was then circulated until his companions became insensibly drunk, and when they awoke from their debauch, could find no traces of their former leader, who soon recruited his lofs by the accession of others, on whose fidelity he could have more dependance.

It must be a matter of astonishment, that an active, powerful, and vigilant government could never succeed in exterminating this banditti from these mountains, however difficult or inaccessible they may at first sight appear. The rebel, who is intimately acquainted with the topography of the place, has his regular videts and scouts upon the qui vive, in all the most advantageous points—who, on the appearance of alarm, or the approach of strangers, blow their whistles, which resound thro' the innumerable caverns, and are signals for a general muster to those hardy desperadoes. They are generally superintended by the chief himself, or by his brother in-law, of the name of Byrne, a determined fellow, in whom alone he places an unlimited confidence. They are both great adepts at disguising their faces and persons, and are thought to pay frequent visits to the metropolis, though they never have been detected. Dwyer is an active, vigorous fellow, about five feet nine inches high, with something of a stoop about the shoulders. He has a ruddy complexion, with lively, penetrating eyes; and is said to be wonderfully patient of fatigue, and fearless of every kind of danger.

BOTANY BAY.

A late Paris paper contains a letter received from citizen Gregoire, mineralogist, dated Bass's Streight, King's Island, Dec. 7, 1802, in which he gives the following account of the English settlement in New Holland:

"After leaving Van Diemen's Land, our next halt was at Port Jackson. That rising colony is the first from which the natives have no right of complaint against Europeans. They have been treated with every attention; but still resist all attempts to civilize them.—Though living for these fifteen years with the English, they have adopted no English custom. Clothes to them is still a superfluity. They rarely wear any thing to protect them from cold; never a garment to hide their nakedness. Their language has, however, by this intercourse, undergone some alteration.

"The English, during the fifteen years since their settlement here, have already carried their agriculture to a surprising extent. The forests have given place to corn fields of wonderful fertility. Here are already towns and villages affording every accommodation of European luxury. The population amounts to 8000 souls, none of whom are slaves. I send you a sample of the wool of this country. The sheep which bear it are from Peru, from Paragua, from the Cape of Good Hope, & from Bengal. The breeds are here much improved and are mending daily. Those from Bengal, which have there nothing but hair, yield here lambs that bear a rich fleece. In a stay of five months I made excursions into the country. Leaving Port Jackson, we proceeded to survey the rest of the coast of New Holland. The commander sends to France the Naturaliste, with what collections we have up to this time made. I have passed from the vessel in which I sailed for Le Geographe, on board which I succeed my colleague and friend Depuch, obliged by ill health to return to France. BAILAY, Mineralogist.

ANECDOTE.

A Seaman once coming before the Committee of Shipping of the East India Company in Leaden hall-street, to be examined for an offence on board one of the Company's ships, was treated with great slight and contempt by one of the members, who went so far as to say that he doubted whether the fellow could box the compass, that is to say, run over regularly all the points of it. Jack sturdily but humorously replied, "I can better than you can say the Lord's Prayer." All the other members laughed, and Jack encouraged offered to lay five guineas of it.—"You can't be off said some." So the insolent gentleman thinking it best to put a good face upon the matter, said, "Done with you," and laid down his five guineas too. The honest tar went through his part, and boxed off the compass in high spirits, and with great precision and rapidity. The member of the committee then followed, and with little trouble went through the Lord's Prayer, having done which, he stretched forth his hand to take up the cash.—"Avast! avast!" cried Jack, gripping his wrist with the strength of an ox, "not so fast neither." "Why," said the other, "you have not said the compass better than I did the Lord's Prayer."—"Aye, but hold, I'm not half done yet," returned the sailor; and immediately began and said the compass backwards with no less precision and quickness than he had before laid it forwards. Having done—"Now say the Lord's Prayer backwards if you can," said he, "and the money is yours." "I can't," said the other.—"Then the money is mine," said Jack; and putting it very deliberately into his pocket, advised his antagonist to contend with his equals another time.

THERE is a curious fact handed down by Lord Bacon, which, if it had not the seal of such authority, would be looked upon rather as a fabricated jest, than a true story. His Lordship, who was many years a Judge, and afterwards Lord Chancellor of England, relates that a thief being brought to the bar and arraigned for being found on a stolen horse, positively insisted to the Bench, that so far from his having stolen the horse, the horse had stolen him. Fellow, said the Judge, how dare you take the liberty of sporting with the Court on such a solemn occasion; and even while your life is in jeopardy, to attempt to amuse us with such an absurd expression?—The horse steal you indeed!—It is true nevertheless, my Lord, said he firmly. I was passing through the fields upon my lawful occasions, when I perceived a fierce mastiff dog, which I feared might be mad, pursuing me. I ran to save myself—he was getting close up with me just as a high hedge lay in my way.—Being very active, I leaped over it, and accidentally lighted upon the back of the horse, which being frightened, ran away with me so furiously that I could not stop him, until he came to the town where I was taken; and where the owner of the horse now lives. The Jury did not think the evidence so conclusive against his resolute affirmation of the story, (improbable as it appeared) and so acquitted him—perhaps, says his Lordship, not a little thereto moved by the whimsicalness of the defence set up. [Charleston Courier.]

Comparison between the Ladies of Paris and those of Amsterdam.

A woman of fortune in France rarely minds any thing but her toilet and her amusements. In Holland the greater the fortune of any family, so much the more is the mistress distinguished as sedentary, vigilant, attentive, that nothing may be out of its place, nothing destroyed, nothing lost. No person even passes before such a house in the streets, or stops or rings at the door, or comes in or goes out, unobserved by the mistress. At Paris a woman of fortune and fashion would be ashamed to be known to pay attention to her household affairs, or to mind any thing in the world but her music, novels, ball dresses, jewels, bonnets, laces, and other things belonging to the toilet. At Amsterdam, the higher a woman's family and fortune, so much the more is she studious of history, geography, and foreign languages, so much the better does she sew, knit, spin, mark, and embroider, so much the more skilled is she to pickle and preserve, and take care of her poultry. Would you see an household cleanly, orderly, and magnificent, servants diligent and honest, clerks steady and discreet, fine children handsomely clothed, and well educated, a husband and wife living happily together, and in the midst of all a virtuous woman, go drink tea with the family of a merchant of Amsterdam.

In Holland, when two persons are about to enter into a law suit, they are first obliged to go before a tribulation of reconciling judges, called "the peace makers." If the parties happen to bring with them a lawyer, the first thing done is to send him about his business, upon the same principle that we take off the wood from the fire we want to extinguish.

The peace makers then tell the parties, "You are certainly great fools to spend your money for the procuration of your own ruin; we will bring you to an accommodation without costing you one farthing." If after this the rage of litigation happens to be too violent in the parties, they put them off to another day, in order to mitigate the symptoms of their disorder; after the expiration of which they summon them a second and a third time. If their folly is then incurable, the peace makers confent that the parties should go into a court of justice, in the same manner as we abandon an incurable member to the surgeon, and then the law takes its course.

BRITONS! TO ARMS!!!

WRITTEN BY W. T. FITZGERALD, ESQ.

And recited by him at the meeting of the LITERARY FUND, July 14, 1803.

BRITONS! to Arms! of Apathy beware,
And let your Country be your dearest care:
Protect your Altars! guard your Monarch's Throne,
The cauſe of GRACE and Freedom is your own!
What! ſhall that England wont her Son's ſupport,
Whoſe Heroes fought at *Creſſy—Agincourt†
And when Great Marlborough‡ led the Engliſh van,
In France, o'er Frenchmen, triumph'd to a man!
By Alfred's great and ever honor'd name!
By Edward's proweſs, and by Henry's fame!
By all the generous blood for Freedom ſhed,
And by the aſhes of the Patriot dead!
By the bright glory Britons lately won,
On Egypt's plains, beneath the burning Sun!
Britons! to Arms! defend your Country's cauſe,
Fight for your King, your Liberties, and Laws!
Be France defied, her ſlaviſh yoke abhorr'd,
And place your ſafety only on your ſword.
The Gallic Deſpot, ſworn your mortal Foe,
Now aims his laſt, but his moſt deadly blow;
With ENGLAND's PLUNDER tempts his hungry Slaves,
And dares to brave you on your native waves!
If Briton's Rights be worth a Briton's care,
To ſhield them from the Sons of Rapine—ſwear!
Then to Invaſion be defiance given,
Your Coaſts in juſt, oppoſe'd by Earth and Heaven!
Should adverſe winds our gallant Fleet reſtrain,
To ſweep his "Rambling"§ veſſels from the main,
And Fate permit him on our ſhores t' advance,
The Tyrant never ſhall return to France—
Fortune herſelf ſhall be no more his friend,
And here the hiſtory of his crimes ſhall end.—
His ſlaughter'd legions ſhall manure our ſhore,
And England never know Invaſion more!!

Policies of 99 guineas to one are now opened at Lloyd's, that if Bonaparte attempts to make a landing in England, he will not be alive in one month after! This, indeed, is nearly his own calculation of the risque attendant on the voyage. There is a variety of other wagers nearly to the same purport. [London Paper.]

AS it would be a violation of the law of nations to put the first 200,000 invaders to the sword, and they will be too numerous for our prisons to contain them, it is proposed to mark them G. R. and a Crown on the right cheek, and to re-embark them for France on their parole. [Ibid.]

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 25th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 8. Page 11. Persons harbouring, concealing, or aiding Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 10. Page 11. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 60. Page 44. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 14. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

---

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

LONDON, AUGUST 12.

LOYAL NORTH BRITONS.

A general meeting of the gentlemen of this corps of Volunteers was held on Monday night, at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, in the Strand, to consider of the propriety of an address from the corps to his Majesty, and to receive and decide upon certain recommendations from the committee, relative to the nomination of officers, and to several other matters of necessary arrangement.

James Mackintosh, Esq. of Lincoln's Inn, was called to the chair. He opened the business of the meeting, in a speech of the most impressive and animating kind.

Mr. Campbell then rose, and addressed the chair nearly in the following eloquent terms:

Sir, although the short and important stanzas which you have done me the honour of mentioning, have no peculiar allusion to North Britain, or to a North British Association, yet I am emboldened to bring them forward by the great and animating cause which has called us together. Sir, as this is the first time I have had the honour of appearing in this meeting of my countrymen, I cannot help expressing my feelings of satisfaction; I cannot help declaring, what a proud and honourable and important æra it forms in the life of an individual, when he enrolls himself even as an undistinguished member in the ranks of this mighty nation, which is now gathering for a combat more eventful and sublime than human history hath ever described, or human imagination hath conceived. To be one of the innumerable thousands who are crowding to this most holy war, is an honour and a privilege. I bless God, therefore, that I exist this moment in my native country, to have the pleasure of witnessing a spectacle the most noble ever exhibited in human affairs; a nation of armed freemen, undivided by faction, unenervated by prosperity, with energies concentrated, renewed, rekindled, by their common danger; assembling to fight under the banners of independence for themselves and the universe. Who would exchange such a spectacle for all the blessings of a timorous repose? Our feuds, our party passions, are for ever gone; they are to be burned in the graves of our invaders.

Our bosoms we'll bare for the glorious strife,
And our oath is recorded on high:
To prevail in the cause that is dearer than life,
Or, crush'd in its ruins, to die.
Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,
And swear to prevail in your dear native land.

'Tis the home we hold sacred is laid to our trust,—
God bless the green isle of the brave!
Should a conqueror tread on our forefathers' dust,
It would rouse the old dead from the grave.
Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,
And swear to prevail in your dear native land.

In Britain's sweet home shall the lyeher abide,
Profaning its love and its charms?
Shall a Frenchman insult the low'd Isle at our side?
To arms! Oh my country, to arms!
Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,
And swear to prevail in your dear native land.

Shall tyrants enslave us, my countrymen?—No!
Their head to the sword shall be given;—
Let a death-bed repentance be taught the proud foe,
And his blood be an offering to heaven.
Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,
And swear to prevail in your dear native land.

August 14. The Secretary at War lately declared in the House of Commons, that the efforts of this Country would be insular, only as long as necessary for safety at home, and that the hopes of a continental confederacy against the consular Government grew better every day. It is certain that a coolness has lately taken place between the Russian and French Governments; and a triple alliance between Russia, Austria and this country will probably shortly take place.

We are happy in being able to contradict a report which has been current a few days, that a mutiny had broken out at Gibraltar, in Dillon's Regiment. The Soldiers of Dillon's Regiment had been engaged for seven years and the term of their engagement being expired, they were disbanded: but without the smallest appearance of mutiny.

A German writer says, that Bonaparte is so ambitious, that he would have the Black Sea for a wash-hand bason; the Mediterranean for a watering-place; the Baltic for a fish-pond; the Atlantic for a pleasure yacht; and the Pacific Ocean for a mirror when he's in a passion.

The following curious article is extracted from an old book well known, entitled the Turkish Spy, written near 150 years ago:—"Queen Margaret of France, the wife of Henry IV. used to practise much with wizards and magicians, who, in an enchanted glass, shewed her who should reign in France for the time to come. First appeared Henry IV. then Lewis XIII. next Lewis XIV. and after him a pack of Jesuits, who should abolish the Monarchy, and govern the nation themselves. This glass is to be seen in the King's palace to this day." We may ask the Chief Consul if he knows any thing of this glass, and whether he has looked into it to see his fate, should he carry in execution his threatened invasion of this country?

August 28.

A Minister of Malta has been received, and accredited at Paris.

The King George British Packet, from Lisbon for England, has been boarded by a French privateer, and carried into Spain. She had on board 31,321 dollars, and 15,000 carats of rough diamonds. Gen. Lasoles, the French Minister at Lisbon, gave information to the privateer, that the diamonds were putting on board the packet; and is to go shares in the booty.

Bonaparte will not command the army of England in person—It is said General Mortier (who has but little fame to lose) will be selected thereto.

August 29.

It is confidently asserted, that France has consented to withdraw its troops from the borders of the Elbe and the Weser, which are to be occupied by Prussian troops, and that Gen. Blucher, the Prussian Commander in Westphalia, has sent orders to several regiments to hold themselves ready to march for that destination. Except a column of 10,000 French troops, all the others are immediately to evacuate Hanover.

It is said that the cause of General Dumourier's visit to this country at present is, that during the American war, when a project of invading England was taken up by the French Government, Dumourier had given in plans. These being preserved, it was said that Bonaparte meant to act upon them. Dumourier wrote to the Duke of Orleans, desiring him to inform our Government of the nature of these plans. In consequence of this, Dumourier was invited to England to give further information on the subject.

We are sorry to state, that the rumour of the loss of the Calypso sloop of war, is confirmed. She was run foul of by one of the ships to which she was convoy, on the 30th ult. and immediately went down. We deeply regret to add, that every soul perished.

The celebrated Doctor Callihan, of the county of Cork, who was arrested with Todd Jones, has, we understand, been liberated. This gentleman, who is considerably advanced in years, is talked of as a very high literary character. He is said to have been the intimate friend of Voltaire, and the correspondent of Adam Smith.

The subscription at Lloyd's on Saturday night, amounted to 141,666l. 7s. 9d. in Cash, and 20,290l. Stock.—The Ladies subscription amounted to 541l. 6s. 6d.

In Paris, as well as in London, there is always some prominent object to engross the attention of the multitude. The insignificance of this object does not materially influence the opinions of the good people of France. At present, the launch of the first of the gun-boats destined to invade England, is the grand theme of conversation, and the giddy Parisians attach to it a degree of importance little inferior to the destruction of the Bastile, then regarded as the pledge of national liberty.

Aug. 30.—A foreign messenger has just arrived from Calais, and reports of Peace have caused the funds to rise a little.

Aug. 31.—Private accounts from France mention, that exertions are making there in the equipment of a respectable naval force. A 74 has just been launched at Toulon, where four sail of the line and two frigates are on the stocks. At Toulon, 3000 galley slaves, and the same number of men, are employed in the dock-yards and fortifications.

The French have 6000 in Genoa.

Accounts from Lisbon by the last mail state, that there has been a serious tumult among the soldiers in that city. It lasted four days, during which many lives were lost. These disturbances originated in a dispute between two of the regular regiments quartered there and the regiment of police guards; but at length by the spirited behaviour of the latter, and particularly of a detachment commanded by a French Emigrant of the name of Novion, order was restored, though the populace seconded the regular soldiers. One of the regiments commanded by Don Gomez Freires is banished to Cascaes, and its commander is confined in the Tower. On the 3d inst. however, the city was in a state of tranquillity; but the precaution had been taken by Government to double the police guards and patroles.

A private letter from France states, that the French government has for some time past made considerable exertions to place their naval establishment on a respectable footing.

A letter from Paris, dated Aug. 20, states as follows: "Two bankers were last Wednesday sent to the Temple, because they had given bills of exchange upon Hamburgh and Frankfort for three millions of livres destined for the use of Louis XVIII. and which the police has found out to have been secretly subscribed by some Royalists at Paris, since his refusal to resign his right to the Throne of France was published here. Remember this refusal was known here on the 1st instant, and that these three millions were subscribed here only."

It is confidently stated, that government will, in the course of a few days, issue letters of marque and reprisal against Spain. Authentic intelligence is said to have been received from Portugal, that French privateers are fitting out in the Spanish ports, and that British prizes are carried in and sold there.

The conduct of the French Government in refusing payment of the bills drawn by their Generals in St. Domingo, must completely destroy its credit, and deter every merchant of common sense from having any dealings with them. That swindling policy, however, will have the effect to render it impossible for the troops in St. Domingo to avoid surrendering either to the Blacks or to the English, because they must now be entirely cut off from neutrals after the fraudulent bankruptcy of the French Government in not paying the bills formerly drawn.

Frankfort, (Germany) July 17.

The English Gen. Stuart, at the moment of his departure from Alexandria, addressed the following proclamation to the inhabitants of that city:

"His Majesty, the King of Great Britain, after having, by the glorious efforts of his arms, joined with those of his grand and august ally, the grand seignior, delivered Egypt from its invaders, has, conformably to the faith of treaties, given orders to his army to return to his own territories, and to give up this entire province, happily reconquered, to the absolute dominion of the Porte. We cannot leave the city of Alexandria, and the different posts occupied by our troops, without publicly testifying to the inhabitants our satisfaction at the friendship which they have constantly shewn to the British army, and their prompt submission to all the orders and regulations which the maintenance of discipline and the police rendered necessary. And, in order to prove to all the inhabitants the interest we continue to take in their welfare, we have acquired and obtained from the representatives of the Porte the following concession:

1. The remission of the arrears of the Karath (a kind of poll tax) and the public contributions of the city of Alexandria down to the landing of the French.

2. Security and confirmation of their appointments, for all the persons who have filled offices during the stay of the British troops.

3. The exclusive appropriation of the quarter of the Francs to Europeans, and those belonging to them, according to the usages and customs of the Levant.

4. That Europeans, and those who belong to them, shall have the right of passing at all hours, on foot or on horseback, upon business or amusement, thro' all quarters of the city, without being molested.

5. A general amnesty, and a promise that no person shall be molested, whatever part he may have taken in the French or Mameluke government.

6. The freedom of the old harbour for all European nations.

"The assent of the officers of the Porte to these demands is the most striking proof of gratitude which the British army could have received, for its eminent and distinguished services in Egypt; and we ardently and sincerely hope that the harmony which exists between the troops of our Sovereign and those of the Sublime Porte, and the immortal glory which their united arms have acquired by the recovery of that important province, will be cherished and maintained by the constant and inviolable friendship of the Britannic and Ottoman empires.

"Given under our hand, and at the head-quarters at Alexandria, the 6th of March, 1803. "J. STUART."

NEW-YORK, OCTOBER 8.

Extract of a letter from St. Maloes, to a gentleman in Newbury Port.

"You must have heard, undoubtedly, of the grand preparations making in this country for a descent on England. It is said that Bonaparte means to head an army of four hundred thousand men himself, in this expedition; but I do not imagine he will lose his head here. However, I wish and think it will take place, as all descriptions of persons are urgent, and encouraging the First Consul to undertake it; but all from different views—the army want it to enrich themselves by plundering that fine country; the citizens wish it, to be rid of the army; the Jacobins are in hopes by that means, to regain their authority; and the Royalists contemplate when the army is gone, to seize the helm of government in the name of Louis XVIIIth; recall that unfortunate Monarch, garrison well the sea coast, to prevent their return, and depend upon on the change in the public mind for their success, aided by all the strength they can collect. I am sure it would not be difficult if the King would be active and enterprising in the business.

It is confidently said that Moreau will assist the royal family; but I feel afraid the plot will be discovered, as some prisons are so imprudent as to express their wishes on the subject already.

October 18.

Died, in the neighbourhood of Speedsborough, Anson County, N. C. about the 25th July last, Mr. Charles Jordan, who, from his own account, (which is not doubted) was born in the month of April, 1689, aged 114 years. Hunting appears to have been his favourite amusement; and only 4 years ago he killed two deer at a shot.

Fire.—The fire which broke out at Bombay in the month of February last, destroyed, independent of the houses, property to the amount of two millions of pounds sterling!

FROM BOMBAY.

In February last, the British were fitting out an expedition to Port Bunder, on the Guzurat Coast, and had in contemplation the subjection of all the Northern Maharatta Powers, and at that time had a large force in that country. The expedition was conducted with the greatest secrecy—news from that quarter being entirely suppressed—printers being prohibited from publishing any thing from that coast in their papers. The conquest of all India, worth having, is undoubtedly their ultimate intention.

The English had also sent a large force against the King of Candy, in the island of Ceylon, and daily expected accounts of the surrender of all his hereditary possessions.—The war was occasioned by some of the nations under the protection of the English being plundered by subjects of the King of Candy, and he refused, or at least, neglected or evaded making ample restitution.

October 18.

His Majesty's land and sea forces, under Lieut. Gen. Grinfield and Commodore Hood, have again been put in motion, and sailed from Carlisle Bay on the 28th of Sept. on an expedition against the Dutch colonies to the Southward.—Lt. Gen. Grinfield commands in chief; Lt. Col. Nicholson (of the Royals, is 2d; Lt. Col. Shiphy commands the Engineers) and Capt. Sheldrick the artillery. The army is composed of choice troops, and sufficiently strong for the enterprize they are engaged upon; the naval force is equally powerful and well appointed; the most ample and extended conquest must therefore be expected to result from their united efforts, which have already added lustre to the British name in the West Indies.

The brig William, arrived at Baltimore from Oporto, brings accounts that the French army have made several motions towards the frontiers of Portugal (through Spain). The inhabitants of the country appear much alarmed, being in expectation of a visit from them. This prospect occasioned produce of Portugal, suited to the British market, to fall rapidly.

A murder of unequalled horror, has happened at Hamburgh. It was committed by a student, in the fiftieth year of his age, in a fit of melancholy delirium. He had been out with his family, returned, and all retired to rest by eleven o'clock. In the night he got up, and deliberately murdered his wife and six children, sparing two other children who were in bed with his two and without disturbing any one in the house, in which were several lodgers. He then proceeded to where a servant girl slept, informed her that he was going out, and should return at seven o'clock; but not coming home at this time, the girl proceeded to get the children up and call the mistress, when she found them dead, weltering in their blood. On the alarm being given, he was pursued, and near a mill, about half a mile from Hamburgh, he was found with his throat cut, but not quite dead —He was conveyed back to Hamburgh.

IMPORTANT INVENTION.

A bold and successful experiment was made at Dartmouth (England), on the 23d of June last, with a Vessel of an entirely new construction, the invention of Mr. Newman, of that place, which, says the letter that furnishes the account, appears to be wholly different in form, construction, and principle, from any thing ever yet entrusted to the waves, being built entirely with straight timber, and resembling more (when on the ground) a hog's trough than any other thing, the bottom and sides being perfectly flat, and square at both ends; is about 90 feet long and 16 wide; draws but three feet water, and is steered, not by a rudder hung to the stern post (which in full built vessels never have a proper effect) but by two small fins, which expand from the sides, and which have an effect which explode the present mode of steering altogether. This vessel, so constructed, was launched about a month since, and though she has now been ready for sea at least three weeks, it was not until yesterday that any seamen could be prevailed on to make trial of her, and the experiment would probably have been wholly relinquished, but for the noble and patriotic exertions of Capt. Hoyles and Mr. Jeffrey, the Inspector of King's Ship-building at this port, who volunteered their services with Mr. N. and were soon joined by several experienced ship-masters and pilots belonging to the port. She started from her moorings about eight o'clock in the forenoon, and went down the river, which was lined with thousands of spectators preferving an awful silence, the wind having every appearance of coming to blow hard, and the general belief that she would never again return to port. But to the astonishment of all, before she reached the Narrows, she ordered all the boats that attended her to return, and immediately, under a crowd of sail, dashed boldly out into the Channel. She had not proceeded far before nautical men were so struck with her manœuvres, that they seemed to doubt their existence; and after a cruise of ten hours, and a most complete trial with more than twenty different cruisers in every way and movement, she beat up this narrow river against a strong wind, and in a manner superior to any thing ever seen by the oldest seaman in this port, amidst repeated discharges of cannon and acclamations of the inhabitants.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. [Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 6[illegible] Page 14[illegible] Persons harbouring, concealing, or aiding Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 60. Page 170 The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 64. Page 82. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 29. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

---

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 18. to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great-Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

From a late London Paper.

LETTERS OF LOUIS XVI.

A MONUMENT the noblest and most durable was lately erected in France to the memory of Louis XVI. in the publication of a collection of his genuine letters—These have been re-published in London, with a translation by Miss H. M. Williams—They are addressed to his Ministers, his Brothers, and his confidential Counsellors. They contain specimens of elegant writing, of scientific composition, of political wisdom, of domestic prudence, of tender and of manly sentiment, which must greatly exalt the character of the amiable and unfortunate Prince who wrote them, in the estimation of every person of worth and taste. They invest the brow of royalty with new honours. Nor is it easy to think of any thing that could more effectually tend to renew the ancient loyalty of the French towards the government and the family of their Kings. We are willing to gratify the ingenuous curiosity of our readers, with a few extracts from this most interesting collection.

To M. Berthier, Intendant of Paris.

PARIS, OCTOBER 28, 1788.

You have presented to my council of state a plan dictated by the purest philantrophy; and I approve highly the means you suggest of extirpating mendicity from my state. To render the poor useful without increasing their misfortunes, to establish places of retreat with humane regulations, and under wise direction, where the love of labor shall be encouraged, where active youth shall be occupied, and infirm old age comforted, such are the motives, and such the aim, of your project. The COURVE is abolished; but the high-ways require continual and expensive repairs; might not your hospitals of mendicants furnish workmen to mend and construct roads? I see whole armies of pioneers formed in those asylums, scouring the country, and stationed on the high-ways, where they will provide against accidents, and the ravages of the seasons, and maintain a free circulation throughout all France. You seem to me, however, not to have paid sufficient attention to the means least burthensome to the people, of furnishing what is necessary for the support of your establishments in favor of mendicity. The people are already too much oppressed by taxes; must their burdens be so increased as to render unavailing the benefit of the abolition of the COURVE? Let us make choice of the mode the least expensive, the most agreeable to the people, and by which the ends you propose can be accomplished, of disburdening those who pay taxes, rendering the poor useful, and keeping the roads in good repair. Your abilities, Sir, will, no doubt, furnish you with new means; and be assured I shall second them in my council.

LOUIS.

To M. De Levoisier.

MARCH 15, 1783.

Your last experiment, Sir, still excites my admiration; this discovery proves that you have enlarged the sphere of human knowledge. Your experiments on inflammable gas shew how much you are occupied by that admirable science, which every day makes new progress.

The Queen, and some persons to whom I will's your experiment to be shewn, will meet in my cabinet tomorrow at seven in the evening; and you will give me pleasure by bringing me the treatise on inflammable gas.

You know, Sir, how much you possess my esteem.

To the Count D'Artois.

JULY 18, 1789. ELEVEN IN THE MORNING.

I had yielded, my dear brother, to your solicitations, and the representations of a few faithful subjects; but I have since made some prudent reflections. To resist at present would be to risk the loss of the monarchy, and the ruin of us all. I have therefore countermanded the orders I had given; my troops will retreat from Paris; and I shall employ milder measures. Talk to me no more of an act of authority, of a great stroke of power; I believe it is most prudent to temporize, to yield to the storm, and expect every thing from time, from the awakened courage of the good, and the love of Frenchmen for their King.

To M. Vergniaud.

JANUARY 19, 1792.

Your plan is sublime, Sir—but it is no longer time to feign. You make propositions; and I can perform nothing. I have not even the power of convincing the world that I have the desire of doing good.—Yourself, Sir, even in the supposition that I consented, have no success to hope. Crimes and conspiracies are abroad: the contagion must fall, and with it the First Public Functionary whom it crea[illegible]. You have great and liberal ideas [illegible]—but your [illegible]ded Governments can only last a day. The Innovators propose to themselves no particular end; they aim at nothing, and will never attach themselves to any thing, but will always destroy. They would overthrow, to-morrow, the constitution they had established to day, and the Public Functionaries they had [illegible] they send to their [illegible] destruction.—We must, Sir, rally sincerely round the constitution, which, perhaps, is not free from imperfections, but may prove, in stormy times, as a salutary plank. Let us then unite our sincere efforts to save this constitution.

PARIS, AUGUST 12, 1792.—EVEN IN THE MORNING.

" My Brother,

" I am no longer King! The public voice will make known to you the most cruel catastrophe.—I am the most unfortunate of husbands and of fathers; I am the victim of my own goodness, of fear and of hope.—It is an impenetrable mystery of iniquity! They have bereaved me of every thing; they have massacred my faithful subjects; I have been decoyed by stratagem far from my palace; and they now accuse me! I am a captive; they drag me to prison; and the Queen, my children, and Madame Elizabeth, share my sad fate.

" I can no longer doubt that I am an object odious in the eyes of the French, led astray by prejudice.—This is the stroke which is most insupportable. My brother, but a little while and I shall exist no longer. Remember to avenge my memory, by publishing how much I loved this ungrateful people. Recall one day to their remembrance the wrongs they have done me, and tell them I forgive them.—Adieu, my brother, for the last time!"

LONDON, August 28.

The Duke of Clarence (3d son of the King) has enrolled himself as a volunteer.

The Earl of Warwick has subscribed 10,000l. for the purchase of arms for the Warwickshire volunteers.

Capt. D'Auvergne, Prince of Bouillon, who is to have a principal command in a secret expedition, was yesterday appointed to the Severn of 44 guns, at Woolwich.

Aug. 31.

The communication between this country and France remains closed; & no accounts reach us from thence, except by the foreign messengers.

Accounts from Ireland, are to the 28th August.—Emmett has been examined, and fully recommitted for trial as a traitor. He will be tried immediately, and his fate, it is supposed, will carry with it important consequences to the general cause.—The proofs against him are ample; and the government will not fail promptly to execute the sentence of the law.

DUBLIN, Aug. 17.

Lady Jerningham, of Coffy, in the County of Norfolk, has proposed to raise and command a corps of 600 females, for the purpose of driving away the cattle from the sea coasts, in case of an invasion.

Aug. 24.

A special commission for the trial of persons charged with High Treason.—The following were arraigned, and counsel assigned them, viz. Felix Rourke, Thomas Donelly, John Killeen, John M'Kenny, James Byrne, Walter Clare, Lawrence Bayley, Nich. Farrel, Mich. Kelly, Edward Kearney, T. Maxwell Roche, John Begg, Patrick M'Guire, J. Doran, and Owen Kirwan. They are to be tried the 31st, they are mostly low fellows.

One of the Calcutta papers which we lately received, contains the following article:—

We little expected that the Revolutionary scenes which so long agitated the Western hemisphere, would have extended their influence over so distant and so zealous a government as the Chinese—The principles which actuate the rebels in this quarter, will be found to be in exact accordance with those which produced the French Revolution, the progress threatens to be as terrible, and if we view the character of the nation and the preposterous genius of the Empire, it is more than probable that the result will be the same;—the subversion of the ancient government of the Chinese.

The following interesting account of this transaction, we have received from a correspondent:—

There has sprung up within these few months a very numerous body of men, of a description very similar to what we have known for some years past by the name of the ILLUMINATI. They are to know one another by particular signs—the bond of allegiance is communicated to any one who is desirous of becoming a member of the society, by drawing blood from some part of his body, and infusing a little of that of one who is already incorporated,—or, a mutual interchange of blood takes place—the clans that have already appeared, are alarmingly numerous, insomuch, that the Tsontee or Viceroy of Canton has long been absent commanding the Imperial troops in person and has gained some signal victories—it was said, indeed, at one time, that he was on his return, but by late accounts, there is great probability of further commotions.

It is prophesied that some person will rise up before the year 1804, who will depose the present Tartar race of Emperors, and restore that of the ancient Chinese. A certain Chinese (who resided about two or three days march from Canton, where the rebels are in great force), having, by his success in trade, amassed considerable riches, insomuch as to be able to purchase a * Burton of some rank, and having impressed on the people in the neighbourhood a great opinion of his consequence, contrived to have it circulated about the adjacent country, that his son, (who was one of the handsomest and altogether the most comely youth in the province) was the man who was destined to re-establish the ancient government:—on this allurance, thousands of the rebels, as well common people of the country, as others of superior rank, flocked to the standard of this youth, who was habited in yellow (the Imperial colour); the force which collected round his banners was very considerable. They were, however, attacked by the Imperial troops, who gained a decided victory.

Many of them, as success failed them, went over to the other side, and the pretender (if he may be so styled) being betrayed, was taken prisoner, and fell a victim to his rashness, by suffering all the torture the human imagination can depict, and afterwards being cut, while living, into thirty-two pieces, and when on the point of expiring, flabbed through the body. I cannot enter further into particulars, but things have been pretty quiet of late. Within these few days, report says, the rebels have collected again in great force.—The Tsontee certainly has remained much longer than he intended, and no doubt under the apprehension that when he turns his back, the flame of rebellion will rekindle.

* A Chinese mark of distinction.

From a London Paper.

SINGULAR METEOR.

An English gentleman, who is a prisoner at Fontainbleau, writes under date of the 13th July as follows.—"I was bathing a few evenings since, with some Englishmen, my fellow prisoners, when we saw a most beautiful and singular meteor. About half an hour after sun-set, two balls appeared in the air above where the sun had set, resembling the sun in colour, size and brightness. They were about the height at which the sun is two hours before its setting. They lasted about ten minutes, moving almost imperceptibly towards the south, and giving an amazing light, when they gradually appeared to dissolve into fiery smoke, which reddened the atmosphere to a considerable distance round where they had been, for an hour afterwards. Some said, this was a reflection of the sun, but it could not be, as it had been set half an hour, and besides, they would never have dissolved into smoke. Mr. Pigot, talking about it, says that these are the same class as those which we call falling stars, which are large stones continually floating about in the immense space of nature, when they come within 60 or 70 miles of the earth by which they are attracted, they fall to it.

" Several of these stones have been picked up in different parts of the world, and they have not been found to resemble any earthly substance."

Another escape of Bonaparte.

The First Consul had a narrow escape on his coasting voyage round the Isle of Cadsant to Flushing.—An English smuggler lay at some distance, and the crew, perceiving what was going forward, immediately loaded their pistols, and arranged their cutlasses, determined, if he put ever so little out to sea, to pounce upon their object.—Had they succeeded provided as they were with sweeps in aid to their sails, nothing could have prevented them from landing Bonaparte in England much sooner than even his sanguine imagination could have promised.—His prudence, however, or as his minions will call it, his " good fortune," led him to keep so close under the batteries, that the feelings of those brave men were mortified, and their intentions disappointed.

From the National Intelligencer.

SOME years ago, a clergyman in England, who to the duties of his station added the benevolent task of assisting his parishioners in the capacity of physician, happened to have a number of them all with malignant fevers.—One day upon visiting a patient (to whom bark and other usual medicines had been administered without effect), and of whose recovery there was no hopes. The curate observed a vessel of yeast standing by the fire. He recollected having heard that yeast beginning to putrify, being placed over a vessel of yeast or fermenting liquor would be preserved from further putrefaction; and the idea struck him to try the effect of yeast upon his patient, as he considered him past recovery.—He ordered a spoon full of yeast to be given once or twice an hour—Next day he found him recovering, ordered the yeast to be continued in like manner; the sick man got well, and the Curate had equal success in a variety of cases of putrid and malignant fevers in which he administered only yeast.

These circumstances I mentioned to a circle of friends in Ireland. Soon after one of those friends was seized by a fever; his physician, after some time, deemed it necessary to have a consultation of the Faculty; they recommended to my friend's wife to prepare for the worst, as it was scarce possible her husband could live through the night. She sent for some yeast and administered it to him every half hour during the night; in the morning the doctors found, to their astonishment, their patient not only alive, but in a fair way to recover. He did recover and is, I believe, now living.

Query—What effect may yeast have in the yellow fever, introduced in as great quantities as the stomach will bear, and freely administered to the bowels by clysters?

Every brewer and distiller knows that the fixed air contained in yeast will speedily kill a man whose head is held over a vessel containing liquor. The same principle prevents the putrefaction of meat, not only prevents the generation of maggots, but the previous stage of putrefaction. If then the fixed air contained in yeast or fermenting liquors, checks putrefaction in animal substance deprived of life, will it not check the tendency to putrefaction that exists in the human frame when seized by a putrid disease?

I am not a physician, nor is it probable I shall ever have an opportunity of trying effects of yeast upon the scourge of our Seaport towns. The above reasoning upon the subject seems to me fair, the practice in disorders less destructive then the yellow fever has been successful, and as the medicine is easily obtained, I wish it may have a trial and prove equally successful in yellow fevers.

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1803.

It is currently reported, and we are sory to add with every appearance of foundation, that the Sloop Lady Washington, commanded by Capt. Murray, was lately lost in a gale of wind near Oswego, on her passage to Niagara. Pieces of the wreck and her boat, by which she was recognized, together with several other articles, are said to have been picked up—It is yet uncertain whether the crew and passengers were saved; among the latter were Messrs. Dunn and Boyd of Niagara.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pg. 11 to 13. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deſerters to ſerve abroad as Soldiers (a ſentence to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary courſe of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in caſes where Death may be thought too great a puniſhment, to ſentence a Deſerter to Tranſportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the ſentence, a Soldier ſo Tranſported ſhall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majeſty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Tranſported, or without ſome other Lawful cauſe, every ſuch perſon being convicted thereof, in the ordinary courſe of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will ſuffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the caſes of Deſertion, or of any other Capital Offence, ſhall have given a ſentence of Death, his Majeſty is impowered, if he ſhall think fit, to order that puniſhment to be changed for Tranſportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majeſty ſhall ſeem meet; and the puniſhment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by ſuch order of his Majeſty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 6. Page 14. Perſons harbouring, concealing, or aſſiſting Deſerters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, inſtead of Five Pounds as formerly.

Sec. 8. Page 15. It is the right of the Military to apprehend Deſerters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the aſſiſtance of a Civil Officer, is now eſtabliſhed.

Sec. 9. Page 16. This Section has been altered ſo as to put it out of the power of Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final deſtination, are obliged to receive Deſerters into their cuſtody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deſerters are conveyed by virtue of a Magiſtrate's Warrant, or under Military Eſcort, by an Order from the War Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY.

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 18. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary courſe of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in conſequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to ſentence Deſerters belonging to thoſe Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be ſent out of Great Britain) to ſerve in his Majeſty's Regiments without limitation as to the period or place of ſervice.

LONDON, Auguſt 29.

Private advices from Paris ſtate, that addreſſes are ſigning throughout the Republic, praying Bonaparte not to riſk his precious life in the expedition to England. This meaſure may be conſidered as the firſt retrograde ſtep of the French from their boaſted expedition.—The ſpirited meaſures in this kingdom have filled the ſtout heart of the Firſt Conſul with diſmay. He has given the challenge; it has been accepted; the ſeconds have been appointed, the ground meaſured; and now the hero of Marengo ſneaks from the combat.

Lord Hobart has tranſmitted a plan to the lord lieutenants of the maritime counties, for the formation of a volunteer naval armament for the protection of the coaſt; which promiſes great utility ſhould the French boaſters dare approach the Engliſh ſhore.

On the 23d inſt. an immenſe depot of military ſtores was diſcovered in Dublin, of 34,000 pikes, 42,000 muſquet cartridges with a proportion of flints, 246 hand grenades, boxes, and bottles of powder, &c.

Three hundred ſtands of arms have been found near Drogheda; ſuſpected of having been brought in a Himburg veſſel, which has been ſeized.

Sept. 5.

It is ſaid that ſeveral large manufactories, which have been long at work night and day for government in the preparation of equipages, and other field ſtores, have been abruptly ſtopped in their orders within the courſe of the laſt two or three days, and told to diſcharge the whole of their men, which has alſo been done, and in ſome inſtances to the number of from four to five hundred.

September 9.

The Victualling Officer has received orders to ſupply proviſions for 100,000 men, for one year, commencing the firſt of January next.

The ſecret expedition, under Gen. Moore, has ſailed. Lord Keith has left Margate Roads. Sir Sidney Smith, as we learn from our correſpondent at Harwich, has had orders to put to ſea. Britiſh ſpirits have become, at laſt, impatient of a mere war of preparation, of menace, of loitering defence.—They are not to be longer reſtrained from action. They burn to take Bonaparte in the midſt of his boaſts, to ſhew him that heroic warfare is ſomething widely different from a prancing buſtle, amid the mere pomp and circumſtances of war. Whether it be that the Elbe or the Weſer is again to be opened to commerce; that the Dutch are to be aſſiſted to break aſunder their chains; that the miſerable preparations in ſome French ports are to be ſuddenly ruined; that the defence of the out-poſts of Jerſey and Guernſey is to be reinforced; or whatever other be the enterpriſe on which our hopes and anxieties muſt, for ſome days, be ſuſpended, it is the intereſt of the World to invoke God's bleſſing upon the effort of our arms!

September 10.

A meaſure for the defence of the rivers THAMES and MEDWAY is, at this moment, carrying into effect, under the direction of the Trinity Houſe, which claims the gratitude of the country in an eſpecial degree.

We have not been backward to beſtowing our tribute of praiſe upon the Volunteer Corps of the realm, compoſed of the youth and manhood of our population. But what ſhall we ſay of thoſe veterans who, paſt the grand climacteric of life, and retired to the hard earned enjoyment of competence and peace, have now ruſhed forth with the ardour of youth to poſts of imminent danger and unremitting toil?—The public will hear with admiration, that a chain of ten thirty two gun frigates is to be formed at the mouth of the Medway, which are to be manned by volunteer officers, who have retired from the Eaſt and Weſt-India ſervice.

We converſed yeſterday with a veteran captain, who is to hold the rank of Lieutenant in this ſervice; and when we expreſſed our ſurpize at his reduced rank, he exclaimed, with zealous ſatisfaction in his countenance, "What's that ſignify? Why there are captains older than I am, who will ſerve before the maſt." By the noble conduct of theſe brave old Britons, our naval force will be conſiderably ſaved in men, and the defence of the important paſſage of theſe rivers will be in the hands of heroes, who will periſh ere they yield them to our enemies.

In a few days we hope to have the ſatisfaction of announcing that the ſecret expedition under the command of Admiral Lord Keith, has ſucceſsfully executed the important office for which it is deſtined. His Lordſhip ſailed on Thurſday from the Downs in the Monarch of 74 guns. He took a weſterly courſe, and by this time has probably joined the reſt of the ſquadron.

Another ſecret expedition will ſail on or about the 20th of this month, from Portſmouth.

September 13.

Wedneſday evening laſt, between five and ſix o'clock, there was deſcried from the heights above Dover, a ſmall flotilla of French gun-boats, about 23 in number, eſcorted by a large ſloop, ſteering cloſe along the French ſhore for Calais. The Republican flag was plainly diſcernable. This flotilla had come out of Dunkirk, and they anchored in Calais roads, waiting for the tide to carry them into harbour. Our cruiſers were unfortunately all to the weſtward, and the wind being from the eaſtward and northward, they had an opportunity of making this movement unmoleſted. An expreſs was ſent from Dover to the Downs, and intelligence was conveyed to the Admiralty by means of the Telegraph.

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 7.

The American brig which ſailed on Saturday laſt for Havre-de-Grace, is brought back by one of the cutters, and is now at anchor in the Sound. After her ſailing from hence, information was given to Admiral Sir J. Colpoys, K. B. commander in chief, &c. of his Majeſty's ſhips and veſſels at this port, of a French pilot who was in our ſervice, being ſecreted on board, for the purpoſe of conveying to France what intelligence, in his capacity, as pilot, to the ſhip he belonged, he had gleaned, either with reſpect to ſoundings of our coaſt, bearings, diſtances, and the ſtate of the force at this port. With the proper officers, and a warrant from a juſtice of the peace, the veſſel was boarded and ſearched, the American captain offering to take his oath, if ſuch a perſon was concealed on board his veſſel, he did not know a ſyllable of the buſineſs, and he was ſure, did without his privity or conſent. After opening ſeveral concealed places, and ſearching the ſhip very narrowly, the French pilot was fortunately diſcovered under a ſcuttle, lying at full length, and immediately ſecured, and the veſſel detained till an examination took place at Dock, before the Rev. Juſtice Williams, which occurred yeſterday, when the American captain took his oath he knew nothing of the circumſtance of the Franco pilot's being concealed in his veſſel. He is ordered to appear this day before Mr. Juſtice Williams, at ten o'clock, with the pilot, and all perſons concerned, to undergo a further examination. It is ſuppoſed the French pilot will be committed for trial.

Sept. 17.

ATTACK ON GRANVILLE.

Through our Portſmouth letter of yeſterday we conveyed to our readers the welcome intelligence of a ſucceſsful attack made by Sir James Saumarez on the town and port of Granville. The force employed on this expedition, which was invited by the preparations carrying on at that place, conſiſted of the Cerberus frigate (ſome letters ſay the Hydra) two ſloops and ſome bomb veſſels. Having ſtationed theſe to the beſt advantage, he ſoon ſilenced the batteries and approaching nearer, bombarded the town, ſet fire to the ſhipping, and deſtroyed a great number of the gun boats in the harbour. The inhabitants, in the utmoſt trepidation, fled up the country. Sir James Saumarez, however, continued the bombardment until his ammunition was nearly expended, and then returned without the loſs of a ſingle man. The commander himſelf was ſlightly wounded in the leg by a ſplinter. By this gallant and ſpirited atchievement, the preparations which were made, as it is underſtood, for the invaſion of Jerſey and Guernſey are not only deſtroyed, but another leſſon is given to the inſolent enemy on the folly of menacing this thinly-wheel, on his own ſhores and under his own batteries, he cannot remain protected from the ſtrenuous impulſe of Britiſh valour.

September 20.

The Baltic fleet may be hourly expected to arrive in our ports. One of them arrived yeſterday morning in Yarmouth roads, from St. Petersburg, bound to London, which parted from the fleet in a gale of wind on the 12th inſt.

DUBLIN, September 17.

After a very long trial, Robert Emmett, one of the principal conſpirators in Ireland, who it was ſaid, drew up the conſtitution for the government of the United Iriſhmen, was ſentenced on the 20th September at Dublin, and executed the next day.

The Hibernian Journal ſays:—

Yeſterday about three o'clock, Robert Emmett, who had been found guilty of High Treaſon the day before, was conveyed under a ſtrong guard from Kilmainham gaol, in a carriage, accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Grant and the Rev. Mr. Gamble, in a ſlow ſolemn pace over Sarah's Bridge, and from thence along Barrack-ſtreet, and over the Queen's Bridge, to Thomas-ſtreet, where a gallows had been erected. On their arrival at the fatal ſpot, the priſoner remained about twenty minutes in the carriage with the clergymen: he then aſcended the platform with a firm compoſed air, untied his neckcloth, and adjuſted the rope about his neck; after exclaiming in an audible voice, "I die in peace with all mankind," the fatal ſignal was given, when he was turned off. After hanging about 30 minutes, his body was cut down, when the executioner perfotmed the remaining part of the ſentence, of cutting off his head. His remains were afterwards conveyed to Newgate.

The Lord Nelſon, Eaſt Indiaman, captured by the Bellona privateer, has been recaptured, and arrived at Plymouth.

We have every reaſon to believe that Bonaparte has not abandoned his deſign of attempting the invaſion. It behoves us to be prepared, and indeed prepared as we already are, we can have no apprehenſions with reſpect to the reſult.

Government has given orders for barracks to be built at Falkſtone, for one thouſand cavalry. The timber is already at the place where they are to be erected.

General Ruſſel was on Wedneſday laſt tranſmitted to Kilmainham gaol. It is imagined he will not be brought to juſtice until next term, when he is to appear in the King's Bench, to be identified as a perſon who has been outlawed.

GLASGOW, Sept. 10.

Tueſday's London Gazette contains an order in council for the blockade of the entrance of the port of Havre-de-Grace, and the other ports of the Seine, and from this time all the meaſures, authoriſed by the law of nations, and the reſpective treaties between his Majeſty and the different neutral powers, will be adopted and executed with reſpect to all veſſels which may attempt to violate this blockade. By this ſpirited and wiſe meaſure, it will be rendered very difficult for France to procure articles of colonial produce, of which, it is ſaid, ſhe is known at preſent to be in great want. The line of coaſt from the mouth of the Elbe and the Weſer to L'Orient is now completely blockaded, and not even a fiſhing ſmack dare venture out of the Scheldt, Dunkirk, Oſtend, Calais, Boulogne, Havre, St. Maloes, or Breſt. Toulon being alſo blockaded, hardly a French veſſel is to be ſeen in the Atlantic or Mediterranean. Several attacks have, of late been made on the harbour and batteries of Boulogne by our veſſels.

An expedition of the 4th regiment, 52d light infantry, 50th, 70th, and rifle corps, is ſaid to have ſailed on Tueſday.

Flotilla, off Boulogne, Aug. 30.

The enemy are ſo cloſely watched by our cruiſers, and ſo much harraſſed by our frequent attacks, that they will doubt begin to be heartily tired of our viſits. Yeſterday, the Diſcovery, Bloodhound and Archer, began at eleven o'clock, and kept up a continual fire with ſhot and ſhells, till four in the afternoon: the enemy, at the ſame time, opened from all quarters, throwing very heavy ſhells and very long ſhot; but thank God none of them did us any injury. One brig at the end of Bologne Pier was ſet on fire by a ſhell from the Diſcovery, and a good deal of other damage was done by the bombardment.

Sept. 3. eight o'clock.

We have juſt made the retreat from a hot action with the batteries: ſhot and ſhells have been flying about like hail for nearly three hours; but none of the ſquadron, as far as I could diſcover, has ſuſtained any injury. Our veſſel fired about thirty ſhot—Our people work the guns exceedingly well and with great quickneſs. Had not the wind been too much to the north, we ſhould have continued our attack a little longer. We have not hauled off for the night; but I imagine we ſhall be at it again in the morning. The Spaniſh meſſenger who lately arrived with diſpatches from the Court of Madrid, left town laſt Saturday on his return, with the ultimatum of our cabinet.

Extract of a letter from a ſeaman on board his Majeſty's ſhip Charwell, dated St. Maloes, Aug. 12.

"Yeſterday morning, in company with the Cerberus, Infolent, and Ming gun brigs, we took a ſhing boat off Granville. The fellow in her told us of an expedition fitting out againſt Jerſey, and in the night would pilot the boats in a creek, where a number of them were lying, and aſſured us we could either take or deſtroy. Accordingly, the ſignal for boats, manned and armed, was made by the Commodore. Our large cutter, with the firſt lieutenant, a midſhipman, and twelve armed men, were ſent on board the Cerberus; ſeven boats ſhoved off from her at nine P. M. and rowed towards the ſhore: at five A. M. they returned with four prizes. After having paſſed ſeveral batteries, and gone two miles up St. Villiere Creek, they boarded them, and brought them away from under the fire of near 300 troops, drawn up in a regular line, and keeping a conſtant fire as our men were making their retreat; but all would not do, for they brought them off without any loſs; but the pilot was near paying for his villainy to his country; a muſket ball paſſed thro' the ſide of his jacket."

CAPTURE.

LONDON, Sept. 25.

The Lord Nelson was captured by the Bellona French privateer, on the 24th of Aug. lat. off Cape Citar, within sight of land. The Bellona was pierced for 30 guns, and had 28, with 260 men. The engagement commenced very warmly at the distance of a cable length, the Lord Nelson being previously cleared for action. The enemy made the first attempt to board on the starboard quarter, but in this they did not succeed. They then ran up on the Lord Nelson's starboard bow, grappled, and boarded on the fore-castle. The enemy were gallantly oppofed by the people on deck; the paffengers bravely contributing their affiftance, but they rushed out in fuch numbers that the overpowered thofe on deck. Almoft every perfon ftationed there, was either killed or wounded. The tops, lower yards, &c. of the Bellona, were filled with men firing down on the Lord Nelfon's deck. The action laffed an hour and fifteen minutes. The privateer had eleven killed, among whom was the fecond captain, and 28 wounded.

Three days after the Lord Nelfon was taken, an Englifh brig privateer, of 14 four pounders, fell in with and attacked her four different times, until fhe was fo much difabled as to be obliged to fheer off for her own fafety. It was during this action that Mr. Spottifwod, brother to the captain of the Lord Nelfon, was killed by a fhot from the privateer. He had been many years refident in the Eaft Indies, and had made a very handfome fortune. The officers of the Lord Nelfon fpeak in the higheft terms of the gallant manner in which the attack was began and continued by the brig privateer, it is lament that they have not an opportunity of difcovering where and to whom the belongs, that a proper teftimony might be paid to the merit of the officers and crew.

Soon after the above mentioned privateer had quitted the Lord Nelfon, an Englifh man of war hove in fight. To fave his prize from the chance of being taken, the captain of the Bellona gave chace to the ftrange fail, and fo managed as to call off her attention from the Indiaman, until fhe was quite out of fight; but fhe never again rejoined the prize, which, however, would have got fafe into Corunna, had not the Tonant, Spartiate, and the Coloffus been cruizing off that port. The Sea Gull had then been in chafe of her 19 hours.

The fhip that firft came up with the Lord Nelfon was his Majefty's fhip the Coloffus, to whom fhe ftruck, without firing a gun.

When the Lord Nelfon was taken by the French, the firft lieutenant of the Bellona was put on board as prize mafter, who, in the feveral attacks, defended her moft gallantly, and behaved to the paffengers and other prifoners in the moft handfome manner.

Captain Spottifwod could not be removed on account of his wounds.

Colonel Murray was killed by a fhot from the Sea Gull, during the chace.

The Bellona is the fame veffel that lately captured the Colland's Grove, Eaft Indiaman, and is faid to be the very fhip that annoyed us fo much in the Bay of Bengal laft war. Since the commencement of her naval depredations, fhe is fuppofed to have committed more ferious aggreffions againft the commerce of this country than three fourths of all the privateers lately fent from France, having captured incredible numbers of prizes. She is a remarkably fwift failing veffel, as her manoeuvre to divert the attention of our man of war from her prize fufficiently proves. Her crew, fome of whom are blacks from St. Domingo, are a very bold and defperate fet of men.

The Lord Nelfon and cargo are eftimated at 300,000l. and the falvage is 12 1-2 per cent. This was her fecond voyage.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.

CAPTURE OF DEMERARA.

Capt. Lynch, arrived at quarantine ground, from Barbadoes, in 22 days, informs, that on the 25th Sept. the Mail packet boat arrived at Barbocs from Demerara, bringing certain accounts of the capture of that colony by the Britifh.—And that on the following day, (the 26th) 20 Englifh fleet of feven or eight fail of large fhipping, left Barbadoes for Demerara.

A letter from Barbadoes, dated Sept. 26, fays, "Demerara was taken by the Britifh the 19th inft. without oppofition."

In corroboration of this, we have accounts from St. Euftatia, in 17 days at Portland, ftating that the Britifh had landed 1500 troops near Demerara, for the purpofe of attacking it.

Berbice and Oronoka have fhared the fate of Demerara, having both been furrendered to the Engliih.

October 29.

Extract of a letter from Halifax, Oct. 17.

"The Prince Adolphus Packet, arrived yefterday with the mails from Falmouth, in 25 days paffage, and brought London papers to the 17th ult. Their contents are not very intereffing.

"Spain endeavours to avoid a war with Great Britain; and a wifh to preferve Portugal from the confequences of a French vifit prevents the Britifh Miniflers from taking that ftep with regard to Spain, which the people of Great Britain, feem to demand, particularly the naval claffs.

"It is faid the Northern Powers of Europe muft come forward and fupport the neutrality of the Sound and Baltic, but they appear very tardy. Notwithftanding the French are faid to have garrifoned Lubec, it appears from the Marine Lift, that a great number of veffels continue to enter from and clear out for that place and the ports of the Baltic, as if no obftruction exifted or was expected.

"An expedition has really failed from Portfmouth, conffting of about 5000 men, commanded by Gen. Moore, among which is the 4th regiment formerly in this garrifon. The naval arrangements are committed to Sir Sidney Smith.

"From the immenfe preparations Bonaparte is making for the invafion of England, it is now thought they will not be completed, to that the enterprife can be undertaken this year.—A ftate of fufpence is injurious to Great Britain—the refult of an attempt to invade would undoubtedly be glorious to her."

ALBANY, Nov. 7.

Capt. Bliss reports that as late as the 25th Sept. no events of confequence had tranfpired. Spain continued to preferve her neutrality; and Portugal, as yet, was exempt from French violence. In the North of Europe affairs remained in the indecifive fituation in which they were left by our laft accounts.—The Englifh nation, inftead of dreading the threatened invafion, began to fear that the Corfican boaffter had entirely relinquifhed his defign. To meet the military ardour of the people, it was believed, fome ferious defcents on the coaft of France were meditated by the Britifh government.—Such an enterprize would be joined by a vaft number of volunteers.

The laft accounts from the ports of Holland reprefented the preparations for the invafion of England, as nearly in a ftate of completion. In the Texel there were faid to be ready for fea eight fhips of the line, a number of frigates, and 530 gun boats. At Flufhing and other ports, 300 boats and feveral frigates. The boats are each 50 feet long, and 20 broad, capable to contain fifty men, and to carry two large cartronades in the bow. The Dutch and French troops in Zealand amounted to 24,000. It was faid, that there were 1500 French troops ready to embark at Dieppe; and that Bonaparte, through his aid-de-camp, had given orders for all the military preparations to be ready on the 22d of September.

In our extracts will be found an account of a gallant enterprize under Sir James Saumarez.

Agreeable to the proclamation of the King, all the aliens were flocking from the kingdom.

War with Spain—The fhip Miffiffippi, captain Dawfon has arrived at Baltimore, in 38 days from Liverpool. By this arrival we learn that France has declared war againft Portugal, and has an army of 200,000 men in motion to effect its conqueft—that Great Britain has declared war againft Spain, for fuffering the French army to march thro' that country againft Portugal; and that her cruizers had captured two Spanifh gallions. We have not as yet been able to obtain any papers by the Miffiffippi—but hope to be able to give our readers late and intereting extracts in our next.—Fed. Gaz.

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 8. Page 11. Persons harbouring, concealing, or abetting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 10. Page 11. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War Office.

Sec. 9. Page 11.

FORFEITURE OF PAY.

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 14. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

A This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 sec. 19, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, September 21.

Letters of the 11th inst. received here this evening from Paris, state that Angereau, instead of repairing to the command assigned for him in the Army of England, had actually set out from Paris in great haste for the Spanish Frontiers. He is to demand of Spain an immediate loan of 50,000,000 francs, a corps of 10,000 men, and six ships of war of different rates and sizes, to be employed in the expedition against England. In case of a denial, he is immediately to enter the Spanish territory with the troops left at his disposal.

September 30.

The damages sustained by the dreadful fire which lately happened at Bombay, is computed at six hundred and fifty thousand pounds; nearly five hundred horses were burnt to death. The houses destroyed will not again be erected where they formerly stood, which is a measure calculated to guard against a similar calamity.

The homeward Leeward Island fleet has experienced a considerable loss on its passage.—Advice is received of two of the Merchantmen, the Stanley of London, and the Eagle of Liverpool, with a sloop of war which was convoying them, having unfortunately foundered at sea; and it is much feared, that some further loffes have been sustained.

October 1.

A letter from Guernsey, dated last Wednesday, says "Our military force at present consists of the 53d, 63d and 91st regiments, the 24 and 5th garrison battalions; other regiments are expected in a short time, as great additions are making to the different barracks in the island. The governor, general Doyle, is indefatigable in his exertions for putting it in a proper state of defence, and within these last two months, embrasures, or bulwarks, have proceeded rapidly, and will in a short time, I have no doubt, render the island impregnable, with the assistance of 150 additional 24 pounders already arrived, or on their passage. No doubt seems to be entertained of an attack in a short time. Some of the papers mention, that Sir James Saumarez has failed on another expedition; his flag is now flying on board the Diomede in these roads. The frigates on this station are cruising off Cherbourg and Granville (the Alcmene and Hydra). Respecting the late stealth, nothing further has transpired, but that the gun-boats have suffered very considerably, as out of 191 sheils, scarcely one failed exploding, sticking. The Catherine, when captured, might with the greatest ease have been taken by the boats, but they were greatly intimidated by the launch, with one gun only on board, with which lieutenant Mansel fired nearly 180 shots."

The distance from Yarmouth to the Texel, is 132 miles; from Harwich to Rotterdam, 180; and from the Thames to Flushing, 111.

The field works on the eastern district of London, are already commenced; soldiers work on them under the direction of engineers.

We have the fatisfaction to announce the arrival in the Channel of a fleet of 160 sail from the West-Indies. They are the Leeward Island and Jamaica fleets. The Leeward Island Ships for Liverpool, Glasgow and Greenock, have arrived at their respective ports.

An officer belonging to our frontiers, has arrived yesterday evening at Dover, gives some information which may be relied on. He is in his letter, dated the 8th P. M.—"The boisterous state has entirely ceased this afternoon, in consequence of the unsuitableness of our vessels being exhausted, and the supplies from the Downs have not yet reached them. Some damage has been done to the Leith frigate, and the Antwerp sloop; not so much from the enemy's gun-boats as from the fury of the wind from off Ostend on shore. In the heat of the commonade a shell fell on board the latter, but happily the explosion was unattended by any fatal consequences. Two other ships have been dispatched from the Downs to relieve them. It appears, that one of the enemy's gun-boats have been dismasted, and two driven on shore.

October 4.

From the account of a gentleman who was at Granville, when that place was attacked by Sir James Saumarez, and who arrived at Falmouth on Thursday last, it appears that by the late bombardment, 85 houses were destroyed, some small vessels and one gun-boat sunk, and 400 shells thrown into the place. There were, however, fifteen gun-boats at Granville ready for sea, eight upon the division, and a great number of troops were assembled in that neighbourhood for the embarking on the projected expedition.

A letter from Dublin, 22d September, 1803, says, "A most extraordinary transaction in the monied world happened yesterday: Luke White called on Mr. Wickham, and told him, that he understood government were prepared for money, and that he had five hundred thousand pounds sterling at their service, on their own terms. This timely aid was accepted (as part of the eight millions allowed by parliament to be raised by treasury bills) and treasury bills at 5 per cent. are preparing to be issued to him for the amount. He is to pay in three instalments, the 20th September, October, and November.

LONDON, September 30.

DREADFUL FIRE—ASTLEY'S THEATRE.

About half past two o'clock yesterday morning, a thick and black smoke was seen by the watchman to issue out of the back part of Astley's elegant little Theatre. The alarm was immediately given, and the doors were burst open. No sooner was the air introduced than the flames broke out in the interior part of the building, in that part where the scenes and machinery are kept. The performances of the preceding night were The Heroine of China and The Invasion. In the latter there is a brilliant display of fireworks, illuminations, &c. It is the business of the lamp-lighters to see that all the lamps are carefully extinguished, more particularly after any entertainment in which there are fireworks. The usual precautions it is said were not taken on Thursday night, and some of the lamp-lighters were negligent. The consequence was, that all the lamps were either not extinguished, or some lamps were left burning near the materials used for the making of fireworks. It is easy to imagine how rapid the spread of fire must be among such combustible materials, and what food must have been afforded to the flames by the canvas scenery, and the thin wooden partitions and machinery upon the stage. The flames raged with most astonishing fury. It is said to have broken out in the lamp room; some sparks from the fireworks fell upon the tow in the room, and set it in a blaze. The fire-engines were immediately sent for, and the populace, who assembled in crowds, ran down to the Thames with buckets and pails, thinking to be able to be of some assistance. Unavailing, however, were their well-meant efforts. Nothing could stop the fury of the fire. Consternation prevailed all the adjoining houses, are small. There is a row of small houses called Amphitheatre-row, the back parts of which almost touch the Theatre. The wretched inhabitants were seen running to and fro, nearly naked; throwing their goods out of the windows, and encreased the horror of the scene by fresenss and shrieks. The same scene of misery and distress occurred in Phœnix-Street, which runs parallel with Amphitheatre-row. Astley's theatre was fituated between those streets.

In the mean time every effort was made to save as much as possible from the Theatre. The horses were all got out without injury; but it was impossible to save, as we understand, any of the scenery or machinery, the flames were so rapid. The engines arrived as soon as possible, and began playing upon the Theatre, which occupies a considerable depth from the street. Little effect was produced for some time. The fire in the mean time had communicated to the adjoining houses. Never were firemen more active and unremitting in their exertions; but the houses unfortunately were most of them small and slightly built, many of them chiefly of wood.

The flames, when they reached the scenes, of which there was an immense quantity, and chiefly painted in oil, raged with such fury, and diffused such an intense heat, that there is scarcely a pane of glass within the distance of fifty feet which was not cracked or shrivelled. The houses in front, at each side of the Amphitheatre, the inhabitants having received a timely alarm, and being supplied with water have been but slightly injured. To the rear of the building, the first intimation of danger was given by the shrill cries of some pigs, expressive of their sense of heat & suffocation. The houses were inhabited by a number of poor families who had great difficulty in saving their numerous children from the impending calamity. These houses were defended by a strong party with, but the great masses of the scenery burned so rapidly adjoining the flames from thence penetrated under the eaves, seized on the timbers, and in the way destroyed the greater part of the upper floors. Of the theatre nothing now remains but the mere shell—nothing which was combustible, being completely destroyed.

The top of the Theatre was much higher than the adjoining houses. When the roof fell in, it fell upon them and did them much damage. Nearly forty houses are either destroyed or injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Astley, we believe, were not in town, though if we are rightly informed he came home before the fire had destroyed his Theatre. The mother of Mrs. Astley unfortunately was in the house that was inhabited by her son and daughter, in front of the theatre. She was an old lady, about sixty, and rather infirm. Two gentlemen, Messrs. Moor and Burnett, made use of every effort in their power to save her. A ladder was raised to the window. She was seen to approach the window, and as we hear, to run back on a sudden, as if recollecting something—probably she wished to save some papers or money in the house. At this was coming down in the usual old time, the floor of the room gave way and she was seen to fall in with it. It was now impossible to save her: she perished.

With a very commendable alacrity the St. James Volunteers and Lambeth Association ran to arms as soon as they heard of the fire; they formed a line round the fire and the engines, and thus kept off the crowd from impeding the efforts of the firemen, and prevented the furniture of the adjoining houses which was brought out into the street; all the space from Westminster bridge to the Turnpike was loaded with the effects of the poor sufferers.

The whole of the Theatre is consumed, and nothing is left of that beautiful little building but a heap of black and smoaking ruins. The range of the five was most fatal towards and to Princes street. The back part of between ten and twenty houses are consumed in that street, and as it is inhabited by poor people, none of whom are, we suppose, insured, their distress may easily be imagined. They were running about for hours in a state of frantic despair.

Most of the houses on the Westminster-bridge side the Theatre are much damaged, particularly the back part of Mr. Cruikington's, the chemist.

About six o'clock the flames were got under.

We have not heard that any but Mrs. Astley's mother fell a victim to the flames.—Two children belonging to a waterman were in great danger, but by the intrepidity of the firemen were saved. A constable named Hart, was very active in endeavouring to rescue as much as possible of Mr. Astley's property from the flames. He succeeded in moving the chests, in which were deposited plate and other valuables.

Mr. and Mrs. Astley came to town we hear, yesterday morning to behold a scene not few have ever had the misery to witness; their property in one night destroyed; their mother a mangled corpse. It was only on Wednesday that the mother of Mr. Astley was buried. The father, too, of Mr. Astley is now a prisoner of war in France.—What a scene of accumulated misery and horror!

It is rumoured that Mr. Astley was in the act of taking his mother in law out of the window, when the beams gave way, and she fell in. It is supposed that she had gone back to save the money, there being the receipts of two nights in the house, as the had at one time a near prospect of safety, a ladder being raised to her window, by which she might have escaped, if she had not been fatally induced to return.

An accident of the same kind and in the same place occured on the night of the Duke of York's birth day, August 16, 1794. The destruction which then took place, and in a similar way, was as complete as in the present instance.

A number of wretches, as usual, profited of the moment of affliction, and under the pretext of assisting despoiled the sufferers of watches, spoons, &c.

This nefarious practice, however, was put an end to by the arrival of the soldiery, who maintained strict order. At one o'clock yesterday there was still some fire to be seen through a thick smoke, but the engines had ceased to play and there was no danger whatever of its spreading further.

THE ORACLE.

YORK: SATURDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1803.

A gentleman from Chicago, to the house of Mr. Dunlap, was on Wednesday last unfortunately knocked down, and severely bruised by a drove of Highland cattle, which were passing through that city. The gentleman, we are happy to learn, is in a fair way of recovery.

By a recent proclamation it appears, that Calais and Boulogne have been declared to be in a state of Blockade, and that all persons found trading with those ports will be seized and confiscated, and the offenders punished as pirates.

Bonaparte was till lately in the habit of breakfasting with a cup of coffee, and the first news he received was upon the Frankfort Gazette, and the second upon the gun boats.—The important crisis was rapidly approaching, and little doubt can exist that calmness and intrepidity would have at last triumphed over the British Nation.

The terms of Capitulation which the citizens of Alexandria and Dalmatia surrendered to the French arms, are in our possession, and will be laid before the public next month.

MONTAGU.

His Majefty's Sloop Autumn, off Calais, September 28.

"The wind fpringing up yefterday morning from the eaft ward, I thought it a proper opportunity to attack the enemy's veffels in Calais, in order that they fhould not get them up the harbour out of the reach of our fire. I waited till it was half ebb in the harbour, at which time they took the ground; upon the Lap, and after trying and finding out the diftance, our anchors in the bomb; to the N. E. of the town, the other part of the fquadron abreaft of the fowns and pier-heads, to draw the enemy's fire as much as we could from the bombs, fo as not to greatly affect us. After we anchored abreaft of the town and pier-head battery, the enemy opened their fire on us from all directions, amongft which I found they had mortars; the firft fhell fell within a fhip's length of us and burft under water, our veffels at that time were by ebbe, that I thought there was a great probability fome of their fhells might fall on board, which I found our fhot (though they all reached the pier-heads) would not go fo far up as their fhips. I therefore made the fignal to weigh and open to a greater diftance, remaining at anchor myfelf. The fquadron has been very fortunate in receiving no damage from the enemy's fire. The bombs were now keeping up a well-directed fire, many of the fhells evidently falling in the midft of three gunboats; the fhells that fell over their gun-boats went into the town, and muft have done great damage; the eaft end of the town appeared to be on fire for fome time. From the enemy's boats and veffels being covered under the land, it was impoffible to judge what damage they fuftained, but it muft have been confiderable; it now came on to blow in from the N. E. that the fprings would not hold the fhips againft the wind and tide; the Tartarus's anchor having given way, I was obliged to make the fignal to difcontinue the fire.

I have the honor to be, &c.

Copy of a Letter from Admiral Lord Keith, to Sir Evan Nepean, Bart. dated Monarch, off Broad ftairs, September 30.

SIR,

Although for their Lordfhip's information, a copy of a letter from Captain Honeyman, of his Majefty's fixty Lyon, to Rear-Admiral Montagu, reporting the attempts which he had made with his Majefty's fhips and veffels under his orders, to difturb the progrefs of the enemy's gun-boats, from the eaftward toward the part of Boulogne; and hence the honor to be, &c. KEITH.

His Majefty's fhip Lion, off Boulogne, September 29, 1803.

SIR,

In anfwer to yefter's of this date, I have the honor to acquaint your, that the enemy's gun veffels, being twenty-fix in number, were yefterday difcovered coming out of Calais, from after I had difpatched Lieut. Cameron to you. I immediately gave chace with the fquadron under my command; but although every exertion was ufed on our parts, the anchored clofe in with the Pier at Boulogne, after a fevere cannonade of three hours, which was returned from them, as well as their numerous batteries on fhore. It was my intention to have bombarded them in that ftrallem, and had every fignal for that purpofe; but the wind blowing ftrong off fhore, and a lee tide, prevented the bomb-fhips taking their ftations accordingly. At day-light laft morning, another fquadron of the enemy's gun-boats (25 in number) were difcovered coming from Wiffant; and I immediately proceeded to attack them, and after a fevere cannonade for nearly three hours, they anchored in the Atrallem with the veffels laft night, with the reft of more of them, they having been driven by fhot and fhells from their veffels. There are at prefent fifty-four gun veffels at anchor outide the Pier at Boulogne. I am happy to add that I have not received reports of any material injury being done to any of the fquadron under my command. A fhell fell on board the Eolus, which fhe had in her hold, doing little injury to the fhip, and without hurting a man.

I have the honor to be, &c.

R. HONEYMAN.

Admiral De Winter is faid to be appointed by the Batavian Government, Governor and Commander in Chief of the naval force of Holland. General Delmont has taken the marine troops at Breft.

By our accounts from Upper de Jaxe, that vigorous operations on the coaft of France are for the prefent fufpended; we believe it arifes from the delights it is to be the intention of Government, that they fhall be immediately refumed, with added vigour, and, as we doubt not, with fuperior effect.

The Peggy from Petersburgh, and Ruth from Riga, having ftruck upon the rocks, it is feared will be loft. The Crufcent frigate is put into Marftrand. The gale blew from the N. W. and continued from Saturday evening till Monday evening.—More bad effects are expected, as the Fleet have a number of rafts and dead bodies.

NEW-YORK, November 17.

Mr. Dawſon, who came paſſenger in the Eliza, from Cape Francois, informs us, that the French had evacuated Port-au-Prince, which was taken poſſeſſion of by the Britiſh. The brigands had carried Port-le-Paix by ſtorm, although defended by 500 men. The Britiſh had ſtipulated with the blacks that the white inhabitants ſhould not be maſſacred, and that the French troops ſhould be delivered to the Engliſh commander as priſoners of war. Juſt before the Eliza ſailed, his Britannic Majeſty's ſhip of war Vanguard brought two ſchooner off the Cape, and intercepted a letter from the board from Rochambeau to the French Miniſter in the United States, informing him that he had only ten days proviſions in the place, and that he muſt inevitably ſurrender within that time if he did not receive a ſupply.

Robert Adams, who had embezzled the property of the Bank of England to an enormous amount, and who was acquitted on a former trial from ſome informality in the indictment, has been arraigned for the ſame offence under a new indictment, and found guilty. An Act of Parliament, paſſed in the laſt reign, having made it felony to embezzle the property of the Bank, it is ſuppoſed he will be ſent for tranſportation.

Extract of a letter from a reſpectable Merchant in Lisbon, dated 30th September, to his correſpondent in this city, received via Philadelphia.

"A French fleet of fifteen ſhips of the line and frigates have ſailed from Breſt for Ireland, troops on board, and a Britiſh fleet is in purſuit them."

From a late London Paper.

The government of England have it in contemplation to build a Military and Naval Hoſpital in the eaſt ſtreet of Portſmouth.

Eleven ſhips of the line, one fifty gun ſhip, five frigates, and fix gun boats, compoſe the Britiſh force now in the Mediterranean.

The accounts from Vienna ſtate the cholera continued to rage in that country. On the 6th of the 24th Moon, a dreadful conflict took place between the King's troops, amounting to 30,000, and the rebels. The latter were repulſed ſeven times, and often returned to the attack; they at length mounted the ramparts of the baſtion where the King was in perſon. It was at this period that the fight became ſanguinary beyond deſcription—the King placed in the centre of his troops, ſword in hand, made diſtraction all around him.

About the concluſion of the afternoon the ramparts were entirely cleared, and the guns were ordered to be opened; the King then attacked and followed the rebels to the banks of the river; where the engagement was renewed with redoubled fury, and the moſt dreadful ſlaughter commenced; for the guns were then played upon them in front, and the river being broad and rapid, and night coming on, thouſands periſhed in the water. Wang-Tonkin, ſon of the Emperor, whole brother was King of Tonking, fled to the mountains; but his younger brother had not equal good fortune. Thirty General Officers and Colonels, as well as 24,000 men, were taken priſoners; the number which were given out are ſaved at 30,000. The day after the battle, the King called to the capital and iſſued orders to attack the fugitive rebels in every direction in the province of Quin Hin.

The following very handſome character is given of the Britiſh gentleman by PATRICK MILLER, Eſq. of Dalſwinton, in Scotland, in a letter to the Depty Lieutenant for Dumfriesſhire:

"Dalſwinton, 20th Aug. 1803.

"DEAR SIR,

"Having expended, by a long courſe of laborious experiments, ten thouſand pounds, with a view to benefit mankind, I am now, perhaps, the fit man and was, but I am unable to attend at all Courts and act as Executor. I am therefore, Sir, with the moſt ſincere reſpect, your moſt obedient humble ſervant, P. MILLER."

"To David Scott, Eſq. D. L."

TO VICTUALLERS.

Chriſt Carrington, Publican of the Sword of Agriculture, in the true ſpirit of practical humanity, propoſes to the Victualling Office of the Britiſh Navy, the following method of preſerving Beef. Whole gentlemanly manner, with a commendable zeal and perſeverance totally overcame the obſtinacy or prejudices of the perſon employed under them; in conſequence of which, the method of ſaving beef will be found, by thoſe who make the trial, an honorable and troubleſome method—but one of the moſt complete ſucceſs. The animal falls ſenſeleſs in an inſtant, and non-acquainted the beef will have the ſame appearance in general, is found to be in a much ſuperior condition to that in which it is killed by the common method. In the ſame way we are aſſured by the Rev. Mr. Marſhall, oxen and ſheep of all kinds may be inſtantaneouſly killed, on inſerting a ſmall knife with a ſharp pointed pen-knife, of peculiar conſtruction, gradually into the brain about half an inch or an inch above the eyes, according to the ſize of the beaſt—a method, which will be recommended by thoſe who wiſh to leſſen the unneceſſary ſuffering of animal nature.—Monthly Rev. Aug. 1803.

INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

Extract of a letter from John De Carro, a Doctor of Medicine at Padua, to Dr. Haygarth, F. Haag, at Rafcliffe, dated 31ſt Auguſt, 1803.

"A thing, which will aſtonish, my dear friend, your ſurprize, and that of all the world, is a new diſcovery made by two phyſicians, M. Abbeni of Conſtantinople, and M. Imbard at Salonika, in Greece.—The experiments of thoſe two phyſicians, who have never had a correſpondence with each other, confirm the idea that VACCINATION is a defence againſt the PLAGUE.—The proofs of the firſt are that of ſix thouſand perſons vaccinated at Conſtantinople, not one has been infected with the plague; that children, made to ſuck the milk of nurſes who had the plague, have themſelves eſcaped; that an Italian phyſician, who has devoted himſelf in Turkey to the ſtudy of the plague, thoroughly convinced of the anti-peſtilential power of the Cow-Pock, expoſed himſelf in every poſſible way to perſons infected with the plague in a hoſpital deſtined for that purpoſe.—They have diſcovered in the villages round Conſtantinople the diſorder among the Cows, and in the hands of thoſe who milk them; that it reſults from the accounts of thoſe perſons, that in their country neither the Plague nor the ſmall-Pox has raged epidemically, when thoſe ſcourges have made the greateſt ravages in the neighbourhood; that when an inhabitant of thoſe villages, has caught the Plague in other countries and returned with it to his own country, had died of it or been cured, never has the diſeaſe ſpread. That finally, the confidence of many claſſes of people, particularly the Armenians, in the anti-peſtilential power of the Cow-Pock, is ſo great, that they annually vaccinate a great number of men, and ſo ſecurely againſt the Plague, that the phyſicians of Conſtantinople have requeſted me to make this new diſcovery public."

Grenville (lately attacked by Sir James Saumarez's ſyſtem too) in a ſmall ſea-port on the coaſt of Lower Normandy. "It was built by the Engliſh in the reign of Charles VII. on an eminence above the ſea, in which a mole has been thrown. Its principal trade is in the Newfoundland Fiſhery. Fifty Granville and St. Malo above eighty veſſels annually ſail on that branch of commerce, ſo productive as a nurſery of Seamen. It has a conſiderable connexion with the Iſland of Jerſey, from which it is diſtant about 20 leagues.

In the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, there are one thouſand eight hundred and forty-two Schools ſupported by public charity—In them there are regularly inſtructed, 33,284 Boys, and 9650 Girls, in all 42,874.

[illegible] POWER, Gibraltar, Nov. [illegible]

By one of the latest arrivals [illegible] from Boulogne, we learn, that [illegible] a night passes but shells and rockets are thrown into Boulogne when it is moderate. The loss of men at Boulogne is very much exaggerated, and most of [illegible] inhabitants have left it. Two large batteries are erected on the [illegible] the work of [illegible] men in the day; is often times destroyed by our fire and shells. Some hundreds of shells have been thrown by the enemy's mortars at our [illegible], but without doing them any damage. [illegible]

LIVERPOOL, September 29.

Almost from London, dated September 27, says, "Several of the volunteer corps which offered their [illegible] part of the kingdom have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march; but to the West London, this morning exercised at Highgate, only an hour's notice is allowed; the condition is also extended to the Tower of London."

The conduct of administration, in adopting at this period of awful uncertainty, the [illegible] offensive operation which Great Britain, acting [illegible] alone can employ against France, in Europe, gives us sincere satisfaction. It is our fervent hope, that not a town of importance, accessible [illegible] may on force, on the enemy's coast, will be suffered to [illegible] experiencing a similar attack as that on Granville or Cherbourg. We shall then be able, in some measure to retaliate for the condition of [illegible] in which we [illegible] to have been [illegible] design to keep this country [illegible] he vainly imagines to [illegible] the baneful tendency of effectually [illegible] our glorious resources—resources which have occasioned his deep rooted envy; but which have hitherto fortunately proved beyond his utmost efforts to materially injure or [illegible].

The most recent continental advices authorize us to think that the time for putting in execution the [illegible] invasion is not very far distant. Several movements have lately been made, indicative of the very speedy occurrence of that great event: an event calculated to excite the most [illegible] interest in every British bosom; but [illegible] we trust, for which this country will be fully prepared.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced in this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pg. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Pg. 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the case of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon for life, or a term of years, as his Majesty shall think meet; and the punishment so returning before the expiration of the time limited by such other Act of his Majesty, will be dealt with as before, [illegible] for Breach of Chief.

Sec. 6. Pg. 13. Persons harbouring Deserters, or assisting them to escape, are now liable to penalties of twenty Pounds for every such offence, instead of five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 66. Pg. 116. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 60. Pg. 116. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec 16. Pg. 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

---

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12. to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Parts (who are not liable by their original engagements to serve out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Sir Robert Wilson has published the following, in consequence of an affection, made to by General Andreossi and published in the official papers, relative to the late Negociations, which was supposed to allude to Sir Robert's account of the murder of the Turkish prisoners and sick French, by order of General Buonaparte, at Jaffa.

TO THE EDITOR, &c.

"Sir,

"In the official correspondence lately published, there appears some remarks, which the French Ambassador was instructed to make on my History of the Expedition to Egypt, and of which I am called upon to take notice: not to personal controversy with Gen. Andreossi, for, conscious of the superior virtue of my cause, I had myself neither aggrieved nor irritated by the language he has used; but that the public may not attribute my silence to a desire of evading further discussion, and thus the shallow mode of contradiction adopted by the Chief Consul seem an unmerited consideration.

"The Ambassador observes, "That a Colonel in the English army has published a work in England, filled with the most atrocious and disgusting calumnies against the French army and general. The fact it contains has been contradicted by the reception which Colonel Sebastiani experienced. The publicity of his report, was at once a refutation and reparation, which the French army had a right to expect."

"But surely a new significavion must have been attached in France to the word calumny, when such a term is applied to my account of the conduct of the French troops in Egypt, and the consequent disposition of the inhabitants towards them.

"Independent, however, of the proofs to be adduced in corroboration of my statement, Europe may justly appreciate the probable truth of what I have written, when she recollects the unparalleled sufferings endured by the unoffending countries upon which, during the last war, a French army penetrated; and she will at least hesitate to believe that the same armies should spontaneously ameliorate their conduct in a country more remote, where the atrocities they might commit would be less liable to publicity, and that this extraordinary change should be in favor of a people, whose principles and resistance might have excited the refentment of more generous invaders.

"I will not enter into an unnecessary detail of the numerous facts which I could urge; but I appeal to the honor of every British officer employed in Egypt, whether those observations are not fecundly true, which describe the French as being hateful to the inhabitants of that country, which represent them as having merited that hatred from the ruin and devastation with which their progress through it has been marked; and I am ready, if there be one who refuses to sanction this relation, to refign for ever, every pretension to honorable reputation, and fubmit, without farther struggle, to that odium which should attach to calumny, and a wilful perverfion of truth.

"But, Sir, I feel confident there is no individual, who will not amply confirm all that I have written on this fubject; and perhaps Europe has a right to cohdemn me for not having made the accusation till the stranger, when I can produce general orders of the French army for the destruction of villages and their inhabitants; when I can prove, that above 30,000 of the natives perished by the swords of the French foldiery; and that every act of violence was countenanced, and particularly in Upper Egypt, which could outrage humanity, and disgrace the character of civilized nations. When writing a history of the campaign, was it poffible not to expreft indignation against the authors of fuch exhibitions? Would it have been decent not to have felt the animation of that virtuous pride which a reflection on the different conduct of the British foldiery muft inspire in the breaft of every Briton? I have affected that a British foldier could travel alone through any part of Egypt, or even penetrate into the Defart, secure from injury or infult. I have defcribed the natives as confidering the British their benefactors and protectors, foliciting opportunities to manifeft their gratitude, and diftinguifhing their uniform as fcarce lefs the turban of Mahometanifm; and I may venture to predict, that hereafter the French traveller will be compelled to conceal the name of his nation, and owe his fecurity to the refpect paid to the British character.

"But, Sir, upon the effect of Colonel Sebastiani's report juftify the Chief Conful's cenfure, that it is "a complete refutation of what I have advanced," even if we attach to that report implicit belief in its candour and veracity? Is it poffible that the Chief Conful can fuppofe that the world will trace refpect for the French name in the circumftances which occurred to Colonel Sebaftiani at Cairo, and which rendered it neceffary for him to demand protection from the Vizier? The bloody meffage that the apologue of d'Cezzar Pacha was not intelligible even previous to the inftructions being publifhed which Talleyrand fent to the French commercial agents?

"That illuftrious Senator, to whofe virtues and fuperlative talents England owes fo much for her profperity, has declared in the report of Colonel Sebaftiani in no cafe contradicts my ftatement; and I fhould confider that high opinion as amply fufficient to remove any impreffion which the French Conful might otherwife have made, did I not think it a duty to refer fome obfervations on that part of the paragraph which alludes to the direct accufation againft Gen. Bonaparte, that (the public may know I was fully aware of the important refponfibility which it had voluntarily undertaken, and in which each fucceeding moment I was more and more impreffed with the neceffity to examine, whether the accufer or accufed hope fhrunk from the inveftigation, and then fhould fome guilty) who has withdrawn from the tribunal of inquiry.

"I avowed that I was his public accufer; I ftood prepared to fupport the charges. The courts of my country were open to that mode of trial, which as an innocent man, he could alone have required, but of which he did not dare to avail himfelf. It was no anonymous libeller againft whom I was to have to do his anfwer, but againft one (and without any fidiculous vanity I may fay it) whofe rank and character would have juftified his moft ferious attention.

"The charges were too awful to be treated with negligence, and we know that they have not been dealt with indifference. Nor is it poffible that the Firft Conful can imagine the fame of General Bonaparte is lefs fullied, becaufe a few fmall boxes bearing his portrait were received by fome abject or avaricious and dividifh wretch in the ftreets of Cairo. Or can he hope, that the contemptible, but not lefs alarming infinuation, directed againft the gallant and eftimable British General, will divert mankind from a refolution on the crimes with which he ftands arraigned?

"Fortunately for Europe, for it daily becoming more intimately acquainted with the character of the hitherto unfcontrouled man; and I copfefs that I feel confiderable gratification when I indulge the thought that I have contributed to its development.

"Succefs fays the unfcrupulous purpofes, confined to attend him; abject fenates may decree him a throne, or the pantheon; but hiftory fhall render him juftice, and an indignant poftérity ftamp his name with infamy.—

"Hic tumens Gabbias
Et quicquid afpidum concipitur nefas,
Tendebat."

I am, Sir, your's,
ROBERT WILSON, K. M. T.
Lieutenant Colonel.

EXECUTION OF HATFIELD.

CARLISLE, Sept. 5.—This day brought to its clofe the life of one of the moft extraordinary men that have appeared in this or the laft age. Mr. Hatfield has not compofed nations, nor led armies to conquest; but in his line he may be confidered as Robefpierre or a Buonaparte.

A notion very generally prevailed that he would not be brought to juftice, and the arrival of the mail was daily expected with the general intelligence. No pardon arriving, Saturday the 3d was at laft fixed upon as the day of execution. There is a ftory in the town, that fome years ago a reprieve arrived for a criminal at three in the afternoon who had been executed at eight in the morning. The cuftom grew up to fix the laft day a fufficient length of time before, that the moft of it may be received by his Majefty's advifers, and to wait till all hope of royal interference is fled.

The gallows was erected laft night between ruined and damp Tempfe-houses (never afterwards to ftrip, and they have not yet arrived at the elegancy of a drop. The apparatus employed is of the moft fimple defcription. Two poffs are fixed in the ground about fix feet diftant from each other. A bar of laid acrofs them from which the criminal is fufpended. He mounts a cart placed under it, and, when the horfe moves on, he fuffers the dreadful fentence of the law.

The place of execution is the ifland formed by the river Eden, on the North fide of the town between the two bridges. All writers upon criminal jurifprudence have agreed that this folemnity ought to be public; and no fituation could be better calculated to carry their wifhes into effect. Ten thoufand perfons might have eafily be within the hearing of the criminal's voice

There was little curiofity to get near the fcaffold on the prefent occafion, as Mr. Hatfield had often declared fince his conviction that he was refolved not to fuffer the fpectators. The manner in which he has lately demeaned himfelf would have commanded refpect had his caufe been better. From the hour when the jury found him guilty, he has behaved with the utmoft firmnefs and chearfulnefs. He received the vifits of thofe who wifhed to fee him, and talked upon the topics of the day with the greateft intereft or indifference. He could fcarceiv ever be brought to fpeak of his own cafe. He neither blamed the verdict, nor made any confeffion of his guilt. He faid that he had no intention to defraud thofe whofe names he forged; but was never heard to fay that he was to die unjuftly

The alarming nature of the crime of forgery in a commercial country had taught him from the beginning to entertain no hope of mercy. This morning by eleven he was in the chapel of the gaol with the Chaplain. He continued performing his devotions for feveral hours. He had determined to have all his beards cut off before he arrived at the fcaffold, that he might remain as ftort a time as poffible under the gaze of an unfeeling mob.

The poft coming in a little before three, and bringing neither pardon nor reprieve, the Under Sheriff and a detachment of the Cumberland Yeomanry immediately repaired to the prefon near the Englifh gate. A prodigious crowd had previoufly affembled. This was the market day, and people had come from the diftance of many miles out of mere curiofity. A poft chaife came to the door for him from the Bath Inn. Having taken farewell of the Clergyman who attended him to the door, he mounted the ftaps with quick ftedfnefs and compofure. The Gaoler and the Executioner went in along with him. The latter had been brought from Dumfries upon a retaining fee of 20 guineas.

It was exactly four o'clock when the procefhion moved from the gaol. Paffing through the South gate, in about twelve minutes it arrived at the Sands. Half the Yeomanry went before the carriage and the other behind. Upon arriving on the ground, they formed a ring round the fcaffold. It is faid that Mr H. wifhed to have the blinds drawn up, but that fuch an indulgence was held inconfiftent with the intereffs of public juftice.

As foon as the carriage door had been opened by the Under Sheriff, Mr. H. alighted with his two companions. A fmall dung cart, boarded over, had been placed under the gibbet. A ladder was placed to this ftage, which he inftantly afcended. He was drefled in a black jacket, black filk waiftcoat, fuftian pantaloons, white cotton ftockings, and ordinary fhoes — He wore no powder in his hair. He feemed at leaft fifty, and was of a ftout fomething grave and reverend in his afpect, which for a moment made one forget all the crimes laid to his charge. He was perfectly cool and collected. At the fame time he fhewed no difpofition to die game. His conduct difplayed nothing of levity, of infenfibility, or of hardihood. He was more anxious to give proof of refignation than of heroifm. His countenance was extremely pale, but his hand never trembled.

He immediately untied his neck-handkerchief, and placed it handkerchief over his eyes. The Executioner was extremely awkward, and Mr H found it neceffary to give various directions as to the placing of the rope, and the proper method of drawing away the cart. He feveral times put on a fmugged and pitcous fmile. He looked rather exhaufted and faint. Having been near three weeks under fentence of death, he muft have fuffered much, notwithftanding his external bearing, and a reflection of the mifery he had occafioned muft have given him many an anguifhing moment.

Having taken leave of the Gaoler and the Sheriff, he prepared himfelf for his fate. He was at this time heard to exclaim, "my fpirit is ftrong, though my body is weak."

Great apprehenfions were entertained that it would be neceffary to tie him up a fecond time. The noofe flipped twice, and he fell down above 18 inches.— His feet at laft were almoft touching the ground. But his exceffive weight, which occafioned this accident, fpeedily grieved him from pain. He expired in a moment, but without any ftruggle. The ceremony of his hands being tied behind his back, was fatisfied by a piece of white tape loofely paffed from the one to the other. But he never made the fmalleft effort to relieve himfelf.

He was cut down after he had hung about an hour. On Wednefday laft he had made a carpenter take his meafure for a coffin. He gave particular directions that it fhould be large, as he meant to be laid in it with all his cloathes on. It was made of oak, adorned with plates, and extremely handfome every way. A hearfe followed with it to the ground, and afterwards bore him away. It was underftood that the body was to be buried in the parifh of Burgh, about ten miles weft from this city. It was here that Edward I. was carried off by a dyfentery, on his way to complete the fubjugation of Scotland. The Lord Lowther has lately erected a monument to his memory, on the marfhy fpot where he had encamped his invincible army. Mr. H. has had a great terror of his being taken up. He was told that it would be falier for him to be buried on this fide, but he has preferred Burgh, a place extremely frequented. He is faid to have been acquainted with the parifh Notwithftanding Hatfield's various and enormous crimes, his untimely end has excited confiderable commiferation in the place. His manners were extremely polifhed and infinuating, and he was poffeffed of qualities which might have rendered him an ornament to fociety.

No one fo much deplores his fate as the unfortunate object of his fedu&ion—Mary of Buttermere. She has remitted him money, has written him letters, and with the greateft difficulty has been prevented from coming to vifit him. She looks upon him as the man who gained her virgin love, and who for her fake was led into all his deviations from rectitude

It is faid that he has left behind him a hiftory of his life. We have no doubt that it will be found interefting and inftructive. May his example teach that the brighteft parts, and the moft valuable accomplifhments, without principle, are a curfe, and prove the ruin of their ill-ftarred poffeffor!

 On this point another account fays—" When he was cut down, and lowered to Dr. Mary's Chartherpit (the ufual place of interment for thofe who come to an untimely end,) the Parifhioners of Burgh objecting to his being laid there."*

PARTICULAR INSTANCE OF ROYAL CLEMENCY.

IT is pretty generally known, that at our laft Affizes for this county, John Holden, late clerk to Meffrs. Kilham and Glover, of Leeds, was tried on a charge of forgery, found guilty and condemned.—The particulars that appeared on his trial, were inftead of a repetition here, but we have been put in a hurry to give them publication, as the man had received his Majefty's pardon.

The circumftances, however, attending this perfon's cafe, are fufficiently remarkable to merit a fhort detail on our part. His family is refpectable in Halifax, and his faith in particular, was a moft worthy man, and greatly efteemed by all who knew him. Immediately after the fentence paffed upon his unhappy fon, a difpenting minifter in that neighbour-hood, (if the Baptift perfuafion, we did not hear him) and intimately attached to the father, preffumed to addrefs his Majefty in a moving petition for the pardon of the fon of his deceafed friend — Aware that it was born an almoft irrevocable law with his Sovereign, to grant no pardons in the cafe of forgery, he had little hope of fuccefs, but his petition prevailed, an d the pardon has been granted.

That the fofficitation of a private individual, in a cafe of this nature, fhould meet with a gracious acceptance from the Sovereign, while fimilar applications, though urged by numbers, and with the weight of perfonal influence, have failed of fuccefs, will no doubt ftrike many with furprife. The following circumftances, however, which have come to our knowledge, and for the truth of which we can vouch, may ferve to explain, — fome meafure, the fagacity of the preceding narrative

In the courfe of the laft year, a preacher before the Royal Family, of the Baptift perfuafion, that he laft addreffed his fubjects from a living author, whofe name, however, was not mentioned The extract excited the attention of the King, who, as foon as the fervice was ended, enquired from what author the quotation was taken. He was informed that he was a diffenting minifter now living in Yorkfhire, his Majefty gave orders for the book to be procured him, and the author was made acquainted with his Majefty's pleafure The book was tranfmitted to the King, and by exercifing the royal prerogative of the feals he conferred on the high bound done him, and fulfilling his Sovereign's acceptance of it. It is added that his Majefty was fo well pleafed with the book, that he defired the author might be informed of his readinefs to grant him — The petition lately preferred for the pardon of the unfortunate man, afforded this diffenterifed and amiable minifter, the opportunity of fupplicating at the hands of his Sovereign, the exercife of his royal prerogative, in favour of a perfon, who, exhibited a no lefs favourable one to the King, of evincing the truth and fincerity of his proffered fervice

[York Herald.]

From late Irifh Papers.

The Chelmsford Chronicle fays, "A few days fince was difcovered, by the falling down of a piece of the cliff on Walton Shore, nearly entire, the fkeleton of the fkeleton of an enormous animal, near 30 feet long, fuppofed to be the Mammoth. Some of the bones were nearly as large as a man's body, and fix or feven feet long; the cavities which contained the marrow were large enough to admit the introduction of a man's arm; the bones, on being handled, broke to pieces. One of the grinders of this wonderful creature was carried to Colchefter by Mr William Jackfon, who took it from the fpot, and in a whole poffeffion it now is; it weighs feven pounds, is of a fquare form, and the grinding furface ftudded with feveral ftrong rows of lamina, and feems evidently to have belonged to an animal of the carnivorous kind. There were many teeth, which were unfortunately broken, one of which weighed 12 pounds."

A worthy Clergyman in Yorkfhire, lately deceafed, bequeathed in his will a confiderable property to his only daughter on the fubfequent conditions:—Firft, that fhe did not enter into the ftate of matrimony without the confent of his two executors, on their refpective refufal fecondly, that fhe drefled with greater decency than fhe had hitherto been accuftomed to do. The Teftator's words are—

"But as my daughter, Ann ——, hath not attended to my admonitions refpecting the filthy and lewd cuftom of dreffing with naked elbows, my will is, that in cafe the perfifts in fo grofs a violation of female decency, the whole of the property devifed by me to aforefaid, and intended as a provifion for her future life, fhall go to the eldeft fon of my filter Caroline ——, and his heirs lawfully begotten. To thofe who may fay this reftriction is fevere, I anfwer, that an indecent difplay of perfonal habiliments in women is a certain indication of intellectual depravity."

The Cockpoden'in a Coal Pit.—A breze of ballin followers had the temerity laft week, to make a fojourn, in the houfe of a pitman, in the neighbourhood of Newcaftle, when they themfelves were ftruck by a number of the fable tribe of colliers, who conveyed them to a neighbouring coal pit, and let them down, where they were forced to remain till about two o'clock next morning, when they were had up hack having a glafs or fix and fome finger-bread given them, were again committed to the dreary bowels of the earth, where they were confined 24 hours. On being releafed, they were made to pay a fine of 6s. 8d. each for their lodgings, and fhall be glad never to trouble or moleft any of the gentlemen of the pit we gain.

A CURIOSITY.

The Fire proof Woman, whom fo much has been lately faid at Paris, has been an object of the Public Curiofity at Madrid. Her name is Faufina Chacou, and he was born at Toledo in 1780. "This man," fays the Madrid Gazette, "was at fifteenth, dura in extreme poverty, at the age of 21 years; and recollecting that his mother had often told him, that when he was very young, he had fallen into the fire without the leaft injury, he thought of this experiment to get a livelihood. In truth, he expofed himfelf in the action of fire, without the leaft harm. Nothing further experiments, he ventured at laft to enter into a Baker's oven. From Eftremadura he went to Zeuta, and from thence to Cadiz. He was there in the laft bombardment of the Englifh. He feved in the midft of the fire, many perfons who were in danger in flames. At Cadiz, Mr. Robinfon heard of him, and wifhed to fee him; and though the young man never laid his fecret but from neceffity, he was prevailed upon to inform Mr. Robinfon to Madrid and to Burgos. He was at Madrid in June laft. The experiment has fubmitted to the fame proofs at Paris as at Madrid, and has had the fame fuccefs. The only effect which fire can have upon him, is, as he declares, that it gives him a kind of cramp, the degree of which leffens upon the frequent ufe of this extraordinary faculty, as difufe increafes it. He is a man without education, and does not know how to read. [Paris Paper.]

An Englifh felon, on his way to execution, at Pennenden heath, called out to fome foldiers, as he paffed, to know if they were not militia men, and fome of them fubfcribers. Being anfwered in the affirmative, he dryly afked if either of them would become a fubfcriber for him, as he did not like to march parade and naufeate, and wifhed to go another way.

POETRY.

ODE TO CHRISTMAS.

OLD CHRISTMAS, hail! thy rev'rend forth
Comes drench'd and dripping with the storm;
Thy hoary locks are tempest-rent,
Thy milk-white beard is ice-befpent:
Wind, sleet, and snow thy steps attail—
Yet still I say in thee, "Old CHRISTMAS, hail!"

For well I jeez thy ancient fway,
Thy jocund, jovial, joyous day;
Thy blameleſs ſports and calm delight,
That gild the dreary hours of night;
Transport the ſoul to ſummer's clime,
And ſledge with plumes the leaden wing of Time!

Full well I love the ſmile of mirth
That dimples round thy feſtal hearth;
Thy votive wreaths of evergreen,
That bloom from houſehold-hearts between,
When RALPH to CICELY breathes his vow,
And claims the cuſtom of thy pendant bough.

The heart exults!—while dim and drear,
The rain'd landſcape ſaddens near;
For tho' the darkly-ſweeping ſtorm
The lights of ether may deform,
'Tis ſeem'd beyond its force to blind
That native ſun which animates the mind!

That orb, of living ray ſublime,
Countemns the power of place and time;
At depth of night, the dungeon's gloom
With broad meridian day illumes,
And ſets alone at His command,
Who bade its dawnal glory firſt expand!

Then, CHRISTMAS, hail! a welcome gueſt
Thou com'ſt to every ſocial breaſt!
Good cheer ſhall thaw thy froſen veins,
Blythe ſports expel thy ſhiv'ring pains,
And pleaſures drop thy herrors way
With flowers more bloomful than the lap of May!

MUTINY ACT,

AS FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty), but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 118. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 80. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 60. Page 78. This Section has been altered, To as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec 18. Page 34. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

---

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 92 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Latest from Europe.

Via Philadelphia.

By the ship Fame, capt. Howland, in 36 days from Liverpool, we have received Liverpool papers to the 7th of October, and London priuts to the evening of the 5th. Paris papers had been received at London as late as the 2nd September, from which it appears that the most extensive means were adopted to accomplish the invasion of England. One great army of England was assembling under Lieut. General Soult, to whose staff Gen. Andreossi was attached. It was to consist of 12 demi brigades, 12 regiments of cavalry, two of flying artillery, and 10 companies of artillery on foot; the whole force would be about 45,000 men. Head quarters were to be established at Ghent, where Bonaparte was expected the end of September. There are likewise two great encampments at Saint Omer's and Ghent, whose united force would be from 80 to 90,000 men. There was to be a third army established at Amiens, on the plan of the army of reserve, that was so serviceable at Marengo. It was to consist of 30,000 men, two-thirds cavalry. Bonaparte's military residence was to be with this army at St. Omer's. The drawing of troops from Italy, was corroborated; 5,000 of these troops were destined for the post of the highest honor, to fight under the First Consul on the grand expedition.—The time fixed in Paris for this great attempt was said to be about the beginning of Brumaire, the middle of November. This, however, might be calculated to mislead the English.—The building of gun boats, in the several French harbours, proceeded with the utmost activity. The number already built was stated at 3,000. Those of the third class were to be rowed with 36 men, 3 men to each oar, so that their celerity, even in case of being deprived of their sails by any accident, is strongly insisted upon. In England, the public mind seems to be exclusively occupied with preparations to repel the threatened invasion. On the third of October several regiments of militia marched for Pevenly, in Sussex, the identical spot where William the Norman landed with 60,000 men. The forces in that quarter were to be employed in redoubts, and constructing other works; that part being the most accessible of the Sussex coast. Between the Beachy head and Portsmouth six line of battle ships and twelve frigates were constantly cruising. Hasseth Effendi, a new Turkish Ambassador with a numerous suite, was on his way to Paris. The troubles in Egypt appear, by the last accounts, to be in some measure allayed, and greater harmony now subsists between the tottering government of Turkey, and the disaffected Beys. The condition of the Northern potentates of Europe, which for some time appeared probable, is quite unlikely to take place. A neutrality, it was rationally supposed, would be observed by them. Between Great Britain and Spain an amicable understanding still exists.—Phil. Gaz.

A few days since the Sea Fencibles at Exmouth went through their pike exercise. In the course of which they commenced a sham fight, when the supposed enemy were driven to take advantage of an eminence on a sand bank, but they were so closely pursued by their adversaries as to be obliged to make a precipitate retreat. The spectators were highly gratified by their manœuvres, during which some lost their hats and wigs, others their shoes, and many fell on the sands. It is a fact, that the fight was so sharply contested that five or six men were slightly wounded.

BOSTON, November 23.

European Affairs.

At the last dates, though big with expectation, no real events of interest had occurred. The notes of preparation in England cannot be expected to afford much new variety. Whilst the large fleets of Britain were blockading Toulon, Brest, and the other ports of France and Holland, and the light flotillas were amusing themselves in bombarding and cannonading the French coast, (with very little loss on either side, excepting in ammunition, shot, and shells), the nation continued employed in raising entrenchments, in laying out encampments, in drills, marches, sham actions, and reviews.—These form a perfect circle. The spirit of the nation had before reached its acme, of course, any increase was not to be expected. False alarms were frequently made to prove the naive and discipline of the volunteers and new troops; and if there were any fear amongst them, it was not visible, and seemed only confined to the great ...ger, where some marks of anxiety might be discovered in the fall of public paper? (October 4, the three per cent. consols were at 52 1-4. Every Englishman appeared in earnest; and the expectation of an invasion was general. The government was all vigilance, circumspection and energy.—The whole coast was lined with troops; and fire beacons and telegraphs were every where erected, to convey intelligence into the interior. While these unequivocal marks of determined opposition were in daily exhibition, the political casuists were equally busy in making calculations on the chances of invasion, success, defeat, and finesse.—Some asserted, that government had received positive information that the invasion would be attempted, about the beginning of November, when the nights were dark and long, and the mornings and evenings foggy: That the main force of the invading foe, would issue from Holland, in three divisions, one from the Texel, another from Helvoetsluys, and the third from Flushing: Besides these, other divisions would fall from Boulogne, Dunkirk, and Ostend; and that England, Scotland, and Ireland, would be attacked in five points at once.—It is so far fact, that the above French places were evidently the ports of rendezvous of the shallops and gun-vessels; and notwithstanding the zeal and vigilance of the British look-out squadrons, they found but little difficulty in proceeding from the small ports to the depots. In two days fifty gun-boats escaped out of Calais, in sight of a British squadron, and anchored safe in Boulogne harbour, a distance of more than twenty miles. Whilst some were thus making their calculations, others said, that Bonaparte did not seriously intend to attempt the invasion; and that his extraordinary preparations and menaces were made solely to harrass the people, to take them from their useful labours, and to damp the patriotism of the monied interest; thereby to excite the discontent of the nation, and induce the Ministry to sue for peace on his terms; or, in the language of Admiral Bruix, in his address to the French boatmen, "to conquer with terror the British nation, before it experiences the fate of arms, or sinks beneath the blows of French nerves."—A third party would have it, that Bonaparte had a two-fold object in view. His mind, they said, was capable only of vast enterprizes; and that the Turkish as well as the British empire, would be his object. It is known that he has 150,000 men in Italy, extending along the Adriatic to Otranto; and commanded by some of his ablest and most experienced Lieutenants.—A squadron, it was said, would proceed from Ancona, and take possession of the Morea, at the entrance of the Archipelago; which they propoled to hold as an offset to Malta. An expedition, too, had for a long time been in preparation at Toulon, consisting of nine sail of the line and frigates; and, it was said, that on the 11th September, it attempted to leave port; but not being able to escape, and unwilling to engage, Lord Nelson's fleet, returned to their moorings. We have thus stated the calculations and facts; and leave our readers to make their deductions.

WIT.—Bonaparte has promised to eat his Christmas dinner in London.—The time is well chosen, as that is the season for mince-meat throughout the Kingdom.

New York, November 20.

By official returns in the late London papers the armed force of England and Scotland amounts to six hundred and twenty thousand men; of which,

140,000 are regulars,
150,000 militia,
50,000 army of reserve,
280,000 volunteers.

IMPORTANT!

The following letter from the Department of War at the city of Washington, to his Excellency the Governor of this State, was received by last night's mail.

War Department, Oct. 31.

SIR,

There being reason to suspect that the officers of the Spanish government at New Orleans may decline of refuse to give possession of the country of Louisiana, ceded to the United States by the French Republic, and which Congress have by law authorized the President of the United States to take possession of, and the President having judged it expedient to pursue such measures as will insure the possession, I have therefore been directed by the President of the United States to request your Excellency to assemble with the least possible delay five hundred of the militia of the state of Ohio, including a suitable number of officers, and cause the same to be formed into a regiment of eight companies, to be engaged to serve four months, unless sooner discharged, to be mustered in companies and ready to march if called, by the 20th of December at furthest; after having been so mustered in companies by suitable persons appointed by your Excellency, the men may return to their homes, but must hold themselves in readiness to join their companies and march at the shortest notice. Each officer and soldier will be entitled to pay from the day they shall receive orders, and march to join their respective regiments, unless discharged. They will be entitled to the same pay as regular troops in the service of the United States.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your humble servant,

H. DEARBORNE.

To his Excellency Edward Tiffin,
Governor of the state of Ohio.

We understand that the provisional army is to be compoled of 500 mounted volunteers from the Mississippi territory to join the regular troops in that territory, and to proceed immediately to New Orleans to take possession of Louisiana; in the mean time the state of Tennessee is to hold in readiness to march at a moment's warning 2000 volunteers,

Kentucky 4000 do.
Ohio 500 do.
Mississippi Territory 500 do.

From a St. Vincents paper of the 24th September, received at Alexandria.

A flag of truce arrived here yesterday, from Guadaloupe, with 69 English prisoners, consisting chiefly of passengers and sailors taken in merchant vessels.

We are sorry to learn, that amongst the enemy's captures are three of our Guineamen, viz. ships Boston and L'Agreable, and brig Susannah. The L'Agreable mounts 22 guns and was nearly ready to sail as a privateer, when the flag of truce sailed from thence.

We have also to lament the loss of the Government sloop Diligence, which was manned with 37 men and officers from his Majesty's ship of war Drake; she was taken by the Republican of 6 guns and 60 men. Lieut. ——, who commanded the Diligence, was severely wounded, and was obliged to go below to have his wounds dressed; but as the ft. ...n was performing his duty, a blood thirsty rascal went down and put an end to Lieut. ——'s existence, by cutting him through the head with a sword.

A few days ago an expedition was fitted out of Guadaloupe against Antigua, and had actually got under weigh, but on the appearance of the Emerald frigate, capt. O'Brien, the enemy returned and anchored. Capt. O'Brien sent his boats in and cut out three of their finest vessels, and thereby prevented the expedition. We understand the privateers men sent from this island formed part of the expedition.

We understand a French privateer has been at anchor for some days at Balliceaux, and that Lieut. Brown, is preparing to go in the Nereus to attack her.

The following is a list of prizes carried into Guadaloupe since the 1st ult. viz.—Nancy, privateer of 4 guns and 33 men belonging to Barbadoes; schr. William from Newfoundland; brig Susannah, from Africa, 103 slaves; L'Agreeable, from do. 240 do; schrs. ——, from Bermuda; Flying Fish, from Trinidad; brig Hawke, from Barbadoes; Dutch brig, prize to the Cayenne; sloop and schr. from Bermuda; Desborough, tender to the Drake; ship Barton, 170 slaves from Africa; schr. ——, Halifax.

From the (N. York) MERCANTILE ADVERTISER.

AT a time when timber for ship-building is growing scarce, except at considerable distances from us, and likewise when our ships and other vessels are built with much hard labour and cost, it appears pitiable to observe their short duration, as well as the imminent danger to which men and property are exposed, even many times before the danger is discovered; and it may appear a natural enquiry what means can be devised for more extensive duration, as the earnest desire no doubt has been. The answer is plain and easy; that which will preserve both timber and plank a number of years beyond their usual time, is SALT.—The enquiry next is, how it shall be applied? Answer. When the timbers are prepared for ceiling, let pieces of boards be dovetailed about the floor timber heads, to the outside plank, in each space between the timbers, to prevent it descending too low, and when the vessel has been watered in order to find out the parts that might prove as leaks, and the water well drained off, let all the space between the timbers and the out and inside planks be filled with salt, which need not be of a costly sort. An enquiry may then arise, has there been any experiment made of its utility? Answer. There has been two within my knowledge; one of those a brigantine which I knew of being thus salted, as described, and from what I have believed as good authority. I was informed she was called a good vessel at the age of twenty years, built with common white oak timber; the other, built by myself in the year 1785, I lately knew to be running, and reported as a good vessel: While others, built at the same time, and of the same materials, have long since gone to decay.—But it may be objected, that in some cases this mode of salting cannot well be done. The tightest and closest coopers are not to admit of the pickle between them. This is granted; but an enquiry may arise, why is this done? Is it not an useless waste of timber, as well in losing to the vessel, room to carry more cargo of timber from any passage of air, it certainly will appear not only useless, but hurtful, and except it may be frame timbers, even in the largest ships it may be doubtful if from four to six inches space between them, may not be as well, and perhaps better, than a less space.

A further enquiry may arise, why the timber in a house is so much more durable than that in a ship, or other vessels? The house timber is more open to receive air, and likewise is mostly dry, while the other is between wet and dry, otherwise, if kept in the water, would probably be more durable than if wholly dry. Why then should salt add to its preservation? Answer—Salt possesses a preserving quality, both to vegetable and animal substances, and also seems to supply the place of the want of air.—I have heard such a proverb, that "the strength of work is the decay of trade;" but in the present case does it not appear needful to reverse it? Does not the strength, or rather the fullness of timber tend to create trade? and does not a mass of crowded timber soon become a mass of rottenness? It is beyond a doubt truly the case. Many methods have been tried, but nearly all appear evidently to have proved abortive, even the timber from the South obtained at a vast expence. But in this appears an easy and safe remedy with small expence, when compared with the great advantages that may be hoped and reasonably expected to flow therefrom.

This information is offered for the public good, by an old ship carpenter, and many further particulars are desired relative to this important concern, applications to Robert Basham, New Brunswick, New Jersey, may be expected to be answered.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Page 112. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier is Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy;

Sec. 6. Page 113. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 112. Persons harbouring, concealing, or aiding Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as formerly Acts.

Sec. 60. Page 114. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 60. Page 114. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve ... his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

[The Paris prints mentioned ſome time ago, that the Firſt Conſul would make his will before he ſet out on the expedition againſt England; a precaution, which indeed the probable iſſue of the undertaking renders very prudent. The French wits in London, in conſequence, and with their uſual gayety, have anticipated, the Conſul, as appears by the following imperfect tranſlation of an inſtrument bearing that title, publiſhed in the "Courier de Londres."]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24TH MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorised, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the case of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 8. Page 18. Persons harbouring, concealing, or aiding Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 60. Page 124. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 69. Page 134. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 34. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to transmit Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

TORBAY, October 2.

We were much alarmed yesterday afternoon here by the appearance of a very large fleet off to the southward and westward of the Berry; they appeared to be upwards of one hundred sail; and when challenged by the officers of the signals at the Berry Head, did not answer them: consequently the drums of the Royal Cornish Miners (in barracks at the Berry) beat to arms; the drawbridge at the fort was drawn up, the Sea Fencibles began to assemble, every one eager to meet and repulse the Corsican tyrant; but soon after the fleet was discovered to be our friends, and supposed it is the residue of the Jamaica and Leeward Island fleet, reaching to the eastward, on their larboard tack, with the wind to the northward.

BOSTON, November 17.

We have received Halifax papers to the 22d ult. The frigate Andromache had returned there from a cruize On the 23th of September she met a brig 10 days from Antigua, and received the following information: That on the 10th Sept. the frigate Emerald fell in with a fleet of small armed vessels, fitted out at Guadaloupe, with about 1,500 men on board, who intended to avail themselves of the British forces having been withdrawn from Antigua, (on the expedition to Demarara) to invade, or, at least distress that Island—The Emerald attacked the whole fleet; took five or six of the largest—destroyed several—and drove the remainder under the guns of the French batteries on the Island of Guadaloupe.

The article in our last, which stated, that the French would probably invade Denmark, in the course of this winter, is corroborated by Captain Lock, who arrived here yesterday from St. Petersburgh; he states, that this expected event had excited very general attention; and it was supposed would bring the Emperor ALEXANDER into an active participation of the impending warfare in Europe; the opinion derives strength from the actual preparations which are now making in Russia for the defence of the Northern Powers.

QUEBEC, December 15.

We return our thanks to the gentleman who favoured us with the following narrative.—We should be happy if others, on similar occasions, were to follow his example.

Narrative of the loss of the ship Norval, Captain M'Kechnie, off Ste. Anne's River, below Cape Chat, on the 19th November, 1803.

The Norval was loaded by Mr. Mure of this place, Merchant, with near 16,000 bushels of wheat, for Lisbon, and sailed from hence on the evening of Monday the 14th November, in company with the brig Charlotte, Capt. Cornfoot, for Jamaica.—On the morning of the 18th, the Pilot was discharged between Green Island and Bic, the Charlotte still in company, and also the ship Oughton, Capt. Baird, bound to Greenock—they proceeded with the wind S.S.W. and next day fell in with the ship Annie, Captain M'Kie, bound to Greenock, which, with the two others already mentioned, outsailed the Norval in the course of the day, and were not again seen from her.—About 9 o'clock in the morning of the 18th, a violent gale came on, by degrees, from the S. E. which varied to E. S. E. and then to N. E. when it blew very hard, accompanied with sleet and thick weather, the sea running high, and the ship laying to, under a close reefed main-topsail, the cargo shifted soon after, and gave the vessel a considerable list to port; the pump was sounded, and 14 inches of water found in the well, which was soon pumped dry, but the vessel lay over so much, that a great deal of the water could not get to the pumps, and Capt. M'Kechnie was confident the had sprung a-leak; a good deal of wheat came from the pumps, and they were in consequence hoised up, and one of them turned to prevent the wheat getting into it; the Mate and Carpenter both examined the well, and found one place by which the wheat got in, which they secured, and the pumps were put back into their places. The ship was now wore to the Southward, the gale increasing, and the sea running mountains high; the cargo again shifted, and gave the vessel a very considerable heel to starboard; on sounding, the leak was found to have greatly increased, there being three feet water in the hold; the pumps very soon choaked and became useless. An attempt was then made to run before the wind, the main-mast and main-top sail yard having been previously cut away to ease the ship, but she would not obey the helm, owing to the heel. All hands then set about throwing wheat in bags overboard from the after-run, in hopes of getting at the leak, which they had discovered to be under the starboard quarter; but they soon found the water had got three feet above the demage, and the pumps being useless, nothing remained but to bail with buckets through the cabin scuttle, and thereby endeavour to keep the ship afloat; until they got never the mid the leak gained fast upon them, and they soon left off bailing. She was at the helm having given notice that he had got the ship's head to the land; upon which four hands were placed at the wheel, to keep her if possible in that direction, which they did for near three quarters of an hour, when she broached to, and never after drifted about as the waves directed, lying like a log on the water, with the lee cabin window under. They remained in this state until about two o'clock in the morning of the 19th, when the wind became less violent, the sea however still running very high: every effort was again made to get the ship before the wind, but to no purpose.—About ten in the forenoon, the tables were fixed to the long boat with intention to abandon the ship, but in the attempt to hoist her out she was beat to pieces by the violent motion. At twelve the weather became moderate, and the yawl was lowered from the stern, into which Capt. M'Kechnie, the 1st and 2d Mate, Carpenter, Boatswain and seven others embarked, leaving five on board, which Captain M. wished to take with him, but was over-ruled by numbers; and the boat pushed off: this proved a lucky circumstance, there being little doubt but the whole would have perished, the boat being fully laden, although those in her had neither provisions clothes excepting what they wore. They quitted the ship full six leagues from the land, and got to Ste. Anne's river below Cape Chat, in about four hours, where they found two small houses, occupied by three brothers named M'Millan, a lame man named La Vielle, with the mother, wife and sister of the elder M'Millan, all of whom received them with the utmost kindness and hospitality; and the men immediately went off with Mr. Stewart the mate, in their own fishing boat, in search of the ship, which they reached about six o'clock, and found the five men left behind, who had made a raft of spars and hen coops, but had got themselves into a state to make little use of it. Mr. Stewart took them into the boat with all the cloathes he could find in the cabin and steerage, and also two quarters of beef, two carcases of mutton, and some bread, with which he got safe to his ship-mates at one o'clock in the morning of the 20th.—Next day the weather was clear, and nothing could be seen of the ship, wherefore they are confident she must have gone down in the night; the more so as when Mr. Stewart left her she had three or four planks of the main deck under water.

Capt. M'Kechnie having received a hurt in his leg, could not leave Saint Anne's until Monday the 21st, when with the second mate, a mulatto passenger, and Daniel M'Millan as a pilot, he came off in the small boat; Mr. Stewart and the others having gone by land in the morning—they rowed all day, and the following night, until seven in the morning, when they hauled up the boat (as they conceived) into a place of safety, and made a fire in the wood at a little distance, where they remained until next morning. When they went to the place where they left the boat, they found to their great disappointment, that it had been dashed to pieces by the surf, and a part of her lay on the beach at a small distance. They returned to the fire and remained all that day and next night, during which the mate and his party joined them and soon after went on. The hurt on capt. M'Kechnie's leg was so painful that he could not accompany them, but followed slowly in the course of the day along the beach till he reached Mr. Frafer's at Matane, where he was hospitably received. Here he remained four days—the mate and his party also remained at Matane two days, one night at the house of a person named Harris, and afterwards at Mr. Frafer's until they proceeded on their journey—Captain M'Kechnie and the second mate followed two days after, having left the mulatto passenger at Matane; they overtook the mate at Father Point, where they again stopped four days at the houses of Mr. Rois the father and his three sons all pilots, where they were comfortably lodged & hospitably treated. From thence capt. M'Kechnie and the second mate got to Mr. Trudelle's at Remouski, who not only received & treated them with great hospitality in his house, but insisted on their taking provisions along with them. The mate and others had passed two days before, and received very hospitable and kind treatment from the parish priest—next night they slept at a Madame Petit's, and thence got to Trois Pistoles, where they procured several carioles, and the mate, carpenter, boatswain and cabin boy got to Quebec on the 8th instant. Capt. M'Kechnie, the second mate and four of the crew arrived on the 28th.

Next to Divine Providence, captain M'Kechnie and his crew are indebted to the humanity of the poor people at St. Anne's river, for their preservation, who not contented with sharing liberally their winter stock of provisions (consisting of fish and potatoes,) with the unfortunate sufferers, conducted them to Father Point, a distance of thirty-six leagues without fee or reward; which they positively refused to receive when offered by capt. M'Kechnie.

Capt. M'Kechnie and his officers have authorised the writer of this narrative to express gratitude to those good people as well as to Mr. Frafer of Matane, the Pilots at Father Point, Mr. Trudelle of Rimouski, and the parish priest of Rimouski; Mr. Le Courtois, who in addition to hospitality, lodging and victualling the mate and his party and paying a man to conduct them, offered capt. M'Kechnie what money he had, which he had not however occasion to accept, having a supply at Father Point. Capt. M'Kechnie expresses much gratitude for the kind treatment he met with every where on the way, and in the last instance at the house of Mr. Francois Bernier at Cape St. Ignace, where he lodged the night before his arrival in town.

About two leagues above Matane, the mate found on the beach, a barrel of pork marked W R° in ink, or black paint, which did not appear to have been long in the water. Mr. Stewart, the mate of the Norval, brought account of the schooner Juno, capt. Plante, belonging to the King's Posts, being wrecked about five leagues above Cape Chat, and one boy drowned.

* It apparently reference to the Custom-house, that the brig William, Capt. Austin, was cleared for Newfoundland, on the 1st Nov. having on board 41 barrels pork, marked W. R.

QUEBEC, December 22.

On Saturday night, the 17th instant, a fire was discovered in an out house occupied by a Mr. Johnson in Fabrique street. The fire had made such progress before it was discovered, that it was then impossible to subdue it. The flames next communicated to two buildings, the property of Mr. Robert Ritchie, Taylor, which were also consumed. Their further progress was, however, fortunately stopped, by the exertions of the inhabitants and military, encouraged by the example of his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor and other persons of the first distinction. The conduct of the military, in general, is deserving of the highest praise, and strongly evinces the advantage of men accustomed to order and obedience: it is principally to their early attendance at the fire, that its ravages have not been much more extensive.

Died on Thursday the 8th instant, at his house in St. Henry's-street, after a painful illness, which he bore to the last with exemplary fortitude and resignation, Kenelm Chandler, Esq. Ordnance Store keeper and Garrison Barrack master, who had served his Majesty with zeal and reputation in different official capacities in this city, during a period of 40 years. Equally estimable in his public and private character, for integrity and goodness of heart, his death is sincerely lamented in the circle of a numerous acquaintance; more particularly by those who knew him best.

THREE RIVERS, Nov. 28.

Died, after a long and tedious illness on Friday last, Mrs. Buchanan, wife of Doctor John Buchanan, attached to the 49th regiment.

John Baptiste Aveithe, of Charleston (South Carolina) has obtained a patent for a machine for boring holes in rocks under water, to the depth of ten or more feet, or in any other situation, and blowing and completely removing them.—"With the labour of two men it will execute more in one day than fifty men without it. The men are not compelled to go into the water, and therefore it can be used in winter as well as summer."

The above person has also invented a Horizontal Windmill, adapted to the grinding of grain, &c. &c.

ESSAY ON SNUFF-TAKING.

EVERY inveterate, inveterate, and incurable snuff-taker, at a moderate computation, takes one pinch in ten minutes.

Every pinch, with the agreeable ceremony of blowing and wiping the nose, and other incidental circumstances, continues a minute and a half.

One minute and a half out of every ten, allowing fifteen hours to a snuff-taking day, amounts to two hours and twenty-four minutes out of every natural day, or one day out of every ten.

One day out of every ten amounts to thirty-six days and a half in a year.

Hence it is supposed the practice to be persisted in forty years, two entire years of the snuff taker's life will be dedicated to tickling his nose, and two more to blowing it.

The expence of snuff, snuff-boxes, and handkerchiefs, will be the subject of a second essay, in which it will appear, that this luxury encroaches as much on the income of the snuff-taker, as it does on his time; and that by a proper application of the time and money thus lost to the public, a fund might be constituted for the discharge of the national debt.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME,—GREETING:

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Page 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 6. Page 14. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 8. Page 14. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 6. Page 14. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Lots No. 14 and 15, in the 8th Concession, containing 400 Acres, No. 6 in the 7th, containing 200, 25 and 26 in the 10th, and the East half of 35 in the 8th, containing 300, and 35 in the 3d, containing 200, in the Township of Darlington, Home District—No. 10, 11th Concession, containing 200 Acres in the Township of King—No. 31 in the 7th and 8th, and North end of 30 in the 7th Concession, containing 400 Acres, in the Township of Glanford, District of Niagara—No. 16 in the 8th Concession of the Township of Windham, containing 200 Acres, and No. 21 in the 8th Concession of the Township of Burford, containing 200 Acres, both in the District of London—Also, Lot No. 3, North side of Newgate Street, in the Town of York, containing one Acre.—All the above Lots will be sold on very moderate terms, by applying to the subscriber near the Garrison, GEO. PURVIS.

WILLIAM BOND.

York, 12th November, 1803.

From late London Papers.

Queen Elizabeth at the time of the Spanish Armada, went to Tilbury Camp, and addressed her army there in the following words:—"I am come amongst you not for recreation or pastime, but resolved, in the midst of battle, to live or die with you. I know I have but the body of a weak and feeble woman, but I have the heart of a Sovereign, and of a Sovereign of England too: I think it foul scorn that Parma or Spain, or any Prince of Europe, should dare to invade the borders of my realms, to which, rather than any dishonour should grow by me, I myself will take up arms; I myself will be your General, Judge, and rewarder of every one of your virtues in the field."

The method of instructing the deaf and dumb, ascribed to the Abbe de l'Epee, is now said to have been invented by M. Perrire, a Spaniard.

Artificial Stone, now becoming in general use, is compounded in the following proportion:—thirteen bushels of pipe clay, 4 do. of brown pot rubbish, broken jars, spruce beer bottles, &c. 4 do. of broken glass bottles; 3 do. of flint, and one bushel of very white or Croydon sand. These materials are ground and sifted—the fine part is used in making figures, which must afterwards be baked; the coarse part is employed in constructing the sides of flower, and various rough works.

It is not generally known that the unfortunate Louis XVI. was a lineal descendant of our equally unfortunate Charles I. The daughter of Charles married the Duke of Orleans, by whom she had a daughter married to the Duke of Savoy; and their daughter Maria Adelaide espoused the son of Louis XIV. from whence the Royal Families of France and Spain are descended; both which Royal Branches of the House of Bourbon would have stood before the House of Brunswick for the succession to the throne, but for the Act of Settlement.

From the result of the numerous experiments made by M. Van Marum, in Germany, it appears, that, for the purpose of extinguishing fires, no more water should be thrown on the burning part than is necessary to wet its surface; care should likewise be taken not to leave an extinguished part between two others that are in flames. The most violent part of the fire should first engage the attention of the firemen, who should follow the progress of the flames, as by creating a strong steam, the atmosphere air is cut off from the inflamed body, and the flames of course subside. M. Van Marum has repeatedly set on fire a pitched barrel, and extinguished it with two ounces of water; and at Hierlem, Gotha, and other places, he has set in flames a temporary room, composed of highly inflammable matter, and put them out within the space of three or four minutes, by means of fifty-four pints of water.

The papers have hitherto omitted to notice a most singular corps that any yet heard of, a corps of Jews, who are trained every evening in a piece of ground near Old Bethlem. As they have not yet won uniform, their appearance is variegated, and somewhat Motley!

A Jew, who lives at Cambridge, has opened a raffling booth at Pot Fairs: as an apology for which illegal act, he pleads the necessities of a large family, having a wife and thirteen children. On a sign over the entrance of his booth is painted at the top a figure of a lion and lioness, and underneath thirteen young lions, with a quotation in Hebrew and Latin, from Psalm 140, and 21, The young lions roar after prey, and seek their meat from God.

LOUIS THE EIGHTEENTH AND MONSIEUR.

As these distinguishing personages now occupy the thoughts of many people in this country and in France, and as rational hopes prevail that they will soon emerge from their long and unremitted obscurity, we lay before our readers some observations on their respective characters, made by a person who had uncommon facility in the knowledge of human nature, and who, as to the great names now in question, had very peculiar opportunities of judging. We mean the celebrated Mr. BURKE. Speaking of LOUIS the XVIIIth, then Monsieur, Who, he often says, he acknowledges not to be without faults and defects, he says:—

"After being as well informed as any man here can be, I do not find that the blemishes of this eminent person are at all considerable, or that they affect a character which is full of probity, honour, generosity, and real goodness. In fame points he has but too much resemblance to his unfortunate brother, who, with all his weaknesses, had a good understanding, and many parts of an excellent man, and a King. But MONSIEUR, without supposing him other deficient (as he was not) excels him in general knowledge, and in a sharp and keen observation of something of a better address, and a happier talent speaking and writing. His conversation is more agreeable, and adorned with his manners, gracious and princely. His brother, the Count D'Artois (now Monsieur) sustains still better the regards due to his place: he is eloquent, lively, engaging in the highest degree, of a decided character, full of courage and activity; in a word, he is a hearty, manly, and accomplished Cavalier.—These Brethren of loyalty, if they were true to their own cause and each other instead of relegating their illustrious persons to a secure town, would bring them forward to the head of their camps, and exhibit them to what they so speedily obtain, the esteem, respect and affection of mankind."

In another place—"Never were these persons guilty, in the day of their power, of a base or ill-natured act. Never, while in France, did they commit one single act of cruelty, or hurt the person or property of one of the individuals of the nation. It is not my right to quote the instances. It is to my honour attributed to their unfortunate brethren—common cause."

Trinity House Volunteers.

GENERAL ORDERS.

The Lieutenant Colonel thanks it as due to the most respectable Volunteers who constitute the Trinity House corps, to explain why they have not been called into action to assist that part of the duty which consists in training for service, as hopeless of such a corporation being accepted on that ground. They will, country throughout producing the finest manly exercises—exertions that contain infinite honour to the zeal and energy of the British character, and which astonish surrounding nations.

The only basis point is then (now the present) before us, that question and difficulty which would have been more analogous to former Habits and Education, as well as more congenial to a Seaman's feelings.

But the rigid rules of the naval service, even under the gentling exigency of affairs, is thus thought unadvisable to indulge; yet under such circumstance, it would have been of more part unpardonable to have been tenacious—our country required our manly and warlike services—we might suffer in reputation, if we did not signify the nation, then either to attend, or be supposed to confider it as an Honorable offered.

His Majesty, his ministers, and the country at large, entertain a most favourable opinion of character transmitted from early life to the use of great guns. Our offers of service were in a like not ufual, were underftood to be much wished, and therefore have been accepted by his Majesty, in a manner that confirms their value and importance.

To be eminently useful in such a crisis, is to adorn the character of British Seamen; and through many of us, for many years, may be considered as invaluable. The occasion shall renovate us, and our hearts and inclinations be in unison with those of the youngest amongst us.

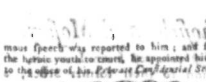
The period is an awful one; the like never before so important; it is liberty or slavery; and slavery of the most direful character; let every man's heart suggest to him what he is to expect if subdued. This thought alone reconciles all difficulties in our way to be fully prepared; we will realize the expectation of our countrymen, and be one of the means, under Divine Providence, of frustrating the designs of aspiring, inveterate, and enterprising foe.

To explain the nature of the service we have undertaken, is to facilitate its execution.

A line of ships is to be stationed across the entrance of the Thames, above the Lower Hope Point, and to be so connected as to form a boom and battery, so far as practicable, that will obstruct the passage of an enemy up the river—this part is our province to defend—the service is stationary, but important; and the whole maritime community will join us in the probable event of invasion; we are engaged also to man batteries on the river's banks, at three up within ten miles of the metropolis; the battery and Shipgun, with the use of the boarding pike, will in our chief weapons; but in proceeding from one post to another, our own safety may consist in field artillery & our pikes; hence the necessity of being instructed in their use; the hand grenade and the carbine may occasionally be referred to, as men numbers increase, and thus be fully competent to protect and defend our post. A portion of the corps, not exceeding one fourth, is proposed to be absent, a week at a time—arrangements must therefore be made; private ones must be undergone—but in a cause like the present, it would be as detestable as impolitic to relax in our exertions, and the Lieutenant Colonel fully relies on the attention, energy, and ready compliance of the Volunteers to fit themselves for actual and effectual service.

A STRIKING ANECDOTE OF THE PRESENT KING OF SWEDEN.

The following little narrative, which exhibits to the reader at once a lively portraiture of filial affection on the one hand, parsimony on the other, a trait highly expressive of that benevolence which so eminently distinguishes the character of the illustrious Prince, who knew so well how to reward it.



A gentleman of Sweden was condemned to suffer death, as a punishment for certain offences committed by him in the discharge of an important public office, which he had filled for a number of years with an integrity which had never before undergone either suspicion or impeachment. His son, a youth of about eighteen years of age, was no sooner apprized of the predicament to which the wretched author of his being was reduced, than he flew to the judge who had pronounced the fatal decree, and throwing himself at his feet, prayed that he might be allowed to suffer in the room of a father whom he adored, and whose loss he declared it was impossible for him to survive.

The magistrate was thunderstruck at this extraordinary procedure on the son, and could hardly believe he was sincere in it. Being at length satisfied, however, that the young man actually wished for nothing more ardently than to save his father's life, at the expence of his own, he wrote an account of the whole affair to the King, and the consequence was, that his Majesty immediately dispatched back the courier with orders to grant a free pardon to the father, and to confer a title of honour on his incomparable son.

This last mark of royal favour, however, the youth begged leave with all humility to decline; and the motive for his refusal of it was no less noble, than the conduct by which he had deserved it was generous and disinterested.

"Of what avail," exclaimed he, "could the most exalted title be to me, humbled as my family already is in the dust!—Alas! I would it not leave but as a monument, to perpetuate in the minds of my countrymen the direful remembrance of an unhappy father's crime!"

His Majesty actually shed tears when this mo[illegible] most speech was reported to him; and feeling for the heroic youth so much, he appointed him directly to the office of his Private Confidential Secretary.

POETRY.

From a late Liverpool Paper.

AULD ROBIN, he came frae the town,
An' a thrawn'd man was he,
"Hang by your heeld, ye weel-a-day!" he cried,
"An' lassie ye mann flee!

"For the French arrowing on us,
As fast as they can bang,
To prief our hands and force our gear,
An' rowing and wit to hang.

"They've sworn to do it, and Bonaparte
Says Scotland he shall hae,
And tried that wrang yield to him,
He'll burn, or else he'll fley.

"Och! do ain't the days are gane,
When Bruce and Wallace fought,
An' the fair freedom to this land
Wi' manly vigour fought.

"To fhey rude times nae tyrant dar'd
To thraw his hatred face;
But is there only Spirit now
To fave us true disgrace"

The words nae sooner out were spoke,
Than twenty tak gae tried flame
An' first young Tam stood forth in hafte,
The bearliest earl to blame.

"Wha fays that Scotland's Spirit's gane—
Wha fays her fons are fmoak!
Wha fays they'll tamely bow the neck
To Bonaparte's yoke!

"Let Frenchmen loot to that disgrace,
But we fic measures scorn;
We'll shew the world that men o' might
Are Robin Scotland born.

"The hearts that bear within our breasts
Know neither guile nor fear—
An' are fherfe arms think ye, we're weak,
To wield the manly spear?—

"We'll shew the world that not wi' Bruce
Did Scotland's valour end,
An' that we're ftrength an' courage yet
Our country to defend.

"Then hafte, my comrades bold, prepare
The haughty foe to meet;
An' let the fons of France behold
Their strength at our feet!"

EPIGRAMS.

FRANK, who will any friend supply,
Lent me ten guineas:—"Frank," faid I,
"Haft any paper?"—'Tis but fair
"You take my note."—Quoth he, "Hold there;
"Jack! to the cash I've no adieu,
"No need to waste my paper too."

A COCK, within a ftable pent,
Was ftrutting o'er fome heaps of dung,
And ayre, at round and round he went,
The mettled courters ftampt and flung.
Bravo! quoth he—A decent noble!
We make a tolerable pother!
But let a ftable-cock, my merry boys,
We tread not upon one another.

AGRICULTURAL.

Continuation regarding Cropping Corn-Stalks at too early a period.

THE harvests of Indian Corn evince their nourishment, as well from the ſtalk above, as from the ſtock and root below the ear; and they continue to be nourished in a meaſure from the ſtalk till they are nearly ripe: therefore by cutting down the upper ſtalks of Indian Corn prematurely, the crop muſt be eſſentially injured.

A man in the Neighbourhood of this place, who had, the preſent year, a ſmall field of Indian Corn, of promiſing appearance, happening to crop off the corn-ſtalks while the plants were in too green a ſtate, the conſequence was that the grain became remarkably ſhrivelled, and probably fell ſhort one quarter or one third of the weight and ſubſtance which it might otherwiſe have had.

It is the opinion of ſome farmers, that if the upper ſtalks of Indian Corn were not cropped at all, the ſucceeding weight of the grain would more than compenſate for the loſs of the fodder.

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 12. A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence, a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 13. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is empowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 6. Page 13. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 15. Page 14. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 16. Page 14. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 18. Page 14. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. IIId. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

Ruffian Voyage of Difcovery.

PETERSBURGH, Aug. 14, 1803.

The two veffels equipped for this voyage, at the expence of the Ruffo American Company, are named the Hope and the Neva. The Hope is 150 tons, mounts 18 guns, and has 80 men, including officers. The Neva is 370, 14 guns, and 90 men. The equipment of both veffels coft 200,000 roubles. There are on board, befides an Aftronomer, Doctor Horner, Doctor Tiefus, a celebrated phyfician and naturalift, M. de Rafanof, the ambaffador to Japan, and all the perfons attached to him, and two fons of M. Kotzebue.

This expedition, which is commanded by M. Rafanof, the grand-chamberlain, is intereffing not only to Ruffia, but to all Europe; its object is not limited to the increafe and extenfion of the Royal Commerce, but is favourable to fcience and humanity.

M. de Rafanof is deftined an ambaffador to Japan. The crews of the two veffels are compofed of experienced officers and good feamen, taken from the fleet. There are Savans on board, who will enrich natural hiftory with new difcoveries and obfervations.

From Cronftadt, the expedition will proceed to Portfmouth, thence to the Canaries, to Sandwich Iflands, as the ancients called them. There they will examine the moft elevated Volcano in the world, the fhadow of which, at the fetting of the fun, covers the whole ifland, and whofe fummit is covered with fnow. From the Canaries, they will direct their courfe towards S. America—they will vifit Brazil, and all the Eaftern coaft to the Streights of Magellan.

After doubling Cape Horn, they will enter the Pacific Ocean, and coaft along Chili, even to Valparaio. Thence they will proceed to the Sandwich Iflands (famous for the tragical end of the celebrated Capt. Cook,) and after furveying the principal of thofe iflands, they will go to Japan, to eftablifh commercial connections with that country. 'Till this moment, Japan, the victim of defpotifm and fuperftition, has had commerce only with the Chinefe and the Dutch, who, in order to preferve the peculiar advantages of this trade have fubmitted to the moft degrading humiliations. If the embaffy fucceeds, we fhall obtain from Japan, merchandize much fuperior to that of China. The Ruffian Company will be able to exchange their merchandize againft thofe of Japan; while the Japanefe, with all their barbarity, are not as fubtle and deceitful in commerce as their neighbours, the Chinefe.

From Japan, the navigators will go (in 1805) to Kamfchatka, where they will paft the winter; thence they will vifit Kodiak, and the other iflands in the Archipelago, between Kamfchatka and the Northern point of America. It is worthy of remark, that M. Rafanof is the fon-in-law of the celebrated Schelekof, who added to the Ruffian poffeffions the newly difcovered iflands of America, and firft made the their inhabitants the name of the immortal Catharine, and the arts of focial life. It is M. Rafanof, who is charged with extending the arts and fciences in thofe iflands.

From the American Archipelago, they will return to Kodiak, and land with merchandize for Canton, where the Ruffians have ever been friendly.

From Canton they will go to the Philippine Iflands, which are as yet but little known. The iflands of Java, Sumatra, the Peninfula of India will alfo attract their attention. They will there fee numerous people fubjected to European merchants; and the objects and victims of their mercantile craft and avarice. They will fee the eftablifhments of the Englifh arrived to the height of grandeur; thofe of the Dutch languifhing, and almoft at an end. Finally, after having doubled the Cape of Good Hope, they will find themfelves at the place where they firft directed their courfe for South America, and return to their native country.

From a London Paper.

ON CHARITY.

THE wit of man cannot contrive (for even the wifdom of God hath not fuggefted) any more preffing motives, more powerful incentives to the exercife of charity than thefe—That we ftall be judged by it at the laft dreadful day, and that then, all the acts of mercy we have done to the poor, ftall, by our merciful Judge, be owned and rewarded, as perfonal kindneffs done to himfelf.

What can awaken us to do good, if the found of the laft trumpet cannot? If a lively fenfe and anticipation of the great fcene of judgment which ftall then be unfolded, of the proceffes which ftall be carried on, of the fcrutiny which ftall be made, of the fentence which ftall be pronounced; if, I fay, the bright ideas of thefe folemnities, which the fcripture hath taken care to imprint upon our minds, do not excite us to abound in the labour of love while it is yet day, ere the night cometh, when no man can work. Vain will be the attempt of rouzing us into the love and practice of goodneffs, by any lefs affonifhing methods: all other applications and motives whatfoever will be loft upon us, and we muft even be fuffered to fleep on in our fecurity, and take our reft, till our judgment, which lingereth not, overtakes us, and our condemnation, which flumbereth not, lays hold of us.

Do we, in good earneft, believe the account of that day's tranfactions which our Lord hath given us? And if we do fo, how can we ever think of appearing at that awful tribunal, without being able to give a ready anfwer to the queftions which God ftall then put to us, where the poor and the afflicted, the hungry and the naked, the fick and the imprifoned? What confufion of face ftall we be under when that grand inquefl begins, when an account of our wealth, and our opportunities of doing good, is difplayed on the one fide, and a particular of our life, or mifery of them, is given in on the other, and it ftall appear, that the good things we have done are few and trifle in comparifon with thofe we have received? How ftall we then wifh (to no purpofe!) that it might be allowed us to live over our lives again, in order to fill every minute of them with charitable, diligent, which, we find, will at that time be of fo great importance to us?

In vain ftall we then plead (though we could truly plead) that we have kept frequent and devout watchings of God, temperate and fober in our refreshments, juft and conficientious in our dealings. In vain ftall we attempt to juftify ourfelves, as the rich young man to the gofpel did, by appealing to the great duties of the law, and fayings:—All thefe have I kept from my youth up: Why unlefs we can fay alfo fomewhat more for ourfelves than he could; even that we have been liberal in our diftributions to the poor, and well difcharged that important ftewardfhip with which God hath entrufted us. One ftinging inftance of relief afforded to the afflicted, in the miferable, one cup of cold water given to a difciple; i. e. the fmalleft act of charity, done out of a fincere principle of goodneffs fhall then ftand us in greater ftead, and recommend us more effectually to the favour of our Judge, than all our pretended zeal for the divine honour, and the advancement of religion; than all the ftrifteft and fevereft of devotion; than all the rigours and feverities of the mortified ftate, nay, than whatever Chriftian graces and virtues we can fuppofe it poffible to attain, without attaining true Chriftian charity, i. e. fuch an ardent love of God, as manifefts itfelf in a proportionable love of our neighbour, and particularly in thofe genuine fruits of love with which Chriftian mercy and tendernefs will be fure to infpire us. This is a truth which cannot be too often or earneftly inculcated, becaufe (important as it is) we are apt, extremely apt, to overlook it, and to perfuade ourfelves, that if we do but obferve the rules of moral honeftly in all our tranfactions; if we wrong no man, or make reftitution to thofe we have wronged, fuch a righteoufnefs as Pharifees cannot will fecure our title to happinefs. It was chiefly to undeceive men up into a fenfe of their duty and danger in this refpect, that our Saviour uttered the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. The rich man is not blamed in that parable, as having made ufe of any unlawful means to amafs riches, to having thriven by fraud and injuftice, or grown fat upon the fpoils of rapine and oppreffion: all that is there laid to his charge is, that he was clothed with purple and fine linens and fared fumptuously every day, without regarding the wretched condition of Lazarus, who was laid at his gate, and who is faid indeed to have defired to feed of the crumbs which fell from his table, but is not faid to have obtained what he defired. And great was the guilt of humanity to an object fo pitiable and moving, did, it feems, deferve to be punifhed with everlafting torments. Hear and tremble, all ye who have this world's good, and fee your brother have need, and fhut up your bowels of compaffion from him.

In order to excite Chriftian compaffion I need ufe no other motive than that which St. Paul fuggefts, that the fmalleft act of charity upon whatever we do of this kind as done to himfelf—Inafmuch as ye have done it unto one of the leaft of thefe my brethren, ye have done it unto me! Let us carry this conffideration always in our view, and endeavour to affect our minds with a lively and vigorous fenfe of it. We are apt fometimes to wifh that it had been our lot to live and converfe with Chrift, to hear his divine difcourfes, and to obferve his fpotlefs behaviour; and we pleafe ourfelves with fuch thinking, how ready a reception we fhould have given to him and his doctrine; how forward we fhould have been in doing all public honours and private fervices, and in abounding in all the offices of humanity towards him.—The opportunity we have for you here, for behold he is with us to the end of the world, in the perfons of the poor and miferable. They are his reprefentatives, his fubftitutes; deputed by him to receive our bounty, in his name, and in his ftead, and we may reft affured (for he is faithful who promifed) that the comforts and fupports which we extend to his poor brethren, ftall be as kindly received, as highly valued, as mightily rewarded, as if he himfelf had been the object of our pious liberality; and that we ftall, on this account, be found at the day of retribution, among thofe at his right hand, to whom he will fay—Come, ye bleffed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirfty, and ye gave me drink; I was a ftranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was fick, and ye vifited me; I was in prifon, and ye came unto me.

SWEEPING CHIMNIES.

On Saturday laft, at ten o'clock, the Bifhop of Durham, Prefident. John J. Angerftein, Efq. and Patrick Colquhoun, Efq. Vice-Prefidents, T. Forcher, W. Fry, Gabriel Gilles, J. M. Morrison, and J. Perier, Efqs. with Mr W. Tooke, Treafurer, and Mr. James Hebbin, Secretary, in behalf of the Society, for the fuppreffing the neceffity of climbing boys, by encouraging a new method of fweeping chimnies, and for improving the condition of children and others employed by chimney fweepers, met at the York Hofpital, Petty-France, Weftminfter, according to appointment, for the purpofe of examining and feeing the feveral machines worked by the under mentioned candidates for the premium for fweeping chimnies.

The firft machine introduced, was one by Mr. Orme, late an officer in the army, being a brufh conftantly confined upon the end of an elaftic pole, compofed of whale bone, with two projected wings made of ftrong leather, the end of which was fixed with nails, in form a circle. To the pole was fuperadded various lengths made of the fame materials, and lapped on with a cord, refembling the handle of a clean man's whip, and fo fattened, that by the ftaffnefs of the pole joined thus together, and fuppended from the fmoke, it took the chimnery in all directions. The chimney-pot thereof was 45 feet high, with the pole joined (or the machine, when required, completed the operation. The fecond was Mr. Barber; his machine was alfo fixed upon the end of a pole, being fix brufhes, forming a large loaf, with a fhilper affixed to each brufh, being fo well contrived, that when the machine defcended to the top of the chimney, the fmalleft quick in pulling a conducting cord, the whole of the brufhes fpread in their feveral directions, fo as to completely fill the flue and crevices of the chimney, which by frequent brufh extended in every direction. This machine afcended the chimney by the affiftance of feveral pieces of wood, occafionally linked together, at the extremity of each link, which formed an angle, with a tafter or roller at each angle. The machine, in its experiment, by fome accident, broke the chimney-pot, and left the brufh at the top; but on the fecond trial in the back parlour, it completed the defign in five minutes.—The third was Mr. Griffin, his being conftructed with a coarfe brufh nearly in the fame manner, with the exception of a fpring, and a top brufh which was to fall over the chimney pot, but by fome defect he could not raife the machine.

During this time, Mr. Orme obferved a fmall baking oven with a flue to it, and in lefs than three minutes, he by his before mentioned machine had finifhed his experiment, by fending his brufh, &c. to the top of the chimney, and down again. The fourth was a Mr. Davis: began his experiment ten minutes before the eleven. His machine neatly conftructed the fame as that of Mr. Barber's, formed by four brufhes, with a ftrong ribbed immediately before each brufh, with inflexible joints, and feveral pieces of lath work, each forming a handle; by the addition of thefe handles in the manner defcribed, cleaned the chimney; 45 feet, and completed his operation.

The fifth and laft was a Mr. Smart; this was a brufh forming five fquares, upon the end of a hollow pole, through which was a ftrait rope, and was fattened by a vaft number of ftout lengths of wood, with a hole and rope through each; at the end of each of thofe pieces of wood, there was a piece of brafs, forming a kind of bell, the end of each wood followed in fucceffion, into the grove of each of thofe bells; fo as to make them all ring at once; and by lightning the rope which was done by a pully, they became fmothered, and yet fo pliable as to take the zig zag of the flue; but by fome mifchance, one of the pieces of wood came through the bottom, and put an end to the experiment before with fuccefs, in this inftance he failed. The fociety meets again on Wednefday, for further experiments, and to adjudge the premium.

SINGULAR CHARACTER.

The perfon known by the name of M. de Verdion, whom our readers muft have remembered about the ftreets of London, for a great number of years, wearing a little bag wig and a large cocked hat, and carrying an umbrella, died laft week of a cancer in the breaft, being, it appears, a female, though fhe always wore the maſculine habit. By papers found in her apartments, it feems fhe was the natural daughter of the late King of Pruffia, and came over to England with Madame Schwellenberg, miftrefs of the robes to her Majefty. It is underftood fhe was once in poffeffion of property to the amount of 800ol. which, trufting in the hands of a foreign banker, who failed, fhe entirely loft. She has fince fubfifted by teaching foreign languages. In her lodgings a number of valuable fuits of cloaths have been found, in which fhe ufed, till within thofe few years, to attend at Court on gala days, in the male character, having never been known in any other fince her refidence in this country, except to her patroneſs; her external form was, however, fuch as almoft to have caufed a fufpicion of the real fact. The enfemble of her figure, when decorated in its ufual paraphernalia, was whimfically grotefque.

POETRY.

INVOCATION TO EVENING.

HAIL fpirit of eve, that lov'ſt to glide
In filence, 'midſt the twilight dye,
Whofe form was only be defcry'd
By moſing Fancy's fervent eye.

With thee the rapt'rous Bard reforts,
To thee refigns his foul fublime,
To range, 'midſt Terror's awful Courts,
To glance beyond the bounds of Time.

Thy mildeſt influence him hath taught
His foul to melting ſtrains to grieve,
And ſwell the note, with ſweetneſs fraught,
That gentle bofoms deeply heave.

Then, Solemn, vifionary hour,
Thy ſilent glim receive he'll greet;
Though viewleſs in the diſtant ſtray tow'r,
Though echo ſhould no ſound repeat.

And then thy ſoft aerial power
Shall Fancy's dark vifions lead,
Oper Contemplation's fairy bower,
And leave behind life's leſſ'ning ſphere.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

MUTINY ACT,

IN FORCE FROM THE 24th MARCH, 1803.

SOME alterations have been introduced into this Act, which it is thought expedient to point out to the particular attention of Commanding Officers of Regiments, and for the information of the Army in general.

DESERTERS.

Sec. 4. Pa. 11 12. * A General Court Martial has no longer the power of adjudging Deserters to serve abroad as Soldiers (a service to which the Regular Soldier is always liable in the ordinary course of duty); but the Court is now authorized, in cases where Death may be thought too great a punishment, to sentence a Deserter to Transportation as a Felon, either for life, or a term of years, according to the degree of the offence; and if before the expiration of the term limited by the sentence. a Soldier so Transported shall return into, or be found at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without leave from his Majesty, or the Commanding Officer of the place to which the Soldier was ordered to be Transported, or without some other Lawful cause, every such person being convicted thereof, in the ordinary course of Law, will be deemed guilty of Felony, and will suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 5. Page 33. Where a Court Martial, either in the cases of Desertion, or of any other Capital Offence, shall have given a sentence of Death, his Majesty is impowered, if he shall think fit, to order that punishment to be changed for Transportation as a Felon, for life, or a term of years, as to his Majesty shall seem meet; and the punishment for returning before the expiration of the term limited by such order of his Majesty, will be Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy.

Sec. 609. Page 248. Persons harbouring, concealing, or assisting Deserters, are now liable to a penalty of Twenty Pounds for each offence, instead of Five Pounds as in former Acts.

Sec. 60. Page 324. The right of the Military to apprehend Deserters, and to receive the reward for apprehending them, without the assistance of a Civil Officer, is now established.

Sec. 68. Page 34. This Section has been altered, so as to put it out of doubt, that Gaolers at places on the road between the original place of confinement and that of final destination, are obliged to receive Deserters into their custody, without any fee or reward, whether the Deserters are conveyed by virtue of a Magistrate's Warrant, or under Military Escort, by an Order from the War-Office.

FORFEITURE OF PAY,

During Confinement for Criminal Offences.

Sec. 16. Page 24. The Pay of Officers and Men, convicted in the ordinary course of Law of any Criminal offence, and under confinement in consequence thereof, is forfeited, from the day on which the conviction takes place, to the day of their return to their Military duty.

* This does not interfere with the power given by the Act 42d Geo. III. chap. 90 § 12, to Courts Martial, in the Militia, to sentence Deserters belonging to those Forces (who are not liable by their original engagements to be sent out of Great Britain) to serve in his Majesty's Regiment without limitation as to the period or place of service.

THE ORACLE.

YORK:—SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1804.

Wednesday last being the day appointed by Proclamation for opening the Provincial Parliament, his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor came in the usual state to the Legislative Council Chamber, and being seated on the Throne with the accustomed solemnities, commanded by Message, through the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, the attendance of the House of Assembly—the Commons being come, his Excellency was pleased to deliver the following most Gracious SPEECH to both Houses of the Legislature:—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, And Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

AFTER the recess which has taken place since I last met you here, it became necessary I should call you together, and it is with concern I have to announce to you, that Hostilities have again been renewed between our Parent Country and the French Republic.

Among the first objects I would recommend to your deliberation, is, the security of this part of his Majesty's Dominions, by some wise and salutary Law calculated to protect the King's Government against Aliens, and to afford to his Majesty's Subjects in this Province, all the internal security which can be derived from timely and well concerted Legislative precaution.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I shall direct the Public Accounts to be laid before you, and I have no doubt you will bestow on them that attention which the nature of the subject requires.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, And Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The dangerous state of the Public Records and Evidences of Title to all the Landed Property of the Province, from the want of proper places of security for their deposit, certainly calls for redress, and I would recommend to you to take into your consideration, the appropriation of a Fund, for the erection of proper Buildings in which reasonable security may be afforded to these very valuable Documents.—It is unnecessary for me to enter upon any comment on the irretrievable calamity and evil, which would arise to the King's Subjects, if by fire or otherwise any serious accident should befall these Records—You cannot therefore too speedily interpose, and adopt such means of security as shall be found best calculated to promote this desirable object.

The situation of the present Public Roads, and the opening of new Roads in particular parts of the Province, to which there is as yet very difficult access, is also a subject well intitled to your attention, and you cannot, in my opinion, better apply a reasonable part of the Public Revenue, than to facilitate the means of communication between all the different parts of the Province, as a sure step to the increase of our Commerce, and the advancement of the general prosperity of the Province.

Upon these and all other topics, which may, during the present Session, form the subject matter of your Councils and Discussions, I confidently trust you will use reasonable diligence, and that the result of all your consultations will bear ample testimony, of the unshaken loyalty and attachment of this Province to his Majesty and his Government, and will be attended with the most happy and salutary consequences to these parts of his Majesty's Dominions which though far removed from him, are and ever have been constant objects of his paternal care and protection.

At a Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, holden at York, in and for the Home District, on Monday the 30th, and continued by adjournment until Tuesday the 31st ult. before his Honor Chief Justice ALLCOCK—

Jonathan Mason, a Private in his Majesty's 49th Regiment, was indicted and tried for feloniously stealing a large quantity of Pork, the property of George Paul, and found Not Guilty.

Stephen Ellis and Elizabeth Ellis his wife, were also indicted and tried for a misdemeanor, in keeping to the public nuisance a disorderly house, for the reception of loose, vicious and lewd persons—The husband was acquitted, but the wife was found Guilty, and sentenced to six months imprisonment in the common Gaol, and to stand twice within that period in the Pillory, on Market days, for two hours each time, opposite the Market-House.

Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, November 6.

The Chief Consul had not left Paris the 25th October.

Yesterday dispatches were received from Admiral Cotton with the enemy's flotilla has made a movement:—They could not have a better opportunity.

Our squadron has been at work again upon the French coast. Yesterday afternoon a heavy firing was heard at Deal and Dover, in the quarter of Boulogne, from which it was concluded that a bombardment had taken place, or the attack had been renewed upon the gun-boats. No particulars had reached our coast at the departure of the post last night.

November 7.

Dispatches have been sent to Plymouth, to be forwarded with all possible expedition to Lord Nelson, in the Mediterranean. Government has received undoubted intelligence of the design of Bonaparte to attempt the landing of a considerable force in Egypt.

Four ships of the line and some frigates, are ordered to reinforce our fleet in the Mediterranean.

A most tremendous firing was distinctly heard at Deal and Dover during the whole of Saturday, the result of which has not yet been accurately ascertained. Our Dover correspondent writes as follows:— [The Globe.]

DOVER, November 5.

Lieutenant Robert Hoult, of the Royal navy, and his wife, landed here this afternoon out of the Maria, Danish vessel, from Dieppe. The news by this vessel is, that the preparations for invasion are going on with extraordinary activity; a great number of gun boats, carrying four guns, 24 pounders, are built ready for sea; and very large camps of troops are formed all along the coast. The troops are ready for embarkation, and their hopes of plunder are of the most sanguine description.

Some very heavy firing has been heard at times all the week; but we have been without any particulars untill this evening. The Admiral Mitchell hired armed cutter, Lieutenant Sheppard, of this port, is just arrived, very much shattered, in consequence of an action fought by her with a French gunbrig of 12 thirty two pounders, and 5 French gun boats. On Monday last, being off Boulogne they distinctly counted 84 gun boats in the roads; at 10, A. M. they discovered 6 sail standing in shore, and tacked to discover what they were. The French brig hoisted her colours, and stood out to engage the cutter, while the gun boats kept firing at a distance.—The brig being pretty near gave the cutter her broadside; one thirty two pound shot went through her larboard quarter, took off a man's leg knocked away the top of the companion, and went out the opposite side; the cutter stood on, and reserved her fire untill within pistol shot, and then gave the enemy a broadside of round & grape; on which the brig tacked and ran in shore, the cutter following her, untill the went on shore on the sharp rocks off Portee Point. One gun boat was also driven on the rocks, the other three found refuge under a large French battery, when the cutter continued cannonading them untill the had expended rounds; when being so much disabled, the water nearly up to her cabin floor, gaft shot away in two places, the mast severely wounded by pieces of shells from the shore, and the master and four men wounded, she hauled off. Luckily the Lark sloop of war immediately came up, received her wounded men, and went in and continued the action. The cutter bore away for Seaford Road; but the weather becoming moderate, the arrived safe here this evening.

Some very heavy firing has been heard again to-day in the direction of Boulogne. The wind is very fair, and the water very smooth—and it is conjectured that the enemy's flotilla has made a movement:—They could not have a better opportunity.

November 8.

Our squadron has been at work again upon the French coast. Yesterday afternoon a heavy firing was heard at Deal and Dover, in the quarter of Boulogne, from which it was concluded that a bombardment had taken place, or the attack had been renewed upon the gun-boats. No particulars had reached our coast at the departure of the post last night.

November 12.

Our Dover correspondent adheres in his letter dated Thursday, November 12, four o'clock P. M.—"About nine o'clock this morning, the whole of the breaking Squadron stationed for some time off Boulogne, was seen from our heights steering for the Downs. The wind strong at N. W. Bonaparte's armada may, therefore, now put to sea, without any interruption from our ships. Unfortunately, however, the wind has shifted to W. N. W. and blows such a hurricane, that we are afraid the gun-boats, and all the rest of the boats, will remain at home until a more favorable opportunity occurs.

The French lodgers lately captured in the gunboat near Calais, and now at Deal, have accounted for their being allowed on board such a contemptible bark, in the following manner:—They say, that for some time past, the principal officers stationed at the several French ports in the Channel, have ordered a certain number of troops to embark occasionally, and to take a voyage from harbour to harbour, in order to reconcile them to the sea, which most of them do not like. This is very likely to be a true state of the case; but it does not appear the voyages already taken have produced the desired effect."

We understand, that in the Gazette of this evening, or, at farthest, the beginning of next week, there will be published a spirited Proclamation from his Majesty, stating, that until the English in France, detained as prisoners of war in fact such manifest violation of the law of nations be released, no prisoners taken by us will be permitted to be exchanged.

Paris papers to the 2d, and Dutch journals to the 7th inst. have been received. An article from Vienna, of the 20th ult. states, in positive terms, the complete failure of the negociations carried on by the Courts of St. Petersburgh and Berlin, for the purpose of adjusting the differences between France and this country.

The following official return of our Volunteer Force was made on Friday at the War-Office:—

Infantry,	297,502
Cavalry,	31,680
Artillery,	6,107
Total,	335,309!

If we add to these our Regulars and Militia, we two may boast our 500,000 Fighting Men.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 10, 1803.

Extract of a letter from London, Nov. 8.

"The note of preparation on this side of the water has increased in a singular manner since my last:——the hottest press for seamen ever known took place all down the river late on Monday evening, and of course a greater number of men were taken, probably between the river and the Nore nearly 1000. It is further understood, that to carry the regulations lately agreed upon for putting an invasion into the most active and immediate effect, the Lords Lieutenants of counties have been ordered by his Majesty's sign manual to take the most prompt measures for driving carriages, moving horses, corn, breaking up of roads, &c. &c. &c. The Northern coast of this kingdom is to be strengthened without delay—a party of the artillery escorting six field pieces, six carricle guns, twelve ammunition waggons, bread waggons, &c. set out on Monday from Woolwich for Tynemouth and Hull, and another detachment is ready to follow them.—In fact, a speedy and terrible conflict is now looked for with confidence, and from the general state of this country rather courted than otherwise.

"By Dutch papers it appears that the head quarters of the French and Batavian army are fixed at Utrecht."

The following Extract, which we have translated from the Leyden Gazette, is well calculated to shew our Countrymen, that the threats of the Mediterranean can be easily brought to order.

FLORENCE, August 19.

Admiral Nelson has bombarded Algiers for ten hours, without intermission: the cause and details of this affair are as follows:—

An Algerine fleet was an English brigantine wear blocking, and endeavored sore to burning it, but after receiving several broadsides, the brigantine escaped, and gained the port of Malta. On receiving this information, two English ships of the line and two frigates, with bomb vessels, &c. departed in pursuit of the barbarian squadron, which they overtook, and took seven of their vessels.

On the news of this defeat, the Dey of Algiers had all the English Agents thrown into irons, and their property confiscated.—Admiral Nelson, when informed of this barbarous proceed, stationed himself before Algiers, with a squadron of seven frigates. The English Admiral immediately ordered his squadron to advance, and in the middle of the night commenced a brisk fire of bombs and heated balls, which spread fear and devastation through the city. The Dey sent a message to Lord Nelson, who replied he could give no answer for several hours, during which interval the bombardment continued without interruption, in such a manner as to cause the most dreadful ravages through the city. After several of a second message from the Dey, with new propositions, Lord Nelson demanded that all the English Agents should be set at liberty, and a reasonable indemnity be made for the losses they had sustained, with the refreshment of all the captives.—He enacted besides the sum of 500,000 sequins, with a peremptory order, that the Dey would come again make either Tartan or Neapolitan captives.

MILAN, Sept. 26.

The English are getting out an expedition at Malta with the utmost expedition. Many of the Maltese have been compelled to serve in it. It is supposed that its destination is against the coast of Elba, partly to cut off the trade of Liguria and Tuscany, and partly to prevent the French fleet of any place of refuge if it should venture to put to sea from Toulon.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 6.

General Ney, who is expected from Switzerland, will command the camps forming on the right and left of Dunkirk. His head quarters will be at Saint-Winoc.

FECAMP, October 13.

This morning a French flotilla sailed by this port, but the rear guard being observed by an English frigate, it was chased and was obliged to take refuge under the batteries of Dollieu: the cannonading on both sides was very brisk.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 15.

In our Courant, it is said, under the Paris head, that the Russian envoy, Count Marckoff, has given a note to the French government, signifying that his court will not see, with indifference, the march of the French troops through Spain, to take possession of Portugal.

DUNKIRK, October 25.

We hear from Valenciennes, that all the English prisoners in that town have been sent to Luxemburgh, under a strong guard. The reason alleged for this is, that four English prisoners, at large on their parole, lately made their escape. Most of the Irish in France are permitted to go at large. They have constantly a certificate from some Ambassador, generally the American, which by direction is narrowly examined. Fifty thousand men are thought sufficient to carry Ireland. They reckon on two-thirds of the population of that country being with them.

Great pains are taken to remove all fears of fear of the English navy; and to this effect strong intimations are given that there are more ways than one of avoiding. If not subduing it. The effect of these intimations is to inspirit the common soldiery, and diminish their dread of our naval power.

The Americans lend their flag colourably to Frenchmen, who trade on American bottoms, with American failors. All these, both ships and men, Bonaparte, since the late embargo, has seized as belonging to France. The most perfectly honorable flag seems to be that of Sweden. A friend of mine wanted lately to charter a vessel of that nation; but the captain told him, that it would be his total ruin if found out, and therefore declined letting him have it.

When Bonaparte was here, his grand ce corps were quartered on private individuals; and abstracted the sum of the house in common with the family.

NEW YORK, December 10.

CALAMITY AT MADEIRA.

This extraordinary event, which we briefly noticed in our paper of the 26th ultimo, happened on Sunday the 9th of Oct. at 8 in the evening. The day had been previously very cloudy, and a continual rain had fallen accompanied with squalls, which were not violent, until the evening, when a sudden dark beneath the horizon, when the sea appeared to be dreadfully agitated, and such a darkness prevailed that no object was discernable at a distance. During this progress, every person remained within their houses, in seeming security, and without any consciousness of that approaching horror which was destined so shortly to sweep them from off the earth.

The clock of the cathedral was striking eight, when an unfortunate flood of extreme thunder and lightning began, and the rain fell in such torrents, that all the cross streets of the eastern part of the city of Funchall, were suddenly filled with mud and water above the first floors of the houses, which was occasioned by its being impeded, in some measure, from the furious descent from the ravines of the mountains into the sea. At this shocking period, the stoutest heart felt appalled—nothing was heard but the din of ruin working in every direction—hundreds of huge stones, that had been taken from their quarries on the hills, three miles above the town, were tumbling over each other in furious confusion, carrying with them, in conjunction with the deluge, churches, convents, streets, stores, bridges, battlements, and eight hundred human souls into the bottom of the deep! Whenever a flash of lightning penetrated the gloom, were seen mothers wading through the streets, up to their chins in water, holding their infants on their heads with one hand, and endeavouring to catch security with the other; while those who attempted to assist them, were frequently maimed or killed, by the masses of timber or the pipes which floated around them; and the sea presented a scene not less awful, though less ruinous; most of the vessels left their cables, anchors & boats, and many of the steamers were washed overboard.—The ships rolled, in some part of anchorey, several feet beneath the water continually, and all the sailors who were there on that dismal night, whether Americans, English, or Portuguese, gave themselves up as lost men.

Thus, in so short a space of time as a few minutes, were many hundred individuals carried to their eternal home, in the very plenitude of an apparent security and several thousands reduced from affluence to poverty; and many of them, it is probable, in the indulgence of those imperfections which constitute our criminality in our boiys; and tops to their accounts unbanished, unrepented, unanointed." Ten thousand pipes of wine and brandy were destroyed, and the sea shore was littered on the ensuing morning with millions of fragments, among which the mourning survivors of the calamity were eagerly seeking for the dead remains of their relations or friends.—Several days after, the air of Funchall became so putrid, from the rotting of the bodies that were buried beneath the congregated mud and filth, that a pestilence was apprehended; but in consequence of burning tar and pitch, and other neutralizing combustibles, that scourge was providentially avoided.

It was remarkable that this deluge in its course, forces away 29 vineyards that were situated on the south west side of the city; and so decisive was the ruin, that it tore up all the trees by the roots, and bore away not only them, but all the cottages, with their inhabitants, the ground, cattle, and appurtenances, and left the rocky bare as bare of vegetation as the cliffs of Norway. All this affords a scene of objects which bears that name.

In this wreck of matter, there was but one human creature saved, and that was an infant in a wooden cradle, which was lodged among some reeds on the side of the declivity, and when discovered, on the ensuing day, was in a profound sleep. This unconscious infant was saved, from its ignorance of fear, as it is the nature of fear to counteract its own purpose.

All the vessels that arrived at Funchall for several weeks after this miserable occurrence, gave an account of the dead bodies, casks, and boxes which they had seen floating many leagues off at sea; and it is believed that some of the crews were thereby enriched by the contents of many of the trunks.

The small town of Machico, was likewise ruined by this singular tempest, and many lives were lost there also; which leads to a supposition, that the lamented event was occasioned by a water-spout, that had burst against the side of the mountain, and discharging itself down the gullies, produced those afflictive and sudden disasters, that all living persons must deplore; and which, whenever recollected, should operate to remind us of our frailty and our responsibility, and make us live, well, that we may die happily.

This is admitted to have been the greatest civic evil that has happened since the earthquake of Lisbon, in 1754, and was the most tragical of its nature that ever happened. Had the younger Pliny been on the spot, it would have been adequately detailed.

The property destroyed, has been estimated at upwards of a million of pounds sterling.

Additional particulars of the late disaster at Madeira.

[Communicated by capt. Perrot, arrived at Norfolk.]

"On Sunday evening, the 9th Oct. being at the island of Madeira, at 6 P. M. there came on a most tremendous storm of wind, hail and rain ever witnessed by the oldest person—the wind blew from S. S. E. which, with the freshes on shore, swept away nearly one third of the town of Funchal, and all the villages received considerable damage—it was generally reported when capt. P. left there, that the number lost must exceed 1000, and that the hail on the mountain tops were as large as a man's fist. Had the wind continued half an hour longer at the same point, every vessel in the road must have been drove on shore, but it shifted suddenly, gave them an opportunity of slipping their cables and going to sea, some with the loss of booms, &c.

"Capt. Perrot's own words—It was nearly two days before I came in again, but whilst at sea, experienced the most tremendous sight my eyes ever beheld—the whole surface of the sea was apparently covered with trees, parts of houses, pipes of wine, boats, oars, hogs sheep, goats cattle, mules, and in short, every thing that the island affords. Capt. Brigdon, of the ship Thomas Gordon, who was at sea two or three days after I came in, informed me of seeing a number of dead bodies at sea. An English family by the name of Tatlocks, all perished.—The oldest and most valuable church was washed away, as well as a large proportion of cash and valuable goods have been destroyed. Numbers were dug out of the rubbish, 30 or 40 horses after the disaster, still alive—and to the astonishment of all, a woman was found dead with her infant child at her breast alive and likely to survive."

One of our last London papers says, "It is a proud circumstance, as indicative of the disposition of the people, and of their just conception of the cause at issue, that the Cinque Ports alone, of which Mr. Pitt is Lord Warden, have given for the support of their country, one hundred and fifty vessels, mounting carronades, from 12 to 24 pounders, which are navigated, and if occasion offers, will be fought without any expence to the state."

Captain Lincoln, from St. Thomas's, who arrived at Charleston the 23d ult. informs, that Major General Prevost, the officer who commanded the British forces against Demerara, died at Barbadoes, on the 17th November last; the General's wife and child died the same day.

Capt. Murphy, from Calcutta, informs that the news of war had not reached that place when he sailed; but was informed of it at St. Helena. A secret expedition sailed from Calcutta in company with the Swift, supposed to be destined for Ceylon, as a reinforcement to the British troops at that place; at which island there had been some serious disturbances between the British and the Kandyian Chief. It was said some of his Britannic Majesty's troops had been shuffled off. The whole of the troops in the upper Provinces had taken the field.

A gentleman who arrived here in the ship Patty, from New Orleans, informs us, that on the 20th ult. he met in the river a Spanish corvette from Havanna, bound up to New Orleans, having on board 150,000 dollars, in part payment for the colonial debt. He learned from this corvette, that the Spanish government did not intend to give up Louisiana.

An Englishman who left Martinique 18 days since, informs that the noted fast sailing French privateer, which has done so much damage in the capture of vessels, was on her going into Martinique with a prize, so closely purfued by a British frigate that she put into an out port of that island. The British landed men, took the fort, and cut the privateer out, and made a prize of her. This privateer is a large schooner, and one of the fastest sailing vessels in the West Indies.—She had often been chaled by British cruizers, but never overtaked.

Capt. Huntam, of the British ship Fortitude, from Londonderry, informs us, that the people of Ireland are all under arms to repel the threatened invasion. He says that there never was more loyalty exhibited in that country, than when he sailed, which was on the 3d ult. However dissatisfied the people may have been with their own government, they are, to a man, determined to fight against the French.

By the Victory, from Martinique, we learn, that the French privateer, which is mentioned in a preceding paragraph to have been cut out of a small port in the island of Martinique, was the Harmony. This exploit was executed by boats from the Blenheim, of 74 guns, together with a brig and cutter; who not only cut out the privateer, but took the fort, spiked the guns, blew up the magazine, and made prisoners of the garrison.

The night before the Victory sailed, a similar detachment formed and took a fort on the right of Fort Royal Bay—tumbled the guns down the precipice, blew up the magazine, and brought the troops of the garrison off prisoners.

Agreeable to advices received at Port-au-Prince from General Dessalines, he had on the 23d ult. attacked the Cape with all the active force he could raise, said to amount to from 20 to 25,000 men. The defeat of the 4th effected from Morne-du-Cap. After having passed the outlines and several of the blockhouses, an action ensued between the troops of Dessalines and Rochambeau, which continued 12 hours with the greatest obstinacy, when Gen. Rochambeau was under the necessity of capitulating for the evacuation of the Cape on the 28 ult.—All the troops posted at the blockhouses between the Bernier and Haut-du-Cap (the out posts) were massacred, as all possibility of escape to the town was cut off. Agreeably to the capitulation, Rochambeau with the army under his command were to be embarked under the protection of the British cruizing fleet. When Dessalines left Port-au-Prince, he nominated Petion (a mulatto) General of Brigade and commandant of the place in his absence.

The people of colour, particularly the women, experienced the most cruel treatment, having been put to labour on the public works, with negro women to superintend them.
