Editorial Commentary.

We call on the people of this country, to look to their Legislature in the Imperial Parliament at home, and especially Sir ISAAC COFFIN, together with the authoritative and dictatorial Editor of BELL'S WEEKLY MESSENGER, were as well aware of the extraordinary advantages possessed by the Upper Canadian Peninsula, in an agricultural and commercial point of view, as our Republican neighbors appear to be. Some highly interesting debates have recently occurred in Congress, on the subjects of revising the Tariff, and the Growth, Flouring, and Transport of Canadian Wheat.

Mr. HAYDEN of New York, mentioned that a single miller of Rochester had imported 4697 bushels of Canadian Wheat, and he did not doubt that in ten years time 280,000 bushels would be imported from the same quarter into Rochester alone.—He further remarked, that, "To give some idea of this trade upon the frontier, the export from the single port of Rochester, during the last year, had amounted to upwards of a million of dollars!!"

Mr. VANCE, of Ohio, said "that he was unhappily able to speak from personal experience on this subject. He knew, for he had felt the existence and operation of Canadian rivalry. He had shipped large quantities of flour and pork, and when he got to a market, had been there put down by the competition of Canadian shippers. The whole of the military posts of the United States, on the North West of the Ohio, had been supplied almost exclusively by the people of Upper Canada. The gentleman from Massachusetts says that this flour is not for American consumption, and he is therefore willing to strike out the duty. But, it is a fact that the British Government have for years past supplied the American army with all its flour. When I took flour to the posts, hoping to find for it an American market, I found that the contractor uniformly drew his supplies from my neighbors on the other side of the line. Upper Canada is in this respect a much more formidable rival to the United States, than gentlemen seem to consider. It is now, and will be more and more so, one of the greatest wheat growing countries in the world."

Even Mr. CLAY, so far condescended, as to say that, "such was the fertility of the Canadian Peninsula, between Lakes Erie and Ontario, and so cheap were the lands sold by the British Government, that the settlers there could afford to undersell the farmer of the United States, whose land cost him ten times as much."—

We have a tract of land in Upper Canada containing about 40,000 square miles, (lying between the outlet of Lake Ontario—and the Sandwich frontier on the west, and Gloucester Bay on Lake Huron, on the north) which is certainly capable,—by its fine position and natural fertility, and peculiar adaptation for the growth of the finest wheat, of supplying the greatest part of Europe with grain and flour, after satisfying its home market; and, we are perfectly satisfied that, if the WELLAND CANAL can be completed for a sum not greatly exceeding the present estimate, a barrel of flour can be delivered in Montreal from the most western limit of the above mentioned tract, at less cost than the same barrel could be sent to the New York market, by the route of the American Canal.

AND we are, further, decidedly of opinion, that, if our merchants and farmers exert themselves as they ought to do—whilst we enjoy so many advantages, under the British Colonial Policy of the present day—it will be entirely their own fault if they do not drive the Americans out of every flour market to which they may both go; but, especially that of the West Indies,—besides having abundance at home.

All our fear respecting the WELLAND CANAL, and a great and well founded fear it is, is that the estimate is infinitely below what will be found to be the actual cost.—In our opinion, the sum heretofore named, will not pay for the locks alone, and we trust that, whatever may be done, it will be done well;—for, never was there a truer saying, than "what is once well done, is twice done," particularly in matters of this kind.—For our own parts, we have no hesitation in declaring that we have seen many master drains, both in Ireland, and in the fenny parts of England, not pretending to the character of canals, very superior to any part of the much boasted canal of the State of New York;—which, for the most part, is a weak, dirty, quavering, ill-contrived ditch, that will require incessant repairs, and must be made anew within the space of five or six years.—Blight of hand seems to be the trick and the catch word of all mechanism amongst our neighbours; but we hope and trust that, in an affair of so much importance as the canal to unite the waters of Erie with those of Ontario, on our side the line, will be constructed after the good substantial, and almost everlasting principles acted upon in the formation of similar works in England.—The first expence is nothing in competition with durability in undertakings of this kind.

Our readers will perceive a notice respecting a Seminary lately opened by a Mr. and Mrs. Andrews, at William Henry, in the Lower Province, in another part of our paper. As it is always a gratifying to us to support the claims of real merit whenever it is in our power, we have much satisfaction in being able to declare, from every information we have received, that in no seminary out of England can there be greater justice done to the pupils, whether in regard to their learning, or their moral; whilst an affectionate solicitude anticipates their wants.—The acknowledged talent and polite accomplishments of this family, in all the branches of Art and Science that are usually cultivated in public schools,—and which are taught by the Messrs Andrews upon the modern European principle, furnish out a strong claim on the public patronage, which we hope will be liberally bestowed.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

THE DISCOVERY SHIPS.—His Majesty's discovery ships Hecla and Fury, were recommissioned at Deptford, on Thursday week, by Captains Parry and Hopper. The latter officer was the first lieutenant on board of Capt Lyon's ship on the recent voyage. Such is the confidence felt in the intrepidity, judgment, and conduct of the distinguished officer in command of the expedition, and in the assistance paid by the different naval departments to the comfort of the men, that no sooner were the ships commissioned, than one-third of the crew belonging to the Fury on the former voyage, again volunteered for the Hecla, the ship bearing Captain Parry's pendant.—Capt. Lyon at the same time commissioned his Majesty's ship Griper, which is destined for Repulse Bay, whence Capt. Lyon proceeds overland to the back of that bay; to survey the coast, thence to the "Cape Turnagain" of Capt. Franklin's recent discoveries.—Capt Franklin proceeds by way of New York to Fort Enterprise, with a view to survey the coast on the American continent to the westward, connecting, if possible, the survey between Fort Enterprise and Icy Cape.

ADVANTAGE OF SILK WAISTCOATS.—The power of electricity over the body is well known; in fact we can never enjoy health without its comfort without a proper portion of it in the system.—When this portion is deficient, we feel languid and heavy, and very foolishly pronounce a libel on the blood, which is quite innocent, while we never suspect the damp atmosphere of robbing us of our electricity. Yet so it is.—In dry weather, whether it be warm, cold or frosty, we feel light and spirited, because dry air is a slow conductor of electricity, and leaves us to enjoy its luxuries. In moist and rainy weather we feel oppressed and drowsy, because all moisture speedily absorbs our electricity, which is the most powerful cordial of the body. To remedy this inconvenience, we have only to discover a good non conductor of electricity to prevent its escape from the body; and this we have in silk, which is so excellent a non conductor, that the thunderbolt, or forked lightning itself, could not pass through the thinest silk handkerchief, provided always, that it be quite dry. Those, therefore, who are apt to become low spirited and listless in damp weather, will find silk waistcoats, drawers, and stockings, to be the most powerful of all cordials. Flannel is also good, but nothing so powerful as silk. Washed leather is likewise a non conductor of electricity, and may be used by those who prefer it. But silk is by far the lightest, and those who dislike to wear flannel next their skin, will find equal benefit by substituting cotton shirts, drawers, and stockings, with silk ones over them; for where more heat is required, flannel ones between the cotton and the silk, for the silk should be outermost. We will to give reasons for our advice, and our readers may depend on the philosophy of these recommendations.—we can answer for their being practically correct.

Silk indeed, should be used in every possible manner by the invalid—in the lining of sleeves, in the neatness of neckcloths, and even in the entire backs of surtouts, cloaks, greatcoats and in the coverlets of beds, &c.; and where health is the question, will be the end to which no sum can be considered other than cheap be used, as it will save money on apothecary's bill. When it can be a principal means of preventing consumption, rheumatism, gout, inflammations, melancholy, madness, and even suicide itself, no expense ought to be spared.—Edinburgh Weekly Chronicle.

WALTZ.—We trust the following happy exposure of the pernicious tendency of this fashionable and lascivious dance will have its due effect on all who have a regard to that character for modesty on which the British fair were wont so much to pride themselves.—"As many of the retired matrons of this city, unskilled in gesticlore, are doubtless ignorant of the movements and figures of this modest exhibition, I will endeavour to give some account of it in order that they may learn what odd capers their daughters sometime out, when from under their guardian wings. On a signal being given by the music, the gentleman seizes the lady round the waist; the lady, scorning to be outdone in coquetry, very politely takes the gentleman round the neck, with one arm resting against his shoulder to prevent encroachment.—A ray then they go, about, and about.—About what, Sir? About the room, Madam, to be sure. The whole economy of this dance consists in turning round and round the room, in a certain measured step; and it is truly astonishing that this continued revolution does not set all their heads swimming like a top; but I have been positively assured, that it only occasions a gentle sensation which is marvellously agreeable. In the course of this circumvolution, the dancers, in order to give the charm of novelty, are continually changing their relative situations:—now the gentleman, standing sideways in the world, I assure you, Madam, carelessly flings his arm about the lady's neck, with an air of celestial impudence; and anon the lady, meaning as little harm as the gentleman, takes him round the waist, with most ingenious modest languishment, to the great delight of numerous spectators and admirers, who generally form a ring, at the ends of about a pair of amazons pulling caps, or a couple of fighting mastiffs. After continuing this divine interchange of hands, arms, &c. for half an hour or so, the lady begins to tire, and with eyes upraised, in most bewitching languor, petitions her partner for a little more support. This is always given without hesitation. The lady leans gently on his shoulder; their arms entwine in a thousand seducing mischievous curves—don't be alarmed, Madam—closer and closer they approach each other, and in conclusion, the lady, quite overcome with exstatic fatigue, the lady seems almost sinking into the gentleman's arms, and then ——

"'Well, Sir! what then?'—Lord, Madam, how should I know?"—Somerset House Miscellany.

THE RICH WIDOW.—It was confidently rumoured in Bath that a marriage is speedily to take place between Mrs. Coutts, the richest widow in England, and R. Elliston, Esq. lessee and manager of Drury lane Theatre.

ROSSINI.—Rossini, the composer, is at present the great object of curiosity and attraction in the fashionable circles. Nothing however, has been thought more striking in him by those distinguished persons to whom he has been introduced than the manly frankness and ease of his deportment, when in the presence of supreme rank, contrasted with that servility which is characteristic of the subjects of a despotic government, and which has been so frequently remarked in the demeanor of eminent foreigners when on a visit to this country.—Rodyn, the greatest musician of his age, was a striking instance of this. It was during his late visit to the Pavilion at Brighton, that Rossini committed perhaps more peculiarly that tone which is inseparable from good society, and which denotes perfect equality with the circle in which we are moving. Some officious friends (of the composer we mean) were so struck with his manner, as to advise him at least in the presence of Royalty to descend from an elevation which in that instance appeared to them to border on indecorum. Rossini is said to have answered this sapient council by remarking, that whatever were his real pretensions, he had been invited to England in the character of a man of genius, as he had been to half the Courts in Europe, and that he had held that character to be on a par with Kings and Emperors. His intercourse, too, with Royalty had been so frequent, that it was in such society he felt, and could not help showing that he was perfectly at ease. The King, greatly to his credit, appears to have entertained none of these notions, but to have treated the Composer with the freedom of an equal. Rossini at the King's challenge, sang a duet with him and the whole of the intercourse was on the same familiar footing. Rossini speaks highly of his Majesty's judgment in music and, we believe, even on this point no connoisseur.—Morning paper.

Gold Mines of North Carolina.

"Gold, yellow glittering, precious Gold!"

NORTH CAROLINA GOLD.—We have several times noticed the gold mine said to have been discovered in N. Carolina, many years ago, but which has never been worked much until the last year. Benjamin G. Barker, merchant of this city, has this morning brought to our office a variety of specimens of this precious metal, in its virgin state, amounting in all to about 1700 penny weights. The gold is generally found in a coarse dust, from the size of mustard seed to that of a large bean. But Mr. B. has a single mass weighing 346 penny weights, and a bar weighing 220 penny weights. These two masses are worth more than 500 dollars. There have never been any specimens of gold from the mines of South America, equal to these—the sight of them really makes our fingers itch while writing this paragraph.—Several years ago, there was a single lump of gold found in this mine, weighing upwards of 28 pounds averdupois, valued at about 7000 dollars. As others have specimens for sale. The two largest of these specimens may be examined at this office until to-morrow at 12 o'clock. By the bye, if such precious metal in such abundance is at the south cannot our subscribers make it convenient to let us hear from them a little oftener.

METHOD OF TEMPERING EDGE TOOLS WHEN OF TOO BRITTLE A QUALITY.—Plunge the blade up to the handle in boiling fat for two hours, and then taking it out, let it cool gradually.—A knife the edge of which was so brittle that it broke in cutting even a pea, after the operation, was capable of cutting the hardest wood even box, or ebony.—From a French Publication.

TO MAKE ODORELDOE.—This well known liniament is prepared by digesting three parts of soap in 16 parts of the Spirits of rosemary, till the former be dissolved, then one part of camphor should be incorporated with the whole. This unguent is of great service in bruises, rheumatic affections and similar painful complaints; but being very volatile, it ought to be kept in bottles closely stopped to prevent the essence of it.

TO MAKE SALT WATER FRESH!—M. Clement, a French chemist, has lately invented an apparatus for the distillation of sea water, which produces six pounds of good fresh water by the burning of one pound of common coal. A single still will supply five hundred pints of water daily, and the distillation may be performed during the roughest weather.

PERKIN'S STEAM ENGINE!—It is with pleasure we learn letters have been received in this city from London, communicating the test of Perkins' improvement on steam power. Public confidence in Mr. Perkins' project did for a time decline; but an experiment with a fifteen horse power engine applied in propelling a boat, has proved the practicability as well as importance of his invention. Large contracts have been made already for the use of the patent on this side of the Atlantic. The subject is deeply interesting to the community in general, and particularly to the inhabitants of this city, whose attention is now directed to the navigation of the river.

MUSTARD.—Why buy this when you can grow it in your garden? The stuff you buy is half drugs and injurious to health. A yard square of ground, sown with common mustard, the crop of which you would grind for use, in a little mustard mill, as you wanted it, would save you some money, and probably save your life. Your mustard would look brown instead of yellow; but the former colour is as good as the latter; & as to the taste, the real mustard has certainly a much better than that of the drugs and flour, which go under the name of mustard. Let any one try it, and I am sure he will never use the drugs again. The drugs, if you take them freely leave "a burning at the pit of your stomach," which the real mustard does not.—Cobbett.

CHEMICAL EFFECTS OF COLD.—A writer says "that the best gun locks with the first rate flints will not produce fire, so as to fire gun powder, when the thermometer stands at 30 degrees or more below 0, if fairly exposed to that temperature."

LA DUCHESSE DE BERRI AND SIR CHARLES STEWART.—A circumstance occurred lately in Paris which merits notice, inasmuch as it shows the anxiety of at least one branch of the French royal family to preserve something like respect for this country. The Duchess de Berri gave a soiree which was concluded by a dramatic piece called "L'Anglaises pour rire," which is a sharp satire upon the customs and manners of the English. When the King heard of this circumstance, he sent for the duchess de Berri, and insisted upon her making an apology to Sir Charles Stewart, for the insult she had put upon the English character. The Dutch are remonstrated, but was obliged to yield, and the apology was made accordingly. Sir Charles, on receiving it, said, her royal highness was unnecessarily concerned on this subject; for that neither personally, nor as the representative of a great nation, did such trifles ever dwell upon his mind.

FANTASTIC POLYGAMY.—Mr. Bowditch informs us that the King of the Ashantees is allowed by law 3,333 wives, this being the precise mystical number on which the prosperity of the nation depends.

RACING EXTRAORDINARY.—The following singular match took place in Scotland in 1821, Capt. Y. of the Dumfries shire Militia, for a considerable bet, engaged to gallop his horse 35 yards before Mr. J. S. E——l, of the same Regiment could run the same distance, the Captain started his horse in as masterly a manner that it proved completely what in the Jockey language is termed, a hollow thing—Capt. Y. upon winning, offered to gallop the same horse 15 yards against Mr. E., which being accepted, much sport ensued; the first and second heats were declared dead by the umpire, and the third was gained by little more than half a yard by the footman.

HUMAN FECUNDITY.—A woman named BURNER, at Brussels, has been delivered of three girls; eleven months previous she was also delivered of three girls: so that in less than twelve months she was mother of six children.

RALEIGH, N. C. March 16.

A SERIOUS KISS.—A singular, and we believe unprecedented, instance of the effect of passion in a brute animal, was witnessed in this city last week. A horse, while paying his respects to a trough of provender, was somewhat annoyed by a cow, who seemed determined to participate without ceremony, in the good things he was so eagerly discussing.—She so far accomplished her intentions as to protrude her head into the trough, and was in the very act of commencing her operations, when the horse, convinced that the moment was a critical one, and forgetful of that nobleness of character for which he has been characterised, caught the tongue of the cow between his teeth, and in an instant severed it in twain! The cow languished a short time and died.

MIRACLES.—Having noticed in some of the recent public journals, an account of numerous miraculous cures which have been performed in Europe and in this country, in consequence of the prayers of the prince Hohenloe, and since the existence of miracles is doubted by many, any fact tending to prove that such extraordinary occurrences may happen in these latter days, will doubtless be acceptable to the public.

A gentleman residing within 30 miles north of this city, was confined during the period of 13 successive years to his bed, from which it was supposed (by his friends as well as himself) he would never rise again, but was restored to instant health in the following extraordinary, if not miraculous manner: His niece, who occasionally acted in the capacity of nurse, one day in her perambulations, happened to find a huge black snake, which she secured, and upon entering the chamber of the impotent man, thrust it into the bed; in a rage he sprang from his bed, and threatened to take her life for the act. She however made good her retreat, and he soon came to the use of his good reason, when he discovered that he was wholly restored to health, and as a reward for her great services made her a present of £100.

He is still living and in good health as can be expected, (considering his age) as he is quite advanced in life. Many witnesses can attest the truth of the above narrative.

Yours, &c. BONIFACE.

Those Greek mountaineers to whom the Turks have given the name of Klephtes, or robbers, have been very successful in resisting their oppressors. Their name has become a title of honour in consequence of the manly posture they have maintained for their country. When the Pacha of Janina wrote to the famous Lieeus in his retirement among the mountains of Epirus, to implore the clemency of your Supreme Master, come and prostrate yourself at the feet of your Vizier, and I will pardon you—" The Captain replied:

"I have no Supreme master but the God of the Christians—for the Pacha I have a musket, and a sabre for the Grand Vizier."

This reply is preserved by the Greeks in one of their popular songs.—French Magazine.

HORTICULTURE.

ON THE MANAGEMENT OF FRUIT TREES.

FROM THE AMERICAN FARMER.

DEAR SIR—Having seen in your valuable paper, many useful remarks on the treatment of orchards, and as the season is at hand, when it is useful to trim them, wash, &c I beg leave to give in my mite to the general stock, and to protest against that too common practice of white washing the trees, as it is, in my opinion, attended with the worst consequences. It is done under the impression that the caustic quality of the lime will destroy the insect. We're it to end there, I would cordially approve of the application.—It will not only destroy the insects, but trees also, by stopping up the pores of the bark, thereby preventing the absorption of those gases that are so essential to preserve and promote vegetation, as it is necessary, in the human system, to keep open the pores of the body, to preserve health and vigour. How long would a man continue healthful, were his body to be incrusted with a thick paste? I have for many years, given considerable attention to the management of fruit trees, and am satisfied, cleanliness is as important to them, as it is to the human family. This is to be produced by scraping off the moss and old bark, and a good washing with soft soap and water, in which tobacco has been steaped, during a moist spell of weather, in the months of February or March. The taking off the moss and bark serves to expose the insect and their eggs to the sharp frosts that are usual at that period of the year.—The soap suds soften the bark, open its pores, assist in destroying the insects, and acts also as a stimulant. I have used all kinds of mixtures as a dressing to the trees, & have never found any to equal tobacco. It not only is active in its operation, but will effectually banish all insects and mice from the roots—other manures attract them.

I am unwilling to occupy your time by giving a detail of my experiments—I will, however, mention to you one fact, in confirmation of my opinion of the utility of keeping open the pores of the bark.

Contiguous to my garden, I have a small orchard, and have had, for several years past, the scrapings of the walls and the weeds from the garden thrown into a heap, between a row of apple trees, which served, when rotted, as a top dressing for the small seeds sown in the garden.—The trees nearest the heap far outstripped the others, and those limbs immediately over it, were of a much more luxuriant growth; and, as if anxious to inhale every exhalation from the weeds, inclined towards and bent over them, instinctively impelled to seek for nourishment, which was received through every pore, and which could not have been inhibed, had the trees been covered with a thick crust of lime, by whitewashing.

A friend to Pomona. D. W. Jr.

FRUIT.—It is surprising to notice the inattention of our Farmers to their Orchards.—Some think it unnecessary to cultivate any fruit at all, while a large proportion suffer their lands to be occupied by trees which will neither warm by their wood, nor gratify by their fruit—hundreds of stunted apple trees may be seen cumbering the ground, where a little attention would have produced a profitable orchard. The vast difference between good and bad apples, peaches and pears, is not in many other cases the result of much labour and skill; it is effected by some trifling attention to the tree in its earliest stage. There are few who do not like good fruit in its season—yet fruit trees are seldom attended to, and their qualities still less minded. A farmer with an orchard of 20 or 100 trees, is too often contented if few or five of them bear a palatable apple, 'the rest,' he will say, 'will do to make cider.' Now the same attention and care which brought up the 94 bad and 6 good trees, would have produced the whole 100 of the best quality—and farmers begin to learn, that the quality of the cider depends upon the apple. Somebody has said, that "planting trees was among the duties which the present generation owes to the next;" if so, let our agriculturalists discharge the duty towards their children better than our predecessors have to us. Do not continue to cultivate trees which can produce nothing but crabbed unpalatable fruit, merely because we found such in our fields, lest our children say, "Our fathers have eaten sour grapes, and our teeth are set on edge with them"—Phil. Gaz.

MARITIME INTERESTS OF ENGLAND.

Speech of MR. CANNING at the Meeting of the SHIP OWNERS' SOCIETY, in London.

Mr. WILSON, M. P. proposed the next toast in the following manner:—It has been allotted to me to propose the health of a Right Hon. Gentleman whose merits this assembly will readily recognize. There are two modes of serving a cause, first, by concurring in a disposition to render service to it, and secondly by superadding to that concurrence the energy and effect of great splendid, and useful talents. In both of these respects the Right

Honourable Gentleman who sits on the right hand of the Noble Earl who presides, will be found to have been eminently serviceable to the maritime interests of this country. In his public conduct, I might safely say, that he has given universal satisfaction, by a prompt, manly, and candid manner, which ensured the respect even of those who opposed him. It is to the exercise of such talents as he possesses, and to the other internal resources drawn from the heart of the nation, that this empire owes its greatness. Long may this country witness the exercise of such talents aiming at distinction by honourable means. Long may she be thus able to draw from her internal resources; and long may she continue, through such aid, and support, to be, as she now is, the envy of surrounding nations. (Applause.) With a hope that the merits of the distinguished individual of whom I speak, may make up for the deficiency of ability on the part of the person who submits the toast, I beg to propose "The health of the Right Honourable George Canning."

Mr. Canning then rose, amidst the universal applause of the company. When it had somewhat subsided, he addressed the meeting to the following effect:—My Lords and Gentlemen, it is impossible for me adequately to express the thankfulness I feel for the kind manner in which you have been pleased to receive the mention of my name, and the sentiments with which it has been uttered. When to my name you have coupled that of my colleagues, and a recommendation that we should attend to the maritime interests of the country, I feel that you have only, in other words, bade us to remember that we are the Ministers of England.—(Loud cheers.)—And, Gentlemen, if any thing could add to my satisfaction, in being thus received by this large assemblage of my countrymen, it is that you represent an interest so peculiarly English.—(Cheers.)—Gentlemen, the situation to which this country is raised in the world, far beyond that to which it is entitled by the extent of its territory or the amount of its population, is mainly attributable to that interest of which you are the guardians in time of peace, providing in that time of peace the means of vigorous action and movement on which it is essential to our power that we should triumph in time of war. (Cheers)—For some years past the eminent position of this country has engaged us in contests far beyond the immediate limits of our own interests or quarrels; we have been called to mix in the combat of the world, and while with one hand we wielded the trident of the sea. With the other we were found not unable to launch the thunderbolts of war. How great soever these exploits may have been—However they may, in the page of history, enhance the extraordinary exertions of this small island, which has acted so conspicuous a part in war by land and sea, we ought never to forget that the root of those splendid achievements is here—in the maritime interests of England.—(Cheers)—We ought never to forget that at all periods the field of our native glory, is that sea which shelters all other countries from each other, but which unites them all to England.—(Cheers)—It must be a great satisfaction to us, after all the exertions of the late war, and after the lassitude and exhaustion natural to a state of peace, and arising from the intensity of action that existed, that we are now fast recovering our native accustomed, and original strength and rising as giants, refreshed from toil and rest from sleep.—(Cheers.)—It must be a satisfaction to those who, like this society, know the secret of our strength and the talisman of our power, to see to what exertions they might be excited on future occasions, with a view to which you recommend the duty of cherishing those sinews of our strength and sources of power.—(Cheers.) There never was a period at which this country was in a course that promised more permanent prosperity. I trust that no untoward accident will disturb this state of repose; but if any such misfortune should occur, let us remember the experience of the last 20 years, and defy the prophecies of evil, and look with confidence to the future.—(Long and continued applause.)

The Earl of Liverpool, the President of the Society, who entered the room accompanied by Mr. Secretary Canning, and other distinguished characters, took the Chair. The Noble Chairman expressed the great satisfaction at the importance of the shipping interest to the prosperity and security of the Empire, and expressed his satisfaction at the gratifying fact that it is at length emerging from the difficulties with which, in common with the other interests of the state, it had struggled after the conclusion of the war. Mr. Canning's speech, to which we regret that our limits prevent us from doing justice, but which, from the brief report we are enabled to give of it, will be seen to have been replete with British feeling, and to have glowed with truly British sentiments and spirit. Every enlightened man in the country concurs with him in the proud declaration of the renovated strength and power of the Empire,—of the giant strides with which it is advancing in prosperity,—and of its capacity, should that prosperity be assailed or threatened from without, to maintain its high and honourable rank and station in Europe, and in the civilized world, against whatever combinations may be brought against it.—Sun.

HUNT'S ACCOUNT OF THE LAST MOMENTS OF THURTELL.

(From late English Papers.)

[OR THE ATTORNEY'S LETTER.]

While we were upon our trial, Thurtell treated me very distantly, and when his brother was giving his evidence, I could not help expressing my astonishment at his attributing to me the expressions which John Thurtell himself had used, respecting my being "Turpin lads." I said, "Good God! here's work." John replied: "Yes, don't alarm yourself, you'll have more work of it presently—we have not half done with you yet." But when he afterwards in addressing the Jury, wanted to lay the whole crime on me and Probert, I was lost in astonishment, and every thing appeared enveloped in mist; but I shall never forget his horrid expression of countenance when he spoke of Barber Beaumont and Mr. Springfield—I was really frightened to look at him.

Directly we left the bar, Thurtell addressed me in the most friendly and familiar manner, and, shaking me by the hand said, "It's all up, Joe; we must now make the best of it, and behave manfully. I forgive you of every thing with all my heart." As we came along back in the chaise, Thurtell asked Mr. Wilson if we were not to be executed in the general pit opposite the jail? Mr. Wilson answered, "he believed so." "Then (said Thurtell) I hope you will have two half hundred weights to my legs, and a good sail, so that I may die instantly." I was greatly depressed, and told him not to talk so. Thurtell replied, "Don't tell me, old fellow—what's the use of repining? I hope you will meet your fate like a man, and I shall do so. I am prepared now, so hold the Judge to sight, and the sooner the business is over, the better."

While we were on our way, Thurtell expressed a great desire to have some refreshment, and addressing Mr. Wilson, said, "I hope you will be able to give us something to eat, for I am almost famished." Mr Wilson replied, that it was against the law to allow any thing but bread and water; and that a gaoler would be liable to lose his situation, and forfeit £100, if he broke through the rule. Thurtell said, "I hope, old fellow, you'll manage to get something better than that." Mr. Wilson said, he would try what he could do when he got up to the prison, and he durst say the Sheriff would not be very strict in obeying the law. After we had been kindly furnished with some refreshments by Mr. Wilson, I was confined in one cell and Thurtell in another. Throughout the night of Wednesday I was in great distress and anguish of mind, as I fully expected that I was to suffer on the Friday morning with Thurtell; but early in the next day, Mr. Wilson told me he believed I was not then to be executed. About 12 o'clock on Thursday, Mr. Wilson came to tell me that I had just wished me to be in the same cell with him; and I accordingly went. On entering his cell, I found him talking with Mr. Sutton, the High Sheriff, and Mr. Franklin. Mr. Sutton told me that Thurtell was perfectly reconciled to me, and wished me to be so with him; and Thurtell came and shook hands with me, and said, "I do freely forgive you, Joe; but I have no one to thank for this but you."

We were together at the condemned sermon on Thursday, and while in the pew I was greatly affected. Thurtell endeavoured to sooth me; but at the same time said, "Hunt, you brought it all upon yourself; if you had not told where the body was, there could have been no trial, and we should have been safe." I answered, "It was to be so, and it cannot be helped; and if it had not then been divulged, it must have come out at some other time." In the course of the afternoon and evening, Thurtell talked a good deal about the trial, and said to Mr. Wilson, "If it had taken place at the Old Bailey, we must both have been acquitted; for who could believe a word that Probert said?" after this stating that Hunt told him where to find the bones, when it was well known that Hunt was never there in his life? This ought to have been enough to have acquitted us." Thurtell also said to me, "If I had known as much when the trial was first to have come on, as I do now, I would have shot Mr. Harmer; and if it had not then been divulged, it must have come out at some other time." In the course of the afternoon and evening, Thurtell talked a good deal about the trial, and said to Mr. Wilson, "If it had taken place at the Old Bailey, we must both have been acquitted; for who could believe a word that Probert said?" after this stating that Hunt told him where to find the bones, when it was well known that Hunt was never there in his life? This ought to have been enough to have acquitted us." Thurtell also said to me, "If I had known as much when the trial was first to have come on, as I do now, I would have shot Mr. Harmer; and if it had not addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

THE Hours of closing the Mail, on Mondays and Thursdays are, Eleven o'clock in the Forenoon, for the Eastward, and Four o'clock in the Afternoon, for the Westward.

Before the departure of the Mail, all Letters composing it, are to be entered, stamped, and the amount of Post-ge entered in a Book of the Office, and on the Post Bills to the respective Offices to which they are destined.—Therefore, all Letters intended to go by either Mail, should be delivered at the Office on or before the time mentioned for closing, as after that period no letters upon which the Postage is to be paid here can be received; and such others as are brought, if put into the Letter-box at the Window, (in place of Persons detaining them, by trying to get in after the door is closed, so as to lose the opportunity of their being forwarded,) are equally certain of being duly forwarded, as if they were handed personally into the Office, as they are taken out of it to the latest minute.

Foreign Letters, and those upon which the Inland Postage is required to be paid, are an exception, for they must be handed into the Office and paid, or they cannot be sent.—Letters to Persons residing in the Country should be directed in the clearest manner to the nearest Post-Office, as otherwise they may often go out of the way.—Newspapers should be delivered at the Office an hour before closing.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Township, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

Editorial Commentary.

No foreign news of importance this week.—We kept open a corner until the last moment, in expectation of some interesting matter by the last mail, but we have been disappointed.

Some of the Legislators of New York have found out a new method to conquer Canada: viz. by opening canals into all our principal waters, where there is a ship navigation, and then laying such heavy duties on our grain and flour as to prevent their transit to New York!!!

Our Domestic article of this week will be perused with great interest

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

MEXICO.—GENERAL MINA is about to embark for South America.

FRANCE AND HAYTI.—Letters from Hayti to the last of February, report, that "Negotiations were on foot between the French and Haytian Governments for the acknowledgement of the Independence of the latter, and that a commission had been appointed in France to regulate the amount of indemnity which shall be paid to the St. Domingo Sufferers."

Splendid effects of National Industry.

PARIS, FEB 3.—Three hundred years ago, when Cortez was serving the Mexican Emperor Guatimozin, as Mr Cobbett threatened to serve himself, by stretching him upon a gridiron to make him discover where he had hidden his enormous treasures, how little they, or either of them, dreamt that this real Eldorado—his land of milk and honey—this realm of Pluto, whose depths were inexhaustible mines of gold and silver, whose fields were covered with indigo, whose air produced cochineal, whose streams were Pactolians, should ever sup it to a rugged, cold, inclement island of the North, naturally gifted with no better indigenous productions than the crab and the sloe, for large loans of that very material of which the Mexicans the constructed massive idols of their common utensils. It is a fine illustration of Adam Smith's position, that labour is the only real source of wealth: it is a noble compliment to the superior industry and sagacity of England: It is a "great moral lesson" for the world in general to see all the soft, luxurious, and favoured countries of the earth, where nature has done every thing, flocking for pecuniary assistance to that comparatively sterile region, whose inhabitants, by their manufactures and commerce have made their little island the emporium of the globe, and rendered all other nations tributary to their opulence and safety. Spain began to decline from the moment she obtained possession of these subterranean treasures; her immense annual supplies from the mines, by the sloth and corruption they engendered, only served to improvish her her, until she has been reduced (by the powerful assistance indeed of Bourbon Kings and bourbon invaders,) to her present degraded plight. Nature exacts a fearful return for her favours, since man seldom attains to much moral dignity where there is little necessity for his exertions; the finest climates generally exhibit the poorest and most wretched population; slavery, barbarism, and ignorance have, in all ages, characterised the South and the East, while the North and the West are now the great fountains of light and liberty. Adam's doom, that he should only succeed by the sweat of his brow, has, antiently speaking, been faithfully entailed upon his descendants—that which is got for nothing generally comes to nothing.

SPLENDID SHIP.—The new Packet Ship, Pacific, for Liverpool, has sailed from New York on her first Voyage. This ship is of about 600 tons, and built with all the modern improvements. Her accommodations for passengers are very extensive, and the workmen have contrived to excel all former ships in the conveniences and ornaments of the Cabin, upon which no expence appears to have been spared. The whole Cabin presents a face of the finest mahogany, rase, and satin-wood, and polished mirrors; the fronts of the berths are each supported by two pillars of about 6 inches diameter of the finest Egyptian Indian, and Vermont Marble—and the Furniture and decorations throughout correspond in elegance and beauty.

HORRIBLE MURDER IN FRANCE.

Extract of a letter from Valenciennes.

"The chambermaid of a lady of distinction, who lived in this town and kept no other servant, has committed a most horrid murder, of which I send you the following particulars.—On the 12th of this month, about noon, this girl engaged her mistress to go to look at something at the top of the cellar stairs; when she violently pushed her down all the stairs, followed her immediately, fell upon her, and thrust her hand into her mouth to prevent her crying out; then took up a brick which lay at hand, and beat her on the head with it till she was dead. This done she undressed the dead body, with her clothes by her side; then going up stairs, she changed her dress, left the house, and went to Vespers, and afterwards walked the remainder of the afternoon, telling those who spoke to her that her mistress was gone alone to a consecration at the Curate of Onnain, at a village about a league distance; that she intended to pass by the side of the Schelde, and that she was to go to her the next day. and carry her watch and jewels. In the evening she returned home, went into the cellar, and cut the body in pieces, separated the head, arms, and legs. Next morning early she carried the head, arms, and body, under her riding hood, about a quarter of a league from the town, and threw them into the Schelde, and next day, towards evening, did the same with the other parts. However, on the 18th she carried her mistress's watch and a part of her jewels to the Curate of Onnain, as if she had expected to have found her mistress there. She expressed great uneasiness at her not being there, and went away under pretence of going to seek for her, leaving the watch and the jewels On Sunday the 14th, she went for them again, and carried them to her mistress's sister, seeming greatly alarmed at what might become of her good lady. The same day an arm and some other parts of the body were found in the Schelde, and this wretched creature was the first to say, they doubtless must be those of her mistress, who must have been murdered in going to Onnain." Strict examination having been made in the affair, and after undergoing several interrogations, the girl confessed her horrid crime exactly as I have here stated, and with such circumstances that there is no appearance of her having had any accomplices to participate with her in the dreadfully hideous act. As the trial will shortly take place, at its termination I will send you the particulars."

ISAAC BEN MOSES.—"Another member remarked the other day to Sir Fredrick Flood, that the science of optics was now brought to the highest perfection, for that by the aid of a telescope which he had just purchased, he could discern objects at an incredible distance. "By 3—my dear fellow," replied the good humoured Baronet, "and I have one at my lodge in the county of Wexford, that will be match for it, for the last time that I took a bird's eye peep through it, it brought the Church of Enniscorthy so near to my view, that I could hear the whole congregation singing in it."—Birmingham Chronicle.

FEMALE PUGILISM.—Two Females are stated to have fought a pitched battle in St George's Fields, London. They had their gut for the occasion, and fought twenty desperate rounds.

QUICK WORK.—Forty six barrels from the rough materials, are stated to have been lately made, in a wo kmin like manner, in one day, by four men, at Boston. One finished 14, one 12, one 11, and the other 9, by half past 6 o'clock in the evening. Three barrels is usually considered a day's work.

A SOLDIER'S DEVOTION.—Brantome, in his well known memoirs, gives the following sketch of Anne de Montmorenci, constable of France, and a distinguished chief in the war of the League.

"Every morning," says the historian, "whether he was at home or in the army, on a march or in the camp, he never neglected to recite or hear his paternosters. But it was a saying among the soldiers—'Take care of the paternosters of Monsieur the constable,' for whilst he was muttering them over, he would throw in by way of parenthesis, as the occasions of discipline or war demanded—Hang me that fellow on the next tree—pass me that other through the pike—bring hither that man and shoot him before my face—cut one in pieces all those rascals who are so audacious as to defend the steeple against the king—burn me that village—set fire to all the country for a quarter of a league round,'—and all this he would utter and have done without the least interruption to his devotions which he would have thought it a sin to defer another hour, so tender was his conscience."

The history of the civil wars of England furnished very many instances of like tenderness of Conscience and scrupulous recital of prayers on the part of military commanders. The fun-ing generals and soldiers performed their devotions with punctilious regularity in the midst of the most ferocious havoc of war.

AGRICULTURE.

On the means of Improving the Resources of a Country.

MR. FOTHERGILL,

I send you the following observations, extracted from the Code of Agriculture, written by the Right Hon Sir John Sinclair, Bart founder of the Board of Agriculture, which, I conceive, worthy of a place in your widely circulating journal, recommending them particularly to the attentive perusal of the Farmer.

AGRICULTURE IS THE GREAT ART, WHICH EVERY GOVERNMENT OUGHT TO PROTECT,—EVERY PROPRIETOR OF LAND TO PRACTISE; AND EVERY ENQUIRER INTO NATURE TO IMPROVE."

The prosperity of a nation possessing an extent of territory, sufficient for maintaining its inhabitants, chiefly depends, 1st, Upon the quantity of surplus produce derived from the soil, after defraying the expences of cultivation. 2d, Upon that surplus produce obtaining such a price at market, as will encourage reproduction; and 3d, upon the Cultivator having such a command of capital, as may enable him to carry on his business with energy.

1st, The surplus produce arises from that inestimable quality possessed by the soil, which enables it, in proportion as it is skilfully managed, to furnish maintenance for a greater number of persons than are required for its cultivation. Hence proceed the profits of the farmer, the rents of the landlords, the subsistence of the manufacturer, and of the merchant, and the greater proportion of the income of the state. That surplus marketable produce, therefore, is justly considered to be the principal source of all political power, and of personal enjoyment. When that surplus produce does not exist, (unless in circumstances of a truly peculiar nature,) there can be no flourishing towns, no military or naval force; none of the superior arts, none of the finer manufactures; no learning, no language, none of the conveniences and luxuries of foreign countries, and none of that cultivated and polished society at home, that not only elevates and dignifies the individual, but which extends its beneficial influence throughout the whole mass of the community. What exertions ought not then to be made, and what encouragement ought not to be given, to preserve or to encrease so essential a resource, the foundation of our national prosperity. In order to form some idea of the amount of the surplus marketable produce, on very different soils, under a judicious system of cultivation, the following statements were drawn up, by two intelligent farmers, respecting that amount in their respective occupations, the one possessing land principally clay, the other a turnip soil.

Mr. Brown, of Markle, in East Lothian, occupies a farm of 670 English acres, on which, in consequence of almost all his servants being married, there is a population of 3 persons to each of ages. The produce of 80 English acres is consumed on the farm, or given to the servants on wages, as nearly the whole of them are paid in grain, and have cows kept for their use both summer and winter. About 90 acres are required for raising corn, clover, tares and hay, for the working stock, and 45 acres to furnish seed corn; one hundred are in an unproductive state, that is in summer fallow, or grass for young horses not employed in labour, and in fences, roads, stack-yards, or devoted to purposes from which no direct produce is returned. Four acres are given to the servants for raising flax as a part of their wages, in all 319 acres; so there only remains 351 acres for raising surplus produce: of these about 120 acres are in pasture grass for sheep and cattle, in clover for soiling, or in turnips. This leaves 231 acres for raising disposable grain, which may be stated at nine hundred and fifty quarters, on an average of seasons. On the whole, he calculates the surplus marketable produce of his own farm, at eleven bushels and a fourth of corn, and one stone seven pounds of butcher's meat, (Amsterdam weight,) for every English acre in his possession.

Mr. Walker of Mellendean, in Roxburghshire, on the extensive tract of arable land he cultivates, (2866 English acres,) with a population of 250 souls depending on its cultivation for subsistence, sends, of surplus produce, to market, 3551 quarters of grain, and 7000 stone of butcher's meat; or, per acre, ten bushels of grain, and two stone seven pounds of butcher's meat, 14 pounds to the stone and 16 ounces to the pound.

To these estimates of surplus produce, there are to be added, the hides, the skins, the wool, the tallow, and a variety of other articles, the basis of many important manufactures, the value of which, although it is impossible to give its amount correctly, from its great uncertainty, and the fluctuation of prices, must be very considerable.

If such are the beneficial effects resulting from cultivating of the soil, (and the facts are established beyond contradiction,) what source, either of domestic industry, or of foreign commerce, can in any respect be put in competition with such a mine of wealth, when extended over a great empire!

2d But the prosperity of a nation, as already observed, depends not only on having a great marketable surplus, but also on its disposable produce fetching such a price, as to encourage reproduction. This was the case during the late war, and hence the nation was enabled to preserve it for so many years, and finally to bring it to a successful conclusion. By means of a great surplus of agricultural productions, sold at a high price, the profits of the farmer, and the rents of the landlord, were doubled; these two classes were thus placed in a condition to pay very heavy taxes to government, to engage in great undertakings of a private description, to furnish employment to labourers, to whom the price of bread was of little consequence, while work was always to be had, at wages proportioned to the price of corn; and to consume immense quantities of merchandise, and articles of manufactures, by means of which, those two branches of national industry were supported, when they were in a great measure deprived of foreign markets. History does not furnish an example of a nation which abroad made such incredible exertions, while at home so many millions of people enjoyed all the necessaries, the comforts, and most of them the luxuries of life; the whole originating in prosperous agriculture, without which, our agriculturing industry, our commercial relations, or the necessary operations of our finances, could not have been carried on

3d. Nor is it alone sufficient, that the farmer should have a price adequate to promote re production; he should likewise have such a command of capital (and if it must be borrowed, at a moderate rate of interest,) as will enable him to carry on his business with energy. Indeed, when that takes place, it lays the foundation of general prosperity. It will not be disputed that a hundred persons may be put to the greatest inconvenience because one individual at the head of a bank of circulation cannot pay £100. Enable him to pay that sum, and progressively those connected with him are relieved. "Do it in the former who is the first link in the great chain of national circulation," when he is supplied with money, he is enabled to pay his rents regularly; the landlord is thus enabled, not only to employ a number of labourers, but to purchase goods from the British manufacturer and the foreign merchant; the latter finding thus a demand for goods, is enabled in return, to export British manufactures to foreign markets; by means of an abundant circulation also, the revenue is paid without difficulty, it is regularly remitted, and fu nishes the means of paying the dividends to the Stockholders; the credit of the country is thus maintained, and every class in the community prospers. The whole, it is evident, originates with the farmer, the first link in the great chain of circulation, whose basis is the plough.

THE FIELD OF WATERLOO.

From Essays descriptive and moral, on scenes in Italy, Switzerland, and France — By an American

It struck my imagination much, says the author, while standing on the last field fought by Bonaparte, that the battle of Waterloo should have been fought on a Sunday. What a different scene for the Scotch Greys and English infantry, from that which at that very hour was exhibited by their relatives; when over England and Scotland each church bell had drawn together its the varied heritage of man to labor or endure. But we know that many thousands rushed into this fight, even of those who had been instructed in our own religious principles, without let sure for one prayer; they made the leap into the gulf which divides to-day with the present from the immutable, without one parting prayer or one note of preparation.

As I looked over this field, now green with growing corn, I could mark with my eye spots where the most desperate carnage had been. marked out by the verdure of the wheat. The bodies had been heaped together in greater than common, and have given richness to the soil, that in these spots the grain never ripens; it grows rank and green to the end of the harvest. This touching memorial, which endures when the thousand grooms have expired, when the stain of human blood has faded from the ground, still addresses to me the lesson that there was awful guilt somewhere, and a terrible reckoning for those who have caused destruction which the earth would not conceal. These hillocks of superabundant vegetation, as the wind sweeps through the corn, seem all the most affecting monuments which nature could devise, and gave a melancholy animation to this plain of death.

ON HIS ARRIVAL IN ENGLAND.

(From the Aberdeen Chronicle)

"Dilectus propter virtutem hominibus, sed magis dilectus propter odium Tyranni"

Tho' the bonour of Spain has been sold to the foe,
Tho' her pride is still free, and thy spirit unbroke,
As when the dark pride of her tyrant was low,
And her neck yet unbent to the foreigner's yoke.
The Despot has triumph'd, and red is his hand
Again with the gore of the valiant and just;
The wild yell of Bigotry hails it thro' the land
Where man crawls again, like the serpent, in dust.

Once more the grim Idol—the Moloch that reigns
In the temple inscribed to the Father of Good—
Enjoys the libation from Patriot veins
That is offer'd by feuds on the altars of blood.
Foul, foul sits the Demon in merciless state,
And grovel around him tormentor and slave;
His look blasts the land like the deep curse of fate,
Giving virtue a wilderness—Glory a grave!

But for thee is a home in the ocean-bound land,
Where man walks erect in the pride of his birth;
And lights not the flames at the bigot's command,
Nor bows his proud knee to the despots of earth.

That land bids thee welcome, outtrodden by slaves,
Which virtue has hallowed and freedom has blest,
Which long, in free glory, had stood 'mid the waves,
And shaken the thunders of Kings from her crest.

Yes, welcome to Mona, the Chief, who has given
His breast to the first devotion to Liberty's laws;
And made the appeal of his country to Heaven,
And stood the last hope in the wreck of her cause.

Alone 'mid the ruins of virtue he stood,
More grand in that desolate vigour of mind,
Than if he were wafted on victory's flood
To a throne that was built on the curse of mankind.

Oh welcome! successless, and brave as thou art,
To a soil oft enrich'd by such spirits as thine,
Where a Hampden has acted the Roman's stern part,
And a Sydney died proudly at liberty's shrine.

Despair not for Spain—tho' her sword has been broke,
Tho' her banner is strewn on the patriot's grave,
Her cause is immortal, and yet shall invoke
The lightnings of virtue to punish and save.

The conqu'ror's delinquents of Europe may boast,
Of a triumph the vilest of traitors have sold;
But their baseness shall call forth a ba dier host,
Who shall triumph or die like the martyrs of old.

Then Mina! tho' treachery check'd thy career,
And thy sword smote the hosts of the stranger in vain,
Yet thy actions, to virtue and history dear,
Shall light to proud deeds the avengers of Spain!

On Saturday the 24th inst. His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR was met by the Members of the Executive Council, the Judges of the Court of King's Bench, and the Gentlemen of the Bar, with the Magistrates, and principal Inhabitants of York. In procession, for the purpose of laying the foundation stone of the new Goal and Court House about to be erected in this Town.—A Sovereign and Half Sovereign of gold, and several coins of silver and copper, of the present Reign, together with some newspapers and other memorials of the present day, were deposited in a cavity of the stone, over which, a plate of copper, bearing an appropriate inscription, was placed; and, after HIS EXCELLENCY had given the first blow, with a hammer handed to him for the purpose, the ceremony concluded with several hearty cheers from all who were present.

If the question were of any real importance, we might have the curiosity to inquire why the deposit was made in the S. East, rather than in the N. East corner of the building?

Friday last being the anniversary of the festival of St GEORGE, and the day appointed for the celebration of the Birth of our beloved SOVEREIGN, the First East, and the First West, York Regiments of Militia, together with Captain George Dunnison's Troop of Cavalry, mustered in considerable strength on parade; and went through their various evolutions with great credit to themselves, and, as we understand, much to the satisfaction of HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, who, notwithstanding a heavy and incessant rain during the whole period of exercise, was early upon the ground, having the utmost leniency of the weather

At two o'clock HIS EXCELLENCY held a LEVEE at the Government House:—and,

In the evening a splendid Ball and Supper was given at Thompson's Hotel, by the Officers of the First and Second East, and the First West, York Regiments of Militia, to which the principal families in the neighbourhood were invited; and which was very numerously and respectably attended by 300 Ladies and Gentlemen being present. The Ball-room was decorated with uncommon taste:—British Ensigns, surmounted by laurels, and having large stars, formed by bayonets, with lamps in their centre, at stated distances, entirely covered the walls; whilst an emblematic design, having the Royal Arms in the centre, (which was painted for the occasion) covered the floor. The music was excellent; and all the beauty and fashion of the metropolis being present, the toute ensemble was truly brilliant.

The Supper was of a character, and was served up in a style equally elegant and creditable to those who had the management of that department.

In the course of the evening, which was spent with the utmost harmony and conviviality, the following toasts were given:—

1. "THE KING—Long may he live the beloved Monarch of a Free and Loyal People."—4 times 4.

Tune—" God Save the King."

2. "THE DUKE OF YORK, and the Army—He, the Soldiers Friend; they, the terror of our enemies, and the admiration of all nations."—3 times 3.

Tune—" The Duke of York's March."

3 "THE DUKE OF CLARENCE, and the invincible Bulwarks of British Liberty."—3 times 3.

Tune—" Rule Britannia."

4. "HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND—May his services to his Country meet their just reward; and the blessings of the People of Upper Canada ever attend him."—3 times 3.

Tune—" British Grenadiers"

5. "The Immortal Memory of the lamented SIR ISAAC BROCK who gloriously fell in the defence of this Province, and whose gallantry and zealous devotion to his country, commands the applause, as his fate excites the sympathetic tear, of all who appreciate a Hero's worth."

In solemn silence.

6. "HIS Excellency the EARL OF DALHOUSIE, Governor General of British North America—May the Administration of his Government meet the approbation of his Sovereign, and prove as beneficial as he could wish to our Sister Provinces;—and may a prosperous voyage attend his approaching return to his native Land."—3 times 3.

Tune—" Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled. &c"

7. "The Memory of the Most Noble the late DUKE OF RICHMOND—While we deeply deplore his untimely end, let the recollection of his friendly solicitude for the welfare and prosperity of the Canadas (which brought him to it) ever awaken in our breasts emotions of the most lively gratitude."

In solemn silence.

8. "Our Brethren of the Militia of Upper Canada.—May they never forget former Deeds, and ever remember what they owe to themselves when their Liberties are invaded."

9. "Lady Sarah Maitland, and the Ladies of Upper Canada."

Tune—Green grow the rashes O."

After which, His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland proposed,

10. "The First and Second East York, and the First West York Regiments of Militia."—3 times 3.

Tune—"York Quick Step."

Several volunteer toasts of merit were given by the company, and drank with enthusiasm. We have only to add, that it is impossible for any thing to have been better managed, and great credit is due to the Stewards.

"At last the golden oriental gate
Of greatest heaven 'gan to open faire,
And Phebus fresh, as bridegroom to his mate,
Came dancing forth, shaking his dewy heare;
And hurl'd his glistening beames through gloomy aire," bidding alike those who tripped the light fantastic toe, or those who quaffed the soul inspiring cup, reluctantly to separate.

We cannot better conclude this article than by the following lines, written on the occasion by a gentleman, well known for his poetic talent, who was present.

"Yes, 'twas a gleam of the pleasures of yore
That awakened my soul to its feeling;
'Twas th' enchantment of Beauty and Music once more
O'er my senses deliciously stealing.—
Tho' gloomy my fortune of late,
Yet some little sun shone there'in it,
And I thankfully bow to Dame Fate,
For affording this exquisite minute. ROSEHARP."

Eastport, March 12.—We are credibly informed that 104 vessels, are now building in the Province of N. Brunswick, some of which are from 5 to 700 tons, and Carpenters are much wanted. Wages from $2 to 2,50 and found.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, the Report was concurred in, & a message was sent to the Hon the Legislative Council to acquaint them of the same.

Mr NICHOL from the Committee of Conference on certain Resolutions relative to impositions of duties at the Port of Quebec for satisfying the claims for losses during the late war with the U States of America, reported as follows.

The Joint Committee appointed by the Hon. the Legislative Council and House of Assembly to confer on the propriety of addressing His Excellency the Lieut. Governor on the subject of certain Resolutions respecting impositions of duties at the Port of Quebec, for satisfying the Claims for losses during the Late War with the U States of America, have agreed to recommend to their several Houses, that a Joint Address be presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, purporting as follows:

That the Legislative Council and House of Assembly have concurred in certain resolutions respecting further indemnity to the inhabitants of this Province, who suffered by the Late War with the U. States of America, and humbly pray His Excellency to transmit the said Resolutions to His Majesty's Government, & to forward a copy of the same to His Excellency the Governor in Chief, in order that they may be submitted by His Excellency for the consideration of the Legislature of Lower Canada now in Session.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, the Report of the Committee of conference was concurred in.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, Messrs. Burwell and McMartin were directed to acquaint the Honorable the Legislative Council that the House of Assembly had adopted the Resolutions reported by the conference to concur in an Address to His Excellency founded on the Joint Resolutions of the two Houses.

On motion of Mr CROOKS, the House went into Committee of the whole, to take into consideration the Navigation of the waters of this Province.

The House resumed, the black rod being at the door.

Mr. BOULTON master in Chancery, brought down from the Honorable the Legislative Council, several Bills which they had passed without amendment, and the Bill for dividing the County of Carleton in the Bathurst District, which they had passed with some amendments, to which he was desired to request the concurrence of the House of Assembly, and withdrew.

The amendments to the Carleton division Bill were then read.

On motion of Mr. MORRIS, the fifth rule was dispensed with, and the amendments were read a second time.

On motion of Mr. MORRIS, the amendments to the Carleton division Bill were concurred in, and signed by the Speaker.

A message was then sent to the Honorable the Legislative Council, informing them of the same.

The House went again into Committee on the state of the Inland Navigation of the Province.

The Chairman reported, that the Committee had agreed to several Resolutions, which he was directed to submit for the adoption of the House.

The Report was ordered to be received.

The Resolutions were then severally put and carried, as follows:

Resolved 1st, That the Act, 14. of His late Majesty, Chap 83, gave to the Governor and Legislative Council of the late Province of Quebec, power and authority to make and Enact Laws for the Government of the said late Province, now comprehended in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

Resolved 2d. That by the virtue of the power so vested in them, the Governor and Council of said Province, made and Enacted certain Laws in the twenty eighth year of His late Majesty's Reign, for regulating the Inland Navigation of the Lakes now forming in part the Boundary between the Province of Upper Canada, and the United States of America, and by two subsequent Ordinances in the 31st, year of His late Majesty's Reign, did amend and extend the Provisions of the same.

Resolved 3rd, That the Navigation of the Lakes continued to be regulated by the said Ordinances, till the division of the late Province of Quebec into the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and until the conclusion of the Treaty between Great Britain and the United States of America in the year 1794, which gave to the latter possession of the Western posts, and enabled them to extend their settlements to the said Lakes.

Resolved 4th, That as soon as the Citizens of the United States built Vessels on the Lakes, they were employed in transporting the productions of Upper Canada, without any interruption, equally with the vessels of His Majesty's subjects of that Province.

Resolved 5, That the Vessels belonging to Citizens of the U. States continued so to transport the productions of Upper Canada, and also Merchandize inward 'till the commencement of the Late War, when several were actually taken (at its commencement), loaded with flour, the produce of this Province.

Resolved 6, That during the said year, the Merchant Vessels of U. Canada, were either taken into His Majesty's Service or captured by the enemy, consequently at the treaty of Peace in one thousand eight hundred and fifteen, the Inhabitants of U Canada had no means of transporting either their produce to the markets of Lower Canada, or receiving through that Province the supplies required by them, and on Lake Erie the military Government of this Province was obliged to employ American Vessels in transporting Troops and Stores to re-occupy the Posts of Amherstburgh and Drummonds Island.

Resolved 7, That in consequence of this state of things, His Majesty's Subjects of this Province were induced to purchase American Vessels, many of which having been rebuilt or repaired, (some recently to a considerable extent) are still fit for the purposes of Navigation.

Resolved 8, That until the year 1816, no interruption was given to the Trade so carried on, when an American Vessel loaded with flour from the head of Lake Ontario, was seized at Kingston, but Vessels of Foreign Build owned by British Subjects were not until last Summer (except in some cases in which seizures were made) interrupted in carrying on their usual business.

Resolved 9, That a considerable number of Vessels, the sole property of His Majesty's Subjects, are by this interruption rendered wholly useless, being refused a register in the U States, whereby great loss must ensue, at a time, when, from the depreciated value of the productions of Upper Canada, and severe losses sustained during the Late War, their owners are struggling with great difficulties and embarrassment.

Resolved 10, That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, praying His Excellency will be pleased to submit the Case to the consideration of His Majesty's Government at Home, and accompany the same with his favourable recommendation, that Legislative Provision may be made to relieve the parties thus previously suffering, and also recommending the enactment of such a system of Laws for regulating the Trade of this Province, as well with the Ports of the U States, as may, from the above representations appear expedient.

On motion of Mr. CROOKS, Messrs. Baldwin and Chisholm were ordered as a Committee to draft an Address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, pursuant to the foregoing Resolutions.

On motion of Mr BALDWIN, the Clerk of the House was ordered to subscribe for three numbers of the Canadian Annual Register, proposed to be Edited by Charles Fothergill, to be deposited in the Library of the Legislature.

Agreeably to notice, Mr. NICHOL moved for leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Act providing for the Erection of a Monument in Memory of the late Major General Sir Isaac Brock.

On which the House divided.

Yeas.—Messrs Robinson Hagerman, Attorney General, Hamilton of Lincoln, Bostwick and Wilson of Prince Edward.—6

Nays.—Messrs Wilson of Wentworth, Baldwin, Burwell, Gordon, Randal, Hamilton of Wentworth, Clark, Wilmot, Hagan, Casey, Walsh, McLean of Stormont, Kerr, Chisholm, McMartin and Jones of Leeds.—16.

The Question was decided in the Negative by a majority of 10, and lost accordingly.

Mr. BALDWIN from the Committee to draft an Address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, on the State of the Inland Navigation of this Province, reported a draft, which was received and read the first time.

On motion of Mr. CROOKS, the fifth rule was dispensed with, and the Address was read the second time.

On motion of Mr. CROOKS, the Address was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time that day.

On motion of Mr. GORDON, Messrs. Jones of Leeds and Burwell were ordered as a Committee to acquaint the Honorable the Legislative Council that the House of Assembly had agreed to the amendment made by the Joint Committee of both Houses to the Resolutions relative to [illegible]

Mr. NICHOL moved, that it might be resolved, that if the Legislative Council concur therein, a Joint Address be presented to His Majesty, to convey to His Majesty the humble and dutiful expression of our gratitude, for His Majesty's most gracious and benevolent consideration for the sufferers from the late war, in ordering the sum of £37,000 to be distributed for their relief. Also, to express our humble hope, that His Majesty will view the measures adopted by us for their further indemnity, as the only alternative within our power, and that His Majesty would be graciously pleased to continue, His Most Gracious protection To this deserving class of His Majesty's Subjects.

Which was ordered.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, a Copy of the above Resolutions was ordered to be sent up to the Honorable the Legislative Council for their concurrence.

Mr. NICHOL from the Joint Committee of Conference on the Boundary Line between this Province and the U States of America, reported a draft of an Address to His Majesty on that subject which had been agreed upon by the Joint Committee.

The Report was ordered to be received, and the Address was read the first time.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, the Joint Address to His Majesty on the subject of the Boundary Line was concurred in.

A Message was then sent to the Hon the Legislative Council, to inform them of the same.

Adjourned.

States as may from the above representations appear expedient.

Mr. CROOKS moved, that Messrs. Walsh and Chisholm should be a Committee to wait on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the Address on the Navigation of this Province, to know when His Excellency would be pleased to receive it, and to present the same.

PRESENT,
His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor,
in Council,

His Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,

Executive Council Chamber, {
at York, 26th Jan. 1824. }
PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, {
York, February 7th 1821. }

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

THE Hours of closing the Mail, on Mondays and Thursdays are, Eleven o'clock in the Forenoon, for the Eastward, and Four o'clock in the Afternoon, for the Westward.

Before the departure of the Mail, all Letters composing it, are to be entered, stamped, and the amount of Postage entered in a Book of the Office, and on the Post Bills to the respective Offices to which they are destined —Therefore, all Letters intended to go by either Mail, should be delivered at the Office on or before the time mentioned for closing, as after that period no Letters upon which the Postage is to be paid here can be received; and such others as are brought, if put into the Letter-box at the Window, (in place of the Pieces designed them, by trying to get in after the door is closed, so as to lose the opportunity of their being forwarded,) are equally certain of being duly forwarded, as if they were handed personally into the Office, as they are taken out of it to the latest minute. Foreign Letters, and those upon which the Inland Postage is required to be paid, are an exception, for they must be handed into the Office and paid, or they cannot be sent.—Letters to Persons residing in the Country should be directed in the clearest manner to the nearest Post-Office, as otherwise they may often go out of the way.—New papers should be delivered at the Office an hour before closing.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

THE LATE EARL OF HOPETOUN.

We are happy to find that a subscription is to be immediately entered into in these Provinces, to result a sum of money in addition to the fund at home for the purpose of erecting a public Monument to the late Earl of HOPETOUN. The military talent and the private qualities of this distinguished nobleman have been every where acknowledged, and as there are in these Provinces several Officers, some of high rank, who have personally witnessed their display, there can be no doubt but that this opportunity of marking the estimation in which they hold the late Colonel of the 42d, will be cheerfully embraced. The Commissary General has undertaken to result the subscription, and the names of Subscribers will be published in this Gazette.

A WELL AUTHENTICATED HORSESTEALEN MIRACLE.—In the course of the last summer, various petty larcenies were committed by an unknown depredator, in a gentleman's pantry, in the County of Armagh. Cheese was stolen, pies were demolished, bread and butter purloined, and other thefts perpetrated both by day and night. In vain did the cook lie in wait and lay snares for the cunning thief, who always escaped detection. At length, human means fruitless, she addressed herself to supernatural agencies with great fervency to St. John Nepomucen and Prince Hohenlohe, earnestly entreating them to make a miraculous discovery of the robber. Scarcely had she finished her prayer, when a kind of pattering noise was heard in the pantry. Cormack, in his communication to the Secretary of State for and on entering, behold, she saw the nilly pillager—a mouse! (or, as he, ascribes the hostility which we experience to the Americans, which, in travelling over a dish of cockles (or as Dr. Johnson manifest to us, the British Settlers to the intrigues and jealousy terms them, "bivalve testacious fishes,") had been caught by of a rival tribe, for the purpose of monopolizing the whole of its right foot by one of the little creatures, which firmly kept it the advantages of the fur trade with us. The tribe of Micmac hold. while the astonished quadruped, in endeavouring to retire, Indians are supposed not to exceed one hundred; neither do the was seized by another of his shelly foes in a similar manner—Red Indians, we consider, amount to many hundreds; but the latter appear Thus, with its legs in pattens, it hobbled along like the cat sung to be a timid race of people, subsisting chiefly by fishing and dalled with walnut shells, by whose prancing Humphry Clinker partly by hunting; but they are either murdered, or prevented was astonished on his wedding night. The thief, thus encum from having any intercourse with us but through their hostile bered, was soon caught, and Hohenlohe's power proved beyond neighbours. Mr. Cormack's account of this journey is given a shadow of doubt. Thus is manifest by the greatest miracle ever with a map of the Island. In Dr. Brewster's Journal for June wrought by that pious and wonder working divine.

CURE FOR SMOKEY CHIMNIES.—From a small bar of wood fastened across the chimney at a few inches from its summit, let a blown bladder be suspended by a string, so as to move freely Nothing more is requisite. One explanation of this effect it is easy to perceive The smoke as it ascends occupies but a small part of the passage in the chimney, and meets with no interruption from the bladder. On the contrary, the gusts of wind, which are, comparatively speaking, rather dense, are arrested and prevented from entering the chimney. By the surface which the bladder presents. The smoke in the chimney is thus only stopped in its progress for a moment, and, not being driven downwards, proceeds in its course as soon as the gust is over.

FIDELITY OF A DOG.—On Thursday last, some persons in the Village of La Prairie observed a dog on the ice in the River, curiosity was excited, and two or three men put off from the shore in a canoe; on approaching the animal, he was found to be guarding a man's hat, and a bag, which were lying near a hole in the ice; all attempts to draw off the dog from those relics were vain, neither would he suffer any one to come near him The party returned to the shore, shortly after which, the bag was no longer visible. On Friday that part of the ice, on which the dog was, separated from the main body, and on its floating down the river the hat was discernible, but the faithful animal could no longer be seen! The probability is, that some man, accompanied by his dog, was on his way to this city, and unfortunately fell through the ice; and that his trusty friend, after suffering from hunger and cold, became unable to retain his situation after the separation of the ice, and shared the same premature fate of his master.—Courant.

GEOGRAPHY OF NEWFOUNDLAND.—It is remarkable that, considering the importance of the Newfoundland fisheries to this country, so little should have remained so many years in comparative ignorance with regard to the interior of that Island. A gentleman of the name of Cormack, in the autumn of 1822, travelled on foot across the island from east to west; accompanied in the first part of his difficult and dangerous route by only one native. There appears to be very little good soil in the interior, vegetation is of course very much stunted in its growth. Mr. his public communication to the Secretary of State for Colonies, we find the following account of the Red Indians, manifest to us, the British Settlers to the intrigues and jealousy of a rival tribe, for the purpose of monopolizing the whole of the advantages of the fur trade with us. The tribe of Micmac Indians are supposed not to exceed one hundred; neither do the Red Indians, we consider, amount to many hundreds; but the latter appear to be a timid race of people, subsisting chiefly by fishing and partly by hunting; but they are either murdered, or prevented from having any intercourse with us but through their hostile neighbours. Mr. Cormack's account of this journey is given with a map of the Island. In Dr. Brewster's Journal for June last, we are apprehensive his description will not indicate any of our countrymen a land of promise; though (in imitation of great travellers) he has given all the great men at the admiralty, &c. either a lake, a river, or a mountain!

DEATHS OF PUBLIC CHARACTERS.—The death of the Marquess of Titchfield, a promising young nobleman, and a nephew of Mr. Canning, is announced in the papers of the 6th The death of Mr. Vestris, a celebrated performer on the violin is also announced in the same paper. Mrs. Siddons, the greatest tragic actress of her day, was not a seriously indisposed, that her medical friends had little hopes of her recovery. Sir Thomas Bell died on the 5th, most deservedly regretted. He was elected, at one period one of the Sheriffs of London, was treasurer of the Scotch Hospital, and indefatigable in his zeal and activity for the promotion of the objects of this and the other benevolent institutions in the metropolis. Mr. Bowdich, the African traveller died at the river Gambia, on the 10th of January, having just completed a survey of that river.

LADY HESTER STANHOPE.—Frequently arrests our attention, when we look over files of English newspapers. The biography of this lady would exhibit as wonderful a phenomenon as any character of the present age. Bonaparte himself not excepted. She is related to the late Lord Chatham, and niece of William Pitt, late Prime Minister of England. What should induce this lady, living in the full bloom of English fashion, to turn her back forever on the tomb of her illustrious parent, and all the splendours of a crowded metropolis, her friends and connexions, to renounce the religion of her ancestors, and become the chief of a wandering horde of Arabs, amongst whom she lives at the present day?—What secret impelling motive could have accomplished in a female mind such a wonderful revolution? All travellers who have been admitted to an interview with this lady, describe her as happy and contented, without the slightest thought or wish to return to her native land. The mind of man has been called by some writer a microcosm, a little world by itself, and in truth so it is. There is no wonder in physical nature so prodigy in creation so astonishing.—Could our intellects, our reasoning faculties be embodied into some tangible form, or visible shape, and preserved in a museum, our friend Peale might shut up his cabinet, splendid and magnificent as it is, and seek some other employment.—Bolt paper.

CONSUMPTION OF BEER IN ENGLAND.—From the official excise returns, furnished by order of the House of Commons, every man, woman and child in London, one with another, drink, on the average, two barrels of beer a year. The quantity of strong beer brewed in England, in a year, would float all the navy in commission.

VINEAT WINE.—The present season has been unusually favourable to the culture of the vine; grape, in the neighbourhood of this place.—About 3500 gallons of wine have been made by six dressers.

Two situations appear to be particularly favourable for the culture of the vine; one upon the margin of large rivers, and the other upon high elevated places. No part of the globe is better adapted to the culture of the vine, to produce the most exquisite wines, than the rich ground on the western river—we are pleased to see the exertions made use of to increase the quantity of wine in this neighbourhood.—Indiana Reg.

FLOGGING IN THE ARMY.—When discussing the mutiny bill, Mr. Hume proposed an amendment for abolishing corporal punishment in the army. He objected to the bill, because it authorized the infliction of corporal punishment on 75,000 men. His attention was particularly called to the subject by a circular recently issued by Lord Bathurst, recommending the total abolition of flogging in the West Indies. He could not understand why a species of punishment which was considered improper to be used upon free men, should be inflicted upon free men. He was convinced that the practice of flogging degraded the army. The Hon. Member next observed, that the inhabitants in the neighbourhood of the King's Mews, were greatly annoyed by the cries of the soldiers who were almost daily flogged there. Sir Henry Hardinge declared, that only one man had been punished at the barracks of the King's Mews in twelve months. The debate was of some length, and the practice of the continental powers was often referred to. The officers in the House were in favour of preserving the power to flog. Lord Palmerston said the punishment of flogging was ancient—it was derived from the Roman army to the British. It was necessary, not only to the discipline of the army, but to take that power away from the prerogative would be to endanger the Constitution. The observation on foreign discipline must be taken with some allowance. The French army had not the power to inflict corporal punishment, but they were less tenacious of life. Surely no one could wish to see capital punishments increased in the British army.—While he was with the army of occupation in France, he heard of several cases of the Russish forces dying from the severity of flogging. In the Prussian army there were two sheaves. On the first offence the soldier was degraded to the second from the first; in which they were not subject to corporal punishment. In the second class they were subject to stripes, which were graduated by a scale: an Ensign could inflict 10, a Lieutenant 20, a Captain 30, a Major 40, and so on. This was not the discipline to be desired for the British army.

DIRECTIONS FOR BOILING POTATOES.—We copy the following from the Irish Farmer's Journal, a very good authority on such a subject.

HOW TO BOIL POTATOES NICELY WITHOUT WASTE.—Seldom do we see potatoes well cooked, and still seldomer do we see them cooked without waste. By the following sections both ends will be attained:—Choose your potatoes of equal size, and put them into a sauce pan or pot without a lid, with no more water than is sufficient to cover them; more would only spoil them. As the potatoes themselves, on being boiled, yield a considerable portion of water. By being boiled in a vessel without a lid, they do not crack, and all waste is prevented. After the water is come to a boil, pour it off, and replace the pot by cold water, into which throw a good portion of salt. The cold water sends the heat from the surface to the heart of the potatoe, and makes it mealy. Like all other vegetables, they are improved by being boiled with salt, which ought not, therefore, to be spared. The boiled with salt, which ought not, therefore, to be spared. The only proper test of their being done enough, is trying them with a fork. When they are boiled with a little cracking is usually considered as the test of their being done enough; but they will often crack, when they are quite raw in the heart. After straining off the water, they should be allowed to stand ten or fifteen minutes on the fire to dry.

ILL REQUITED LOVE.

There was a damsel—one Miss Hannah Maria Juliana Shum, charged by the books of Covent Garden watch house, with having robbed a young gentleman of a golden sovereign. The young gentleman made such a pathetic appeal against the publication of his name—being, as he said, "a young man just venturing into the affairs of the world," that we shall content ourselves, (and our readers also, we hope) with saying, that he was simply a young gentleman of little person—and that little made the most of secundem artem; that is to say, the bootmaker had lengthened him at one end, and the hair-dresser at the other, whilst his tailor had done all that padding could do, to increase his bulk longitudinally.

The damsel—Miss Hannah Maria Juliana Shum, was not the purest damsel in existence perhaps—certainly not the purest in attire, and her face, pretty as it certainly was, would have been all the prettier for a commodity of soap and water. But to describing the persons of this rather ill matched pair, we shall forget their adventures.

The young gentleman left his home on the preceding night with the intention of going to the play, but in his way thither he met with Miss Hannah Maria Juliana Shum, and she looked at him from under her black arched eye-brow with such a look as he could not resist. Now, since he could not resist, he should have turned his back and fled; but instead of flying, he stopped, and asked her how she did. She replied that, she should be very well if she were not so very cold; and sighing deeply, she added—"Oh! what a delightful thing is a glass of nice hot brandy and water on such a piercing night as this!" Here was a direct appeal to the young gentleman's generosity, and gallantry, and all that sort of thing, and every thing in the world almost; and he could no more resist it than he could the sparkling of her jet black eye. So he gave her his arm and his heart together, and looking round, he saw the words, "Fine Cognine Brandy neat as imported" staring him full in the face from the windows of a tavern most opportunely opposite. What was to be said for it? Nothing at all. In his opinion the brandy and water was now inevitable, and they went into the tavern and drank a glass, and so delightful did they find it, that they had another, and another, and another. But still, as Miss Hannah Maria Juliana Shum naively remarked—

"As onward we journey, how pleasant,
"To pause and inhabit awhile
"Those few grassy spots, like the present,
"That 'mid the dull wilderness smile."

By and by two other ladies, friends of Miss Hannah Maria Juliana Shum's dropped in, and, the gentleman insisting upon it, they also had some glasses of nice hot brandy and water. In short, they were all so jocund, that at length the gentleman made up his mind to make a night of it—"But first," said he, "I should just like to step home and tell them not to sit up for me." "Tell the devil!" exclaimed Miss Hannah Maria Juliana Shum—"that's all a hum; for if you go away you'll not come back again." The gentleman was shocked, but his love was not shaken, and he pledged his honour that he would return. "Is Honour is all my eye," said the gentle Juliana Shum—"pledge your honour! will you pledge a sovereign?" I will!" said the gentleman, and he did—for as we have already stated, he was a young gentleman. The ladies waited his return, because they were not remarkably able to go. In consequence of the cognine When the gentleman returned, he, very naturally, expected the return of his sovereign; and the ladies, very naturally, knew nothing about it; whereupon the young gentleman's love evaporated, or rather exploded, with a bounce; and his love-being all gone, he was ungallant enough to send his once loved Miss Hannah Maria Juliana Shum to the watch house.

During the night, however, he repented himself of his cruelty; and he told the Magistrate that he did not wish to prosecute her. "I am a young man," said he, "just verging into the affairs of the world, and a business of this kind has such an ugly look with it, that I shall be much obliged to you, if you will let the lady go, and I am sure she is very welcome to keep the sovereign."

The gentle Juliana, seeing matters in this comfortable train, ventured to tender the gentleman his sovereign again, which he tenderly refused; and then the Magistrate dismissed them both with a rather outender admonition.

ALGIERS.

A letter received at Lloyd's Coffee House, London, dated Marseilles, February 24, states that Vice Admiral Neale had sailed from Malta for Algiers, taking with him the Naiad, and leaving orders for all other ships of war to follow.—The Comet had embarked with the Admiral.—Of the Algerine forces now at sea, we have no correct account, but it is said to consist of two frigates, two corvettes, and several small vessels, and about the 5th Feb. they were cruising off the coast of Spain, having captured a Spanish fishing vessel near Benedorm. All the British vessels at Gibraltar, bound up the Mediterranean, were waiting there for convoy.

Advices from Zante of 1st February, state that Patras remained under close blockade by sea and land. Lord Byron and Colonel Stanhope and Delamay, were concerting measures with Mauro Stanhope and Delamay, were concerting measures with Mauro Tobbi and other chiefs of Western Greece. Some Algerine vessels which had taken shelter under the guns of that fortress, were bl sokaded by six Hydriote vessels. It is mentioned, in letters from 5 - yras, that the Turks in Crete had received reinforcements from Egypt

The Greek Bonds are 2 1-2 premium in London.

TURKEY.

Letters from Constantinople, dated January 27, speak positively of the disastrous situation of the Turks. It seems certain that the fire which broke out in the Arsenal on the night of the 25th Jan. was caused by incendiaries, and that the damage done was very great, although the Turks pretend that it was completely subdued without any considerable loss. It is also confirmed that the Persians in the neighbourhood of Bagdad have made hostile movements.—These letters state that Lord Strangford had given great offence to the majority of the Turkish Ministry, by the positive tone in which he demanded, on the 24th of January, the immediate evacuation of Wallachia an Moldavia but that he is in favour with the Sultan and the Grand Vizier, who are both disposed to a pacific policy.

POETRY.

Professor Porson, whose powers of recollection, especially with reference to the Works of Shakespeare, were without a rival, was equally well read in the Poets which preceded the great Bard, and often delighted in pointing out his plagiarisms or imitations. Porson constantly quoted the following passage from Sir William Alexander's (afterwards Lord Sterline) Tragedy of Darius, as superior to Shakespeares imitation of it in that celebrated passage in the Tempest, inscribed on his monument in Westminster Abbey. Darius was originally published in 1603, and the Tempest in 1623.

Let greatness of her glassy scepters vaunt,
Not emperors, no, but reeds, soon brute'd, soon broken;
And let this worldly pomp our wits enchant,
All fades, and scarcely leaves behind a token.
These golden palaces, these gorgeous halls,
With furniture superdurously fair,
These stately courts, these sky encount'ring walls,
Evanish all like vapours in the air.

Lord Sterline's play was written before the death of Queen Elizabeth.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION AS TO LITERARY PROPERTY

Court of King's Bench, Quebec, Monday, April 19.

This day the Court was occupied in hearing the arguments of Council on an application made by Mr. Neilson for an injunction to the Sheriff of this District, enjoining him to publish according to Law, his advertisements of sales of real property in the Gazette published by Samuel Neilson, and a mandamus ordering J. C. Fisher, Esq. to discontinue publishing in his Paper, "The Quebec Gazette, Printed by Authority," the said advertisements of the Sheriff. All the Judges were on the Bench.

Messrs. STUART and VALLIERES for Applicant,
AND
Mr. Gugy for J. C. Fisher, Esquire, and the Attorney General, (Uniacke,) and Advocate General (Vanfelson,) for the Crown.

Mr. Stuart began by stating, that he would put the learned Council on the opposite side in possession of the arguments he intended to apply in the present case, and of the Authorities in support of them. He began by quoting the Ordinance of 1785, 2d Sec. 33, which orders the sale of real property to be advertised by the Sheriff in the Quebec Gazette; that at the time of the passing of that Ordinance, the Quebec Gazette, printed by that name, was the only one existing. He went on to inquire into the power of the Crown to alter the Ordinance of 1785, in that respect; he agreed that the King might have a printer, but went on to show that the Office of King's Printer was intended for special purposes, to wit; the publication of all Laws, Proclamations, and matters of State (Chitty on Prerogative, p 230). He proceeded to show that the publishing the advertisements by the Sheriff, as directed by the Ordinance of '85, was entirely a Judical proceeding, and not a matter of State, and consequently not controlable by extrajudiral authority. Ord 1795, act 32, respecting (affiches de dee et) This was cited to show, that the publication of Sheriffs' Sales, &c. by affiches, and publishing the same in a Gazette, was a mere matter of Judicial proceeding. He then proceeded to state that the Proclamation, revoking the Commission of Samuel Neilson, as King's Printer, and appointing J. C. Fisher, as Editor of such Gazette, in his stead, was bad, and particularly that part of it which enjoined Sheriffs to publish their advertisements in the Gazette published by J. C. Fisher. He stated that this Proclamation was a Legislative Act, in as much as it had put a construction and interpretation upon the Ordinance 55; that the Jus interpretandi belonged tot he Legislative power, and ought to be exercised by the Legislature only, and not by a Proclamation. Interpretative power is especially Legislative, (Dicta Droit, verbo Interpretatione de Lois,) Ord. 1667. Sec. 1, Art. 7, Viner L. Stat. B. 6, No. 37—143. He stated that the Proclamation was an assumption of Judicial authority. (Same work, p 96, 104.) He next proceeded to state, that he doubted the right of the Governor to issue such Proclamation; he was aware of the mistaken notion which the people had imbibed of the Governor being the Representative of the King; that there were essential differences between the authority of the King of England and the Governor of a Province; first, the authority of the King is original, but that of a Governor is derived: That the King held the Crown and his estate in fee simple, which is the highest title known in Law; that a Governor held his Government for life, and not in fee simple, which is the high held the Crown and his estate in fee simple, which is the high-est title known in Law; that a Governor held his Government for life, and not Reports, 1st Vol. P. 170—1, though he admitted no action lay against a Governor in a Colony, during his administration. Yet the action could be brought in the King's Court.

The learned Gentleman now went on to state that the King might have a Printer but not an Editor; here he quoted a work by Mr Masere's, (formerly Atty. General of Canada) entitled the Canadian Freeholders, p. 227, 2d, Dialogue 219, 20. The King specifies the authority of the Governor in his Commission, the Governor cannot in the least point, exceed the authority given him by his Commission.

Mr. Gugy, on the part of J. C. Fisher, Esq. began, by stating that he appeared solely for Dr. Fisher; that he would not enter into the discussion of the Constitutional principles which had been urged by the learned Counsel on the other side, Mr. Stuart, but would confine himself to the motion before the Court, so far as his client was concerned; he proceeded to state, that the application was defective, that it ought to have been made by Messrs. Neilson and Cowan, being Joint Proprietors and Publishers of the Quebec Gazette, whereas it had been made by Saml. Neilson alone: that the Court was incompetent to proceed, that it had no jurisdiction to award any thing demanded in the shape of a Rule Nisi; that the ordinance 25th Geo. III. pointed out the manner in which the Plaintiff was to come into Court, that in the present application those directions had not been followed. That the Court could not prevent the Printer of the Quebec Gazette published by authority, from advertising and publishing in his Paper an Advertisement of real property more than an Advertisement of Rum or Molasses—That the writ of mandamus, could issue but from the Court of Chancery or Equity, the this Court could not exercise a jurisdiction in equity, that by the motion before the Court damages were demanded, that they ought to be demanded by writ, that, the writ of Injunction issued out of the Court of Chancery, to restrain proceedings in the King's Bench. That the Court could not decide upon the mere affidavit of one party, that the applicant could not take upon himself to interpret the law, which was the peculiar province of the Judges. Moreover, that the injunction was never moved, but when, without such proceeding irreparable injury would be sustained.

Mr. Vanfelson, Advocate General, for the Crown, after having gone into the history of the Quebec Gazette, from the period of the establishment of that paper, and its having been subsequently published by authority of Government, and after having quoted various documents to shew that at the passing of the ordinances it was still a Government paper, and was considered as such by the Legislature at the time of the passing of the ordinance, entered forcibly into the nature of injunctions, as being a remedy resorted to only in extraordinary cases; he then contended that the Applicant should shew an absolute property in the title of the "Quebec Gazette," & also that he should shew that there was no ordinary remedy by action, for the grievance of which he complained to justify the specific remedy of an injunction. He said that the Quebec Gazette before the passing of Ord 1785, was published by authority, and was not a private paper The Advocate General concluded by declaring that he did not see how the application could be granted in its present form.

Extract of a letter from William Henry.

"On Sunday last, a Mr. Theodore De Pincter, for many years known in Canada, as a very extraordinary personage, shot himself in his room with a fowling piece, which alone he bequeathed to his wife.—He was supposed to be a natural son of the late Duke of Brunswick, in whose auxiliary troops he had served as a Lieutenant for many years, as a very intelligent and deserving officer, but he had imbibed from his earliest years the most erroneous philosophy of Deism He has left many valuable papers—various subjects having employed his attention—such as attempting to prove the world a square and not a circle, &c. &c.—Times.

JOURNALS OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,

FRIDAY, 16th JANUARY, 1824.

MR. SPEAKER.

The Honourable the Legislative Council have concurred in the Resolution sent by this day from the Commons House of Assembly, and have appointed a Committee of two members who will be ready to meet the Committee of the Commons House of Assembly in the Joint Committee Room at three o'clock P. M. this day, for the purpose of preparing a Joint Address to His Majesty founded thereon.

WM. DUMMER POWELL,
SPEAKER.

Legislative Council Chamber, 16th January, 1824.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, the Message from the Honourable the Legislative Council was concurred in, and Messrs. Hagerman Crooks and McLean of Stormont, were ordered to attend the Conferees on the part of the House of Assembly.

A message was then sent to the Hon. the Legislative Council to inform them of the same.

Mr. BOULTON Master in Chancery, brought down from the Hon. the Legislative Council several Addresses, & having withdrawn, the Speaker read them as follows:

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WE, Your Majesty's Dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Legislative Council and Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament Assembled, humbly beg leave to represent to Your Majesty, that by the Laws of the Empire, Your Majesty's Subjects in Upper Canada are prohibited from procuring the article of Tea, which is in very general use among them, by any other means than by importation from Great Britain.

Your Majesty's Petitioners are fully aware that this restriction does not apply peculiarly to Canada, but that it is a regulation of trade which extends to all Your Majesty's Dominions, and is in fact an express condition in the Charter granted by Parliament to the Honourable East India Company, with a just regard, as your Petitioners are convinced, to the interests of the Empire, & to the Claims of that great Commercial Body.

Your Majesty's Petitioners do therefore neither complain of this restriction as a grievance, nor presume to pray that it may be relaxed in their favour upon the unreasonable expectation that as a matter of indulgence, that can be conceded to them, which is withheld from their fellow subjects in other parts of the Empire; but they humbly and earnestly entreat Your Majesty's attention to their representation, that from circumstances wholly beyond their power to control, the laws which are intended to confine their Trade to Tea to importations from Great Britain, cannot be enforced, that their supplies of that article, which is in truth, one of General, and almost necessary consumption, instead of being furnished by the fair trade in the course of Legal Commerce, are clandestinely introduced from the adjoining States of America, which by contiguous to Upper Canada along the whole extent of its Southern Boundary. That this direct intercourse, by which the comparatively low price of Teas thus supplied, furnish the strongest temptation, and against which the position and circumstances of the Country, render it impossible to guard, wholly defeats the hope of any advantage to the East India Company and to the Shipping interest of Great Britain or her Colonies, from the present restrictions, while it is injurious to the fair Trader, extremely detrimental to the Public revenue, and pernicious to the morals of the people.

Your Majesty's Petitioners are fully convinced, both from reason and experience, that [illegible] must continue to exist until some means are taken by the Honourable East India Company, or with their consent, to counteract them; and in a report which they beg leave to lay before Your Majesty, they have ventured, with humble deference, to suggest such measures as appear to them most likely to afford an effectual remedy

Your Majesty's Petitioners have endeavoured in their report to state fully the circumstances which compel them, thus respectfully, to solicit Your Majesty's attention to a subject of so much importance, to the welfare of Your Majesty's Subjects in this Colony They have desired to anticipate the probable difficulties, as well as the benefits of the several measures they have presumed to propose to Your Majesty's consideration, and to furnish such information as it is in their power to afford, and they rest with just confidence in the wisdom and goodness of Your Majesty, to recommend to the Imperial Parliament such provision for the removal of the evils represented, as to Your Majesty may seem meet.

WM. DUMMER POWELL
SPEAKER.

Legislative Council Chamber, 16th Jan 1824.

To His Excellency SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

The Legislative Council and House of Assembly in Provincial Parliament Assembled, have concurred in a report with certain Documents annexed thereto, and agreed on a Joint Address to His Majesty, praying that our Most Gracious Sovereign, in consideration of the circumstances which render it impossible for them to prevent the clandestine introduction of the article of Tea into this Province from the United States of America, would be pleased to recommend to the Imperial Parliament such measures as His Majesty may in his wisdom deem most likely to afford a remedy so important to the welfare of His Majesty's Subjects in this Colony.

They therefore entreat that Your Excellency will be pleased to cause their Address to His Majesty, with their report, to be laid at the foot of the throne.

WM. DUMMER POWELL
SPEAKER.

Legislative Council Chamber, 16th January 1824.

On motion of Mr. BURWELL, the 6th rule was dispensed with, and the Address to His Majesty on the subject of the Tea Trade was read a second time, concurred in, and Signed by the Speaker.

On motion of Mr. BURWELL, the Address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, on the subject of the Tea Trade was read a second time, concurred in, and Signed by the Speaker.

Mr. McDONELL from the Joint Committee of Conference, on the State of the Library, reported as follows:

The Joint Committee of conference appointed to examine into the State of the Library, having met in the Joint Committee Room, agreed to recommend to their respective Houses, That the sum of Two Hundred Pounds should be placed at the disposal of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for the purpose of completing the Present sets of the,

"Statutes at large"
"Annual Register"
"Parliamentary Debates"
"Quarterly Review"
"Edinburgh Review"

and to procure a second set of the "Statutes at Large" and the latest Edition of "Burn's Justice"

Several books are missing from the Library, but as it is supposed that they are in the possession of Gentlemen connected with the Legislature, it is probable that they will be speedily returned.

The Committee considered the propriety of recommending the appointment of a permanent Librarian, with an increased Salary whose duty it should be to remain constantly in the Chamber where the books are placed, during the Session of the Legislature, being perfectly satisfied that without the appointment of such an officer, no regularity can be expected to be observed in the Library, under existing circumstances; however, the Committee considered that it might be deemed advisable to delay this measure until a future Session.

The Committee also considered that the appropriation of a sum of money annually for the purpose of making additions to the present collection of books, was most desirable, but the same reasons which restrained their recommending the immediate appointment of a Librarian induced them not to press this subject on the consideration of their respective Houses.

ALEX. McDONELL
CHAIRMAN.

Joint Committee Room, 16th January, 1824.

Mr. NICHOL from the Joint Committee of Conference on the subject matter of a resolution of the House of Assembly, in which the Hon. the Legislative Council had concurred, reported as follows:

The Joint Committee appointed to confer on the subject matter of a Resolution of the House of Assembly, in which the Legislative Council have concurred, having met, agreed on the form of an Address to His Majesty, and also to His Excellency the Lieut Governor, praying him to transmit the same, which are recommended to the consideration of their respective Houses.

The Addresses reported were then read.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, the House concurred in the Report of the Committee of Conference.

A message was then sent to acquaint the Hon. the Legislative Council of the same.

Leave of Absence was granted to Mr. Crooks for the remainder of the Session.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the Cause of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration fixing the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'r. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR, In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Ticket a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed the settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office, York, 11th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

York, 29th Dec 1823

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't.
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 25th, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

YOUR having taken it for granted, I trust, that it I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament, I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and I hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

When I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my last period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be not such as you approve, it would be unwandid to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is never likely to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I FEEL that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service:—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue; but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have perceived in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should wave considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

WITH a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
JNO. B. ROBINSON.

Editorial Commentary.

It is with a feeling of the deepest and and most unaffected regret, we have to announce the death of COLONEL NICHOL, M. P. for the County of Norfolk—He had been to Niagara on business, and was upon his return home at a very late hour in the night of Monday, the 3d inst. The night was exceedingly dark and stormy; and, on ascending the heights of Queenston, instead of keeping to the right, where the road turns to wind up the hill, he unfortunately turned to the left, and drove his horse and waggon over the frightful precipice which bounds the River Niagara at that spot, and which is the same place where so many of the defeated Americans perished after the memorable battle of Queenston. The perpendicular fall could not be less than one hundred feet, and his skull was so dreadfully fractured, that his death must have been instantaneous

The loss of COL. NICHOL will be extensively felt in this Province.—He was a thorough man of business, and of talents, far above mediocrity,—with a memory so surprising, by reflection, that what he once learned he never forgot. In the House of Assembly he was indefatigable, and transacted far more than his share of the business.—We know not who will be able to fill the place of the lamented—We know not who will be able to fill the place he has left vacant in that Assembly, for his knowledge was all of a useful, practical, cast. Much genuine patriotism attached to his public character; and, in private life, he was affable, kind, generous, humane, and convivial.

It is to be hoped that this shocking catastrophe will prove the means of causing a suitable fence to be placed on that side of the road next the River which has ever been exceedingly dangerous, in the open and unprotected state in which it is left.—But, perhaps, it would be more desirable to change the direction of the road altogether, and carry it up the natural hollow or ravine which occurs near the old barracks.—We trust this improvement will be speedily made.

We can assure Mr HERON, of the Gleaner that he is somewhat too rash in his conclusions respecting the Statutes of last Session.—They are completed;—and, it would have been impossible, from their bulk, and the largeness of the edition, for any single press to have completed them in a shorter time, as there has been no delay whatever from the commencement of the job to its completion

It gives us great satisfaction to inform the inhabitants of the Newcastle District generally, and of Port Hope and its neighbourhood in particular, that we have received the Report of the Engineer whom we requested to examine the mouth of Smith's Creek, with a view of ascertaining its capabilities for being made a safe and commodious harbour for shipping; and, that the Report is highly favourable.—We shall probably give some further particulars in our next.

The King of Spain has declined the mediation of England, and is determined to use every effort to recover her S. American Colonies—beginning with Mexico. We are sorry to say that a very serious riot has occured among the new Emigrants from Ireland, located in the Perth district.—Literally speaking, Scotch and Irish!—Amongst the wounded in those were "literally speaking" Scotchmen.—The rioters formed themselves Ballygibbards—it is said the walls and door of one of Captain GRANT answered as the 40th Carlton Militia

NEW INSURANCE COMPANY.—A new General Insurance Company is about to be established, under the auspices of three of the most eminent establishments in Europe. The capital will be over £5,000,000, and under the control of Mr. Rothschild.

WOODEN PUMP DISCOVERIES.—Mr Perkins has brought to perfection an apparatus to discharge water by steam.—An article in one of the papers says that indications have been discovered in the moon of that planet being inhabited by civilized beings.

SIR ROBERT WILSON'S DAUGHTER.—Some warm letters have passed between the British and French Ministers respecting the treatment of the daughters of Sir Robert Wilson received from the Police at Calais.

TREAD MILLS.—In the British House of Commons, lately considerable discussion took place on the subject of the tread mill. It was satisfactorily shown as proved that the exercise was not prejudicial to health, that convicts weighed more when on the wheel than off

MANUFACTURE OF OPIUM.—An effort is making to introduce the cultivation of the white poppy in England, and the making of Opium. £20 worth has been obtained from an acre.

The Duke of Cambecesses, died at Paris on the Ninth of March.

The wife of General Mina had arrived at Havre, on Board a vessel from Lisbon, she is accompanied by her father. They will proceed directly to London, by the packet boat, without going to Calais, as they at first intended.

Joseph Lancaster, celebrated for his new system of education, sailed from Philadelphia, with his Family, on Wednesday, for Laguayra.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

A bill has recently passed the Senate of the U. States, to abolish imprisonment for debt; and it is hoped that the barbarous custom will receive its death blow in the house of representatives. In announcing this important measure, the National Intelligencer makes the following pertinent remarks. "A great principle triumphed in the Senate yesterday, and the day will be remembered as one of the brightest in its history. That enlightened body yesterday gave its final sanction to an Act, which we venture to say, will command the applause of the country, and acquire for the body itself a durable renown. Of a branch of the National Legislature has, at length, said, that debt shall no longer be considered criminal—that the dungeon shall no longer be the portion of the honest debtor. The bill which has passed is necessarily qualified and guarded—it gives no immunity to fraud, and it contains the requisite checks to shield it from abuse; but the senate has, substantially and formally, declared against the principle of imprisonment for debt; it has trodden down and trampled under foot one of the last remnants of Feudal and Roman barbarism, which the force of education and habit have been able successfully to uphold until now, against the spirit of the age We cannot doubt that the concurrence of the other branch will render the overthrow of this anomaly in our system complete and perpetual.

IRISH MAILS.—It is incontemplation to convey the mails between London and the South of Ireland entirely by the route throughout Gloucester to Milford Haven. According to the present mode, they pass three times a week through Bath and Bristol, and three times through Oxford and Gloucester. The latter course is shorter by 30 miles than the former; and this saving, with further improvements of this line of road now in agitation, and the conveyance of the mails by steam packets from Milford to Dunmore, near Waterford, will, it is expected, gain no less than 24 hours between Cork, as well as all the southern districts of Ireland and London. When this plan is brought to maturity, it is proposed to have the Bristol letters for Ireland forwarded to Gloucester in time to be conveyed thence on the arrival of the London mail for Milford.

NEW INVENTION.—The Boston Palladium informs us of another invention of a steam engine on new principles, called, "Portable volcanic self generating gas and Steam Engine." The Palladium says, "that a young gentleman of this city, after twelve months study and experiment, has accomplished that great desideratum, the unexceptionable application of an elastic power, to the propelling of Land Carriages We have been favoured with a sight of this Engine in operation, and from the novel, scientific and economical principles upon which it is founded, we cannot doubt of its complete success

From the confidence that has been placed in us, we cannot here explain its principles, it being the intention of the inventor not to make them known to the public, until they are demonstrated in actual operation on a carriage; but we will venture a general view of its advantages over any thing of the kind heretofore invented for this and all other purposes, where Steam Engines have been used.

A ten horse power Engine may now be made to weigh from one to two hundred pounds, occupying the space of a child, at the prime cost of 150 Dollars, and working at an expense proportionably advantageous. In fact, it seems to combine the use of the greatest power, with perfect safety, in the least possible space and weight.

The inventor has several different methods of generating his power and caloric, applicable to the same Engine. Some of them afford all their own supplies without any attendence whatever.

We have seen a letter from London, stating that this Engine had been secure l, three months since, in six different states in Europe.

THE HIGHLAND WARRIOR.—The venerable Highlander, Patrick Grant, to whom His Majesty, two years ago graciously granted a pension of one guinea per week, died at Bree Marr on the 24th of February, in the 111th year of his age. He expired while sitting in his elbow chair, having left scarcely any perceptible illness. His pension now devolves on his daughter Ann, during her life. A cottage is to be built for her on the farm of Drumcain, in the parish of Sethnot, near Brechin. It is thought very late before was the only survivor of those who fought at the battles of Culloden and Falkirk. He was also engaged in the English Raid under the Pretender, and was present when the Pretender embarked for France.

From the Albany Daily Advertiser

GENERAL JACKSON.—The virtual declension of Mr. Calhoun, and the extreme improbability of Mr. Clay's success, render it certain that there will be but three candidates before the American people for the office of President, to wit, General Jackson, Mr Adams, and Mr Crawford

PENALTY FOR SHAVING.—No fewer than 3000 Russians were massacred in 1705, on occasion of the order of Peter I. that people should shave their beards. They were conducted into a vast enclosure, where numbers of blocks, axe had been previously arranged. when Peter himself, with the axe in his hand, gave the example to the executioners how they should chop off the heads of the victims

NEW SPECIES OF GAMBLING.—A letter from Richmond, (Va) to the Editor of the Norfolk Beacon, says "Travelling some time since, in Virginia, I stopt at a public house in Brunswick county, where I found several country bumkins playing at push pins, for money. After playing for some time, one of the company proposed to play a game in which he said there could be no cheating.—They all consented to play his game, they knew how. He said it was called Fly Loo, and was played in the following manner, viz:—He called for a sugar dish and gave each man a lump of sugar. Each man put down his money and his lump of sugar. The man on whose lump a fly first alighted should sweep the stakes. After playing some time, the mover of the game asked the company to excuse him for a few minutes, and took his lump out with him. After being out two or three minutes, he returned, having dipt his lump in fish brine and won every stake. His lump attracted the flies by its odoriferous smell."

THE AUTHOR OF WAVERLEY.—At the annual meeting of the Celtic Society, held lately in Edinburgh, the Chief Commissioner thus introduced the health of Sir Walter Scott:—"The Union (between England and Scotland) which had stood but on paper since 1707, had within these very few years, become an union in heart and in deed. If he were asked for the reason of this change—for the cause of this union—he would say that it ought to be ascribed to the works of that bright genius who sat opposite to him, who like Prometheus, had stolen fire from heaven, and given life to ages that were gone, and knowledge and intelligence to that in which he lived. His works had delineated the character and peculiarities of the Scottish people in a manner at once pleasing, instructive, and true. No less successful had he been in his description of the no less amiable character of England. The works of that gentleman had united the hearts of all in one common bond of friendship. He would follow, and every true Celt and Scotsman would be proud to follow, the example of the young and noble Lord opposite him (Lord Castlereagh) by devoting an overflowing bumper to the health of Sir Walter Scott." The toast was received with the greatest enthusiasm. Sir Walter then said, "he would not attempt to reply to the compliments which had been directed to him by the right honorable Judge, nor to thank the Celtic Society, of which he had a way s been a sincere admirer and warm friend and supporter; but he would ill express the sentiments he felt, if he did not say he was much flattered at a compliment, however unmerited, when coming from such a source, and received with such a Highland welcome.

EXTRAORDINARY SIMILARITY.—A Mr. Smart, who keeps the Wintry Arms Inn, at Ruthin Denbigshire, has two daughters, twins: they are so surprisingly alike, that not only strangers, but their own parents, find it difficult to name them when apart. They seem almost to possess but one mind; are very uneasy if not dressed exactly alike to the smallest minutiæ; have each one particular tooth that stands forward more than the rest, and a few years back one had a tooth extracted, and on examination, the other was found to have the same tooth in nearly the same state of decay; if a question is asked one of them, they generally both answer; their friendships and dislikes are always the same; if one is struck the other seems to feel it equally by the distress she evinces; if either of them is unwell, the other sickens in a day or two afterward; they are inseparable companions—eat alike—think alike—act alike; in short, the sympathy existing between these children has been the astonishment of the whole neighbourhood.—Evening Paper.

After this, the Comedy of Errors will seem quite natural.—London Examiner.

PERKIN'S STEAM ENGINE.

We have seen many attempts to explain the principles of Mr Perkins' new Steam-engine, but none which is more likely to render them plain to every capacity than the observations contained in the passage subjoined. The basis of Mr Perkins' improvement consists in his bringing water in actual contact with the metal, by which the excitement is directly communicated to the water, which excitement, heretofore, has been allowed to dissipate itself by the simultaneous generation of steam. The atomic motion transferred by the fixation of the gases in the process of the external combustion, passes through the substance of the vessel containing the water, and its first effect has been to convert the adjoining liquid into steam. Room being allowed in ordinary boilers for the expansion of this steam, the ultimate force consisted only of the first simple force; or, if accelerated, the acceleration depended on the vague dimensions and decreasing strength of an extended surface of boiler. But Mr. Perkins has contrived to press his liquid into his boiler, or generator, home to the interior surface of his generator, and to keep it full, so that no steam can be simultaneously generated and hence, as the motion transferred by the fixation of the gases in the adjacent combustion is not simultaneously distributed in steam, the contained water receives all the acceleration of excitement of which it is susceptible. This accumulated excitement does not, however, burst the generator, because the strength other things alike, is inversely as the dimensions, and the thickness can not conveniently, in so small a bulk, be increased to any required degree; thus, loss of the motion transferred from the combustion is lost, than when, by the old system, steam was simultaneously generated; and the continued addition accelerates the excitement of the water, on the principle of accelerated motion in falling bodies. From this effect of acceleration, which cannot be complete in an ordinary expanded boiler, Mr. Perkins obtains great excitement with much less fuel, or less gas fixing, by combustion. He loses no motion, and he appropriates the whole by an accelerated result. The expansive force is all the motion of the gases fixed by the combustion; and, as long as the strength of cohesion in the materials of the generator is greater than the expansive force, no explosion can take place. But, as soon as Mr P has sufficiently excited his water, he allows some of it to escape, and every drop then evolves in steam many hundred times the original bulk. The excited atoms, of course, perform large orbits, creating a local vacuum, therefore, a precipitation of coldness to the evaporating hand plunged into it, and a force of expansion equal to any amount required. as 500 lbs. or 20,000lbs. to the square inch. It is a case of motion compressed. The confined atoms of water are not to be supposed at rest on the contrary, no motion is lost or gained in the whole process. It previously existed in the gases of the atmosphere; these are fixed by the combustion, which is a mere process of gaseous fixation; the generator and its contained water are placed in contact; the atoms in water receive the motion, but are unable, for want of space, to exhibit any of it in forming steam; the contact ance of the transfer of motion causes acceleration, and a violent tendency to escape, which, however, is prevented, till the excitement is sufficient to evolve gas of the required power. Rationally explained, Mr. P.'s machine is founded on principles strictly philosophical—he has safely generated a force before unknown; and if he had failed to apply it with skill, his past reputation, as a mechanic of the first order, would have been undeserved. Till we have fallen upon a method of applying gases themselves in various degrees of condension, as contrasted mechanical powers, we must be content to regard Mr Perkins's contrivance for producing the same power with one gallon of water as with sixty, and with one bushel of coals as with four, as the limit of human ingenuity in this branch of human art. At the same time I am persuaded, that the application of the force transferred by combustion through water, for the purpose of arriving at mechanical power, will by posterity be considered as a very bungling process indeed; and I think that it has been confounded merely because mankind have been confounded by the nonsense about caloric; and in consequence have not understood the nature and source of the power which they were applying.—English paper.

MEXICO.

Mr. BULLOCK'S TRAVELS AND ACQUISITIONS IN MEXICO.—Mr. Bullock spent six months in Mexico, visited the capital, and many principal cities, and with his usual zeal and assiduity, climbed volcanoes and pyramids, drew landscapes and temples, exhumed ancient images and unniched long established gods; collected of nature and manufactures; and beyond all, availing himself of the political situation of the country, which opened channels jealously had dammed up since the conquest by Spain, obtained possession of early manuscripts and other records of the most remarkable kind, and apparently of the highest antiquarian value.

But what affords a more perfect notion of Mexico, is a series of models in full size, as well as in little, of the fruits and vegetable productions. We never approached any thing so like the idea of a tropical climate as these give at one glance; the doubted hand tree, with its fruit resembling the human hand; the gigantic and clustering shapes of the palms bamnois, plantains, paupaws, avocates, annanas, and hundreds of others, whose forms are totally unknown to us, rendee credible the veriest stories of travellers, and when seen in their true forms and proportions, excite an astonishment which description and pictures cannot create. A white gourd, like a bludgeon, two feet long, may be instanced as one plant which struck us particularly: and we also remarked strings of a nameless fruit resembling our ropes of onions, but four or five feet in length, and more closely studded with cherry or plum-looking berries. Prodigious cactus, which with us yield no fruit, are here of the size of mishaped chair bottoms, and set round the edges with a scarlet fruit like our largest pears; and the torch thistle, three feet in thickness, and thirty feet high, is seen with its massy stem, covered with flowers and fruits. Also unize of extraordinary fertility and rich colours, and above sixty pounds weight in all the varieties of form which fancy could suggest.

To models of these and many others, Mr Bullock has added specimens of all the productions that could be preserved in their natural state: and has brought with him (to enrich the Flora of England) a large collection of living plants, and seeds of the rarest and most beautiful flowers. These are now committed to British earth, and as their habitation was principally the table-land to the north of Mexico, a temperate and congenial climate, it may reasonably be hoped that their cultivation with us will be successful, and that in a few years we may not only see them naturalized, but extensively adorning our gardens and shrubberies. In natural history, his collection of preserved specimens seems to be as numerous, new, and interesting as in botany. Of nearly two hundred species of birds, the greatest number are undescribed! Many of these are humming birds of exquisite plumage and surpassing brilliancy; resembling the dazzling and glittering products of the mines round which they fly. Of these, Mr. B had at one time, seventy alive in one cage, and studied closely their motions and actions.

The fishes of Mexico and its coast are also little known Mr. B has preserved a great variety, very singular in form, and beautiful in colour. His catalogue embraces between two and three hundred species.

Mr. B. also brought with him several living animals, but they have not borne our climate; they are new, or little known in Europe. Among these are the Acoloth, or Wild Dog of Mexico; a miniature species of dogs, scarcely the size of a rat, which burrows in the mountains, in the neighborhood of Durango; a new species of Deer. Armadillos, Currasows, Flamingos, Parrots (undescribed), &c. In charge of these and other marvels, is a young Mexican Indian, probably the first who has visited Europe since the days of Cortes, and certainly the first who has visited Britain. He can read and write the Mexican language, and even partially interpret the MSS.

While augmenting the stores of the vegetable and animal kingdoms, it was not to be imagined, that our enthusiastic countryman would neglect the mineral world, in which Mexico is perhaps richer than all the universe besides. Her mines form her distinguishing character, and will soon, in all likelihood, since British and American capital has been set to work upon them, renew her wealth and importance as a nation. The mineral kingdom is, nevertheless, more profuse and valuable than rare and beautiful. What there is, Mr. Bullock has been fortunate in obtaining. His cases comprise the whole collection of the Conde de Valentiniana, the crystals, &c. of Mr. Wilcox, the American consul; and all those collected by Dr. Cervantes, the professor of Natural History, besides other curious specimens.

Still, however, to us, the most interesting part of his acquisitions remain to be described. We allude to his manuscript and religious emblems, &c.; historical documents of the time of Cortez, in the shape of rude pictures; pictures still more rude, detailing, obviously and quite intelligibly to the mind through the eye, the early, perhaps, original migrations and settlements of the Mexican tribes; emblematical writings; maps; casts of the stupendous idols which they worshipped, nor the lesser idols themselves, so curiously and elaborately cut in the hardest materials, that we wonder how they could possibly be executed with the native tools; and a multitude of other extraordinary things.

FOREIGN

ENGLAND AND ALGIERS.

Despatches were received at the Admiralty, from Sir Harry Neale, dated 25th of February, off Algiers, where the Admiral was keeping up a strict blockade. Although it was evident the Dey had not made the full concessions required of him, yet it was said that on the appearance of the British Admiral, he had directed some European captives to be placed on the footing of prisoners of war, although till that time, they had been treated as slaves. Two Algerine frigates were seen near Cadiz, Feb. 19, and three or four days afterwards two British frigates sailed in that direction from Lisbon, which it was hoped might fall in with the Algerines.

HOLLAND AND ALGIER

A Paris paper of March 6, contains the following paragraph:— The squadron of His Majesty the King of the Netherlands, which was in the ports of the Balearic Islands, under the command of Admiral Ruyseh, ric Islands, under the command of Admiral Ruyseh, has sailed to make war with the Algerines in conformity with the treaty of Aix-la which the Regency has sent ships of war, and a great number of corsairs, to the coasts of Spain, for the purpose of capturing all Spanish vessels that they may meet with during all Spanish vessels that they may meet with during the month of March. It is known that before the 12th of last month four Spanish vessels had been carried into the port of Algiers."

It is publicly asserted at Vienna, that the declaration of war by England against Algiers, was only a prelude to an increase her naval force in the Mediterranean, and it was believed that she had ulterior views in this increase.

Domestic.

QUEBEC.—Several vessels from sea have arrived at this port The navigation has been practicable since the 19th instant.

SAINT JOHNS.—There were launched this morning three large Ships from the Yards of Messrs Finch, Munn, and Bell respectively. With the exception of the Hariquin, of 300 tons, from Mr Finch's Yard, they all entered their new element with ease and beauty, this Vessel, after moving a considerable distance stopped beyond her bed, and we understand her rudder was torn off; there is no doubt that she will float at the next tide as she has sustained no other injury.

The St. David, of 330 tons, was launched from Mr. Bell's yard at half past six o'clock this morning, in the presence of His Excellency the Governor in Chief, the Countess Dalhousie and their suite, and a great concourse of spectators We understand she has been purchased by Wm. Price, Esquire, and is upon a beautiful model.

The Bark Caroline, of upwards of 300 tons was also safely launched from Mr. John Munn's ship yard about the same time

There remain three to be launched in a few days; three others are on the stocks, and, we understand, that several more will, during a short time, be laid down. The number of men which have been employed at this kind of labour during last winter has been great, and cannot, upon a moderate computation, have averaged less than thirty five, for each of the six vessels built in the Port, and probably one hundred and seventy five for the large ship building on the Island of Orleans; supposing that three hundred and fifty men have been employed, 200 may be considered as having a wife and four children; this would give, as a low computation, a number equal to 1000, or a twentieth part of the population of the City, which has drawn its subsistence from this kind of labour, and which, had it not existed, must have been left to gather its pittance from very precarious sources.

In this view, the occupation is important. In another, if the vessels are built on commission, or for exportation, or employed in the trade by capitalists of the Colony, they are an addition, in the last instance, to our shipping, a proof of the increase of our capital or means, and in the first and second, form a considerable item in our exports.

It is somewhat singular that in the Province of New Brunswick, where, we believe, timber may be said to bear generally a higher value than it does here, whose labourers, if accounts are, to be relied on, are scarce, and high prices paid, and where the natural advantages for ship building cannot be said to be greater than they are here, we find, that no less than one hundred and four vessels are building.

The following is the Custom house admeasurement of the large Timber Ship building at the Island of Orleans:—

Length of Keel, 201 feet 6 inches.
Beam, 50 feet 7 inches,
Depth of Hold, 29 feet 4 inches

St. Johns, (N. B.) April 3—It is now currently reported that some changes will certainly take place in the Ecclesiastical establishment of the Provinces, and that a Bishop may be appointed to New Brunswick, who, during the absence of the Prelate of Nova Scotia, will exercise Episcopal jurisdiction in that Diocese. Having understood that it was very probable the Bishop of New Brunswick, if one should be appointed, would reside in Nova Scotia- a more proper time than the present cannot be for the Clergy, the Vestries, and all the Members of the Church of England in the Province, to unite with one accord in petitioning His Most Gracious Majesty to appoint a Resident Bishop to this His loyal Colony of New Brunswick.—Courier.

GREAT FIRE AT ST. JOHNS, N B.—It is with deep regret we announce that St. Johns, N B was visited with a very destructive fire on Wednesday morning last, which commenced in a cooper's shop on Mr. S Merritt's wharf, and taking a northerly direction, swept every thing in its course till it reached Osborne's buildings, which were also burnt; thence E. S E to Prince William's street, taking the buildings on both sides of the street, and before the destroying element was subdued, about forty stores and dwelling houses were laid in ashes. The loss is estimated at £300.00, and very little of the property was insured. The above are all the particulars we have been able to learn.

QUEBEC, APRIL 27.—On Friday last High Mass was celebrated with great pomp in the parish Church of this City, by the Rev. Mr. Signay, Cure of Quebec, to a numerous and respectable congregation of English Catholics; the Band of the 68th Regiment attended on the occasion. We particularly notice this occurrence, as we have been given to understand that it is the first time the Festival of the Tutelar Saint of England has been so observed in Canada.

We have been politely favoured with a copy of the following General Order, which his Lordship the Governor in Chief and Commander of the Forces has been pleased to issue, expressive of His approbation of the appearance of the Troops on Wednesday last, being the anniversary of St. George's day.

GENERAL ORDER,

HEAD QUARTERS,
Quebec, 24th April, 1824.

The formation and appearance of the Troops in Garrison yesterday in honor of His Majesty's birth day, call upon the Commander of the Forces to express in General Orders his unqualified approbation to all Officers commanding.

His Excellency feels it incumbent upon him to notice in a particular manner, the Volunteer Troop of Cavalry, commanded by Major Bell—the Artillery Company, by Lieutenant Cringan—the Rifle Company, by Captain Dunn—The Grenadiers and Light Infantry of the 3d Battalion of Quebec Militia, by Captains Casy and Melvin respectively—their appearance in Line with His Majesty's Troops, completely drilled, and admirably appointed during the three last months, bore ample testimony of their zeal and spirit.

The Governor in Chief is delighted in seeing such Corps formed in the cities of this Province—they do honour to the country—they do honour to those who have stepped forward and shewn the good example to young men—they unite all classes of Society and lead to general happiness. These are the motives of the Governor in Chief in promoting and encouraging the Volunteer Corps—and His Excellency has peculiar pleasure in offering this record of His approbation, and thanks to the Officers above named.

By Command
Of His Lordship the Commander in Chief.
And Commander of the Forces,

Mr. WALSH from the Committee to wait on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with the Address of the House of Assembly, relative to the Internal Navigation of the Province, reported delivering the same, and that His Excellency had been pleased thereto to make the following reply.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

The circumstances represented in Your Address with relation to the Navigation Laws generally, have at various times engaged my attention, and have recently more especially been pressed upon the consideration of His Majesty's Government.

Those persons in particular, who have suffered under the provisions of the Navigation Acts, and whom I have found it out of my power to relieve, have been repeatedly instructed by me to submit their cases to His Majesty, and have had the most explicit assurance that I could recommend them to the most favourable consideration.

With respect to any change which may appear expedient in the future regulation of our Trade, His Majesty's Government is already in possession of my sentiments, and if the House of Assembly think it expedient to address His Majesty on the subject, I will not fail to transmit their representation. The Resolutions you have now brought before me, will, of course form a part of the Journals of your House, and as such, will necessarily be forwarded in the regular manner to His Majesty's Government.

Mr WILMOT moved that the House should concur in the request of the Honourable the Legislative Councillor for a conference on the subject matter of the Serjeant at Arms Pension Bill.

Which was carried, and Messrs. Willson of Wentworth Burwell, Kerr & Wilmot were ordered as a Committee for that purpose.

The Joint Addresses on the subject of the Boundary Line were then read

Mr. NICHOL moved, that the Joint Address of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly to His Majesty on the subject of the Boundary Line, also the Address to His Excellency the Lieut Governor, praying His Excellency to transmit the same, sent down from the Legislative Council for concurrence, might be concurred in.

Which was carried, and the Addresses were signed by the Speaker as follows:

To the King's Most, Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN.

WE, Your Majesty's Dutiful & Loyal Subjects the Legislative Council, and House of Assembly of the Province of U. Canada, in Provincial Parliament Assembled, most humbly beg leave to approach Your Majesty's Royal Person, and to submit to Your Majesty our humble representations on matters deeply affecting the interests of Your Majesty's faithful Subjects, inhabiting the Provinces of Canada

WE, with all humility, represent to Your Majesty, that in the year 1822 a public instrument issued from the Department of State of the U States of America, as the award of the Commissioners under the Treaty of Ghent for ascertaining the Boundary Line between U. Canada, and the said U. States; by which an Island called Barnhart's Island, which from the Conquest and Cession of Canada had been occupied by Your Majesty's Subjects and under Your Majesty's Dominions, was declared to be a part of, and within the Territory of the U. States, and that in conformity to that declaration, the State of New York has exercised Jurisdiction by executing legal process therein.

WE also with all humility represent to Your Majesty, That Barnhart's Island approaches to within an hundred and thirty yards of the Canadian Shore, and that by its relinquishment the United States of America, have obtained possession of all the Navigable Channels of the St. Lawrence, in that portion of its course, and that Your Majesty's faithful Subjects have been cut off from all communication by water with Lower Canada, unless by passing through the Territories of a Foreign Power.

WE are at a loss, may it please your Majesty, to conceive upon what principle a decision could have been made, which was to confine thereafter to one Nation, the only Navigable Channels of one of the Noblest Rivers in the World, whose waters, where they form the Boundary, had hitherto afforded equal advantages to Navigation to both; but it is nevertheless true, that the boundary line has been asserted to, includes within the Territories of the United States, the only deep and safe channel in that part of the River, and that it is wholly impracticable for rafts of timber, staves and other Lumber, which are among the principal exports of Upper Canada, to be floated to the only Markets which are open to them, by the shallow, dangerous and intricate channel on the north side of Barnhart's Island, even were it ceded exclusively to Your Majesty.

We will not, may it please Your Majesty, weaken our representation, or impute the hazard of committing Injustice, by ascribing motives to your Majesty's Commissioners, but we feel ourselves impelled to declare, that no person acquainted with the Localities of the Island ceded, and supposed as we are with the importance, in a national point of view, of those advantages, of which its Cession will deprive us, could have failed to insist on its being retained by Your Majesty.

While suffering from this unfortunate error on the part of your Majesty's Commissioners, our anxieties have been again awakened by having seen in a message sent by the President to the Congress of the United States, an intimation that a negotiation is now pending between that Government and Your Majesty for procuring for its subjects, the free Navigation of the River St. Lawrence to the Ocean.

We entreat Your Majesty to believe that we would not intentionally offend Your Majesty by obtruding our forebodings of the unhappy consequences which in our opinion, would flow from the recognition of this claim, but our feelings and interests are too deeply involved in the result, to permit us to withhold from Your Majesty the apprehensions we entertain.

We feel, Most Gracious Sovereign, That the admission of the Subjects of the United States, to the free Navigation of the River St. Lawrence to the Ocean would be most ruinous to British Interests, would endanger our connection with Your Majesty's Empire, would injure to an incalculable extent, our Commerce and Revenues, and would, by admitting a direct Trade under a foreign flag, not allowed to British Subjects, facilitate the illicit introduction of Foreign Merchandize, and afford to the Subjects of a Foreign State advantages, not enjoyed by Your Majesty's Canadian Subjects, for which the restitution of Barnhart's Island, and the free Navigation of the South Channel of the St Lawrence, valuable as we admit those objects to be, and particularly interesting as they are to ourselves, would not in our opinion be an adequate compensation.

We therefore most humbly and earnestly implore Your Majesty, to take those our humble representations into Your Majesty's most gracious consideration, and to direct Your Majesty to direct the attention of Your Majesty's Ministers during the Negotiation said to be depending to such measures as may effectually secure the present and future Interests of your Majesty's Canadian Subjects.

To His Excellency SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

The Legislative Council and House of Assembly in Provincial Parliament Assembled, have agreed on a Joint Address to His Majesty, praying that our Most Gracious Sovereign would be pleased to take into consideration the unhappy situation in which His Majesty's Subjects of this Province are placed by the award of the Commissioners, for ascertaining the Boundary Line between Upper Canada, and the United States of America, which renders it impossible for them to transport their principal exports to the Sea, without passing through the Territory of a Foreign Power, and to beseech His Majesty to direct the attention of His Majesty's Ministers, during the negotiation said to be pending to such measures as may effectually secure the present and future Interests of His Majesty's Canadian Subjects.

They therefore entreat, that Your Excellency will be pleased to move their Address to His Majesty to be laid at the foot of the throne.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come—GREETING:

WHEREAS by Proclamation bearing date the Fifth day of June, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventeen, our trusty and well beloved FRANCIS GORE, Esquire, late our Lieutenant Governor of our Province of Upper Canada, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, and by virtue of the Authority in him vested in that behalf did declare and appoint the Port of Ernestown, otherwise commonly called the Port of Bath, within the Midland District of this Province, to be a Port of Entry and Clearance for all Goods and Merchandize, not being entirely prohibited and for the payment of all Duties, liable to be paid on all Goods and Merchandize brought into this Province from the United States of America.

AND WHEREAS by a certain Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, passed in the Third Year of our Reign, entitled, "An Act to Regulate the Trade of the Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, and for other purposes relating to the said Provinces," it is among other things Enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the Governor Lieutenant Governor, or person Administering the Government of either of our said Provinces respectively, by and with the advice and consent of the Executive Council thereof for the time being, from time to time to diminish or increase, by Proclamation, the number of Ports or places, which then were, or thereafter might be, appointed in such Province for the Entry of Goods, Wares, and Commodities, imported from the United States of America.

Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces thereto, at York, this Twentieth day of March, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty four, and in the Fifth Year of our Reign.

NOTICE is therefore given to those Persons who hold Licences of Occupation for any of the said Glebe Lots, that the same will not be Renewed; and unless they do make application, by Petition, for Leases in the usual manner, through the medium of the Corporation for superintending the Clergy Reserves, before the Twenty-ninth day of September next ensuing, the Lots so held by Licence of Occupation will be Leased to other Applicants.

Executive Council Office York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or the Representatives, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from the date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

Executive Council Chamber, York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration for the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one reason seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, {
York, February 7th 1821. {

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Ticket a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment thereof with of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office, {
York, 7th Nov. 1821. {

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS

OF THE

COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late War, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

If elected, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 25th, 1824. }

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU have taken it for granted, I trust, that it I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament. I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and a hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that should strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

WHEN I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken; and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my past period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be not such as you approve, it would be uncandid to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is necessarily to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I FEEL that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service:—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue; but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have found in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should wave considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

WITH a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
JNO. B. ROBINSON.

MAY 12th, 1824.

TO THE FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

It appears that, because I have thought proper to stop the insertion of my Address in the Newspapers of this place, several persons, and amongst them the Editor of the Observer, have presumed to say that I have declined the Election! Be assured I am not about to desert the Station I hold, but by your Election of another in my stead, which, from what I understand of your general wishes on the subject, I have little reason to apprehend.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your Faithful Servant,
W. W. BALDWIN.

Editorial Commentary.

WE regret exceedingly, that we have not room this week to insert the splendid oration of MR. CANNING in the House of Commons, on the principles and practice of the Slave Trade, which reflects the highest honour upon him, as a Christian and Philosopher, as well as a Statesman; equal, perhaps, to any of those splendid luminaries which have surrounded the throne of Great Britain ever since the glorious revolution of 1688. Whilst the energies of our great empire are directed by such hands, we can have but little to fear for her prosperity at home, or for her influence and power abroad.

Some further, and interesting, particulars relative to the melancholy death of COLONEL NICHOL have appeared in the Niagara Sentinel; but, as the short account given in our last contains the main facts, we shall reserve these more minute particulars for the CHRONICLE which forms an important section of the CANADIAN ANNUAL REGISTER.

It gives us great satisfaction again to return our thanks, thus publicly, to the patriotic societies of Delaware and Burford, for the liberal support which they have given to the work just mentioned—From Delaware alone we have received a list of 28 Subscribers; and, from Burford, one of 18 Subscribers. When it is considered how thinly settled those parts of the country are, in comparison with the Districts to the eastward of the metropolis, the encouragement thus given to a great national work is a strong proof of enlightened mind, and an advanced state of society and civilization.—We are informed that at the single Post Office of Burford from 48 to 50 newspapers are taken weekly, and not long since the number amounted to 60! A very few years ago that entire neighbourhood was covered with the primeval forest!!—May the blessings of Divine Providence continue to rest on the labours of individuals so meritorious as those who have thus brought the "desart to blossom as the rose."

As to the CANADIAN ANNUAL REGISTER, itself; we have only to say, that a very few more instances of patronage, like those we have taken occasion to record, will enable us to put the work to press.

We have to thank our correspondent, Mr. K——p——k, in Lanark, for his kind offer, and beg to say, that we shall take every care of the MSS. should he favour us with their perusal and return them the first favourable opportunity. As to the mode of conveyance, probably it might be well to choose some private hand, in order to avoid unnecessary expence in the carriage.

THE particulars relative to Port Hope harbour are unavoidably postponed.

In addition to what we have given in the body of our paper, relative to the Perth Riots, we extract the following from the last Montreal Herald, just received:—

"TOWNSHIP OF RAMSAY RIOTS.—In a further Communication from our PERTH Correspondent, it is stated, that "the Magistrates who had accompanied the under Sheriff to Ramsay on Saturday last, returned on Monday evening, bringing nineteen prisoners, along with them. The under Sheriff remained behind for the purpose of apprehending, if possible, some of the most notorious offenders who had eluded the vigilance of the Magistrates. I am sorry to add, that this business has not been executed without bloodshed.—Resistance having been made and the party under the Magistrates being fired upon from a hut where a number of the Irish emigrants had assembled, evidently for the worst of purposes, the fire was returned in self defence, and one of the emigrants was shot dead and several others wounded. To shew you the general feeling which prevails in this quarter relative to this unfortunate occurrence, almost the whole of the male population of the eighth concession of Drummond, made their appearance in Perth, at a late hour last night, with an offer of their services to the Magistrates on any duty to which they might appoint them. They were thanked for their zeal; but as circumstances did not call for immediate aid, they required quietly and orderly to their respective homes. Much praise is due to Colonel Marshall, Dr. Thom, and Mr. Graham, the Magistrates who accompanied the party who went to apprehend the rioters, as well as to the under Sheriff. (the Sheriff being confined by severe indisposition) and the party under his charge, for the judicious zeal evinced on this trying occasion."

As the idea long since not only occurred to us, but was actually made the foundation of a new Legislative Constitution, in a manuscript now in our possession,

We feel considerable interest in repeating the following Rumour, just received from Quebec :—

UNION.

A Rumour has been in circulation for a few days past, that it was the intention of His Majesty's Ministers to submit to Parliament a Union of all the British Provinces in North America, and to place at their head a Royal Duke as Vice roy. This project, we suppose, is a substitute for the Union of the Legislatures of Upper and Lower Canada, which, notwithstanding all that had been said to the contrary, was not thought of being revived by Ministers up to the end of March.—Mr. Neilson's Gaz.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

DEATH OF MR SCARLETT.—We are sorry to announce that accounts have reached town of the death of Mr. Scarlett, the eminent King's Counsel, and Member of Parliament for Peterborough. He died at York, yesterday morning (25th) where he was attending his professional duties.

FRANCE.—The Speech of the King of France on opening the sitting of the Chambers, alludes to the state of South America in guarded terms; and expresses a determination to make the duration of the Chambers septennial.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL'S motion respecting the French occupation of Spain, failed on the 18th March without a division.

SLAVE TRADE.—The National Intelligencer informs us, that the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, respecting the slave trade, (mentioned in Mr. Canning's Speech,) was actually signed at London, on the 13th instant, between Mr. Rush, on the part of the United States, and Mr. Stratford Canning and Mr. Huskisson, Commissioners for that purpose, on the part of the British Government. The Treaty, it is said, has arrived at Washington, and it is probable will be before the Senate, for its decision thereon, during the present Session of Congress.

SLAVERY IN THE WEST INDIES.—Earl Bathurst in the Lords, and Mr. Canning in the Commons, have introduced this subject. The following are the provisions for the amelioration of the Slave condition :

1. The use of the whip is to be utterly abolished in regard of female slaves.

2. The whip is to be no longer borne by the driver in the field; to be no longer employed as a summary punishment of the male Negroes; to be wholly laid aside as a stimulus to labour, and restored to only as a chastisement for misbehaviour, deliberately proved and recorded.

3. A simple provision is to be made for the religious instruction of the Negroes, by the appointment of two Bishops, with regular Clergy under them.

4. Marriage is to be encouraged, families never to be separated, and the property of the slave is to be protected by positive law.

5. Means are to be established, in which the slave may deposite his earnings; the money so placed to be sacred, in all cases from the masters' grasp.

6. The testimony of slaves, under certain limitations depending on personal character, is to be received in all civil cases except when the master's immediate interests are concerned, and in all criminal cases, except when the life of a white person is involved.

7. The slave who has acquired a certain sum of money is to have the power of purchasing his own manumission, or that of his wife or child; and thus the father may become the instrument of liberty to his offspring.

With respect to the Slave Trade, the French Government had agreed to admit a mutual right of search, if the punishment was to be made severe.—The American Government had formerly made the trade piracy, and now had admitted a mutual right of search; by which British ships might visit American as well as British ships, should be sent for condemnation to a British Tribunal, and American ships to a tribunal of their own country men.

CHINA TRADE.—Accounts have been received from China, by which it is learned that the differences between the East India Company and the Chinese authorities had been adjusted, and the ships homeward bound had taken in their loading.

FROM BERMUDA.—The editor of the Baltimore Federal Gazette, has received Bermuda papers to the 31st of April. The difficulties between Governor Lumley and the House of Assembly have increased. The new members not only manifest feelings similar to those which governed the former Assembly, but having drawn up and unanimously adopted resolutions, which amount to an impeachment of His Excellency's conduct and integrity, ratify many acts of tyranny and oppression, they consider as resorting and to proceed with the public business until they obtained redress from the British Government. In a message composed in a like spirit, they communicated their resolutions to the Governor, to which he returned an angry reply, denying the truth of some of the charges, and as to the others, declaring it to be incompatible with the dignity of his situation to enter upon explanation." The editor of the Bermuda Gazette then takes up the subject with great ability, fastening many of the charges upon Sir William by the production of documents and facts, shewing how, at the same time, that he his faults or delinquencies under his administration.

CARLILE.—It is said, that Richard Carlile, who is confined in Dorchester gaol, has of late exhibited such symptoms of mental derangement, that on one occasion, it was deemed necessary to handcuff him for some time.

ALEPPO.—A volcano is said to have broken out in the centre of the town of Aleppo, in Syria, which afterwards turned into a Lake.

MATTHEW'S "AT HOME."—It "at home" again in London, and has opened his budget of American wonders. The description of the African Theatricals excited great mirth.

RAISING A CAPITAL.—About fifty years back, two young fellows, brothers, went to Jamaica; they were by trade black smiths. Finding soon after their arrival, that they could do no thing without a little money to begin with, but that with 60 or 70l. they might be able to realize a fortune, they hit upon the following novel and ingenious expedient. One of them stripped the other naked, shaved him close and blacked him from head to foot.—He—over—ony—being—performed, he took him to one of the negro dealers, who was so well pleased with the appearance of sale; and he prided himself much upon the purchase, supposing him to be the finest negro on the island. The same evening, this manufactured negro made his escape to his brother, washed himself clean, and resumed his former appearance. Rewards were then in vain offered in handbills, pursuit was eluded, and discovery, by care and precaution, rendered it impracticable.—They returned to England not many years since, with a fortune of 20,000l.—Previous however, to their departure from the island, they waited upon the gentlemen, from whom they had received the money, and recalling the circumstances of the negro to his recollection, paid him both the principal and interest.

MAHOMET'S COFFIN.—One of the most celebrated wonders of the East, is the suspension of Mahomet's coffin, by the Attraction of magnets. The following description of the situation in which this curiosity stood in 1804, from the pen of an enterprising American traveller, Mr. Anderson, whose travels are as yet (1820) unpublished. The vault is in Medina, and situated contiguous to the grand Mosque through which, and two inferior buildings, termed majets the passage leads to the vault, the entrance into which is by a small door or aperture, arched at the top in a stone wall seven or eight feet thick. The vault inside is round, likewise arched at the top, although octagon without; the size in the interior about nine feet wide, and ten to eleven feet high without aperture to admit light, the loss of which is supplied by lamps which are constantly burning. At the top of the dome or arch is inserted a square dove coloured stone or slab of marble, into which is inserted another a stone of dark brownish hue, round about seven or eight inches in diameter, and probably eighteen inches in length, projecting downwards. At the centre of the floor, which is of stone, there is a pile of marble tables or slabs, about eighteen or twenty inches square, and two feet high; into the top of one of which is inserted a similar stone to the one just described as at the top, projecting downwards: its diameter, however, does not exceed three inches. From the stone at the top projects, on the right and left, two rods apparently of iron, extending to the side walls, at their extreme height, where the arch springs, thence down the side walls to about midway, where it curves off towards the centre of the whole space inside the vault. At the end of these rods are bulbs resembling a four pound shot, black or dark brown but not rusty; between these four points, but detached from all, stands erect a box or coffin, four feet and a half long, by eighteen inches square, how thick, or of what metal Mr. A. does not pretend to say, but thinks it probable it is steel washed with some composition, as its appearance was white, but not polished. At either end of the coffin or box, was a half round knob of a similar appearance to those on the ends of the rods. The ends of the rods come not immediately opposite to the centre of the coffin, but somewhat below it.

Mr. Anderson, when at Medina, was given to understand, that although he was not the only European who had visited the vault, he was the first christian traveller who was permitted actually to enter the interior.

The vault is open only on particular days, and few even of the religion of the country, are permitted to approach nearer than the grand Mosque, from which through the aperture already described, the visitors have an opportunity of seeing the coffin. But Mr. A's curiosity was not easily gratified. A number of impediments were in the way he surmounted them all, and when in the interior, actually passed his sword at either side of the coffin, which very sensibly vibrated as the steel approached it.

COLOMBIA.

The Bogota Gazette of the 14th March, contains an account of the arrival of the British Commissioners to the Colombian Republic, at that capital, and of their interview with the Vice President, which we here insert, as it tends to elucidate the views of Great Britain towards South America."

"The day after the arrival of the Commissioners from His Britannic Majesty at the Capital, they waited on the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and expressed their satisfaction at the state of the country. On the third they again visited him, and delivered a letter from Mr. Secretary Canning, accrediting them as mediatorial agents or Commissioners, from His Britannic Majesty to the Government of Colombia. Being acknowledged by the Vice President in this character, they solicited on the 6th, to be presented to his Excellency, which was done on the 8th, at half-past 11 in the morning. At this hour the Secretary for Foreign Affairs conducted them to the Audience Hall, where they were introduced to H. E. the Vice President, who was accompanied by the other Secretaries of State, and various general officers. On being presented, Col. Hamilton, Chief of the Commission, addressed the Vice President in the following manner :—

"Sir,—It is my ardent desire that the Commission sent by the King of England to the Republic of Colombia, be productive of the means of establishing a firm and solid alliance between the two countries. Their mutual interests demand this treaty, and I confess I see no obstacle towards the attainment of this desirable object. I must acknowledge, that at present but little is known in England of South America, that region in which nature has been so generous, and I may say, lavish of her most precious gifts—where are found in abundance all the productions peculiar to the tropics, and the greater part of those belonging to the temperate climates of Europe; but I E. will allow me to assure you, that the British nation is not ignorant of the sacrifices already made by the Colombian people, nor of the valor and resolution manifested by the Colombian army, in a most bloody and arduous war, by which they have obtained freedom from an oppressive slavery. I can confidently assert that the British people feel the most lively interest for the welfare and prosperity of Colombia—permit me likewise to declare, that I participate to the fullest extent, in their generous sentiments.

"It is said, Sir, that France wishes to assist Spain in reconquering these countries. Let not the people of Colombia entertain the least apprehension of such an invasion, because in Great Britain they will find a constant and firm friend. I have the honor to present to Y. E. on the part of H. B. M. a snuff box, in testimony of his esteem."

His Excellency the Vice President answered with expressions of the highest consideration towards the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and esteem towards the nation.

"This important commission," he said, "entrusted to persons so estimable, must necessarily produce the greatest advantage to Colombia, and to the interests of Great Britain. The sacrifices of the Colombians have been crowned by victory, and the assurances of friendship which you now offer us, merit our particular gratitude. The Republic has never sought for enemies, who by keeping us in a state of warfare, obstruct the progress of our happiness; but if Spain should still find in France or any other power, allies and coadjutors, desirous of interrupting that internal peace which we have acquired at the expence of so much blood, and so many sacrifices, the resolution and constancy of the Colombians will not be less firm than that which they have shewn for the last 14 years, in their struggle with Spain—The constitution prohibits me from receiving presents from any foreign King or Prince: permit me, gentlemen, to express the sentiments of my heart for this mark of esteem from the King of Great Britain, until Congress consent that I accept it."

"The ceremony ended, the commissioners remained a long time in conversation with the Vice President and other persons in the hall; during which His Excellency bestowed great eulogium on Mr. Canning, who, he said, merited not only the gratitude of Colombia, but of all South America.—This interview has inspired us with the hope that we shall soon see established between Colombia and Great Britain, the most intimate relations of friendship and harmony, and we anticipate from this connexion the most favorable results for the cause of South America, so long afflicted by a bloody and disastrous war."

PERSIA.

Accounts from Constantinople to February 12, contradict the report of Peace having been ratified with Persia, and state that the Turkish army had recently been completely defeated in the neighbourhood of Bagdad.

ALGIERS.

Letters have been received from our squadron at Algiers (off Marseilles) dated March 2, which state, that the Dey had renewed his engagements with Admiral Sir Harry Neale not to make Christian but slaves, and to abide by the treaty made with Lord Exmouth. Sir H Neale was, in consequence, about to return to Malta, with the Revenge, Naiad, &c.

INTERESTING FROM OTAHEITE

A letter dated Otaheite, the 13th of May last, contains the following statement—

"The Isle of Otaheite is now so different from what it was in the time of Captain Cook, in 1767, that it is impossible for me to give you a complete idea in so short a letter, written in all haste. The Missionaries have totally changed the direction of the morals and customs of the inhabitants. Idolatry exists no longer; Christianity is generally adopted The women now behave with extraordinary reserve; they no longer go on board the ships, and even on land it is impossible to form with them the least connexion, the least attachment. Marriages are contracted as in Europe—even the king can have but one wife The practice of destroying children and human sacrifices, no longer take place. Almost all the inhabitants can write and read; they all have religious books written in their language, and printed in the Island.

Sixty-six magnificent churches have been built, and twice a week, the people go in great devotion to hear the preacher. Individuals are often seen taking notes with pencil on paper, of the most interesting passages of the sermon

The Missionaries yearly convoke at Papaeo the whole of the population, which amounts to 7000 souls. This assembly is at present holden. There is now a discussion going on respecting a new code of laws, and the principal Chiefs of the nation assemble the Tribunal, and speak for whole hours with a vehemence truly extraordinary.

About two months ago the Isle of Otaheite declared itself independent of England; it on y recognizes its Missionaries. A frigate bearing a white star in the upper corner, is now mounted on the point which Bougainville named Point Venus.

GREECE.

Information was received by way of Trieste from Missolonghi to February 6, at which time it was stated the Greek army had been divided into battalions, according to the English custom, and was undergoing the discipline of European troops.—Many of the chief Chiefs were assembled at Missolonghi, and instructions had been given for introducing the modern tactics into every part of the service. The utmost harmony prevailed, and a plan was digested for the operations of the next campaign. The presence of Lord Byron had instilled unanimity in their councils, and he had, by universal acclamation, been declared a citizen of Greece. His poem, The Triumph of Hellas, had been translated into Greek.

A paper dated Constantinople, January 2, says, "The Sultan seems determined to double his efforts for the new campaign against the Greek insurgents.

Tranquility with Russia is established; and the army of observation which was stationed on the Danube is left disposable. The fleet is fitting; and 80 Ortas of the Janissaries are to march to the Morea :—but it is said that they refuse to proceed, unless the oriflumme of Mahomet is displayed, and the Grand Vizier march at their head. It is added that the Captain Pacha will command the land forces and Reschid Mehmet Pacha the fleet."

The provinces of Moldavia and Wallachia are perfectly tranquil.

Lord Byron has put on a Greek uniform, and marched at the head of a Greek corps against Lepanto.

IRELAND.

We regret exceedingly, (says the Dublin Evening Post, of the 23d of March,) to state that disturbances in Limerick, Cork, and Kilkenny, continue. We will not say that they are alarming, but certainly they are of a nature that must inflict pain on every man who has a regard for this miserable country, and its wretched inhabitants, to whatever rank or class they may belong. In Killorrery, (Cork,) a murder has been committed on a man named Sullivan. Near Buttevant, in the same county, the house of Mr. Ilward, a farmer, was burnt. In Tipperary, near New Inn, a man named Conway had his scull fractured, of which he died. We have already mentioned the murder of Mr Marum, in Kilkenny. By a misprint it was stated that his son had shared the same fate: the latter was wounded, but is recovering. At or near Callaw, however, in the same county, one Long, a process server, who endeavoured to levy tithes, was murder d on the same day. In Limerick they are continuing to arrest, under the Insurrection Act. Sixteen men were taken up, on the 20th instant, in Kilmeady, in this county.

Irish Catholics.—The Aggregate Meeting of the Irish Catholics was held on Friday last, at Dublin; Sir Thomas Esmonde, Bart. in the chair; when resolutions were unanimously agreed to, in condemnation of the injustice of the penal code, as it affected the Catholic bodyand all its branches.

Disturbances were beginning to wear a serious aspect in the county of Limerick, Ireland Mr. Read, a barrister, had been killed, and several houses robbed of arms.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

For the Weekly Register.

Fare thee well! fare thee well! unlock all the treasure
They cannot heart contains, and with rapture inspire;
May blessings attend thee, unmixed, without measure,
And sorrow and pain at thy presence retire.

Fare thee well! fare thee well! no fortune can sever
The tie that enchains this fond bosom to thine;
Not its wild and its fitful moments can never
Chill the warmth of affection that glows with mine.

O yes! though I bound o'er the foam crested billow,
Each thought will be sweet that is wafted to thee;
Every sweet would I sleep 'neath a far distant willow,
Should'st thou cherish one fond recollection of me.

Fare thee well! o'er these moments shall memory linger,
Their sweet hours shall ever be Love's magic finger
To those exquisite tones shall vibrate,
Point, and say that such blessings awalt me at last

IMPORTANT LAW CASE.

Mr. Uniacke, Attorney General for the Crown, commenced by stating that the learned Gentleman who had opened the case had called upon the Law Officers of the Crown for information on constitutional questions which they were not disposed to give, nor was it necessary that they should do so. He proceeded to say that by the Governor's commission, there was a general clause authorizing him to do all acts necessary for the administration of his Government. He then entered fully into the powers and authority of the Governor in Chief. He also referred to several cases which he suggested to the Governor in Chief, as precedents went on to shew, that the applicant was not entitled to a mandamus; he quoted Bacon's Abridgement 496, to shew that mandamus; he quoted Bacon's Abridgement 496, to shew that more than no legal action or otherwise, unless the right be clearly shewn, then it is granted. Comyn's digest, 6 vol. 324. Viner, 15

These authorities shewed that most clearly that a mandamus cannot be granted where there was another remedy. The learned Attorney General then observed, that the applicant was not entitled to the injunction as to the mandamus, unless a title were obtained by the applicant, to the (14 Viner 422. 8) which title obtained by the applicant, to the exclusive right of selling his paper the Quebec Gazette, he had not shewn; he said he did not see why a person could not open his door the same sign that he chose, that the case would have nor did he see any thing illegal in that, that the case would have been different had the Quebec Gazette, published by D. Fuller, been printed on the same kind of paper and with similar type. He referred to the case of Rex and Harris, 7 Durnford and East. The learned Attorney General concluded by observing that the question had not been stated at all he guarded.

how the application was to be granted, and with much force and Mr. Stuart, resumed the argument, and with much force and energy contended, that the great Constitutional questions to which he had referred, and upon which he had relied, had not been touched by the Crown Officers, as he had a right to suppose they would have done, but they had confined themselves entirely questions upon which the decision of the case must eventually be proceeded to state, that the Governor in Chief had attributed to himself not only an Executive, but a Judicial authority also, by determining upon the construction upon which was to be given to the ordinance of 85—that the advertising of Sheriff's Sales was a Judicial proceeding forming an essential part of the absolute imperfection or nonfeasance of the sheriff; that if this officer were not to be considered as the servant of the Court, and under its immediate control, but as an officer under the immediate superintendance of the Executive, there was no mode of obtaining one; for, if the Courts of Justice had not that construction upon the ordinance of 85 which has been put to it by the Governor in Chief, or had misdirected that officer in any particular by which any individual might be benefitted, the party aggrieved had the benefit of an appeal to the Provincial Court of Appeals. And from that to His Majesty in his Privy Council, whereas, in the other case he had not. The learned gentleman, that in matters of description, the slightest variance was fatal, so much so, that by the addition of the words, "By Authority," he constituted a different paper, and that an advertisement published in the Quebec Gazette might be altered by the Sheriff. He concluded by some general observations on the importance of the question, and the injury likely to result from its remaining undetermined; and after having sat down, he rose instantly, and begged to be informed by their honors, if they or any of them had previously given their opinions on the subject as Members of the Executive Council, upon which his Honor the Chief Justice observed that he knew they were under oath and could not answer such a question. Mr Stuart then said that that was a satisfactory answer.

The Court then adjourned. QUEBEC, APRIL 22.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH.

The April Session of this Court terminated on Tuesday last.

No Judgment was given on the Motion at the instance of Samuel Neilson, for an Injunction restraining J. C. Fisher, King's Printer, from publishing in a paper lately issued, entitled the Quebec Gazette, and published by authority of the Sheriff a Advertisement required by the Ordinance of 1785 to be published in The Quebec Gazette; nor that for issuing a Mandamus to the Sheriff, ordering him to publish his advertisements according to Law. His Honor the Chief Justice stated, that as the case involved questions of great importance, the Court had found it necessary to defer giving its judgment before the ensuing Term in June next

THE PERTH RIOT.

(From the Montreal Herald.)

RIOT.—Our Correspondent in Perth, Upper Canada, writes to us as follows :—I regret to have occasion to communicate a disagreeable occurrence which took place between the Irish Emigrants and the Scotch Emigrants who are settled in this neighbourhood. The Irish Emigrants who arrived in this settlement last season under the auspices of Government, and superintendence of the Hon. and the Rev. Peter Robinson, are carrying their resentments to extremities almost to battle, are carrying their resentments to extremities almost to battle, are carrying their resentments to extremities almost to battle turned, and an immediate rush made upon them. One of the rioters was killed on the spot, and upwards of twenty taken prisoners, a number of whom were wounded. Two of the under Sheriff's party were slightly wounded. The prisoners, with the exception of four or five, who escaped on the way, were conducted to Perth, where after an examination, ten of them were committed to Gaol, on various charges, and the remainder discharged.

The Emigrants settled in that part of the Country where the riot took place, are represented as being in a state of great alarm; many of whom do not think it prudent to lodge in their own houses at night, but either collect together in parties for mutual defence, or secret themselves in their out buildings and other places.

Movements of the Military.

Orders have been received for the relief of the 1st Battalion, 60th Regt. by the 71st or Highland Light Infantry. The 60th is to be re-landed at Kingston by the 27th Regt. now in the Garrison of Quebec. The 71st have been for some time past stationed in Ireland, and are expected to arrive in this country about the middle of July.

The first division of the 37th Regiment will embark for Kingston early in June His Excellency the Commander in Chief will inspect the Regt. on the 20th inst.

The 98th Regiment of Foot is ordered to march from Manchester to this town, to embark for Halifax. In order to replace the 2d Battalion of the 60th (Royal American) Regiment, which is ordered to proceed from that station to the Windward & Leeward Islands.

SMOKING ACCIDENT.—On the 20th April a melancholy circumstance took place at New Longueil, L. C.—A woman of the name of Greenleaf, while sitting by her own fire side, was suddenly deprived of her senses by an apoplectic fit; she fell into the fire; no assistance was at hand but that of her helpless children, (none over eight years of age) whose weak endeavours could not save their parent from perishing in the flames before them.

LOVERS LEAP.—On Saturday last, a man supposed to be from Ireland, stopped at Pointe Claire; he appeared much dejected, and told the landlady that he was trouble-d in his mind in consequence of having been disappointed in obtaining a young girl as his wife, whose parents refused their consent to the union, which he observed, would deprive him of his senses.—At St. Anns he was found in the Church by the beadle, who kept him in custody after the service on Sunday when he was discharged. On Monday he departed from the house of one St. Luc, and proceeded to the river, and in pursuance of several previous plunged in head foremost, and notwithstanding the exertions almost immediately made to save him, he was drowned.—This unfortunate victim appeared to be about 30 years old, about 5 feet 4 or 6 inches high, stout made, fair complexion with black hair.—He was dressed in a blue coat, yellow vest, with black stripes, pantaloons of a blueish colour, flannel drawers, and a shirt of Canadian flannel, with a black silk handkerchief. Those articles are left at the house of Captain Lalonde, near Point a Gouett. There were no documents about him by which his name could be ascertained.

JOURNALS OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,

SATURDAY, 17th JANUARY, 1824.

To His Excellency SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WE, Your Majesty's Dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Legislative Council and Commons House of Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament Assembled, have agreed on an humble Address to His Majesty, to convey to His Majesty the humble and dutiful expression of our gratitude for His Majesty's most gracious and benevolent consideration for the sufferers from the Late War, as evinced in the munificent donation of the sum of Fifty Seven Thousand Pounds directed by His Majesty to be distributed among them, also to express our humble hope that His Majesty will view the measures we have adopted for their further indemnity as the most expedient, and as a proof of our readiness to comply with His Majesty's gracious intimation respecting them.

Also humbly to entreat the continuation of His Majesty's most gracious protection to this most deserving class of His Majesty's Subjects.

Which Address we pray Your Excellency to transmit, with our humble duty, to be laid at His Majesty's Feet.

SPEAKER.

Legislative Council Chamber, 16th January, 1824.

LEVIUS P. SHERWOOD,

Commons House of Assembly, 17th Jan. 1824.

The Joint Addresses on the Subject of the Tobacco Trade of this Province were then read.

Mr. NICHOL moved that the Joint Address to His Majesty from the Legislative Council and House of Assembly on the culture of Tobacco, sent down from the Hon. the Legislative Council for concurrence, also the Address to the Lieutenant Governor, praying His Excellency to transmit the same, might be concurred in.

Which was carried, and the Addresses were signed by the Speaker, and are as follows:

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WE, Your Majesty's Dutiful & Loyal Subjects, the Legislative Council, and Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament Assembled, humbly beg leave to represent,

That the Western Districts of U. Canada, though highly favoured in regard to climate and soil, are from their remote situation and the consequent difficulty and expense of transporting their Bread Stuffs and other principal productions to market, subject to great disadvantages in comparison with the other portions of the Province.

That these disadvantages increasing greatly the inconvenience and loss resulting from the uncertainty of a profitable market for those Staples, have necessarily occasioned a depreciation in their value, and have checked the Agricultural and Commercial prosperity of those particular sections of the Province.

That actual experiment has proved that the climate and soil of the Western Districts are generally well adapted to the Culture of Tobacco, which being an Article of greater value, in proportion to its bulk, than the ordinary productions of the Province, and consequently better able to bear the charge of transportation to Market, would be cultivated extensively by the Inhabitants of those Districts, if they were encouraged by the certainty of a remunerating price.

That it has been satisfactorily ascertained, That the Tobacco of Upper Canada, from its being cultivated by a free, instead of a slave Population, from its less easy access to market, and from other causes, cannot be introduced into great Britain so as to compete with the same article imported from the United States of America, if both are admitted for consumption upon the same terms; But Your Majesty's Petitioners have good reason to believe that if an abatement inconsiderable in proportion were made in the excise duty imposed in Great Britain upon Tobacco produced in Upper Canada, when taken out of the Warehouse for consumption, it would lead to its general cultivation in the Western Districts of this Province.

Your Majesty's Petitioners beg leave respectfully to represent to Your Majesty, that encouragement on the part of the parent State would induce the rapid population of those remote sections of Upper Canada, which require some peculiar advantage to compensate for their distance from Market; that it would add most materially to the strength and value of the Colony, by the introduction of capital, and the impulse it would afford to general improvement; and that it would necessarily tend to enable a much greater portion of its Inhabitants to become profitable consumers of the Manufactures of Great Britain.

Your Majesty's Petitioners are encouraged by these considerations, to indulge the hope that an expectation which Your Majesty's Subjects have ventured to form of a benefit which must be attended with such important results will, by Your Majesty's gracious intercession, be happily realized.

WM. DUMMER POWELL,
SPEAKER.

Legislative Council Chamber, 16th January 1824.

LEVIUS P. SHERWOOD,
SPEAKER.

Commons House of Assembly, 17th Jan. 1824.

To His Excellency Sir PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieut. Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein. &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

The Legislative Council and House of Assembly in Provincial Parliament Assembled, have concurred in certain Resolutions respecting the culture of Tobacco in the Western Districts of this Province, and have concurred in a Joint Address to His Majesty, praying that our Most Gracious Sovereign, in consideration of the difficulties and expense of transporting that Article to Great Britain, would be pleased to recommend such abatement in the excise duty imposed upon Tobacco produced in Upper Canada, as to His Majesty may seem meet.

They therefore entreat, That Your Excellency will be pleased to cause their Address to His Majesty, and Resolutions, to be laid at the foot of the Throne.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration falling, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Cl'k. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.
PRESENT:
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Cl'k Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 25th, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU have taken it for granted, I trust, that if I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament, I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and a hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that should strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

WHEN I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken; and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my past period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be [illegible] such as you approve, it would be uncandid to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is never likely to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I FEEL that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service;—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue, but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have found in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should wave considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

WITH a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
JNO. B. ROBINSON.

MAY 12th, 1824.

TO THE FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

It appears that, because I have thought proper to stop the insertion of my Address in the Newspapers of this place, several persons, and amongst them the Editor of the Observer, have presumed to say that I have declined the Election! Be assured I am not about to desert the Station I hold, but by your Election of another in my stead, which, from what I understand of your general wishes on the subject, I have little reason to apprehend.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your Faithful Servant,
W. W. BALDWIN.

Editorial Commentary.

SINCE our last, we have received the first number of a new work to be published weekly, (ostensibly at Queenston, but in reality at Lewiston) entitled the "COLONIAL ADVOCATE" edited by Wm. Lyon Mackenzie Esquire; and to be conducted, professedly, on a but are called independent principles.

THE opinions formed of Newspapers, and their writers, have been nearly as various as their characters. The JULIUS says, to write news in its perfection requires such a combination of qualities, that a man completely fitted for the task is not always to be found. In SIR HENRY WOTTON'S jocular definition, "an ambassador is said to be a man of virtue sent abroad to tell lies for the advantage of his country; a news writer is a man of virtue, who writes lies at home for his own profit."—To these compositions is required *neither genius nor knowledge, neither industry nor upright*ness; but CONTEMPT OF SHAME, and INDIFFERENCE TO TRUTH are absolutely necessary.—He who by a long familiarity with infamy has obtained these qualities, may confidently tell to-day what he intends to contradict tomorrow; he may affirm fearlessly what he knows that he shall be obliged to recant, and may write letters from Washington, New York, or Lewiston, to himself.

THE original object, beyond all doubt, was the communication of political news; but, as Dr. KNOX, emphatically declares, "in the gratification of party resentment and as the tools of faction, many of them have displayed a foul mass of falsehood, malignity, and POLLY; such personal calumny and detraction, as degrades human nature, and could only have been expected from the agency of infernal spirits supplying the Press of a Pandemonium!

NEVERTHELESS, adds the learned Doctor, with all their imperfections on their heads, Newspapers are upon the whole the best bulwarks of our liberty, and the surest defence of the helpless against the proud man's contumely and the oppressor's wrong. They sound the alarm bell throughout an empire, and no influence is great enough to stifle the sound, before the people examine into its cause.—Let us bear all their evils, rather than endanger the liberty of the Press.

So say we, and a few skip-jack imps from the Pandemonium of Democracy into the bargain.—But we must be allowed to brush away any little dirt that may be squirted upon our garments as they splash along, according to old DRAYTON,

> "Thorough water, thorough fire,
> Thorough brake, thorough briar,
> Thorough muck, thorough mire!",

In this instance the dirt will be removed with all due gentleness, and humanity, in consideration of the smallness of the offender.—But, to be a little more serious, and having, in reality, some personal respect for the Editor of the said "ADVOCATE" —who, we hope, is not quite so far gone as he appears to be, we are desirous of passing as favourable a critique on his bantling, at its debut, as our sense of duty will permit;—at the same time, we should be greatly wanting in the obligation we owe to the Public,—to the Executive of this Province.—and, to ourselves, were we wholly to overlook the very extraordinary course which this Independent Editor has thought proper to dopt at his very outset.

HE begins, (no doubt with a view of striking a panic into his rivals or adversaries on the stage of Politics in this Country,) by placing himself in a really striking attitude, dealing out sans ceremonie, a tremendous, palpable, hit—a positive facer—to DR FISHER; and, a sort of back-handed tip (though luckily without drawing any claret, whatever may be the quantum of black strap that may flow in consequence,) to our most noble selves.—Now this is battling and kicking, at the same time, with a vengeance; and, in a manner which the laws of honourable warfare by no means permit, being what is termed foul-play—as foul, indeed, is the game intended to be played, if a sufficiency of "niller" can be had to carry on the war.

BEFORE we make a few animadversions on the discrepancies and cacoëthes of this formidable denouncer of feeble knights, and Squires, however, we cannot help expressing a little surprise that, (being so great a Democrat himself!) he should have forgot ten to name, in the list of Yankee Worthies to whom he wishes to dedicate his lucubrations, the greatest Democrat in the United States, and the one who will, in all probability, soonest have it in his power to reward the services thus commenced at Queenston—otherwise Lewiston.—We allude to GENERAL JACKSON, who has a fair chance of succeeding to the Presidency of the land of Democrats and confused politics.—This omission is certainly an unlucky one for so acute and erudite a scribbler;—for, who knows that, had his memory been a little more faithful to his principles, and he had dedicated this bantling of his to the MURDERER OF ARBUTHNOT and AMBRISTER, (in the event of the said Murderer's accession to the Presidency) Messrs Gales & Seaton might not have been routed from Washington, and this redoubtable damagogue of Queenston, otherwise Lewiston, placed on the throne of "National Intelligence"!

BEFORE we go further we have also to inquire by what route the "ADVOCATE" is to be conveyed to SIR THOMAS BRISBANE, and its Australasian reader [illegible] as our own ambition may hereafter lead us to desire a circulation equally as extensive, when the confines of these Provinces shall be found too narrow for the usefulness of our labours, and the fumes of our fame.—Probably one of Noma's winged broomsticks might be had from Shetland, on which to horse some witchlike courier of the air as a ready bearer of the news: and, as SIR THOMAS is said to be a great lover of Astronomy, he may be agreeably surprised, when contemplating the starry heavens some moony night in the beautiful regions of New Holland, on beholding the novel messenger, descending from the upper regions, laden with dos; atches from our Queen-Lewiston Advocate, after having left a few bundles for the edification of sundry planets in the way.—What brave news for the convicts in Paradise, and the Australasian Gazette!

BUT, again to be serious.—It is exceedingly unfair, to say the least of it, to accuse DR. FISHER with besieging Quebec and our noble Governor in Chief—with American Printers, paper, and types;—and most marvelously inconsiderate and inconsistent is this accusation from a man who is found in the act of invading this Province also with American printers, from an American would-be city—and with American paper, and American types— "All republican agents, animate and inanimate," and with most righteous republican principles into the bargain; and what is worse, all under false colours!—DR. FISHER'S paper did not pretend to be any other than a New York paper.—This paper of mostly, unconnected shake-bag, periods; this unblushing, brazen faced Advocate, affects to be a Queenston and Upper Canadian Paper, whereas it is to all intents and purposes, and radically, a Lewiston and genu-ine Yankee paper.—How can this man of truth, this pure and holy reformer and regenerator of the unhappy and prostrate CANADA reconcile such bare-faced an i impudent deception—!

WITH the alleged ultra-royalism of Dr. FISHER, we have nothing to do; though, we may say, that, both when and after, the gentleman was resident in the United States, we have frequently lamented a man of his talents and acquirements, and power of attaining extensive influence, should have occasionally been the advocate of any species of despotism, whether holy or unholy, or of monkish superstition, and Turkish backstairy; which was undoubtedly sometimes the case when touching on the affairs of Greece and Spain.—No Englishman, of all other men, ought to forget that his country stands at the head of enlightened nations, and is ever the staunch advocate of rational freedom, and the steady supporter of those liberal principles, on which BRITISH civil rights and religious toleration are founded. It is, indeed, almost certain, that a faithful regard to existing treaties, and certain commercial interests, alone, prevented Great Britain from taking an open and active part in the Greek and Spanish contests, reasing, as she is ever wont to do, on the side of the injured and oppressed.—Let any one who is desirous of knowing, imbibing, and acting upon the true British, patriotic, enlightened, sentiments of the present day—study the orations of Mr. CANNING!—and he who would please the most generous, illustrious, and liberal, and accomplished, Monarch that ever swayed a septre—GEORGE THE IV. OF ENGLAND, must take some other method than that of becoming the blind tool of caitiff a tal depotism, and what has been of late years termed ultra royalism!

LEAVE we DR. FISHER, however, to fight his own battles, to no wise doubting his capability and prowess, and proceed we more closely to grapple with our new opponent, the Queen-Lewiston, Advocate.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

MS. OF MILTON.—Mr. Peel has announced in the House of Commons, that the manuscript of Milton, recently discovered in the garret of which is to furnish proofs of the truth of the Christian religion, was about to be published under the auspices of the King.

NORTH WEST EXPEDITION.—The Heela and Fury, under Capt. Parry, were to sail from England, on their interesting voyage to the North.—They are to be re-fitted with propelling wheels, to be worked either with a capston or straits, in the transport which is to accompany them thither.

Barbadoes, March 20.

BLOODY BATTLE IN AFRICA.—The brig Elizabeth, which arrived Thursday last from Africa, gives an account of a sanguinary conflict that lately happened between the Ashantees, a very powerful race, and a force composed of about 4000 natives, and others of Cape Coast Castle, an English settlement in that neighborhood. The former had, of late, made frequent incursions for the purpose of plundering the latter territory, and in one of these, had seized a British serjeant, whom they murdered, and afterwards mutilated in a most shocking manner. To avenge this crime, and the insult offered to the English flag, Sir Ch. McCarthy, Governor of Sierra Leone, immediately prepared this expedition, which was formed into three divisions, one of which he commanded, and was accompanied by many merchants as volunteers; before the three parties could form a junction, Sir Charles was intercepted by 10,000 of the Ashantees, whom he fought as long as his ammunition lasted; but being at length overpowered by such an immense number of the foe, he, and those with him, were either massacred or made prisoners; and from the bloodthirsty character of the enemy, it is feared the first of these disasters has befallen them, and under circumstances of aggravated cruelty. Although 14 days had elapsed after the departure of this Expedition, no intelligence of Sir Charles or the Merchants had reached the Cape when the Elizabeth left that coast. It has been surmised, that the Ashantees had been instigated to their late ill conduct by some foreign traders in the neighbouring district, on account of the exertions of the British in intercepting the African Slave Trade.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.—An extract of a letter from Rio Janeiro under date of Feb 21 says:—

"We have in town the King of the Sandwich Islands, on his way to England, and, as is said, thence to the United States. He is accompanied by his Queen, and a suite of ten persons.

TO PREVENT DROWNING.—As every invention that may tend to preserve a fellow creature from destruction is to be prized, we copy from an English paper the following recipe for saving drowning men, which, if it prove as successful as it is simple, will be of incalculable advantage. "A man's hat and pocket handkerchief are all that are necessary. Spread the handkerchief on the ground, and place a hat with the brim upwards in the middle of the handkerchief—then tie the handkerchief over the hat as you would do a bundle, keeping the knots as nearly as possible in the centre of the opening. Now, by seizing the knots with one hand, and keeping the crown of the hat upwards, any person, though unable to swim, may fearlessly plunge into the water with a rope, or any other thing that may be necessary to save the life of a fellow creature."

VICE ROY OF EGYPT.—An account is received by way of Odessa, that Ali Pasha, the enterprising Vice Roy of Egypt, has declared himself independent of the Turkish government. Great consternation was produced at Constantinople by this intelligence. The news was not believed in Paris. The Vice Roy was to have furnished 10,000 troops for the war against the Greeks.

EASTERN MAGNIFICENCE.—Sir John Malcolm, in his late account of Central India, to give us some idea of eastern magnificence, states, that according to respectable testimony, "700 Elephants, in velvet housings, walked at the coronation ceremony of a young prince, through the streets of Mandoo," a city whose magnificent ruins may still be traced over an extent of ground 37 miles in circumference.

ACTION OFF ALGIERS.—An action is said to have taken place off Algiers, between the British frigate Naiad, of 36 guns, and the French Frigate Hermione, of 44 guns. It was occasioned in consequence of the latter attempting to run into Algiers without showing her colours, when she was fired into. A close action ensued, but the French frigate finally hoisted the white flag, and was then permitted to proceed on her voyage.—She suffered severely in men.

THE STONE.—It appears that the French Surgeons have obtained a triumph most honorable for themselves, and most precious to humanity.—Dr. Civiale has succeeded in curing the disorder of the stone without the operation of cutting. His method consists in the introduction of an instrument, which seizes the stone, then crushes it, and reduces it to powder. This ingenious process is far less afflicting, and does not compromise the existence or even the health of patients.—Paris Paper.

ACTING A PART.—In a room full of ladies and gentlemen, a lady requested a gentleman, who was next the fire place, to ring the bell. "I never before," said the gentleman, "heard of acting a part; for once I will try." So saying, he rose, pulled a grid iron from the fire, and scratched the hob. He had requested him to ring the bell; and who was the finest lady in the room, and deliberately put the ring on one of her fingers, saying "it is with much pleasure, indeed, that I obey your orders, and thus ring the Belle."

HUMANE EXTRAORDINARY!—The Duke of Richmond had some capital hunters in Sussex. A monkey who was kept in the same stable was remarkably fond of riding the horses, skipping from one to the other, and teasing the poor animals incessantly. The groom made a complaint to the Duke, who immediately formed a plan to remedy the evil. "If he is so fond of riding, we'll endeavour to give him enough of it." A complete jockey dress was provided for the monkey, and the next time the hounds went out, Jacko in all uniform was strapped on the back of one of the best hunters. The view-hollow being given, away they went through thick and thin, the horse carrying so light a burthen presently left all the company behind. Some of the party passing by a farm house, enquired of a country man whether he had seen the fox. "Aye sure (said the man,) he has gone over yon fallow." "And was there any one up with him?" "Way, yes (said John) there be a little man in a yellow jacket, riding as though the devil be in un. I hope from my heart the young gentleman may'nt meet with a fall, but he rides most monstrous hard."

The experiment had the desired effect; Jacko was sufficiently chaffed by his exercise to make him dislike the sight of a horse or a stable ever afterwards.

From the London Courier, March 20.

DISCHARGE OF CANNON BY STEAM.—Mr. Perkins, whose invention in the engraving of steel, and improvements in the construction of steam-engines are well known, has brought to perfection a branch of art, on which there may be some difference of opinion—that of the more speedy destruction of our species! The fact, we believe is as follows:—Mr. Perkins, while experimenting on the expansive force of Steam, subjected to very elevated temperatures, with the view of applying its power to the purposes of the steam Engine, was very naturally led to investigate its applications in many other departments of art, where great mechanical force was required; and among others, to that of discharging ordinance. We are enabled to give a brief description of the present apparatus; which is constructed with the view of showing the application of steam to this purpose, rather than as a model. A copper pipe of two inches diameter is connected at one extremity with the steam reservoir belonging to Mr. Perkins' improved engine, and at the other end with a chamber formed of metal flanges into this chamber a strong gun barrel is firmly screwed, so as to be perfectly air tight, (and two others connected with it) and extended in a horizontal direction. From the upper portion of the chamber, two pipes or tubes projected about five inches, of sufficient diameter to allow musket bullets to pass freely down, for the purpose of loading or shooting the gun. The steam being laid on the apparatus, nothing more is necessary than to lift the short lever of a sliding valve, when the rush of steam into the chamber instantaneously discharges the bullet through the gun barrel, with a force much greater than o dinary gun powder. The bullets being received against an iron target, are completely flattened. Mr Perking threw into the gun barrel, before us the apparatus, three or four bullets at a time, which were stopped in the gun barrel more than once, from want of sufficient steam pressure at the moment. But it is obvious this may be avoided by giving any degree of pressure requisite. Mr Perkins has not yet employed a greater power than about 25 atmospheres, though the strength of his apparatus would admit five times that power, if necessary. The apparatus is capable of discharging 100 balls per minute, or in fact, as fast as they can be put into feeders, and the gun barrel made turned in any direction. We believe Messrs. Bolton and Watt made some experiments, many years back, with the view of discharging cannon by steam; but the plan was carried into execution, from some cause with which we are not acquainted.

UNITED STATES.

We wish our limits could have permitted an insertion of the entire piece, of which the following is a paragraph, as it is a fine illustration of the gratitude of democrats and republicans!

The editor of the Baltimore Morning Chronicle thus gives vent to his indignation at the late act that stigmatized the N. York legislature.

It will be recorded to the scandal of New-York legislation, that at the very time when that state was reaping the rich reward brought about by that glorious consummation of enlightened industry, laborious perseverance and gigantic genius, at the time while the wealth of the continent found an outlet to the ocean, by the assistance of the Hudson, when all the other members of the vast confederated political family gazed with admiration on the project, De Witt Clinton, the man whose genius planned and executed this magnificent and stupendous design, was hurled by the legislature of New York, from his office, as an object unworthy of popular confidence. His enemies could be no otherwise consistent with themselves, than to receive the benefits that he bestowed, and then turn their benefactor out of office; it is the only way in which they are able to testify their sense of the obligation.—It would be a curious point of enquiry, what the value of the estates of these gentlemen legislators was, both before, and after, the formation of this canal; to what amount they had arisen, in consequence of De Witt Clinton's labors—for, in proportion to the amount of such benefit, would they naturally be anxious to sting and bite the hand of their benefactor—their sense of gratitude knows of no other mode of requital. This thing will not remain circumscribed by the local limits of New-York,—the waves of the Atlantic are wafting the shameful intelligence to Europe already; that De Witt Clinton, projected and accomplished the great Western Canal—that he received no public reward, other than legislative ingratitude for his services, will shortly be told in the cabinets of kings, emperors and princes. But the subject is not to sleep here—all the better feelings of man, all that enobles and adorns our common nature, without distinction or party, will be arrayed on the other side of the question. This deed will be regarded as a stigma on the American name, as a reproach on the age in which we live? But could any thing better be anticipated from legislators of this stamp, men who solemnly pledged themselves to restore to the people their electoral rights, and then so magnanimously turned their backs upon their own promises—men who had made themselves the slaves of a mean and miserable caucus at Washington, and in the dirty work of corruption and venality, were content to do the humble drudgery of apprentices—men who were not even allowed to sin, according to their own free will and pleasure? No! their parts were given out by the Crawford caucus; they waited until they knew what point of honour and faith, they were commanded to violate.

From the British Traveller.

PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE.

Paris, Jan. 7th, 1824.

THEY who imagine that the threat of the American President as to European interference in the neighbouring Commonwealths, is a mere brutum fulmen, do not, at least, find participators in the Royalist Coffeehouses and Saloons of Paris, nor in the Columns of the fanatic and Ultra Journals.—La Scelerat! le Revolutionaire! Quelle insolence de parler de la sorte!—Such are the exclamations that accompany any reference to that document, and which instantly make the impartial hearer conclude, that something must have happened highly conducive to the welfare and happiness of mankind.—Nothing, certainly, could have been better timed, or of deeper consequence in its probable results, than this public declaration. England has already announced her determination to prevent any attempts at crushing South American Independence, except on the part of Spain, which, in the utter imbecility of that besotted Government, is tantamount to a general prohibition; and we now see the United States manifesting a disposition to unite with her in the same generous policy. It is always delightful to behold any approximation between these two free and kindred countries—the Britain of Europe and that of America; but it is peculiarly animating at the present moment, when the politician, who carefully watches the signs of the times, to catch from them glimpses of futurity, may draw pleasant prophecies as to the ultimate fate of the world, from the smallest communion of interests in these two powers. It is not improbable that this common recognition, and identity of views as to South America, may eventually lead to an intimate union with them, to a confederacy, in short, of all the Constitutional Governments and free countries in the world—to an alliance which might, without sacrilege and hypocrisy, be indeed termed Holy, against that monstrous and liberticided league which has usurped its name.

This would be a truly glorious spectacle—the good principle emballed against the evil one; light, liberty and religion, enrolled against darkness, slavery, and superstition; and to this conclusion must it indisputably come at last. As has generally been the case, the free States would then be the maritime ones, and dependant as Europe has become from her luxuries, as well as commercial habits, upon America and Asia, she will always be controlled by those who have the command of the sea. England, in the last war, with a navel force never exceeding a hundred and forty thousand seamen and marines, blockaded every enemy's port in the four quarters of the world, and was victorious upon every sea. Suppose her in alliance with the United States, and the Independent Governments of South America—imagine a combined fleet, with a few thousand English troops on board, stationed between the two combustible Peninsulas of Spain and Italy—and a proclamation issued from Great Britain, as the head of the confederacy, promising its support to what ever country would hoist the standard of revolt against the Holy Alliance, and she would presently set in motion the elements of a moral earthquake, which would simultaneously shake down the crowns and sceptres from the tyrants, bigots, and dotards who wear them, and give a total regeneration to Europe.

GOURLAY, AND THE FORTY OLD WOMEN OF WILY.

Petition of Robert Gourlay and forty Old Women of Wily to the House of Commons, praying it to ameliorate their condition, and to put them, so far as it regards the possession of Land, Pigs, Poultry, and other things, on an equal footing with the Negro Wench Slaves in the West Indies.

To the Honorable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, the Petition of Robert Gourlay and Female Parishioners of Wily, in Wiltshire,

Humbly showeth,

That the men of Wily have again and again, during the last nine years, petitioned your honourable house in order that the condition of labourers may be ameliorated. That during last Session, three of their petitions were ordered to be printed (8th, 19th, and 27th, June, 1823,) and to these your petitioners would at this time refer.

That the women of Wily have hitherto refrained from publickly joining in prayer for this purpose; but, understanding that negro slaves have become special favourites with certain Members of Parliament, and that an appeal had been made to the religion, justice and humanity of the inhabitants of the British Empire, in their behalf, they no longer think it improper, even for females to petition your Honourable House. That your petitioners have learned that Negroe slaves have not only a sufficiency of land allowed them, free of charges, for the growth of provisions, but twenty six days of each year, besides Sundays and holidays, for the cultivation of the same:—That Negroe slaves are not obliged to work more hours a-day than English labourers, and do not perform, in an equal period of time, nearly so much work:—That Negroe slaves are not only able to bring up their children, but encouraged to marry and have large families:—That Negroe slaves rear quantities of pigs and poultry, not only for their own use, but for sale; and that, with industry and frugality, they may possess sufficient means to purchase up, were they permitted, their children's freedom.

That during the last fifteen years, the condition of Negroe slaves has been improved, in many respects, while that of English labourers has become notoriously worse. That formerly it was not usual for English women to be subjected to hard labour, out of doors, during inclement weather; but now, some of your petitioners are obliged, even in winter, to spread manure in the fields, to pick stones for the roads, and do other work ill befitting the female frame, and manifestly at variance with the design of PROVIDENCE.

That your petitioner, Robert Gourlay, has lately conversed with women of Compton, a neighbouring parish, who are now, and have long been, employed in repairing the public roads, and who receive only sixpence a-day for this employment:—That he has heard their sad complaints and anxious desire for milder treatment.

That on the 19th day of the present month of February, while the air was chilly in the extreme, and the ground thickly wreathed over with snow, he, the said Robert Gourlay, travelling in Wiltshire, on the road from London to Bath, saw women spreading earth on the pastures, women planting beans in the dirty ploughed fields; and, in one place of the high way, six women together breaking stones for its repair.

That your petitioners have seen the report from the Select Committee on the employment of the poor, in Ireland, and particularly page 132, where the Countess of Glengall declares, that "The people under the better sort of farmers are worse off than any of the slaves in the West Indies." And your petitioners, from their own experience in the parish of Wily are too well assured that this declaration may be perfectly correct and true.

Your petitioners, therefore, most earnestly entreat, that before the charity of your Honourable House is entirely expended on Negroe Slaves, you will think of doing justice to English labourers, and more especially to females:—That you will appoint, without delay, a Commission to visit Wily Parish to inquire into the actual condition of the labouring poor, now truly deplorable; so that facts may be better known, and effectual means contrived for relief and improvement; they also entreat that this petition may be printed for more ready perusal by any Committee, Commission, or Board appointed for the consideration of this subject, and they will ever pray.

(Signed by R. GOURLAY, & Forty Women of Wily.)

HORTICULTURE.

As we are satisfied the Peach Tree may be cultivated with success in various parts of CANADA, where it has not yet been tried;— we give the following valuable observations, on the best mode of culture, from the Commercial Advertiser, to be continued in our next.

ED.

ON THE CULTURE OF PEACH TREES.—We recommend to the attention of the public, the following Essay on the cultivation of the Peach Tree. It is written by a practical Horticulturalist, who has an extensive and flourishing nursery of the choicest kinds of this delicious fruit.

For the Commercial Advertiser.

PEACH TREES.

Several considerations seem to render any correct information respecting the successful cultivation of the Peach Tree, a subject of considerable importance. It is a fruit universally admired, and its cultivation here for many years past has generally been very unsuccessful. Various opinions have been entertained as to the deleterious causes which have so universally obstructed the successful culture of this delightful Fruit; and it would be no difficult task to exhibit the erroneous doctrines to long and so widely propagated, respecting the sadly deteriorated state of our peach trees. That melancholy term, "the yellows," and the still more frightful bugbear of "the maggot," with all the evils arising therefrom, have been multiplied into insurmountable obstacles; and the misguided cultivators, directing their sole attention to the discovery of some particular application for the counteracting of these evils, appear to have altogether overlooked the true and radical cause of the failure of the peach tree. This, like every other vegetable, is liable to disease from the inclemency of seasons, from the attacks of insects, and other external violence, from the want of proper nutriment, and lastly, by that natural tendency to decay by which the unalterable laws of nature have wisely limited the ordinary period of duration of every thing that lives. The peach tree is of a comparatively short duration, to the pear or apple; and although by budding or grafting, any particular sort may be increased to any amount, yet, as both these operations only extend a continuation of a part of the original plant, its time of duration must terminate; and such are no hesitation in giving it as our opinion, that the late failure of our peach orchards has been more owing to causes arising from the natural termination of the duration of the sorts so long propagated, than from any extraordinary malignancy of disease. If this opinion be correct, there is little wonder to see the long languishing state of our peach orchards, where, instead of adopting that careful and improved mode of culture, calculated to introduce a renovation of the plants, the chief attention has been directed to the cure of evils from which no permanent advantage can ever arise. That our opinion respecting the efficacy of an improved mode of cultivation is correct, will appear from the facts, that where this has been attended to properly, no material injury has been experienced from those diseases, otherwise so widely complained of. It is more than twenty years since I planted out an orchard of peach trees in Greenfield, in Connecticut, for a gentleman in whose employ I then was, and which has never failed, in a single year since, of producing an abundant supply of the finest & most delicious fruit. This gentleman is a most accurate observer, and well skilled in Horticultural subjects —His young trees have been reared from seed of the finest of his fruit, and inoculated from trees in a healthy flourishing state; his orchard is regularly manured, and constantly retained in a high state of cultivation. In the spring of the year 1807, I planted out a peach orchard of about one acre upon this island, within three miles of the City-Hall, and during the nine succeeding years, viz. till the year 1816, not more than six trees died out of the whole—two or three of which were not thrifty when I set them out, but owing to the quality of their fruit, I wished to try them; the others were injured by a heavy storm, when loaded with fruit; and in fact, I had more trouble in preying up limbs to support fruit, than in guarding against infected farina, or pursuing maggots.

POETRY.

BE TRUE TO THEE.

Be true to thee! O yes—the dove
Ne'er for her mate more fondly cried,
Than I for thee, my gentle love,
When thou wert absent from my side.
I gazed around, but saw no eye
So bright as thus beam smilingly;
I listen'd oft, but heard no sigh,
No friendly voice to welcome me.

Be true to thee! O yes, the night
Shall change at once to blushing day,
Ere I forget, in bloom or blight,
The flower that blest my thorny way;
In smiles or tears, in joy or woe,
My heart shall kindly beat for thee;
And e'en in death 'twill still bestow
Its parting gift—Fidelity.

TRADE WITH IRELAND.—Directions have been given by the Board of Trade to place vessels trading between Great Britain and Ireland on the footing of coasters—in compliance with a memorial from the merchants of Dublin.

We can state upon unquestionable authority, and we are the first to make the communication, that it is the intention forthwith to repeal the whole of the Union duties.—Dublin Evening Mail.

BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

On the 12th of March, the House being in Committee on the Supply, after several sums had been voted for the different West India Colonies, £8,229 for the Civil Establishment of Upper Canada, was proposed.

Mr. Hume thought the nature of the Civil Establishment should be known before the House was called upon to destroy the expenses. He had hoped, that after what had been said last year, such a vote would not have been submitted to the House.

Mr. W. Horton stated, that the Colony was poor, though in a progressive state of advancement; two-thirds of the expense was borne by the Colony, which demanded such assistance from England; and the Government had taken every pains in enquiring what reductions could be made.

Mr. Bennet was of opinion that the Colony should maintain its now establishment. The Church Establishment there was a curse rather than a blessing; and the lands belonging to it were in a state of complete barrenness, amidst surrounding fertility.

Mr. W. Horton stated that the Militia Pension List in Upper-Canada, amounted to £4,000 from the expence of the war.

Mr. Bright thought that the Colony should be fostered as a balance to the power of the United States.—He should support the vote.

Mr. Hume would recommend, that within ten years, the Canadas should be declared independent. Upper Canada was no infant Colony, but had existed for more than 40 years. Ministers should see that Lower Canada paid what she owed to Upper, and there would be no need for the present grant. He must divide the Committee, unless he was assured that the grant would be diminished next year, and in the following should wholly cease.

Dr. Lushington had some reasons for knowing a good deal about Upper Canada; and he would not vote with his hon. friend against the grants.

Mr. Bennet would advise his hon. friend not to divide the Committee, as something in the nature of a pledge had been given, that the charge would soon cease.

Mr. Hume would not press a division, as sense the of the Committee appeared against him.

£9,197 was moved for the Civil Establishment of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Hume remarked, that the West India Colonies had been put under very unfair restrictions, to foster the Canadies and Nova Scotia.

£5,194 for the Civil Establishment of New Brunswick, the vote last year having been £6,770.

Mr. Hume stated, that the inhabitants of New Brunswick had offered to defray their own expenses, if they were permitted to appoint their own Officers of Customs; to which Mr. W. Horton replied, that the subject was under consideration.

The sum of £15,552 being moved to defray the charges of the Establishment for propagating the Gospel in Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, New-Brunswick, Prince Edward's Island, and the Cape of Good Hope,—

Mr. Hume objected to this vote as too large. He was not satisfied with the account which this Society gave of the appropriation of their funds. In 1818 they stated, that £50,000 of the money raised on the public was for the building of Schools, and that the buildings had commenced: In 1819, they reported that the buildings were finished, and that there were Scholars in them all: In 1820, on enquiry it turned out, that no Schools were built, nor had they any Scholars, nor did the Society deny the truth of this statement, but excused themselves by saying, the misrepresentation originated in a mistake of their Secretary. Would the House now place a sum of £15,000 to a Society that kept such a Secretary? If religious instruction was necessary in those Colonies, let it be given under the direction of the Government. Considering it as money thrown away, he should oppose the grant altogether.

Mr. W. Horton defended the grant as necessary, and he defended the Society from the charge made by the member for Aberdeen. The Society had done much good by their labours—To stop this grant, would be to stop Religious Education in the Colonies.

Mr. Hume contended that the Colonies would pay for their own religious instruction if there was no disposition to throw money away.—There was Halifax, for instance, a large, populous, and manufacturing place, could not pay their own minister. Why should

...ised towards paying a salary of £400. to the Rev. Mr. Inglis for religious instructions given by him to the people of Halifax?

Mr. Butterworth, so far from diminishing this vote, would readily increase it.

Mr. Bennet thought the Society had acted negligently; he would not oppose the grant of money, but he would oppose its passing through the hands of these individuals.

Mr. Goulburn defended the grant.—The member for Aberdeen was mistaken if he supposed the Clergy in the Colonies were entirely supported by England. No, on the contrary, they had large tracks of barren lands assigned for their support by the Colonies.—(A loud laugh.)

Sir M. W. Ridley wished to know, whether this money was applied to the propagation of the doctrines of the Church Established, or to the spreading of those enthusiastic doctrines which had done so much mischief.

Mr. Goulburn replied, to the Church of England Establishment only.

Mr. Hume said, this was the strongest argument he had heard against the grant.—(Hear, hear!)—By what right were they to tax the Catholics of Ireland or the Dissenters of England, for the education of a different Sect in the Colonies?

Sir T. Ackland said, he was no way surprised at such a remark from the member for Aberdeen, but he trusted that was no objection in the eyes of the majority of the members of the House. The Society was a Royal Chartered Society, bound to the Church of England; and he considered that the withdrawing of this grant without notice, would be injurious to the cause of Religion, and unjust to persons engaged in moral instruction.

Mr. S. Morland was in favour of the grant.

Lord Althorp could have wished to see it pass thro' the hands of Government; but he would rather give it to the Society than not give it at all.

Mr. T. Wilson feared that if the grant was placed at the disposal of the Governors of Colonies, they would be in much more danger of being misled than the Society was.

Mr. Bennet moved, as an amendment, to leave out the words, "to defray the charges of the Society;" this would leave the money in the hands of the Governors.

The Committee divided; for the original resolution 98, for the amendment 19—Majority 79.

JOURNALS OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,

MONDAY, 19th JAN. 1824.

Mr. WILMOT from the Committee, to whom was referred the Contingent Accounts of the present Session, informed the House that the Committee had agreed to a report which he was directed to submit for the adoption of the House.

The Report was ordered to be received and read.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, the House went into Committee of the whole on the Report of the Select Committee on the Contingent Account.

The Chairman reported progress and obtained leave to sit again the same day.

At twelve o'clock the two Houses waited upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the several Joint Addresses of Saturday, and being returned, Mr. Speaker reported the same having been delivered to His Excellency, and that His Excellency had been pleased to make thereto the following replies.

Honourable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen.

I shall not fail to transmit to the proper Department of His Majesty's Government, your Joint Addresses to the King, and your Resolutions respecting the Culture of Tobacco in the Western Districts of this Province.

Hon. Gentlemen, and Gentlemen.

I will on the earliest occasion take the proper means of causing your Joint Address to His Majesty relative to the Boundary Line between this Province and the U. States of America, to be laid at the foot of the Throne.

Hon. Gentlemen, and Gentlemen.

I shall with much pleasure transmit to Earl Bathurst, your Joint Address to the King, expressive of your gratitude for His Majesty's benevolent consideration for the sufferers from the late War.

Hon. Gentlemen, and Gentlemen.

I shall take an early opportunity of transmitting to His Majesty's Government, your Joint Resolutions respecting further indemnity to the Inhabitants of this Province who suffered by the late War, and I shall lose no time in forwarding the same to His Ex'y. the Governor in Chief.

Hon. Gentlemen and Gentlemen.

I shall, in compliance with your request, take an early opportunity of forwarding to His Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, your Joint Address to the King, & the accompanying Report, in order that they may be submitted to His Majesty.

The House went again into Committee on the Report on Contingent Accounts

The Chairman reported that the Committee had agreed to several Resolutions which he was directed to submit for the adoption of the House.

The report was ordered to be received, and the several resolutions were then put and carried as follows:

RESOLVED 1st. That there be granted to the Sergeant at Arms to enable him to pay to John Carey the sum of Twenty Five Pounds to compensate him for continuing the papers to Members for such period beyond the prorogation, as the proceedings of the House of Assembly shall be published therein.

2d. That it is the opinion of this House, that an humble Address be presented to His Excellency the Lieut. Commons House of Assembly, 19th Jan 1824.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, Messrs McMartin and Chisholm were ordered as a committee to wait upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the foregoing Address.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, it was Resolved that the Resolution of the House of Assembly authorising the payment of Postage on the letters addressed to, and sent by Members, should be rescinded.

Mr. McMARTIN from the Committee to wait on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with the Contingent Address of the House, reported delivering the same, and that His Excellency had been pleased to make thereto the following reply.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I shall direct the necessary Warrants to be prepared in compliance with your Address.

At half past two o'clock, P. M. Mr. Lee, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, came to the Bar, and delivered the commands of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the immediate attendance of the House, at the Bar of the Honourable the Legislative Council Chamber, and having withdrawn, Mr. Speaker and the House forthwith proceeded to the Bar of the Honorable the Legislative Council Chamber, where His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, after assenting to the Bills passed by both Houses, with the exception of the Assessment Act, which was left for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, delivered the following most gracious Speech.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

The conclusion of the Public business, which is now disposed of by your unremitted attention, enables me to dispense with your further attendance in Provincial Parliament, but I cannot put an end to this Session without assuring you how fully sensible I am of the judgement and temper which have governed your counsels and given efficacy to your various and extensive labours.

The united Representations which you have Addressed to Your Sovereign, on matters of no ordinary importance to the interests of your Country, afford a gratifying proof of your cordial and zealous co operation in the prosecution of your Legislative duties.

You are sufficiently aware that the measure of success which may attend your petitions, must be governed by a view of various and perhaps conflicting Interests; but it will be no less agreeable to Your Sovereign, than it must be satisfactory to the people of this Province, to observe the vigilant attention with which you have regarded every question that can affect the welfare or security of your Country.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I thank you, in His Majesty's name, for the supplies which you have granted me for the ordinary exigences of the year, and for the prudence you have manifested in guarding against temporary inconvenience to the public service by authorising a loan in anticipation of the payments expected from Quebec; and you may be assured that the repeated testimonies which I have received of your confidence and support, shall continue to be met on my part with a disposition to justify your reliance by a regular & economical administration of the Revenue.

Hon Gentlemen. and Gentlemen.

I am happy to concur with you in affording countenance and support to the first efforts of a spirit of enterprise which has been directed to the improvement of our internal Navigation, and which affords the most pleasing and convincing proof of increasing intelligence and wealth.

The measures by which you propose to render effectual the Acts formerly passed for subjecting all the granted Lands in this Province to a moderate indiscriminating Assessment, have the decided concurrence of my own judgement, and I have reason to believe they will be found perfectly in accord with the opinion of His Majesty's Government, fully convinced of the necessity of some measure to counteract the evils occasioned by unoccupied and neglected lands, and acceding entirely to the principles of the provisions which you have proposed, I have every hope that the reference for His Majesty's consideration which has appeared to me proper, will result in the declaration of the Royal Assent

The provisions you have made for the better collecting of the Revenue and for obtaining a more accurate census of the Population will, I trust, be found effectual.

I entertain an ardent hope that under the protection of divine Providence, the permanent support which you have contributed in your amendments of the Com. Scool Act, to the cause of religious instruction, & the general dissemination of knowledge, will be productive of the happiest effects; such objects the wisest and most virtuous will best appreciate, and the attention you have given to them will confer lasting honor on you.

I cannot refrain from adverting to the present tranquil and happy state of this Province, and pointing out to your observation how materially that harmony and public spirit which have prevailed in the Councils of the Legislature have led to a mutual confidence between the Government and the people, and produced a highly favorable influence, both on the general prosperity and on the contentment and happiness of private life.

You will know how greatly individual security, comfort, and convenience, as well as the whole interior order and economy of a Country depend on the just fulfilment of those ordinary duties which the Law requires, and I am persuaded that in your respective Counties, you will be desirous to impress truths, so important upon the minds of those who look up to your example, or are influenced by your advice.

After which the Hon. the Speaker of the Legislative Council, declared that it was His Excellency's pleasure that the Parliament should be prorogued to Monday the first day of March, and declared the Parliament Prorogued to the said first day of March, to be then and there holden.

PENSION.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the cause of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations?

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.
PRESENT:
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of the date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

Gentlemen,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 25th, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

Gentlemen,

YOU have taken it for granted, I trust, that if I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament, I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and a hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that should strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

When I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken; and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my past period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be not such as you approve, it would be uncandid to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is never likely to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I feel that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service:—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue, but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have found in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should waive considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

With a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
Jno. B. ROBINSON.

May 12th, 1824.

TO THE INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

Electors!

I Have thought necessary to acquaint you to my resolution, in compliance with your proposals, of offer myself at the ensuing Election as one of your Candidates, &c.

I am,
Electors,
Your
Obt. Servant,
JOHN GOESSMAN.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

Vol. III. Our endeavour will be to "stamp the very body of the time—its form and pressure"—we shall eschewate nothing, nor shall we set down aught in malice. No. 23.

THURSDAY, JUNE 3d, 1824.

Editorial Commentary.

An instance of wilful blindness usually raises our indignation in the same proportion that a moral or physical deprivation of sight moves our compassion, and excites our pity. A corrupt or malicious perversion of a manifest truth produces the same effect if honesty is the best policy, candour is equally necessary in the formation of an upright and manly character; and, for his own sake, it is to be lamented that the 'Advocate,' at his very outset, has shown himself equally destitute of both.

None but a licentious democrat, bent on mischief, and lost in the mazes of his own bewilderments, could have so far perverted and misapplied the few lines which he thought proper to quote from one of Mr Fothergill's Addresses to the Electors of the County of Durham:—the passage is this,

"Having experienced many of them in common with you, I know your wants; and, I think, I know some of the deep and latent causes why this fine country has so long languished in a state of comparative stupor, or inactivity, while our more enterprising neighbours are laughing us to scorn. All I desire is an opportunity of attempting the cure of some of the evils we labour under;" &c, &c.

Now, it must be the obvious intent of this passage to shew that Mr. F. conceived the fault to be with the House of Assembly; and, that the evils complained of, were remediable by that branch of the Legislature, if any where, on the well known axiom that all Law is for the people;—from the people;—and, when inefficient, must be remedied or rectified by the people:—and therefore, he was desirous of assisting in the great work. It is impossible he could be such a fool as to suppose the people had the power to place him in the situation, (even as the representative of Majesty,) on which this envious and cruel-hearted Advocate would lay blame that never was attached, or even conceived, by any other than himself:—but,

"Amongst the sons of men how few are known
Who dare be just to merit not their own!
Superior virtue and superior sense
To Knaves and Fools will always give offence."

In Politics, as in Religion, there are undoubtedly sins of omission, as well as of commission, & it has always appeared to us that our Representatives are either generally ignorant of, or know not how to exercise, the power which is vested in them by their constituents.—The people must surely be supposed to know their own wants;—and, for what purpose do their representatives assemble, if it be not to remedy them?—If these Representatives are remiss in their duty, and neglect to do those things which their country requires at their hands—and there alone—is it just—is it manly—is it honest—to lay their errors and omissions on the Executive, which has ever shewn itself, of late years at least, ready to sanction every measure calculated to advance the public interests?—Our road, our canal, our public school, and our wild land assessment bills, fully attest this truth.

But the manner in which this shameless Advocate attempts to calumniate the universally respected and most worthy Representative of our Sovereign, in this Colony, is the most insolent and wretched specimen of a total abandonment of all truth, principle, sense and decorum—we have ever witnessed—Its very extravagance, however, will prove its own antidote; and even as the scorpion, when surrounded by a wall of fire, is said to retire into the centre of its own narrow circle, and there commit a felo de se by the sting of its own tail, so will the venom of this mischievous libeller, of genuine and unaffected worth, recoil on his recreant head.

It is, however, but another and a melancholy instance that no merit, however exalted, can screen its possessor from the assaults of an unprincipled and abandoned plebeian, lost to every sense of propriety, and even to the common decencies of life.—It is an easy matter to throw dirt by those who are near, or in, the kitchen, and which hands are always filthy—The evil spirit and all his agents, in whatever shape they appear, love to mar, or attempt to mar, that beauty and excellence from which they are for ever removed.—One would have thought that if any man could have escaped the virulence of such an assault, it would have been, Sir P. Maitland!

But this Advocate (who has certainly in perfection one of the qualities requisite both in the dock, and at the bar) is singularly unfortunate in his assertions; for, notwithstanding the universal depression which succeeded the late war both in Europe and America—it is notorious, and undeniable, that this country has advanced with more rapid strides in all that constitutes national power—under the present, than any former, Lieutenant Governor; which could not have been the case, had he been that careless and inactive spectator of our wants, which this scurrilous obtainer from all truth would make us believe—Before he wore his flimsy tissue of absurdity and falsehood—he ought at least to have made some inquiry, for at the moment he pretends to an extensive acquaintance with the country, he betrays a most unaccountable ignorance of what is going forward. With ridiculous pomposity and egregious stupidity—he inquires, what road, and what canal, has been commenced in his time? when almost every schoolboy in the Province knows that several canals, and a grand Military road on such a scale as it is probable no British, or any other colony ever will be tried—(and which is exclusively the project of our Lt. Governor,) have not only been planned, but have been in part commenced.

Being limited to a narrow space in these columns we shall not attempt to notice one tenth part of the absurdities crowded into the first number of the Advocate, but shall content ourselves with saying that had his Excellency refused his assent to any measure of importance, or had thrown any obstacle in the way of improvement, this more than half crazy scribling might have had something to howl about, but his own questions sufficiently condemn him, and shew the grossness of an ignorance which is paralleled only by the measure of his impudence:—However, we dare say that His Excellency, Sir P. Maitland—will care as little for the censure of such a creature, as the "amiable misstatement," (by which cognomen this very un amiable democrat condescends to designate the Earl Dalhousie) will value his praise.

The Advocate flatters himself that he is not at his setting out, "in any way obnoxious to the powers that be." We rather think he has either totally mistaken the meaning of the word obnoxious, or that he has very singular notions as to what is likely to make a man so noxious. He further says that he is "sensible" and even "well aware" that "he might have induced Government to bestow sundry good things upon him"—so that it is clearly not "appreciation" which has driven "this wise man mad."—(see P. 15.)

After all, some compassion is due to the unhappy man who can gravely assert that one month, only, of our time is due to the service of Him who, when on earth, not only gave the whole of his—but his precious blood also, for our present and everlasting benefit. After such a confession of faith, it is only fair to conclude that six months of his scribblers time are given to Acts of insanity;—and that only one seventh part of his lines contain either truth or reason.

Why we speak of such, it will solely be in reference to their public acts.—Col. Mag. R. A.

As to this writer's expectations of the conduct to be pursued by Mr. Fothergill, in the event of his obtaining a seat in the House of Assembly, we can assure him that Mr. F.—has as little to do with the likes, dislikes, and base motives of Dr. Hornby as he has with the figures, the tales, and the similitudes of that sensitive and right worthy compounder of pills, and administrator of balsams—and whether within, or without, the bar of that Honourable House, we have no doubt that Mr F.—will be able to go through the fatigues of his duty without the aid of a glass of water, or the ready arms of a brother Æsculapius!

We have now to apologise to our readers for detaining them so long on a subject, to them, perhaps, of little interest.—But the attack which has been made upon the Lieutenant Governor—however puny it may be—appeared to us so unwarrantable and so wholly unprovoked—that we could not resist the feeling which has induced us thus gently to notice it.—We have no desire to waste time in criticising the literary merit of a work which we have no doubt will shortly become defunct. The pale characters of disease and death are already stamped on the countenance of this ink shapen bantling, conceived in iniquity, and brought forth in shame and dishonour, and it would be cruel to add pain to those convulsive throes under which it labours to crawl for a little space, up those fatal heights of Queenston, from whence so many of its country men have been already precipitated at the points of British and Canadian Bayonets!—

We understand a meeting of the Society of "Friends to the Strangers" in distress was held at Sheffield's Hotel, on Friday last, when it was resolved, that a new Subscription be set on foot in aid of the Funds of the Society. It gives us much pleasure to state that the gentlemen deputed to solicit Subscriptions have met with that success which evinces, by the strongest manner, the great liberality of the Inhabitants of York—Indeed we cannot conceive how charity can better be bestowed, than in contributing to the support of an institution which has for its object the relief of Strangers in distress.

The amount of good already done by the Society, since its first formation, has been extensive,—many hundreds of destitute Emigrants of all ages, have partaken of the Bounty; and who but for the timely aid afforded them, must have sunk under the accumulated pressure of poverty and disease.

The Season is at hand, when we may expect the usual visit to our shores of numerous of in Bound Emigrants. To enable the Society to meet the wants of those poor people, and to cover a debt to a considerable amount, due to the Treasurer, are the reasons for proposing the present subscription.

The Subscription List is in the hands of Mr. Allan, where those persons who have not been applied to, have an opportunity of entering their names.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

Mr Scarlett.—Mr. Scarlett, M. P. has recovered from his dangerous illness, after having been Killed in the Newspapers.

Sir George Quentin retires from the 10th Hussars, and receives congés to last day with Lieutenant Colonel Henry Wyndham.

Lord Gifford is appointed Master of the Rolls; and is succeeded by Sir John Copley the Attorney General, as Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

The Expedition Assassinated.—Don Juan Martin, better known as the Empecinado, has been murdered at Roa by a band of Ultras. In consequence of the refusal of the ministers to put him upon his trial.

Slave Trade.—The Slave Trade Piracy Bill was read a third time in the House of Commons, on the 26th of March, & sent to the Lords. Sir J. Mackintosh expressed his entire concurrence in the Bills, and hailed the auspicious treaty, entered into with America, with the most heartfelt satisfaction.

Free Trade.—On the 19th March, Sir James Mackintosh took occasion to say that he most highly approved of all that the Ministers proposed, with respect to the removal of restrictions on commerce, and that "the experience of his whole life, had convinced him that the principles of free trade were the best & surest foundation of the well being of nations, and from year to year he had witnessed the fatal results of a deviation from them."

A debate exceedingly interesting, if not very important, took place on Monday night, in consequence of a complaint of breach of privilege, committed by no less a personage than the Lord Chancellor. The matter of this complaint was certain strong observations made by his Lordship from the Chancery Bench, on a Speech of Mr. Spring-rice's in the House of Commons.

A motion for his levy was lost by a majority of 181 to 80. The friends of the Lord Chancellor wisely forbore his vindication on high grounds, and rested his defence on the warmth of feeling into which he had been inadvertently betrayed by an ill-reported report of the speech of Mr. Abercrombie. Ample justice was done to the character of this gentleman by those who undertook the defence of the Lord Chancellor.

WHISKEY.—Mr. Bartlett, of N. H. during the Tariff debate, moved to impose a duty on Stills. If his object was to raise a revenue, his proposed ways and means were very injudicious; for he ought to know that our Whiskey drinkers would raise another Rebellion if a tax should be put on Whiskey.—A tax of that sort ought never to be imposed, unless adequate provision is made in the bill that it shall be collected without Rebellion or War and Feuders: for it costs an enormous sum of money to march an army into that country to quell revolt. It cost President Washington 2'000 000 dollars to put down GALLATIN'S Rebellion. Whenever we want a snug little war all within ourselves, we have nothing to do but to tax Whiskey—for then will raise a Rebellion as quick as cockatardies will raise a blister. A raise a Rebellion as quick as cockatardies will raise a blister. A tax on Whiskey taxes the people—but it will never raise money.—Salem Gazette.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London to his friend in Boston, dated February 25.

"It is lucky for you that you are out of trade; it never was less prosperous. This is certainly a pleasant place for those fond of novelty. There never were more Lions extant than at present.—We are to have steam frigates, cannon, and all to go by steam. Stage coaches are lighted with gas.—Chickens are hatched by steam in twenty one days. Copper is to last five years on ship's bottoms.—French and German is taught with such rapidity as to enable one to read his Bible in those languages in forty-eight hours. Poor children are to be educated on a new plan, which has such a wonderful effect on their morals, that they will never go astray; and last, though not least, the National Debt is to be paid off. All these discoveries and propositions are now before the public; and you have been long enough on the "fast anchored Isle," to know there is no such thing as humbug here."

JOHNSON THE SMUGGLER.—We hope some clever fellow is collecting materials for the Memoirs of JOHNSON the smuggler, for he is certainly one of the most extraordinary men that ever lived.

PRESENT ESCAPE OF BONAPARTE.—It is not generally known that a vessel was undertaken by Johnson, the smuggler, by the renowned Johnson, the smuggler, for the purpose of liberating Bonaparte from the island of St. Helena. The vessel was about ninety feet long, and the burden of one hundred tons. It was built of half-inch plank; the grain of one half of which was placed in a vertical, and the other in a horizontal position. The planks were so well caulked and cemented together that the thickness of the sides of the vessel did not exceed that of an ordinary washing tub. The masts were so contrived that they could be lowered with the deck, and then the whole vessel might be sunk to about water with the crew on board, without danger. Ample means were provided for supplying the vessel with fresh air. The plan was to sail up at night, within a short distance of St Helena, and sink the vessel until the next or some subsequent night, when Bonaparte would be enabled to make his escape to the beach, at which time the vessel was to be raised, Bonaparte to get on board, and sail away in the dark. It happened however, that Bonaparte died before the vessel was finished; and it is a curious coincidence that she was to be launched the very day the news of his death arrived. Johnson was to have received 40,000*l.* as soon as the vessel had got into blue water, exclusive of the reward to be given in case of service succeeded. This Johnson had previously offered his services to the Admiralty, and affirmed that he could blow up a ship without being hurt. Accordingly, a trial was given him in the Thames, accompanied by a boatswain of one his Majesty's ships, who had been married only a week before, in a boat of a similar construction to the one before described, to a large vessel moored in the middle of the stream. They sunk their boat, made fast the torpedo to the bottom of the barge, and lighted the match. Johnson then perceived that his vessel remained fast, having got (as the sailors express it) his cable athwart hawse of the barge. Upon which he pulled out a knife, and having hacked at it a-half to five. Upon this, the boatswain began to make grievous lamentations—"Oh, my poor dear Nancy!" said the boatswain—"what will she say P—" Johnson—"Damn your blubbering," said Johnson—"Duff your jacket, and be ready to stuff it into the bewsehole while I cut the cable." Upon saying this, Johnson seized an axe, and cut the cable. The boatswain stuffed his jacket into the hole, and they got out of the reach of the torpedo, which blew up the barge.—Morning Herald.

Such is the extent of buildings going on in and about London, that bricks are with difficulty obtained, and contractors who are obliged to complete their work by a given time, have offered 40 to 60 per 1000 above the usual price without being able to obtain them.

AMERICAN LOAN.—Another loan has rather unexpectedly appeared in the London Market, of Two Millions and a half sterling, for the service of the ancient kingdom of Guatimala, or the United Provinces of Central America.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MARCH 29.

Milton.—Literary Discovery

Mr. W. Williams wished to put a question to the Right Hon. Secretary. He understood that a work of the immortal Milton, in the hand writing of one of his nephews, Phillips, had been lately discovered in the State Papers. He was anxious to know whether such a gratifying communication was true, and if true, whether it was (as he hoped) intended to give it to the public? (laugh)

Mr. Secretary Peel—It is true that a work of Milton's in the hand-writing of Phillips, has been discovered by Mr. Lemon amongst the State Papers. It is a work entitled de Dei Cultu, in support of the truths of Christian Religion. It was on its discovery submitted to His Majesty, and the first observation of His Majesty was, "A work of Milton's must be made public." (Hear, hear, continued cheers.) It has since, in furtherance of the Royal decision, been submitted to a competent supervision, and the work will speedily appear.—(Cheers.)

PARRY'S LAST VOYAGE.—Captain Parry's last voyage is published with all the splendid accompaniments of Charts, and Plates.

A FOOT-PAD ATTESTING TO BE SUPERIOR TO A LAWYER.—A lady walking across the fields in the neighbourhood of Islington, observed two very suspicious looking fellows who seemed to be watching an opportunity to rob her. Her alarm was increased by observing a fellow of a similar appearance in a gateway at a little distance from her; but as the case did not admit of hesitation, she boldly walked on to one, and addressed him with an air of confidence:—"Sir, you look like a gentleman; I do not like the appearance of those fellows behind us. I think they intend to rob me! Will you protect me?" "Madam," repeated the man, "I will—take my arm, and I will attend you until you are out of danger; you will see when I wave my handkerchief, the two men will sheer off; they are my companions, and we intended to rob you; but when confidence is reposed in me, I am not scoundrel enough to betray it." He attended until she came in sight of her own house—when she offered him a guinea as a reward for his protection; but he refused it, adding, he hoped he had more honour left than to sink his character to the level of a Lawyer's—"I am above taking a fee."

THE LAIRD OF AUCHINLECK.—It is well known that the Lord Auchinleck had not the greatest partiality, either for the literary labours or the literary character of his son, the Biographer of Johnson. The latter was one day haranguing him upon the happiness of literary men, and concluded by saying, that they went through the world swimmingly. "You don't, Jamie, that a chield does," said the old Judge, "for you see, Jamie, that a chield that's no better than yoursel' was bladders o' wind useth his oaters, than I was puzzens o' gowd."

VAN DIEMAN'S LAND.—By the accounts lately received from this settlement, the farmers were continuing to prosper, and to agree with the country. Every arrival from England brings them the number. Goods are constantly wanted of every kind were however, at moderate prices, and by sheep, and by asellon for less money than their prime cost in Britain. Every warehouse was full, and every ship arriving continued to add to the general glut.

Settlers are recommended to take nothing but specie with them; and to take servants properly indentured for a period of years, under a high penalty in case of breach of bargain. Wages of freemen are enormously high; they will not work under £50 per annum, and most three times a-day, and tea, &c. &c. twice. Ticket of leave-men from the Government were much in demand. Some state. There were many good servants said to be among the convicts. The following were the prices then current:—

Horses	£55 to £100
Bullocks for work, per pair	£36.
Cows	£18 to £20
Heifers	£11 to £15
Ewes	20s. to 30s.
Ewe and Lamb	27s. to 35s.
Beef, per lb.	9d.
Mutton	4s. 6d.
Butter	3s. 0d.
Cheese	2s. 0d.
Oats per bushel	7s. 6d.
Barley	7s. 0d.
Wheat	6s. to 7s. 6d.
Tea, per lb.	5s. 0d.
Sugar	4d.

The acts relating to these fine countries, which received the Royal Assent a short while before the rising of the last Session of Parliament, would not reach them till about October last: consequently the accounts of their beneficial effects upon the country, and thus Government could be known till next arrivals which may be expected in March. Twelve months trial of these salutary laws, it was anticipated, would have the best possible effects upon the whole classes of the people.

CURIOUS FACT.—By placing a candle at thirty degrees from perpendicular, the flame is not encumbered with the wick, and the air that passes by the flame completely destroys the smuff; so that the candle thus placed never wants snuffing, and gives one half more light than when placed in the usual way.

COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE.—We perceive by the advertisements of the day, that two new lines of Packets have just been established by active shipping merchants, to ply regularly between New-York and London, and between New-York and Greenock.

MECHANICAL INGENUITY.—Brom. & Gardner, mechanic, once constituted a clock which was capable of the following surprising attonements:—There was seen on it a negro, a dog, and a shepherd. when the clock struck, the shepherd played six tunes on his flute, and the dog approached and fawned upon him. This clock was exhibited to the king of Spain, who was delighted with it. The gentleness of my dog, said Drom, is the least merit. Let your Majesty touch one of the apples which you see in the shepherd's basket, you will admire the fidelity of the animal. The king took an apple, and the dog flew at his hand and bit it. Having taken an apple, and the dog flew at his hand and bit it. Having taken the bag-dog, which was in the room, began also to bark. At this the courtiers, not doubting that it was an affair of witchcraft, hastily left the room, crossing themselves as they went out. The minister of marine was the only one that ventured to stay. The king having desired him to ask the negro what o'clock it was, the minister obeyed, but he obtained no reply. Drom then observed that the negro had not yet learned Spanish, upon which the minister repeated the question in French, and the black immediately answered it. At this new prodigy the favourite of the minister also forsook him, and he retreated precipitately, declaring that it must be the work of the devil.

Grimm's Year in Europe.

EARTHQUAKE.—A vessel bound into the harbor of St. Thomas, with a cargo of coffee, was sunk on the 20th ult. by a violent shock of an earthquake.

ENGLISH ROMAN CATHOLICS.—The Marquis of Bandshows brought in a Bill to enable the Catholics of England to vote at Elections in the same manner as those of Ireland—read the first time—the noble Marquis then referred to another Bill he meant to introduce, the object of which was to enable the Catholics of England to hold offices upon the same principles with those of Ireland.

CORBETT.—Cobbett has been presented with a silver cup very finely wrought, and of large size, by the owners of one-horse carts, for his zeal in opposing the extortions of the Turnpikemen.

From a late London paper

SINGULAR DETECTION OF A THIEF.—A few days ago a thief was detected in the following singular and judicious manner:—Mr. Thomas——, a respectable cow keeper and dairyman residing at Islington, had a sow pig which produced a large litter of young ones, which for some time she appeared to bring up with all maternal affection: but suddenly one of the swinish family disappeared, and was no where to be found; and as it is known to Naturalists that sows sometimes, notwithstanding their maternal affection, devour their young.—Mr. —— took it for granted that this sow had thus regaled herself, and yet he thought it rather odd, that like the story of the two cats, not even a tail remained, or any trace whatever of the departed sucking. The next night came and with it disappeared another pig—the next night another, and another still, until the latter was minus four of its members, Mr. —— now began to think his sow of too ravenous a disposition to keep any longer, and to save the remainder of the young from a premature death, he sold the sow, litter, and all. The pig stye being now unoccupied, and though he had determined to adopt some profitable use, and accordingly hired it out to the itinerant exhibitor of a bear, and on the very night that the sow and her young quitted it, Bruin entered into possession. About two o'clock the next morning Mr. —— was disturbed by the loud lamentations and moaning of a man in distress, and getting out of bed he proceeded in the direction of the noise, from whence the complaint seemed to come, and pig stye, from whence the complaint seemed to come, and listening for a moment at the door, he soon entered to hear a man, evidently in great pain, say, exclaim, "Oh, for God's sake man, evidently in great pain, say, exclaim, "Oh, for God's sake man, evidently in great pain, say, exclaim, "Oh, for God's sake courtiers attended. Ferdinand did not find much pleasure in the demeanour of these persons; but he derived great enjoyment from that of the inferior servants, whom he treated with the greatest familiarity, and to whom he allowed the most extraordinary liberties. Amongst them was one Chamorro, celebrated as a sort of stupid and vulgar buffoon, who, by his fooleries afforded infinite diversion to Ferdinand, and obtained a sufficient degree of influence with him to dispose of the first offices in the kingdom.

"Ferdinand embittered the final moments of his mother, Maria Louisa, by expressing to her, through the medium of his Ambassador Vargas, an eager desire to get possession of his mother's diamonds, which were both numerous and magnificent. Vargas executed his commission with the indelicacy of a man who is anxious only to please authority, and has no respect for the unfortunate. The Queen objected to give them up; and declared in presence of Cardinal Gonsalvi, and other illustrious personages of the Court of Rome, that the diamonds should not go out of her possession until death; and that she would much sooner throw them into the Tiber, than give them to her son. She did keep them until she breathed her last, but her body was yet warm when Vargas took possession of the desired treasure, carrying his zeal in Ferdinand's service to such an extent, as even to remove from the fingers of the corpse a gold ring of paltry value, which Maria Louisa had signified a wish to take with her to the tomb.

"The execution of the will of the royal parents showed how inflexible Ferdinand can be when he wishes. They fixed considerable pensions on several persons who had been in their service during their exile. These pensions were all sanctioned by Ferdinand, with the exception of those which were bequeathed in favour of individuals who had shown any attachment to Godoy.

"This want of sensibility is one of the most characteristic traits of the present king of Spain. His selflove and pride may be deeply affected, but his heart is never touched. He was affectionately attached to his second wife, Maria Isabel of Braganza; but he was playing at nine-pins when her funeral left the palace, and the following day, there was not the least sign of grief in his countenance. The uncommon fickleness of his imagination prevents any one sentiment from overruling him, or from making any serious impression on his mind. In adversity he was never dejected; when misfortunes of a formidable nature occurred to him, he still knew how to take advantage of all the alleviating circumstances which they produced. It would seem as if he counted with certainty on the combinations of the future, which have so often extricated him from the most imminent dangers.

"Ferdinand is a man of middle stature; his figure is large beyond proportion; his complexion is pale, and his health is frequently interrupted by extremely violent attacks of the gout. To this affliction, and to the infirmities of his youth, he owes a flaccidity of appearance which does not correspond with his age. His features are strongly marked, and rather deformed, though his look wants not animation. His constant custom of smoking segars, which he scarcely ever suspends, gives a bad odour to his breath. The versatility of his features is so great, that the most eminent artists have failed to give a perfect likeness of him. His gestures are lively, and often violent. He speaks in a hurried manner, and all his actions partake of the precipitate character of his conversation. He is subject to no ruling passion. [illegible] the chase, and his only pleasure is in making horse observe his paces. His demeanour towards [illegible] who are intimate with him, goes beyond the bounds of familiarity; and even during the private audiences which he gives to those who are recommended by his favorites, he forgets all etiquette, reclines on a sofa, and smokes, and enters into conversation with strangers. He possesses a very strong memory, and is so deep a dissembler, that he often eludes the observation of those who known him most intimately.

"The events of Ferdinand's life have contributed to increase the defects of his character, and to indulge him to follow, without any reserve, his favourite inclinations. He has been always cast down through his own fault; he has himself always created the germ of those evils which have come upon him; but he has always found a foreign hand to rescue him from every misfortune.

"His hatred of enlightened ideas, and the fear which he entertains of well informed men, are features in his character which have exercised, and will continue to exercise, great influence upon the destinies of Spain. She, unhappily, gives herself up to the most profound ignorance, while all the other communities of England nobly emulate each other in improving the useful sciences. Ferdinand abhors those sciences as dangerous enemies; and although public opinion does not set him down as a devotee, and even supposes him to be sincerely religious, he will always continue to favour fanaticism as the best auxiliary of absolute power, which is the idol of his soul, and the most irresistible of his inclinations."

LAST MOMENTS OF THOMAS PAINE.

(From the New Monthly Magazine.)

MR. EDITOR,

THE subjoined account of the concluding scenes of the life of Thomas Paine was read at a public meeting some weeks ago, by a very respectable member of the Society of Friends, in my hearing. From his Brother I procured this copy of the account. I rather think that William Dilwyn, his daughter, and the young person who visited Paine, and gave the account to Dilwyn's daughter, are of the same Society. As almost the whole world was injured by Paine's pernicious principles, I hope you will not refuse to increase the circulation, as widely as possible, of his recantation.—Wishing you increasing and continued success, I remain, &c. A. B.

THE following is an extract of a letter received by Mr. William Dilwyn, of Walthamstow, Essex, from his Daughter, in America. The writer is of the most unquestionable respectability, and appears recently to have received the information stated in it from a person equally entitled to credit. The latter had resided in a family in the near neighbourhood of the celebrated Thomas Paine, who resided at Greenwich, near New York, and during his last illness, had contributed to his comfort by occasionally preparing and sending him food and refreshments more adapted to his situation than he usually enjoyed. These the informant chose to be the bearer of, (although his personal circumstances were so deplorable that the air of his chamber would scarcely be endured) to his bed-side. In performing this humane office, she had the opportunities of conversation with him, which authorise the Writer's belief, that he exhibited another proof of Dr. Young's assertion, that

"Men may live fools, but fools they cannot die!"

The latter proceeds to say, that she found him frequently writing, and believed, from what she saw and heard, that, when his pain permitted, he was almost always so engaged, or in prayer, in the attitude of which she more than once saw him when he thought himself alone. One day he inquired if she had ever read the "Age of Reason?" and being answered in the affirmative, desired to know her opinion of that book. She replied, that she was but a child when she read it, and probably he would not like to know what she thought of it. Upon which he said, if old enough to read, she was capable of forming some opinion, and from her he expected a candid statement of what that opinion had been. She then said, she thought it the most dangerous and insinuating book she had ever seen—that the more she read, the more she wished to read, and the more she found her mind estranged from all that is good; and that, from a conviction of its evil tendency, she had burnt it, without knowing to whom it belonged. Paine replied to this, that he wished all who had read it had been as wise as she; and added, "If ever this Devil had an agent on earth, I have been one."—At another time, when she was in his chamber, and the master of her family was sitting by his bed-side, one of Paine's former companions came in; but seeing them with him, hastily went out, drawing the door after him with violence, and saying, "Mr. Paine, you have lived like a man, I hope you will die like one." Upon which Paine, turning to his principal visitor, said, "You see what miserable comforters I have."—An unhappy female, who had accompanied him from France, lamented her hard fate, observing, "For his man I have given up my family and friends, my property and religion; judge then of my distress, when he tells me that the principles he has taught me will not bear me out!"

POETRY.

The murder of Duncan King of Scotland, with the ambition and subsequent fate of the usurper Macbeth, form the ground work of Shakespeare's sublime tragedy of that name. The imagery of the enchantments of the North, is introduced with so much judgment and felicity, that it carries the imagination away captive, in despite of reason.—The following small piece will be read with interest by every admirer of that noble play.—

DUNCAN'S WARNING.

RECITATIVE.

As o'er the heath, amid his steel clad Thanes,
The royal Duncan rode in martial pride,
Where, full to view, high tow'rd with gilt'ring vanes,
Macbeth's strong tow'rs o'erhung the mountain's side;

In dusky mantle wrapp'd, a grisly form
Rush'd with a giant stride across the way;
And thus, while howl'd around the rising storm,
In hollow thund'ring accents, pour'd dismay.

SONG.

Stop, O King, thy destin'd course,
Furl thy standard, turn thy horse;
Death bestrides thine onward track,
Come no farther,—quickly back.

Hear'st thou not the raven's croak?
See'st thou not the blasted oak?
Feel'st thou not the loaded sky?
Read thy danger, king, and fly.

Lo! yon castle banners glare
Bloody through the troubled air,
Lo! what apparitions on the roof,
Frowning bid thee stand aloof.

Murder, like an eagle, waits
Perch'd above the gloomy gates,
Just in act to pounce his prey,
Come not near—away, away.

Let not plighted faith beguile
Honour's semblance, beauty's smile
Pierce detraction's venom'd dart
Rankle to the fest'ring heart.

Treason arm'd against thy life,
Points his dagger, whets his knife,
Drugs his stupefying bowl,
Steels his unrelenting soul.

Now 'tis time; ere grisly night
Closes round thee, speed thy flight;
If the threshold once be crost,
Duncan, thou'rt for ever lost.

On he goes! resistless fate
Hastes to fill his mortal date;
Cease, ye warnings! vain tho' true,
Murder'd king, adieu! adieu!

BONOMI BEARING THE CROSS.

A sculpture of the celebrated Bergami has lately been published in Italy, representing him loaded with honours and crosses and under it there is the following very appropriate inscription:—

Nai tempi pin antichi pin feroci
Si appiccavano i ladri sulle croci:
In tempi pin moderni e pin leggiadri
Si appiccavano le croci in sui ladri.

Which may be thus translated into English, though it will of course lose much of its point:

In ancient times the custom was
To hang the rogues upon the cross,
But now the custom is in vogue
To hang the crosses on the rogue.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come—GREETING:

WHEREAS by Proclamation bearing date the Fifth day of June, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventeen, our trusty and well beloved FRANCIS GORE Esquire, late our Lieutenant Governor of our Province of Upper Canada, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, and by virtue of the Authority in him vested in that behalf did declare and appoint the Port of Queenstown, otherwise commonly called the Port of Bath, within the Midland District of this Province, to be a Port of Entry and Clearance for all Goods and Merchandize, not being entirely prohibited and for the payment of all Duties, liable to be paid on all Goods and Merchandize brought into this Province from the United States of America.

York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

JOHN SMALL.
Clk. Ex'e Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration being, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings

REPEATED

and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 8th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Cl'k. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Cl'k Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties. JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Commissioners appointed under the Act passed at the last Session of the Provincial Legislature, entitled, "An Act to provide for the appointment of Commissioners to investigate the claims of certain inhabitants of this Province, for losses sustained by them during the late war with the United States of America, and for other purposes therein mentioned," will meet at the Town of York, on the Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays of each week; commencing on Tuesday next, the 10th instant, for the investigation of such Claims as may be submitted to them.

For the accommodation of individuals concerned, claims duly sworn to by the claimants, before one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, supported, by the affidavit of at least one indifferent person, and accompanied with such documents duly proved as may be necessary to substantiate the same, will, in the first instance be received; but, should it appear essential, the claimants, as well as their respective evidences, will be required to appear personally before the Commissioners, in order to their examination before them upon oath as provided for by the above recited Act.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York, }
February 25th, 1824. }

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU have taken it for granted, I trust, that if I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament, I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and a hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that should strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

WHEN I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken; and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my past period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be not such as you approve, it would be uncandid to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is never likely to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I FEEL that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service:—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue, but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have found in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should wave considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

WITH a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
JNO. B. ROBINSON.

MAY 12th, 1824.

TO THE FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

It appears that, because I have thought proper to stop the insertion of my Address in the Newspapers of this place, several persons, and amongst them the Editor of the Observer, have presumed to say that I have declined the Election! Be assured I am not about to desert the Station I hold, but by your Election of another in my stead, which, from what I understand of your general wishes on the subject, I have little reason to apprehend.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your Faithful Servant,
W. W. BALDWIN.

Editorial Commentary.

SINCE the fact, we have received the first number of a new work to be published weekly, (ostensibly at Queenston, but in reality at Lewiston) entitled the "COLONIAL ADVOCATE" edited by Wm. Lyon Mackenzie Esquire; and to be conducted, protessedly, on what are called Independent principles.

THE opinions formed of Newspapers, and their writers, have been nearly as various as their characters. THE FULER says, to write news in its perfection requires such a combination of qualities, that a man completely fitted for the task is not always to be found. IN SIR HENRY WOTTON'S jocular definition, "an ambassador is said to be a man of virtue sent abroad to tell lies for the advantage of his country; a news writer is a man of virtue, who writes lies at home for his own profit."—To these compositions is required neither genius nor knowledge, neither industry nor uprightness; but CONTEMPT OF SHAME, and INDIFFERENCE TO TRUTH are absolutely necessary.—He who by a long familiarity with them has obtained these qualities, may confidently tell to-day what he intends to contradict tomorrow; he may affirm fearless-ly what he knows that he shall be obliged to recant, and may write letters from Washington, New York, or Lewiston, to himself.

THE original object, beyond all doubt, was the communication of political news; but, as DR. KNOX, emphatically declares, "in the gratification of party resentment and as the tools of faction, many of them have displayed a foul mass of falsehood, malignity, and FOLLY; such personal calumny and detraction, as degrades human nature, and could only have been expected from the agency of infernal spirits supplying the Press of a Pandemonium!

NEVERTHELESS, adds the learned DOCTOR, with all their imperfections on their heads, Newspapers are upon the whole the best bulwarks of our liberty, and the surest defence of the helpless against the proud man's contumely and the oppressor's wrong. They sound the alarm bell throughout an empire, and no influence is great enough to stifle the sound, before the people examine into its cause.—Let us bear all their evils, rather than endanger the liberty of the Press.

So say we, and a few skip-jack imps from the Pandemonium of Democracy into the bargain.—But we must be allowed to brush away any little dirt that may be squirted upon our garments as they splash along, according to old DRAYTON,

> "Thorough water, thorough fire,
> Thorough brake, thorough briar,
> Thorough muck, thorough mire!",

In this instance the dirt will be removed with all due gentleness, and humanity, in consideration of the smallness of the offender.—But, to be a little more serious, and having, in reality, some personal respect for the Editor of the said 'ADVOCATE'—who, we hope, is not quite so far gone as he appears to be, we are desirous of passing as favourable a critique on his bantling, at its debut, as our sense of duty will permit;—at the same time, we should be greatly wanting in the obligation we owe to the Public,—to the Executive of this Province—and, to ourselves, were we wholly to overlook the very extraordinary course which this independent Editor has thought proper to dopt at his very outset.

HE begins, (no doubt with a view of striking a panic into his rivals or adversaries on the stage of Politics in this Country,) by placing himself in a really striking attitude, dealing out sixty cents munia, a tremendous, palpable, hit—a positive facer—to DR. FISHER; and, a sort of back-handed tip (though luckily without drawing any claret, whatever may be the quantum of black strap that may flow in consequence,) to our most noble selves—Now this is butting and kicking, at the same time, with a vengeance; and, in a manner which the laws of honourable warfare by no means permit, being what is termed foul-play, en forul, indeed.

Before we go further we have also to inquire by what route the "ADVOCATE" is to be conveyed to SIR THOMAS BRISBANE, and its Australasian readers!—as our own ambition may hereafter lead us to desire a circulation equally as extensive, when the confines of these Provinces shall be found too narrow for the usefulness of our labours, and the fulness of our fame——Probably one of Norna's winged broomsticks might be had from Shetland, on which to horse some witchlike courier of the air as a ready bearer of the news: and, as SIR THOMAS is said to be a great lover of Astronomy, he may be agreeably surprised, when contemplating the starry heavens some moony night in the beautiful regions of New Holland, on beholding the novel messenger, descending from the upper regions, laden with des; atches from our Queen-Lewiston Advocate, after having left a few bundles for the edification of sundry planets in the way—What brave news for the convicts in Paradise, and the Australasian Gazette!

BUT, again to be serious—It is exceedingly unfair, to say the least of it, to accuse DR. FISHER with besieging Quebec and our noble Governor in Chief—with American Printers, paper, and types;—and most marvelously inconsiderate and inconsistent is this accusation from a man who is found in the act of invading this Province also with American printers, from an American would-be city—and with American paper, and American types—All republican agents, animate and inanimate," and with most righteous republican principles into the bargain; and what is worse, all under false colours!—DR. FISHER'S paper did not pretend to be any other than a New York paper.—This paper of mostly, unconnected shake-bag, periods; this unblushing, brazen faced Advocate, affects to be a Queenston and Upper Canadian Paper, whereas it is to all intents and purposes, and radical Lewiston and genu-ine Yankee paper.—How can this man of truth, this pure and holy reformer and regenerator of the unhappy and prostrate CANADA redouble such bare-faced and impudent deception.—!

WITH the alleged utter-ruption of Dr. FISHER, we have nothing to do; though, we may say that, both when and after, that gentleman was resident in the United States, we have frequently lamented a man of his talents and acquirements, and power of attaining extensive influence, should have occasionally been the advocate of any species of despotism, whether holy or unholy, or of monkish superstition, and Turkish barbarity; which was undoubtedly sometimes the case when touching on the affairs of Greece and Spain.—No Englishman, of all other men, ought to forget that his country stands at the head of enlightened nations, and is ever the staunch advocate of rational freedom, and that, as a ready supporter of the national principles on which her own civil rights and religious toleration are founded. It is, indeed, almost certain, that a faithful regard to existing treaties, and certain commercial interests, alone, prevented Great Britain from taking an open and active part in the Greek and Spanish contests, ranging, as she is ever wont to do, on the side of the injured and oppressed.—Let any one who is desirous of knowing, imbibing, and acting upon the true British, patriotic, enlightened, sentiments of the present day—study the orations of MR. CANNING!—and he who would please the most generous, illustrious, and liberal, and accomplished, Monarch that ever swayed a septre—GEORGE THE IV. OF ENGLAND, must take some other method than that of becoming the blind tool of contin-ental despotism, and what has been of late years termed ultra roy-a-ism!

LEAVE we DR. FISHER, however, to fight his own battles, to no wise doubting his capability and prowess, and proceed we more closely to grapple with our new opponent, the Queen-Lewiston. Advocate.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

MS. OF MILTON.—Mr. Peel has announced in the House of Commons, that the manuscript of Milton, recently discovered, the nature of which is to furnish proofs of the truth of the Christian religion, was about to be published under the auspices of the King.

NORTH WEST EXPEDITION.—The Heela and Fury, under Capt. Parry, were to sail from England, on their interesting voyage to the North.—They are to be re-fitted with propelling wheels, to be worked either with a capstan or straits, in the transport which is to accompany them thither.

Barbadoes, March 29.

BLOODY BATTLE IN AFRICA.—The brig Elizabeth, which arrived Thursday last from Africa, gives an account of a sanguinary conflict that lately happened between the Ashantees, a very powerful race, and a force composed of about 4000 natives, and others of Cape Coast Castle, an English settlement in that neighbourhood. The former had, of late, made frequent incursions for the purpose of plundering the latter territory, and in one of these, had seized a British serjeant, whom they murdered, and afterwards mutilated in a most shocking manner. To avenge this crime, and the insult offered to the English flag, Sir C. MCCarthy, Governor of Sierra Leone, immediately prepared this expedition, which was formed into three divisions, one of which he commanded, and was accompanied by many merchants as volunteers; before the three parties could form a junction, Sir Charles was intercepted by 10,000 of the Ashantees, whom he fought as long as his ammunition lasted; but being at length overpowered by such an immense number of the foe, he, and those with him, were either massacred or made prisoners; and from the bloodthirsty character of the enemy, it is feared the first of these disasters has befallen them, and under circumstances of aggravated cruelty. Although 14 days had elapsed after the departure of this Expedition, no intelligence of Sir Charles or the Merchants had reached the Cape when the Eizabeth left that coast. It has been surmised, that the Ashantees had been instigated to their late ill conduct by some foreign traders in the neighbouring district, on account of the exertions of the British in intercepting the African slave Trade.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.—An extract of a letter from Rio Janeiro under date of Feb 21 says:—

"We have in town the King of the Sandwich Islands, on his way to England, and, as we understand, thence to the United States. He is accompanied by his Queen, and a suite of ten persons.

TO PREVENT DROWNING.—As every invention that may tend to rescue a fellow creature from destruction is to be prized, we copy from an English paper the following recipe for saving drowning men, which, if it prove as successful as it is simple, will be of inestimable advantage. "A man's hat and pocket handkerchief are all that are necessary. Spread the handkerchief on the ground, and place a hat with the brim upwards in the middle of the handkerchief—adhere to the handkerchief over the hat as you would do a bandle, keeping the knots as nearly as possible in the centre of the opening. Now, by seizing the knots with one hand, and keeping the crown of the hat upwards, any person, though unable to swim, may fearlessly plunge into the water with a rope, or any other thing that may be necessary to save the life of a fellow creature."

VICE ROY OF EGYPT.—An account is received by way of Odessa, that Ali Pasha, the enterprising Vice Roy of Egypt, has declared himself independent of the Turkish government. Great consternation was produced at Constantinople by this intelligence. The news was not believed in Paris. The Vice Roy was to have furnished 10,000 troops for the war against the Greeks.

EASTERN MAGNIFICENCE.—Sir John Malcolm, in his late account of Central India, to give us some idea of eastern magnificence, states, that according to respectable testimony, "700 Elephants, in velvet housings, walked at the coronation ceremony of a young prince, through the streets of Mandoo," a city whose magnificent ruins may still be traced over an extent of ground 37 miles in circumference.

ACTION OFF ALGIERS.—An action is said to have taken place off Algiers, between the British frigate Naiad, of 36 guns, and the French Frigate Dromidaire, of 44 guns. It was occasioned in consequence of the latter attempting to run into Algiers without showing her colours, when she was fired into. A close action ensued, but the French frigate finally hoisted the white flag, and was then permitted to proceed on her voyage.—She is said to be terribly in men.

THE STONE.—It appears that the French Surgeons have obtained a triumph most honorable for themselves, and most precious to humanity.—Dr. Civiale has succeeded in curing the disorder of the stone without the operation of cutting. His method consists in the introduction of an instrument, which seizes the stone, then crushes it, and reduces it to powder. This ingenious process is far less afflicting, and does not compromise the existence or even the health of patients.—Paris Paper.

ACTIVE A PUN.—In a room full of ladies and gentlemen, a lady requested a gentleman, who was next the fire place, to ring the bell. 'I never before,' said the gentleman, "heard of acting a pun; for once I will try." So saying, he rose, pulled a gold ring from his finger, approached the lady who had requested him to ring the bell; and who was the finest lady in the room, and deliberately put the ring on one of her fingers, saying "it is with much pleasure, indeed, that I obey your orders, and thus ring the Belle."

HIGHLY AN EXTRAORDINARY!—The Duke of Richmond had some capital hunters in Sussex. A monkey who was kept in the same stable was remarkably fond of riding the horses, skipping from one to the other, and teasing the poor animals incessantly. The groom made a complaint to the Duke, who immediately formed a plan to remedy the evil. "If he is so fond of riding, we'll endeavour to give him enough of it." A complete jockey dress was provided for the monkey, and the next time the hounds went out, jacko in his uniform was strapped on the back of one of the best hunters. The hollow being given, away they went through thick and thin, the horse carrying so light a bur then presently left all the company behind. Some of the party passing by a farm house, enquired of a countryman whether he had seen the fox. "Aye sure (said the man,) he has gone over yon fallow." "And was there any one up with him?" "Why, yes (said John) there be a little man in a yellow jacket, riding as though the devil be in um. Hope from my heart the young gentleman may'nt meet with a fall, but he rides most moustrous hard."

The experiment had the desired effect; jacko was sufficiently chaffed by his exercise to make him dislike the sight of a horse or a stable ever afterwards.

From the London Courier, March 20.

DISCHARGE OF CANNON BY STEAM.—Mr. Perkins, whose inventions in the engraving of steel, and improvements in the construction of steam-engines are well known, has brought to perfection a branch of art, on which there may be some difference of opinion—that of the more speedy destruction of our species! The fact, we believe is as follows:—Mr. Perkins, while experimenting on the expansive force of Steam, subjected to very elevated temperature, with the view of applying its power to the purposes of the steam Engine, was very naturally led to investigate its applications in many other departments of art, where great mechanical force was required; and among others, to that of discharging ordinance. We are enabled to give a brief description of the present apparatus; which is constructed with the view of showing the application of steam to this purpose, rather than as a model. A copper pipe of two inches diameter is connected at one extremity with the steam reservoir belonging to Mr. Perkins' improved engine, and at the other end with a chamber formed of metal flanges; into this chamber a strong gun barrel is firmly screwed, so as to be perfectly air tight, (and two others connected with it) and extended in a horizontal direction. From the upper portion of the chamber, two pipes or tubes projected about fifteen inches, of sufficient diameter to allow musket bullets to pass freely down, for the purpose of loading or shooting the gun. The steam being laid on the apparatus, nothing more is necessary than to let the short lever of a sliding valve, when the rush of steam into the chamber instantaneously discharges the bullet through the gun barrel, with a force much greater than ordinary gun powder. The bullets being received against an iron target, are completely flattened. Mr Perkins threw into the pipe or feeder of the apparatus, three or four bullets at a time, which were stopped in the gun-barrel more than once, from want of sufficient steam pressure at the moment. But it is obvious this may be avoided by giving any degree of pressure requisite. Mr Perkins has not yet employed a greater power than about 25 atmospheres, though the strength of his apparatus would admit five times that power, if necessary. The apparatus is capable of discharging 120 balls per minute, or in fact, as fast as they can be put into feeders, and the gun barrel made turned in any direction. We believe Messrs. Bolton and Watt made some experiments, many years back, with the view of discharging cannon by steam; but the plan was carried into execution, from some cause with which we are not acquainted.

UNITED STATES.

We wish our limits could have permitted an insertion of the entire piece, of which the following is a paragraph, as it is a fine illustration of the gratitude of democrats and republicans!

The editor of the Baltimore Morning Chronicle thus gives vent to his indignation at the late act that stigmatized the N. York legislature.

It will be recorded to the scandal of New-York legislation, that at the very time when that state was reaping the rich reward brought about by that glorious consummation of enlightened industry, laborious perseverance and gigantic genius, at the time while the wealth of the continent found an outlet to the ocean, by the assistance of the Hudson, when all the other members of the vast confederated political family [illegible] with admiration o. the project, De Witt Clinton, the man whose genius planned and executed this magnificent and stupendous design, was hurled by the legislature of New York, from his office, as an object unworthy of popular confidence. His enemies could be no otherwise consistent with themselves, than to receive the benefits that he bestowed, and then turn their benefactor out of office; it is the only way in which they are able to testify their sense of the obligation.—It would be a curious point of enquiry, what the value of the estates of these gentlemen legislators was, both before, and after, the formation of this canal; to what amount they had arisen, in consequence of De Witt Clinton's labors—for, in proportion to the amount of such benefit, would they naturally be anxious to sting and bite the hand of their benefactor—their sense of gratitude knows of no other mode of requital. This thing will not remain circumscribed by the local limits of New-York—the waves of the Atlantic are wafting the shameful intelligence to Europe already; that De Witt Clinton, projected and accomplished the great Western Canal—that he received no public reward, other than legislative ingratitude for his services, will shortly be told in the cabinets of kings, emperors and princes. But the subject is not to sleep here—all the better feelings of man, all that enobles and adorns our common nature, without distinction or party, will be arrayed on the other side of the question. This deed will be regarded as a stigma on the American name, as a reproach on the age in which we live? But could any thing better be anticipated from legislators of this stamp, men who solemnly pledged themselves to restore to the people their electoral rights, and then so magnanimously turned their backs upon their own promises—men who had made themselves the slaves of a mean and miserable caucus at Washington, and in the dirty work of corruption and venality, were content to do the humble drudgery of apprentices—men who were not even allowed to sin, according to their own free will and pleasure? No! their parts were given out by the Crawford caucus; they waited until they knew what point of honour and faith, they were commanded to violate.

From the British Traveller.

PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE.

Paris, Jan. 7th, 1824.

THEY who imagine that the threat of the American President as to European interference in the neighbouring Commonwealths, is a mere brutum fulmen, do not, at least, find participators in the Royalist Coffeehouses and Saloons of Paris, nor in the Columns of the fanatic and Ultra Journals.—Le Scelerat! le Revolutionaire! Quelle insolence de parler de la sorte!——Such are the exclamations that accompany any reference to that document, and which instantly make the impartial hearer conclude, that some-thing must have happened highly conducive to the welfare and happiness of mankind.—Nothing, certainly, could have been better timed, or of deeper consequence in its probable results, than this public declaration. England has already announced her determination to prevent any attempts at crushing South American Independence, except on the part of Spain, which, in the utter imbecility of that besotted Government, is tantamount to a general prohibition; and we now see the United States manifesting a disposition to unite with her in the same generous policy. It is always delightful to behold any approximation between these two free and kindred countries—the Britain of Europe and that of America; but it is peculiarly animating at the present moment, when the politician, who carefully watches the signs of the times, to catch from them glimpses of futurity, may draw pleasant prophecies as to the ultimate fate of the world, from the smallest communion of interests in these two powers. It is not improbable that this common recognition, and identity of views as to South America, may eventually lead to an intimate union with them, to a confederacy, in short, of all the Constitutional Governments and free countries in the world—to an alliance which might, without sacrilege and hypocrisy, be indeed termed Holy, against that monstrous and liberticised league which has usurped its name.

It would be a truly glorious spectacle—the good principle embatilled against the evil one; light, liberty and religion, enrolled against darkness, slavery, and superstition; and to this conclusion must it indispu-tably come at last. As has generally been the case, the free States would then be the maritime ones, and dependant as Europe has become from her luxuries, as well as commercial habits, upon America and Asia, she will always be controlled by those who have the command of the sea. England, in the last war, with a navel force never exceeding a hundred and forty thousand seamen and marines, blockaded every enemy's port in the four quarters of the world, and was victorious upon every sea. Suppose her in alliance with the United States, and the Independent Governments of South America—imagine a combined fleet, with a few thousand English troops on board, stationed between the two combustible Peninsulas of Spain and Italy—and a proclamation issued from Great Britain, as the head of the confederacy, promising its support to what ever country would hoist the standard of revolt against the Holy Alliance, and she would presently set in motion the elements of a moral earthquake, which would simultaneously shake down the crowns and sceptres from the tyrants, bigots, and dotards who wear them, and give a total regeneration to Europe.

GOURLAY, AND THE FORTY OLD WOMEN OF WILY.

Petition of Robert Gourlay and forty Old Women of Wily to the House of Commons, praying it to ameliorate their condition, and to put them, so far as it regards the possession of Land, Pigs, Poultry, and o-their things, on an equal footing with the Negro Wench Slaves in the West Indies.

To the Honorable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, the Petition of Robert Gourlay and Female Parishioners of Wily, in Wiltshire,

Humbly showeth,

That the men of Wily have again and again, during the last nine years, petitioned your honourable house in order that the condition of labourers may be ameliorated. That during last Session, three of their petitions were ordered to be printed (5th, 19th, and 27th, June, 1823,) and to these your petitioners would at this time refer.

That the women of Wily have hitherto refrained from publickly joining in prayer for this purpose; but, understanding that negroe slaves have become special favourites with certain Members of Parliament, and that an appeal had been made to the religion, justice and humanity of the inhabitants of the British Empire, in their behalf, they no longer think it improper, even for females to petition your Honourable House. That your petitioners have learned that Negroe slaves have not only a sufficiency of land allowed them, free of charges, for the growth of provisions, but twenty six days of each year, besides Sundays and holidays, for the cultivation of the same:—That Negroe slaves are not obliged to work more hours a-day than English labourers, and do not perform, in an equal period of time, nearly so much work:—That Negroe slaves are not only able to bring up their children, but encouraged to marry and have large families:—That Negroe slaves rear quantities of pigs and poultry, not only for their own use, but for sale; and that, with industry and frugality, they may possess sufficient means to purchase up, were they permitted, their children's freedom.

That during the last fifteen years, the condition of Negroe slaves has been improved, in many respects, while that of English labourers has become notoriously worse. That formerly it was not usual for English women to be subjected to hard labour, out of doors, during inclement weather; but now, some of your petitioners are obliged, even in winter, to spread manure in the fields, to pick stones for the roads, and do other work ill befitting the female frame, and manifestly at variance with the design of PROVIDENCE.

That your petitioner, Robert Gourlay, has lately conversed with women of Compton, a neighbouring parish, who are now, and have long been, employed in repairing the public roads, and who receive only sixpence a-day for this employment:—That he has heard their sad complaints and anxious desire for milder treatment.

That on the 12 day of the present month of February, while the air was chilly in the extreme, and the ground thickly wreathed over with snow, he, the said Robert Gourlay, travelling in Wiltshire, on the road from London to Bath, saw women spreading earth on the pastures, women planting beans in the dirty ploughed fields; and, in one place of the high way, six women together breaking stones for its repair.

That your petitioners have seen the report from the Select Committee on the employment of the poor, in Ireland, and particularly page 132, where the Countess of Glengall declares, that "The people under the better sort of farmers are worse off than any of the slaves in the West Indies." And your petitioners, from their own experience in the parish of Wily, are too well-assured that this declaration may be perfectly correct and true.

Your petitioners, therefore, most earnestly entreat, that before the charity of your Honourable House is entirely expended on Negroe Slaves, you will think of doing justice to English labourers, and more especially to females:—That you will appoint, without delay, a Commission to visit Wily Parish to inquire into the actual condition of the labouring poor, now truly deplorable; so that facts may be better known, and effectual means contrived for relief and improvement; they also entreat that this petition may be printed for more ready perusal by any Committee, Commission, or Board appointed for the consideration of this subject, and they will ever pray.

(Signed by R. GOURLAY, & Forty Women of Wily.)

HORTICULTURE.

As we are satisfied the Peach Tree may be cultivated with success in various parts of CANADA, where it has not yet been tried;—we give the following valuable observations, on the best mode of culture, from the Commercial Advertiser, to be continued in our next.

ED.

ON THE CULTURE OF PEACH TREES.—We recommend to the attention of the public, the following Essay on the cultivation of the Peach Tree. It is written by a practical Horticulturalist, who has an extensive and flourishing nursery of the choicest kinds of this delicious fruit.

For the Commercial Advertiser.

PEACH TREES.

Several considerations seem to render any correct information respecting the successful cultivation of the Peach Tree, a subject of considerable importance. It is a fruit universally admired, and its cultivation here for many years past has generally been very unsuccessful. Various opinions have been entertained as to the deleterious causes which have so universally obstructed the successful culture of this delightful Fruit; and it would be no difficult task to exhibit the erroneous doctrines so long and so widely propagated, respecting the sadly deteriorated state of our peach trees. That melancholy term, "the yellows," and the still more frightful bugbear of "the maggot," with all the evils arising therefrom, have been multiplied into insurmountable obstacles; and the misguided cultivators, directing their sole attention to the discovery of some particular application for the counteracting of these evils, appear to have altogether overlooked the true and radical cause of the failure of the peach tree. This, like every other vegetable, is liable to disease from the inclemency of seasons, from the attacks of insects, and other external violence, from the want of proper nutriment, and lastly, by that natural tendency to decay by which the unalterable laws of nature have wisely limited the ordinary period of duration of every thing that lives. The peach tree is of a comparatively short duration, to the pear or apple; and although it is by budding or grafting, any particular sort may be increased to any amount, yet, as both these operations only extend a continuation of a part of the original plant, its time of duration must terminate; and we have no hesitation in giving it as our opinion, that the late failure of our peach orchards has been more owing to causes arising from the natural termination of the duration of the sorts so long propagated, than from any extraordinary malignancy of disease. If this opinion be correct, there is little wonder to see the long languishing state of our peach orchards, where, instead of adopting that careful and improved mode of culture, calculated to introduce a renovation of the plants, the chief attention has been directed to the cure of evils from which no permanent advantage can ever arise. That our opinion respecting the efficacy of an improved mode of cultivation is correct, will appear from the facts, that where this has been, and is properly, so much is more than ever we experienced from these diseases, otherwise so widely complained of. It is more than twenty years since I planted out an orchard of peach trees in Greenfield, in Connecticut, for a gentleman in whose employ I then was, and which has never failed, in a single year since, of producing an abundant supply of the finest & most delicious fruit. This gentleman is a most accurate observer, and well skilled in Horticultural subjects—His young trees have been reared from seed of the finest of his fruit, and inoculated from trees in a healthy flourishing state; his orchard is regularly manured, and constantly retained in a high state of cultivation. In the spring of the year 1807, I planted out a peach orchard of about one acre upon this island, within three miles of the City-Hall, and during the nine succeeding years, viz. till the year 1816, not more than six trees died out of the whole—two or three of which were not thrifty when I set them out, but owing to the quality of their fruit, I wished to try them; the others were injured by a heavy storm, when loaded with fruit; and in fact, I had more trouble in proping up limbs to support fruit, than in guarding against infected farina, or pursuing maggots.

POETRY.

BE TRUE TO THEE.

Be true to thee! O yes—the dove
Ne'er for her mate more fondly cried,
Than I for thee, my gentle love,
When thou wert absent from my side.
I gazed around, but saw no eye
So bright as thou beam smilingly;
I listen'd oft, but heard no sigh,
No friendly voice to welcome me.

Be true to thee! O yes, the night
Shall change at once to blushing day,
Ere I forget, in bloom or blight,
The flower that blest my thorny way;
In smiles or tears, in joy or woe,
My heart shall kindly beat for thee;
And e'en in death 'twill still bestow
Its parting gift—Fidelity.

TRADE WITH IRELAND.—Directions have been given by the Board of Trade to place vessels trading between Great Britain and Ireland on the footing of coasters—in compliance with a memorial from the merchants of Dublin.

BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

On the 12th of March, the House being in Committee on the Supply, after several sums had been voted for the different West India Colonies, £8,229 for the Civil Establishment of Upper Canada, was proposed.

Mr. Hume thought the nature of the Civil Establishment should be known before the House was called upon to defray the expenses. He had hoped, that after what had been said last year, such a vote would not have been submitted to the House.

Mr. W. Horton stated, that the Colony was poor, though in a progressive state of advancement; two-thirds of the expense was borne by the Colony, which demanded such assistance from England; and the Government had taken every pains in enquiring what reductions could be made.

Mr. Bennet was of opinion that the Colony should maintain its now establishment. The Church Establishment there was a curse rather than a blessing; and the lands belonging to it were in a state of complete barrenness, amidst surrounding fertility.

Mr. W. Horton stated that the Militia Pension List in Upper-Canada, amounted to £4,000 from the expence of the war.

Mr. Bright thought that the Colony should be fostered as a balance to the power of the United States.—He should support the vote.

Mr. Hume would recommend, that within ten years, the Canadas should be declared independent. Upper Canada was no infant Colony, but had existed for more than 40 years. Ministers should see that Lower Canada paid what she owed to Upper, and there would be no need for the present grant. He must divide the Committee, unless he was assured that the grant would be diminished next year, and in the following should wholly cease.

Dr. Lushington had some reasons for knowing a good deal about Upper Canada; and he would not vote with his hon. friend against the grants.

Mr. Bennet would advise his hon. friend not to divide the Committee, as something in the nature of a pledge had been given, that the charge would soon cease.

Mr. Hume would not press a division, as sense the of the Committee appeared against him.

£9,197 was moved for the Civil Establishment of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Hume remarked, that the West India Colonies had been put under very unfair restrictions, to foster the Canadies and Nova Scotia.

£5,194 for the Civil Establishment of New Brunswick, the vote last year having been £6,770.

Mr Hume stated, that the inhabitants of New Brunswick had offered to defray their own expenses, if they were permitted to appoint their own Officers of Customs; to which Mr. W. Horton replied, that the subject was under consideration.

The sum of £15,552 being moved to defray the charges of the Establishment for propagating the Gospel in Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, New-Brunswick, Prince Edward's Island, and the Cape of Good Hope,—

Mr. Hume objected to this vote as too large. He was not satisfied with the account which this Society gave of the appropriation of their funds. In 1818 they stated, that £50,000 of the money raised on the public was for the building of Schools, and that the buildings had commenced: In 1819, they reported that the buildings were finished, and that there were Scholars in them all: In 1820, on enquiry it turned out, that no Schools were built, nor had they any Scholars, nor did the Society deny the truth of this statement, but excused themselves by saying, the misrepresentation originated in a mistake of their Secretary. Would the House now place a sum of £15,000 to a Society that kept such a Secretary? If religious instruction was necessary in those Colonies, let it be given under the direction of the Government. Considering it as money thrown away, he should oppose the grant altogether.

Mr. W. Horton defended the grant as necessary, and he defended the Society from the charge made by the member for Aberdeen. The Society had done much good by their labours—To stop this grant, would be to stop Religious Education in the Colonies.

Mr. Hume contended that the Colonies would pay for their own religious instruction if there was no disposition to throw money away.—There was Halifax, for instance, a large, populous, and manufacturing place, could not pay their own minister. Why could

...ted towards paying a salary of £400. to the Rev. Mr. Inglis for religious instructions given by him to the people of Halifax?

Mr. Butterworth, so far from diminishing this vote, would readily increase it.

Mr. Bennet thought the Society had acted negligently; he would not oppose the grant of money, but he would oppose its passing through the hands of these individuals.

Mr. Goulburn defended the grant.—The member for Aberdeen was mistaken if he supposed the Clergy in the Colonies were entirely supported by England. No, on the contrary, they had large tracts of barren lands assigned for their support by the Colonies.—(A loud laugh.)

Sir M. W. Ridley wished to know, whether this money was applied to the propagation of the doctrines of the Church Established, or to the spreading of those enthusiastic doctrines which had done so much mischief.

Mr. Goulburn replied, to the Church of England Establishment only.

Mr. Hume said, this was the strongest argument he had heard against the grant.—(Hear, hear!)—By what right were they to tax the Catholics of Ireland or the Dissenters of England, for the education of a different Sect in the Colonies?

Sir T. Ackland said, he was no way surprised at such a remark from the member for Aberdeen, but he trusted that was no objection in the eyes of the majority of the members of the House. The Society was a Royal Chartered Society, bound to the Church of England; and he considered that the withdrawing of this grant without notice, would be injurious to the cause of Religion, and unjust to persons engaged in moral instruction.

Mr. S. Morland was in favour of the grant.

Lord Althorp could have wished to see it pass thro' the hands of Government; but he would rather give it to the Society than not give it at all.

Mr. T. Wilson feared that if the grant was placed at the disposal of the Governors of Colonies, they would be in much more danger of being misled than the Society was.

Mr. Bennet moved, as an amendment, to leave out the words, "to defray the charges of the Society;" this would leave the money in the hands of the Governors.

The Committee divided; for the original resolution 98, for the amendment 19—Majority 79.

JOURNALS OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,

MONDAY, 19th JAN. 1824.

Mr. WILMOT from the Committee, to whom was referred the Contingent Accounts of the present Session, informed the House that the Committee had agreed to a report which he was directed to submit for the adoption of the House.

The Report was ordered to be received and read.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, the House went into Committee of the whole on the Report of the Select Committee on the Contingent Account.

The Chairman reported progress and obtained leave to sit again the same day.

At twelve o'clock the two Houses waited upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the several Joint Addresses of Saturday, and being returned, Mr. Speaker reported the same having been delivered to His Excellency, and that His Excellency had been pleased to make thereto the following replies.

Honourable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen.

I shall not fail to transmit to the proper Department of His Majesty's Government, your Joint Addresses to the King, and your Resolutions respecting the Culture of Tobacco in the Western Districts of this Province.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, Messrs McMartin and Chisholm were ordered as a committee to wait upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the foregoing Address

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, it was Resolved that the Resolution of the House of Assembly authorising the payment of Postage on the letters addressed to, and sent by Members, should be rescinded.

Mr. McMARTIN from the Committee to wait on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with the Contingent Address of the House, reported delivering the same, and that His Excellency had been pleased to make thereto the following reply.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly

I shall direct the necessary Warrants to be prepared in compliance with your Address.

At half past two o'clock, P. M. Mr. Lee, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, came to the Bar, and delivered the commands of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the immediate attendance of the House, at the Bar of the Honourable the Legislative Council Chamber, and having withdrawn, Mr. Speaker and the House forthwith proceeded to the Bar of the Honorable the Legislative Council Chamber, where His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, after assenting to the Bills passed by both Houses, with the exception of the Assessment Act, which was left for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, delivered the following most gracious Speech.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

The conclusion of the Public business, which is now disposed of by your unremitted attention, enables me to dispense with your further attendance in Provincial Parliament, but I cannot put an end to this Session without assuring you how fully sensible I am of the judgement and temper which have governed your counsels and given efficacy to your various and extensive labours.

The united Representations which you have Addressed to Your Sovereign, on matters of no ordinary importance to the interests of your Country, afford a gratifying proof of your cordial and zealous co operation in the prosecution of your Legislative duties.

You are sufficiently aware that the measure of success which may attend your petitions, must be governed by a view of various and perhaps conflicting Interests; but it will be no less agreeable to Your Sovereign, than it must be satisfactory to the people of this Province, to observe the vigilant attention with which you have regarded every question that can affect the welfare or security of your Country.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I thank you in His Majesty's name, for the supplies which you have granted me for the ordinary exigences of the year, and for the prudence you have manifested in guarding against temporary inconvenience to the public service by authorising a loan in anticipation of the payments expected from Quebec; and you may be assured that the repeated testimonies which I have received of your confidence and support, shall continue to be met on my part with a disposition to justify your reliance by a regular & economical administration of the Revenue.

Hon Gentlemen. and Gentlemen.

I am happy to concur with you in affording countenance and support to the first efforts of a spirit of enterprise which has been directed to the improvement of our internal Navigation, and which affords the most pleasing and convincing proof of increasing intelligence and wealth.

The measures by which you propose to render effectual the Acts formerly passed for subjecting all the granted Lands in this Province to a moderate indiscriminating Assessment, have the decided concurrence of my own judgement, and I have reason to believe they will be found perfectly to accord with the opinion of His Majesty's Government, fully convinced of the necessity of some measure to contract the evils occasioned by unoccupied and neglected lands, and according entirely to the principles of the provisions which you have proposed, I have every hope that the reference for His Majesty's consideration which has appeared to me proper, will result in the declaration of the Royal Assent

The provisions you have made for the better collecting of the Revenue and for obtaining a more accurate census of the Population will, I trust, be found effectual.

I entertain an ardent hope that under the protection of divine Providence, the permanent support which you have contributed in your amendments of the Com Scool Act, to the cause of religious instruction, & the general dissemination of knowledge, will be productive of the happiest effects; such objects the wisest and most virtuous will best appreciate, and the attention you have given to them will confer lasting honor on yourselves.

I cannot refrain from adverting to the present tranquil and happy state of this Province, and pointing out to your observation how materially that harmony and public spirit which have prevailed in the Councils of the Legislature have led to a mutual confidence between the Government and the people, and produced a highly favourable influence, both on the general prosperity and on the contentment and happiness of private life.

You well know how greatly individual security, comfort, and convenience, as well as the whole interior order and economy of a Country depend on the just fulfilment of those ordinary duties which the Law requires, and I am persuaded that in your respective Counties, you will be desirous to impress truths, so important upon the minds of those who look up to your example, & are influenced by your advice.

After which the Hon. the Speaker of the Legislative Council, declared that it was His Excellency's pleasure that the Parliament should be prorogued to Monday the first day of March and declared the Parliament Prorogued to the said first day of March, to be then and there holden.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the cause of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, }
YORK, 26th JAN. 1824. }

PRESENT:
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government is omitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of the date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 5th, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU have taken it for granted, I trust, that if I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament, I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and a hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that should strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

When I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken; and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my past period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be not such as you approve, it would be unseemly to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is never likely to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I feel that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service;—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue, but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have found in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should wave considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

With a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
JNO. B. ROBINSON.

TO THE INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

ELECTORS!

I Have thought necessary to acquaint you of my resolution, in compliance with your proposals, of offer myself at the ensuing Election as one of your Candidates, &c.

I am,

Your
Obt. Servant,
JOHN GOESSMAN.

VOL. III. Our endeavour will be to "stamp the very body of the time—its form and pressure"—we shall exterminate nothing, nor shall we set down aught in malice. No. 23.

THURSDAY, JUNE 3d, 1824.

Editorial Commentary.

An instance of wilful blindness usually rouses our indignation in the same proportion that a moral or physical deprivation of sight moves our compassion, and excites our pity. A corrupt or malicious perversion of a manifest truth produces the same effect. If honesty is the best policy, candour is equally necessary in the formation of an upright and manly character; and, for his own sake, it is to be lamented that the 'Advocate,' at his very outset, has shewn himself equally destitute of both.

None but a licentious democrat, bent on mischief, and lost in the mazes of his own bewilderments, could have so far perverted and misapplied the few lines which he thought proper to quote from one of Mr Fourneau's Addresses to the Electors of the County of Durham:—the passage is this,

"Having experienced many of them in common with you, I know your wants; and, I think, I know some of the deep and latent causes why this fine country has so long languished in a state of comparative stupour and inactivity, while our more enterprising neighbours are laughing us to scorn. All I desire is an opportunity of assisting the cure of some of the evils we labour under;" &c. &c.

Now, it must be the obvious intent of this passage to shew that Mr. F. conceived the fault to be with the House of Assembly; and, that the evils complained of, were remediable by that branch of the Legislature, if any where, on the well known axiom that all Law is for the people;—from the people;—and, when inefficient, must be remedied or rectified by the people:—and, therefore, he was desirous of assisting in the great work. It is impossible he could be such a fool as to suppose the people had the power to place him in the situation, (even as the representative of Majesty,) on which this envious and cruel-hearted Advocate would lay blame that never was attached, or even conceived, by any other than himself:—but,

"Amongst the sons of men how few are known
Who dare be just to merit not their own!
Superior virtue and superior sense
To Knaves and Fools will always give offence."

In Politics, as in Religion, there are undoubtedly sins of omission, as well as of commission, & it has always appeared to us that our Representatives are either generally ignorant of, or know not how to exercise, the power which is vested in them by their constituents.—The people must surely be supposed to know their own wants;—and, for what purpose do their representatives assemble, if it be not to remedy them?—If these Representatives are remiss in their duty, and neglect to do those things which their country requires at their hands—and there alone—is it just—is it manly—is it honest—to lay their errors and omissions on the Executive, which has ever shewn itself, of late years at least, ready to sanction every measure calculated to advance the public interests?—Our road, our canal, our public school, and our wild land assessment bills, fully attest this truth.

But the manner in which this shameless Advocate attempts to calumniate the universally respected and most worthy Representative of our Sovereign, in this Colony, is the most insolent and wretched specimen of a total abandonment of all truth, principle, sense and decorum—we have ever witnessed.—Its very extravagance, however, will prove its own antidote; and even as the scorpion, when surrounded by a wall of fire, is said to retire into the centre of its own narrow circle, and there commit felo de se by the sting of its own tail, so will the venom of this malignant libeller, of genuine and unaffected worth, recoil on his execrable head.

It is, however, but another and a melancholy instance that no merit, however exalted, can screen its possessor from the assaults of an unprincipled and abandoned plebeian, lost to every sense of propriety, and even to the common decencies of life.—It is no easy matter to throw dirt by those who are near, or in, the kennel, and whose hands are always filthy—The evil spirit and all his agents, in whatever shape they appear, love to mar, or attempt to mar, that beauty and excellence from which they are for ever removed.—One would have thought that if any man could have escaped the virulence of such an assault, it would have been, Sir P. Maitland!

But this Advocate (who has certainly in perfection one of the qualities requisite both in the dock, and at the bar) is singularly unfortunate in his assertions; for, notwithstanding the universal depression which succeeded the late war both in Europe and America—It is notorious, and undeniable, that this country has advanced with more rapid strides in all that constitutes national power—under the present, than any former, Lieutenant Governor; which could not have been the case, had he been that careless and inactive spectator of our wants, which this scurrilous abstainer from all truth would make us believe.—Before he wove his flimsy tissue of absurdity and falsehood—he ought at least to have made some little inquiry, for, at the moment he pretends to an extensive acquaintance with the country, he betrays a most unaccountable ignorance of what is going forward. With ridiculous pomposity and egregious stupidity—he inquires, what road, and what canal, has been commenced in his time? when almost every schoolboy in the Province knows that several canals, and a grand Military road on such a scale as it is probable no British, or any other colony, ever witnessed—(and which is exclusively the project of our Lt. Governor,) have not only been planned, but have been in part commenced.

Being limited to a narrow space in these columns we shall not attempt to notice one fourth part of the absurdities crowded into the first number of the Advocate, but shall content ourselves with saying that had his Excellency refused his assent to any measure of importance, or had thrown any obstacle in the way of improvement, this more than half crazy willing might have had something to bawl about, but his own questions sufficiently condemn him, and shew the grossness of an ignorance which is paralleled only by the measure of his impudence.—However, we dare say that His Excellency, Sir P. Maitland, will care as little for the censure of such a creature, as the "amiable wits oral," (by which cognomen this very un amiable democrat condescends to designate the Earl Dalhousie) will value his praise.

The Advocate flatters himself that he is not at his setting out, "in any way obnoxious to the powers that be." We rather think he has either totally mistaken the meaning of the word obnoxious, or that he has very singular notions as to what is likely to make a man or himself obnoxious. He further says that he is "sensible" and even "well aware" that "he might have induced Government to bestow hundry good things upon him"—in that is it clearly not "approbation" which has driven "this wise man mad."—(see P. 15.)

After all, some compassion is due to the unhappy man who can gravely assert that one seventh, only, of our taxes is due to the service of Him who, when upon earth, not only gave the whole of His—but his precious blood also, for our present and everlasting benefit. After such a confession of faith, it is only fair to conclude that six sevenths of his scribblers time are given to Acts of insanity;—and that only one seventh part of his lines contain either truth or reason,

"If we spoke of men, it will safely be inferrence to their public acts."—Col. Ad. P. 4.

As to this writer's expectations of the conduct to be pursued by Mr. Fourneaux, in the event of his obtaining a seat in the House of Assembly, we can assure him that Mr. F.—has as little to do with the likes, dislikes, and intentions of Dr. Hoyle as he has with the Hyperia, the Ichs, and the Lambda, of that sensitive and right worthy compounder of pills, and administrator of balsams—and whether within, or without, the bar of that Honourable House, we have no doubt that Mr F.—will be able to go through the fatigues of his duty without the aid of a glass of water, or the ready arms of a brother Æsculapius!

We have now to apologize to our readers for detaining them so long on a subject, to them, perhaps, of little interest.—But the attack which has been made upon the Lieutenant Governor—however puny it may be—appeared to us so unwarrantable and so wholly unprovoked—that we could not resist the feeling which has induced us thus gently to notice it.—We have no desire to waste time in criticising the literary merit of a work which we have no doubt will shortly become defunct. The pale characters of disease and death are already stamped on the countenance of this mis shapen bantling, conceived in iniquity, and brought forth in shame and dishonour, and it would be cruel to add pain to those convulsive throes under which it labours to crawl for a little space, up those fatal heights of Queenston, from whence so many of its country men have already precipitated at the points of British and Canadian Bayonets!—

We understand a meeting of the Society of "Friends to the Strangers" in distress was held at Sheffield's Hotel, on Friday last, when it was resolved, that a new subscription be set on foot in aid of the Funds of the Society. It gives us much pleasure to state that the gentlemen deputed to solicit Subscriptions have met with that success which evinces, in the strongest manner, the great liberality of the Inhabitants of York—indeed we cannot compete how charity can better be bestowed, than in contributing to the support of an institution which has for its object the relief of Strangers in distress.

The number of good already done by the Society, since its first formation, has been extensive—many hundreds of destitute Emigrants of all ages, have partaken of the Bounty; and when but for the timely aid afforded them, must have sunk under the accumulated pressure of poverty and disease.

The Season is at hand, when we may expect the usual visit to our shore of numerous of its Ingent Emigrants. To enable the Society to meet the wants of these poor people, and to cover a debt to a considerable amount, due to the Treasurer, are the reasons for proposing the present subscription.

The Subscription List is in the hands of Mr. Allan, where those persons who have not been applied to, have an opportunity of entering their names.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

Mr Scarlett.—Mr. Scarlett, M. P. has recovered from his dangerous illness, after having been Killed in the Newspapers.

Sir George Quentin retires from the 10th Hussars, and exchanges his half pay with Lieutenant Colonel Henry Wyndham.

Lord Gifford is appointed Master of the Rolls; and is succeeded by Sir John Copley the Attorney General, as Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

The Expedition Abandoned.—Don Juan Martin, better known as the Empecinado, has been murdered at Roa by a band of Ultras. In consequence of the refusal of the Ministers to pardon him upon his trial.

Slave Trade.—The Slave Trade Piracy Bill was read a third time in the House of Commons, on the 26th of March, & sent to the Lords. Sir J. Mackintosh expressed his entire concurrence in the Bills, and lauded the nefarious treaty, entered into with America, with the most heartfelt satisfaction.

Free Trade.—On the 12th March, Sir James Mackintosh took occasion to say that he most highly approved of all that the Ministers proposed, with respect to the removal of restrictions on commerce, and that of the experiment of free trade were the best & surest foundation of the well being of nations, and from year to year he had witnessed the total results of a deviation from them."

A debate exceedingly interesting, if not very important, took place on Monday night, in consequence of a complaint of breach of privilege, emanated by no less a personage than the Lord Chancellor. The matter of this complaint was certain strong observations made by his Lordship from the Chancery Bench, in a Speech of Mr. Abercrombie's for the House of Commons.

REPEATED

A motion for hearing was lost by a majority of 181 to 168. The friends of the Lord Chancellor wisely forbore his vindication on the right grounds, and rested his defence on the warmth of feeling into which he had been inadvertently betrayed by an erroneous report of the speech of Mr. Abercrombie. Ample justice was done to the character of this gentleman by those who undertook the defence of the Lord Chancellor.

WHISKEY.—Mr. Bartlett, of N. B during the Tariff debate, moved to impose a duty on Stills. If his object was to raise a revenue, his proposed ways and means were very injudicious: for he ought to know that our Western brethren would raise another Rebellion if a tax should be put on Whiskey.—A tax of that sort ought never to be imposed, unless adequate provision is made in the bill that it shall be collected without Sheriffs or Tax and Feathers: for it costs an enormous sum of money to march an army into that country to quell a revolt. It cost President Washington 2,000 000 dollars to put down GALLATIN'S Rebellion. Whenever we want a snug little war all within ourselves, we have nothing to do but to tax Whiskey—for that will raise a Rebellion as quick as cantharides will raise a blister. A Whiskey tax may raise the people—but it will never raise money.—Salem Gazette.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London to his friend in Boston, dated February 25.

"It is lucky for you that you are out of trade; it never was less prosperous. This is certainly a pleasant place for those fond of novelty. There never were more Lions extant than at present.—We are to have steam frigates, cannon, and all to go by steam. Stage coaches are lighted with gas.—Chickens are hatched by steam in twenty one days. Copper is to last five years on ship's bottoms—French and German is taught with such rapidity as to enable one to read his Bible in those languages in forty-eight hours. Poor children are to be educated on a new plan, which has such a wonderful effect on their morals, that they will never go astray; and last, though not least, the National Debt is to be paid off. All these discoveries and propositions are now before the public; and you have been long enough on the "fast anchored isle," to know there is no such thing as humbug here."

JOHNSON THE SMUGGLER.—We hope some clever fellow is collecting materials for the Memoirs of JOHNSON the smuggler, for he is certainly one of the most extraordinary men that ever lived.

PARTICULAR ESCAPE OF BONAPARTE.—It is not generally known that a vessel was undertaken to be built at Bremen, by the renowned Johnson, the smuggler, for the purpose of liberating Bonaparte from the island of St. Helena. The vessel was about ninety feet long, and of the burden of one hundred tons. It was built of half-inch plank; the grain of one of which was placed in a vertical, and the other two in a horizontal position. These planks were so well caulked and cemented together that the thickness of the sides of the vessel did not exceed that of an ordinary washing tub. The masts were so contrived that they could be lowered with a lever with the deck, and the whole vessel might be sunk to about water with the crew on board, without danger. Ample means were provided for supplying the vessel with fresh air. The plan was to sail up at night, within a short distance of St Helena, and sink the vessel until the next succeeding convenient night, when Bonaparte would be enabled to make his escape to the beach, at which time the vessel was to be raised, Bonaparte to get on board, and sail away in the dark. It happened however, that Bonaparte died before the vessel was finished; and it is a curious coincidence that she was to be copper-fayed the very day news of his death arrived. Johnson was to have received 40,000l. as soon as the vessel had got into the blue water, exclusive of the reward to be given in case the enterprise succeeded. This Johnson had previously offered his services to the Admiralty, and offered that he could blow up any ship without being hurt. Accordingly, a trial was given him in the Thames, accompanied by a boatswain of one his Majesty's ships, who had been married only a week before, in a boat of a similar construction to the one before described, to a barge moored in the middle of the stream. They sunk their boat, made fast the torpedo to the bottom of the barge, and lighted the match. Johnson then perceived that his vessel remained fast, having got (as the sailors express it) his rudder in the barge. Upon which he pulled out his watch, and having looked at it attentively, told the boatswain that he had only two minutes and a half to live. Upon this, the boatswain began to make many lamentations.—"Oh, my poor dear Nancy!" said the boatswain: "what will she say?"—"Avast, blubbering," said Johnson,—"Doff your jacket, and be ready to stuff it into the bawsehole while I cut the cable." Upon saying this, Johnson seized an axe, and cut the cable. The boatswain stuffed his jacket into the hole, and they got out of the reach of the torpedo, which blew up the barge.—Morning Herald.

London, Price of Stocks, April 13th, 1824.

Such is the extent of buildings going on in and about London, that bricks are with difficulty obtained, and contractors who are obliged to complete their work by a given time, have offered 5s. to 6s. per 1000 above the usual price without being able to obtain them.

ANOTHER LOAN.—Another loan has rather unexpectedly appeared in the London Market, of Two Millions and a half sterling, for the service of the ancient kingdom of Guatimala, or the United Provinces of Central America.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MARCH 29.

Malice.—Literary Discovery

Mr. W. Williams wished to put a question to the Right Hon. Secretary. He understood that a work of the late Secretary Phillips, had been in the hand-writing of one of his employees, and had been lately discovered in the State Papers. He wished to know whether such a gratifying communication was true, and if true, whether it was (as he hoped) intended to give it to the public? [laughter]

Mr. Secretary Peel—It is true that a work of Milton's in the hand-writing of Phillips, has been discovered by Mr. Lemon among the State Papers. It is a work entitled de Dei Cultu, in support of the truths of Christian Religion. It was on its discovery submitted to His Majesty; and the first observation of His Majesty was, "A work of Milton's must be made public." (Loud and continued cheers.) It has since, in furtherance of the Royal decision, been submitted to a competent supervision, and the work will speedily appear.—(Cheers.)

PARRY'S LAST VOYAGE.—Captain Parry's last voyage is published with all the splendid accompaniments of Charts and Plates.

A FOOT-PAD ATTESTING TO BE SUPERIOR TO A LAWYER.—A gentleman walking across the fields in the neighbourhood of Islington, observed two very suspicious looking fellows who seemed watching an opportunity to rob her. Her alarm was increased by observing a fellow of a similar appearance in a pathway at a little distance from her; but as the case did not admit of help, he came in sight of her good-humour—when she offered him a guinea as a reward for his protection; but he refused it, adding, he hoped he had more honour left than to sink his character to the level of a Lawyer's—"I am above taking a fee."

THE LAIRD OF AUCHINLECK.—It is well known that the Lord Auchinleck had not the greatest partiality, either for the literary labours or the literary associates of his son, the Biographer of Johnson. The latter was one day haranguing him upon the happiness of literary men, and concluded by saying, that they "went through the world swimmingly." "Nae doot, Jamie, nae doot," said the old Judge, "for you see, Jamie, that a chield can swim better wi' twa bladders o' wind aneath his oxters, than he can without."

VAN DIEMAN'S LAND.—By the accounts lately received from this settlement, the farmers were continuing to prosper, and to agree with the country. Every arrival from England added to the number. Goods and merchandize of every kind were however very selling at nominal prices, and by auction for less money than their prime cost in Britain. Every warehouse was full, and every ship arriving continued to add to the general glut.

Settlers are recommended to take nothing but specie with them; and to take servants properly indentured for a period of years, under a high penalty by case of breach of bargain. Wages are enormously high; they will not work under £50 per annum, and most three times a-day, and tea, &c. &c. twice. Ticket of leave-men from the Government were much in the same state. There were many good servants said to be among the convicts. The following were the prices then current:—

Horses	£55 to £100
Bullocks for work, per pair	£36.
Cows	£18 to £15
Heifers	£11 to £15
Ewes	25s. to 30s.
Ewe and Lamb	27s. to 35s.
Beef, per lb.	9d.
Mutton	11d.
Butter	4s. 6d
Cheese	3s. 0d.
Oats per bushel	7s. 6d.
Barley	7s. 0d.
Wheat	6s. to 7s. 6d.
Tea, per lb.	5s. 6d.
Sugar	4d.

The acts relating to these fine countries, which received the Royal Assent a short while before the rising of the last Session of Parliament, would not reach them till about October last; consequently the accounts of their having taken effects upon the economy of that Government cannot be known till next arrivals which may be expected in March. Twelve months trial of these salutary laws, it was anticipated, would have the best possible effects upon the whole classes of the people.

CURIOUS FACT.—By placing a candle at thirty degrees from perpendicular, the flame is not encountered with the wick, and the air that passes by the flame completely destroys the snuff: so that the candle thus placed never wants snuffing, and gives one half more light than when placed in the usual way.

COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE.—We perceive by the advertisements of the day, that two new lines of Packets have just been established by two active shipping merchants, to ply regularly between New-York and London, and between New-York and Greenock.

MECHANICAL INGENUITY.—Brou, a Genevese mechanic, once constituted a clock which was capable of the following surprising movements:—There was upon on it a negro, a dog, and a shepherd, when the clock struck, the shepherd played six tunes on his flute, and the dog approached and wagged upon him. This clock was exhibited to the king of Spain, who was delighted with it. The gentleness of my dog, said Brou, is the least merit. Let your Majesty touch one of the apples which you see in the shop, hard by, you will admire the fidelity of the animal. The king took an apple, and the dog flew to his hand and barked so loud, that the negro's dog—which was in the room, began also to bark. At this the courtiers, not doubting that it was an affair of witchcraft, hastily left the room, crossing themselves as they went out. The minister of marine was the only one that ventured to stay. The king having desired him to ask the negro what o'clock it was, the minister obeyed, but he obtained no reply. Brou then observed that the negro had not yet learned Spanish, upon which the minister repeated the question in French, and the black immediately answered him. At this new prodigy the firmness of the minister also forsook him, and he retreated precipitately, declaring that it must be the work of the devil.

SINGULAR DETECTION OF A THIEF.—A few days ago a thief was detected in the following singular and judicious manner:—Mr. Thomas———, a respectable cow keeper and dairyman residing at Islington, had a sow pig which produced a large litter of young ones, which for some time she appeared to bring up with all maternal affection: but suddenly one of the swinish family disappeared, and was no where to be found; and as it is known to Naturalists that sows sometimes, notwithstanding their maternal affection, devour their young, Mr. ——— was not a little pleased that his sow had thus regaled herself, and yet he thought it rather odd, that like the story of the two cats, not even a tail remained, or any trace whatever of the departed suckling. The next night came and with it disappeared another pig—the next night another, "and another still," until the latter was minus four of its number. Mr. ——— began to think his sow of too ravenous a disposition to keep any longer, and to save the remainder of the young from a premature death, he sold the sow, litter, and all, for what she would fetch. Fortune favoured the purchaser of the pig stye being now unoccupied, Mr. ——— thought he had best convert it to some profitable use, and accordingly hired it out to the itinerant exhibitor of a bear, and on the very night that the sow and her young quitted it, Bruin entered into possession. About two o'clock the next morning Mr. ——— was disturbed by the loud lamentations and screaming of a man in distress, and getting out of bed he proceeded in the direction of the pig stye, from whence the complaint seemed to come, and stopping for a moment at the door, he was astonished to hear a man, evidently in great agony, exclaim, "Oh, for God's sake let me go, and I will tell you where the pigs are." Mr. ——— let me go, and I will tell you where the pigs are." Mr. ——— lost no longer in any doubt as to what became of his lost pigs, and convinced that Bruin had got hold of the thief, he thought it a good opportunity of discovering where his property was deposited, knowing that on their being unmuzzled, he could not desist, knowing that on their being unmuzzled, he could not desist, knowing that on their being unmuzzled, he could not desist

A motion for brevity was lost by a majority of 161 to 68. The friends of the Lord Chancellor wished for his vindication on high grounds, and rested his defence on the certainty of facts into which he had been inadvertently betrayed by an erroneous report of the speech of Mr. Abercrombie. Ample justice was done to the character of this gentleman by those who undertook the defence of the Lord Chancellor.

WAYSES.—Mr. Bartlett, of N. H during the Tariff debate, moved to impose a duty on Bills. If his object was to raise a revenue, his proposed ways and means were very injudicious: for he ought to know that our Western brethren would raise enough without any duty on Bills, or Whiskey.—A tax of that sort—might answer in Switzerland, where adequate provision is made in the bill that it shall be collected without fees or Taxes and Feasters: for it costs an enormous sum of money to march an army into that country to quell revolt. It cost President Washington 2,000,000 dollars to put down Gallatin's Rebellion. Whenever we want a sung little war all within ourselves, we have nothing to do but to tax Whiskey—for that will raise a Rebellion as quick as cantharides will raise a blister. A Whiskey tax may raise the people—but it will never raise money.—Salem Gazette.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London to his friend in Boston, dated February 25.

"It is lucky for you that you are out of trade; it never was less prosperous. This is certainly a pleasant place for those fond of novelty. There never were more Lions extant than at present.—We are to have steam frigates, cannon, and all to go by steam. Stage coaches are lighted with gas—Chickens are hatched by steam in twenty one days. Copper is to last five years on ship's bottoms—French and German is taught with such rapidity as to enable one to read his Bible in those languages in forty-eight hours. Poor children are to be educated on a new plan, which has such a wonderful effect on their morals, that they will never go astray; and last, though not least, the National Debt is to be paid off. All these discoveries and propositions are now before the public; and you have been long enough on the "fast anchored Isle," to know there is no such thing as humbug here."

PARTICULAR ESCAPE OF BONAPARTE.—It is not generally known that a vessel was undertaken to be built at Baterses, by the renowned Johnson, the smuggler, for the purpose of liberating Bonaparte from the island of St. Helena. The vessel was about ninety feet long, and of the burden of one hundred tons. It was built of half-inch plank; the grain of two of such planks was placed in a vertical, and the other two in a horizontal position. These planks were so well caulked and secured together, that the thickness of the sides of the vessel did not exceed that of an ordinary washing tub. The masts were so contrived that they could be lowered to a level with the deck, and the whole vessel might be sunk to about water with the crew on board, without danger. Ample stores were provided for supplying the vessel with fresh air. The plan was to sail up at night, within a short distance of St Helena, and sink the vessel until the next or some subsequent night, when Bonaparte would be enabled to make his escape to the beach, at which time the vessel was to be raised, Bonaparte to get on board, and sail away in the dark. It happened however, that Bonaparte died before the vessel was finished; and it is a curious coincidence that she was to be conveyed the very day the news of his death arrived. Johnson was to have received 40,000*l.* as soon as the vessel had got into the blue water, exclusive of the reward to be given in case the enterprise succeeded. This Johnson had previously offered his services to the Admiralty, and affirmed that he could blow up any ship without hurt. Accordingly, a hulk was given him in the Thames, accompanied by a boatswain of one his Majesty's ships, who had been married only a week before, in a boat of a similar construction to the one before described, to a barge moored in the middle of the stream. They sunk their boat, made fast the torpedo to the bottom of the barge, and lighted the match. Johnson then perceived that his vessel remained fast, having got (as the sailors express it) his cable athwart hawse of the barge. Upon which he pulled out his watch, and having looked at it attentively, told the boatswain that he had only two minutes and a half to live. Upon this, the boatswain began to make grievous lamentations.—"Oh, my poor dear Nancy!" said the boatswain; "what will she say?"—"Avast thubbering," said Johnson,—"Doff your jacket, and be ready to stuff it into the bawsehole while I cut the cable." Upon saying this, Johnson sawed no less and cut the cable. The boatswain stuffed his jacket into the hole, and they got out of the reach of the torpedo, which blew up the Barge.—Morning Herald.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MARCH 29.

Mallon.—Literary Discovery

Mr. W. Williams wished to put a question to the Right Hon. Secretary. He understood that a work of the immortal Milton, in the hand-writing of one of his nephews, Phillips, had been lately discovered in the State Papers. He was anxious to learn whether such a gratifying communication was true, and if true, whether such a gratifying communication was true, and if true, whether it was (as he hoped) intended to give it to the public? [laugh]

Mr. Secretary Peel—It is true that a work of Milton's in the hand-writing of Phillips, has been discovered by Mr. Lemon among the State Papers. It is a work entitled de Doctrina, consequently the accounts of their beneficial effects upon the economy of that Government cannot be known till next arrivals which may be expected in March. Two months trial of these laws, if it was anticipated, would have the best possible effects upon the whole classes of the people.

Letters from Gibraltar, of the 16th and 19th ult. communicate some particulars relative to the blockading squadron off Algiers which are not without interest. It appears that the Dey has obstinately refused to accede to the terms proposed to him by the British Admiral; but that his own officers are, for the greater part, determined to resist his authority, as they see by no means disposed to undergo the horrors of a bombardment. An attempt was even made upon his life on the 15th March, which very narrowly missed success. Up to the 17th no attack has been made by the British squadron, and it was still expected that the differences would be adjusted. These letters state that accounts had been received from the Morea of unfortunate differences between the Greek Chiefs; but we are happy in being able, from direct channels, to state that these differences have been removed.—London paper, April 9.

RUSSIA.

A letter from Dr. Lyall throws light on a subject of great interest at the present moment, namely, the internal state and designs of Russia. He says, "It is a pretty general opinion that the exhausted state of the Treasury is one of the greatest obstacles to an attempt at the execution of Russia's favorite schemes of aggrandizement; and this opinion is grounded upon the low value of the paper currency in that Empire, and the necessity the crown was under of making loans at a high per centage But, I believe from good authority, that the world is deceived on this point. Russia has borrowed, to be sure; but the gold she received, or at least a part of it, has not gone for the recall of her old paper currency. No! the ingots—the bars of the yellow metal—which were transported from the Thames, are now piled on the banks of the Neva, within the Mint, which is situated within the Castle of St. Peter and St Paul. IRELAND.

A letter from London, dated the 7th instant, mentions that among the Irish grievances to be removed by the Legislature this season, are the Leather and Paper duties. The motion for the repeal of the Leather Tax will be made by Sir J. Newport, for that of the Paper Duty by the Hon. Co. Ruthemon.—The general opinion is, that the Bar will be opened to English Catholics. The Royal partiality for Ireland, and the desire to effect her tranquility, which the King has so often expressed, have undergone no change; on the contrary, His Majesty expresses himself more anxious than ever to ensure the happiness and permanent peace of that country, by all the means in his power. Hopes are entertained by some sincere friends to Ireland, that the King will redeem his pledge during the approaching summer, by again visiting Ireland, and holding a Court in Dublin, and that His Majesty will be attended, if not preceded, by the Duke of York.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ALGIERS.

LONDON, Foreign Office, April 13

The Right Hon. George Canning, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has received his Majesty's commands to signify to the Ministers of Friendly and neutral powers residing at this Court, that the necessary measures have been taken by command of His Majesty for the blockade of the port of Algiers, and that from this time all measures authorised by the law of nations will be adopted and executed with respect to all vessels which may attempt to violate the said blockade.

Intelligence has been received from the British squadron off Algiers. Admiral H. B. Neale was off that port in the Revenge, with five frigates; the Dey had refused to treat, and was making preparations to sustain a bombardment. For this purpose he had dismantled the vessels of war which were in the Bay. He had also commanded an immense number of troops from the interior, to man the fortresses. This news was brought to Gibraltar on the 19th ult. by the Phaton frigate, which had been dispatched by the Admiral.

Letters from Gibraltar, of the 16th and 19th ult. communicate some particulars relative to the blockading squadron off Algiers which are not without interest. can be but one conclusion in regard to this conduct; that hoarding up of the precious metals. On one point we have been some weeks in possession of information, the hoarding up of gold obtained from the country by way of loan, to be in readiness for future operations; but though the source from which we received it was most respectable, and we are assured that it rested on authority that could not be questioned, still we hesitated to give publicity to the circumstance.—*Morn. Alexander has permitted the erection of a monument to the memory of Kosciusko, at Cracow, which has become an object of extreme veneration to the Poles. It is a simple barrow or tumulus, like the renowned sepulchres of the ancients, about 300 feet in diameter, and 130 feet in height; and it stands within view of the ancient monements of Cracus and Wanda, on a low hill near the Vistula, which happens to bear the appropriate name of Brooklhaw, or "the Defender of Glory." Ground has been bought and houses built, for four peasants, who fought under Kosciusko, and who, with their families, are charged to take care of the monument. The money for raising the monument and supporting the peasants, has been raised by subscription throughout all Poland.

FREEDOM OF POLITICAL SENTIMENT IN RUSSIA!—A letter from St. Petersburgh, says "English and American Papers are prohibited. No prudent man dares express his political opinions—and we rarely sit down to dinner without one or more spies at table."

INDIA.

Calcutta, Jan. 8.—The accounts from Madras are of a distressing nature, and have come upon us with a suddenness which renders the horror more striking.

We were prepared to expect a scarcity of Grain on the coast, but had not the most distant idea of the extent to which the failure of the crop had reached.—Madras, and the surrounding country, are in a state of famine. Independent of the accounts we publish to day from Madras Papers, private letters agree too minutely in the distressing details for us to doubt a second that the most dreadful effects are to be apprehended. It is stated that even the dread of the arms of the military who are necessarily placed at the Godowns where the Rice is distributed, is scarcely sufficient to prevent depredations. Parents are abandoning their children, and several have absolutely died from starvation.—This is but the commencement of the appalling consequences of famine. Disease is sure to follow; and although we are certain that every possible means will in the power of Government will be employed to lessen the effects of this dire visitation, we trust also that the aid of the Bengal public will not be withheld.

A Rope Bridge has been made at Calcutta, and has been much praised.—Palladium.

From a Tour through the Upper Provinces of Hindostan.

The following characteristic is, we fear, too usual with other nations than the Hindoos:—

"The natural indolence of these people is indeed very great; no plea but necessity induces them to move at all. They would like to sit and smoke the whole day long. "Better," say they, "to sit than stand; better to lie down than sit; better to sleep than either."—If roused by any sudden misfortune, they instantly lose all presence of mind, and run hurrying about like so many mad creatures.

The Missionaries have never made much progress amongst this people, if the recent publications of the Abbé Dubois, and others, may be credited.—The following anecdote is of an older date, but it may be taken as a fair instance of the tenure of Hindoo Christianity.

A singular circumstance occurred, in consequence of the arrival of some Missionaries, while we were at this place. These gentlemen had been holding forth in the Bazar, and having gathered together a numerous assembly of the people, particularly remarked one, as being more attentive than the rest, (a cora-factor of respectable appearance;) when, going up to him, the Missionary asked if he had been convinced by the arguments he had heard in favour of the Christian religion? After a moment's hesitation, "What will you give me," said the native, "to become a Christian?" "The blessings of our holy religion will reward you," replied the Missionary. "That will not do," returned the native; "but I'll tell you what—if you will give me a lac of rupees, and two English ladies for my wives, I'll consider of it." The Missionary was indignant; and but for the timely interference of the Mayor, matters might have taken a serious turn.

They are not a very active people in repelling the attacks of the tigers, and other wild beasts, that frequent some of the interior parts of the country. Our author accounts for this inactivity, by ascribing it to their belief in predestination and the transmigration of souls.

"A striking instance of this occurred to me, as I was one day sitting reading in our own Bungalow at Meerut. A bird of bustle in the verandah caused me to look up, when I perceived a large snake of the species called by the natives Coprah Capell, or hooded snake, advancing towards me. Starting from my seat, I called to some palankeen bearers, who were looking on, to kill him. With the greatest composure one of them asked if that was my hookah? (order) "To be sure it is," I exclaimed. (The reptile meanwhile spreading his hood, and looking very fierce.) When approaching the snake, he made a profound salaam, and muttering Maaf kurro, (forgive,) with a stick he knocked him on the head, and despatched him in a moment. A very slight blow is sufficient on this part to destroy them.—It is singular, that when one snake has been destroyed, another is sure to come, our people consequently watched, and in a few days killed its partner. To so great an extent do the Hindoos carry their superstitious ceremonies, that they even salaam to their tools of a morning before they begin to use them, and the same when they have finished their day's work, alledging as a reason, that it is to them they are indebted for subsistance. I verily believe this is the only specice of gratitude they are acquainted with.

(From Quin's Memoirs.)

"Those traits in the character of Ferdinand which we have placed before the reader, have shown, that if he wants those high qualifications which are necessary to the government of a great empire in critical circumstances, he is equally destitute of that dignity of manner, that serenity of mind, and that elevation of thought, which ought to accompany such exalted rank. Upon his return to Spain, he abrogated, in a great measure those forms of etiquette which had previously reigned in the Court, and introduced in their place a certain system of familiarity hitherto entirely unknown. At the time of his predecessors of the House of Bourbon, every member of the Royal Family dined in a separate apartment; the services were numerous, and the ceremony with which they were attended, elaborate; and that ordinary act into a kind of court festivity. The dishes were served up in processional order, escorted by a military guard: and such persons as happened to be going through the passage at the time, were obliged to take off their hats and to pass on in a respectful manner. Ferdinand abolished all this ceremony, established the more easy system of dinner en famille, and invited as guests such grandees as offered themselves, the clergy, and the religious communities of both sexes. He was likewise accustomed to have different amusements in his apartment; such as concerts, sleight of hand, and phantasmagoria; at which only a limited number of courtiers attended. Ferdinand did not find much pleasure in the demeanour of those persons; but he derived great enjoyment from that of the inferior servants, whom he treated with the greatest familiarity, and to whom he allowed the most extraordinary liberties. Amongst them was one Chamorro, celebrated as a sort of stupid and vulgar buffoon, who, by his fooleries afforded infinite diversion to Ferdinand, and obtained a sufficient degree of influence with him to dispose of the first offices in the kingdom. * * *

Ferdinand embittered the final moments of his mother, Maria Louisa, by expressing to her, in consideration of his Ambassador Vargas, an eager desire to get possession of his mother's diamonds, which were both numerous and magnificent. Vargas executed his commission with the indelicacy of a man who is anxious only to please authority, and has no respect for the unfortunate. The Queen objected to give them up; and declared in presence of Cardinal Gonsalvi, and other illustrious personages of the Court of Rome, that the diamonds should not go out of her possession until death; and that she would much sooner throw them into the Tiber, than give them to her son. She did keep them until she breathed her last, but her body was yet warm when Vargas took possession of the desired treasure, carrying his zeal in Ferdinand's service to such an extent, as even to remove from the fingers of the corpse a gold ring of paltry value, which Maria Louisa had signified a wish to take with her to the tomb.

"The execution of the will of the royal parents showed how inflexible Ferdinand can be when he wishes. They fixed considerable pensions on several persons who had been in their service during their exile. These pensions were all sanctioned by Ferdinand, with the exception of those which were bequestied in favour of individuals who had shown any attachment to Godoy.

"This want of sensibility is one of the most characteristic traits of the present king of Spain. His selflove and pride may be deeply affected, but his heart is never touched. He was affectionately attached to his second wife, Maria Isabel of Braganza; but he was playing at nine-pins when her funeral left the palace, and the following day, there was not the least sign of grief in his countenance. The uncommon fickleness of his imagination prevents any one sentiment from overruling him, or from making any serious impression on his mind. In adversity he was never dejected; when misfortunes of a formidable nature occurred to him, he still knew how to take advantage of all the alleviating circumstances which they produced. It would seem as if he counted with certainty on the combinations of the future, which have so often extricated him from the most imminent dangers.

"Ferdinand is a man of middle stature; his figure is large beyond proportion; his complexion is pale, and his health is frequently interrupted by extremely violent attacks of the gout. To this affliction, and to the infirmities of his youth, he owes a flaccidity of appearance which does not correspond with his age. His features are strongly marked, and rather deformed, though his look wants not animation. His constant custom of smoking segars, which he scarcely ever suspends, gives a bad odour to his breath. The versatility of his features is so great, that the most eminent artists have failed to give a perfect likeness of him.—His gestures are lively, and often violent. He speaks in a hurried manner, and all his actions partake of the precipitate character of his conversation. He is subject to no ruling passion. He loves the chase, and his only pleasure is in making those observe his paces. His demeanour towards those who are intimate with him, gones beyond the bounds of familiarity; and even during the private audiences which he gives to those who are recommended by his favorites, he forgets all etiquette, reclines on a sofa, and smokes, and enters into conversation with strangers. He possesses a very strong memory, and is so deep a dissembler, that he often eludes the observation of those who known him most intimely.

"The events of Ferdinand's life have contributed to increase the defects of his character, and to induce him to follow, without any reserve, his favourite inclinations. He has been always cast down through his own fault; he has himself always created the germs of those evils which have come upon him; but he has always found a foreign hand to rescue him from every misfortune.

"His hatred of enlightened ideas, and the fear which he entertains of well informed men, are features in his character which have exercised, and will continue to exercise, great influence upon the destinies of Spain She, unhappily, gives herself up to the most profound ignorance, while all the other communities of England nobly emulate each other in improving the useful sciences. Ferdinand abhors those sciences as dangerous to mear, and although public opinion does not set him down as a devotee, and even supposes him to be sincerely religious, he will always continue to favour fanaticism as the best auxiliary of absolute power, which is the idol of his soul, and the most irresistible of his inclinations."

LAST MOMENTS OF THOMAS PAINE.

(From the New Monthly Magazine.)

Mr. Editor,

The subjoined account of the concluding scenes of the life of Thomas Paine was read at a public meeting some weeks ago, by a very respectable member of the Society of Friends, in my hearing. From his Brother I procured this copy of the account. I rather think that William Dilwyn, his daughter, and the young person who visited Paine, and gave the account to Dilwyn's daughter, are of the same Society. As almost the whole world was injured by Paine's pernicious principles, I hope you will not refuse to increase the circulation, as widely as possible, of his recantation.—Wishing you increasing and continued success, I remain, &c. A. B.

The following is an extract of a letter received by Mr. William Dilwyn, of Walthamstow, Essex, from his Daughter, in America. The writer is of the most unquestionable respectability, and appears recently to have received the information stated in it from a person equally entitled to credit. The latter had resided in a family in the near neighbourhood of the celebrated Thomas Paine, who resided at Greenwich, near New York, and during his last illness, had contributed to his comfort by occasionally preparing and sending him food and refreshments more adapted to his situation than he usually enjoyed. These the informant chose to be the bearer of, (although his personal circumstances were so deplorable that the air of his chamber could scarcely be endured) to his bed-side. In performing this humane office, she had the opportunities of conversation with him, which authorize the Writer's belief, that he exhibited another proof of Dr. Young's assertion, that

The latter proceeds to say, that she found him frequently writing, and believed, from what she saw and heard, that, when his pain permitted, he was almost always so engaged, or in prayer, in the attitude of which she more than once saw him when he thought himself alone. One day he inquired if she had ever read the "Age of Reason?" and being answered in the affirmative, desired to know her opinion of that book. She replied, that she was but a child when she read it, and probably he would not like to know what she thought of it. Upon which he said, if old enough to read, she was capable of forming some opinion, and from her he expected a candid statement of what that opinion had been. She then said, she thought it the most dangerous and insinuating book she had ever seen—that the more she read, the more she wished to read, and the more she found her mind estranged from all that is good; and that, from a conviction of its evil tendency, she had burnt it, without knowing to whom it belonged. Paine replied to this, that he wished all who had read it had been as wise as she; and added, "If ever the Devil had an agent on earth, I have been one."—At another time, when she was in his chamber, and the master of her family was sitting by his bed-side, one of Paine's former companions came in; but seeing them with him, hastily went out, drawing the door after him with violence, and saying, "Mr. Paine, you have lived like a man, I hope you will die like one." Upon which Paine, turning to his principal visitor, said, "You see what miserable comforters I have."—An unhappy female, who had accompanied him from France, lamented her hard fate, observing, "For his man I have given up my family and friends, my property and religion; judge then of my distress, when he tells me that the principles he has taught me will not bear me out!"

POETRY.

The murder of Duncan King of Scotland, with the ambition and subsequent fate of the usurper Macbeth, form the ground work of Shakespeare's sublime tragedy of that name. The imagery of the enchantments of the North, is introduced with so much judgment and felicity, that it carries the imagination away captive, in despite of reason.—The following small piece will be read with

(not by every admirer of that noble play:—

DUNCAN'S WARNING.

RECITATIVE.

As o'er the heath, amid his steel clad Thanes,
The royal Duncan rode in martial pride,
Where, full to view, high toss'd with glitt'ring vanes,
Macbeth's strong tow'rs o'erhung the mountain's side;

In dusky mantle wrapp'd, a grisly form
Rush'd with a giant stride across the way;
And thus, while howl'd around the rising storm,
In hollow thund'ring accents you'd dismay.

SONG.

Stop, O King, thy destin'd course,
Curl thy standard, turn thy horse;
Death besets this onward track,
Come no farther, quickly back.

Hear'st thou not the raven's croak?
See'st thou not the blasted oak?
Feel'st thou not the loaded sky?
Read thy danger, king, and fly.

Lo! yon castle banners glare
Bloody through the troubled air,
Lo! what spectres on the roof,
Frowning bid thee stand aloof.

Murder, like an eagle, waits
Perch'd above the gloomy gates,
Just in act to pounce his prey,
Come not near—away, away.

Let not plighted faith beguile
Honour's semblance, beauty's smile
Fierce ambition's venom'd dart
Rankles to the fest'ring heart.

Treason arm'd against thy life,
Points his dagger, whets his knife,
Drugs his stupefying bowl,
Steals his unrelenting soul.

Now 'tis time; ere grisly night
Closes round thee, speed thy flight;
If the threshold once be crost,
Duncan, thou'rt for ever lost.

On he goes! resistless fate
Hastes to fill his mortal date;
Cease, ye warnings! vain tho' true;
Murder'd King, adieu! adieu!

BONGAMI BEARING THE CROSS.

A caricature of the celebrated Bergami has lately been published in Italy, representing him loaded with honours and crosses, and under it there is the following very appropriate inscription:

Nei tempi pin antichi pin feroci
Si appiccavano i ladri sulle croci;
In tempi pin moderni a pin leggiadri
Si appiccavano le croci in su dei ladri.

Which may be thus translated into English, though it will of course lose much of its point:

In ancient times the custom was
To hang the rogues upon the cross,
But now the custom is in vogue
To hang the crosses on the rogue.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith;

To all to whom these Presents shall come—GREETING:

WHEREAS by Proclamation bearing date the Fifth day of June, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventeen, our trusty and well beloved FRANCIS GORE Esquire, late our Lieutenant Governor of our Province of Upper Canada, by and with the advice of the Executive Council thereof, and by virtue of the Authority in him vested in that behalf, did declare and appoint the Port of Ernestown, otherwise commonly called the Port of Bath, within the Midland District of this Province, to be a Port of Entry and Clearance for all Goods and Merchandize, not being entirely prohibited and for the payment of all Duties, liable to be paid on all Goods and Merchandize brought into this Province from the United States of America.

Executive Council Office
York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jubez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency, the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL.
Clk. Ex'o Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration fixing the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 8th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Cl'k. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared va ant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties. JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.:

A Township North of Mariposa, advertised from the Surveyor General's Office on the 19th of October, as—

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the great part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant,
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 25th, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU have taken it for granted, I trust, that if I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament, I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and I hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that should strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

WHEN I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken; and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my past period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be not such as you approve, it would be uncandid to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is never likely to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I FEEL that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service:—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue, but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have found in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should wave considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

WITH a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
JNO. B. ROBINSON.

MAY 12th, 1824.

TO THE FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

It appears that, because I have thought proper to stop the insertion of my Address in the Newspapers of this place, several persons, and amongst them the Editor of the Observer, have presumed to say that I have declined the Election! Be assured I am not about to desert the Station I hold, but by your Election of another in my stead, which, from what I understand of your general wishes on the subject, I have little reason to apprehend.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your Faithful Servant,
W. W. BALDWIN.

Editorial Commentary.

SINCE our last, we have received the first number of a new work to be published weekly, (ostensibly at Queenston, but in reality at Lewiston) entitled the "COLONIAL ADVOCATE" edited by Wm. Lyon Mackenzie Esquire; and to be conducted, professedly, on what are called independent principles.

THE opinions formed of Newspapers, and their writers, have been nearly as various as their characters. THE IDLER says, to write news in its perfection requires such a combination of qualities, that a man completely fitted for the task is not always to be found. In SIR HENRY WOTTON'S jocular definition, "an ambassador is said to be a man of virtue sent abroad to tell lies for the advantage of his country; a news writer is a man of virtue, who writes lies at home for his own profit."—To these compositions is required neither genius nor knowledge, neither industry nor upright-liness; but CONTEMPT OF SHAME, and INDIFFERENCE TO TRUTH are absolutely necessary.—He who by a long familiarity with infamy has obtained these qualities, may confidently tell to-day what he intends to contradict tomorrow; he may affirm fearlessly what he knows that he shall be obliged to recant, and may write letters from Washington, New York, or Lewiston, to himself.

THE original object, beyond all doubt, was the communication of political news; but, as DR. KNOX, emphatically declares, "in the gratification of party resentment and as the tools of faction, many of them have displayed a foul mass of falsehood, malignity, and FOLLY; such personal calumny and detraction, as degrades human nature, and could only have been expected from the agency of infernal spirits supplying the Press of a Pandemonium!

NEVERTHELESS, adds the learned DOCTOR, with all their imperfections on their heads, Newspapers are upon the whole the best bulwarks of our liberty, and the surest defence of the helpless against the proud man's contumely and the oppressor's wrong. They sound the alarm bell throughout an empire, and no influence is great enough to stifle the sound, before the people examine into its cause.—Let us bear all their evils, rather than endanger the liberty of the Press.

So say we, and a few skip jack imps from the Pandemonium of Democracy into the bargain.—But we must be allowed to brush away any little dirt that may be squirted upon our garments as they splash along, according to old DRAYTON,

"Thorough water, thorough fire,
Thorough brake, thorough briar,
Thorough muck, thorough mire!",

In this instance the dirt will be removed with all due gentleness, and humanity, in consideration of the smallness of the offender.—But, to be a little more serious, and having, in reality, some personal respect for the Editor of the said "ADVOCATE"—who, we hope, is not quite so far gone as he appears to be,—we are desirous of passing as favourable a critique on his bantling, at its debut, as our sense of duty will permit;—at the same time, we should be greatly wanting in the obligation we owe to the Public,—to the Executive of this Province—and, to ourselves, were we wholly to overlook the very extraordinary course which this independent Editor has thought proper to dopt at his very outset.

HE begins, (no doubt with a view of striking a panic into his rivals or adversaries on the stage of Politics in this Country,) by placing himself in a really striking attitude, dealing out sage sermonic, a thundering, palpable, hit—a positive facer—to DR. FISHER; and, a sort of back-handed tip (though luckily without drawing any claret, whatever may be the quantum of black strap that may flow in consequence,) to our most noble selves.—Now this is butting and kicking, at the same time, with a vengeance;—and, in a manner which the laws of honourable warfare by no means permit, being what is termed foul-play, or foul, indeed.

Before we go further we have also to inquire by what route the "ADVOCATE" is to be conveyed to SIR THOMAS BRISBANE, and its Australasian readers?—as our own ambition may hereafter lead us to desire a circulation equally as extensive, when the confines of these Provinces shall be found too narrow for the usefulness of our labours, and the fulness of our fame——Probably one of Norna's winged broomsticks might be had from Shetland, on which to horse some witchlike courier of the air as a ready bearer of the news: and, as SIR THOMAS is said to be a great lover of Astronomy, he may be agreeably surprised, when contemplating the starry heavens some moony night in the beautiful regions of New Holland, on beholding the novel messenger, descending from the upper regions, laden with despatches from our Queen-Lewiston Advocate, after having left a few bundles for the edification of sundry planets in the way.—What brave news for the convicts in Paradise, and the Australasian Gazette!

BUT, again to be serious.—It is exceedingly unfair, to say the least of it, to accuse DR. FISHER with besieging Quebec and our noble Governor in Chief—with American Printers, paper, and types;—and most marvelously inconsiderate and inconsistent is this accusation from a man who is found in the act of invading this Province also with American printers, from an American would-be city—and with American paper, and American types—"All republican agents, animate and inanimate," and with most righteous republican principles into the bargain; and what is worse, all under false colours!—DR. FISHER'S paper did not pretend to be any other than a New York paper.—This paper of ours, unconnected, shake-bag, periods; this unblushing, Lenzen faced Advocate, affects to be a Queenston and Upper Canadian Paper, whereas it is to all intents and purposes, and radically, a Lewiston and genuine Yankee paper.—How can this man of truth, this pure and holy reformer and regenerator of the unhappy and prostrate CANADA reconcile such bare-faced and impudent deception—!

WITH the alleged utter-expulsion of Dr. FISHER, we have nothing to do; though, we may say that, both when and after, that gentleman was resident in the United States, we have frequently lamented a man of his talents and acquirements, and power of attaining extensive influence, should have occasionally been the advocate of any species of despotism, whether holy or unholy, or of monkish superstition, and Turkish barbarity; which was undoubtedly sometimes the case when touching on the affairs of Greece and Spain.—No Englishman, of all other men, ought to forget that his country stands at the head of enlightened nations, and is ever the staunch advocate of rational freedom, and the steady supporter of those liberal principles on which her own civil rights and religious toleration are founded. It is, indeed, almost certain, that a faithful regard to existing treaties, and certain counsel, of Canning, alone prevented Great Britain from taking an open and active part in the Greek and Spanish contests, ranging, as she is ever wont to do, on the side of the injured and oppressed.—Let any one who is desirous of knowing, imbibing, and acting upon the true British, patriotic, enlightened, sentiments of the present day—study the orations of MR CANNING!—and he who would please the most generous, illustrious, and liberal, and accomplished, Monarch that ever swayed a septre—GEORGE THE IV. OF ENGLAND, must take some other method than that of becoming the blind tool of contin-tal despotism, and what has been of late years termed ultra royalism!

LEAVE we DR. FISHER, however, to fight his own battles, in no wise doubting his capability and prowess, and proceed we more closely to grapple with our new opponent, the Queen-Lewiston, Advocate.

(To be continued next week)

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

MS. OF MILTON.—Mr. Peel has announced in the House of Commons, that the manuscript of Milton, recently discovered, the nature of which is to furnish proofs of the truth of the Christian religion, was about to be published under the auspices of the King.

NORTH WEST EXPEDITION.—The Hecla and Fury, under Capt. Parry, were to sail from England, on their interesting voyage to the North.—They are to be re-fitted with propelling wheels, to be worked either with a capstan or straits, in the transport which is to accompany them thither.

Barbadoes, March 29.

BLOODY BATTLE IN AFRICA.—The brig Elizabeth, which arrived Thursday last from Africa, gives an account of a sanguinary conflict that lately happened between the Ashantees, a very powerful race, and a force composed of about 4000 natives, and others of Cape Coast Castle, an English settlement in that neighbourhood. The former had, of late, made frequent incursions for the purpose of plundering the latter territory, and in one of these, had seized a British serjeant, whom they murdered, and afterwards mutilated in a most shocking manner. To avenge this crime, and the insult offered to the English flag, Sir C. MCarthy, Governor of Sierra Leone, immediately prepared this expedition, which was formed into three divisions, one of which he commanded, and was accompanied by many merchants as volunteers; before the three parties could form a junction, Sir Charles was intercepted by 10,000 of the Ashantees, whom he fought as long as his ammunition lasted; but being at length overpowered by such an immense number of the foe, he, and those with him, were either massacred or made prisoners, and from the bloodthirsty character of the enemy, it is feared the first of these disasters has befallen them, and under circumstances of aggravated cruelty. Although 14 days had elapsed after the departure of this Expedition, no intelligence of Sir Charles or the Merchants had reached the Cape when the Elizabeth left that coast. It has been assumed, that the Ashantees had been instigated to their late ill conduct by some foreign traders in the neighbouring district, on account of the exertions of the British in intercepting the African Slave Trade.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.—An extract of a letter from Rio Janeiro under date of Feb. 21 says:—

"We have in town the King of the Sandwich Islands, on his way to England, and, as it is said, thence to the United States. He is accompanied by his Queen, and a suite of ten persons.

TO PREVENT DROWNING.—As every invention that may tend to rescue a fellow creature from destruction is to be prized, we copy from an English paper the following recipe for saving drowning men, which, if it prove as successful as it is simple and free of inconcludable advantage. "A man's hat and pocket handkerchief are all that are necessary. Spread the handkerchief on the ground, and place a hat with the brim upwards in the middle of the handkerchief—fasten to the handkerchief over the hat as you would do a bundle, keeping the knots as nearly as possible in the centre of the opening. Now, by seizing the knots with one hand, and keeping the crown of the hat upwards, any person, though unable to swim, may fearlessly plunge into the water with a rope, or any other thing that may be necessary to save the life of a fellow creature."

VICE ROY OF EGYPT.—An account is received by way of Odessa, that Ali Pasha, the enterprising Vice Roy of Egypt, has declared himself independent of the Turkish government. Great consternation was produced at Constantinople by this intelligence. The news was not believed in Paris. The Vice Roy was to have furnished 10,000 troops for the war against the Greeks.

EASTERN MAGNIFICENCE.—Sir John Malcolm, in his late account of Central India, to give us some idea of eastern magnificence, states, that according to respectable testimony, "700 Elephants, in velvet housings, walked at the coronation ceremony of a young prince, through the streets of Mandoo," a city whose magnificent ruins may still be traced over an extent of ground 37 miles in circumference.

ACTION OFF ALGIE RS.—An action is said to have taken place off Algiers, between the British frigate Naiad, of 36 guns, and the French Frigate Hermione, of 44 guns. It was occasioned in consequence of the latter attempting to run into Algiers without showing her colours, when she was fired into. A close action ensued, but the French frigate finally hoisted the white flag, and was then permitted to proceed on her voyage. She suffered severely in men.

THE STOCKS.—It appears that the French Surgeons have obtained a triumph most honorable for themselves, and most precious to humanity.—Dr. Civiale has succeeded in curing the disorder of the stone without the operation of cutting. His method consists in the introduction of an instrument, which seizes the stone, then crushes it, and reduces it to powder. This ingenious process is far less afflicting, and does not compromise the existence or even the health of patients.—Paris Paper.

ACTIVE.—Yes,—in a room full of ladies and gentlemen, a lady requested a gentleman, who was next the fire place, to ring the bell. "I never before," said the gentleman, "heard of acting a pun; for once I will try." So saying, he rose, pulled a gold ring from his finger, approached the lady with it, and requested him to ring the bell; and who was the finest lady in the room, and deliberately put the ring on one of her fingers, saying "it is with much pleasure, indeed, that I obey your orders, and thus ring the Belle."

HIGHLY MAN EXTRAORDINARY!—The Duke of Richmond had some capital hunters in Sussex. A monkey who was kept in the same stable was remarkably fond of riding the horses, skipping from one to the other, and teasing the poor animals incessantly. The groom made a complaint to the Duke, who immediately formed a plan to remedy the evil. "If he is so fond of riding, we'll endeavour to give him enough of it." A complete jockey dress was provided for the monkey, and the next time the hounds went out, jacko in his uniform was strapped on the back of one of the best hunters. The view hollow being given, away they went through thick and thin, the horse carrying so light a bur then presently left all the company behind. Some of the party, passing by a farm house, enquired of a countryman whether he had seen the fox. "Aye sure (said the man,) he has gone over you fallow." "And was there any one up with him?" "Way, yea (said John) there be a little man in a yellow jacket, riding as though the devil be in um. Hope from my heart the young gentleman may'nt meet with a fall, but he rides most moustrous hard."

The experiment had the desired effect; jacko was sufficiently chaffed by his exercise to make him dislike the sight of a horse or a stable ever afterwards.

From the London Courier, March 20.

DISCHARGE OF CANNON BY STEAM.—Mr. Perkins, whose inventions in the engraving of steel, and improvements in the construction of steam-engines are well known, has brought to perfection a branch of art, on which there may be some difference of opinion—that of the more speedy destruction of our species! The fact, we believe is as follows:—Mr. Perkins, while experimenting on the expansive force of Steam, subjected to very elevated temperature, with the view of applying its power to the purposes of the steam Engine, was very naturally led to investigate its applications in many other departments of art, where great mechanickal force was required; and among others, to that of discharging ordinance. We are enabled to give a brief description of the present apparatus; which is constructed with the view of showing the application of steam to this purpose, rather than as a model. A copper pipe of two inches diameter is connected at one extremity with the steam reservoir belonging to Mr. Perkins' improved engine, and at the other end with a chamber formed of metal flanges; into this chamber a strong gun barrel is firmly screwed, so as to be perfectly air tight, (and two others connected with it,) and extended in a horizontal direction. From the upper portion of the chamber, two pipes or tubes projected about fifteen inches, of sufficient diameter to allow musket bullets to pass freely down, for the purpose of loading or shooting the gun. The steam being laid on the apparatus, nothing more is necessary than to lift the short lever of a sliding valve, when the rush of steam into the chamber instantaneously discharges the bullet through the gun barrel, with a force much greater than o dinary gun powder. The bullets being received against an iron target, are completely flattened. Mr Perkins threw into the pipe or feeder of the apparatus, three or four bullets at a time, which were stopped in the gun barrels more than once, from want of sufficient steam pressure at the moment. But it is obvious this may be avoided by giving any degree of pressure requisite. Mr Perkins has not yet employed a greater power than about 35 atmospheres, though the strength of his apparatus would admit five times that power, if necessary. The apparatus is capable of discharging 100 balls per minute, or in fact, as fast as they can be put into the feeders, and the gun barrel made turned in any direction. We believe Messrs. Bolton and Watt made some experiments, many years back, with the view of discharging cannon by steam; but the plan was carried into execution, from some cause with which we are not acquainted.

UNITED STATES.

We wish our limits could have permitted an insertion of the entire piece, of which the following is a paragraph, as it is a fine illustration of the gratitude of democrats and republicans!

The editor of the Baltimore Morning Chronicle thus gives vent to his indignation at the late act that stigmatized the N. York legislature.

It will be recorded to the scandal of New-York legislation, that at the very time when that state was reaping the rich reward brought about by that glorious consummation of enlightened industry, laborious perseverance and gigantic genius, at the time while the wealth of the continent found an outlet to the ocean, by the assistance of the Hudson, when all the other members of the vast confederated political family gazed with admiration on the project, De Witt Clinton, the man whose genius planned and executed this magnificent and stupendous design, was hurled by the legislature of New York, from his office, as an object unworthy of popular confidence. His enemies could be no otherwise consistent with themselves, than to receive the benefits that he bestowed, and then turn their benefactor out of office; it is the only way in which they are able to testify their sense of the obligation.—It would be a curious point of enquiry, what the value of the estates of these gentlemen legislators was, both before, and after, the formation of this canal; to what amount they had arisen, in consequence of De Witt Clinton's labors—for, in proportion to the amount of such benefit, would they naturally be anxious to sting and bite the hand of their benefactor—their sense of gratitude knows of no other mode of requital. This thing will not remain circumscribed by the local limits of New-York—the waves of the Atlantic are wafting the shameful intelligence to Europe already; that De Witt Clinton, projected and accomplished the great Western Canal—that he received no public reward, other than legislative ingratitude for his services, will shortly be told in the cabinets of kings, emperors and princes. But the subject is not to sleep here—all the better feelings of man, all that enobles and adorns our common nature, without distinction or party, will be arrayed on the other side of the question. This deed will be regarded as a stigma on the American name, as a reproach on the age in which we live? But could any thing better be anticipated from legislators of this stamp, men who solemnly pledged themselves to restore to the people their electoral rights, and then so magnanimously turned their backs upon their own promises—men who had made themselves the slaves of a mean and miserable caucus at Washington, and in the dirty work of corruption and venality, were content to do the humble drudgery of apprentices—men who were not even allowed to sin, according to their own free will and pleasure? No! their parts were given out by the Crawford caucus; they waited until they knew what point of honour and faith, they were commanded to violate.

From the British Traveller.

PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE.

Paris, Jan. 7th, 1824.

THEY who imagine that the threat of the American President as to European interference in the neighbouring Commonwealths, is a mere brutum fulmen, do not, at least, find participators in the Royalist Coffee-houses and Saloons of Paris, nor in the Columns of the fanatic and Ultra Journals.—Le Scelerat! le Revolutionaire! Quelle insolence de parler de la sorte!——Such are the exclamations that accompany any reference to that document, and which instantly make the impartial hearer conclude, that something must have happened highly conducive to the welfare and happiness of mankind.—Nothing, certainly, could have been better timed, or of deeper consequence in its probable results, than this public declaration. England has already announced her determination to prevent any attempts at crushing South American Independence, except on the part of Spain, which, in the utter imbecility of that besotted Government, is tantamount to a general prohibition; and we now see the United States manifesting a disposition to unite with her in the same generous policy. It is always delightful to behold any approximation between these two free and kindred countries—the British of Europe and that of America; but it is peculiarly animating at the present moment, when the politician, who carefully watches the signs of the times, to catch from them glimpses of futurity, may draw plea sant prophecies as to the ultimate fate of the world, from the smallest communion of interests in these two powers. It is not improbable that this common recognition, and identity of views as to South America, may eventually lead to an intimate union with them, to a confederacy, in short, of all the Constitutional Governments and free countries in the world—to an alliance which might, without sacrilege and hypocricy, be indeed termed Holy, against that monstrous and liberticided league which has usurped its name.

——This would be a truly glorious spectacle—the good principle embattled against the evil one; light, liberty and religion, enrolled against darkness, slavery, and superstition; and to this conclusion must it indisputablely come at last. As has generally been the case, the free States would then be the maritime ones, and dependant as Europe has become from her luxuries, as well as commercial habits, upon America and Asia, she will always be controlled by those who have the command of the sea. England, in the last war, with a navel force never exceeding a hundred and forty thousand seamen and marines, blockaded every enemy's port in the four quarters of the world, and was victorious upon every sea. Suppose her in alliance with the United States, and the Independent Governments of South America—imagine a combined fleet, with a few thousand English troops on board, stationed between the two combustible Peninsulas of Spain and Italy—and a proclamation issued from Great Britain, as the head of the confederacy, promising its support to what ever country would hoist the standard of revolt against the Holy Alliance, and she would presently set in motion the elements of a moral earthquake, which would simultaneously shake down the crowns and sceptres from the tyrants, bigots, and dotards who wear them, and give a total regeneration to Europe.

GOURLAY, AND THE FORTY OLD WOMEN OF WILY.

Petition of Robert Gourlay and forty Old Women of Wily to the House of Commons, praying it to ameliorate their condition, and to put them, so far as it regards the possession of Land, Pigs, Poultry, and o their things on an equal footing with the Negro Wench Slaves in the West Indies.

To the Honorable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, the Petition or Robert Gourlay and Female Parishioners of Wily, in Wiltshire,

Humbly showeth,

That the men of Wily have again and again, during the last nine years, petitioned your honourable house in order that the condition of labourers may be ameliorated. That during last Session, three of their petitions were ordered to be printed (8th, 19th, and 27th, June, 1823,) and to these your petitioners would at this time refer.

That the women of Wily have hitherto refrained from publickly joining in prayer for this purpose; but, understanding that negroe slaves have become special favourites with certain Members of Parliament, and that an appeal had been made to the religion, justice and humanity of the inhabitants of the British Empire, in their behalf, they no longer think it improper, even for females to petition your Honourable House. That your petitioners have learned that Negroe slaves have not only a sufficiency of land allowed them, free of charges, for the growth of provisions, but twenty six days of each year, besides Sundays and holidays, for the cultivation of the same:—That Negroe slaves are not obliged to work more hours a-day than English labourers, and do not perform, in an equal period of time, nearly so much work:—That Negroe slaves are not only able to bring up their children, but encouraged to marry and have large families:—That Negroe slaves rear quantities of pigs and poultry, not only for their own use, but for sale; and that, with industry and frugality, they may possess sufficient means to purchase up, were they permitted, their children's freedom.

That during the last fifteen years, the condition of Negroe slaves has been improved, in many respects, while that of English labourers has become notoriously worse. That formerly it was not usual for English women to be subjected to hard labour, out of doors, during inclement weather; but now, some of your petitioners are obliged, even in winter, to spread manure in the fields, to pick stones for the roads, and do other work ill befitting the female frame, and manifestly at variance with the design of PROVIDENCE.

That your petitioner, Robert Gourlay, has lately conversed with women of Compton, a neighbouring parish, who are now, and have long been, employed in repairing the public roads, and who receive only sixpence a-day for this employment:—That he has heard their sad complaints and anxious desire for milder treatment.

That on the 10th day of the present month of February, while the air was chilly in the extreme, and the ground thickly wreathed over with snow, he, the said Robert Gourlay, travelling in Wiltshire, on the road from London to Bath, saw women spreading earth on the pastures, women planting beans in the dirty ploughed fields; and, in one place of the high way, six women together breaking stones for its repair.

That your petitioners have seen the report from the Select Committee on the employment of the poor, in Ireland, and particularly page 132, where the Countess of Glengall declares, that "The people under the better sort of farmers are worse off than any of the slaves in the West Indies." And your petitioners, from their own experience in the parish of Wily, are too well assured that this declaration may be perfectly correct and true.

Your petitioners, therefore, most earnestly entreat, that before the charity of your Honourable House is entirely expended on Negroe Slaves, you will think of doing justice to English labourers, and more especially to females:—That you will appoint, without delay, a Commission to visit Wily Parish to inquire into the actual condition of the labouring poor, now truly deplorable; so that facts may be better known, and effectual means contrived for relief and improvement; they also entreat that this petition may be printed for more ready perusal by any Committee, Commission, or Board appointed for the consideration of this subject, and they will ever pray.

HORTICULTURE.

As we are satisfied the Peach Tree may be cultivated with success in various parts of CANADA, where it has not yet been tried;— we give the following valuable observations, on the best mode of culture, from the Commercial Advertiser, to be continued in our next.

ED.

ON THE CULTURE OF PEACH TREES.—We recommend to the attention of the public, the following Essay on the cultivation of the Peach Tree. It is written by a practical Horticulturalist, who has an extensive and flourishing nursery of the choicest kinds of this delicious fruit.

For the Commercial Advertiser.

PEACH TREES.

Several considerations seem to render any correct information respecting the successful cultivation of the Peach Tree, a subject of considerable importance. It is a fruit universally admired, and its cultivation here for many years past has generally been very unsuccessful. Various opinions have been entertained as to the deleterious causes which have so universally obstructed the successful culture of this delightful Fruit; and it would be no difficult task to exhibit the erroneous doctrines so long and so widely propagated, respecting the sadly deteriorated state of our peach trees. That melancholy term, "the yellows," and the still more frightful bugbear of "the maggot," with all the evils arising therefrom, have been multiplied into insurmountable obstacles; and the misguided cultivators, directing their sole attention to the discovery of some particular application for the counteracting of these evils, appear to have altogether overlooked the true and radical cause of the failure of the peach tree. This, like every other vegetable, is liable to disease from the inclemency of seasons, from the attacks of insects, and other external violence, from the want of proper nutriment, and lastly, by that natural tendency to decay by which the unalterable laws of nature have wisely limited the ordinary period of duration of every thing that lives. The peach tree is of a comparatively short duration, to the pear or apple; and although it may by budding or grafting, any particular sort may be increased to any amount, yet, as both these operations only extend a continuation of a part of the original plant, its time of duration must terminate; and we have no hesitation in giving it as our opinion, that the late failure of our peach orchards has been more owing to causes arising from the natural termination of the duration of the sorts so long propagated, than from any extraordinary malignancy of disease. If this opinion be correct, there is little wonder to see the long languishing state of our peach orchards, where, instead of adopting that careful and improved mode of culture, calculated to introduce a renovation of the plants, the chief attention has been directed to the cure of evils from which no permanent advantage can ever arise. That our opinion respecting the efficacy of an improved mode of cultivation is correct, will appear from the facts, that where this has been attended to properly, no material injury has been experienced from these diseases, otherwise so widely complained of. It is more than twenty years since I planted out an orchard of peach trees in Greenfield, in Connecticut, for a gentleman in whose employ I then was, and which has never failed, in a single year since, of producing an abundant supply of the finest & most delicious fruit. This gentleman is a most accurate observer, and well skilled in Horticultural subjects.—His young trees have been reared from seed of the finest of his fruit, and inoculated from trees in a healthy flourishing state; his orchard is regularly manured, and constantly retained in a high state of cultivation. In the spring of the year 1807, I planted out a peach orchard of about one acre upon this island, within three miles of the City-Hall, and during the nine succeeding years, viz. till the year 1816, not more than six trees died out of the whole—two or three of which were not thrifty when I set them out, but owing to the quality of their fruit, I wished to try them; the others were injured by a heavy storm, when loaded with fruit; and in fact, I had more trouble in proying up limbs to support fruit, than in guarding against infected farina, or pursuing maggots.

POETRY.

BE TRUE TO THEE.

Be true to thee! O yes—the dove
Ne'er for her mate more fondly cried,
Than I for thee, my gentle love,
When thou wert absent from my side.
I gazed around, but saw no eye
So bright as thus beam smilingly;
I listen'd oft, but heard no sigh,
No friendly voice to welcome me.

Be true to thee! O yes, the night
Shall change at once to blushing day,
Ere I forget, in bloom or blight,
The flower that blest my thorny way;
In smiles or tears, in joy or woe,
My heart shall kindly beat for thee;
And e'en in death 'twill still bestow
Its parting gift—Fidelity.

TRADE WITH IRELAND.—Directions have been given by the Board of Trade to place vessels trading between Great Britain and Ireland on the footing of coasters—in compliance with a memorial from the merchants of Dublin.

We can state upon unquestionable authority, and we are the first to make the communication, that it is the intention forthwith to repeal the whole of the Union duties.—Dublin Evening Mail.

BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

On the 12th of March, the House being in Committee on the Supply, after several sums had been voted for the different West India Colonies, £8,229 for the Civil Establishment of Upper Canada, was proposed.

Mr. Hume thought the nature of the Civil Establishment should be known before the House was called upon to defray the expenses. He had hoped, that after what had been said last year, such a vote would not have been submitted to the House.

Mr. W. Horton stated, that the Colony was poor, though in a progressive state of advancement; two-thirds of the expense was borne by the Colony, which demanded such assistance from England; and the Government had taken every pains in enquiring what reductions could be made.

Mr. Bennet was of opinion that the Colony should maintain its now establishment. The Church Establishment there was a curse rather than a blessing; and the lands belonging to it were in a state of complete barrenness, amidst surrounding fertility.

Mr. W. Horton stated that the Militia Pension List in Upper-Canada, amounted to £4,000 from the expence of the war.

Mr. Bright thought that the Colony should be fostered as a balance to the power of the United States.—He should support the vote.

Mr. Hume would recommend, that within ten years, the Canadas should be declared independent. Upper Canada was no infant Colony, but had existed for more than 40 years. Ministers should see that Lower Canada paid what she owed to Upper, and there would be no need for the present grant. He must divide the Committee, unless he was assured that the grant would be diminished next year, and in the following should wholly cease.

Dr. Lushington had some reasons for knowing a good deal about Upper Canada; and he would not vote with his hon. friend against the grants.

Mr. Bennet would advise his hon. friend not to divide the Committee, as something in the nature of a pledge had been given, that the charge would soon cease.

Mr. Hume would not press a division, as sense the of the Committee appeared against him.

£9,197 was moved for the Civil Establishment of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Hume remarked, that the West India Colonies had been put under very unfair restrictions, to foster the Canadies and Nova Scotia.

£5,194 for the Civil Establishment of New Brunswick, the vote last year having been £6,770.

Mr Hume stated, that the inhabitants of New Brunswick had offered to defray their own expenses, if they were permitted to appoint their own Officers of Customs; to which Mr. W. Horton replied, that the subject was under consideration.

The sum of £15,552 being moved to defray the charges of the Establishment for propagating the Gospel in Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, New-Brunswick, Prince Edward's Island, and the Cape of Good Hope,—

Mr. Hume objected to this vote as too large. He was not satisfied with the account which this Society gave of the appropriation of their funds. In 1818 they stated, that £50,000 of the money raised on the public was for the building of Schools, and that the buildings had commenced: In 1819, they reported that the buildings were finished, and that there were Scholars in them all: In 1820, on enquiry it turned out, that no Schools were built, nor had they any Scholars, nor did the Society deny the truth of this statement, but excused themselves by saying, the misrepresentation originated in a mistake of their Secretary. Would the House now place a sum of £15,000 to a Society that kept such a Secretary? If religious instruction was necessary in those Colonies, let it be given under the direction of the Government. Considering it as money thrown away, he should oppose the grant altogether.

Mr. W. Horton defended the grant as necessary, and he defended the Society from the charge made by the member for Aberdeen. The Society had done much good by their labours—To stop this grant, would be to stop Religious Education in the Colonies.

Mr. Hume contended that the Colonies would pay for their own religious instruction if there was no disposition to throw money away.—Where was Halifax, for instance, a large, populous, and manufacturing place, could not pay their own minister. Why seek

...ard towards paying a salary of £400. to the Rev. Mr. Inglis for religious instructions given by him to the people of Halifax?

Mr. Butterworth, so far from diminishing this vote, would readily increase it.

Mr. Bennet thought the Society had acted negligently; he would not oppose the grant of money, but he would oppose its passing through the hands of these individuals.

Mr. Goulburn defended the grant.—The member for Aberdeen was mistaken if he supposed the Clergy in the Colonies were entirely supported by England. No, on the contrary, they had large tracts of barren lands assigned for their support by the Colonies.—(A loud laugh.)

Sir M. W. Ridley wished to know, whether this money was applied to the propagation of the doctrines of the Church Established, or to the spreading of those enthusiastic doctrines which had done so much mischief.

Mr. Goulburn replied, to the Church of England Establishment only.

Mr. Hume said, this was the strongest argument he had heard against the grant.—(Hear, hear!)—By what right were they to tax the Catholics of Ireland or the Dissenters of England, for the education of a different Sect in the Colonies?

Sir T. Ackland said, he was no way surprised at such a remark from the member for Aberdeen, but he trusted that was no objection in the eyes of the majority of the members of the House. The Society was a Royal Chartered Society, bound to the Church of England; and he considered that the withdrawing of this grant without notice, would be injurious to the cause of Religion, and unjust to persons engaged in moral instruction.

Mr. S. Morland was in favour of the grant.

Lord Althorp could have wished to see it pass thro' the hands of Government; but he would rather give it to the Society than not give it at all.

Mr. T. Wilson feared that if the grant was placed at the disposal of the Governors of Colonies, they would be in much more danger of being misled than the Society was.

Mr. Bennet moved, as an amendment, to leave out the words, "to defray the charges of the Society;" this would leave the money in the hands of the Governors.

The Committee divided; for the original resolution 98, for the amendment 19—Majority 79.

Commons House of Assembly, 19th Jan 1824.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, Messrs McMartin and Chisholm were ordered as a committee to wait upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the foregoing Address

On motion of Mr. NICHOL, it was Resolved that the Resolution of the House of Assembly authorising the payment of Postage on the letters addressed to, and sent by Members, should be rescinded.

Mr. McMARTIN from the Committee to wait on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with the Contingent Address of the House, reported delivering the same, and that His Excellency had been pleased to make thereto the following reply.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly

I shall direct the necessary Warrants to be prepared in compliance with your Address.

At half past two o'clock, P. M. Mr. Lee, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, came to the Bar, and delivered the commands of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for the immediate attendance of the House, at the Bar of the Honourable the Legislative Council Chamber, and having withdrawn, Mr Speaker and the House forthwith proceeded to the Bar of the Honorable the Legislative Council Chamber, where His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, after assenting to the Bills passed by both Houses, with the exception of the Assessment Act, which was left for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, delivered the following most gracious Speech.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

The conclusion of the Public business, which is now disposed of by your unremitted attention, enables me to dispense with your further attendance in Provincial Parliament, but I cannot put an end to this Session without assuring you how fully sensible I am of the judgement and temper which have governed your counsels and given efficacy to your various and extensive labours

The united Representations which you have Addressed to Your Sovereign, on matters of no ordinary importance to the interests of your Country, afford a gratifying proof of your cordial and zealous co operation in the prosecution of your Legislative duties.

You are sufficiently aware that the measure of success which may attend your petitions, must be governed by a view of various and perhaps conflicting Interests; but it will be no less agreeable to Your Sovereign, than it must be satisfactory to the people of this Province, to observe the vigilant attention with which you have regarded every question that can affect the welfare or security of your Country.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I thank you, in His Majesty's name, for the supplies which you have granted me for the ordinary exigences of the year, and for the prudence you have manifested in guarding against temporary inconvenience to the public service by authorising a loan in anticipation of the payments expected from Quebec; and you may be assured that the repeated testimonies which I have received of your confidence and support, shall continue to be met on my part with a disposition to justify your reliance by a regular & economical administration of the Revenue.

Hon Gentlemen. and Gentlemen.

I am happy to concur with you in affording countenance and support to the first efforts of a spirit of enterprise which has been directed to the improvement of our internal Navigation, and which affords the most pleasing and convincing proof of increasing intelligence and wealth.

The measures by which you propose to render effectual the Acts formerly passed for subjecting all the granted Lands in this Province to a moderate indiscriminating Assessment, have the decided concurrence of my own judgement, and I have reason to believe they will be found perfectly to accord with the opinion of His Majesty's Government, fully convinced of the necessity of some measure to contract the evils occasioned by unoccupied and neglected lands, and acceding entirely to the principles of the provisions which you have proposed, I have every hope that the reference for His Majesty's consideration which has appeared to me proper, will result in the declaration of the Royal Assent

The provisions you have made for the better collecting of the Revenue and for obtaining a more accurate census of the Population will, I trust, be found effectual.

I entertain an ardent hope that under the protection of divine Providence, the permanent support which you have contributed in your amendments of the Com Scool Act, to the cause of religious instruction, & the general dissemination of knowledge, will be productive of the happiest effects; such objects the wisest and most virtuous will best appreciate, and the attention you have given to them will confer lasting honor on yourselves.

I cannot refrain from adverting to the present tranquil and happy state of this Province, and pointing out to your observation how materially that harmony and public spirit which have prevailed in the Councils of the Legislature have led to a mutual confidence between the Government and the people, and produced a highly favourable influence, both on the general prosperity and on the contentment and happiness of private life.

You well know how greatly individual security, comfort, and convenience, as well as the whole interior order and economy of a Country depend on the just fulfilment of those ordinary duties which the Law requires, and I am persuaded that in your respective Counties, you will be desirous to impress truths, so important upon the minds of those who look up to your example, or are influenced by your advice.

After which the Hon. the Speaker of the Legislative Council, declared that it was His Excellency's pleasure that the Parliament should be prorogued to Monday the first day of March and declared the Parliament Prorogued to the said first day of March, to be then and there holden.

Executive Council Office, York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

Executive Council Chamber, York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Cl'k. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 20th Jan. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Cl'k Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that it all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties. JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

A Township North of Mariposa, advertised from the Surveyor General's Office on the 19th of October, as-

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

York, May 13th, 1824. 21—3w.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the great er part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 25th, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF YORK.

GENTLEMEN,

YOU have taken it for granted, I trust, that if I had been induced by any circumstances to decline offering myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Parliament, I should not have suffered you to remain to this time, ignorant of my intention; and if, on my part, I may have appeared, to some of you, to rely too securely upon the assurance that you had no desire to commit your interests to other hands, it has arisen from a consciousness that I have done nothing that should weaken, and a hope, perhaps, that I have done some things that should strengthen the good understanding that has hitherto subsisted between us.

WHEN I first solicited your suffrages, Gentlemen, it was under circumstances very different from the present. The four years that has since passed, have given me experience of the duties which I had undertaken; and have afforded you the opportunity of observing to what extent they have been fulfilled.—You can now judge by a test surer than professions;—and I will enable you to form your judgment the more decidedly, by stating plainly, that the feelings and principles, which I have discovered during my past period of service, are those which, I am convinced I shall be governed by on all future occasions, and under all circumstances.—If, therefore, they be not such as you approve, it would be uncandid to hold out a probability of a change, which my duty, and my inclination, would equally forbid; and which, I hope, my conduct is never likely to exhibit.

You judge too correctly, Gentlemen, I am sure, not to deem it unbecoming that I should express any personal anxiety on the subject which induces this Address. The confidence I would appeal to, should neither be asked for on private grounds, nor bestowed from unworthy motives.

I FEEL that, as your Representative, I have labored not sparingly; and, I hope, not uselessly, in the Public Service:—those labors, if supported by your confidence, it will give me pleasure to continue, but, if there be any one among us from whom you think you can obtain a more zealous devotion of his attention, and the application of talents more useful to the common good than you have found in me, it will become your duty; and as a Member of the same Community, it would be my interest as well as yours, that you should wave considerations of private friendship, and place the opportunity within his reach.

WITH a sincere desire to advance the general good of Upper Canada, and with a particular regard for your interests and happiness,

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,
JNO. B. ROBINSON.

VOL. III. Our endeavor will be to "stamp the very body of the time—its form and pressure"—we shall extenuate nothing, nor shall we set down aught in malice. No. 23.

THURSDAY, JUNE 3d, 1824.

Editorial Commentary.

AN instance of wilful blindness usually rouses our indignation in the same proportion that a moral or physical deprivation of sight moves our compassion, and excites our pity. A corrupt or malicious perversion of a manifest truth produces the same effect. If honesty is the best policy, candour is equally necessary in the formation of an upright and manly character; and, for his own sake, it is to be lamented that the 'ADVOCATE,' at his very outset, has shewn himself equally destitute of both.

NOW but a licentious democrat, bent on mischief, and lost in the mazes of his own bewilderments, could have so far perverted and misapplied the few lines which he thought proper to quote from one of Mr FOTHERGILL'S Addresses to the Electors of the County of Durham:—the passage is this,

"Having experienced many of them in common with you, I know your wants; and, I think, I know some of the deep and latent causes why this fine country has so long languished in a state of comparative stupour and inactivity, while our more enterprising neighbours are laughing us to scorn. All I desire is an opportunity of attempting the cure of some of the evils we labour under;" &c, &c.

Now, it must be the obvious intent of this passage to shew that Mr. F. conceived the fault to be with the House of Assembly; and, that the evils complained of, were remediable by that branch of the Legislature, if any where, on the well known axiom that all Law is for the people;—from the people;—and, when inefficient, must be remedied or rectified by the people:—and, therefore, he was desirous of assisting in the great work. It is impossible he could be such a fool as to suppose the people had the power to place him in the situation, (even as the representative of Majesty,) on which this envious and crack-brained Advocate would lay blame that never was attached, or even conceived, by any other than himself:—but,

"Amongst the sons of men how few are known
Who dare be just to merit not their own!
Superior virtue and superior sense
To Knaves and Fools will always give offence."

In Politics, as in Religion, there are undoubtedly sins of omission, as well as of commission, & it has always appeared to us that our Representatives are either generally ignorant of, or know not how to exercise, the power which is vested in them by their constituents.—The people must surely be supposed to know their own wants;—and, for what purpose do their representatives assemble, if it be not to remedy them?—If these Representatives are remiss in their duty, and neglect to do those things which their country requires at their hands—and their alone—is it just—is it manly—is it honest—to lay their errors and omissions on the Executive, which has ever shewn itself, of late years at least, ready to sanction every measure calculated to advance the public interests?—Our road, our canal, our public school, and our wild land assessment bills, fully attest this truth.

BUT the manner in which this shameless Advocate attempts to calumniate the universally respected and most worthy Representative of our Sovereign, in this Colony, is the most insolent and wretched specimen of a total abandonment of all truth, principle, sense and decorum—we have ever witnessed.—In his very extravagance, however, will prove its own antidote; and even as the scorpion, when surrounded by a wall of fire, is said to retire into the centre of its own narrow circle, and there commit self-death by the sting of its own tail, so will the venom of this malignant libeller, of genuine and unaffected worth, recoil on his recreant head.

IT is, however, but another and a melancholy instance that, no merit, however exalted, can screen its possessor from the assaults of an unprincipled and abandoned plebeian, lost to every sense of propriety, and even to the common decencies of life.—It is an easy matter to throw dirt by those who are mean, or in the kennel, and whose hands are always filthy—The evil spirit and all his agents, in whatever shape they appear, love to mar, or attempt to mar, that beauty and excellence from which they are for ever removed.—One would have thought that if any men could have escaped the virulence of such an assault, it would have been SIR P. MAITLAND!

BUT this Advocate (who has certainly in perfection one of the qualities requisite both in the dock, and at the bar) is singularly unfortunate in his assertions; for, notwithstanding the universal depression which succeeded the late war both in Europe and America—it is notorious, and undeniable, that this country has advanced with more rapid strides in all that constitutes national power—under the present, than any former, Lieutenant Governor; which could not have been the case, had he been that careless and inactive spectator of our wants, which this scurrilous abstainer from all truth would make us believe—Before he wove his flimsy tissue of absurdity and falsehood—he ought at least to have made some enquiry, for at the moment he pretends to an extensive acquaintance with the country, he betrays a most unaccountable ignorance of what is going forward. With ridiculous pompposity and egregious stupidity—he inquires, what road, and what canal, has been commenced in his time? when almost every schoolboy in the Province knows that several canals, and a grand Military road on such a scale as it is probable no British, or any other colony, ever witnessed—(and which is exclusively the project of our Lt. Governor,) have not only been planned, but have been in part commenced.

BEING limited to a narrow space in these columns we shall not attempt to notice one tenth part of the absurdities crowded into the first number of the Advocate, but shall content ourselves with saying that had his Excellency refused his assent to any measure of importance; or had thrown any obstacle in the way of improvement, this mean then half crazy willing might have had something to bawl about, but his own questions sufficiently condemn him, and shew the grossness of an ignorance which is paralelled only by the measure of his impudence.—However, we dare say that His Excellency, SIR P. MAITLAND—will care as little for the censure of such a creature, as the "amiable waiter girl," (by which cognomen this very un amiable democrat condescends to designate the EARL DALHOUSIE) will value his praise.

THE Advocate flatters himself that he is not at his setting out, "in any way obnoxious to the powers that be." We rather think he has either totally mistaken the meaning of the word obnoxious, or that he has very singular notions as to what is likely to make a man *in*noxious. He further says that he is "sensible" and even "well aware" that "he might have induced Government to bestow hundry good things upon him"—so that it is clearly not "oppression" which has driven "this wise man mad."—(see P. 15.)

AFTER all, some compassion is due to the unhappy man who can gravely assert that one servile, only, of our time is due to the service of HIM who, when upon earth, not only gave the whole of His—but his precious blood also, for our present and everlasting benefit. After such a confession of faith, it is only fair to conclude that six servile of this scribblers time are given to Acts of insanity;—and that only one seventh part of his pages contain either truth or reason.

"If we speak of men, it will solely be in reference to their public acts."—Col. Adv. P. 4.

AS to this writer's expectations of the conduct to be pursued by Mr. FOTHERGILL, in the event of his obtaining a seat in the House of Assembly, we can assure him that Mr. F.—has as little to do with the likes, dislikes, and lucubrations of Dr. HOUSE as he has with the digests, the laws, and the feelings, of that sensitive and right worthy compounder of pills, and administrator of bolusses—and whether within, or without, the bar of that Honourable House, we have no doubt that Mr F—will be able to go through the fatigues of his duty without the aid of a glass of water, or the ready sens of a brother Æsculapius!

WE have now to apologise to our readers for detaining them so long on a subject, to them, perhaps, of little interest.—But the attack which has been made upon the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR—however puny it may be—appeared to us so unwarrantable and so wholly unprovoked—that we could not resist the feeling which has induced us thus gently to notice it.—We have no desire to waste time in criticising the literary merit of a work which we have no doubt will shortly become defunct. The pale characters of disease and death are already stamped on the countenance of this mis shapen bantling, conceived in iniquity, and brought forth in shame and dishonour, and it would be cruel to add pain to those convulsive throes under which it labours to crawl for a little space, up those fatal heights of Queenston, from whence so many of its country men have been already precipitated at the polats of British and Canadian Bayonets!—

WE understand a meeting of the Society of "Friends to the Strangers" in distress was held at Sheffield's Hotel, on Friday last, when it was resolved, that a new subscription be set on foot in aid of the Funds of the Society. It gives us much pleasure to state that the gentlemen deputed to solicit subscriptions have met with that success which evinces, in the strongest manner, the great liberality of the Inhabitants of York—indeed we cannot conceive how charity can better be bestowed, than in contributing to the support of an institution which has for its object the relief of Strangers in distress.

THE amount of good already done by the Society, since its first formation, has been extensive,—many hundreds of destitute Emigrants of all ages, have been partakers of the Bounty; and who but for the timely aid afforded them, must have sunk under the accumulated pressure of poverty and disease.

THE Season is at hand, when we may expect the usual visit to our shore of numerous of its ligent Emigrants. To enable the Society to meet the wants of these poor people, and to cover a debt to a considerable amount, due to the Treasurer, are the reasons for proposing the present subscription.

THE Subscription List is in the hands of Mr. Allan, where, those persons who have not been applied to, have an opportunity of entering their names.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

MR SCARLETT —Mr. Scarlett, M. P. has recovered from his dangerous illness, after having been Killed in the Newspapers.

SIR George Quentin retires from the 10th Hussars, and exchanges to half pay with Lieutenant Colonel Henry Wyndham.

LORD Gifford is appointed Master of the Rolls; and is succeeded by Sir John Copeley the Attorney General, as Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

THE EMPERADOR ABASHNATED.—Don Juan Martin, better known as the Emperador, has been murdered at Rosby a burd of Ulloa. In consequence of the refusal of the ministers to put him upon his trial.

SLAVE TRADE.—The Slave Trade Piracy Bill was read a third time in the House of Commons, on the 29th of March, & sent to the Lords. Sir J. Mackintosh expressed his entire concurrence in the Bills, and hailed the auspicious treaty entered into with America, with the most heartfelt satisfaction.

SLAVE TRADE.—On the 12th March, Sir James Mackintosh took occasion to say that he most highly approved of all that the Ministers proposed, with respect to the removal of restrictions on commerce, and that "the experience of his whole life, had convinced him that the principles of free trade were the best & surest foundation of the well being of nations, and from year to year he had witnessed the fatal results of a deviation from them."

A debate exceedingly interesting, if not very important, took place on Monday night, in consequence of a complaint of breach of privilege, emanated by no less a personage than the Lord Chancellor. The matter of this complaint was certain strong observations made by his Lordship from the Chancery Bench, on a Speech of Mr. Abercrombie's in the House of Commons.

REPEATED

A motion for inquiry was lost by a majority of 151 to 108. The friends of the Lord Chancellor wisely forbore his vindication on high grounds, and rested his defence on the warmth of feeling into which he had been inadvertently betrayed by an erroneous report of the speech of Mr. Abercrombie. Ample justice was done to the character of this gentleman by those who undertook the defence of the Lord Chancellor.

WHISKEY.—Mr. Bartlett, of N. H during the Tariff debate, moved to impose a duty on Stills. If his object was to raise a revenue, his proposed ways and means were very injudicious: for he ought to know that our Western brethren would raise another Rebellion if a tax should be put on Whiskey.—A tap of that sort might prevent the immediate future adequate provision is made in the bill that it shall be collected without Rebellion or Tar and Feathers; for it costs an enormous sum of money to march an army into that country to quell a revolt. It cost President Washington 2,000,000 dollars to put down GALLATIN'S Rebellion. Whenever we want a snug little war all within ourselves we have nothing to do but to tax Whiskey—for that will raise a Rebellion as quick as cockardies will raise a blister. A Whiskey tax may raise the people—but it will never raise money.—Salem Gazette.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London to his friend in Boston, dated February 25.

"It is lucky for you that you are out of trade; it never was less prosperous. This is certainly a pleasant place for those fond of novelty. There never were more Lions extant than at present.—We are to have steam frigates, cannon, and all to go by steam. Stage coaches are lighted with gas —Chickens are hatched by steam in twenty one days. Copper is to last five years on ship's bottoms—French and German is taught with such rapidity as to enable one to read his Bible in those languages in forty-eight hours. Poor children are to be educated on a new plan, which has such a wonderful effect on their morals, that they will never go astray; and last, though not least, the National Debt is to be paid off. All these discoveries and propositions are now before the public; and you have been long enough on the "fast anchored isle," to know there is no such thing as humbug here."

JOHNSON THE SMUGGLER.—We hope some clever fellow is collecting materials for the Memoirs of JOHNSON the smuggler, for he is certainly one of the most extraordinary men that ever lived.

PARTICULER ESCAPE OF BONAPARTE.—It is not generally known that a vessel was undertaken to be built at Bateresa, by the renowned Johnson, the smuggler, for the purpose of liberating Bonaparte from the island of St. Helena. The vessel was about ninety feet long, and of the burden of one hundred tons. It was built of half-inch plank; the grain of two of such planks was placed perpendicular, and the other two in a horizontal position. These planks were so well caulked and cemented together that the thickness of the sides of the vessel did not exceed that of an ordinary washing tub. The masts were so contrived that they could be lowered at will with the deck, and the whole vessel might be sunk in short water with the crew on board, without danger. Ample means were provided for supplying the vessel with fresh air. The plan was to sail up at night, within a short distance of St Helena, and sink the vessel until the next or some subsequent night, when Bonaparte would be enabled to make his escape to the beach, at which time the vessel was to be raised. Bonaparte to get on board, and sail away in the dark. It happened however, that Bonaparte died before the vessel was finished; and it is a curious coincidence that she was to be conveyed the very day the news of his death arrived. Johnson was to have received 40,000*l.* as soon as the vessel had got into the blue water, exclusive of the reward to be given in case the enterprise succeeded. This Johnson had previously offered his services to the Admiralty, and affirmed that he could blow up any ship without being hurt. Accordingly, a trial was given him in the Thames, accompanied by a boatswain of one his Majesty's ships, who had been married only a month before, in order to try similar construction to the one before described, to a barge moored in the middle of the stream. They sunk their boat, made fast the torpedo to the bottom of the barge, and lighted the match. Johnson then perceived that his vessel remained fast, having got (as the sailors express it) her cable athwart hawse of the barge. Upon which he pulled on his watch, and having looked at it attentively, told the boatswain that he had only two minutes and a half to live. Upon this, the boatswain began to make grievous lamentations—"Oh, my poor dear Nancy!" said the boatswain "what will she say to—Avast blubbering," said Johnson.—"Pull your jacket, and be ready to stuff it into the bawsehole while I cut the cable." Upon saying this, Johnson seized an axe, and cut the cable. The boatswain stuffed his jacket into the hole, and they got out of the reach of the torpedo, which blew up the barge.—Morning Herald

Such is the extent of buildings going on in and about London, that bricks are with difficulty obtained, and contractors who are obliged to complete their work by a given time, begin offered to them per 1000 above the usual price without being able to obtain them

ANOTHER LOAN.—Another loan has rather unexpectedly appeared on the London Market, of Two Millions and a half sterling, for the service of the ancient kingdom of Guatimala, or the United Provinces of Central America.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MARCH 29.

Milton.—Literary Discovery

Mr. W. Williams wished to put a question to the Right Hon. Secretary. He understood that a work of the immortal Milton, in the hand writing of one of his nephews, Phillips, had been lately discovered in the State Papers. He was anxious to learn whether such a gratifying communication was true, and if true, whether it was (as he hoped) intended to give it to the public? [hear]

Mr. Secretary Peel—It is true that a work of Milton's in the hand writing of Phillips, has been discovered by Mr. Leman a-band-writing of Phillips, has been discovered by Mr. Leman among the State Papers. It is a work entitled de Dei Cultu, in support of the truths of Christian Religion. It was on its discovery submitted to His Majesty; and the first observation of His Majesty was, "A work of Milton's must be made public." (Loud and continued cheers.) It has since, in furtherance of the Royal decision, been submitted to a competent supervision, and the work will speedily appear.—(Cheers.)

PARRY'S LAST VOYAGE.—Captain Parry's last voyage is published with all the splendid accompaniments of Charts, and Plates.

A FOOT-PAD SUFFERING TO BE SUPERIOR TO A LAWYER.—A Lady walking across the Park to the neighbourhood of Islington, observed two very suspicious looking fellows who seemed watching an opportunity to rob her. Her alarm was increased by observing a fellow of a similar appearance in a pathway at a little distance from her; but as the case did not admit of hesitation, she beckoned him to stop and addressed him with an air of confidence. "Sir, you look like a gentleman; I do not like the appearance of those fellows behind us. I think they intend to rob me! Will you protect me?" "Madam," repeated the man, "I will—take my arm, and I will attend you until you are quite out of danger; you will see when I wave my handkerchief, the two men will sheer off; they are my companions, and we intended to rob you; but when confidence is reposed in me, I am not scoundrel enough to betray it." He attended until she came in sight of her own house, when she offered him a guinea as a reward for his protection; but he refused it, adding, he hoped he had more honour left than to sink his character to the level of a Lawyer's—"I am above taking a fee."

THE LAIRD OF AUCHINLECK.—It is well known that the Lord Auchinleck had not the greatest partiality, either for the literary labours or the literary associates of his son, the Biographer of Johnson. The latter was one day haranguing him upon the happiness of literary men, and concluded by saying, that they "went through the world swimmingly." "Nae doot, Jamie, nae doot," said the old Judge, "for ye ken, Jamie, that a chield eye above water wi' twa bladders o' wind aneth his oxters, than twa purses o' gowd."

VAN DIEMAN'S LAND.—By the accounts lately received from this settlement, the farmers were continuing to prosper, and to agree with the country. Every arrival from England added to the number Goods and merchandize of every kind were howthe number Goods and merchandize of every kind were however, selling at nominal prices, and by auction for less money than their prime cost in Britain. Every warehouse was full, and every ship arriving continued to add to the general glut.

Settlers are recommended to take nothing but specie with them, and to take servants properly indentured for a term of years, under a high penalty in case of breach of bargain. Wages years, under a high penalty in case of breach of bargain. Wages of freemen are enormously high; they will not work under £50 per annum, and meat three times a-day, and tea, &c. &c. twice. Ticket of leave-men from the Government were much in the same state. There were many good servants said to be among the convicts. The following were the prices then current:—

Horses	£55 to	£100
Bullocks for work, per pair		£36
Cows	£12 to	£16
Heifers	£11 to	£15
Ewes	25s. to	30s.
Ewe and Lamb	27s. to	35s.
Beef, per lb.		9d.
Mutton		11d.
Butter	4s.	6d.
Cheese	3s.	0d.
Oats per bushel	7s.	6d.
Barley	7s.	0d.
Wheat	6s to 7s.	6d.
Tea, per lb.	5s.	6d.
Sugar		4d.

The acts relating to these fine countries, which received the Royal Assent a short while before the rising of the last Session of Parliament, would not reach them till about October last; consequently the accounts of their beneficial effects upon the colony, and that Government cannot be known till next arrivals which may be expected in March. Twelve months trial of these salutary laws, it was anticipated, would have the best possible effects upon the whole classes of the people.

CURIOUS FACT.—By placing a candle at thirty degrees from perpendicular, the flame is not encumbered with the wick, and the air that passes by the flame completely destroys the smuff, so that the candle thus placed never wants snuffing, and gives one half more light than when placed in the usual way.

COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE.—We perceive by the advertisements of the day, that two new lines of Packets have just been established by active shipping merchants, to ply regularly between New-York and London, and between New-York and Greenock.

MECHANICAL INGENUITY.—DROZ, a Genevan mechanic, once constituted a clock which was capable of the following surprising movements:—There was seen on it a negro, a dog, and a shepherd. when the clock struck, the shepherd played six tunes on his flute, and the dog approached and fawned upon him. This clock was exhibited to the king of Spain, who was delighted with it. The gentleness of my dog, said Droz, is the least merit. Let your Majesty touch one of the apples which you see in the shepherd's basket, you will admire the fidelity of the animal. The king took an apple, and the dog flew at his hand and barked so loud, that the king's dog, which was in the room, began also to bark. At this the courtiers, not doubting that it was an affair of witchcraft, hastily left the room, crossing themselves as they went out. The minister of marine was the only one that ventured to stay. The king having desired him to ask the negro what o'clock it was, the minister obeyed, but he obtained no reply. Droz then observed to the minister that the negro had not yet learned Spanish, upon which the minister repeated the question in French, and the black immediately answered him. At this new prodigy the firmness of the minister also forsook him, and he retreated precipitately, declaring that it must be the work of the devil.

EARTHQUAKE.—A vessel bound into the harbor of St. Thomas, with a cargo of coffee, was sunk on the 20th ult. by a violent shock of an earthquake.

ENGLISH ROMAN CATHOLICS.—The Marquis of Lansdowne brought in a Bill to enable the Catholics of England to vote at elections in the same manner as those of Ireland—read the first time—the noble Marquis then referred to another Bill he meant to introduce, the object of which was to enable the Catholics of England to hold offices upon the same principles with those of Ireland.

CORBETT.—Cobbett has been presented with a silver cup very finely wrought, and of large size, by the owners of one-horse chay, for his zeal in opposing the extortions of the Turnpikemen.

From a late London paper

SINGULAR DETECTION OF A THIEF.—A few days ago a thief was detected in the following singular and judicious manner:—Mr. Thomas——, a respectable cow keeper and dairyman residing at Islington, had a sow pig which produced a large litter of young ones, which for some time she appeared to bring up with all maternal affection; but suddenly one of the swinish family disappeared, and was no where to be found; and as it is known to Naturalists that sows sometimes, notwithstanding their maternal affection, devour their young.—Mr.——— took it for granted that his sow had thus regaled herself, and yet he thought it rather odd, that like the story of the two cats, not even a tail remained, or any trace whatever of the departed suckling. The next night came and with it disappeared another pig—the next night another, "and another still," until the latter was minus four of its members, Mr.——— now began to think his sow of too ravenous a disposition to keep any longer, and to save the remainder of the young from a premature death, he sold the sow, litter, and all, to the itinerant exhibitor of a bear, and on the very night that the sow and her young quitted it, Bruin entered into possession. About two o'clock the next morning Mr.——— was disturbed by the loud lamentable screaming of a man in distress, and getting out of bed he proceeded in the direction of the pig stye, from whence the complaint seemed to come, and listening for a moment at the door, he was astonished to hear a man, evidently in great agony, exclaim, "Oh, for God's sake man, evidently in great agony, exclaim, "Oh, for God's sake let me go, and I will tell you where the pigs are." Mr.——— let me go, and I will tell you where the pigs are." Mr.——— lost no longer in any doubt as to what became of his lost pigs, and convinced that Bruin had got hold of the thief, he thought it a good opportunity of discovering where his property was deposited, knowing that as the bear was muzzled, he could not desired, knowing that as the bear was muzzled, he could not devour the man by his haste. His interest therefore getting the better of his humanity, he let the thief remain in the clutches of the bear during the following dialogue:—"Well, said Mr.——, in a sepulchral tone, "and where are the pigs?" "Oh, I have them at home!" replied the captive. "And who are you? what is your name?" "My name is James———, I live at No. 5——— street, and the four pigs are there safe." Knowing the person whose name was thus mentioned, who happened to be a neighbour, Mr.——— was now satisfied, saving no father injury than a mouse, and therefore resolved to call up the keeper of the bear, who lodged close by himself, not daring to venture at liberating the man. The keeper being arrived, a light was procured, and on entering the stye, there they saw Bruin seated on his hinder part, with the man firmly clasped round the middle, face to face, and squeezing him in a most affectionate manner. The moment the keeper spoke to him the bear dropped the man, who by this time was as much dead as alive. He, however, soon recovered, and receiving no father injury than a good squeezing and a hard knock on the head of the bear's muzzle on the part of the keeper——considering that the man, whose character had previously been very good, had received sufficient punishment, he got back his pigs and declined any prosecution.

From the New Monthly Magazine.

MR. EDITOR,

BEING in possession of a Recipe for the certain removal of that truly painful sensation, the Tooth-ach, and desirous of communicating its value to the public, in order that others may get rid of so troublesome a visitor, without parting with the ornaments of the mouth, to the injury of the gums, I solicit you to give it a place in your valuable magazine.—It is as follows:

A sheet of writing paper, burned in a clean white plate, will produce a yellowish oil, which oil is to be soaked up by a small piece of clean cotton, and placed in or on the tooth affected; for twelve or fifteen minutes. In the most distressing cases, I have known it give immediate relief; one of which happened last week, in a Mrs. F. who, for more than three months, had been almost always tormented by the pain, when, by applying the Oil of Paper, she had immediate relief. I never knew a case where a repetition was necessary.

Newington, April 22d, 1816. J. W

IRELAND.

A letter from London, dated the 7th instant, mentions that among the Irish grievances to be removed by the Legislature this season, are the Leather and Paper duties. The motion for the repeal of the Leather Tax will be made by Sir J. Newport, for the repeal of the Paper Duty by the Hon. Col. Hutchison.—The general opinion is, that the Bar will be opened to English Catholics. The Royal partiality for Ireland, and the desire to effect her tranquility, which the King has so often expressed, have undergone no change; on the contrary, His Majesty expresses himself more anxious than ever to ensure the happiness and permanent peace of that country, by all the means in his power. Hopes are entertained by some sincere friends to Ireland, that the King will redeem his pledge during the approaching summer, by again visiting Ireland, and holding a Court in Dublin, and that His Majesty will be attended, if not preceded, by the Duke of York.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ALGIERS.

LONDON, Foreign Office, April 13

The Right Hon. George Canning, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has received his Majesty's commands to signify to the Ministers of Friendly and neutra powers residing at this Court, that the necessary measures have been taken by command of His Majesty for the blockade of the port of Algiers, and that from this time all measures authorised by the law of nations will be adopted and executed with respect to all vessels which may attempt to violate the said blockade.

Intelligence has been received from the British squadron off Algiers. Admiral H. B. Neale was off that port in the Revenge, with five frigates; the Dey had refused to treat, and was making preparations to sustain a bombardment. For this purpose he had dismantled the vessels of war which were in the Bay. He had also commanded an immense number of troops from the interior, to man the fortresses. This news was brought to Gibraltar on the 19th ult. by the Phaton frigate, which had been dispatched by the Admiral.

Letters from Gibraltar, of the 18th and 19th ult. communicate some particulars relative to the blockading squadron off Algiers which are not without interest. It appears that the Dey has obstinately refused to accede to the terms proposed to him by the British Admiral; but that his own officers are, for the greater part, determined to resist his authority, as they are by no means disposed to undergo the horrors of a bombardment. An attempt was even made upon his life on the 15th March, which very narrowly missed success. Up to the 17th no attack has been made by the British squadron, and it was still expected that the differences would be adjusted. These letters state that accounts had been received from the Morea of unfortunate differences between the Greek Chiefs; but we are happy in being able, from direct channels, to state that these differences have been removed.—London paper, April 9.

RUSSIA.

A letter from Dr. Lyall throws light on a subject of great interest at the present moment, namely, the internal state and designs of Russia. He says, "It is a pretty general opinion that the exhausted state of the Treasury is one of the greatest obstacles to an attempt at the execution of Russia's favorite schemes of aggrandizement; and this opinion is grounded upon the low value of the paper currency in that Empire, and the necessity with the crown was under of making loans at a high per centage. But, I believe from good authority, that the world is deceived on this point. Russia has borrowed, to be sure; but the gold she received, or at least a part of it, has not gone for the recall of her old paper currency. No! the ingots—the bars of the yellow metal—which were transported from the Thames, are now piled on all the banks of the Neva, within the Mint, which is situated with in the Castle of St. Peter and St Paul. This fortress, it is reported is full of uncoined silver and gold lying idle, while the empire is suffering by the depreciated value of paper money. Thef can be but one conclusion in regard to this conduct; this hoarding up of the precious metals. Russia must have some mighty project in view; some great conquest in expectation, which is to be the reward for present sacrifices." On one point we have been some weeks in possession of information, the hoarding up of gold obtained from the country by way of loan, to be in readiness for future operations; but though the source from which we received it was most respectable, and we are assured that it rested on authority that could not be questioned, still we hesitated to give publicity to the circumstance.—Morn. Chronicel.

Alexander has permitted the erection of a monument to the memory of Kosciusko, near Cracow, which has become an object of extreme veneration to the Poles. It is a simple barrow or tumulus, like the renowned sepulchres of the ancients, about 300 feet in diameter, and 130 feet in height; and it stands within view of the ancient monuments of Cracus and Wanda, on a low hill near the Vistula, which happens to bear the appropriate name of Brouishwa, or "the Defender of Glory." Ground has been bought and houses built, for four peasants, who fought under Kosciusko, and who, with their families, are charged to take care of the monument. The money for raising the monument and supporting the peasants, has been raised by subscription throughout all Poland.

FREEDOM OF POLITICAL SENTIMENT IN RUSSIA!—A letter from St. Petersburgh, says "English and American Papers are prohibited. No prudent man dares express his political opinions—and we rarely sit down to dinner without one or more spies at table."

INDIA.

Calcutta, Jan. 8.—The accounts from Madras are of a distressing nature, and have come upon us with a suddenness which renders the horror more striking.

We were prepared to expect a scarcity of Grain on the coast, but had not the most distant idea of the extent to which the failure of the crop had reached.—Madras, and the surrounding country, are in a state of famine. Independent of the accounts we publish to day from Madras Papers, private letters agree too minutely in the distressing details for us to doubt a second that the most dreadful effects are to be apprehended. It is stated that even the dread of the arms of the military who are necessarily placed at the Godowns where the Rice is distributed, is scarcely sufficient to prevent depredations. Parents are abandoning their children, and several have absolutely died from starvation.—This is but the commencement of the appalling consequences of famine. Disease is sure to follow; and although we are certain that every possible means with in the power of Government will be employed to lessen the effects of this dire visitation, we trust also that the aid of the Bengal public will not be withheld.

Boston Palladium.

A Subscription, amounting to near 70,000 rupees, (of which the Governor General gave 20,000,) has been made in India, to encourage the establishment of Steam Packets between Bengal and England. A premium of 50,000 rupees is to be given for the first two voyages, either by the way of the Red Sea or Cape of Good Hope—to be performed by British Subjects, and not exceeding 70 days.

A Steam Boat is established on the Hoogly, which has run 14 miles an hour.

A Subscription for the Greeks has been commenced at Calcutta, and up to the 8th of January 18,764 sicca rupees had been subscribed.

It was calculated that there would be 5000 chests of Opium on hand at Canton, April 1st, 1824—about one year's supply. The price, Nov. 10, 1823, was from 980 to $1400.

A Rope Bridge has been made at Calcutta, and has been much praised.—Palladium.

From a Tour through the Upper Provinces of Hindostan

THE following characteristic is, we fear, too usual with other nations than the Hindoos:—

"The natural indolence of these people is in bed very great; no plea but necessity induces them to move at all. They would like to sit and smoke the whole day long. "Better," say they, "to sit than stand; better to lie down than sit; better to sleep than either."—If assailed by any sudden misfortune, they instantly lose all presence of mind, and run bawling about like so many mad creatures.

The Missionaries have never made much progress amongst this people, if the recent publications of the Abbé Dubois, and others, may be credited.—The following anecdote is of an older date, but it may be taken as a fair instance of the tenure of Hindoo Christianity.

A singular circumstance occurred, in consequence of the arrival of some Missionaries, while we were at this place. These gentlemen had been holding forth in the Bazar, and having gathered together a numerous assembly of the people, particularly remarked one, as being more attentive than the rest, (a corn-factor of respectable appearance;) when, going up to him, the Missionary asked if he had been convinced by the arguments he had heard in favour of the Christian Religion? After a moment's hesitation, "What will you give me," said the native, "to become a Christian?" "The blessings of our holy religion will reward you," replied the Missionary. "That will not do," returned the native; "but I'll tell you what—if you will give me a lac of rupees, and two English ladies for my wives, I'll consider of it." The Missionary was indignant; and but for the timely interference of the Mayor, matters might have taken a serious turn.

They are not a very active people in repelling the attacks of the tigers, and other wild beasts, that frequent some of the interior parts of the country. Our author accounts for this inactivity, by ascribing it to their belief in predestination and the transmigration of souls.

"A striking instance of this occurred to me, as I was one day sitting reading in our own Bungalow at Meerut. A kind of bustle in the verandah caused me to look up, when I perceived a large snake of the species called by the natives Coprah Capell, or hooded snake, advancing towards me. Starting from my seat, I called to some palankeen bearers, who were looking on, to kill him. With the greatest composure one of them asked if that was my hookah? (order) "To be sure it is," I exclaimed. (The reptile meanwhile spreading his hood, and looking very fierce.) When approaching the snake, he made a profound salaam, and muttering Maaf karro, (forgive,) with a stick he knocked him on the head, and despatched him in a moment. A very slight blow is sufficient on this part to destroy them.—It is singular, that when one snake has been destroyed, another is sure to come; our people consequently watched, and in a few days killed its partner. To so great an extent do the Hindoos carry their superstitious ceremonies, that they even salaam to their tools of a morning before they begin to use them, and the same when they have finished their day's work, alledging as a reason, that it is to them they are indebted for subsistance. I verily believe this is the only species of gratitude they are acquainted with.

(From Quin's Memoirs.)

"Those traits in the character of Ferdinand which we have placed before the reader, have shown, that if he wants those high qualifications which are necessary to the government of a great empire in critical circumstances, he is equally destitute of that dignity of manner, that serenity of mind, and that elevation of thought, which ought to accompany such exalted rank. Upon his return to Spain, he abrogated, in a great measure those forms of etiquette which had previously reigned in the Court, and introduced in their place a certain system of familiarity hitherto entirely unknown. In the time of his predecessors of the House of Bourbon, a member of the Royal Family died in a separate apartment; the services were numerous, and the ceremony with which they were attended, consumed that ordinary act into a kind of court festivity. The dishes were served up in processional order, escorted by a military guard: and such persons as happened to be going through the passage at the time, were obliged to take off their hats and to pass on in a respectful manner. Ferdinand abolished all this ceremony, established the more easy system of dinner en famille, and invited as guests such grandees as offered themselves, the clergy, and the religious communities of both sexes. He was likewise accustomed to have different amusements in his apartment; such as concerts, sleight of hand, and phantasmagoria; at which only a limited number of courtiers attended. Ferdinand did not find much pleasure in the demeanour of these persons; but he derived great enjoyment from that of the inferior servants, whom he treated with the greatest familiarity, and to whom he allowed the most extraordinary liberties. Amongst them was one Chamorro, celebrated as a sort of stupid and vulgar buffoon, who, by his fooleries afforded infinite diversion to Ferdinand, and obtained a sufficient degree of influence with him to dispose of the first offices in the kingdom.

"Ferdinand encountered the final moments of his mother, Maria Louisa, by expressing to her, through the medium of his Ambassador Vargas, an eager desire to get possession of his mother's diamonds, which were both numerous and magnificent. Vargas executed his commision with the indelicacy of a man who is anxious only to please authority, and has no respect for the unfortunate. The Queen objected to give them up; and declared in presence of Cardinal Gonsalvi, and other illustrious personages of the Court of Rome, that the diamonds should not go out of her possession until death; and that she would much sooner throw them into the Tiber, than give them to her son. She did keep them until she breathed her last, but her body was yet warm when Vargas took possession of the desired treasure, carrying his zeal in Ferdinand's service to such an excess, as even to remove from the fingers of the corpse a gold ring of paltry value, which Maria Louisa had signified a wish to take with her to the tomb.

"The execution of the will of the royal parents showed how inflexible Ferdinand can be when he wishes. They fixed considerable pensions on several persons who had been in their service during their exile. These pensions were all sanctioned by Ferdinand, with the exception of those which were bequeathed in favour of individuals who had shown any attachment to Godoy.

"This want of sensibility is one of the most characteristic traits of the present king of Spain. His self-love and pride may be deeply affected, but his heart is never touched. He was affectionately attached to his second wife, Maria Isabel of Braganza; but he was playing at nine-pins when her funeral left the palace, and the following day, there was not the least sign of grief in his countenance. The uncommon fickleness of his imagination prevents any one sentiment from over-ruling him, or from making any serious impression on his mind. In adversity he was never dejected; when misfortunes of a formidable nature occurred to him, he still knew how to take advantage of all the alleviating circumstances which they produced. It would seem as if he counted with certainty on the combinations of the future, which have so often extricated him from the most imminent dangers.

"Ferdinand is a man of middle stature; his figure is large beyond proportion; his complexion is pale, and his health is frequently interrupted by extremely violent attacks of the gout. To this affliction, and to the infirmities of his youth, he owes a flaccidity of appearance which does not correspond with his age. His features are strongly marked, and rather deformed, though his look wants not animation. His constant custom of smoking segars, which he scarcely ever suspends, gives a bad odour to his breath. The versatility of his features is so great, that the most eminent artists have failed to give a perfect likeness of him.—His gestures are lively, and often violent. He speaks in a hurried manner, and all his actions partake of the precipitate character of his conversation. He is subject to no ruling passion. He [illegible] the chase, and his only pleasure is in making [illegible] observe his paces. His demeanour towards those who are intimate with him, gones beyond the bounds of familiarity; and even during the private audiences which he gives to those who are recommended by his favorites, he forgets all etiquette, reclines on a sofa, and smokes and enters into conversation with strangers. He possesses a very strong memory, and is so deep a dissembler, that he often eludes the observation of those who known him most intimately.

"The events of Ferdinand's life have contributed to increase the defects of his character, and to induce him to follow, without any reserve, his favourite inclinations. He has been always cast down through his own fault; he has himself always created the germ of those evils which have come upon him; but he has always found a foreign hand to rescue him from every misfortune.

"His hatred of enlightened ideas, and the fear which he entertains of well informed men, are features in his character which have exercised, and will continue to exercise, great influence upon the destinies of Spain She, unhappily, gives herself up to the most profound ignorance, while all the other communities of England nobly emulate each other in improving the useful sciences. Ferdinand abhors those sciences as dangerous enemies; and although public opinion does not set him down as a devotee, and even supposes him to be sincerely religious, he will always continue to favour fanaticism as the best auxiliary of absolute power, which is the idol of his soul, and the most irresistible of his inclinations."

LAST MOMENTS OF THOMAS PAINE.

(From the New Monthly Magazine.)

MR EDITOR,

THE subjoined account of the concluding scenes of the life of Thomas Paine was read at a public meeting some weeks ago, by a very respectable member of the Society of Friends, in my hearing. From his Brother I procured this copy of the account. I rather think that William Dilwyn, his daughter, and the young person who visited Paine, and gave the account to Dilwyn's daughter, are of the same Society. As almost the whole world was injured by Paine's pernicious principles, I hope you will not refuse to increase the circulation, as widely as possible, of his recantation.—Wishing you increasing and continued success, I remain, &c.

A. B.

THE following is an extract of a letter received by Mr. William Dilwyn, of Walthamstow, Essex, from his brother, in America. The writer is of the most unquestionable respectability, and appears recently to have received the information stated in it from a person equally entitled to credit. The latter had resided in a family in the near neighbourhood of the celebrated Thomas Paine, who resided at Greenwich, near New York, and during his last illness, had contributed to his comfort by occasionally preparing and sending him food and refreshments more adapted to his situation than he usually enjoyed. These the informant chose to be the bearer of, (although his personal circumstances were so deplorable that the air of his chamber could scarcely be endured) to his bed-side. In performing this humane office, she had the opportunities of conversation with him, which authorise the Writer's belief, that he exhibited another proof of Dr. Young's assertion, that

The letter proceeds to say, that she found him frequently writing, and believed, from what she saw and heard, that, when his pain permitted, he was almost always so engaged, or in prayer, in the attitude of which she more than once saw him when he thought himself alone. One day he inquired if she had ever read the "Age of Reason?" and being answered in the affirmative, desired to know her opinion of that book. She replied, that she was but a child when she read it, and probably he would not like to know what she thought of it. Upon which he said, if old enough to read, she was capable of forming some opinion, and from her he expected a candid statement of what that opinion had been. She then said, she thought it the most dangerous and insinuating book she had ever seen—that the more she read, the more she wished to read, and the more she found her mind estranged from all that is good; and that, from a conviction of its evil tendency, she had burnt it, without knowing to whom it belonged. Paine replied to this, that he wished all who had read it had been as wise as she; and added, "If ever the Devil had an agent on earth, I have been one."—At another time, when she was in his chamber, and the master of her family was sitting by his bed-side, one of Paine's former companions came in; but seeing them with him, hastily went out, drawing the door after him with violence, and saying, "Mr. Paine, you have lived like a man, I hope you will die like one." Upon which Paine, turning to his principal visitor, said, "You see what miserable comforters I have."—An unhappy female, who had accompanied him from France, lamented her hard fate, observing, "For this man I have given up my family and friends, my property and religion; judge then of my distress, when he tells me that the principles he has taught me will not bear me out!"

POETRY.

The murder of Duncan King of Scotland, with the ambition and subsequent fate of the usurper Macbeth, form the ground work of Shakespeare's sublime tragedy of that name. The imagery of the enchantments of the North, is introduced with so much judgment and felicity, that it carries the imagination away captive, in despite of reason.—The following small piece will be read with interest by every admirer of that noble play:—

DUNCAN'S WARNING.

RECITATIVE.

As o'er the heath, amid his steel clad Thanes,
The royal Duncan rode in martial pride,
Where, full to view, high topp'd with glitt'ring vanes,
Macbeth's strong tow'rs o'erhung the mountain's side;

In dusky mantle wrapp'd, a grisly form
Rush'd with a giant stride across the way;
And thus, while howl'd around the rising storm,
In hollow thund'ring accents sound'd dismay.

SONG.

Stop, O King, thy destin'd course,
Furl thy standard, turn thy horse;
Death besets this onward track,
Come no farther, quickly back.

Hear'st thou not the raven's croak?
See'st thou not the blasted oak?
Feel'st thou not the loaded sky?
Read thy danger, king, and fly.

Lo! yon castle banners glare
Bloody through the troubled air,
Lo! what apestres on the roof,
Frowning bid thee stand aloof.

Murder, like an eagle, waits
Perch'd above the gloomy gates,
Just in act to pounce his prey,
Come not near—away, away.

Let not plighted faith beguile
Honour's semblance, beauty's smile
Fierce ambition's venom'd dart
Rankles in the fet'ring heart.

Treason arm'd against thy life,
Points his dagger, whets his knife,
Drugs his stupefying bowl,
Steels his unrelenting soul.

Now 'tis time; ere grisly night
Closes round thee, speed thy flight;
If the threshold once be crost,
Duncan, thou'rt for ever lost.

On he goes! resistless fate
Hastes to fill his mortal date;
Cease, ye warnings! vain tho' true,
Murder'd king, adieu! adieu!

BORGAMI BEARING THE CROSS.

A caricature of the celebrated Bergami has lately been published in Italy, representing him loaded with honours and crosses, and under it there is the following very appropriate inscription; which of course lose much of its point:

Nai tempi pin antichi e pin feroci
Si appiccavano i ladri sulle croci;
In tempi pin moderni e pin leggieri
Si appiccavano le croci in sugli ladri.

Which may be thus translated into English, though it will

In ancient times the custom was
To hang the rogues upon the cross,
But now the custom is in vogue
To hang the crosses on the rogue.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons — and that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration for the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres [illegible]

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, }
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824. }

PRESENT:
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, }
York, February 7th 1821. }

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties. JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office, }
York, 4th Nov. 1821. }

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz:

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

have the honor to be,

Editorial Commentary.

As there are very few natural, and no artificial, harbours, on the northern coast of Lake ONTARIO;—it must be interesting to others, as well as to the inhabitants of the District of Newcastle, to be made acquainted with the following extracts from the first report of a very able Engineer whom we requested to examine the out-let of Smith's Creek, at PORT HOPE, for the purpose of ascertaining how far it might be practicable to construct a Dock for shipping, at that place.—A more enlarged and detailed account will be given hereafter.—In the mean time the general sketch, here presented to our readers, must, we think, prove highly satisfactory.

"I have, according to your request, explored the mouth and waters of Smith's Creek; and am of opinion, that the situation is truly desirable for the construction of a Commercial Dock, with a throat (or short Canal) discharging its feeder through a Lock, carried in a strait line into a ten feet depth of water upon the Lake.—and, at all times, when the Lock-gates are shut, and no vessels are coming in, or going out, the supply can be conducted by means of race ways over as much Machinery as the eternal springs, and freshets of the season will admit of—so that little or no water will be lost or wasted at any time"

"These race-ways I propose to communicate from the East, and from the West sides of the Dock, by means of sluice gates, to open and shut at pleasure; and through which the water may pass, or be directed, over any Machinery that may be erected on lands towards the south and contiguous to the Lake shore—which cannot fail to advance the value of the swamp, and all the adjoining lands, for commercial purposes, wharves, &c. &c.

"THE work may be carried on chiefly by a principle of piling and embankment—except at the entrance of the Lock, from the Lake, which must be of stone;—but, I will give you the practice in my next—with an estimate of the expence I may here add however, that I propose the Canal or Throat to begin from the centre of the southern wall of the Dock."

THERE is at present no safe or commodious harbour, worthy of the name, between York and Presqu'Ile; and, as Port-Hope is nearly central between the two, there is scarcely any of the projected improvements in this Province more pregnant with advantage to the commercial interests, connected with the navigation of Lake Ontario, than the one now alluded to, and which we hope will be shortly carried into effect.—PORT-HOPE is the natural outlet of the deepest and richest tract of land in Canada:—by the word deepest we mean, that, a line running north, or a few points either east or west of north from that place, (which in fact might be run to Hudson's bay without intersecting any considerable obstacle) traverses the most extensive region, adapted for agricultural purposes, any where to be found in the British Possessions of North America.—In every point of view, therefore, this work is of vast importance; and we shall hereafter take the liberty of proposing a plan, at once novel and effective, by which the necessary funds for completing the work may be raised.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FORLIGN JOURNALS.

Golden Whip.—His Majesty, when in Ireland, made a promise to the Turf Club of Kildare, of a Gold Prize Whip; it has now been completed by Messrs. Storr and Mortimer, of Bond Street. The handle is of massive dead gold, richly chased, with the Shamrock Leaves in green gold, over which are the Royal Arms within the order of St. Patrick. On the adverse side, the inscription, surmounted with the Crown in full relief: the parts being composed of silk, richly ornamented with the Thistle and Rose leaves; the whole doing great credit to those gentlemen, both for the elegance of the design and manner of execution. It has already been run for, and we understand the Marquis of Sligo to be the winner; but is only held on the same tenure as the one given by Charles I. to New Market, being open to a challenge.

The late Miss Bathurst.—Rome, "The body of Miss Bathurst, Lord Aylmer's niece, has not yet been found. The cause of this lamentable accident, which has deprived our gay circles of one of its most accomplished and brilliant ornaments, were as follows:—The road on the banks of the Tiberbeyond the Ponte Mole was so narrow and bad that the party, who were on horseback, were obliged to return. Lord Aylmer took hold of Miss Bathurst's bridle to assist her in turning round; but at the moment the horse backed and fell into the river with the unfortunate young lady.—Besides Lord Aylmer, a young Englishman and a servant of the French Ambassador leaped into the water. Divers, boats, and every kind of succour were immediately employed, but it was too late." In this place the Tiber is winding and its waters rapid This young lady, who is a niece of Lord Bathurst, was seventeen years of age, and was the charm of all her friends by her beauty and cultivated mind A fatality seems to be attached to this family. Mr. Bathurst, her father who was ambassador to the Court of Russia some years ago, suddenly disappeared whilst traversing a forest on his way to Hamburg without his body being ever found by any certain information obtained relative to his death."

Discoveries in the Moon.—An Augsburg (Germany) paper of the 12th March, says, that the Professor Gruithuisen in Münich, whose selenognostic researches are known to the learned from Bode's Astronomical Calendar, and other writings, has spoken in that Calendar, and in one of his works, of the discovery which his extremely quick sight, aided by a good telescope of Frauenhofer's making, has been enabled to make of a colossal building, situated near the Equator of the Moon resembling a fortress, with strait ramparts, which are arranged like the latter fibres of an elder leaf. We now learn that he has also discovered a great many regular made roads, alterations evidently made by art, in natural walls, the clearest traces of cultivation on the surface of the Moon, (which Schroeber affirmed to exist,) and several other indications of rational beings in that planet.

Egypt.—One of the London papers says, this season Egypt will send thirty thousand bags of Cotton to the United Kingdom, of which the quality is not inferior to Sea Island. The cultivation of sugar, indigo, corn, and every product, for which Egypt, by soil and climate, is so well adapted, occupies the undivided attention of its present ruler, and all institutions which oppose the views of the Pacha are dispensed with.—He finds that the cultivation of the cane is useful to the people, and therefore, asserts that Mahomet never intended to prohibit the consumption of any of its extracts.

From a late London paper.

Price of Race Horses.—During the last few years about two thousand pounds has been the maximum for the reputed best colt of the year. Five thousand guineas were offered and refused for the celebrated Smolensko, before he went to Epsom. In the Newmarket October meeting, 1805, a bay colt by Pipator sold for 15,000 guineas. A chesnut two year old colt by Ben ingborough, a bay two year old colt by Volunteer, and a brown three year old filly, Orange Girl, by Sir Peter, sold for 15,000 guineas each.—Lord Egremont refused 5,000 guineas for Sir Paul, by Sir Peter, out of Pearl by Tandem. About half a century since, Lord Grosvenor offered Mr. Piggot 10,000, for Shark, as the horse was leading off the course at Newmarket, to be taken out of training. It was reported that O'Kelly refused nearly double the sum for his Eclipse, replying to the offer, that all Bedford Level would not purchase Eclipse." To go half a century further back, a report has been handed down from father to son, that a Welsh sportman offered the Duke of Devonshire for flying Childers, the horse's weight in Crowns and half crowns, which the Noble Duke refused.

Buonaparte's Mameluke.—The celebrated Roustan, the faithful Mameluke of Bonaparte, has arrived in London, decorated as is his invariable practice, with the superb suit of arms, pistol, sabre, and carbine, presented to him by Napoleon.

A Bull.—A Suffolk farmer, whose accent was singularly broad, recently took his first born child, a boy, to the clergyman of the parish for baptism. He told the the divine his name was to be John, but spoke it so like Joan, that the other concluded it at once to be a girl, and actually performed the service appointed by the church, as if for a female child, without the observation of either the father, the mother, or two young women present. The parish Clerk finding out the mistake a few days afterwards, went in haste to the vicar, imploring him to alter the register, or name the child again; but the divine refused, alleging the impropriety of transgressing the ruhical injunction. "I will nevertheless, make a memorandum of the circumstance," said he, and wrote the following at the foot of the register: "Mem.—The GIRL baptised on the 10th instant, by the name of Joan, proved a fortnight afterwards (admirable dicta!) to be a Boy!"

Opium Eaters.—The Medical Adviser mentions as probably the greatest opium eater in England, a man by the name of Smith, who is on the books of the Mendicity Society, and who took to this practice for the purpose of producing upon him a debilitated aspect, thus qualifying him for the profession of begging. He is a tall, extremely thin, die-away-looking man, about fifty years of age, and walks, or rather creeps, as if he had just risen from the grave—starvation sits upon his lip, and misery upon his brow—yet this man eats two or three shillings worth of opium in the day. When he is deprived of this drug from want of money to purchase it he becomes almost raving mad and hysterical, falls down in the street in most terrible tremors, which generally has the effect of obtaining for him a few pence by the charity of the passengers, when he runs immediately to the Apothecary's and sits all night by his favourite quid. It may be imagined that this man could not do without opium; but the following circumstance says the Adviser, will prove that he could be brought to it by proper restriction. He was imprisoned once for a month, and for the few first days was incessantly roaring and lamenting for his opium, declaring that he should die if he did not get it. The surgeon allowed him a moderate quantity, informing him that he should have no more for three days. This obliged the opium eater to portion his allowance of comfort according to his resources. The next allowance from the surgeon was a less quantity, and the third a still less, refusing at last to allow him any. The man became reconciled, and before the period of his imprisonment expired, he was in excellent health, nor did he feel a wish for his former habit.

From the Mechanic's London Magazine.

Hatching Fish.—The newspapers have desbribed as a matter of wonder, the process adopted by a Mr. Barlow of hatching eggs, but in which there is in reality nothing new or suprising, the process having been long known and practised in the East. The following account of a mode of hatching fish will be allowed, perhaps, to be a little more extraordinary. The Chinese fishermen collect with care, on the margin and surface of the water, all those gelatinous matters which contain the spawn of fish. After they have found a sufficient quantity, they fill with it the shell of a fresh hen's egg, which they have previously emptied, stop up the hole, and put it under a sitting fowl. At the expiration of a certain number of days, they break the shell in water, warmed by the sun. The young fish are presently hatched, and are kept in pure fresh water till they are large enough to be thrown into the pond with the old fish. The sale of spawn for this purpose forms an important branch of the trade in China. In this as in some other matters, we may perhaps take some useful lessons from the Chinese. The destruction of the spawn of fish by troll-nets, threatens in many parts the utter extinction of fisheries that were formerly very productive.

Interesting Discovery.—It is stated in the Raleigh Register, that Professor Olmsted, of the University of North-Carolina, has ascertained that a fine illuminating gas may be obtained from cotton seed. The product of gas from a bushel of seed, is more than double the average product of the same quantity of Newcastle coal, and greatly exceeds that illuminating power. It partakes of the purity and splendor of gas from oil, with which substance, indeed, this seed is known to abound. From the vast quantity of cotton seed which annually accumulates in the southern States, it is supposed that this article may not only afford materials for illuminating almost every city in the United States, but also become an article for exportation.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

GREECE.

The news from Greece to the 4th of March are interesting, inasmuch as they assure us of the continued tide of success which attends the Greek arms.

It appears that Lord Byron had succeeded in making the Legislature and Executive Government combine their efforts to ensure the ultimate triumph of their country. Acrocorinth, (the citadel of Corinth,) had been provisioned. At Tripolitza, a manufactory of gunpowder had been established, the mills of which are built on the basis of the Eurotas. Six Schools have been established at Tripolitza, Mistra, Caritene, Gastouni, Calamata and Phanari, on the Bell and Lancasterian plan. Also one near Missilonghi, founded by Prince Mavrocordato, where a Military College and Hospital had been established by Colonel Stanhope.

The siege of the Castle of the Little Dardanelles and of Lepanto, was carried on under the direction of English, Prussian, and French Engineers, who, with a few Americans and Italians, were the only foreigners yet engaged under the banner of the Cross.

In Epirus, Arta had fallen into the hands of the Greeks, and the insurrection of the Tacha of Scodra is confirmed.

Mahomed Ali Pacha, the Governor of Egypt, had long contemplated making himself independent of the Porte. He had imported eighteen months ago, upwards of 100,000 stand of arms, chiefly of English manufacture, with large supplies of ordnance, stores, &c. He had also an excellent printing establishment conducted by Greeks, from which he had issued several books in Turkish and Italian. He has a fine cannon foundery, and makes excellent powder. He is partial to the English

An account that fifty eight Greek vessels had arrived in the mouth of the Dardanelles had caused great consternation at Constantinople.

ALGIERS.

The following extract of a private letter from this place, will throw some light on the present differences between England and the Dey:

In the end of Nov. 1813, the Regency of Algiers, for some private and political reasons, which are not explained, required that the different consuls would give up the free Moorish slaves, called Corbailles, which were in their service, and therefore, under the protection of the Consular flag. The Consuls, surprised at such a decision, refused to comply with it, and having all at once enabled their slaves to escape, declared that they retained none of that class in their service. The English Consul had, however, retained about fifteen, and the American one or two; they both refused to give them up.—The Dey caused the Corbaills on the English Consul's service to be seized, and the Consul himself, whom he kept in irons for some days, and then released.

About the 1st of February, an English fleet appeared before Algiers, and the English Consul departed incog. and went on board; at the same time the American flag floated on the country residence of the English Ambassador. The Dey did not dare to offer it any violence, and therefore lost his privilege of confiscation. An English mediator presented himself. He demanded, as the only condition, that the same Consul be permitted to enter there again; and that he should be received in a manner prescribed, and that for the future the English colours should be allowed to appear on a house in the city, (for the Algerines, for what motive I cannot tell, never permit a foreign flag to appear in the city.) The Dey refused these propositions, and war was declared, which has continued since the 15th Feb. A strong fleet blockades the port of Algiers, and determines on bombarding the city.—The English only await the arrival of reinforcements from London, which are on their way.

The Algerines are preparing for war: They have sent out of the city every thing not suited to their defence. The Dey has ordained that every man from eighteen to fifty years old, shall take up arms.—He has for his defence, a formidable artillery, mounted on bad frames, and an unwarlike militia. Alone in his capital, he is determined to fight or to be buried in its ruins. The bombardment appears inevitable, unless the Dey loses his head, which is not likely, as he never comes out of his fortress, and is kept out of view by a man who is greatly devoted to him.

UNITED STATES.

NEW YORK, May 22d, 1824.

The Tariff Bill has at length, after various amendments, passed both Houses of Congress, and is now before the President for his assent. The Session is to terminate on the 27th instant.

The Ætna.—The following letter gives an account of the explosion of the Ætna, which will be read with interest:—It was written by an eye-witness of the dreadful scene, a passenger, to his friends in Philadelphia:

NEW YORK, May 16.

It is with pain I inform you of an awful occurrence that took place at seven o'clock last evening on board the Steam Boat Ætna, Captain Thomas Robinson, when about seven miles from, and in sight of this city, her boilers bursting with a noise like thunder, and throwing the pieces upon the quarter-deck, where I had the minute before been standing. I had walked to the bows when the explosion took place; and thanks be to the Almighty, that I am one of the few escaped unhurt. Oh, the awfulness of the scene! My situation I can scarcely describe. It pleased the Almighty to give me a command of myself at this horrid moment when every one on board thought it their last, and some in despair jumped overboard and were drowned. A man standing by me was about to jump, when I told him he had better remain quiet, and if the boat should be burned up, we could throw off the cover for the cables, (a large round box at the bows,) that we stood by, and might save ourselves this way. He stopped, and a man crying in the water, we threw him a rope, and drew him upon deck.—He was one of the firemen who had been blown overboard. This served to compose him a little, or he would have jumped over the side of the boat. The smoke disappearing, the horrors of the sight increased, and we beheld the bodies of those who had been struck by pieces of the boiler, weltering in their blood on the deck. I now attempted to make my way aft, and succeeded, after getting through the smoke and broken parts of the wreck, in assuring Captain Robinson and others to bear the comparion way to get into the Ladies' Cabin. The Captain went down and handed up five ladies whom I took from him, and placing them upon deck, they expired. One little girl, about the age of Mary, entreated me to throw water upon her, her agonies were so great.—They were all of one family, and had been on board but a few minutes, being on their return from the funeral of a sister, at Elizabeth Town Point.—In this situation we were discovered by two boats at the Quarantine Ground, which put off to our assistance, and brought us up to the city; and a steam boat passing by, brought the wreck, with the dead and wounded on board, to the wharf.—What rendered my situation more singular was, that my baggage was blown up, but fell upon the wreck again. My trunk, previously to my being taken off, I found in the place from which the boilers had been blown. Last night at twelve o'clock I went to search for my writing desk. Two friends accompanied me, but they were not permitted to go on board, as the Coroner had just held an inquest, and had gone on shore to give his verdict. I therefore went on board alone, and getting a light, commenced searching for, and succeeded in getting the desk, &c. and discovering a hand under some of the rubbish, I called one of the watchmen, and moving the timber away, it led to the discovery of another corpse.

NATURAL HISTORY.

The Venomous Bug of Persia.—A traveller in Persia in a Russian embassy gives the following account of their arrival at Miana, and of the venomous bug of that place:—We passed through several deserted villages, from which (as the Persians assured us) the inhabitants had been driven away by the bugs. A long naked valley led straight to the little town of Miana, the Governor of which came to meet the Ambassador with the usual Persian ceremonies. As this town is the chief residence of the bugs, we were under the necessity of establishing our encampment four wersts further, on the banks of the river Karlanku, at the foot of the Capianta mountains. A fine bridge of twenty three arches leads over this now inconsiderable river, which I should, however, imagine must swell considerably during the rainy season. This bridge was built by Abbas the Great. It has several internal passages, and on the steps at the end, stand four pillars, one of which has fallen to ruins.—The venomous bug, properly called the Miana Bug, is worthy of the particular notice of the naturalist. It is larger than the common European bug; it is of a grey colour, inclining to black, and its back is covered with small red points, scarcely distinguishable, on account of their number. It is only found in walls, and its frequency, and the intensity of its poison, are in proportion to the age of the building. It does not make its appearance by daylight, although certainly there have been instances to the contrary. These bugs have existed at Miana from time immemorial, and have gradually spread into the neighbourhood, where, however, they are not equally venomous. In winter they lie in walls in a state of torpor, and, like all poisonous reptiles, are most dangerous during the heat of summer. I should mention, that houses in Persia are not built of bricks, but (particularly those of Miana and every village) with loam, which is kneaded with fine cut straw. The most remarkable, and indeed quite a peculiar feature in the history of these bugs is, that they do not bite the inhabitants; or at least if they do, the bite is as little felt by them as the sting of our bugs is felt by us: but they would certainly bite every stranger who should pass a night at Miana; and there is no antidote to the poison of their sting, which proves mortal in four and twenty hours. Of its fatal effects in two instances I have heard the precise particulars. The English at Tauris told me repeatedly, that they had lost a servant at Miana who had had the misfortune to be stung by one of these vermin: he complained immediately of parching heat over his whole body, shortly afterwards became delirious, and expired in dreadful convulsions. Colonel Baron Wrede, who has long served with credit in Grusia, and who some years ago came to Persia on a mission, relates a better authenticated instance of the pernicious sting of these bugs. It was pretty late in the year, and the Baron thought that the effect of their bite was not so dangerous as was reported; he therefore determined to pass the night at Miana, taking, however, the precaution to keep a light burning in his apartment. Every one happily escaped, with the exception of a Cossack, who the next morning observed a black spot on his foot. The inhabitants recommended, as an antidote to the poison, that an ox should be slaughtered, and that his skin should be wrapped, while warm, round the Cossack's foot: this was done, but to no purpose: he died in dreadful convulsions. The inhabitants assert that some persons who had been stung, had been saved by tasting nothing but cold water, sugar and honey, for forty days. They take them in their hands without danger. It is very fortunate that clothes and similar articles do not harbour these vermin; otherwise they might perhaps have spread throughout the whole country.

HORTICULTURE.

PEACH TREES.

In the year 1816, I commenced the cultivation of about ten acres of land on Greenwich Lane, where I have continued the cultivation of the Peach with great success, and have at this present moment upon the ground several thousand Peach Trees, perhaps in no respect inferior to any ever raised here at any former period. I would not be understood to aver, that the cultivation of the Peach is a matter of as little indifference at present as it was thirty years ago.—The successful cultivator now, is under the necessity of pursuing a mode of culture calculated to renovate the species, by selecting a new and improved race of plants. This cannot be achieved by chemical plaisters or scientific dissertations on the terrifying name of a worm, which the experience of twenty years' ineffectual speculations on these subjects, have sufficiently proved. Many fine new varieties raised from the seed of this fruit, are at present, and have for many years been, under successful cultivation in this vicinity. Yet, buds taken even from these, and inserted on stocks raised from seed of old defective trees, may be very liable to fail; for, amongst the fruit of such trees, many of the stones have defective kernels, and although such will often grow, yet they produce a sickly race of plants, which no culture can invigorate, and which the slightest injury destroys. It is therefore as necessary to be careful in selecting good seed to raise the stocks, as to procure buds from good healthy trees. There are also many other particulars which require great care and attention from the cultivator, and which the limits of a single essay would not permit our treating of, separately. Our main object in the present essay is from a faithful statement of a long series of actual facts, to endeavour to correct a radical error which almost every cultivator, and I believe every former writer, has laboured under, in endeavouring to discover means of renovating our Peach Trees, by the application of artificial remedies, instead of adopting a more careful and improved mode of cultivation, by which a new, more healthy, and vigorous race of Peach Trees may be once more introduced through out this truly congenial clime. This, it is true, will require the work of time; yet, if the subject could once be generally understood, a very ordinary degree of care and attention on the part of the cultivator, might effect it in a few years. The great evil exists in the want of a proper degree of care and skill, in introducing and selecting such sorts only as are worthy and proper for our future cultivation.

By the establishment of a botanical garden, under the management of experienced men, the greatest benefits to society in the improvement of this and every other fruit, might be effected. Here a liberal portion of the grounds might be adapted particularly for the introduction and cultivation of being retained or recommended for general cultivation; and here the most improved mode of cultivation might always be ready for the actual investigation of all such as might be desirous of obtaining such benefits as are always to be derived by men of discernment from such models. The scientific speculator, too, might here have a fine opportunity of testing the efficacy of his favourite theories, and the public would not be left at a loss to know how far they would be safe in following such rules as his superior sagacity and skill might discover worthy of being recommended.—Great mistakes are generally entertained, and much mischief done, by the improper pruning of Peach Trees; and those unacquainted with the proper method of managing this part of their culture, would derive more benefit by contemplating, for a few moments, the actual form of a few trees properly managed, than reading the written or printed directions of a volume. The state and form of the trees are often so different when obtained from the nurseries, that no particular rule can be laid down that would be applicable to the whole. The great art for securing a proper form for the head of a Peach Tree, depends upon cutting off the leading or main stem at the desired height the head may be wished to commence at, which should never be more than four feet high—I prefer two or three feet. The selection of four or five limbs, if possible, from the opposite sides of the stem, as near this point as can be got, and in moderately upright positions, should be suffered to form the main stems of the top of the tree; and as these generally furnish abundance of shoots from all parts as they advance in height, they ought never, in such case, to be shortened. It is seldom that the Peach Tree requires much pruning after the main branches of the head is thus formed. Wherever the inferior limbs become too close, they should be cut out; and, if any supply be any where necessary, some branch, if any be found conveniently situated, may be shortened, so as to throw out a greater supply. There is one particular season which I have always found to succeed better than any other, for cutting the main stem for forming the head of the tree, and that, is in April. Just as the buds begin to break, wherever any irregularity of the branches occur, in the growing season they may be regulated by the knife any time; but no pruning ought ever to be performed on these trees at the approach of, or during the winter season.

It is not the object of our present undertaking to enter into any particular investigation of these external evils which have, for many years, been generally considered as an unconquerable scourge of the Peach Tree; nor have we any objections to the man of science, developing the results of those profound researches, arising from the pursuits of natural philosophy. Our object has been to prove by a long series of facts, (which can be well authenticated,) both the erroneousness and absurdity of ascribing the great failures of our Peach Trees to any malignant cause, but to other natural defects, which an improved mode of cultivation has been able to resist, and which, if more universally adopted would greatly facilitate the complete renovation of this delightful fruit.

Consequences of Surprise.

The dangerous effects of surprise are well exemplified in Dumont's Narrative of his return from slavery at Algiers to France, after Lord Exmouth's expedition. He was accompanied by a friend, and on their approach towards home they were attacked by thieves, who, he says, "robbed how Etienne and myself not only of our money, but the two parcels containing our wearing apparel. Fortunately, on proceeding to the next village, the inhabitants took a little pity on us, and what with the assistance we received there, as well as in one or two other towns along the road, we managed to arrive at Lyons in tolerably good spirits.

"Having passed a part of the day in looking at the principal streets and buildings in the above city, Etienne conducted me towards dark to the house of his parents who kept an inn. He entered without making himself known, and ordered supper for two persons. On serving the soup and bouille, Etienne called for a roast fowl; upon which his mother, examining us more attentively, observed, "Sir, you are travellers I perceive, and perhaps not aware the provisions are dear." My companion, with his hat slouched, and turning his back to the old lady, replied, "that's of no consequence to you mother, give what is ordered, and we'll pay for it." "I beg your pardon, Sir," rejoined his mother, "I am wrong, but I didn't exactly know the state of your purse." This short dialogue was followed by the fowls being brought in. We continued to eat very slowly, in order to wait for the night's closing in, when Etienne asked, whether we could have beds? "No," answered the mother, "all my beds are occupied:"—"and this young lady," replied the same, pointing to the sister who served at table, "has she got a bed?"—"How! if my children have not beds, who is to have them?" "Then I am not your son," exclaimed Etienne, raising his voice, and discovering his countenance. At these words, and this movement of the stranger, the poor woman seemed to feel a violent oppression, turned pale, and fell senseless on the floor; the daughter instantly ran to inform her father, who was in the next coffee-house.

"Etienne flew to the assistance of his poor mother; the servants cried aloud, and I could not help weeping with them. The father came in soon after; but Madame Etienne was no more! Her daughter took the event so much to heart, that she immediately retired to bed and never left it again, having died after an illness of two days. The father, distracted by this double loss, sustained by the recovery of his son, could not support it, and only survived eight days!

"Finally, Etienne, the cause of this sad tragedy, was seized with a raging fever, for his health had never been properly restored, and followed the fate of his parents in a week after the death of his father.

I saw them all perish, and never left the bed of my comrade, who received all the attention I could bestow, and even died in my arms. This was one of the most dreadful trials that had overtaken me in life. What a picture, for one who was on the point of looking after his own family after an absence of more than thirty seven years! I had also formed the plan of taking them by surprise, before this catastrophe occurred, and sending a letter, in which my adventures were to be given under a feigned name; but I was soon cured of that whim, by the frightful calamity that befell the unfortunate family of Etienne."

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following Letter was originally sent to the Editor of the Brockville Recorder, but it is worthy of a place in every paper in this Province:—

FROM THE BROCKVILLE RECORDER.

To the Roman Catholics and Orangemen in the Johnstown District.

GENTLEMEN,

IT is with extreme regret, and painful anxiety, that I perceive dissension & discord prevailing among you. The breach evidently opens to grow wider and wider, and your existing difficulties greater and greater. Good God! what essential benefit does either party expect to reap by entertaining and manifesting malice and revenge against each other? Are not you natives of the same fertile soil? Subjects of the same Gracious Government? And worshipers of the one true God? You cannot deny that you are natives of the same country; you both profess to be faithful subjects of the same Government. Why then persecute, bite, and devour one another? You convince yourselves to be Christians. Why then do you not act in character? "by this," says our common Lord, "shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another." And if you be true Christians, you will not, you cannot hate each other. Are you British Subjects? You will mutually watch over each others interest. Agree as Christians; unite as brethren; and associate as countrymen, do not disgrace yourselves in this distant land by intestine broils and fruitless quarrels, you are both brave and valiant, side by side, under the same banner, in many different climes, have you not fought and bled as a band of brothers in defence of your King and Country?

GENTLEMEN.—Look back on the state of Great Britain & Ireland, for twenty years and upwards; they were engaged in a bloody and destructive war with a neighbouring power, great was the struggle, and glorious was the result. Erin's sons Orangemen and Catholics, gained the Standard of the Immortal Wellington; Portugal and Spain witnessed their valour with astonishment, and their Heroism with wonder and surprise. Direct your attention for a moment to the never fading laurels you gained at Waterloo: amidst shafts of death & rivers of blood, your hurled irresistable destruction on the Despot of Europe, and levelled to the dust the sceptre of nations: on that memorable day did not great numbers of Orangemen and Catholics, after displaying every quality requisite to constitute the Soldier, and he Hero, after rendering essential service to their Country, after performing prodigies of valour seldom equalled but never excelled, after covering themselves with glory and their King & country with immortal honour, expire in the arms of Victo embracing each other in the icy arms of death. View the sanguinary spot were Ireland's once irresistable Heroes sleep; move the earth from their sacred ashes; see them mouldering in the dust, and mixing as they mouldered! Shed a tear to the memory of Erin's slaughtered sons, slain in her country's service. "They were lovely in their lives, and in their deaths they were not divided." Be ashamed of your intestine quarrels, and your fire-side pettifogging scribblers of both parties. Cease to blow the coals of contention into a flame; rake not up the ashes of your fathers; mention not their former animosities; bury, for God's sake! for the sake of peace, and for the welfare and prosperity of this Province, and for your own sake, bury in eternal oblivion, that disgraceful animosity which ruined Ireland, and now threatens this Province with destruction.

GENTLEMEN.—I conclude by wishing both parties that peace, which the world can neither give nor take away. Wishing to hear no more of such disgusting and disgraceful discord,

Yours, &c.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

For the Weekly Register.

TO E. V. E.

The Trees spread their foliage, sweetly blossomed each flower
The birds warbled cheerily 'midst the dark grove;
The bright sun of summer, the nourishing shower,
Called the beauties of nature to welcome my love

You came, and my heart how it bounded with gladness!
I saw you, and ecstacy filled my fond breast
No longer I sighed, every dark cloud of sadness
Had fled 'midst the pleasure with which I was blest'd.

Now winter approached with its withering power;
Each plant drooped its head, each bird ceased its song;
The trees of the forest were changed in an hour,
All nature looked gloomy, for ah, you were gone.

You were gone, and the hope which so fondly I cherished,
The hope that we ne'er should be severed again,
Like a dream's fleeting vision had cruelly perished,
And now my poor bosom throbbed sadly with pain.

But the spring soon returned, and the bright orb of heaven
In its gayest apparel all nature had dressed
Again to my arms my beloved was given,
Again to my bosom you fondly were press'd.

But alas! you soon left me, and left me to sorrow;
While the world smiles serenely my heart swells with grief;
From the joy that surrounds me no charm can I borrow,
I join the gay crowd, but can find no relief.

Fare thee well, fare thee well! tho' doomed thus to sever,
With me thy loved Image shall constantly dwell
Each thought, dearest you!, shall be yours, and I never Will cease for a moment to wish thee farewell.—

From the Albany Gazette.

MESSRS. —

On perusing the fugitive pieces of Dr. Percival, I have frequently been forcibly struck with the peculiar beauty and elegance of the enclosed lines. The depravity of man, and the endearing constancy of female love, are here most vividly—most inimitably depicted. If viewed by you with the same degree of admiration with which I regard them, I trust they will be deemed worthy a corner in your valuable paper.

C.

"He comes not—I have watch'd the moon go down,
But yet he comes not—once it was not so.
He thinks not how these bitter tears do flow,
The while he holds his riot in that town.
Yet he will come, and chide, and I shall weep;
And he will wake my infant from its sleep,
To blend its feeble smiling with my tears.
O! how I love a mother's watch to keep,
Over those sterling eyes, that smile, which cheers
My heart, though sunk in sorrow, dark and deep.
I had a husband once, who lov'd me—now
He ever wears a frown upon his brow,
And feeds his passion on a wanton's lip
As bees, from laurel flowers, a poison sip;
But yet, I cannot hate—O! there were hours,
When I could hang forever on his eye,
And time, who stole with silent swiftness by,
Strewed, as he hurried on, his path with flowers.
I lov'd him then—he lov'd me too—my heart
Still finds its fondness kindle, if he smile;
The memory of our loves will ne'er depart;
And though he often stings me with a dart,
Venom'd and barb'd, and waste upon the vile
Caresses, which his babe and mine should share;
Though he should spurn me, I will calmly bear
His coldness—and should he, in an hour, its paralyzing hand upon him, then
I would with kindness, all my wrongs repay,
Until the penitent should weep and say,
How injured, and how faithful I had been."

THIS day the Corner Stone of the Court House and Jail of the Ottawa District was laid in presence of a number of Gentlemen, at the beautiful and flourishing village of Larignae.

The site chosen for the building is dry and airy, and commands an extensive view of the village and of the Ottawa River for several miles. The House is to be built of Stone, and will be finished early in the fall.

New Longueil, 27th May, 1824.

Grand Fête to the Countess of Dalhousie.

On Wednesday the farewell Ball which has for some time been in preparation, was given to this amiable and distinguished personage by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, the gentlemen of the Councils, the Heads of the Civil and Military Departments, and the Field Officers of the Troops in Garrison, and of the Militia of the City. The Rooms at the Union-Hotel were employed on this occasion, and the public curiosity had been raised to the highest pitch from the circumstance of admission to the Ball Room having been refused till the night of the entertainment, whilst the acknowledged taste of the distinguished officer to whose direction this part of the arrangement for the evening had been exclusively committed, led to an expectation that the decorations would be in a style of elegance seldom witnessed in this country. Great as was the excitement on this point, it was in no way disappointed, the sentiment universally expressed being that of admiration at the light, chaste, and elegant harmony which pervaded the whole, exhibiting the simplex munditiis in its most imposing form; whilst, though free from the blaze of meretricious decoration, the fitting up of the apartments was decidedly worthy of the entertainers and of the noble guest whose presence formed the brightest attraction of this splendid Fête.

The character given to the room was totally different from that which it bore on the two last occasions, (the Ball given by the 68th Regt. and that of St. George's day.) the walls had been newly coloured of a pink tinge, and the roof was painted en ciel, representing an Italian sky, perfectly in unison with the fragrant collection of exotic plants which placed on a conical stand surmounted by the Thistle of Scotland, occupied a space in the centre of the floor, under the principal chandelier, fenced with a light trellage. The numerous windows were lowered in an elegant drapery of pink and white muslin in festoons, with a border of roses—the two centre windows had each a transparency of a dancing female, whilst the others (necessarily left open for the purpose of ventilation,) were filled with green house plants, and in the centre of each the cast of a female figure. The pillars supporting the arches, dividing the larger room from that which on ordinary occasions is appropriated to cards, were also similarly surrounded; at the upper end of the room was erected a state canopy, corresponding with the draperies of the curtains, above which was placed a transparency of the Arms of Dalhousie, and in front an Earl's coronet; under this a sofa was raised some steps above the floor, to which, on her entrance, the Countess of Dalhousie was conducted by his Excellency the Lieut. Governor; The windows on either side the canopy displayed a transparent painting of Dalhousie Castle, representing it as a noble building bearing the marks of great antiquity, situated as the castles of the 'olden time' generally were, in a commanding situation.—We should have noticed that the piers between the windows were ornamented with concave and convex mirrors; these reflected the company in miniature and produced a very pleasing effect; to the walls medallions were affixed, encircled with wreaths of flowers and bearing the initials C. B. D; over each of these, as well as over the centre of every window, was placed the coronet of Earldom; in the centre of the orchestra, on a medallion, was a bar of music, bearing the notes C B D a musical pun, sufficiently intelligible to adepts in the science; the lesser room was decorated in the same style with the principal apartment, the windows had transparencies representing Waterloo Bridge, the Admiralty and Chelsea Hospital, the fourth was a fancy Landscape. Notwithstanding the ample size of the suit of apartments, they were literally filled; upwards of four hundred persons were in the room at 10 o'clock, and most of these remained till a late hour; His Excellency Major General Sir Peregrine Maitland and his staff, with Commodore Barrie, from Upper Canada, were present, as were also several gentlemen from Monreal and the Three Rivers district, who availed themselves of this opportunity to pay a parting tribute of respect to the distinguished Lady whose affability and virtues peculiarly fit her for the exalted station she has so admirably filled, and which, we hope ere long to see her resume; of her it may truly be said that her presence has dispensed nothing but pleasure and happiness, and her departure, even for a limited period, would be deeply regretted, but for the anticipation of the meeting which awaits her Ladyship with those who have the strongest ties upon a mother's heart.

About 12 o'clock, the company decended to the Supper-room, the size of which bearing no proportion to the Ball Room, was necessarily densely filled, the table arrangements were the same as on the former evenings.

After supper, His Excellency Sir Francis Burton, proposed the health of the Countess of Dalhousie, and afterwards that of the Governor in Chief, prefacing each toast by a short address, couched in terms of great kindness, with which both her Ladyship and the Earl appeared sensibly affected, and which made a deep impression upon all present; both healths were drank with long and loud acclamations; on his Lordship's health been given, as soon as the plaudits had ceased, he rose to return thanks, which he did in that neat and appopriate style for which he is so conspicuous; shortly after the Countess and her party left the room, the healths of Sir Francis Burton and of Sir Peregrine Maitland were successively given, and received with that applause which marked the just estimation in which these exalted characters are held.

The dresses of the Ladies on this occasion were generally elegant.—The Governor in Chief and Sir Peregrine Maitland were the full uniforms of their respective ranks, with the Orders of Knight Grand Cross and Knight Companion of the Bath. Sir Francis Burton was dressed in a full suit of the Windsor uniform, with the blue ribbon of Knight Companion of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order. The company departed at a late hour, highly delighted with an entertainment given in honour of one, whose many amiable and endearing virtues will long live in the remembrance of the society of Quebec.

PERTH RIOTS.

The Quebec Mercury has this passage.—We are happy to learn from good authority that the disturbances which have lately existed in the Perth settlement, the extent of which has been greatly magnified, are entirely at an end; Colonel Fitzgibbon has been despatched from York by his Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland to enquire into the actual state of the matter; of his judicious choice of this gentleman for such a duty was particularly judicious, as no man is more intimately acquainted with the character and peculiarities of his countrymen.

NOTICE.

HIS MAJESTY'S Receiver General for the Province of Upper Canada, will be prepared to commence, on Monday the 14th day of June next, to pay to the Claimants for Losses sustained during the Late War with the U. States of America Twenty five per cent on the Amounts Awarded by the Commission appointed under the Provincial Act of Parliament passed in the 4th Year of His Majesty's Reign, Cap. 4.

The List of Persons, and the sums awarded respectively, will appear in a future Gazette, as well as instructions for the Receipt of the Money, where it is done through the means of Agency.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, in Council, having taken into consideration the system hitherto practised, of Granting Licences of Occupation for GLEBE LANDS, is pleased to Order, that in future the Glebes in the several Townships, with the exception of One Lot in each Township, for the accommodation of the Incumbent, shall be Leased on the same terms as Clergy Reserves.

NOTICE is therefore given to those Persons who hold Licences of Occupation for any of the said Glebe Lots, that the same will not be Renewed; and unless they do make application, by Petition, for Leases in the usual manner, through the medium of the Corporation for superintending the Clergy Reserves, before the Twenty-ninth day of September next ensuing, the Lots so held by Licence of Occupation will be Leased to other Applicants.

Executive Council Office
York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL.
Clk. Ex'v. Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTANANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties. JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.,

A Township North of Mariposa, advertised from the Surveyor General's Office on the 19th of October, as-

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

TO CLAIMANTS FOR LOSSES DURING THE LATE WAR.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Commissioners appointed under the Act passed at the last Session of the Provincial Legislature, entitled, "An Act to provide for the appointment of Commissioners to investigate the claims of certain inhabitants of this Province, for losses sustained by them during the late war with the United States of America, and for other purposes therein mentioned," will meet at the Town of York, on the Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays of each week; commencing on Tuesday next, the 10th instant, for the investigation of such Claims as may be submitted to them.

For the accommodation of individuals concerned, claims duly sworn to by the claimants, before one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, supported, by the affidavit of at least one indifferent person, and accompanied with such documents duly proved as may be necessary to substantiate the same, will, in the first instance be received; but, should it appear essential, the claimants, as well as their respective evidences, will be required to appear personally before the Commissioners, in order to their examination before them upon oath as provided for by the above recited Act.

By order of the Commissioners,

TO CLAIMANTS FOR LOSSES.

IT appearing that many persons who preferred Claims for Losses during the late War to the Boards heretofore assembled, have not renewed them before the one now sitting at York,—and it being apprehended that such persons are not aware of the necessity of an application to the present Board, before such former claims can be referred to, or acted upon,—the Commissioners do hereby give Notice, that Fresh Claims must be submitted, or applications in writing, for reference to the old ones, be made, WITHOUT THE LEAST DELAY, by the individuals alluded to, accompanied with the Affidavits of the party, and one or two Witnesses in proof of the Losses for which remuneration claimed.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties. JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.,

JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmers.

Editorial Commentary.

We are told that our remarks on the first number of the 'Examiner' have roused all the clannish pride, and have kindled the utmost wrath, of the ci devant Highland Chieftain of Queenshuidow; and, that his hose claymour is wielded against us in most terrific array—but, such is the weatherbeck uncertainty by which his bulletins are wafted to this, our northern, shore of the Lake that we have not yet received his 3rd and 4th numbers although we have heard of their arrival at Kingston. At all events we can assure this potent hero of the 'kilt' that we shall waste very little of our time in so unprofitable a warfare.

Important Changes.

It was reported that the King would visit the Continent in July.

The London Gazette of the 6th April, announces the appointment of Horne Lord Gifford as Master of the Rolls, in the Room of Sir Thomas Plumer, Knt. deceased.

Mr Justice Best is appointed Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

It is said that Sir James M'Intosh had been offered the government of Bombay, which he had declined; it was afterwards made to, and excepted of, by Mr. Lushington.

Tasso.—An unpublished, unknown ode of Tasso, has lately been discovered and printed at Rome; the subject is religious, and the execution is said to be highly beautiful.

An Earthquake happened on the 10th April in Jamaica, which was severely felt at Kingston and other ports, but did no damage of consequence.

The English Aid de-Camp to General Riego, who was made prisoner with him, and conducted to the prisons of Madrid, being claimed by the British Cabinet, has been released, and passed through Bayonne.

Money market of England.—In a debate in the House of Commons on the 26 of April, among other things upon the money concerns of the nation. Mr. Canning said—

"We well know, that at this moment there is scarcely a power in Europe that is not collecting from the capitalists of Great Britain the sinews of war—there is scarcely a power that does not look for resources to the exchequer of our exchange. (Hear, hear.) I do not mean to justify the moral character of such loans; but we all are aware that our monied men lend indiscriminately to all parties: and if, in former times, English Capitalists have led adverse fleets into action, so those, who are now the bankers of the metropolis: (Hear, hear,)—are furnishing arms to those who are contending against each other. (Hear, hear!) Therefore, let me not be told, that if I throw away the foreign enlistment bill, and the alien bill, I may look for security in the morality of our money lenders. (Hear, hear, and laughter.)—No, no—let Ferdinand himself, to-morrow, shew signs of strength, and a determination to fit out an armament, and the troops and fleets of Spain, raised by British capital, will sail from your ports, to strangle infant liberty in South America. (Hear!) I defy you to prevent it, and I defy you to shew any thing in the morality of loan pecuniary transactions to insure you against such an event."

Countess of Albany.—The decease of this Lady, the widow of the late Pretender, which has reached us through the French Papers, gives a revived interest in the contents of the following extract from the Italy of Lady Morgan:—

"But there is a house open in Florence, which has a character and interest peculiary its own; through which all Europe passes on its way to various destinations; which is entered with intense curiosity, and left (to speak from the conviction of my own feelings), with infinite regret—I mean the little palace on the Lung-Arno, where on Saturday evening, a Congress more strictly European than that of Laybach, assembles to offer its homage to the only Legitimate Queen, who unites the sufferages of all parties in her favour, the widow of that true legitimate James the Third of England, Louisa, Princess of Stolberg, Countess of Albany. This Lady has, however, another, and perhaps a deeper claim to interest than these titles given her, as being the 'mia Donna' of Alfieri, his destiny and muse; the only woman whose 'aurea catena' could bind that vagrant heart in eternal fetters, which before or after could fix—the woman without whose friendship, he observes, he never could have effected aught of great or good (senza la quella non avrei mai fatto nulla di buono.") Alfieri's description of his first interview with Madame d'Albany (or as he terms her, 'quella gentilissimam bella signora') is feeling and poetical. He describes the fair young German Princess as a stranger in the midst of strangers, distinguished above all, attracting all, and served by all, till even his sentimental eye fled and morbid shyness yielding to the spell of personal and intellectual charms: and the destiny of one (hitherto his own fate) became dependent on the will of another, and that other a young and unhappy woman.

"The Countess d'Albany was driven to seek the Asylum of a convent, to escape from the brutality of her husband Alfieri has immortalized the coarse licentiousness of this legitimate sot, who lived in a state of perpetual inebriety; but less the evidence of a rival should be doubted, the testimony of some of his contemporaries at Rome and Florence may be taken. His brother, the Cardinal York, was just a degree less contemptible; but he has left a wretched character behind him. He is said to have been feeble, sordid, and bigotted. So, indeed, was the whole race of Stuarts, from the time of James the First of England, the most degenerating and degenerated stock of Europe."

A good Heddiacator!—The followingis a literal transcript of a letter actually sent, a short time ago, to the Matron of a school at Hendon, by the father of one of the boarders:—"As I had a good heddication myself, I am intirely ashamed in what manner Lucy his bitt by the bugs; and it is my desire for her to sleep in the bedd she always do, and not to shift one time in wan, and then in anouther, or to feed all the buggs in the house; for I think it be not right, neither shall she do it.

Pugilism.—The match between Spring and Langan was finally made on Tuesday night. The fight is to be for 600 sovereigns, and to take place on the 8th of June, within 100 miles of London, on a stage of six feet high, covered with three inch planks, without turf. Fifty pounds a side was deposited when the match was made.

Walking School for the Ladies.—Captain Hardman, (a very severe name) has opened a school in London, "in which he performs to instruct young ladies how to walk in a graceful, easy and eminent manner, and to cause them to have an extraordinary genteel carriage of their bodies." In his advertisement, Mr Hardman addresses himself to the nobility, gentry, and public generally.

Cape of Good Hope.—Accounts of a distressing nature have been received from the Cape of Good Hope, dated December 24. At that period the Caffres had made fresh attacks upon the ill-fated settlers, carrying off their cattle and burning their houses. Several skirmishes took place in consequence of these depredations, some of which have had serious results.

Lord Chancellor and Mr. Abercrombie.—We added some time ago to the report of the regret expressed some time ago by the Lord Chancellor on account of what he had said respecting Sir Abercrombie We understand his Lordship, immediately after the debate in the House of Commons, sent a letter couched in the most complimentary terms, expressing his deep regret for the language into which he had been inadvertently betrayed.—Morn. Chronicle.

Canning the Unitedy Parties!—At the anniversary festival (the fifty-first) of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, held on Wednesday week, at the Albion, Aldersgate-street, in the metropolis, Mr Canning was present, and was the proposer of the health of the President, the Duke of Bowes. His royal highness afterwards proposed the name of the right honourable secretary, as one of the vice-presidents. The proposition was assented to by acclamation. The health of the new vice-president was drunk and thanks returned. When it came to Sir James M'Intosh to return thanks for a like compliment, he spoke to the effect, a just and elegant compliment to Mr. Canning:—"As a native Highlander, he felt the greatest pride in beholding a member of that family whose house was founded on the principle of uniting the most eloquent minister of the age, of whom he could say, even in his presence, that he was trusted by his friends as their most potent advocate, and respected by his opponents as the man whom they would have chosen for their head—to say that seeing them come forward on the present occasion afforded him pleasure, would hardly express his feelings on the subject"

To escape from, or go into a House on Fire.—Creep or crawl with your face near the ground, and although the room be full of smoke to suffocation, yet, near the floor the air is pure, and may be breathed with safety. The best escape, from upper windows, is a knotted rope; but if a rope is unavailable, then the bed should be thrown out first, or beds prepared for the purpose.

Definition of Dun.—Dun an importunate creditor; dunny in the provincial dialect of several counties signifies dead; to dun then perhaps may mean to deaden, to importune with demands. Some derive it from the word don, which signifies give; but the true original meaning of the word owes its birth to one Joe Dun, a famous bailiff of the town of Lincoln, so extremely active and so dexterous in his business, that it became a proverb, when a man refused to pay, "Why do you not Dun him?" Hence it became a cant word, and is now as old as the days of Henry VII—Dun was also the general name for the kangaroo before that of Jack Ketch.

And presently a bailiff got
Made of the best strong inompentoer,
And here a cat would lick her ear,
Had tied it up with as much art
As Dun himself could do for his heart.
Cotton's Virgil Tra. book.

An Honourable Widow.—The following feat is worthy of honourable record. A widow lady, now living in the parish of Sebergham, whose deceased husband had been unfortunate in trade, and left her with two children dependent upon her exertions, began business after his death upon a small scale; and after twenty years of persevering industry, finding herself in a situation to discharge her late partner's debts, she privately waited upon every creditor, many of whom were in reduced circumstances, and paid the whole in full, to their no little surprise and admiration. The writer of this (says our informant,) who was acreditor of the latter description, thinks it his duty to make so meritorious an action public.

Graphic Kaleidoscope.—An invention of great importance in the arts, and particularly in bank note engraving, has lately been perfected by Mr. William I. Stoney, of Washington, by which an endless variety of figures can be produced, in a manner that we believe to be inimitable. We cannot give the reader a better idea of the peculiar powers of this machine, than to compare it to a Kaleidoscope, in forming combinations of the most beautiful figures that can be imagined. They are formed of concentrated line, crossing and entangling themselves in the richest variety.

This apparatus is composed of two cylinders, on the surface of which levers are attached, with moveable fulcrums, and as the cylinders pass and repass each other, they shift the fulcrums in the evolutions, which give motion to another lever of singular construction, and to which a chisel is attached for cutting the figure. Nothing that we are acquainted with, in the whole circle of the arts, presents such a formidable obstacle to forgery; and we are assured by the inventor himself, that no two machines of this description can ever produce the same work.

Here, then, it is probable, is the desideratum so long sought for by the Bank of England, and which so tempting a premium has been offered. The inventor, we are told, is so confident of the utility of his discovery, that he intends to repair to London for the purpose of submitting it for inspection in the metropolis.—Wash. City Gazette.

Apathy of the Hudson.—A murderer having committed some crime for which he was sentenced to be hanged, received the awful sentence with so much coolness, that the judge was disposed to believe the man had not understood him, and accordingly caused it to be repeated by one of the native Canadians. The prisoner replied, that he understood the judge very well "You are to be hanged to morrow," repeated the barrister. "Sabes lo bien." "as the gentleman pleases" returned the culprit, and followed his conductor out of court, apparently unconcerned. A few days elapsed before the sentence could be put in execution, and when brought forth to suffer the punishment of his crime, there appeared quite a different person This being reported to the judge, he was ordered to be brought before him, and it was discovered that the other had given this man three rupees to be hanged in his place. The former one of course made his escape; and strange as it may appear, the substitute was afraid of being discharged, lest he might insist upon his refunding the three rupees which he had spent, he said on certain solace, of which they are particularly fond, made of sugar and flour.

Lenfant.—We understand that a gentleman in this country is collecting materials for a life of Ledyard, which may be expected at no distant period to come before the public. Of the man who rambled in his boyhood among the Indians on our frontiers; who was the first to descend the Connecticut river in a canoe, and in one which was constructed by his own hands, and navigated in its voyage by himself alone; who studied law and divinity;—who enlisted as a soldier at Gibraltar;—who went round the world with Cook; projected the first trading voyage to the North West Coast; was intimate with Robert Morris in Philadelphia, with Paul Jones in Paris, with Sir Joseph Banks in London, and Voltaire and Catharine in Petersburgh; who was the friend and correspondent of Jefferson and La Fayette; who was one season in New-York, the next in Spain and France, the next in Siberia, and the next under the Pyramids of Egypt; who was the first to open the field of African discovery, on which during the last thirty six years, so many have entered with an enthusiasm and love of adventure, which nothing could damp but the want of the means; and who, after having seen more than half the globe under his feet,—died at last a man, no doubt many particulars may be related, which will be interesting to his countrymen, and which, at the same time they illustrate the character, and do justice to the memory, of a remarkable individual, will prove what wonders may be wrought by a union of enterprise, perseverance, and resolution, in the same mind."

CAUGHT TARTARS.—Among the Polish prisoners of war, who were in Russia in 1661, was a distinguished nobleman, with whom nobody was allowed to speak without witnesses. This man became ill, and applied for a physician, which the Czar granted. The physician prescribed Cremor Tartari. The doctor had scarcely left the house, when the nobleman ordered before him his minister, who, as soon as he entered, addressed him very angrily, calling him a traitor, threatening the severest punishments, exclaiming, "You dog, what have you been talking to the Pole about the Crim Tartars?" The minister stood motionless with astonishment, now comprehended the misunderstanding arising from the report made by some listeners to the minister, and explained it by shewing the prescription which he had left with the patient.

THE YOUNG LORD ENCOMBE.—The King lately sent for Lord Encombe, the Chancellor's grandson, who is at present a student at Oxford, and presented him with a splendid edition of the Classics, in which his Majesty had written an inscription in the highest degree complimentary to the young Lord's learned and venerable ancestor.

CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER.—It is resolved that Mr. Frederick Robinson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, shall be put in nomination for the Representation of this city on the next General Election. We state this upon from personal knowledge of the fact, that several thousand pounds are subscribed for the purpose of bringing Mr. Robinson in free of expence.—Dublin Evening Post.

MR. JAMES.—Since the death of Sir George Collier, Mr. James, the author of the Naval History, has been assaulted by Sir John Phillimore, who commanded the Eurotas in the action with the Clorinde. In the examination at Union Hall, Mr. James made the following statement, occasionally with very excited feelings, while Sir John Phillimore stood near him, occasionally making significant gestures during the recital. Mr. James said: On Friday last, at half 2 o'clock, I was asleep in my study, not having been well for some days, and over fatigued from want of rest on the previous night, when I was awoke by a loud knocking at the door of my house. I was neither a gentleman's nor a footman's knocking, but as if the parties wanted to break down the door. My servant opened the door, and in came Sir John Phillimore, and another Gentleman (I suppose I must use that term,) whom I wish I never had seen in this office —they entered my parlour, and I requested them to be seated, but Sir John (whom I never saw before) was quite furious in his manner, frowning with rage, stobbering in the mouth, and all I could understand from him was, "I come here about your scoundrelly, rascally book." I repeated my request that he would sit down while I got the book for him to point out what part he complained of. I took the book down, and opened it for him: but he was like a mad lat loose from bedlam, while the poor inanimate man who was with him, (for such he was, or else he would have tried to calm his companion) stood by and said nothing. Sir John opened the book: but his rage so agitated him, that, instead of pointing to the chapter of the Eurotas, he pointed out that of the Loire—"Here, sir," he answer, "How dare you say this about the guns? You are a scoundrel—a rascal." I replied, either "It is a lie," or "you are a liar for saying so. I am no more a scoundrel than you are," or some such words. He immediately struck at me with a stick, and his friend then he'd me back, while Sir John repeated his blow; but I had closed with him, put him on his knees, and would have made him rue the day he attacked me, had I not heard a scream in the passage from my wife, whom health is bad, and who ran into the room, and seized the top of Sir John Phillimore's stick, which he afterwards wrested from her; I was unnerved in the presence of my wife, and at that moment received from the stick the severest blow of all, which cut my head. My wife, alarmed at what she saw, called out to the servant to bring a constable; Sir John Phillimore, and his friend, a man I suppose I must call him, immediately ran off, and Sir John, as he ran from the door, brandished his stick at me, and they ran off like madmen! I supposed they would have been stopped, from a cry of "stop thief," had not the people thought by their dress, that they were different people; they went into a coach near Vauxhall Chapel, and drove rapidly off towards Stockwell; that is all I have to say, Sir.

Sir John made his own defence—and was ordered to recognize in the sum of £80, for his appearance at the Sessions.

In the course of the examination Mr. Justice CHAMBERS "hoped Mr. James would be more cautious in future. He was sure that he felt more than any human being the late unfortunate occurrence (the death of Sir George Collier,) which there was no doubt had been occasioned by the contents of his book, and it was to be expected that his corrigenda would be very copious as well as correct, with a view of preventing a repetition of such events."

ALPHABETICAL PUN.—Among the numerous puns in Matthew's present entertainment, he is quite "at home" in the following:—A person speaking to a very deaf man, and getting angry at his not catching his meaning, says——"Why it is as plain as A. B. C." "Aye, Sir, but I am D. E. F!"

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

It is said that no new Journal can be published in France without the permission of the Ministers. The Filos is the only Evening liberal Paper at Paris, and a person claiming the property of it has sold it to the Government.

From a Work entitled, "Statistical Enquiries respecting the City of Paris," &c.

Paris exports above half the mercearies, furniture, fashions, prints, &c. which are sent out from France, and three-fourths of the clocks and watches, instruments, medicines, wrought metals gold wire, objects of art, maps, prints, music, pottery, chemical productions, and silk fabrics.—This will give an idea of the extent of its trade, and the importance of its industry. In these respects the face of Paris is completely changed within the last thirty years. It is perhaps to be regretted that France has not its Liverpool, and that so much activity and intelligence is concentrated in a spot which almost absorbs that of the whole kingdom. The spirit of Commerce is so prevalent in Paris, that while the duties on goods exported from the whole kingdom, have increased only ten-fold from the year 1819, to the year 1821, the same duties exported from Paris alone, have increased a hundred fold in the same space of time. These duties are principally on refined sugar, and on cotton and woollen goods. Paris and its suburbs contain 25 sugar houses, the neat profits of which are estimated at 1,281,052 francs.

Paris contains 9761 shops for the sale of provisions; not including 5600 traders that way in the halls and in the streets. The venders of wine alone are 2333 in number; while there are but 560 bakers, 335 butchers, 927 eating houses, and 787 coffee-houses.—Thus it appears that the number of taverns is above four times that of bake-houses, and above six times that of butchers' shops. It ought to be observed, however, that the last must not exceed a certain number.

From the year 1810 to the year 1821, the number of silk manufactories increased from 52 to 67. In 1813, 2,270,000 pair of stockings were manufactured, the current price of which at the time, was two francs a pair; and 6,818,000 yards of silk, the price of which was two franks a yard. At present the employment of machinery has diminished those prices a third. It is calculated that 1300 work people of both sexes, and of all ages, are employed in these manufactories.—From seven to eight thousand are employed in the manufacture of gold and silver articles. In the year 1819, there were stamped in France six millions of gold and silver articles, representing a value of 64 millions of francs." It is calculated that the gold manufactured in France in 1819, amounted to thirty-eight hundredths of the gold annually brought into Europe.

One year with another, 120,000 watches and 15,000 clocks are sold in Paris, for about 20 millions of francs, the net profit of which is about three millions and a half.

Every year, from thirty-five to forty thousand horses and mules are brought to market. The average price of a horse is one hundred and sixty francs sixty two centimes.—There are in Paris twelve thousand horses belonging to individuals, and three thousand five hundred to military bodies.

Six hundred and eighty presses are actively employed in Paris, and from three to four thousand printers. It is estimated, that of every hundred works published, sixty eight relate to the belles lettres, history, or politics; twenty to the sciences and arts; and twelve to theology and jurisprudence. The average price of a thousand copies of a printed sheet, paper included, is sixty two francs. The annual consumption of paper is 366,000 reams.

SPAIN

Even the French papers are compelled to admit, that Spain is a scene of bloodshed from one extremity to the other. In all the great towns, the Exaltados, as they are called, videlicit, the Ultra Royalists, are in the continual habit of rising in bodies, and attacking the houses of those they suspect of retaining any affection for the constitution. These unfortunates they butcher without let or hinderance, and plunder their property. Such massacres are daily taking place in towns where there are no French garrisons; and where there are, it requires the exertion of all their force to prevent their occurrence. The ruthless Author of these enormities has led Madrid to enjoy himself at Aranjuez. Afraid to entrust his precious person to the protection of his own subjects, he took with him the major part of the French garrison. The Exaltadoss, however, soon compelled the French General to march additional troops on the capital, which was about to exhibit one general mass of pillage and destruction. It is morally impossible that such a state of things can last long.

It was generally believed that the king would remain six months at Aranjuez. Quesado had received, as the barren reward of his services, the Grand Cross of St. Ferdinand. Such was the state of Spain, that a reinforcement of 6,000 additional French troops was, it is said, to enter it immediately.

GREECE AND TURKEY.

The Turkish Empire, it appears, is assailed on all sides, and its downfall may ere long become matter of history. The Russians, taking advantage of the embarrassment of the Ottomans, are again urging their pretentions on Moldavia and Wallachia with as sanguinous which, if persisted in, must soon produce bloodshed. On this occasion the pride of the Turks keeps a kind of coincident pace with their feebleness. Though evidently unable to withstand the half-armed, undisciplined Greeks, they seem more to court than to deprecate the vengeance of the Autocrat of the North. All the pacific recommendations of Lord Strangford, our ambassador, have, it is said, failed to induce the Porte to listen to any thing which involves the evacuation of the two principalities a matter which the Russians now insist on in the most peremptory manner. In the mean time the Greeks are progressing towards independence. They have taken CORON from the Turks.

A meeting has been held by the Greeks at Missolonghi, in order to discuss the offensive and defensive measures for the ensuing campaign. Prince Mavrocordato presided in this important meeting. It appears to be resolved to send the whole force to Thessaly. The Provinces is to be entered on three sides; one corps seems to be destined to Agroppa, on the west; a second to occupy Voles, on the east, while the main Greek army will advance to Neopatra and the Thermopolæ. The first two corps, in those naturally strong positions may oblige the Turks to divide their forces.

We learn by letters from Missolonghi that the Greeks, on hearing of the preparations at Constantinople for the invasion of the Morea, immediately dispatched European engineers to the north of the Isthmus of Corinth, to form an entrenched camp for the purpose of offering an effectual resistance.—Engineers are also occupied in raising fortifications on the side of Thebes, and on all the principal mountains. By the same channel we learn that upon the receipt of information that the Capt. Pacha was about to set sail from Constantinople with a large body of troops for the relief of Patras, the Greeks sent reinforcements to the blockading army, with positive instructions to carry the place by assault in the event of the Turkish Governor still refusing to capitulate. Among these reinforcements are several distinguished English French and Polish Officers.

Public attention begins to concentrate itself on Greece. Every day increases the probabilities that the power of the Turks will be destroyed. To whom will belong the territory from which they must be driven? Will Russia and Austria partition European Turkey as they partitioned Poland? Or will the Greeks be permitted to establish a representative government in the districts they may recover from their tyrants? It does not seem probable that the legitimate conspiracy against human improvement, who put down liberty in Italy and Spain, will tolerate the establishment of a representative government in Greece; and yet seems scarcely possible that France should be so dead to her own interest as not to unite with England in preventing Russia from rendering her influence overwhelming, by the acquisition of Constantinople and the Dardanelles. A cordial understanding between England and France, with respect to the affairs of Greece, would preserve the balance of power and the peace of Europe.—Globe and Traveller.

Lord Byron's efforts in behalf of the Greeks have excited the resentment of the Divan, who is unable to comprehend how an Englishman, bearing a title, could possibly be so little under the control of his own government as to engage, without its consent, in active warfare against an ally; and they have demanded an explanation from Lord Strangford, who is likely to experience as much difficulty on this point as he did in his efforts for bringing about a reconciliation with Russia. How difficult it is to keep terms with barbarians!

The Pacha of Egypt.

A vessel arrived at Marseilles from Alexandria, which place she quitted in the beginning of March, brings information that at that time every thing was tranquil in Egypt, and that the Pacha, whatever might be his intentions towards the Porte, had refrained from any overt act of independence.

The occupation of the town and castle of Arta by Constantine Botsaris is also confirmed.

A Greek vessel arrived at Ancona on the 4th of April, from Corfu, whence it sailed on the 29th March, with information that the city of Lepanto had fallen into the power of the Greeks, the 13th of that month.

It was stated at Missolonghi that Lord Strangford had nearly broke terms with the Sultan, on account of the insolent reproaches of the Grand Vizier, for the loan raised in England for the Greeks. That troops under Lord Byron and Captain Parry (provided with several pieces of cannon, each of which is commanded by a German or British officer.

LORD BYRON. It was stated in London on the 12th, upon the authority of a letter from Zante, that Lord Byron was dangerously ill; that a vein of the neck had been o ed; and that one of his Suliotes had shot the guard of Lord Byron, on the refusal of the guard to admit the Suliote into the presence of His Lordship. A morning paper of the 14th, says. We found, however, yesterday, that a letter had been received from the particular friend and companion of Lord Byron, which puts an end to all fear as to the life of his Lordship. On the 15th of February Lord Byron was attacked by a nervious and convulsive fit, the consequence of great exsitement, which was really dangerous while it lasted, which left no other effect than excessive weakness. The letter was dated from Missolonghi the 19th of Feb. It was a private quarrel between him and an Englishman, in which the latter was shot.

There is a report then an intimation has been made to our Ministers, that the members of the Holy Alliance are prepared to recognise the independence of Greece, provided that its future Government shall be monarchical. The answer of our Cabinet is said to have been that the most proper mode would be, to acknowledge the independence first, and that it would then be time enough to discuss the form of Government most congenial to the interest and happiness of Greek people. Should the monarchical form be adopted, the Greeks are so unfortunate as not to be able to select from among themselves a monarch of the true legitimate breed; the last known dependant of their imperial line having died a few years ago in Italy. This deficiency, however, may be supplied, by a scion of the House of Romanow, on whom, in kind anticipation of the future wants of the Greeks, the Empress Catherine conferred the name of Constantine

AGRICULTURE.

From the New England Farmer.

POTATOES.

You will do well to plant some early sort of potatoes on a small, fertile, and forward piece of ground near your stye, which, together with your peas, (if you have any) will give you a chance to bring forward your pork, and get your hogs at least half fatted before your Indian corn is ripe enough to gather. With regard to the greatest portion of your potatoes, intended for the use of your kitchen, and for feeding your stock, &c. you may, perhaps, derive useful information from the following observations, which we copy from the 2nd vol. of "Memoirs of the board of Agriculture of the state of New York."

"Potatoes should be planted the first ten days in May, or a little before planting Indian corn. But it is better to postpone the planting of potatoes than of corn Therefore, in the hurry of spring, farmers often leave their potatoes to be planted in the last week of May. To plant them early will never injure the crop at any season, and if the season happens to be very dry about harvest time, the crop will be much better if planted the first of May.

"Seed potatoes should never be cut—one large whole potatoe is sufficient for a hill. The outside skin of potatoes, called cuticle, is the most durable part, and retains the moisture for the use of the young plants, until it is all exhausted. If potatoes are cut, the nutritive juice is absorbed in a great measure by the earth.—The evil of cutting seed potatoes is more manifest on dry soil than on moist. It is a mistaken opinion that a whole potatoe is not good on account of bringing the plants too near together, for the roots, which yield all we seek for, spread in all directions and fill the hill.

"Potatoes, if planted in sandy or loamy soil, will yield one third more if a table spoonful of plaster be thrown upon the naked potatoes in each hill, after they are dropped and before they are covered.

"Yard manure is very useful, if laid over the potatoes in each hill, and after an inch of soil has been laid upon them, and then the hill covered as deep as usual. But if the manure be laid directly upon the seed or under it, a drought will injure the crop.

"The most convenient method for raising potatoes is to plant them about the margins of corn fields.—Then a horse may turn upon them when ploughing among the corn without injury."

If the land on which you plant potatoes is infested with grubs, or wire worms, it may be well to strew quick lime over it, at the rate of about two bushels to the acre, immediately after planting. Or if lime cannot conveniently be had, you may try the effect of a bushel and half or two bushels of salt to the acre.—But neither of these substances should be put into the hills, or suffered to come in contact with the seed potatoes.

CATERPILLERS.—The following method of destroying these reptiles is successfully practised in many parts of England. Fires are kindled around the Orchard in such situations as to make the smoke pass through the trees—and as the efficiency of the remedy depends upon the smoke, the fires are fed with stable litter, wet straw, or such substances as produce the greatest quantity of it. In some cases when the Caterpillers are very numerous, powdered Brimstone is occasionally thrown upon the fires, but this is seldom necessary. Care must be taken to prevent the fires from blazing, and the smoke continued until the Caterpillers are seen dropping off the trees, on the ground.

INDIAN CORN. It is now the right time to plant your Indian Corn; and having heretofore given more directions than we fear many of our readers will take the trouble to comply with, we shall be pretty brief on the present occasion.

No rules of universal application can be given respecting the time of the year when corn should be planted. This depends on the nature of the ground and the state of the season. The farmers of Rensellaer county, New-York, prefer the Middle of May for planting But if the land is very dry and warm they plant the first week in May to prevent suffering by drought. They say that ashes or quick lime ought always to be applied to the top of corn hills, immediately after planting, if it follow award, to prevent grub-larva from destroying it. The same application will have a similar effect, if applied to potatoes, but neither unleached ashes or lime, in a quick or caustic state, should, in any case come in contact either with the seed corn or the young plants.*

As a farther precaution against insects, and to bring forward germination, it is recommended to wet the seed corn in strong tar-water, or water in which turpentine has been infused, and then roll it in plaster. But care should be taken not to cont the dry corn with tar, as that process may prevent its sprouting. A great many other liquids, steeps and infusions, have been recommended as preservatives against worms, &c. but we believe tar water is as effectual as any. There is danger in soaking the seed too much, especially if it be planted early in the season, as it sometimes causes the corn to rot in the ground. But if planting a second time should become necessary, by means of the destruction of the first seed, or if planting be delayed on any accouht till the beginning of June, then it will be proper that the seed should have warm water poured on it. Let it not soak more than a quarter of an hour, and be cooled speedily, and be planted before it dries. The corn will be forwarded in its growth by several days.—The seed should be covered with about two inches of earth.†

Receipts to Destroy Insects on Plants.—Tie up some flour of sulphur in a piece of muslin or fine linen, and with this the leaves of young shoots of plants should be dusted, or it may be thrown on them by means of a common swansdown puff, or even by a dredging box.

Fresh assurances have repeatedly been received of the powerful influence of sulphur against the whole tribe of insects and worms which infest and prey on vegetables. Sulphur has also been found to promote the health of plants, on which it was sprinkled; and that peach trees in particular, were remarkably improved by it and seemed to absorb it. It has been likewise observed, that the verdure and other healthful appearances were perceptibly increased, for the quantity of new shoots and leaves formed subsequently to the operation, and having no sulphur on their surfaces, served as a kind of comparative index, and pointed out distinctly the accumulation of health.

To Remove Herbs and Flowers in the Summer.

If you have occasion to transplant in the summer season, let it be in the evening after the heat has passed; plant and water the same immediately, and there will be no danger from the heat the next day; but be careful in digging up the earth, you do not break any of the young shoots that the sap exudes out of the same, to the great danger of the plants

HORTICULTURE.

CULTIVATION OF MELONS AND CUCUMBERS.

To the Editor of the New England Farmer.

SIR,—Perhaps there is nothing relating to our common gardening, in which people more generally err than in the manner of cultivating melons, cucumbers, and other running vines. I allude to the practice of having too many plants grow in a hill. As far as my observation has extended, it appears to be the common practice to suffer as many as from four to ten or twelve vines to grow in a hill. This, I believe, is an error. One good thrifty vine in a hill, I am studied is generally enough. I have been confirmed in this opinion, by seeing within a year or two, the effects of a few experiments on the subject.

Sometime in August, 1822, I visited a friend in Salem, who had two considerable water-melon fields. One of them was cultivated the usual way, that is in hills about three and a half feet distant and with several vines in a hill. The other was planted in hills eight feet distant, each way, and but one vine in a hill suffered to grow. Both fields were well manured, and in good order: but the difference in the crop was as great as in the manner of their cultivation. In the first mentioned field the melons were of an ordinary size and quality, and the vines were much blighted. In the other field, where the hills were eight feet apart, the vines had no appearance of blight upon them, and the melons at that time, though they were not fully grown, were much the largest I ever saw. When they were gathered, as I have since been informed, one of them weighed above forty pounds, and several between thirty and forty pounds each.*

I seldom succeed in raising good melons, owing as I have supposed to the unsuitableness of the soil, it being of a wet, cold nature which causes them to blight. In consequence of this difficulty in bringing them to perfection, I have frequently wholly omitted planting them, altho' they are to me a real luxury. But the last season I was induced to plant a few similar to those I saw in Salem. My water melon hills I had about eight feet apart; my musk-melons four, and I suffered but one vine to grow in a hill. Notwithstanding the season was very unfavorable, having frequent sudden showers, accompanied with wind, which blew the vines in every direction, yet my melons were very good, some of them the best I ever raised.

The advantage to be derived from having vines grow single, as I believe nearly as great, respecting the cultivation of cucumbers as of melons.

A neighbour of mine, who is very curious in these things, last season, took me into his garden to see the effect of an experiment of his.—He had planted his cucumbers in two rows of hills, manured alike. In a part of them he had let but one vine grow in a hill, in a part two, and in another part three or more vines in a hill. At that time, where there was but one in a hill, the vines were very flourishing, all the leaves green, the cucumbers very fair, and he assured me that he had gathered from them as many, as from the same number of hills that had three or more vines in a hill. That part containing two vines in a hill was visibly different, they appeared less luxuriant than those of but one; and in that part containing three or more vines in a hill, they were apparently on the decline, the leaves had mostly become yellow and some of them black.

Perhaps it may be thought that eight feet apart is a great distance for water melon vines to grow, and singly too; but when it is considered that a single vine, in a rich soil will extend over a rod or even more, of ground, I think it must appear rational that in a rich soil it is not too great a distance. Doubtless in a light sandy or gravelly soil, lightly manured, half the distance may be preferable. P————s.

WILLIAM MORTIMER.

'One Clear Liver, A Thousand are Forgot.

At that awful period when England was convulsed with civil discord, and Cromwell with his partizans were contending against the scattered forces of the king, William Mortimer, a young and zealous loyalist, used every exertion to forward the success of his lawful monarch. He left his family, then living in retirement near Chepstow, to join the standard of Charles, who was marching with an army from Scotland into the southern part of the country, expecting to be reinforced by his friends, and all those who were discontented with the wild enthusiasm of Cromwell and his followers. These expectations were, in a great measure, disappointed. The royalists, in general, were not aware of their king's approach, and the Scotch, on whose assistance he had confidently relied, were deterred from uniting with them unless they previously subscribed to the covenant. In this posture of affairs, Charles encamped at Worcester, and was compelled to hazard that fatal battle, the result of which is so well known. Mortimer was one of the few who, escaping from the field, accompanied the king in his flight; and although history is silent upon the subject, it has been handed down by tradition, that Charles, dismissing all his faithful attendants, for fear of hazarding a discovery, and accompanied only by William Mortimer, who was well acquainted with the localities of the country, resolved, if possible, to escape into Wales. The attempt, however, was frustrated by means of the various passes of the Severn, being so well guarded by soldiers, who were every where eager for his apprehension, not so much in obedience to the command of their generals, as on account of the immense reward that was offered for his person. Not dismayed at this unexpected failure, they travelled by night (hiding themselves in marshes and among the river reeds in the day time,) and, with much peril and exertion, contrived to reach Monmouth. Here they soon perceived that it was impossible for them to remain long without being discovered; and, Mortimer, having arranged his plans accordingly, seized a little boat on the banks of the Wye, and, covering the king with the bark of trees, suffered the vessel, during the night, to be carried down by the current till it reached a range of romantic rocks on the banks of the above mentioned river. Here they landed, and, letting the boat adrift with the stream, to elude pursuit, secreted themselves in the natural recesses of the cliffs. Mortimer had sufficient confidence in the faith of a young lady, to whom he was betrothed, to confide to her the secret of the king; and as he was afraid to make his appearance near a place where he was so well known, this loyal and affectionate girl, at the hazard of her own life and honour, brought them at the dead of the night, their provision. One fatal night she was traced to the spot by a militia man, who was eager for the destruction of his sovereign, and on her return was seized and confined by this ruthless traitor. In the mean while, Mortimer, fearful that a discovery might take place from these midnight interviews, in a neighbourhood where he was so well known, and anxious for the further safety of his royal master, whose danger was increased by delay, ventured to descend from their secret cave, to the residence of a peasant, who was under the greatest obligations to him, and informed him that a friend of his, a cavalier, who had escaped from the battle of Worcester, was anxious to get out of the country. The old man was sworn to secresy, and the king was immediately confided to his care. Mortimer then retired to his hiding place, with the intention of passing the remainder of the night, but his pursuers, with their hot blood hounds, were then hunting about the spot; he saw the light of their torches glaring among the dark caverns, and heard the cliffs re echo the howling of the wolf dogs as they forded the river, and climbed the precipices, in the eager pursuit of their prey. He attempted to retreat, but in vain, the monsters of death were already fast approaching, and after a short, but desperate, struggle, he sank down, bleeding and exhausted, under their greedy fangs. The pursuers cutlet off their dogs in order to save his life, that they might extort from him a confession of the king's retreat; they succeeded in mastling the ferocious animals, but when they lifted their victim from the blood stained sward, where he had fallen, they found him stiff and cold in the arms of death; they rested their torches before his face, but his eyes were forever closed. Even the barbarians themselves, when they looked upon his well proportioned limbs, and saw his fine and manly countenance, beautiful even in death, cursed the cause that had betrayed them from their allegiance, and compelled them to the commission of a crime, at which their depraved hearts now shuddered. As they had gained nothing by their cruelty, and he, from whom they might have endeavoured, by threats and torture, to extract a full developement of the king's intention, and his present hiding place, was now dead, they released their unhappy captive next morning, without making her acquainted with the bitterness of her destiny. She hastened towards the spot of her lover's retreat, anxious for his safety, and yet scarce daring to proceed. It was in the month of October; the morning was chill and cold, and although the red sun was glimmering on the distant waters of the Severn, it spake no comforts to her soul; the dew drops were lying thick upon the lank blades of grass, and a grey mist was rising from the earth, which partly obscured the distant objects. She ventured onward, trembling with the most intense anxiety, and invoking heaven for the safety of her lover, (for then she thought not of the king,) when suddenly turning her eyes to the ground, she witnessed the object of all her solicitude, lying on a cold bed of turf before her. He, who had so often hailed the sound of her footsteps, was now heedless of her approach; his cheek, which had once glowed with her pure kisses, felt not now her pale and delicate lips as they fed greedily upon the death damp of his face. She passed her white fingers over his brow, and when she saw them smeared with the unnatural stain of livid gore, she laughed in the delirium of her despair, till the sound of the mountain echoes, mocking her tones of misery, awoke her to the burning realising sense of her soul's agony. Now unrestrained, she called upon his name in language the most affecting. She whispered in his deaf, unheeding ear, the voice of love and truth—she pressed his lifeless head and placed it in her bosom, and when she felt its icy coldness freezing at her heart, she wept that he was cold. A fisherman, who had witnessed the scene, and hurried from his boat to assist her, was, at this moment, approaching the spot; she looked wildly round and beckoned him away, but when she saw him still advancing towards her, she uttered a piercing shriek, and in a few minutes was on the lofty summit of an adjoining precipice. She waved her white arms for a few minutes, as in triumph, and then sinking upon her knees at the utmost verge of the o'erhanging brow, she crossed her hands over her face, and instantly bending forward, sunk gently into the deep dell below. Such was the aerial delicacy of her form, that not a limb was bruised, and nothing but the absence of breathing indicated the calm triumph of death. The unfortunate lovers were buried in one grave, and nothing is left to perpetuate their memory but the imperishable cliff, which rises, like the genius of history, over the spot, to consecrate their eternal fame.

QUEBEC.

Thursday, 3d June, 1824.

The proceedings at the close of our Provincial Parliament had been received in London before the 14th of April.

His Excellency the Earl of Dalhousie, Governor in Chief, we understand, will embark in His Majesty's Ship the Athol, 28, —— Bourchier, Esq. Commander, on a temporary absence from the Government of the British North American Colonies, on Sunday next. The Countess Dalhousie and Miss Hay, with Mr. Maule, A. D. C. and A W. Cochran, Esquire, Civil Secretary to His Excellency, will embark at the same time. The Athol will sail for Leith.

An immense quantity of Shad has lately been taken in this neigbourhood and brought to market; one individual had about 3ooo this morning. They sell at from 3d. to 4d. each, and are a cheap article of food for the poorer classes.

One hundred sail of square rigged vessels have arrived in the Port within the last forty eight hours. Those with cargoes & that were deeply laden have generally sustained losses in their Bulwarks, Spars, Sails, and Boats, and some of them had their decks completely swept. Several of the vessels that arrived had not a boat to land with. The most violent gales prevailed from the 23d April, to 1st May, and during that period some vessels were driven back about 800 miles, and had they been within a few distance of the European coast, must inevitably have been lost. We have accounts of the loss of four vessels bound to this port, besides three bound to the lower ports.

The Harbour presents a very cheering view, the river is absolutely covered with vessels.

Many of these vessels have had a passage of two months and several days. The Cherub and Canadian proceeded to Montreal yesterday, being towed up by Hercules Steam-Boat. The two vessels had general cargoes, and drew fourteen or fifteen feet of water. She proceeded with them from the harbour with apparent ease.

MONTREAL, May 26.

STEAM TOW BOAT HERCULES.

On Sunday last, about 4 o'clock, this beautiful & powerful boat, arrived in our Harbour from Quebec, which Port she left on Friday evening, having in tow the ship Margaret of Liverpool, and returned for the new Brig belonging to Messrs. Millar, Parlane and Co. which was launched at the Cross on Saturday, both of which were safely moored in our Port. In addition to the Margaret, we understand that the Hercules brought a Schooner as far as the foot of St. Mary's current; and that notwithstanding these incumbrances her speed was equal to any of the other Boats which ply between this City and Quebec. That the Hercules will answer every purpose originally contemplated by the proprietors, is now placed beyond a doubt, and that the Citizens of Montreal will feel the good consequence resulting from her services is equally certain; of this the people of Quebec are equally convinced.—Heretofore Quebec enjoyed the principal advantage of having in its harbour for a great part of the season, the foreign vessels, whose cargoes were consigned to agents there, and forwarded up the country by Steam Boats. This mode of proceeding will no longer be necessary, as they can be now brought to this Port with facility, discharge their cargoes on the spot where they intended to arrive, and take on board their outward bound loading without being subjected to a tedious and expensive delay at Quebec. We were led to believe last year that something would be done to render the harbour of this place more convenient than it has been for many years, but nothing has yet been done in that way, and not only an approach to the vessels, but to the water side is extremely difficult, and even dangerous, from the filthy state of the beach, and the multiplicity of carts which are continually driving in a furious manner through, and opposite the different avenues leading to the river. We trust the Committee of trade will exert themselves for the accomplishment of this desirable purpose, as under present circumstances it may be reasonably expected that every succeeding summer will bring an addition to the arrival of square rigged vessels to the Port of Montreal.—Courant.

DEATH.

Having in early life, and for several years, had the pleasure of an intimate acquaintance with the estimable Lady whose decease is announced in the following paragraph, extracted from the Papers of the Lower Province, we can unite with great sincerity in the tribute there paid to the memory of one of the most amiable, lovely, and accomplished women that ever left the shores of Great Britain. We remember when that Lady was the pride and ornament of a circle unrivalled in the North of England for wit, talent, and beauty. It was, indeed, difficult to say, whether the beauty of her person or mind was most conspicuous, and the fascination of her manners was irresistible.—We deeply sympathize with her bereaved husband, whose desolation of heart must be unutterable.—Ed.

Died at William Henry, on the 26th ultimo, Mrs. Mary Cossitt, Wife of Thomas Cossitt, Esq. R. N.

It forms but little tribute to the memory of one whose loss must be the source of the deepest regret, to say, that the amiable and endearing qualities of this truly accomplished Lady, so conspicuous in her social intercourse of life, never failed of securing, not only the most prominent attachment and respect of those who ranked in the circle of so desirable an acquaintance, but of all who can view with admiration the practice of the noblest virtues of our nature.

Her generous feelings betraying a heart ever breathing with warmth for the happiness of all—her great and long sufferings, endured with exemplary patience, her calm resignation to the Divine will,—her piety,—anxious solicitude in the hour of danger for a truly tender and beloved husband,—for a numerous family, and for innumerable friends, formed, amongst others, the characteristic traits of this admirable woman; and which, in their just appreciation, can be surpassed by few mortals.

"To know her was to love her."

Her remains were interred on Saturday last, in the Parochial Church, when an immence concourse of Inhabitants evinced the deep regret with which they were impressed for departed worth.—Communicated.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Executive Council the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, which it appeared that the House of Assembly addressed His Excellency to that effect, for the County; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

That the adoption of such a measure to the end seeming to militate with the Provision of the Act, when the Communication from the Seat of Government to the Districts was admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit to each District; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that it all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate,

WELLAND CANAL.

To the Editor of the U. C. Gazette.

Sir,

I will thank you to publish the following Report of Messrs. Clowes, together with the Letter from the Hon. J. H Dunn, in the next Gazette, and oblige,

your's &c.
Wm. HAMILTON MERRITT.

St. Catherine's, June 14th, 1824.

REPORT.

TO THE DIRECTORS OF THE WELLAND CANAL COMPANY.

Gentlemen,

In submitting this Report to your consideration, it may be advisable to accompany it with a few observations and remarks to guide you in the prosecution of the work, and to state some reasons for estimating and proportioning our Canal for eight feet Locks.

The greatest obstacle to overcome, & the only one worthy of consideration on this route, is the dividing ridge between Chippawa and the head waters of the 12 Mile Creek—this we propose to tunnel which will save far more than one half the time necessary to expend in cutting it open, and every foot in depth would add proportionably to the expense by giving it a foot more than the Locks; Boats will never meet with obstruction in loading, and room will be left for the supply of water for your hydraulic concerns, and for all purposes of Boat Navigation. A Canal of this size is considered practicable, and will pass all the produce that may be required for a century to come. The Grand Canal in Great Britain is of those dimensions.

In recommending wooden Locks, I am guided by the following considerations, a stone Lock would cost at least

From the low price of wooden materials in this country, a wooden Lock can be built for £220, the foundation of those Locks, and that part under water, will last a century, the upper timbers at least ten years, when the whole expense of repairing or rebuilding each of those entire will not exceed £100; this can be done in the winter season, and not interrupt the navigation one single hour. Now the difference in the original cost is £780, the interest on which, is £46. 16. currency per Annum, consequently an entire new Lock may be built including the foundation every five years for the difference in interest of the money.

In regard to the Harbour, we beg to observe, that there is a natural Basin, capable of holding 500 sail of vessels, always in water, and that they can proceed 3 miles up without incurring one shilling additional expense to the four feet Canal.

Respecting the prosecution of this work to advantage, and with expedition, you must open the two tunnel mouths as soon as possible, which will draw off the water from each end of the tunnel, then a tunnel may be drove through in six months, which will not cause an expenditure of more than £162 per month, after which it will take fifteen months to complete the tunnel at an outlay of £800 per month, it is not necessary to lay out money the present year on any other part of the route, as ample time will be left you to finish the cutting, and years after at your leisure; the tunnel cannot be drove faster than mentioned which shews the necessity of its speedy commencement.

We must further observe, that this estimate is founded on mature deliberation, and from the experience of the practical part of Canal operations for a series of years, and that we will undertake to complete the whole of it according to the above estimate, and require from you no advance, when we finish each mile we will expect payment and not until then.

We have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your Obedient Servants,

Copy of a Letter from the Honourable J. H. Dunn, to the Directors of the Welland Canal Company.

York, 30th May, 1824.

Gentlemen,

I had the pleasure to receive your letter and beg leave to express my thanks for the honour conferred on me, by nominating me President of the Welland Canal Company. The situation which I have the honour to hold in the Province, leaves it quite out of my power to give any personal attendance to this object, my duty requires my constant presence at York, this, together with my want of experience in filling such an office, renders me under the necessity of requesting you will be pleased to appoint some more disposable and fit person as your President. I feel highly gratified with the Report of Messrs. Samuel and James Clowes Engineers, which is so perfectly satisfactory that I recommend your publishing the same for the information of your friends in the Provinces.

I cannot view the proposed Canal in any other light, than a public benefit and advantage to the Country, and it would have afforded me great pleasure, if I could with propriety, comply with your wishes, but rest assured I shall do all I can to promote it, and from the easy mode you propose calling in your instalments, I beg you will permit me to double my number of Shares.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your Obedient Servant

Gentlemen,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

Editorial Commentary.

THE SIGNAL IS GIVEN—The eighth Parliament of Upper Canada is dissolved, and the new Writs are made Returnable on the 9th day of August.—Most devoutly do we pray that the PEOPLE of this PROVINCE will DO THEIR DUTY; and waving all personal, and interested motives, judge and determine coolly, and return such men for their Representatives, as may be a credit to themselves, and the honour, and the stay, and the bulwark, of their Country. May God be with them, and direct their councils.

We are much gratified by the opportunity that is given us to make public an instance of great liberality on the part of the Hon. JOHN HENRY DUNN, respecting the patronage he has bestowed on the WELLAND CANAL: an example which we hope soon more extensively followed than has yet been the case. It is really astonishing that so many gentlemen (of well known ample mean) and whose property must be so greatly benefitted by the work) should keep back the support which THEY OUGHT TO GIVE to this great national undertaking; both the glory and profit of which, will shortly rest on more worthy and patriotic individuals.

We have no time, this week, to spread a plaister for the wounds of the little Hero of the "Pilot"—even the MACKENZIE of all the MACKENZIES, whose loyalty appears to have caught an ague-fit t'other side of the water—Should they fester a little, we really cannot help it.—It's hard to "minister to a mind diseas'd"!

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

WHITEHALL, APRIL 10.

The King has been pleased to constitute and appoint the Right Hon. the Earl of Morton, K T to be His Majesty's High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

The King has been pleased to direct Letters Patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, appointing the Earl of Eldon, Chancellor of Great Britain, and the Chancellor Lord Keeper & Commissioners of the Great Seal of Great Britain for the time being; Lord Redesdale; Lord Gifford, Master of the Rolls, and the Master of the Rolls for the time being; the Right Hon. Sir John Leach, Knight, Vice Chancellor of England, and the Vice Chancellor for the time being; Sir Charles Wetherell, Knight, His Majesty's Solicitor-General; Samuel Compton Cox, Esq one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery; Anthony Hart, Esq one of His Majesty's Counsel learned in the Law; Stephen Lushington, Doctor of Civil Law; William Courtenay, Esq. one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, Robert Percy Smith, Joseph Littledale, John Herman Merivale, Nicholas Conyngham Tindale, and John Thomas Beames, Esqrs Barristers at Law, His Majesty's Commissioners for enquiring into the practice established in the Court of Chancery.

Lord Francis Conyngham has led to the Hymeneal Altar, Lady Jane Fagel, daughter of the Marquess of Anglesea. Immediately after the ceremony, the happy couple departed in a new post chariot for Cumberland Lodge.

The King we are happy to state is convalescent; he is nearly recovered from his late indisposition. His Majesty intends to come to London, and will reside at Carlton-house for six weeks.

The King's birth day was kept at Court on the 13th May.

WEST INDIES—A loan to the amount of five millions, for the relief of the West India proprietors, had within a few days, it is said, been negociated and agreed on with two houses in London of the first respectability, who came forward and made the immediate advance, on the security of property to a large amount in Jamaica and other islands.

THE BENEVOLENT MRS. FRY.—Mrs Fry, who, like an Angel of Mercy is always doing good, has founded an institution called the Guardian Society, for the reception of reduced females. At the anniversary which was celebrated on the 28 h, the Rev Rowland Hill sent a five pound note, with a letter, stating, that he thought such a note better than a speech; and remarking that speeches on these occasions are apt to be too long. Mr. Serjeant Lens took the hint, and in making his speech uttered the following language which we commend to speech makers on this side of the Atlantic. Mr. Lens said there was one thing in which he had no doubt the meeting would agree with the Divine whose letter they had heard, and himself, namely, that the speeches made on these occasions were in general a great deal too long, and however interesting they might be to the speakers, that they seldom failed to tire the hearers. He therefore besought the speakers who might address the meeting to condense their speeches and to remember that brevity was the soul of wit. The late Lord Ellenborough on the occasion, in the House of Lords, when another Noble Lord had just made a dreadfully long speech, got up, and said, "My Lords! my Lords! I am answerable to God for my time," and said no more. The speakers on these occasions should remember that they are equally responsible for the time of their hearers.

WAVERLY NOVELS.—A new Romance, by the Great Unknown of the North, has been announced to the London booksellers at a recent sale at the Albion Tavern. The story is Scotish, and the incidents it includes, are supposed to have happened about the year 1760, fifteen years after the rebellion. Four thousand copies of the work were bespoke on this occasion. One great house alone, in Paternoster Row, subscribed for 900. Two volumes of this Romance are actually printed off.

DEATH OF SIR CHARLES M'CARTHY.—The defeat of the English by the native Ashantees, and the death of Sir Charles M'Carthy, with the loss of 400 of his army is confirmed by an arrival at Providence, which left the coast of Africa about the 12th April.

EXTRAORDINARY DESPATCH.—The ship Emerald, of Boston, Philip Fox, commander, sailed from Liverpool on the 20th of February, arrived at Boston on the 8th of March (17 days passage)—sailed from Boston on the 21st March, and arrived at Liverpool on the 13th April, being absent only 53 days from Liverpool.

NEW TESTAMENT IN CHINESE.—One of the passengers just arrived in the Lord Castlereagh East Indiaman, has brought with him, a translation of the New Testament in the Chinese language, written or engraved on slips of a leaf of a plant or tree, strung together.

FROM THE LONDON PRICE CURRENT, APRIL 20—Quebec Ash 28—Pot 33s. Pearl 40s. 0d.

ELECTIONEERING-PUFF—Some years ago, the candidates for the representation of one of the northern boroughs were Sir Ralph Par and a Mr. William Fratrum, a rich clothier. Neither of them were much liked, and any third candidate might easily have thrown them both out; but the following accident excited an interest in favour of the former, who ultimately carried the election. One of the electors, a favourite of the mob, happened to ejaculate with a sigh of indifference, Par nobile Fratrum, the words were caught and misconstrued by the crowd—Par! No Billy Fratrum! was instantly shouted by a thousand voices, and scribbled all over the borough.

A LOW ESTIMATION!—In one of the articles of a benefit society at the west end of London, the following description of persons prohibited from becoming members thereof is inserted, namely, "No lawyer, or lawyer's clerk, or any other dangerous artificers."

MATCH AGAINST TIME.—Mr. Mason's match to ride his horse, Fury, 20 miles in one hour, from the 17th to the 21st mile-stone, between Slough and Salthill, took place yesterday morning.—The horse did the first ten miles in 29 minutes, and after passing through Colnbrook on the return at a winning rate, the horse fell, but received no injury. Not so with Maynard the rider, who rode under 12st: he was stunned for the moment, and was unable to mount again until too late to win the match, which was for 100 sovereigns.

JUDGE PARSONS—A gentleman had been concerned in a duel. The ball of his antagonist struck his watch and remained in it thus saved his life. CARRIAGE SPRINGS.—Mr. Lemuel H. Parsons of Lenox has made an improvement in the carriage spring, so simple that every body may see the operation of it, and so cheap that it must be of public utility.—It consists in the application of rollers to one or more springs in the form of a cradle spring.—The spring placed on the axeltree of the carriage, and parallel with it a roller is placed transversely at each end of the spring, the axis of which is in a horizontal position, so as to admit a leathern strap to pass over it. The strap is connected at one end with an iron bow, which bow is made (sat under the body of the carriage, then passing over the roller, on the end of the spring, is fastened to a bar of wood, resting on the axeltree.—Thus it operates upon the principle of the pully, thereby giving to the carriage double the perpendicular motion of the spring, in addition to a horizontal or swinging motion. It is not necessary that the spring should be entirely of steel. It may be principally of wood, and in this way the spring which has double the advantage of the cradle spring, will not cost one third as much.

A GOOD JOKE!—A surveyor of taxes, named Hyde, was examining a house by the side of which was a tan pit, and while disputing with the tenant about the number of windows it contained, the most unfortunately, but very gently, slipped into the pit. "For God's sake," cried he "help me, help me!" "Nay said the proprietor, "I dare take nothing from thence without consent of the exciseman: and it would be a pity to pull out a Hyde before it is well tanned."

MR. BOOTH.—We regret to learn that this distinguished actor was seized with a violent fit of insanity on Saturday. On Friday night he played Othello, and in some passages is said to have been inimitably fine, while in others it was thought by some he was turning the character of the moor into burlesque. In the dying scene we are informed he even excelled himself. But before the drop of the curtain, he turned over facing the audience, raised his head upon his hand, and said.—"There, who! think of that!" These circumstances were looked upon strange at the moment; but no further notice was taken at the time. About eleven o'clock on Saturday, he was in the green room of the theatre, conversing with Mr. Wood suddenly, but with an air of calmness, he said to [illegible] somebody's throat to-day, and whom shall I be Wallack, or yourself, or who?"—Woodhull meant. "Why I mean what I say," replied Booth. He then observed that he was grasping a dagger and at the very moment Wallack passed along. Wallack then ran the street, and Booth after him; and Woodhull after Booth gained upon Wallack, and just as he was making a plunge at his back, Wallack providentially stumbled and fell, and Booth passed over him. He was then seized, disarmed [illegible] In the evening he was taken to the house [illegible] the asylum, as mentioned in a morning [illegible] treated with every kindness and at [illegible] tranquil, and it is hoped, that he [illegible] painful indisposition [illegible] ran a risk of being [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

For the first time, the Duke of Bordeaux was represented in this solemnity, on which occasion his substitute was selected from amongst the juvenile domestics in the service of the Duchess of Berri. Each of the children were presented with thirteen plates of eatables, and also with thirteen pieces of silver. After the ceremony the Princes and Princesses, with their suite, attended mass in the chapel.

The Duke of Bordeaux, son of the Dutchess de Berri, now about four years old, has an establishment of four Gentlemen of Honour, five Aids, a Col. of the Staff, and three Secretaries!!!

On Thursday the 15th April, the English workmen, to the number of fifty, employed in the iron foundery of Charenton, turned out and paraded the Commune of Carreres, with knives and bludgeons, and attacked and ill treated the peaceable inhabitants, and such as came in their way. The inhabitants were at length obliged to repel force by force, and finally the authorities of Paris found it necessary to send off a corps of gendarmerie and quarter upon the inhabitants of Charenton.

The Paris Etoile gives a singular account of the destruction of one of Ruben's pictures in the Museum. Some days previously to the event, M. de Forbin, the Director of the Museum, received an anonymous letter from an individual, who said that the Government having caused him to sustain a loss of 20,000 francs, he would destroy, one after the other, all the pictures in the Museum, if the sum in question was not brought to him at an appointed place. M. Franchet, of the Police, also received a similar letter; but, thinking it the act of some madman, no importance was attached to it, but a few days after, a person employed at the Museum ran to the Director of the Police, and informed him that one of the finest of Ruben's pictures had been torn to pieces. The author of this act had not been discovered. The doors of the Museum were instantly closed, and similar precaution was adopted at the Luxembourg.

Mr. Tennant states, that he obtained these documents "through a person attached to the Empress, and who was deeply in her confidence. The letters were given to me a few days after the death of the Empress, without any view of interest, the character of the person on whom I am indebted for the possession of them, being above every suspicion of fraud." No. I.

[Of this letter Mr. Tennant observes, it is without a date; but from the style and address it should seem to have been written by Napoleon, at Paris, just before his Marriage with Josephine.]

"Seven o'clock in the morning.—I awake full of thee; thy portrait, and the recollection of the intoxicating evening of yesterday, have left no repose in my mind. Sweet and incomparable Josephine! what a curious effect have you had on my heart. Will you be angry? Are you sorrowful? Are you disturbed? My soul is broken with grief, and there is no place of repose for your friend. But is there more repose for me when delivering ourselves up to the deep sentiment which overpowers me, I take from your lips and your heart a flame which burns me? Ah! it was this night that became truly sensible your portrait is not yourself. Thou art to set out at noon; I shall see the again in three hours. In the mean time into deli amor, retrieve thousand kisses, but do not give me any, for they burn my blood

[This letter, Mr. Tennant remarks, is dated the 14th Germinal (4th April.) On the 27th of March, Buonaparte arrived at head quarters at Nice. Finding the army badly provisioned, he removed his head quarters to Albenga.]

"Part Gaurier, the 14th Germinal.—I have received all the letters, but no one of them made the same impression on me as the last. THE TIGER AND ALLIGATOR.

An interesting Anecdote related by the Captain of a Davenports Guineaman.

The bosom of the sea was extremely tranquil, and the heat, which was at a considerable, had made us so languid, that almost a general wish overcame us, on the approach of the evening, to bathe in the waters of the Congo—however, myself and Johnson were deterred from it, from the apprehension of Sharks—many of which we had observed in the progress of our voyage and these enormously large. At length, Campbell alone, who had been making too free with his liquor case, was obstinately bent on going overboard—and although we used every means in our power to persuade him to the contrary, he dashed into the watery element, and had swam some distance from the vessel, when we on the deck discovered an Alligator making towards him from behind a rock that stood a short distance from the shore. His escape I now considered impossible, his destruction inevitable, and I applied to Johnson how we should act, who, like myself, admired the impossibility to save him, and instantly seized upon a loaded carbine, to shoot the poor fellow before he fell into the jaws of the monster. I did not, however, consent to this, but waited with horror the tragedy we anticipated—yet, willing to do all in our power, I ordered the boat to be hoisted out, and we fired two shots at the approaching Alligator, but without effect, for they glided over his scaly covering like ball stones on a tiled pent house, and the progress of the creature was by no means impeded. The report of the piece, and the noise of the blacks from the sloop, soon made Campbell acquainted with his danger—he saw the creature making for him, and with all the skill and strength he was master of, made for the shore. And now the moment arrived by which a scene was exhibited beyond the power of my humble pen perfectly to describe. On approaching within a very short distance of some canes and shrubs that covered the bank while closely pursued by the Alligator, a fierce and ferocious tiger sprung towards him, at the instant the jaws of his first enemy were extended to devour him. At this awful moment, Campbell was preserved. The eager Tiger, by over leaping him, encountered the gripe of the amphibious monster.

A conflict then ensued—the water was coloured with the blood of the Tiger, whose efforts to tear the scaly covering off the Alligator were unavailing, while the latter, had also the advantage of keeping his adversary under the water, by which the victory was presently obtained, for the Tiger's death was now effected. They both sunk to the bottom, and we saw no more of the Alligator. Campbell was recovered, and instantly conveyed on board; he spoke not while in the boat, though his danger had completely sobered him; but the moment he leaped on the deck, fell on his knees and returned thanks to Providence who had so protected him, and what is most singular, from that moment to the time I am writing, has never been seen the least intoxicated, nor has been heard to utter a single oath. If ever there was a perfectly reformed man in the universe, Campbell is the man.

CURIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES RELATIVE TO A WILLOW.—A very small osier or twig was taken from a willow at Cottingham, about fifteen years ago. It was planted immediately in the parish of Scultcoates, and in a few years, by its gradual growth, came very strongly in contact with five bars of iron set upright and strongly connected. These were about three quarters of an inch square, and a small space intervened between each bar. The willow, greatly impeded, still increased in bulk, till at length, by its forcible pressure, the central bar was broken, and the whole now presents a very curious object.

LITERARY AND HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

On Monday the last meeting previous to the summer recess took place at the Castle of St. Louis. The attendance was numerous, and we observed among the members Sir PEREGRINE MAITLAND and Staff. An address was unanimously voted to HIS EXCELLENCY the GOVERNOR IN CHIEF on his departure. A Committee was appointed to draw it up, and it was afterwards presented to HIS EXCELLENCY by SIR FRANCIS BURTON President. His Lordship feelingly declared that no exertions of his should be wanting to give stability and perpetuity to the Society. The Society then listened to an admirable address from the Chief Justice, which included a juridical essay on the laws and customs of France from the time of the Romans to the grand council of Quebec, 1633. This was received with great approbation by the Society, who voted that a copy should be requested of the Chief Justice for publication, to which his Honour assented. Previously to the close of the meeting, the Earl of DALHOUSIE, in a neat speech, proposed the admission of the Honourable DE WITT CLINTON as an honorary member of the Society. We need not say, that the approbation of the meeting was unanimously expressed, no name standing higher in public estimation in CANADA, than that of DE WITT CLINTON.

On Sunday last, (the 6th inst.) His Excellency the Governor-in-chief with the Countess of Dalhousie & Miss Hay, Mr. Maule, A. D. C. and A. W. Cochrane, Esq. his Lordship's Civil Secretary, embarked on board H. M. S. Atholl, for Scotland. His Lordship left the Castle of St. Louis at a little after two, P. M. and was escorted to the place of embarkation by his Excellency Sir Francis Burton, Major General Sir Peregrine Maitland, and their respective suite, the Chief Justice, the Judges, many of the members of the Councils, the Hon. the Speaker of the House of Assembly, the Officers of the General Staff, Departments, and Regiments, and some of our most respectable citizens; the General Order which was issued on the preceding day having announced 3 o'clock as the hour of his Lordship's departure, a number of gentlemen and officers, who were most anxious to mark their respect for the Governor-in-Chief, by escorting him to the water's side, were deprived of this pleasure in consequence of the alteration in the arrangements.—His Lordship dispensed with all military compliments on the occasion, except the usual salute.

On arriving at the King's Stairs, the Governor-in-Chief took leave of the friendly Cortége which had attended him, shaking hands with all those who had been previously honoured with his acquaintance. The Countess of Dalhousie was conducted on Board the Frigate by Lieut. Col. Cockburn, Dep'y. Quarter Master General in his boat, and his Lordship went in his own barge, accompanied by Lieut. Colonel Harvey, D. A. G. On leaving the Wharf he was loudly cheered; as soon as the Governor-in-Chief was on the deck, a salute of 19 guns was fired from the ship, which got under weigh a little after 3 o'clock, when a salute of the same number of guns was given from the Citadel, and returned by the Atholl as she was towed out of the harbour, the wind being from the eastward and very light; till this morning it has continued in that quarter.

His Lordship is succeeded in the civil government of Lower Canada, by Lieutenant Governor the Hon. Sir F. N. Burton, and in the command of the troops in both Canadas by Major General Sir P. Maitland

On the day previous to her departure, (Saturday) the Countess of Dalhousie received the visits of the Ladies of Quebec. A constant succession of visitors thronged her Ladyship's drawing room from noon till a late hour; indeed, such is the estimation in which the many virtues and estimable qualities of Her Ladyship are held, that we believe no lady of this city, or its vicinity, who had the entrée of the Chateau, unless prevented by illness, omitted paying her tribute of respect on this occasion.

On Monday, at noon, His excellency the Lieutenant Governor, took the oaths of office in presence of the Executive Council; Sir Peregrine Maitland attended by his staff, the Officers of the general staff, &c. were present in full uniform to witness the ceremony; a salute was fired from the Citadel upon a signal been given from the Castle at the moment the oath was administered. We have understood that his Excellency dressed the council in a short but emphatic less, and a Bugler was killed in another room; several other men were seriously, though not mortally, injured both in that and the adjoining wing which forms the west side of the building. On the north side a chimney was struck, and in several parts beams were split and the floors splintered and torn up. A horse, standing in a cart on the bay-market, nearly 30 yards from the barrack, was struck down, but afterwards recovered.

At the Officers' Barracks, Ensley House, St. Louis Street, the effect was equally distressing; after the storm had subsided, about 4 o'clock, the servant of Ensign Cogan, 68th Light Infantry, entering his master's room, found the unfortunate young Gentleman a lifeless corps, his face much discoloured, and the hair on the right side of the head singed by the fluid, which glancing from the head entered behind the right clavicle, and passing transversely through the body made its way out at the heel of the left foot, the shoe on which was torn, and the floor on the spot where Mr. Cogan had stood near to the window was slightly splintered; it is not known whether this officer was killed by the same discharge which proved fatal at the other Barrack, as two intensely vivid streams of lightning simultaneous with the thunder, followed each other closely, and both were perceived to strike in several parts of the town. The government buildings have very massive iron work to the windows, are covered with sheet iron and not provided with conductors, which accounts for their having suffered more than the neighbouring houses.

Some minor accidents happened in the town, but we fear we shall hear of many disasters in the country after so severe a storm.

The interment of the sufferers took place at noon this day, and was attended by the Officers of the Staff and Corps in Garrison, and by the men off duty of the 37th and 68th Regiments, as well as by a large concourse of citizens. It was an awfully impressive sight, to see the coffins containing the bodies of four of our fellow creatures, who at the same hour yesterday were in the full enjoyment of health and vigour, borne in mournful procession to the grave, all present appeared deeply touched with the solemnity of the scene.

Ensign Cogan was appointed to, and joi Regiment last year. He was much este corps and in society for his gentlemanly m was 21 years of age.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Jonnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL.
Clk. Ex'o Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber.
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration having, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.
PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Fees of Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND

WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

This information, the Surveyor General thinks it necessary to make, in order to prevent those persons, who are desirous of having an authentic MAP of Upper CANADA, from being imposed upon by a Surreptitious Copy, said to be on the eve of Publication.

Editorial Commentary.

We understand that some delay in the Elections for the Niagara District is likely to be occasioned by a doubt which the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery has stated; whether, under the last Act, regulating the return of Members for the different Counties of the Province, the four Members to represent the County of Lincoln ought not to be returned under one Writ, to represent the County at large, instead of being separately chosen by each Riding respectively.

As this question is probably under the consideration of the proper authorities, we forbear to offer an opinion upon it; but, on turning to the Act, we find, the general provision to be, that every County containing (as the County of Lincoln does) more than Four Thousand Souls* shall be represented by two Members, which it would seem would have given but two Members to the County of Lincoln instead of one for each Riding, as appointed by the Laws repealed, if there had not been a subsequent Clause† in the Act which provides that the number of Members in any County shall not be lessened. This Clause does not mention the District of Niagara or the County of Lincoln, but we presume it must be under this Clause, only, that the four Members have been, and are, to be chosen.

By a short extract from the London Sun, under our Domestic head, it will be seen that a reduction of 3d per lb in favour of Tobacco, the growth of these Provinces, has been granted by the British Ministry.—This concession has been made in consequence of the Resolutions and Prayer of our House of Assembly of last Session, and is another proof how much may be done by a proper and respect ul representation of our wants to the Imperial Government at Home, which is perpetually anxious for the universal good of the Empire at large.—The cultivation of Tobacco on a large scale must now become an object of primary importance in this Province.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

UNITARIAN MARRIAGES BILL.—The Archbishop of Canterbury said it was perfectly true that the Unitarians denied the doctrine of the Divine Trinity; for they questioned both the divinity of Jesus Christ and the personality of the Holy Ghost; and it was because they denied these religious points, that they now asked relief from their Lordships. Did the House wish under such circumstances, to obtain a simulating or seeming acquiescence in the doctrines of the Established Church, from persons who so far dissented from them? It would, he believed, be as much a relief to Ministers of the Establishment not to be under the obligation of marrying such persons, as for the Unitarians not to be so united in marriage.

A bill the object of which was to permit officers of the army to be married without the consent of the English Church, was rejected in the House of Lords, 105 to 66.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

In concluding a Debate Mr. Canning said, there is not a naval station in the universe, where the English forces are not superior to those of all other powers.

Among other petitions presented, was one, the object of which was to prevent the employment of criminals upon the Treadwheel, as an unsafe and unconstitutional mode of punishment; and inflicted to an extremity by cruel keepers, by making criminals, as Mr. Hobhouse observed, run round like a dog on a wheel for the amusement of those who might choose to stand and gape at them. The petition was ordered to be printed.

SETTING OF THE DISCOVERY SHIPS.—Saturday being appointed for the sailing from Deptford of the Hecla and Fury, on the voyage of discovery, every arrangement was made to facilitate that object by the superintendant of the dock-yard, but on Friday night the Fury was ordered to remain until Saturday morning's tide. The officers and crew of the Hecla mustered on board, on Friday night with many friends, among whom were several females, who could not be prevailed upon to depart until the last moment. At 5 o'clock in the morning the anchor was raised, and the Hecla swung upon the buoy with the tide, and at 7 o'clock, the signal for sailing was hoisted; the Comet steam-yacht was then finally moored along side to tow her down. Capt. Parry, a few minutes after 7 o'clock, came on board in the pinnace, with several ladies and gentlemen, who were received by the First Lieutenant, Mr Wynn. At this moment the river and shore presented a very animated spectacle; several boats with company, bidding adieu to the crew of the Hecla, were visible; and many of the ships of war's crew were out, cheering the hardy adventurers.

The final orders for getting under weigh were given at 25 minutes past 7 o'clock, and a very affecting scene took place on board the transport; several sailors at one time rushed into the arms of some females, and, snatching a hasty embrace jumped into the Hecla, in a manner that many who have taken such farewells cannot forget.

The Comet got under weigh, and proceeded with the Hecla in tow, down the river, and was soon out of sight.

The crew of the Griper gave three cheers as she passed, which was answered by the Hecla's crew. This incident is very interesting, as the Griper is taking out the Land Expedition, and the next intercourse of those brave men will probably be in regions of desolation and misery.

DEATH OF R. P. KNIGHT ESQ.—On Wednesday last, died, at his house in Soho square, Richard Payne Knight, Esq who was long distinguished in the literary circles of Europe. He had the reputation of being one of the most eminent Greek scholars of his day.

We understand Mr. Payne Knight has bequeathed his matchless collection of Medals, Drawings, and Bronzes, worth at least £200,000. to the British Museum. They include a single volume of drawings by the inimitable Claude, which we recollect Mr. Knight purchased for £1600, from a private individual, who, a short time previously, had given £3 for the same volume. Mr. Knight's general library is by no means particularly distinguished for either rare or splendid works:

FATE PAS IN HIGH LIFE!—The following particulars of the recent fatal pas in high life have transpired, as well as the extraordinary incident by means of which the guilt of the fair fatal one was fully made known to her much injured husband.—The one was fully made known to her much injured husband.—The extreme wealth of the parties makes it almost unnecessary to say, that wherever they travelled, they lived in a style suitable to it. The lady's display of jewels at Paris, as well as in London, was most magnificent and many a belle of higher rank in the beau monde has beheld with no less envy, the charms of the wearer, and their dazzling lustre. On the Lady's arrival in this country, the usual first visit received in it was paid to her by the excise-man, who instituted his search for smuggled goods. Having seen the case containing the jewels, with other articles of immense value, he conceived they were not British manufacture, and therefore liable to seizure. In vain the lady declared she had brought them from this country originally, the wary excise-man had too often heard similar declarations as fervently made by our fair country women on their return laden with French manufactures. His cupidity being excited by their great value, he remained unmoved by her entreaties, and the more anxious she was to get back the articles, the more he congratulated himself on the richness of the supposed prize. The lady announced herself—all that she could obtain by doing so was, that they should be restored if her husband could prove what was asserted by her. He went down for that purpose, and met the lady with a mind disturbed by various rumors with which her character had been assailed during her excursion to the Continent. Those stories received some confirmation when he learned that she was accompanied by the person who was supposed to have caused them.—"To be at once in doubt, is to be at once resolved." amongst the articles detained was an escritoire of curious workmanship, which, having been restored, he examined, and found in some secret drawers several letters that too plainly conveyed to him the knowledge of her unworthiness, and that she, whom he had selected as his greatest source had forever blasted his happiness. With unparalleled generosity he restored her the jewels, and then told her they must part forever; and he has since given up to her a large fortune received by him on his marriage. The gay Lothario had started. He is the brother of a Baronet of sporting celebrity, a son of Mars, though not much distinguished in his service—certainly much more distinguished for his attachment to the Noble Marquis at the head of the Irish Government, having made himself conspicuous, on the other kingdom by a personal encounter with a Dublin Editor, in whose paper some animadversions had been passed on his conduct.—Well would it have been that he had continued there, and fixed with such objects, and not have thus involved his injured wife in a scandalous suit. It is supposed the guilty pair only waited for a divorce to be united. The husband's generosity to the lady has given the gentleman a weighty consideration for such a treasure—her fortune, now at her own disposal, by this act, in money and jewels, being nearly two hundred thousand pounds

LIEUT. MAITLAND lost his leg at the battle of Leipsic. After he had suffered amputation with the greatest courage, he said his servant or pretending to cry, in the corner of the room—"None of your hypocritical tears you d—d dog," said his master; "you know you are very glad for now you will have only one boot to clean instead of two."

WILL OF THE LATE LUKE WHITE, Esq.—The Will of the late Luke White, Esq. has been lodged in the Prerogative Court. His property amounted to 30 000l. a year real estate, and 100,000l. in money and securities. This which remained after the enormous sum of 200,000l. expended upon elections, he has bequeathed by will as follows:

To his eldest son, Col. Thomas White, of Woodlands, County of Dublin, who in 1819 married Juliana, daughter of Viscount Gort, 5000l. a year. This includes the estate of Luttrel's Town, near Dublin, purchased from the Earl of Carhampton for a sum of 100 000l.

To his second son, married to Miss Robb, 7000l. a year

To his third son, not married, 4500l a year.

To his fourth son, not married, the present representative of the County of Dublin, 13 000l. a year.

To his son by a second wife, 500l a year for a certain time and then 10,000l. to himself that annuity.

To his three daughters, 12,000l. each.

The marriage settlement on his widow is 1000l a year

It is said that his eldest son offended him by refusing to offer himself a Candidate for Dublin, with a promise to support the Catholic cause

Lord Cochrane is now said to be on his way to England. This determination has been hastened by the Brazilian Emperor's withholding the prize money due to him.

The celebrated Mrs. Fitzherbert has returned to London from Paris, and, it is said, still retains her beauty.

The Bristol coach has performed the distance to London, [120 miles,] in 11 hours

EMIGRATION OF PLAYERS!—Mr Dowton, we understand is about to visit the United States. It is reported that Mr Price, the American Manager, offered Mr. Bunnan £10 000, secured on the Bank of England, for twelve months' engagement. A Liverpool paper says—We can also from good authority, that Mr Kean has offered to guarantee Mrs Mc'ulloh £3,000. clear of all expenses, provided she and her husband will accompany him to America. Mr. Webb the Irish Comedian, is also said to have received an invitation to America

DARING PURSUIT OF A RUSSIAN OFFICER.—In the month of March last Baron Stein, a Russian Officer, made a secret excursion for the purpose of a journey from the mouth of the Kyssma to the northward over the ice. In the first attempt he was stopped by an open sea, on which neither ice nor land was visible in any direction. In the second he had nearly perished. He had entered advanced fifty werst when a gale of wind broke up the ice all around him, and he found himself on an open sea to sail about on a floe of ice eighty fathoms long and forty broad. He stood about at the mercy of the wind and current which however, by divers ugly changes, half dragged and half drifted him, at length on the 3d day, to the Asiatic shore, not far from Behring's Straits.—*Nat. FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

GREECE AND EGYPT.

From the Morning Chronicle of May 10.

Letters were received this morning via Marseilles, from Alexandria in Egypt, dated on the 5th of April, communicating the news of great importance to Greece, to the authenticity of which the utmost reliance may be placed. It has been known, that for some time past the Pacha of Egypt has been forming large magazines of gunpowder, and of all descriptions of military stores at Grand Cairo, avowedly for the purpose of equipping an army to act against the Christians in the Morea, but more probably with the view of protecting the independence of his own Government from the Grand Seignor himself. The advices received this day from Alexandria, state that these magazines had been destroyed by fire, and that three thousand Egyptian soldiers had perished in the explosion. The value of the property destroyed was estimated at not less than ten millions of Spanish dollars; and one of the effects of this event will probably be the abandonment of the expedition from Alexandria into the Morea, it his Highness the Egyptian Pacha ever seriously intended to waste his resources in a cause so entirely hopeless as the reduction of Greece to the Ottoman yoke of barbarism His Highness the Captain Pacha had arrived at Alexandria with a part of the Turkish fleet, and the remainder of his naval force was expected soon to join him at that place. It was at Alexandria that the fourth expedition of the Turks against the Christians was to have been first dined, for at Constantinople the Treasury was not replenished sufficiently with money to enable the government to obtain the necessary supplies for such an important undertaking.—The destruction of the magazines at Grand Cairo will prevent the Pacha of Egypt from furnishing the expedition with warlike stores, and thus it must be either altogether abandoned for this year, or be so defective in every necessary quality as to render the power of the Ottomans during the fourth campaign against the independence of Greece weaker than ever.

France.—The surveys for a grand canal to establish a communication between the Mediterranean, the Ocean and the interior of France, were prosecuting with great activity. The rivers Rhine, Saone Menthe, Moselle, Meuse and Mawl will be made to communicate Spain.—Advices from Spain are down to the 30th of April inclusive. The Madrid papers and letters furnish the accustomed anticipations and changes of ministers and narrations of disorders. The announcement of any approach to stability in the government, or tranquility in the country, are the only novelties that could be received from Spain. A private letter from Madrid, dated April 29. says:—"I scarcely dare to relate to you the many reports that are at present in circulation respecting the situation of our provinces; if they are true, they would sufficiently justify the entrance of new French troops.

Portugal.—It is said that the King of Portugal has declared war against Brazil, and that an expedition of 9,000 men, commanded by Bernardo Silveira, was preparing at Lisbon to proceed against that country.

FALL OF LIMA.

Our unfavourable forebodings as to the situation of the Patriot cause in Peru, have at length been more than realised and both Callao and Lima, it appears are again in the hands of the Royalists. The affairs of the Patriots in that quarter have been in an unheard way, ever since the defeat of Santa Cruz, which was so obstinately denied by certain papers in this country; but still, we have the best of the arrangements of Bolivar would have been such, as to have preserved the capital. The Royal army was computed at about 9,000 men, being 2,000 more than of the force of the Patriots. Another engagement was shortly expected to take place—and letters were entertained of the defeat of the Patriots

Com Adv.

Mexico.—A letter received in London, from Mexico, dated March 18, speaks in very favourable terms of the country, but takes no notice of any favourable change, the prospects in that Capital. No agreeable change, the writer says, has taken place in that city. "Instead of the Spaniards here having up all the goods and sending the produce for sale at their own prices, they themselves are now coming to Mexico and buying assortments on the way of coming to Mexico and buying assortments, of goods on the iron ore accounts. I went the other day into the shop of a Spaniard who advertised to sell cheap, and found it was a sort of auctioneering they have not been accustomed to here, all trade having been a mere monopoly. It was crowded with purchasers. Two things are now occupying public attention here, almost entirely. The first is, the Loan to Government, and the second, the Mining Company, which we have just received advice of from London. If both these operations go forward, they will produce efforts on the condition of this country, not to be conceived. The Loan will give the Government all the strength that it wants, and the Mining Company will be the means of distributing wealth throughout the country in every direction." An improvement of the police is spoke of as being much wanted. Neither persons nor property are quite so secure as they should be. The numerous gatherings of the people against the old Spaniards is such, that they are hardly safe, and if any serious rumor was to get afloat of Old Spain being disposed to make any fresh attempt against the country, the life of any Spaniard would not be safe for twenty-four hours.

VOLCANOES IN THE SUN.—A German Journal contains the following curious facts, by Count Moscati and his assistant M. Quirio Mauri, which were drawn up at Milan, having been deduced from observations of the former in that city;—On the 3d of October, 1824, the craters of the three volcanoes lately discovered in the surface of the sun, appeared quite distinct, but elleptical; they were situated about the edge of the sun, in the form of a transverse belt. On the 4th the two nearest to the edge were invisible, owing to the sun's revolution, and the contour of the other was less distinctly marked than before. On the opposite edge, however, appeared very plainly on the sun's disk, two detached planetary masses, in conjunction; on the 5th was observed, a single but thicker mass of the same kind, likewise in conjunction. On the 7th, half of the middle crater of the 3d was seen nearly circular, because it had approached to the centre of the solar disk. On the 1st the circumference of this crater appeared lengthened and the crater observed on the 4th seemed almost round, and nearest to the centre of the disk, on did, in its turn, the last and only one visible on the 6th. On the 17th were remarked three different planetary masses in conjunction like those above mentioned but not so large: on the 18th appeared three small but probably similar masses; on the 19th, three smaller; on the 23d three still smaller; on the 29th five, little different from the proceeding; and, finally, on the 30th, near the edge of the sun, a small portion of one of the craters described above. All these masses without exception, were in the above-mentioned zone. The powers of the telescope would not allow of any further discoveries during the time specified.

From these phenomena M. Maura deduces the following inferences: The sun must be considered as a body, containing a matter capable of producing distinct volcanoes, because it has recently exhibited traces of such craters, and the projected masses really, or at least to appearance, covered the luminous surface in several places. There is every reason to believe that the sun is a solid, not a fluid body; because the volcanic craters were distinctly to be seen open for a considerable time together. The sun is, on the other hand a cold body, not so hot as to melt or produce a red glow; because the parts observed in these abysses, were not fiery, but black. The sun has for the promotion of fertility, a luminous slightly fluid, envelope, like the green carpet that covers our fields; because some folds of luminous matter inclined downward in order to cover the bare places or some of the inner edges of the craters. The sun surrounded the above mentioned envelope, is not luminous; because the interior of the newly opened craters was quite dark as well as the masses thrown up by them. The sun has, probably a warmth nearly approaching to the temperature of our earth's because volcanoes which are hotter than the rest of the mass of the earth, make their appearance in the sun. The sun reproduces the luminous envelope wherever the latter is broken through, because the volcanoes are gradually covered again with it, after the manner of an organic, and, to us, unknown matter. The sun eruptions its duty to maintain about one hundred and eighty hours of our time. The period is ascertained by the re-appearance of the individual craters discernable by us on the surface of the sun; and on this occasion it may be affirmed, that the spots, as they are called, upon the sun, which have hitherto been considered as attached to its body, are either atmospheric phenomena, or aerolites, passing about it, because they change their situation with respect to each other. Perhaps they may be wrecks from that remote catastrophe described by Moses: perhaps fragments though of smaller dimensions, yet of a similar nature with those which we have in a former place denominated planetary masses: fragments of that kind, which I remarked in diverging columns, more or less fan-shaped, which accompanied the last beautiful comet, like an atmosphere illuminated in opposition with the sun, and through which, on account of the inferior power of reflecting light, I discovered the real opaque nucles of that meteor. I could appeal, for the truth of this, to the testimony of various eye-witnesses, and among the rest of a professor, who observed it with me, and who entertained no doubt of the reality of the phenomenon. The sun has, on its surface, prodigious concavities, and proportionate protuberances; because the situation of the elliptic axis of the crater differed from that of those which would have been produced on a perfectly level sphere. Besides its annual and diurnal motion, the sun has a conical revolution round its pole, which is performed by its axis in about twenty-seven days of our time; because the last portion of crater, in the zone originally discovered, re-appeared in that period, after the positive passage of the craters into other zones. I might mention some other discoveries worthy of notice; but this letter is already long enough. Allow me, however, to express my ardent wish, that astronomers, possessed of the requisite instruments and skill, would examine and confirm the discovery of the latest planets that have issued from the sun. The three largest seemed to me to belong to the class of Venus and Mercury. If the sun's light should preclude observations of them at present, in their elliptical situation, they might be found hereafter in a more favourable position. The discoverers might then give them what appellation they please, with the exception of the three largest, which I reserve to myself be right of naming.

SILVER MINES OF MEXICO.

From the London Philosophical Magazine and Journal for February, 1824.

Great public interest has been excited of late by the formation of companies in London, whose object it is to work the silver mines of Mexico, who have raised large capitals for that purpose. We have made the best inquiries in our power upon this subject, and we are enabled to lay before our readers some correct information, which will, we have no doubt, be acceptable as it relates to undertakings which may have great influence on political events, may enlarge our commercial relations, and extend the field of scientific research.

The mines of Mexico, though rich have been abandoned, owing to the joint operation of natural causes and of others arising from long continued domestic contentions. The first of these causes relate principally to the difficulties arising from increasing depth, and the consequent insufficiency of the means possessed to extract the water and the ore: these, it is expected, will be easily overcome by the application of our machinery, directed by competent skill to be supplied by persons sent from this country: the other obstacles are likely, it is hoped, to be removed by the settlement of differences among the provincial governments and the arrangement of a legislative body agreeable to the whole.

The first company which has actually contracted for the mines is called the Anglo-Mexican Mining Association, and possesses a capital of one million sterling in shares of 100£ each. The mines which are engaged are principally in the Real Guanaxuato, near the city of that name, about 200 miles N. W. of the city of Mexico; they include that of Valenciana, which is stated to have been carried to the extraordinary depth of 350 fathoms. This mine is spoken of at large by Baron Humboldt, in his interesting works upon New Spain, and is reckoned by him to have alone produced one fourth of the silver of Mexico. It was originally quite free from water, but has been inundated by the influx from water, but has been inundated by the influx from an adjoining mine, Tepeyac, and has been nearly filled in the last 12 years, owing principally to the neglect caused by civil commotion. There are other mines also situated upon the same vein (the veta madre of Guanaxuato) some of which will be worked by the company.

Several steam engines, as well for pumping out the water, as for drawing up the ores, and for stamping and reducing them to a proper state for amalgamation and smelting, are already constructing in this country, and a select body of miners from Cornwall are engaged to go out to conduct the various operations. The enterprize will be intrusted to Colonel Robinson, an officer of distinguished activity and merit, who will shortly leave England to commence operations. The directors in London have been chosen from among gentlemen of great respectability and influence; and the establishment, which will be of an extent commensurate with the magnitude of the object, is arranging under the direction of John Taylor Esq. whose connexion with the largest mines in this country is very well known.

LONDON ODDITIES.

(From an Article in Blackwood's Magazine.)

Every thing in London depends upon the choice of season. Irving, flung up into vogue, chiefly by the extreme idleness of the time at which he was recognized among the cobwebs and grim physiognomies of the Caledonian Chapel, would have been unheard of but for the closing of Parliament, the Theatres, the Law Courts, and all other places detrimental to preaching and puritanism. The "intellectual and imaginative" world would never have hazarded the abrasion of a shinbone, or the loss of a shoe, in the crush of cross streets, but for the fatal abundance of time that afflicts it from July to November. The return of "something to do," has, therefore extinguished the orator; and, the humblest record of the wonders and absurdities of this mighty metropolis that tempts the passers by, at twopence a number, would now disdain to allude to the performances of the Rev. E. Irving. Thurtell's affair was not less prosperous in its tempus. From the latter end of February, through the merry months of spring, and the merrier months of summer, Thurtell would have been tried without a whisper outside the walls of the Court, and hung with no other consideration than that which the Ordinary and the hangman give to the family of cutthroats. It is to be told, in vindication of the monstrous and disgusting interest that gathered round this villain and his associates, that the populace had nothing else to talk of, and, in addition that the newspapers had nothing else to publish. All was tranquil, every where through the land. Every man from Inverness to Scilly, was eating and drinking, walking, and sleeping, more majorum; the old firm of tumult was broken up; Cobbett was splitting straw for bonnets; Hunt was roasting corn for coffee; Manchester cried not forth; and Sheffield and Birmingham were hammering away with equal patience and pleasantness: in short, the newspapers, deprived of their natural nutriment, were like mice in an exhausted receiver, they gasped, and must have in nine instances out of ten, gasped their last, but for the sudden intelligence from Hertfordshire.

The histories a thousandfold of the frightful-atrocity itself, the added histories of every thing human, bestial, inanimate, that could be connected with it: the crowding down to the trial; the visages of the criminals lithographed in all directions; the shilling a piece for a peep into Gill's hill cottage; the sale of the horse and gig; the sofa, and the supper-table that became sacred to this insane curiosity; and lastly, the exhibition of those moveables at the suburb theatres, which exulted in dividing those relicks of the transaction: were all accountable in the same way; the prevailing famine of public subjects. Yet, some of this interest was pushed within the confines of idiotism. What are we to say to the foolery that brought locks of the murderer's hair for fond remembrance, to the tender solicitations for his snuff box and shoe-strings, or, last and greatest, to the purchase, at ten times its worth, of the pistol rusted with blood? This is the rabidness of a curiosity that deserves the cat-o'nine-tails. If ever there was a murder, merciless, cold-blooded, and brutal, it was this murder; if ever there was a villain who deserved to be expunged from the earth, as a disgrace and horror to his species, it was this murderer, and yet, it was round this savage and sanguinary villain that those foolish affections of sensibility were displayed. No language can be too strong for the horror of this crime, and no contempt too bitter for the miserable sympathy that attempted to turn him into a victim of a hero.

Domestic.

From the Quebec Mercury.—The St. Lawrence, Captain Douglass, sailed this morning, at half-past nine o'clock, with detachments completed service men, invalids, &c. belonging to the different regiments in the Canadas. Lt. Col. Harvey, D. A. G. and family, Lt. Col. Cockburn, D. Q. M. G. Ensign Dalgetty 70th Regt. Dr. Lamond, Hospital Staff, wife and two children, likewise embarked; George Ryland, Esquire, and Miss Thomson were also passengers for London.

Appointment of Col. Ready.—Letters, this morning, arrived in town, which confirm the appointment of Col. Ready, as Governor of Prince Edward's Island. His Excellency, we understand, proposes to arrive at his government by the beginning of September next.

LORD DALHOUSIE.—The Montreal Herald, in alluding to the article which we published last week, respecting the changes in the governments of India and these Provinces, says:—

"We have sufficient authority to state that this piece of intelligence is so far correct; but that, previous to his departure for Europe, Lord Dalhousie expressed his determination to decline the situation thus offered him."

PERTH RIOTS!—At a Court of Quarter Sessions held lately at Perth, in Upper Canada, two of the Township of Ramsay rioters were sentenced to six months imprisonment, and fined £3 each, with costs, for assault, &c. Some, for the same charge were acquitted for want of evidence; but others, for crimes of a more serious nature, have been fully committed to take their trial during the assizes in August next. At the Quarter Sessions a true Bill was found against one of the rioters for perjury; but instead of finding the ordinary bail, we understand that he found some means to take what is so well known among such rogues as "leg bail." During the trials a threatening and intimidating letter from one of the prisoners was handed by the Gaoler to the Bench of Magistrates; but it met with the reception it deserved, the Magistrates ordering the bearer of it from the prisoner to the Gaoler, into solitary confinement.

Canada Tobacco.—We are authorized to state, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer has agreed to reduce the duty on tobacco 3d. per pound upon the growth of Canada.—London Sun.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'o. Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber, York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Rounds Four Shilling and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.
PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged that the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office, York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter mentioned on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

A Township North of Mariposa, advertised from the Surveyor General's Office on the 19th of October, as

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

COMMUNICATION.

FOR THE U. C. GAZETTE.
Niagara Falls, June 30th, 1824.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

Sir,

From what is stated in Numbers Three and Four of a Paper lately Published at Queenston styled the "Colonial Advocate" it might be inferred that the Commissioners appointed to superintend the Erection of the Monument to the Memory of the late Major General Sir Isaac Brock, had been remiss in their duty, & that they had employed William Lyon Mackenzie to superintend in their stead—but such is not the case;—It is thus:—

Shortly after the death of one of the Commissioners (Colonel Nichol,) I consulted with the remaining Commissioner, Mr. Thomas Dickson, and with other gentlemen of the District, as to the propriety of having a procession of ceremony at laying the foundation—when it was agreed; from the recent death of Col. Nichol, and from the short time there was to invite over from York, the gentlemen from thence, to form the necessary Masonic procession; that the ceremony should be deferred until the Monument was finished and when the remains of the late Major General would be deposited in the Vault of the Monument.

The Contractors informed Mr. Hall, Engineer, superintending the Erection of the Monument and myself, that they would be ready to commence the Foundation in the first week in June; they were directed to proceed when ready, as there would be no ceremony at the laying of it. On the first day of June I had appointed to be at Burlington Beach as a Canal Commissioner, as was well see by Public Notice in your Gazette of May last, whereby I accordingly went, accompanied by Mr. Hall the Engineer.—On that day, the coast being clear, (the only remaining Commissioner Mr. Thomas Dickson from indisposition not being able to leave his room) Mr. Lyon Mackenzie, took upon himself unknown to the Commissioners, to perform his impertinent and officious ceremonies at the laying the foundation of the monument.

For the information of the public I have to state, that William Lyon Mackenzie's wide mouthed bottle, and his wider mouthed securitous paper are now removed from under the monument.

And am Sir, your very obedient servant,

(Signed)

THOMAS CLARK.
Commissioner for Erecting a Monument to the memory of the late Maj. General Sir Isaac Brock.

Editorial Commentary.

LORD BYRON, the greatest Poet, and one of the most extraordinary men, of modern times is dead.—We have difficulty in suppressing those serious reflections which naturally arise from the contemplation of such an event; particularly as we are in possession of some original anecdotes which serve to throw a new light, and which may us probably considered as shedding new lustre, upon the remarkable character and genius of that great Poet; but our confined limits of this week forbid the attempt.

FEW amongst our readers will be surprised at the anxiety express ed in the Communication received from the Hon. COLONEL CLARK (and which is published in this day's Gazette) relative to the deposit, recently made in the foundation stone of General BROCK's monument at Queenston, by the loyal and patriotic Mackenzie "of all the Montezzas" a self appointed Commissioner for the laudable purpose of handing down to posterity a villous and malicious libel on the very Patrons under whose auspices the monument itself is erected; but which, for the credit of Upper Canada, has been dis-inhumed.—We must give this little Hero of Radicalism however full credit for the boldness of his attempt to perpetuate a species of political malignity, against all legitimate authority unknown in former times—and which, under such circumstances, could not fail to excite the astonishment of posterity.—If this illustrious descendant of the breechless marauders of the north, had enclosed that number of his Advocate, also, wherein he endeavours to prove his own loyalty by proving and vindicating the rebellion of his great progenitors under the flag of the Pretender—some excuse indeed might be found in the apparent insanity of this unfortunate candidate for posthumous fame.—But enough:—

THE Election for the the Counties of York and Simcoe is carried on with great spirit—The State of the Poll on Tuesday evening was as follows:

Thompson	266
Playter	230
Ree	217
Baldwin	161
Small	146
Boulton	116
Total	1,139

Messrs. Dunnish, Sherrard, Goeetman, and Wilcox declined the Contest the same evening;—and, we have just heard (Wednesday) that the Solicitor General has also declined;—and, by the same authority, we learnt that Mr Roe was second on the Poll.

THE Election for the Town began yesterday—when one of the most eloquent, energetic, and electrifying, orations ever heard in this or any other country was delivered by our worthy and highly accomplished ATTORNEY GENERAL whose every word, unmounting from truth, evidently sank deep in the minds of his hearers.—We have no hesitation in saying that if this Gentleman is not re-elected for the Town of York its character is gone for ever, and an ETERNITY OF DISGRACE must rest upon it.—Whilst we are penning this paragraph, Mr. Robinson is only 6 a-head of Mr. Duggan !!!!!!—

SIR CHARLES M'CARTHY.

The following letter is taken from an Evening Paper.

TO THE EDITOR,

8, QUEEN'S SQUARE, WESTMINSTER, MAY 4.

SIR,—As great fears are entertained for the safety of our excellent Governor Sir Charles M'Carthy, and as it may be some consolation to his friends in this country (among whom I am proud to consider myself one not the least interested,) to learn that there are still hopes of his being in existence, permit me to offer the following observations upon this subject:—

Although it cannot be disputed that the Ashantees are a barbarous nation, yet as I have been among them, and witnessed their humanity to prisoners which they captured in their late wars with the Buntakoos, I am, of course, speak with confidence upon that subject; and if the same King (Zay Tootoo Quamina) who was alive when I was at Coomassie, is still in existence, I can pledge myself for the safety of Sir Charles M'Carthy, being well acquainted with his noble Majesty's disposition, and having the utmost confidence in his humanity. The following reasons absolutely force me to think Sir Charles's life will be preserved

1st. When I was at Coomassie, in 1820, I saw one of the Chiefs of the Bonlakoos, who had been taken prisoner by the Ashantees, walking about with his attendants enjoying his liberty, and every attention and respect.

2d. After the battle of Bonda, where the Fantee were defeated by the Ashantees, one of their Chiefs, named Ate, was taken prisoner and sent to Coomassie, where he was set at liberty, and offered to be restored to the Fantees upon the payment of 60*l.* which was demanded for his ransom.

3d. It is not by any means a case without precedent for the Ashantees to have a European Governor in their possession, as a prisoner, and treating him kindly; as they some years ago captured a Governor Flindt and kept him for five months, during which time he was treated with the greatest humanity and respect; after which he was ransomed for 400*l.*

In all these occasions, Apoko, the General in Chief of the Ashantees, commanded, and as there is little doubt that he is with the army who have captured Sir Charles, there is reason to hope, that as he saved the lives of others, he will also spare that of Sir Charles M'Carthy. Sincerely wishing that this may be true case,

I am, Sir,

Your obedient humble servant,

WILLIAM HUTTON.

Horrid Fanaticism.

GENEVA, April 24.—A little piece of news was published here a few days ago of a very piquant nature, the details of all the horrors lately committed in a village of the Canton of Zurich, by a troop of fanatics. It describes a sad state of Libertinism, & by a troop of fanatics. It describes a sad state of Libertinism, & of Fanaticism. A young woman, who had lived for some time a very irregular life, persuaded herself, all at once, that God demanded her life, to obtain at the price of her blood the salvation of sinners. She succeeded in making her family adopt this idea. One of her sisters under her tuition devoted herself also to death.—They armed the hands of their parents and friends, and expired slowly under their blows. According to their express commands they were tied to crosslets, and their executioners waited patiently for three days in expectation of their resurrection, agreeable to the assurances of the young prophetess. The murderers and their accomplices, to the number of eleven, having among them the father, a brother, sisters, and the lover of the principal, have been condemned to imprisonment and hard labour for life or, for a period of years in proportion as they took a more or less active part in the horrid scene of carnage.—The house where this dead was perpetrated has been demolished, and it has been forbidden to build another on the spot.

CHURCH PREFERMENT.—The death of the Bishops of Chichester, and Bath and Wells, has placed much valuable ecclesiastical preferment in the hands of Ministers. Dr. Bloomfield is to be raised to the Bishopric of Chester, the present Bishop of Chester being translated to Bath and Wells. Dr. Carr, Dean of Hereford, is spoken of as the new Bishop of Chichester, in which case the living of Brighton will become vacant.—The valuable Rectory of St. Giles in-the-Fields, in the gift of the King, is also vacated by the Death of Bishop Burkett, while that of Bishopsgate will likewise fall to the Crown by the promotion of the present Rector, Dr. Bloomfield.

THE LATE DUEL.—We find also the following further particulars of the Duel between Lord Londonderry and Mr Battier, from which it appears that the original matter of challenge having been disposed of by the fire and nine fire, and Mr B having declared himself satisfied, Sir Henry Hardinge begged the principals to advance, and informed Col. Westenra, in their presence, that as Mr B. had received the satisfaction he demanded, he wished to make two observations upon the last published letter of Mr. B. The first related to an assertion, made by Mr B. that Lord L. had, by his rank sheltered himself from the consequences of an arbitrary act, which of course Mr. B said his second admitted to be fully disproved by that meeting. The second was, that Mr. B had also said, that although Lord Londonderry denied having seen or perused a certain letter or letters, conveying a censure upon the officers of the 10th Hussars for their conduct towards Mr. B. he (Mr. B.) knew that Lord Londonderry had seen those papers. On the part of Lord L. Sir H. Hardinge declared that this assertion contained in Mr. B's letter was false. Mr. B. observed, that if it was intended to add new insults to those he had already received, they had better proceed. Sir H. H said, that Mr B. might have been misinformed, but he could not retract his assertion, and that his principal was ready to resume his ground in support of it.—Mr Battier referred the matter to his second —They (Col. W and Mr. B.) withdrew for a few minutes, when the Colonel returned and said, Mr. B. was contented that the matter should rest as it did.

The statement of which the above is the substance, is signed by Sir H Hardinge and Colonel Western.

The same paper gives the names of the parties in the late elopement in high life, which has been spoken of in the English papers The adulterer is Captain Webster, A. D. C. to the Marquis Wellesley and brother to a Baronet well known as a bang up leader of the Farming end of a stock not unknown in the annals of gallantry. The adulteress is Mrs Hervey B——, an injured husband, with a liberality her conduct but ill deserves has given up to his frail partner her marriage portion and her jewels, a mounting together, it is said, to nearly £20,000.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

LONDON, May 16.

The Chester Chronicle, received this morning, contains the following:—

END OF THE WAR WITH ALGIERS.

"We have just been favoured with a right of a letter from Malta, of the recent date of April 9. It co mmunicates some interesting information, on which we place full reliance, in very few words:

"The Algerine war is over; a brig of war from the squadron brought us the news last Tuesd y, (the 6th) and also stated, that the Admiral had sailed with despatches to Marseilles.

"The terms extorted from the Barbarians we are of course unacquainted with, but we have no doubt, they are such as will afford immediately for the past and security for the future. A few days will furnish full particulars."

We can only say that no official accounts, either to confirm or contradict the above statement, have reached Government; but the thing is probable enough.—Courier.

SPAIN.

The accounts from Spain are deplorable as usual. In Catalonia the soldiers of the Faith, devout as they are, have taken to robbing Churches. Several have been arrested, and others are pursued. A telegraphic despatch from Bayonne conveys news that the corps of reserve on the frontier had orders to hold itself in readiness to enter Spain. Four other French Regiments have also received orders to get ready for marching.

PORTUGAL.

Expresses from Paris this morning, bring important intelligence from Lisbon. Very serious disturbances have taken place in that capital. The soldiery assembled in a tumultuous manner, and seized the person of the Queen, under the suspicion that she was intriguing for a change in the existing Government. Several of the Foreign Ministers were arrested, but at the time of the departure of the courier they were again released. The greatest agitation continues to prevail.

It is said, that the French, Austrian, and Russian Ambassadors were among those arrested and kept in confinement for some hours, and that Don Miguel was also seized by the troops, who refused to embark for the Brazils.

SWITZERLAND.

GENEVA, April 24th.

It is observed here with great uneasiness, that religious enthusiasm is spreading, even among the better classes, and instances of religious melancholy which has been frequently followed by total mental alienation, become every year more numerous.

GREECE.

By the Courier which brought the melancholy intelligence of the death of Lord Byron, Greek Chronicles have been received down to the 18th April. Considered seems again established among the Greeks and Colocotroni, whose intriguing and dangerous character had caused, it seems, many alarms, has been entirely deserted by his soldiers. The news of the organization for the loan had been received in Greece, with unmingled satisfaction.

SOUTH AMERICA.

PERU.—The Patriot cause appears to be utterly hopeless in Peru. Both Callao and Lima are again in the hands of the Royalists, whose forces are stated at 9,000, whilst the Patriots have not above 7,000: another engagement is expected, but fears are entertained for the Patriots.

SOUTH AMERICA.—The question of South American Independence approaches to a crisis. It would that Lord Elliot who has reached London from Madrid, is the bearer of important despatches to Government. The Courier makes no allusion to this circumstance; the following notices appear in other Journals:—

We are assured from a high authority that Lord Elliot arrived last night at the Foreign Office with despatches from Madrid, bringing the ultimatum of the Spanish Court. The answer given to our proposals is, that the independence of any State in South American will not be acknowledged under any circumstances.—Globe.

The important intelligence has this day been received by express from Paris, that Lord Elliot has passed through that capital on Friday, as a Courier extraordinary, with despatches for the British Government from Madrid, which city his Lordship left on the 6th instant. The object of the despatches is to state the positive determination of the King of Spain, and his Cabinet, not to recognise the independence of the South American States, and on the contrary, his inflexible resolution to adopt every practicable and efficacious means for their recovery. The result of this decision must of course lead to a speedy and final determination of the policy to be pursued by Great Britain.—Alfion.

The arrival of Lord Elliott is also noticed in one of the private letters, inserted below. The Funds were depressed in consequence, South American Securities especially.

Connected with this subject, we have the following important notification.—London Courier.

We can state upon authority, that the Ex Emperor of Mexico, Iturbide, who has been for some months in this country, sailed from Southampton, for Mexico, on Thursday last, in an armed vessel accompanied by a Staff of 14 persons. We understand he is assured of being joined by a numerous party in Mexico, when he arrives, who will assist him in recovering his abdicated throne. His departure was managed with the greatest secrecy.—The persons who have accompanied him are all of them foreigners, and the greater part of them, we believe Italians. Among them is an Aide-de Camp who had served with him in all his Mexican campaigns. He has taken his wife with him, and two infant children. Six other of his children have been sent at School in England, where they are to remain. In all, we understand, he has on board, and other military stores, also a printing press, with its apparatus complete, for the purpose of printing and circulating proclamations upon his landing. We have no means of precisely knowing what may be the amount of treasure; but one thing seems certain, that such an enterprize would not be undertaken without some supposed adequate grounds, and the result, therefore, is likely to be, what all must deplore, a renewed civil war in that country.

"Paris, January 1st.—A Congress at Prague is again talked of, and July is said to be the time fixed for the assembling of the Allied Sovereigns, and that a formal demand will be made by Ferdinand for the withdrawing of the French Troops in Spain. This news has occasioned some bustle among the politicians here; but, as you will perceive by the speculations of the French Funds, an unfavourable impression has long been upon them. It is extremely probable that the report of a new Congress, which was circulated so actively at the Bourse, has been set afloat by the speculators here, in order to throw obstacles in the way of the Government, which is about to reduce the interest of the Rentes.

LORD BYRON.

DEATH OF LORD BYRON.—The following letter, announcing the death of Lord BYRON, has been addressed, by Prince Mavrocordato, to the Secretary to the Greek Committee.

MISSOLONGHI, 9th (20th) April, 1814.

"Sir, and my very dear friend! It is with the greatest affliction that I fulfil the duty of giving you the sad news of the death of Lord Byron, after an illness of ten days. Our loss is irreparable, and it is with justice that we abandon ourselves to inconsolable sorrow. Notwithstanding the difficult circumstances in which I am placed, I shall attempt to perform my duty towards this great man: the eternal gratitude of my country will perhaps be the only true tribute to his memory. The Deputies will communicate to you the details of this melancholy event, on which the grief which I feel will not allow me to dwell longer. You will excuse—you will justify, by being overwhelmed with sorrow, and accept the assurance of my devotion &c.

"A. MAVROCORDATO.

"To J. Bowring, Esq.
Secretary to the Greek Committee."

George Gordon Lord Byron, born in 1788, was the representative of a family which ascends to the Norman conquest, and many of his ancestors fill a distinguished place in the history of this country. The Peerage was conferred on Sir John Byron for his services to the Royal cause in the battles of Edgehill and Newbury, in which he was engaged with six of his brothers.

William Lord Byron, who succeeded to the family honors, in 1736, was created a Peer of the Town in 1759 for killing Mr. Chaworth, in a duel. This Lord died at Newstead Abbey, May 17, 1798.

The Hon. John Byron, his brother born at Newstead Abbey, on the 8th Nov. 1723. is distinguished in our Naval history for the hardships he encountered in the expedition under Commodore Anson, and for the expedition he himself commanded shortly after the commencement of the last reign. The son of this veteran, John Byron, the father of the poet, was born in 1751. He distinguished himself in the annals of gallantry, by the seduction of the Marchioness of Carmarthen, whom after her divorce he married. On her death he married the mother of the poet, Miss Gordon, a Scotch lady of noble descent, an heiress to an estate at Rayne, in the district of Garrwith, in the county of Aberdeen; he died at Valenciennes, on the 2d of Augt. 1791. His Lordship's mother died in Scotland, while he was on his travels, in 1811.

Lord Byron succeeded to the title and estates on the death of William the Fifth, Lord Byron, which, as we have already stated, took place in 1798, when he was only ten years of age.

Up to that period he had lived in Aberdeenshire, and it appears that the wild scenery of the spot in which he passed his early years remained always deeply engraven on his memory.

Towards the close of the year 1798, he was removed to Harrow. Speaking of his studies there, his Lordship says in a note to the Fourth Canto of Childe Harold, "In some parts of the Continent, young persons are taught from more common authors, and do not read the best Classics till their maturity. I certainly do not speak on this point from any pique or aversion towards the plan of my education. I was not a slow though an idle boy; and I believe no one could be more attached to Harrow than I have always been, and with reason —a part of the time passed there was the happiest of my life; and my preceptor (the Rev. Dr Joseph Drury) was the best and worthiest friend I ever possessed, whose warnings I have remembered but too well, but too late when I have erred," &c.

At the age of little more than sixteen, he removed to the University of Cambridge, where he became a student of Trinity College.

At the age of 17, he left the University for Newstead Abby, and the same year gave to the world his "Hours of Idleness."

Among the early amusements of his Lordship, were swimming and mauging a boat, in both of which he is said to have acquired great dexterity, even in his Childhood. In his aquatic exercises near Newstead Abbey, he had seldom any other companion than a large Newfoundland dog, to try whose sagacity and fidelity he would sometimes fall out of the boat, as if by accident, when the dog would seize him and drag him ashore. On losing this dog in the autumn of 1808, his Lordship caused a monument to be erected, commemorative of its attachment, with an inscription, from which we extract the following lines:—

> "Ye who, perchance, behold this simple urn
> Pass—it honours none you wish to mourn!
> To mark a friend's remains these stones arise—
> I never knew but one, and here he lies"

On arriving at the age of manhood, Lord Byron embarked at Falmouth for Lisbon, and from thence proceeded across the Peninsula to the Mediterranean, in company with Mr. Hobhouse.

The travels of his Lordship are described in Childe Harold and the Notes. It is somewhat singular that his Lordship should have then had a narrow escape from a fever in the vicinity of the place where he has just ended his life:

"When, in 1810," he says, "after the departure of my friend Mr. Hobhouse, for England, I was seized with a severe fever in the Morea; these men (Albanians) saved my life, by frightening away my physician, whose throat they threatened to cut, if I was not cured within a given time. To this consultary assurance of posthumous retribution, and a resolute refusal of Dr. Romanelli's prescriptions, I attribute my recovery. I had lost my last remaining English servant at Athens; my dragoman or interpreter was as ill as myself and my poor Albanian nursed me with an attention which would have done honour to civilization."

He returned to England, after an absence of nearly three years, and the two first Cantos of Childe Harold made their appearance a few months afterwards. To this poem in rapid succession followed the Giaour and the Bride of Abydos, two Turkish stories; and while the world was as yet divided in opinion as to which of these three pieces the palm was due, he produced his beautiful poem of the Corsair.

On the 2d January, 1815, his Lordship married, at Seham, in the county of Durham, the only daughter of Sir Ralph Milbank Noel, Bart. and towards the close of the year his Lady brought him a daughter. Within a few weeks, however after that event, a separation took place, for which various causes have been stated. This difference excited a prodigious sensation at the time. His Lordship, while the public anxiety as to the cause he would adopt was at its height, suddenly left the kingdom with the resolution never to return.

He crossed over to France, through which he passed rapidly to Brussels, taking in his way a survey of the field of Waterloo. He proceeded to Coblentz, and thence up the Rhine as far as Basle. After visiting some of the most remarkable scenes in Switzerland, he proceeded to the north of Italy. He took up his abode for some time at Venice, where he was joined by Mr. Hobhouse, who accompanied him in an excursion to Rome, where he completed his Childe Harold.

At Venice, Lord Byron avoided as much as possible all intercourse with his countrymen. He quitted that city and took up his residence in other parts of the Austrian Dominions in Italy, which he quitted for Tuscany. He was joined by the late Mr. Shelly, and afterwards by Mr. Leigh Hunt!!!

His patrimonial estate received lately a large increase by the death of Lord Byron's mother, and a valuable coal mine, said to be worth 500,000£. had been discovered on his Rochdale estate before he left England, so that at his death he must have been in the possession of a large income.

One production of his Lordship will be looked for with more anxiety than any of his former publications. We allude to his life, written by himself, which he gave to his friend Mr. Thomas Moore, and which has been some time in this country. If report is to be credited, Lord Byron, has in this work examined himself with an unsparing severity of which few men are capable.

On the day of Lord Byron's death, and when he appeared in imminent danger, the Prince Mavrocordato wrote to his Lordship's friend and companion, Count Gamba; requesting that a committee might be immediately appointed to take the necessary measures for the security of his property; in consequence of which four gentlemen have been nominated to act until other arrangements can be made.

The intelligence of the death of Lord Byron has produced a deep and very general impression of sorrow, not less creditable to those who have shown it, than to the object of it.

The following particulars will fill up all that is known of this melancholy event:—

On the 9th of April Lord Byron, who had been living very low, exposed himself in a violent rain; the consequence of which was a severe cold, and he was immediately confined to his bed. The low state to which he had been reduced by his abstinence, and probably by some of the remaining effects of his previous illness, made him unwilling—at any rate he refused to submit—to be bled. It is to be lamented that no one was near his Lordship who had sufficient influence over his mind, or who was himself sufficiently aware of the necessity of the case, to induce him to submit to the remedy, which in all human probability would have saved a life so valuable to Greece. The inflammatory action, unchecked, terminated fatally on the 19th April.

There are no letters of his Lordship's of a date subsequent to the commencement of his illness. The friends who were near him at the time of his decease, in addition to Prince Mavrocordato, were Mr. Parry, who had organized the artillery and engineer corps for the Greeks at Missolonghi, Mr. Bourk, and Count Gamba.

Lord Byron had succeeded, his friends are informed, in stirring up among the people of the part of Greece in which he had resided, an inconceivable enthusiasm. His exertions were incessant in their cause, and the gratitude of the people was proportioned to them. His influence was not lessened by being employed often to procure humane and even kind treatment towards the Turkish captives.

One of the letters from Corfu, received this morning, and dated April 23, states that Lord Byron died possessed of considerable property in Greece, having for some time resolved to pass his life there, and received considerable sums from England for the purpose of investment. The Hon. Leicester Stanhope, had signified his intention of quitting Greece for family affairs in this coutry, but he had received a pressing invitation from Prince Mavrocordato to remain; and Major Hastings, a gentleman who had been for some time there, had also had inducements offered to him to remain firm to the cause which he had so mainly assisted

The Morning Chronicle on this subject says "that has perished in the flower of his age, in the noblest of causes, one of the greatest Poets England ever produced. His death, at this moment, is, no doubt, a severe misfortune to the struggling people for whom he has so generously devoted himself.

His character we shall not attempt to draw. He had virtues, and he had failings; the latter were in a great measure the result of the means of indulgence which were placed within his reach at so early a period of his life. "Give me neither poverty nor riches," said the inspired writer, and certainly it may be said that the gift of riches is an unfortunate one for the possessor —The aim which men, who are not born to wealth, have constantly before them, gives a relish to existence to which the hereditarily opulent must ever be strangers. Gratifications of every kind soon loose their attention, the game of life is played without interest, for that which can be obtained without effort is never highly prized.

It is fortunate for the great when they can escape from themselves into some persuit, which, by fixing their ambition, gives a stimulus to their active powers. We rejoiced to see Lord Byron engaged in a cause which afforded such motives for exertions, and we anticipated from him many days of glory. But it has been otherwise decreed."

Domestic.

Melancholy Occurrence.—Early on Saturday last Mr. Elijah Lyons was unfortunately shot by Mr. John Lowe, a young gentleman in the employ of C. A. Hagerman, Esq Collector of the Customs at this Port. (Kingston) The circumstances attending this unhappy affair are briefly as follows.—At about half past one o'clock in the morning, Mr. Hagerman and two of his students, Messrs. Lowe and Kirkpatrick, went out in search of Smugglers, of whose approach, it appears, information had been previously given. In a short time Mr. Lowe, who had parted from his companions, encountered Lyons, while in the act of carrying a Chest of Tea from the river side, and commanded him, in the King's name, to surrender it. The latter refused, and immediately struck Lowe in the face. A scuffle ensued, in the course of which a Pistol was discharged, and the ball passed thro' Lyons' body, a little above the heart. Every attention has been paid to the unfortunate sufferer, who now lies in a dangerous state, but some hopes are entertained of his recovery.

From the Quebec Gazette.

With reference to the article in a late Albion, mentioning the probable removal of His Excellency the Earl of Dalhousie to the command of India, we have reason to believe that such change is not at present in contemplation, at least as regards our present Governor in Chief. The command of the Forces in India is now separated from the dignity of Governor General, and has been seldom united with it, only, we believe, in the cases of Lords Cornwallis and Hastings. The Earl of Dalhousie previously to his departure for Great Britain had declined the command of the Forces in India; and as far as depends on himself, it is His Lordship's intention to resume the Government of these Provinces as before. A short absence from this place has prevented our earlier notice of this rumour.

Moose Deer.—Some Indians brought into town a fine female moose calf, of a year old, which they exhibited at the Robin-Hood Tavern; it is about five feet high on the withers and appears very gentle, when approached by a stranger, it utters a plaintive moaning cry; we were informed that it was taken near the source of the river Nicolet; this species of animals, once common, has become exceeding rare in this Country, and the mufle or head of the moose, formerly so highly extolled by our epicures, is now hardly known.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Jonnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

Executive Council Chamber, } York, 31st January, 1824. }

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the cause of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shilling and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 6th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

Executive Council Office, } AT YORK, 20th JAN. 1824. }

PRESENT;

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition; His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, } York, February 7th 1821. }

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payement therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within

Months after the expiration of that period, to the Applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall are such subsequent application, have lodged a ntificate of his having performed the Settling Du-

COMMUNICATION.

FOR THE U C GAZETTE.
Niagara Falls, June 30th, 1824.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

Sir,

From what is stated in Numbers Three and Four of a Paper lately Published at Queenston styled the "Colonial Advocate" it might be inferred that the Commissioners appointed to superintend the Erection of the Monument to the Memory of the late Major General Sir Isaac Brock, had been remiss in their duty, in that they had employed William Lyon Mackenzie to superintend in their stead—but such is not the case;—it is thus:—

Shortly after the death of one of the Commissioners (Colonel Nichol,) I consulted with the remaining Commissioner, Mr. Thomas Dickson, and with other gentlemen of the District, as to the propriety of having a procession of ceremony at laying the foundation—when it was agreed; from the recent death of Col. Nichol, and from the short time there was to invite over from York, the gentlemen from that, to form the necessary Masonic procession; that the ceremony should be deferred until the Monument was finished and when the remains of the late Major General would be deposited in the Vault of the Monument.

The Contractors informed Mr. Hall, Engineer, superintending the Erection of the Monument and myself, that they would be ready to commence the Foundation in the first week in June; they were directed to proceed when ready, as there would be no ceremony at the laying of it. On the first day of June I had appointed to be at Burlington Beach as a Canal Commissioner—as you will see by Public notice in your Gazette of May last, who I accordingly went, accompanied by Mr Hall the Engineer.—On that day the east I being close, (the only remaining Commissioner Mr. Thomas Dickson from indisposition not being able to leave his room) Mr. Lyon Mackenzie took upon himself unknown to the Commissioners, to perform his ungentlemanly & officious ceremonies at the laying the foundation of the monument.

For the information of the public I have to state that Walden Lyon Mackenzie's wide mouthed bottle, and his wider mouthed & scurrilous paper are now removed from under the monument,

and am Sir, your very obedient servant,

(Signed) THOMAS CLARK.
Commissioner for Erecting a Monument to the memory of the late Maj. General Sir Isaac Brock.

Editorial Commentary.

THE ELECTION for the TOWN of YORK closed early on Thursday last in favour of the ATTORNEY GENERAL, amidst the general greetings of the public.—Even his opponents had no objection—indeed, it was impossible for them to have any objection against him, as a man, an able statesman, and a good citizen.—It was his situation, as the First Crown Lawyer, alone, that was objected to by some; but, with what degree of justice, remains, and will probably long remain, a matter of mere opinion.

As an abstract political question, it certainly appears more objectionable that the eldest sons of Peers, whom it may be impossible to divest of an undue share of aristocratical feeling, should sit amongst the Commons of England. In this infant colony we require all the aid that can be given;—and, for the present, it must be evident that the talents of the Attorney General cannot be dispensed with.

THE CONTEST for the COUNTIES of YORK and SIMCOE, was severe, and close, to the last moment. It terminated at 8 o'clock on Saturday evening; last, and the following will be found an accurate statement of the six day's Polling:—

ON MONDAY the 12th inst:—a very numerous and respectable body of Orangemen, amounting to several hundreds entered York in procession to celebrate their annual festivities; which was done in a manner highly creditable to themselves, and which could give offence to no one.—We have been favoured with the sight of some important resolutions, to be signed by the heads of the Lodges then present, holding forth the hand of good will and reconciliation to the Roman Catholic fellow subjects in this Province, which cannot fail to be productive of the happiest results.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A "FULL PRIVATE" is under consideration.

We are sorry that the whimsical account of the York and Simcoe Races about 12 miles up Yonge Street, cannot appear until our next.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT.—A Mr. Harris, who lately ascended in a balloon from the city road London, was unfortunately killed in descending in Redding on Park near Croydon, Surry. A very fine lady who accompanied him, had her thigh broken, and was otherwise seriously injured

The name of Mr Battier, has by His Majesty's command, been erased from the list of the Army.

A morning Paper states that Mr Battier met Sir H. Harding in Westminster, and shook a horse-whip over his head; Sir H. did not notice this insult.

A General Order has issued, dated, Horse-Guards, 13th May: expressing His Majesty's disapprobation of Lord Londonderry's conduct, in accepting a challenge from Cor. Battier.

The expected Brevet has not taken place.

LORD BYRON.—Capt. George Anson Byron, R. N. cousin to the late noble Lord, succeeds to the titles. Lord Byron was 37 years of age. His body is on its way to England to be deposited in Westminster Abbey. Lady Byron succeeds to his property, which affords an income of £10,000 per year.

There is one circumstance connected with his Lordship's lameness, which, we believe, is not generally known. He was born with what is termed a club foot, and at the age of sixteen had the tardinde to submit to a painful and dangerous operation for removing the blemish. This fortunately succeeded, so as to enable him to indulge in every description of athletic exercises, of which he was exceedingly fond, and to remove the defect so that it was hardly perceptible.

THE PLAGUE.—The plague was raging violently at Alexandria. Letters from Malta, completely confirm the explosion at Cairo, 5000 persons lost their lives, with half a million of property.

The Joint Stock Company Bill passed the House of Commons on the 28th.

SAINTS PLAY AT PIQUET!—M. De Cosnas, Archbishop of Aix, was at a very advanced age when he learned that St. Francois de Sales had been canonized. "What!" cried he, 'my old friend! I am delighted at his good fortune; he was a gallant man, an amiable man, and an honest man too, although he would sometimes cheat at piquet, at which we have often played together. But, Sir,' said some one present, 'is it possible that a Saint could be a sharper at play?'—'No,' replied the Archbishop; but could be a sharper at play?—'No,' replied the Archbishop; but could be a sharper at play?—'No,' replied the Archbishop; but could be a sharper at play?

contest again and again, and came always off with distinction, almost always with complete triumph. As various in composition as Shakespeare himself (this will be admitted by all who are acquainted with his Don Juan,) he has embraced every topic of human life, and sounded every string on the divine harp, from its slightest to its most powerful and heart astounding tones. There is scarce a passion, or a situation, which has escaped his pen; and he might be drawn, like Garrick, between the weeping and laughing muse, although his most powerful efforts have certainly been dedicated to Melpomene. His genius seemed as prolific as various. The most prodigal use did not exhaust his powers, nay, seemed rather to increase their vigour. Neither Childe Haroldе, nor any of the most beautiful of Byron's earliest tales, contain more exquisite morsels of poetry than are to be found scattered throughout the pages of Don Juan. Amidst verses which the author appears to have thrown on with an effort as spontaneous as that of a tree designing its leaves to the wind. But that noble tree will never more bear fruit or blossom. It has been cut down in its strength and the past is all that remains to us of Byron. We can scarce reconcile ourselves to the idea—cannot think that the voice is silent for ever, which bursting so often on our ear, was as often heard with rapturous admiration, sometimes with regret, but always with the deepest interest.

All that's bright must fade,
The brightest still the fleetest!

With a strong feeling of awful sorrow, we take leave of the subject. Death creeps upon our most serious as well as upon our most idle employments; and it is a reflection solemn and gratifying, that he found our Byron in no moment of levity, but contributing his fortune and hazarding his life in behalf of a people only endeared to him by their just glories and fellow creatures suffering under the yoke of a heathen oppressor. To have fallen in a crusade for freedom and humanity, as in olden time, it would have been an atonement for the blackest crimes, may in the present be allowed to expiate greater follies than even exaggerating enemmy has propagated against Lord Byron

Lord and Lady Byron.—We have been assured, that when they last parted a perfect amity prevailed between them. Lady Byron left him to visit her parental roof, upon his promise that he would speedily rejoin her, and we are assured that every day during her absence, she wrote to him the most affectionate letters, pressing for his presence. It was therefore determined between him and a most respectable gentleman, allied to the family, that they should together leave London on the following Tuesday, but on the Saturday, Lord Byron received a letter prohibiting his intended visit, and intimating, not from herself, that his Lady should not be permitted to join him any more. Wherefore this lofty spirit declined to enquire the reason of this prohibition we have not learned, but we have been assured that some relations and friends of the family in vain attempted to have the prohibition annulled. This circumstance must remove the prejudices which have been raised against the domestic conduct of Lord Byron, and we may be permitted in his favor to observe, that the severe lines which he addressed to the female whom he suspected to have alienated the affections of his wife if his suspicion was well founded, must certainly be considered as a well merited infliction.—London Sun.

HOME CIRCUIT—HERTFORD.

Shortly after the murder of Weare, an affray took place in the same part of Hertfordshire, between a Mr. Connolly and some Sheriff's Officers who came to arrest him, which ended in homicide—Connolly refused them admittance, and they endeavoured to force the door, one of the pannels of which they beat out. Connolly still resisted and kept them off with a pitchfork, wounding one of the officers, who, failed in taking the prisoner, procured a warrant against him for a breach of the peace, which they gave to a constable to enforce, and thus strengthened again attacked the house Connolly had in the mean time, by means of harsevent Horan, procured a gun, which, when the second attack was made, he discharged at the assailants, and the constable was unfortunately killed:—Horan was likewise active in assisting Connolly in resisting the officers For this act Connolly and Horan were capitally indicted, at the Spring Assizes held at Hertford, and were severally sentenced as follows:

THE SENTENCE.

This morning the prisoners, Connolly and Horan, were placed at the bar to receive the sentence of the Law.

Mr KNAPP, Clerk of Assize, addressed them severally, and asked them what they had to say in arrest of judgment.

Mr Connolly said he would submit himself to the merciful consideration of the Learned Judge.

Hugh Horan said nothing.

Mr. Justice PARK then addressed the prisoners to the following effect:—Patrick Connolly and Hugh Horan, the most painful, the most awful duty of a Judge is to express his discretion in a case of this description Would to God that the condition of human nature would allow that there should be fixed rules to govern us in every case If that could have been the case in this instance, much—much of pain and anxiety would have been spared to me since that time I have agitated last night I have thought of the character which has been given to you both. I have endeavoured, consistently with my duty to the country, to give full effect to that character. In the case of one of you—I mean you, Hugh Horan—happy to say that I feel I can give effect to it. You undoubtedly had a share in this transaction, which was most improper; but I have no doubt that you acted under a mistaken sense of duty to a person whom you considered your master. I hope, however, that that punishment which you will suffer will teach you, and other persons in your situation, that though it is your duty to obey the lawful command of your master, and obey them with cheerfulness, yet that your duty to God and your country requires you to resist when your master requires you to do any thing against the law—against the rules of morality. There is, however, one strong circumstance in your favour, that you did not execute the dreadful, the savage command which he gave you, when you were armed with a gun, and directed by Connolly to shoot one of the officers. You abstained from doing so, and there is no evidence of any actual personal violence offered by you to any body in this unfortunate transaction. You will find this circumstance, connected with the good character given you by your master, have had their effect upon my mind, and have produced a much more lenient sentence than I shall feel myself compelled to pass upon the other offender.

With respect to you, Patrick Connolly, there is no doubt that the proceedings of the Sheriff's officer were originally improper. I so consider them, and also those of the unfortunate person who attempted to execute the peace warrant. It is in consideration of this, and from the wilderness which the law of the country bears to the liberty of the subject—from its desire that its processes shall be regularly and temperately executed, that your life is spared. But for that, it is my duty to tell you, for the sake of others, that if the warrant had been directed to a regular officer, and had been executed properly within the scope of his authority, it would have been impossible for me to interpose to prevent your suffering on Monday next an ignominious death You owe the preservation of your life, not to any merits of your own, but to the tender regard which the law bears to the liberty of the subject Though your case is not murder, there is but a slight shade of difference between it and that horrid crime. If a man's house is improperly broken, when he knows that the utmost effort of the breaking will be a personal trespass on himself, is he to execute vengeance by his own hand? Should he not repress the violence of his temper, and appeal to the laws of his country, which will abundantly redress any injury he has sustained? Is he not to bear with submission the wrong done him, when he knows that the law will afford him relief? If he is improperly arrested, the Judges of the country will order him to be released; and if the officer misconducts himself he is answerable to the law, either upon action of trespass, or to punishment by indictment as a criminal It cannot be permitted in this country, that in case of any irregularity in the execution of process either criminal or civil, that a man shall be allowed to take the dreadful vengeance which you have taken into your own hands. I come now to that part of your conduct which will form from me the sentence that I am about to pronounce; and I solemnly assure you, but for that (considering the character you have borne) you would have been differently treated. In my experience of Courts of Justice, and from what I have learnt of human nature, I never knew a man before to conduct himself so ferociously after you had fired this gun. I have often heard that the murderer, with his hands reeking with blood, has been seen weeping and lamenting over the victim he had destroyed 'This was not your case. It is distinctly in evidence that after you must have known the result of your desperate act—after you knew that one of your fellow-creatures had been sent to another world by your rash hand, you fired a second gun, and prepared to fire a third; for, after the house was entered, a gun was found primed and loaded, which you would have discharged if not thus prevented. I state to you again, that this is a which convinces me that you are a person unworthy to remain any longer in this country. I therefore pass upon you the sentence I am now called upon to pronounce, and considering the respectability of your friends and connexions I do it with pain —I do it with reluctance, but I do it because I feel it is my duty to the country to do it. The sentence of the Court is, that for this offence you, Patrick Connolly, be transported to such parts beyond the seas as his Majesty, by the advice of his Council, shall direct and appoint, for the term of your natural life. Upon you, Hugh Horan, the sentence of the Court is, that for this offence, you be imprisoned in the House of Correction for this country for six months, and be kept to hard labour.

Mr Connolly appeared deeply affected by the Learned Judge's address, and at the close bowed respectfully.

From the Baltimore Chronicle of Saturday.

INFIDELITY

Counteracted by its own weapons.

At the time when infidelity was making enormous strides in Europe, one mode was adopted for its promulgation: short extracts from the writings of Voltaire and the rest of the literary banditti of his day were printed and disseminated amongst the lower orders of the people. Religion was thus, with incredible industry, exposed to popular scorn and contempt. Infidelity became fashionable in that mass of population in which the physical strength of a kingdom resides This hint furnished by an abandoned set of philosophical atheists, was the occasion of all those tract-societies now extending in every part of the Christian world. Religion fights infidelity with its own weapons—little indeed did those atheistical philosophers imagine, that they were laying the very efforts which they were making for the abolition of Christianity, contributing to the still further extension of the word of Divine truth.

All this has been brought about in a few revolving years. There is scarce any occurrence that shews more forcibly than this, the superintending and controling hand of a God. How many Christians trembled, when they beheld the promulgation of infidelity, little dreaming at the same time, that all this was preliminary to the triumphant advances of the standard of our Redeemer, in places where before was never heard the sound of the silver trumpet of Salvation; another remark arising from the subject, is this, that the real Christian when he beholds the advance of infidelity, has no occasion with such an example before his eyes, to feel despondence. The darkness by which he is surrounded, may be only preparatory to the full blaze of gospel day; it may be the season when the morning star will begin to sparkel upon the shadows. The times and seasons for the display of Divine grace, are under the control of the same Almighty Hand, that compelled the disciples of Voltaire, to become involuntary agents for the promulgation of the Gospel.

AMERICAN INDIANS.—It is ascertained that 471,417 Indians are connected with the U States; 120,000 of whom are scattered through the States from the Atlantic to the Mississippi; 150,000 between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains; 170,000 between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific. Of those who reside within the limits of the U. States 5000 are supposed to be in the state of New York consisting chiefly of Oneidas, Senecas, Onondagoes and Tuscaroras, being the remnants of the former confederacy of the Six Nations, 2500 of the various tribes are in New-England; 2400 in Ohio; and 45,000 in Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, &c. A remnant of the Catawba nation, amounting to about 150 reside in two villages on the Catawba river, in this state, on what is called the Indian Land, 15 miles square. They occasionly visit Charleston. Drunkenness, that scourge of the human race, is their prevailing vice, and has associated their persons and benumbed their faculties.

RESIGNATION OF JOHN GOESSMAN ESQ.

We are requested to publish the following address delivered from the Hustings, at the ELECTION for the COUNTIES of YORK, and SIMCOE on Mr. G's declining the Contest, on the second day of the Poll:—

GENTLEMEN,

I am very sorry that even the faintest obligation that might have rendered me your thankful debtor, has been placed to that access beyond my reach, that I much more creditable had banished from me the idea of ever assuming the attitude of conferring to you any advice or hint to preserve your privileges.—The ties that might have connected me to such a duty are dissolved, and for the few moments I shall have to remain among you, I shall only apply for the privileges of a very stranger, to this nation, though I may properly say that I was certainly a born British Subject, before a great number of you did even draw breath, and have certainly borne more oppressions during the late French war, than any child of this country, that never peeped beyond the boundary even of this continent, where only a small twig of that all crushing war struck.

Our Sovereign has not been always powerful enough to defend all his dominions. We Hanoverians have been left the greater part during that contest to our own fate; we have been crushed to yield our privileges to the subjection of Buonaparte, his greatest antagonist. I have during the whole period of that tumult, never bowed my face to any other power, than that which I serve now and hope that I may have at least as good a claim for the reputation of a true Britton than any of the by standers.

We Hanoverians had not lost our British spirit after having been confined to a subduction of their foes for more than ten years.

Our attachment to our true Sovereign had not then faded, we were able to preserve during that long period of suppression still courage sufficient to shake off the yoke at the first sight of our true masters friends.

Government House,
July, 15th 1824.

HIS Excellency the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, has been pleased to License the following Gentlemen to practise Physic, Surgery, and Midwifery, within this Province:—

THOMAS D. MORRISON,
and
STEPHEN W. AVERY.

Executive Council Office
York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johns, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL.
Clk. Ex'v. Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shilling and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admits, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1824.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL. Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

COMMUNICATION.

FOR THE U. C. GAZETTE.
Niagara Falls, June 30th, 1824.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette,

SIR,

From what is stated in Numbers Three and Four of a Paper lately Published at Queenstown styled the "Colonial Advocate" it might be inferred that the Commissioners appointed to superintend the Erection of the Monument to the Memory of the late Major General Sir Isaac Brock, had been remiss in their duty, in that they had employed William Lyon Mackenzie to superintend in their stead—but such is not the case—it is thus:—

Shortly after the death of one of the Commissioners (Colonel Nichol), I consulted with the remaining Commissioner, Mr. Thomas Dickson, and with other gentlemen of the District, as to the propriety of having a procession of ceremony at laying the foundation—when it was agreed; from the recent death of Col. Nichol, and from the short time there was to invite over from York, the gentlemen from thence, to form the necessary Masonic procession; that the ceremony should be deferred until the Monument was finished and when the remains of the late Major General would be deposited in the Vault of the Monument.

The Contractors informed Mr. Hall, Engineer, superintending the Erection of the Monument and myself, that they would be ready to commence the Foundation in the first week in June; they were directed to proceed when ready, as there would be no ceremony at the laying of it. On the first day of June I had appointed to be at Burlington Beach as a Canal Commissioner, as you will see by Public Notice in your Gazette of May last, where I accordingly went, accompanied by Mr. Hall the Engineer.—On that day, the most being clear, (the only remaining Commissioner Mr Thomas Dickson from indisposition not being able to leave his room)—Mr. Lyon Mackenzie, took upon himself unknown to the Commissioners, to perform his impertinent and offensive ceremonies at the laying the foundation of the monument.

For the information of the public I have to state, that William Lyon Mackenzie's wide mouthed bottle, and his wider mouthed assertions paper are now removed from under the monument, and safe, your very obedient servant,

(Signed) THOMAS CLARK.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

SICILIAN DWARF.

(London Literary Gazette)

"Seeing is believing," and upon my conscience, unless I had seen the Sicilian Dwarf with mine own eyes, I could not have credited so extraordinary a variety in humane nature. This creature is a female, and of the name of Cramachi; a Sicilian by birth, and now within a few months of being ten years old. But it is impossible to describe the miracle of her appearance, or its effect upon the mind. Those rationality, sportiveness, and intelligence, all the faculties of humanity, in a being so inconceiveable below the standard at which we have ever witnessed them, so overturns all previous impressions that, even with the fact before us, we doubt the evidence of our own senses. A tolerable sized doll, acting, and speaking would not astonish us so much—for nature is in this instance, far more wonderful than art could be. Only imagine a creature about half as large as a new born infant; perfect in all parts and lineaments, uttering words in a strange unearthly voice understanding what you say, and replying to your questions; imagine, I say, this figure of about nineteen inches in height and five pounds in weight—and you have some idea of the most extraordinary phenomenon and the more you look, the more you reflect,—the more incredible it appears that this can be real—But true it is: here is the fairy of your superstition in actual life: here is the progy of ancient mythology brought down to your own day. The expression of her countenance varies with whatever effects her mind (for, on faith, there is a mind and soul in this diminutive frame) her beautiful tiny hand (for the fore finger of which, the ring of a very small shirt button would be much too wide a round) has all the motions and graces which rare found in the same member of a lovely woman; she laughs, she threatens, she displays her fondness for finery, she likes her drop of wine, she shows her displeasure, she chooses and rejects; in fine, she is as perfect as a common child of the same age. Her walk is rather tottering, and her voice (as I have said) very remarkable. Her general appearance is not unpleasing, though there is a little of the simia in the form of the features: her health is good, and her body, limbs &c. are complete.

I shall visit her again and again, for she is to me the wonder of wonders. I took her up caressed and saluted her; and it was most laughable to see how reverse the latter freedom wiping her cheek, and expressing her dislike of the rough chin. But her great antipathy is to Doctors; these have offended her by examining her too minutely, and whenever they are mentioned she doubles her fibert of a fist, and manifests her decided displeasure. Of her trinkets she seems very proud, taking off her ring to show it, and pointing to her earrings with the joyous exclamation of "Very pretty,"—for she has already learnt a little English But, go and see her or you never can conceive the true meaning of Milton's phrase—

"Mimim of nature"

CAUSE OF THE SEPERATION OF LORD AND LADY BYRON.

At the time of Lord Byron's separation from his Lady, many different and contradictory stories were in circulation as to the real cause of such an event. Scandal was not idle on the occasion, and reports highly prejudicial to his Lordship's character were most industriously circulated by his enemies. A domestic division, which arose from a very trifling circumstance, was laid hold of with avidity, in order to propagate the heaviest imputations against the morals of Lord Byron, that the most malicious heart could possibly devise.

The real cause of this occurrence originated in jealousy on the part of Lady Byron Her Ladyship was filled with constant suspicions of the fidelity of her Lord; these doubts, it is said, had been infused into her mind by a favourite confident who had been a governess, and who had come with Lady Byron after her marriage, in the capacity of a friend. This person, actuated, one would imagine, by the spirit of a fiend, formed the design, from some hellish motives, of destroying the domestic felicity of the noble pair under whose roof she was a sojourner. This female Iago confirmed by vague imputations, dark insinuendos and damnable surmises respecting Lord Byron, whose every action she watched with the eye of an Argos, to misrepresent with the cool calculating malevolence of a demon. She at length got so complete an ascendancy over the mind of Lady Byron, that her Ladyship was incapable of viewing any thing, except through the jaundiced medium in which this monster chose to present it. Though Lord Byron, previously to his marriage with Miss Noel, daughter of Sir Ralph Noel, had lived a free and dissipated life; yet it is asserted by his most intimate friends, that no man could have been more restrained in his conduct than he was after his marriage, and at the precise time of the quarrel which took place between the parties, and which terminated in their eternal separation.

At this period Lord Byron was one of the Committee of Drury Lane Theatre, and frequently had theatrical persons, both male and female, calling at his residence on affairs connected with the Committee.—This circumstance was artfully seized on by the person who was the confidant of Lady Byron, and was construed by her into a means of still further deluding her Ladyship's mind. Lord Byron was represented as having affairs of gallantry with several actresses. As "trifles light as air are to the jealous, confirmations strong as proofs of holy writ," so a trivial matter which occurred tended to inflame the mind of Lady Byron, already prepared by the machinations of the person above alluded to.

The beautiful Mrs. Mardyn, at that time a member of the Drury-Lane Company, had occasion to call on Lord Byron, at his residence, relative to some theatrical business, and was shewn into his Lordships library. During her stay there came a dreadful storm of rain; and when the lady was about to depart, Lord Byron sent a servant to procure a hackney coach. There not being a single coach to be found, his Lordship very politely offered his carriage to convey her home. Lady Byron, who had received information that Mrs. Mardyn was in the house, on learning that the coach was ordered for her, directed the servant to say that his Lordship's carriage had been lent and was abroad.—"Then," said Lord Byron, "I am requested that this was an excuse arising from the jealous mind of his Lady, and her consequent disinclination that such a conveyance should be provided for the female stranger) with some impetuosity, "let lady Byron's carriage be instantly got ready." Lady Byron's answer to this was, "go to the theatre master that" Mrs. Mardyn shall never ride in a carriage belonging to me." Hereupon Lord Byron, with great sang froid, observed, that as Mrs. Mardyn could not be procured any kind of conveyance home, she should stay all night. Dinner was announced, and the Noble Lord led Mrs Mardyn to the dinning room, where Lady Byron had just preceded them. On their entrance, he presented Mrs. Mardyn to his Lady, who, with an air and manner manifesting the deepest indignation, made some caustic observation on Mrs. Mardyn's character, and left the room, and burst out of the room. The consciousness of his integrity of conduct, and the injustice of Lady Byron's suspicions, roused in turn a momentary, though perhaps, a too warm resentment, in the bosom of his Lordship; and as he believed his Lady to be the door, he betrayed more of defiance, even than reproach, and quickly slapped it to as Lady Byron retired. This was too much for a woman full of love and passion, and with another feeling superinduced by both. She re-entered Her proud spirit was dispected to her countenance; and with a firmness and a fierceness of tone and determination from which she never relaxed, she exclaimed,

"I leave you for ever—never will I live with that man again!" These were the last words Lord Byron ever heard his Lady utter—he saw her now for the last time! The carriage which had been gotten ready by his Lordship's subsequent orders, for Mrs Mardyn, served to convey his Lady from his house to return no more! She threw a mantle over her shoulders—fled, as it were, from her home; she paid hastily into her chariot, and drove to her father's residence—leaving the astonished husband, and the almost fainting cause of so much domestic disquietude, wrapt in confusion and astonishment. From this apparent trifling cause arose their separation; being very passionate, and his Lordship too proud to make even the slightest concession. The individual who had irritated Lady Byron against her husband, had caused her to suspect that her Lord had an intrigue with Mrs. Mardyn. Mrs. Mardyn, however, deples in the most solemn manner, ever having any commerce of the kind with Lord Byron. Thus it would appear, but for the insidious insinuations of a base wretch, the domestic happiness of the noble pair would not have been impaired; the separation would never have taken place; and England would not now have to lament his loss.—Dublin Star.

BUONAPARTE AND TALMA.—Talma mentioned to me some singular circumstances of Buonaparte, which may be of interest, as they are derived from an authentic source. The early acquaintance of Talma with Buonaparte originated from its passion for the stage, Talma had an opportunity of gratifying it, by giving him free admissions, when the finances of the "emperor to be" were too limited for a frequent indulgence in what every Frenchman considers as almost a necessary of life.—Their acquaintance soon ripened into familiarity, and the hours which were not devoted to their respective professions, were often passed together. They used frequently to stroll through the streets of Paris in the evening. Buonaparte was so immoderately found of coffee, that he could not refrain from entering every tavern by which they passed, in which, his favourite beverage could be procured. His love for it arose from its exciting qualities.—After he had swallowed large draughts, and when his spirits were awakened into unusual vivacity, he indulged in all sorts of ambitious speculation. His friend could not help smiling at the confidence with which he predicted his future greatness, for he was ever commencing with futurity, and by anticipation was already a great man. All his notions were vast and daring; he expressed himself in wild and dreamy imagery, which was well united to his high and aspiring thoughts. Talma said, that at this time his conversation was nearly Ossianic, from which I took occasion to inquire from him if it was true that Buonaparte had so much partiality for the writer whom he little suspected for a modern Scotsman, who had arrayed his conceptions in the mists of his own grey hills and contrived to impose upon the world in this ingenious and fantastic masquerade. Talma did not seem to be quite pleased at my being so incredulous of the authenticity of the favorite author of his imperial friend; for he assured me that from the earliest period of their acquaintance, he remembered Buonaparte's passion for what he considered as among the sublimest fragments of antiquity. He used to carry a small edition of Ossian about him. No doubt, the style more or less communicated something of its own colour to his mind; and we account for the occasional hyperboles to be found in his public documents, by referring them to that very likely source. I asked Talma whether Buonaparte's temper was as violent before he attained his elevation, as it was said to have been afterwards. He denied, and that with no little warmth, that his temper had ever been remarkable for its vehemence, and asserted, that on the contrary, though subject to gusts of a sudden and transitory kind, he was generally gentle, and exceedingly good-natured. As a proof of it, he mentioned the deep attachment of all those who were immediately about his person. Talma was often much affected in speaking of the man, who had loaded him with favours, and upon one or two occasions he was moved to tears. He could not help admitting the evils which Buonaparte had inflicted, and that he was a foe to liberty; but at the same time he said, that those who knew him best indulged in the hope that age might have calmed his ambition, and given his mind a more pacific cast—an opinion which, from politeness I did not care to controvert. Talma always found a ready access to Buonaparte, even in the days of his loftiest prosperity. The emperor used to chat with him, with all the familiarity of an old acquaintance, he inquired minutely into all the concerns of the theatre, and dwelt upon the subject with a real and unimpaired delight. Corneille was Buonaparte's favorite dramatist; and of all his works, he chiefly admired Cinna It occurred to me indeed, when I saw that noble tragedy, that the sentiments it conveyed must have been greatly agreeable to him, as the evils of a republic, and the imminently and distracted times, are strongly inculcated.—Talma played Augustus for the first time whilst I was in Paris, and to Lutond, who had till then performed the former part, Cinna was committed. Their was a rivalry between the two actors, which gave additional interest to the performance. Talma soon left competition at an immense distance, and carried all the applause of the house, which was crowded to excess. The deepest emotion was produced among the spectators, by the many references to the scenes of Roman conception, which afforded a painful association with what they had themselves so recently beheld.—The terrific descriptions of the poet, given with all the power of the most masterly declamation, approaches at moments, to the vividness of reality. Scarcely a sentiment was uttered which did not find an echo in every bosom around me, and I could not refrain from praying, that in the theatres of my own country I should never be a witness to emotions derived from any kindred cause. Talma appeared to me, in his personation of Agustus, to aim at presenting some shadows of Buonaparte. Indeed, there was a vehemence and abruptness in his acting, so little conformable with my own ideas of the character, that I was satisfied that he intended to pourtray the great product of the revolution. Talma afterwards mentioned that Cinna was the play which Buonaparte chiefly liked; and that one day, after witnessing its representation, he mentioned, that the depth and justice of the political reflections which every where occur in the writings of Corneille, had so much impressed him with admiration for the genious of the poet, that if he had been living in his time, he would have made him his prime minister.

LORD BLARNEY.

(Some valuable information relative to the affairs of Ireland.)

FROM THE NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

The two former volumes of this lively and intelligent observer of men and manners, were duly noticed and properly praised by us, though it happened that some of our severe critics were not so well disposed to be pleased as we were with his facetious anecdotes and humourous descriptions. The present volume we think must be more to the taste of the severe censors of the press, for the noble writer has here given a sober and statistical account of the sister kingdom, which will be found highly interesting to politicians. His lordship is too shrewdly acquainted with human nature to deny the degraded condition of the Irish peasantry, but while he paints it in its true colours, and illustrates it with all the feeling of a patriot, he forms no visionary ideas of amending the evil by schemes of reform, which are merely tools for ambitious minds to gain possession of power, or of crafty knaves to procure riches. He calls loudly upon the gentry of the land to return to their duty, and instead of wandering from their native country, to employ their time, their influence, and their property, in bettering the condition of the indigent classes, educating the poor children, promoting industry, allaying faction, and above all, in counteracting a tyrannical priesthood. Lord Blayney is a steady friend to toleration, and he manifests great liberality of sentiment; but he possesses too much good sense not to perceive that the privilege of legislating contended for by the Roman Catholics and their blind or furious advocates would inevitably be the establishment of their church in Ireland. He sees & has acknowledged that if this measure be carried in an evil hour, the consequences will be the complete subjection of the Protestant interests for no member will be returned to parliament but Romanists in faith or connexion. Mischief enough has already been done in the way of concession, and one which is here mentioned as coming more immediately within his lordship's observation speaks so emphatically that we shall be forgiven for extracting the passage in this place:—The evil alluded to is the order given by the British government for the soldiers to choose their respective places of worship, in Ireland, and to attend them at pleasure. "The consequence was," says Lord Blayney, "the greater part preferred going to a Roman Catholic Chapel; because there, after divine service, they always met the dissolute and depraved, in order to drink whiskey, with a chance of imbibing the pernicious doctrines which they may and can hardly fail to receive, from the lowest, the most vile, and the most degraded of his Majesty's subjects. The soldiers never entertained a thought otherwise than that they were to attend divine service according to the roles of the established religion. The author commanded a regiment for many years; every non-commissioned officer and soldier went regularly to church; they never hesitated, nor was it a question that entered into their ideas, until informed of it by the authority of a general officer—The effect has been, that the very best men in the regiment have been corrupted; order, morality, discipline, and regularity, for which they had been previously conspicuous, were set at defiance, and through the influence of the priests, and the examples received from their flocks, the best behaved, and most exemplary men for good conduct in the regiment, soon became the worst. Ferdinand VII, the modern prince of blockheads, never could have been guilty of so fatal an error as to sow discord in his own army, by means of dividing them on religious opinions; or, as is called in England, toleration. Had not this fatal measure been acquiesced in, the Roman Catholic soldiers would have seen the world in a different point of view; their ideas would have been expanded; and on their return home they would have by their conversations instructed others, their friends and relations who had not the same opportunities. Where now, on their return home, the soldier is held hold of by the priest, who counts him, during his absence, a lost child. No influence or exertion on his part is wanting, (in which he always succeeds) of bringing him back to nearly his former state of bigotry and ignorance. The same influence disorders the Roman Catholic soldiers of the militia from entering into the line, and not one in five volunteered that would otherwise have offered themselves had not the government been persuaded to adopt that pernicious measure. It will be said that the British soldiers fought as well abroad; they have ever done so abroad, because they are removed from the influence of their priests; and they have never fought well at home, because they are ever under the control of that influence."

A JAIL SONG.

He who lives in a jail
Will never run pale
With a dun at his door,
For his bolts are his bail;
He may dance, drink, and sing,
As free as his king,
From Monday to Monday morning.
(Chorus repeats)

When once he's here,
At the world he may jeer,
And pay no more debts than a prince or a peer,
But takes his sling,
Till he takes his swing,
All on Monday morning.

THE FANCY.

SPRING AND LANGAN.—These first rate heroes of the fist, left London yesterday for close training. The former takes up his old quarters in Surrey, where he trained so clean for Neate. Langan is gone for the days, sea bathing, until Tuesday next, when he will be press-nt at the fight between Hudson and Sampson. He will afterwards pursue close training in the ne ghbourhood of Cheltenham. Betting remains stational at 2 to 1 on Spring.

HUDSON AND SAMPSON.—Hudson has won the toss to name the place of fighting on Tuesday next. The articles state that the battle should be fought within 100 miles of London, and report states that it will be seventy miles off. Josh. Hudson is the favourite at 6 to 4.

We extract the following from the "Memoirs of Captain Rock, the celebrated Irish Chieftain. written by himself," as affording something like a key to the spirit of the work.

As long as Ireland shall pretend,
Like sugar-loaf, turn'd upside down,
To stand upon its smaller end,
So long shall live old Rock's renown.
As long as Popish spade and scythe
Shall cut the Sassenagh's* tithe;
And Popish purses pay the tolls,
On heaven's road, for Sassanagh souls—
As long as Millions shall kneel down
To ask of Thousands for their own,
While Thousands proudly turn away,
And to the Millions at wer "Nay,"—
So long the merry reign shall be
Of Captain Rock and his Family.

SAILORS PETITION.—The following is a literal, and genuine copy of an irresistibly humorous petition which came last Friday under the consideration of the Lords of the Treasury, by whom it was remitted to the commissioners of Stamps with a favourable recommendation:

To the most noble Lords and Gentlemen of his Majesty's (God bless him) Treasury. A bit of a petition from C——P——(seaman,) a prisoner in the County Goal, Devon, Commanded by Mr. Cole, Esq.

"Most Noble Gentlemen.—You will please to excuse your poor petitioner, in taking the liberty of sending you this petition; but he is informed by the gentleman magistrate, Mr Lockyeare, esq. who committed him, that it is to your lordships he must apply to be let out of prison, and let your lordships know for what he was put in there, My most noble gentlemen, your petitioner is by trade a sailor, and he served his majesty in a man of war sixteen years, and first and his larboard arm in fighting for him, on board his majesty's ship Victory. Your petitioner has been very ill of a fever, and is as thin as a rope yarn, and cannot work as a sailor for want of his larboard fin, and not being willing to leave to commenced to sell little books at Plymouth, where your petitioner lives, but not about my master, the King, or any of your lordships. Your petitioner had not long been at this work, when he was bawled by a land shark, (a Jew), who is a constable at Plymouth, and carried before Mr Lockyeare, esq. who inquired in the business and told your petitioner he must either [illegible] and [illegible] or pay £5 and [illegible] not, or to goal I was brought; where I am laid up in hevour r, like Paddy Ward's pig, for three months, unless your Lordships will please to give orders to the contrary, which, please God, I hope you will, and I will praise your Lordships all the days of my life—Signed C——P——. Exeter High Gaol, April 3d, 1824."

OPIUM EATING.—This practice does not appear to be so general with the Turks as is commonly believed But there is a set of people at Constantinople devoted to this drug; the Theriakis, as they are called, have that hollow and livid aspect, the fixed dullness of the eye at one time, and the unnatural brightness at another, which tell too plainly of this destructive habit. They seldom live beyond thirty, lose all appetite for food; and as their strength decreases, the craving for opium increases. It is useless to warn a Theriaki, that he is hurrying to the grave. He comes in the morning to a large coffee room, a well known resort for this purpose. Having swallowed his pill, he seats himself in the portico in front, which is shaded by trees. He has no wish to change his position, for motion would disturb his happiness, which he tells you is indescribable. He gazes on the river beneath, covered with the sails of every nation; and on the majestic shores of Asia opposite. There, till sunset, the Theriaki revels in love, in splendour, or in pride. He sees the beauties of Circassia striving whose charms will most delight him; the Ottoman fleet sails beneath his flag as Captain Pacha; or seated in the Divan, voices hail, and turbaned heads are bowed before him. But evening comes, and he awakes to a sense of wretchedness and helplessness, to a gnawing hunger, which is the effect of his vice; and he hurries home, to suffer, till the morning sun reveals to him his paradise.—New Monthly Magazine: art, "Constantinople."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—The Bill to permit bonded Wheat to be converted in o flour and exported was read a second time in the House of Commons on the 17th May Mr. Huddisand first moved its second reading that day six months, i. e. to reject the Bill. Mr Huskison on this occasion explained himself as follows:—"That the history of the Bill originated in representations were made to him by West India Merchants, that flour was imported into this country from Dantzig and Hamburgh, to be sent to our West India Colonies; he then asked himself this question, was it right that the country should be drained for years to its great injury, perhaps total destruction, which if allowed to be made into flour could be sent to our Colonies? and he would now ask the House whether they would allow the British capital which was employed in Foreign Wheat, to the amount of two and a half millions annually, to remain useless, rather than allow that Wheat to be manufactured into flour and exported"

MR. ELLIS begged leave then to observe, that when the Bonded Wheat Bill came before the House, he would move a clause to exempt Canadian Wheat, at present in Bond, from duty. That Wheat was now admissable under the Law, but from some particular circumstance in the market, it was subject to a duty of 12s per quarter. He trusted when the subject came before the House, he should show such good reasons, that he should meet with an almost unanimous vote in his favour.

An interesting conversation took place on Thursday, in the House of Commons, on the subject of the existing Corn Laws, in consequence of which a total change of the system will perhaps take place Mr. Curteis, the Member for Sussex, and a gentleman who, we believe, resides much and has his own management, complained that the averages by which the importation of foreign grain was to be regulated were never fairly struck. It would be a miracle if they were, when those to whom the business is recorded have a direct interest, and a very personal feeling, against discharging their duty honestly A different tax, as suggested by Mr. Huskison, upon imported corn, is a more rational proceeding than the present prohibition of its entry till native grain has mounted up to a certain price.

PORTUGAL.

From Nelson's (Quebec) Gazette.

We have been politely favoured by Capt. Whiteside, of the Brig Ann, 36 days from Lisbon, with the following particulars of the late re-surrection in that City. The latest advices from this place at London, on the 26th May, were only to the 6th of that month.

When Capt. Whiteside arrived at Lisbon, which was on the 10th of May, all was in confusion and quietness at a stand. The King the day before had gone on board the British 74, "Windsor Castle," Capt. Dashwood, where he remained some days, and did not return to the city until order was restored. The plot was got up by the King's son, a young man of 22 years of age, without education, to whom the King had given the command of the army. The [illegible] [illegible] were, by order, thrown into prison; the greater part were Military Officers, known to be attached to His Majesty, and belonging to the first families in Portugal, who it was alledged, had the plot succeeded were to have been shot on the 13th, the King's birth-day. When the Prince had done this, he wrote to his father that a conspiracy had been formed against the Royal Family, by the persons imprisoned, and wished his Majesty to sanction his proceedings. The King hesitated, and sent for the Foreign Ambassadors, by whom he was informed of his son's intentions and taking alarm for his safety, immediately went on board the Windsor Castle. Upon the Tagus, from which he issued orders to release those who had been imprisoned. On the 15th, the Prince, who had been brought a prisoner on board the Windsor Castle, was sent off in the Pearl, Portuguese Frigate, accompanied by the English Frigate Lively, and a French Brig of War. It was understood that he had been banished to France. The Marquis of Abrantes had fled; he was generally supposed to have been the murderer of the late Marquis of Marialva. The Portuguese evinced much dissatisfaction at the King's going on board an English Man of War, while there were several of their own in the River. The Queen, it was said, would go into a convent.—All was quite on the 27th May.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Weekly Register.

SIR,

You will doubtless gratify some of your readers by inserting the following brief hints.

The subscriber has recently returned from a journey to Sandwich where he has been travelling, with a view of promoting Sunday Schools and juvinile libraries.

The friends of religion will rejoice to hear, that these valuable institutions are increasing, and becoming more extensively useful.

It is a most gratifying circumstance, that all denominations of Christians are uniting their efforts towards carrying this very important design into operation.

Upon the river Thames six Societies have recently been organized for promoting the moral and religious instruction of the youth upon the Sabbath. And it is the determination of the committee, which has been appointed by each society to make the necessary arrangements for setting up a small library, of the most interesting books, to which all the children and youth may have access. This method of rewarding the youth and prompting their punctual attendance is much better than to give presents in small books, as was formerly practised; for, upon this plan, one book may be rendered useful to many; in this way also much property can be saved; for, it would require a very considerable sum of money to furnish each child with a good assortment of interesting books; but a very small sum from each parent and head of a family, paid yearly to the treasurer of a Sunday School Society, would provide a good library and keep it in repair. But, very great care and attention should be paid to the choice of books, which are to constitute such libraries; vain novels and plays ought to be wholly excluded, from every library, especially from a Sunday School library. All the books, that may be put into such a library ought to be of a moral and religious tendency particularly as they are to be taken out and returned upon the Sabbath. And, in a country like this, where every Sabbath School is expected to consist of children and youths, whose parents belong to different denominations, nothing of a party nature, designed to wound the feelings of real Christians of any denomination should be admitted into a Sunday School Library.

There are two respectable Societies in London from which books may be obtained, at a very reasonable price, viz: The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge and the Sunday School Union. The former is composed of gentlemen of the Episcopal Church only; but the latter is constituted of Christians of different denominations.

A Sunday School Union has been formed in Montreal, Kingston, York, and Niagara, and a correspondence has been opened between each of these Societies and the Society in London. Books to the amount of £200 have been ordered this year from that society. And all country schools, which now are or may be formed in Canada, may be supplied through this channel with a very excellent assortment of Sunday School Books at the most reasonable price.—This is a very great accommodation to the small schools in this country. And it is hoped, that the secretary of each Sunday School, will write as soon as practicable to the secretary of the Union Society through which they may wish to obtain their books, inclosing the sum which may be raised, and what kind of books are needed.—And it is requested that the number of scholars in each school may be stated and such interesting facts, as may be thought worthy of a place in the annual report of the Sunday School Union Society of Canada.

That the most vigorous efforts may be made, for the accomplishment of this laudable design, is the fervent prayer of the Public's

Humble Servant,
T. OSGOOD.

Agent for Sunday Schools.

POETRY.

VERSES ON THE DEATH OF LORD BYRON.

Thyself had'st said, that in the cloudy clime
Which gave thee birth, thou willing wouldst not die;
The wish thou breath'd, in thy prophetic rhyme,
Has granted been by answering destiny.

Greece saw thee die—Greece fully made thine own—
By all the ties thy genius could impose;
Greece claim'd thee living as her fav'rite son,
And dead, immerits thee with a nation's woes.

Oh! well Childe Harold has his fame restored—
And well his wayward pilgrimage has closed;
In arms for liberty, by Greece adored,
He died, to Moslem tyranny opposed.

Oh, had his sword but drunk the oppressor's blood;
His dying voice but rais'd the victor's cry:
The pilgrim's glorious death would then have stood
A crowning worthy of his poetry.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF LORD BYRON, IN GREECE.

He sleeps in the land of his earliest dream,
In the scene of his brightest story:
The language that kindled his patriot flame
Has chaunted the dirge of his glory!—

And the sons of the heroes of ancient days,
O'er the grave of their brother are mourning;
For he came to their succour, he came for their praise,
Like the might of their fathers returning.

Oh, his was a spirit, great, gloomy, and dread,
Where Hector and Homer were blended,
When the cloud of the grave round his brightness was spread,
Then the flash of his thunder descended.

He haunted the patriot's earliest tomb,
And sung like an orphan his sadness;
For vainly he look'd o'er the valies of g om,
For the heirs of that freedom and gladness!

He has hallow'd their cause, it has hallowed his name,
Their fame is embalmed with his glory;
E'en the Turk, while he bleeds on his pages with shame,
Immortally lives in their story.

But Britain must mourn, with a deeper distress,
And silent and lonely her weeping;
For who can reply with a soothing address,
Like the song of the bard that is sleeping?

Oh, then, let the light of his pages be sought.
Let her breathe in his language his sorrow;
She cannot be wrong with an unguiding thought,
But there she its language may borrow.

The course of his spirit was awfully high,
Among the dread regions of thunder;
It flashed through the deep, and it flamed through the sky—
It went every trammel asunder!

He looked on the world—it was splendour or gloom,
All midnight or noon, in his mirror—
He searched heaven and earth, and he rent every tomb,
For the stories of rapture and terror.

For think not the soft harp of passion unstrung,
In sympathy, sadness or pleasure;
Like the syren he wept—like the syren he sung,
With a magical sweetness of measure.

The gloom and the tempest would pass from the sphere,
And the landscape bloom lovely and tender;
His genius would beam in the dew of a tear,
Or rise from the ocean in splendour.

But he rests in the chilly embraces of death,
And his soul to its home is taken;
The angel has hushed the wild strains of his breath,
And who shall its slumbers awaken?

The following is a translation from an ancient Spanish Poet, which, says the Endinburgh Review, is surpassed by nothing which we are acquainted with, in the Spanish language, except the odes of Luis de Leon.

O! let the soul its slumber break,
Arouse its senses and awake,
To see how soon
Life, with its glories, glides away,
And the stern footstep of decay
Comes stealing on.

How pleasure, like the passing wind,
Blows by, and leaves us nought behind.
But grief at last;
How still our present happiness
Seems, to the wayward fancy, less
Than what is past.

And while we eye the rolling tide,
Down which our flying minutes glide
A way so fast;
Let us the present hour employ,
And deem each future dream of joy
Already past.

Let no vain hope deceive the mind—
No happier let us hope to find
To morrow than to-day,
Our golden dreams of yore were bright,
Like them the present shall delight—
Like them decay.

Our lives like hasting streams must be,
Tant into one engulphing sea
Are doomed to fall;
The sea of death, whose waves roll on,
O'er king and kingdom, crown and throne,
And swallow all.

Alike the river's lordly tide,
Alike the humble rivulets glide
To that sad wave;
Death levels poverty and pride,
And rich and poor sleep side by side
Within the grave.

* * * * * * * * * *

Our birth is but a starting place,
Life is the running of the race,
And death the goal;
There all our steps at last are brought,
That path alone, of all unsought,
Is found of all.

Say, then, how poor and little worth,
Are all those glittering toys of earth,
That lure us here:
Dreams of a sleep that death must break,
Alas! before it bids us wake,
Ye disappear.

Long ere the damps of death can blight,
The cheek's pure glow of red and white
Hath passed away;
Youth smiled and all was heavenly fair;
Age came, and laid his finger there,
And where are they?

Where are the strength that mocked decay,
The step that rose so light and gay,
The heart's blithe tone?—
The strength is gone, the step is slow,
And joy grows weariness and woe
When age comes on.

ELECTIONEERING INTELLIGENCE.—The contest between Mr. Cumming and Mr Hagerman, for the honour of representing this Town in Parliament, was decided yesterday. The poll at its close stood as follows:

For Mr. Cumming, 93
For Mr. Hagerman, 82

exhibiting a majority of 11 in favour of the former gentleman.

The opening speeches of both Candidates were reciprocal in expressions of amicable feeling and respect—and a correspondent line of conduct was maintained by both gentlemen throughout the contest—not a word at variance with their sentiments having passed between them.

At the close of the poll, Mr. Hagerman, in a most conciliatory speech, which amply justified his reputation for eloquence, with an air of great sincerity, complimented the Town of Kingston on the character of the Member elect, who after expressing his gratitude to his friends for their effectual support, in his turn declared, that had he not been himself a Candidate, his opponent was the person of all whom he knew the best entitled to his conscientious vote.

The Election of two Members to represent the County of Frontenac commenced at Waterloo on Tuesday the 13th instant, pursuant to notice, and on Wednesday Messrs. Thomson and Atkinson were declared duly elected. The number of votes were for DISTRESSING OCCURRENCE.

On the evening of the 25th ult. Mr. Joseph Haskins and his nephew Joseph Hutton, manned his Canoe and dropped down the river (Rideau) from the Haskin farm, in quest of game. Another canoe about three miles below, set off to cruise up the river on the same evening; this last was managed by William & Smith, and his brother George Smith. William was in the bow with the fire arms and a torch, and George in the stern. In passing up on the Montague shore, they observed by the noise in the water that some animal was in the edge of the stream near the place where they were: but when William had lighted the torch, it immediately fled. After this they continued for a while to proceed up the river, but becoming weary, they concluded to return by the way they came, and at, or near the place where they found the animal on their way up, they observed something in the water, and supposing it unquestionably the animal which they had just before driven out of the river, were eager to secure it; George who was still in the stern, in a low voice desired his brother to fire without lighting up, on which William (who notwithstanding the darkness of the night, discovered something above the surface of the water) immediately discharged his piece, an' dreadful to relate! the ball after perforating the upper edge of the canoe, passed through the body of Hutton, from the left to the right lip; he sallied backwards in his sitting position, and expired without uttering a word. Haskins was so stunned and blinded by the discharge of the gun, that it was some time before he could recollect himself; but as soon as he was sufficiently recovered he made himself known. But who can describe the emotions of the parties, on discovering the extent of mischief which had been done? They, however, united their efforts to convey him to the house of his mother, about a mile distant, whose feelings may be more easily imagined than described. An Inquest was held on the body, and a verdict of "accidental death," was unanimously returned.—Brockville Recorder.

The following particulars of the unfortunate affair, to which it relates is from the pen of Doct. T. Raymond, who was a passenger on board.

On Thursday the 1st instant, as the new and elegant Schooner, Union, Capt. J. Mosher, Owner and Master, was sailing up the St Lawrence, under a light though unsteady air breeze having on board the Captain and crew, 6 in number, 6 carpenters and 20 passengers among whom was a family consisting of the husband, the wife and five children, and 16 tons of merchandize besides about 9 tons of ballast. When the vessel was about two miles above Brockville, in a rapid Current, a sudden flaw, or gust of wind struck her sails, and notwithstanding the Captain was at the helm, and all hands promptly stationed to ease off in the event of danger and but one topsail up, yet so sudden and violent was the gust, that no efforts could save her from upsetting for in four or five seconds she was on her beam ends, and the ballast and cargo having shifted prevented her from righting.

The five children were in the hold, and their parents were on deck, the women fell over board, and with much difficulty was saved, two children, one seven years old, and the other an infant, were killed by the falling of some part of the cargo upon them; and as the vessel did not fill for twelve or fifteen minutes, two of the children were saved, but all exertions failed to save one boy about 12 years old, who was in the hold when it filled, at that time, when his hopes were all gone, it was truly horrible to hear his shrieks within, answered by responding cries of parents, and children without.—But discription can tell no tales of keen distress.

All on board were saved except the three children.—This happened about half past eleven o'clock A. M. near an island, to which the vessel was hauled. It is but justice here to observe highly to the credit of the people of Brockville and its vicinity that sufficient assistance soon arrived, taking an active and interesting part on this occasion, so that by 2 o'clock P. M. the vessel was righted though nearly all under water.—Ib.

Casualties.—Three men belonging to a raft lying near the Falls of Montmorenci while raising the anchor on Tuesday night last were thrown into the water. Two of them were saved by the Steam-Boat Experiment, but the other, a Canadian from Laprairie, was drowned.

A well dressed man, in the act of passing from Hunt's Wharf to the Steam Boat Quebec, last Saturday morning fell from the plank and was drowned, every means were used to save him, but without effect. The body has not been found.

The same evening John Tillery, Cook of the Brig Herald, lying at the same wharf, when proceeding to his vessel, fell through that part of the platform which is in an unfinished state and was drowned—he was found about half an hour afterwards, and was buried this morning—we understand he belonged to Greenock, and has left a wife and four children.—Quebec Gazette.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

Clk. Ex'v. Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,

IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shilling and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Cl'k. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,

In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular and Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty:

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

COMMUNICATION.

FOR THE U. C. GAZETTE.

Niagara Falls, June 20th, 1824.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

SIR,

From what is stated in Numbers Three and Four of a Paper lately Published at Queenstown styled the "Colonial Advocate" it might be inferred that the Commissioners appointed to superintend the Erection of the Monument to the Memory of the late Major General Sir Isaac Brock, had been remiss in their duty, & that they had employed William Lyon Mackenzie to superintend in their stead—but such is not the case;—it is thus:—

Shortly after the death of one of the Commissioners (Colonel Nichol,) I consulted with the remaining Commissioner, Mr. Thomas Dickson, and with other gentlemen of the District, as to the propriety of having a procession of ceremony at laying the foundation—when it was agreed; from the recent death of Col. Nichol, and from the short time there was to invite over from York, the gentlemen from thence, to form the necessary Masonic procession; that the ceremony should be deferred until the Monument was finished and when the remains of the late Major General would be deposited in the Vault of the Monument.

The Contractors informed Mr. Hall, Engineer, superintending the Erection of the Monument and myself, that they would be ready to commence the Foundation in the first week in June; they were directed to proceed, so as to be ready, as there would be no ceremony at the laying of it On the first day of June I had appointed to be at Burlington Beach as a Canal Commissioner, as you will see by Public Notice in your Gazette of May last, when I accordingly went, accompanied by Mr. Hall the Engineer.—On that day, the coast being clear, (the only remaining Commissioner Mr Thomas Dickson from indisposition not being able to leave his room) Mr. Lyon Mackenzie, took upon himself, unknown to the Commissioners, to perform his impertinent and officious ceremonies at the laying the foundation of the monument.

For the information of the public I have to state, that William Lyon Mackenzie's wide mouthed bottle, and his wider mouthed querulous paper are now removed from under the monument,

and am Sir, your very obedient servant,

(Signed) THOMAS CLARK,
Commissioner for Erecting a Monument to the memory of the late Maj. General Sir Isaac Brock.

Editorial Commentary.

THE DURHAM ELECTION, which has excited so much interest both in the Home and Newcastle Districts, is not yet at an end;—although the Poll was closed at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening last—after the warmest contest ever known in that part of the country.—At the close of the Poll, the numbers stood as follows viz:—

FOTHERGILL,	148
BOULTON,	138
WILMOT,	19
ORTON,	0

MR. WILMOT declined the contest on the morning of the third, and Orton at the close of the first, day.—The following statement of the six days Poll will shew with what steady perseverance the independent interest of the Older Townships gradually brought up their Candidate to a tie with the Candidate of a very opposite interest.

CANDIDATES	1st day	2nd day	3rd day	4th day	5th day	6th day	TOTAL
FOTHERGILL,	20	36	28	22	18	24	148
BOULTON,	59	53	13	4	3	16	138
WILMOT,	19	9	—	—	—	—	19

AFTER the Poll was closed at 7 o'clock precisely, as was previously agreed upon—and the numbers were cast up and found to be equal.

THE Returning Officer, at the suggestion of one of Mr. Boulton's numerous legal advisers, seemed disposed to strike off four from Mr. F's list in order to give Mr. B a nominal superiority—Against this unjust measure, Mr F. entered his formal protest, and demanded a general and not a partial, scrutiny—to both sides.—That scrutiny is fixed for Monday next, the 2d of August.

BOTH the Returning officer, and his Adviser on this occasion, ought to know, that when a voter is numerically admitted on the Poll—the words objected or rejected being placed opposite his name do not reject him from being added upon—(see Heyward on Contested Elections). It is only upon an abstaining the right of vote, upon a general scrutiny that he can be declared inadmissible.—If the voter is willing to swear himself duly qualified the Sheriff is bound to receive his vote, he has "See Tidwell's Cases, v. 2 p. 19.

As there is a tie, and there is not time between the 2d and 9th of August (the return day) for a general scrutiny—The only safe way, in our opinion to pursue is to make a double return—when a new Election must be the necessary consequence. We are assured that MR. FOTHERGILL, so far from having any dread of a general scrutiny, is confident of possessing at this very moment, a large majority of sound, INDEPENDENT VOTES!

So remarkable are many of the circumstances attending this Election—and so important are they to the general and the dearest interests of the country at large—that it has been determined to publish the Cheque Poll-Book, with remarks and annotations, and send a copy to every Freeholder in the County.

plained to the person who cut him down, that she had hanged her brother "for to send him to heaven," and that she would cut her own throat to go along with him. She attempted to commit suicide, but was prevented. The Jury found her "not guilty, believing her to have been insane when she committed the crime. During the trial, she fainted away and was carried out in strong convulsions. This poor girl had been in the habit of attending the "Revival" meetings of the Methodists. According to one of the witnesses, "a Revival is an 'out pouring of the spirit,' and causes the congregation to cry aloud to the Lord for mercy. The Revival continues for a month or six weeks. The members of the church meet every night. Revivals are held in the stated places of worship of particular congregations, and sometimes continue open for three nights and days in succession. Those who are 'convinced of sin,' as it is called, fall on their knees, and with uplifted hands, and their bodies working to and fro, call as loud as they are able to the Lord for help. Their ejaculations are such as, 'Oh! Christ pardon me my sins'—'O Lord! give me grace!'—and a variety of other similar expressions, adopted as the zeal of the moment may suggest. The Revival is open by night as well as by day. There is no appointment as to the time when the Revival is to be held; a congregation may be met, and at prayers, when perhaps some member will fall on his knees and call aloud to heaven for mercy. When this happens; the other Members are generally moved by the same spirit, and the Revival commences. This continues till the preacher pronounces a benediction, and he tells his flock 'the moment of conversion' is come, and they may expect 'a ray of hope, of comfort, and joy.' The moment of the coming of the 'ray of hope' is uncertain, and the congregation continue their extravagant devotions till they are 'convinced' or 'converted.'" One night, her mother went to fetch her home; and when Emma caught a sight of her, "immediately she lifted up both her arms, as if she was going to fly to the top of the room, and called on her dear mother and father to pray to the Lord to help them, for that they could not see the danger they were in. At this meeting she lost her clock, bonnet, handkerchief, and pattens. She had been moving from one part of the meeting to the other; and, in her unbounded zeal, had dropped her cloths, and they were trodden under feet. On another occasion, she came home, praying in a horrible manner for the conversion of her father and mother."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Two days later from England.

An arrival at Boston has brought London papers to the 1st of June inclusive, for extracts from which we are indebted to our correspondents of the Boston Daily Advertiser, Courier, and Centinel.

The prorogation of Parliament was expected to take place about the 20th of June.

On the 31st of May, Mr. Canning laid upon the table of the House of Commons, copies of two commercial treaties, with the governments of Prussia and Sweden.

Two Catholic petitions were presented to the House of Lords. They contained some insinuations that the Duke of York was the patron of the Orangemen. On account of some informality they were withdrawn. Mr. Brougham presented a counter petition which was read. In the course of his remarks upon the petition, Mr. B. enforced his favorite doctrine, "that there is nothing so sacred in his eyes, as the rights of subjects to say what they like of kings, princes, and ministers."

Another petition was also presented, praying for the suppression of the Catholic Association.

Mr. Gouldburn gave notice that he should move the next day for the renewal of the insurrection act.

The London Courier of June 1, says, "The question of the recognition of South American Independence continues most anxiously to occupy public attention, particularly in the city. We can venture to state, that previously to the close of the present session of Parliament, a communication will be made on this question to the house of Commons."

It is stated in the same paper that a rumor was current, derived from Mexican sources, that the British commissioners were on their return from Mexico. The rumour is declared to be unfounded.

A paragraph from Berlin, May 22, affirms, that Information has been received there, that Lord Byron completed his emancipation of Don Juan before he left Corfu, and sent it to England. He had written to Gamba, that he would pay him a visit at Woltman on his return from Greece.

Their Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Austria arrived on the 19th of May at Prague, where they were received with the greatest enthusiasm by the inhabitants.

A paragraph from Hague, May 27, says, "In the debate on the treaty of London, Messrs de Coltes, Beelaerts, and Van Alphen, spoke at some length on the freedom of commerce, and expressed a hope that the example given in this respect by the Netherlands, may be followed by other powers. M. Beelaert, spoke of the importance of the Cape of Good Hope, and concluded with a wish that circumstances might again restore it to the Netherlands."

Paris dates are to May 30.—The Prince de Polignac Ambassador to London had not arrived but was expected every moment. His expected arrival gives rise to many political conjectures.—Some say that he is to enter the Ministry, others affirm that he is to be present at the approaching Congress, when the Sovereigns of the Holy Alliance are to deliberate in person respecting the affairs of South America and Greece.

Galignani's Messenger of May 29, says, the Money market has been very dull, notwithstanding the approach of settling day. The Price of Stocks has experienced a decline, which is attributed to the fall in the Exchanges on Russia, and the uncertainty of the decision of the Chamber of Peers relative to the reimbursement of the Five per Cents.

From London Papers received at Boston.

'London, June 1st.

Letters have this morning been received from Trieste, dated on the 14th May, which advise the receipt of intelligence from Missolonghi, dated on the 3d May. It must afford sincere satisfaction to those who are friendly to the restoration of Grecian civilization, to learn, that General Colocotroni, his sons, and his partizans, have not only submitted themselves to the orders of the Senate, but that their influence and exertions have been again restored to the services of their country; for the Senate, as soon as it was convinced of the sincerity of General Colocotroni's submission, restored to him its confidence, and directed him to resume the investment of Patras, which will now therefore secure the speedy surrender of that important fortress. The Senate also directed one of the General's sons to proceed to Candia with reinforcements, and, if possible to liberate that island from the yoke of the barbarians. The consequence of the submission of Colocotroni was the occupation of Napoli di Romania by the Senate. The greatest unanimity prevailed amongst all classes in the Morea, and preparations had been made on the most extensive scale to repel the Turkish invasion, should any be actually attempted. None of their ships, however, had at these dates appeared on the coast.

Letters were received this morning from Constantinople, dated on the 26th April, but they only communicate news tending to confirm the already generally entertained idea, that vice has at length nearly concluded the effects of her influence in that part of the world, by the now pending destruction of the once mighty Ottoman Empire. The following is an extract of one of these letters, written by a gentleman who is certainly not very friendly generally, in his communications to the cause of Greece:—"The fleet has at last sailed, thanks be to God! and taken with it the very dregs of villainy.—This is a harsh expression, but had you seen their fine troops, you would willingly sanction it. The Captain Pasha, after his departure on Wednesday last, returned to take fresh orders, and it is said that he is to make his first attack on the islands. This, however, is uncertain; the Turks left this quietly, but in very bad spirits, and one hundred and twenty of them made off the day before the expedition sailed.—The 84 gun ship is a very fine vessel, but still the Captain Pacha preferred to sail in a corvette. It is reported that 250 Europeans are on board the line-of-battle ship, but the manner in which she was handled on her departure, says little for their seamanship. It afforded much amusement to observe her sometimes with head, sometimes with stern way, and frequently running on board of vessels which it was the object of the crew to avoid. To all appearance, this ship cannot defend herself against the enterprise of the Grecian seamen, and the Capt Pacha certainly has, therefore, discovered considerable prudence in preferring the corvette for the protection of himself. The Divan exhibits much uneasiness, and it is attributed to the receipt of bad news. There are 6000 men to be sent away the end of next month, but it is all nonsense, for they will never do any good. The plague has broken out in Talvoda or St. Dimitri, a village near Pera. Trade is dull, owing to the holidays, &c. &c.

From every quarter, the intelligence received respecting Greece is highly satisfactory, and a short time only is requisite to enable the inhabitants to enjoy the reward of their persevering exertions in the cause of independence and civilization.

LATEST FROM CADIZ.

By the ship Fabius from Cadiz, papers have been received to the 29th of May. The King had issued a decree to re-organize the militia. Those individuals however, who are wanting in fidelity to their sovereign are not to be enrolled. By advices from Paraguay, it appears that Pereira entered into a convention with the government of Buenos Ayres, in the name of H. C. M. whereby a friendly understanding between the governments may be established. This arrangement was not sanctioned by the King, and the same has been declared by him null and void.—Com. Adv.

SHIPING INTELLIGENCE.

Charlotte Town, Prince Edward Island, June 12th, 1824.

Melancholy Shipwreck.—It now becomes our painful duty, beyond a doubt, to record that melancholy loss of the brig Jessie, with all the passengers and crew, twenty six in number. She sailed from Three Rivers (in Prince Edward Island) on the 25th day of December last, for Liverpool, G. B. and was seen passing Chelicaw, (Cape Breton,) on the evening of the 27th, and it is most probable she run on shore that night on St. Paul's island (a desolate island opposite Cape North in Cape Breton.) From the currency of several reports from the adjacent shores of the wreck of a brig on that island, a small vessel was despatched from the house of Messrs. M'Kay's (the owners) which returned on Tuesday last with the most conclusive proofs of the fatal loss. The wreck of the Jessie lies within 200 yards of the south west point of the island, and on the west side of the point, eleven bodies were discovered about half a mile from the wreck; among whom were recognized Donald M'Kay, Esq. Mr. Forbes, (a merchant of Miramichi) and captain M'Alpine, who were lying together. It would appear that they must have perished from the severity of the weather, as some provisions were found. The passengers who left Three Rivers in the Jessie, Captain M'Alpine, were Donald M'Kay Esq. Mr. Forbes, Mr. John Lowe, Mrs. Williams (wife of Mr. John Williams) and two of her family. The loss of each individual is sincerely to be deplored, but the blank which Mr. M'Kay leaves will be severely felt by every person in this island, and indeed all who had the happiness of knowing him. The excellence of his whole character, the kindness and benevolence of his disposition, and his affable and truly gentlemanlike manners will be long remembered—no man perhaps ever possessed a warmer or more feeling heart, or enjoyed a greater share of the good will of mankind—A schooner left this town yesterday to bring some of the bodies here for interment, and on her return we hope to be enabled to give more detailed particulars.

Extract of a letter dated Sydney, June 11.—"A fishing vessel has lately returned to Margaree, from St. Paul's island off Cape North, where they discovered eleven dead bodies of persons lying in a tent on the Island, supposed to have perished from cold and starvation, as there appeared signs of their having lived on each other."

The Bark Dunscombe, Harrison, from Bristol to Miramichi, in ballast was lost about the 1st June on Scaterie island near Main à Dieu, (Cape Breton.)

Besides the above vessel which had not been heard of before, there is the Brig Sampson which sailed about the same time

Drowned.—On Monday the 12th inst. near the mouth of Chesseguay River, Mr. Samuel Hardy. He was unfortunately knocked overboard by the boom of the Durham boat on his passage to Montreal, the exertions of the Captain and crew to save him were unavailing. The deceased resided at Farr's Mills on the Humber, York, U. Canada, and had in his charge 14 barrels Ashes, marked S. H which, together with his valise, have been left with D. W. Eager: his body has not yet been found. His friends or relations will receive further information, by applying to Mr. Eager.—Canadian Courant.

Singular Disappointment.—The Steam Boat Lady Sherbrooke on her last trip from Quebec to this city, had on board amongst other cabin passengers a female who was known by a gentleman on board, and who had been brought up by a family at Quebec as their adopted child: upon being interrogated by the gentleman who was acquainted with her, he ascertained that she had deserted her paternal home, and placed herself under the protection of a man who was a steerage passenger. Enquirery was then made, who this man was, when he proved to be a trader from Saint Albans, U. S. where he has a wife and family. Upon this being communicated to her, and the absurdity of such an unpremeditated elopement, she consented to go ashore at Three Rivers and return to Quebec. When the boat reached that place, she was smuggled ashore, and as her enamoured swain was in a different part of the boat, he did not find out his disappointment till the boat had conveyed him "far from his desire" but his surprise and chagrin may be easily imagined when he found out the trick which had been played upon him.

NOTICE.

HIS MAJESTY'S Receiver General for the Province of Upper Canada, will be prepared to commence, on Monday the 14th day of June next, to pay to the Claimants for Losses sustained during the Late War with the U. States of America Twenty-five per cent on the Amounts Awarded by the Commission appointed under the Provincial Act of Parliament passed in the 4th Year of His Majesty's Reign, Cap. 4.

The List of Persons, and the sums awarded respectively, will appear in a future Gazette, as well as instructions for the Receipt of the Money, wherein is done through the means of Agency.

Executive Council Office
York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL,
Cl'k. Ex'v. Council.—17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Governor having recently exte[nd]ed their assistance to the class of emigrants which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shilling and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed the settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further, His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of extending any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.:

JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

COMMUNICATION.

FOR THE U. C. GAZETTE.

Niagara Falls, June 30th, 1824.

To the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette.

SIR,

From what is stated in Numbers Three and Four of a Paper lately Published at Queenston styled the "Colonial Advocate" it might be inferred that the Commissioners appointed to superintend the Erection of the Monument to the Memory of the late Major General Sir Isaac Brock, had been remiss in their duty, & that they had employed William Lyon Mackenzie to superintend in their stead—but such is not the case;—it is thus:—

Shortly after the death of one of the Commissioners (Colonel Nichol,) I consulted with the remaining Commissioner, Mr. Thomas Dickson, and with other gentlemen of the District, as to the propriety of having a procession of ceremony at laying the foundation—when it was agreed; from the recent death of Col. Nichol, and from the short time there was to invite over from York, the gentlemen from thence, to form the necessary Masonic procession; that the ceremony should be deferred until the Monument was finished and when the remains of the late Major General would be deposited in the Vault of the Monument.

The Contractors informed Mr. Hall, Engineer, superintending the Erection of the Monument and myself, that they would be ready to commence the Foundation in the first week in June; they were directed to proceed when ready, as there would be no ceremony at the laying of it. On the first day of June I had appointed to be at Burlington Beach as a Canal Commissioner, as you will see by Public Notice in your Gazette of May last, where I accordingly went, accompanied by Mr. Hall the Engineer.—On that day, the coast being clear, (the only remaining Commissioner Mr. Thomas Dickson from indisposition not being able to leave his room) Mr. Lyon Mackenzie, took upon himself unknown to the Commissioners, to perform his impertinent and officious ceremonies at the laying the foundation of the monument.

For the information of the public I have to state, that William Lyon Mackenzie's wide mouthed bottle, and his elder mouthed scurrilous paper are now removed from under the monument.

I am, Sir, your very obedient servant,

(Signed)

THOMAS CLARK.
Commissioner for Erecting a Monument to the memory of the late Maj. General Sir Isaac Brock.

Editorial Commentary.

THE DURHAM ELECTION is destined to become a subject of much deeper interest than could have been anticipated. After being on Monday last, the 2nd instant, for a general scrutiny—and after Mr. FOTHERGILL had been put to the expense and trouble of bringing forward a vast mass of evidence, as well as being provided with Counsel—the Returning Officer thought proper to deny the scrutiny he had, himself, appointed—and on his own responsibility struck off four of Mr. F's voters—and returned Mr. Boulton as duly elected.

Since the very extraordinary circumstances of this case will be brought before the Legislature as soon as possible after the meeting of Parliament;—and, as the conduct of some individuals, will be brought before the Cognizance of our Courts of Justice—we shall forbear going into further particulars at present otherwise than by saying that we doubt whether all the electioneering annals of England, since the first institution of Parliament, can furnish a parrallel to this case, which cannot fail to become memorable in the political history of this Province.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

Carlton Palace had narrowly escaped being destroyed by a fire which broke out in one of the sitting rooms, on the night of the 8th. The damage done in that room was irreparable, as four inestimable portraits were destroyed. They consisted of a beautiful full length portrait of the late Duke of Cumberland, painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds; another of the Duke of Clarence, by the celebrated Hoppner; another fine portrait of Louis XV. and another of the Duke of Orleans. This was supposed to be one of the finest pictures ever executed by Sir Joshua. A half length portrait of George II. and a full length portrait of the late Queen Caroline, were the only two saved.

A proposition had been discussed at a public meeting in London, for forming a canal between Bristol and the English Channel, large enough for ship navigation. The object is to avoid the dangerous passage around the Land's End, especially in winter. The cost is estimated at £1,200,000. The resolutions were adopted.

The King of England held a levee on the 5th June, at which were present all the cabinet and foreign ministers. After the levee his Majesty held an installation of the Order of the Bath. Sir John Oswald was invested with the Order of a Knight Grand Cross, in the room of the late Sir Thos. Maitland.

PROSPERITY OF ENGLAND.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman at Liverpool, dated May 22d, 1824.

"You would be surprised, should you return, to see poor old England in such a flourishing state,—no complaints, no wants, all in full work. Spinning and manufacturing, I think, is nearly doubled since you left, and I cannot see to what extent we shall not go. The South American and East India markets take off such abundance of goods, that no man living can set bounds to our prospects. Some very clever men think our manufactures only in their infancy, and I am inclined to think so too. The Town of Bolton, I think, is nearly doubled since you left us. Come and see; for no letter can convey to you the flourishing and prosperous state this country is now in!"

Extract of a letter dated Glasgow, May 29.

"We are going on most prosperously here. Four hundred houses are building. A house, bought for me two months ago for £2,000, was yesterday offered £2,200 for. All description of goods and wages are on the advance."

MASSACRE OF SIR CHARLES MCCARTHY.

BRIDGETOWN, (Barbadoes) May 27th, 1824.

By the arrival this morning of the brig Anne, from Cape Coast Castle, last from Accra, which place she left on the 23d April, the melancholy intelligence of the massacre of Sir CHARLES MCCARTHY and his gallant followers, has been confirmed by a gentleman. (Mr. Williams,) whose life was miraculously saved on this occasion: we say miraculously, because the Ashantees are a nation, whose victories are always followed by the blood of their captives, and in no one instance before was it ever known that they spared a single one. This gentleman was among the number who were knocked down with the back part of a sabre and left for dead upon the field, whilst they were preparing to sever the heads from the prisoners they had already taken. Mr. Williams having recovered from his stupor was immediately surrounded, and the knife was instantly applied to his throat, when one of the chiefs suddenly drew his sabre and swore "on the head of the Ashantee King," that "while it could be spared," it would remain where it was. The gentleman, (but he was present when they took off the head of Sir Charles McCarthy:—he states that after they had effected this (which they considered a great trophy of victory to be presented to their King,) shocking to the feelings of humanity to relate, they threw wrong bits heart from his breast, which they exposed to the mockery of their companions, and then deliberately proceeded to cut his joint from joint, until they had removed every limb from his body; after which they placed his body upon the head of a barrel and scorched it until it became as black as their own skins.

In having been reported at the Cape that a white man had been seen among the Ashantees since the battle, enquiry was immediately made as to the fact, through a private agent and the report found to be correct. The Governor of St. George D'El Mina the head quarters of the Dutch settlement, being upon good terms with the Ashantees, was applied to, who interested himself upon the occasion and they were induced by the offer of a ransom, (a profitable traffic hitherto unknown among them) to give him up, on the condition that he was neither to go to the Cape or to Europe: It appears however that they very soon repented of their bargain, or they were distrustful of the Dutch Officer, for they made an additional demand that four Ashantees should remain constantly with him as a guard: In other respects he has been rendered very comfortable by the hospitality and kind attention of the Governor. Mr. Williams having reached the castle perfectly naked and otherwise in a deplorable condition. Two gentlemen of the party, merchants, seeing the dreadful havoc among their unfortunate companions and the awful ceremonies they were undergoing, finding all attempts at escape fruitless, each drew a pistol from his belt and shot himself. It is added that previous to Sir Charles being overpowered, he received two or three wounds, one of which was said to be mortal. The battle took place on the 21st January, (as before stated by us) at two o'clock P. M. and lasted until sun-set, when Sir Charles finding his ammunition expended, made a desperate charge upon them; but was immediately borne down by legions, when the general massacre commenced.

A SKETCH.—By LORD BYRON.

"Honest!—Honest Iago!
"If that thou be an a devil, I cannot kill thee."

SHAKESPEARE.

BORN in the garret, in the kitchen bred,
Promoted thence to deck her mistress' head;
Next—(quick gradation from the toilet)—to her waist,
And from its wages only to be guess'd—
Raised from the toilet to the table,—where
Her wandering batters wait behind her chair.
With eye unmoved, and forehead unabash'd,
She dines from off the plate she lately wash'd.
Quick with the taste, and ready with the lie—
The genial confidante, and general spy—
Who could, ye gods! her next employment guess—
An ivory lodge's earliest governess!
She taught the child to read, and taught so well,
That she herself, by teaching, learn'd to spell.
An adept next in penmanship she grows,
As many a tradesman's slander daily shows:
What she had made the pupil of her art,
None know—but that high Soul secured the heart,
And panted for the truth it could not hear,
With longing breast and undeluded ear.
Full well was reservation by that youthful mind,
Which Flattery foul'd not—Baseness could not blind,
Deceit infect not—near contagion soil—
Indulgence weaken—nor Example spoil—
Yet suffer'd secret grief her step to look down
On dauntless talents with a pitying frown—
Nor Genius swell—nor Beauty render vain—
Nor Envy ruffle to retaliate pain—
Nor Fortune change—Pride's cold mien—nor Passion bow,
Nor wit, nor even austerity—till now.
Serenely purest of her sex that live,
But wanting one sweet weakness—to forgive.
Too shock'd at faults her soul can never know,
She deems that all should be like her below;
Foe to all vice, yet hardly Virtue's friend,
For Virtue pardons those she would amend.
But to the theme—now laid aside too long
The baleful burthen of this honest song—
Though all her former functions are no more,
She rules the circle which she served before:
If mothers—none know why—before her quake;
If daughters dread he for the mother's sake;
If early bachs—whose false hinks, which lead

At times the loftiest to the meanest mind,
Have given her power too deeply to intwine
The angry essence of her deadly will;
If like a snake she steal within your walls,
Still the black slime betray her as she crawls;
If like a viper to the heart she wind,
And leave the venom there she did not find;
What marvel that this hag of hatred works
Eternal evil intent as she lurks,
To make the Pandemonium where she dwells,
And reign the Hecate of domestic hells?
Skill'd by a touch to deepen scandal's tints
With all the kind mendacity of hints
While mingling truth with falsehood—sneers with smiles;
A thread of candour with a web of wiles;
A plain blunt show of briefly-spoken seeming,
To hide her blondless heart's soul-harden'd scheming;
A tip of lies—a face form'd to conceal;
And, without feeling, mask at all who feel:
Within, with murk the Gorgon would disown;
A cheek of parchment and an eye of stone.
Mark, how the channels of her yellow blood
Ooze to her skin, and stagnate there to mud,
Cased like the centipede in saffron mail,
Or darker grayness of the scorpion's scale—
(For drawn from reptiles only may we trace Congenial colours to that soul or face)—
Look on her features! and should her mind
Be in a mirror of itself defined:
Look on the picture! deem it not o'er charged;
There is no trait which might not be enlarged;
Yet true to "Nature's journeyment," who made
This monster when their mistress left off trade,
This female dog star of her little sky,
Where all beneath her influence droop or die.
Oh! wretch without a tear—without a thought,
Save joy above the ruin thou hast wrought—
The time shall come, nor long remote, when thou
Shalt feel her more than thou hadst not now;
Feel for thy vile self loving self in vain,
And turn thee howling in unpitied pain.
May the stung nerves of soul and sense delight
Back on thy bosom with reflected blight!
And make thee in thy leprosy of mind
As loathsome to thyself as to mankind!
Till all thy self-created sins infest,
Black—as by will for others would create:
Till thy hard heart be calcined into dust,
And thy soul ashier in its hideous crust.
Oh! may thy grave be sleepless as thine bed,
Yet wishin'd long as life, with every plague outspread!
Then, when thou foin wouldst weary heaven with prayer,
Look to thine earthly victims, and despair!
Down to the dust!—and, as thou rott'st away,
Even worms shall perish on thy poisonous prey!
But for the love I bore, and still must bear,
To her thy malice from all ties would tear—
Thy name—thy human name—to every eye
The climax of all scorn should hang on high,
Exalted o'er thy less abhor'd compeers,
And festering in the infamy of years.

From the Norfolk Herald of July 17.

We insert with great pleasure the following striking and exemplary instance of juvenile heroism, communicated by a Suffolk Correspondent.

Remarkable instance of intrepidity in a youth.

Some five or six boys were standing on Jordan's wharf a few days ago, one of whom, (John Driver, about 12 years of age,) having gone too near the brink of the wharf, accidentally slipped it in eight or ten feet water, and, as he could not swim, would instantly have perished in that situation, but for the friendly aid and assistance which he received from one of his schoolmates, (Josiah, son of Thos P. Smith, Esq. of this place,) who has not yet attained his eighth year. The intrepid youth, perfectly regardless of the imminent danger necessarily attending an undertaking of this sort, and thoughtless of the great inconvenience of his clothes quickly leaped into the briny element, determined to rescue his companion or be buried with him in a watery grave; after great mystical exertion on the part of little Smith, he succeeded in reaching the shore, swimming with one arm, and buoying his almost exhausted schoolmate with the other. Thus by his heroic and exemplary interposition, he has succeeded in restoring a fellow being from an untimely end

Much credit, I conceive, is here due to our little hero, as his juvenility alone necessarily precludes a suspicion of his having been actuated by any other than the purest motives, a friendship and love that could possibly flow from the philanthropic breast.

Singular Love Case.—A man by the name of Smith, cut off the ears of one Taylor, in Nassau, New Providence, he was tried and convicted under the statute of Mayhem, which is a capital offence; an arrest of judgment was moved, on the ground that the ear was not a "member of the body," as referred to in the statute.

The Court took a week to consider, and gave a learned opinion, shewing clearly that the ear was a member of the body, and in citing authorities, the following were referred to from St. Paul, in his first epistle to the Corinthians:

14. For the body is not one member, but many.

15. If the foot shall say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it not therefore of the body?

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 — But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.

Sentence of death was then solemnly pronounced by the Court.—N. Sirocco.

Anatomical Phenomena —The body of a gentleman, who died in this place a few days since, was opened by some members of the faculty, for inspection; from which the following remarkable visceral transposition was discovered: the heart was found in the right cavity of the breast, with the situation of its auricles and ventricles reversed, and the aorta or great artery, arching towards the right instead of the left side, descending the spine in the usual course of the vena cava, which last, were situated where the aorta should have been. The great lobe of the liver occupied the left hypochondriac region, with the small lobe extending a little to the right. The spleen was found in the right side, where the liver should have been situated. The stomach was reversed with regard to its position, having the larger curvature on the right, the small curvature and the pyloric orifice on the left. The intestines were likewise changed in their order of arrangement, the deodenus commencing, and lying principally on the left side, and the segmoid flexure of the colon on the right.

This examination was extended far enough, to satisfy those present, that this anomally was a lusus naturæ of the remotest embryotic origin, and could not possibly have resulted from disease, at any period of his life. This gentleman died in his thirtieth year, and is said to have been remarkably healthy and athletic until two or three years past, during which time, he had suffered much from disarrangement of the liver and spleen, probably produced by his removal from a northern to a southern climate, of which disease he ultimately died.—Louisville Post.

CONCILIATION OF IRELAND.

TO——ROBERTSON, ESQ. M. P.

Concluded.

These results cannot be attained by Catholic Emancipation alone, still less by those futile measures which are now in progress; if the mind of the nation be not well directed, and the public will made to cooperate with the Legislature, the disease may be repressed, or shifted, but no renovating principle of health will be infused into the frame of society.

Catholic Emancipation will not remedy the evils of the tithe system, it will not allay the fervour of religious zeal—the perpetual clashing of two Churches, one elevated, the other fallen, both high-minded, perhaps intolerant; it will not check the rancorous animosities with which different sects assail each other; it will not remove all suspicion of partiality in the Government were Antonius himself the Viceroy; it will not create that sympathy between the different orders in the state which is ever mainly dependant on religion, nor produce that unlimited confidence between man and man, which is the strongest foundation on which public welfare can repose, as well as the most certain pledge of a nation's prosperity.—Withal Catholic Emancipation is a great public measure, and of itself not only would effect much, but open a passage to ulterior measures, which a prudent Legislature could without difficulty effect.

The Union of the Churches, however, which you have had the singular merit of suggesting to the Commons of the United Kingdom, would together and at once effect a total change in the dispositions of men; it would bring all classes to co-operate zealously in promoting the prosperity of Ireland, and in securing her allegiance for ever to the British Throne. The question of Emancipation would be swallowed up in the great enquiry, how Ireland could be enriched and strengthened, and in place of the Prime Minister devising arguments to screen an odious oppression, and reconcile an insurrection Act of five and twenty years duration, with the Habeas Corpus Act and Magna Charta, we would find him receiving the plaudits of the Senate, the thanks of the Sovereign, and the blessings of millions for the favours which he could so easily dispense.

This union, on which so much depends, is not as you have justly observed, so difficult as it appears to many; and the present time is peculiarly well calculated for attempting, at least, to carry it into effect.

It is not difficult; for in the discussions which were held, and the correspondence which occurred on this subject early in the last century, as well as that in which Archbishop Tillotson was engaged, as well as the others which were carried on between Bossuet and Leibnitz, it appeared that the points of agreement between the Churches, were numerous, those on which the parties hesitated few, and apparently not the most important. The effort which was then made, was not attended with success, but its failure was owing more to Princes than to Priests, more to State policy than to a difference of belief. But the same reasons which at that period disappointed the hopes of every good Christian in Europe would at present operate favourably. For what interest can England now have, which is opposed to such a Union, and what nation or church in the Universe can have stronger motives for desiring it than Great Britain, if by it she could preserve her Church Establishment, perfect her internal policy, and secure her external dominion.

The time is favourable; for the Government is powerful and at peace, the Pope is powerless and anxious to conciliate, the Irish Catholics are wearied and fatigued, exceedingly desirous of repose; the established religion is almost frittered away, and the Monarchy, a thing unprecedented in a Christain state, is left in one country with only the staff of the Church, to use an expression of Mr. Hume, and in the other with less than a moiety of the people attached to the hierarchy. Add to this the improvement of men's minds during the last century, the light and liberality which distinguish the present, the revival of Christian piety since the overthrow of the French Revolution, and the disposition of even religious disputants to conciliate and explain.

In Ireland, I am confident that, notwithstanding the ferment which now prevails, a proposition, such as you have made, if adopted by Government, would be heartily embraced. The Clergy of the establishment are unpopular, and they feel it; they are without flocks, and every professional man wishes for employment; their property is attacked, and even endangered, for the State has touched it, and the people have no respect for it. The Dissenters have encroached on them, and the Catholic Clergy have despoiled them, in many places, of their flocks. The Catholic Laity, as I before mentioned, are tired of their degradation; they are wearied in pursuit of freedom; they love their country, and are anxious for repose. Their Clergy, without, I believe, an exception, would make every possible sacrifice to effect a union; I myself would most cheerfully, and without fee, pension, emolument, or hope, resign the office which I hold, if by doing so, I could in any way contribute to the union of my brethren, and the happiness of my country.

The Proprietors and Capitalists in Ireland, are affected at the prospect which lies before them, and are if not blind to self-interest as well as dead to patriotism, anxious to establish peace and security amongst us.—The Government has no interest in preserving disunion, unless for the purpose of securing its power, and should it find an honourable and safe substitute for so detestable and precarious a system, it should be hailed and greeted if it did not embrace it.

The King who rules over us is liberal, wise and enlightened, beyond any of his predecessors; and as he is at the head of the State, so he has been for some time through life in bestowing his royal countenance and support on whatever could contribute to the honour or religion, to the good of his subjects, or to the glory of his reign.—Whatever, then, time and circumstances can contribute to a great and good undertaking seems now to favour a project for the union of Christians too long divided — Had they been so favourable in the sixteenth century, the separation which produced such numberless calamities, would certainly have been prevented.

It may not become so humble an individual as I am to hint even at a plan for effecting so great a purpose as the union of Catholics and Protestants in one great body of Christians; but as the difficulty does not appear to me to be at all proportioned to the magnitude of the object to be attained, I would presume to state, that if Protestant and Catholic Divines of learning, and a conciliatory character, were summoned by the Crown, to ascertain the points of agreement and difference between the Churches, and that the result of their conferences were made the basis of a project to be treated on between the heads of the Church of Rome and England, the result might be more favourable than at present would be anticipated.

The chief points to be discussed are, the Canon of the Sacred Scriptures, Faith, Justification, the Mass, the Sacraments, the Authority of Tradition, of Councils, of the Pope, the Celibacy of the Clergy, Language of the Liturgy, Invocation of Saints respect for images, prayers for the Dead.

On most of these it appears to me that there is no essential difference between Catholics and Protestants; the existing diversity of opinion arises, in most cases, from certain forms of words which admit of satisfactory explanation, or from the ignorance or misconception which ancient prejudice and ill will produce and strengthen, but which could be removed, they are pride and points of honour, which keep us divided on many subjects, not a love of Christian humility charity, and truth

It should be the duty, as it is obviously the interest of the ruling powers, to provide for the happiness of the people, by enlightening there minds and curbing their passions; not by reproachful feelings and coercive laws, but by means suited to their real wants; and if through the wisdom of Parliament and the efforts of Government, the Churches of these countries could be united, a new era of happiness would commence in our history. The laws of this country could be equalized, the most perfect confidence would prevail between the Government and the subjects; their natural protectors would be restored to a generous and warm-hearted people; the aristocracy would become what it never has been in Ireland—a link between the Prince and the peasant; industry would be protected; capital would flow into the country; all the resources of the soil, climate, genius and talent of the nation would be called into life and activity: the union of the countries would be consolidated, and Great Britain would not only be Queen of the ocean, but Mistress of the world.

Hoping that you will again call the attention of Parliament to the consideration of this important subject.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient humble Servent,
J. DOYLE.

Carlow, May 13, 1824.

TO—— ROBERTSON, ESQ. M. P.

SIR,—The public mind being much occupied with the consideration of the Rev. Dr. Doyle's Letter to you, on the practicability of a union between the Churches of England and Rome; I feel it will not be unbecoming in a Protestant Divine to endeavour to remove the persuasion which is so universally entertained, that the union he contemplates is visionary in the extreme. The history of the attemps which was made in the year 1718, to unite the English and Gallic Churches, will clearly prove the practicability of the measure, and that the failure of "the effort then made was more owing to Princes than Priests—to State policy, than to a difference of belief."

When the Pope (Clement XI.) had issued the Bull, Unigenitus, condemning Paschasius Quenel's translation of the New Testament, a considerable number of the French Clergy took offence at the proceeding and appealed from the Bull to a general Council. At this period, Wake, Archbishop of Canterbury, was informed by Beauvoir, Chaplain to the Earl of Stair, the English Ambassador at Paris, that a strong desire existed on the part of the French Clergy to effect a union with the Church of England. Frequent letters passed upon the subject between the Archbishop and the celebrated Dr. Du Pin. These letters were all read in the Sorbonne, and at last Du Pin sent the result of a commonitorium or advice, relating to the method of uniting the Churches as read and approved by that body. "The Doctors of the Sorbonne having examined the Articles of the Church of England, wholly approve in this commonitorium of the five first; would not make the 6th an occasion of quarrelling; wholly approve of the 7th, 8th, and 9th; agree, if they rightly understand it to the 10th; agree to the 11th, as explained by the 12th; would not dispute about the 13th; do not entirely agree with the 14th; make no objection to the 16th, 17th, 18th, and 19th, and that it was needless to say that all churches might err; consent to the 20th, and with some modification to the 21st; explain away a good deal of the controverted points in the 22d; approve of the 23d; do not complain of the 24th; in speaking of the 25th; insist on the acknowledgement of the five Romish Sacraments; approve of the 26th, and 27th articles; and endeavour to express the doctrine of transubstantiation (which word they purpose to leave out) in a kind of ambiguous and accommodating manner; are for mutual toleration on the 30th; are not disposed to concession on the 31st; will not quarrel on the 32d; wholly agree with the 33d, and 34th; suspend their judgement, as they had not read the Homilies, on the 35th; as to the 36th, do not deny the validity of orders in the church of England, admit the 37th; but insist on a primacy in the Pope; approve of the 38th, and 39th Articles; and see neither in the discipline nor worship of the Church of England any thing amiss."

The correspondence on this subject soon transpired, and, owing to the complaints of the Jesuits, the ambition of the Abbe Du Bois, the death of Du Pin, and above all, the intrigues of the Spanish party at the court of France, the project of union was defeated. —Thus, Sir, may we be led to believe, that if it were attempted by men of liberal and enlightened minds, heartily disposed to effect a union between the Churches of England and Rome in this country, that union might be accomplished. The day of its consummation would be the happiest that ever shone on our unhappy country. Instead of its being the theatre of distraction, poverty, and bloodshed, it would be the scene of peace and happiness, of civil and religious concord. The generous and ardent temper of our countrymen, which now, perverted by bigotry, or a sense of wrong, is the occasion of our being held up as a barbarous and unwarily and irreclaimable race, would then find a field for generous and patriotic enterprise in the improvement of all our natural advantages. England would for our importance, would appreciate and caltivate us. Enjoying the full blessings of the British Constitution, the subjects of the Queen of Nations, free and a united people, we would indeed be happy. It would be man's interest to perpetuate discord; and we, of the same country, worshipping the same God, through the same Redeemer, should not dread each other worse than a foreign enemy.—The benevolent Christian, the enlightened patriot, the liberal statesman, of each persuasion, may yet prove the project to be more than the dream of an enthusiast. Had I, Sir, many lives to lose, I would cheerfully lay them down to see that day. I would then say with Simeon, "Lord now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

I have the honour to remain, &c,

THE POLAR EXPEDITION.—Extract of a letter, dated Thurso, May 31

"The Hecla and Fury passed through the Pentland Frith yesterday afternoon, with their colours flying. They had a fine favorable breeze, and as it still continues, it is supposed that this evening these brave men will, for a time, bid farewell to the haven of their native isle.

"They were piloted through the frith by a fishing smack, the master of which reports that the crews of both vessels were in great spirits, and most of them also could write, gladly embraced the opportunity of his returning to the shore, to forward a few farewell lines to their relations and friends.

"An official despatch for the Admiralty, and a bag of letters from each ship, which were sent to the custom house here, accompanied by a polite card from Capt Parry, have, in terms of he request, been forwarded by the mail, agreeable to their several addresses. The impression on the seals of many of the seamen's letters was, "Though lost to sight to memory dear," a motto no doubt suggested to the feelings of their friends at home, who from this time must feel a deep anxiety for the success and safety of these brave and intrepid adventurers, a feeling in which their countrymen in general must also participate."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

From the Commercial Advertiser.

NEW YORK, JULY 8th.

The packet ship Alexander, Captain Baldwin, arrived yesterday at Philadelphia from Liverpool, bringing London papers of the 9th June, and Liverpool of the 8th.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A grand entertainment has been given to the King and Queen of the Sandwich Islands, by Mr. Canning. Their Majesties evinced much satisfaction at their reception, and with every thing they took place. Upwards of 200 persons of the first rank and fashion were invited to meet them, including their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, Prince Leopold, most of the Cabinet Ministers, and nearly the whole of the Corps Diplomatique. Their Majesties were attended by the Hon. Mr. Byng, who was appointed to attend them while they remain in that country.

The opposition in steam boat navigation, in some parts of Great Britain, exceeds that of the North River and Brunswick boats. The fare of a passage from the Clyde to Belfast, is only five pence! In consequence, great crowds of passengers throng the boats.

The 90th Regiment, now at Manchester, is to embark for Halifax.

Independence of South America—The Courier says the question of the recognition of South American Independence continues most assiduously to occupy public attention. We can venture to assure our readers, that on the part of the present session of Parliament, a communication will be made on this question to the House of Commons by Mr. Canning.

The Lord Chancellor is supposed to be the most opposed to the recognition of the South American Governments. He has refused an injunction on the part of the Colombian Government, to perform a contract made with Jeremy Bentham. He says "I can take no notice—no notice of the Colombian Government."

A large meeting has been held at Liverpool, to petition the Government to acknowledge the independence of the South American states.—The Mayor, Charles Lawrence, Esq. presided in addition to His Majesty, many forth the great commercial advantages to be derived from the measure, was adopted.

Parliamentary—Mr. Brougham brought forward his motion relative to the case of the unfortunate missionary Smith, on the 31st June. An interesting debate ensued, which was adjourned over, until after the holidays—many gentlemen who wished to take part in it having left town.

The project of the Great West India Company is abandoned, the majority refusing to charter it. The bill for incorporating the Great Marine Insurance Company, has passed. This Company are to give a bonus to the government of three hundred thousand pounds sterling!! The act for the better regulation and management of pilots, for the conducting of ships and vessels into and out of the port of Liverpool, has received the royal assent.

FRANCE.

The only articles of intelligence, of any importance, from France, is the following, from a London paper of June 6. "An express from Paris arrived yesterday, bringing the Etoile on Friday, from which it appears that the French Ministers have been unexpectedly beaten in the Chamber of Peers, where the financial law was rejected by a majority considerably larger than would have been anticipated. What makes this rejection the more remarkable was, that it was preceded by a speech from M. De Villele, in which he had declared his intention to establish an institution, to assign annuitants of or below £40 sterling yearly dividend, to invest their capital at a fixed rate of interest. This proposition proved of no avail, and the project was rejected by a majority of one hundred and twenty to one hundred and fourteen. All the other propositions, founded on the first were likewise rejected to the same end, and rejected, and the Chamber adjourned without fixing the day of its next meeting. The rejection of the project had occasioned an immediate fall in the rents of about 2 per cent. At the time the express left, they were down at twenty six 1023 10c. They had been at 106f. 25c. We believe, however, that the best informed parties do not apprehend this result."

SPAIN.

Letters from Madrid of the 20th ult. state that the decree of amnesty has excited an intense sensation in that capital. The royalist volunteers are by no means satisfied with the exceptions numerous as they are, for they hate the very name of mercy; but steps have been taken to keep them in order. Those persons who are allowed the measure of purification have been informed that they must present their claims within 15 days from the publication of the amnesty, on pain of forfeiting the provision made in their favour. A committee, formed from Ex-Members of the Inquisition, is sitting day and night to make out a catalogue of prohibited books; and an order has been issued for all persons who were formerly employed under the French administration, and who are now without occupation, to quit Spain without delay. £2,000 more than I now desire, and

SWEDEN.

Two proclamations have been issued by the King of Sweden dated 20th April, the one placing British produce, and American manufactures imported into Sweden, in British vessels, upon the same footing with respect to duties of customs, as if imported in Swedish vessels; and the other placing British vessels, in respect to duties of every description, upon a perfect equality with Swedish vessels.

It was confidently believed at Genoa, on the 22d May, that the Dey of Algiers has offered any concession to England, provided a new Consul was appointed, as the present one had made himself personally obnoxious to the Government.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE WANTS OF A LADY OF FORTUNE.

The following paragraphs are extracted from Miss Aikins Life of King James.

"In the year 1610, died Sir John Spencer, formerly Lord Mayor of London, respecting whom some circumstances have been recorded worthy of notice, as illustrative of manners and private life. He was perhaps the richest citizen of his time, but the amount of his wealth cannot be ascertained, as it was vehemently stated at three, five and eight hundred thousand pounds. His only son and heir was Sir William, who married the eldest daughter of Lord Compton, afterwards created Earl of Northampton. At the funeral of Sir John, about one thousand persons followed in mourning cloaks and gowns. The amount of the inheritance seems to have exceeded all the expectations of Lord Compton: inasmuch that on the first news of it, either through the vehement apprehension of joy for such a plentiful accession, or of carriage how to take it up and dispose of it, he became distracted and so continued for a considerable length of time. It would probably have been well for his recovery that his wife addressed to him a letter, which may be regarded as the most perfect exposition we possess of the wants and wishes of a lady of quality in the age of James First.

"My sweet life, now I have declared to you my mind for the settling your estate, I suppose that it were best for me to betake myself to London, where I shall either be more assisted for me, I pray and beseech you to get me your most kind and loving wife the sum of £2,000 quarterly to be paid Also, I would be glad that all manner, have £600 quarterly to be paid, for the preferment of gentlemen's sons, both of the one and the other sex, if you will not, spare of these said women, that will have for maintenance of their children at home. Also, I will have six or eight gentlemen; and I will have my two coaches, one lined with velvet for myself, with four very fine horses; and coach for my women, lined with cloth and laced with gold, other lined with scarlet and laced with silver, with four good horses. Also, I will have two good coachmen, one for my coach the other for my women. Also, at any time when I travel, I will be allowed not only coaches but spare horses for me and my women, but I will have such carriages as shall be fitting for all orderly, not pestering my things with my women's, nor theirs with either chambermaids, nor theirs with wash maids.

Also, for laundresses, when I travel, I will have them sent away before with the carriages, to see all safe, and the chamber maids I will have go before, that the chamber may be ready, sweet and clean. Also, for that it is indecent to crowd up myself with my gentleman usher in my coach, I will have him to have a convenient horse to attend me either in city or country. And I must have two footmen. And for my desire is, that you defray all charges for me. And for my self beside my yearly allowance, I would have twenty gowns of apparel, six of them excellent good ones, eight of them for the country and six other of them very excellent good ones Also, I would have to put to my purse, £2,000, and £200, and so, you to pay my debts. Also, I would have £6,000 to buy me jewels and £4,000 to buy me a pearl chain.

"Now, seeing I have been and am so reasonable unto you, I pray you do find my children apparel, and their schooling, and all my servants, one good woman, their wages. Also, I will have all my houses furnished, and my lodging chambers to be suited with all such furniture as is fit; as beds, stools, chairs, tainted cushions, carpets, silver warming pans, cupboards of plate, fair hangings and such like. So for my drawing chambers in all houses, I will have them delicately furnished, both with hangings, couch, canopy, glass, carpet, chairs, cushions, or things thereunto belonging. Also, my desire is, that ye pay your debts, build up Ashley house, and parcks and do so many, as you love God, to my lord who would have all, perhaps your life from

LADIES TAKING THE VEIL.

The following is a description of the ceremony which takes place at the time of ladies taking the veil in France, and is given by an eye witness:

"When I was in the capital of this country, I had an opportunity of being present at the time when a lady took the White Veil, or in other words, formed a resolution to retire from the world, and shut herself up in a cloister. It may be interesting to give a short account of the forms observed upon this occasion. In the first place, this person, who was young was dressed in her secular attire, as it may be denominated, and placed in an arm chair in front of the altar; she was immediately surrounded by her friends, and those whom curiosity had attracted to the spot to be spectators of the solemnity. A Priest ascended a temporary pulpit, placed at the corner of the altar, and in front of the lady. At this time he delivered a discourse in which he pointed out the vanities of the world, the nature of the obligation she had undertaken to fulfil and the beneficial effects which would be derived from a life of contemplation in retirement. On this being ended she appeared under a considerable degree of agitation and embarrassment, particularly at the moment when her father gave her his hand, and led her from the seat out of the church. From thence she entered a contiguous convent, where there was a window at the side of the altar of the church secured by a close iron grating, and here the fair one appeared to be most completely metamorphosed.—Her hair had been cut off, she was stripped of her dress, and robed in the costume of the monastery where the spectators of the previous scene were permitted to see her through the iron bars. At this particular moment the scene appeared to be of a nature tragical and affecting. I observed her accompanied by a number of nuns, whose faces were concealed, with her own, in veils, who walked in slow procession round the place, preceded by one of them carrying a crucifix, when a mournful chaunt of praise took place by the whole, in which they were joined by some of the spectators. This being ended, a curtain was drawn over the grating. Although a promise of this nature is made after the proposed nun is allowed to deliberate a year from the period of the wish she expressed to seclude herself in the convent, yet should she enter this establishment, still there is a locus penitentiæ in one view attached to the obligation as to the white veil, since at the expiration of one year after having received it, she has it in her power to depart, and return to the world. During this year however, which may be considered a probationary state, a marked attention is paid to the young Nun, in order to induce her to go through another formality, namely, that of taking the black veil. Should she assume this, it constitutes a most effectual barrier to her quitting the Convent, and she is shut up in it for life"

HINTS TO FEMALES.—A London paper speaking of the ladies says: "We have of ourselves a still greater fault to find with a revival of the system of high pressure as an engineer would call it; we mean the odious screwing in of the waist, now springing up. If women fancy it graceful, they are woefully deceived, and if they do not find it prejudicial to their health, why, we are deceived and not they.

We believe it is owing entirely to the ease and freedom of the female dress for the last few years, that our young girls are all so healthy, so well formed, and so forward in their growth. All this will be checked by most unnatural screwing in and torturing of the body.

To talk about health to a girl in oppos tion to fashion, we fancy is useless: and we will take up the screwing system upon its effect, which is to make fat elderly ladies look like oil jars, and young ones like hour glasses. Four or five years ago we had fools among our men, so supremely fools, as to squeeze in their waists, and this during the time the ladies had abandoned their torture, as if they were wearing out the corsets of their female relations, and to strengthen this supposition, as soon as these persons have abandoned the folly, our fair country women adopt it—a folly which has not the merit of being either pleasant or becoming.

Simplicity in dress is its greatest beauty—artificiality becomes distortion, and we seriously recommend an immediate abandonment of the vice in question; assuring our fair readers that ladies unlike ships, are much best "when slack in stays."

St. Thomas's, 22d July, 1824.

The triumph of independence in Middlesex is complete; Mr. Rolph and Captain Matthews have been returned by a large majority, which would have been doubled or trebled had the poll been kept open but one day longer; and such were the feelings of the Northern Townships towards Capt. Matthews, (where he is best known) that if location tickets had been permitted to vote (as they have hitherto done), he would have had at least 500 plumpers to have added to his already overwhelming majority.

The true character of that gentleman begins to appear, tho' nothing has been kept untried, by a few malicious and interested individuals to destroy it.

Capt. Matthews was escorted to his residence in Lobo, a distance of 20 or 30 miles, by the members elect of Oxford, his worthy fellow member elect, by the Chairman of the Court of Quarter Sessions in the London District, and by as gallant as numerous, and independent a troop of honest honourable and loyal men, as perhaps ever trotted that distance together.

Ancaster 13th July, 1824.

MR. FOTHERGILL,

SIR,

By inserting in your very valuable Paper the following authentic account of the ceremony of laying the Corner Stone of the New Church, now erecting in this village, you will confer a favour on the parties interested, and on the inhabitants of this part of the country in general.

Few villages on the Continent of America have increased within the last two years, equal to that of Ancaster, which is now about to be further improved by the addition of a very handsome frame Church, to be dedicated indiscriminately to the worshipers of God, of every Christian profession without distinction of sect or party—with this reservation, viz: That the resident minister of the Episcopal Church is at all times to have the right of preaching in it once a day, and oftener if no minister of a different persuasion is provided. Twenty five hundred Dollars has already been subscribed, the building contracted for and the preparations for raising it being in such a state of forwardness as to admit of the corner stone being laid. The 7th July was the day appointed for the ceremony, and the Masonic Union Lodge of this village, by permission of the Deputy Grand Master and of the Church Committee was appointed to officiate upon the occasion, a public dinner was ordered at Rousen's Hotel, upwards of 200 invitations were issued; Col. T. G. Simons and Col. James Crooks, Esq. request of the Committee of management, consented to act, the former as Marshall and the later as President of the day.

The day was remarkably fine, and the occasion being altogether a novel one in this part of the country, a great number of persons was assembled to join in the procession, which being arranged under the direction of Col. Simons, moved off to the ground precisely at two o'clock; preceded by a part of the Military Band of the 76th Regt. with the Lieut. Governor, with his Characteristic kindness—a kindness which has inspired every one liberated upon this occasion with the most grateful sentiments towards His Excellency—had ordered to attend upon this occasion.

Upon the arrival of the procession on the ground a solemn Masonic air was played, and the ceremony of laying the Corner Stone was performed agreeable to the rites of the fraternity; several pieces of Coin and the following scroll were deposited.

After the ceremony was performed, an excellent and very appropriate oration was delivered by John M. A. Cameron, Esq. of Dundas, in which the progress of Masonry was traced from the earliest ages to the present period, and its benefits to society depicted in a manner that evidently delighted the fraternity—inspired the uninitiated with a high opinion of the Masonic Institution and pleased every one.

After the return of the procession, about an hundred persons sat down to an excellent dinner, which had been prepared under an awning, on a lawn adjoining the hotel, the band playing "the Roast Beef of Old England." After the cloth was removed, the following toasts were proposed by the President (Col. Crooks,) and drank with great applause.

The bodies of Donald M'Kay, Esq. and Captain M'Alpine, had been brought from St. Paul's Island; nine were buried on the spot, and of the fifteen more no traces were found. The loss of so many valuable lives, of which we gave an account in Thursday's paper, had created an unusual gloom in Charlotte Town. York, 14th April, 1824.

NOTICE is hereby given, to Jabez Johnson, or his Representative, to make good any claim he may have to Lot Number Two, in the Seventh Con-session of the Township of Louth, in the District of Niagara within six months from this date, in default of which, the Lot will be otherwise disposed of.

By order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL.
Clk. Ex'v. Council. 17—6m.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTANANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shilling and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one reason seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty, in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND

WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinaf ter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

Liverpool, June 8.

MR. GRAHAM'S AERIAL EXCURSION.

On Wednesday last, Mr. Graham made another ascent in his balloon, accompanied by Mrs. Graham. The place fixed upon to ascend from was White Conduit House, near London—a fatal result of the recent attempt of Mr. Harris, had thrown a doubt on the present a degree of interest which would not have otherwise attended it, and the number of spectators was consequently great. From 11 o'clock in the morning, great crowds were hastening to the scene of action, and by 3 the gardens were nearly filled with respectable company, and the concourse of people outside was immense. In every direction, as far as the eye can reach, the crowd was a dense as it was possible to be, and the roofs of the houses which commanded a view of the gardens were covered with spectators. About a quarter before 5 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Graham came from the tavern and ascended the stage amid loud plaudits. Mr. Graham was dressed in a suit of black, and wore a cap, and his lady was attired in a pelisse and bonnet of white satin. She seemed in delightful health, but perfectly collected, and conversed cheerfully with those about her while the final preparations were making. At twenty-five minutes past 5 Mr. and Mrs. G. entered the car, and the suspending cords having been brought up and lashed to the balloon, (his friends meanwhile holding it down) and every thing being ready, Mr. G. gave the word, and the balloon was let go. It ascended only five or six yards, and then lowered nearly to the ground, and there were apprehensions that it would come in contact with a row of houses adjoining the garden; but a long rope had been attached to the car which was held by those upon the stage, and they pulled with all their strength, cleared it of the houses, and it ascended speedily and majestically. Mr. and Mrs. Graham stood up in the car, and bowed repeatedly to the crowd below, and the cheering was loud and hearty. The balloon proceeded rather slowly in a south-westerly direction, and it had not arrived at a great altitude when Mr Graham discharged a quantity of ballast, and the ke repeated several times before the balloon disappeared from view. It is impossible to conceive a finer ascent.

The Æronauts descended at Cuckfield, in Sussex, forty miles from London, at five minutes before seven o'clock, having been exactly one hour and twenty minutes on their voyage. Soon after starting, they got into a dense cloud, which had such an effect on them as almost to prevent their hearing each other talk They alighted in a field belonging to Mr. Browne, a farmer, who rendered every assistance. The thermometer, at a quarter past six, was at freezing point, and at half past six so low as 20. They arrived in Pelland Street at 3 o'clock on Thursday morning, from whence they instantly proceeded to White Conduit Gardens. Both Mr. and Mrs. Graham were in good health and spirits.

It is a singular coincidence, that at the moment Mr. Graham's balloon passed over Tottenham court road, the mourners of Mr. Harris were returning from St. James's burial ground, where they had just deposited the remains of that unfortunate adventurer.

In an account given by Mr Graham of his voyage he says; I need not say any thing concerning Mrs. Graham on this occasion.—Her conduct on entering the car was quite sufficient to prove the pleasure I experienced from her company and remarks during the voyage. The length of line to the grapling-iron was two hundred and seventy feet. Mrs. G. looking over the car observed the grapple looked about the size of a small knife.—The greatest height we reached appeared to be, by the gauge, two miles and a half. Mrs Graham threw over the car an empty ballast bag; after this bad descended a considerable distance, it became inflated, and ascended to the level of the car, and remained with us till we descended, being at one time reached as high as the equator of the balloon. After quitting the car, Mrs. Graham wrote five slips of paper, and fastened them to the pigeons we had taken up, but the heavy storm that prevailed at the time of the flight, prevented them reaching their homes as soon as was expected.

London, June 11.

LAND EXPEDITION TO THE NORTH POLE.

The final orders from the Lords of the Admiralty for the sailing of the expedition to co-operate with Capt. Parry, in the event of being able to meet in the Arctic Regions, were received on Wednesday evening, and the Griper, which is to take out the expedition and proceed with it, was immediately swung upon the buoy in the tier in readiness for departure in the morning. Capt. Lyon came on board at ten o'clock on Wednesday night, and was accompanied by the whole of his officers. The crew were on board the transports, and on shore, and were, by permission, allowed to remain with their friends, and to enjoy the festivities of Greenwich Fair, and were not mustered until half-past nine o'clock yesterday morning; they were inspected by Capt. Lyon and his officers. The men appeared in excellent health and spirits. At ten o'clock the Commander from the quarter deck gave the signal for sailing, and the Blue Peter was run up. The Comet steam-yatch was then towed along side, and moored fast to the Griper. Notwithstanding the incessant rain, which at this moment came down in torrents, the shores and dock-yards were lined with spectators, who seemed to take a great interest in the departure of the bandy adventurers. A few minutes after ten o'clock, the tide serving, the Comet proceeded to "cleave the liquid way," with the Griper in company. The crews of the different ships in the river gave three cheers as the Griper passed down, which were answered by her crew. The departure of the vessel produced a very great excitation of sympathy from the spectators. The Griper is a fine sailing brig, and her tonnage does not now exceed 320 tons, having undergone a great part of her stores into the Snap transport, which accompanies her to Davis's Straits. The crew of the Griper is composed of only 35 men, who are commanded by eight officers, not including the gentlemen who accompany the expedition for scientific purposes. The vessel went as far as Northfleet yesterday, where the remainder of the stores were to be taken on board, and the arms and ammunition shipped. All the instruments of science have been on board some days. Upwards of 6,000 persons visited the Griper within the last few weeks.

Intelligence from the East Indies give alarming accounts of a scarcity of provisions. Madras and the surrounding country was in a state of famine towards the last of December. A letter from Madras, Dec. 23. says—"In the bazaars rice is not to be procured, and only one bankshall is now open for its sale, consequently the rush of the people to obtain a portion of this small supply is dreadful, and the North Beach is covered with hundreds, waiting with the faint hope of being at least fortunate enough to reach its door Many European gentlemen are seen mingled with the crowd, endeavouring to procure grain for their servants, which, after having succeeded, the difficulty of carrying it away in safety is considerable, at the right of the strongest, the only law which, as necessity, seems universally acknowledged. Some few merchants are dealing out their stock of rice scantily and secretly during the middle of the night, to avoid the scene of confusion and violence attendant on a public sale of it. The native inhabitants of Pondicherry are said to learn, are also sufferers for want of food We can now no longer indulge the expectation that a fall of rain may yet save the harvest of the coming year, as we understand from those acquainted with the subject that the crops are already destroyed."

Another letter says:—"On Monday night a vast multitude assembled in the Black Town, and proceeded to break open some of the rice stores belonging to native merchants, which were plundered, and much grain carried off. Guards of native troops were sent to protect property of this description; the mob, however, behaved in the most daring and outrageous manner towards the sepoys—while the latter, we understand, acted with the greatest forbearance, under the circumstances; two of the mob, however, are reported to be wounded, and one killed It is imagined that not less than 100,000 persons were collected."

PUGILISM.

SECOND BATTLE BETWEEN SPRING AND LANGAN FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The great fight between Spring and Langan, for 500l. a-side, took place at Chichester, on the 8th of June, on a stage six feet high from the ground, and twenty four feet square, planked with three inch planks. Langan was attended by Tom Belcher, and his countryman, O Neil, a rough unpolished mountaineer; the former as second, the latter as bottle holder. Cribb was second to Spring, and Painter was his bottle holder. Both men were brought into the ring—after which a car was quite sufficient to stage; their left elbow resting upon it; and Langan's being a black flag, was tied over the blue bunting. A bye-stander observed that "things looked black" "Aye," cried another, "as somebody will look blue before it is over." The queen coming to the ninth knocked extremely well in point of condition—Spring was stated to weigh thirteen stone seven pounds, and Langan twelve stone four pounds and a half. On setting to, three to one was offered in favour of Spring; and after a few rounds enough appeared to convince every one that there was no chance for Langan. The superior science of Spring enabled him to plant his blows wherever he pleased both right and left, and he punished his man dreadfully. At the 71st round, there were cries of "shame" from various quarters, and Col. O'Neil was called aside and spoken to privately. Col O'Neil was desired by the umpires, and said he left the man in Belcher's care. From the state of Spring's hands, it was impossible he could receive any more punishment, and as Langan had 200l. of his own money on the fight, he did not like to interfere.

72. Another round—Spring fibbed his man, and laid him down gently, evidently wishing to avoid administering more punishment.

74 Langan pushed down without a blow.

75 As Langan sat almost senseless on O Neil's knees Cribb advanced him, and said, "So help me God, Langan, you are as brave a man as ever stepped in leather, but you have not a shadow of a chance, so don't be gammoned to some again." Langan, however, tried it once more, and fell almost senseless.

76. Langan was again at his post. Spring fibbed him gently, and dropped The umpires now said that it was cruel to go further, and Belcher reluctantly gave in.

The battle lasted an hour and forty-eight minutes; and Langan was most shockingly sacrificed The heads from the ring to take him away from the 24th to the 70th rounds, were vehement. He was blind of both eyes, but still refused to yield. A braver man was never seen.

The latest accounts from Chichester say, that Langan is doing as well as can be expected, considering the severe punishment he received. On Wednesday last he was able to walk about his room for a short time, but in a state of total darkness. He complains most of his head, and particularly of a spot over his right temple, which, he says, was struck just one of the points of the stage in a fall. At first it was thought that his skull was fractured in that part, but it now ascertained that this is not the case. Many persons went up to see him in the after part of the day of the fight, some of whom dropped their sovereigns as a mark of their admiration of his bravery.

It is not probable that he will be in a state fit to be removed for some days O'Neil, his countryman, who we into the ring with him, attends him constantly Spring arrived in London on Wednesday; he suffers much pain from his hands, particularly his right one. He went to see Langan before he left Chichester; and we hear that he generously gave the fallen man ten pounds

It is supposed that the injury done to Spring's fists is such that it will be impossible for him, were he disposed, to fight again.—Langan seems to have calculated on the effects of his iron head upon his adversary's knuckles, and in this he was right He ran in head foremost, regardless of the most tremendous blows on that nob, which, if it sweetened not his breath, was proof that it would suppose could have no room in it for brains. After all, though the Irishman was no match for Spring in science or length, it was no sinecure to thump such a piece of stuff as Langan for two hours.

The above contest has exhibited nothing but science on one side, opposed by a hard head on the other, and a foolish and obstinate determination not to give up as long as a spark of life was left.

Such was the interest felt in London on the result of this battle, that one evening paper published two thousand of a second edition after nine o'clock in the evening of the day the fight took place.

AN OLD SOLDIER.

On the night of Thursday se'night an aged couple, residing without Elgin gate in this city (Hereford) were amused by a loud knocking at the door, and called upon by a noisy intruder. The husband and wife, to whom this singular intruder proved to be, were astonished, and the more so when he addressed them by their names, and proceeded to bore the marks of small pox on his face before he went abroad, but nothing of the sort was visible now. The soldier assured her they had been obliterated by a fever very peculiar to the East; this, however, did not satisfy the dame, and at length the cross examination became so perplexing that the dutiful son declared his mother mad, and appealed so powerfully to his father, that the old man asserted he was satisfied, and consented ther, that the old man asserted he was satisfied, and consented that his son should go to Leominster to receive the £400. Towards Leominster the hero accordingly proceeded, but at Din more he met with an awkward, "skirmisher in advance" in the shape of a constable who made him a prisoner, on a charge of having obtained £4. from another father, in or nea Leominster, to whom he had claimed kindred with the completest success This was a thunderbolt to the father with four hundred, who was astonished to find this—child of many fathers—no son of his and he returned to his better half to compliment her sagacity, and to acknowledge the truth of a certain proverb, which declareth that "he is a wise father who knows his own child." There is little doubt that the imposter had served in the British army, and in the confidence of complaisancy had learned from 22d), and in the confidence of complaisancy had learned from some of the inhabitants residence of their parents and friends in England, besides various domestic occurences, which enabled him on his return to this country to manœuvre a campaign of different complexion from that which, but for a little want rather a novel description of ventriloquism—in consequence of a squabble, he would probably have made son fillon to the tune of £400. The fellow was very improperly suffered to depart on refunding the £4. and doubtless will be attempting to play the old soldier and practise similar manœuvres in other places.—Hereford Journal.

VENTRILOQUISM.

(From the Edinburgh Weekly Journal.)

The attraction of M Alexandre, that most astonishing of all ventriloquists, appears to increase rather than diminish, judging by that surest of all tests—the numbers that attend his performances. We went to see them last night, and, having been rather late, were received at the door with the encouraging information, that there was tolerable standing room In fact, the place was crowded to overflow. All the feats of vocal magic were repeated with unabated effect; and a new one was gratuitously (for it was not in the bill) added, to the excessive entertainment of the hearers—that of instructing one of the ignorant in the mysteries of ventriloquism. We have neither time nor room for particulars; but it was as graciously received as gratefully intended.

This ingenious foreigner was on a visit at Abbotsford some days since; and having chanced to mention to his distinguished host that he kept a sort of Album, or Scrap book, in which were reposited various tributes which had been paid to his talents by many eminent individuals of the countries he had visited, Sir Walter slept aside, while the carriage was getting ready for his guest's departure, and immediately presented to him the following good humoured and characteristic lines:—

TO MONS. ALEXANDRE.

Of yore, in Old England, it was not thought good,
To carry two visages under one hood:
What should folks say to one, who with ease two faces sports?
That from under one hood you last night shew'd us twenty!
Stand forth, arch deceiver! and tell us, in truth,
Are you handsome or ugly, in age or in youth?
Man, woman, or child? or a dog, or a mouse?
Or are you at once, each live thing in its house?
Each live thing, did I ask? each dead implement too!
A work shop in your person—saw, chisel, and screw.
Above all, are you one individual? I know
You must be, at least, Alexandre and Co.
But I think you're a troop—an assemblage—a mob—
And that I, as the Sheriff must take up the job;
And, instead of rehearsing your wonders in verse,
Must read you the Riot Act, and bid you disperse;

Abbotsford, April 23. WALTER SCOTT.

A few days ago, a servant girl entered the shop of courteous silk-mercer in a fashionable town not quite a hundred miles from the banks of the Chelt, and asked for some pink ribands. The shop-keeper, who does not like himself dislike a joke, determined to banter the poor damsel, and placing some purple ribband on the counter, facetiously asked her whether she could not "fancy it was pink?" "Oh yes," replied the arch Abigail, "certainly sir; please to cut me twelve yards of it." The bewildered shop-keeper obsequiously obeyed her high behest," measured the required quantity, and with his most graceful bow presented it to his customer, who after thanking him for his civility, thus played one of the best retorts that we have heard of for a long time. "To oblige you, sir, I fancied this purple ribband was pink—to oblige me pray fancy yourself paid!" and bowing left the shop The scene we pronounce inimitable!—Thus "fancy does all colours show."—Cheltenham Chronicle.

A circumstance of a very interesting and affecting kind occured some time since in one of the Greek Isles. A number of the inhabitants, terrified at the approach of a Turkish force, hurried on board a large boat, and pushed off from the land The wife of one of them, a young woman of uncommon loveliness, seeing her husband departing, stood on the shore stretching out her hands towards the boat, and imploring, in the most moving terms, to be taken on board. The Greek saw it without concern or pity, and, without aiding her escape, bade his companions, hasten their flight. This unfortunate woman, left unprotected in the midst of her enemies, struggled through scenes of difficulty and danger, of insult and suffering, till her failing health and strength, with a heart broken by sorrow, brought her to her death bed. She had never heard from her lord or his band; and when wandering among the mountains, or lying ill in some wretched habitation, or compelled to urge her flight amidst cruel fatigues, her affections for him and the hope of meeting again, bore up her courage through all. He came at last, when the enemy had retreated, and the Greeks had brought their homes again, and learning her situation, was touched with the deepest remorse.—But all hopes of life was then extinguished; her spirit had been tried to the utmost: love had changed to aversion, and she refused to see or forgive him. There is at times, in the character of a Greek woman, as more than one occasion occurred of observing, a strength and sternness that is remarkable. Her sister and relations were standing round her bed; and never in the days of her health and love did she appear more touchingly beautiful as then; her fine dark eyes were turned on them with a look, as if she mourned not to die, but still felt deeply her wrongs; the natural paleness of her cheek was crimsoned with a heetic hue, and the rich tresses of her hair fell dishevelled by her side. Her friends, with tears, entreated her to speak to and forgive her husband; but she turned her face to the wall, and waved her hand for him to be gone. Soon the last pang came over, and affection conquered; she turned suddenly round, raised a look of forgiveness to him, placed her hand in his, and died.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Both Houses of Parliament were to be Prorogued on the 24th.

The Hon. Capt. W. L. Fitz Gerald De Roos, of the 1st Regt. of Life Guards, was married on the morning of the 7th, at St. George's, Hanover square, to Lady Georgiana Lennox, daughter of the Duke of Richmond.

Mrs. Opie, of the theatre has turned Quakeress, and Mr. Macready, also of the theatre, has taken orders in the Church.

Miss Cracchami, the Sicilian dwarf, died suddenly in London.

Mr. Osberry, the Commedian, died suddenly in London on the 9th June.

A subscription for the Greeks has been commenced at Calcutta, and up to the 8th January, 18,764 sicca rupees had been subscribed.

It is said the Danish Government has contracted a loan with some English houses of four and a half millions, at the rate of 4 per cent.

The celebrated Robert Gourlay has made a strange assault upon Mr. Brougham, in the lobby of the House of Commons.—Physicians had been sent to visit Gourlay, as it was supposed that he was deranged. Indeed in detailing the particulars of the assault, when Mr. B was brought up to custody, Mr. Brougham intimated that he thought him to be insane, and this was the general opinion of the House. Mr. B. however, was very indulgent at this supposition, as will be seen by the following note addressed, — Com. Adv.

To the Editor of the Courier.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, June 12th 1824.

SIR,—Seeing it this day reported in Parliamentary Debates that I had been insane, with insinuations that my conduct, yesterday, in the lobby of this House, had proceeded from something of the kind, will you allow me to assure my friends and the public, through the medium of your paper, that I never was in such a state; nor ever more free from mental disease than now.

Let it be considered, that circumstances will justify extraordinary measures, let it be remembered that Christ whipt the rascals out of the temple; and, before I am condemned, let me have fair opportunity of being heard.

ROBERT GOURLAY.

The Editor of the Colonist and Weekly Courier says he evidently labours under a complete and melancholy delusion. His appearance is dessyed and debilitated; and when removed into one of the committee rooms of the House of Commons, he let fall his head upon his hand, as a person labouring under the collapse incidental to violent excitement. He complained of some neglect of Mr. Brougham's respecting the presentation of a petition from Canada, which we understand has no foundation. On being told that if he would express any contrition for his outrage, Mr. Brougham would instantly move for his discharge; he refused, but said he had no objection to petition the House. He added, that he was determined to have a fight with Mr. Brougham, because he had shamefully deserted his cause, and taken up that of a dead missionary.

DISMISSAL OF VISCOUNT CHATEAUBRIAND.—Late arrivals from France announce the sudden and unceremonious dismissal of Viscount Chateaubriand, from the office of Minister of Foreign Affairs.—The causes which led to this measure are involved in impenetrable obscurity, and the proceedings altogether unlooked for by the minister himself.

"He, it said, was on his way to the Tuileries, when he was apprised that an important communication had been sent to his hotel. He returned and found a laconic intimation from M. de Villele that he was no longer a minister. He replied with equal brevity, that he no longer occupied the hotel of foreign affairs, and it was at the service of his successor. The Journal des Debats, (the Ex Minister's own paper) makes no secret of the cause of his disgrace, by distinctly admitting that he was punished for remaining silent in the discussion of the law of Repies."

SOUTH AMERICA.

The great question respecting a negotiation of the independence of South America, was brought up in the House of Commons, by Sir James Mackintosh, on presenting the petition of the merchants of London. The speech, says the Courier, "with which the Honend Learned Member introduced his motion, was an able and argumentative exposition of those principles of public law, by which a question like the one now pending must be regulated.—The reply of Mr. Canning was brief, if compared with the matter thrown out by Sir James Mackintosh, but ample enough, in reference to the information which was sought. Our readers may remember that when last this subject was before Parliament, the course which England might take was conditionally bound up in that of the Mother Country; it was wished, if possible, that Spain should have the benefits as well as the credit, of taking the lead in recognizing the independence of her former Colonies. This state of things no longer exists. Mr. Canning distinctly declared, and repeated the declaration, that with respect to any further steps to be taken by this country towards South America, she must act for herself. More than this, in the way of information, Mr. Canning declined to state. Indeed, he admitted that more than this, he scarcely had any thing to state, which could be called information. The question, therefore, now stripped of its last embarrassment, as respects any foreign obligation, and England is free to act, at any moment, and in any manner, her own interests may suggest.

"Two points were urged by Mr. Canning, to which we may be permitted to advert, because they are strongly corroborative of the views we have constantly taken in reference to this subject. The one is, that whenever the recognition takes place, it will be of such separate and distinct portions of South America, as have made the greatest progress towards consolidating their respective forms of government; the other, that England is not prepared so to shape the act of recognition, as to carry with it any implicit obligations of making common cause, or of co operating, with the states so recognised. Recognition by a neutral power, may be merely a simple acknowledgement of a fact; but without this caution, it might be accepted as a sort of treaty of alliance and co-operation. "I am, therefore," said Mr. Canning, "most anxious that exaggerated expectations should not be indulged in on that head, by the immediate consequence of recognition."

The communication of Mr. Canning may be reduced to the following heads:—

1. That his Majesty's Government is no longer bound in considering the question of recognition, to wait for any communication with Spain, but that it is wholly free to act on a view of its own interests.

2. That the Government will consider the question of each state separately, and not South America en masse.

3. That Ministers have taken means to inform themselves of the actual condition of the respective governments, but that no information upon the subject has yet reached them.

4. That his Majesty's Government will steadfastly adhere to the declarations it has made on this subject, and which are before Parliament.

Lastly. That it has the second time refused the urgent entreaty of Spain to become a party to a Congress for considering this question.

Mr. John Hunt, publisher of the Examiner, has been tried and convicted of a libel contained in the Vision of Judgement, by Lord Byron. The court imposed a fine of £100, and required sureties for good behaviour, himself in £1000 and two others of £500 each. Hunt having stated on trial that he was about to publish a new edition in which he would omit the parts declared to be libellous by the jury, Mr. Justice Bayley remarked,—"I am not aware of all the contents of this work. There may be other passages equally objectionable, with those brought before the court; if, therefore, you re-publish the work, even omitting the passages now specially pointed out to the court, you will bear in mind that you do it at your peril. Should you re-publish any part of the work, and should any of the passages in such re-publication be complained of, and brought before the court, after this warning, the court will know how to deal with you on such offence.

Mr. Robert Gourlay remains in custody at the House of Commons—he is with two messengers in the prison rooms. A friend appeared, in consequence of what was said in the House of Commons by Mr. Canning, and proferred to take some care, to make some arrangements with Mr. Gourlay; but Mr. Gourlay would not accept of them. His insisted on remaining in custody, and on being called to the bar. He has prepared several petitions, which have been forwarded to an Hon. Member, but which he complains were not presented. The prisoner is well provided by Mr. Bellamy, the Commons' Coffee-house-keeper. He has caused to be published in the morning papers several certificates as to his mental sanity, and also another letter to the Speaker of the House of Commons, in which he says his plan was laid five months ago, in concert with a Dr. Hamilton, who formerly lived in Canada.

The Widow of Riego was in a dying state on the 18th, and her physicians considered her case utterly hopeless.

Lady Byron has given up her jointure of £2000 per annum to the present Lord Byron.

News from Bengal had been received to the 14th Feb. All was "quite in the Company's own possessions, but a late war with the Birmans seemed inevitable. Mr. Chew, a Bengal Branch Pilot, had been seized by the Birmans and sent to the capital, Umerapoora. A large detachment of troops, with a train of artillery, had marched towards the Birman frontier, and it was reported that the 13th Light Infantry, under Colonel M'Creagh, were to proceed thither by water from Calcutta. All articles of Indian produce were high, particularly the finer sorts of Indigo, owing to a great failure of the crop, which was only one half of former years.

Official Accounts have at length been received, confirming the melancholy intelligence of the death of Sir Charles M'Carthy, but the despatches containing the details of the operations with the Ashantees have not yet reached England. We give such particulars below as were received.

CAPE COAST, March 10.

"His Excellency Sir Charles M'Carthy, arrived here from Sierra Leone in December last, and in the early part of January marched to the interior towards the river Pree, with an army of between six and seven thousand men, chiefly natives, and a West India regiment. On the 21st January, near Free, a most sanguinary battle was fought, in which nearly 1000 of the enemy were slain, but the amunition being expended, our little army was surrounded by above 15,000, and the greater part cut to death with long knives, in a most horrible manner. The heads of nine White Officers were exhibited near one spot, with the jaw bones taken out, an invariable practice with these savages when they take an enemy alive.

"A considerable force under Capt. Blankarne, of the West India Regiment, has marched to take ample revenge. An action is hourly expected.

"The Owen Glendower has been very active along the coast in destroying all that came within her reach. She sails to-morrow morning to destroy a town that had seized on an English merchantman and murdered the crew."

The following is an extract of a letter dated Elmina, March, 1824:

"It was my fortune to be near our lamented chief, when he received his wound, which was at all probability, a mortal one. Buckle, Wetherall, and myself conveyed him for shelter against a tree; but we were soon discovered by the enemy, a number of whom rushed on us. I had one very severe cut on the left side of my neck, but just as the fellow was making a more complete effort, his arm was arrested by one of his chiefs, and I was saved. On looking round, I beheld the headless trunks of my friends. I was bound and conveyed towards their camp."

DEATHS.—His Excellency Sir Charles M'Carthy, Dr. Tedly, Messrs. Buckle, chief engineer; Wetherall, Sir Charles' secretary; Brandon, ordnance storekeeper; Hedley, merchant; and Robinson, merchant; killed by the enemy. Capt. L'Estrange, and Mr. Raydon, merchant, of fatigue. Lieut. Theed; Lieut. Torrane, of the Owen Glendower; Mr. Mends, of do; Lieut. M'Clean, W. I. R; Mr. Belzoni, the traveller; Mr. Hamlyn; Mr. Keffen, assistant commissary: Mr. Gordon, printer to the colony, Mr. Tedley, merchant; and Mr. Picton, staff assistant surgeon, of fever.

It would only add to the grief of the friends of our lamented countrymen, were we to add all the particulars that have come to our knowledge of the refined cruelty practiced on their remains.

ENGLAND AND ALGIERS.

News have been received at Genoa of the Blockade of Algiers to the 9th of May. The Dey will listen to no proposition of arrangement which includes an obligation to receive the former English Consul, Macdonald. The number of English ships of war was nine, without including two gunboats. The entrance of the port was shut with a great iron chain, which the Regency had procured from England some time ago. The Dey has made various arrangements to place his ships beyond the reach of danger in case of an attack. He has likewise caused hospitals to be established for the wounded

FRANCE.

Baron de Royer is appointed Minister plenipotentiary at Lisbon; M. de Maltzahn succeeds M. de Royer at Madrid. Don Miguel arrived at Angers on the 12th inst. on his way to Paris. A tremendous hail-storm on the 9th inst. ravaged several Communes of the Northern Departments of France.

The Chamber of Deputies have rejected the project of an address to the king to ask indemnities, and has left the initiative on this subject,—The Journal des Debats adds, by a great majority; and there were but 8, or as others say, 11, who opposed it. Is that a majority?

The marriage of M. Rothschild, of Paris, will shortly be celebrated at Frankfort. It is said that the head of the House of Rothschild, at Frankfort, who has no children, has added a million to the three millions which are the marriage portion of his niece.

The criminal section of the Court of Cassation was lead to try a question of extraordinary interest. It is this.—"Whether a Frenchman, who has served under the flag of Colombia, and assisted in the capture of a Sardinian vessel, declared to be a good prize by the Admiralty Court at Carracas, can now be subject to a criminal prosecution before the French tribunals, as having exposed France to measures of reprisal on the part of his Majesty the King of Sardinia?" A London editor remarks, "This question bears a similarity to that which is the subject of the remonstrances made by the Ottoman Porte to the Cabinet of Great Britain, with regard to Lord Byron and other English subjects who have embraced the cause of the Greeks."

Speculation and controversy, about M. de Chateaubriand, seem nearly at an end; and we suppose the Ex-Minister is doomed to discover that the whole government did not centre in him or his party. M de Villele, we learn, is expected to hold the Portfeuille of Foreign Affairs, provisionally, for some time yet; it is said, until every thing is arranged—until the ebullition has entirely subsided. It is said he continues high in the King's favour.

SPAIN.

Very little is said in these papers, respecting the affairs of Spain. The Quotidienne of the 16th says:—Reports were yesterday in circulation at the Bourse, that troubles had broken out in Spain. Nothing could be more void of foundation: the most perfect tranquility reigns on all points of the Peninsula. The amnesty was carrying into execution without opposition. The disturbance created by Gen. Capape had been suppressed. He could not prevail upon more than about 40 persons to join him: he had been arrested, and was on his way to Madrid to stand his trial.

GREEK REVOLUTION.

A private letter from Greece states that the Turks have effected a landing in Candia and Negropont, but that at the first mentioned place they were repulsed with great slaughter. The force of Ulysses at Negropont was considerable, and it was fully expected that the utmost extent of the evil of the arrival of Turkish troops, would be to prolong the resistance of the forces of Negropont. No details are given of the affair in Candia. According to this letter, the Turks have abandoned all idea of invading the Morea this summer. [We hope it may be true; but we have so many fictions from the East, that we are obliged to receive every thing with great caution.]

TURKEY AND RUSSIA.

The Constitutionnel contains part of a note of Lord Strangford to the Sublime Porte, dated April 10, 1824, respecting the differences between Russia and Turkey. These differences, according to his Lordship, arose on two interests—commercial and political. The first had been satisfactorily arranged, and the latter would be finally settled by the evacuation of the Principalities of the Danube.

SWEDEN.

On the 22d of May the Norwegian Diet unanimously rejected all the thirteen alterations in the Constitution proposed to them by their Sovereign. They, at the same time, resolved to present an address to his Majesty, stating the grounds of rejection. Signor Moreno Y. Davis, Spanish Ambassador at the Court of Stockholm, died on the 30th of May. He had retained his embassy forty years.

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.

ROSE v Ollier.—This action was brought to recover compensation in damages for a breach of promise of marriage. The plaintiff is Miss Sarah Rose, one of the daughters of Mr. Micah Rose formerly a tradesman of Manchester but now retired from business, and residing at Northern, near that town. The defendant is Mr. J. S. Ollier, head clerk to the distributor of stamps, at Manchester, and son of the late Dr. Ollier of that town. It is rather a peculiar feature of this case, that the defendant is not yet married. Messrs. Scarlett, Williams, and Brougham were engaged for the plaintiff; and Messrs. Alderson and Wightman for the defendant. The Court was crowded particularly by ladies. After Mr. Brougham had opened the pleadings, Mr. Scarlett stated the facts of the case, which were briefly these:—The families of both parties, which were highly respectable, had been known to each other for a very long period, and the plaintiff and defendant had been mutually acquainted almost from their infancy. The friendship should ripen into something more ardent was as they advanced in years, perfectly natural; and the result was, that, in the summer of 1823, Mr. Ollier openly declared himself the lover of Miss Rose, and began to pay her those attentions which might be expected in consequence. On his second or third visit to her he had a conference with Mr. Rose, and asked him permission to pay his addresses to Miss Sarah. Mr. Rose was rather pleased at the proposals, as the gentleman was of good character and family; and, as he thought highly of Mr. Ollier's character and family; but he said that if he indulged the expectation of a large fortune with her he would be disappointed, as he had decided not to give portions to any of his children (four daughters,) until his death, which, at his time of life, could not be long, and then a few thousands would be divided among them. Besides this, Miss Sarah would have £300 from another source. Mr Ollier expressed himself perfectly satisfied on that head, as his only object was to make her his wife. Money was not at all his object; and he requested Mr. Rose would speak to his (Mr. Ollier's) father, on the subject of his present application. From that time Mr. Ollier was received on the footing of an honourable lover, and as he was of gentlemanly manners and very good person, a mutual attachment took place, and the result of which no doubt was entertained. Mr. O. was introduced to the friends of Mr. Rose's family; he accompanied Miss Sarah frequently to parties, to Church, and other places. Shortly after Mr. Ollier's declaration, Mr. Rose called upon Dr. Ollier, and conversed with him on the probable union between their families, at the same time mentioning what he had told Mr Ollier as to money matters. Dr Ollier made no reply, at first on the subject of Mr. R's call—but the intimacy continued between the young parties as before. From that time until Whitsuntide, 1823. About three weeks before the latter period, Mr. Rose met Dr. Ollier, who then said he wished the match might be put off, as his family were not agreeable to it. With this sentiment, as the family did not object to it; and he In the evening Mr. Rose mentioned the circumstance to Mr. O. who considered himself to be of age to judge for himself. (Mr O. is now about 30 and Miss R. about 23.) On the same evening Mr. O invited Mr. Rose to go and see the house in which he has taken a preparatory to the marriage; but Mr. R. declined going that evening. After the conversation Mr Ollier only visited Miss Rose two or three times, when he entirely discontinued his visits without any difference having been perceived in his behaviour, or without his assigning any reason whatever for his absence and Mr. Scarlett commented on this part of the conduct of the defendant, which he characterized as base and dishonourable towards the plaintiff, whose affections he had gained, who was a beautiful and accomplished young lady, whose affections he had engaged as if for his mere amusement, and the gratification of his vanity; with whom he had been received in society as betrothed husband, and whom he thus suddenly abandoned, exposed to the cruel and unjust suspicions in which a censorious world might choose to indulge, as to the cause of so extraordinary a change in his conduct. In July following, Mr Grundy, the godfather of Mr Rose, inquired from Mr. Ollier himself the cause of his withdrawing his attentions; when the latter declared that the obstacle to the match was his father's objections, to which he felt himself bound to attend, as his father was his surety in £10,000 at the Stamp Office; but that his conduct had been, in all respects, censured by any part of Miss R's behaviour or character, of which he spoke with warm respect, to the great satisfaction of the godfather. About September following, Dr Ollier died, when Mr Grundy again saw Mr. Ollier in October, when he inquired whether his father's death would remove the obstacle which had prevented his marriage with Miss Rose. Mr. O. said it would not, for that he had several sisters who now required his assistance and protection, and that his father's affairs were not settled. Mr Holland, cousin to Miss Rose, also called upon him to know if he intended to fulfil his engagement with Miss Rose, when, after questioning his authority to interfere, he declared he did not intend to fulfil it. Words then ensued between Mr. Ollier and Mr. Holland, and this action was soon afterwards brought. Mr Rose, Mrs Wood (his eldest daughter) Miss Mary Rose (his youngest daughter) Mr. Grundy, Mr. Holland, and Mr Burgess, proved the facts of the case. To show that the family of Dr Ollier did not desire the courtship, it was proved that the Dr and the two families continued to be intimate, and that the former and the two families continued to be intimate, and that the former and the two families continued to be intimate, and that the former and the two families continued to be intimate, and that the former and the two families continued together. A note from Miss Olivia Ollier was produced, addressed to Miss Rose, and brought to her by Mr Ollier. Miss Ollier had written on a part of the envelope, "Miss S. Rose Miss Ollier had written on a part of the envelope, "Miss S. Rose the words "For star read gondolune," on another part of the envelope. This showed the writer's knowledge of the court-hip. This showed the writer's knowledge of the court-hip. This showed the writer's knowledge of the court-hip

The slightest transolation visible in the traveller has often determined the guides, notwithstanding the most lucrative offers, to return to the neighbouring valley of Chamouni.

The summit of the mountain, which is visible at the distance of 204 miles, is so narrow, as scarcely to permit two persons to walk abreast, especially on the western side, which is very steep, and terminates in frightful precipices, fearful to behold. The cold is here so intense, that fire can scarcely be maintained in the chafing dish, provisions are entirely frozen, and ink even is congealed To the rarefaction of the air is to be attributed the singular appearances of the sky which is almost black; and, on looking through a tube, the stars are visible at noon.

ON THE DEATH OF THE HON. THOMAS SCOTT.

Oh mournful muse! now pomene I arise—
She comes with solemn steps and down cast eyes,
Raises her hand points to the earthly bed,
Where rests the ashes of the virtuous dead.

Soft heaves her bosom while her accents roll,
With sad remembrance thrilling to the soul;
There Scot remains in solemn silence sleep,
There Science, Virtue, Truth and Justice weep.

There lies a man whose upright heart and hand,
Once bore the sword of justice in your land,
Once stood the champion of his country's cause,
Th' impartial guardian of his country's laws.

There lies the empty casket where is fled
That gem the spirit, lo! from earth 'tis freed,
Aerial it flies, mounts on triumphant wing,
Nor heeds of grave the power, of death the sting.

Peace to his ashes on that clay-cold bed,
'Till the last triumph shall wake the slum'bring dead,
Then shall he rise, shall join the angelic choir,
And feel a seraph's love, a seraph's fire.

Where's now the sword of justice lo! 'tis borne,
By one his station fitted to adorn,
By one whose deeds demand from truth the praise,
Where POWELL sitsin judgment justice sways.

Long may he live to guard his country's laws,
And feel that high reward his hearts applause,
And then like Scott in honour sink to rest,
Rever'd by all regretted by the best.

THE UNION.

Letters have been received by a respectable mercantile House in this city, from London, mentioning that a bill for uniting the Provinces of Lower and Upper canada, was recently brought before the House of Commons, and ordered to be printed. The letters further state that His Majesty's Ministers intend to act on this bill in the early part of next session.—C. Cou't.

Extract of a letter to a Commercial House in this City, dated London, June, 4, 1824.

"The East India Company have just made public their intention of opening a Trade in Teas direct to Canada from China; and a bill is now in progress through the Houses of Parliament to allow them.—The detail is not arranged; but it is intended to have public sales—the monies received to be paid into the Colonial Treasury; to be accounted for with the Company at home. The Tea is ordered to be in readiness at Canton in January next."—Canadian Times.

Accidents.—On Friday evening as Mr. and Mrs. William Wragg were taking a ride in a calesh, the horse stumbled near the entrance of the St. Antoine Suburbs, and the sudden jolt threw Mr. W. (who was not in a good state of health) out of the Carriage, he fell on the side of his head, and right shoulder, his collar bone was broken, and his shoulder dislocated. He bled profusely from the ear, and lay for some time in a state of total insensibility. Surgical aid was procured as soon as possible, and we are happy to say he is now in a fair way of recovery. Mr. W. was left in the Carriage; her feelings at that moment cannot be described, the crowd which immediately collected on the occasion frightened the horse, and he ran with full speed towards the bridge, some persons attempted to stop him at the entrance, but he made a violent plunge, and narrowly escaped the creek. Mrs. W. cried out to let the horse pass, and no further resistance was then made by those on the bridge, over which he bounded furiously; many unavailing attempts were made to stop his progress in the suburb, during which time Mrs. W. thought destruction inevitable, she did not however in this perilous predicament lose her presence of mind, she made a successful effort to reach from the carriage and hold fast by the harness, considering that in the event of the calesh being overturned, she might be more secure in that position. While she was thus situated, the reins fortunately met her eye, she seized them, and regaining her place in the carriage drew tight the reins and was most providentially saved from the impending danger. The spectators cried out "you are safe"; it was then that her feelings overpowered her, she sank down in the carriage and remained for a considerable time deprived of all powers of recollection. We have seldom had occasion to notice a circumstance which so strongly marks the protecting care of a merciful providence, as the one above mentioned.

Messrs. Auclair and Marion, with their wives went from this city on Sunday last to visit some friends on the opposite side of the river; they stopped at a house a few miles from La Prairie to give the horse some water, the men got out of the waggon, leaving the women in it, the bridle was taken off the horse, and one of the husbands held him by the mane. Some persons returning from church drove past at the time, and the cracking of their whips frightened the horse, who disengaged himself from the hold, and ran off violently; the waggon was dashed against a fence, and the women thrown out. We understand that Mrs. Auclair had three ribs broken, and Mrs. Marion (her sister) had her arm broke. They were carried to town on Monday morning.

On the same day, Mrs. Johnson, wife of Mr. Johnson, Baker, residing in Commissioners Street, which runs along the banks of the river, had just got into a calesh, when the horse in place of proceeding as she intended, continued to back towards the river, where the bank is remarkably high, over which he would have been precipitated had not the wheels of the carriage come in contact with a large Potash Kettle which was lying within a short distance of the edge of the bank; by the violence of this resistence, Mrs. J. was thrown from the calesh and we are sorry to state had one of her legs broken.—Canadian Courant.

THE LAUNCH.

The long expected launch of the great ship took place on Wednesday morning last at the point of the Island of Orleans, in presence of a large concourse of people, assembled to witness an event which forms as important an epoch in the history of naval architecture, as it does in the annals of this province. The St. Lawrence, which but a few years ago, comparatively speaking, had borne on its wave only the rudely constructed canoe of the native Indian, has now floating on its waters the largest ship in existence, or of the building of which for navigable purposes we have any authentic record. This immense vessel, has, with great propriety been named The Columbus.

Her dimensions are as follows—length 300 feet, breadth of beam 50 feet and depth of hold 30 feet, her model is also as extraordinary as her dimensions, being precisely that of a Candian batteau, that is, perfectly flat bottomed and wall sided, the stem and stern post nearly or altogether perpendicular, and both ends sharp alike, without any fullness as is the case in the bows and sterns of ships of the usual construction. So that her floor may be compared to a parallel ogram, with an acute equicrural triangle at either extremity. Her tonnage by register is 3,690 tons, but she is thought to be capable of carrying at least 6,000 tons freight, her stowage is somewhat embarrassed by the massy beams which connect her side timbers, or she would probably freight 7,000 tons.

This ship has been an object of general curiosity since she was first laid down, her dimensions, so far exceeding any which have yet been attempted in the largest ships of war, that even a faithful report of the bulk was received with suspicion, and a number of vague stories were set afloat as to the intention of the builders in framing this wonderful craft, it was imagined by many, that a solid mass of timber was to be built in, something like the shape of a vessel, and covered with an outward sheathing of plank sufficiently strong to render her capable of traversing the ocean at a favourable season when good weather might be expected, but as the work advanced, it became evident from the regular plan pursued and the solid manner in which her massy frame was connected, that something more was intended than a mere ship shaped raft, she is now a complete vessel, and it is expected will prove sufficiently managable, but will not probably perform more than one voyage. Every precaution has, however, been taken for the safety and comfort of those who are to navigate her. Her cabin and a safety room being prepared, that should the vessel by any means become water logged, the crew would endure but little inconvenience. Many persons entertained doubts of the possibility of launching this stupendous fabric, and there were not wanting those who affirmed that she would never float, but remain on the blocks where she was built, a monument of the presumptuous folly of the projectors.

The events of Wednesday proved how much the wonderers and doubters had been mistaken, and cheered by how able the work had been conducted and how minutely and justly the builder had made his calculations. At half past or 35 minutes past seven, this ponderous mass was put in motion with as much facility as any smaller vessel and slid majestically into the St. Lawrence. The length of the ways was somewhat less than 600 feet, and precisely one minute elapsed between the period when she moved and that of her reaching the water, her entrance into which was greeted by appropriate airs from the military bands in attendance, and repeated salutes from the guns of the Steamboats, and some which had been planted on the shore for that purpose. Her ways were much scorched by the friction of her motion, and so great a smoke arose, that distant spectators imagined some accident to have taken place. From her peculiar construction in the wedge-like form of her stern, and the small proportion her breadth bears to her length, she created but little swell, even the smallest boats were hardly tossed, and no sensible motion was experienced on board the Steamboats and larger vessels.

Three of her four masts were standing, that is, the first and second main-mast-, and her try-sail mast—the sheers were also up for shipping the fore-mast and her bowsprit was in: the whole of these appear so small when compared with the bulk of the hull, that they look like jury spars, her main-sail is not larger than that of a small 74. As soon as she lost way, she was taken in tow by the Steam-boats, Swiftsure, Lady Sherbrooke and Malsham; and conducted to the Montmorenci channel, where she dropped her anchor, which did not appear to us larger than we have seen on board a first rate ship of War.—The weight is 18 Cwt. 2 Qrs.

The day was remarkably fine and the river presented an animated spectacle, no less than seven steamboats and an amazing number of rowing and sailing boats being upon the water. Those who contented themselves with a view from the works of the Town or Cape Diamond, though they had but a distant sight of the launch had the pleasure of enjoying the moving scene upon the St. Lawrence as in a panorama. The effect of the military bands upon the water was very fine; the Swiftsure, which after the business of the launch was over, made the tour of the Island of Orleans, had on board the band and bugles of the 71st Regt.; the 68th band enlivened the Lady Sherbrooke, whilst the admirers of the pibroch were gratified by the pipers of the former Regt. who were on board the Laprairie in full national costume.

Amongst the company in the different boats we saw some strangers from the United States, and several gentlemen from Montreal; what greatly enhances the pleasure afforded by this memorable occasion is, that we have not heard of any, even the most trivial accident occuring.—Quebec Mercury.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,

IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made in any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres the consideration being, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Ster. EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,

In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR sub mitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,

Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, York, February 7th 1821.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, C.E.C. Cons.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19th, 1824.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

An account of the proceedings under the insurrection act, during the last year, has been published by order of the House of Commons. It appears, that no less than seventeen hundred and seven persons were brought to trial, after periods of imprisonment, amounting in many instances, to two and even three months, though not more than 271 were convicted, and sentence was actually carried into execution upon only 75.

A bull was lately slaughtered at Aisle, in Cheshire, which weighed one ton one hundred and eighty pounds: the rough fat taken from him weighed three hundred and eleven pounds. He was eight years old. Of a bull previously killed, at the same place, one rib weighed twenty-three pounds.

Mr. Keen the tragedian, has purchased ground for building a villa in the island of Bute. The situation, on the banks of Loch Fad, is truly beautiful, and the villa, in which he intends to reside, is now in a state of great forwardness. It is to consist of two stories, with a neat front.

We mention for the information of our female friends, that an entirely new article, called Circassian, or Cassinette, is now manufacturing in the neighbourhood of Huddersfield, in very considerable quantities, principally for exportation to the Continent. The warp is of cotton, and the weft woollen, and all colours, qualities, and widths may be had. It wears well, and, in some colours look very genteel. The chief recommendations of this fabric are, its cheapness, durability and incombustibility; not that it will not burn, but it takes fire with difficulty, and is, on that account, well adapted for children's wear.—The Cassinette makes a very pleasant dress, particularly in the winter season; and, though it is little more than the same price as calico, it will wear three times as long, and save a fourth dress in washing.

There are serious differences between the spring knife makers and their employers, at Sheffield; the former demand what they call the prices of 1810, which the latter, it appears cannot accede to. About 1500 men are out of employ, in consequence of refusing to work.

It is determined by the relatives of Lord Byron, that his remains shall be interred in Poet's Corner, Westminster Abbey.

At the Old Bailey, lately, William Campion was convicted of publishing a profane and blasphemous libel on the Holy Scriptures and the Christian Religion, and was sentenced to three years imprisonment in Newgate. Richard Hassall was found guilty in the same court, of a similar offence, and was sentenced to two years imprisonment, and to enter into his own recognisance to £100 to be of good behaviour during his life.

In the Court of King's Bench Thomas Thurtell, [brother of the notorious John Thurtell,] William Anderson, and J. B. Snowden were tried for a conspiracy in setting fire to their premises, situate in Watling street, in the year 1822, and for defrauding the County Fire Office of the sum of £1930. The Jury found Thurtell and Snowden guilty, and Anderson not guilty. The defendant Thomas Thurtell sat in court with great composure till the Lord Chief Justice began his charge, when he retired.—The trial lasted till near midnight.

The Rev. Mr. Dunbar has, by a series of experiments in Scotland, ascertained, that, when a queen bee is wanting for a hive, her majesty can be, and is produced from the egg of a working bee. In one experiment, having removed the queen, the bees set about constructing royal cells, and placing common larvæ in them: seven days two queens were formed. One of these killed the other; and though, while in a virgin state, treated with no distinction whatever, she no sooner began to lay, than she became the object of constant solicitude and respect to crowds of her admiring subjects, who fed and watched upon her.

At a farm-house, at Hooton, a short time ago, there was a little pet duck, which was accustomed regularly to suck a cat with her kittens; and at the hunting stable there is a large gentleman cat, which was purloined by a terrier bitch, which fondled with it as freely as with its own whelps. In the kitchen there, also, is a young cub fox, reared by a cat, who took the utmost care of the young one's charge.

At the conclusion of the June Races, at Epsom, a number of ruffians on horseback, in chaises, waggons, carts, &c. galloped down the course, broke down a chain placed to prevent their egress, and indiscriminately knocked down and drove over many persons on foot. One lady had her jaw broke by a horse treading on her; a countryman's arm was fractured, a boy was so dreadfully injured that his life is despaired of; a coachman was kicked by a horse, and died at the Magpie, in Epsom, in about an hour; a groom had his skull fractured and his horse killed; and many others were severely bruised.

A poor woman at Glasgow, one of those furious creatures who pick up their living on dunghills, chanced, a few days ago, to light on a small parcel which she took for meal: home she hastened, and made what she thought a delicious mess of pottage; but alas! there was arsenic in it, (used probably for destroying rats,) and she perished in great agony.

At Sheffield, a man was lately so dreadfully lacerated by a bear, which he kept for the purpose of baiting, that he died shortly afterwards. A boy 12 years old, was also stung in the leg by an adder, in a wood near Dumfries, the effects of which nearly proved fatal to him.

A Dr. Thornton has projected a balloon, and solicited subscribers at ten guineas each, to patronize his scheme. He describes this new vehicle as having wings and a tail, worked by a steam engine and mechanical powers; made to ascend and descend at pleasure, and to travel 100 miles within the hour, in any direction, and to carry letters and persons to any distance.

The following is the direction of a letter sent from Sheffield to Dublin, a few days ago: "For John——, private soldier, 2d or Queen's Royal Regiment of Foot, King's Military, Infirmary, Dublin. If dead please to read this letter.

DREADFUL PARTY CONFLICT.

IRELAND.—The Enniskillen Chronicle gives the following account of the conflict at Inniniore:—"On Monday last, a scene the most alarming among the many that have degraded this quarter of the country for some time, took place in Inniniore, a large island about five miles distant from Enniskillen. From the circumstances which we have been able to collect, it appears that a duel was to have been fought in the morning, between two as fine young men as ever trod the soil of Fermanagh, the latter a Roman Catholic, and that the friends and adherents of both parties assembled on the occasion in great numbers. From the interference of some gentlemen, the quarrel was made up; but the bad feelings of the parties led to a general conflict, in which the Protestants who were at first by much the weaker party, were overpowered and beaten; and one of them, named M'Cleery, had his skull fractured, and was left senseless on the field. The alarm of this affair, with the usual exaggerations, shortly after spread through the country, and a reinforcement armed with guns, bayonets, and other weapons, repaired to the scene of action—On the appearance of fire arms, the Catholics retreated to their cots on the opposite shore, on the Monlaugh side of the country. The protestants irritated by the circumstances above stated fired and wounded several persons, and afterwards committed considerable excesses in the island. On the news reaching town, two companies of the 66th regiment, accompanied by Magistrates, set off without delay, each taking a different side of the lake, and on their arrivals at the island, the mischief had nearly subsided. Some of the parties on both sides were made prisoners, and a few muskets seized and brought into town. On Tuesday the Magistrates assembled to investigate the business, and have proposed taking information on both sides. That we believe, the matter at present rests. M'Cleery, whose skull is fractured, was not dead a few the last accounts reached us, but remained in a most dangerous state. A fair was held in Maguire-bridge yesterday, which, we understand, was also a scene of battery and bloodshed. On the evening of Sunday last, a Mr Graham, the Permanent Sergeant of the yeomanry corps of this town, was returning from the country, he was attacked by a party near Lisbellaw and beaten in such a savage manner that he was unable to proceed home. Mr Graham is a man of the most peaceable disposition and inoffensive manners; but in the present disorganized state of society here, the best disposed persons are equally the victims of the lawless and turbulent ruffians that distract the neighbourhood."

Genuine Heroism.—When the plague raged violently at Marseilles, every link of affection was broken; the father turned from the child—the child from the father; cowardice and ingratitude, no longer excited indignation. Misery is at its height, when it thus destroys every generous feeling—thus dissolves every tie of humanity. The city became a desert, grass grew in the streets, a funeral met you at every step. The physicians assembled in a body at the Hotel de Ville, to hold a consultation on the fearful disease, for which no remedy had been discovered. After a long deliberation, they decided, unanimously, that the malady had a peculiar and mysterious character, which opening a corpse alone might develope—an operation, it was impossible to attempt, since the operator must infallibly become a victim in a few hours, beyond the power of human art to save him, as the violence of the attack would preclude their administering the customary remedies. A dead pause met added this fatal declaration. Soon after, a surgeon named Guyon, in the prime of life, and of great celebrity in his profession, rose, and said, firmly "Be it so: I devote myself for the safety of my country. Before this numerous assembly, I promise in the name of humanity and religion, that tomorrow, at the break of day, I will dissect a corpse, and write down, as I proceed, what I observe." He left the assembly instantly. They admire him, lament his fate, and doubt whether he will persist in his design. The intrepid and pious Guyon, animated by all the sublime energy religion can inspire, acted up to his word. He had never married, he was rich, and immediately made his will, dictated by justice and piety; he confessed, and in the middle of the night, received the sacrament. A man had died of the plague, in his house, within four and twenty hours. Guyon, at day break, shut himself up in the same room; in his cool and steady hand, he held a pen, and a little crucifix. Full of enthusiasm, never had he felt more firm or more collected; kneeling before the corpse, he wrote—" Mouldering tenement of an immortal soul, not only can I gaze on thee without horror, but even with joy and gratitude. Thou wilt open to me the gates of glorious eternity. In discovering to me the secret cause of the terrible disease, which destroys my native city, thou wilt enable me to point out some salutary remedy: thou will render my sacrifice useful. Oh God (continued he) thou will bless the action thou hast thyself inspired." He began—he finished the dreadful operation, and recorded in detail his surgical observations. He then left the room, threw the papers into a vase of vinegar, and afterwards sought the lazaretto, where he died in twelve hours—a death too blest amid times more glorious than the warrior's, who, to save his country, rushes on the enemies ranks—since he advances with hope at least, sustained, admired, and seconded by a whole army.

Extract of a letter from St. Thomas, June 8.

Yesterday evening a melancholy circumstance occurred here. A Danish gentleman named Gardiner, received information that his wife, a beautiful young woman, of twenty years of age, had formed an improper connexion with a young Englishman or German of good appearance, and respectability, and he therefore made arrangements for proceeding to Copenhagen, in order to place the lady in charge of her mother. He was to sail on the 25th instant, and the lover had also taken his passage for Puerto Cavello. Every thing was settled, and nothing remarkable occurred till yesterday evening, when the wife of Gardiner took advantage of his being occupied in dressing at four o'clock, left his house and proceeded to that of the young man, which she joined before Gardiner's. On entering she locked the door, and immediately afterwards two shots were heard. The people of the house forced open the door, and discovered the young lady a corpse on the bed, with a pistol wound in the lower part of her face, and the pistol at a considerable distance; whilst the young man was on the ground, likewise mortally wounded, having discharged his pistol through his mouth. It is presumed that he first destroyed her, and afterwards himself. It would seem also from the position of the bodies that she urged him to the act, as well as from the circumstances of a letter having been previously written by her, to her husband, confessing her infidelity, commending him and blessing him to marry a worthy woman, and to forget her, and more especially if upon reading his virtues. This is the account given, as the young man had manifested no previous unpleasantness but conversed cheerful y with some friends in his counting house, until within half an hour of the fatal moment: more especially was predetermination to die on the part of the woman evident, as upon discharging his hand, he suddenly seemed to make a grasp at the jaws of the folding gate and door, which had come against his body whilst struggling; his hand, however, struck against one of the jaws, and he immediately dropt it to his side, clenching his fingers in apparent agony. He struggled long and violently. The body was cut down after it had hung about three hours. He was cut off by his father and brother in a cart with all speed, under the fond but delusive hope, that efforts to restore animation would not prove unavailing. We understand the father had, a day or two previously, called on a medical gentleman in St Nicholas, and mentioned what he intended to do on getting the body of his son.—The surgeon immediately opened a vein in the temple, but without effect. He was more successful on opening the jugular vein, which flowed so freely that he could have taken any quantity of blood. The body was rubbed, and the usual methods adopted for producing circulation put in practice, but without effect; for no sooner was the blood drawn than the body became cold—the aspect of the countenance, and every thing pointing it beyond doubt that the functions of life had now been too long suspended to expect that any human efforts could recal them again into action. He is, however, confident, that if Campbell had been suspended for ten minutes less, the result would have been very different.—Above five pounds of blood have been taken from the arm under all the circumstances of the case, he had strong hopes of success had he been aided with the assistance of a galvanic battery.—Stirling Journal.

The Eye.—This very delicate and beautiful organ is exposed to many injuries, though protected by several admirable contrivances, which demonstrate design and considerate kindness on the part of the Creator.

A fact is stated in the Newspapers, of a person's becoming blind, in consequence of the eyes being pressed by another person in sport, is a remarkable instance. No visible injury had been sustained by his eyes; but it is at least probable, that, in the struggle, the optic nerves were either ruptured, or otherwise rendered useless. It is well known that the eye is merely an instrument. By means of its humours which answer the purpose of lenses, the rays of light are brought to a focus on the retina, forming an image of the external object. The retina is an extension of the medullary portion of the optic nerves, which are connected with the brain. If these nerves are divided, the communication is destroyed, and the eyes are rendered useless, though otherwise perfect. The following case, related by and English Surgeon, is in point:—

In going through an hospital on the Quay at Ostend, in order to assist the wounded French officers that arrived from Waterloo the night before, I was accosted by a tall man of about fifty years of age, a Brigadier General. He was a true picture of the old Napoleon soldier—the thick mustachio—the dark carried and careless looks—the stern countenance—the round earrings—the decoration of the legion of honour—all marked him out as one of the sons of glory. I advanced towards me bowing, and seemed to fix his full black eyes on mine, as he asked for my assistance. I begged to know where he was wounded; and he informed me that he had been shot through the head, that the wounds were nearly healed but that he was quite blind. I looked at his eye, and found no alteration in them from the natural appearances;—but on closer inspection found the pupils dilated and fixed. He then allowed me the extraction and exit of the ball. It entered between the top line of the ear and whisker, and pierced between the top line of the ear and whisker, and having passed across the head, came out exactly opposite but a little between the other ear and whisker. It was therefore evident that the loss of vision was occasioned by the optic nerves having been totally divided by the ball in its passage. From the intensity with which I examined his case he seemed to gather hopes of relief. I hesitated as I told him of the irreparable loss of his sight, and I saw the tears start from those fine, but now useless eyes, with a sympathy that instantly affected my own—it was one of the most extraordinary wounds I ever witnessed which did not prove fatal.

From the Albion.

Among the numerous passengers by the New York, we notice the arrival of three members of the British Parliament:—The Honorable Edward Geoffery Stanley, for Stockbridge, grandson of Earl Derby; John Evelyn Denison, Esq. for New Castle under Lyme, Staffordshire, and James Stuart Wortley, for Bossiney, in Cornwall. They are quite young members having all been returned to Parliament since the last general election. These Gentlemen have commenced their tour by proceeding up the Hudson, and will visit the Canal, Niagara falls, the Canada s, and the Eastern States, and return to New York in the autumn. It is we understand, their intention to proceed to the south, and to be at Washington during the next Session of Congress. We are gratified to learn, that they have determined to rough it, and perform their journey like true travellers, by taking the regular conveyances of the roads; a plan which will bring them in contact with all classes of the American people, and of course afford them the best facilities of acquiring a true knowledge of the state of the country they have come to visit. Mr. Stuart Wortley is the son of James Archibald Stuart Wortley, the loyal and independent Member for Yorkshire. The Hon Edward Geoffrey Stanley will after the demise of his father and grandfather, being in the direct line of succession, succeed to the titles and estates of Earl Derby. The title of Earl Derby is, we believe, one of the oldest in the Peerage. Its bearers having on various occasions adorned the page of history with feats of their bravery and patriotism. The Earldom was first granted to Thomas Lord Stanley, (second Baron) by Henry VII. in 1485, for his eminent services at the battle of Bosworth Field.—James, the seventh Earl, was taken prisoner at the fatal battle of Worcester, in 1651, during the civil wars, and was beheaded at Bolton shortly afterwards, notwithstanding his plea of having surrendered to one Capt. Edge, upon the condition of quarters being given.

This noble Earl was truly loyal, and of a great and heroic spirit; he fell a sacrifice to the dastardly revenge of Oliver Cromwell, who sent a letter, offering him his own terms, if he would deliver up the Isle of Man; to which the Earl returned the following spirited answer:

"I received your letter with indignation, and with scorn I return you this answer, that I cannot but wonder whence you should gather any hopes from me, that I should (like you) prove treacherous to my sovereign; or else you cannot be insensible of my former actings in his late Majesty's service; from which principle of loyalty I am no way departed.

"I scorn your proffers, I disdain your favours; I abhor your treasons; and am so far from delivering this island to your advantage, that I will keep it to the utmost of my power to your destruction.

"Take this final answer, and forbear any further solicitations; for if you trouble me with any more messages upon this occasion, I will burn the paper, and hang the bearer.

"This is the immutable resolution, and shall be the undoubted practice of him, who accounts it the chiefest glory to be,

"His Majesty's
"Most loyal and
"Obedient subject,
"DERBY."

Those who have read that excellent Novel, the King of the Peak, founded on facts which occurred during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, will recollect the amiable character of the Earl of Derby of that day; although, as the author remarks, the then Edward Stanley "was the proud, fierce, and wicked character here pourtrayed, I have to request that he (Earl Derby) will pardon me for having raked up the ashes of the only bad man of his house, to supply a picture in my gallery."
