Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

The London Gazette of Sept. 5. announces the appointment of Major General Sir Howard Douglass, as Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick.

New York Spectator.

HARVEST IN ENGLAND.—The London Courier of September 6th, contains an account of the Harvest in England, from which we make the following summary.

According to general report the harvest will not only be abundant in quantity, but also most excellent in quality, notwithstanding the long continuation of wet weather which has preceded. The markets can hardly be said to rise.

In Essex the corn is represented as extremely good and abundant; and the prospect of better weather for harvest flattering. In Cornwall grain of every description has ripened under every advantage. In low situations the farmers have suffered partial damage by the rising of the waters on Saturday and Sunday se'night. In Somerset and Gloucester, more than half the wheat, and much of the barley and oats have been cut, and a great deal is already stacked. More abundant crops were never known. In Berkshire, a great deal of wheat has been housed in excellent order. Wilts has had most rain, but the crops are fair though rather backward. In Sussex the crops look remarkably well, with the exception of beans. From Lincolnshire the reports are favourable for every thing but beans. The accounts from some of the northern counties are not quite so favourable; but there the harvest has not so far advanced.

The Irish agricultural reports give promise of an abundant and cheap season. Wheat will be a good average crop. Oats are rather complained of; Barley, rye and rape promise well; Potatoes, on account of the rain, were late in planting, but in some fields they cover the ridges; on the whole a pretty fair crop. The frost has blighted a considerable number of the fruit trees.

In Scotland, although the harvest is very late, the crops are every where reported abundant.

The accounts from France and Spain, and mostly all parts of Europe, are favourable; so that there is every prospect of the poor and working classes throughout Europe being blest this year with bread, not only cheap, but of good quality.

LORD BYRON.—A gentleman who has just arrived at Boston from Leghorn, and who had a personal interview with his lordship, states that he has cast his fortune on a single point, to sink or swim with the Greeks. He is said to have purchased a brig entire, and embarked his whole fortune for the purpose of proceeding to Constantinople to endeavour to release a number of Greeks held in captivity there, mostly belonging to Scio. If he is frustrated, it is his intention to buckle on his armour, and breast the storm of war.—N Y D. Adv.

The Duke of Cumberland, we regret to hear, is nearly deprived of sight. His Royal Highness is entirely blind of his left eye, and the vision of the right eye is so imperfect, as to oblige him to use a large glass to discern objects, and even occasionally a stick.

(Englishman)

The following is an Extract of a Letter from the Agent to Lloyd's at Waterford, dated 30th August, which, compared with the one from Cowes, appears very extraordinary.—"This day put back the Brig George the Fourth, to this place, Capt. Thomas, bound to Quebec, having been run foul of on the 15th instant, by a Ship belonging to London, 700 tons burthen, laden with timber; the Brig had her foremast, main topmast, and bowsprit carried away, and the Ship lost two of her masts." This letter does not mention any lives having been lost, and we trust may prove correct.

Montreal Paper.

A letter from Civita Vecchia in Italy reports, that, in working on the highway near Corneto, a sepulchral vault has been discovered, cut out in the rock. In the interior was found a corpse, placed on a coffin, cut also out of the rock; beside it were laid a helmet, two very long spears, a sword, and two metal bucklers, decorated with bas reliefs of excellent workmanship, but much worn. There were also a number of elegant copper and earthenware vases, some of which had rich ornaments. The general opinion is, that it was the tomb of some ancient Etruscan warrior. Tarquinia, a town the existence of which retrogrades to more than twenty-five centuries.

PROGRESS OF PRINTING, &c.—In the English parliament, the annual motion for reform in the representation had been made by Lord John Russell, and negatived by a vote of 269 to 164. The result was received with loud cheering by the opposition, as showing an accession of strength to their cause. In the course of his speech, Lord Russell stated several facts to show the improved state of all classes from the increased means of instruction, and the propriety and justice of giving to the mass of population a representation proportioned to its increased relative weight and improvement. He stated as among the results of his inquiries into the extention of the means of instruction, that the sales by one bookseller's house in London, amounted to £5,000 000, sterling, (upwards of $22,000,000,) worth of books; that they employed sixty clerks, paid £5,500 for advertisements, and gave constant employment to no fewer than 250 bookbinders. The increase of circulating libraries had also been very great, there being about 1000 of those establishments in the kingdom, and from 1500 to 2000 marts for the sale of books distributed throughout the country; in addition to all which was the quantity of newspapers annually distributed. The number of which, for the year 1821, he estimated at 23.600.000, and of those 11,000,000 were London daily papers, country papers, 7,000,000. The increase of presses in 40 years had been from 79, the whole number in 1781, to 284, in 1822; yet with a population of 18.000,000 so provided with the means of knowledge, a majority of the representation in the parliament was returned by less than 8,000 electors.

SILVER MINES.—More than nine tenths of all the silver in the known world is derived from the mines of Spanish America, which produce, according to Humboldt, $43,500,000 annually; and of this sum Mexico alone yields more than $20,000,000. The mine of Valencia is one of the most noted. Its depth is from 1640 feet, and it extends horizontally for about eight miles. The number of persons employed is about 3100, of whom 1800 work under ground, 900 of whom are employed in carrying the ore up the shafts that form the descent into the mine, and 400 in removing it to the places where it is tried and roasted. The annual produce is about £2600,000, and the expense of working it £200,000.

Death of Tam O'Shanter.—At Lochwinnoch, on the 9th inst. died Thomas Reid, labourer. The importance attached to this circumstance arises from his having been the celebrated equestrian hero of Burns' poem, TAM O'Shanter. He was born on the 21st of October 1745, in the clachan of Kyle, Ayrshire, and has now at length surmounted the mosses "rivers, slaps, and stiles of life." For a considerable time past he had been in the service of Major Hervey, of Castle Temple, and for nine months previous to his death the many ills of old age and disease were soothed as far as possible by a fostering and laudible generosity. Reid, however, retained to the last his desire of being "fu' for weeks together."

ANECDOTE.—An Irishman just landed on our shores, was straying about the wharves near the Fulton Market, (New-York) and observed the fish in cars which were floating in the dock, and occasionally saw their owners open them and take out a quantity to expose for sale in the market. The Irishman, not being aware that the fish are emptied in these cars from the smacks to keep them alive, and supposing them to be public property, he enquired if there were any game laws in this country. Being informed that there were none, he immediately applied himself with a small drag net, and opening one of the cars, he hauled up a large mess of fine fish, and in the presence of several persons, was congratulating himself on his good luck in living in such a country, and was proceeding home with his prize, when the owners, to his utter astonishment, stopped him and gallanted him to the Police, where he was charged with stealing the fish. "Stealing fish?" said the Irishman, "Sure and I catch'd them in the river, all alive and kicking." "But they are in floating cars, and are private property" said the magistrate. "Private property! The fish of the sae, to be private property! I ax'd if there were game laws here, as they were in Ireland, and they told me no; and by the powers, says I, this is the very country, my jewel; and I help'a myself to a good bunch, and the people all look'd at me and laughed; stating fish indeed! I'm an honest man, your honour, and never stale at all."

As it was clearly apparent that no robbery was intended, he was discharged with admonitions not to be again found fishing in troubled waters.

THE INQUISITION.

The Inquisition was first instituted by Pope Innocent III. in the year 1200. It was introduced into Spain, in 1231, and was sufficiently intolerant in that country until 1481, when Ferdinand V. and Pope Sixtus IV. established what is called the modern inquisition, under the direction of inquisitors general, with a host of subordinate officers. The number of victims in Spain, under 45 inquisitors general, between 1481 and 1820, were 34,

—INDEX AT FRONT.

658 burnt alive, 18,049 burnt in effigy, and 288,214 condemned to the gallies or to imprisonment. Total 340,921. If to these are added the condemnations in other countries, subject to Spain, such as Sicily, Sardinia, Flanders, the Canary Isles, South America and the Indies, the number would be appalling.

PRISON BREAKING.—One of the most astounding feats of prison breaking upon record was that of Jack Shephard, the celebrated burglar, who twice escaped from Newgate. The second time was the extraordinary thing, as on account of the former one he was heavily ironed and vigilantly watched. In the night, after the keeper had examined his irons and locked him in his cell, he got off his handcuffs, and with a crooked nail, opened the great padlock which fastened him to the floor. His feet locks he could not get rid of, but tied them up with garters. He then went up the chimney, after removing an iron bar in it, an inch square into a room over his own; and thence by the help of the bar and a great nail he broke through several strong doors, all bolted and barred, passing through the chapel, and arriving at the leads of the gaol. Then, in order to descend, he went back and fetched his blanket, and wrenched an iron spike from the chapel door, with which he made fast the blanket to the wall, and let himself down upon a turner's house adjoining. The garret door on the leads was open, through which he entered; and after remaining till the people were gone to bed, he descended the stairs and went out at the street door. A preacher of that day, when the story was ripe, made the following pious application of Jack's adroitness:—"Let me exhort ye, then, to open the locks of your hearts with the nail of repentance; burst asunder the fetters of your beloved lusts; mount the chimney of hope; take from thence the bar of good resolution; break through the stone wall of despair; and all the strong holds in the dark entry of the valley of the shadow of death; raise yourselves to the leads of divine meditation. Fix the blanket of faith with the spike of the church. Let yourselves down to the turner's house of resignation; and descend the stairs of humility, so shall you come to the door of deliverance from the prison of iniquity, and escape the clothes of that old executioner, the devil, who goeth about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour."

A Lunatick's Cunning.

A very laughable incident lately occurred at the Lunatick Asylum at Lancaster, England. A parish officer from the neighbourhood of Middletown took a lunatick to the asylum, pursuant to an order signed by two magistrates. As the man was respectably connected, a gig was hired for the purpose, and he was persuaded that it was merely an excursion of pleasure, on which he was going. In the course of the journey, however, something occurred to arouse the suspicions of the lunatick with respect to his real destination; but he said nothing on the subject, made no resistance, and seemed to enjoy his jaunt. When they arrived at Lancaster, it was too late in the evening to proceed to the asylum, and they took up their quarters for the night at an inn.—Very early in the morning the lunatick got up and searched the pockets of the officer, where he found the magistrate's order for his own detention, which of course let him completely into the secret.—With that cunning which madmen not unfrequently display, he made the best of his way to the asylum, saw one of the keepers, and told him that he had got a sad mad fellow down at Lancaster, whom he should bring up in the course of the day; adding, "He's a very queer fellow, and has got very odd ways. For instance, I should not wonder if he was to say, at the inn, that he was bringing me; but you must take care of him, & not believe a word that he says." The keeper of course promised compliance, and the lunatick walked back to the inn, where he found the overseer still asleep. He awoke him, and they sat down to breakfast together. "You're a very lazy fellow to be lying all day. I have had a good walk this morning." "Indeed," said the overseer. "I should like to have a walk myself after breakfast: perhaps you will go with me." The lunatick assented; and after breakfast they set out, the overseer leading the way toward the asylum, intending to deliver his charge; but it never occurred to him to examine whether his order was safe.—When they got within sight of the asylum, the lunatick exclaimed, "what a fine house that is!" "Yes," said the overseer, "I should like to see the inside of it." "So should I," rejoined the lunatick. "Well," said the other, "I dare say they will let us look thro': however I'll ask." They went to the door; the overseer rang the bell; and the keeper whom the lunatick had previously seen, made his appearance with two or three assistants. The overseer then began to fumble his pockets for the order, when the lunatick produced it, and gave it to the keeper, saying.—This is the man I spoke to you about, you will take care of him; shave his head, and put a strait waistcoat on him." The men immediately laid hands on the poor overseer, who vociferated loudly that the other was the madman, and he the keeper; but as this only seemed to confirm the story previously told by the lunatick, it did not at all tend to procure his liberation. He was taken away and became so very obstreperous, that a strait waistcoat was speedily put on him, and his head was shaved secundum artem. Meanwhile the lunatick walked back to the inn, paid the reckoning, and set out on his journey homewards. The good people in the country, were, of course, not a little surprised on finding the wrong man return; they were afraid that the lunatick in a fit of frenzy had murdered the overseer; and they asked him with great trepidation, what he had done with him—? "Done with him," said the madman, "why I left him at Lancaster Asylum, as mad as h—ll;" which, indeed, was not very far from the truth; for the wits of the poor overseer were well nigh overset, by his unexpected detention, and subsequent treatment. Farther inquiry was forthwith made; it was ascertained that the man was actually in the asylum. A magistrate's order was procured for his liberation; and he returned home on Wednesday last, with a handkerchief tied round his head, in lieu of the covering which nature had bestowed upon it.—London Paper.

FRANCE AND SPAIN.

It is our belief that the French are heartily sick of the contest in which they are engaged, and that the Constitutionalists have at present but little hope of maintaining their ground, yet it seems to us that if peace were immediately proclaimed, there could be no real peace, or tranquility, in that wretched region, for years to come. The state of affairs in Spain presents to our view nothing but "confusion worse confounded." The French appear to be wholly dissatisfied with the extravagant expectations and exterminating wishes of the Royal Junta created by themselves, and have so much taken away all real power from that body. The Junta of course hate the French; the Constitutionalists hate both; and a considerable part of the nation probably execrate them all. If, therefore, a formal peace were concluded immediately by Spain, it is clear, must be long torn by the most envenomed factions. Who can predict the event? we rejoice to leave with Him who use prerogative it is, to bring order out of confusion, light out of darkness, and good out of evil.

From the New York Spectator, October 23.

By the British Packet, Ship Lady Lucy, London, which arrived last evening from Falmouth, via Halifax, the Editors of the Commercial Advertiser have received their regular file of various London Papers, to the 9th of September inclusive, being three days later from London, than our former advices, four days later from Paris, and seven days later from the South of France.

These papers furnish two important articles of intelligence. The Government of Portugal has joined France in her war against Spain, and sent a naval force to assist in the siege of Cadiz; and the Trocadero, a fortress in the island of Leon, has been taken possession of by the troops under the Duke d'Angoulême. Should the latter part of this intelligence, which comes in an official shape through the Moniteur of the 7th of September, prove correct, as we fear it will, it is a most unfavorable commencement of the attack upon Cadiz. For the last two months, we have been told that Valdez, the Governor of Cadiz, who is regarded by the whole of the French army as a very able man, and who has been completely master of all the operations of defence, has bent the whole of his attention to fortify this point. He has separated it from the neighbouring land by a trench 35 or 40 fathoms in breadth, into which the sea enters, and filled this immense chasm with a great number of gun boats, placing a ship of war at the entrance. It was the opinion of persons who had seen the works, that it would render an attack on the Trocadero, if not impracticable, at least productive of an immense loss of life. Up to the very last hour, the London Times was very sanguine of the moral impossibility of the French taking this fortress. The peninsula Trocadero, comprising the forts Trocadero, St. Joseph, and Matagorda, shuts up the entrance of the inner port, leaving between the fort Matagorda and Puntales, a channel of only about 500 toises wide. Puntales is built on a point of sand, which also bears the name of Puntales, and this point is at the end of the causeway which unites the island of Leon.

Admiral Hamelin has relinquished the command of the blockading squadron before Cadiz, and Rear-Admiral Baron du Perre had left Paris to take the command in his place.

PARIS, September 7.

Telegraphic Despatch transmitted from Bayonne.

HEAD QUARTERS,
Santa Maria, Aug. 31.

THE MAJOR GENERAL TO THE MINISTER OF WAR.

At three quarters past two o'clock, the Trocadero was carried with great vigour in sight of the Duke d'Angoulême.—The enemy had about 150 men killed and wounded, and we made 900 prisoners and took more than 50 pieces of Cannon in the batteries.—Moniteur.

St. Sebastian still held out. A chasse maree going from that place to England, with officers and soldiers, had been captured by the French squadron. An article dated, "Camp before St. Sebastian, August 24," says, "Deserters often come in from St. Sebastian, but as the reports vary, measures of precaution are taken against them, especially since three of these gentry escaped from the post of mine. It is said that the road from Tolosa to Vittoria is not secure, and the Guerillas have shown themselves in the neighbourhood of these towns.

Sir Robert Wilson.—On the 13th of August, this officer wrote a letter to Count Palmella, the Portuguese minister for foreign affairs, in which he says:—"After the ungenerous vindictive, as well as lawless treatment, I have experienced under circumstances that would have secured me protection and hospitality from the governments of even the most barbarous nations, it is impossible for me to wear the insignia of a country whose government has so grossly violated these duties. The very possession of these insignia implies obligations on my part, which it is not for my honour should any longer exist; and therefore, I have to request that you will take proper measures to have my name erased from the Commander's Roll of the Portuguese Order of the Tower and Sword. Having formerly refused all pay and pecuniary remuneration from the government of Portugal, during the time I was employed in its service, I have the satisfaction now to say, that I am released from every sort of acknowledgment."

GREEKS AND TURKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.

Advices from Zante and Corfu, contained in letters from Trieste, of the 31st ult. mention that the Turkish fleet in that neighbourhood, was in a state of great insubordination, and that the plague prevailed on board many of the ships. That the Greeks maintained a position favorable for an attack but their naval commander had determined to delay it until disease and the mutinous spirit of the sailors had weakened the Turkish fleet in a still greater degree.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.

Extract of a Letter from Smyrna, July 29

We are in hourly expectation of the return of our privateers. Some were before Lemnos, others in the Gulph of Salonica and Volo, and others on the coast of Syria. Yesterday five vessels left our harbour to go to the Dardanelles, and land on the coast of Troy and Ilium, and even further, if they can. Something must accrue from this. It is really astonishing to see that the Greeks are regardless of the formidable fleet of the Captain Pacha, and that they are pillaging the Turkish Coast in spite of his exertions. According to the reports we have here, the Greek cause is prospering everywhere. The Captain Pacha has done nothing, even up to this time. He is still at anchor before Patras, and it is said that a dangerous fever has very much weakened his fleet.

The Spanish of the Morea has ordered the administration of the three Islands to keep their vessels in port till the 23d of August, in order that they may then fall upon the Turkish fleet.

The Agraphiotes, the Chiurmotes, and Chiarmiotes, of the Montiangrins, have all lately revolted against the Turks—Romelie is entirely free from the Turks, except Larissa. It is said the Agraphiotes are ordered to go as far as Trieuta. Seandre Pacha, who was to march against the Greeks with 18,000 men, is prevented from executing his plans by the revolt of the Montiangrins, which gave him sufficient occupation. I believe the Captain Pacha will do nothing this year. Up to this time all he has done is to provision Patras and Corinth. He has landed only a few troops at Patras. There are 20,000 Turks in Lividia, but they have been purposely let in to get hold of their arms and baggage. It is already reported that Odysseus has destroyed a part of them; however, they will never be able to get into the Morea, because the passes are defended by 5,000 men. The Turks are now at Megare. We know that by sea the Turks are insufficient, for their vessels of war carry but few landing troops; so I calculate this terrible campaign is surmounted by the Greeks.

On the side of Volo and Trikeri, the Greeks have again taken the offensive, and we hope the same will take place at Caristo (Negropont) where ten Hydriot vessels have landed troops and ammunition. It is added, that the Turks have been again obliged to shut themselves up in the Castle of Caristo; and that the inhabitants of Negropont are taking vigorous measures to cause the surrender of it.

Extract of Letters from Smyrna, August 19.

The confirmation of the above we have just received, via Athens. It is moreover said, to day, that the castle of Morattina, in Candia, has been taken, and that the Greeks were bombarding the castle of Cannie, by sea and land. Nikotas has arrived before Patras with 16,000 Greeks, to prevent any further landing of Turks. In Livadia Odysseus has defeated in five different encounters the body of troops there. The naval fleet of the Greeks, it is said, and we believe it, is gone out to meet the Turks on their return. The Greeks have 14 ships with them. We have accounts to-day that the Persians have made peace with the Turks.

SOUTH AMERICA.

CURACO, Sept 20.

General Paez is at present in this city—he went down to Laguayra for the purpose of accelerating the departure of the squadron destined for the attack on Puerto Cabello which place will be in our possession in a very short time.

So great is the confidence placed in the government by the inhabitants of this place, that the sum of 26,000 dollars was subscribed by the merchants in the course of three days for the naval service.

The war in Peru is favorable. The auxiliary troops from Colombia, and the 3000 men sent from Chili have changed the fate of that country, so much so, that President Bolivar is shortly expected in Santa Fe.

The armed schr. Centella, Capt. Hopner, has arrived from a cruize with a Spanish prize ship.

A letter from Maracaybo of the 4th inst announces the departure of Comodore Beluche, in 12 days from that date to take the command of the naval operations against Puerto Cabello, in the absence of general Padilla.

Owing to the events which have taken place twice at Pasto and Santa Martha—and to some very important discoveries made from intercepted letters to Spain, the people of Colombia have unanimously and with one common voice demanded the expulsion of the Spaniards from their territory, which has been decreed by the supreme government, excepting those only who have rendered important services to Colombia; the 27th inst. is fixed upon for their departure from this capital and La Guayra; in the former place eight only remain, and two in the latter, from all the other places of Colombia they will be expelled in succession; and it is believed we shall have reason to bless the government, from whose wise measures in this respect, the happiest effects will flow.

[FROM ENGLISH PAPERS.]

CONSECRATION OF THE JEWS SYNAGOGUE.

On the 20th August, an interesting scene took place in the Great Synagogue, Jews' Place, London. The building having been thoroughly overhauled and repaired, and fitted up in great splendour, the ceremony of consecration commenced.

"The gallery was crowded with females, many of whom were very beautiful, and all attired in that fashionable splendour which forms a principal characteristic of the nation. Soon after 5 o'clock, the hour appointed for the ceremony, the Chief Rabbi, attended by the Wardens, Elders, and other officers of the Synagogue, bearing the rolls of the Laws, appeared at the door of the Synagogue; the Chief Rabbi was in his full costume under a canopy of state supported by six persons; the Chief Rabbi, then exclaimed, "open unto us the gates of righteousness; we will enter them and praise the Lord;" they then all entered in procession, preceded by six little boys tastefully attired, each carrying a large silver basket filled with different flowers which they strewed along the path over which the procession passed. In this manner, they circumambulated the Synagogue seven times, during which time seven appropriate psalms were chanted by the Reader and Choir, the music of which was exceedingly grand. Upon the procession approaching the Ark for the seventh time, the rolls of laws, which were all secured in peculiar cases, most splendidly ornamented, were severally placed with in the Ark. The Chief Rabbi then delivered a prayer on behalf of the whole congregation, in which he particulary noticed the providential discovery of the state of the building. Three of the rolls were then taken from the Ark and conveyed in procession to an elevated spot in the centre of the Synagogue, when the Reader, surrounded by all the officers, delivered in a very solemn manner in the Hebrew language, the following prayer for the King and the Royal Family.

"He who dispenseth Salvation unto kings and dominion unto nations, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, who delivered his servant David from the destructive sword, who maketh a way in the sea and a path through the mighty wilderness, may He bless, preserve, guard, assist, exalt, and greatly aggrandize, our Sovereign Lord King George the Fourth and all the Royal Family. May the Supreme King of kings through his infinite mercy, grant them life, preserve and deliver them from all manner of trouble, sorrow and danger. Subdue the nations under the soles of the king's feet, cause his enemies to fall before him, and grant him to reign prosperously. May the Supreme King of Kings through his infinite mercy, inspire him and his Counsellors and Nobles with benevolence towards us and all Israel. In his days and in ours may Judah be saved and Israel dwell in safety, and may the Redeemer come unto Zion, which God, in his infinite mercy grant, and we will say—Amen"

"The rolls of laws being replaced in the Ark, and some other peculiar forms of service having been gone through, a subscription was opened towards defraying the expences of the building, and in a very short time near 1000l. was collected. The mode of conducting the subscription was a most curious one; for the Sabbath having just commenced as the subscription was opened, no money or cheques passed, and every moment one might see the officers who were collecting the names of the subscribers hold up their fingers to any friends whom they saw at a distance, which was to ask him how much he meant to subscribe. As many fingers as the individual held up in return he was immediately put down for so many guineas. The subscriptions were afterwards announced in Hebrew: after this was over, the ordinary forms of Sabbath eve commenced."

BIOGRAPHY.

Mr. N M. Rothschild—Is descended from a German lineage. Mr. R. sought to establish his fortune in England. Various were his vicissitudes in early life. By his industry and prudent conduct, he acquired considerable property in the linen trade at Manchester, vast quantities of which article were exported during the last war to the Continent, where Mr. Rothschild availed himself of the peculiar advantage of his brother's agency in that quarter of Europe.—Previously to the close of the late war, Mr. Rothschild transferred the scene of commercial operations from Manchester to London. He then became a considerable speculator in the Foreign and British Securities on the Stock Exchange, and after the melancholy death of Mr. Goldsmidt, assumed a very prominent station in the money market. But the principle incident which contributed to the rapid elevation of our modern Croesus, was the escape of Bonaparte from Elba, in 1814. In consequence of Mr. R's superior means of information on the Continent, this important occurrence was known to him nearly forty eight hours before it was in the possession of any other person in this country. He did not fail to avail himself of every advantage which this priority of intelligence presented. His agents went into the market and sold prodigious quantities of stock. The consternation was excited. Every one expected danger, none knew were to look for it. The panic was epidemic. On the disclosure of the fact, the general cry was sauve qui peut; and the object of our present article bore off the immense sum gained by his success on this great and extraordinary occasion.

Mr. Rothschild, thus fortified in wealth, and enjoying at this time the almost exclusive means of acquiring the first intelligence from the Continent, soon established for himself a reputation and importance, the maturity of which can scarcely be said to have been accomplished at the present moment. He availed himself, in conjunction with his brothers (who are also great capitalists on the Continent,) of the opportunity of administering to the wants of the King of Prussia, the Emperor of Russia, the Kings of Naples and Spain; the Republic of Columbia and other States, who negociated loans on terms highly profitable to him; and which have, with the advantages of the courses of exchange, and other incidental benefits, realized immense sums in addition to his former speculation in British Stock. But the great coup de main of Mr. R. consisted in his out generalling the Gallic Financiers in the recent French Loan. In that transaction he is supposed to have cleared upwards of 100,000l. by the commission alone, independent of the advantages of the courses of Exchange!

By the fortuitous occurrence of favourable circumstances, Mr. R. has been enabled to amass greater wealth than any man that ever existed in England. It would be impossible for others to estimate his property, when Mr. R. has declared that he could not do it himself. It has been asserted, however, that he can command upwards of Fifteen Millions sterling at any time, if required! When it is considered that "money, the sinew of war," is in its amount illimitable, and in its control so much at the mere volition of Mr. R; it ceases to surprise the reader, that such a man should be necessary to the Potentates of Europe, and that his friendship and assistance should be no less anxiously sought, than promptly and powerfully afforded.

He is about 43 year of age, and possesses a family of 9 children. His mode of life is remarkable for its retired description. Unlike his great predecessor (Goldsmidt,) he does not boast of his chosen and exquisite wines, or herald his hospitality towards the Princes of the blood. His appearance is unostentatious, his deportment familiar, and his manners unaffected and open. His conversational style on change is very acute, and discriminating. He carries about with him no aristocratic feeling; neither does he affect a singularity, the common concomitant of extraordinary genius, and the mental importance of pecuniary plenitude. His face is distinguished by lack of that piercing intelligence, which lights up and animates the expression of those proverbial for their acuteness; but there is a quickness in the eye, which denotes a lively and unremitting watchfulness of the mind, on every subject of general interest.

When engaged in conversation, Mr. R. usually dangles a bunch of keys in his right hand, and to-

If to these are added the condemnations in other countries, subject to Spain, such as Sicily, Sardinia, Flanders, the Canary Isles, South America and the Indies, the number would be appalling.

PRISON BREAKING.—One of the most astounding feats of prison breaking upon record was that of Jack Shephard, the celebrated burglar, who twice escaped from Newgate. The second time was the extraordinary thing, as on account of the former one he was heavily ironed and vigilantly watched. In the night, after the keeper had examined his irons and locked him in his cell, he got off his handcuffs, and with a crooked nail, opened the great padlock which fastened him to the floor His feet locks he could not get rid of, but tied them up with his garters. He then went up the chimney, after removing an iron bar in it, an inch square into a room over his own; and thence by the help of the bar and a great nail he broke through several strong doors, all bolted and barred, passing through the chapel, and arriving at the heads of the gaol. Then, in order to descend, he went back and fetched his blanket, and wrenched an iron spike from the chapel door, with which he made fast the blanket to the wall, and let himself down upon a turner's house adjoining. The garret door on the leads was open, through which he entered; and after remaining till the people were gone to bed, he descended the stairs and went out at the street door. A preacher of that day, when the story was ripe, made the following pious application of Jack's adroitness:—"Let me exhort ye, then, to open the locks of your hearts with the nail of repentance; burst asunder the fetters of your belaved lusts; mount the chimney of hope; take from thence the bar of good resolution; break through the stone wall of despair; and all the strong holds in the dark entry of the valley of the shadow of death; raise yourselves to the leads of divine meditation. Fix the blanket of faith with the spike of the church. Let yourselves down to the turner's house of resignation; and descend the stairs of humility, so shall you come to the door of deliverance from the prison of iniquity, and escape the clutches of that old executioner, the devil, who goeth about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour."

A Lunat'k's Cunning.

A very laughable incident lately ocurred at the Lunatick Asylum at Lancaster, England. A parish officer from the neighbourhood of Middletown took a lunatick to the asylum, pursuant to an order signed by two magistrates. As the man was respectably connected, a gig was hired for the purpose, and he was persuaded that it was merely an excursion of pleasure, on which he was going. In the course of the journey, however, something occurred to arouse the suspicions of the lunatick with respect to his real destination; but he said nothing on the subject, made no resistance, and seemed to enjoy his jaunt. When they arrived at Lancaster, it was too late in the evening to proceed to the asylum, and they took up their quarters for the night at an inn.—Very early in the morning the lunatick got up and se arched the pockets of the officer, where he found the magistrate's order for his own detention, which of course let him completely into the secret.—With that cunning which madmen not unfrequently display, he made the best of his way to the asylum, saw one of the keepers, and told him that he had got a mad fellow down at Lancaster, whom he should bring up in the course of the day; adding, "He's a very queer fellow, and has got very odd ways. For instance, I should not wonder if he were to say I am the king, and that he was bringing me; but you must take care of him, & not believe a word that he says." The keeper of course promised compliance, and the lunatick walked back to the inn, where he found the overseer still asleep He awoke him, and they sat down to breakfast together. "You're a very lazy fellow to be lying all day. I have had a good walk this morning." "Indeed," said the overseer, "I should like to have a walk myself after breakfast: perhaps you will go with me." The lunatick assented; and after breakfast they set out, the overseer leading the way toward the asylum, intending to deliver his charge; but it never occurred to him to examine whether his order was safe.—When they got within sight of the asylum, the lunatick exclaimed, "what a fine house that is!" "Yes," said the overseer, "I should like to see the inside of it. Come, shall we?" "Well," said the other, "I dare say they will let us look thro'; however I'll ask." They went to the door; the overseer rang the bell; and the keeper whom the lunatick had previously seen, made his appearance with two or three assistants. The overseer then began to fumble his pockets for the order, when the lunatick produced it, and gave it to the keeper, saying.—This is the man I spoke to you about, you will take care of him; shave his head, and put a strait waistcoat on him." The men immediately laid hands on the poor overseer, who vociferated loudly that the other was the madman, and he the keeper; but as this only seemed to confirm the story previously told by the lunatick, it did not at all tend to procure his liberation. He was taken away and became so very obstreperous, that a strait waistcoat was speedily put on him, and his head was shaved secundum artem Meanwhile the lunatick walked back to the inn, paid the reckoning, and set out on his journey homewards. The good people in the country, were, of course, not a little surprised on finding the wrong man return; they were afraid that the lunatick in a fit of frenzy had murdered the overseer; and they asked him with great trepidation, what he had done with him—? "Done with him," said the madman, "why I left him at Lancaster Asylum, as mad as h—ll;" which, indeed, was not very far from the truth; for the wits of the poor overseer were well nigh overset, by his unexpected detention, and subsequent treatment. Further inquiry was forthwith made; it was ascertained that the man was actually in the asylum. A magistrate's order was procured for his liberation; and he returned home on Wednesday last, with a handkerchief tied round his head, in lieu of the covering which nature had bestowed upon it.—London Paper.

FRANCE AND SPAIN.

It is our belief that the French are heartily sick of the contest in which they are engaged, and that the Constitutionalists have at present but little hope of maintaining their ground, yet it seems to us that if peace were immediately proclaimed, there could be no real peace, or tranquility, in that wretched region, for years to come. The state of affairs in Spain presents to our view nothing but "confusion worse confounded." The French appear to be wholly disatisfied with the extravagant expectations and exterminating wishes of the Royal Junta created by themselves, and have actually taken away all real power from that body The Junta of course hate the French; the Constitutionalists hate both; and a considerable part of the nation probably execrate them all. If, therefore, a formal peace were concluded immediately, Spain, it is clear, must be long torn by the most envenomed factions. Who can predict the event? we rejoice to have with Him who se prerogative it is, to bring order out of confusion, light out of darkness, and good out of evil.

From the New York Spectator, October 23.

By the British Packet, Ship Lady Lucy, London, which arrived last evening from Falmouth via Halifax, the Editors of the Commercial Advertiser have received their regular file of various London Papers, to the 9th of September inclusive being three days later from London, than our former advices, four days later from Paris, and seven days later from the Head Quarters of the Duke d'Angoulême.

These papers furnish two important articles of intelligence. The Government of Portugal has joined France in her war against Spain, and sent a naval force to assist in the siege of Cadiz; and the Trocadero, a fortress in the island of Leon, has been taken possession of by the troops under the Duke d'Angoulême. Should the latter part of this intelligence, which comes in an official shape through the Moniteur of the 7th of September, prove correct, as we fear it will, it is a most unfavorable commencement of the attack upon Cadiz. For the last two months, we have been told that Valdez, the Governor of Cadiz, who is regarded by the whole of the French army as a very able man and who has been completely master of all the operations of defence, has bent the whole of his attention to fortify this point. He has separated it from the neighbouring land by a trench 35 or 40 fathoms in breadth, into which the sea enters, and filled this immense chasm with a great number of gun boats, placing a ship of war at the entrance. It was the opinion of persons who had seen the works, that it would render an attack on the Trocadero, if not impracticable, at least productive of an immense loss of life. Up to the very last hour, the London Times was very sanguine of the moral impossibility of the French taking the Trocadero. The Morning Herald, comprising the forts Trocadero, St. Joseph, and Matagorda, shuts up the entrance of the inner port, leaving between the fort Matagorda and Puntales, a channel of only about 500 toises wide Puntales is built on a [illegible] of sand, which also bears the name of Puntales, and this point is at the end of the causeway which unites the island of Leon.

Admiral Hamelin has relinquished the command of the blockading squadron before Cadiz, and Rear-Admiral, Baron du Perre had left Paris to take the command in his place.

HEAD QUARTERS,
Santa Maria, Aug. 31.

THE MAJOR GENERAL TO THE MINISTER OF WAR.

At three quarters past two o'clock, the Trocadero was carried with great vigour in sight of the Duke d'Angoulême—The enemy had about 150 men killed and wounded, and we made 900 prisoners and took more than 50 pieces of Cannon in the batteries.—Moniteur.

St. Sebastian still held out. A chasse maree going from that place to England, with officers and soldiers, had been captured by the French squadron. An article dated, "Camp before St. Sebastian, August 24," says, "Deserters often come in from St. Sebastian, but as the reports vary, measures of precaution are taken against them, especially as those of these gentry escaped from the gens d'armes. It is said that the road from Telosa to Vittoria is not secure, and the Guerillas have shown themselves in the neighbourhood of these towns.

Sir Robert Wilson—On the 13th of August, this officer wrote a letter to Count Palmella, the Portuguese minister for foreign affairs, in which he says:—"After the ungenerous vindictive as well as lawless treatment, I have experienced under circumstances that would have secured me protection and hospitality from the governments of even the most barbarous nations, it is impossible for me to wear the insignia of a country whose government has so outrageously violated these duties The very possession of these insignia implies obligations on my part, which it is not for my honour should any longer exist; and therefore, I have to request that you will take proper measures to have my name erased from the Commander's Roll of the Portuguese Order of the Tower and Sword. Having formerly refused all pay and pecuniary remuneration from the government of Portugal, during the time I was employed in its service, I have the satisfaction now to say, that I am released from every sort of acknowledgment."

GREEKS AND TURKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.

Advices from Zante and Corfu, contained in letters from Trieste, of the 31st ult. mention that the Turkish fleet in that neighbourhood, was in a state of great insubordination, and that the plague prevailed on board many of the ships That the Greeks maintained a position favorable for an attack but their naval commander had determined to delay it until disease and the mutinous spirit of the sailors had weakened the Turkish fleet in a still greater degree.

LITERARY.

Mr. Moore has resumed his long suspended task, the Life of Sheridan, and this work may be expected to appear early in the ensuing winter

A Treatise on the Law of Boroughs and Corporations, deduced from the earliest to the present times, and including their general history, the history, origin, and law, of the right of election, and of the king's prerogative in granting charters, as well as the binding effect of charters and bye laws and the power of corporations to admit freemen; with an appendix of records, and charters illustrative of these points; by H. A. Merewether, Esq. of the Inner Temple, Barrister will soon be issued.

Mr A. kermann is indefatigable in adding to the ornament and utility of the juvenile library. The seventh and eighth divisions of his World in Miniature, two volumes each, are now before us. They illustrate the manners, character, and costumes, of Austria and of China; the former with thirty-two, and the latter with thirty coloured engravings. Of these volumes it is sufficient to say that they are inferior in no respect to the parts that were previously published.

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS.

The following morceau, if we may credit common fame, was from the pen of Mary Stuart, queen of Scots. It will, undoubtedly, be thought curious, as tracing one of the human passions (regret,) in a new manner, and as containing, in a plaintive melody, some natural, pathetic, and beautiful touches. It has borne the name, as we have been informed, of a Romance, and there is an air that accompanies it, composed by David Rizzio, musician and secretary to the queen

Heureux séjour de mon enfance;
Adieu France; adieu mes beaux jour.

LOSS OF THE ROYAL OAK.

The Brig Royal Oak, Capt. Darley, outward bound from Quebec to Hull, was lost on the morning of the 15th ult. off Cape Rozier. She sailed on the 11th and until the 14th experienced nothing unfavourable, on that day the wind began to blow strong from the N. East, and by the following morning had increased to such violence as to compel the ship to lie to. In this situation a heavy sea struck her which carried away her stanchions, bulwarks, boats and deck load, starting at the same time her deck timbers; this caused the vessel to fill rapidly, and she shortly fell over, but in about ten minutes righted again, with the loss of the foremast and bowsprit, and three of the crew, the second mate, cook and a boy; the remaining number, viz: the Captain, Mate, carpenter, 4 seamen and 2 boys, now used their endeavours to get to the fore part of the vessel, and succeeded in saving the 2 boys, who were washed over by the violence of the waves. Here they remained some hours, benumbed with cold and exhausted with exertion; in the course of which time two of the seamen died. Towards evening, the rest (5 in number,) got into the main top, where they remained, with the exception of the Captain, who returned on deck the same night, and was washed over board until the 19th, when the Ship Margaret, Capt. Creighton, from Hull, bove in sight; and immediately despatched two of her boats to the wreck, which brought off the survivors, who were in a shocking state of debility for want of food, having their hands and feet severely frost bitten. From Capt. C. they gratefully acknowledge to have received every mark of kindness and attention that humanity can bestow; and by him they were landed at Quebec on Monday last Names of the survivors. Matthew Greenwood, first Mate, John Green, Carpenter, Charles Shuttleworth and Robert Smith, seamen. The Mate and the two seamen are in the Emigrants' Hospital, in a fair way to recover.

MONTREAL, Nov 1

Fatal Occurrence.—On the afternoon of the 27th ultimo whilst a number of persons were assembled at what is termed a "Logging Bee," in the Signory of Argenteuil, Reubin Chambers, a Mulatto man, was observed walking about the field with a handspike on his shoulder, and evincing marks of his intention to quarrel. From the menacing attitude of Chambers, many persons were induced to retire, dreading the consequence of a quarrel with him;—he at length took a boy by the collar, and called him violently round a stump the boy cried out from the pain, when James Mcintire, late of the Parish of Calender Perth shire in Scotland went up in order to relieve the lad from the grasp of Chambers, who immediately loosed his hold, and without any further provocation struck the unfortunate McIntire on the head with the hand spike, which broke the Scull, and caused his death in about three hours afterwards! He has left a wife and four children to lament his untimely fate—and the afflicted widow is daily expected to give birth to a fifth child. An inquest was held on the body, which rendered a verdict of wilful Murder against Chambers—he was accordingly apprehended and is now in the Gaol of this city. We are sorry to add that the wretched man so far from showing any marks of contrition for the commission of this barbarous act, boasted of the deed, and said he was rejoiced at sending a Scotchman out of the world!

EXTRAORDINARY NARRATIVE.

About twenty five years afterwards, an elderly lady of honour, the Baroness U——, was gathered to her right noble and illustrious ancestors. She made, as it is called, a very edifying exit; and, by her will, bequeathed a legacy of fifty dollars to the church and schools.—Soon after her interment, a story, to which she had herself given occasion, by a confession made on her death-bed, began to be whispered in the higher circles. The substance of it was as follows:—

"Count T—— had been in her youth the first, and, it might be said also, the only object of her affection. Encouraged by herself, he had for some time, professed himself her admirer, and possessed her favour in the fullest measure. On her side, she was perfectly serious, but probably he was not the same on his; for, in a few months, he suspended his assiduities, and soon afterwards publicly courted the hand of the lady who became his wife. This conduct was thought extremely natural by the rest of the fashionable world, and Baroness U—— alone deemed it an heinous offence. With a heart deeply wounded at his inconstancy, she at first made some attempts to recal her unfaithful lover; but, as they all proved ineffectual, she had secretly vowed to take the most signal revenge. To effect her purpose with the greatest security, she displayed in her exterior so much serenity and composure, that her acquaintance, and even the Count himself, were deceived by it. A new lover was received by her with the utmost cordiality, merely for the purpose of strengthening the delusion, and at length, she even succeeded in gaining the confidence of the newly married Countess T——.

"Thus she continued to be intimately acquainted with all his domestic circumstances; she had always watched for an opportunity for revenge, but had never been able to find one that satisfied her. On the death of the young Countess, which certainly was unexpected, but not unwished, her hopes of regaining his heart revived for a few days. But, as his affliction would scarcely deign to bestow on her a single look, as he had entirely broken off all intercourse with her, as well as with many others this fresh injustice, his grief, and the masquerade, gave birth to the idea of practising a little deception, in order to increase the acuteness of his pain. Having rather more embonpoint than the late Countess, she had compressed herself with a pair of tight laced stays; and in every other particular, had imitated that original as closely as possible. His imagination, the mask itself, and the tone of their conversation, made amends for many deficiencies. As she had appeared at an early hour at the masquerade, in a totally different dress, had purposely spoken to several persons, and even taken off her mask for a few moments close by the Prince and his favourite, it was impossible that the Count, on her appearance in her second dress, should have any suspicion of her. The death's head was a mask under the exterior mask. She had previously taken for granted, that terror would prevent the Count from examining it very closely; but in the worst case every one of her expressions was susceptible of a two fold expl nation. She had long been acquainted with the apartment, a tapestry door, and a back stair case close by it. Imperceptibly to himself, she had easily led the Count impatient for the discovery. Her woman, her only confident, and who had taken care of her from her youth, offended by the Count for refusing to procure her son a place about the court, had been her assistant in this business. This woman, with a pick lock, opened the church yard gate, where she ordered the chairman to set her down; and notwithstanding the darkness of the night, and the horrors of the place, waited for her there with her first dress. She had returned to the masquerade before the Count was found. From that moment it was next to an impossibility that she should be suspected; and so little apprehension did she feel on that subject, that she stood close by one of the chairmen when he was obliged to repeat his wonderful story to the Duke. Her plan of revenge had succeeded to the utmost of her wishes, nay, almost still further. Her woman, the only depository of her secret, had long been dead; but for her own part, she found it impossible to leave the world without first unburdening her heart by an upright confession."

Such was the account that was given of the occurrence. It is not impossible that rumour, which seldom fails to make additions to such a story, may have sheered many little circumstances. It affords, however, a sufficient explanation of every thing but, at first, appeared almost inexplicable; and whoever thinks that the revenge of the Baroness U—— was carried too far, let him recollect this important truth, that in woman, slighted love thinks no danger too formidable, no revenge too cruel.

VOL. II. YORK U. C. THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20. 1823. No. XLVII.

By Authority.

YORK, U. C.
November 14th, 1823.

This day, at one o'clock, the Honorable the Legislative Council waited upon His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR with the Address, of which the following is a copy :—

To His EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General, commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency,

We His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, beg leave to approach your Excellency with our sincere acknowledgements for your very gracious Speech from the throne at the opening of the present Session of the Provincial Parliament.

Participating in the blessings of the general peace enjoyed by the United Empire, and in that spirit of contented industry and obedience to the laws which prevail among the people of this Province, we most cordially join in the satisfaction so kindly expressed by your Excellency; a satisfaction much enhanced by the improving value of the chief productions of the country, which had become greatly depressed on the termination of the late war.

We cannot but feel highly gratified to learn, that the powers and privileges vested in us, by the Constitution have been so wisely and temperately exercised, as to have been attended, in your Excellency's opinion, with much benefit to the Province.

It is with much pleasure that we find the arbitrators appointed under the Canada Trade Act, have reported their decision; and that the sum awarded to this Province, will, without any very material delay, be paid into the treasury.

We shall not fail to direct our attention to such Provincial Laws as are soon to expire; and feeling sensible of the great importance of our commercial intercourse with the United States of America, and the necessity of making its provisions consistent with the spirit of the Acts which have been recently passed by the Imperial Parliament to regulate the Trade of the British Colonies in general, and more particularly of His Majesty's North American Provinces, we shall give to that object our most serious consideration.

Appreciating most highly the cordial intercourse, so happily established between the two Houses of the Legislature, upon a practical discernment of their just and constitutional relations, we feel gratified in assuring your Excellency, that our future conduct will most fully justify the confidence you are pleased to repose in our public spirit from past experience—that every matter of general interest which it may be found expedient to bring before us, will be entertained with zeal and attention, and that your Excellency may safely rely upon the steady continuance of our exertions in pursuing such objects as may tend, under the favour of Divine Providence, to improve the growing resources of the country and the sound welfare of its inhabitants.

WM. DUMMER POWELL,
Speaker.

Legislative Council Chamber,
November, 1823.

To which His EXCELLENCY was pleased to make the following reply :—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,

I THANK you for this kind and loyal address.

I receive with great satisfaction the assurances of your continued disposition to enter with zeal and industry into the consideration of such objects, connected with the promotion of the general welfare, as shall require your attention.

YORK, U. C.
Nov 15th, 1823.

This day, at one o'clock, the House of Assembly waited upon His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, with the Address, of which the following is a copy :—

To His EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency,

We His Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, humbly beg leave to thank your Excellency for your gracious Speech from the Throne, at the opening of the present Session.

We participate in the satisfaction expressed by your Excellency, in the prospect of continued peace to the United Empire, and in the existence of the spirit of contentment and obedience to the Laws, on the part of the people of this Province, while we view with much pleasure the gradual improvement in the prosperity of the country, from the increasing value of its principal productions, and while we acknowledge your Excellency's justice in noticing the anxious endeavours of the Legislature to advance the public welfare, we cannot review the present internal condition of the Province, without expressing our sincere and grateful sense of your Excellency's just and impartial administration.

We assure your Excellency, that we will apply ourselves with diligence and attention to the examination of the Public Accounts, and that your Excellency may securely rely upon our disposition to provide the proper support of His Majesty's Government.

We are happy to entertain, with your Excellency, the expectation of results beneficial to the finances of this Province, from the operation of the late Acts of the Imperial Parliament, which have opened to the North American Colonies, a less restricted intercourse with Foreign Countries; and, while we have deeply to regret our temporary inability to afford efficient aid to objects of public utility, we are most happy to hope, with your Excellency, that the time is not far distant when, without any material additional burthen on the people, it will be in the power of the Legislature to give an effectual impulse to public improvement.

We learn from your Excellency with much satisfaction, that the Arbitrators appointed under the Canada Trade Act, have reported their decision on the arrears of Revenue due to this Province from the Sister Colony, and that no material delay in the receipt of the sum awarded is likely to occur.

We will direct our attention to the Laws about to expire, and in a more especial manner, to that regulating the intercourse between this Province and the United States of America, with a view to establish the same on a footing consistent with the spirit of the Acts which have been recently passed by the Imperial Parliament in regard to the Trade of the British Colonies, and particularly of His Majesty's North American Provinces.

We most fully assure your Excellency of our constant desire to preserve a cordial understanding with the other branches of the Legislature, so necessary to the effectual discharge of the duties committed to us, and that we will entertain at all times with zeal and attention, whatever matters your Excellency may find it necessary to lay before us, and will earnestly endeavour to manifest in all our measures a sincere disposition to unite with your Excellency, and the remaining branch of the Legislature, in all such objects as may tend, under the favor of Divine Providence, to improve the growing resources of the country, and to increase and confirm the welfare of the People.

THE FIRST PROSPECTUS OF A NEW WORK TO BE ENTITLED THE Canadian Annual Register;

OR,

A VIEW OF THE

History, Politics, Literature, and Growth

OF

IN ALL THAT CONSTITUTES THE WEALTH OF NATIONS.

TO BE CONDUCTED AND PUBLISHED ANNUALLY,

BY CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

His Majesty's Printer in U. C.

THE lapse of sixty-five years since the commencement of DODSLEY'S Annual Register in England has shewn the vast importance, and increasing value of that great work;—a work which has become an authority of the highest respectability and consideration on every subject connected with English History (indeed one may say with the History of Europe,) since the period of its commencement;—and, if there be any cause of regret, it is that such an undertaking was not begun at an earlier period.

The number of editions which that work has passed through,—the high price it bears,—and the fact that no library is considered at all complete without it, sufficiently proves its great value and utility.—It forms, indeed, no inconsiderable library in itself; and, if a man had no other book, exclusive of his Bible, he could never want either amusement or instruction.

It is scarcely to be supposed, that a similar work, well conducted, would fail in proving of equal value and importance to other countries; and particularly to those in a state of comparative infancy—CANADA, especially, presents a fine field for such an undertaking.—All that is known, or ever can be known, of its early history may be comprised in little more than an hundred pages; after which, by a similarity of plan with that adopted in the Annual Register of England, all the transactions, events, discoveries, and improvements of each year, worthy of preservation, may be given to the public at a very moderate expense,—less than the cost of the meanest Newspaper in the country;—gradually forming a library, which would contain every thing interesting, or having any reference to the NATURAL and CIVIL HISTORY of the COUNTRY, and becoming a book of such important reference as all the other books in the world, put together, could not supply.

Besides the more serious business of the State, which must necessarily occupy a large portion of the pages of such a work; now, that Newspapers and Magazines are generally conducted by men of respectable talents and attainments, it must occur to readers of every class, that articles of great interest and utility are continually occurring in those periodical publications, which deserve a more lasting record;—such a record is found in an Annual Register on the plan proposed, at a price considerably less than that of any respectable Newspaper, taken singly —This Work will contain all that is considered worth preserving, and that is of interest to this country, in the various Newspapers, Magazines, and other Miscellaneous Publications, both of the old and new world.

That such of the readers of this Prospectus as are unacquainted with the plan of DODSLEY'S Annual Register, (which, with some alterations, additions, and improvements will be pursued in the present undertaking,) may form some judgment of its merits, we shall now proceed without further preface to give an outline of the SECT. XIV.

Account of Books, and other new publications having reference to the country.

Should any important changes occur in Europe, at all likely to affect this country, they will be also noticed under a separate head.

As it is presumed that this work, even if conducted with no more than moderate skill and industry, will gradually become a standard book in this quarter of the world, it is unnecessary to have recourse to any of those arts which are commonly practised by the Booksellers and Reviewers in Europe to puff off their new publications. It is hoped this simple sketch of the design, and the manner in which the first volume (for the present year) will be got up, will be sufficient to obtain that patronage which is so necessary to the support of such an undertaking. If this work is encouraged, it will gradually become of vast importance to public men in every profession, as a book of reference, and in process of time will, in itself, contain an immense body of Canadian History, such as no other book or books could afford. Had such a work been commenced in England soon after the gloom of the middle ages began to disperse, instead of the year 1758—its value would have been now beyond all price.

It being necessary to insure the sale of at least 300 copies before the work is put to press; this Prospectus is thus early published, in order to ascertain the degree of patronage it is likely to obtain. The price to subscribers will be $2½ —to non subscribers, $4—printed on fine English paper, and handsomely done up in boards, and lettered.—No payment will be requested, or desired, until the work is delivered—but an early intimation of the names and address of Subscribers is earnestly requested. either at the U. C. Gazette Office, in York, or at any of the various Agents for the Weekly Register.

Editorial Commentary.

A dispute of a singular character has arisen between the present and ci-devant Editors of the Quebec Gazette, in consequence of the recent change in the management of the official paper, and both parties claiming the same title.—It is not our business to determine the point of law, although we have no manner of doubt as to what it is, for the privileges of copy-right, in this respect at least, are pretty well understood; but, we cannot help expressing surprise that the right of the Executive Government to change one paper for another, as the organ of its official communications with the public, should be for a moment questioned. In our time, no less than three very differently conducted papers, and with various titles, have been successively chosen by the Ministry of England, as their channels for official intelligence, between themselves and the public. It is perfectly ridiculous to deny a privilege to the highest authorities of the State, which is possessed by every private individual. As to the dispute about the title, we humbly conceive it might be readily settled by the use of the word "Official"—The "Quebec Gazette" of Mr. NEILSON, and the "Quebec Official Gazette," conducted by Dr. FISHER, would be publications, unquestionably, as opposite in character as any two Newspapers need to be.

We are glad to see the good people of Nova-Scotia so happily tranquil, content, and unanimous in patriotic and loyal feeling; but when their Editors again draw comparisons, between their own state and that of the other dominions of His Majesty on this continent, we hope they will allow the Upper Canadians to be at least as fortunate as themselves, and confine the agitations alluded to, if any there are, to the Lower Province, and New Brunswick. Halifax papers inform us that their Parliament will meet on the 8th of January.

Little business of importance has been as yet gone into by our Assembly, though much is anticipated during the Session. It is delightful to witness the cordiality, unanimity, and ready willingness of co operation which so evidently subsists between the different branches of the Legislature, and from the continuance of which the hapiest results must emanate. One of the first resolutions of the House of Assembly this week has been to order up Mr. THOMSON, the Editor of the U. C. Herald, to the bar of their house, to answer for the publication of an alleged libel which appeared in that paper on the 11th instant—purporting to be a petition and report from the Commissioners, appointed under a late act, for settling the affairs of the pretended Bank of Upper Canada;—with the following title—"To the Honorable the Commons of the Provinces of Upper Canada in Parliament assembled; the Report of the Commissioners for unsettling the affairs of the pretended Bank of Upper Canada lately established at Kingston,—Greeting, &c &c. This strange production, which has no signature, occupies more than three columns of that paper—and is of a nature, without doubt, well calculated to find out the limits of the freedom of the press in this colony; which, perhaps, may be the object of the real author; we say real, because there is internal evidence to induce us to believe MR THOMSON will acquit himself of being the author, though he may not escape the responsibility of the publication.

Our absence for several weeks is the apology we have to offer to CAPT. MATTHEWS, and others, for the non-appearance of their Communications, which we have only just seen. One of them appears in our Register of this week, and we hope to be excused continuing a controversy, beyond next week, to which there seems to be no end, unless we ourselves attempt the termination. We desired to give the belligerents fair play, and it has been given, so far as we are concerned.—It may be that THEM will accept the olive branch; if so, we cannot object to proclaim peace!

The news from SPAIN is of a nature to induce a belief that it will require at least another campaign for the entire subjugation of that unfortunate country.—The rainy season must have commenced long ere this, and the French have most probably retired into winter quarters.

We take this opportunity of acquainting our friends and the public, that, in order to take full advantage of the size of the Imperial Paper on which this work is now printed, the columns of both the U. C. Gazette and Register will be materially enlarged after the publication of the present number.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

THE RADICALS.—As a further proof of the wisdom, foresight, and accurate predictions of native ruin, bankruptcy, &c. by radical patriots, we are happy to state, that the London Gazette of Tuesday, September 2d, contained not a single failure, a circumstance which has not occurred before for the last thirty years.

ST. JAMES'S PALACE.—The late visit of the Duke of Cumberland to England, was in consequence of the contemplated alterations and improvements in the Palace of St. James, some of the apartments of which he claims as his own by the late King. The Duke does not wish to stand in the way of the proposed alterations, but insists that a residence equal to his rooms, shall be provided before he gives them up. Those engaged in the negotiation, have not yet been able to propose any satisfactory arrangements in the palace.

KING'S SHIPS.—The Masters of His Majesty's Ships are henceforward to have charge of the warrant officers, stores, with an increase of pay, for the trouble and responsibility.

SIR JAMES MCINTOSH.—Immediately after the adjournment of Parliament, Sir James M'Intosh attended the Marquis of Tichfield to Welbeck, to examine the archives of the family, which had not been opened for many years. Sir James, it is said, there discovered some invaluable letters and state papers, which will materially tend to illustrate that portion of his "History of England," to which they belong.—Eng. Pa.

PORTUGAL.—The London Times reports that Portugal has joined France in her war against Spain, and takes the opportunity of venting a severe invective against Mr. Canning and the British Ministry, for having prevented an alliance between that power and Constitutional Spain; the report is not confirmed; the Journal des Debats, however, mentions three Portuguese ships of war, having joined the French blockading squadron before Cadiz. A Cutter, which got out of St. Sebastian, and was bound to England with despatches, has been intercepted by the French cruisers.

TREAD-MILL.—Sir John Coxe Hippisley is making experiments at Cowes, with a large boat, which is moved through the water at the rate of ten miles an hour, by means of six paddle wheels, worked by a hand winch, for the purpose of proving how far this description of mechanical power is applicable to use in gaols; in order to do away with the tread mill, against which the Baronet has strong objections, as being injurious to health, particularly in cases of females.

THE GREEKS.—A letter from Smyrna, received at Boston, dated 17th July, says that great fears are entertained there and at Constantinople, of the safety of the Europeans, in consequence of the subscriptions in England in aid of the Greeks, and that an account of the London Meeting, Speeches, and Subscriptions, has been translated into the Turkish language, and presented to the Grand Seignior.

SOUTH AMERICAN STATES.

The progress of the late Spanish Colonies towards Independence, and great Importance, both in a commercial and political view, is extremely rapid. Arrangements appear to have been entered into between England and Mexico, and the former power will likely, as she has already shewn a great inclination to the principle, generally recognize their Independence. Even Spain, it appears pretty certain, has recognized the United Provinces.

M. GARNERIN, the aeronaut, died a few days ago, in PARIS. About a week before he had a sudden stroke of apoplexy in the Theatre du Jardin Beaujon, in consequence of which he let go the rope of the curtain which was in his hand, and the curtain fell on his head and severely wounded him. The hemorrage caused by the wound retarded for some time his disease. M. Garnerin is the first who attempted the experiment of the parchute.

Severity in East Prussia.—A great number of domestic animals have perished in the course of the last winter and spring, in East Prussia, for want of food, viz. 11,545 horses, 1,969 oxen, 2,234 cows, and 6,397 young cattle of various kinds.

Pleasures of Ice Cream.—An honest sea officer dining at a gentleman's house in a town in Sicily, after the second course was removed, saw, in the shape of various fruits, were advanced by way of rear-guard, as is the custom in those places. One of the servants carried the figure of a fine large peach to the captain, who, unacquainted with deceit of this kind, never doubted but it was a real one, and cutting it through the middle, in a moment had one half of it in his mouth. At first he only look'd grave, and blow'd up his cheeks to give it more room; but the violence of the cold soon getting the better of his patience, he began to tumble it about from side to side in his mouth, water running out of his eyes, till at last, able to hold it no longer, he spit it out upon his plate, exclaiming with a horrid oath, "A painted snow ball, by G—!" Wiping away the tears with his napkin, he turned in a rage to the Italian servant who had helped him, with a "D— your macaroni eyes, you son of a b— what did you mean by that?" The fellow, who did not understand a word of it, could not forbear laughing, which convinced the captain the more that it was nothing but a trick, and he was just going to throw the rest of it in his face, but was prevented by one of the company. When recovering from his passion, and thinking the object unworthy of it, he only added in a softer tone, "Very well, neighbour, I only wish I had you on board ship for half an hour, you should have a dozen before you could say Jack Robinson, for all your painted cheeks."

L'HOMME SANS ARGENT.—A man without money is a body without a son—a walking death—a spectre that frightens every one. His countenance is sorrowful, and his conversation languishing and tedious. If he calls upon an acquaintance, he never finds him at home; and if he opens his mouth to speak, he is interrupted every moment, so that he may not have a chance to finish his discourse, which it is feared will end with his asking for money. He is avoided like a person infected with disease, and is regarded as an incumbrance to the earth. Want wakes him up in the morning, and misery accompanies him to his bed at night. The ladies discover that he is an awkward booby—landlords believe that he lives upon air, and if he wants any thing of a tradesman, he is asked for cash before delivery.

GREEK PIETY.—The master of a Greek vessel and his crew set mished the inhabitants of Marseilles a short time since by carrying the cargo of their small vessel, consisting of rice, to the market place, and distributing it gratis to the poor. It may easily be supposed that their customers increased hourly when the circumstances were made known; and several other cargoes might have been speedily disposed of on the same terms.—These poor men, it seems, were caught in a dreadful storm in the Mediterranean; and having betaken themselves to prayers, according to the forms of the Greek Church, they made a vow to give their cargo to the poor if Providence should be pleased to spare their vessel and their lives for the sake of their wives and families. The storm abated, and they gained Marseilles in safety, where they rigidly performed their vow. It is to be observed, that the master and crew of a Greek vessel are all joint owners, in certain proportions, of a ship and cargo.

PATTERN FOR SPORT-MEN.—The Lord Chancellor possesses strength and activity equal to any man of his age.—His Lordship is in his seventy-fourth year. During his residence at Encombe, his seat in Dorsetshire, his Lordship breakfasts regularly at eight, and goes shooting (as soon as the season commences) at nine—a sport to which his Lordship is very much attached, and is allowed to be as good a shot as any nobleman or gentleman in the country. His Lordship walks over so much ground in the course of the day, that his gamekeeper is frequently knocked up!—Ministerial paper.

Pyroligneous Acid, or Essence of Smoke, a new and valuable discovery.—This essence has been of late applied to the curing of beef and hams, and has proved to be preferable to the common mode of making bacon, its antiseptic and prophylactic qualities can never be known to fail by applying a virtue to the curing of beef and pork hams, and preserving meat a longer time from detriment from flies and hot weather. The trouble and expence that is abridged in the use of this Pyroligneous Acid are amongst those productions which are of real advantage to the user, and consequently to the public at large. One quart of this essence will season one barrel of hams; can be purchased at a moderate price of agents in this city; and those who cure hams can have a smoke house in their barrels, without any shrinkage to the bacon or damage from flies or insects through the year, as the hams are put down in pickle in the same manner as to smoke in the usual way, and one quart of this essence of smoke or pyroligneous acid is put into the barrel with the hams and pickle. After remaining three weeks, you can hang them up to dry, or let them remain till wanted for use. Hams cured in this manner retain all the flavor of the best hams smoked in the usual way. Pork in the barrel can be converted into bacon by pouring this acid into the barrel when covered with brine, and any person can have bacon after cutting pork in slices and applying this acid six hours before wanted for use.

We do not give a description of this acid to raise its merit, or deceive the public, but simply that the community may become acquainted with a discovery which will be productive of real advantage in curing beef and hams, and preserving fresh meat from detriment from flies and warm weather.

The experiments that have recently been made with this acid, in embalming, are sufficient to convince the mind of its power against putrefaction. "The body of Mr. Boardman, a Senator in Congress from the State of Connecticut, who died suddenly in Ohio, has lately been brought home in this acid, at a warm season of the year, without the slightest appearance of putrefaction, or the least change in his features.

CANALS IN ENGLAND.—The number of navigable canals in the United Kingdom is 103; of which 97 are formed in England alone,—not including those whose length does not exceed five miles.—5 in Scotland, and one only in Ireland. The total extent of these canals is 2,682¼ miles; viz 2741 miles of English canals, 149¾ miles in Scotland, and 69¼ miles in the Dublin and Shannon canals. The sum expended in these constructions is estimated at thirty millions pounds sterling; and in some cases the original shares have arisen to fifteen, and even twenty times their original value. In the lines of these canals forty eight subterraneous passages occur, the entire length of which is not accurately known; but forty of them, whose lengths are stated, give a total developement of 57,051 yards, or more than thirty two miles. It is deserving of remark, that of the total length of English canals, more than 1400 miles communicate with the grand navigable line between London and Liverpool, the length of this being alone 264 miles, and it is connected in its course with 45 others, of which the united extent equals 1150 miles. Such is the present state of English navigable canals, not a yard of which existed before the year 1765.

BARCLAY'S BREWERY.—The directors of this establishment, to whom I was introduced by a letter from one of the Barclays, put me in the way of seeing its various parts, and communicated such information as I wished respecting its extent and operations. If any private concern in England, or in the world, is entitled to the epithet of vastness, this is one. It covers about eight acres of ground, and manufactured last year 340,000 barrels of 36 gallons each. The buildings which contains the vats themselves, are enormous. The largest of the latter contain each 4000 barrels. The average number of vats is nearly 100. A steam engine of 28 horse power is employed in driving the machinery, and about two hundred men are engaged in the various works of the establishment; while it is supposed that the sales of persons, dependent upon it without, in the sale and transportation of the beer, is three or four thousand. The three coppers in which the beer is boiled, hold each 150 barrels.

Twenty five gentlemen once dined in one of them, after which fifty of the workmen got in and regaled themselves. One hundred and ninety pounds of beef steaks were thus consumed in one day, in this novel kind of dining room. The tuns in which the beer ferments, hold 1400 barrels each. The carbonic acid in one of them stood about three and a half feet above the liquor, and poured over the side in a continued stream. A candle is instantly extinguished on being placed near the outer edge of this receptacle, and on holding one's face near it, a sharp pungent sensation is felt in the mouth and fauces, not unlike that produced by ardent spirits. An immersion of a few moments would be sufficient to occasion a suspension of voluntary motion.

One hundred and sixty horses are kept on the premises, for the purpose chiefly of transporting the materials to and from different parts of the city. A fine collection of animals employed in one concern, I imagine is no where to be seen.

This is, upon the whole, I believe, the largest brewery in London. It formerly belonged to Thrale, the friend of Dr. Johnson, who, as executor to the estate, sold the establishment to its present owners. One of the latter informed a friend of mine, that the Doctor in treating with them for the purchase, remarked in his characteristic manner:—"Gentlemen, it is not merely these boilers and these vats that I am selling to you, but the potentiality of acquiring wealth beyond the dreams of avarice."

IRISH KNIGHTHOOD.—The twelve Judges of England have given an unanimous opinion, that the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland still possesses the same power of conferring knighthood that he did before the union of the kingdom with Great Britain.

CORONER'S PROCLAMATION.—In 1547, a Proclemation was issued by Henry the 8th:—"That women should not meet together to babble and talk, and that all men should keep their wives in their houses."

IDOLATRY OF OUR ANCESTORS.—Our ancestors worshipped many deities, or deified heroes, Woden or Odin, under whose guidance they migrated into Europe; Thor, the thunderer or god of thunder; Frigg, who answered to the Venus of the Romans, and from their several deities we received the names of the days of the week. Sunday—Monday, (Moon day.) Tuesday, (Tuet's day or Tuder.) Wednesday, (Woden's day.) Thursday, (Thor's day.) Friday, (Frigg's day.) and Saturday, (Sater's day.) All authors agree that human victims were sacrificed to their deities, and that the festivals devoted to their worship were scenes of riot and revelry.

SPAIN.

The Cortes were opened on the 6th, and the President of the permanent committee delivered a short address, in which he stated to them the object of the convocation, and mentioned that causes and events, which it would be superfluous to specify, had brought things to a dreadful crisis, but that the fault was not theirs, and their consciences would remain undisturbed. The oath prescribed by the Constitution was taken by the members present, of whom we have counted, on the list of names, upwards of one hundred, comprising Argu-lles, Galiano Valdez, and the most resolute patriots. A committee was appointed to wait on the King with the notification that the Cortes were installed.

MESSAGE FROM THE KING.

In the evening, all the ministers of state being present, the following message from the King, was read to the assembly by the speaker:

"Gentlemen Deputies.—On that important day on which the ordinary Cortes of the present year closed their session, I announced to you that if circumstances should require it, I would seek in the Extraordinary Cortes, a means of safety for the vessel of state. An exposition which my ministers are, by my order, to submit to you, will shew that the vessel of the state is on the point of being wrecked, if the Congress do not exert themselves to save it. What is to be laid before you will also palpably evince how ineffectual have been all the efforts made to obtain an honourable peace; because the enemy, bent upon pursuing his purpose of interfering, against all right, in the affairs of this kingdom, persists in not treating but with me alone and free (conmigo solay libre) and will not consent to regard me as free unless I go to place myself amidst his bayonets. Inconceivable and ominous freedom, whose sole basis is the degrace of delivering yourself at discretion into the hands of your enemy!

"Make provisions, Gentlemen Deputies, for the exigences of the country, from which I should not, and will never separate my lot, and being convinced that the enemy holds as nought reason and justice, unless they be supported by force, examine quickly the evil and the remedy."

After the reading of this energetic discourse, the speaker suggested that the exposition spoken of, must be considered in secret sitting; and the doors were soon after shut. At the re-opening of them, the speaker stated, it has been resolved to make the exposition public, which communicated to the Cortes the lamentable condition of the national affairs; the steps taken by the executive government since the invasion of the French; the means which had been repeatedly used to procure an honourable peace; the futility of all the attempts, owing to the obstinacy of the enemy in his purpose; the particular situation of the Isle of Cadiz; the dearth of resources, and the necessity of a vigorous application by the Cortes of all attainable means for the ends of the cause maintained in the present struggle.

The exposition was then referred to a special committee, as well as the last report to the Cortes in secret sitting, of Don Cayetano Valdes, representing that the Count de Bourdesoult, commander in chief of the French forces at the lines, had announced to him that the reply given by His Catholic Majesty to the communication made the day before, to Lieutenant General Alava not being satisfactory, and H. R. H. the Duke d'Angouleme not meaning to entertain any negotiation upon other basis than those which he had specified—he expected that a satisfactory reply would be given by eight o'clock in the evening of the 5th; otherwise, all negotiation would be broken off, and matters remain as they were.—Valdes stated, in rejoinder, that the extraordinary Cortes having been convoked, he could send no answer by the hour designated, but would give one as soon as possible after the meeting of the Cortes. This body forthwith adopted a motion, made by a member, to invest a Junta or Committee of Defence, selected by the governor of the fortress of Cadiz, with unlimited power to take what measures said committee might deem suitable for the defence of the Island of Cadiz.

We observe by the proclamations of the military Governor, Don Manuel de Intra, that every male between the ages of 18 and 45, was to present himself within three days after the 4th September, to the constitutional municipality, to be armed and embodied for the public service—that requisitions were issued for forty thousand sand-bags, and for provisions and munitions of every description; and in short, that every preparation was on foot for holding out to the last extremity.

At a meeting of the Cortes, on the 7th of September, the answer of that body to the King's message was submitted. They echo his language concerning the conduct and propositions of the French, and pledge themselves to defend his person and the honor of the Spanish name at all hazards. The answer was adopted without debate. Senor Galiano then read the report of the Committee to whom was referred the Exposition of the State of the Nation—Its force—that the government had made fruitless attempts to bring about a suspension of arms, and a negotiation which might lead to an honourable peace, and to engage the mediation of a great neutral power; and that the reply of the enemy excluded all other basis of an armistice or negotiation than the surrender of the King and royal family and of the Isle of Cadiz to the French troops—terms which the executive government had deemed dishonourable, and was disposed to perish rather than admit. The Committee applauded the disposition of the government, and recommended that the most absolute and unbounded authority to draw forth and use the national resources for defence, should be conceded to it anew. The Report was adopted; and a committee of the Cortes named to concert with the ministers touching measures in reference to defence, which it might be proper to propose for the approbation of the Cortes. The question was asked by a member whether the government remained authorized "to continue negotiations with whatever power it might have instituted them, with a view to obtaining an honourable peace, which should secure the civil and political liberties of Spain, and the throne of His Majesty." Argueiles, replied that the Executive Government having the exclusive right to make war and peace, no limitation upon the exercise of its prerogative was imposed in this instance.

We infer from what we have read in the Cadiz papers, that there was but little probability of a compromise. It is known that Cadiz had not surrendered on the 19th Sept.

The French are very active, and anxious to effect the reduction of Cadiz before the rainy season commences; should they not succeed, it is probable the place will hold out till next year. We may expect the first rains early in October, perhaps before. Should the French fail before Cadiz, they will probably consent to negotiate under the mediation of England. Sir Wm. A'Court is still here; report says he is to proceed to Cadiz very soon to commence negociations. Let the result be what it may—restoration of the King to his absolute authority—a representative government, under the guarantee of England—or a confirmation of the present Constitution, there will be no peace in Spain; the civil war has been lighted up, and will continue for a long time; bitter animosities have been engendered, which nothing but blood can allay."

BATTLE IN CATALONIA.

Extract of a letter from Tarragona, dated the 28th of Aug. received through France:—"Our victories of yesterday and to day have been complete; the enemy under M. Mouces, attacked our line from the sea to the Reus Road; his columns were led into action by many superior officers, who attempted to turn our flanks and get possession of the heights of Loretto and Mount Oliva; it was evidently his intention to establish himself in these positions, which gave him an opportunity of pressing the blockade, and eventually detaching a part of his forces against his Excellency, General Milans, a measure which he had attempted on the 27th, and failed in, through the decision, promptness and courage, manifested during the sortie, which dislodged his advanced posts, and endangered the safety of the division left to cover the blockade. His Excellency General Milans, taught by the example of Suchet's movements in 1810 11, had caused redoubts to be constructed near the aqueduct, on the heights, and on our right, between the last bastion and the sea; these commanded all the roads, covered the defiles, and secured a retreat in case of reverse; the extreme left was flanked by the Fracoli and Fort Royal. At 8 o'clock on the morning of the 28th, the enemy advanced in three columns on Mount Oliva and on Loretto; the third acted as a reserve, and subsequently came into action to connect and sustain the others. His light troops penetrated between the rocks and vineyards, under cover of which they kept up a destructive fire; the columns supported them, and made several attempts to carry our positions, but were repulsed with vigour.

About twelve o' lock, all the enemy's forces had come up—and by the advance of the reserve, their right flank was exposed, and gave us an opportunity of attacking in turn. General Milans directed the advance of Llobera's brigade, by the left it turned the Oliva, and the enemies right, and caused some confusion in his columns. The General directed a simultaneous movement upon the whole line; Llobera threatened to take the enemy in reserve, and endangered his retreat, which he commenced about one, at first with considerable order, but the Royalists throwing away their arms, and flying in confusion, introduced a panic, which all his efforts could not prevent—our soldiers charged them in this state, and completed a glorious victory.—The enemy left about four hundred killed on the field, and three hundred wounded fell into our hands, who have been carried to the hospital of San Jose, and attended by our surgeons. Our loss amounts to 3 officers 35 men killed; 8 officers, 100 men wounded. The enemy has resumed his position near Altafulla and apparently, for the present, abandoned the hope of making a detachment against the Commander-in Chief, or disturbing our cantonments. We have daily communications with Barcelona by Villanoeuva and Sitgis, as well as by coasters; the distance is but 20 hours, or 17 leagues; and the blockade is of little impediment; our position is strong, and we are full of confidence."

The Royal Academy having for some years on account of the contracted limits of its Exhibition rooms, been under the avowed necessity of rejecting many meritorious works, and of crowding or misplacing others; and the rooms of the British Institution being devoted to the exhibition of works of the old masters, and of the School of Painting which succeeded it, a numerous body of artists, desirous of bringing their works fairly before the public, have formed themselves into a Society, for the purpose of erecting an extensive suite of rooms for the exhibition and sale of their works, in painting, sculpture, architecture, and engraving; and, opening an exhibition immediately after the close of the British Institution in April, to continue during the three succeeding months. Twenty-seven of the most active, enterprising, and original artists of the day, have formed themselves into a committee to carry this design into execution.

Three new journals have appeared at St. Petersburgh since the 1st of January last. The first is entitled "Archives of the North," and is devoted to history, political economy, voyages and travels, and a brief bibliography. The second appears every fortnight, under the title of "Literary Supplement," &c. The third is in the German language, (the two former are in the Russian,) treating of letters, sciences, the fine arts; and appears every Saturday.

The kingdom of Portugal contains 873 elementary schools. In 266 of them the Latin language is taught; in 21 the Greek language and rhetoric; in 17 natural and moral philosophy. The University and Preparatory College of Coimbra contain at present from 1,200 to 1,600 students. The total of young persons educated in these various public establishments is about 30,000. There are, besides, several especial institutions; such as the Academy of Commerce and the Marine at Porto, which contained 315 students in 1820; that of Lisbon, which had the same number in 1821. In Lisbon are also the Royal College of Nobles, an Academy for the Arabic Language, the school of Civil Architecture and Design, the Royal School of Sculpture, that of engraving, the Musical Institute, and several others of minor importance. The Military School for mutual Instruction, into which the children of the citizens were admitted, had in 1818, 2,518 pupils, and the number has been much augmented since. The Royal Academy of Sciences of Lisbon publishes interesting memoirs annually. Other literary societies have been recently formed in the city among which is the Patriotic Society of Encouragement. The average number of books printed in Portugal, from 1805 to 1815, was 942; but an accession of liberty has given a more active impulse to the press. The number of publications has been trebled in the two last years, and that of journals is also much increased.

At Leipsic, in Saxony, the number of pupils at the University, during the last winter six months amounted to 1102: among whom, in theology were 480; in jurisprudence, 381; in medicine, 163; and in philology, 74. There was afterwards a further augmentation of forty-one pupils.

The Porte (Turkish) has ordered the sale, by weight, of all the fine libraries that are in Constantinople. Among others are noticed those of the Princes Morzai, who had become objects of jealousy to that despotic government, by reason of their wealth, their patriotism, and their talents.

SWALLOWS.

To the Editor.

If any of your scientific readers would be kind enough to state to the public, through the medium of your paper, the usual periods at which Swallows disappear from this country on the approach of winter, and also when they return, it might very probably throw some light on a subject which has given rise to much interesting discussion in England, and oblige your constant reader,

CURIOSO.

Of the six species of Hirundines common to the Canadas, one only is found in the British Isles, so that analogies reasoning in the respect alluded to would be here at fault. In Upper Canada, most of the species arrive the latter end of April, or very early in May; and depart, towards the South, in October.—Ed.

Sagacity of the Swallow.—A pair of swallows had been in the habit of paying an annual visit to a farmer's house, in the neighbourhood of Sterling, to take possession of a nest which they had built in the corner of his window. Their ingenuity and industry in repairing and fastening the clay tenement, had often been the source of curiosity and amusement to a youth, the farmer's son. Some time ago, the swallows having been rather later than usual in making their appearance, he remarked that the nest had become the habitation of a sparrow, which had commenced one day to sit on her eggs, when the original owners appeared, and sans ceremonie, were going to expel the intruder. This, however, was not so easily effected; for they had scarcely commenced their attack in front, on the besieged, when they found they had to prepare for an equally active enemy in their rear, in the person of an engaged cock sparrow, which, having witnessed the danger of his better half, flew to her assistance. The combatants having thus got on a more equal footing, a short engagement ensued which, after a doubtful contest, at length terminated in the swallows sounding a retreat. They did not however abandon all as hopeless; having recruited all their strength, they returned, and showed that if they were not a match for their enemies in the open field, they were sufficiently masters of stratagem to be amply avenged for the wrongs they had suffered. Whilst the sparrow was engaged, as the saga, they supposed, to block up her habitation so briskly, that before she had time to be aware of her danger, the entrance was so securely filled up as straw and mortar could make it. Next day, when the farmer's boy went up to see what they had done, he found the poor sparrow lying lifeless on her eggs.

East India Glow Worm.—Mr. N. Grimm has given, in the German Ephemerides a description of a curious species of glow worm, found in the East Indies.—"Being on the coast of Coromandel," says this naturalist, "I often made excursions into the country, to examine whatever was curious in it, and one night perceiving something luminous, I drew near to it, and observed a certain motion, but would touch nothing till the day began to appear. I then found that they were worms, which displayed the beauty that had attracted my attention. They were of a scarlet colour, rolled and heaped one upon another; had neither feet nor wings, nor any eyes that were perceptible. Having taken away some of them, with the earth they were upon, and put them in a phial, they yielded so much brightness for an entire month, lost by the aid of this alone, I could read and write. They all died at the expiration of a month, and the light disappeared.

"Something of the like kind is observed in the scorpions of the Island of Ceylon; for if slightly compressed, yet so as to make them void some liquid, this liquid becomes bright and luminous, which proves the activity of their poison, an activity so great, that if any one is stung by these insects, he feels pain as if aqua-fortis, oil of vitrol, or an acrid caustic, had been applied to the stung part."

Robbers Beaten by a Bull Dog.—In South Reading, on Tuesday evening last about 8 o'clock, two Robbers entered a Shoemaker's shop, and stole a bag of shoes worth 40 or 50 dollars, and made off. They had not proceeded far before the bag was missed, when a young man by the name of Oliver Swain, mounted his horse and followed them, accompanied by his large Bull Dog. He overtook them in the woods, dark and rainy, and hailed them; upon which one of them left the road with his booty. Mr Swain dismounted and bravely demanded the shoes. The robber refused to give them up, and Mr. S. commanded his dog to attack him. The faithful animal soon stripped the rogue of most of his clothes and a portion of his skin.—The robber, finding that Mr. S. was alone, hailed his comrade, saying "there is but one—come on and we'll fix him." He then seized Mr. S and got him down, but he was set at liberty by his dog before the other depredator appeared—and discovering that he was in danger, he caught the bag of shoes, re-mounted his horse, and proseeded homewards, while the dog acted as a rear-guard.

The next morning the scene of battle was inspected, when there were found most of the villain's clothes in rags and stained with blood.—Boston Palladium.

Singular Phenomenon.—Between 11 and 12 o'clock to day, this city was visited by a violent storm of thunder and lightning, during which the rain fell in torrents for half an hour with hail. The heavens were shrouded in darkness, and for an hour the scene was truly sublime. The streets wore the gloom and obscurity of twilight, and lights were as necessary in the houses and shops, as they are in the evening.—N. Y. Statesman of Saturday.

Natural Antipathies.—The Journal des Mœres mentions a woman who is seized with horrible convulsions whenever she sees a serpent or a toad. It likewise tells the story of M. Charles D'Escars, bishop of Langres, who fell into a trance at every eclipse of the moon. A more extraordinary instance of this kind of phenomenon is related in the memoirs of Madame de Larochejaquelein.—The sight of a squirrel produced on the intrepid Henri de Larochejaquelein, all the physical effects of fear; the hero of La Vendee could not approach this weak and innocent animal without trembling. This he himself confessed, though he smiled at his own weakness, and made useless efforts to overcome it.

HORTICULTURE.

From American Papers.

A Potatoe weighing seven pounds and eight ounces, has been produced in the garden of a gentleman at Fayetteville.

A Pumpkin grew this season, in Rochland, co. Va which weighed 196 pounds.

Benjamin Bartlett, of Eaton, Madison co. raised this season, 170 bushels of corn on one acre of land, and 305 bushels of potatoes on one half acre of land.

A Blood Beet, raised in Mr. Seymour's garden in this village, was last week exhibited, weighing 11 lbs 12 oz. measuring 20 inches in length, and 22 inches in circumference.

An Apple, was lately picked from a tree on Mr. Wallings farm in Hartford, which weighed 20½ oz. and measured 14½ inches in circumference. Mr. Joseph Ingraham, of the same town, picked from a tree in his garden, weighing 22 ounces.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Weekly Register.

Sir,

That you understood that Colonel Burwell, the Member, received some censure from his Constituents for not bringing the measure of a division of this District forward during the last Session of Parliament, I readily believe, because you say so; but perhaps, Sir, you understood it from Col. Burwell the Member himself, or from some person equally interested; but, I cannot admit your inference, that it shews that a deep interest is felt on the subject, the words some censure by no means necessarily implying more than a very small degree of it. I am, however, right glad to find, Sir, that you consider the subject of sufficient importance to proceed with it; I shall, therefore, reply to that part of Trim's letter published in your paper of the 2d inst. Wherein, Trim's word for it, Sir, that the Petition he speaks of, has been signed by several gentlemen of at least equal integrity, intelligence, respectability, and credibility with myself. Be it so, Sir, who has disputed it? but who also, is this Trim? who is this inspired writer? who is this man who already pronounces sentence, so like a Judge! who is this penetrating genius, that can thus dive at a dash into our souls, and decide on the very secrets of our hearts? who, I say, is this Trim, that the public are to bow down before him, and to believe his anonymous assertions? Come, Trim, out with it, who are you, and who are those personages of whom you thus favourably speak? Speak, man, out with it, and I will then tell you, how they were induced or imposed upon, to betray the rights and interests of their neighbours, perhaps by you, Trim, and perhaps also to you, Trim.

Once more, Trim, speak out, who art thou?—Art thou not striving for the Judgeship thyself, and for the other offices for thy relatives and supporters? Art thou not striving, thee and them, thou for hundreds, and they for fifties of quarts of our sweat, annually, to be paid to thee and to them, for injustice? but no matter, Trim, so that it maintains thee and them in idleness. You think, perhaps, Trim, that having no Parsons to pay, we may as well pay tythes to thee! Now do speak out, Trim, deny these things if thou canst; pledge thyself to thy country, man, that neither thee nor thine, will accept of office or emolument resulting from the proposed new establishment, and give me an opportunity to acknowledge to the world that I have mistaken thy character, and that thou mayest be honest in it!

Much of Trim's witty stuff, I shall pass over, and reply only to his last question. Yes, Trim, I do well remember that I addressed a letter to Col. Nichol, a Member of the House of Assembly, in 1822, on the subject of a division of the District. I understood then, as now, that Kettle Creek, was in that case, to be the seite of His Majesty's new Court of Justice. I understood also, that certain other interested individuals were secretly endeavouring to have it elsewhere, and in a situation, in my estimation, almost equally objectionable; and I considered it my duty, under those circumstances, to recommend the Reserve in London, at the Forks of the River Thames, which I did, in the most unequivocal and forcible manner, and which is very distant and difficult of access from my property.

Are you answered, Trim? I did also, supposing that the government might have other intentions respecting that reserve, mentioned that I possessed a tract called the goose in Delaware, any part of which I was ready to relinquish for the public service; and which I consider as superior for such a purpose to Kettle Creek, as Trim's head, is to intelligence, to a drum. But I never did recommend it, even as a fit place, much less as the fittest. (I have not I think quite so much brass as Trim) indeed I know several as good situations, and many better; but I could make no offer of them, they not being mine; I however offered to the public the best I had, fearing that they might otherwise be driven, or wheedled into a much worse, by offers of affected liberality; that offer at any rate, I now renew; without any more desire now, than then, that it should be accepted, if a better is selected; I offer it in opposition to the skirts at Kettle Creek; I offer it, as I did before, that it may not be asserted, that there is not a better offered, and therefore that there is no choice. I offer it, and I will offer it again and again; 1, 2, or 300 acres mill seat, materials and all, without any fear of having my disinterestedness called in question, by any body but Trim; at the same time, however, I recommended Dingman's on the North Street; I recommended McMillan's plains in Westminster, Munroe's in London, the reserve at the Forks of the Thames, and twenty others; several, as far superior to my own; and all in every point of view, decidedly so, to St. Thomas's, commonly called Kettle Creek. And I here beg leave strongly to recommend to the inhabitants of Bagham, and Malahide, to draw out in time, and to attach themselves to Norfolk; and not suffer themselves to be misled, or imposed upon, or made tools of; for so sure as a division takes place, so sure the Courts of Justice will not be, cannot be at Saint Thomas's; and they with them, perhaps, have to come farther to Court in this direction, than will be quite agreeable to them! Let them consider these things; let them reject their deceivers, and be wise; let us all be just also, to our neighbours; and not monopolisers of each others rights; then will there be no disputes among us. Trim, I fear, is our great disturber, he thinks, perhaps, that he can fish best in troubled waters; and to accomplish other purposes, as well as this, has thrown this apple of discord among us.

And now Trim, whoever you may be, permit me to give you a little well meant advice.—The retort courteous, to which you allude, would not make peace between us; nor would it prove truth or falsehood on either side; besides it would be vulgar—These reasons, no doubt, have weighed with you, and Trim, if I have mistaken either you or your sentiments, you have exposed yourself to it, by attacking me, when you were not attacked, and by assuming a fictitious name; and therefore can have only yourself to blame.

If I have mistaken you, Trim, avow yourself, and shew wherein I have done so; you will then set all to rights, and you will find me as ready to correct my errors, if I have committed any, as yourself can wish; but unfortunately Trim, you are like a ship beating against an adverse wind; you make no headway, but rather go to leeward; in short you are beating and buffeting on the wrong side of an argument and you cannot prevail. I do not positively assert that you are arguing against your own judgment, but I fear that you are blinded by your own interests, and misled by two or three lying tale-bearing rascals, who unfortunately possess your confidence. But believe me, Trim, if I have mistaken you, or your motives; and if you are an honest man, I cannot be your enemy

You see, Mr. Editor, that I have taken your well intended hint, and have tendered the olive to Trim, and I think that every good man will allow, that my terms are unexceptionable.

I am Sir,
Your Obd't. & Obg'd. Serv't,
J. MATHEWS.

Desperate Encounter.

The following circumstances were lately detailed to the editor by a gentleman who lives near the place where occurred. They exhibit a ferocity, and at the same time fidelity of character, that has few parallels.

On the 6th inst. a negro called at the house of Mr. Lloyd Ward, on the Allegany mountain, in Hampshire county, and asked for something to eat. Upon being interrogated as to his name, &c. he produced a pass, which Mr W. on examination told him he would do well to be cautious about showing: for if the person who gave it to him was discovered, he would certainly be hung. Upon this, the negro tore the pass in pieces, saying he never would betray his friend, and confessed that he belonged to a person on Big Capton. Mr Ward then determined to apprehend him if possible, and upon the negro's asking if he would hire or buy him, replied he was not able to do either himself, but that his neighbour probably would, and offered to accompany him thither. They went off together, Ward taking his gun, which was loaded, and the negro taking freely by the way, without however, exciting in the breast of W the least suspicion that he had any base design. When advanced some distance from the house, the negro suddenly faced round, sprung upon W and by a violent effort, wrested the gun from his hand, immediately cocking and levelling to shoot. Most fortunately the triggers were not set, (it being double barrelled) and while the ruffian was doing this, Ward gained a tree a few yards distant, and stood the fire unhurt. He then drew his hunting hatchet, rushed upon his adversary, who was armed with a large butcher knife, and a dreadful combat (both being large men) ensued. Ward was assisted in the onset by a powerful dog, which was soon despatched, by a skilful stroke upon the neck, and the conflict maintained single handed. It was a horrible affray. Victory for a long time remained doubtful, but at last decided for Ward; the negro being exhausted from the loss of blood, and surrendering at mercy. A deep, though not dangerous wound in the breast was the only severe hurt Ward had sustained, although his clothes were literally torn in pieces. Receiving a promise from the negro to remain where he was until aid could be procured, he departed for that purpose, but on returning found him gone; although from the number and severity of his wounds, it is highly improbable that he will survive. Our informant adds, that he never saw the ground torn as much by a bull fight—the bushes were all spattered with blood, and in many places there was as much blood on the ground as if some animal had been butchered.

The Fancy.

Moulsey-hurst was yesterday (12th August,) a scene of slaughter, which affrighted one half of the new lanciers. None of the heroes that have figured there ever displayed more knocking up or more diversion than the fight we have to record. Curtis, the brother of the out and out fighter, was one, and his opponent was Inglis, the featherbed maker, who had fought and won several battles. The disputants about the men brought betting to equality, but Curtis (from breed) rather for choice.

The scene of setting to was grand. Joshua Hudson and Harry Holt seconded Curtis, and Tom Jones and Neale picked up Feather bed. In the first round, Curtis made a left handed hit, and he was returned upon as gaily as it was given. An irregular rally; both hit and got away, and showed a rare example of manhood. Both went down from a close; but the disparagement in skil, at about equal weights, was about 3 to 1.

2 Curtis measured his adversary's nob, and he was as readily met at his fighting game. A gallant rally followed, in which Inglis shewed first blood, and Joshua Hudson sang out—"There! did I not tell you to keep your hands up, and hit with your left first?" 6 to 4 on Curtis.

3 A terrible fighting round, each contending for a removal from the scratch. It was one general bustle at hitting away until both turned pipers.

4 Curtis talked after making an excellent parry at a head hit. Josh told him to fight first, and talk afterwards. 6 to 4 on Inglis. Both went down, but the fall of Curtis was a cross buttocker.

5. One of the bravest rounds ever seen. The men seemed to be at forlorn play, and the advantages in a rally of five minutes were give and take. At the close of the round there was a disgraceful hanging upon the ropes, when both men were distressed, which broke in the ring at the time, and whips and missile weapons were resorted to, to keep order. Curtis was much punished, and when upon the ground his face exhibited a gore of claret.

6. Both men fought themselves out, and yet they made a regular stand to win. Many exchanges took place, and both maintained the scratch alternately. It was all for the stake. Curtis had the worst of a smashing milling hit, which floored him. 5 to 1 on Inglis.

We have no limits to record nine other bravely fought rounds to the advantage of Inglis, who has often hit until the chancery injunction remained uncertain. Such heads were rarely seen. Their ladies could only know them by rhetoric. One of the best little ones of a rare good breed was at length beat out of his recollection, and all his studies. Inglis, although a winner, was heavily hit. Curtis was attended by a surgeon, bled, and pronounced in a thriving state. The match was for 100 sovereigns.

Reid, a good man, known in the ring, beat Harris, a waterman. It was a rare good fight. Harris led in the first two rounds, but youth exercised its influence in less than twenty minutes.

Domestic.

The first number of "The Quebec Gazette, published by authority," and conducted by Dr. Fisher, the King's Printer, was published on the 30th ultimo.

We understand that the Government of the Mother Country has, in that generous manner which it is conspicuous for, granted the sum of £1000 in aid of the Emigrants' Society of this City, to be appropriated to the relief of the numerous objects of distress that come under its notice. This Sum, with the liberal provisions made by the Provincial Legislature, and the large Subscriptions by the public, give this Society the means of doing the most extensive good. Can. Cour.

THE PORT HOPE MANSION-HOUSE HOTEL.

TO BE LET, AND POSSESSION GIVEN ON THE FIRST DAY OF JANUARY NEXT.

ALL that Extensive BRICK MANSION and Premises now erecting in the delightful and flourishing village of Port Hope, in the District of Newcastle, to be called The Port Hope Hotel, consisting of a Double House, most substantially and elegantly built of Brick Two Stories high, and advantageously situated in the centre of the village, near the Bridge.

The Main or front building, is 50 feet by 36, and contains Eight Square Rooms. The wing behind is 50 feetby 18, and contains Ten Bed-rooms.—The Kitchin is 18 by 20 feet, with every requisite convenience. There is, besides, a Wash house, Laundry, &c. 32 feet by 18, and Stabbling for 40 Pair of Horses. As much Garden ground can be had as the occupier may wish for.

The proprietor is anxious rather to have a respectable, assiduous tenant, who is well acquainted with business, and who will keep such a house as may be a credit to himself, and acquire a good reputation for the Town, than to secure an unreasonable or exorbitant rent; the terms will, therefore, be made easy to one sufficiently well qualified, in all respects, to undertake the management of this promising concern.

It must be needless to say much respecting the situation. Being nearly in the centre of the northern shore of Lake Ontario, and at the outlet of one of the most flourishing and extensive Settlements in the Province, with every convenience of Market, and on the high road between York and Kingston, it will be difficult to find any other comparable to it.

For Terms, and other particulars, apply to John Brown, Esq. at Port Hope. 39 t.—f.

Editorial Commentary.

THE excellent BOERHAAVE used to say of calumny and detraction, (for the latter is but a sub-species of the former,) that "they were sparks which, if you do not blow them, will go out of themselves," observing at the same time, that, the surest remedy against scandal was to live it down by perseverance in well doing; and by praying to GOD, that he would cure the distempered minds of those who traduce and in ure us.

Although we might be willing to overlook and forgive a very undue portion of these same commodities, "calumny and detraction," which has been doled upon us in CARY's Debates of last week,—it is our duty to protect the character of this Office, and of those who perform the mechanical labour in it; than whom, as the said CARY well knows, there are not better workmen in these Provinces.—We are very ready to acquit the Honorable Gentlemen named, as taking part in the particular debate alluded to, of the falsehood uttered in the Observer; because, we will presently shew that it was impossible those Gentlemen could make such unqualified, and prejudicial assertions, with certain facts in their own possession!

Alas, Alas, Alas,! it is too true;

"Ferdinand Mendez Pinto, was but a type of thee,
"thou Prince of Lyars!"

When will this abominable propensity to lying be lash'd out of thee, thou brazen-faced knight of the long bow? It was a bold stroke, truly, to make the Honorable Member for Grenville assert, that the sum of £800 was paid to the Government Printer as the expense of work done for a single Session, (the last) when it is known to every Member of the House that the account for printing, done in this Office, which was rendered at the close of last Session, not only comprehended two year's subscription to the U. C. Gazette for each Member, and the entire printing for Two Sessions.—(that of 1822 as well as 1823.) but also the printing of the Public Accounts (which was by far the most considerable item in it) for a period of no less than Seven Years! besides many other important items entirely independent of the business of last Session!!—Next, he makes the Honorable Member for Norfolk, so justly celebrated for his abilities as a man of business, unable to understand the printed accounts!!!——Whatever feeling of an unpleasant nature might have been engendered near the close of last Session, and which it would seem, may extend to this, respecting the Public Accounts, it is very hard to saddle us with censure that in no respect appertains to our calling.—We had not even the correction of the Proofs, when those Accounts were set up and worked off; and, that our compositors faithfully followed the copy, may be proved by an inspection of the original in our Office!

If the learned member for Kingston did actually assert that the printing was done in 'a shameful and disgraceful manner,' which we cannot believe, we will say that if he, or any other person entertaining such an opinion, will do us the honour of calling at the Gazette Office, we shall have no difficulty in proving that the Reports, Mr. Commissioner Robinson's Correspondence, and the Public Accounts, were printed in a style very superior to former years!—But of all tasks, to vindicate where accusation is false or malicious, is the most painful—and we are heartily sick, even of the thought of the base and unfounded calumny.—As to Mr. Pinto, the steps he has taken to accomplish his very sinister ends, are worthy of himself, and of himself alone. Let his reward go with him! But, as to the public, we can only say, and we are sorry to say it, for the sake of the country, as well as for ourselves, that there is at present but poor encouragement for enterprize, skill, and industry in the more liberal arts, or professions, in this country. We have certainly been at great pains and expense to procure some new types, and paper of a superior quality, with the hope of doing more ample justice to the public service; but, if unemployed for the object to which the preparations were destined, we have only to render them subservient to a purpose we have long entertained, and which, in the end, may prove not less important.

It will be seen by the intelligence from Spain that the Cortes have lost the rubber!—What game is next, to be played by the pious descendants of ST. LOUIS remains to be seen; and is, indeed, a matter of general curiosity and interest.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

NEW GOLD COIN.—The King of Great Britain has ordered a new gold coin, to be called "Double Sovereigns" or "gold two ounce pieces," each of which shall be the value of forty shillings. These coins are to have for the obverse impression the King's effigy with the inscription "Georgius IV. D: G: Britannia Rex. F: D:" and for the reverse the image of Saint George, sitting on horseback, attacking the dragon, and the date of the year; and on the edge of the piece, in raised letters, the words "Decus et Tutamen. Anno Regni," with the year of the reign.

CROPS IN ENGLAND.—We have conversed with a very intelligent gentleman, who came out a passenger in the Canada, and had passed through Scotland and a part of England immediately prior to his leaving that country. He states that the crops in England were about two thirds secured, and were of fair average quality. In Scotland and Ireland about one third of the Crop had been got in, and was about an average. Up to the 20th had been very favourable; from the 20th to the 28th it had been unfavourable, but not so much, it is believed, as to endanger the crops. It was the general opinion that the wheat would be a fair average, both as to quality and quantity throughout the kingdom.—N. Y. D. Adv.

CONSULS TO SOUTH AMERICA.—It is asserted, by several of the London papers, that Consuls have been appointed to several of the South American States, on behalf of Great Britain—preparatory, it is hoped to a full recognition of their Independence.

ROYAL MARRIAGE.—The Prince Royal of Prussia is to marry the Princess Eliza of Bavaria. By this marriage he will become the brother-in-law of the Emperor Francis of Austria, and a new tie will be thus formed between the courts of Vienna, Berlin and Munich, leading to a still closer political alliance.

GEN'L. BUCKLEY.—General Felix Buckley died in England on the 14th Sept. He was the oldest officer in the British army. He entered the service in the reign of George I and expired at the great age of 114 years.

THE BRITISH CABINET.—The London Courier says that the vacant seat in the Cabinet is to be given to Mr Huskisson.

The British Parliament is further prorogued to the 25th November.

WITTICISM OF LORD NUGENT.—In 1776 a bill was introduced into the house of commons, which went to propose that the watchmen of London should be compelled to sleep by day; whereupon Lord Nugent rose and observed that he wished he might be included in that bill, as he was so much troubled with the gout that he could not sleep either day or night.

FRENCH COMPOSITION.—It is rather singular that the first prize for French composition was, on the 1st of August, adjudged to a Mr. Charles Neate, an English student from Oxford.

REV. MR. IRVING.—The Congregation of the London Caledonian Church have resolved that a handsome edifice shall be built by subscription, to accommodate the hearers of the Rev Mr Irving. It is to cost 15,000.

LORD BYRON.—Letters from Corfu announce Lord Byron's arrival in Cephalonia with the money and ammunition which he had promised the Greeks. The we was most impatiently expected in the Morea, he judged that he ought not to depart without the instruction of the Greek Government, in order that the succour he brings may be directed to the most suitable point.

RUSSIAN SALUTATION.—The Russian salutation is very contrary to our etiquette. The ladies, in meeting, kiss each other on the lips and cheeks; and a lady and gentleman meeting, the latter kisses the hand of the lady, and inclines his cheek towards her, which she kisses; and omitting to do this is a proof of great distance of manner, arising from either superiority of rank, slight acquaintance, or offence.

NEW METHOD OF LEVYING TAXES.—The manner in which taxes are imposed by an African Prince is somewhat singular. The King of Congo sometimes waits out on a dry day when there is a high wind. He then puts his bonnet over one ear only, and when it is blown off by the wind, he imposes a tax on those subjects who live in the quarter from which the wind blew.

RESOURCES OF RUSSIA.—A table has been published, from official documents, of the population, &c. of Russia, for 1822. The total of inhabitants for the whole empire is stated at 40,067,000. the number of manufactories and work shops at 3724, the total of commercial capital at 519,666,000 rubles, and the revenue from the poll tax, and that on the consumption of liquors, at 169,350,000 rubles.

From the Commercial Advertiser of November 7.

Advices from the Cape of Good Hope, have been received in London, to the 14th of July. A report had just reached the Cape, that a numerous wandering tribe, or more properly a nation, was on the way South, whose course was marked with the greatest cruelty and devastation.—They had advanced as far as Kaffre Land, which borders the frontiers, destroying every thing they encountered, sparing neither man woman, nor child; in fact, it is said, they resemble a flight of locusts, which consume every thing they rest on. The people composing this nation, are said to be of a much lighter colour than the native Africans, and are supposed to be descendants of some Europeans wrecked on the coast of Africa.—They are well armed, and much better equipped than the aborigines of the country. The Grosvenor Indiaman was wrecked about forty years ago, and many of the crew saved. These are supposed to have mingled with a powerful tribe, whence sprang this horde. The reports, however, were by some, supposed to be exaggerated.

Capt. Parker, lately walked in England, near Buxton, (a considerable bet pending.) 7 miles in 1 minute and 20 seconds less than an hour. The bet was that he could not perform it in one hour.

SUBSTANTIAL PHYSIC.—A man in the neighbourhood of Buckingham, England, during illness, took various kinds of medicine without affecting a cure, resorted to another expedient; he eat 3 pounds of mutton chops and 8 large onions, washing the whole down with a quart of ale; which remedy in a short time restored the patient to health.

SPAIN.

From the last New York Spectator.

FALL OF CADIZ CONFIRMED.

Our forebodings have been realized, sooner, indeed, than we had anticipated they would be; and Cadiz, which so many political speculators have an hundred times proved never would surrender, and never could be taken, is in the hands of the French. The "beloved Ferdinand" lost no time in passing over to the head quarters of his cousin of Angouleme; and, in the language of the "Legitimates," protected by French bayonets, the adored monarch, is now at liberty to give his subjects such institutions as he shall think most conducive to their happiness.

We are left entirely without details of the operations of the French, from the 13th of September, up to the surrender, which took place on the 27th. We find, however, an official article in a Gibraltar paper, (regular files of which we have received to the 25th of September inclusive,) announcing the capture of the Fortress of St. Petri; and it is said in the Gibraltar papers and letters, that the French had also taken the whole of the Isle of Leon, which gave them possession of the narrow peninsula connecting the town of Cadiz with the Isla. Whether the castle of Puntales (directly opposite to the Trocadero,) was also forcibly carried by the French, previously to the surrender, we are not informed. Cadiz however, we should infer from the accounts, has been surrendered without firing a gun, although, as at the Trocadero, there may have been hard fighting in taking the outworks. But we are to do, as one reason for this, that the French, by obtaining the Isle of Leon, were enabled to cut off their supplies. It flows, then, of course, that all the reports we have heard, relative to the abundance of provisions in Cadiz, like a majority of the other reports, were unfounded.

Thus has ended the grand tragi comic drama of the Spanish struggle for independence and freedom. By way of an after-piece, there may be some further skirmishing in Catalonia; but it is said that the fortresses which have held out, have only been waiting for the event that has taken place at Cadiz, and that their gates will be instantly unbarred at the word of the King. Nothing of a positive character is said in the imperfect accounts, of the Cortes. Left to themselves, and entirely unaided by the mass of the nation, they have held out, like a band of patriots, with great firmness and unanimity. Blood may flow—the heads of some of them may roll from the scaffold—but the probability is, that terms were made previously to the surrender, and that they will have leave, if not to remain at home, at least to retire to what country they please. And there may have been other stipulations, for we do not believe that Spain is to be stripped entirely of a constitution. An aristocratic branch will most likely be added to the Cortes, and the priests, who have done all the mischief, by keeping the great mass of the lower order of the people neutral, or friends of the French, will be restored to their property and influence.

CAPTURE OF RIEGO.

The following is the account given of the taking of RIEGO.

On the 13th, unexpectedly Riego arrived at the cantonment of part of General Ballasteros' army at Priego, and demanded of that General to join him, and offering to resign to him the command of Andalusia and Estremadura. The proposition was rejected, and a smart action ensued, after which, General Ballasteros was taken by stratagem, as has before been stated in this paper. General Ballasteros was kept under arrest for 17 hours, during which time, many of Riego's troops deserted and disappeared. The French under General Bonnemain came up—Riego fled to Judar, where he was eventually completely defeated, and his troops scattered in all directions without organization or discipline. In his flight, Riego lost his heavy portmanteau, containing 150 gold doubloons, which it is said he had plundered at Malaga. Riego, with fifteen others, arrived at a village within three leagues of Carolina, when he sent seven of them to collect his dispersed troops, and, with the other four, entered a farm house, and from thence sent to a neighbouring farrier to shoe the horses. The farmer thought his guests to be suspicious persons from their having taken possession of the key, and always keeping their door locked, and gave information to the village magistrate of the fact. About twenty men were then immediately armed, who surrounded the house, and Riego, a Spanish captain, a Piedmontese, and an Englishman, one of Wilson's party, were made prisoners. They were immediately sent to Carolina, and placed in seperate dungeons, in jail, to answer for their robberies. The civil authorities could scarcely prevent the mob from falling upon, and murdering them. The writer of an account of this event says, "It fell to my lot to be jailer to Riego, as I had the key of his dungeon." On the 16th, Gen. Latour sent an escort of Dragoons to Carolina, and conducted Riego to Andujar, for safe custody.

CONCLUSION OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Before the late events were known, the Courier expressed the following opinion, in which most men, we think, must coincide.

"We will assume that Cadiz must surrender, that the Cortes will disperse, that the King and Royal Family will be set at liberty, and that Ferdinand will be reinstated upon his throne, in Madrid; but even then, will any reflecting man say that the accomplishment of these things will prove the accomplishment of that for which the war was undertaken? Is it not, on the contrary, quite obvious, that, as far as concerns the tranquility of the Peninsula, every thing will remain to be done?"

Communication.

To the Editor of the Weekly Register.

SIR,

I observe by the Register of the 2d inst. that you are willing to permit what you are pleased to term "another exchange of shots," by which I understand that you intend allowing Captain Matthews a reply to my letter of the 16th ult. part of which appears in that paper; which letter was intended only as a reply in part to the Captain's letter, to which it alluded; and upon this ground, I claim to be permitted to reply to certain other parts of his letter, keeping it principally as my text.

You are kind enough to signify that it would afford you "much greater satisfaction to hear of the parties shaking hands."—Permit me, on my part, to return you my sincere thanks for this friendly expression.—I can assure you that I have no angry feelings towards the Captain, but he has chosen unnecessarily to introduce a question of vast importance to the people of the County of Middlesex, and to throw out personal reflections against me, which I feel disposed to answer, and which I will endeavour to do rightly so as not to prevent the insertion of my letter entire in one of your numbers.

In the Captain's third Letter, which it seems was designed for me, in retaliation for the short and good natured remarks which he really induced me to make upon his Bulletin, of the 4th of July last, he appeared to have indulged in every thing that could reasonably have brooded in his exuberant imagination, was pleased to make some very coarse insinuations, and then endeavoured in the most sapient manner, to turn them to his own advantage by way of shewing the disinterested-ness of his intentions in the issue of his said Bulletin; but whether he has succeeded in doing so, or gone further to shew that it originated in some strange visitation of his mind, might probably as well have been laid over for the determination of other persons: be that as it may, he seemed to jog on as triumphantly as though he had obtained a verdict by his peers; but the best of the joke is, that the Captain winds up a most erudite sentence, by threatening to be so civil as to introduce me to my neighbours; this is remarkably modest, kind, and polite; and although I have had the honour of being well acquainted with my neighbours, as well as his own "newly" acquired neighbours, respecting whom, and for whose benefit his said Bulletin was issued, [illegible] was so much augmented in value and political importance by the tread of the Captain's foot, I will not give him a moment's pain, or shock the delicacy of his feelings, by declaring that distinguished civility.—I will not introduce him in turn, as the author of his said Bulletin, nor will I say a word when I shall have the honor of his introduction, that shall go intentionally to ruffle the pure sun shine of his countenance; nor will I say, Gentlemen, this is the first person who has emigrated to Upper Canada, and dared by means of the Public Press, to attempt to blast the reputation of the "neighbourhood" in which he has the honour to be received.

Should the Captain continue to permit the light of his mind to illumine this "neighbourhood" by the issue of Bull-tins, like his first, and the famous apology contained in his second, I have not much doubt, but that although not one in hundreds of my neighbours have arrived at the important honour of feasting their optics upon his person, they will gradually become acquainted with the [illegible] of his mind, and look forward to the day of introduction with a kind of awful curiosity, which has rarely fallen to the lot of man to experience, in the expectation of seeing, in the introducer, some wonderful excrescence of nature in the shape of a man, possessing the extraordinary powers of doing with "a little coaxing and familiarity, and a little whi-key, and if he had the honour to be a Magistrate," that which all good men from the days of Adam down to the present moment, have deemed impossible. For he has stated his "firm belief," that with the assistance aforesaid, he possesses the power of making his "newly" acquired "Society," who are honest men, and whom many of my neighbours knew and esteemed for years before the Captain's approach to the Continent of America, swear that he had sustained considerable losses during the ravages of the late War in this Province, although he was not an inhabitant thereof during any period of the War, and had no interest in it.

In proceeding, the Captain is pleased to express himself thus.—"Trim, I doubt not, is bursting with his own gall, but still, I think his good sense, (if he has any,) would have induced him to have been silent on this subject, had not the knaves looked up to him as their Champion, to throw a little mud at me, as they have often (with his assistance) done before, for interfering with their knavery.—This also, Sir, has been, and is the sole cause of the injuries I have heretofore sustained, and of the animosities now existing against me" Trim is not troubled with the gall passion, but from the several "out-breakings" of the Captain's great, but apparently uneasy mind, it seems that the said Captain is "from his own shewing" grievously tormented with that disease; nor has Trim ever made pretensions to "good sense," but he can, with some assurance inform the Captain, that, contemptible as his abilities may appear in the estimation of the said Capt. (particularly where he descends by way of demonstration to compare them with his own gigantic powers,) Mr. Trim is positively not on such bad terms with himself, as to think it necessary to ape the said Captain by way of appearing to have "good sense."

To be concluded in our next.

QUEBEC, Nov. 11th, 1823

The number of vessels now remaining in the Port does not much exceed twenty, and the greater part of them, we believe, are ready for sea. The wind has lately prevailed from the East; on Tuesday last fifteen or twenty sail d. The cold has set in earlier than usual, and the surface of the river was this morning chequered with ice; but we hope that all the shipping will be enabled to sail and get safely to sea, although at this season we conceive the passages, besides being unpleasant, are not the safest.

Among the Ladies and Gentlemen who have taken their passage in the St. Lawrence, to sail to-morrow afternoon, are—Mrs. & Mr. W. Pemberton. Mrs & Mr. Mitchell; Capt. Perry 37th foot; Mr. L. J. Crawford. Dr. Dubois, Dr. Dunnesson, Mr. True, Commissariat Dept. Mr. S. McAulay and Master Darling, eldest son of Col. Darling.

The St. Lawrence takes home about 50 invalid soldiers belonging to different regiments in this colony.

INDEX AT FRONT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

It is our wish to publish the JOURNALS of the House of Assembly, with the yeas and nays, on every question, after the manner that was adopted in this paper during the last session; with occasional reports of such debates, as appeared to be of general interest. The House has not yet decided upon the propriety of publishing the Journals; so that we can, for the present, give no more than a brief notice of the debates which have been agitated, in the course of the last week.

A Petition from Mr. D. Markham for aid to establish a Paper Mill was read, and Mr Ruttan moved that it should be referred to a select committee.

Mr Nichol observed, that it should come recommended to the House by His Majesty's Government. He had no objection either to going into committee, or affording the desired relief, but also proper course. While was that adopted by the British Government, ought to be pursued. If that House complied with the prayer of the Petition, and passed a Bill, the Upper House would not acquiesce without the sanction of Government.

Mr. Ruttan thought that Paper-Mills were much wanted in this Province—very large sums of money were sent annually away for the purchase of this article. It was the duty of the House to encourage domestic manufactories of all kinds. The establishment of Paper-Mills would be a great saving to the Province, and he would prefer sending the Petition to a committee, and have their report upon it.

Mr. J. Jones opposed the motion—the question was not, whether it would be advantageous to the country, but whether it was of such a nature as to require Legislative interference. There were persons who would undertake the business, if it was beneficial; he would object, therefore, to its being referred to a committee.

Mr Nichol said there was a standing order of the House not to take up any Petition of such a nature without the sanction of His Majesty's Government. He wished to support the prayer of the Petition; but the course now proposed would prove abortive. He hoped, therefore, that the hon. mover would not press his motion —The Petition was lost.

Mr. Casey having moved that the Petition of the inhabitants of Lennox and Addington should be referred to a select committee,

Mr. J Jones rose, and moved that after the words referred, the whole should be expunged, and the following substituted—' to the Committee for the division of the Province.'

Mr Nichol, said, he was favorable to a division of the counties alluded to, having a hope that it might put a stop to the heavy expense that was incurred every session by the contested Election for those counties. The expense incurred for contesting the Election for those counties amounted, he believed, to a sum exceeding three thousand pounds!

Mr. Hagerman thought it would be well to divide the counties. He wished the Petition to go before a committee of the House in order to prevent delay. He should, therefore, oppose both motions.

Mr. Wilson agreed with the hon. member for Kingston, and thought it would be best to discuss the Petition in a committee of the whole House, as there had not been a sufficient notice given, as required by the Upper House.

Mr. Crooks would support the amendment proposed by Mr. Jones—a notice of six months was necessary in such cases, which had not now been given.

Mr. Hagerman wished for two distinct Bills, one for each division.

Mr. Baldwin was favourable to the amendment. The whole should be embraced in one Bill, for the more easy information of the people. The House should not embarrass itself with rules which it was not bound to attend to. If the measure were necessary, the want of notice for six months, or two months, should not stand in the way of its completion.—Amendment carried.

Upon the original motion being put, Mr. Nichol rose, and said, that he agreed with the hon. member for Kingston. A committee of the whole House was the most salutary mode that could be adopted. It would put a stop to the intrigue and under hand work that was carried on in select committees.

Both motions were put and lost

Mr. J. Jones brought in a Bill to amend the law in force for collecting the Duties in this Province.—Read a first time.

Mr. Nichol wished to adopt some measure in lieu of this Bill, which should remove its necessity.—It was proper to take up the subject of Tea, which was daily smuggled into this Province, and the sums paid to the United States for this article alone were enormous. It was proposed that an application to the British Government would bring about a remedy for this great evil. The East India Company could certainly furnish Tea at the Port of Quebec, at a much cheaper rate than it could be had for in New York. If the House took up the question in a proper manner, he had no doubt the remedy would be had. It would be advantageous to the East India Company to furnish this country with Tea at a low rate, for it would not only prove a great saving here, but it would enable us to supply that country from whence we now receive our supplies. He believed that 10,000 Chests of Tea were smuggled annually into the two Canadas from the United States; and it was the duty of the House to exert all its powers to remedy so great an evil. He hoped, therefore, that the present measure would not be pressed, until the question relative to Tea came before them. He had, besides, a dislike to some of the clauses in the proposed Bill. He thought it wrong to pass any Bill that would abridge the rights of the people —— The law, as it now stood, was permanent. It was as easy to bank up the Falls of Niagara, as to repeal a permanent Act. He objected particularly to that clause which enabled a Deputy Collector to seize the property of an individual bought in a Store, merely because that individual might be unable to shew that the duty was paid.

Mr. C Jones held the same opinion.—" The House could not be too watchful over the rights and liberties of the people. The Bill of last Session, after having passed through this House, was arrested in its progress through the Upper House; because the Members of that House felt more tenderness for the rights of the people than we did." That Bill appeared to him a great infringement of the rights of the subject; and, unless the present Bill was divested of all its objectionable clauses, he hoped it would meet with the same fate.

Mr. I. Jones remarked that the objectionable clauses were left out of the present Bill.

The Attorney General wished to enter on the Bill at an early day. The success of an application upon the subject of Tea, would not depend upon the disposition of the Government. It depended much upon the East India Company, who were deeply interested in that question. Several months must elapse before an answer could be obtained from the British Government to their address; and it was therefore necessary, that they should do every thing to protect their own Revenue. The present Bill seems well to reduce the expense of collecting the Revenue, and it was right to enter upon it with as little delay as possible.

Mr. Crooks said, it was not his intention, by moving the amendment, to destroy the Bill. He was as anxious to protect the revenue of the country as any other member; but he thought that some delay should be allowed in order to have the Bill printed, and to give time for members to consult upon it.

Mr. Hagerman was for discussing it as soon as possible; and hoped that an early day would be adopted.

Amendment carried.

Mr. Crooks having moved for the printing of 100 copies of the Bill, in its amended state, for the use of the members, a discussion ensued, in which much unmerited censure was lavished upon the Government Printer, and the motion was finally lost. In this discussion Mr. Jonas Jones, Mr Nichol, and Mr. Hagerman, bore the principal part.

Mr. C Jones, in pursuance of his notice, rose to move a resolution for employing a reporter or reporters, to give the debates of the present Session to the public. He was aware that opposition would be made; but he conceived it was his duty to bring the question before the House, and he would not shrink from it. A majority of the House was in favour of the measure last Session, and he hoped for the same result this Session. The people of this country were anxious to be made acquainted with the proceedings of their representatives, and it seemed to him they had a right to be gratified. The House of Common in England could be no precedent to them; there the Newspaper proprietors were able to employ reporters, and although the English Commons did not pay a reporter, they connived at the practice; the debates were published, and it mattered not how, when the public were gratified, and justice was done to their constituents; un these circumstances, he felt justified in making the motion he then held in his hand, and hoped the majority of the house would support him.

In making this motion he would advert to a very extraordinary circumstance which occurred last Session. The Hon. member on his right [Mr. Nichol] made a motion similar to the present; at least the object was the same. That hon. member, with some others, felt great irritability in the beginning of the Session, and argued strenuously against the impropiety of the House recognizing the employment of a reporter. That hon. member would not then allow the house to employ a reporter, least it should appear on the journals; but moved an amendment to the resolution for purchasing Newspapers, &c. Let that hon. member look now to the Journals, and he will find that, at the close of the same Session, a public committee of this house, of which he [Mr. Nichol] was a member, recognized in their report, the employment, by the house of a reporter. The report stated that the employment of a reporter was an extravagant expense which greatly encreased the contingencies; but, being sanctioned by the house, it must take place. In consequence of this document having been publicly entered on the Journals, he [Mr. Jones] was induced, on the present occasion, to come forward in an open and public manner with this motion, and hoped that hon members would support it, and not shrink from their duty, because there was no precedent. He moved, seconded by Mr. Wilson of Wentworth, "that it be resolved, that it is necessary and proper for the information and satisfaction of the Electors of this Province, that the debates of this House should be reported; and as under existing circumstances it is impracticable for the publishers of newspapers in this new country, as in England, to defray by an increased circulation of papers, so great an expense as must necessarily be incurred. It is therefore further resolved, that it is expedient that the sum of Pounds be appropriated to defray the expense of a reporter, or reporters, in reporting and furnishing the debates of this House during the present Session."

Mr. Nichol said that the Hon. Member felt much interested in the present motion—and seemed to have a great anxiety that the debates should be fully given to the people. He [Mr. Nichol] was anxious also that the debates should be published; but would never submit to a gratification of the people, at the expense of the dignity and propriety of the House of Assembly—and it was altogether on the grounds of propriety that he opposed this motion. While he admitted the necessity of giving information to the country, he admitted also the necessity of protecting the privileges of the House, and in his opinion it was impossible for and Hon. Member to come to the House, and discuss public measures freely, if his conduct were erroneously stated to his Contituents and to the public at large, and laugh at the hon. member. He was willing to afford some assistance to increase the circulation of newspapers as was done last year; but he would never consent to prostrate this House under the feet of a reporter. It was argued that this measure was agreeable to the wishes of their constituents; but they must recollect that if they degraded themselves by such a proceeding, they would degrade their constituents also. From the State of Maine to the State of Georgia, there was no precedent for such a measure; in that Country too, where they courted popularity as much as they did here—He recollected that the motion was once debated in England, but was negatived by a large majority.—Under all these circumstances, he would oppose the present motion as unparliamentary, and contrary to the dignity of the House.

Mr Baldwin said, he would support this motion with all his heart—The expense of employing a reporter was trifling, and it was a great gratification to the country at large, who looked for it, and would feel greatly disappointed if the proceedings of the House were not published. In his opinion the question came to this:—whether they would allow their constituents to have their proceedings laid before them, or transact their business with closed doors, and not allow the public to know what they were doing.—He hoped this would never be the case. They were told by some hon members, that if they passed this motion, they would compromise the dignity of this House. This was not the fact; but they would rather compromise their own dignity, and the dignity of their country, if they refused the people the liberty of inspecting their conduct. This was a young country, unable to remunerate editors of newspapers for any additional expense of this kind, and, unless some means were adopted by the House, the debates could not be published at all.

The Attorney General said, that this was a motion to which he could never give his consent. In England, reporters were merely admitted by the forbearance of the House, so long as the reports were given fairly. Sometimes however, members have been materially misrepresented, in the heat of debate, and there have been instances where reporters had actions brought against them for publishing certain speeches. Now, suppose an hon. member of this House, in the freedom of debate, attacked the character of a clerk of the peace, or other public officers in distant part of the Province, charged him with high crimes; that the reporter employed by this House gave public circulation to such a speech, and that an action was taken against him for doing—What would be the situation of this House? They would be bound in honour and justice, to pay the amount of any verdict against him, were it even to amount to £10 000. He thought it was rather putting the question on an unfair footing to say that it came to the point mentioned by the honourable member for the County of York; namely, whether they were to allow their constituents to know what they were about, or sit with closed doors; because the doors were open to all, except on some particular occasions. He did not think the people of the country were so anxious for the publication of the debates, as was represented by some honourable members; on the contrary, he doubted very much, whether the papers that inserted the debates heretofore, met with an increased circulation on that account, and was of opinion, that a majority of their subscribers thought their columns might have been better filled. He thought the present motion unprecedented, although he did not know but something of the kind might have been sanctioned in the U. States; but they all knew that no such measure was adopted in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, or any of the British Colonies, and the people of those Provinces feel their own interests and rights to be as important to them, as ours are to us; yet they all run the chance of leaving the publication of their debates to such Editors as may choose to insert them, without publicly employing a reporter. He thought this House would act dishonourably, if they adopted the present motion.

TO CORRESPONDENTS

We have to apologize to Trim for not inserting his letter at full length this week—having again to remind him of the impossibility of devoting so large a portion of our columns to a single communication;—the remainder will appear in our next.—

Having duly weighed the nature of Cap. Le Breton's remarks, we are obliged to pronounce them inadmissible.

Editorial Commentary.

In pursuance of an order of the House of Assembly we are furnished with an Official report of the Journals which, coming too late for this number, will begin to appear in our next.

The state of Spain is most deplorable; and it is but too evident, that that unpurified country has yet to be visited by the most horrid of all political catastrophes, even that of a long protracted civil war. If the infatuated Ferdinand should strike off the heads of many of the Cortes, after having been permitted to escape himself, untouched by the hands of a regicide, we think it by no means improbable that he, and all his family, may be cut off by assassination.

Although he has been unsuccessful in the main object of his expedition, every one must rejoice in the safe return of the intrepid Capt. Parry; who, it would appear, has made his late attempt towards a discovery of the north west passage, in a direction to the southward of his former voyage, and in a quarter where success could scarcely have been anticipated, if any reliance can be placed on the testimony of former navigators in the same direction.—We cannot help entertaining a hope that he will be again dispatched in his former track, for it is in the higher latitudes, only, where any passage can be successfully looked for.

We have given the Orphiness notion of the true nature of the Infernal Regions, not merely for its curiosity, but for the sake of illustrating that wonderful conformity of opinion which has prevailed at different periods of the world, in countries, and amongst people, very remote from each other, and dissimilar in manners, customs, idols, and forms of worship; PLATO taught his disciples that every passion which the soul contracted during its residence in the body, remains with it when disembodied; and that, therefore, when the obscene passions, in particular, have once taken root, and spread themselves in the soul, they cleave to her inseparably, and remain in her for ever, after the body is cast off as a useless thing. As an argument to prove this doctrine they observe, that "a lewd youth who goes on in a continued course of voluptuousness, advances by degrees into a libidinous old man; and that the passion survives in the mind when it is altogether dead in the body; nay, that the desire grows more violent, and gathers strength by age, at the same time that it has no power of executing its own purposes." It is thus, therefore, that the punishment of a voluptuous man, after death, consists in being tormented by desires which it is impossible for him to gratify; solicited by a passion that has neither objects nor organs adapted to it.

The ancients have tormented Tantalus after these conceptions, by punishing him with the rage of a perpetual thirst, and by setting him up to his chin in water, which fled for ever before his lips, when he attempted to drink it.

In the sixth book of his Æneid, VIRGIL gives us the following picture of the state of voluptuaries after death.

> They lie below on golden beds display'd,
> And genial feasts with regal pomp are made;
> The Queen of furies by their side is set,
> And snatches from their mouths the untasted meat;
> Which, if they touch, her hissing snakes she rears,
> Tossing her torch, and thundering in their ears.

An attempt to illustrate the same opinions, which displays uncommon genius, has been made in the latter times by SOUTHEY, in his Curse of Kehama, which is a work of the highest rank in the walks of fancy. It must be confessed that the dreams of the vicious and corrupt, when the body is compelled to pause in the career of sensual gratification by the wants and frailties of nature, are well calculated to impress such notions on a mind unenlightened by revealed religion; for it is by the power and everlasting light of the lively oracles of the Gospel alone, that our fallen race can be taught to understand that neither fleshly wants, nor fleshly lusts, can have any existence in a world of spirits. But, there are those who will say this is not a proper subject for a Newspaper,—and so let it rest.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

CEYLONESE INFERNAL REGIONS.—The opinion of the Ceylonese, with respect to the punishment of the wicked, are of a singular and very poetical kind. They believe that there are eight principal hells, all of which are hollow metallic squares, composed of different alloys, of the common metals, without any openings in each there is an intense fire, which burns constantly without fuel. Though they do not differ in kind, they do in degree; the lowest being the largest and hottest, and the punishments inflicted in them proportionally severe, and of longer duration. Sinners are doomed to different hells, according to the degree of their crimes: thus, those who are merely guilty in thought and intention, descend to the first hell; and as the crime deepens in dye, the sinner sinks lower. For each great sin, there is a particular kind of punishment—for murder, the wretch is perpetually murdered, and the very act he has been guilty of, in all its minute circumstances, is constantly repeated on him; for stealing, the sinner is punished by gems of great value in appearance, tempting him to seize them, and when seized turned into fire; the drinker of spirits is drenched with melted lead; the liar is constantly tormented by the application of red hot irons to his tongue; and the adulterer is punished perpetually by climbing up and down a thorny tree in pursuit of his paramour, whom, when he is below, he sees alluring above, and whom, when he has forced his painful way through the thorns to the top, he sees practising the same as below. Besides these particular punishments there are innumerable others. They alternately dreadfully from intense heat, and from hunger and thirst, the pains of which are heightened by the expectation of gratification, which, instead of enjoying, they swallow fire. Besides, they are liable to be impaled on burning brands, and to be flogged while burning, and to be cut and chipped, and fashioned like wood.

FEMALE DEFENCE.—Mr. Baron Hullock, at the Dorset Assizes, said, that a wife had no right to dispose of the property of her husband, or of the clothes she wore, which were the property of her husband. This seems to verify the old vulgar saying of man to wife —"What is your's is mine, and what is mine is my own."

TRADE OF EGYPT.—Since the war between the Greeks and Turks an extensive carrying trade has been carried on foreign vessels, between the ports of Egypt and those of European and Asiatic Turkey and the Archipelago. In the course of the year 1822, 900 vessels entered the port of Alexandria in Egypt, of which 292 were Austrian, 223 English, 143 Sardinian, 76 Swedish, 57 French, 54 Spanish, 15 Danish, 10 Russian, 2 Dutch, and what is singular, not one American.

FOREIGN JOURNEY, DISPATCH.—During the six weeks preceding the 14th of September, the number of yards of cloth printed by a single concern at Stockport, was more than 1,261,920, equal to 716 miles in length; and the sum of duties paid amounted to £11612 8s 7d.

IRON STEAM BOAT.—An iron steam boat called the Commerce de Paris, has left London for Paris She is 112 feet long, and 27 wide. She goes eight miles an hour, and will carry about 130 tons.

Lloyd's Paper.

LOCO MOTIVE MAILS.—It is said that Mr. Bangles of Birmingham, has invented a self-acting machine, that will convey the mails through the kingdom at the rate of 12 miles an hour.

REVENUE OF ENGLAND.—The net revenue of the year ending 5th Jan. 1823, was £54,374,637 18s 6¼d. Taking the population of Great Britain at a point between 12 and 13 millions, the amount of direct taxation exceeds £4. sterling per head per annum.

POWER OF MEMORY.—John Van Muller, a native of Switzerland, and author of a history of his native country, and of a posthumous work on his Universal History, was a man of uncommon powers of memory.—He possessed, says M. de Stael, a mass of erudition altogether unparalleled: His acquirements of this kind actually inspired awe in those who witnessed their display. It is difficult to conceive how the head of one man could contain a whole world of occurrences and dates. The six thousand years of authentic history were perfectly arranged in his memory; and his studies had been so accurate, that his impressions remained as vivid as though he had been a living witness of the events. Switzerland does not contain a village or noble family whose history was not perfectly familiar to him. On one occasion he was requested, in order to decide a wager, to repeat the pedigree of the sovereign counts of Bogey; he performed the task immediately, but was not quite certain whether one individual of the series had been a Regent or a Sovereign in his own right; and he seriously reproached himself for this defect of memory.

THE DOG BILLY AGAIN.—Thursday at Tufton's cock pit, Westminster, a dog named Billy, well known in the sporting world, destroyed 110 rats in the space of nine minutes. This feat was the result of a wager of 100 guineas.

EXTRAORDINARY. GAZETTE.—Few instances have occurred, and only twice within the last thirty years, where the Gazette has been published without the announcement of a "Whereas;" this was the case on Tuesday night week; and we congratulate the Liberals on their Prognostications of "bad times," "bankruptcy," and all the et ceteras of "days gone by."

Courier.

FAST WALKING.—The fastest walking on record, was performed by Wm. M'Mullen, a lad not 17 years of age, about Manchester. He walked 18 miles in five minutes and a half less than three successive hours; and, for another bet, he engaged to walk 102 miles in 24 hours, which he effected in two hours and five minutes under the time.

Windsor.—Windsor Castle, a palace worthy of a Monarch is to be the future residence of His Majesty during the summer and autumn months. The winter and the spring will be passed in London and Brighton.

The sale at Fonthill Abbey was going on at the last dates. It is said that the house and grounds have been offered to the Duke of HAMILTON, who married Mr. BECKFORD's daughter.

The New Pope.—Cardinal Della Genga was elected Pope on the 27th of September, and has taken the title of Leo XII. He is an Italian born at the Castle of Della Genga, 2d of August, 1760. The Journal des Debats says he is a man of great learning accustomed to business, and of irreproachable morals.

—INDEX AT FRONT.

Great preparations were making in France to cause public rejoicings on the arrival of the Duke de Angouleme.

The Emperor of Russia was on his route to Czernowitz, where a meeting is to be held to settle the affairs between Turkey and Greece.

The Duke of Bourbon has fractured his thigh bone by falling from his horse.

Mrs. Burns.—The widow of Robert Burns paid a visit to Carlisle on the 1st of October. This Lady is now upwards of 60 years, quite hearty and enjoys the best health.

Waverley Novels.—A London paper states that the next novel of the Great Known Unknown, will appear in November. The scene lies in Scotland, and the period of time chosen for the action, is about 40 years back.

Military Exercise.—A new system of manuel and platoon exercise is practising by the Coldstream Guards, and will shortly become general throughout the army.

Scotch Peerage.—The report of the restoration of the forfeited Scoch Peerages seems to be premature. We see nothing of the kind in the English papers. The Earldom of PANMURE will decend to the family of our respected Governor in Chief, if it is in reality one of those that were forfeited in consequence of CHARLES STUART's attempt on the Crown.

We are very sorry to state that the excellent Lord Chancellor ELDON is in an alarming state of illness.

Melancholy accident.—At a horse race lately in England, in which twenty horses, rode by gentlemen, started for the prize, one of the riders, the Hon. Mr. Trevor, second son of Viscount Duncanson, was thrown from his horse with so much violence as to break his collar bone, and produce a concussion of the brain. He had taken the lead, and turned on his saddle, to see the position of the other horses, when his horse came in contact with the three quarters of a mile post, which occasioned the accident. It is feared he will not recover. He is a fine young man, about 21 years old, of more than ordinary personal accomplishments.

British Museum!—The new Museum will be one of the largest quadrangular buildings yet erected in the Metropolis. The interior area will be as large as Hanover square. The buildings will be adorned with granite columns of extraordinary magnitude.

Orangemen!—A Dublin paper says, 45,965 Orangemen have subscribed before magistrates to the oath prescribed by the late act of Parliament.

Venemous Fish!—A Mr. Thomas Glover, having been stung by a fish, the surgeon found it necessary to amputate his arm; but he expired soon afterwards.

CAPTAIN PARRY.

From the London Courier of October 18.

NORTH WEST EXPEDITION.

ARRIVAL OF CAPT. PARRY THIS MORNING, AT THE ADMIRALTY.

AUTHENTIC PARTICULARS.

Captain Parry arrived this morning at the admiralty, having landed at Whitby, whence his Majesty's ships Fury and Hecla were continuing their way to the river Thames.

The public regret that Capt. Parry has not been able to accomplish the North West passage, will be amply compensated by the general pleasure which will be felt at the safe return of this gallant officer and his brave companions.

In 1821, the expedition explored Repulse Bay, Sir Thomas Roe's Welcome, Middleton's Frozen Strait, and that neighbourhood, and finding no passage to the Northward and Westward, wintered in the southern bay of an island, called Winter Island, in lat. 66, 11, long. 83.

In 1822, the expedition, guided and encouraged by the information they had received during the winter, from a party of Esquimaux, with whom they had established a friendly intercourse, pursued their attempt to the Northward, and examined all inlets towards the West, till they arrived at a strait which separates the North West Coast of America from what Capt Parry considers to be clusters of Islands, extending North ward towards the scene of his former voyage.

The great object of ascertaining the Northern limit of the Continent being thus accomplished, Capt. Parry penetrated two degrees to the Westward with considerable expectation of final success; but in a narrow part of the strait, they found the ice fixed in that peculiar manner which indicates that it is perpetual, and not separated in any season, or under any circumstances. The expedition was therefore obliged to winter in lat. 69, 20, long. 81, 50.

In the summer of this year, finding the ice still fixed to the shores, in such a manner as precluded all hope of any further progress in the neighbourhood in which he was, Capt Parry thought it advisable to give up the attempt and return to England.

The Expedition has lost by illness, only Mr. Fyffe, the Greenland Master, and three seamen, and one man killed by an accident.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The following is the answer of Government to an application from the merchants of London on the subject to which it relates.

FOREIGN OFFICE, Oct. 17.

SPAIN.

LONDON, Oct. 12.

The Gazette of last night contains the convention agreed on in March last between our Government and the King of Spain, by which convention, restitution is to be made to the owners of British vessels for seizure made under the Spanish flag from July, 1808, to March 1823.—The official publication of this document, at this peculiar moment, may give rise to much speculation.

RIEGO was tried before a civil tribunal, notwithstanding his military rank, and condemned; but he has been respited, in consequence of certain disclosures, which it is said will effect 300 persons, some of whose names are conspicuous in France. In consequence of these disclosures, a private letter from Madrid, of October 8, states that Ballasteros has been arrested.

It is stated that the most distinguished of the Constitutionalists made good their escape to Gibraltar before the surrender.

A letter from an English Gentleman at Cadiz, dated Oct. 2, 1823, describes the state of the neighbourhood as terrific. After Ferdinand had been to church after his liberation, "all the dwellings of those marked for Constitutional principles became the prey of the bloodthirsty Faithful; the houses of many of our friends were ransacked and pillaged, and every thing which can contribute to freedom, instruction, or improvement, instantly burnt, or broken to pieces in the streets, amidst Vivas and rejoicings; some even of the higher class and priests, encouraged to the commission of these deeds; Velaustegui, Orlando, and Padre Camanio being the most active. The effervescence," he adds, "amongst the lower class of people is intense; authorised to satiate their passions, they hunt all those who are comprised as blood-hounds on the scent, and assassinate them when discovered. The state of the country is dreadful; it surpasses all description in anarchy, confusion, and bloodshed."

The following paragraph from the same letter must attract notice:—

"The French do little to prevent these cruelties, but should they depart, universal depopulation and desolation must ensue. The French, we understand, have already sent fast sailing vessels to Teneriffe, Cuba, and South America, to summon them to surrender to the allied arms, and to return to unlimited obedience to King Ferdinand.

GREECE.

Greece is every day consummating her freedom by acts of devoted bravery and the most intrepid heroism: as if she awoke from a night of ages, she has sprung from the earth on which she lay, and, like a giant starting from his slumbers, astonished all Europe by her successful efforts. The fourth expedition of the Moslem against her has been scattered by her gallant bands in dismay, and the followers of the Crescent wander, in bloody disarray, over the fields the tyranny of ages had depopulated and laid waste. The freedom of Greece is no longer doubtful.—It is now certain and assured. No effort the barbarous Ottoman can make, will be able to disturb it. The Greeks are superior to the rabble crowd of their oppressors in every thing that can constitute a military force; and the sceptre of the Turk over classic Greece is broken in his ruthless hands for ever.

The Greeks have brought the Musselmen to a bloody battle between Thebes and Gitoni, in which the latter lost 4000 men in killed and wounded, and 400 prisoners. In a second battle at Maratia, near Volo, the Turks lost 600 prisoners, although their army was 15,000 men, and that of the Greeks only 7000. The Musselmen, after the action, were obliged to retire towards Thessaly, and to take refuge in Larissa.

DEATH OF THE BRAVE BOZZARIS!

WHEN he arrived at the camp of Carair Cachi, he found that the Greeks were resolved, at all events, not to suffer the Turks to enter Livadia, and seemed resolved to risk a battle. Bozzaris represented this as a desperate measure, and proposed that they should fall upon them suddenly in the darkness of the night.

"We can surprise them," said he, "for they do not expect to be attacked; and you know that these barbarians never take any precautions against surprise. I have with me 340 Sulliotes, and I will, at their head, enter the Turkish camp, with no other arms than our pistols and sabres. Do you" said he to the Hellenians, "present yourselves in four different points, and commence your fire when you are recognized, so as to distract the Turks; and, if you second me, we will seize the Pacha, alive or dead."

The proposal met with universal approbation, and Bozzaris was directed to lead the enterprise. At midnight he desired an addition of 100 chosen men to his little band of Sulliotes; then separating them into four divisions, prepared for the hazardous enterprize.—When he left the camp, he said to his chiefs:—"My friends, if we scatter, you will be sure to find me round the tent of the Pacha."—Having said this, the signal was given, and the heroes marched on in silence. The Turks were taken entirely by surprise, and the tent of the Pacha surrounded.

Bozzaris taunted the infidels for their carelessness and their defeat, and then stepping forward, seized the Pacha with his own hands. He, however, received a mortal wound from a Moor, and was borne off by his soldiers, while the Pacha was killed on the spot. The last words of Bozzaris were these:—

"My friends, to die for liberty is a pleasure, and not a pain. Freedom is not acquired but at great sacrifices. I die content, because I have contributed to the independence of my country. Continue your services to her, and do not quit your arms but amid the destruction of your enemies."

This is a lead worthy of ancient Greece in her most heroic ages. The character as well as the fate of Bozzaris, may bear a comparison with that of Epaminondas; and the Sulliotes remind us of the heroes of Thermopylæ. Such men are worthy to fight for liberty and to enjoy it.

Lord Strangford had succeeded in settling all the differences between the Porte and Russia, the Porte having acceded to all the demands of the latter power. Turkey further consents to leave her pretensions respecting the Greeks, and her quarrel with that heroic people, to the arbitration of England, Austria, and Russia.

We learn from Constantinople, under date of Sept. 9, that the conferences commenced on the 30th Aug. between Lord Strangford and the Reis Effendi, have had the most happy result.—The Porte has declared that the passage of the Black Sea shall be free to all Christian nations, without distinction.

An article from Zante, Aug. 6, says the plague has made so great a havoc on board the fleet of the Capt. Pacha, that since the 17th of June, more than 12,000 seamen have fallen victims to it.

IRELAND.

STATE OF THE COUNTRY.

For a week the catalogue of outrages in the South has been much diminished. Whether we should ascribe this favourable change to a returning sense of duty in the peasantry, or to the shortness of the nights at this season, we are at a loss to conjecture. The continued activity of the tribunals may have, at length, subdued the violence of the insurgents, by removing the most turbulent, or after two years experience, they may have themselves discovered the inutility of their lawless operations. It would, however, clear up this point, if we could ascertain, whether rents and tithes were now paid, or that the landlords and clergy had ceased to demand them in the disturbed quarters.—If the fuel be exhausted the flames will expire. If the peasantry have attained their objects, there can be no motive for outrage. If the land owner, the middle-man and tithe proctor have retired from the scene of contest, or, are quiescent in the mean time, under the influence of terror, the calm is not real but illusory.—Although there be much room for amendment in the nature of contracts between landlord and tenant, and also, in the conduct of both parties—although the system of tithes be the cause of irritation to all concerned, both payers and receivers, yet it would unhinge the whole fabric of society to yield the just claims of the landlord and the Church to the menaces of an infuriated banditti. Whatever modifications it may be deemed advisable to adopt regarding the amount and mode of collecting rents and tithes, such must proceed only from private compact, of legal authority, and not from popular compulsion. We hope and trust, that the improved aspect of the Southern districts arises from the influence of salutary principles, and that we shall not again have to record instances of such barbarous outrages as have hitherto disgraced those quarters of Ireland.—Dublin Journal.

Communication.

In regard to the "knaves," the "mind," the "dirty work," the "knavery," the "rascality," the "vicious and unprincipled Society," the "injuries," the Captain has received, and the "animosities" existing against him, (all of which seem to be ranked in systematic order and as far as I can judge, according to the strictest discipline of scientific classification in the professions to which they allude) and shine with such radiant splendor and proficiency in his several bulletins, I know more of them from him than from any other person. I did lament that the Captain had fixed his mind upon a confiscated estate, which he could not obtain in the way he seemed to wish without injuring very materially an honest man with whom I had long been acquainted, and who was in possession of it with leave of the Government. I lamented also that the Captain seemed under an impression that he had purchased the said estate from the Commissioners at auction, which happened to be a mistake. I did condole with the Captain in this apparently unfortunate affair, and he knows it.—I gave him the best evidence of my friendly intentions towards him that could be given, and he will not deny it.—And it ought to be unworthy of him to make the insinuations he has made. He did not believe them unless the "guess"-ing mood in which his mind was when writing his letter made his "gall froth out at his mouth; and in it, in an unguarded moment, or perhaps accidentally, be happened to dip his goose quill," involuntarily at the expense of every correct principle. When the confiscated estate which the Captain desired was really sold at auction, I have understood that he was, by agent, a competitor for the purchase, and if he did not get it, the reason must have been because he did not choose to pay so much for it as Mr. Springer, who was in the occupancy of the Premises.

The Captain proceeds. "There is however, I suspect, another reason for this attack of Trim's; you must know, then, that some of my neighbours have occasionally talked, though perhaps not seriously," (mark his words in another place, "Sir, I have reason to believe that I live in the neighbourhood of the most vicious and unprincipled society which this Province can produce," and, Quere, were those of the persons who have occasionally talked, though perhaps not seriously) "of endeavouring to send me to the Commons House of Assembly, at the next Election, and the knaves are already alarmed at this."—— Who are the "knaves" that were "alarmed"? And what kind of character are you giving yourself, my good Captain, by the "talking" of such persons?—

In his second, apologetic, and explanatory bulletin, the Captain's words are," and to make the offence as great as possible, they have endeavoured to make what they are pleased to call my neighbourhood as extensive as possible." —— This must have proceeded from the effervescence of the Captain's own mind; because, at the time he wrote he could not have known that Mr. Trim, or any one else, would pay their respects to him.—Now he states that Trim's first letter gives "fair grounds for belief that he is not only the champion, but one of the crew whose rascality" he was so graciously and well disposed to put down, or rather as he has it, "to put a stop to."—— The Captain knows that Trim lives many miles from his residence at "Lobo near Delaware," his words therefore prove that his abuse was intruded to apply extensively, or that he affected to be mistaken in the person of Trim; Or otherwise, that he orally was incapable of defining satisfactorily without committing himself, what he did mean, which last I most humbly "suspect" was the case.

It has been cursorily mentioned (as I have been informed) that the Captain would condescend, of his own special grace and mere motion, to give and grant himself to his said "neighbourhood," to and for their special use, benefit and behoof, in the "Commons House of Assembly," and that he would in that capacity be "their servant," but I never heard of any doubt or "alarm" respecting the premises until I had the honor to read it in the Captain's "guess"-ing letter which was granted for my benefit and instruction.

The Captain's learned dissertation upon the offices to be created should a new District be formed, must have been read with intercst; all of which offices he has been pleased to name severally, with such apparent deep rooted regard, and self affection for them, that one cannot be at a loss to conceive how he would be pleased to dispose of the said Offices; particularly now, that by a subsequent letter, he has shewn a very intimate acquaintance with Government at "the meridian of Algiers, where all are slaves" not be very problematical from these "being the incumbent of all the said offices, namely "Judge, Clerk of the Peace, Sheriff, Turnkey, &c. &c. and uniting them in his own high personage, by which he would be made a little Reis Effendi of the new District, would be agreeable to him or not; the more so, if the spot affixed upon should be on lot A0, or A, in the Gore of Delaware, by means of an avenue, from whence to the commanding prospect from his residence at "Lobo near Delaware," he could overlook the Thames and surrounding country, to the seat of his Government, with more majesty than the Dey can be favored with, from his regal palace near the Bay of Algiers. His fears that Mr Trim might become the holder of some of the said offices—are solved in terms rather too "mud"-dy, too "dirty," and fubbling to require any reply save the foregoing, which is respectfully intended for the Captain's benefit, and very much at his service.

In alluding, as I have in the preceding sentence, to a letter of the Captain's, which was in answer to Mr. Schoffield, I have done so most reluctantly;—I would not have done so, had not the Captain named Trim in that letter in a very ostentatious manner; as the matter now is, he cannot charge me with travelling out of the record.

Natural History.

THE TIGER.—The following anecdote of the sagacity of a tiger, is related in an interesting little work, entitled "Museum Asiaticum." The ship-carpenter who came over with the tiger from Bengal, in 1791, by the Pitt East Indiaman, after an absence of more than two years, came to the door to see him. The animal instantly recognised his former acquaintance, rubbed himself backward and forward against the grating of his den, and appeared highly delighted. Notwithstanding the urgent request of the keeper, that he would not rashly expose himself to danger, the man begged so earnestly to be let into the den, that he was at last suffered to enter. The emotions of the animal seemed roused in the most grateful manner. He rubbed against him, licked his hands, fawned upon him like a cat, and in no respect attempted to injure him. The man remained there for two or three hours; and he at last began to imagine there would be some difficulty in getting out alone. Such was the affection of the animal towards his former friend, and so close did he keep to his person, that his escape was rendered almost impracticable. With some care, however, he got the tiger beyond the partition which divided the two dens, and the keeper, watching his opportunity, dexterously closed the slide, and thus separated them.

DOMESTIC TURKEY.—A curious circumstance in natural history has just taken place at Sinsto Crag, Northumberland. A Turkey cock found the nest of a common hen in the stack yard, with ten eggs in it: he took possession, and sate upon the eggs for three weeks till they were hatched; and he is now bringing up the chickens with the greatest attention.—Lon Pap.

CHESNUT TREE.—It is stated in the French Annales de l' Industrie, that the Chesnut tree bark contains twice as much of the tanning principles as that of oak and nearly twice as much colouring matter as logwood. With iron it forms an intensely black and durable ink. Its colouring matter has a stronger affinity than so much for wool, and is not affected by air or by light.

RESUSCITATION OF FROZEN FISH.—The following curious fact in natural history appears in "Captain Franklin's Narrative of a Journey to the Shores of the Polar Sea:"—"The fishing having failed as the weather became more severe, it was given up on the 4th October. It had procured us about 1200 white fish, from two to three pounds each. There are two other species of salmon in Winter Lake; Back's grayling, and the round fish; and a few trout, pike, methye, and red carp, were also occasionally obtained from their nets. It may be worthy of notice here, that the fish froze as they were taken out of the nets, in a short time became a solid mass of ice, and by a blow or two of the hatchet were easily split open, when his

...e removed in one lump. If in this ...en state they were thawed before the fire, ...covered their animation. This was particular...y the case with the carp, and we had occasion to observe it repeatedly, as Dr. Richardson occupied himself in examining the structure of the different species of fish, and was always, in the winter, under the necessity of thawing them before he could cut them. We have seen a carp recover so far as to leap about with much vigour, after it had been frozen for 36 hours."

Mr J. Jones felt the awkwardness in which it was possible the House might be placed, quite as much as the Attorney General; but he thought the arguments against this motion were not sufficiently weighty to counterbalance the reasons that were in favour of the resolution. The hon. member for Norfolk said there was no precedent for such a measure in the United States; he believed that he was mistaken in that particular, as he (Mr Jones) had seen resolutions passed in the United States authorising a reporter to sit within the bar of the House! He did not support this motion that his own speeches might go forth to the public, but that the public anxiety might be satisfied.

Mr Nichol had no objection that a reporter should be allowed a proper place where he might hear the debates; because that was permitted in England. He was of opinion with the Att'y General, that if the House employed a reporter, they would be bound to indemnify him in case of any action.

Mr C. Jones conceived the House would not be bound to indemnify the reporter in the event of any action; and, as to precedents, if they were to do nothing without a precedent from England, there would be an end to all improvements in agriculture, or in the arts and sciences!

Mr John Willson would support the resolution—He was surprised to hear hon gentlemen talking of reporters bespattering the character of Public Officers!—Do these hon. gentlemen think that this House of assembly will turn itself from a legislative body into a bespattering club? No; he hoped such would never be the case; and therefore there was little to be dreaded from the objections made by the learned Attorney General—He even doubted whether an action could be maintained against any reporter, on ras some glaring malignity was visible in his reports, which can never happen by a reporter fairly taking down the proceedings of this House. He (Mr. W.) would not look for precedents in this case; it was sufficient that the measure tended to gratify and tranquilize the minds of the people of this Province; and he thought that their neighbours from the State of Maine to that of Georgia would not condemn, but rather applaud, the liberality of the Representatives of the people of this Province, in publishing their proceedings for the information and satisfaction of their constituents. In Lower Canada, out of their large population, but a small number were capable of reading newspapers; and the latter informed classes had wealth and means of procuring additional knowledge. In this Province the great mass of the people are possessed of some information, without the means of improving it. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and the other Colonies, as also Great Britain herself, were differently situated; they all possessed agents, and men of wealth and talents, who gave an impulse to public matters, and encouragement to the circulation of newspapers. In this Province, the Editors of newspapers had little encouragement. With respect to the observation made by an hon. member that the doors of the House were open to all, he would remark, it was altogether impossible for any person coming into the gallery on a part only of a debate, to know what the house was about, but when a reporter gives a general statement from both sides, and that his report is laid before the public, it is easy to take a fair view of the proceedings, to judge of the propriety of measures, and to draw proper conclusions. He thought it was the duty of the House, and that it would also show their liberality, to circulate freely the knowledge of their proceedings among their constituents without showing any wish to confine it to themselves. How many were the false reports which spread abroad on various subjects debated in this House, and which disturbed the minds of the people, without any cause, before they had the advantage of seeing the publication of the debates; They were innumerable; but the case was now different, and the effect on the mind of the people was visible; they were consequently calm and tranquil—sufficient cause to withhold from the country the great privilege of having the proceedings of their Representatives laid before them. The publication of the debates in this Province for the last few years has been of infinite service—it has given the people of a remote part a disposition to read, and drew their attention to seek all other information. He therefore felt it his duty to give his warmest support to the motion before the House.

Mr Gso. Hamilton thought that the difficulty might be got over by taking a certain number of newspapers, as was done last year. He hoped the debates would be correctly given, as many important debates were omitted last Session altogether, particularly that on the Public Accounts.

Mr Hagerman had no doubt but the resolution would be carried the House would be carried, yet he rose to give it his dissent.—He thought the House was misinformed with regard to the interest that people felt in having the debates published—he did not believe there was such a lively interest in favour of the measure. For his own part he thought it quite an necessary for a reporter to publish every debate, it was only particular questions, of interest to the country at large, that ought to be given.

Mr. Nichol said, in rising to make an amendment to the present resolution, he did so, because he would not consent to give up the privileges of the House to a reporter. In amendment, Mr Nichol, seconded by Mr. Burwell, moved, that after the word "resolved" the whole of the original motion be expunged and that the words "that the Sergeant at Arms be directed to provide each Member of the House with two Newspapers weekly during the Session," be inserted.

Mr. Ruttan was anxious the reports should go forth, and would therefore support the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Norfolk

Mr Nichol's amendment, after some further debate, was put and carried.—The House adjourned.

THE BATHURST AND MALLARDIE BILL.

Mr. Wallbridge having moved that this Bill be referred to a committee of the whole House on the Monday following;

Mr. Burwell rose and observed that he had understood, from a conversation which had passed between the two members for Norfolk, that this Bill should not be urged at present, he knew that the proceeding was irregular and ought not to be entertained at [illegible] and as the [illegible] he had expected that his hon friend, Col Nichol, who was usually a stickler for the rules of the House, would have opposed its further progress. He was now surprised to find that he had seconded Mr Walsh's motion. By a standing order of the house, all private Bills must be founded on Petitions. The hon. member had not brought forward a Petition in favour of this his measure—he could not procure one; the truth was, that he (Mr. B.) had the Session before last, brought up the Petition of all the Freeholders of both the Townships of Malahide and Bayham, praying that they might not be taken from Middlesex and added to Norfolk. The hon. member, Mr. Nichol, had asserted that those Townships had by law always belonged to Norfolk; but he (Mr. B.) had to say that Mr. N's. Law was equally at variance with the fact, as his mode of proceeding was with the practice of the House The hon member had mentioned as his authority, a Proclamation which had been issued in the early settlement of the Province dividing it into Counties; but he forgot to state the time that the Proclamation which he mentioned had been completely abrogated by a subsequent Statute in 1798; that Statute mentioned by name the Townships which composed both Middlesex and Norfolk, it was true, but could not mention Malahide and Bayham, as no thing was ever known of them up to the year 1800, in which year (Mr. B.) had been ordered to survey the Talbot Road, and upon that survey he had discovered and reported upon the tract now constituting those townships. The Executive Government, on his report being made, had considered the tract as in Middlesex—they had been issuing Deeds for Lands in those townships describing the lands as in Middlesex ever since the year 1810—the people there had always considered themselves as inhabitants of that County and had petitioned the House that they might not be separated from it. He wished to inform the House, that this attempt had been made to affect the coming question on the Middlesex Petition for the division of the District. The members for Norfolk were both opposed to the division—they were aware that if a Population of 2,000 souls, which those townships contained was taken from Middlesex, and added to Norfolk, it would destroy the claim of the Petitioners for a division.

Mr Nichol contended, as to the propriety of the Bill, that Bayham and Malahide were originally set down in the act of 1792, as forming a part of the County of Norfolk; it was in a Bill on Roads afterwards introduced, that this mistake was made, and at this moment the Townships of Bayham and Malahide, were not, strictly speaking, attached to any County He thought a petition was not necessary in bringing the present bill; it was only necessary to bring it in by petition where the townships had been attached to some County, and where a change was about to take place. which could not be the case at present, as these townships were never attached to the County of Middlesex He was of opinion that the present bill was brought forward in a proper Parliamentary way, and he would support it.

Mr Burwell explained, &c.

Mr. Hagerman opposed the Bill on the ground that it should have been brought in by Petition; and, that if the people of Bayham and Malahide had felt any inconvenience, they would have petitioned in favour of a division.

Mr C. Jones, objected to it on the same ground, and that it was a private Bill.

Mr. Baldwin, accorded with the hon. member of Norfolk that this was a pub ic measure, and he thought the House would be confining their privileges by drawing such nice distinctions between public and private motions. Had this bill been for a bridge or a turnpike—had it even been for any corporate body, then it might truly be considered a private bill; but this bill was for the division of a County, for the benefit of the people, and in his opinion it was a public bill.

Mr Nichol wished the hon. Speaker to examine the law, and he would then see that these townships were not attached by any existing law and would afterwards be able to decide that this was a public bill.

The Speaker said it was unnecessary for him to consult the law on the subject; he was decidedly of opinion that this was a private bill, and not a public one.

This decision was final; and the bill was consequently thrown out.

CONTESTED ELECTION FOR LENNOX AND ADDINGTON.

Mr. J. Jones having moved that the petition of John Lake and others contained reasons, if sustained, sufficient to make void the Election of G. Hall, esquire.

Mr. Attorney General said he had discovered, by a reference to authorities, that where an Officer did not keep a Poll open during the time appointed by law, the Election did not become void, unless some mischief arose to one of the parties.—He read some precedents to support this statement.

Mr. J. Jones said that if the Returning Officer was allowed to adjourn one day he might adjourn for a week.—It appeared to him clear, that he had acted illegally, and that therefore the House was bound to declare the Election void.

Mr Chosen thought that the Officer was not confined to six successive days, and that the adjournment over Friday was of no injury to Mr Bidwell. The Returning Officer could not keep the Poll open on Good Friday; he was forbidden by a Magistrate at the Hustings in presence of the other Candidate not to go on—Mr Bidwell did not object to the Magistrate's interference, and he (Mr C.) could not support the present motion.

Mr. G. Hamilton was surprised at the language of the last speaker. If the act did not mean six successive days, Sunday would have been, as in all cases, excepted.

Mr Nichol was astonished at the doctrine laid down by the hon. member for Halton Who ever heard of a discretionary power being vested in a Returning Officer? The law was mandatory, and he was bound to obey it. The officer should not have allowed himself to be bullied by a magistrate. If he (Mr. N.) had been the Returning Officer upon that occasion, he would have put the Magistrate infra for his illegal conduct. He hoped the Magistrate would be struck out of the commission of the Peace for his illegal conduct in this case. If he (Mr. N.) had 500 or 1000 votes on this occasion, he would give them in support of the motion.

The House divided, and the motion was carried by a majority of 19

Mr. J. Jones then moved that Monday the 8th of December, be determined on for considering the merits of the said Petition; which, after some discussion, was agreed to.

On the motion of Mr. J. Jones it was resolved that John Lake, or some other responsible person or persons for him, do enter into a bond conditioned for the payment of £200, in case of failing in proving the allegations of said Petition.

Domestic.

St John, (New Brunswick.)

We have this day the pleasure of announcing officially, the appointment of Sir Howard Douglas to the Lieutenant Governorship of that Province. We say the pleasure of announcing it, because it is not merely desirable that we should have that high and responsible situation filled, but it is peculiarly desirable that it should be filled by one of Sir Howard's reputation. From every thing we have heard both of his private and public character, we have reason to congratulate ourselves and the Province at large on his appointment. He is said to be a man of sense and science, to be both disposed and well qualified to plan and carry into effect public improvements. Above all, he is a man who will think for himself, which is just the man we want. His habits are domestic. He has a family or nine children, and it is understood that one of his sons will accompany him and act in the capacity of Aid-de-Camp. He has been long advantageously known as an officer in the Royal Artillery, and is in high favour with the Royal Family. He served for some time in Canada, and was created a Major General in the year 1821. He is of a Scotch family, and is one of the Baronets of Great Britain connected with Scotland. His father, Sir Charles Douglass, distinguished himself during the American war, and was known to several individuals now in this place. He commanded the Forth dabie, 98 guns, which broke the enemy's line on the famous 1st of June, 1794, under Admiral Earl Howe. Sir Howard was expected to leave England about the 7th of this month, and therefore the probability is that he is now on his way, and will reach his destination in the course of November.

Montreal Rifle Corps.—We are happy to learn, that the Company of Sharp-Shooters, lately organized here under the command of Captain Norman Bethune, have made great progress in their exercises, and that they are soon likely to attain a thorough knowledge of all that is necessary to constitute an efficient and well disciplined corps. We cannot pass this opportunity without expressing the sentiments of our entire approbation of these manly, social, and patriotic feelings which led to the rise and completion of this volunteer military society. As they could not have proceeded from any danger which menaced the country, either externally or internally, they must have derive their source alone from this excellent feeling which pervades our society, and that native bravery of heart and spirited enterprize which will ever characterize British subjects wherever they are placed.—*Mont. Editorial Commentary.

A question of much importance to this country, and one materially connected with the colonial policy and Indian monopoly of England, has been agitated in our House of Assembly—It is on the subject of TEA, and the most material arguments in favour of an application to the Imperial Government, for a remedy to the many evils which have been engendered by the present system, will be found in this number. Many repetitions and some vague notions in political economy that were brought forward being omitted in our report of the debate, as incumbering, rather than illustrating, the view which it is necessary to take.

The subject has many difficulties which are not to be overcome at present, even by the British Ministry, all powerfull as it is, without the consent of the East India Company, who have been compared by an eminent writer to the vicious cur in the manger, that would not let others eat what they themselves were unable to taste. The monopoly of that Company is a mis-shapemonster which we doubt not will have ceased to exist in a very few years;—but, in the meantime, British justice must respect those privileges which have been lawfully purchased. The inadequacy of the Company's capital has been clearly shewn by Lord CORNWALLIS; and a famous essayist writes thus eloquently on the subject:—

"At a time when the capital of the British merchants has been so much at a loss for employment, we have seen the East India Company obliged for want of capital, to recede from a great part of the trade which they were once able to embrace, instead of occupying, to its full extent, a great branch of trade newly acquired for its benefit—is that nobleminh in the policy of a country calling itself enlightened? Is there no disadvantage, no national detriment, no disgrace, in short, in a situation of thing like this?—What has the Company done that it should be suffered to close the immense outlet which India, Persia, China, and all the vast countries which are washed by the Indian Ocean reopen to the eager demands of British commercial enterprize?—What has it done that it should have the privilege of cramping British industry, and of thus keeping down the wealth and prosperity of the nation?—What is the benefit the monopoly produces, to compensate these, and all the other great and numerous evils, of which it is the undoubted parent?"

The great evil of monopolies generally, and of this in particular, is, we believe, now fully admitted by all parties in England;—and it is not like by that the Charter will be renewed: but, in the mean while it has yet some ten years to run, and the remedy we seek must be dependant on the Company; for, if we petition Government, the Government will refer to the holders of the monopoly. What then have we to do? why, even this; the Company are merchants; and, like all other merchants, go verned by self-interest;—let us, therefore, speak powerfully to their interests; let us shew that 10,000 chests of Tea are smuggled annually into this country from a rival state; that our own consumption will not only soon amount to 15 or 20,000 chests; but, that it depends upon them, and upon them alone, whether we do not supply all the Northern States, whose consumption is enormous, in the same manner that we have been supplied by them;—for, it is no question whether the Company can undersell, and it is equally certain that they can supply a much better article.

As matters now stand, an illicit trade is carrying on to a vast extent, and we, British Subjects, are actually contributing to the support of the American revenue, to no trifling amount! Such a situation of things is surely preposterous, and unnatural!

The ports of the St Lawrence are nearly as well situated for a China Trade as New York; and if the Company were to establish an India House in Quebec and Montreal, employing as many vessels as were required in a direct trade to Canton, we are satisfied they would sell 100,000 chests of Tea more than they now do, and it is for them to consider whether that is an object, with a prospect of vast increase, worthy of their regard!!!

It has been said that the affairs of the Company are embarrassed.—It may be so—They may even not find it convenient to establish this new commerce. Great obscurity hangs about all the concerns of that famous body.—One of the most enlightened Committees that ever sat in the British House of Commons, declared they had been fatigued into such a despair of ever obtaining a competent knowledge of transactions in India, that they were easily persuaded to remand them back to that obscurity, mystery, and intrigue out of which they have never been forced upon public notice—but by the calamities arising from their extreme mismanagement.

After such language, it were vain for us to attempt a decision upon their resolves; but, we are apprehensive of one obstacle which we think it right to mention, in order to shew how it may be removed. It is this—Much bullion, and specie, is required in the China trade from England, and God knows we have little to spare, of that kind of thing here—and to render the trade lucrative—it should be direct, and the advantages reciprocal! Why then is to be done? why, even to look at the example of a single individual, who has realized a princely fortune, in the course of many millions in this very trade; and go and do as he has done.—We allude to J. J. ASTOR, who has amassed his immense pile of wealth by carrying Furs to the East and bringing back Teas, Silks, and other valuable commodities.—This is the country of Furs, one of the very few articles which the cunning Chinese will take in exchange for what they find is now indispensable.—One half the amount of Furs annually sent away from this continent by the North West Company would be fully adequate to supply the Canadian Tea market, and those might have been shipped from the natural port (the Columbia river) out for the gross ignorantes, wretched policy and unpardonable blunders of negotiators scribbling away the rights of present and future millions, as though they were "capering verses"!

But we must pause; our limits are very narrow; what we have said, and what we may say, on this subject, are mere blots. A fine field for capital and enterprize is open: and it is essentially necessary for the interest of Great Britain, and of this in future and in fact, her most valuable Colony; that it should be cultivated.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

London Sept. 8.

Hatton Garden—On Saturday, William Cosgrave, a working goldsmith and jeweller, was charged with pawning a gold ring, a brooch, and seal, the property of a gentleman who gave them to him to repair.

Some gentlemen of the trade stated that the prisoner was the best workman in London, and perhaps in the world, and might be an opulent man had he but attended to his business; and could easily earn from seven to ten pounds a day, and never from work; instead of which he was idle and would not work—but spent his time in smoking and drinking at public houses with persons of the very lowest description, and whenever any work was intrusted to him, he was sure of pawning it. As one instance of the prisoner's surprising abilities, it was stated, that some years ago, he made a coach, with four wheels of gold and ivory, not bigger than a pea, with a complete set of gold harness for two fleas, which drew the carriage; each flea had a gold chain round its neck, consisting of one hundred and sixty links, fastened on by a small padlock, which they drew along on a table—and being examined by a microscope, appeared in every respect perfect in all parts, and when he unfastened them from the coach, he let them feed on his wrist or on the back of his hand, and then put them into a small box, in which there was a bit of cotton. The coach he kept in a separate box, each not bigger than a nut—and that this extraordinary curiosity was shown at the time to their late Majesties and the principal Nobility in the kingdoms, as many living witnesses could attest. A gentleman present expressed his doubt that two fleas could be able to draw a coach and harness of that size and weight. The gentleman rejoinder remarked, that a flea was the strongest living thing in nature; that it could carry a thousand times its own weight, and leap upwards of two thousand times its own length;—and had but an elephant the strength and activity of a flea, in proportion to its bulk, it could carry the Monument on its back, or leap from Hyde Park to Greenwich. This extraordinary curiosity the prisoner lost when in a state of intoxication at a public house.

The prisoner not being able to produce the property, was ordered to be locked up until eight o'clock in the evening, at which time he was brought up again, when his daughter, a respectable genteel young girl, produced the property. The prisoner was severely admonished, and discharged.

COURT OF CONSCIENCE, DUBLIN.

CORDON VS. CHARLES.—On Saturday last, there was a hearing in this Court, before Sir John K. James, in which—Cordon (a tailor) was plaintiff, and Mr. Charles, the celebrated magician, was defendant.

Plaintiff stated, that he sought to recover 30s. the value of a hat spoiled by the defendant: that going with another gentleman, a few evenings before, to Mr Charles' exhibition, in Grafton street, his friend, who had some knowledge of these matters, puzzled the Magician, and gave him some little annoyance, he must confess; on which Mr. Charles gave to each of them, "a fresh egg," keeping another himself, at the same time saying, that if they could do exactly as he did, three hot omelets should be produced for the company;—he then broke the egg, and poured the contents into his hat, desiring them to do so with their hats, which they did. On turning their hats up, their hands and sleeves were all bespattered to their great annoyance, while Mr. Charles suffered no inconvenience, but produced his omelet.

Sir John—Perhaps, Sir, you would have done well to demean yourself like other gentlemen, at such an exhibition. Mr. Charles, will you have the goodness to go through the experiment here, for the benefit of the company?—Mr. Charles bowed assent, amidst peals of laughter.

Plaintiff said, that this was no treatment for a gentleman, and that the public were concerned in such an outrage as this of Mr. Charles's, and that he walked home at night without a hat.

Sir John turned to Mr. Charles, and asked what he had to say to all this?

Mr. Charles—My Lor, I am sorry you and I are trouble vid such a silly ding as dis is; Sir Garret Neville, I am told, dismiss this worthy jantleman yesterday, saying much laughter, and advising him to keep de secret, and mind the advice of Sancho Panza, "The more you, &c."

My Lor—In the language of your greatest Poet—

"The very head and front of my offending hath which extent.
No more;—bad am I in speech, being a
Foreigner; and therefore little shall I grace
My cause, in speaking for myself—put
By your leave, I shall a round unvarnish tale relate
Of all what drugs, what charms,
What conjurations, and what mighty magic,
I stain'd his hat withal," (loud laughter.)

Dis Jantleman have come vid his friend to my Exhibition, they den appear to know every ding as well as myself, and den I thinks I vill try them; there vas a much large fashionable company; my performances, either in science or slight of de hand, may be acquired; my tricks are all much easy—any body can do dem—dat is, when dey know how—(loud laughter.) My Lor, 'tis no laugh; you remember Columbus' Egg—he says, "I will make dis egg stand on end." He too vas laugh at, but he tap de end on de table, and de ding was done! Why did not the jantleman do as I did? Where is de oder jantleman? He have more sense than because he have vex himself and been laugh at, to come and vex at and laugh at me.

Plaintiff—This is all nonsense, Sir, you ought to apologise.

Mr. Charles—Apologise for what?—Here is your hat, (taking it out of a handkerchief;) you state it is spoil, you throw it at me on my stage and den you say you go home uncovered; where is it injured—blowing on the hat,) dere, my Lor, where is it injured?

Sir John—Who knows, Mr. Cordon, but the hat is improved by this magic; it does not appear to me to be injured; you should have got Mr. Charles to blow on the last before.

Mr. Condon—Why did he not offer to do so?

Mr. Charles—Let him take his hat—"an egg to day is better than a chicken to morrow." He thinks, perhaps, your Lordship and I are chickens, but the Dutch Proverb tell him "some reckon dere chickens before dey be hatched."

A friend of Mr. Charles then begged he would rest his case here; as no injury had been sustained, he humbly conceived nothing could be recovered in that court.

Plaintiff—I have paid 30s. for a new hat for the one you made me spoil, and I look for justice.

Mr. Charles—I make you spoil? Come sare, (taking two full bottles out of his pockets,) here are two bottles of strong laudanum—taste them, take you choice, drink one of them off—I do so; here goes—(swallowing the contents of the bottle, amid murmurs of horror and laughter)—dare, sir,—ah! you no drink: dat show me you know better than do as Conjurer bid you; take your hat, or shall we send it to the mendi city, and be good humour?

Plaintiff—Mighty fine, sir, but—

Sir John—Really, gentlemen, such a case as this is quite rare here; I can give no damages for what plaintiff has felt about his hat—there is, I believe no harm done, and I must dismiss the case with costs.

The parties left the court in apparent good humor, and the beaver was borne by Charles' servant to the lodgings of the plaintiff unhurt.

Liberal Feelings.—At the late Sheriff's Dinner, in London, immediately after the election of the new Lord Mayor, (Alderman Waithman,) among other guests, Mr. Canning and Mr. Huskisson were present, and on their respective healths being drank, both of them made speeches which were warmly cheered. This mingling of the Ministers with those who are avowedly in opposition to them, appears to give much satisfaction to the liberal minded politicians. It shows a disposition to conciliate, which is a disposition that pleases every one. Charles II. on his restoration, adopted this plan, and he met with much success. Though he was known to be profligate, yet he so won upon the people, especially the middling classes, that even to this day he is liked by them, and his memory is respected. One of the opposition editors remarks—"this is a new spirit which is arising in England; it is the spirit of conciliation; that of gentlemen, the spirit of Christianity. And it gives us great pleasure to observe that King George the Fourth's Ministers set so good an example. We wish that it may be followed, and that the mean, paltry, virulent party-spirit may die away, that has been for the last quarter of a century so fashionable, in a country boasting of its courteousness, its philanthropy, its humanity, its freedom of speech, its toleration of religion, and its Christianity."

Dispatch!—The London Morning Chronicle, published at five in the morning, is received in every town within one hundred and twenty miles of London, by the coaches, on the day of its publication.

Population of Ireland.—In some parts of the sister Island, the population is remarkably dense. Mr Reid states, in his Travels in Ireland, that in eleven cabins which he visited in the lanes in the vicinity of Cork, he found them to average a population of eighteen and a half to each. At Limerick, the author went into several houses, and found the population greatly beyond any thing he had imagined, three families often occupying one room, and upwards of forty crowding one house! He numbered thirty one in a house between two and three o'clock in the afternoon, and there was a room containing two more families to which he was not admitted.

The Ladies retort.—Judge Buller, in an opinion he delivered in an action against a husband for bad treatment of his wife, laid it down as positive law, "That a husband was privileged to beat his wife, if the instrument used was wooden, and no thicker than his thumb." It was on this occasion that the ladies of Exeter addressed a round robin to the judge, in which they requested to be informed thickness of his Lordship's thumb.

Burning Bricks a Nuisance!—The Hon. Miss Monson, of Cheltenham, England, was lately convicted by the magistrates of a nuisance interdicted by 2d Geo. IV c. 121, sec. 59, by burning bricks within one mile and a half of the parish church of the town.

Mr Mathews.—At the closing of the English Opera House in London, in the beginning of last month, Mr. Bartley delivered an address, containing this passage.

"The first appearance of Mr Mathews in the Drama for six years has been greeted with a warmth of feeling bordering on enthusiasm, and the proprietor, therefore, congratulated himself on having been able to afford this welcome treat to the town, prior to a rich land of character and anecdote, with which the quick perception, acute observation, and brilliant humor, of that gentleman have furnished the budget of his next campaign, during his late trip to America."

New Pantheon.—The Golden Cross, Charing-cross, and the adjoining buildings in London, are to come down, and a splendid building is to be erected on its site like the Pantheon at Rome.

Children's Food.—A lady of Yorkshire observes, in a letter dated May 2d, that in consequence of losing her three first children, one during teething, and two of inflammation on the bowels, she gave her fourth child a little lime water in every article of food, adding a desert, and sometimes only a tea spoonful, of lime-water to every article, whether liquid or thick. It succeeded in keeping up healthy digestion, and a regular state of the bowels; the child, instead of being feverish, flatulent, and fretful, free from symptoms of indigestion, cut its teeth without any constitutional disturbance. She has continued this practice with two more children, with the same good effects. We have known this simple addition to the food of children prove very efficacious in incipient cases of rickets and of irritable bowels, attended with looseness, &c. but if the child be disposed to costiveness, on account of its astringent quality, a little magnesia should be occasionally added to it.

New and Powerful Gas.—Sir Humphrey Davey has, within the last month, discovered that the application of a certain gas, fifteen times heavier than the atmosphere, to the mechanism of a steam engine, will produce a power fully equal to that which now results from the application of steam. The great obstacle which stands in the way of a general and immediate introduction into use of this gas, is the difficulty of confining it. The task of constructing convenient vessels, sufficiently strong for that purpose, Sir Humphrey proposes as a problem, the solution of which must be attended with inestimable benfit to this country.

The Pope and Paridise.

By a letter from Rome of a very recent date, we learn that the 50 and odd churchmen who wear the Cardinal's hat, had not yet decided which of their number should be selected as St Peter's successor. Meanwhile the capitol of the Catholic world was as much a scene of intrigue and corruption as the most close borough before an election. The Austrian influence was said to be exerted to exclude Gonsalvi from the Papal Chair, and the French ambassador had procured the political annihilation of Cardinal Fesch. Some speak of Zula, who is a kind of savant, and has written a book on geography; but being a Venetian, he detests the Austrians, and is likely on that account to be set aside. It is most probable the Sacred College will fix upon some meek old dotard, who will give them little trouble while living, and will soon have the civility to depart and leave the triple crown to more ambitious competitors. It will be difficult to find in every respect a man more to their mind, or a man better calculated for his high office, than his late Holiness, and yet, strange to tell, it is reported at Rome, that he has not gained that ready admission into Paradise which his mild reign and pious services would seem to have merited in the eyes of our Catholic brethren. It is well known that from his advancement to the Pontificate, Pius VII was governed by Gonsalvi, and that Gonsalvi was governed by his secretary. On these facts, and the late conduct of the secretary, a story has been framed respecting his deceased Holiness, which at present makes a great noise in the capital of Christendom. It is stated in this story, that when Pius VII. died, and went according to custom, to knock at the gates of Paradise, St. Peter, as usual, appeared to demand "Who was there?" Pope Pius, of course, told his predecessor what had happened, and begged admission. St Peter said he had no objection to receive him, but asked a little delay to consult superior authority.—He accordingly went to the Virgin Mary, and delivered this message. The Virgin expressed some surprise at the delicacy of his holiness, and said that he might of course open the doors and come in, without asking questions, for he himself had the keys. St. Peter therefore returned, and desired his Holiness to use his keys. Pius VII replied, that he had left them with Gonsalvi. A celestial messenger was immediately despatched to Gonsalvi, the late Pope standing all the while shivering at the gate. The expedition was useless—the keys were not to be found. Gonsalvi said, that they were in possession of his Secretary. Search was immediately made in the house of the secretary, but it was found that he had disappeared a few days before with a celebrated ballerina, or opera dancer, and had carried the keys along with him.—Pius VII. is therefore obliged to stand at the gate till the secretary be found. If this story should seem to savour of irreverence towards the Catholic faith, or to betray an unbecoming levity towards its late venerable chief, be it remembered that it is no Protestant invention, but was hatched in the Vatican, and passes current among the members of the Sacred College and existing fathers of the Church.

SIR GEORGE PREVOST.

We have been favoured with a perusal of a book giving "An account of the public life of the late Sir George Prevost, Bart. including a reply to the Quarterly Review for Oct. 1823."

This is a most successful vindication of the whole public life of that officer. It is peculiarly happy in the defence of his conduct at Plattsburgh and Sackett's Harbor. The style is clear and unaffected, and the statements are supported by documents. This statement was submitted to the Duke of York, and the Letter of Sir Ht. Taylor to the present Sir G. Prevost conveys the opinions and feelings of His Royal Highness upon the matter of it. In our present number we lay before our readers this excellent Letter—and also one passage relative to the state of Canada on Sir George's arrival here. We hope the author of the letter to Lord Liverpool may read this book. If possible we shall gratify our readers on a future occasion with further extracts.

Horse Guards, November 15, 1822.

"Sir,

"I am directed by the Commander in Chief to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, containing a statement, "which the family of the late "Lieutenant General Sir George Prevost have felt "themselves called upon to make public, in reply to a "wanton and malignant attack which has been recently made in an article of the Quarterly Review upon "his military character and reputation."

"His Royal Highness orders me to assure you, that it has not been without great concern and indignation that he has noticed the ungenerous and cowardly attack to which you advert: ungenerous, because, even if it had been borne out by facts, it was calculated to wound most deeply the feelings of respectable and amiable individuals who had not provoked it; cowardly, as being directed by an anonymous libeller against the memory of an officer whose premature death had alone deprived him of the benefit of an investigation into accusations which he was prepared to meet, with the confident expectation that he could successfully refute them. His Royal Highness' sentiments upon the character, conduct, and services of the late Sir George Prevost, have, upon a former occasion, been conveyed to his family. Those of His Majesty's Government, in approval of his distinguished services, his gallantry, zeal, and able conduct, are recorded in a public act of His Majesty's, dated 31 September, 1818, which you have inserted in your statement. To that record His Royal Highness conceives that you may with confidence appeal for a refutation of the calumnies recently published; and having adverted to that document, so honourable to the memory of the late Sir George Prevost, His Royal Highness considers that he needs only to add, that nothing has since the date of it come to his knowledge, which can shake the opinion he then entertained in perfect union with the sentiments therein expressed.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient humble servant,
(Signed) Hr. Taylor."

Page 12.—"Upon the arrival of Sir George Prevost at Quebec in 1811, he found much dissatisfaction and discontent existing in the Lower Province. The inhabitants were divided into two parties, termed the English and Canadian, and the feelings of hostility with which they viewed each other, had unfortunately not been allayed by the policy which the late Governor in-Chief, Sir James Craig, had thought it necessary to adopt during his administration. To such a degree had this party spirit been carried, and so doubtful had he been of the disposition of the Canadians, that it had been thought inexpedient to call out the militia, lest they should make an improper use of the arms to be intrusted to them. Under these circumstances, it was evidently the duty of Sir George Prevost to conciliate, by every means in his power, the confidence and affection of the Canadians, more particularly as in case of hostilities with America, it would have been impossible to preserve Lower Canada without the cordial support of its inhabitants. Sir George Prevost therefore did not hesitate to adopt a system which the true interest of the Province seemed so imperiously to require. He anxiously endeavoured to unite the two adverse parties, and to soothe the irritation which not only threatened the tranquility of his government, but, even the safety of the colony itself. In the distribution of the patronage which he enjoyed, he resolved to be guided solely by a consideration of the public good, and when offices became vacant, he bestowed them, with a due regard to the merits of the individuals, indifferently upon the English and Canadians.

"The beneficial effects of these measures became every day more apparent: the Governor in Chief speedily acquired the confidence of all ranks of people, who submitted with cheerfulness to the privations and sacrifices which they were soon afterwards called upon to endure. In numerous instances, he received from the inhabitants, both collectively and individually, the strongest proofs of their zeal; and he had the satisfaction of seeing them united in their attachment to their government, at a time when the preservation of the colony depended upon such feelings."—Can. Spectator.

Mr. Ricardo.

The country and his friends have to lament the loss of this enlightened, amiable and truly virtuous Senator. An express arrived in town on Friday morning, with an account of his death, at his seat in Gloucestershire. The disease is said to have been water on the brain.

Political economy remained nearly in the state in which it was left by Smith, till the appearance of the writings of Mr. Ricardo. To him we are indebted for the discovery of many important principles, and for the correction and modification of many of those laid down by his great predecessor. But in the brief notice to which we must now confine ourselves, we can only allude generally to his merits as a political economist, without attempting a specification of them.

As a Senator he stood alone, and we know not whether he will have any successor.—Before Mr. Ricardo, we had able, practical statesmen, great orators, and brilliant wits; but he is the first man who carried into the House of Commons a clear philosophical head, and an inflexible determination never to deviate in the slightest degree from any of those principles, the truth of which he had once ascertained. With such a determination he could not possess extensive influence in the Parliamentary sense of the word; because, in a popular assembly, influence can only be purchased by occasional sacrifices to the opinions and even the prejudices of others. But his disregard of all the means of obtaining adventitious consideration, gave him great weight with the well informed, both in the House and throughout the country. Forty years ago, when even Burke, with all his financial and brilliant declamation, could not obtain a hearing for any thing beyond the routine of every-day politics; Mr. Ricardo would have been totally disregarded. The diffusion of knowledge throughout all classes in the country has since been very great, and the philosophical elucidations of Mr. Ricardo of points in political economy, delivered in the most unpretending manner, and unrelieved by any thing extraneous, were listened to by the House with a respectful attention, indicative at all events of a due sense of the value and importance of knowledge. He was the Representative of an age when the arts of delusion have lost much of their influence through the general advancement of intellectual power.

In the House, as in conversation, Mr. Ricardo possessed great presence of mind, and readiness in expressing his sentiments on all the subjects with which he was conversant. He was often extremely happy in his retorts on those who opposed themselves to his views; and some of his remarks on Sir Thomas Lethbridge, and other sons of the soil, approached even to epigrammatic point.

The example of so much simplicity and singleness of purpose, so pure and constant a love of truth for her own sake, would in time, we doubt not, have been still more beneficially felt in the assembly to which he belonged. We regard therefore his death in the light of a great national calamity. His talents, though of the first order, may be sooner replaced than his virtues. Let us hope however, that some man of independent fortune, and endowed with high powers of intellect, which he considers as a trust for the benefit of his species, will rise up among us to tread in his footsteps.

Mr Ricardo is supposed to have been worth upwards of half a million when he retired from business. He was remarkably successful hardly ever sustaining any loss. Indeed the system on which he proceeded to some measure secured him against heavy losses, though it also prevented him from gaining much at any one time. His practice was to sell always at the turn of the market, and his gains, though small at any one time, by being often repeated, became large in the end. He has left behind him a widow and a tolerably large family. One, if not two of his sons were lately (and perhaps still are) at one of our Universities.

SPAIN.

One of the London Editors remarks aptly and justly,—"The intelligent part of the Spaniards have been found unequal to cope with the ignorant and prejudiced mass aided by Government, unprincipled enough to ally itself to the partizans of the Inquisition and Despotism."

Spanish Friars.—The Charleston Courier states, that accounts from Havana mention the arrival at the latter place of a brig from Malaga, which port she left on the 1st Sept. having on board a large number of Friars, sent off by General Riego. When they were landed at Havana, the boys hooted at them, and pelted them with stones; nor could the populace be quieted until the strangers cried out, "Vive la Constitution!" when they were allowed to proceed to their lodgings unmolested. It will be recollected, that an article appeared in the French papers, accusing Riego of having given orders that these same Friars should be massacred, and thrown overboard, which was followed up by a statement that several of the dead bodies had been picked up at sea.

When the Spanish patriot, Riego, was escorted as a prisoner to Corunna, some of the rabble attempted to insult him. When he arrived before a balcony, indicative of the year he bore he harangued the people, from which the year he bore he harangued the people, from which the year he bore he harangued the people, from which

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF LOWER CANADA.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,

Quebec, 26th November, 1823.

This day at two o'clock His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief came down in State to the Legislative Council Chamber, and being seated on the Throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was sent down to the House of Assembly to command their attendance before His Excellency, and that House being come up, His Excellency opened the fourth Session of the Eleventh Provincial Parliament, with the following Speech:

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

It is painful to me to meet you in each succeeding year with statements of difficulties in our financial affairs; but as they still exist, it is incumbent upon me to bring them before you in the fullest detail; and it is for that especial purpose I have called you to meet at this early period.

Placed as the Executive medium between the Imperial Treasury, and this Provincial Parliament, I am to be guided by the decisions of both in financial matters; and having the satisfaction to know, that the course I have pursued in the difficulties of this summer, has been approved by His Majesty's Government, it remains for me to submit it to you consideration, in order that Parliament here may adopt such measures as to it shall seem best.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I shall direct the proper Officer to lay before you the annual Accounts of the Province to 31st October last, as soon as they can be prepared. Also Estimates of the probable Expenses of the Civil Government for the year now commencing in the same form as I presented them in last Session, and in His Majesty's name, I am to call upon you to make provision accordingly.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

It is with great satisfaction I have to state, that the Revenue continues fully equal to what it has been for several years past, and that I consider the Province essentially prospering, even to a degree far beyond what is generally imagined.

Under existing circumstances it may be unnecessary for me to recommend the improvement of Roads, or the Canal now nearly completed, or indeed any works which spring from public necessity and; nevertheless I trust they will not be omitted in your deliberations.

There are other subjects, not so dependent, and no less important to the public interests,—The Judicature Bill, and that for the establishment of Register Offices, have been already under your consideration, and I hope will be again resumed.

We are already at the last Session of this Parliament, let it be the anxious desire of all to close our labours in that harmony and effectual concert which always promote public good, and ensure public popularity; in that desire I think I need not assure you of my cordial concurrence.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

INTERCOURSE WITH THE UNITED STATES, AND THE DEBATE ON THE SUBJECT OF TEA.

Mr. HAGERMAN said the proper regulation of our Commercial Intercourse with the United States, was an object of the greatest importance to this Colony. He was satisfied that this was a question for which the Country at large, and particularly the Agricultural Interest, felt the greatest anxiety, and he was also convinced that the Committee would admit the necessity of putting it on a proper footing. As the British Acts had levied a duty on Flour, and other articles for Exportation, it was not his intention to lay any thing additional on them—he wished all such articles to go as little embarrassed as possible, being satisfied that much of the Carrying Trade now passes out of our hands, and many articles took another course. In consequence of our restrictions. It will be said that in proportion as we keep out the foreign produce, the domestic will rise in price; but in view ing this subject, the House ought not only to consider the Agricultural Interests, but also, the Interests of the laboring and other classes. He wished to raise the duty on a few articles, particularly on Salt; he was aware that this would be opposed, as it was an article of prime necessity; but he wished the committee to recollect that we had a number of infant establishments, which would come to something, if encouraged. It was proposed last Session to give a bounty on this article; but he thought the better way would be to lay a reasonable duty on the American Salt. He intended also to put an additional duty on Woolen and Cotton Manufactures, and a duty on Tobacco. Before he submitted his Resolutions to the committee, he would suggest the propriety of passing certain Resolutions respecting East India Goods. The article of Tea particularly was now smuggled into this Province from the United States. This was a subject on which this House could not legislate; but he would suggest the propriety of forwarding a Joint Address to His Majesty in order that this Province might be permitted to import Tea, either direct from Canton, by the way of Quebec, or through the United States, on paying a reasonable duty. He intended to move for a conference with the Upper House, in order that a Joint Address might be forwarded on this subject.

He then proposed the following Resolutions:

Resolved, That it is expedient further to regulate by law the Commercial Intercourse of this Province with the United States of America.

Resolved, That from the great extent of coast of Upper Canada bordering on the United States of America, affording the greatest facilities for smuggling, and against which it is impracticable by any law of the Province to establish effectual checks; that description of illicit traffic is carried on to an extent highly prejudicial to the revenue of this Province, destructive of the interests of the Fair Trader, and injurious to the morals of the People.

Resolved, That India Goods, and more especially Tea, constitute the principal articles smuggled, which is entirely owing to the great difference in the price of these articles, when purchased in the United States, or imported from England.

Resolved, That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty praying that he will be graciously pleased to recommend to His Parliament such relaxation in the laws of the Empire as will authorise his subjects of this Provice, to import direct from India, such Goods as they may require, the production of that country, (and more particularly the article of Tea) or that they may be permitted to supply themselves therewith through the United States of America, upon the payment of a reasonable duty.

Mr. NICHOL said there could be no objection to these Resolutions.—It was their duty to address the Imperial Government on this subject, and particularly on the article of Tea.

Mr BALDWIN had no doubt the system of smuggling now so generally pursued in this country, had an injurious effect on the morals of the people.—He lamented that an application on the subject of Tea was not long since forwarded home. He thought, however, it was impossible that Tea could be imported at all into here from England as by the United States. The East India Company were at a heavy expense, and their Tea was generally of a better quality—yet so long as the people could get Tea cheaper from the United States, although not so good, they would smuggle it, and the people of the United States obtained a large revenue by it.

Mr. C. JONES said the object of the Resolutions was to gain relief for the Inhabitants of this Colony with respect to the article of Tea, and to prevent the smuggling of that article from the United States. If the relief was not of such a nature as to put the people of this Province on a footing with the U. States, on this point it would be no relief at all, and smuggling would be carried on.—He was of opinion that they could never obtain the necessary relief from the East India Company, who could not, by sending one small ship yearly to the Port of Quebec, come in competition with the U States; nor would the Mother Country ever consent to the importation of Tea through the territory of the U States. Therefore, nothing but a free trade from Canton to Quebec could give this Country effectual relief.

Mr. NICHOL thought the necessary relief could be afforded by the East India Company, who purchased their Tea on better terms than the Americans, and had it in their power to charter as many ships as they pleased, consequently they could supply any quantity as cheap, and even cheaper, than the Americans. He was well aware that the Government of the Mother Country always guarded the monopoly of the Tea Trade with a jealous eye, and the people of this small colony could not expect privileges which have been refused to twenty millions of subjects, who are paying heavy taxes at home. The great thing in favour of any application from this colony, however, was the facilities afforded to smuggling from the great extent of coast on the frontier of the United States.—He was of opinion that this fact strongly urged, would induce the East India Company to come to any reasonable measure, and with this view, he would move the following amendment: "Or, that if either of these measures be deemed inexpedient, some arrangements may be made with the Honorable the East India Company, for the annual supply of Tea in the Provinces of Canada, by direct importation through the agency of that Company."

Mr J. JONES saw no objection to this amendment—and thought they ought to make application in such a way as would be considered most feasible, and best calculated to obtain the necessary relief.

Mr C JONES would oppose this amendment as it would have a most injurious effect—and when so many alternatives were proposed to His Majesty's Government, they would most likely adopt the last, which would not give the desired relief, and if granted, would be a means of preventing further application or effectual relief.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL thought this a most important question, and no harm could arise from any application of this sort—It was a subject to which the Government at home had their attention directed a few months ago by a number of the most respectable Merchants in Lower Canada, by whom an application was made to the East India Company to establish a central Mart, to supply these Colonies with Teas, &c. on reasonable terms

Mr. JOHN WILSON agreed with the opinion of the hon. Member for Leeds, that when they ask a favour, it should be such as would serve their purpose and no other. If the people of this country were allowed a direct trade to India on the same terms with the United States, then they would be benefitted, and smuggling would be done away; but obtaining Tea through the United States, on payment of a duty or other usual grounds, would never remedy the evil complained of. He thought it not at all unlikely that the Government of the Mother Country would grant to this Colony what they had refused others; because, from our local situation, and the vast extent of our coast on the boundaries of the United States, it was utterly impossible to prevent smuggling, and the East India Company could sustain no loss by any relaxation in our favour, as very few of their Goods came to this Colony through that channel. He would therefore oppose the amendment.

Mr. RUTTAN thought that Tea might be allowed to come through the United States on payment of a small duty.

Mr. MORRIS could not see any grounds for objecting to this amendment, nor could he think that this application would be of no benefit. He was decidedly of opinion that if a ship were despatched from India to Quebec, we should have our Teas as cheap as the people of the United States had them. He could not approve of bringing our Tea through the United States, because it would give that encouragement to American Seamen which was due to our own people.

Mr. BALDWIN would oppose the amendment because it would not procure the relief we required, and consequently smuggling would be continued.

Mr. G. HAMILTON thought that hon. members were opposed to this amendment without any reason. He could not see why the East India Company should not sell their Tea as cheap as any other people, and on this consideration, he would support the amendment.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL, was of opinion that effectual relief could be afforded through the medium of the East India Company by a direct application from Canton to Quebec, by that means they would save the expense of a circuitous navigation, and of a second shipment from England—and he could not see any thing to prevent the Company, in that way, from affording Teas as cheap as the United States.

Mr. NICHOL was of the same opinion. At present the East India Company had no Port open to them but London, and they were bound by their charter to keep two years' supply of Tea, sufficient for the British dominions, in their Warehouses under the King's Lock. They also paid the immense sum to the government of £800,000 yearly for their monopoly. Therefore, to meet all these heavy expenses, and to pay them for the great Capital sunk in the two years' supply lying in the Ware houses, they have been obliged to sell their Teas higher than the United States; but in the event of a direct trade, all these difficulties and additional expenses would be avoided—there would be no necessity for keeping a large capital sunk in two years' supply here, and three or four ships could start annually to Quebec, and deliver Teas on as good terms, and better terms, than it is now smuggled from the United States.

Mr. JOHN WILSON thought that nothing but a direct free trade with the East Indies could supply us with Tea as cheap as the prices of the United States. He thought it highly important for them to call the attention of the Imperial Government to this subject, as soon as possible, as the charter of the India Company would expire in about ten years, and His Majesty's Ministers might think proper to make such necessary arrangements as would have the effect of supplying these colonies with the important article of Tea as cheap as our neighbours, and thereby put a stop to smuggling.

After some further, and lengthy discussions, much to the same purport with that which we have given, Mr. NICHOL's amendment was put and carried.

Mr. HAGERMAN, on the principle before stated, to raise a revenue and encourage Home Manufacture, proposed an additional duty of 9d per bushel on Salt.—This motion was negatived after a long discussion, and the former duty of 6d per bushel was adopted.

A resolution imposing a duty of 15 per cent. on Snuffery of every description, passed the Committee.

It was then ordered that the Resolutions be communicated to the Honorable the Legislative Council, for their concurrence therein.

Editorial Commentary.

VERY late and important news have been received from Europe by the Ship Columbia.—It is said that England is determined to make a stand against the pretensions of Russia in the East, as well as to thwart a projected Expedition from Spain, consisting of 12,000 men, nominally Spaniards, assisted by French artillery and engineer officers, destined against South America. There is, indeed, very strong grounds for believing that our Government is about to shake her "lion's mane" in good earnest.—In addition to the regiment already ordered on foreign service, the 42d Highlanders, the 77th, and several others, are stated to be preparing for embarkation.—Admiral Halsted had sailed for the Jamaica Station, in the Isis; and the Ganges, of 84 guns, with 700 men on board, and the Genoa, of 74 guns, Sir Thomas Livingstone, with the 7th regiment, were nearly ready for sea; and many other ships are spoken of, as being in a state of forward preparation. In short, the utmost bustle is remarked in the British naval depôts.—The Funds have felt the shock; and the busy hum of a general war is already heard.—The Courier, always cautious and circumspect, plainly hints at something more than the mere protection of our West India interests.—England has not only to pay herself, as Mr. Canning lately observed, but, we apprehend, she has now to declare herself openly on the side of liberal principles, in opposition to the dark despotism of the continental policy, which hangs, like the black canopy of death, over millions of men destined by their Creator for light and freedom.——May that Power, by whose arm the universe is sustained, direct her councils in all wisdom, and make feel the hearts of her enemies—until it shall be once more seen, that she, even England, is under God, the arbitress of the destinies of Europe!

Sir Walter Scott's new work is entitled "St Ronan's Well," and will shortly be out.—The fate of Sir Walter's being the author of the Waverly Novels gains a more general admission every day.—For ourselves, we had "confirmatory strong as proof from holy writ," more than ten years since, which should have been laid before the public long ago, but for the delicacy of the circumstances attending the proofs, and the charge of egotism that might have been brought against ourselves: but, that Sir Walter Scott is the author of the Waverly Novels we have evidence nothing short of ocular demonstration!

It was our intention to have mentioned a circumstance of much interest and curiosity, with respect to the subject of Tea, in our last week's publication, which we shall state here.—Several gentlemen in the South ern States are now cultivating the Tea-Tree, on a small scale, with considerable success; and, amongst the premiums offered by the Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce in England, in the Session for 1823 and 1824, we perceive the following :—297 To the person who shall grow and prepare the greatest quantity of Tea, of good quality, not less than 20 pounds weight, in the Island of Jamaica, or in any other British West India Colony, and shall import the same into Great Britain.—The Gold Medal, or Fifty Guineas.—Satisfactory certificates from the Governor or Secretary of the Colony, that such Tea was grown and prepared in the Tea-Trees, together with an account of the number of Tea-Trees, their age, mode of culture, of gathering, drying, and preparing the leaves; and samples of the Tea to be produced to the Society on or before the first Tuesday in February 1827.

The same premium is offered for the Colonies of—298. The Cape of Good Hope,
299. The Mauritius,
300. New South Wales.

301. Chinese Tea.—To the person who shall communicate to the Society, from information obtained in China, the best and most authentic account of the culture of the plant, or plants, the leaves of which furnish the different kinds of Tea; together with the method of gathering, drying, and otherwise preparing the leaves—The Gold Medal.—The communication, with the necessary certificates, to be sent in to the Society on or before the last Tuesday in March, 1824.—This premium is extended to the years 1825 and 1826

The Tea-Tree will flourish, even in England, as a green house plant; where we have seen it attain a growth nearly as large as the orange tree by which it is used. In its external form, it bore a close resemblance to the broad-leaved myrtle.—Of all our colonies, New Holland is the best adapted for the culture of this valuable plant. It is by no means improbable that in a very few years, even before the expiration of the East India Company's Charter, we shall hear of a Tea-trade from some of our own Colonies!

By recent advices from Prince Edward's Island, we learn, there is such a dust between the Lieut. Governor and people, as to put a stop to business: and it goes so far as to state that several of the leading men of Charlotte Town were going to jail, besides being fined so enormously as to occasion their ruin, for an alleged contempt on the Court of Chancery.

We cannot help congratulating the Public on the passing of the Canal Bill to unite the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario. The enactments are liberal and just—every person whose property may be injured in the slightest degree by the Canal passing through it is to receive full compensation by an award of arbitrators. The stock is to be raised by shares of $50 each, to be paid in by instalments of ten per cent. as they may be called for; and neither of the instalments cannot be required oftener than once a month. We hope there is scarcely a person in the country who will not endeavour to subscribe for one or more shares. There is one very important consideration which we will beg leave to state; it is this, that the amount of £10,000 is subscribed for during the present winter, it would be no difficult matter to finish the cut, from Chippawa to Lake Ontario, in the course of next summer; thereby uniting the waters by Boat Navigation, in the distance of a few months. Nature has already done so much towards the accomplishment of this great purpose, that there are only two miles to dig, and two hundred men would certainly complete the undertaking in six months!

What a glorious subject of congratulation would it not be for all of us, to have an Act passed in January; a Company formed, and the stock taken up by May; and the work finished by the December following!—The very idea, which is no aerial speculation, warms us to our toes.—every friend Jonathan would steer and ply out 'Iuration,' who would have thought it? Yes, it is very possible to shew Jonathan that the same spirit which gave him such a drubbing at Lundy's and at Queenston, can rival and surpass him when directed to more honourable objects than throat cutting; for, it the people will come liberally forward, this Canal may be assuredly completed before that which has been so much talked of in the State of New York!

The interests of the merchants of Lower Canada are much concerned in this great work, and we trust they will be induced to take a liberal share of the Stock. Being of the same breadth and depth as the American Canal; and commencing at a point nearly opposite, it must needs draw off a fair proportion of the Produce and Merchandize that would otherwise go to New York.

We hope to see the Lower Canada papers taking up the subject with ardour.—By the bye, we observe in the Quebec Mercury an unusually liberal order from the House of Assembly—for no less than six copies of every Newspaper published in Montreal as well as in Quebec, for each Member, during the Session.—Profusion and parsimony are equally censurable, but liberality is necessary and becoming in a Public Body!

We think the following extract from the letters of an American gentleman writing to his friend from Montreal not unworthy of consideration—though it is out of the nature of things that Canada is ever can, or will, be a member of the American union of confederated republics:

"Should the projected union of the two Provinces take place it is not difficult to foresee what would be the effect. That the French Canadian interest would incur the majority in the House of Assembly, their language be discouraged, their ancient civil law and feudal system set aside, their religion interfered with in the nomination to Curacies and Bishoprics, and the Catholics, who are now among the most faithful subjects the King has, would be converted into a discontented faction; a new order of things would arise, and in this the influence of minds affected by the late struggles thereof, the United States, and emulating perhaps their successful struggle in the first instance, and their rapid improvements since in arts, in arms, and in the sciences of legislation, would soon manifest itself, and Canada become a member of our union—a circumstance which would be neither for their interest, nor for ours"

BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The public generally are little aware of the extreme arbitrariness of the attempt to arrest the attention and obtain the approbation of the House of Commons in a speech of any length. From four to eight, or perhaps nine o'clock, an aldermen of London may be permitted to hold on the even tenor of his prose, but once the benches are filled, and the six maitresses is in full time, woe be to bold who addresses them unskilfully, if he would not be mercilessly assailed by their summary vengeance. If they are not very patient, or if they feel some respect for the Honourable member, though he wear a stupid head, they may probably proceed no farther than to withdraw their attention, and to form innumerable private committees. The interminable, undistinguishable buzz which alternately rises and falls, like a distant waterfall on a stormy day, and the regular recurrence of the call for "order," are, to ears connected with a feeling frame, horrible as idiomy to a virtuous mind. There are those who heed not this terrible neglect, but some of the most accomplished men in England have sunk under its power, and never spoke again.

"A kick that scarce can move a horse
May kill a sound divine."

But there is force enough to kill even a horse. The short and the frequent cough, and the determined demand of "question," sound as loud as a Stentor himself, even though manager of the House. No impudence can protect from self disapprobation and illness when this omnipotent remedy is administered.

The House of Commons is perhaps the only Assembly that ever possessed this power, and the House of Commons possesses it in perfection. Two circumstances contribute chiefly, if not exclusively, to its existence and preservation; the intelligence of the literature of the members and the absolute impartiality with which speeches are heard or condemned. It is impossible to congregate together a more various, more comprehensive, more profound, more intelligent more virtuous, more conscientious body than the Representative Body, possesses. Thus a large proportion of this Assembly are regularly trained in the great schools and universities of classical renown, and while not a few of these are intimately familiar with Greek and Latin lore, almost all of them are sufficiently acquainted with the outward symptoms of erudition, and the common rules of taste, to join cordially in hooting merited approbation or pointed derision. The learned towing merited approbation or pointed derision. The learned towing merit of approbation or pointed derision. The learned towing, who either have never attempted, or have, in despair, abandoned public speaking are the awful but salutary checks upon aspiring genius. Acknowledged orators are generous and indulgent; they feel sympathy and judge mercifully. The disinterested spectator cares little for applause, and is never solicited by the pleadings of his own consciousness. What beauty would not feel more confidence in the presence of happy matrons than under the judgment of sullen maidens? What statesman orator would not dread the severe eyes of Mr. Hobse or Mr. Bankes (of Lincoln) more than the sympathising looks of Sir James Mackintosh or Mr Canning? Such severe and inexorable judges are always found in the House. There are always Hobbses and Addisons, who judge of speeches with perfect taste and unfeeling impartiality. Their very looks, their involuntary breathing, their unconscious expressions, are caught by others, and the animated cheer or contemptuous indifference, makes or mars the orator. But the impartiality of the decision is the grand foundation of its power. A first effort may be partially cheered, a favourite partisan may be encouraged without reason, but miserably deluded is he who essays a speech relying on such aid. The cheers are neither numerous nor loud enough to deceive vanity, and they are drowned forever dumb by the infectious yawning of the opposite side. The House, like every accomplished Assembly, is extremely good natured, but its good nature extends only to the securing of an Englishman's powers for play. Their votes, to the securing of an Englishman's powers for play. Their votes may, perhaps be liable to influence, but their attention and approbation are inaccessible to fear, favour, reward, or the hope of reward. The celebrated Horne Tooke felt and confessed this virtue; and no reformer ever denied it, when once admitted into a situation to be sensible both of its existence and power. Mr. Waithman and Mr. Hobhouse might be confidently appealed to. Waithman and Mr. Hobhouse might be confidently appealed to. If, without illness, Mr. Hunt or Mr. Cobbett may be imagined to be admitted into the Honourable House, they would infallibly find themselves affected like rats in an exhausted receiver. It is a most dignified and glorious balm air which guards our Representatives from the insolence of a ruffian and the ignorance of a gentleman from the impudence of a quack. Their votes from the impudence of a quack. Their votes from the impudence of a quack. Their votes

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

SCRAPS OF HISTORY.—In the reign of Henry VIII. there did not grow in England any vegetable or eatable root, such as carrots, parsnips, cabbage, &c Turkeys, fowls, &c. were introduced there about the year 1524. The currant shrub was brought from the Island of Zante, A. D. 1553. Pocket watches were brought there from Germany, A. D. 1577 — About the year 1580, coaches were introduced. A saw mill was erected near London in 1633, but afterwards demolished, that it might not deprive the labouring poor of employment. Tea was introduced into England in 1666, and soon became a fashionable drink: it sold then for 60s. per lb. It was boiled in a large iron pot until it was tender, and was then sauced with butter, and served up in a large deep dish.

CAUSE OF THE DEFEAT OF THE SPANISH ARMADA — The following curious fact is given upon the authority of Bishop Burnet, who states, in the "Memoirs of his Own Times," that he had good reason for believing the circumstance to have been as narrated:

"A single banker secured Queen Elizabeth against the dangers with which she was threatened by the soi-disant invincible armada. When the queen was apprised of the design of Spain, she had no ships capable of being opposed to the Spanish fleet; a part of those which were lying in the ports and docks could only be used after twelve months, and great anxiety prevailed. This banker, however, being well acquainted with the state of the Spanish finances, knew that the Spanish fleet could not set sail but through the medium of bills which were to be drawn upon the Genoese bank. He therefore conceived the idea of buying up all the paper or bills that could be met with in every commercial town in Europe, and to deposit them in the bank of Genoa, that by his large remittances he might have the bank so in his power, as to incapacitate it, whenever he chose, from giving any aid to the Spaniards. Being well aware that it only required to let those remittances be so long at Genoa, until the season should obstruct the sailing of the fleet, he calculated that these exchange operations would cost about 40,000*l* sterling, and he proposed to the queen to extricate her at this price from the dilemma. The proposal was accepted and carried into effect with so much secrecy, that Philip's hands were tied, and he could not send out the fleet until the following year."

WOLVES.—We have often read accounts of the ferociousness of these animals, but do not remember so extraordinary a detail as appears in the Journal de Paris of the 6th. It is stated, that on the 12th and 13th of Oct a wolf, five feet long, and about five years old, absolutely ravaged the communes of Beurlay, Romegoux, Saint Porchair, and Saint Sulpice d'Arnoult, (Charente Inferieure.) In its course it tore and dreadfully mutilated, on the first day, no fewer than nine individuals. On the 13th one woman was killed on the spot, and two others terribly lacerated: the Mayor of Gua, with two persons, attacked the animal, but were se verely wounded, and would have perished had not assistance arrived. At last this monster was killed by a man named Jean Mesnard.

PUNS, &c.

Those of our readers who are in the habit of reading the Newspapers, are in possession of the circumstances growing out of the representations of Mr. Buck's Tragedy of the Italians. On the second performance of that piece, it seems buckets of water were emptied upon the audience in the pit. This proceeding, in the first instance, was attributed to the managers, but it is an act of justice due to them to state, that a prompt and positive denial of any participation in that disgraceful proceeding was made by Mr. S. Kemble, and inserted in the various Newspapers.—A facetious correspondent has transmitted us the following report of a dialogue which took place in the pit upon that very curious occasion:—Tickler

An old renter, who felt the shower on his bald pate, observed, "This is a new way to liquidate our demand!"

"You have no cause to complain," said his neighbour; "the affairs of the Theatre go on swimmingly"

"I thought the name of the author who reigns (rains) here was Buck?"—"No, sir, it is Bucket."

"So, so; they have mistaken the pit for a well, and have let down the Buckets." "I should think not, sir. The buckets in a well descend empty, and go up full. Here it is reversed"

"Pray is this the Aquatic Theatre?"—"No, Madam, it is what they call on dry land an over flowing house."

"Have they changed the play of the Italians, and is this the first representation of Deluge?"—"I fancy it is, although I did not conceive the Deluge could be well adapted to the stage."

"It is fortunate for the author,"—"I do not know that. It would be as well for the author to be damned as drowned."

"There you are mistaken, sir. There is a tide in the affairs of man, that taked at the flood leads on to fortune."

P. S. It appears that the performances of the evening to which the above refers, have been withdrawn, in consequence of a portion of the audience having thrown cold water upon some of the proceedings.

NECK AND HEELS.—A young man of the name of Neck, was recently married to a Miss Heels; they are now, therefore, tied, Neck and Heels, together.

BUONAPARTE.—The name of Buonaparte is not unknown to literary fame. In the sixteenth century there were four writers of that surname. Jacobo Buonaparte published a relation of the Sacking of Rome by the Imperialists, A. D. 1527. He was an eye witness of the cruelties and rapacity of the soldiery, and is much consulted by later Italian Historians. Nicolo Buonaparte wrote a sprightly comedy, called La Vedova, or the widow; and Count Mazzuchilli, has published notices of the other two, who were of the same family with Nicolo Buonaparte.

LORD NELSON'S PRAYER FOR VICTORY.—The most splendid example of piety in a profession generally supposed deficient in it, was undoubtedly that of the immortal Nelson; particularly previous to the ever memorable battle of Trafalgar, in October, 1805. His despatch, conveying that welcome intelligence, began with the words which have been so generally and justly admired:—"My Lord, Almighty God has blessed his Majesty's arms by a great victory." An entry in the hero's diary, October 21, 1805, breaths still more devotion: thus—"At day light saw the enemy's combined fleet from E to E S E.—bore away; made the signal for order of sailing, and to prepare for battle; the enemy with their heads to southward at seven, the enemy wearing in succession. "May the great God whom I worship, grant to my country, and for the benefit of Europe in general a great and glorious victory! and may no misconduct in any one tarnish it! and may humanity after victory, be the predominant feature in the British fleet! For myself, individually, I commit my life to Him who made me, and may his blessing light upon my endeavours for serving my King and country faithfully! To Him I resign myself, and the just cause which is intrusted to me to defend. Amen.

ECONOMY —It is mentioned as the result of actual experiment, that light produced by the best spermaceti oil, at its present price, is about in proportion to tallow candles at six cents per pound. Besides, a light lamp is much safer than a candle, and without the trouble of snuffing.—Mer. Adv.

UNREASONABLE LOYALTY.—On Monday week several Journey Taylors were charged at Queen square office, London, with being drunk and disorderly One of them, J. Wallace, went into St. Margaret's Church during divine service, on Sunday morning, and placing his back to the altar, began to sing "God save the King;" and on being interrupted, said if they did not like that, they should have "Rule Britannia." On the beadle attempting to turn him out, he turned on him in a pugilistic style, and was with difficulty removed.—The magistrate committed him in default of bail, and fined his companions 5*s*. each.

RIPE CHERRIES IN APRIL.—A gentleman who was riding near Uckfield, in England observed some with a couple of cherries (the produce of a neighbouring hothouse) tied on a stick. The gentleman, on passing, inquired the price of these early specimens of summer fruit, and was informed that they were only a guinea each!—Checking his horse for the moment, he drew from his pocket an embroidered purse, and placed in his hands of the man who had the cherries, two sovereigns and two shillings; at the same moment taking the fruit, he with great non chalance ate it, observing aloud, it was very fine and full flavoured. He then replaced his purse in his pocket, put his horse on a canter, and left the man of whom he had purchased the cherries, and our informant, staring after him with amazement, undecided whether to account for his conduct on the score of liberality, folly, or a mixture of both.

DISCOVERY OF AN ANCIENT PAINTING —In cleaning the south wall of the church at Wootton Basset, Wilts, which is a more ancient part than the rest of the structure to which it is now united, the workmen accidentally brought to light a very curious painting, executed in the rudest style, but evidently illustrating the subject which it represented. In brushing, a piece of the plaster fell off, and the armed foot of a man with a spur was discovered underneath. Gradually removing the plaster around, the workmen discovered a painting in water colours, of the murder of Archbishop Beckett. The four knights in complete armour are in the act of assaulting the Archbishop. The figures of the knights are nearly perfect; the two latter in the act of drawing. The Archbishop is leaning before the alter; between his hands, which are raised in a pious attitude, is the wafer; the cup and the book are placed on the table before him—the crosier and mitre are by his side. His Cardinal's red robe, with gold in bands, is distinct. His features are a good deal obliterated, but there is sufficient to distinguish that his head is turned round in sudden surprise. This painting is evidently very curious, both from the subject and rudeness of the execution. It was done in all probability, at an age when Beckett's character as a saint stood high, as a holy decoration for the church, and at no great distance from the event. He was murdered A. D. 1170 It is not easy to determine when the picture was covered over; very likely at the Reformation, to efface a Catholic memorial of a personage to whom such miraculous celebrity was ascribed. It might however have been covered up in the time of Cromwell, for on the opposite wall the plaster was also removed, and the painting of the royal arms in Charles's time discovered over, and the zeal of the partizans in those days might have caused both the picture and the king's arms to be effaced together The picture is evidently painted on the first coating, as the bare stone is immediately underneath. The entrance by the folding doors is also rudely represented, and below is sketched what seems intended to signify the cathedral itself The picture is highly worthy the inspection of the curious. London paper.

WEST INDIES.—Such is the distressed situation of the island of Grenada, that on an application of the Governor for 700*l*. to repair a fort highly necessary in the critical state of the colony, the reply of the Assembly was:—"That from the unparalleled state of distress into which this colony has fallen, this House is totally unable to comply with your Excellency's wishes, respecting the sum of 700*l*. to be applied to Fort King George." We fear such must be the answer of the Assembly of Jamaica, next Session, to the question of supply.

SPAIN.

On the authority of the London Courier, it is stated, that France is to continue the military occupation of Spain to a certain extent, and until the Government of Ferdinand is entirely and firmly re-established. In pursuance of this plan, Cadiz will be occupied by 10,000 troops; Madrid by 5000, and 15,000 will take up positions along the line of the Ebro. One great point, says the Courier, which it is intended to accomplish, if possible, is the entire disbanding of the Spanish army, as now constituted, and to re-model it upon a totally different system.

A private letter from Madrid, dated the 20th, states that the strong representations made by M. de Chateaubriand, through all the Embassies and Legations remonstrances of the Duke d'Angouleme, have had the desired effect on Ferdinand; the sentences of the Regency are not confirmed, and the execution of his own decrees are suspended. It is whispered, that the Duke explicitly declared in his remonstrance, that if his Majesty did not revoke the decrees, which were calculated to produce civil war, he would withdraw all the French troops, and leave him entirely to his own resources. Ferdinand, it is said, was fool-hardy enough to say, "let them withdraw, I am powerful enough without them;" but his Minister-Confessor thought otherwise; and though he was the first to suggest the plans of vengeance, he now felt alarmed for the consequences and the safety of his own dear person, which would inevitably be one of the first victims of popular vengeance.

Among numerous decrees issued by Ferdinand, since his arrival at Seville, are the following:—For a funeral service to be performed in all the churches in the Kingdom, "for the repose of the souls of those who have died since the 7th of March, 1820, in the support of God's cause and mine!" For the formation of a junta to select such books "which are proper to form men who may be worthy supports of the altar, the throne and the country!!"

BADALONA, IN THE VICINITY OF BARCELONA. Oct. 22.

On the 17th inst Mina sent Colonel Espag Monserrat to Marshal Moncey at Sarria. This officer offered to surrender the fortress, upon conditions which were inadmissible. The Marshal rejected them, and delivered his ultimatum. The Colonel returned at five o'clock, and requested that a French General might be sent into Barcelona to discuss the proposed conditions with Mina. The Colonel was received at dinner by the Marshal.

On the 18th, General Berge was sent into Barcelona, where he arrived at eight o'clock in the morning, and was received with distinction. He returned in the evening, bringing with him a project of capitulation.

But in the course of the day of the 18th, a courier had arrived from Cadiz, bringing an order to the Marshal to grant no special conditions whatever to Mina, and to demand that Barcelona should surrender as Cadiz had done.

On the 19th, General Berge transmitted the King's order to the Spanish General, who answered, that he would defend the fortress.

Since the 19th, however, several flags of truce have presented themselves, but the Marshal refused to receive any, unless he were the bearer of an unconditional surrender. Colonel Monserrat, however, was received yesterday. We are as yet ignorant of the object of his mission.

It is affirmed that previously to the 17th inst., the Marshal had offered to Mina very advantageous conditions, and particularly a ship to convey himself, his family and property wherever he wished.

The operations of the siege are actively carried on. A hundred pieces of artillery have arrived from France and Figueras.

The Inquisition is re-established, and the General of the Capuchins appointed Grand Inquisitor.

General Riego has been tried and condemned to death—Cavia was his Judge. The crime in the act of accusation against him was, for having voted as a Deputy of the Cortes, the deposition of the King, and the nomination of the Regency. Riego was extremely calm until he was directed to prepare for his defence; he selected M. de Cambronario, for his counsel, who is said to be an eminent lawyer, and the most eloquent orator in Madrid.

ARTS AND SCIENCES.

IMPROVEMENT IN BEDS —An Englishman has made an improvement in this necessary article, which is peculiarly novel and highly economical. He proposes to render the bed impervious to air, then to fill it, by means of an air pump, or condensing syringe, with common atmospheric air, instead of down or feathers The air is introduced through an aperture or tube into the case, and prevented from returning by means of an air tight stop cock or valve. The case may be made impervious to air by various methods, but that recommended by the patentee is a composition of India rubber, spirits of turpentine and linseed oil, which when dry is exceedingly pliable, and so elastic, that if the cloth be folded in sharp corners, it will not crack or peel off. The advantages of this method of constructing beds and pillows, are their superior degree of elasticity, affording the most refreshing and easy repose in the warmest climate. They may, when required, be changed from the greatest degree of softness to the hardness of a mattrass, by moving the handle of the air pump, which is placed commodiously within the reach; or may be rendered soft to any required degree, by the exhausting pump, also within reach. They may be made fresh and cool, by changing the air by the alternate use of the air pumps. This may be effected in a few minutes, without removing the person who occupies the bed. Hence a great advantage to invalids. For medical purposes they may be filled with air at any required temperature, or with water, steam, or other fluid —Phila. Union.

GRAVEL.—A philanthropist begs to communicate to the world the following simple remedy for the gravel: Dissolve three drahms of prepared natron (which may be purchased for 3*d*.) in a quart of cold soft water, and take half this quantity in the course of the day. Continue this medicine for a few days, and that painful complaint will be dislodged. It may be taken at any hour, but is best after a meal. The greatest martyrs to this disorder have been perfectly relieved by this simple remedy. There is no quackery in the preceding prescrition, which is offered to mankind from a feeling of humanity.

Intertwine a thick hempen rope (probably straw or flax would do as well) among the branches of a fruit tree in blossom, and let the end of it be suspended so as to terminate in a pail of water at the bottom of the tree; should a slight frost take place during the night, the tree will not be in the least degree affected, while the surface of the water in which the rope is, will be covered with a coat of ice of more or less thickness, though water placed in another pail by the side of it, will not, frequently, where the frost is slight, have any on it.

How to slide Houses!—Capt. Joseph Edwards, an enterprising and industrious mechanic, of this town, lately removed the Asylum house in Carpenter St. with the chimneys, furniture, and fixtures, over thirty feet by means of a slide. The family were within, attending to their concerns, while the house was moving. We understand that neither the walls, nor the brick work in the chimneys, received the slightest injury by the process of removal.—Salem Observer

Chimnies on fire put out by Steam.—It has been found that when the chimnies of manufactures catch fire where steam is used, and the steam finds a common passage with the smoke, that the fire may always be put out simply by allowing a certain quantity of the steam to escape through the chimney

Invisible Cement.—Isinglass boiled in Spirits of Wine will produce a fine transparent Cement, which will unite broken glass so as to render the fracture almost imperceptible.

Fire and water in Partnership!—An improvement has taken place in Southampton in England of a novel nature, which is of singular utility—fire and water issuing from the same conductor. This experiment is made on the pillar supporting the gas lamps, and entirely saves the expense of a pump.

FOR THE CANADIAN COURANT.

POT AND PEARL ASHES—Have become one of the chief articles of Export from these Provinces, to the Mother Country.

When we consider that nearly fifty thousand Barrels will be shipped this season from Lower Canada, and of that quantity, perhaps forty eight thousand and upwards inspected in this City, valued at four hundred thousand pounds sterling,—some remarks thereon may not be unacceptable to the Government of this Province.

By the Law of the Province, no ashes can be exported except Inspected, and the quality Branded on the Head of each Barrel.

The Merchant who purchases the article for export, does the same on the Bill of Inspection produced by the owner from the office of Inspection. The article he never views (nor could be, did he wish it,) full faith and reliance must be placed on the Inspector who signs the Bill.

On arrival in England, they are reinspected and sold accordingly—agreeable to the quality contained in each Barrel.

Thus in several Sales, made in London and Liverpool, Bourhillier's Brand of Seconds and Thirds sold at equal price of the Three River First Brand!—By which means heavy losses have been suffered by the Shippers of the Three River Inspection. The injury may be divided under three heads.—1st. From the law being insufficient.—2d. From persons obtaining from the Government Commissions appointing these inspectors, who are in no way qualified to fill the office.—3d. From Ashes Manufacturers, Shop Keepers, and persons who have no respect for their own characters signing recommendations for persons to obtain a Commission of Inspectors; to serve their own private interest, and under a full conviction that their own Ashes will be branded First Sort.

I contend, were a reference made to former recommendations from Three Rivers, and other Country Villages, this will be found correct.

I therefore beg leave to submit, the necessity of an amendment being made to that act, that the Governor General should have the power to appoint a Committee of five persons in this city, three of whom should be Inspectors of three years experience, to examine all and every candidate for the office of Inspector in this Province, and if found qualified, to grant them a certificate to obtain a Commission of Inspector.

It is a fact well known, that often the Top and Bottom of a barrel of Ashes are of good quality, and the center very indifferent, for which reason, the oath of an Inspector, should compel him to empty every Barrel, before he places his Brand on the same.

For the last three years, from four to five hundred barrels of Ashes have been annually taken to Three Rivers—to receive the Brand of First Sort of Pearl.

These were only Salts, and not Barrelled; by which means they weighed full one-third more than they would have done if Pearl'd, and dried, or lost in weight inwards of Ten per cent. While real Pearl Ashes gain in weight.

I contend, the Law should prevent an Inspector of Ashes from following any other occupation or business.

It may be said, in that case, five persons in the country would not be found to take the Commission. This I grant, yet it would be an advantage to the Trade in general.

That being the case, one or more persons fully qualified would be found to accept the Commission in One bec—where all Ashes could be forwarded, fraud prevented, and a fair Inspection obtained.

At periods when our offices are full, and more on the hands of the Inspectors than they can in justice go through with—Durham Boats from the Upper Province, could discharge their cargoes on board of River Craft or Steam Boats, by which means the Ashes would be ready for sale and Shipping in two or three days—while at present they are often detained for weeks.

I further contend, no man can be qualified to be an Inspector, who has not had three or four years experience in a regular Inspector's office, and it must be allowed, we have in this city several of the head Coopers and Clerks who have served a number of years, some of whom may be considered the best judges of Ashes in North America. JUSTICE.

PROCEEDINGS
PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

On the resolution for a division of the London District, proposed by Col Burwell, that honourable member exerted himself with great energy and ability; but was warmly opposed by Messrs Nichol and Walsh, who were decidedly against the measure, contending that, as the District was in debt in consequence of building the present Gaol and Court House—it would be unjust to saddle the Counties of Norfolk and Oxford with the proposed additional expense.—That St. Thomas was not the most eligible site for a County Town—that the signatures to the Petition before the House had been unfairly obtained;—that there did bones of contention, the Townships of Bayham and Malahide belonged of right to the County of Norfolk; and that more than 500 of the people of Middlesex petitioned against the division. But the greatest clencher of all the argument to be urged, was a calculation of the hon. Member for Grenville, which operated, according to a saying of Swift's, like a ball upon a man's head—as it would cost the Province from £700 to £800 annually!—

COLONEL BURWELL made an able and very animated reply, and said that the present day had been facetiously termed by some, Members the day of battle, another hon Member had said he expected that Malahide and Bayham which he had been pleased to term bones of contention, would become a subject of controversy in this debate; but that matter had been happily set at rest on a former discussion. He was aware that both the hon. Members for Norfolk were opposed to the application he was about to make, from what they conceived to be public motives, and he would take occasion to assure them that he was disposed to enter upon the argument with perfect good temper. He read, and explained at length, two Petitions from his constituents, one with upwards of 1500 Signatures, and another with upwards of 500; he stated, that the whole of his constituents were in favour of the division of the London District; the only difference of opinion was, the seite for the new Establishment; but, that was to be expected in all questions of such a nature. He wished to consider the interests of the whole in a mass, at one view, to which all private interest should become subservient St Thomas was the place fixed upon by a great Majority of the Petitioners. And he felt no hesitation in pronouncing it in his place, the most eligible situation, in every point of view. Neither time, nor circumstances, could alter its claim to the preference, unless Middlesex (when the country became settled) should extend to LAKE HURON, which would be unreasonable as there was a sufficient tract between the rear of the Township now settled, and LAKE HURON for another District, to be composed of as fine a tract of Country, in the Neighbourhood of the River Sable as any in America. He was aware that his hon. friend, Col. Nichol, would make strong objections to the application for a division at present, because the District was in debt; but he begged his hon friend to recollect, that when the Bill passed, which authorising a loan to complete the Public Buildings at Vittoria that he, Mr B., had been the means of lessening the sum proposed to be raised annually from the Funds of the District, as he had stated at the time with a view to the present application; and he would put it to his hon. friend, if he did not believe that Norfolk and Oxford would be able to pay the debt at the time required by Law, if Middlesex should be separated from them. He had no desire in pressing the Resolution which he was about to do himself the honour to propose, but such as proceeded entirely from a wish to further the just claims of his Constituents. The Population of Middlesex was nearly equal to that of Norfolk and Oxford together; and he would put it to the justice of the House, whether, under all the circumstances he had stated, they would not approve of a division. He did not ask any particular favour, the whole object he had in view, was, to obtain leave for his Constituents to erect Public Buildings for a new Establishment at their own expense. He moved the following Resolution; which was lost by a majority of six

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the application of the Inhabitants of the Townships of Dunwich Aldborough, Southwold Yarmouth, Malahide, Bayham, Dorchester, Westminster London Lobo, Carradoc, Ekfrid, Mosa and Delaware in the County of Middlesex, praying to be erected into a separate District, ought to be granted, and that leave be given to bring in a Bill for that purpose.

It appeared that the greater part of the Inhabitants of Middlesex were in favour of the proposed division. The measure was finally lost by a majority of six.

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, moved for leave to bring in a Bill for the sale of the Lands of deceased Debtors, which, after a long discussion, was refused; chiefly on the ground that innocent heirs might suffer, even to absolute ruin; and, that it never was the intention of former Parliaments to sell lands in the hands of Executors and Administrators.

COL. NICHOL, moved the passing of his Seditious Attempt Repeal Bill, which had been read a third time. He observed that the Bill was similar to that which he had brought in last Session, and which was rejected in the Upper House. He felt it to be his duty to persevere, in the hope that its justice would finally bear him out. In England the Slave trade Bill had been repeatedly rejected, but was finally carried; and the same might be said of many other salutary measures. He trusted that this iniquitous and unconstitutional Act would be expunged from our Statute Book! He had no doubt that the good sense of the country would prevail against a measure which had a tendency to destroy the good faith that all men ought to have in our Government;—and which prevented useful Settlers from coming into this Province; for, he asked the question, which man would subscribe to a Country from whence he was liable to be transported, on the mere oath of a villain who had been pleased to entertain a suspicion prejudicial to his character?—Carried by a large Majority.

In answer to a request from Mr. WALSH, Col NICHOL said there were no less than 3000 claimants before the Commissioners appointed to adjust the claims of Sufferers during the late war with the United States; and that the Clerk to the Commission had informed him it would take two years to finish their labours. He was therefore of opinion that, as several of the claimants were in deep distress, the Five Shillings in the pound appropriated by His Majesty's Government at home, ought to be paid forth with.

THE METHODISTS' RELIEF BILL

Mr. CASEY having moved for leave to bring in his Methodists' Relief Bill.

Mr. JOHN WILSON rose, and said that the Methodists were a respectable and numerous class of people, and had strong claims for relief; however, he was warranted in saying that they were not generally determined on petitioning for relief this Session, and he was himself applied to, by that body, to oppose any petitions that might be brought forward in their favour this Session. On this ground he declined bringing in a petition which was given to him, and on this same ground he would oppose bringing in the present bill, as the petition now before the house did not express the opinion of one person in that Society, out of a hundred; circumstances were expected to take place at no distant period which would place this subject on a very different footing from that on which it now stood. He therefore opposed the bill.

Mr. CASEY thought the hon member for Wentworth gave no reason for his opposition, and would press his motion.

Mr HAM said that this class of subjects did more to serve this Province than all the other classes put together!! When this country was first settled, the Methodists formed the principal body of the people—they supported the Government under every possible difficulty, and why they should now be refused the privilege of solemnizing marriage, he could not tell.—He would ask this Hon. House whether men who had fought and bled in support of the British cause, should be driven to the necessity of seeing their sons and daughters go to the United States in order to obtain their own form of matrimony? He hoped not; but on the contrary, that this House would afford them the relief sought for by the Petitioners

Mr JONAS JONES, being satisfied the hon Member for Wentworth was governed by conscientious motives, would not vote for the present bill.

Mr. C JONES was not surprised that the hon. Member for Wentworth opposed this bill—it seemed to arise from that strong spirit of opposition to the former proceedings of this house, which had been so forcibly evinced by that class of Methodists to which the hon. Member belonged; but he was indeed astonished that the hon Member for Grenville should be influenced by his conduct. For his own part, he should be very unwilling to confine this bill to the Wesleyan Methodists; because the great body of the Methodists of this Country did not belong to that class, and they ought not to be deprived of the relief afforded by the bill

Col. NICHOL said he was uniformly an advocate for these people in that house. He thought he could account for the opposition of the hon. Member for Wentworth; knowing him to be a respectable Member of, and a friend to, that Society, he took it for granted that he had very strong reasons for his present conduct, and he must see that if the House entertained the present bill, it would be to the prejudice of that cause which he had so much at heart. Therefore, although he approved of the principles of this bill, he would oppose it, if the hon. Member for Wentworth assured the House that his opposition was only to give the Methodists time to arrange a regular plan of proceeding. He [Col Nichol] was always in favour of granting the power of marrying to the Methodists—it was absurd to think that any harm could accrue to the Government of this Country by allowing their ministers to marry. The young people of that persuasion were very much in the habit of going to the U. States to get married, and the Government of this Country ought not to drive them to such an expedient. It was objected that these people acknowledged a foreign head in their Spiritual affairs—but what injury could possibly arise from that circumstance? The Roman Catholic Clergy were allowed to marry and preach, although they acknowledged the Pope as the Spiritual head of their Church. Yet was it not known that in the late war they gave examples of bravery and devotion to the British cause not to be exceeded by any people in the Universe? Look to Glengarry—and that other Catholic set lements, and see whether there is any cause to call their loyalty, &c. in question.—It was absurd to throw out such an objection against the Methodists.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL thought the arguments of the hon. Member who spoke last, were fallacious, and not applicable to the present question. It was argued by him that the Roman Catholics acknowledged a foreign head, and yet they were allowed the privileges now desired and were still a loyal people. In answer, he would say, that the Roman Catholics formed but a very small part of the population of this Province; and that their preachers were not Aliens; they were, for the most part, natural born subjects; but the Majority of the Methodist Preachers were Aliens, from a foreign land, who were not educated in the principles of loyalty and attachment to the British Government. He begged the House to recollect that if they passed this bill, it would be referred to the Imperial Legislature, who would never consent to any measure so prejudicial to the interests of the Country. He was disposed to afford relief to that respectable body of people, but would never consent to put such an unqualified power into the hands of men bearing allegiance to a foreign Country. He hoped the opposition of the hon Member [Mr. Wilson] to this bill, originated from his knowledge of some system about to be established, that would afford Methodists the means of educating a Provincial Ministry. If this were the case, he would support the present measure; but, at present he would oppose it.

Mr. JOHNSON said, that he must decline being one of those opposing the present bill. He had to say, that there was a plan in contemplation with the Society, which was not yet matured, but which it was hoped would be generally adopted. Under this impression, he requested the hon. mover of the bill to keep back his petition; but that hon member thought proper to pursue a different course. He should be very happy to explain to the house the system about to be adopted; but, as he received his information concerning it, in a confidential way; and, as the thing was yet in embryo, he would decline any further explanation at present.

Mr RUTTAN said it was in contemplation with the Methodists to have a Conference independent of the United States; and he believed that one portion of this classed people were adverse to breaking off their connection with the United States. If this plan were adopted he would support the bill, and he thought it should be adopted, as the greatest portion of the Methodists were against having any thing to do with the United States. Although he was friendly to Methodists, he would never grant them the relief required, while they recognized and kept up their connection with the United States.

Mr. HAGERMAN said he was always a friend to religious toleration, so far as they were in obedience to the British Government. He had no objection to grant the Methodists an indemnity for what had been done in the way of marriages—so far he thought this house would be justified; but he would not consent to the general terms of the bill; however, as it was necessary that some relief should be afforded, he hoped the house would so modify it, that it would be likely to receive the Royal assent.

Mr. C. JONES said there was one consideration which he recommended to the hon. member for Wentworth and the other friends of Methodists,—namely, that they should not neglect making some provision for them this Session; because they were aware that the present Parliament was friendly to Methodists, but this Parliament might soon be dissolved; or the Union might take place; and, in either case, they did not know how the next house would be disposed—as to any danger that might arise from the Methodists acknowledging a foreign head—for once admitting their Preachers were peaceable people, who never mingled politics with religion, like some others; nor did he fear any increased political influence which might be given to the Methodist Preachers, by allowing them to celebrate marriage. The point of danger to the Government on this head, was a far fetched argument against them, and not at all entitled to the consideration of this house

Mr CROOKS did not see any injury that could arise to the country by allowing Methodists to marry—it would rather be of great service; because it would set at rest all angry feelings, and secure their affections to the Government of this country; but, if they were refused this privilege, they might have recourse to the United States, where any Magistrate could marry them. He would therefore support the provisions of the bill.

Mr GEORGE HAMILTON said, if the house did no good for the Methodists, they should do them no harm—if they passed this bill, they would do them harm, and cause a schism amongst them. The hon. member for Wentworth, who had studied the benefit of this class at least as much as any other man, did not oppose this bill without good reason; he would therefore oppose the bill at present, although disposed to give every possible relief to the Methodists of this Province

Mr. MORRIS would be very willing to allow the Methodists the privilege of marrying, if they did not acknowledge a foreign head. The Methodists were numerous, and sufficiently wealthy to support a head of their own, and he hoped they would soon adopt that measure. Under all circumstances, he thought it better to let the matter lie over till next Session, and he was satisfied the Legislature would allow them this privilege as soon as they recognized a head of their church in this country.

On motion by Mr. CASEY for bringing in the bill, the House divided—and he obtained a majority of four

The Methodist Relief Bill was ordered to be read a second time to morrow.

POSTSCRIPT,

We detained this impression to the last moment, in the expectation of very important News from Europe by the Mail, which has just arrived; but, there is no particular confirmation of the rumours alluded to in our Commentary. It is said in the Spectator that he Genoa, of 74 Guns, has sailed merely to try the newly constructed masts—which consists of a greater number of pieces than heretofore.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

Midland District, To wit. } ON Saturday the Twentieth day of March next, will be Sold at the Court House in the Town of Kingston, the following Lands and Tenements, which were of the late James Cumming, Esq., Seized by Virtue of an Execution issued out of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, at the suit of Joseph Shuter and Robert C. Wilkins, viz.

...ar with Sir R. Wilson, to partake with him the triumphs which the Radicals of London are preparing for these heroes.

Riego it appears has little chance of escaping: in addition to treason, he is charged with assassination and sacrilege, so that his fate may be considered as sealed. The report of Baron d'Eroles having fallen into the hands of Mina, in an affair near Lerida, as noticed in our paper of Tuesday, must be unfounded, as the Governor of that fortress had entered into a convention with the Baron on the 16th Oct.

Mina, according to the latest accounts, was victualling the fort of Mont Jouy near Barcelona, for three years. This fort is about half an hour's walk from Barcelona, which it commands entirely, whilst it remains open to no favourable point of attack. It covers a great space of ground, and will easily contain 2,000 men.

It is bomb proof. Should Mina in his despair throw himself into this fortress, and his troops remain faithful, he may still give much trouble to the French army in Catalonia.

Mina, and Rotten, have replied to the summons of the King, that they require a precise order in the hand writing of Ferdinand, to be brought by a Spaniard.

As an evidence of the failing of the ultra royalists of Spain, it is stated that the Madrid Restaurador of the 16th of October, in a gratis supplement, contains the representation of the city of Corunna against Chambers, and in favour of the holy tribunal of the Inquisition! In the course of that enlightened document it is said, "Deign then, to attend to this representation. Re-establish the holy tribunal of faith, that the impious may be struck dumb, and put to flight, and return no more to propagate their pernicious principles. Finally, consign the education of youth to the Society of Jesus, to perform that duty in the same manner as before its extinction, in order that our tranquility may be lasting." —Lasting tranquility, no doubt!. But what "past saving slaves are these!"—Com. Adv

The birth day of the King of Spain was celebrated at Seville on the 14th. The British Minister was present, and congratulated him on his happy liberation.

King Ferdinand has issued decrees, from Seville, denouncing pernicious books, and directs a Commission to inquire what books are fit for Spaniards to read.

A vessel which has arrived at Marseilles saw the white flag flying on the walls of Barcelona.

When their Majesties and their Royal Highnesses were leaving Cadiz, the Queen and the Infantas, D. Maria Francisca de Asis, and the Duchess of Veyra, were in Scotch costume, with white and carnation cockades. At half-a-canon shot from Cadiz, they threw off this dress, and put on robes of scarlet colour, adorned with Fleur de lis. At the sight of this change, Valdez and Capaz grew pale.—Journal des debats.

The son of Count Walsh, the author of the Royal Captive, was at Saint Mary at the moment the Royal Family of Spain disembarked. He fell on his knees to them, and so great was his emotion, that he was unable to cry Vive la Roi! Vive la Reine! The Queen was so affected at the circumstance, that she laid her hand upon the arm of the young man, who kissed it, bathing it with tears.

JAMAICA.

Among the resolutions passed by the late meetings in the Island of Jamaica are found those annexed:—

Quebec Gazette.

Resolved, that the rights and privileges of the first settlers in Jamaica were clearly defined, and that they extend to the present descendants, with all the immunities solemnly and irrevocably granted by the original charter of Charles the Second.

That we view with astonishment the deliberations of the Parent Parliament, wrought upon by an impure Faction, which, under the mask of religion, seeks to strew anarchy and immorality among the labouring class of a community, of which the British Empire can exhibit no parallel in comfort or in social habits.

That in the Legislative body of Jamaica, is invested the only power on earth to tax us, and to frame laws for our internal government.

That our Legislature has shewn its wisdom on every occasion, and has justified the solemn authority vested in it by the King, Lords and Commons of Great Britain. In no case has it denied the Sovereignty of the Crown, in none flinched from a manly display of its means in support of that Crown throughout its various struggles, be they in ... rebellion or to oppose a foreign yoke.

That as a Deliberative Body, sanctioned by irrevocable charter—The Legislature of Jamaica is the best, as it is the only, judge of internal regulations; that we are convinced it will not forsake our rights no more than it will desert its own—rights which we inherit, and which it has tempered (as much as local circumstances have permitted) to the tone of English sentiments.

That we will go hand in hand with the Island at large in defending our property, which is as legitimate and as unalienable as any freehold of the United King dom.

GREECE.

The cause of Greece goes on prosperously, and if no unsanctified coalition on the part of the continental oppressors, takes place against them, we are convinced that they will be able to draw their implacable enemies from their shores, and firmly establish a government for themselves.—It is with pleasure we notice that the situation of these heroic Islanders has called the attention of some of the most respectable characters in the United States of America. Committees have been formed in the principal cities, for the purpose of devising the best mode of serving the Greeks, funds have been opened where money will be received, and appropriated to the purposes for which it is solicited; and a depôt established where donations for service of the Greeks, other than money, are to be deposited. The clergy are to be solicited to preach a sermon, and if deemed expedient, to raise collections in support of the cause.

UNITED STATES.

Certain Extracts, from the PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE, of Importance to British and Canadian Interests!

I. The commissioners under the 6th article of the treaty of Ghent, having disagreed in their opinions respecting that portion of the boundary between the territories of the U. S. and of Great Britain, the establishment of which had been submitted to them, have made their respective reports in compliance with that article, that the same may be referred to the decision of a friendly power. It being manifest, however, that it would be difficult, if not impossible, for any power to perform that office, without great delay and much inconvenience to itself, a proposal has been made by this government, and acceded to by that of Great Britain, to endeavour to establish that boundary by amicable negociation. It appearing, from long experience, that no satisfactory arrangement could be formed of the commercial intercourse between the U. States and the British colonies in this hemisphere, by legislative acts, while each party pursued its own course, without agreement or concert with the other, a proposal has been made to the British government to regulate this commerce by treaty, as it has been to arrange, in like manner, the just claims of the citizens of the U. States inhabiting the states and territories bordering on the lakes and rivers which empty into the St. Lawrence, to the navigation of that river to the ocean. For these and other objects of high importance to the interests of both parties, a negociation has been opened with the British government, which, it is hoped, will have a satisfactory result.

The commissioners under the sixth and seventh articles of the treaty of Ghent, having successfully closed their labours in relation to the sixth, have proceeded to the discharge of those relating to the seventh. Their progress in the extensive survey, required for the performance of their duties, justifies the presumption that it will be completed in the ensuing year.—

II. At the proposal of the Russian imperial Government, made through the minister of the emperor residing here, a full power and instructions have been transmitted to the minister of the United States at St Petersburgh, to arrange, by amicable negociation, the respective rights and interests of the two nations on the north west coast of this continent. A similar proposal had been made by his imperial majesty to the government of Great Britain, which has likewise been acceded to.—The government of the United States has been desirous, by this friendly proceeding, of manifesting the great value which they have invariably attached to the friendship of the emperor, and their solicitude to cultivate the best understanding with his government. In the discussions to which this interest has given rise, and in the arrangements by which they may terminate, the occasion has been judged proper for asserting, as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintained, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European powers!!!

III. In compliance with a resolution of the house of representatives, adopted at their last session, instructions have been given to all the ministers of the United States accredited to the powers of Europe and America, to propose the proscription of the African slave trade, by classing it under the denomination, and inflicting on its perpetrators the punishment of piracy. Should this proposal be acceded to, it is not doubted that this odious and criminal practice will be promptly and entirely suppressed. It is earnestly hoped that it is the most effectual expedient that can be adopted for the purpose.

IV. During the month of June last, General Ashley and his party, who were trading under a license from the government, were attacked by the Ricarees while peaceably trading with the Indians, at their request. Several of the party were killed and wounded and the property taken or destroyed.

Colonel Leavenworth, who commanded Fort Atkinson, and at the Council Bluffs, the most western post, apprehending that the hostile spirit of the Ricarees would extend to other tribes in that quarter, and that thereby the lives of the traders on the Missouri, and the peace of the frontier would be endangered, took immediate measures to check the evil.

With a detachment of the Regiment stationed at the Bluffs, he successfully attacked the Ricaree village, and it is hoped that such an impression has been made on them, as well as on the other tribes on the Missouri, as will prevent a recurrence of future hostility!!

V. The usual orders have been given to all our public ships, to seize American vessels engaged in the Slave Trade, and bring them in for adjudication; and I have the gratification to state, that not one so employed has been discovered, and there is good reason to believe that our flag is now seldom, if at all, disgraced by that traffic.

VI. It is a source of great satisfaction, that we are always enabled to recur to the conduct of our Navy with pride and commendation. As a means of national defence, it enjoys the public confidence, and is steadily assuming additional importance. It is submitted whether a more efficient and equally economical organization of it might not, in several respects, be effected. It is supposed that higher grades, than now exist by law, would be useful. They would afford well merited rewards to those who have long and faithfully served their country; present the best incentives to good conduct, and the best means of ensuring discipline; destroy the inequality in the intercourse between the military and naval services, and our officers from many inconveniences and mortifications, which occur when our vessels meet those of other nations—ours being the only service in which such grades do not exist.

VII. There are established by law eighty-eight thousand six hundred miles of post roads, on which the mail is now transported eighty five thousand seven hundred miles; and contracts have been made for its transportation on all the established routes, with one or two exceptions. There are five thousand two hundred and forty post offices in the Union, and as many post masters. The gross amount of postage which accrued from the first of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-two, to the first of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, was one million one hundred and fourteen thousand three hundred and forty-five dollars and twelve cents. During the same peried, the expenditures of the Post Office Department amounted to one million one hundred and sixty-nine thousand eight hundred and eighty-five dollars and fifty-one cents.

Mr THOMPSON'S CASE of LIBEL.

Mr. Ira Thompson, Editor of the Upper Canada Herald, having appeared at the Bar of the House, Col NICHOL moved the resolution which declared certain article in the form of a Petition, on the subject of the Kingston Bank, published in the U. C. Herald, to be libellous; and said he did not expect any discussion on this question, as there was enough spoken already on the subject; the article published had been declared by the House, to be a false, scandalous and malicious libel, and a breach of privilege.—He then called on the Speaker to ask Mr. Thompson, the publisher of the article, what he had to say in his defence.

THE SPEAKER accordingly put this question to Mr. Thompson, who replied,

Mr. Speaker,—As to the article which this Honorable House have declared to be a libel upon them, I can, with perfect sincerity declare, that, when I published it, I had no intention to commence any offence against its dignity or its privileges, nor indeed the least idea that it contained any such matter upon the face of it. In the management of my paper, I have endeavoured uniformly to do my duty to the public with fidelity and independence, and at the same time respectfully towards all the constituted authorities of the Province. Having this matter and having no idea that the communication was intended or could be considered as disrespectful to this House, and entertaining the opinion that I had no right to refuse its insertion, because it was not in the same style or tone that I, perhaps, should have chosen, I suffered it to be inserted. I can assure this Honorable House, that in doing so, I had no intention to offer it disrespect, and that if, the publication is libellous or a breach of the privileges of the House, I am sincerely sorry

In announcing a new paper to each member of this Honorable House. I by no means intended to insult them either individually or collectively. I had determined to furnish each Hon. Member with a paper during the present Session, and the number containing the objectionable article being the first that was published after the Session commenced, it was of course forwarded, but with no design on my part of giving offence to this Honorable Body.

The SPEAKER then, by order of the House, addressed Mr. Thompson in the following words: Mr. Thompson, the article published in your paper, which gave offence to the House, has been declared a libel. The misdemeanor appears to be an aggravated one, because the publication has an immediate tendency to affect that confidence which the people ought always to have in their Constitutional Representatives, assembled in Parliament. This offence is the more inexcusable, as the matter published is wholly unnecessary for the purpose of public information, and was not intended to convey any. The Electors of any County in the Province have an undoubted right to be informed of the public conduct of their Member, but the whole people of the country have also a right to expect, that they themselves are not to be directly insulted by offering abuse and calumny to their assembled Representatives.

When the Electors of any County have good reason to suppose that their Representative has abandoned the sacred trust reposed in him, they have the good privilege by which they have a periodical and constitutional opportunity of changing their Member. In the present instance, the publication gives the Electors no information and is wholly addressed to the bad passions of mankind, and not to their reason. Every person who is improperly actuated to encourage the influence of the House with the public at large, does a great injury to the people; because he thereby diminishes the power of this House to be useful to the people.

Under these circumstances, it be comes my painful duty to reprimand you for your improper conduct You are accordingly reprimanded, and at liberty to retire from the Bar of the House.

Editorial Commentary.

As Christmas day happens to fall this year on Thursday, we have deemed it proper to publish the present number on the day before.

We extracted such parts of the MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES as bore upon the interests of the British empire generally, and of Canada in particular; and numbered the paragraphs, with a view of commenting on them separately; but we soon found the field quite too wide for this place; and it must be reserved for a future occasion, when these things will be considered with that attention they so imperiously demand. However, in the mean time, we have to thank the PRESIDENT for the unreserved manner in which he has been pleased to develope the "American Policy," into which we have long since ventured to peer our enquiring eyes, and wherein we found such prognostics as filled us with alarm for the future, unless the whole policy of the British Nation is changed in respect of those Colonies which are immediately adjacent to that power.—Some of our Editors are pleased to compliment the "good sense,—liberality,—confidence" &c. &c. of the American Government. There is certainly something in the manner of doing a thing; but, our satisfaction is in no wise agreeably augmented by the civility of a highway man, who is so obliging as to relieve us of our purse;—we hate to see the truth disguised:—and there may be far too much of courtly manner introduced amongst men of business. In our treaties with the United States, heretofore, we have always suffered, either through the gross ignorance, or the overweening complaisance, of our right courtly negotiators; and it is highly probable we shall again be the losers on the same scores. We observed an article not long since in The Edinburgh Observer very much in point;—here it is.

"The Americans, it is universally allowed, have had their diplomatic concerns conducted with unrivalled ability; and yet they pay their first class of Foreign Ministers no more than $9000, £2000 per annum. This shows at how moderate an expense the real business of a nation can be managed. So far from thinking that the Americans suffer from this low scale of salary, we are convinced that it is one reason why they are so ably conducted. Their minister is a man of business—ours a man of ton—the one is in the bureau—while the other is in the ball-room—the one is famous for successful negociations—the other for brilliant entertainments and choice wines—the one is labouring for the solid advantage of his country—the other is feasting or fiddling for "the honour and dignity of his."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Both the Parliaments of Canada are proceeding steadily with business—and much there is of importance before them. Our own Legislature, ever since the question of an Union was agitated, has shewn a very uncommon, and in our mind, a very impolitic degree of delicacy, (on one occasion amounting to absolute refusal,) to augment the Representation of the Commons of this Province, although the necessity of forming several new Counties was apparent, and admitted.—What will those who have felt and expressed this delicacy say to the passing of a law (for the augmentation of the Representatives of the Lower Province?—MR. DAVIDSON has a Bill before the House for the attainment of that object.

There is at length some hope of Register Offices being established in Lower Canada.

The "Death of Brock" in imitation of the "Death of Wolfe" has been received, and will appear in our next.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

DUEL.—At an early hour yesterday morning, a meeting took place in a field near Turnham Green, between J—— T——, Esq. of New York, and H—— M——, Esq. late of the King's German Legion; the former attended by P—— W——, Esq. the latter by a Naval Officer. It was agreed to fire by signal. The first shot was discharged without effect; but on the second fire, Mr. M's ball struck his antagonist's chin, slightly wounding the flesh. The seconds then interfered; but Mr. T. demanded another pistol in such terms as admitted of no refusal. The demand was therefore complied with, and he was once more slightly wounded, after which, an adjustment was with difficulty effected. It is said that the quarrel originated at a tavern the preceding evening, in consequence of a political discussion, in which Mr. T. conceived that some insinuations were thrown out by Mr. M reflecting on the courage of the American nation.—Morning Herald.

NEW POPE.—The coronation of Pope Leo XII. took place on the 5th of October.

THE NORTHERN EXPEDITION.—The Edinburgh Observer says, "After they got clear of the ice, it was Capt. Parry's intention to have taken the greater part of the remaining provisions out of his consort, and her home, and persevere himself, but strong symptoms of scurvy just then made their appearance which determined him to give it up. We understand the highest latitude they reached was 69 deg., and that of the two years and a half they were absent, they were twenty-one months frozen in.

Power of Music on the Brute Creation.—Sir Everard Home has recently made some interesting inquiries by way of comparison, between the auricular organs of man and quadrupeds. The result of his researches seems to prove that shrill tones, or the upper notes of an instrument, have comparatively little effect in exciting the attention of animals, whilst the full lower tones stimulate them almost to fury. Sir Everard observes, "that the effect of the high notes of the piano forte upon the great lion in Exeter Change, only called his attention, which was considerable, though he remained silent and motionless. But no sooner were the flat, or lower notes sounded, than he sprung up, lashed his tail, and yelled violently, and endeavoured to break loose; and became altogether so furious as to alarm the spectators present. This violent excitement ceased with the discontinuance of the music. The deep tone of the French horn also produced a similar effect with the lower tones of the piano forte on the elephant and other animals, on which the experiment was made.

A Facetious Barber, in New York.—Pernit him to say a few words upon his profession.

Doctors Gall and Spurzheim have contended that genius, taste, the passions, and all that belongs to the intellectual powers of man, rest upon the formation of the cranium:—This may be true—but with how much more truth can it be said, that the beauty of "the human face divine," depends upon that great feature of the countenance, the HAIR. Fashion has held a constant reign, exhibiting all the varieties of her power, over this vegetable of the human head—now flowing in luxuriant ringlets, and now shaven with ecclesiastical solemnity. Wigs were invented to give dignity to the wise, and the appearance of gravity and wisdom to the dull; but the age of wigs is gone forever—the head of Minerva has moulted his feathers, and fallen from her fame.—The present style of moulding this feature has never been surpassed—it has a classical origin taken from the antique crop seen on the Elgin marbles and Roman coins, uniting Athenian grace with Roman dignity, and is finely adapted to the ball room or military parade. This art of "managing the hair," is one not learned in a day, but, a piece of skill and experience. The rule is general, but the application must be varied—for delicate textures by help of this art, can be built up into something of a martial air, and severe lines of the countenance softened down to sylvan simplicity. If any one doubts whether this can be done, let him come and test his skill.

NORTHERN EXPEDITION.

Portsmouth, Oct. 25.

"His Majesty's ship Hecla, off Cape Farewell."

Greenland, Sept. 29, 1823.

"After an unavailing struggle of two years and a half to get to the westward, we are again thus far upon our passage homeward, by the same route as we went out. In the beginning of October, the frost set in so fast that the ships were scarcely manageable or the sea navigable. It was then thought prudent to look out for a place to winter in, and a small shallow bay on the south west point of an Island, in lat. 66, 11, 40, long. 63, was found, which promised us shelter from the northerly winds and drift ice. A canal was cut in the new form'd ice, and the ships properly placed by the 10th, about a quarter of a mile from the shore. We were soon afterwards frozen up and housed over, and otherwise prepared for the winter, which now set in very fast; the land was covered with snow, and deserted by almost every animal; foxes and bears seemed the only exceptions. Our recreations and amusement, now became so regular, that the history of a single day may suffice for the whole winter. At seven o'clock in the morning we got up, at eight breakfasted, at nine mustered on deck; the rest of the forenoon was generally spent in visiting our fox traps, of which almost every officer contrived to have one. This amusement, or in walking over the snow, lasted till Christmas. At 1 P. M. dined; the afternoon was spent by some in sleep, others in reading, or playing chess, backgammon, or cards, till five o'clock, when we took tea; at six attended master, reading or writing, on till eight, when we supped; after that, continued in general conversation over a glass of grog and segars till bed time. On the 1st February, when all our tales had been at least twice told, and the time began to hang rather heavy upon our hands, a most seasonable relief appeared in a tribe of Esquimaux, who were approaching the ships. This appeared the more astonishing to us as we had seen none of them since leaving Hudson's straits, except one family that were fell in with by our boats at the top of the inlet, and some others that were heard on the shores to the westward, during the summer, although in every place we landed we met with remains of their huts, and some of them were the appearance of being lately occupied.

They came towards the ships without hesitation, entirely unarmed, one of them carrying an old man on his back; on coming on board, they looked round, either with the most stupid indifference, or were struck dumb, with astonishment, as they had never seen a ship before, nor indeed, a man besides their own race. They exchanged any thing they had for whatever was offered them, and received presents with extreme delight, jumping and shouting in the most hideous manner when any thing was given them. They pointed to their huts, which were about three miles distant from the ships, on the south west face of the hill; and on some of us making signs, wishing to go, there were one or two of them readily accompanied us. When we got near, all that were at home came out to welcome us with shouting and jumping; their huts were built entirely of snow arched over like a baker's oven, but high enough to stand upright in; on each side was a bench of snow covered with skins, which served as the seat and bed of the family; at each corner was a lamp, with a stone pot suspended over it. Each hut was above twelve feet in diameter, and contained from a dozen to eighteen inhabitants, most of the men being accommodated with two wives. The door was about eighteen inches high, and three or four of the huts communicated with a covered passage, having one common door. The horde had been driven down to the point by necessity, to look for open water, that they might kill seals, and they had encamped there the evening before. During the remainder of the winter months, we lived in the greatest friendship with them, occasionally supplying them with a mess of bread-dust and oil, when fishing failed them; they, in return, lent us their sledges, to ride on. The same day that the natives appeared, a herd of wolves (thirteen in number) passed close to the ships, and continued prowling about in the neighbourhood until they were all shot or caught in traps. We continued at this place until the latter end of September, in hopes that it might break up, but the frost then setting in, very nearly froze the ships up, and it was with some difficulty that we got out of the strait, when it was resolved to return to the Island in the Bay inhabited by natives, called by them Igloolek, to winter there, where we arrived at the end of the month.

"In the beginning of October, the ships were secured and fitted for the winter. The natives seemed rejoiced to see us return, and visited us daily on their sledges, and were always ready to drive us up to their huts, about six miles distant, whenever we wished to go; we also had sledges built, and purchased a pack of dogs for each ship; on these we were enabled to drive about at pleasure while the daylight lasted, but when the sun disappeared, which was forty-eight days, we were very much confined to the ships. The lowest temperature was 45 below zero.

Mr. Canning's Speech in the City.—Yesterday the Sheriffs for the ensuing year (Messrs. Whittaker and Laurie) gave their usual dinner on their entering upon office. Mr. Canning and Mr. Huskisson were invited and were present.—Mr. Canning, on his health having been drank, observed, he had in the discharge of his public duty, the high gratification of bearing the approbation of his Sovereign;—to this was added the sustaining support of the Parliament; but great as were these testimonials of support, they were incomplete and inofficial, without that other acknowledgement which he was proud to receive—the co-operation and approbation of his fellow citizens at large.—(Loud applause.)—The Lord Mayor had truly said, that, difficult as had been the period at which he (Mr. Canning) had been called to fill the office, he had nevertheless the satisfaction to find the City of London pursuing a state of great and glorious prosperity. He had the satisfaction to know, not only that such prevailed, but that it was founded upon sound and permanent principles of Commercial economy—that from the very nature of its organization and action, it was not liable to the vicissitudes which had previously swayed it, and it is better calculated to acquire a steady and permanent value. He also agreed with the Lord Mayor elect (Mr. Waithman) in the full admission that every man in the community whatever might be his situation or office, had a full right to the honest expression of his sentiments in such manner as became an honest and independent man.—(Loud applause.)—The Constitution of England rested on the balance of power between the several bodies of the State. These could only be maintained by giving a fair scope to the conflicting opinions of the country; and they, like all public men, honestly contending for the public interests, must be sensible that, however present feelings might prompt them to extreme struggles, their only object—what they meant to accomplish—was the public good, according to their respective sense of its best interests. Their real ground of disputation was not the maintenance of the Constitution—upon that they were all agreed; but the means of supporting it, and, with it, the dignity and independence of the country.—(Great applause.)—In almost all other countries but Great Britain, nations were of late times found at war upon extreme principles. This country had abstained from participating in those inflammations, from a fear of immediately aggravating them by a useless and an unnecessary intermixture with their passions and their wants. They had taken what he trusted would eventually prove the wiser course—they had by their wiser policy shown, that however heretofore it might have been deemed that War and Commercial prosperity went hand in hand, it remained for them to exhibit to the world the admiring spectacle of Commerce growing with general Peace, and by the more natural and calmer operations of universal friendship and confidence.—(Applause.)—He cordially trusted that such a state of things would be found progressively advancing.

Signification of the names of Towns and Villages.—Such towns, cities, and villages, whose terminations are chester, caster, ceter show that the Romans, in their stay among us, made fortifications about the places where they are now situated. In the Latin tongue, castra is the name for these fortifications. Such are Caster, Chester, Don aster, Leicester. Don signifies a mountain, and ley or lei ground widely overgrown, in our ancient tongue. Wye, Wick, or Wich, means a place of refuge, and is the termination of Warwick, Sandwich, Greenwich, and Woolwich. Thorp, before the word village was borrowed from the French, was used in its stead, and is found at the end of many towns' names. Bury, Burg, Berry, signifies metaphorically a town having a wall about it; sometimes a high or chief place. Wold, means a plain open country; combe a valley between two hills; knock, a hill; hurst signifies a woody place; magh, a field; innes, an island; worth a place situated between two rivers; and ing, a track of meadows. Minster is a contraction of monastery. All these words are found in many of our names of places, either at their beginning or end.

English Paper.

West Indies!—The Superb, 78, Capt. M'Kenzie two other 74's, and five frigates, are ordered to proceed forthwith from Plymouth to the West Indies.

Meeting of the Emperors.—A meeting took place betwixt the Emperors of Austria and Russia regarding the future state of the Turkish Empire, on the 6th Oct. which lasted only for an hour, and the final arrangement of the object of this meeting was left to their Prime Ministers.

Musical Festival.—At a late grand musical festival at York, England, there remained, after paying all expenses, a total profit of 7200 pounds sterling, for the Charitable Institutions of York.

Capt. Parry.—The illness of this gallant officer, which has lately been mentioned in the newspapers, arose in consequence of a disappointment in love. He could smile at the horrors and dangers of the frigid zone, but the cruelty and coldness of his betrothed was too much for him. A beautiful, lovely, and accomplished young lady, who had exchanged with the gallant officer in question, a mutual pledge of unshaken attachment previous to his embarking on his dangerous enterprise, and the promise of an immediate and honorable union on his return, has, during his absence, forgotten the pledge she had given, and afforded reason to believe that the gallant officer is no longer the favoured object of her affections. On his arrival in London, he hastened, after the first discharge of his public duty, and drove with an unaltered attachment and fond anxiety to the lady's house in the neighbourhood of Portland place, to pay his first attentions to the object of his highest esteem, and receive her congratulations on his safe return; but, to his surprise and sorrow, he found that the house had been for some time shut up, and that the family had quitted London; and upon further inquiry he learned that some change had occurred with respect to the affections of the chief object of his solicitude, which made it advisable that he should endeavour to eradicate from his mind all recollection of her plighted faith and influence over his heart. It is stated that the lady in question is a sister of Capt. Sabine, who accompanied Capt. Parry on his first voyage, and who was in this city sometime since, making astronomical observations.

British Parliament.—The British Parliament was expected to meet before Christmas, in consequence of important despatches received from Sir. W. A'Court.

FOREIGN.

Mexico has declared War against Spain!—The unexpected commencement of hostilities by the governor of the castle of San Juan de Ulloa against the town of Vera Cruz, has compelled the supreme executive power to adopt measures consequent on an aggression unprovoked by its inhabitants, and warranted by no political considerations.

1st.—It is ordered that all political and mercantile relations with the Spanish nation cease.

2dly.—That using the lenity dictated by the philanthropic principles of the Mexican nation, it is ordered that all Spanish vessels immediately leave the ports of Mexico, without proceeding, as the government might, to embargo or confiscate.

3dly.—That the same conduct be pursued with all Spanish merchantmen that may arrive in these ports from Europe in the space of four months, a time sufficient to allow this resolution to be known on that continent, and of forty days from Havana or any other Spanish ports of North America.

4thly.—That all vessels arriving after the expiration of those periods, will be treated according to the laws of war, (if, before it be not terminated) as will be, from this moment, all armed vessels.

5thly.—That after the period of four months the productions of the Spanish soil will not be admitted to an entry under any flag whatever. By order of H. S. H.—Mexico, 1st Oct. 1823.

FRANCISCO JOSE BERNAL.

SPAIN.

A private letter from Madrid, dated the 20th, states that the strong representation made by M. de Chateaubriand, through M. de Talaru, and the still stronger remonstrances of the Duke d'Angoulême, have had the desired effect on Ferdinand; the sentences of the Regency are not confirmed, and the execution of his own decrees are suspended.

A Spanish brig was to sail on the 4th or 5th from Cadiz for the Balearic Islands, and if the answer of the Constitutionalists is not satisfactory, a part of the French squadron will be sent there. The French troops will be sent thither after their submission, as King Ferdinand will not hear of his own soldiers.

Report still speaks of the speedy return of 40,000 men to France; the Royal Guard will go first. Nearly an equal force will remain in the Peninsula, and be distributed as follows:—

Madrid	4 000
Seville	600
Malaga	600
Murcia	500
Alicant	1 000
Carthagena	1,000
Valencia and Murviedro	1,000
Badajoz	600
Ciudad Rodrigo	500
In Galicia	2,000
Catalonia	8,000
Pampeluna	1 000
St. Sebastian and Santona	1,000
Cadiz and the Isle of Leon	4,000
The Balearic Isles	5,000
On the roads serving for communication, and to guard their points	6,000
TOTAL	34 600

Besides these, 34,600 men, there will be a reserve of 5 or 6,000, which will be cantoned on the Ebro, and have its head quarters at Vittoria, ready to march wherever it may be necessary.

Madrid, Oct. 1.—As soon as the Duke of Angoulême shall have arrived at Madrid, which will be about the end of the month, and terminated the organization of the Army of Occupation, he will take the road to Paris.

Quiroga has not been arrested at Corunna, as the English Journals announced; he will set off for Gibral-

Editorial Commentary.

We are greatly flattered, and obliged, by that promise of increased patronage which the Public so kindly holds forth towards the new edition of the "York Almanack" and "Royal Calendar of Upper Canada," now in the Press, and which will shortly appear.—We trust this favourable countenance will not, as it ought to do, be stimulating us to render the volume as perfect as the nature of such an undertaking will permit. Many errors, which deformed the first edition, are corrected in the present; and, we hope the next will be still better than that now in hand. The apparent delay in the publication is occasioned by the great addition of new matter, and the formation of Chronological Tables, from the creation of the world to the present times, on a plan far more comprehensive, and generally useful, than has been hitherto attempted in any work of the kind. More than 150 very closely printed pages are already worked off, and the whole will be shortly ready for delivery.

Mr. Tarr has a right to an apology from us for taking the liberty of publishing a part only of his last communication, being that part which is of a public nature; forbearing to print what related to his own private feelings and views, not merely because we have no room for so long an insertion but, because it is conceived that this dispute, (which is terminated so far as we are concerned in this number of our paper,) can only be interesting to the public so far as public interests are concerned. The subject has had a very full hearing, and we hope, that, though "fire has flash'd, and swords have gleamed," the parties, both of whom we know and respect, will by and bye forget the "angry mood," shake hands, and be emulous which can evince the truest patriotism, and most befriend his District and Country.

As it is a subject of importance to the country, and instances of a similar nature may again occur, we have much satisfaction in publishing the short and able address of the Solicitor General, on bringing the late contested Election for the Counties of Lennox and Addington, as Counsel for the Petitioners, before the House of Assembly.—Short as it is, this speech contains arguments altogether conclusive on the point in question; and Returning Officers in general would do well to consider the nature and extent of their duty, more attentively than they now seem to do (for, it is no trifle that is hazarded by forgetfulness or a wilful neglect of their duty.—That actions will lie against them, has been proved by the circumstance of Mr. Fox, in the year 1786, obtaining £500 damages against the High Bailiff of Westminster, for not returning him as a Member for that City.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

A Ship of War.—We have often seen striking descriptions of this tremendous engine of destruction, but we never saw one more poetical and grand than the one lately given by Ma CARRIER, on a public occasion at Plymouth, as symbolic of the sleeping energies of the British Nation.—"Our present repose," said the orator, "is no more a proof of inability to act, than the state of inertness and inactivity in which I have seen those mighty masses that float in the waters about your town, is a proof that they are devoid of strength and incapable of being fitted for action. You well know, gentlemen, how soon one of those stupendous masses, now reposing on the shadows in perfect stillness—how soon, upon any call of patriotism or of necessity, it would assume the likeness of an animated thing—instinct with life and motion—how soon it would ruffle its wings, its swelling pinnage—how quickly it would put forth all its beauty and its bravery—collect all its scattered elements of strength, and awaken its dormant thunder!—(Immediate applause) Such as is one of these magnificent machines, when springing from inaction into a display of its might; such is England herself, while apparently passive and motionless, she silently concentrates the power to be put forth on any adequate occasion!"

Force of Habit.—In illustration of the force of habit, an English paper quotes the following instance which lately occurred at an iron foundery.—They were making a tremendous boiler for a sugar baker, and a workman was put into it, with a hand anvil, which he was to hold against the nails that were to rivet it together; and which nails were struck by others on the outside with sledge hammers, making a noise, compared to which a Chinese gong is a whisper, the report of an eight and forty pounder the pop gun of a school boy. Yet such is the force of all powerful habit, that the hero in the copper fell fast asleep—no doubt lulled by the sweet lullaby of the dulcet hammering, unconscious of a din that would have kept a whole parish unrefreshed by naps for ever, and that would have rendered such a neighbour indictable at the quarter sessions.

Faux Pas in High Life.—It was generally circulated in town yesterday, that a dashing individual, nearly allied to a certain noble lord, had eloped with the beautiful wife of a now disconsolate husband. It is said they sailed for England this week. The entire particulars of this event will, it is expected, shortly become more generally known.

Dublin Evening Post.

The King of France.—A correspondent of a morning paper gives the following portrait of Louis the XVIII. whom he saw during the late celebration of Te Deum at Notre Dame:—

"I had heard that he was very much fallen off of late, but before I had the near view of him which my position yesterday gave me, I could not have believed the report to the half of its extent. His former embonpoint has entirely left him, or fallen down upon his legs and lower extremities, which are proportionally large and unwieldy. His eyes were sunk, hollow, and troubled, retaining nothing of their former vivacity; his cheeks have fallen in, his lips have lost their roundness and tension, and his whole countenance had an exhausted and cadaverous appearance, which betrayed a state of health more allied to the quietness and retirement of his bedchamber than the bustle of a public ceremony. For the last eighteen months he has entirely lost the power of moving his lower extremities, but the bust and the countenance remained little changed till lately. The ravages of age or disease are now, however, rapidly extending upwards, and it is probable that Louis XVIII. will not long keep the sceptre from Charles X. The same hair in which he was rolled up the nave of the cathedral, was the same which he had occupied in his couch. He had been let down from the latter without leaving the former, or at all changing his first position. A kind of slope, covered with carpeting like the Montagnes Russes, had been formed at the great gate of the church, so that he could be rolled up and down without the necessity of being lifted over the steps. This chair, which was placed within the frame that supported the canopy, was so extremely low, that in passing along the lines of the guards, he was looked down upon by them, and by the spectators who stood behind them. His legs were extended at full length—his feet were covered with black cloth shoes; both seemed preternaturally swollen, unwieldy, and torpid.—His hands on both sides had a firm hold of the arms of the chair, on which his elbows leaned; his head was a good deal sunk between his shoulders, and his whole person without life or energy, seemed that of a man suffering from an acute disease. To the by-standers, who cheered him as he passed, he never lifted his eye, nor showed the least token of recognition or pleasure. In short, I have seldom witnessed a more painful exhibition, and may ven ture to add, that not one individual who saw him would have exchanged situations with him for the honour of being placed under the royal canopy, and being rolled to Te Deum between a double line of royal guards."

Alledged Fashionable Faux Pas.—From Naples, September 26.—An affair of gallantry, which lately happened here, is to occupy the gentlemen of the long robe in London very shortly. The case is this:—A lady, beautiful and accomplished, said to be a natural daughter of a distinguished general, married an officer in the guards, who, on account of bad health, was advised to try the benefit of this climate. He and his lady arrived here early in the summer, and became intimate with a family distinguished in the fashionable world in England, and commanding the society of this place. The lady claimed some relationship to the family in question, since the gentleman is a nephew to the lady's father; they being cousins nothing was more natural than the intimacy which has led to the unfortunate occurrence in question. The attentions of the gallant became so marked, that the lady's husband forbade her visiting her relation any longer, and is said to have used threats towards her, which being unattended to (according to the lady's statement) he soon after put into execution; in consequence of which she flew from her home, and took apartments in a hotel. The husband immediately repaired to an official gentleman, who, while he stated his inability to render any assistance, could not help saying that the lady had taken the most imprudent step possible, but regretted that the husband should have been led to put his threats in execution. The husband then caused to be published in the best way he could, his determination to be no longer responsible for the debts of his wife, and by means of her waiting maid, &c. has collected evidence to prosecute his suit. In the mean while, the amiable wife of the gallant is said to be convinced of the innocence of the accused lady, that on her hearing of the step taken by her, she drove to the hotel, and brought her to her own mansion, where she now resides under her protection.—Morning paper.

From the Baltimore Morning Chronicle.

IMPORTANT RUMOUR.

A rumor has been afloat in this city for some days past, that Mr. Rush had made an enquiry of our Government, by the request of the English Cabinet, to ascertain whether the United States were prepared to [illegible] England in united resistance to any attempt of the Holy Alliance, upon the Independence of the South American Republics." We confess that we are credulous to believe not only this, but that England is prepared to join us in resisting all further attempts on the part of the Allied Powers, to colonize this country. They have large possessions on this continent, to defend from foreign aggression as well as the United States. England is jealous of Alexander's power, and the settlement which he has formed on our western frontier, has already been with the English Cabinet, a subject of remonstrance.

IMPROVEMENT IN GUNNERY.

A Correspondent in the Philadelphia National Gazette, gives information that a Gentleman in that place has made an important improvement in gunnery. It is in the manner of discharging artillery, superior by far, he says, to the method formerly in practice. The new invention it appears, was sufficiently tried, and approved of by the best judges. In speaking of the improvement, he says:

"Above all, it is an indestructible principle; dampness has no effect upon it. In operations it resembles a small flat piece of metal about the size of a five cent piece, which on being struck with a hammer, explodes with considerable noise, and penetrates through the flannel cartridge, at any required distance, without the necessity of occupying the intermediate space of the touch hole with any kind of priming."

Schalken, the Dutch Painter.—Schalken, a pupil of Gerard Dow, came to England with William III. and was famous for his candlelight productions. He used to place the object with a candle, in a dark room; and looking through the key-hole, which was enlarged for the purpose, he painted by day-light what he saw in the dark. He was engaged at length to paint King William, after the same manner, and being desirous that all who sat to him should themselves hold the candle, his majesty complied with the form, and kept it fast till the tallow began to scald his fingers. On another occasion, having taken the portrait of a lady who had very fine hands, he was asked by her if she must not, after the face was completed, sit for them also? to which Schalken, who was not very polite, replied, "No, Madam I always draw them from my house maid," which was his constant practice.

Dreadful Explosion of a Coal Mine.—"Durham, Nov. 3.—In consequence of an explosion of foul air in a coal pit, called the plain pit, belonging to the Marquis of Londonderry, situate near Rainton, about five miles from this city, a number of unfortunate persons have lost their lives. The accident took place this morning about five o'clock. There are a great variety of rumours afloat respecting the number of persons employed in the pit at the time, but from the best information I have been able to acquire, I believe there were between ninety and a hundred; the whole of whom, it is supposed, have perished. At the time the latest accounts left the scene of the catastrophe, nearly forty bodies had been brought up corpses. I cannot describe the anguish occasioned by this melancholy event, which was most likely occasioned by neglecting to use the safety lamp."

Dibdin, the Songster.—The late C. Dibdin was born in 1745, and was the son of a clergyman at Bristol. He was the eighteenth child, his mother being 50 at his birth. He had a brother 29 years older than himself, Thos. Dibdin, on whose death he wrote the beautiful ballad of Poor Tom Bowling. This gentleman was captain of an East Indiaman, and father of the present Rev. T. F. Dibdin.

The Dublin Freeman's Journal says,—"The new Pope, it is said, intends to proceed on a tour through England and Ireland!!!"

ACCOUNT OF THE ESQUIMAUX INDIANS.

[From Capt. Barry's last Voyage, as detailed in the Literary Gazette.]

In the second winter, a more numerous tribe of the Esquimaux, about 150, and including the visitors of the preceding year, settled near the ships, and were in daily intercourse with them. We shall here throw together what we have learned respecting this people.

They are represented as being peaceable and good natured: not stupid, but not eminent for lead or in self-esteem. The first tribe lived together on terms of perfect liberty and equality; in the second there was an Angekkok or conjuror, who exercised a certain degree of influence and authority. There are no signs of the worship of a Supreme Being among them, and they do not appear to have a perfect idea of ONE; they have large possessions on this continent, to defend from foreign aggression as well as the United States. England is jealous of Alexander's power, and the settlement which he has formed on our western frontier, has already been with the English Cabinet, a subject of remonstrance.

Their habitations are dirty-looking yellowish white, and their proportions by no means robust.

We have mentioned the appearance of their snow houses when first seen; they are curiously shaped and constructed, resembling three immense bee-hives grouped together, and entered, by one long passage, by all the three families to whom those yield an abode. A tree-full affords a tolerable idea of them. They are about nine feet in diameter, and seven or eight feet in height. The passage is about twenty feet in length, and so low that you must creep along nearly on all fours, in order to reach the hut. This is ingeniously intended to exclude the cold air, which it does effectually, though widened in parts for lodging the dogs belonging to the several households, and which are stationed in the last sort of antichamber, before the entrances turn off to the right and left for the two nearest huts. The huts themselves are entirely made of square blocks of solid snow, with a larger key block at the top of the rotunda. The window is a piece of flat transparent ice. Round the interior runs a seat of the same material as the walls, upon which the skins of animals are thrown for seats and beds. Beds are also made of a platform, on the floor. The houses are without any artificial warmth, except what is produced by a sort of oil lamp, in which they use pieces of dry moss for wicks.

In the winters of 1822–3 native dwellings or huts, constructed of bone, were also seen. The Esquimaux often eat flesh in a raw state; but it is sometimes cooked, and the women almost invariably submit their food to that process. The utensils are uncommon, though simple. They consist of two vessels of stone; generally the pot stone, or lapis ollaris, also used in parts of Germany, for the same purpose. The lower vessels a good deal resemble an English kitchen ash shovel: the upper one a trough, of a wide coffin form. In the first, which is filled with oil, a number of moss wicks float, and are lighted for the fuel. The oil is gradually supplied from strings of fat hung up over the flames, the heat of which melts them into so many reservoirs of grease. In the second utensil, placed over the fire thus made, the meat is stewed. The natives are filthy in their eating, and hardly reject any thing, from the blubber of whale, to the flesh of wolf. When hungry, they devoured the carcasses of ten or a dozen of the latter, which were killed by our seamen. Their food, indeed, consisted chiefly of seal and wolves' flesh; but notwithstanding this, they appeared to be perfectly contented, nay, even happy. Their dresses were made entirely of skins, chiefly those of the reindeer.

The lapis ollaris is originally so soft that it may be cut into form with a knife; and when it is not to be found, an extraordinary substitute is manufactured into pots and pans. This is cement composed of dogs' hair, seals' blood, and a particular clay, which soon becomes as hard as stone, and bears the effects both of oil and fire below, the moisture and stewing above.

In the begining of their intercourse, the Esquimaux were somewhat reserved, and shy of communicating their opinions; but as their reserve wore off, they developed a number of interesting particulars. The vulgar, especially, were less secret than the men, who (we may here state by the by) had no hesitation in bartering their wives and daughters with the sailors, at first for no more a bribe as a nail, or two or three beads, and at last for the price of a paltry knife.

These females are not, it is true, the most lovely objects in nature. Their features are disagreeable, and they have long and harsh, but extremely black hair. We have been shown a map drawn by one of them, (a remarkable instance of intelligence,) in which she represents two islands to the north of the second winter's position of the ships, and others in different directions giving rather uncertain names to them all. The nearest on the north is several days' journey across, and the roaming of the Esquimaux tribes is confined to these islands, as they never venture upon the continent. Every family has a sledge and generally five or six dogs, with which they travel with great ease, and hunt.

From the length of time during which the natives were daily with them, our people were enabled to pick up a rather copious vocabulary of their language. Some of the journals contain from five hundred to a larger number of words. Their knowledge of figures is very limited—five and ten being their most obvious enumerations. When they wish to express the former, one hand is held up; the latter, of course, requires both; but when the sum exceeds that number, the Esquimaux calls on a neighbour to help him out, by holding up one or two hands as the occasion requires. One or two of our friends related a whimsical anecdote connected with this sort of dumb show. He was conversing with a native alone, who wanted to make the large and unusual sign of thirty. He accordingly held up both hands, and was sadly puzzled to go further. It never occurred to him to break off and repeat the sign in any way; but at length he happily struck upon ten more by getting the Jew to raise his digit. Here were twenty; out the ten to be added was the great puzzle among men of Esquimaux numerals. The difficulty seemed insuperable; but again his genius befriended the calculator; he held up one of his feet—twenty-five! What was to be done? Like one of the wise men of Gotham, our clever native tried to hold up the other foot at the same time, and his efforts to have all his limbs simultaneously in the air were the most ludicrous that can be imagined. But it could not be managed, and it was not without an immensity of trouble that the proposed number was finally expressed by the four hands and one foot of each of the conversing parties.

FRANCE AND SPAIN.

From the London Sun of October 30.

We stop the Press to give the following most important information, and have no doubt of its authenticity, coming from a quarter not only of the first authority, but one with which we are most intimately acquainted; it is as follows:—French and English influence has completely prevailed with Ferdinand, who has consented to revoke all decrees since the 1st inst.

Oct 31—An addition of five thousand seamen is immediately to be made to the naval force of the country. The public is aware, for some time past, there has been considerable activity displayed in putting several ships of the line and frigates on their full complement; and the addition of 5000 seamen is therefore nothing more than a necessary and corresponding increase of men in proportion to the extension of the service.

From the London Courier, of October 31.

We can state upon the best authority, that all questions relating to the late Spanish Settlements in South America, will become matter of discussion in a General Congress. Such, at least, is the nature of the proposition made by France to our Government, but to which we have declined acceding. Whether determination on our part may alter the original intention is a point we cannot decide. Ministers, meanwhile, will steadily pursue the course they have adopted, and fix their attention upon objects of a paramount importance to the commercial interests of England.

PARIS, November 3.

His Royal Highness the Duke d'Angoulême will arrive in Paris on the 5th of December.

General Bourck, whose departure from Madrid, we announced, is detained there by indisposition.

General Ballasteros is at Port St. Mary.

LONDON, November 3.

We received last night, Paris papers by express. The following are extracts:—

(From L'Etoile of Saturday, November 1.)

POSTCRIPT—BY EXPRESS.

Badalona, below Barcelona, Oct 25. in the evening.—An armistice was signed on the 24th. On the 25th the Articles of Capitulation have been accepted. The garrison and forty-seven of Hostalrich and Tarragona are included in it.

Mina has declared that the King of Spain might depend on his devotedness and fidelity.

Our troops are going to occupy all the fortified places.—Vive le Roy!

The decree of the King of Spain for erecting a monument in his Capital to commemorate the services rendered to His Majesty by the Duke d'Angoulême and the French Army, cannot fail to strike our readers with surprise; whatever may be thought of the monarch's gratitude, the discretion may well be questioned for thus perpetuating the recollection of events which the peace of the nation requires should be forgotten, at the same time judging from the general disposition manifested by the people during the late contest, the experiment is less dangerous than would at first sight appear.

A letter from Madrid of the 27th, states that the King was expected in that city on the 11th of November. The same letter adds, that in Catalonia, the love for the Constitution is as firmly rooted as ever in the hearts of the people.—Since the departure of the King, eight thousand passports have been delivered. All those issued by General Vaides, have been declared null.

A letter from Gibraltar, of the 16th Oct. mentions that that place was crowded with the unfortunate Spaniards, who had fled there for refuge. Among them were upwards of sixty of the most distinguished deputies of the Cortes; among whom were Valdes, Alava and Istantes. Quiroga, Manzanares, and Calatrava were also there. Sir Robert Wilson arrived at Gibraltar on the 12th, and was to sail for England by the first packet. Yandiola and Calatrava are to proceed to England. They intend, it is said, to lay before the English Ministers the minute of the King's Manifesto of the 30th September, in which he made several important corrections with his own hand. "The revocation of this decree must have been the more surprising, as the guarantee which it contains correspond with the assurances which were given by his Royal Highness the Duke d'Angoulême, to General Alava, when he was sent with a flag of truce."

UNITED STATES.

VIII. Having communicated my views to congress at the commencement of the last session, respecting the encouragement which ought to be given to our manufactures, and the principle on which it should be founded, I have only to add, that those views remain unchanged, and the present state of those countries with which we have the most immediate political relations, and greatest commercial intercourse, tends to confirm them. Under this impression, I recommend a review of the tariff, for the purpose of affording such additional protection to those articles which we are prepared to manufacture, or which are more immediately connected with the defence and independence of the country.

IX. Many patriotic and enlightened citizens, who have made the subject an object of particular investigation, have suggested an improvement of still greater importance. They are of opinion that the waters of the Chesapeake and Ohio may be connected together, by one continued canal, and at an expense far short of the value and importance of the object to be obtained. All this could be accomplished, it is impossible to calculate the beneficial consequences which would result from it. A great portion of the produce of the very fertile country through which it would pass, would find a market through that channel. Troops might be moved with great facility in war, with cannon, and every kind of munition, and in either direction, connecting the Atlantic with the western country, in a line passing through the seat of the national government, it would contribute essentially to strengthen the bond of union itself. Believing, as I do, that congress possess the right to appropriate money for such a national object, (the jurisdiction remaining to the states through which the canal would pass,) I submit it to your consideration whether it may not be advisable to authorise, by an adequate appropriation, the employment of a suitable number of the officers of the corps of engineers, to examine the unexplored ground during the next season, and to report their opinion thereon. It will likewise be proper to extend their examination to the several routes through which the waters of the Ohio may be connected by canals with those of Lake Erie.

X. The citizens of the United States cherish sentiments the most friendly in favour of the liberty and happiness of their fellow men on that side of the Atlantic. In the wars of the European powers in matters relating to themselves we have never taken any part, nor does it consort with our policy so to do. It is only when our rights are invaded, or seriously menaced, that we resent injuries, or make preparation for our defence. With the movements in this hemisphere we are, of necessity, more immediately connected, and by causes which must be obvious to all enlightened and impartial observers. The political system of the allied powers is essentially different, in this respect, from that of America. This difference proceeds from that which exists in their respective governments. And to the defence of our own, which has been achieved by the loss of so much blood and treasure, and matured by the wisdom of our most enlightened citizens, and under which we have enjoyed unexampled felicity, this whole nation is devoted. We owe it therefore to candour, and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers, to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere, as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power, we have not interfered, and shall not interfere. But, with the governments who have declared their independence, and maintained it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling, in any other manner, their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition towards the United States. In the war between those new governments and Spain, we declared our neutrality at the time of their recognition; and to this we have adhered, and shall continue to adhere, provided no change shall occur, which, in the judgement of the competent authorities of this government, shall make a corresponding change on the part of the United States indispensable to their security.

XI. The late events in Spain and Portugal, shew that Europe is still unsettled. Of this important fact, no stronger proof can be adduced, than that the allied powers should have thought it proper, on any principle satisfactory to themselves, to have interposed, by force, in the internal concerns of Spain. To what extent such interpositions may be carried, on the same principle, is a question, in which all independent powers, whose governments differ from theirs, are interested, even those most remote, and surely none more so than the United States. Our policy, in regard to Europe, which was adopted at an early stage of the wars which have so long agitated that quarter of the globe, never-theless remains the same, which is, not to interfere in the internal concerns of any of its powers; to consider the government, de facto, as the legitimate government for us; to cultivate friendly relations with it, and to preserve those relations by a frank, firm, and manly policy, meeting, in all instances, the just claims of every power; submitting to injuries from none. But in regard to those continents, circumstances are eminently and conspicuously different; it is impossible that the allied powers should extend their political system to any portion of either continent, without endangering our peace and happiness; nor can any one believe that our southern brethern, if left to themselves, would adopt it of their own accord. It is equally impossible, therefore, that we should behold such interposition, in any form, with indifference. If we look to the comparative strength and resources of Spain and those new governments, and their distance from each other, it must be obvious that she can never subdue them. It is still the true policy of the United States to leave the parties to themselves in the hope that other powers will pursue the same course.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Weekly Register.

SIR,

As to the division of the District of London—it's not likely that a question of this nature was ever decided according to the unanimous wish of all the parties concerned. There must of necessity be a clashing of opinions.—It is the lot of humanity that those should be; and all parties may probably, according to the particular bias of their judgments, mean equally well—the matter ought to be discussed between them in good faith, and charity for their respective opinions and prejudices. We should avoid exciting the violent passions of which our nature is so susceptible.—The interests of the whole in a mass ought to be considered at one view, to which all private interests should become subservient. The Captain ought not to wish the new scite to be fixed upon Lot Æ in the Gore of Delaware; nor should Trim wish it to be fixed near the River Thames, not far from the said Lot Æ, where private interest would really lead him to desire it. Both of these Gentlemen ought to be quiet upon that score.—Under such a state of things St. Thomas will have a strong claim to be made the new scite. It is a healthy salubrious situation, combining the advantages of good water, and a junction of the great Roads throughout the country. It is the place which the great majority of the Inhabitants will naturally fix upon. This is proved already by upwards of fifteen hundred Freeholders having signed a Petition to both Houses praying that St. Thomas may be made the scite when the District is divided.—Upwards of five hundred persons equally well disposed, and whose opinions are equally entitled to the consideration of the Legislature, as far as the number goes in opposition to the others, have signed a petition disapproving of St. Thomas as the scite. But I know that they are equally in favour of a division with the others, although by some sort of manœuvre their petition is made to conclude against the measure.

For the satisfaction of the last mentioned petitioners, I beg leave to inform them, that if you take a map of the County, and set one foot of a pair of compasses in the village of St. Thomas, and with the other describe a circle, it will pass nearly through the South-West Angle of Aldborough, the South-East Angle of Bayham, and the rear of the Townships of London, Lobo, Carradoc, Enfrid, and Mosa.—It is true, that owing to a great curvature in the shore, the circle would encroach some distance upon Lake Erie, but if you recede back as far as Mr. Dingman's, and describe a circle, it will include a large portion of Lands not yet purchased from the natives, as well as part of the County of Oxford, and will leave out the greater part of the populous Townships of Aldborough and Bayham, by which a direct injury would be done to their inhabitants.

Although St. Thomas is the centre of population for the County, it is only eight miles from Lake Erie, owing to the curvature before mentioned; and under all the circumstances of the case, its proximity to the Lake is an advantage, because that the distance for taking the products of the soil to market is lessened; the mouth of Kettle Creek being the natural depot.

I have not time to give the Captain the history of Malahide and Bayham, but most intimate to him that it is not likely the inhabitants of those Townships will be "made fools of" by obeying his doctrine. It is most probable that they understand their own interests quite as well as he does; nor do I think that the Legislature will be so unjust as to pass a Law, without any good reason for it, to sever them from Middlesex, contrary to their unanimous petition presented to both Houses against such a measure.

TRIM.

York, 24th November, 1823.

Lobo, 12th Dec. 1823

To the Editor of the Weekly Register.

SIR,

In your Register of the 2d October, you inserted part of a very lengthy letter from Trim, and the remainder the week following.

On the 27th Nov. you gave us another specimen of Trim's long wind, and on the 4th inst. another; while my reply to the 2d part of his first letter, has never appeared at all! I must now acknowledge to you, Sir, that I am heartily sick of this controversy; and indeed, I find nothing in Trim's last letters requiring a Comment. His assumptions are altogether incorrect, his deductions follow of course; and should this dreadful disease—this Cacoethes Scribendi, still continue upon him, unless he should happen to hit upon something much more to the purpose, I can assure him, he shall have it all to himself.

In reply to two notices which have appeared several times, one in your Paper, and the other in the Observer, Signed Chloe Cooper, and Roswell Mount, I beg to observe that they both come from the same quarter: that the 1st is full of intentional falsehoods, that I believe not hers; and that as to the last, I am the person that has advised Mr. Cooper on that subject.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your Most Obedient Servant,

J. MATTHEWS.

I bring forward these examples to impress upon your minds, the imperative necessity that exists for making yourselves well acquainted with anatomical science."

Natural History.

Journey to the North Pole.—Captain Sabine, on his voyage to the North Pole, passed the Arctic Circle on the 24th of May, and arrived at Hammerfast Bay on the 2d of June. The sun there was visible the whole 24 hours. Capt. Sabine was on shore with his instruments, and was to remain there about 14 days, and would then proceed to Spitsbergen.

A kind of grass called Bakegonan wingy, abounds in the deserts of the Ukraine. Towards the end of the month of June, this grass is torn up by the roots, which are covered with maggots of an oval shape, that become indurated as soon as they are exposed to the air. Those maggots are sold by the spoonful to the merchants. They are then pounded, and water, in which they are steeped, with a little alum, assumes the colour of the most beautiful crimson.—The wives of the Cossacks dye there their thread with them; and the Russian merchants buy them for their wives to paint their faces with. The Polish Jews and the Armenians sell large quantities of them to the Turks, who employ them in dying their silks, their morocces, the tails and manes of their horses, and their own hair, beards, and nails. The names of Cocous Polonorum has been given to these maggots. Dampier, in his "Voyage round the world," speaks of them at the same time as of cochineal. From an experiment made at Moscow, it appears that a pound of these maggots, which costs only one ruble, yields as much rouge as half a pound of cochineal.

African Ants.—These insects sometimes set forward in such multitudes, that the whole earth seems to be in motion. A corps of them attacked and covered an elephant quietly feeding in a pasture. In eight hours, nothing was to be seen on the spot, but the skeleton of that enormous animal neatly and completely picked. The business was done, and the enemy marched on after fresh prey. Such power have the smallest creatures when act g in concert.—Hip Horis.

Culture of Tea in the United States.—Mr. Mallet of Louisiana, has succeeded in raising Hyson tea from the seed; and has now an extensive bed of the shrubs.

Rats.—In no country is there a creature so destructive of property as the rat in Jamaica; their ravages are inconceivable.—One year with another, it is supposed that they destroy at least about a twentieth part of the sugar canes throughout the Island, amounting to little short of £200,000 currency per annum. The sugar cane is their favourite food; but they also prey upon the Indian corn, on all the fruits that are accessible to them, and on many of the roots.—Some idea will be formed of the immense swarms of those destructive animals that infest this Island, from the fact, that on a single plantation thirty thousand were destroyed in one year. Traps of various kinds are set to catch them, poison is resorted to, and terriers, and sometimes ferrits, are employed to explore their haunts and root them out; still, however, their numbers remain undiminished, as far at least as can be best remain undiminished, as far at least as can be judged by the ravages they commit. They are of a judged by the ravages they commit. They are of a much larger size than the European rat, especially that kind of them called by the negroes raccoons. On the experiment being tried of putting one of these and a cat together, the latter declined attacking it.

Oak Openings.—There is one fact, in relation to a description of land which constitutes a very considerable portion of this peninsula, which settlers ought to reflect on before they locate. Oak Openings are supposed, by some, to be destitute of a thick growth of timber, by reason of the poverty, or of some peculiar properties of the soil. This opinion is incorrect. It is well known to those acquainted with the customs of the Indians, that they set fire to their hunting grounds every fall, to keep them clear of under brush. This is the true reason why these plains have not the quantity and variety of timber, which are found on other lands, immediately around them. Many persons in this city recollect the appearance of the openings on this side of Pontiac, three years ago. They were then beautifully clear of under brush.—Since the settlement beyond them, the Indians have not used them for hunting grounds; and they are now thickly studded with young timber, of all the varieties which are seen in our forests. American paper

Want of Sagacity.—A Salem paper mentions that a cow was lately found in a narrow passage between two barns, where she had remained 40 days without food. She was greatly emaciated, and soon died.—Her remaining so long in the situation in which she was found is attributed to her not being able to turn, and not having sagacity to back out.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

THE DEATH OF BROCK.

Lines composed on hearing the Speech of the Commissioners for Erecting a Monument to the Memory of the late MAJOR GENERAL SIR ISAAC BROCK.—In imitation of the Death of WOLFE.

Crown'd with sad sympathy Britannia sat mournful,
Where Queenston's bold height overlook the broad plain;
Her garments were wet with the tears of Aurora,
And she mus'd on the deeds of her Brock that was slain.

Her soul was absorb'd in profound contemplation;
'Neath her feet roll'd the surge in its turbid career;
Now the gun'd on the shore—now the dark sheep before her,
While Niagara's thunders broke full on her ear.

"My Brock!" she exclaim'd—"did death here arrest thee?
Did thy gallant spirit here burst from its clay?
Ah! why was so short the bright path of thy glory?—
Why cut down so soon in the noon of thy day?—

'Twas morn,—and sublime o'er the gulph of Niagara,
On the dark folding cloud rising dense to the sky,
Sol the GENIUS of CANADA—round far below him,
Majestic he shot the quick glance of his eye.

He saw the discomfiture queen of the ocean
Reclin'd on the ground—in an instant was there
Before her the vision'd bold hulk, and suspended,
It hung o'er the deep channel'd rocks in mid air.

She gaz'd as with wonder—the genius refulgent
In glory, descended and stood at her feet:—
Ah! whip, he exclaim'd dost thou swerve, fair Empress,
And pour the red ish on the midnight retreat?

Thy BROCK is not dead,—for gift fresh is his glory;
Unsullied remains the bright wreath at his fame;
And long shall posterity tell the proud story,
And kindle anew at the sound of his name.

When call'd to the council of state, by his wisdom
He lavish'd counsels, nothing all hands
And all hearts into one,—all their energies guiding
As one, to one object,—his Sovereign's commands.

The glory of Britain—the good of his country
United, stood first in the views of his mind.
To build a thunderbolt,—mold to the vanquish'd,—
In council a sage,—and a friend to mankind.

His labours were ended, and ripe was his glory:—
The FATHER of all—call'd him home to his rest;
Now a CROWN, never fading, encircles his temples,
And peace, gentle peace, reigns serene in his breast.

'Tis mine here below his fair fame to watch over;
His memory to guard from oblivion's dun shade;—
And here on this ground will I raise his proud trophy,
Where he fell—where his last gallant act was display'd.

E'en now are my faithful Canadians preparing
The pile of affection to rear to his name,
The marble shall tell of his deeds to the stranger,
And ages unborn shall recount all his fame.

ERIEUS.

Port Talbot, Dec. 9, 1823.

Having an idle hour on the American side of the Falls of Niagara, during the past summer, we amused ourselves by looking over the Album in Col. Whitney's Tavern, and were pleased by the manner in which Dr. Howison, now well known in this Province by his book of Travels, had entered his name, and commemorated the remarkable bridge which is there thrown over the river to Goat Island. We took a copy, and it is as follows:—

1820, May 6, Dr. John Howison U. C. visited the Falls, and traversed the Romantic recesses of Goat Island. Beautiful weather, and the luxuriant verdure of an early Spring, conspired to abstract the mind from every thing painful, and to render it serene as the divine atmosphere of happy CANADA.—The honorable Augustus Porter deserves the thanks of all persons of taste.

The bridge which JULIUS CÆSAR made,
When Pontus' stream his march confin'd,
A structure and a form displayed
Which were admired by all mankind.

But Porter well may claim the bays
This work bestow'd on CESAR'S brow,
And CESAR'S merits, CESAR'S praise,
In truth belong to Porter now.

For by his genius, he has won
A victory obtain'd by few;
His glory lies in having done
What others scarce dared hope to do.

Thanks, Porter, thanks, for all I see,
For all thy wonderous bridge has shown;
Nature applauds too—for by thee
The noblest scene has been made known.

Speech of H. J. BOULTON, Esq SOLICITOR GENERAL of the Bar of the House of Assembly, as Counsel for the Petitioners against the Return of GEORGE HAM Esq to serve in Parliament for the Counties of Lennox and Addington.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL appeared at the Bar as Counsel for the Petitioners, and said he would take up but very little of the time of this Hon. House, as the circumstances of the present case were plain and simple; he would only call one witness. The facts were, that this Election was held in passing week, and that the Returning Officer took it on him, contrary to law, to adjourn the Poll from Thursday over Good Friday, till Saturday and from Saturday till the Monday following, by which inconvenience, and lost several votes. He contended that if the Returning Officer was permitted to adjourn the Poll over one day, he might with the same propriety adjourn for a week or a month. The Act of Parliament says that the Returning Officer shall continue the Poll for six days, and that at the end thereof he shall make his return; consequently, votes taken after six days, cannot be considered as taken on the Poll at all

On Thursday evening, at the time the Poll was adjourned over till Saturday, the state of the Poll was 400 for Mr. Bidwell, and 397 for Mr Ham; here Mr. Bidwell had a majority of 3. On Saturday at the close of the Poll, the votes were seven, 405 for each. (Here the learned Counsel quoted several authorities to shew that Good Friday was not a holiday in point of law, and also that any ministerial act might be done on any holiday, and even on Sunday; consequently that the act of conducting and keeping open the Poll at an Election, being a ministerial act, the Returning Officer in this case would not only have been justified, but compelled to do it the election on Sunday, had the Writ been issued for any day in the middle of the week instead of Monday, and went on to shew that warrants in all criminal cases were executed on Sunday, as well as every other holiday) It would then appear to this Hon House that the Returning Officer, instead of having any authority for adjourning over from Thursday till Saturday, could be punished for so doing. He would also bring evidence to shew, that Mr. Bidwell protested against this conduct, and that he actually lost his Election by it, as many of his voters returned home, and would not wait till Saturday. Saturday being the proper day for the Return, and both candidates being equal in votes, the Election ought to be declared void Under all these circumstances, he hoped this Hon. House would declare the Election void, which was the only thing that the Petitioners expected on this occasion.

Editorial Communications.

It is no affectation in us to say we are really grieved to see the foolish question of the necessity of crushing any peaceable assemblage of Orangemen, met to commemorate their festivities in this Province, again brought forward, by a very laboured and highly charged petition, before the Legislature. We suppose it is useless, perhaps worse than useless, to say any thing more than was said on a former occasion; but we beg to repeat, that it is the principle, and not the thing, (which is trifling and insignificant in itself,) that we deprecate. The hope that whatever happened to be the old world, the British Constitution in its greatest purity—the sacred liberty of the person—security in property—sanctity of domicile,—and all those glorious privileges of which our ancestors have been so proud, would survive in this country, has many and oft a time spread the bright halo of human happiness, and of beauty, in perspective ken, over the vast, and now soaring, bosom of this extensive region, and given us the highest pleasure in search for the future.—But, when we see so much reason to fear that these laws as they now stand—it is time the said booby went to sea!

There seems to be quite a rage for quoting precedents from Great Britain and Ireland. The petition is much filled with long quotations from addresses by Judges. Fletcher and M'Clellan.—There is no sort of analogy in the circumstances and situation of this country and Ireland.—It is hard if possible for any two countries to be more different;—and it is evident these quotations are

Mr. RUTTAN said well, when he declared his repugnance to legislate for the feelings of individuals. The science of legislation, when confined to its proper objects, is sufficiently complex and difficult, without hunting after, and attempting to gauge and direct, a control human feeling through all the various emotions of passion—and all the mazes and labyrinths of mere physical execution, which is a task beyond the power of human legislation.

Not to run into refined speculations which may be here useless, we may assert that the laws, as they now stand, are fully adequate to the suppressing of any tumult—be the orange, blue or green, sported; and, if there be not sufficient strength in the constitutionally, to suppress. MAGISTRATES may well feel a state, when called upon to act where there is no cause for interference;—but, if there is any country body of a Magistrate in this Province, who does not know what is said, and is unsatisfied resembling of tumultuous persons, and what is not—according to the laws as they now stand—it is time the said booby went to sea!

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

The Colonist.—We perceive in the last English Papers, the Prospectus of a "Weekly Paper upon a plan entirely new, to be entitled the Colonist; and to be devoted to the interests of the British Colonies in the West Indies and America. The Colonist will be of the quarto size, printed in the best and neatest manner. It will be published in London every Sunday Morning, and a second edition will be brought out so as to bring down the intelligence to the moment at which the Packets sail"—Herald.

The Rival Champions.—At length these men have come to terms. The English champion Spring is matched to fight the Irish Champion Langan, not for love, but for 300 guineas; the fight to take place about midway between London and Manchester. Of Spring we have little occasion to speak, he is already well known. Langan is a stranger in the prisoning of London, but he is spoken of as a young man of no ordinary powers. Spring has been exhibiting at the Manchester Theatre, and on Tuesday, we understand, took his benefit. He immediately goes into training for the contest, which, it is said will take place in February. Betting ast night, five to four on Spring.

Facts which require philosophical elucidation.—If a blacksmith strike his anvil with a hammer, action and re-action are equal the anvil returning the hammer as forcibly as the hammer strikes the anvil. If the anvil be large enough, a man may place it on his breast, and suffer another person to strike it with all his force, without sustaining any injury, because the vis inertiæ in the anvil will resist the force of the blow; but, if the anvil be too small, the blow will be fatal.

The spontaneous combustion of charcoal has been frequently observed by chemists.—M. Pallas, of Montfolowing manner:—The charcoal, not being much exposed to the air after the carbonization of the wood, had retained, in a greater or less degree, a phosphoric principle, susceptible of inflammation by contact with damp air.—Now the charcoal, which is at present the subject of consideration, was kept in a place in which there were casks and vases filled with water. This liquid diffused a great degree of humidity, which absorbed the phosphorus; hence there arose a disengagement of caloric, and ignition was the consequence. Those who keep large depôts of charcoal, should therefore be careful to preserve the air about it from moisture.

King George the III.—There were many peculiarities in the character and habits of the late King of England. Until his sight began to fail, he had no secretary. He was a very early riser, whether in town or in the country, and seldom troubled a servant for any thing he could do himself. The little crib in which his Majesty slept at the Queen's Lodge at Windsor, was contiguous to the office where he transacted public business. There he was found at his desk by six o'clock in the morning, even in winter, having lit his own fire quently admitted and dispatched by the King himself. It was said to have been a source of great pain to his Majesty, when, from the loss of sight, Sir Herbert, then Col. Taylor, was appointed his secretary at the recommendation of the Duke of York.

Trust me, "Gon judges not as man judges"!—The fate of Riego was dreadful indeed. The Excel. in the act of execution, requires that Riego should be published as follows:—That he shall be drawn by the feet from the prison to the scaffold, there hanged, then quartered, and that one limb should be sent to Las Cabezas, one to La Isla, one to Malaga, and one to Madrid; that the rest of the body should be burnt, and the ashes cast into the air by the hands of the hangman. The wife of Riego, was in London, in indigent circumstances.

Fire! a fire!—A preacher observing that several of his congregation had taken alarm, suddenly exclaimed, with a loud voice, 'a fire, a fire!' 'Where,' where!' cried his awakened auditors. 'In the place of punishment,' added the preacher, 'for those who sleep under the ministry of the holy gospel.'

Presence of mind! and trapping Indians!—The following anecdote is from the second edition of the "Description of Brunswick"—Among the first settlers of Brunswick, Mr. ——, a man of undaunted courage, and an inveterate enemy to the Indians, who gave him the name Saugarumby, (i. e. very strong man,) early in the spring ventured alone into the forest for the purpose of splitting rails from the spruce, not apprehending the least danger. While engaged in his work, and having opened a log with small wedges about half its length, he was surprised by Indians, who crept up and secured his musket standing by his side. Saugarumby, said the chief, now we got you—long time speak Indian—long time no long me—you long time speak Indian—long time sorry him—me have got you now—look up stream to Canada. Well—and Malcolm, with true sang froid, you have me, but just help me open this log before I go.—They all fire—agreed. Malcolm prepared a large wooden wedge, carefully drove it, took out the small wedges, and told the Indians to put in their fingers to the partially cleft wood and help pull it open, they did,—he then suddenly knocked out the blunt wedge, and the elastic wood immediately closed on their fingers, and thus secured them all.—Belfast Mc. Gazette.

Extraordinary.—There is now living in the neighbourhood of Bollington, Cheshire, a man of the name of John Jackson, the following particulars of whose history, together with that of his wife, were related by himself, and can be easily substantiated:—He relates, that he was married the first time in the year 1763, to one Betty Brown, by whom he had twelve children, six boys and six girls. In 15 weeks after her death, he married his present wife, who before their marriage was a widow, and had had five children, which were then all living; by her he had twenty-two children in 20 years and 46 weeks, the time and circumstances of whose births were equally singular, and probably unprecedented. He hired a cow from a neighbour every year during that period (in which he had but two different cows,) and in three or four weeks after the cow had called, each time his wife was delivered of a child; but in the 21st year the cow had two calves at the same time, and his wife was thereupon said the people in the neighbourhood began to predict that his wife would also have two children, which in about two or three weeks was realized in the birth of two boys. When he took them to the church at Prestbury to be baptized, the minister smiled, (as he had had thirty-two children baptized there before,) and said, 'Well John, have you another?' 'Yes, Sir,' was the reply. 'Well, what must they be called?' 'Abraham and Isaac,' said John. When the children had been baptized, and the ceremony was over, the minister said, 'well, John, you should have another, and call it Jacob!' and Jacob's wife beat him with another boy, which was called Job; so that he had thirty-five children in the space of 22 years.—Stockport Advertiser

The celebrated Polish Dwarf.—Count Borowlaski, the celebrated Polish dwarf, who has recently published his very interesting memoirs, would not suffer a copy to be offered for sale until he had presented, in person, a large paper copy, splendidly bound, to our most gracious Sovereign. The Count, who is now in his 84th year, and only 3 feet 3 inches in height, set out from Durham for this purpose. It is an extraordinary circumstance that he was received at Carlton Palace with that dignified kindness which distinguishes the character of our Royal Majesty. In return for the book, his Majesty presented the Count with a handsome gold watch, chain, and seals.

Burning of the Western Prairies.—The Kaskaskia (Illinois) paper of the 30th of October, states that during a number of days past, the extensive prairies in the neighbourhood of that place, which annually produce a most luxuriant crop of grass, and which is now in a most inflammable state, have been burning to an amazing extent. The fire spreads with a rapidity truly surprising, carrying consternation to every direction. Much fencing has been destroyed, and, we are informed, considerable quantities of corn, and other produce which remained in the fields, and some houses were consumed. An interminable cloud of smoke hangs over the face of the country, at such density as almost to intercept the sun beams, and to produce a continued twilight. The first copious fall of rain, accompanied with a strong wind, will doubtless extinguish the fire, and disperse the smoke.

CHRISTMAS DAY,

From the Calcutta Observer.

"This Grand Festival is universally observed on the 25th December, in memory of the NATIVITY of JESUS CHRIST; which circumstance the term CHRIST-MAS, CHRIST, having been added to the name of JESUS, to express that he was the Messiah. The Mass, JESUS, as originally used by the Church, implied solely the festival celebrated.

From the various alterations in the Roman Calendar, arose the inaccuracy that certainly prevails, in keeping the day of our LORD'S nativity, which did not take place on the 25th December, but at the time the Jews kept their Feast of Tabernacles.

The FIRST CHRISTIANS kept the NATIVITY on the 1st of January, conforming in this computation to the Roman year. On the FEAST OF TABERNACLES, they decorated their Churches with green boughs, as a memorial that CHRIST was actually born at that time.

The custom of ornamenting churches and houses with evergreens at Christmas, is still pretty general observed.

The now almost obsolete custom of making presents at this season, under the title of Christmas Boxes, arose from the custom of a boy devoted to every ship which sailed on a voyage being deposited with a priest, into which money might be dropt to give efficacy to the prayers of the Church, and these Boxes being opened at Christmas in each year, thence acquired the name of CHRISTMAS BOXES. This in process of time, became the familiar name of presents in these days, and the poorer classes were even encouraged to beg of their richer neighbours Box Money, or in other words, money to support the Priest's box.

The ancient salutation of A MERRY CHRISTMAS, like that of a HAPPY NEW YEAR, adverted to the hospitality of the rich who kept spacious Halls, crowded with tenants and neighbours, were scenes of boundless Round about our coal fire" they were regaled with the most substantial fare the season could afford. The first dish was generally a BOAR'S HEAD, and sometime a Gammon of Bacon. The Boar's head is yet served upon Christmas Day at Queen's College, Oxford—where it is solemnly ushered into the Hall with a Monitch Carol. Both these dishes were meant to express an abhorrence of Judaism.

PLUM PUDDINGS were emblematic, from their ingredients, of the offerings of the wise men; and MINCE PIES with pieces of paste over them in the form of a crib or hay rack, commemorated the manger in which our Savour was first laid. A composition of Ale, Sugar, Nutmeg, &c. called LAMB'S WOOL, passed jovially round a bowl of which the Saxon colonists in Britain took such copious draughts, as even to call for the words WASS HEAIL, Be of health.

When Hengist and Horsa first visited Britain at the solicitation of Vortigern prince of the Silures, the Britain chief became enamoured of ROWENA, the niece of his host became enamoured of ROWENA, the niece of HENGIST, at a Banquet prepared by the stranger in honour of Vortigern, the Princess, invited by her Uncle, presented to the aged Prince a cup of spiced wine, and with a smile welcomed him to the words WASS HEAIL HALFORD CYNING, to Be of health Lord King, to which, through his Interpreter, he answered "DRINC HEAIL" or I drink your health. The event is narrated by Robert of Gloucester, but as the vocabulary of this ancient Bard are may not be intelligible generally to our readers, we shall prefer the more modern paraphrase in the Antiquarian Repository.

"Health, cry'd the Christian to the Saxon Maid;
Health, cry'd the Christian to the Saxon Maid;
Then gently rose, and 'mid the concourse stood,
Kissed her pale lips, and placed her by his side.
At the soft scene such gentle thoughts abound,

That healths and kisses 'mongst the guests went round;
From this the social custom took its rise,
We still retain, and still must keep the prize.

WASSAIL HEAL OR WASSAIL, from that period, became the name of the Drinking Cups of the Anglo Saxons; and the custom of drinking healths, derived from these Saxon Ancestors, still remains amongst the English and those descending from them; hence drinking parties were called WASSAILS, and the Jolly Bacchanalians WASSAILERS.

Christmas, considered as a religious festival, is one of the first consequence; and although, from the change which modern luxury has introduced in the manners of the age, many of the solemnities with which it was formerly observed are now discontinued, it still is marked as a period when a more social intercourse takes place between the different classes of society, and one at which the poor are considered as having, amidst the general festivity which prevails, a stronger claim upon the benevolence and charity of their richer neighbours. The reader will find an interesting account of Christmas, as it was observed in the early part of the last century, in one of the first numbers of the Sketch Book.

ACCOUNT OF THE ESQUIMAUX INDIANS.

Other characteristic traits of these simple people may be told in this place. The wives of two of them, one with a baby sucking (which nutriment they supply for seven years,) were taken on board the vessel for medical treatment, both being in the last stages of disease. It was indeed too late to save them; and they died. The husband of the mother evinced some distress, and howled a little when she expired; but very soon seemed to forget his loss. Yet he attended very sedulously to the proceedings of the Cabluna. They enveloped the body decently, as is done with sailors, in a hammock, and dug a grave for its reception. To this it was borne accompanied by the husband, who manifested much uneasiness. At last he made himself understood that he was afflicted by the confinement of the corpse. Having obtained a knife, he was permitted to gratify his own feelings, and he cut all the stitches which held the hammock together down the front, so as to give a kind of liberty to the dead form. The covering in of the grave with earth and stones, seemed also to give him pain; but he asked leave to bury the living child with its dead mother. The reason assigned for this horrid proposal was, that being a female, no woman would take the trouble to nurse it, as that was never done among them. If it had been a boy, perhaps some one might have adopted and reared it. In fact the infant, without sustenance, did die on the ensuing day, and was placed at the disposal of its parent, who drew it away on his sledge to a short distance, and raised a small mound of snow over its lifeless corpse.

It is curious to remark, that while they dislike the idea of hurting the dead by putting any thing heavy upon them, they feel no regret at the consequence of their own insufficient mode of sepulture—the dragging of the bodies from their slight snow tombs to be torn to pieces and devoured by dogs and wolves, as was frequently witnessed by our men, who, when they spying dissolved the snow, had to dig graves for the mutilated remains of several of the native corpses thus exposed to view. There was a considerable mortality among them; no fewer than sixteen old and young, dying within the few months they spent near the expedition in its second winter.

In the management of the canoe, the Esquimaux are very expert. They are amazingly light, and formed of skin over whale-bone. The largest which Capt. Parry obtained is 26 feet in length; and we observed a feather between the decks in the Hecla, which is 19 feet long, and only 19 inches in width, half of which are in the depth.

In these the natives pursues his marine chase, and spears the fish and fowl. The spear is double pointed with bone, about six or seven inches in length, and barbed. The shaft is of very light wood, five or six feet long, and below the handle, or part by which it is thrown, are three other barbed bones, standing out a few inches from the wood, and calculated to strike the prey, should the bi-forked point miss. They kill at twenty yards distance. The bow and arrow is also employed in killing game and wild animals. The arrows are pointed with stone smoothed into a lance-head shape by friction against other stones.

A method of catching seals (and, if we remember correctly, fish also,) through a hole in the ice, is one of the most dexterous of Esquimaux contrivances: A line is let down, at the end of which is fastened a small piece of white bone, or tooth, about an inch long—cut into a rude fish form, and having two morsels of pyrites stuck into it, to resemble eyes. This bait is drawn through the water, and when seals or other prey approach to examine it, the watchful native spears them from above.

The knives used by the women are curiously constructed, and as cleverly employed in skinning animals and carving victuals as the instruments of hunting are by the men. They resemble a small cheese, or saddler's knife; the iron or cutting part being semi circular, and inserted in a bone handle. The whole is three or four inches long, and the edge three or four inches in breadth. With these they carve away underhanded in a very dexterous style.

Spectacles—another of their articles, which struck us as curious and well contrived. They consist of a piece of wood scraped thin, like a bandage, and perforated with two narrow horizontal slits, something like pigs' eyes, where we would have glasses; a rim of about an inch broard projects in the same direction as that of a hat would; and this simple mechanical process, tied about the head, protects the eyes from the drifting snow and spiculæ, and improves the sharpness of the sight.

Having already stated the longitudes, latitudes, and periods of sailing and wintering; we shall not deem it necessary to go much into the details of the Expedition, which has, in fact, neither added much to geography, nor been able to explore farther than was done by Middleton and preceding navigators. The last year seems to have been so unproductive, that the ships might as well have returned home in the autumn of 1822; but it is not the character of British seamen to desist while the slightest prospect of success can be entertained. Our own opinion is, that there may be many openings into the Polar Sea, and that probably the best, after all, is in Lancaster Sound, and where Capt. Ross showed the way, but did not pursue it. Certainly the course taken upon the present occasion does not appear to have answered the expectations formed, or to promise any advantageous results for future attempts, should such be persevered in.

The inlet where the second winter was spent, presented a solid mass of everlasting ice. It is about ten miles in breadth; its length (of course, not having been traversed) one-train. The ebb tide is from the South West, and the flood from South East; small channels ran through it, but not wide enough to work a ship. While they lay here, and indeed during the voyage, the vessels do not seem to have encountered much danger from the ice; at any rate, they have pitched and painted them in coming home, so as to make them look fresh and well in the Thames. About the bows, we noticed some rather harsh grazing, and the bolt heads sticking out a few inches from the wood. In one instance, we were informed, a field of ice coming down at the rate of about two miles an hour, almost lifted the Hecla out of the water, and snapped five of the strongest cables and ropes, by which she was moored.

SPAIN.

If any reliance can be placed on the following information, which we are inclined to think there may be, the fate of the with those circumstances of extraordinary cruelty, which had been anticipated.

The Madrid papers of Nov. 5, say, Don Rafael del Riego is condemned to the ordinary punishment of hanging, and he shall be drawn on a hurdle to the place of execution—his property shall be confiscated, and he shall pay the costs of suit. The sentence was placed in capilla (reclusion) at 10 o'clock this morning.

The Madrid Gazette of Nov. 6, says, this day at noon the ordinary punishment of hanging was inflicted on the person of Don Rafael del Riego. The public that held his crimes in such detestation, has shown on this occasion, that it can distinguish between crime and the criminal, for not the least insult was offered to him by the immense crowds that filled the streets through which he passed—and it was only at the moment of execution that the shout of long live the absolute King, was heard.

This act is one of the most base that ever disgraced the annals of civilized nations. Riego had been made to suffer death for unwisely supporting the constitution and government which he, in conjunction with the nation and the king, had solemnly sworn to defend.

The Madrid Regency was a nonentity—a mere puppet in the dance of a foreign power, to which no free Spaniard could be faithful, but bended the knee, and the members composing it, by pressure, or fraction. The King and the cortes, were the only lawful powers, and to them Riego patriotically adhered. He obeyed their orders, in endeavouring to defend the liberty of his country, and to expel invaders who would fasten upon it the fetters of slavery. He used every exertion which a brave man could, to further the designs of the government which he had delegated himself to support. And for these, he is ignobly hung on a gibbet, by the very monarch, who by his proclamations and addresses to the aged all his subjects to resist the vile attempts of France. It a circumstance ever transpired in the world, to make angels weep, and devils laugh, it is emphatically the execution of this unfortunate officer. Poor Spain! with a country which is the admiration of the world, with a people who are brave, and with some generous hearts and feelings shed as you ought indeed were, you are fated to be under the direction of a monarch, who from his weakness and ignorance is fit for nothing else than to be a turnspit or a scullion; who treats his cruelty is well calculated to amuse him—if with impaling flies on a pin, and who from his bigotry would make a serviceable tool to carry the trail of an inquisitor's robe, embroider a petticoat for the image of the Virgin Mary, or apply the torch to the fagots at an auto da fe.

But there is yet within you a redeeming spirit, which will ere long burst forth in all its splendor, eradicate tyranny, superstition and ignorance, and place you on an equal with nations where the principles of liberty are predominant!

SPANISH COLONIES.

Cuba and Colombia.—Intelligence of the fall of the Cortes and the triumph of the French arms over the patriots of Spain, having reached Cuba, about the middle of November, Gen Vives, Captain general of that Island, immediately issued the following proclamation.

PROCLAMATION

Of the Captain General of the Island of Cuba, Don Francisco Dionisio Vives.

Inhabitants of Cuba:

The English brig Margaret, in 46 days from Gibraltar, has just arrived, in which vessel Col. Don Jose Ovande has come passenger, who in addressing me officially, has transmitted to me a note containing a statement of the most interesting events of the affairs of the Peninsula, from the month of June, until the 3d of October, as also a signed copy of the Manifesto of the King of the Nation, given by his Majesty on the 30th of September, the evening of his departure for Port St. Mary's. Although these accounts are not official, the situation of Cadiz entitles them to all probability; and their importance is likely to excite the public attention, affording a field of malice to riot in the luxury of revenge, insomuch that I deem it necessary to cause the Note and Manifesto to be published in continuation of this, in order that the public may be aware of the frankness of my character, and of my disposition to act against (contravention) evil interpretations; and the many dangers to reputation which might be exultingly opposed. And I expect that the intelligent part of the inhabitants of this city will thwart the plans of the wicked, who may strive in any manner whatsoever to afford an opportunity to conspirators to meditate on their ruthless schemes of independence; thereby disturbing the public tranquility. I have adopted all the measures which I deem expedient to insure the felicity of the Island, and shall know how to curb the pretentions of the ambitious, should they design to compromise the political existence of Havana; and therefore exhort all peaceable people to await the orders of the superior government, which we shortly expect to receive.

Havana, 19th November, 1823.

NATURAL HISTORY.

Long abstinance of the Adder!—Some time during the by gone summer, a Surgeon in Maybole, in possession of a living Adder, put it into a large globular glass bottle, for the purpose of showing it, in a live state, to his acquaintances, and at the same time to ascertain how long it would exist without nourishment in a sphere so contracted. To soften its decease as much as possible, a small quantity of loose hay was put into the bottle, on which the miserable reptile might rest and coil his spangled form, as of most nature tempter might rest and coil his spangled form, as of most nature tempter might rest and coil his spangled form, as of most nature tempter

Vol. III. No. 3

THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1824

Editorial Commentary.

Debates of extraordinary interest have occurred in the Assembly of the Lower Province on the subject of Crown and Clergy Reserves, which we are sorry we have not room to insert beyond their mere commencement:—we shall endeavour to continue them next week, as we hope to see some measures of the kind proposed (at least attempted) in this Province.

A measure of immense importance has been introduced, and carried through our House of Assembly, by the Attorney General, and is now pending or the third reading, with a certainty of passing in the Upper House.—It may in truth be called the "Wild Land Sentenced Bill." It goes to render permanent an Act which passed in the 50th of His late Majesty's Reign, relative to levying and collecting Rates and Assessments in this Province, and to provide for the more equal and general Assessment of Lands, &c. By the new Bill every owner or occupier of land which has not been surveyed by, or under the authority of, the Surveyor General of this Province must make a return of his Land to the Treasurer of the District in which the Land lies, on, or before, the 1st of July next,—in case of neglect he is to pay double the amount of the Assessment; and, also, double for every year afterwards, until the return is made.

If the arrears have been suffered to accumulate so long, at the expiration of 8 years, such a portion of the lands as will satisfy the claim, is to be seized and sold by the Sheriff. The mode of selling to be by Public Auction, when the amount in arrear is to be declared, together with the expenses incurred on the seizure, &c. &c. and the person, who shall offer to pay the Assessments and expenses for the least quantity of the Lands seized, shall be considered as the purchaser thereof.

The original owner may recover possession by paying the purchase money, together with 20 per cent in addition to the same, within 12 calendar months after the day of sale.

This Act will operate alike on residents and absentees, who neglect their wild lands; and the effect, in a few years, will be most beneficial and extensive, bringing a vast sum of money for the public service; and having an immediate, direct, and certain tendency to make the wilderness smile and "blossom as the rose." It is probable the first effect will be a rise in the market, will be a general depression in the price, but that depression will be temporary—Lands will afterwards be appreciated as they ought to be in this fine country, and they will steadily, and even rapidly, advance in value. Upon the whole, it is by far the most important act that has passed since our acquaintance with the country, and it does high honor to the able and accomplished mover on the present occasion

Lord Chief Baron Richards died on the morning of the 11th of November, in the 71st year of his age.

Sir Hudson Lowes' application to the Court of King's Bench to have a criminal information filed against Mr B O'Meara, has been refused

At a recent sale of a gentleman's effects in England, 20 dozen of choice Claret sold for £845 !!!

A flood of light is about to be thrown upon the seizure, trial, and last moments of the unfortunate Duke D Enghien.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

From the Com. Advertiser, December 26.

Extract from Spain.—The brig Susan, Capt. Winser 35 days from Malaga, arrived at Boston on Tuesday last. Capt. Winser states that Ceuta has been taken possession of by the French, who had openly declared they would never give it up so long as the English held possession of the Rock of Gibraltar; and that on the 13th Nov news was received at Malaga of the surrender of the cities of Alicant, Carthagena and Barcelona, to the French and Spanish Royal authorities.

London, Nov. 9.

Polar Expedition.—We understand it is in the contemplation of the Admiralty to commission Discovery Ships for another voyage to the Polar seas, with this difference, that their route is now to be by Behring's Straits, whence they will sail eastward. The distance which must be traversed before they can well be said to commence proceeding to the object of their mission, and the consequent difficulty of preserving the necessary supplies, has hitherto been the obstacle to the attempt by this passage. This latter impediment it is now proposed to obviate, by sending a supernumerary vessel, laden with necessaries, which will probably accompany them to the neighborhood of the Kamschatkan coast. Capt. Parry is again to take the command.

Waterloo Monument!—A monument is erecting in the field of Waterloo, to commemorate the battle fought here in 1815. It will consist of a lion 20 feet long and 18 feet high, placed on a hillock 150 feet high.

Tremendous Gales on the Coast of Eng.and.—The English coast was visited by tremendous gales and hurricanes on the 1st November.—The accounts received at Lloyd's were dreadful, 140 vessels had been lost on the N. E. coast. The London Courier of the 3d Nov. says—"That our papers and advices, received this morning, from all parts of the United Kingdom, furnish a mass of calamitous details of the damage occasioned by the tempestuous weather which prevailed during Thursday and Friday last. To an extensive devastation of property is added a melancholy loss of human life.

Remarkable Challenge.—The following challenge was sent from Soliyman the Great, Emperor of the Turks, to Maximilian II. Emperor of Germany:—"By connivance of the Great God in Heaven, we Soliyman, God on earth, Great and Sublime Emperor of all the World, Lord, Master, and disposer of all the followers of Christ, we send and declare unto thee, Maximilian, indignation, misfortune, and infidelity to thee and thy Princes, subjects and adherents. We moreover give thee to know that we, by the sufferance of the Great God, styled on earth the Great and Perpetual God, Most Mighty Emperor Soldan of Babylon, Lord of Armenia, the Mightiest in Persepolis and Numidia, the greatest auxiliary of God, Prince in Barbary, even unto the Mountains of Achaia, King of Kings, from the Meridian to the Poles, from the rising of the sun to the setting thereof, the first and chief-placed in the Paradise of Mahomet, the scourge of Christendom and Christians, keeper and defender of the sepulchre of thy God crucified, the only victorious and triumphant Lord of the World, and of all Circuits and Provinces thereof; thou, Maximilian, who stylest thyself King of our Kingdom of Hungary, we will visit thee for that cause, and make thee acquainted with our strength of thirteen kingdoms, collected in one hundred thousand horse and foot prepared for war, with all the power of Turkish munition, such as thou nor none of thy servants have seen, heard, or had knowledge of; and this even before thy chief city, Vienna. We, Soliyman, God on earth, in defiance of thee, thine adherents and abettors, do with our war-like strength, pronounce and intend thine and their utter destruction and depopulation, by every possible means we can devise; and this we signify unto thee to the end that thou and thy miserable people may prepare your selves for ruin or death; with us it is determined, by the hands of our Janizaries, to ravage, hold spoil there, and all thy German kingdoms and principalities. This misery we have denounced against thee and thy adherents; having no doubt we will come.—Dated in the year of our reign forty seven, in the city of Constantinople, from which we did expel thy predecessors, their wives, children, and friends, and made them miserable slaves and captives"

Cuba.—A French frigate left Cadiz on the 5th, for Havana, with a new Governor, and to bring home the present Governor.

Russian Clergy.—Mrs. Henderson, in a letter published in the Missionary Herald, says, that at the time when a Bible Society was formed in Novogorod (Russia,) there were many of the clergy who had never seen a Bible, and one on hearing of it, asked what kind of a book it was?

Somewhat galling to Spanish pride!—A ludicrous account having been given in an English Newspaper, of one of the heads of the Bourbon family, all the ambassadors then at the court of London belonging to that family, joined in a remonstrance to the then British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who answered that they must appeal to a British jury. Prince Masserano, at that time the Spanish Ambassador, was greatly enraged at this answer of Lord Weymouth's, and exclaimed. "What, not punish the rascal who has called the king of Spain a fool?" "No," said Lord Weymouth, "I cannot, for these very printers have said the same of our king, who is a mad man; and when brought to trial by our course of law, they were acquitted."

How to feed Geese and Poultry.—An experiment has lately been tried of feeding geese with turnips, cut in small pieces like dice, but less in size, and put into a trough of water; with this food alone, the effect was, that six geese, each when lean weighing only 9lbs. actually gained 20 lbs. each in about three weeks fattening. Malt is an excellent food for geese and turkeys; grains are preferred for the sake of economy, unless for immediate and rapid fattening; the grains should be boiled afresh. Other cheap articles for fattening are oatmeal and treacle; barley meal and milk; boiled oats and ground malt. Corn, before being given to fowls, should always be crushed and soaked in water. The food will thus go further, and it will help digestion. Hens fed thus have been known to lay during the whole of the winter months.—London paper.

How much folly, vanity, and possitive evil may be engendred for half a dollar!

Anecdote of Gen Jackson.—A few days since, when at Fredericksburgh, Va. on his way to Washington, a small boy about eight years of age, and who was named after him, soon after the eighth of January, 1815, was introduced to the general as his namesake. He took him in his arms and kissed him; then putting his hand on his head, said, "God bless you, my dear little fellow; be a good boy; learn your book; and be always ready to fight for your country!" Then, taking out of his purse a fifty cent coin, (in English half a dollar,) and presenting it to him, he continued:—"Here is the eagle of your country—never desert it! Wear this next your heart, and remember me." The scene was striking; and the impression made on the boy, will be lasting. It will influence his future life. He wears it round his neck, and it is the envy of all his schoolfellows!! The little fellow is already a thorough Jacksonite, and says he will go to Washington, when Jackson is president, and shew it to him, in the president's house.—Amer. Pap.

Steam Power.—M. Dupin, whilst speaking of the immense mechanical force set in action by the steam engines of England, gives the following illustration of its amount:—The great pyramid of Egypt required for its erection the labour of above 100,000 men, for 20 years; but if it were required to raise the stones from the quarries, and place them at their present height, the action of the steam engines of England, which are managed at most by 36,000 men, would be sufficient to produce the effect in 18 hours! The calculation of M Dupin is as follows:—The volume of the great pyramid is 4,000,000 cubic metres, its weight is about 10,400,000 tons, or 10,400,000 kilogrammes. The centre of gravity of the pyramid is elevated 49 metres from the base; and taking 14 metres as the mean depth of the quarries, the total height of elevation is 63 metres, which, multiplied by 10,400,000 tons, gives 624,000,000 tons raised one metre high. Then, the total of the steam engines in England represents a power of 320,000 horses. These engines moved for 24 hours, would raise 862,800,000 tons one metre high, and consequently 647,100,000 in 18 hours, which surpasses the produce of labour spent in raising the materials of the great pyramid.—Mechanic's Magazine.

MANUFACTURES OF FRANCE.

The silk manufacture of France may be compared with the woollen manufactures of England—it is the staple of the country. It is the foundation of the immense wealth to the nation. It is divided into two distinct species, the white and yellow, of which the latter has been in the country more than two centuries, but the former was introduced from China within a short time. Before the revolution some attempts were made to obtain the white, or China silk worm, and the grain on which it feeds, but very little use was ever made of it for many years, and the species was supposed to have become extinct in France.—In 1806 however it was found in the hands of several cultivators, and by the exertions of societies and the government the raising of white silk worms is established, and the animal is found to be quite as hardy as that in the other species, so that there is no doubt it will by degrees encrease throughout the kingdom.

The method of spinning silk has attained a high state of improvement in all its branches. The water in which the silk balls are steeped is warmed by steam, which the silk balls are steeped is warmed by steam, which is found to clean the silk at the same time that it loosens it.—The winding is now performed by machinery, as well as the weaving; and the invention by which the latter objection is effected has relieved many poor women and children from a species of labour which produced deformity and sometimes premature death. Important discoveries have also been made in the art of silk dying; so that the various branches of this manufacture are now carried on with greater economy and perfection, and with daily encreasing demand. Several kinds of the lightest and most elegant mixtures of silk with cotton, wool, cashmere, &c. are now made at Paris, and even surpass those from Lyons.

Carpets.—It is well known that the French make very little use of carpets, although they have long manufactured the most elegant patterns of tapestry for the rich and great. Under the royal patronage, the arts and many other branches of manufacture more luxurious than really valuable, have been carried to a ugliness of improvement, which those which were necessary for the convenience and comfort of the people at large were neglected or discouraged. A Paris journalist regards this as an important fact in the history of the manufactures, and one which has no parallel. French manufactures, and one which has no parallel. In England, "That people," remarks this writer, "who envied the fresh straw with which Cardinal Wolsey strewed his hall floor, now have carpets on their tables and under their tables; carpets throughout the houses from top to bottom; in their passages, in their farm houses; and if Cardinal Wolsey could return to this world and witness the change, he would be surprised to find horses accommodated like gentlemen. He might console himself, however, by reflecting on the instability of human affairs; for there are no princes or peers like masters in disgrace."

The manufactory of tapestry at the Savonnerie has been established two hundred years, but it is only within a very short time that carpets have been furnished at such a price as to be afforded by any except the rich; and it will probably be a long time before the poorer classes derive much benefit from it, unaccustomed as they are to the use. The society for the encouragement of manufactures have produced this important change by offering proper premiums, and carpets are now sold for 7 and 12 sous per square foot.

There is a manufactory in Paris where the richest cashmere brocades and gold tissues are made for the Levant market. "They are so superb and costly, says a French paper, "that I am rejoiced they are woven by us and used in Turkey."

Belzoni the Traveller.

London, September 6.

Mr. Belzoni.—Our readers may probably recollect, that about three weeks ago we inserted an extract, with which we had been favoured, of a letter from Mr. Belzoni, giving an account of the failure of his projected enterprize in regard to passing from Fez across the Atlandian range of hills to Tafilet, and thence by the caravan to Timbuctoo. As our readers, we doubt not, are equally interested with ourselves in the welfare of this intrepid and persevering traveller, we have great pleasure in communicating the latest intelligence which has been received from Mr. Belzoni. Upon leaving Gibraltar he proceeded first to Madeira, and by letters which were received from him, dated the 15th of July, it was then his intention to embark for Santa Cruz, a Moorish sea port a little to the southward of Morocco, and thence to cross the Great Desart on his way to Timbuctoo; and if he did not succeed in that quarter, he should try another and another till he did succeed. Letters have since arrived from him, dated at Tenerife on the 25th of July, of which the following are extracts:—

"I have to lament my misfortune in meeting with such a reverse, after my hopes had been so highly raised, and the serious expense I had incurred, as well as the loss of so much precious time. My life is certainly a good deal endangered; and, as I told you in my former letter, now that the Moors see that I have no protection, they will act towards me as they please. But, armed with the perseverance which has always conducted me to the accomplishment of my wishes, I shall not hope to arrive at a happy end of this journey; and the more obstacles which may be put in my way, and the more obstacles which may be put in my way, and the more obstacles which may be put in my way, I shall endeavour to remove. Say little in any final success. Happen what may, I shall not turn my face towards Europe till I shall reach the intended point, and as none of the other expeditions into Africa mention either the Niger or Timbuctoo, to be their point of destination, I shall endeavour to be that point of destination, I shall endeavour to be their point of destination, I shall endeavour to be that point of destination, I shall make bold to aim at those places, in the hope of not intruding upon the ground of other travellers. I trust, indeed, that the true Englishman, whose character I have so long studied, will be the Judge of my conduct; and, should I prove successful, he will, I am confident, impartially bestow on me the reward of my labours.

For that I have long dedicated, and all I can insist to dedicate my efforts, well assured that my endeavours to gain me good wishes, in spite of calumny and misrepresentation, will finally be successful. I thank God I never was in a better state of health than at the present moment. I beg to be kindly remembered to ——; I shall write to him as soon as I have any thing of importance to communicate. The people I am going among, I am told, are chiefly savages; so much the better—for if I meet with the worst in the be the better—for if I meet with the worst in the beginning, I shall have better fortune to encounter afterwards."

The reason of Mr. Belzoni's leaving when he was just at the point of setting out from Fez, and the sudden change in the Emperor's determination concerning him, have not yet been explained; various causes have been assigned—among which are the unsettled state of the Soudan territory, and the commercial jealousy of the Moorish and Jewish merchants. But one thing is quite clear, that Mr. Belzoni was not demanded to leave Fez for any fault committed by him; of this we have ample and decisive proof in the following letter, which has been communicated to our perusal. It was written in Arabic by Sidi Bengelel, the Chief Minister to the Emperor of Morocco, to the British Consul at Gibraltar, and kindly translated into English by Mr. Salame:—

"Know ye, that we had written other letters to you respecting the Great Christian who came to us, desiring permission of our Lord, the ever victorious, for his permission of our Lord, the ever victorious, for leave to proceed to the Negro country; and that we had sent him unto the Majesty, to crave permission of our Lord, the ever victorious, for leave to see him; and obtained the Majesty's leave to see him; and obtained the Majesty's leave to see him; and obtained the Majesty's

(who was then M. de Talleyrand,) was quitting Murat's house at the moment when the Duke of Rovigo entered it. The latter received orders to send a strong detachment of gendarmerie (of which he was Colonel,) to garrison Vincennes —It was only at that place that he knew that this was on account of the Duke of Enghien. The following is his own account of the horrible trial :

"The commission assembled in the great hall of the inhabited part of the castle. The doors of the hall were open, and free for all those who might repair to it of that hour. It was even so well filled that I had some difficulty, having arrived one of the last, to penetrate behind the seat of the President, where, however, I succeeded in placing myself, being anxious to hear the debates on that trial. I arrived too late to see the Prince enter. The discussion had already commenced with much animation. The Duke of Enghien was repelling with indignation, the intention imputed to him of participating in an act of assassination, and from what I heard on the spot, he had just admitted that he was not to re-enter France, except sword in hand By the warmth with which he addressed his judges, it was easy to see that he had no suspicion whatever of the issue which his trial would have.—The Commission allowed him to speak as long as he pleased; and when he had done, it was observed to him, that either he did not know his situation, or that he did not deign to answer the questions put to him; that he confined himself to the birth and glory of his ancestors, and that he would do better to adopt another system of defence. It was added, that it was not probable that he should be so ignorant as he asserted, of what was passing in France, when not only the place which he inhabited, but France and all Europe were occupied with it; that it never would be credited that he was indifferent to events, all the results of which would tend to his benefit; that this was too unlikely not to be observed to him; that he was therefore requested to reflect upon it, and that it might become serious. The Duke of Enghien, after a moment's silence, replied in a grave tone—'Sir, I understand you very well; my intention was not to remain indifferent to those events. I had asked England for service in her armies, and she had sent me for answer that she would not give me any, but that I should remain on the Rhine, where I should have immediately a part to play, and I was waiting. Sir, I have nothing more to tell you.' Such was verbatim the answer of the Prince. I wrote it down instantly; I quote it at present from memory, but it was so deeply engraved on my mind, that I do not believe I have forgotten one single syllable. The Commission thinking itself sufficiently informed, closed the discussion & caused the hall to be emptied of the spectators, in order to deliberate in private. I retired with the officers of my corps, who, like me, had been present during the proceeding, and I joined the troops who were on the esplanade of the Castle. The Commission deliberated for a considerable time. It was only two hours after the evacuation of the hall that the sentence was known. The officer who commanded the infantry of my legion came to tell me, with deep emotion, that he had been asked for a picket of men to execute the sentence of the Military Commission. Give it, said I. 'But where shall I station it ?'—'Where you will be sure to wound no one.' After having well examined the localities, the officer chose the Castle ditch, as the best place for wounding nobody. There was no other motive for preference. The Duke of Enghien was conducted to it through the staircase of the entrance tower on the side of the Park. He heard his sentence there (in the ditch) and it was executed."

The Duke of Rovigo defends himself, with much indignation, against the charge of having ordered a lantern to the breast of the Prince, and taken his spoils. "The following fact," says the Quotidienne, "throws some light on the men who advised or favoured the execution of the murder."

"After the execution of the sentence, I sent back the troops to their respective cantonments, and resumed the way to Paris. I approached the turnpike, when I met Mr. Real, who was going to Vincennes in the costume of a Counsellor of State. I asked him where he was going ?—'To Vincennes,' he replied. 'I received orders yesterday to go there to interrogate the Duke of Enghien.' I related to him what had taken place, and he appeared as much surprised as I had been at what he told me. I began to reflect; my meeting with the minister of Foreign Relations, (Talleyrand) at General Murat's came back to my mind, and I commenced doubting that the death of the Duke of Enghien had been the work of the First Consul. Mr. Real returned to Paris, and I went to Malmaison to give the first Consul an account of what I had seen. I arrived at eleven o'clock.

"The First Consul could not conceive that the Duke should have been tried before the arrival of Counsellor Real. He fixed upon me his lynx's eyes, and repeated :—'There is something in this which I do not understand. That the Commission should have pronounced sentence, on the confession made by the Duke of Enghien does not astonish me. But that confession has been obtained when the trial began, and ought not to have been asked till after Mr. Real should have interrogated him on a point which it was important to clear up. There is something in this which goes beyond me. Here is a crime which leads to nothing, but only tends to make me odious."

The Duke of Rovigo then adds, that it was only when he became Minister of Police that he unfolded the whole mystery, and learned that Pichegru was the mysterious individual who had attended the conferences of the conspirators, whilst the First Consul had been made to believe that it was the Duke of Enghien, and that when Bonaparte had been informed by Mr. Real of the fact, he had exclaimed—"Ah! wretch, Talleyrand, what hast thou made me do!" The extract, after charging this Minister with having been the author of the imposition practised on the First Consul, and the cause of the hurry with which the trial and execution took place, without the knowledge of Bonaparte, closes with this remarkable passage :

"It is time that every one should be known as the father of his own works It has been seen what has been my share in this sanguinary drama, I will admit of no other, and I shall not suffer odious suspicions to rest on my head, whilst the real culprits stalk proudly beneath the honours with which they are invested."

ACCOUNT OF THE ESQUIMAUX INDIANS.

(Concluded from our last.)

To beguile the tedious time, our countrymen occasionally lived in tents, on shore, and hunted, shot, and fished for the general consumption. Rein-deer were sometimes killed; the carcass of the largest weighed (without offal) 150 lbs. These were very acceptable to the ships' companies; but their fresh provisions were not always so dainty as venison. The hearts livers, and kidneys of whales and walruses (brought by the Esquimaux) were not irreconcileable to European palates, and many a hearty meal was made on these not very delicate dishes. According to the report of the natives, there were rein-deer on the large island towards the north. No musk oxen were seen in any part; and from the same authority it was gather ed that they only appeared to the westward of the longitude to which the Expedition penetrated.

Of birds there were prodigious numbers; but their flesh was of a fishy unpleasant taste; it was made nevertheless, to serve at times, to vary the Arctic cuisine.

In these journeys, and their continual migrations, the value of the Esquimaux dog is witnessed. These strong and hardy animals draw the country sledges at the rate of five miles, and more, an hour. Nor is this performed with a light weight attached to them. Eight of them will draw three or four persons with ease and speed in this manner. On one occasion an anchor and stock, weighing about a ton, was dragged to its destination by fifteen or sixteen of them; and, generally speaking, they are fully equal to a load of one hundred weight per dog.

They are also bold and vigorous in the chace. With them the Esquimaux hunts the Great White Polar Bear; and some of those brought to England carry the scars of their prowess in this way. They seize their adversary by his long shaggy hair, worry and detain him till their masters come up with their spears to end the conflict.

Those in the ships, twelve or fourteen in number, are large creatures of various colours, tan, grey, but mostly black, with white spots over the eyes and on the feet, and tip of the tail. They are exceedingly fierce, and more like wolves than dogs. They do not bark, but snarl, growl, and howl in a savage manner. A good many died in consequence of the heat, on their way to England; and though Wednesday was a cold October day, the survivors were panting as if they had exhausted themselves with running. In the Hecla was one dog bred between the Esquimaux dog and a lurcher taken out from this country.—She had as female pups, and the specimen we saw is now a fine powerful animal, and quite tame. It gave a singular proof of its sagacity in the river: a lighter came along-side with some casks of fresh water, into which it immediately leapt over the side, and ran from cask to cask, trying to get its head into a bung-hole. This being impossible, one of the men good humouredly drew a bowl full for it, which it despatched with evident delight, and then begged for another draught. This it also obtained, drank it nearly all, and with signs of gratification and thankfulness made its way back into the ship.

On their native soil, however, these ferocious animals are often destroyed by the still more ferocious wolves. The latter hunt in packs and even drag the dogs from the huts to devour them. Attracted by the scent, they were always prowling about our vessels, and daringly carried off whatever came in their way. Thirteen of them were seen in one pack; all of which were trapped and slain. It was of these the hungry Esquimaux made their dinners. At one time they bore away a dog from the Fury, in spite of the pursuit of the men.

The animals which may be enumerated besides, are bears, foxes, rein-deer, hares, lemmings, the white ermine, and the marmot.

The birds are the swan, the beautiful king duck, the eider duck, the long tailed duck, the silver Arctic duck, &c. Gulls of every kind, the Arctic diver, the loon, the red-throat, guillemots, the snow bunting, the ptarmigan; ravens, snowy owls, and hawks; birds of song, with a short low chirping note, the Siberian lark and the Lapland finch.

The insect creation is very limited. There are about six species of flies; the mosquito—very troublesome, but existing only about one month; the wild bee, i. e. the large black and not our hive-bee; the spider; the butter-fly, a small kind of the gold-n, and the white moth.

The water teems, as we have stated, with molusca, the food of the enormous whale and other species of fish. There is also another minute creature in extraordinary abundance; we mean the small shrimp, which is known by the name of the sea-louse. These performed a very curious office to the naturalist in the expedition, and their uneasiness was very drolly discovered. An officer, one day, was desirous of preparing a Solan goose for cooking, and in order to reduce its saltness, he plunged it through an ice hole into the water; but alas! next morning, when the goose was to be drawn up for spitting, nothing but the skeleton appeared. The sea-lice had picked his bones as clean as any anatomist could have scraped them, and thus finely prepared it for any collection of natural history which might want such a specimen! The hunt was not lost, for, after this time, whatever skeletons or bones required polishing, were submitted to the lice operators, and so diligent were they in executing the task confided to them, that they would eat a sea-horse's head clean in a couple of nights.

On leaving the Esquimaux, some muskets of small worth were given them; and one native and his wife were willing to have come to England, but the trouble and uncertainty of restoring them to their own country prevented their voyage. An axe, and still better, a saw, would console them for any disappointment.

Since writing this account, and on looking over our brief memoranda, &c. we are reminded of right or ten specimens of fossils and minerals. A dark piece of iron pyrites is that with which the natives strike sparks among dry moss, to light their fires. We have also on our desk a part of the yolk of a sea bird's egg, as prepared by the Esquimaux to keep for food. It is as hard and transparent as amber, for which it might readily be mistaken. A model of a canoe, ingeniously made by a native, and only fourteen inches long, is also among our stores. It does credit to their skill; but not so much as a female's reticule (if we may call it) made of duck's feet, curiously disposed in a neat circular shape, and the toes hanging out like tags or tassels. This is a very singular piece of workmanship, and looks well. Small bottles of matting, woven close, and of an elegant form, are among their manufactures; and the stringing, on threads of fish fibres of the teeth of foxes, wolves, &c. for female ornaments, does not always betray a bad taste, however common the materials are. Images of bone an inch or an inch and a half long, affords no high notion of the native talents for carving in ivory—they just so far resemble the human shape as to show they were meant to represent it.

One petrifaction of the back bone of a fish is in our collection, and extremely curious.

DESTRUCTION OF SCIO.

The following, drawn from the French Annuaire for 1823, is one of the most striking Sketches we have seen of the terrible outrage, and atrocity to which it alludes.

In the account of the destruction of Scio, there are some affecting particulars, which deserve to be mentioned. After relating the principal incidents of the landing of the Turks on the island, and of the catastrophe which immediately ensued, the writer continues:—"At length the flourishing, the opulent Scio, the paradise of the Greeks, has ceased to exist. The charming country seats, which rendered it so remarkable among all the islands of the Archipelago, the beautiful edifices in the town, the academy, the library, the noble cathedrals of Saint Anargyrosto, of Saint Victor, of the Apostles, eighty six churches, and more than forty villages, had been consumed by the flames Thermain remained at Scio, on the 10th of May (thirty five days after the Turkish landing) only the Catholics, spared at the solicitation of the Consuls, and in consideration of their hatred for the Greeks; and a few thousand wretches escaped from massacre and concealed in the mountains. Fifteen or twenty thousand succeeded in making their escape to the islands of Samos, Tine, and Hydra. More than twenty five thousand had been put to the sword, drowned, and burned, or had died of fatigue, had starved to death, or perished of diseases, caught from the infection of so many bodies lying in the streets. All the rest were reduced to slavery according to the register of the Turkish Custom House, there had been up to the 25th of May, 1822, FORTY ONE THOUSAND individuals entered at that office, to pay duties as slaves sold! After the first dictates of avarice were satisfied, fanatical mussulmans were seen to buy these miserable Christians, for the purpose of exercising all the refinements of cruelty in putting them to a lingering death. The port was filled with transport vessels, into which were driven indiscriminately, and tied with ropes, young girls, ladies of wealthy families and their children, to be carried to the slave markets in Asia. Many of these unhappy persons died in agonies of horror of what they already suffered or saw too plainly before them. Those, who attempted by starvation to procure their release, were forced with blows to take food. Many young women, lately the boast and ornament of the city, found the means, by stabbing each other, to escape the fate which awaited them For many months, the market of Smyrna was filled with goods of various kinds, clothing, and valuable furniture from the sack of Scio, sold in lots with their late owners. This recital, continues the French author, will make our readers shudder; but the principal features of it are from an eye witness—the Editor of the Oriental Spectator—who wrote under the eyes of a Pacha; and who is habitually favourable to the cause of the Greeks. We have presented but a feeble sketch of the scenes that passed"

ENGLAND.

The "Holy Alliance"! and, the States of South America.

(From the Courier of Nov. 10th.)

It seems strange that any persons should view our sentiments upon the South American States as breathing either war or defiance. It is a policy upon which, we contend, other European powers have no right to interfere with us—nor do we pretend to interfere with them. They may, or they may not, acknowledge and treat with those States; that is their business. But the cannot justly complain of our exercising the same privilege. And here, in order to clear away in limine the ground of some objections that have been urged, and which will be put to bear this in mind—that it we must desire the public to bear this in mind—that it we not the case of an incipient insurrection of the colonies against the parent state—that it is not a struggle in which the power of one side is balanced by the power of the other, issue doubtful—it is not a case in which a third party, stepping in, turns the scale, and decides the conflict in favour of the side to which it carries its weight. It bears no resemblance to the case of our American Colonies, when France and Spain interfered; the conflict is decided—the issue is arrived—and Spain is not more divided by the seas from her ancient possessions, than she is by the difference of their respective institutions; nor has she more ence of their respective governments, than we have ever France.—Sovereignty over them than we have ever France.—Sovereignty over them can we have ever France.—Though we continued to bear the empty title of her King. The question has been well put by one of our contemporaries,—"As to the independence, the question is at rest—the States are free—the acknowledgement by Spain is not worth a straw to England—all colonies are, de jure, Sovereign States, the moment in which they achieve their independence, de facto. This, for the clearest of all reasons, because the foundation of their allegiance is their enjoyment of protection from the parent state. When the colonists cease to want protection, they are no longer bound to pay the price of it; and this is one of a class of cases in which power becomes the evidence of right."

This is what we wish to lay down in limine. The South American States are to all intents and purposes free and ind pendent States, with which any other State may treat and negociate, and form alliance, with out any violation of treaty or good faith towards any other power

But it is said, Spain has not acknowledged their independence, and therefore 'you are guilty of an attack upon her sovereignty.' Indeed! Let us see the absurdity to which this position would lead. The South American States might have established, as they have their independence—might have exercised all the acts of a sovereign and independent power—might have entered into commercial and political relations with other nations—Spain would not be able to take any step, to do any act, calculated to resume her former authority over the states, or to arrest for a moment the march and exercise of their independence—navy might remain totally inactive and supine; yet, because she refused to acknowledge them as free States, we are to refuse to acknowledge them as free States, we are to refuse all intercourse, all political relations with them whatever! Why, does not every one see the utter absurdity and childishness of such reasoning, if reasoning it can be called?

But we are told of a Congress of European Powers to settle the fate of the American colonies. We should like to see what sort of a preamble such a Congress would draw up to their deliberations.—"Wherens, a certain tract of country, some thousands of miles distant from Europe, containing about 470,000 square leagues, and a population of seventeen millions, has determined that it will be governed by its own institutions, and will no longer continue in dependence, (which they do not want, and which is injurious to their best interests,) upon a nation containing 25,000 square leagues, and ten millions of inhabitants; We the powers of Europe, are assembled in Congress to devise the best means of putting an end to so unsatisfactory a situation of affairs, and of concluding some arrangement that shall be more congenial to the policy, &c. &c. !!" Congresses may deliberate and reciderate, pass protocol upon protocol, multiply confference upon conference, but what would the seventeen millions on the other side of the Atlantic say ?—Or what means would the Congress possess of enforcing their edicts ? To frame resolutions which you have no means of executing, or to use an old proverb, "to shew your teeth where you cannot bite," is, in private concerns, not a very wise proceeding; but in public matters, in the intercourse between nations, not only idle, but positively dangerous. We think the Continental Powers will pause before they hold any such Congress; but whether they do or not, we shall neither be a party to it, nor send a Minister to it. We shall leave the Continental Powers to act as they like, whilst we shall act as we think best for our own interests.—The American States have achieved their emancipation —achieved it by their own efforts—without foreign aid, foreign counsels, or foreign encouragement. We, who, of all nations, could have rendered them the most powerful assistance, did not, through our government, express even a wish in their favour. They fought, the fight, they gained the victory without us. Their independence is established—the tide cannot be rolled back. The American States are free sovereign states with which any nation is at liberty to treat without affording any just grounds of offence or complaint to any other power.

We have sent Consuls and Commissioners—other powers may, and probably will, do the same. We call this step a de facto acknowledgement of the sovereignty of the American States—and we may expect further, that a higher diplomatic character will either be sent out, or that some one of the Commissioners has or will have, the power of taking upon himself that character, as soon as the different Consuls have made their reports upon the situation and feelings of the states to which they have been respectively sent.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

For the Weekly Register.

O there are hours in life's career
Worth mingled years of joy or sorrow;
O there are moments that endear
The worst past, and bless the morrow!
When in the pure and fervid heart
The tide of grateful love is glowing;
When, though no fair'ring voice depart,
Affection's gentle flow is flowing.

O, 'twas an hour I ho'd to greet,
That fancied burst of joy confessing!
O, 'twas a moment bright and sweet,
Which memory lingers o'er in blessing!
Yes, hope may vanish and most sad,
The sweetest, best, in bliss and vision;
Yet, memory plead's, will o'er it bend,
And love shall glow 'mid joys Elysian.

Yes, it did gild my early morn,
And woke the beam of bliss that's shining—
With loveliest radiance shall adorn
The twilight glow of life declining.
The firm, the tender chain, that ties
Heart to heart, no fate can sever—
No—that chain within the skies
Is fast and there it binds forever!

TRADE OF THE COLONY.

From the Quebec Gazette.

	Vessels.	Tonnage.	Men.	Emigrants.
1822	612	145,953	6,450	10,468
1823	569	132,634	6,130	10,258
Difference in favor of 1822.	43	13,319	320	210

At the commencement of the season, from the quantity of timber on hand, the number of vessels, and the extent of trade generally, it was thought, would exceed that of the last year. The accounts reaching home about midsummer of a glut of timber at Quebec, still favoured the supposition, and the prices rose; but the vessels not arriving in the autumn, a very great, but in this country not unusual, fall, in the prices of timber took place—and near the close of the season, pine was we saw as 2½d per cubic foot, a price which can hardly be supposed to cover the charges of preparing it, and transporting it to the place of shipment.

The number of vessels built this year, is only one more than in the last; in tons an excess of 854. This branch of commerce, for which we are so advantageously situated, is not carried on to the extent which might be expected. It is perhaps not generally known, that in New-Brunswick, at the Port of St. John's alone, in the same period, 42 Ships, Brigs and Schooners carrying 8002 Tons, were registered. Our winters, in which many of the labouring classes are idle, and therefore labour is low, would lead us to think that they might be built as cheap here as any where; but individual interest, where capital exists, is always the best judge of such speculations. We are glad to find that something more in this way is likely to be done this season.

On comparing the imports of dutiable merchandize, we find them somewhat greater this year than last, and in reality, from the depreciation in value of most of the articles, they must have exceeded in quantity those of last year, This increase may be attributed to the progress of our population, which doubles in every twenty years. The Revenue, owing to the operation of the 3d Geo. IV. Chap. 119, & Canada Trade Act, must have been materially increased.

The value of all imported merchandize, however, is greater last year than this, by £5323 2s—this year's amounting to £737,896,740, and last year's being £742,919 9s. 4d.

Of Wines, the importation of such as are in great est demand, exceeds that of last year by 84.316 gals a very unusual thing, we suppose, be ng more than double that of last year. The 3d Geo IV. Chap. 45. permitting the importation of Wines direct from foreign parts, under much more favourable circumstances than heretofore, may account for this, which however, is not a fair criterion of the consumption, but may be the consequence of speculation in a new channel. As a corroboration of this, the last year's importation of French wines, was only 4925 gals. that of this year is 27,160 gals.

In Brandy, probably from the same cause, the increase has been as marked; the importation of last year being 14,304 gallons only, and that of this year 59,308 gallons, an increase of about 275 per-cent.

In Rum, the decrease is 317.278 gallons, or about 25 per cent, this year's importation amounting to 970-265 gals. and last year's to 1,287,543 gals.

In Sugars, the difference is not worthy of notice.

In Teas, the importation of last year was 134,379lbs. of this year it is only 70.9251 a forming but an inconsiderably small portion of the actual consumption of the country. This subject, we are glad to see, has attracted the attention of the Legislatures of both Provinces, and some remedy to an evil equally detrimental to the interests of the Mother Country and the Colony, may be looked for in consequence.

In Molasses, there is an out 300 per cent in favour of last year's importation.—Dec. 31st.

Crown and Clergy Reserves of the Lower Province.

(From Neilson's Quebec Gazette.)

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

Sketch of the substance of the Debates.

30th December, 1823

The Hon. Mr. Papineau, after the second reading of the Bill from the Legislative Council providing for the making of roads on the Crown and Clergy Reserves, observed that if this House had lost all hopes of ever seeing a remedy for the evils resulting from the interposition of these Reserves between the lots granted for actual settlement, it would perhaps be well to adopt the provisions of the Bill as affording some palliative for these evils. For his part he was of opinion that while this evil continued, it was needless to talk about the settlement of the country. There never was offered an insuperable obstacle. Those who chose to plan had no idea of the difficulties of a first settlement where the utmost efforts of every one were not more than sufficient to do the share of labour upon the land in his own occupation. He felt no objection to the free and Common Soccage Tenure; but with these reserves it was incomparably more unfavorable to the actual settler than the seigneurial tenure. The House, he said, ought to be aware of giving its sanction to the system as it now stands. There was reason to believe that representations might be successful He asked how it happened that the administration of Upper Canada had obtained a favourable change with respect to these reserves; and that our colonial administration had not obtained the same? he believed representations had been made to the Province but without complete success; they ought to have been repeated yearly, and monthly, if it was necessary; for so long as these evils continued to exist, among the settlements to be repeated, that it was in vain to seek for any other cause of the slow progress of our settlements. A similar system had never been thought of in any other country than Canada. It was time, however, to attend seriously to this matter; hitherto the vacant seigneurial lands have been sufficient for the new settlements indispensable to our own increasing population. Seigneurial land in situation fit for cultivation is now nearly all taken up. He trusted that the immense tracts of crown lands still unsettled in this Province would not always continue to be made unfit for settlement by Legislative provision. He could not continue—all ought to unite in obtaining as speedy a remedy as possible, and the repeal of the clause of the Act 31st Geo III was the only effectual one. It showed lamentable ignorance of the country, to have imagined that a revenue would ever be derived from these Reserves. While the immense Continent of North America was, comparatively speaking, still a wilderness, calling only for the labour of man to make it produce, it was impossible that any labourer could be found, or indeed one to be able to pay rent for unimproved land. During the last twenty five years these lands had presented a nuisance to the settler, without in fact, giving any Revenue. A favorable lot for carrying off lumber, a Mill seat, and other lots having such advantages having been leased and the rent paid; but this was all—and all that ever could be paid. It was strange, he said, to see these lands, which would never give any Revenue, and were so hurtful to the country, had already become an apple of discord between two of the Protestant Churches As to the question of right, he conceived that Protestant Ministers of all denominations had an equal right to a share of them. He trusted that the axe would be laid to the foot of the tree, and that some steps would be taken by the House, on the present occasion, to hasten the application of the only effectual remedy for the evil, which had occasioned the Bill's being sent down from the Council.

Mr Taschereau.—Said he entirely concurred with the Hon. Member, as to the evils resulting from the interposition of the Reserves among the lots granted for actual settlement; but he conceived that it was not proper because no complete cure could be effected at present that no remedy, no relief, was at all to be afforded. The people of the Town-ships, he had reason to believe, wished for the Bill; the matter has been three years before the House; something similar had passed the House last year, but it was lost in the Council, it forming part of another Bill, and it having been thought that this provision was of a description that required to be submitted to Parliament, before it became a law, He would join in any representations for effectual relief; in the mean time we ought to do all we can. The Bill may even be made temporary The Hon. Member explained its contents, which provided that the roads on the unoccupied Crown and Clergy Reserves should be made by the joint labour of the township, according to the prorata perbasa of the Grand Voyer: the value of the labour to be reimbursed out of the rent, when Reserves were leased. The treasurers are of course bound to make the roads on the leased lots He was of opinion that the Bill ought to be referred to a Committee of the whole House; which was agreed to, without a division.

Mr. RUTTAN from the Committee, to whom was referred the Petition of the Inhabitants of the Township of Aspbodel and Otonabee, reported as follows.

To the Honorable the Commons House of Assembly in Provincial Parliament assembled, the Committee to whom was referred the Petition of the Inhabitants of the Townships of Asphodel and Otonabee, in the Newcastle District, beg leave to report that a Bridge across the River Trent, at the lower end of the Rice Lake, the point at which the Petitioners communicate is essentially necessary, not only to obviate the difficulties complained of in the Petition, but also for the encouragement of others, who, in the event of the attainment of this object, will be induced to settle in the rear of those waters. The only objection to which your Committee are assured, is the length of time, every year, that the Inhabitants in that part of the Country are deprived of all communication with the Old Settlements and Lake Ontario, such communication being an object of the first importance to Emigrants thrown upon their own resources in a new country.—Taking this view of the subject, and taking also into consideration the great exertions which the present few settlers will have to make in accomplishing an object, which, with all of public and future advantage, the Petitioners are nevertheless, from their peculiar circumstances, compelled to undertake alone, Your Committee would not feel justified, did they not recommend the prayer of your petitioners to your most favorable consideration.

(Signed) HENRY RUTTAN,
CHAIRMAN.

UPPER CANADA.

It is with much pleasure we announce to our readers that the Session of Parliament for this Province, which has been sitting since the 4th December, was brought to a close on Saturday last, by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, who delivered the following

SPEECH:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

The conclusion of the Public Business, which is now disposed of by your assembled attendance enables me to dispense with your further attendance in Provincial Parliament; I most cordially put an end to this Session without assuring you how fully sensible I am of the Judgment and temper which have governed your Councils, and given efficacy to your various and extensive labours.

The valuable Representations which you have addressed to your Sovereign, on matters of no ordinary importance to the interests of your Country, afford a gratifying proof of your candid and anxious co-operation in the prosecution of your Legislative Duties.

You are sufficiently aware that the measure of success which may attend your petitions, must be governed by a view of various, and, perhaps, conflicting interests; but it will be no less agreeable to your Sovereign than it must be satisfactory to the People of this Province, to observe the visible attention with which you have recorded every question that can affect the welfare and security of your Country.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you in His Majesty's name for the supplies which you have granted me for the ordinary exigencies of the year, and for the prudence that you have manifested in guarding against temporary inconvenience to the Public Service, by authorizing a Loan in anticipation of the payments expected from Quebec; and you may be assured that the repeated testimonies which I have received of your confidence and support shall continue to be met on my part with a disposition to justify your reliance, by a regular and economical administration of the Revenue.

Honorable Gentlemen and Gentlemen,

I am happy to concur with you in affording countenance and support to the first efforts of a spirit of enterprize which has been directed to the improvement of our Internal Navigation, and which affords the most pleasing and convincing proof of increasing intelligence and wealth.

The measures by which you propose to render effectual the acts formerly passed for subjecting all the granted Lands in this Province to a moderate, but indiscriminating Assessment, have my decided concurrence of my own judgment, and I have reason to believe they will be found perfectly to accord with the opinion of His Majesty's Government

Fully convinced of the necessity of some measure to counteract the evils occasioned by unoccupied and neglected Lands, and acceding entirely to the principle of the provisions which you have prepared I have every hope that the reference for His Majesty's consideration, which has appeared to me proper, will result in the declaration of the Royal Assent.

The Provisions you have made for the better collection of the Revenue, and for obtaining a more accurate Census of the Population, will, I trust, be found effectual.

Entertain an ardent hope that, under the protection of Divine Providence, the permanent support which you have contributed, in your amendments of the Common School Act to the cause of Religious instruction and the general dissemination of Knowledge, will be productive of the happiest effects. Such objects the wisest and the most virtuous will best appreciate, and the attention you have given to them will confer lasting honour on yourselves

I cannot refrain from adverting to the present tranquil and happy state of this Province, and pointing out to your observation how materially that harmony and public spirit, which have prevailed in the Councils of the Legislature, have led to a mutual confidence between the Government and the People, and produced a highly favorable influence both on the general prosperity and on the contentment and happiness of private life.

You well know how greatly individual security, comfort, and convenience, as well as the whole interior order and economy of a Country depend on the just fulfilment of those ordinary duties which the Law requires; and I am persuaded that in your respective Counties, you will be desirous to impress this so important upon the minds of those who look up to you as example or are influenced by your advice.

Editorial Commentary.

THE fourth, and most probably the last, Session of the Eighth Parliament of this Province closed its arduous labours on Monday, after a sitting of something more than ten weeks, in which a great quantity of important business has been transacted.—The Speech of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, on the Prorogation, will be read with deep interest.—It abounds with warm and generous feeling, and noble sentiment.—Nothing can be more gratifying than the continued harmony which prevails between the different branches of this Legislature. It presents a fine spectacle to other Governments, and shews how much how very much, may be gained by mutual confidence.—This Province, indeed, seems to want nothing but JUSTICE in the regulation and payment of its due share of the Import Duties from the Lower Provinces, to be most fortunately and happily situated.—there is a great deal of good sense, talent and genuine worth, without any non-sensical flash or meretricious glare, amongst the people, and their Representatives, who go about their business like men sincerely determined to do their duty without noise or affectation. Our worthy Governor sees, and knows how to appreciate the excellent qualities of the loyal inhabitants of this Province; and he loves, as the Representative of a BRITISH MONARCH ought ever to do, in the HEARTS of the PEOPLE! We will repeat, what we exclaimed on a former occasion,—Esto perpetua!

We have no foreign news of extraordinary interest this week. Our readers will find a very bold attack, (including fierce defiance) on the privileges of our House of Assembly, in this number of the Register, extracted from the Montreal Gazette. We own we have a strong leaning to take the matter up; but, looking on the FREEDOM of the PRESS as the main pillar of the greatness of the state in England, as we do, and knowing that all health, social, religious, and political, depends upon the unshackled operations of this great engine, we are afraid of running wild and bolting from such narrow confines as the columns of a news paper, if we venture on the discussion at present.—We are, however, pleased to see our brother Editor so vigorous on a subject in which it is natural for us to take a very deep and positive interest.—The privileges of Parliamentary Legislators have often either been discussion, even in Courts of Law, without their true nature and extent being discovered; but, whatever they are, it is certainly very doubtful how far they are transferable to this, or any other colony.—At first sight it seems very absurd that we may freely criticise the conduct of each other, and of candidates at an Election, and even of M. P's, and their measures when out of Session, and that we cannot do the same, with impunity, when assembled together within the walls of a house! Our House of Assembly, it must be allowed, has several times discovered an uncommon tenacity in regard to some of these assumed privileges, and never more so than on the occasion alluded to by the Montreal Gazette,—and it is not to be wondered at, that people at a distance should view with some amusement, such an act of an august Assembly, as that of making a man quit his family and affairs, and travel 400 miles through bad roads in the depth of winter, merely to tell him as one would say to a froward child— You are a very naughty boy, and deserve whipping; and then you must therefore consider yourself as whipped, and go home again.—We have been told by a certain Member, who has lately talked wonderfully at large on the rights and liberties of the people, a vast deal about the magnificence of Parliament!—How little is imagined by the plain, honest people of the country that, when they send one of their circle to represent them in the Assembly, they clothe him with omnipotence, and put a hammer in his hand, whose blow shall be ten times more destructive than that of the famous Scandinavian God Thor!—But enough now; after a while we may take this matter up in good earnest.

We are happy to hear that a LITERARY and HISTORICAL Society has been formed at Quebec. The EARL OF DALHOUSIE presided at the meeting held on the 6th inst. His Lordship is the founder and Patron of this interesting and laudable establishment.

The Courier of the 21st November, announces the death of Lord Bishop of Edinburgh, in consequence of an inflammation of the lungs. His Lordship was in his 70th year. The Sun of the 22d contains an interesting biographical sketch of this Lordship.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

PORTSMOUTH, Sept 22.—We have been visited by a navigator of great celebrity, who is going on his third voyage round the world. We allude to Capt. Otto Von Kotzebue, who accompanied Capt. Krusenstern, and afterwards made a voyage to the South Sea, and North East coast of America, in a small vessel fitted out at the expense of that munificent patron of science, Count Romanzoff. The very interesting account of that expedition, and the discoveries he made, are well known in England, having been translated and published two years ago. On the present occasion he is sent by the Russian Government, and nothing has been neglected to ensure the success of the voyage. The ship was built last winter expressly for the voyage. She is a corvette, called the Enterprise, carrying 24 guns, and manned with a crew of 100 men, and 13 officers, all volunteers from the Imperial Navy; she has on board two Physicians, both well versed in Natural History—one of them is Dr. Escholtz, who accompanied Captain Kotzebue on his late voyage. The Astronomer is Mr. Preisz, Mineralogist, Mr. Lisiz; and professed Naturalist, Mr. Hoffman. These gentlemen are all from the University of Dorpat. Immediately on his arrival, Captain Kotzebue went to London to receive the astronomical instruments and the chronometers, which had been previously ordered by the Imperial Government for this expedition.

The astronomical instruments are made by the celebrated Troughton who is justly considered throughout Europe, as the worthy successor of the celebrated Ramsden, and by Jones, instrument-maker to the Admiralty. The chronometers are by Parkinson and Frodsham, whose improvements in these machines have obtained much well merited praise since their superiority has been so fully proved in several of the late scientific voyages, especially Capt. Parry's, to the Polar Sea, and Capt. Sabine's to the Coast of Africa. As the object of this expedition is said to be not so much for new discoveries, as to make accurate surveys, and most strictly to determine, by astronomical observations, the real situation of many imp rtant points, we cannot but applaud the judgement and liberality of the Imperial Government in applying to the above eminent Artists for the numerous instruments required for the full attainment of the object proposed. Capt. Kotzebue's destination is to Rio Janeiro, round Cape Horn to Kamtschatka, where he will find further instructions, which are to be forwarded over-land through Siberia.

CAPT. PARRY.—The papers state that the story of Capt. Parry's illness arising from the alienation of the affections of Miss Brown, is wholly without foundation. The highest character is given of that young lady, who it appears "secluded herself from society during his absence, looking only to her own bosom, which was feelingly alive to all the appalling dangers its fondest object had to encounter, for that consolation which found alone support her under the painful separation." Capt. Parry's disappointment, and which caused his illness, came from another quarter.

LIFE BOAT.—Mr Wm. Wake, Jun. of Monkwearmouth Shore, England, has just completed a Life-boat of much superior mechanical principles to any yet discovered. Its buoyancy and security in a broken sea exceed every thing of the kind heretofore invented: should the boat, with its crew, be split to pieces, still every part of the frame is rendered, by the regularity of the builder, so particularly buoyant, that there is not the least fear of their safety; or should it be filled to the brim with water, in less than half a minute she is completely clear, by a simple, yet excellent contrivance.

REMARKABLE OCCURRENCE.—In the year 1664, on the 5th December, a boat on the Menin, crossing that strait, with 81 passengers, was upset, and only one passenger, named Hugh Williams, was saved. On the same day, in the year 1775 was upset another boat, containing 30 persons, and every soul perished, with the exception of one, whose name was also Hugh Williams; and on the 5th of August, 1820, a third boat met the same disaster, but the passengers of this were no more than 25, and singular to relate, the whole perished with the exception of one, whose name was Hugh Williams.—Bristol Mercury.

GROANING AND CRYING.—A French Surgeon lately published a long dissertation on the beneficial influence of groaning and crying on the nervous system. He contends that groaning and crying are the two grand operations by which nature allays anguish; and that he has uniformly observed that those patients, who give way to their natural feelings, more speedily recover from accidents and operations than those who imagine it is unworthy a man to betray such symptoms of cowardice and weakness neither to groan nor to cry. He is always pleased by the crying and violent roaring of a patient, during the time he is undergoing a severe surgical operation, because he is satisfied that he will thereby so sooth his system, as to prevent fever, and ensure a favorable termination. From the benefit hysterical and other nervous patients derive from crying or groaning, he supposes that by these processes of nature, the superabundant nervous power is exhausted, and the nervous system is in consequence rendered calm, and even the circulation of the blood greatly diminished. He relates a case of a man, who by means of crying and laughing, reduced the pulse from one hundred and twenty to sixty in the course of two hours. That some patients have a great satisfaction in groaning, and that hysterical patients often experience great relief from crying, are facts which no person will deny. As to reading hypocondriacal subjects, or those who are never happy but when they are under some course of medical or dietetic treatment, the French Surgeon assures them, that they cannot do better than to groan all night, and cry all day. By following this rule, and observing an abstemious diet, a person will effectually escape disease and may prolong life to an incredible extent.

American Militia.—It appears by returns to Congress, that the Militia of the U. S. now amounts to 968,851.

CURIOSITIES OF HISTORY.

ENGLISH MINSTRELS.—The English minstrels, who had formerly been very popular, were suppressed in the reign of Elizabeth as rogues and vagabonds; in feudal times they enjoyed great reputation, but with the advance of moral civilization they were supplanted by the race of ballad-singers, who differed from the minstrels merely from singing without any accompanying instrument. The agitated period prior to the Protector's reign, permitted only political ballad-singing. They subsequently assumed a respectable standing, and their festivals at St. Giles's were attended by the most celebrated wits of the day, among others by Swift, Gay, Bolingbroke, Steele, &c. even Pope, with his aversion to the lower classes, wrote several ballads. The "Beggar's Opera" was originally written to celebrate the marriage of James Chanter and Moll Lay.

There was a young creature amongst the ballad-singers, now known to the world by no other title than Clara, who drew much attention at this time by the sweetness and pathos of her tones. She was the original singer of Black Eyed Susan, and one of the songs which were afterwards introduced into the Beggar's Opera. But her recommendation to particular notice was the circumstance of her having for many years been the object of Lord Bolingbroke's enthusiastic affection. The poor girl strayed for some time, during which his Lordship had not seen her; and it was after that interval, that, having met her, he addressed to her the tender lines, beginning—

"Dear thoughtless Clara, to my verse attend, Believe for once the lover and the friend."

And concludes thus,

"To virtue thus and to thyself restored,
By all admired, by one alone adored;
Be to thy Harry kind and true."

And live for him who more than died for you!"

A series of calamities totally ruined her vocal powers, and she afterwards subsisted by the sale of oranges at the Court of Requests.

Curious Typographical Error.—The celebrated printer, Henri Etienne, son of Robert, (both known in the learned world by the name of Stevkanus,) once engaged in the printing of a splendid quarto Missal. The great number of subscribers seemed likely to make ample compensation for the heavy expense required by the undertaking. After the sheets had been corrected with the utmost care, the work was printed off, splendidly bound, and delivered to the subscribers. It would be impossible to describe the astonishment of the learned printer, when one copy after another, was turned to him, till all were sent back. He required the reason of this extraordinary circumstance, and was informed, that in one place the compositor had put Ici le prete cha a sa culotte (Here the priest will take off his breeches.) instead of calotte, (small black cap,) and the error escaped the correctors of the press. In vain did the poor printer offer to make a cancel: the subscribers, who were almost all ecclesiastics, positively refused to take the work on any terms. This unfortunate affair is said to have been the first and chief cause of the derangement which afterwards caused Henri Etienne to be confined in the Lazaric Hospital at Lyons, where he died in 1598. There is a copy of the Missal with this unlucky error, in the royal library at Paris.

Umbrellas.—"Here will I mention a thing," says Coryat, in his 'Crudities,' 1611—"that, although, perhaps it will seem but frivolous to divers readers that have already travelled in Italy, yet because unto many that neither have been there, nor ever intend to go thither while they live, it will be a mere novelty; I will not let it pass unmentioned," &c. "Many of them do carry either fine things of a great price, that will cost at least a ducat, which they commonly call in the Italian tongue 'umbrellas,' that is, things that minister shadow unto them for shelter against the scorching heat of the sun. These are made of leather, something answerable to the form of a little canopie, and hooped in the inside with divers little wooden hoops that extend the umbrella in a pretty large compass. They are used especially by horsemen, who carry them in their hands when they ride, fastening the end of the handle upon one of their thighs, and they impart so long a shadow unto them, that it keepeth the heat of the sun from the upper part of their bodies."

SOLUTION OF THE MYSTERY.

"Who was the man who beheaded Charles I.?"

George II. on his return to London, after the battle of Dettingen, could with difficulty bear the sight of Lord Stair. He could not forgive his Lordship's reproaching him for the danger which threatened the English army in case the King had obstinately persisted in leaving it in the camp which it occupied, and where it would have been completely defeated, if the Duke de Grammont by his rashness had not saved it. Lord Stair, as proud as he was skilful in war, having soon perceived the King's dislike, and being little disposed to bear the shame of a formal disgrace, was on the point of retiring to his estate in Scotland, when he received the following letter:—

"Mr Lord,

"Your bravery is well known; but will you have the courage to go, to-morrow night, to the entrance of Somerset House, where you will meet one who (if you dare follow him) will conduct you to a part of the town not much frequented, but where you will find one who is impatient to see you, and to discover secrets which are of more importance than you imagine, and which cannot be disclosed in a letter. If you are afraid this should be a plot on your purse, bring nothing valuable about you."

We may conceive his Lordship's surprise at the reading of this note. At first he took it for a trick of some secret enemy; or some affair of gallantry, the heroine of which had probably her reasons for secrecy; however, he determined to go. He therefore, after providing himself with a sword and brace of good pistols, went to Somerset house, and found there a man, who, without speaking, made him a sign to follow him; after walking for about an hour, they came into a street almost empty, where the conductor knocked at the door of a small old house; when it was opened, he said, walk in, my Lord, and the door was shut upon them. The intrepid nobleman, holding his sword in one hand and a pistol in the other, went up the staircase and entered a room; the furniture of which seemed very ancient. "Come in, my Lord, (said a faint voice issuing from a bed) come in, you have nothing to fear; pray sit down in a chair near my bed, and we will converse together." "Very well," said Lord Stair; "but make haste and tell me the reason of this odd adventure." "You are hasty, my Lord, but have patience; lay down your arms, take that seat and come and look at me." His Lordship, surprised at such authoritative commands, to which he was little accustomed, got up, took the lamp, went to the bed, and remained stupified at the sight of an old man, pale and thin, with a long white beard, and whose eyes were instantly fixed upon him. "Look at me, my Lord," said he, "I am still alive; I owe to you the only true pleasure I have tasted these many, many years. Age and misfortunes, have they entirely effaced the marks of one who is nearly related to you, and who is delighted to find in you features which are most dear to him?" His Lordship, still more astonished, looked at the old man, and unable to account for the different emotions which agitated him, spoke not a word. "Stoop," said the old man, "and you will find under my bed a box which contains papers capable of amply repairing the losses which your family have suffered by the civil wars." His Lordship having placed the box upon the bed, sat down again upon the chair. "Here, my Lord," said the old man, "here are copies of the sales of three of the principal seats belonging to your ancestors, which your great grand father sold, or rather pretended to sell, during the troubles. Here are also letters of the pretended buyers, by which you may immediately recover the estates on your arrival in Scotland. Precautions have been taken to prevent any disputes." What was his Lordship's astonishment when he saw these three contracts of estates, which he knew formerly belonged to his house. "Ah!" cried he with transport. "Ah!" who are you, venerable and benevolent old man, to whom I owe more than to my own father? speak, I beg of you! favour me with the name of so generous a benefactor in whom I am so singularly interested, and whose days heaven seems to have prolonged, that he may find in me the most tender and respectful of friends, and the most grateful of men!" "Leave me, my dear Lord," said the old man, in haste. "I am too weak to bear a longer conversation, leave me, I beg; take that box, and bid adieu to an old man, who thinks himself less unfortunate since he has had the happiness of holding you in his arms." "Ah! whoever you are," said Lord Stair, "and whatever reason you may have to conceal the name of so generous a man, can you have the cruelty to oblige him to obey you? To abandon you in such a situation, without friends, without help, without——?" "Stop, my dear Lord! it is with pleasure I see in you such generous sentiments; but I know that your friend, (since you think him worthy of that title) however unfortunate he may be in other respects, is still free from want; therefore, if you wish to oblige me, leave me, my Lord, instantly; nay, do more, and believe me I have a right to demand it; swear to me that you will never come here again, nor ever search after me, unless I send for you." His Lordship seeing by his tone of voice that he would not be refused, promised to obey him; once more embraced him, and then left him with tears in his eyes. On his return home he immediately opened the box, and found a great number of papers which he judged would be of great use to him. Next morning, as he was preparing, (notwithstanding his promise) to return to the old man, he was suddenly stopped by the following letter, sealed with his own arms, and to his extreme surprise, signed George Stair.

"Do not return to me, my dear Lord, for you will not find me. If it had been only to tell you who I am, that is, your great grand father, who has so long been supposed dead, and who justly deserves to be so, I should not have opposed your just desire of knowing your benefactor; but the consequence which I foresaw of so interesting a scene, too much so for my weak age to bear, made me dread to satisfy your curiosity upon circumstances, which far from offering to you so dear and respectable a relation as you imagined, would only have shewn to you a wretch, a monster less worthy of pity than horror!

"My father died a few months after my birth; my mother soon followed him; I was left to the care of an aunt, sister to my father, who brought me up so tenderly that (though she was the cause of my crime) I still retain the most grateful remembrance of her in my heart. I was scarce seventeen, when, struck with indignation at seeing my countrymen armed against their lawful sovereign, I formed the design of tendering to King Charles I the offer of my fortune and sword; but what was my astonishment when at disclosing my intention to my good aunt, I saw her trembling, lift her hands to heaven, and look at me with a kind of horror. Surprised and afflicted at the state she was in, and turning with impatience to know the reason,—"You force me then to tell you," cried she, bursting into tears; "know then that the Prince you are so desirous of serving, is the author of my shame and of your father's death. I was about fifteen, and among the attendants who waited on his mother, when the wretch, imposing on my age and credulity, by the most sacred oaths, contrived to seduce me—in short I was ruined. The perfidious Prince, soon after went to Spain, in hopes of marrying the Infanta. I should have been entirely lost if your father had not come to London: to him I was obliged to owe my misfortune and the consequences which I dreaded. That dear brother, afflicted even to tears, ran immediately to the Queen, obtained permission to take me away, and sent me to one of his seats near Edinburgh, where I remained till I was perfectly recovered. Alas! (added she) I was doomed to see him no more. The grief which he conceived for my undoing, soon killed him; and his worthy wife, who after bringing you into the world, survived only a month. Such, my dear nephew, were the secrets and deplorable motives which reduced me to that obscurity in which I have since lived, and of which you are alone acquainted. Judge now, my friend, if after the care I have taken of your infancy, and the education I have procured you, say, can you devote your fortune and arms to the author of so many calamities, to a barbarian who has carried death into the breasts of your parents, and into mine eternal remorse!" No!" cried I, "by God! no! the wretch is unworthy of life, and he shall die by my hand!" To tell you, my Lord, by what means, as refined as dangerous, my fury against the King continually increasing I was at last able to fulfil my revenge and execrable oath; to tell you all the events, and excess of remorse which soon followed my crime, would be now too grievous in my weak state to relate. Be satisfied with knowing, that you may abhor me as much as I detest myself;—that the executioner of King Charles I who appeared under a mask, was in fact no other than your unworthy, too guilty great grand-father, Sir George Stair."

From 1649 (when Charles I. was beheaded) to 1743 (when the battle of Dettingen was fought) there is an interval of 94 years. On supposition that Sir George Stair was 20 years old when he committed this crime, his age in 1743 must have been 114 years.

The anonymous author of these memoirs adds, that whatever were the emotions of Lord Stair at reading the letter, his first care was to look for the street and the house where he had seen his great grand father; but finding the house empty, he had learnt from the neighbours that it had only been occupied since eight days; that it was never known by whom; that since the preceeding night the servants had abandoned it, furnished as it was; that they could not tell of what the tenant held the house: the proprietor being long since settled in America.

AMERICAN TEA.

From the Boston Evening Gazette.

A letter from W. T. Lewis, of New-Orleans, states, that Mr. Mallet, of Louisiana, had succeeded in raising Green Tea from the seed. His plantation is near the river Amite. The leaves have become considerable in the extent. The climate appears to favour its growth, Mr. M. thinks the shrub might be cultivated with perfect success if proper attention was paid to it. A specimen of the Hyson Tea, thus raised in the south, accompanied Mr. Lewis's letter, and on repeated trials, has been found to be palatable and refreshing. The rolling and twisting operation upon the leaves, and the scenting and flavouring by other sweet scented substances, seemed to be all that was wanting to render it equal to the article we import from Canton. In short, there is every reason to believe, that the United States is as favourable as China for the cultivation of the Tea Plant. The only doubt is, whether in our state of society, the labour of our citizens cannot be more profitably bestowed than in the rearing of this vegetable.

The following is a copy of a letter from Dr. Mitchell, upon the same subject; one that is highly interesting to the growing greatness of our country, and particularly to the state.

New-York, September 16.

Dear Sir,

Your specimen of Hyson Tea, raised near the banks of the River Amite, in Louisiana, was received a few days ago. A number of my friends, female as well as male, have tasted it, and highly approve of it. Last evening I presented a sample to our Lyceum of Natural History, who referred it to a committee. We may expect a good report. I congratulate you on the growing and opening prospect of our country. I am convinced the plant under consideration may be cultivated to perfection in regions much to the north of your state. What a delightful consideration, that we can cultivate this luxurious shrub to any extent we please!

"Offer my compliments to Mr. Mallet; and accept of the assurance of my high and particular respect.

Samuel L. Mitchell.

ARTS AND SCIENCES.

PRESERVATION OF MEAT.

(From the Journal of Science.)

The anticeptic power of charcoal has long been known; the domestic use of it to remove or to disguise a slight taint of meat which has been over kept, is familiar; as is the employment of it to subdue the stench of animal corruption on other circumstances. Trials had been likewise made of it for preserving raw meat for a long time, and preventing instead of merely remedying the decay; but not with complete success, nor satisfactory results. I was therefore desirous of instituting trials of its efficacy, aided by other means for obviating the usual concurrent causes of putrescence; which appear to be moisture, warmth, and the access of atmospheric air.

With this view I procured some vessels to be made of tin, which may be shortly described as canisters, to which a sliding lid is adapted. Into these vessels fumes of charcoal were introduced to expel the air, and substitute for it carbonic acid.—They were then filled with slices of raw meat between layers of dry charcoal powder, and carefully closed, shutting the lid, and then covering the whole with a bladder. In this state the tin vessels were placed in a wine cellar, where they remained for more than eight months, from the beginning of April to the present month (December.)

Four of these vessels were opened on the 6th and the remainder on the 8th December. The meat was found perfectly sound, firm, and sweet; except two small pieces which were soft. In all the rest, in lifting three cords of meat, the fat and the lean were a like good; and, on rubbing or scraping off the charcoal, the raw meat had precisely the appearance which it has when fresh from the shambles. Some of the pieces were dressed and tasted, and were, pronounced to be entirely sound. A few were kept, after being taken out of the charcoal, and did not become tainted until after six days.

The charcoal had imbibed a smell not unlike that of dried meat; but not materially offensive. The meat itself, was entirely free from that smell.

Receipt to make pickle for beef and pork.—Six gallons water, 9lbs. salt, coarse and fine mixed, 9lbs. brown sugar, 3oz. salt petre, 1oz. pearl ash, 1 gallon molasses to every 6 gals. water.

In making a larger or smaller quantity of pickle, the above proportions are to be observed. Boil and skim these ingredients well, and when cold, put them over the beef or pork.

NATURAL HISTORY.

The Hippopotamus.—An officer employed in surveying the coasts and islands to the Eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, states in a letter dated St. Mary's Isle of Madagascar) 20th December, 1822," that a large Hippopotamus came in contact with the Lewes's Cutter, called the Cockburn, and bit out six planks at one bite; the boat immediately filled, but being close to the bank of the river, soon reached the shore. On another occasion, one of them sprung from the bank of the river, open mouthed, at one of the boats, but without doing any injury to either the boat or crew. They were so surprised and terrified by this huge animal that it was under the water before a shot could be fired at it.

Voracity of the Cod Fish.—A short time ago a cod fish of the rock species, was caught in the bay of Lucs, and distributed by a correspondent, on whose accuracy we can rely. In the stomach of this aquatic glutton there were found no fewer than seven lobsters, besides fragments of smaller fish. One of the lobsters weighed 15 ounces, and three of them, which were taken quite alive, looked as fresh and fair as if they had never "crossed the cradle" of the voracious cod. The gastric juice of the cod must of course be extremely powerful; but if the largest lobster had used his fore finger and thumb to as good purpose as we have seen divers of his kind do, he might have easily we think, have sprung a leak under the lower fin of his devourer and, by a trifling exertion of muscular power piloted his way back to Father Ocean.

Strength of Man compared with that of the Horse.

Men exercised in running, outstrip horses, or hold their speed for a longer continuance. In a journey, a man will walk down a horse; and after both have continued to proceed for several days, the horse will be quite tired and the man as fresh as in the beginning. The King's messengers of Ispahan, who are runners by profession, go 108 miles in 14 hours. Hottentots outstrip lions in the chase, and savages who hunt the elk, tire down and take it; and are said to have performed a journey of three thousand six hundred miles in less than six weeks.

Large Turnip.—Ne Plus Ultra.—Isaac Rosset, Jr has left at our office, for the inspection of the curious, an English Turnip, which exceeds in size, any we have seen or heard of; measuring 3 feet 3 inches in circumference; largest diameter 14½ inches; thickness 7 inches—and weighing without the top, 20 pounds, and 2 ounces.—Worcester Spy.

Like a baudrie frae the sea,

Agreeably to the order of the day, the Canvey Bill was read the third time.

On motion of Mr. HAGERMAN, the Canvey Bill was passed and signed by the Speaker.

On motion of Mr WILLSON of Wentworth, the Canvey Bill was sent up to the Honorable the Legislative Council for concurrence.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the House went into Committee on the Report of the Select Committee on the Western District Petition.

The Chairman reported that the Committee had agreed to several Resolutions, which he was directed to submit for the adoption of the House.

The Report was ordered to be received, and it was as

Resolved, 1st—That it is the opinion of this House, that the restrictions under which the Grand Staffs and other bulky commodities of Canada, also admitted into Great Britain, the mart of the markets in other places to which they are permitted to be exported, and the impediments which render the transportation of them, from the remote Districts of Upper Canada, both difficult and expensive, have caused the value of the Staples to those Districts, to be greatly depressed, and have checked their agriculture and consequent prosperity.

Resolved, 2d.—That actual experiment has proved that the Climate and soil of those Districts, are generally well adapted to the culture of Tobacco, which, if encouraged by the certainty of a remunerating price to the grower, would be cultivated in considerable quantities, thereby enabling the inhabitants to pay for the large supplies of manufactures which they require from the Mother Country.

The third resolution was then put, on which the House divided.

Yeas,—Messrs. Jones of Leeds, Burwell, Nichol, Gordon, Clark, McMartin, Pattie, Perkins, Baldwin, White, Boswicke, Casey, Jones of Grenville, Shaver, Morris, McDonell, Wilson of Prince Edward, Hagerman, Kerr, Robinson, and Ruttan—21.

Nays.—Messrs. Wilson of Wentworth, and Walsh.—2.

Question gained, majority nineteen, and it was Resolved, That it has been sufficiently proved, that the Tobacco of Upper Canada, from being cultivated by a free, instead of a slave population, from its easy access to market, and from other causes, costs two-pence half-penny per pound more, when imported into Great Britain, than the same article brought from the United States of America, and consequently that it cannot successfully with it in the Mother Country, where no duties are levied on its importation.

Resolved.—That if an abatement of three pence per pound in favour of Tobacco produced by Upper Canada, were granted on the same duty imposed upon that article in Great Britain, when taken out of the Ware House for consumption, it would afford sufficient encouragement to the grower, and lead, without doubt, to its general cultivation in the Western Districts of the Province.

Resolved.—That such a measure on the part of the Mother Country, would hasten the rapid population of those remote sections of Upper Canada, which though highly favored in regard to climate and soil, remained under many disadvantages of the description so unfavorable for their commencement, and that it would add most materially to the strength and wealth of the Province in general, by the introduction of capital, give an impulse to improvements at every kind, and enabled a much greater portion of its inhabitants to become profitable consumers of the manufactures of Great Britain.

Resolved.—That in the opinion of this House, it is expedient to address his Most Gracious Majesty, praying that His Majesty would recommend to His Parliament to grant the indulgence sought in the foregoing resolution.

Mr. GORDON moved, that it might be resolved that a Copy of the resolutions of this House on the Tobacco Trade of this Province should be sent to the Honorable the Legislative Council, and that that Honorable Body should be requested to concur therein.

On which the House divided

YEAS—Messrs. Jones of Leeds, Burwell, Nichol, Gordon, Clarke, McMartin, Pattie, Peterson, Baldwin, white, Rattan Hagerman, Atty. Gen. Kerr, Robinson, Casey, Wilson of Prince Edward, McDonell, Morris, Shaver, and Berwick. 21.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

From the Montreal Gazette.

It is with feelings of considerable regret and surprise that we have perused the report of the proceedings of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada in relation to Mr. Thompson, the Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette. With surprise, because to us it is more than surprising, that any Legislative body in this Country should display such eagerness in assuming rights which they can lay no claim to, either legally or constitutionally; and with regret, that Mr. Thompson, or any man of education and knowledge sufficient to qualify him for the important situation of Editor of a Newspaper, should so far forget his duty to himself and to his country as to submit to the self arrogated jurisdiction of the House of Assembly—thereby giving the authority of precedent at least to such assumed powers. It is perfectly astonishing, and "past finding out" how the privileges of the Legislative bodies of these Provinces have originated, but above all, how they have become so formidable and irresistible.

We do not, however, wish to enter upon any discussion of this subject at present, but merely to enter our decided protest against its legality in any manner of way, and to warn our brother editors against permitting these tyrants to be the instruments of establishing a right by precedent in a matter where it never did absolutely exist. No person can possibly entertain a higher respect, or a greater veneration for the constituted powers of the country than we do; and none could more earnestly aim at the possibility of bringing their actions or conduct into contempt; but, at the same time, we can see no cause for yielding up rights, which they have no authority to claim of us, and which, if they actually did, could not be the means of clothing them with greater power, honour or consideration. We should therefore be extremely sorry to see the least symptoms of a growing disposition in our Legislative Bodies to notice the public Press in such a way, even if they had a right to do so—which can never lead to any beneficial result. We certainly never wish to see the day when a struggle shall exist between both parties for their rights and privileges; but were that struggle unfortunately to arise, we should declare at once, and our efforts would be in support of that declaration, "the Press must triumph." It would triumph too, and signally for it might as well be attempted to chain up the winds as to stop the motion of that mighty Engine, a Free Press. We are arguing, however, upon a case, happily so remote, that to discuss it further would be merely superfluous labour. But what we deprecate, is a useless collision with a power which cannot be subdued and a ready subserviency on the part of the conductors of that power, which cannot be too much commended.

DOMESTIC.

The rapid increase in the population of the Lower Province is said to be chiefly owing to early marriages, and to the regular habits and comfortable condition of it inhabitants. There is now living at L'Islet, a woman whose age does not exceed 68 years, whose grand daughter is a grand mother.—Quebec Gazette

A few spirited Individuals in the Townships north of the Rice Lake, having volunteered to open a road from the Marmora Iron Works, to communicate with the waters of the Rice Lake, by the way of Ecclar's Mills in Asphodel, at the expence of their own time and labour, merely requiring the assistance of some provisions; a subscription has been entered into to aid of that very meritorious undertaking, and J G Bethune Esquire of Cobourg appointed Treasurer; who will receive any contribution, however small, that may be subscribed in support of the fund for this purpose.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT,

OF

LOWER CANADA.

31st December, 1823.

FEES ON GRANTS OF CROWN LANDS.

In Committee of the whole on the Bill for making it penal to take Fees on Grants of Crown Lands, not authorised by the Royal Instructions.

The Hon. Mr. Papineau, on the reading of the clause which provides that no other fees shall be taken "than those established, or which may hereafter be established by the Royal Instructions, &c." said that he had objected to this part of the clause in the Special Committee, but had been left in a Minority; that he would, nevertheless, now submit to the House the Motion which he had then made. He said there might be doubts whether His Majesty alone, had a right to establish these fees, and there was no necessity of making the acknowledgement in a Bill passed by the House. He was of opinion that such Fees could only be fixed by the Imperial Parliament or the Provincial Legislature. These fees might be made such as to be a tax on the subject, which His Majesty could not impose. The Constitutional Acts provide that the Waste Lands of the Crown may be granted en Fief or in Townships; it says nothing about fees. There are many things, he said, in the Royal Instructions which could not be enforced without the concurrence of the Legislature. He instanced Martial Law. The Colonial Legislature had even made regulations respecting these fees in 1780. If the prerogative vested such power in the Crown it was not the business of the House to ratify it by an acknowledgement. He then proposed to leave out the words objected to as above mentioned.

Mr. Taschereau said that he was opposed to the Bill. If it went to establish fees he would vote for it. As it now stood it tends to make it be believed that there were great abuses with respect to these Fees on the part of the Officers of Government who had no opportunity of justifying themselves. If they did exact fees to which they were not entitled, they ought to be proceeded against in a Court of Justice, where they would have this opportunity, or they might be impeached, when the same opportunity would be allowed them. By the Bill they were condemned without being heard, and the public would be led to believe that they had been guilty of a great crime. The Bill might be rejected in the Legislative Council, still the impression would remain; if it passed there, they would not even then have an opportunity of being heard; he did not think it consistent with Common Justice; the course of extortion was an odious one, and if any public officer had been guilty of it, he certainly must be unworthy of serving His Majesty. The Bill certainly carried with it an aspersion on the character of the party concerned, who were left without means of defence. He repeated that if it went to establish fees he would support it

The Speaker could not agree with the motion of the gentleman who had spoken. He said it would be but a sorry privilege enjoyed by this House if it could not pass a Bill to remedy abuses; every law of this description presupposes an abuse. All that is necessary, is to be assured that the abuses which it is intended to remedy exist. He did not see, in this case, that any reflection could fall upon the officers concerned in receiving the Fees which were complained of. They had been allowed by the Council; whose authority it could not be expected they were to question. It might be that they had even received less than the quantum meruit. The question was, whether what they had received was authorised by the King's Instructions.—The House had proceeded with sufficient deliberation, with perfect publicity, and no one had ever pretended that these fees were authorised by the Instructions. He did not agree in opinion with the Honorable Member for Montreal. He conceived that it was the King's Prerogative to establish reasonable fees, for the granting of the Waste Lands of the Crown: these lands in fact belonged to the Crown, which could impose conditions on its gift. It was always to be presumed that they would be reasonable; in point of fact they had been so.

The instructions in every case shew the greatest wisdom and attention to the interests of the subject and the settlement of the Country. In one instance, the Crown seems to have been deceived; he alluded to the in'ermixture of the Reserves among the lots granted for actual settlement; but he believed that that abuse was now done away with on representations from the Government. The House, he said, in its attempt to remedy abuses, could not be stopped by individual considerations.—Nothing could give him greater pleasure than to see all concerned fully justified; but of the existence of an abuse he could not doubt, and it is the duty of this House to apply the best remedy in its power. He should therefore give his vote for the Bill as it stood.

Mr. Stuart said that the subject seemed to divide itself into two parts. 1st. that respecting fees taken without authority from the King's Instructions 2d. The best way of preventing future. The Hon. Gentleman for Gaspé had spoken to the former the Hon. Member for Montreal to the latter. The former complained of the injustice done to the Gentlemen holding public situations, by whom the Fees had been received. They were Gentlemen of education, information and rank, many of them he had the honour of knowing personally, and he respected them most highly; he was sure that they would not have taken any fee to which they did not think themselves fairly entitled. There was no extortion in the case, and no one had a right to accuse them of it. It was very distant from his intentions. The abuse he however conceived to exist, and it must be remedied.

He said there was no question between this House and these officers; they had acted under an authority de facto, by which those fees had been regulated for nearly thirty years, they were clear both in honour and conscience, although the authority under which they acted had been illegal Even the gray and revered luminary of the law, Sir Matthew Hale, had acted under an authority de facto.

By Authority.

YORK, Upper Canada, December 30th, 1823.

AT THE COUNCIL CHAMBER.

Present,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

THIS day, Peter Robinson, Esquire, and the Honourable George H. Markland were sworn of His Majesty's Honourable Executive Council, and took their respective places at the Board accordingly.

Erratum in Gazette of the 8th Inst.

For, "His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to License the following Gentlemen to practise Physic, Surgery, and Midwifery within this Province"—Read:

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to License the following Gentlemen to practise Physic, Surgery, and Midwifery within this Province—viz.

to Practise Physic and Midwifery.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th Jan. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor submitted to the consideration of the Board, the District Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one session seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government is admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Terms of the Location Ticket a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty have been withheld from the meritious settler to extort such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificates thereof within six Months of the date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fees, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions in the European Colonies, and similar cases, be declared en suit, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nompee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Exc. Coun.

Executive Council Office, York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the conditions of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

A Township North of Mariposa, advertised from the Surveyor General's Office on the 19th of October, as Zora, to be called Eldon.

Editorial Commentary.

A number of Electioneering addresses, squibs, &c. have already poured in upon us. Some of them require serious consideration before they can be admitted into our columns;—others are altogether inadmissible, from their vulgar and Billingsgate character.—It is clear to us, that the communications signed "A Member of the British Cabinet at Bath," and that by a "Glengary Flanker," are from the same person. The last is given in this number, because it relates to an abuse of power, which we fear has been but too general in the more retired corners of this Province, and which ought to be exposed in yet stronger terms than the "Flanker" has used; but the description of the "Court of Inquisition at Bath" is quite too low, abusive, scurrilous, puerile, and unmeaning, for us to notice it.

The communications relative to the present and newly proposed Members for the County of York and Simcoe, must remain upon our table 'till next week, when we shall be glad to take the matter up so far as respects one of the Candidates,—the more especially as some foolish people have thought proper to set us down as perpetually hostile to the whole family of Lawyers, without distinction, merely because we had occasion, once upon a time, to take down our rod, and give it a shake or two over a certain little Hero of the Quill, who justly deserved the 'lash positive,' instead of the 'lash presumptive.' Nothing, however, can be more absurd than to suppose persons of our sagacity and sage experience blind to the true dignity of the legal profession, and to the distinguished merit of the many exalted characters, which have adorned, and do even yet adorn, it. We shall be very happy, therefore, to redeem our character, so far as it has been unjustly aspersed in this respect, by giving our support to a LAWYER, (if he will allow himself to be nominated,) who is a most worthy, upright, and able man, and the "Old Farmer" of Markham may rely upon all the assistance that we can give.

We hope some of the earliest exertions of the Quebec Literary and Historical Society, will be directed to the recovery of all the MSS. which escaped the destruction of the very valuable library formerly belonging to the College of the JESUITS in that City; many of which must prove of extraordinary interest and curiosity, if we may judge from the few specimens which have been made public;—among which may be particularly named, the account of that remarkable Earth quake which convulsed Canada in the year 1663 published in LAMBERT'S TRAVELS. When it is considered how great were the acquirements of the JESUITS and that they were the first to explore the country, and open an intercourse with the Indians; and, that they were bound by instructions from the French King to commit all their discoveries to writing; much may be expected from their labours, if unremitting inquiries are made, notwithstanding the melancholy destruction of their papers, which ensued after their suppression, and the conversion of their College into a Military Barrack. In the year 1816, Mr. Romaine, Librarian, showed us several chests of books and papers in the Public Library, unopened, which had been rescued from destruction, and we doubt not there are numerous documents in the hands of the Clergy & other persons, if they were carefully sought after.—Much may therefore be expected from the excellent institution to which we have alluded.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

The King continued in the enjoyment of excellent health

Parliament was further prorogued till the 3d February.

The Right Honorable Viscount Granville has been appointed Ambassador Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, to the King of the Netherlands.

Captain Lyon, of the Hecla, the second in command under Captain Parry, in the late voyage of discovery, is promoted to the rank of Post Captain; and Mr. Bushnair, and Mr. Griffiths, midshipmen, of the Fury and Hecla, have been promoted to the rank of Lieutenants.

Northern Expedition.—It is in contemplation to send out two land expeditions to assist in the discovery of a Northwestern passage; one is to be commanded by Captain Franklin, and to proceed by the same route as formerly undertaken by Mackenzie, and the other to ascertain whether there be not a continuity of land between the Wager and Copperamine Rivers. Captain Lyon, we understand, has volunteered his services for the latter undertaking, which is not so likely to be attempted as the former

Ionian Islands.—Lieut. Colonel John T. Jones, C. B. Commanding Engineer at Woolwich, accompanied by Captain Harper of the same corps, is ordered by the Master-General of the Ordnance to proceed immediately over to the Ionian Isles, to inspect, and report upon, the fortresses of those Islands

Traffick in Human Ears!!—It is true that bags full of human ears, stated to be those of slain Greeks, and for which the Porte, according to ancient custom, pays a certain sum, are sent from time to time as trophies to Constantinople. But the Franks are no longer deceived by this, as it is a certain fact, that the Turks cut off the ears of their own dead, which they deliver to the Porte as those of Christians.

Knight of Malta.—A letter from Paris, says: "There is no longer any doubt that the Order of Malta will be re established shortly. An island of Greece, which is ceded to it, is already mentioned, but prudence induces me not to name it at present. The Order is going to send Deputies to the King of Spain, to claim its estates in that Kingdom, which the Cortes ordered to be sold. There is reason to hope that the negotiation will be successful. The illustrious Order of St. John, of Jerusalem, will soon rise from its ashes, and after having so long served as a barrier to Europe, against the invasion and pillage of Barbarians, it will again protect the commerce of the Mediterranean and Adriatic, against the pirates of the coast of Africa."

Courtesy!—It is a curious fact that during the detention of Bonaparte at St. Helena, all letters, parcels, books, &c. the envelopes of which bore the signatures of Lord or Lady Holland, were, by orders from Lord Bathurst, conveyed to Bonaparte at once without any examination by Sir Hudson Lowe.—London Courier.

Captain Cooke.—The widow of the celebrated circumnavigator, Captain Cook, is still alive, and resides at Clapham, having survived her husband FORTY FOUR years.

London Bridge.—The new London bridge is to be built a short distance from the old one; the front of St. Saviour's, Southwark, will be thrown open. The old one to stand until the new one is built. Its expence will be £1,000,000 sterling, and will consist of five arches

Revenue of Great Britain.—The total amount of revenue derived in Great Britain for the year ended Oct. 10th, 1823, was £45,227,105

Peace of Europe!—A London paper of the 24th, the British Monitor, hazards the assertion that the Peace of Europe is not likely to be disturbed.

Number of Methodists.—The eighteenth Annual Conference of the Wesleyan Methodists was held at Sheffield within the month of September. The numbers of this body are as follow: in England and Scotland, 219,398; in Ireland, 24,218; total, 241,616. Increased during the past year, 8,006; ditto in foreign stations, 1,653 Total increase, 9,659.

South America.—France, it is stated, has given England positive assurance that she will not assist Spain to recover her South American Colonies.

General Mina has arrived at Plymouth, England, from Spain.

Patriotic and Facetious Brother.

The subscriber, inspired by the love of liberty, so natural to those who enjoy it; and anxious to assist in securing its blessings to those from whom it has been withheld, by the iron hand of oppression; is determined that his pecuniary wants shall not deter him from administering to the wants of his friends:—"friends worthy to be called so—friends, whose wrongs have made them friends;" and that the act his heart wills, (though his purse cannot) his hands shall assist in accomplishing. He therefore proposes to present the proceeds of his Shaving and Hair dressing Establishment, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, the 5th, 6th, and 7th, instant, to the committee in aid of the glorious cause of Greece. He has prepared his establishment for the reception of many new faces, which he hopes will willingly subject themselves to his lathering, that the Greeks may be the better enabled to lather the Turks, and shave the Ali Pacha; and he also trusts that the razors drawn by him over the chins of his friends, will furnish swords to be drawn across the throats of the barber-ous enemies of Grecian Liberty.

Pride of Learning.—Among men of Learning, the pride of the two Scaligers, father and son, has been scarcely ever equalled. A friend to the elder of that name, wrote to acquaint him that he would make mention of him in a work which he meant to publish, and wished to know what he should say of him. Were not the answer which the elder Scaliger made, actually extant, in the printed collection of his letters, it could not be credited. "Endeavour," said he, "to collect your best ideas of what Massinissa, what Xenophon, and what Plato were, and your portrait will bear some, although an imperfect, resemblance of me."

Wedge of Agate.—A most beautiful and curiously veined wedge of agate was recently found on the estate of Claremont, Scotland, when digging near the bottom of a steep bank, and a short distance from the spot where Archbishop Sharpe was murdered. It was discovered embedded in the clay, about 3 feet below the surface, in a horizontal position. Immediately to the westward there is a large whin-stone fixed on the ground—the memorial, probably, of some deed of blood, or the monument of one whose memory it has survived. The wedge measures in length exactly 12 inches; from 1¼ to 3 inches in breadth, and from ¼th to one inch in thickness. It possesses a very fine polish, and it is supposed to have been an instrument of sacrifices used is barbarous ages

LONDON, NOV. 22.

"City two o'clock.—Consols for Account, which left off yesterday afternoon at 83¾, have this morning risen to 83¾, and one or two bargains have been made at 84, while for January, Consols have been sold at 84¼. Up to the present hour Consols for account remain steady at 83¾, and January 84¼.

Improvements in the Platoon Exercise.—A most material improvement in the platoon exercise has been recently made, and is now practised by the Coldstream Guards.

According to the old regulations for the performance of the platoon Exercise, after the priming and loading is effected, the firelock is shouldered, and upon the word of command, "ready," being given, the soldier brings his firelock to the recover, and cocks, and remains in that position till he receives the word, "present" when he levels his piece at the supposed object to be fired at.

Instead of adhering to this system, the improved method prescribes that the firelock, after being loaded, should not, preparatory to its being fired, be brought to the shoulder, nor subsequently to the recover, but should, by a brisk motion, be brought close to, and across the body, to the charging position, and when the soldier receives the command, "ready," he is to cock his piece in the same position, and after receiving the word, "present," he is to elevate his firelock and take aim, before, by the command "fire," he discharges his piece.

The advantages possessed by the new over the old system, must be obvious to every military man. By the improved method justness of level, quickness of fire, and consequence of execution (no mean objects) are demonstratively secured.

The motions of the platoon exercise, by the omission of the shoulder and recover, are shortened; the exactness of aim by the abandonment of the constrained position of presenting from the recover, and the adoption of the natural attitude of the experienced fowler, of raising his gun to cover his object, is incontrovertibly established, and the practical effect of both combined, against an opposing enemy, powerfully illustrated.

Portrait of Sir William Wallace.—A Portrait of this hero has recently been discovered, and its originality is supported by such strong traditional evidence as prevents all doubt of its authenticity. It seems that it had been long in the family of a Captain Thompson of the Navy. The ancestors of this Gentleman had long possessed the portrait, and not only considered it as a very great treasure, but attached to it a sort of superstitious veneration, which induced them to think that they were secured from danger while they possessed the effigies of so eminent and so patriotic a hero. Captain Thompson took it to sea with him in all his voyages, and though exposed to various perils, he always escaped with safety, attributing this deliverance to the influence of the picture.—For service rendered to the Captain, he presented with the portrait in question, to a friend, Mr. Bell, of Downing street, London, where it now remains. It is painted on very old canvass, stretched on a similar lining for security. The picture has all the rudeness which might be expected at the period and in the place where it was painted. The outline is bold, and the face marked by a manly and vigorous expression. The hero has a tartan plaid over his shoulders, clasped with a sort of sun dial. There is the figure of a dragon on the helmet. The 'golden hair" of the hero marks his brow. The eyes are large, noble, and commanding, which tradition records as peculiarly characteristic. The nose is aquiline, with the full nostril, resembling a war-horse neighing for battle.

Three Cabinet Councils were recently held in London. At the last Sir George Cockburn was present, and it was believed that he was to proceed to take the command on the South American Station.

British Navy.—Naval preparations continue in our arsenals, and more especially of our largest ships. The ST VINCENT, of 120 guns, is fitting at this port with extraordinary haste; a great many shipwrights are employed upon her, and it is expected she will carry a flag.—Plymouth Journal.

There are only 3 French ships of War in the West Indies, and their names and description are as follow; Vesta, 60 guns; Thetis, a frigate; and Concorde, a frigate.

Law Movements.—The following movements, are likely to take place in consequence of the death of Lord Chief Baron Richards.—The Attorney General, Sir R. Gifford, to be Chief Baron; the Solicitor General, Sir J. Copley, Attorney General; and Mr. Shagwell, of the Chancery bar, to be Solicitor General. It is also added, that Sir T. Plumer, Master of the Rolls, has added his resignation to that of Sir R. Dallas, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

Extraordinary Birth.—Lately, at Galgate, near Lancaster, a poor woman, of the name of Lamb, was delivered of two female children, grown together at the breast, so as to give the idea of a child with one body, two heads, four arms, and four legs. The infants just lived to be baptized, and one died about half an hour before the other. On dissection, they were found to contain only one heart.

Lord Byron.—Lord Byron has in the press a new drama called the Deformed Transformed. Cantos 12, 13, and 14, of Don Juan, are also announced.

Mr. Kean.—Kean, the actor, who has been for some time residing near Rothsay, on account of his health, we learn, is so delighted with the mildness and salubrity of the Isle of Bute, that he has purchased from the Marquis of Bute, a piece of ground on the shore near Lo'n Fad, a short distance from the capital, in order to erect a villa, which he intends for his future residence

Poor Sir Robert!—Sir Robert Wilson has been deprived of the Prussian Order of the Red Eagle, by a Decree of the King of Prussia, dated October 1.

Anecdotes.

Practice better than Profession.—An Athenian, who was deficient in eloquence, but very brave, when one of his competitors, in a long and Bowery speech, made great professions of what he would do, arose and said —"Men of Antheus! all that he has promised, I will perform."

FONTENELLE.

The character of this celebrated French Writer, who died within one month of completing his hundredth year, is admirably given by M. Grimm.

Literally without heart, generosity, or sympathy with any human being, Fontenelle was extremely complaisant and amusing in general society—where he dealt out his epigrams to the very last, with a neatness and vivacity that was extremely engaging; and continued to be universally acceptable, without even pretending to take an interest in any thing but himself. In the whole course of his long life, it was remarked of him that he was never known either to laugh or to cry, and he even came at last, it seems, to make a boast of this insensibility. On one occasion, when a friend of his was undergoing some melancholy occurrence, in which, recounting some melancholy occurrence, in which, voluntarily shed some tears, he inquired with affected wonder what was the matter with him—and, upon being told that his feelings overpowered him, replied "Your feelings! It is now more courageous years since I bade adieu to feeling and to pastoral poetry." The most decidedly characteristic story is that of the asparagus. He had a great liking it seems for this vegetable, and preferred it dressed with oil. One day a certain bon vivant Abbe, with whom he was extremely intimate, came unexpectedly to dinner. The Abbe was very fond of asparagus also—but liked his dressed with better. Fontenelle said, that for such a friend there was no sacrifice he did not feel himself capable of—and that he should have half the dish of asparagus which he had just ordered for himself; and that half moreover should be done with butter. While they were conversing together very lovingly, and waiting for dinner, the poor Abbé fills suddenly down in a fit of apoplexy —upon which Fontenelle instantly springs up, scampers down to the kitchen with incredible agility, and bawls out to his cook with eagerness. "The whole with all the whole with oil" as at first!"

Of a Literary Prodigy.—A Heidelberg paper of the 30th of Nov. contains the following account of a German literary prodigy;—"We have now at our University, the youngest Doctor in Philosophy probably ever created Carle Witte of Lochau. His Diploma, which was given him by the University of Giessen, is dated the 13th of April last, when he was only in his 13th year. He studied mathematics, physics, chemistry, natural history, mineralogy, history, philology, and philosophy, for years at Gottenburg, to the universal satisfaction of his professors. The first production of his pen was a treatise, entitled, Conchoidis Nicomedæ aquatio et tactus; and he has just published another, called, A Manuel of Common and Analytical Plane Trigonometry. His father, who was his only instructor, accompanies him.

During the retreat of the French army in 1813, a French officer who had a good deal of gold about him at the battle of Hanau, afraid of losing it if he should be taken prisoner, put it into his pistols, and hid them in a hollow tree in a small wood which was surrounded by the enemy. He was actually taken and conducted to Russia. Having after the Peace returned, he quitted his column upon some pretext or other near Hanau, found the tree, and recovered the money which he had deposited there.

Garrick's precepts to Preachers.—The celebrated Garrick having been requested by Dr. Stonehouse to favour him with his opinion as to the manner in which a sermon ought to be delivered, the English Roscius sent him the following judicious answer.

My Dear Pupil.—You know how you would feel and speak in a parlour concerning a friend who was in imminent danger of his life, and with what energetic pathos of diction and countenance you would enforce the observance of that which you readily thought would be for his preservation. You could not think of praying the orator, of studying your emphasis, cadences and gestures; you are to be yourself; and the interesting matter of your subject impressing your heart, would furnish you with the most natural tone of voice, the most proper language, the most energetic postures, and the most suitable and graceful gestures. What you would thus be in the parlour, be in the pulpit; and you will not fail to please, to affect, and to profit. Adieu, my dear friend.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Weekly Register.

SIR,

In Justice to the Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Privates of a certain Regiment of militia, who are desirous for its publication, I send the following communication for insertion in your valuable paper.

DESERTER.

A late Captain, now a Lieut. Colonel of Militia, called a Meeting of his Officers for the purpose of enjoining them, in the strictest manner, not to sign any petition to Government without his consent, on pain of incurring his displeasure;—that, in such case, he would be compelled to report them, and cause the appointments of those so offending to be cancelled.

This measure, beyond a doubt, was intended to prevent a true representation being made of the imposition step which he has taken of recommending a person for an appointment who was obnoxious to the interests of Government during the late war with the United States.

I would not have taken any notice of this circumstance were I not certain that some improper partywork is the true cause of the meeting alluded to being called. A GLENGARY FLANKER.

ENGLAND.

Holy Alliance, and South America.

From the Constitutional.

Paris, November 19.—Strong as she is, England does not give herself the least trouble to parley with the Continent, nor even to threaten it or attack it, not at all. She goes little by little, and with diplomatic address, in which she has long practice, to recognize American Independence—to form their commercial connections, much more useful, much more fruitful for her prosperity, than the relations of dependence which can exist between a metropolis and Colonies. She goes on, in a word, to secure to herself the only kind of domination compatable with the present time, & during this interval, innumerable ships will cover the seas, and protect, in silence, the establishment of her connections. The Holy Alliance will call England to a Congress; but as it is useless to go to plead before others for the possession of an object of which one has secure possession, England will not repair to it, or at most leave a visiting card by a ceremonious diplomatist, and she will continue her useful proceedings.

In this case the Continent would have only two courses to take; either to make a sudden attack, or to acknowledge immediately the Spanish Colonies, in order to participate in the advantage of a prompt reconciliation. But we have said, that to subjugate America by force, and in spite of the English, is impossible; to acknowledge her is a mortal sin, which the Holy Alliance will not commit. The Continent will therefore make useless propositions of arrangement, and will lose in trifling the time which England will employ in useful negotiations. Here we supose the greatest possible wisdom in their Councils; but it is not improbable that a military enterprise may be attempted, and that Morillo, with a few Spaniards and Russians, may be put on board a few rotten vessels at Odessa, to oppose the English fleets. In that case the two great Powers, in which all interests and opinions centre, would definitely measure their strength; and as the quarrel must come to an issue, this would probably be the point in which the two opposing lines would meet.

GREECE.

London, Nov. 22.—The following letter on the affairs of Greece, is from an Englishman who is an honor to the rank to which he belongs. It is peculiarly deserving of attention, as it contains the views of a leading and influential Greek on the policy which ought to be pursued by his countrymen, and throws some light on an intrigue which is now on foot for making the son of the Ex King of Sweden sovereign of Greece. This is better than the Knights of Malta scheme, but we dislike its Russian complexion, and should greatly prefer seeing the Greeks form a Confederation of Republics, for which the character of the population best fits them. We do not like to see the destinies of an interesting people bound up in a protege of Russia and a near relative of Alexander, who may betray the trust reposed in him, and open a way to the Autocrat when timefavours the execution of his designs. How easy, for instance, would it be for Russia to bribe him with an offer of the throne of Sweden! The announcement of his intention to displace Bernadotte, in the French papers, a day or two ago, was, we should suppose, premature, as we do not think it would suit Alexander at the present moment to interfere with Sweden, and besides, he commands that K ngdom through the fears of the monarch. But the Swedish Nobility are as convenient for an intriguing neighbor as the Turkish Janissaries. Russian Gold will be as acceptable at Stockholm as the French used formerly to be. If Alexander should ever wish to have an insurrection in favor of Legitimacy, to give him a pretext for marching a Russian army into Sweden, he will always have abundant materials for it in the the numerous and needy aristocracy of that country.

Extract of a letter from Florence, dated November 15.

I have had a most interesting conversation with your friend the Bishop, about the affairs of Greece, with which he is, perhaps better acquainted than any other man in Europe. This venerable Prelate would scarcely believe me when I described to him the apathy which pervades the Ministers and people of England towards his unfortunate country. He says that, next to sending out supplies of the nature before mentioned, the greatest service the Greek Committee can render Greece, is to convince the Government and people that it is their interest to favour her independence. The fact of Turkey being unable ever to regain possession of the territory lost through its own tyranny and oppression, and of the well known intentions of Russia to reach Constantinople the moment her plans are matured, were the chief grounds of argument made use of by the Bishop.

The old man is of opinion that a King should be placed over Greece. He would prefer a foreigner—the Prince of Coburg, for instance; or, as suggested by others, the son of the deposed King of Sweden. Although this Monarchial spirit is far from being general among the numerous Greeks I have met with in Italy, it certainly prevails in several respectable quarters. The Bishop quoted many eminent writers to prove that democracies are not suited to large States, because they possess less vigor and promptitude than smaller ones. To this line of reasoning I opposed the splendid example of North America, its freedom, activity, and enterprise, so far above all other nations; and more especially, the inestimable advantage of being enabled to change a President who may have proved himself unfit to govern, or unworthy of the public confidence.—They talk, said I, of the prospect of small republics and the decline of large ones; but they forget to cite the corruption, the effeminacy, the disorder and the convulsions to which large Monarchies are subjected, while every hour adds wealth and power to America.

In illustration to passing events in the Morea, the Bishop thinks Corinth must soon fall, because the supplies have been cut off. Patras could not hold out many days against a regular siege; it is commanded, has no case ments, and is crowded with Turks. The possession of this point would secure the fall of Lepanto, and command all the trade of the Gulph; thus preventing the enemy from attempting another landing in the Morea.

There is a report at Leghorn that Mytelene has revolted. This would be an event of vast importance. The island has a warlike population of 30,000 Greeks, it possesses two strong fortresses; its possession would enable the Greeks to blockade the mouth of the Dardanelles, and eventually lead to a reduction of Scio.

All the public bodies, and eminent public men, whether Greeks or otherwise, with whom I have conversed on the affairs of the Confederacy, most strenuously urge the expediency of our changing both men and measures in the Ionion Islands. The Russians and French contrived to conciliate these Islands by securing the Aristocracy, while the present powers there have selected the most inefficient and unpopular men they could find to fill all the places of trust.

A notion seemed to prevail on the Continent that England had a selfish policy in view towards Greece. I have, however, laboured to produce a contrary opinion, founded on our real interests. So long as Greece could be kept down by the Porte, the British Cabinet sanctioned her oppression; but the moment she freed herself, and the question was whether she was to become a Substantive State or be added to Russia, no doubt could remain in the mind of any statesman. For how could it be the interest of England, not only to increase an Empire already too large for the safety of Europe, but make her a great naval power into the bargain.

There is a report here that Lord Byron has offered to raise 500 men for the Confederation, and maintain them at his own expence; the report relative to the resignation of Mavrocordato requires to be confirmed. The Bishop observed to me on this subject, that if the Prince withdrew from the helm, it would only be for a short time; and with a view of rendering more important services to his country in another place, than he could by remaining there now that the campaign is at an end.

EMPIRE OF THE BRAZILS.

Commercial Reading and New Bedford.

Boston, Jan. 1, 1 P. M.

From Rio Janeiro.—Some events have transpired in the government of the new Empire, which seem to show that the Brazilians have rather over-rated the privileges and freedom supposed to have been secured to them. Great animosities and jealousies existed; and though other lines of party were drawn, the principal contest was between the old (or European) Portuguese and the native Brazilians, who appeared to entertain the most bitter feelings towards each other. Both parties supposed themselves possessed of the Emperor's entire confidence and affections; and while each was manœuvering to bring out his declaration, he studiously avoided it, but at the same time was evidently employed in attaching the military to his views, who, in the capital and neighbourhood, are principally of the former party. The Cortes, or legislative assembly, were digesting and debating the new Constitution, consisting of 270 articles, some of which had passed in their debates. Several of the deputies belonging to the independent party had expressed their sentiments in the most bold and independent language. The liberty of the press began to show itself by the freedom of remarks in half a dozen papers issued daily. Some attacks had been made upon the ministers, and hints and inuendoes thrown out that offended the government. The Emperor, it seems, to have the appearance of a desire to submit every thing to the opinion of the Cortes, sent a messenger on the 10th of November, requesting their opinion, respecting the right and propriety of these things, which was returned without answer, with a demand in the first place to be told for what reasons the troops had been assembled in the streets, (as had been done the evening preceding,) and placed in the entrance of the house of their deliberation.—No reply was made to this demand till the morning of the 13th, when, after the deputies had assembled, as usual, a corps of artillery was marched into the city and planted about the house; and while the cannon were aimed and the matches blazing, to enforce compliance, if necessary, the Cortes was dissolved in the name of the Emperor, to assent or act no more from that moment! They dispersed immediately; but every one did not go his way without fear and trembling. Those who had been the most bold in asserting for the liberty of speech, and of the press, a toleration of religion, and the rights of Brazilians as free and independent people, were proscribed; among whom was Don Jose Bonefacio, formerly prime minister, and his two brothers, who with two others were arrested before they left the house, and sent to prison. Soon after this, the Emperor appeared on horseback escorted by a few officers, and followed through the streets by some of his loving subjects, whose appearance was certainly none of the most respectable. The windows were crowded by Brazilian beauties of all degrees and complexions, and whose loyalty was displayed by the waving of a thousand white handkerchiefs, and their reiterated screams of Viva! Viva! His majesty published a decree, in which he promised his subjects that he would himself give them a constitution, and hinted that it should be a better one to them than that which the Cortes had half manufactured for them. In the evening the city was partially illuminated, and there were some other manifestations of rejoicing; but it was far from being general. In short, this event is looked upon as a complete triumph of the Portuguese over the Brazilian party. The Empire of Brazils may last a while longer yet, but Don Pedro the First has no longer the hearts of his native subjects.—There are many of them undoubtedly who would co-operate with the other party, with a view the more speedily to bring about a re-union with the mother country, as being a condition preferable to any independent government they can at present establish and maintain. Indeed this was an event already talked of as probably soon to take place. It was believed that the Emperor's entire wish was to see this effected, and it is said that a ship was to be despatched immediately to Portugal with the news, and probably to make overtures. It was also reported that Lord Cochrane, in disgust, had sent in his resignation of the command of the naval force, and that the numerous Portuguese ships made prizes by him would probably all be restored. But this was afterwards contradicted.

NATURAL HISTORY.

A shepherd who inhabited one of those vallies of glens which intersect the Grampian mountains, in one of his excursions to look after his flock, happened to carry with him one of his children, an infant of three years old. This is not an unusual practice among the Highlanders, who accustom their children from their earliest infancy to endure the rigors of the climate. After traversing his pastures for some time, attended by his dog, the shepherd found himself under the necessity of ascending a summit at some distance to have a more extensive view of his range. As the ascent was too fatiguing for the child, he left him on a small plan, at the bottom, with strict injunctions not to stir from it till his return. Scarcely, however, had he gained the summit, when the horizon was dark ned by one of those impenetrable mists which frequently descend and rapidly amidst these mountains, as in the space of a few minutes almost to turn day to night. The anxious father instantly hastened back to find his child; but owing to the unusual darkness, and his own trepidation, he unfortunately missed his way in the descent. After a fruitless search of many hours, he discovered that he had reached the bottom of the valley, and was near his own cottage. To renew the search that night was equally fruitless and dangerous: he was therefore compelled to go home, although he had lost both his child and his dog, who had attended him faithfully for many years. Next morning, by break of day, the shepherd, accompanied by a band of his neighbours, set out in search of his child; but after a day spent in fruitless fatigue, he was at last compelled by the approach of night to descend from the mountain. On returning to his cottage, he found that the dog which he had lost the day before, had been home, and on receiving a piece of cake, had instantly gone off again.—For several successive days the shepherd renewed the search for his child, and still, on returning home disappointed in the evening, he found that the dog had been home, and on receiving his usual allowance of cake, had instantly disappeared. Struck with this singular circumstance, he remained at home one day; and when the dog, as usual, departed with his piece of cake, he resolved to follow him, and find out the cause of this strange procedure. The dog led the way to a cataract at some distance from the spot where the shepherd left his child. The banks of the cataract are almost joined, and yet separated by an abyss of immense depth, presenting that appearance which so often astonishes and appals the travellers that frequent the Grampian mountains. Down one of those rugged and almost purpendicular descents, the dog began, without hesitation, to make his way, and at last disappeared by entering into a cave, the mouth of which was almost level with the torrent. The shepherd with difficulty followed: but on entering the cave what exciting emotions, when he beheld his infant seating with satisfaction the cake which the dog had just brought him; while the faithful animal stood by, eyeing his young charge with the utmost complacency! From the situation in which the child was found, it had wandered to the brink of the precipice, and then either fallen or scrambled down till he reached the cave. The dog by means of his scent had traced him to the spot; and afterwards prevented him from starving by going up to him his own daily allowance. He appears never to have quitted the child by night or day, except when it was necessary to go for food; and then was always seen running at full speed to and from the cottage.—Percy Anecdotes.

Natural curiosity.—A tenant of the Rev J. Cottle, of Warwick, has just presented to him a part of a solid butt of an ash tree, containing within it the skull of some animal unknown. It was cut up in the part of the tree, 9 feet above the ground; and was perfectly enclosed in solid timber. The tenant has resided upon the farm above 60 years, and had never noticed any opening in the tree: nor was there the least appearance in the bark or the wood, that the part it now so firmly and solidly occupied was ever vacant. Some idea may be formed of the size of the skull when it is stated, that the part which held the brain is about four inches in diameter.—Poulson's American.

Camphor trees.—These trees grow in the island of Sumatra. A letter from a traveller published in an Edinburgh Journal, describes them as being often 100 feet perfectly strait to the first branch. The camphor is found in masses, in cracks and hollows in the heart of the tree. It is chiefly carried to China, where it bears a price about 30 times that of the China camphor. It is the latter that is brought to Europe and America. It is obtained by boiling. The Sumatra camphor trees also yield a powerful oil. It flowers only once in four or five years.

Foreign Leeches.—It is stated in the Democratic Press, that there had lately been an importation into Philadelphia of 500 fine Leeches from England. And that the importer hoped "to be at all times able to furnish his customers with Leeches of this breed." Considering the high price obtained for English Leeches, we would suggest to the dealers in that article, the propriety of raising them in this country, instead of incurring the expense and risk always consequent on importation. We believe that leeches of the English breed, have already been found in the United States. In that case there can be no necessity in sending abroad for them. But should we be mistaken, we know of no good objection against rearing them here, where we have every variety of soil peculiar to Great Britian, and where so many situations present themselves, in which they might be multiplied, ad infinitum, at no expense, and greatly to the advantage of any one who would devote a little attention to the subject.

Agreeably to notice, Mr. BALDWIN moved that it might be resolved

1st. That the Commercial interests of this Province, at present greatly contracted, are owing to the infancy of the Province, and to its peculiar geographical position, are deserving the attention of the Legislature in all its points.

2d. That this Province has already sustained such increase of expence by reason of its extended frontier on the St. Lawrence, would in some measure be lessened by a designation of the north ern and northwestern boundary in such extent as to embrace a Port on Hudsons Bay.

3d. That notwithstanding the remoteness of such Port on Hudson's Bay, and the present apparent insignificance of the object, yet such an acquisition would be of the greatest importance in future times.

4th. That the Province of Lower Canada, has lately sustained the loss of a considerable share of the Fur Trade, by the late collision between the Hudson's Bay Company, and the North West Company of Canada, which is the more unreasonable as a great part of the Furs exported at Hudson's Bay are caught within the confines of Upper Canada.

5th. That an Humble address be presented to His Majesty, praying His Majesty may be pleased to issue his Royal Proclamation declaring that the boundary of this Province as follows. That starting from the head of the Ottawa River, which now forms part of the boundary between the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, throughout the centre of Lake Temiscaming up the principal Northern branch which falls into the said Lake, thence over land into the Abbitibbee Lake at its Eastern extremity, thence through the centre of the last mentioned Lake, thence down the Abbitibbee River, till it joins the Moon River thence down the Moon River, till it falls into James' Bay, thence along the coast of James' Bay to the Albany River, thence up the centre of the stream of Albany River, and through the most direct and practicable Westerly course along the same communication to Cumberah House on St. Joseph's Lake, thence through the centre of this last mentioned Lake Westward, thence over the land by the shortest route to Sal Lake, thence through its centre to the western point thereof, thence by the largest stream communicating with the Lake of the Woods to the boundary between this Province and the United States of America.

In consequence Mr. NICHOL moved, that after the word "that" in the original motion the whole might be expunged, and the following words inserted, "this House do on to-morrow resolve itself into a Committee of the whole, to take into consideration the propriety of addressing His Majesty for an extension of the Provincial Boundary towards the North west.

Which was carried.

FEES ON GRANTS OF CROWN LANDS.

(Concluded from our last.)

The question did not at all lie between these officers and this House, and he wished it to be kept in mind that it lay between the King's Government in England, and the Executive Council of the Colonies.—The question is whether the colonial authority is to contemn the Royal Instructions? and if it is to preserve these inviolate, that the present Bill is necessary. The rights of the King and the interests of the people, always in union, appear to have been violated This House has proceeded deliberately. It is now three years since the matter was introduced; every thing that has been done has been made public; those who have sinister views do not take this course; they do not furnish the means of contradicting their charges; or subverting their evidence. In this case there has been no contradiction of the evidence; no attempt to controvert the fact of the existence of the abuse, but those fees, so attempted to be justified, have been continued

He said the question was one of principle more than of amount. The principle once admitted that the Colonial Executive could fix the Fees on the grants of the Crown Lands at pleasure there was no knowing how far it might be carried He said, that in Upper Canada, and he spoke from the best information he could obtain, before the Battle of Waterloo, which brought the late war to a conclusion and made it necessary for so many thousands of his Majesty's best subjects to emigrate to these Colonies, the Fees on a thousand acres were £50; they have since been increased to £250. In New-Brunswick, before that event, they were 6 to 8 dollars for 200 acres; they have since been raised to £12 or £15. The Mother Country which required an outlet in her Colonies for a superabundant population, suffered in this case as well as the Colonies. The Honourable Gentleman for Gaspé, wished to apply for a remedy to the Courts of Justice. He would ask the Honourable Gentleman, who established these Fees? The Executive Council; in which there are the Chief Justice and two Judges of the King's Bench, three of the four of which the Court is composed. They have already decided the question. Is it carried to the Court of Appeals? that is the Executive Council. But you may impeach! Where is the tribunal? Are you to go to the Legislative Council? there you have the same Judges and the Executive Councillors. This concentration of the Judiciary Executive and Legislative powers, precludes the remedy which the Honourable Gentleman recommends.

The Honourable Gentleman said, he could not agree with the Honourable member for Montreal in his doubts concerning the prerogative. The Crown had been in possession of this prerogative in all the Colonies If it was abused, this House would have a right to complain, and would doubtless find redress. We had no complaint to make. The Royal instructions, on the contrary, shew the greatest wisdom and the utmost regard for the welfare of the Colonies. They were favourable to the settlement of the Country without burthening the people, and were all that could be desired. There was little to fear concerning any thing that might be done in England, in respect to Fees; the advisers of the Crown there, could have no interest contrary to those of the Colony, and could never enrich themselves at its expense.

He did not know whether this Bill would pass the other Branches of the Legislature; but he was certain that it would ultimately be successful, if it was founded on justice; and hitherto he had seen or heard nothing to persuade him to the contrary The moment he did, it should no longer have his support.

The debate, consisting of explanations, and some further remarks was continued for some time by Messrs. Viger, Grenier, and Mr. Speaker, after which Mr. Papineau's amendment was negatived; Ayes 10, Nays 13; and the Bill passed the Committee without further division.

Quebec Literary and Historical Society.

A Society with this appellation was formed on the 6th, inst. by a meeting at the Castle of St. Lewis, at which His Excellency the Governor in Chief presided. Its object is stated more especially to be the developement of the early History of this Colony, and to induce those who may possess materials that would tend to this, to communicate them. We believe, that the history of this Country, although in some not very important subjects still obscure, to be on the whole better known than that of any other part of this continent This we owe chiefly to the labours of the Jesuits, and the desire of the French Government for information connected with its then Colonies. No doubt a correct abbreviation of the history of the country would be advantageous. Many parts of it are, however, of little interest but to the curious. who in new countries, for obvious reasons, are rather rare.

Several branches of the Natural History of the country, (those of Mineralogy and Geology in particular,) and its Geography, which might be made to comprise good descriptions of the advantages, climate and general resources of the less known parts of the country, would form useful enquiries, leading to practical purposes. There are immense tracts of fertile country to the north of the St. Lawrence fitted for settlements. The country about the upper part of the Saguenay contains one of these tracts. On the shores of Lake St. John, which is navigable by small crafts, is fourteen leagues in circumference, and only four or five days journey against the stream from the St Lawrence. The winters are remarkably mild, and several descriptions of grain have been brought to maturity, and harvested as early as they usually are at Quebec. Indeed it appears to have been the earliest settled part of the country, although subsequently, through the representations of the French Fur Company, the settlement was abandoned.

From all accounts, a population of half a million of souls might be settled there. Quebec Gazette.

New Copper Coin.—A new Copper Coin which has been received at the Provincial Treasury from England, is issuing in Packages of 4s and 2d. each.

The Gentlemen appointed to explore the route for a Canal from Memramcook River to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, have returned to this City, after having accomplished their object, and we are glad to hear that the line is much approved of. It is said to possess not only an excellent harbour on the Gulph shore, (Chediac,) with abundance of head water near the centre of the line, but we understand that vessels drawing 18 feet water may proceed to the mouths of this line both from the Gulph and Bay of Fundy shores. The total distance requiring to be cut we understand to be about 13 miles.—Courier, St. Johns (N. B.) Dec. 6.

POETRY.

THE MOURNER.

By Miss Rowcroft, of Liverpool.

She flung her white arms round him.—Thou art all
That this poor heart can cling to; yet I feel
That I am rich in blessings; and the tear
Of this most bitter moment still is mingled
With a strange joy. Reposing on thy heart,
I hear the blasts of fortune sweeping by,
As a babe lists to music,—wondering,
But not affrighted. In the darkest hour
Thy smile is the brightest; and when I am wretched
Then am I most beloved. In hours like this
The soul's resources rise, and all its strength
Bounds into being—I would rather live
With all my faculties thus wakened round me,
Of hopes, and fears, and joys, and sympathies,
A few short moments, even with every feeling
Smarting from fate's deep lash,—than a long age,
However calm and free from turbulence,
Bereft of these most high capacities.
Not vainly have I nursed them; for there is
An impulse ev'n in suffering; and so pure
Rise the eternal hopes, called by the anguish
Of a world wearied spirit; with such light
They rush before me, like a sunny ray,
Piercing the dark shades of my clouded thoughts,
That for such high and holy consolations,
I welcome misery, and I know thy heart
Hath the same blessed anchor. In heaven-ward hopes
We drank the cup of youthful happiness;
And now, when sorrow shades our early promise,
In heaven-ward trust we comfort one another.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriff's Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for the Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government is obstructed, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Ticket, on a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared re ant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

TO the FREE and INDEPENDENT ELECTORS of the COUNTY of DURHAM.

GENTLEMEN,

THE time has at length arrived when it is necessary for me again to trouble you with a few lines upon the subject of the approaching contest for the COUNTY of DURHAM.

At two time I declared myself a Candidate for the honor of representing you in Parliament, I was assured by a very intimate friend of Mr. WILKES that he did not intend to come forward again; and the Gentleman to whom I allude, even went so far as to assign the reason which Mr. W. had given him for retiring.

I did not, therefore, stand forward in opposition to Mr. WILKES—it is rather him who is in opposition to me. Having much personal respect for that Gentleman, I shall neither descend upon what some consider to be his defects, as a Member of the House of Assembly, nor attempt to do precisely his merit.—It is a principle of his ability to serve you better than any of the other Candidates already named; and, if you are of the same opinion, it would be one to say, either that he over rates his abilities and acquirements, or, that you err in judgment.—I have taken my pen for no such purpose but merely to say, that I shall take an early opportunity of paying my respects to you, in person, and of ascertaining your sentiments, upon the knowledge of which, my own resolutions will be immediately formed.—If I find it the wish of a decided majority that I should withdraw, it will be my duty to retire; and to create no further trouble, which I am immediately do, with that deference which all men ought to entertain for public opinion;—but I must learn this decision from your own lips.

With the highest respect, and the most earnest desire for your prosperity,

I have the honor to subscribe myself,
Your most devoted,
Humble Servant,
CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

Editorial Commentary.

In the hurry and confusion attending the removal of our Office, we have unfortunately mislaid the communication received from an "Old Farmer" of Markham, which is therefore postponed from necessity.

The English Consuls destined for South America have arrived at Jamaica.—Extraordinary reports are in circulation relative to that valuable Island. The House of Assembly have actually repealed the Registry Act, and have refused to alter the Slave Law, thereby asserting their independence in the most marked and effectual manner. It is most probable, under these very serious circumstances, that His Majesty's Ministers will pursue a conciliatory course.—There has been no increase in British Exports to Jamaica for 10 years—the average amount being about 2 1-4 millions.

The Wesleyan Missionary, Surrs, who was accused of exciting the negroes in Demarara to revolt, has been tried, convicted, and sentenced to death.

The extent of land in the whole of the West India Islands, including those on the Coast of South America, is about 105,000 square miles, the population amounts to 2,150,000 souls, 1,700,000 of that number are negroes—amounting to four fifths—the three islands of Cuba, Hispaniola, and Jamaica, contain 1,400,000 souls. Aborigines or Caribs are still found in the Windward Islands, and do not exceed 3000—the great majority of the Inhabitants are Roman Catholics—Hayti or St. Domingo, is now an Independant Government under President Boyer, and composed entirely of African blacks or their descendants. It is impossible to view the great excess of the black over the white population without having some fear that a few years may bring about those attempts to gain liberty which have shewn themselves in every quarter around them, and while ultimately productive of good, yet are attended with all the evils which now distinguish South America. viz the neglect of all useful pursuits, and the constant repetition of plunder and barbarities.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

London Dec. 1.—The return of Dr. Mackay, who had been sent to Mexico on a particular mission by Government, has been noticed. We have reason to believe, from advice to be relied on, that this news is correct. The Doctor has negotiated with Mexico a commercial treaty on terms the most favourable to our merchants.—Cour.

The Morning Herald of the 18th Nov. states that the nuptials between the Hon. Capt. Fredk. Berkley and Lady Charlotte Lennox were to be solemnized at the end of that month.

The King of France.—A private letter from Paris inserted in the London Times of 19th Nov. gives the following account of the health of Louis, who appears to be fast approaching his end.—"His Majesty has twice passed through a dangerous crisis since he made part of the procession to Notre Dame, to celebrate Te Deum. The fatigues of that day were too severe for his exhausted frame. The flow from his legs ceased for a few hours, and he was in the most imminent danger. The same event happened towards the end of last week. In both cases the faculty succeeded with much difficulty in re-opening the wound, and giving him the necessary relief. There are probably few instances of a patient living so long as his Majesty in a state so deplorable. His chest is entirely filled with water; his body is a mass of corruption; and the flow from his lower extremities is so great, that it penetrates in a quarter of an hour a double covering of flannel, besides a wrapping of bark and cotton, and passes to the footstool on which he rests them. He does not experience much bodily pain, but he is oppressed with a perpetual tendency to sleep. When left alone but for a few minutes, he is found in a kind of lethargic slumber. He even sleeps in his carriage when he takes his airing. He can scarcely move his legs, and has lost the usual energy of his arms. His head reclines upon his shoulders, as if he had lost the power of voluntary motion. In the mean time the smell arising from his legs and body, in a state of approaching dissolution, is painful to himself, and sometimes overpowering to his attendants. His servants and ministers cannot long remain in the room or the cabinet where he receives them. It is not supposed that His Majesty can linger in this state more than a month or two, and by the stopping of the flow from his legs he may die in a day's illness."

Useful Invention.—The impenetrable prepared cloth for lining shoes, cloaks, &c. for which a patent was recently got, has proved eminently successful. A pair of shoes, which have lain soaking in water, in a shoe shop in Trongate, for the last nine weeks, is in the inside, completely free of the slightest degree of moisture. There are only two considerable objections to the general use of the prepared cloth. One is the excessive high price. The quantity requisite to line a pair of shoes, which would cost 11s to 12s, raises the price to 20s, and even at that rate the additional trouble is so great, that a shoe maker has more profit on a 12s. article. The other objection is the disagreeable gas-ous smell which the preparation has while new; but this, we are informed, goes off after being worn some time and exposed to the air.

Glasgow Paper.

Portable Gas.—The application of gas, as well as steam, appears but in its infancy. The London Portable Gas Company propose to supply this article in vessels of all sizes and shapes, fit for immediate use, and adapted for every room in the house, from the kitchen to the drawing room, and at any infinitely less expence than even to law candles, notwithstanding its superior brilliancy. This gas is made from oil, and is perfectly free from smell. Its cheapness will occasion its introduction to the poor cottager.

Riego's Family.—It was stated in a Morning Paper, a few days past, that the wife and brother of Riego were living in London in very indigent circumstances. There is good reason to believe that this statement is too true; although a sort of contradiction of it was afterwards published in the same paper. Miguel Riego, who is a Canon of the Roman Church, removed to England with Madam Riego, at the urgent request of his brother. He had no time to make preparations for his journey, for the General seemed to have a presentiment of what had taken place, and was therefore exceedingly anxious to remove his wife from the scene of his sufferings. She is indeed a most amiable woman. Madame Riego is afflicted with a consumptive disease. She is, it is greatly to be feared, dying. Her circumstances are very confined.

South America.—A letter from Washington of the 3d instant, says—"The answer of the Executive to the call of Congress for information in relation to the intentions of the Holy Alliance as to the South American Colonies, will be to substance, that the public safety will not permit them to give all the information they have. I have no doubt they have positive and important information, and that what was lately said about a pledge of the British government to resist the Allies is true. That pledge and the orgin of it, is probably what the Executive cannot communicate."

A Protestant Miracle.—The Archives Christiennes, a periodical work published in Paris, contains the extraordinary intelligence that on the 6th of April last, M. Heuhoffer, the Roman Catholic Rector of the parishes of Mullisheusen and Steyneyg, in the Duchy of Baden, with the Baron de Gimmingen, his household, and forty other families, making in all 220 persons, publicly embraced the reformed religion in the Seigneurial Chapel of Steyneyg, after which the adults received the holy communion, according to the rites of the Protestant Church. The affecting ceremony took place in a Roman Catholic country, in the midst of a vast assemblage of persons of different religious denominations, without the smallest interruption or disorder.

Old or Lost Greenland.—The Dundee, whaler, Capt. Duncan, is lately arrived from this interesting spot, having spent the greatest part of the summer in exploring the coast. Capt Duncan penetrated below Cape Barclay, and discovered a large tract of land hitherto unknown, which he has named, in compliment to his owner, Gale's Land. In their voyage along the coast, they discovered a large island, which was low and fertile, and covered with huts of the inhabitants.

From Canton.—One of the morning papers informs us a few days since, that a letter from Batavia, of Sept. 22, had been received in this city, stating that the Milford of Bombay, arrived the preceding day from Canton with verbal intelligence that the affair of the Topaz frigate had been revived. It was reported that the Hong merchants had been ordered to Pekin, because the British government have not sent out two individuals to be delivered to the Chinese as an atonement for the lives of the Chinese, who perished at Lintin.

By the London Morning Herald of the 17th of November, we perceive that a Court Martial has been held, for the trial of Lieut. Hamilton, who had command of the Topaz when the affray above alluded to took place at Lintin, (100 miles from Canton.) The Court determined that the affray and death of the natives, arose from an unprovoked and barbarous attack upon an unarmed watering party of the Topaz, and that measure so promptly adopted by Lt. H. were absolutely necessary for saving the lives of his men. He was accordingly honorably acquitted.

Languages.—A Russian has published "A View of all the known Languages and their Dialects." In this book we find, in all, 937 Asiatic; 587 European; 226 African; and 1,264 American languages and dialects, enumerated and classed; a total of 3,064. The Bible is translated into 139 languages.

Literary Curiosity.—At the second ordinary meeting of the Royal Society of Literature, there was read a most curious M. S. being a report relative to the survey of the coasts of Syria and Egypt, ordered by Henry 5th. preparatory, as that King declared on his death bed, to his attempting an expedition for the deliverance of Jerusalem. This paper overthrows the dictum of Hume on this particular subject.

Poor Sir Robert!—The Hamburgh Gazette announces from the Rubrick of Vienna, "that the Emperor Alexander has withdrawn from Sir Robert Wilson, the Order he had formerly invested him with as a reward of his military services."

Gourlay!—The Reformer Gourlay has addressed a letter to the Lord Chancellor pressing for judgment in the case of the Duke of Somerset vs. Gourlay—the Chancellor noticed this circumstance in Court, and added, that whenever he saw the name of a party in that Court to a letter he endeavoured not to read it.

Account of a curious specimen of the old English Country Gentleman, in the person of Mr. Hastings, who died at Woodlands, near Cranborne in Dorsetshire, in the year 1636—at the age of nearly 100 years.—Written by Lord Shaftesbury.

Mr Hastings was by his quality the Son, Brother, and Uncle to the Earls of Huntingdon, and his way of living had the first place where he resided. He was personable and an original in our age, or rather a copy of our Nobility, in ancient days, in hunting and not warlike times.

He was low, very strong, and very active, of a red dish flaxen hair, his clothes always green cloth, and never all worth, when new, five pounds. His house was perfectly of old fashion, in the midst of a large Park well stocked with deer, and near the house rabbits to serve his kitchen, many fish ponds, and great store of timber; a bowling green in it long but narrow, full of high ridges, it never having been levelled since it was first plowed; they used round sand bowls, and it had a banqueting house like a stand, a large one built in a tree.

He kept all manner of sport hounds that run Buck, Fox, Hare, Otter and Badger, and Hawks long and short winged, he had all sorts of nets for fishing, he had a walk in the new forest and manor of Christ Church, this last supplyed him with red deer, sea and river fish; and indeed all his neighbour's grounds and royalties were free to him, who bestowed all his time in these sports, but what he borrowed to caress his neighbour's wives and daughters, there being no woman in all his walks of the degree of a yeoman's wife or under, and under the age of 40, but it was extremely her fault if he was not intimately acquainted with her; this made him very popular, always speaking kindly to the husband, brother or father, who was to bost welcome to his house; whenever he came there he found beef, pudding, and small beer in great plenty.—The house not so neatly kept as to shame him or his dirty shoes. The great hall was strewed with bones, and full of hawks patches, hounds, spaniels and terriers; the upper sides of the hall were hung with foxskins of this and the last years killing, with here and there a polecat, gins, keepers and huntsmans poles in abundance.

The parlour was a long room, as properly furnished. On a great hearth paved with brick lay some terriers, was good and fair and gracious; he was happier (to use his own expression) than the happiest man on earth, and he besought me to "come down and witness his beatitude." It was impossible to resist an invitation which promised so much pleasure.

Upon my arrival at the manor house, I was shewn into a library, where the Captain received me. "If you wish to see Mr. Morel, he is in that apartment," said the Clergyman pointing to an open door. I entered, and found myself in a darkened bed-chamber. Of one moment took me all! There was a manlike figure stretched upon the bed, a heavy and overpowering smell of herbs and drugs filled the room; every shape was clothed in deadly white. My friend sat by the bed-side, with his hands locked, and his eyes fixed upon the statue, I approached, but he took no notice of me. "Poor Morel!" said I, bending over his face. "though we'd a short-lived flower!" A smile seemed to gather on the lips of the girl as I said these words, a smile between resignation. She was in her wedding dress, to which, as I afterwards learned, she had desired to be buried. There was no other covering, and as I thought to my recollection her appearance on the day of her marriage, she seemed in nothing altered but that she was now still and pale. "God of heaven! cried I, "is this only sleep?" I said, bending over her. "Merciful from this torpor; be gazed at me for some time, then, pointing to the body, as if to inform me of what was already too plain. "Eveline is dead," said he, "she is dead." I made no remark; considerate was premature; indeed I was unable to offer condolence, my heart was flowing through my eyes. He rose, covered the face of the statue with a handkerchief, and, taking me upon his arm, led me into the adjoining room, which was the scene of familiar but revolting peculiarity. "If I was come to congratulate him!" Then, without waiting for an answer, he continued in the same strain of bitter irony. "There, there is my friend in the arms of his beatitude! have I not reason to be happy? felicity! there is my possession! was it not to be wealthy and grace and goodness in my possession? was it not to be enviable man?" He broke off suddenly, continued he and dressing the insensible figure, "there you lie in your wedding garments! with your crystal clocks and your snowing lip, fresh from the marriage bed! Look at her as she smiles, a little sweet, just as if she had lain down after dance! see her arms there, so white and long! and her fair bosom, with its curls playing about her snowy neck! Eveline, dear Eveline, have you indeed forsaken me?—O God! O God! that this could be all a dream! No, no—it is no dream—no dream." Here his words again ceased, and resigned into his former attitude of body he fixed both the bed, and his hands clenched in inexpressible despair.

When they were nailing up the coffin, the young widower rushed from my arms into the room, tore open the lid, and threw himself on the body. We could scarcely oblige him to let the operation proceed, whilst he incessantly exclaimed that we were burying his Eveline alive; as she lay to our sad satisfaction in the coffin his bewildered imagination conceived she was still living. No force could drag him from the apartment, though every blow of the hammer on the lid of the coffin seemed to strike upon his breast. When the body was carried out, he sprung to the door, and was scarcely withheld by his domestics and myself from useless opposition to the bearers. His Eveline was at length removed from his sight for ever; and his grief, from being outrageous, subsided at length into melancholy and total silence. She was buried in the churchyard near his demesne, and he was seldom to be found far distant from her grave. His honour was to lean on one shoulder of the oak which bends her name, and ruminate on the long grass which waves to and fro over the turf that covers her remains. A premature decay carried him off at the end of the year.

COLOMBIA.

Being a Geographical, Statistical, Agricultural, Commercial and Political account of that Country; adapted for the general reader, the Merchant, and the Colonist 2 vols. 8vo. pp. 1817. London 1823.

Our author has a sensible and well written introduction on the subject of the loss and the recognition and colonization of Colombia, its mineral and agricultural riches, &c. Of the commercial advantages which the country presents, he says,—

"Their independence once established the Colombians will not delay opening a trade with Japon, China, and India. Their coasts, bordering on the Pacific Ocean give them great advantage in such a trade over European Nations. Porto Bello and Nicaragua, will be in some years the staples, where all America bordering on the Atlantic, and probably all Europe itself, will go to purchase Indian Merchandize. This change in that great trade will produce one or more durable in the relative wealth and power of states as that of the discovery of the Cape of Good Hope. The Americans themselves will take to Bengal and China the metal which they furnish to Europe for maintaining this trade. The day when commerce shall take this new direction, and that day is not so distant as many suppose, will be that of the independence of the nation of Asia as well as of America, not to mention those innumerable advantages which necessarily result from the shackled commerce. The American of the United States have carried on the East India trade, for more than fifteen years past, with greater relative profits than the English. Those of Colombia will have only a third of the distance to sail, and will navigate on cheaper terms.

"Nor is this all; the Atlantic will be joined to the South Sea by more than one canal. Nine easy communications between them are pointed out by M. de Humboldt, in his political essay on New Spain. Since 1780, boats have sailed up through the Ravine of La Raspadura to Choco, by which they have passed from the Pacific Ocean into the sea of the Antilles. A canal across the Isthmus of Panamá would be a matter of no great difficulty. An Isthmus of only 30 miles between two Oceans, cannot be an insuperable barrier to the inventive genius and perseverance of man in the present age; and the ground is generally thought by late travellers to be more suitable for an enterprise of this kind, than the academicians have reported.

Colombia is bounded on the north by the province of Costa Rica in Guatimala, and the Caribbean Sea; on the east, by the Atlantic and British Guiana; on the south, by Portuguese Guiana; the river Maranon, and Peru; and on the west, by the Pacific Ocean. It thus extends from the 12th degree of northern latitude, to its eastern portion nearly equal to the equator, and in its western, nearly equal to the 10th degree of southern latitude.

The eastern portion of this vast region was formerly called Venezuela or Caracas; the western portion, New Grenada or Cundinamarca; and the south western extremity of the latter, Quito. The whole is now united in the republic of Colombia.

The Cordillera of the Andes crosses the country from the north to the south, a length of 4,200 miles. In Colombia, the greatest altitude of the Andes is conjectured to take place nearly under the equator, where the cone of Chimborazo rises to the amazing height of 7,147 yards above the level of the sea; but the Cordillera of Caracas, which is, on the average, 4,500 feet in height, occasionally exceeds 9000. The mountain of Quida is 8,465 feet above the sea.

Colombia has several lakes, particularly the lake of Maracaybo, which is 180 miles long, 90 broad, and communicates with the Gulf of Venezuela. Its rivers are large and numerous, particularly the Orinoco.

The total population of Colombia is 2,644,600 persons.

P. MAITLAND,

THE Lieutenant Governor transmits to the House of Assembly a copy of the Report of the Commissioners appointed under the Act for the improvement of the internal Navigation of this Province, together with their accounts of the expenditure for that object

Government House, }
31st December, 1823. }

P. MAITLAND,

The Lieutenant Governor thinks proper to transmit for the information of the House of Assembly, the following extract from a dispatch which he has recently received from His Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, respecting the distribution of the sum appropriated by His Majesty for the compensation of losses sustained by the Subjects of this Province during the late War.

Government House, }
31st December, 1823. }

"If, however, the Province shall provide funds arising from new taxes, to be specially imposed for that purpose, and in no degree regarding the appropriation of the existing revenue by which funds, the Province may be enabled to take upon itself the annual payment of some portion of the Civil Establishment, the expense of which is now defrayed by Parliament. I should, in that case, be disposed to recommend to the Treasury the propriety of sanctioning a further grant in aid of the Civil Establishment, being a proportion to the diminution of the annual grant of the British Parliament, which may be effected by the Assembly taking a proportion of that payment on the motives."

FROM THE QUEBEC GAZETTE

The Union.—The subjoined letter was some time ago addressed to Mr. Lunday, Clerk of the Assembly, by L. J. Papineau, Esq. on the subject of the Petitions against the proposed Union, which were forwarded during last Session to the Agents appointed by the Province then in London. Quebec, 23d Dec. 1823.

SIR,

Having perused the letter, addressed by Mr. Neilson to you, bearing date the second of July last, by which he informs you that the petitions of the House of Assembly to the House of Lords and to the House of Commons, which by order of the Assembly, you had transmitted to him and to me, had been by us delivered in at the Colonial Office on the twelfth of May last, and that Lord Bathurst and Mr. Wilmot were to present them in the Houses of which they are Members, towards the close of the Session of Parliament; I have the honour to acquaint you, for the information of the Hon. the Houses of Assembly, that I remained in London until after the Session, and that in the interviews which I had with Lord Bathurst and Mr. Wilmot, they informed me that His Majesty's Government not having come to any determination on the subject mentioned in the petitions, they had been induced by that circumstance not to present them. That they would nevertheless remain in their hands to be thereafter presented, if it should become necessary so to do; and that till the consideration of that measure should at any time be resumed, it should not be so without acquainting it through the Governor to the inhabitants of the Colonies, in time to enable them to be heard in Parliament, if they should think it proper, by Commissioners, by their petitions, or in such manner as they should see fit.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your very humble and very obt. Servant,

W. LINDSAY, Esq. L. J. PAPINEAU.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 24st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration arising, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 8th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.
PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

AT a numerous and respectable meeting of the Inhabitants residing in the Western part of the Home District, held at Phillip Coudy's Tavern on Dundas Street, on the 5th inst. for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety and expediency of choosing a fit person from among the farmers as a candidate at the ensuing Election of representatives. The meeting proceeded by calling Mr. T. Street to the chair, and appointing Capt. John Beatty Secretary. Several gentlemen then spoke on the rights and privileges guaranteed to British Subjects in this Province, by the excellent constitution under which they live. That the people are in full possession of every species of political as well liberty that mankind can wish for, if they choose to exercise it, and urged in the strongest terms the necessity of their doing so. The people paid the most serious attention. The chairman then put the important question, whether the people should exercise the glorious privilege of freemen, by nominating candidates, or give their votes as they had hitherto done to self appointed candidates. It was unanimously resolved that the first motion be adopted.—The chairman was then requested to nominate William Thompson of the Township of Toronto, Esquire, as a fit person for a Representative; the motion was put and carried without a dissenting voice, and resolved unanimously; that the people of this meeting give him their united support at the ensuing Election; and do therefore recommend him to the Electors of the Counties of York and Simcoe, as a gentleman in whom the greatest confidence can be placed.—A committee was then appointed to meet on the 19th inst. at Wilcox's tavern in the Township of Etobicoke to forward the views of the meeting, and to publish the proceedings of this day.

Etobicoke, Jan. 19th 1824.

Pursuant to the appointment of the above meeting, the committee met this day, and resolved that the proceedings of that meeting be immediately published in the York Gazette, and in the observer; it was also resolved, that Mr. T. Street, Capt Monger, Capt. Edward Thompson, and Mr. A. Robitet be appointed to visit the different Townships in the Counties of York and Simcoe, for the purpose of ascertaining the general wish of the inhabitants with respect to the above proceedings; to requ that they will concur in this route, and adopt similar measures in their Townships, with an assurance of our hearty co-operation and support in the event of their concurrence.

By order of the Meeting.
JOHN BEATTY, Secretary.

TO the FREE and INDEPENDENT ELECTORS of the COUNTY of DURHAM.

GENTLEMEN,

THE time has at length arrived when it is necessary for me again to trouble you with a few lines upon the subject of the approaching contest for the COUNTY of DURHAM.

At the time I declared myself a Candidate for the honor of representing you in Parliament, I was assured by a very intimate friend of Mr. WILMOT's, that he did not intend to come forward again; and the Gentleman to whom I allude, even went so far as to assign the reasons which Mr. W had given him for retiring.

I did not, therefore, stand forward in opposition to Mr. WILMOT—it is rather him who is in opposition to me. Having much personal respect for that Gentleman, I shall neither descend upon what some consider to be his defects, as a Member of the House of Assembly, nor attempt to depreciate his merits.—If he is entitled of his ability to serve you better than any of the other Candidates already named; and, if you are of the same opinion, it would ill become me to say, either that he over rates his abilities and acquirements, or, that you err in judgment.—I have taken my pen for no such purpose. But merely to say, that I shall take an early opportunity of paying my respects to you, in person, and of ascertaining your sentiments, upon the knowledge of which, my own resolutions will be immediately formed.—If I find it is the wish of a decided majority that I should withdraw, it will be my duty to retire, and on cession no further trouble, which I shall immediately do, with that deference which all men ought to entertain for public opinion;—but I must learn this decision from your own lips.

With the highest respect, and the most earnest desire for your prosperity,

I have the honor to subscribe myself,

Your most devoted,

Humble Servant,

CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

TO THE FREEHOLDERS OF THE HOME DISTRICT.

Fellow Subjects.

THE Provincial Parliament being now closed; and, as you will soon be called upon to exercise the right which is vested in you by the Constitution, again to choose your Representatives—allow me to address you on a subject in which your own welfare, and that of your posterity, is so materially concerned.

My present purpose is to canvas the general conduct of one of our Members during the last four years, who will be recognised by the measures to which I am about to allude, and I do this the more readily and sincerely, because I was one of his great supporters at the last Election—and having been from first to last, of all the four Sessions, disappointed in my expectations, I have thought it necessary to give you a short statement of his conduct during the last Parliament.

The first Session I have only to notice his Road Bill which cost the Province a large sum of Money for the Printing, and which was afterwards thrown under the table. During the Remainder of that Session he was opposed to every measure that was advocated by all the talent of the House.

The next Session, his conduct was much more extraordinary, In the first place he used all the influence he was master of, to bring into our House of Assembly a Ci-devant Member of the American Congress, who, after abjuring his allegiance to the Crown of Great Britain, and committing atrocious crimes, had fled to this Province to avoid punishment. To this conduct I particularly wish to call the attention of those loyal subjects who, after having fought and bled in the cause of the British Constitution, and of their beloved Sovereign—voluntarily came to this country, and suffered every privation, save that of their loyalty. The next thing he did was to oppose, in solitary stubbornness, the measures adopted by the House to obtain redress from our Sister Colony for the heavy greviance of not receiving our due share of import Duties.

He also stood opposed to many other questions of magnitude and importance throughout the Session, which may be easily ascertained by a reference to the Parliamentary reports.

In the third Session, although His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor had assured the House that the Commissioner, with whom he had intrusted their address to the Throne, had discharged the important duties of his appointment to the fullest satisfaction, this Hon. Member took it upon him to deny the fact and to reprobate the conduct of the honourable and able Commissioner, which had given so much satisfaction to every other individual.

During the last Session his Bill for introducing three Indians into the Legislative Bodies—and one Indian to assist the judges at the Courts of Assize, &c. surely needs no comment. But his opposition to the Bill for taxing the Lands of Absentees and of non-residents for the purpose of making roads, &c. is so manifest an injury to the Canadian Body Politic—that in my opinion that fact alone is sufficient to disqualify him for ever from being returned again—and I really beg every loyal and good subject to take this matter into their serious consideration.—There is one charge we have against this Member, which the Farmers in particular ought to bear in mind, it is this. When the question of a bounty on the growth of Hemp was discussed, this gentleman proposed that the bounty should be lodged in the hands of Merchants!!! The reason whereof, Gentlemen, I leave you to guess. But I must stop, or I shall fill a volume with the charges which lie against him.

There is every prospect that a Union will take place before, or soon after, another Election—and the inhabitants of the Home District should pause before they make choice of their Representatives, who will have to a great and important trust to discharge, and who will go to contend with men of known talents who have hitherto shewn every disposition to subject Upper Canada to their own views, considering us as dependant upon them for our political existence. Let me therefore urge you to think seriously, deliberately, and wisely, and choose such men as will be able to support your rights and privileges in the United Parliament. Such a man, for one of your Representatives, as I have taken the liberty of denouncing one of your present Members, I shall venture to name one who is undoubtedly of great talent, unwearied application, and known integrity: it is true he has not come forward himself, but he might be induced, perhaps, on being properly applied to, to accept the important trust, I speak of James B. Macaulay, Esq. to whom I shall give my own vote if he can be induced to stand.

I remain, Gentlemen,

Your humble Servant,

AN OLD FARMER.

Editorial Commentary.

The "Old Farmer" of Markham will see his address to the Home District in this days paper. We beg to assure him that although we may not join in the invective he has lavished upon one of the present Members, we do most cordially approve his new choice. We know of few men in the whole District so well qualified to be of service to the interests of those who may elect him, and of the country generally, as James B Macaulay Esq.—His talents;—his acquirements; his knowledge of, and attention to, business;—and his unimpeachable integrity, are extensively known and esteemed; and we have no doubt he would be very generally supported: But, the question is, has he been consulted, and will he come forward? If we mistake not he has much of that fine quality which is generally attendant on superior merit, and which is now a days so rare, modesty; and it may be that he will refuse. For our own parts we can only say, if he will allow himself to be nominated, that he shall have all the support it is in our power to give.

The last Observer assures us that no less than 28 Lawyers will be Candidates at the next general Election. This is certainly a most alarming majority out of 40 Members, and we must not tell who, are our apprehensions in this place; yet here, or elsewhere, we have no reluctance to declare our sentiments as to the degree of propriety, there may be in sending a certain number of Lawyers to the Commons House of Assembly, and that number ought to be, consistently with the safety of the people.

In the present state of the country we think that three or four of the ablest gentlemen of the Profession, ought to have seats in the Assembly; and, amongst those three or four, we should always desire to see the Attorney and Solicitor General; because their legal knowledge, exercised as it should be in that Assembly, must ever prove of signal advantage to the country. If the House were composed entirely of Farmers and Merchants, whilst the Province is still in a state of comparative infancy, how many of its 40 Members would know any thing of the difficult science of legislation; or of law precedents; cases; &c. &c; or even how to frame a Bill? We cannot pretend to answer. Farmers are under a great mistake if they suppose their interests are not the interests of every class of persons in the country; and they have nothing to fear from a few able and enlightened Lawers being in their Assembly. It is the Petifogger, and his fraternity, that is to be dreaded like the Plagues of Egypt, or the little vermin that creep into our Graineries for the sake of nibbling up, by little and little, all the good wheat we have had so much difficulty and expense in harvesting.

We have often thought it would afford a curious and interesting subject of inquiry for a man of leisure to trace, historically, the rise, progress, and necessity of legal enactments, and the gradual increase of legal professors of all sorts and degrees, and how far their numbers could be determinate of any particular state of society, at any given period. By a paragraph we intended to have given in this days publication, extracted from an American paper, it will be seen that, in the United States, their are already the moderate number of six thousand Lawyers, besides three thousand Legislators and, in this young Province, only just emerging from the gloom of its primeval wilderness, there are more Lawyers than were to be found in all England for a period of several hundred years; since it appears by a Parliament Roll of the 20th of Edward I. in 1292, that the number of Lawyers and Attornies in the whole Kingdom, did not exceed 140; yet Chancellor Fortescue assures us they encreased in a little more than 100 years to about 2,000, but, afterwards, they were reckoned at 10,000 by Lord Coke in Epist: to Institute. We shrewdly suspect that feudal customs, and baronial power, and the summary vengeance that was generally taken in chivalric times, were not very favourable to the quill driving pursuits. Be that as it may, we find we are running on quite too fast for the present occasion, and must therefore halt.

Eumenius is under consideration.

CURIOUS LETTER.

[Sir Harcourt Lees has lately published the following extraordinary letter, in the Antidote.—]

TO THE PROTESTANTS OF IRELAND

Glasgow, Septembes 18.

Gentlemen.—It is my wish and desire, that every individual attached to his King and the constitution, or Protestant Church, should instantly provide himself with a musket, a bayonet and one hundred rounds of ball cartridge, and be prepared to obey that summons which I fear, from important information I have received, it will be my painful duty to issue, (for the miserable drivellers who have nearly destroyed us never will,) before three months more have expired. A great and fearful crisis is on the eve of breaking over my unfortunate country, which, if I do not avert by proving to the treacherous villains both foreign and domestic, that my loyal and faithful brethren will and shall not be surprised, nor even injured with impunity, inevitably must deluge Ireland in blood. I need not inform you gentlemen (for you may long since have witnessed) that I am the only man amongst the public writers, or supposed statesmen, in this great empire, who has foreseen and foretold every event long before it happened, that a political transaction cannot be even whispered, or a plot contemplated in the most secluded closet in any part of Europe, without my knowing it. Fifteen months back I communicated to the Earl of Liverpool, that upright but undecided, and too timid Minister, the entire mystification of continental politics, and the eventual object that the holy and immaculate villains, mis named allies, contemplated, as the fruits of their treachery. His Lordship had not the nerve to strike that blow which I commanded him to do, and which Lord Chatham would have done, to ensure the glory and future salvation of England. The consequence has been, that Maria Louisa, under the direction of Pozzo di Borgo, laughed at the noble and gallant Wellington who was as much fit to negotiate with this Russian imposter, as Prince Hohenlohe would be to shoot black rocks with me, upon the moors of the brave, the generous, the hospitable proprietors of educated and consequently religious and happy Scotland. Had I danced a few quadrilles with Maria, instead of Waterloo cutting the caper he did, a single shot would not have been fired in the Peninsula; the Priest ridden and thick headed Bourbons would have remained with in the Cloisters of Paris, and my friend Pozzo should have been two thirds of the night swimming in a cold bath to relieve the effects of the diplomatic perspiration I would have worked him in throughout the day. However as late events and to sign ministerial acknowledgements have completely confirmed the truth of every thing I so often predicted, I shall only now again repeat my awful warning to the Protestants of Ireland to arm, and to be vigilantly circumspect and quiet, but to arm, and to be vigilantly circumspect and quiet, but to arm, and to be vigilantly circumspect and quiet, but ready to defend their Church and their country from violation. My last address, designated by the wing or revolutionary faction, as "disgraceful," in the House of Commons, instantly restored Ireland to a degree of temporary tranquility, as I told you it would. Poor Wellesley thought it was his constables that had, in twenty-four hours, frightened the hives out of Rochdale, who are living on reception and sup pieces. Let him follow the example set him by Carew, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when Ireland was precisely in the same state as she is at present, and in one month peace will be restored.—But all the Grenville humming and deception must be given up, or your residing proprietors will be buried by detail, in their beds. Gentlemen, I shall soon again be in the midst of you, where I ever wish to be, cheering and supporting you amidst your offerings and your insults.—I have the honour to be, your faithful friend, were lining the banks of the garden. A magnificent sight, as they are of a light shape, guilt, and painted very beautifully. We had a large telescope, and saw the Ottoman splendour very distinctly. The sultan dyes his beard black, to give himself a young look, and he is known at a considerable distance by that, which contrasts singularly with his face, that is extremely livid and pale. The kiosk, which contained him and his silver sofa, was not very large, and like a hundred others to be seen on the canal. It is strange how words gain, in other countries, a signification different from the meaning they possess in their own. Serail or Seraglio, is generally understood as the habitation, or rather the confinement for women; here it is the Sultan's residence; it cannot be called his palace, for the kiosks, gardens, courts, walls, stables, are so mixed, that it is many houses in many gardens.

HARCOURT LEES.

The streets both of Pera and Constantinople are so narrow that few of them admit a carriage; the windows of every story project over those under them, so that at the upper, people may shake hands sometimes across the street. No Turk of any consequence makes a visit, if it is only four doors from his own, but on horseback; and, on my arrival here, I saw one who landed in a boat, and had a fine grey horse led by four men, that went a long way round, on which he mounted gravely, to get off in a few minutes.

As to women; as many, if not more than men, are to be seen in the streets, but they look like walking mummies. A large loose robe of dark green cloth covers them from the neck to the ground; over that is a large piece of muslin, which wraps the shoulders and arms, and another which goes over the head and eyes. If I was to walk about the streets here, I would certainly wear the same dress, for the Turkish women call others names, when they meet them with their faces uncovered. When I go out I have the ambassador's sedan chair, which is like mine in London, only guilt and varnished like a French coach, and six Turks carry it, as they fancy it impossible that two or four men can carry one; two Janisaries walk before with high fur caps on. The ambassadors here have all Janisaries as guard- allowed them by the Porte.—Thank Heaven, I have but a little way to go in this pomp, and fearing every moment the Turks should fling me down, they are so awkward; for the platform, where people land and embark from and to Pera, is not far from this house.

I saw a Turk the other day lying on cushions, striking slowly an iron which he was shaping into a horse shoe, his pipe in his mouth all the time—nay among the higher order of Turks, there is an invention which saves them the trouble of holding the pipe—two small wheels are fixed on each side of the bowl of the pipe and thus the smoker has only to puff away, or let the pipe rest upon his under lip, while he moves his head as he pleases. Perhaps, it is lucky for Europe that the Turks are idle and ignorant—the immense power this Empire might have, were it peopled by the industrious and ambitious, would make it mistress of world. At present it only serves as a dead wall to intercept the commerce and battles which other powers might create one another.

The Turks in their conduct towards our sex are an example to all other nations; a Turk has his head cut off, his papers ar examined, every thing in his house seized, but the wife is provided for; her jewels are left her.

The harem is sacred even to that rapacious power, which has seized the master's life only because he was rich. It may be said, that in Turkey like wise, women are perfectly safe from an idle, curious, impertinent, public; and what is called the world can never disturb the ease and quiet of a Turkish wife. Her talents, her beauty, her happiness, or misery, are equally concealed from malicious observers. Of misery, unless Turkish woman is beyond conception unreasonable, I cannot imagine that her portion can be great; for the wife whose wretched husband earns subsistance by carrying water, or burdens, sits at home bedecked with jewels, or goes out as her fancy directs, and the fruits of his labour are appropriated to her use. In great houses, the wives of the Turks, who compose the train of a Turkish husband, are destined to be subservient to the will of the first wife, and she treats them as she pl[illegible]

Domestic.

MONTREAL MANSION HOUSE HOTEL.

Domestic Improvement.—The enterprising and public spirited John Molson Esquire, to whom not only the citizens of Montreal, but those of the whole Province are so much indebted, for his zealous, and active exertions to promote their interests, is now making the necessary arrangements for erecting a new Mansion House, on the scite of the old one, which was destroyed by fire some time ago. We were yesterday favoured with a view of the plan and elevation of the intended building, which was executed by an architect of acknowledged merit; the design is chaste, and at the same time will produce a degree of elegance of which the old building was destitute. The interior arrangements seem admirably calculated to afford comfort to the guests and convenience to the persons who may conduct the establishment; the plan embracing the luxury of baths, large and comfortable apartments for the reception of company, and between thirty and forty bed-rooms, which will be airy, and well lighted.

The building is to be upwards of 100 feet in length, by 75 feet deep, and will have two fronts, one facing St. Paul Street, the other, looking towards the River. The front to St. Paul Street, is to be of cut stone, receding a short distance from the street, so as to preserve a good entrance; two wings are to project at each end, from the main building, about 6, or 7 feet, in order to afford room for a handsome Doric Portico, surrounded by an ornamental balcony over the grand entrance, which will be opened for public accommodation, on particular occasions. The River front will be plain, uniform, and handsome, but less expensive than the one facing the street. The Ball-Room, which will extend from the left wing to the rear, is to be finished in a similar manner to the former, with the exception of the lights being admitted from both fronts, in place of the sides, as was the case in the old room, and the orchestra being placed on the side, and not in the end as formerly, the height will take in the two upper stories.

The supper room (which will be under the dancing one) is to be superior to the old room, as it will be several feet higher, and will have the advantage of a much better entrance. On all occasions, except on assembly nights, this apartment is to be divided by folding doors, and will form a dining and sitting room, having two separate entrances from the Great Hall which will be 30 feet square, from which will lead the principal staircase. The Ball and Supper Rooms are to be warmed by ranges of air, which will preclude the introduction of Stoves, and consequently produce a more agreeable, and healthy temperature in the atmosphere of each.

A handsome suit of rooms are to be fitted up in the third story, which we understand will be appropriated to the purposes of Masonic meetings.

On the centre of the roof there is to be a flat of about 25 feet square, enclosed by a Balustrade; the view from this elevated place will be delightful, as it commands an extensive prospect up and down the River, and extends as far as the eye can reach on the opposite side, to the mountains of Chambly and Vermont.

The New Mansion House, for neatness and convenience will be decidedly superior to any buildings of the kind in Canada, and will perhaps not be surpassed by many in North America. It will be ornamental to the City, afford splendid accommodation to strangers, and add considerably to the comfort of our social circles.

AN ACT to Repeal part of the Second Clause of an Act passed in the Thirty-Third Year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to Provide for the Nomination and Appointment of Parish and Town Officers, within this Province," and to make more Effectual Provision for obtaining an Accurate Census of the Population of this Province.

[Passed 19th January, 1824.]

WHEREAS it is expedient that an accurate Census of the Population of this Province should, from time to time, be obtained, and deposited in the Office of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of this Province, AND WHEREAS, the Laws now in force for that purpose are found not to answer the desired end, and it is therefore expedient to repeal the same, and to make other provision by Law, for obtaining such Census: Be it therefore Enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province;'" and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, so much of the second clause of an Act passed in the thirty-third year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to provide for the Nomination and Appointment of Parish and Town Officers within this Province," as relates to the taking a true and complete list of every male and female inhabitant, by the Town Clerk, within the limits of his parish, town or township, and returning the same to the Justices in General Quarter Sessions assembled, in the month of April, be, and the same is hereby repealed.

II. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall be the duty of the Assessors chosen or appointed for any parish, township, reputed township, place or places, in this Province, to take a true and correct List of all the inhabitants of the parish, township, place or places for which they may be chosen or appointed, which List shall be in the following form:—

And it shall and may be lawful for the Assessors, or one of them, and they are hereby required to demand from every inhabitant, householder, or head of a family, at the usual place of residence of such householder, or head of a family, a true and correct List of the number of persons composing such family, male and female, and their respective ages, including therein, all persons employed by, or resident with, such householder; and if such inhabitant, householder, or head of a family, shall refuse to give in a true and correct List, or shall neglect to do so for ten days after the same shall have been demanded as aforesaid, he or she shall, for every such refusal or neglect, forfeit and pay a fine of Forty Shillings.

III. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said Assessors shall severally subscribe such List, to be taken by them, and shall deliver the same to the Clerk of the Peace for the District in which they may reside, on or before the first day of April in each and every year; and at the same time, they, or one of them, shall make oath before the Clerk of the Peace, (which oath he is hereby authorised to administer,) that such List hath been faithfully taken by attendance at the usual place of residence of the several householders, or heads of families therein named, and contains a true and correct statement of the number of inhabitants in the township, place, or places for which the same shall have been taken, according to the best of his or their knowledge and belief.

IV. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall be the duty of the Town Clerk in each and every town or township in this Province, within ten days after the holding of the Town Meeting, for such town, township, or place, to notify the persons chosen at such Town Meetings as Assessors, by leaving a notice in writing at their usual place or places of residence, or by personally acquainting them thereof, of their having been so chosen; and to require of such persons immediately to take the oath prescribed for parish and town officers; and further, it shall be the duty of the Town Clerk to transmit to the Clerk of the Peace, within twenty days after the holding of the Town Meeting, the names and descriptions of the persons who may have been chosen Assessors at such Town Meeting, accompanied by affidavit that he hath duly notified them of their election or appointment as Assessors, as required by this Act; and if such Town Clerk shall neglect, or refuse so to notify the Assessors, and to acquaint the Clerk of the Peace of the names and descriptions of such Assessors, he shall pay a fine of Three Pounds.

V. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any Assessor or Assessors shall neglect to perform the duties hereby imposed upon him or them, it shall be the duty of the Clerk of the Peace to cause such Assessor or Assessors to be summoned by any one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, to appear at the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, or before any two Justices of the Peace to answer for such neglect or refusal; and if such Assessor or Assessors shall be convicted before the said Court or Justices of such neglect or refusal, or shall not appear before such Court or Justices, in obedience to such summons, due proof of the service thereof being first made, the Court, or Justices, shall impose a fine upon him or them, not exceeding Ten Pounds, nor less than Five Pounds: Provided nevertheless, That nothing herein contained, shall be construed to authorise the said Court or Justices to levy the fine imposed upon any one Assessor from the goods or chattels of the other.

VI. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case of the neglect or refusal of the Assessor or Assessors, chosen and appointed at the Town Meeting, to discharge the duty hereby imposed upon him; or in case no Assessors are chosen and appointed at the Town Meeting, or in case of the death, removal, or sickness of any Assessor or Assessors, it shall be lawful for the Justices assembled at the said Court of General Quarter Sessions, or any adjourned or Special Session, to appoint two fit and discreet persons to perform the duties of Assessors; and the Clerk of the Peace shall forthwith notify them, respectively, of their appointment, and such persons so appointed, or either of them, shall be liable to be proceeded against, at any adjourned meeting of the said Court, or before any two Justices of the Peace, for neglecting to take the oath of Assessor for the space of ten days after a notice of appointment shall have been served; or for any neglect or refusal to perform the duty by this Act required to be performed by Assessors, and shall be liable, upon conviction, on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, to a like fine as is hereby prescribed respecting the Assessor or Assessors, chosen at the Town Meeting; and the Court, or Justices, before whom any conviction shall take place under this Act, shall continue to appoint another or other Assessor or Assessors, and to punish the same for neglect or refusal to act as such in the manner pointed out by this Act, until the duties hereby required, shall be performed.

VII. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall be the duty of the Clerk of the Peace to make out a General Return of the population of his district, from the several returns which he may receive from the Assessors, and to transmit the same to the Office of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person administering the Government of this Province, for the time being, on or before the first day of June, in each and every year; and if such General Return shall not contain the whole population of his district, he shall send in a return of such townships or places as may be deficient, as soon as practicable after he shall be enabled so to do, by the Assessor or Assessors of such townships or places.

VIII. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Clerk of the Peace, Assessors, and Town Clerk, shall be entitled, for the duties by this Act imposed upon them, to demand and receive from the Treasurer of the district, from, and out of any monies in his hands for the public uses of the district, the sums following; that is to say:—

The Clerk of the Peace, for each return, One Pound.

The Assessor, Three Pounds for every Hundred Pounds upon the Assessment Roll, in addition to the remuneration now afforded by Law.

The Town Clerk, Five Shillings for each Notification.

Provided nevertheless, that the Assessor or Assessors of, or for any town, township, or place, shall not receive any fee or reward whatever for the performance of any duty, as Assessor or Assessors, until the return of the population in this Act required, shall have been filed in the Office of the Clerk of the Peace, and a certificate thereof produced to the Treasurer, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

IX. And be it further Enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the fines and forfeitures imposed by this Act, except as is herein otherwise provided for, together with costs of conviction, shall and may be recovered before any two or more of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, or by the confession of the party, and shall and may be levied, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person or persons convicted, under and by virtue of a warrant for that purpose issued by the Justices, or any two of them, before whom, he or they may have been convicted; one half of which fines shall be paid to the informer, or person who shall sue for the same, and the other half into the hands of the Treasurer, for the public uses of the district.

Executive Council Chamber York, 31st January, 1824

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk Executive Council

Executive Council Office, York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Ticket a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office. York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

TO THE PUBLIC.

UNDERSTANDING that Reports are in circulation, that I wrote, or dictated, an anonymous letter to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, I consider it necessary, in justice to my character to declare, that I have not the most distant idea of who either wrote, dictated, or sent the said Letter; and that it does not exceed two months since I first learned of the circumstance, and I therefore feel it my duty to pronounce the Author of such Reports a most infamous Liar. The labours and anxieties of a faithful Representative, great beyond what you imagine, might perhaps induce me to withdraw from this honourable trust, but that public duty commands me in a measure, at least to offer myself again to your choice; and if the result of such offer should be the Election of another, I will be happy in the hope that you shall have chosen one more able; but be assured that none can be chosen more attached to your interests and to the honour and prosperity of the Province, than

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1824.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

THE KING.—It is with feelings of the highest gratification that we find ourselves enabled to present to our readers a more detailed account of HIS MAJESTY'S late visit to DRURY LANE, a circumstance which has completely set at nought the malicious surmises so industriously fabricated and circulated by his enemies. The enthusiastic greeting which the King experienced from his subjects upon the present occasion surpasses any thing of the kind that has occurred in England since his accession to the Throne. No living Monarch is so capable of forcing himself into the hearts of his subjects as our present gracious Sovereign, and even at this distance, it is a joyous reflection to his subjects to behold him so much honoured and caressed by that portion of them who have the happiness to be permitted to make so near an approach to his person. The only way in which we can vie with them is to shew by our actions, both in public and private, that we in heart venerate the Sovereign who reigns over us, and are happy and contented under the administration of his government both at home and abroad.

MINA.—General Mina was received in Plymouth with the most enthusiastic applause. On getting into his carriage, the horses were taken out, and it was dragged by the populace, amidst the loudest huzzas, and cries of "Mina for ever." "Brave Mina," through the town to the Royal Hotel.—No fewer than 3000 persons assembled on the occasion.

ENGLAND.—The English Funds were improving. A considerable advance took place on the 6th, on which day purchases were made by several eminent brokers to a very large amount. Wagers had been laid that Consols would advance to 86 in the ensuing week, and in one or two instances ¼ per cent had been given for the option of purchasing them at 87. They however experienced a slight decline on the 8th, on which day, Consols for Accounts opened at 85¾ eached 85¼, and closed at 85¾.

Sir Robert Gifford is to succeed Sir Robert Dallas as Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and Sir J. Copley will succeed to the vacant office of Attorney General. Mr. Wetherell is talked of as Solicitor General.

The trial of the persons concerned in the murder of Mr. Weare, has been postponed to the 6th of January.

The King held a Court at his Palace in Pall Mall on the 5th, at which a number of Foreign Envoys attended.

Accounts were received at the Admiralty on Tuesday from the Island of Ascension, which announce the death of Com. Sir R. Mends, commanding on the coast of Africa.

Lord Milford died at his seat, Picton Castle, Pembrokeshire, on the 28th of November.

The Hon. Capt. Berkley of the Royal Navy, has married Lady Charlotte Lenox, sister to the then Duke of Richmond.

RICE GRUE.—An elegant cement may be made from rice flour, which is at present used for that purpose in China and Japan. It is only necessary to mix the rice flour intimately with cold water, and gently simmer it over the fire, when it readily forms a delicate and durable cement, not only answering all the purposes of cabinet paste, but admirably adapted for joining together paper, cards, &c., in forming the various beautiful and tasteful ornaments which affords so much employment and amusement to the ladies. When made of the consistence of plastic clay, models, busts, basso relievos, &c. may be formed: and the articles, are susceptible of a high polish, and very durable.

STATE OF ENGLAND.—From extracts published from "LOWE'S PRESENT STATE OF ENGLAND" giving a detailed account of the sums annually raised in Great Britain and Ireland, for defraying the expenses of the late war, it appears that the entire cost of that long and important war amounted to the enormous sum of £1,100,000,0001. The war expenditure of 1813, after deducting the interest of the national debt, the nation of expenditure at a peace establishment, and the depreciation of currency, amounted to no less than £70,000,000 sterling! Is there another country on the face of the globe that could flourish under such circumstances!

RANDOLPH.—The Commercial Advertiser gives the following Portrait of Mr Randolph.

"He (Randolph) appears this winter, in a large drab surtout, with a huge cape to his elbows and a flat Missouri fur cap; from which his lock of hair, tied with a ribbon, depends conspicuously behind—while two spindle legs appear below, covered with white stockings, and warmed at the bottom with large flannel socks that project three or four inches above the top of his shoes. His mind, his body, his dress, his walk, his voice, his argument, his oratory, are all unique; as distinctly marked as would be a real Arab in the Tontine Coffee-house. The moment he rises, the hum that ordinarily prevails through the House, at once subsides—the moment the first note of his shrill pipe is heard, there is nothing else to hear."

EXHILIRATING GAS.—The effects of the Protoxide of Azote or Nitrous Oxide Gas, on Mr. Southey, the poet, and others, as recorded by Dr. Ure are as follows.

"Mr. Southey could not distinguish between the first effects and an apprehension of which he was unable to divest himself. His first definite sensations were a fullness and dizziness in the head, such as to induce a fear of falling. This was succeeded by a laugh, which was involuntary but highly pleasurable, accompanied with a peculiar thrilling in the extremities; a sensation perfectly new and delightful. For many hours after this experiment, he imagined that his taste and smell were more acute, and is certain that he felt unusually strong and cheerful. In a second experiment he felt pressure still superior, and has once, when under its influence, poetically remarked, that he supposed the atmosphere of the highest of all possible heavens to be composed of Nitrous Oxide Gas.—

"Mr. Wedgwood, who disbelieved in the exhilarating powers of this Gas, breathed atmospheric air first without knowing it was so. He declared it to have no effect, which confirms him in his disbelief. After breathing the gas, however, for some time, he threw the bag from him; kept breathing on laboriously with his mouth open, holding his nose with his left hand without power to take it off, though aware of the ludicrousness of his situation, all his muscles seemed to be thrown into vibratory motions; he had a violent inclination to make antic gestures; seemed lighter than the atmosphere; and as if about to mount. Before the experiment he was a good deal fatigued after a long ride, of which he permanently lost all sense.

"On Sir Humphrey Davy and Robert Kingsdale, M. D. the effect was still more powerful; their sensations were indescribably exquisite and the emotions sublime in the extreme."

Ure's Chemical Dictionary.

FREEMASONRY—JUDAISM.—Among a curious collection of papers we lately received from Madrid, is one containing an elaborate series of remarks, tending to prove that Freemasonry is nothing but Judaism; and an immense number of these papers have been printed by order of the Regency, and distributed among the inhabitants of the Provinces for the purpose of exciting odium against the Constitutionalists, many of whom are Freemasons, by a strong appeal to the religious prejudices of the lower order.—The paper in question is most probably drawn up by some one of the monks now preparing to take possession of his convent, and to revel amidst the good things he will be able to squeeze out of the poor peasants; and certainly it would have been undeserving of notice, if it had not first been published by the command of the Madrid Regency, in their own Gazette, and afterwards in a separate form for a political purpose. It is too long for insertion, we shall, therefore, only attempt a short sketch of its contents. It begins thus:—

"What is Freemasonry, and what is its object?

"Freemasonry is Judaism, masked under the first name consequently, all Jews are Freemasons or Liberals, by nature. Nevertheless there are many persons, who, without being Jews, are Freemasons, for reasons we shall afterwards point out.—If Freemasonry is equivalent to Judaism, the political object of the Freemasons and Jews can be no other than to establish themselves into a corporative nation, notwithstanding the anathema by which they are condemned, for ever, to live like wanderers and vagabonds among all nations, without country, king and laws.

"The political object of the Freemasons and Jews being the re-establishment of their nation, their religious object can be no other than to re establish the Law of Moses, or that of the Jews, and consequently, the Temple of Solomon which symbolically represents it.

"PROOFS OF THE ABOVE ASSERTIONS DEDUCED FROM MANY AND STRIKING SIGNS.

"The signs, rites, ceremonies, &c of the Freemasons, are Jewish, and even the words they use are Hebrew. The allegorical history of their master, Horam, is all taken from the history of the Jews in the Old Testament. The columns in the Lodges represend those of the above King and their documents are dated in Jerusalem. Their computations of time are also according to the law of Moses. The great Patriarch of the Freemasons is St. John Baptist, because as this was the last just man in the old, or Jewish law, he having immediately preceded Jesus Christ, author of the new law, or the Law of Grace, it follows that all the Saints of the latter are according to the Jews, who considered Jesus Christ as an impostor, reprobates, heathens, and idolators, and our worship consequently idolatrous. In this sense, as the Jews consider there was no just man subsequent to St. John Baptist, the Freemasons had good reasons for choosing him for their protector and chief mason."

After stating that no less than twenty odd argumentative reasons why Freemasonry is the same thing as Judaism; and after also asserting "that Bonaparte's Expedition to Egypt was no other than a Masonic one, and for the purpose of seizing on Jerusalem, as the head of the Empire of the Freemasons," the paper alleges the following curious reason, numbered 21:—

"Among them (Freemasons) the number 13 is symbolical, because it alludes to the 13 Tribes of Israel, and for this reason, the principles or superiors, officers of Freemasonry, are 13 in all the globe, scattered through the different kingdoms and provinces constituting the same. Such among others, are Benjamin Constant and Jeremy Bentham, whose names are evidently Jewish. The latter, in his Lamentations to the Portuguese and Spanish Cortes, was in the habit of calling the Deputies My Children, according to the Oriental usage of the Patriarchs and ancient Jews when they sought to admonish or persuade the people."

After this, we hope neither Mr. Benjamin Constant nor Mr. Jeremy Bentham will visit either Spain or Portugal for the paper in question has also been published in Portuguese. After the above specimen, what shall we say of those presiding over the destinies of Spain? We can only say that Ferdinand and his Monks are very ungrateful to the Children of Israel, for they certainly were the best Allies they had in the late contest.—London Morning Chronicle.

CAST IRON CHURCH.—St. George's church, Liverpool, is an object of considerable architectural interest for its taste, and as having been nearly the first cast iron church erected in the kingdom. The whole of the frame work of the windows, doors, pillars, groins roofs, pulpit, and ornamental enrichments, are of cast iron. The length is 118 feet; the breath 47. It is ornamented by a splendid cast window of stained glass. The tower raised to the height of 98 feet and standing on a hill, the site of an ancient sea-beacon, is elevated 345 feet above high water mark, and commands one of the finest views of the kingdom, comprehending the town and shipping of Liverpool, the estuary of the Mersey, the level surface of Lancashire, as far as the eye can trace the prospect, with the craggy hills of Wales towards the west, and towards the north-east the distant mountains of Cumberland and Westmoreland.

UNITED STATES.—It is stated in an eastern paper, that there are 5000 clergymen, 6000 lawyers, 10,000 physicians, 3000 legislators, and 500,000 students in the United States. Also, 1000 newspapers, [this estimate is too high, by at least 500.—Com. Adv.] and 100 other periodical publications. It is said no man will undertake to number the justices of peace and militia officers.

THE SAWNEY REBEL and his Watch!—The desire of gain will sometimes inspire with dishonest cunning the illiterate savage. After a successful attack on the Royal party, in 1745, a Highlander had gained a watch as his share of the spoils of the vanquished. Unacquainted with its use, he listened with equal surprise and pleasure to the ticking sound with which his new acquisition amused him; after a few hours, however, the watch went down, the noise ceased, and the disputed owner, looking on the toy no longer with a satisfaction, determined to conceal the misfortune which had befallen it, and to dispose of it to the first person who offered him a trifle in exchange. He soon met with a customer; but, at parting, he could not conceal his triumph, and exultingly exclaimed, "hoo, hoo, she dee'd last night."

SORE THROAT FROM COLD.—At this season of the year, when common colds are prevalent, a better remedy cannot be prescribed for a soreness or inflammation of the inside of the throat, which often attends a severe catarrh, than the following.

MIX a wine glass full of good Calcined Magnesia and Honey, to the consistence of paste, or jelly, and take a tea-spoonful about once an hour through the day, for a day or two. It is cooling, healing and very gently cathartic.—Bermuda Paper.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Weekly Register.

SIR,

While our Province affords countenance and support to so many weekly publications devoted to the common passing events of the day, it must, to the serious and reflecting mind, be matter of deep regret that there is not one page amongst us devoted especially to our best and most permanent interests.—I do not intend to find fault with the spirit, or the taste, that is indicated by the number of our weekly Newspapers:—No;—it is laudable and praise-worthy, and argues an increase of intellectual improvement. But while we bestow so much pains to hear and know things of a temporary nature, it is certainly culpable in no small degree, that so little attention is paid, in this way, to the concerns of a future state, which we all believe to be uniform and unchangeable.

Why should religious Newspapers be so rarely to be found, while the Press is pouring forth its abundant weekly labour from every corner? It cannot be that they are too expensive. The same materials, mental and manuel exertions are only required in the one that are found adequate in the other. It cannot be that such a mode of conveying religious knowledge and instruction is any way improper. No;—the more common and easy of access the means of instruction, the more highly they should be esteemed; because effects are generally, if not always, correspondent to the causes that produce them. Novelty also has its attractions; and the young mind particularly, is drawn by its powers. Youth is the time for instilling right principles in the mind, and for training it in the school of virtue. The periodical arrival of a religious newspaper would naturally engage the attention, and the discussion of every new topic would serve to improve the understanding, and enforce the necessity of a life of conformity to the requirements of the Gospel. Neither is it that religious books and regular preaching supersede their necessity, for, provided they were sufficiently common (which is far from being the case) they could not do all that might be expected from the additional help of judicious religious newspapers. Enticements to evil are to be met with at every step—and at every step they should be vigorously opposed by some counteracting agency. The root of moral evil is a depraved, sinful nature; and its auxiliaries are the various concurring influences by which it is continually surrounded. On the other hand, the root of moral good in man is the grace of God, implanted in the heart, and its auxiliaries are only to be found in those things that tend to illustrate man's real condition, and lead him to sober, serious reflection thereon. The answer then must lie in that indifference to the subject which is so very manifest. And it surely is a shame to this Province, that the whole interest taken in it in the cause of religion, provided the estimate could be made in money, is not equal in value to a single printing establishment.

It was chiefly owing to that indifference that the Christian Recorder was suspended,—a paper which, though animadverted upon by some in my humble estimation, was of a character to supersede in a great degree the kind that have as yet appeared in the Canadas. The Editor promised to resume it when circumstances should be favourable. And what time can be favourable without the proper disposition? If those who subscribe to two or three weekly papers were to drop one, and apply the price of it to encourage the re appearance of the Christian Recorder, it would thus find many friends. If the leading characters of the country generally, themselves setting the example, were to prevail upon their heedless neighbours to curtail their needless, if not vicious, expences, and thus save money enough to pay for a Recorder, many more might be added. And should every clergyman in the Province become responsible for twelve or fifteen Copies, he might surely dispose of them amongst his parishioners for articles of household consumption without the risque of a shilling; and while he was giving encouragement to the cause generally, he would convert the own unavoidable expences into a means of seconding his labours from the pulpit, and of bettering the moral and religious condition of his flock.

In hopes that the foregoing remarks may serve to excite an interest in the revival of the Christian Recorder; I subscribe myself,

Your obedient Servant,

EUSEBIUS.

* I understand all virtue to consist in a religious observance of the substance of the Ten Commandments, and not that principle of selfishness which separates virtue from the act of obedience to the Supreme Law giver.

HORTICULTURE.

The Arracacha of South America.—We observe by the Norfolk papers of Wednesday last that the distinguished Botanist Baron de Schaeck has arrived there from Trinidad, with the intention of directing his course to the north, for the purpose of introducing to our Horticulturists, a knowledge of the properties of the Arracacha, and the manner of cultivating this excellent vegetable. Those who are well acquainted with its qualities describe it as one of the most useful of all the vegetables in South America, its root yielding a food which is prepared in the Kitchens in the same manner as potatoes. It is extremely grateful to the palate; so tender that it requires little cooking, and so easy of digestion, that it is the common practice where it is cultivated, to give it to convalescents, and persons with weak stomachs, being considered of a much less flatulant nature than potatoes. Starch, and a variety of pastry work are made of its flecons; and reduced to a pulp it enters the composition of certain fermented liquors, supposed to be very proper for restoring the lost tone of the stomach.

The Arracacha, though a native of Santa Fe, and other places in South America, thrives best in temperate climates. Its cultivation requires a deep black mould, and it is propagated by cutting the roots to pieces, each having a separate eye or shoot, and planting these in separate holes.

At the end of three or four months the roots are of sufficient size and quantity to be used for culinary purposes, and if allowed to remain in the ground for six months, they increase to a great bulk, without their taste being any way altered. We understand the Arracacha has undergone such experiments in Scotland, as to satisfy Botanists there that it is much superior in every respect, to the potatoe, which it is expected in a great measure to supercede. The potatoe was originally introduced into Europe from a warm climate, and has since become naturalized to the soil. In many parts of the United States, there can be no doubt the Arracacha might be cultivated with as much ease as the potatoe; and considering the great superiority which it is said to possess over that root, we hope that Baron de Schaeck will be encouraged in his endeavors to introduce it into this country.

The Chairman reported that the Committee had agreed to a resolution which he was directed to submit for the adoption of the House.

The Report was ordered to be received, and it was resolved that the Banking bill should be referred to a Select Committee to report thereon.

On motion of Mr NICHOL, Messrs Atty. General, Hagerman, Baldwin, Gordon, Crooks, and Jones of Leeds, were appointed the Select Committee for that purpose

Agreeably to the order of the day, the House went into Committee on the Salmon fishery bill.

The Chairman reported the Bill as amended

Mr HAGERMAN from the Committee to confer with the Committee of the Hon. the Legislative Council upon the subject of certain resolutions sent up from the House of Assembly relative to the growth of Tobacco in the Western Districts of the Province reported as follows.

The Committee to confer with a Committee of the Honourable the Legislative Council upon the subject of resolutions sent up from this House relative to the growth of Tobacco in the Western Districts, met them in the Joint Committee Room, and were informed by them, that it appeared to the Honourable the Legislative Council, that the allusion made in the first resolution to the restriction imposed upon the admission of our breadstuffs into Great Britain, might be prejudicial to the objects of the application and to the general interests of the Province, and they recommended that a Joint Committee might be framed for the purpose of preparing an address in conformity to the spirit of the Resolution, making the amendment suggested.

Mr. JONES of Grenville, from the Committee to confer with a Committee of the Honourable the Legislative Council, on the subject matter of the Bill entitled "An Act to make good certain monies issued and advanced by His Excellency the Lieut. Governor in pursuance of the Address of the House of Assembly during the last Session," met the said Committee at the time and place appointed. The Committee of the Honourable the Legislative Council proposed that the said Bill should be altered, by striking out the words, "and for other purposes" which your Committee agreed to report to your Honourable House.

On motion of Mr. BALDWIN, the Salmon Fishery Bill was ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time on the Monday following Agreeably to notice, Mr. HAMILTON of Lincoln moved for leave to bring in a Bill to extend the jurisdiction of Probate and Surrogate Courts in this Province.

On which the House divided.

YEAS.—Messrs. Hamilton of Lincoln, Hagerman, Burwell, Gordon, Wilmot, Clark, Hamilton of Wentworth, Pattie, Rottan, White, Casey, Bostwick, McMartin, Jones of Grenville, Wilson of Prince Edward, Nichol, Crooks, Morris, and McDonnell—19.

NAYS.—Messrs. Walsh, Baby, Jones of Leeds, and Baldwin, —4

Question gained, majority 15, and the Bill was read.

On motion of Mr HAMILTON of Lincoln, the Probate and Surrogate Court Bill was ordered to be read a second time on the Monday following.

On motion of Mr NICHOL, the consideration of so much of the order of the day as related to the Kingston Bank Bill was postponed till the ensuing Monday.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the address to the King was read the second time.

Mr. SECRETARY HILLIER, brought down from His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, a message which was read by the Speaker as follows.

P. MAITLAND,

The Lieut. Governor is apprehensive that the contemplated arrangement for a second circuit, will not secure the certain and effectual administration of Justice without an increase in the number of Judges which was deemed sufficient in the original constitution of the Court of King's Bench.

The Lieutenant Governor therefore recommends to the House of Assembly, to take into consideration the propriety of enabling him to make provision for and additional appointment to the Bench

In regard to this measure the Lieut Governor suggests to the House of Assembly, that it may be expedient to avoid delay, on account of the necessity of submitting any addition of this nature for the approbation of His Majesty's Government.

Government House, }
3d January, 1824. }

On motion of Mr. JONES of Grenville, it was resolved. That an humble address should be presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, thanking him for his message respecting the provision for the appointment of an additional Judge of the Court of King's Bench of this Province, and assuring His Excellency that the House would give the matter their serious consideration.

On motion of Mr. JONES of Grenville it was ordered that the House should go into Committee of the whole on the Monday following to take into consideration His Excellency's message.

On motion of Mr. JONES of Grenville, Messrs. Morris, and McMartin, were ordered as a Committee to draft an address to His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, pursuant to the resolution of the House.

On motion of Mr MORRIS the House went into Committee of the whole on the address to His Majesty

The Chairman reported the address without amendment.

On the Question for receiving the Report, the House divided

YEAS.—Messrs. Hamilton of Wentworth, Nichol, Hamilton of Lincoln, Pattie, Baldwin, Wilmot, Walsh, Casey, McMartin, Wilson of Prince Edward, Crooks, Morris, and McDonell—13

VOL. III. YORK U. C. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1824. No. IX.

By authority.

Government House,
February 24th, 1824.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR has been pleased to appoint the following Gentlemen to be Commissioners, under an Act of the Last Session of Parliament, entitled, "An Act to amend and extend the Provisions of an Act, passed at the last Session of Parliament, entitled, "An Act to provide for constructing a Navigable Canal, between Burlington Bay and Lake Ontario:"

The Hon. Thomas Clark,
James Crooks,
John Wilson,
William Chisholm, and Manuel Overfield, Esquires.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the close of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Cl'k. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.
In Council.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Cl'k Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Terms of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragment thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two Years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals.

His Majesty's visit to Drury Lane Theatre.—His Majesty having intimated his intention of honouring this Theatre with his presence last night, by commanding the performances for the even ing, every necessary preparation was made for his reception.

The Magistrates, Sir R Birnie, and Mr. Halls, were in attendance, and the distribution of the police was as such, that there was not the slightest confusion; the Carriage passed to the Theatre without stoppage or impediment.

His Majesty and suite left his Palace in Pall Mall at about a quarter before seven o'clock in five royal carriages, escorted by a party of Life Guards.

The Royal Procession attracted crowds of spectators, and most of the windows of the houses were filled. The Shakespeare Tavern, opposite Bridge street, was illuminated with G R and the Crown, in variegated lamps.

The King was received by the populace with loud and continued cheerings, and the waving of handkerchiefs, as he passed through the street, on his way to the Theatre, where his arrival and entrance was announced by the sound of a trumpet.

Viscount Lake, as Lord in Waiting, rode in the carriage with His Majesty. The other attendants in the royal suit, were the Lord Steward, the Duke of Wellington, as Colonel of the Royal Horse Guards, the Gold Stick in Waiting, the Vice Chamberlain, Lord M. Bruce, the Deputy Comptroller of the Household, Lord Francis Conyngham, Sir Hildrone Turner, and Sir Edmund Nagle the Grooms in Waiting. Mr. Mash, senior, and Mr. Mash, junior, the Gentlemen Ushers in Waiting. Col. Vivian, the Equerry in Waiting. Mr Gardner, the Groom of the Great Chamber in Waiting, the Esquire in Waiting, and the Lieutenant of the Yeomen Guard.

This was the first visit with which His Majesty had honoured the Theatre since the re building of it: inferior, and as the Royal state-box had been widened, and the decorations were on a more splendid scale than they had been former ly, the effect was more complete and imposing. His reception room was ornamented for the occasion. The apartment is in itself well proportioned, and sufficiently spacious. There was a large ar mchair in the centre, with eight Grecian burners; and ten large Grecian lamps served also to illuminate the room. The tables were ornamented with bouquets in gilt vases; the draperies were scarlet, and the cornices and mouldings gilt. The box appropriated for His Majesty's use was the principal one of the four over the stage, on the King's right hand side. The embellishments of the exterior, though of course new, and in themselves handsome, were not in accordance with the rest of the Theatre The drapery was crimson, the cornice, canopy, and crown, were a mass of gilt, and the frontings of the box appeared to be of blue fluted silk, with a panel in the centre bearing the Imperial arms A large chandelier had of necessity been removed; and as no expedient had been provided to supply its place, the box was left in comparative darkness. The interior was lined with scarlet hung with Waterloo blue draperies, ornamented with bullion fringe. The back was lighted with Grecian lamps on gilt pillars.

Very shortly after the doors were opened the Theatre was crowded in every part; indeed, so great was the pressure in the pit, that several attempted to escape from the danger of suffocation by mounting into the dress boxes, but most vigorously repulsed by the police in attendance.

His Majesty was received by Mr Elliston, Mr. Winston, and Mr Bunn, the stage manager, in full court dresses.

At seven, His Majesty entered his box, attended by the Duke of Wellington, Lord P. Conyngham, Sir Edmund Nagle &c. The rest of the suit occupied the two boxes immediately over the King's. The Prince of Leiningen (son of the Duchess of Kent) sat in Prince Leopold's box.

On the very instant that His Majesty was recognized by part of the audience while entering the box, the whole house rose, and welcomed him with immense cheerings, waving of hats, handkerchiefs, and clapping of hands with hearts in them" His reception was enthusiastic from every part of the house, we believe from every individual. His Majesty immediately advanced to the front of the box, and most graciously acknowledged the gratification he derived from the fervor of affection display ed towards his Royal Person, by repeated and most graceful bendings His Majesty looked remarkably well in health; he was dressed in a scarlet uniform, decorated with a star and several orders; and his appearance was noble and kingly After the cheering which was addressed to his Majesty on his immediate entrance had continued for some time, the whole of the audience commanded the natl nal song of God save the King," The symphony was obeyed with the utmost alacrity The curtain arose, and a large majority of the Company per ed them selves; among the performers were Braham and Miss Stephens

Mr Stephens sang the second verse, Braham concluded, and it was a conclusion worthy of his grand and noble composition The occasion appeared to have even increased his extraordinary powers, and he poured forth a flood of spirit, feeling and melody, at once magnificent and unrivalled. A great majority of the audience joined in chorus, and if not in science and minute correctness, by vigorous tone and ardor of expression, they overwhelmed the band and the professors The finish of each verse was marked by an unanimous cheer, and the whole was called for and repeated with undiminished applause. The play was The Hypocrite, and it may be question ed whether the principal characters in as ever so admirably represented Cowlan's Doctor Cantwell is absolute perfection from the first line to the last. The actor last night played with greater diligence, and more unceasing attention and judgment than we ever before witnessed in him. The part is one of extraordinary difficulty and danger; but Dowton is its master. It is generally the case that a great actor plays some few characters, in which all allow him to be perfect—and Doctor Cantwell is decidedly one of Dowton's. Wallack was gentleman like as Colonel Lambert, and played with spirit.

His Majesty, who appeared to enjoy good health and spirits, paid the most marked attention to the passing scene; and when any particular excellence was displayed by the actor, he was by no means a niggard of his applause Liston's performance of Mawworm more especially arrested his attention; he laughed almost heartily at this actor's richly comic delineation. The ignorant fanatic, and applauded it with great fervor. The audience were so delighted that they encored Mawworm's sermon; and though Liston was very tardy in answering the call, they would not be refused

At the conclusion of the comedy, "God save the King" was again called for, and, along with the Company, was sung by Braham, with undiminished ardor and delight The performers

LATE INTELLIGENCE FROM GREECE.—Mr. Topliff, of Boston, has received a letter from Smyrna, dated the 22d of November, from which it appears the Greeks have been again successful in an engagement with the Turks. The letter says—"The Greeks go on famously. A naval action has lately been fought, in which the Greeks captured a sloop of war, several brigs, a schooner, and transports. The sloop of war was formerly an American ship, belonging to New-York, captured by the English during the war, and sold lately to the Turks"—A postcript to the letter adds, "I have just time to add, that we have this moment received official news of the surrender of Corinth to the Greeks sans, under a capitulation—the prisoners to be landed in Asia. The Greek vessels, with the prisoners, are now in the Gulf, with the intention of landing them. It is an all important place for the Greeks, whose cause appears daily to brighten."

"The Turkish fleet, after remaining out all summer, has returned to the Dardanelles; during the whole time nothing worthy of relating has taken place between them and the Greeks. The prospect of the latter maintaining their independence improves daily, and notwithstanding all that is said about their divisions and so forth, I do not believe that there are more divisions among them than in any other country, where all men have the liberty to speak their sentiments, and propose their plans. Affairs with Russia remain unsettled, although no fears appear to exist of a war taking place shortly—on the contrary reports are much in favour of an amicable termination of them."

FRANKFORT, Nov. 30.—The actual Government of Greece is said to have been informed by secret agents who have come from the Ionian Islands, that the Minister of a great Power has caused a very circumstantial Memorial to be laid before the Emperors of Austria and Russia, at their interview at Czernowitz, the object of which was to prove that in the present state of things it would be advisable to form at St. Petersburgh a European Committee composed of Plenipotentiaries from the Sovereigns of the Holy Alliance, which should be commissioned to discuss the affairs of Greece, and propose plans for the future settlement of that country. It is affirmed that this Committee will certainly take place, under the influence of Russia, since it is said that Count Nesselrode is to be President.

SPAIN.

The most important article that has met our our notice is, the change in the Spanish Ministry.—This event took place on the 2d December.—The Marquis Casa Irujo, is appointed prime Minister; Heredia is appointed minister of Justice; Don Josef de la Cruz, minister of War; Don Louis Lopez Ballasteros, minister of Finance; and Vilela, President of the Council. It is but a short time since we announced the appointment of Saez to the office of prime minister. Ferdinand has sent his beloved confessor back to the Bishopric of Tortosa. Casa Irujo, although a man of more talent, yet his principles, it is said, are not more liberal than the "reverend statesman" who preceded him.

Some disturbance had taken place at Madrid at the close of November, between some French and Spanish Soldiers. The French were roughly handled; the guard coming up, on hearing the noise, took all to the guard house, where a sergeant commanded. Soon after a detachment of Spanish Lancers came to demand the release of the prisoners, uttering imprecations against the French in general; the people joined them, and the post was on the point of being forced, though the sergeant defended himself bravely, when it was reinforced by a detachment from the nearest post, which had been informed of what was passing by a soldier who made his way through the crowd with his bayonet. General Bourmont being informed of this disorder, ordered the drums to beat to arms, and the garrison assembled, which cleared the streets. There were two persons killed, and several wounded. Order was soon restored; but to prevent the recurrence of similar scenes, Gen. Bourmont has ordered all the Spanish troops to quit Madrid. The letters from Madrid of the 27th say, that the number of persons wounded in the above mentioned affray, was 24; three are dead.

A letter from Bayonne, of December 4th in alluding to this affair, says that seventeen of the persons concerned have been shot.

Letters from Madrid of the 30th Nov. speak of the organization of the army. The King has ordered that all subalterns and privates who are married, as well as those who enlisted voluntarily for the time that the war should continue, shall be sent to their homes. Madrid is still in a state of fermentation. An order has been published prohibiting the Inhabitants from conversing on political subjects.

The latest accounts from the Capital of Spain are the 6th of Dec. On the 5th the Deputation of the Kingdom of Navarre sent a mission to felicitate Ferdinand in its own name, as well as in the name of its faithful subjects. "The Navarrese, Sire, who have followed every event have inscribed their names in the Temple of Fidelity and Heroism, have not been dead during the disastrous revolution which threatened the liberty of their King."

The brother of Lopez Banos, has been arrested at Cadiz, and sent to the Castle.

GARRISON ORDER.

CADIZ, Nov. 30.

"The sentinels of the allied troops, who are in garrison here, having orders not to permit any person to pass near them, from 10 o'clock at night until day break; the Inhabitants are hereby apprised of this order, that they may conform to it, and avoid being compelled to do so by force. At the word 'who goes there?' They are to reply, the King! and pass immediately on the side opposite to the spot where the sentinel is posted. By order of the Governor, ad interim.

SOUTH AMERICA TRADE.

From official and interesting returns we select the following particulars of the British trade to South America. But though some of the returns commence earlier, and come down later, yet we cannot find any returns where the whole are connected, except for the three following years:—

PORTUGUESE AMERICA.

		Imports from	Exports to
1818,	The Brazils,	£1,070,051	£3,191,62
1819,	Do.	952,201	1,886,316
1820,	Do.	1,294,025	2,278,463
	Total,	£3,226,267	£1,733,405
	Average	£1,075,422	£2,633,201

Of the exports £35,000 only were Foreign and Colonial goods. This trade, much increased and increasing, we certainly cannot lose by the re-conquest of South America by Spain.

The trade carried on by the country to Spanish South America is certainly very considerable, and an object worth carefully looking after, at the same time we believe the extent of what we might lose by success of the dreaded attack is exaggerated and on this account it may be worth while to enquire what the trade really is.

Even were Spain to conquer the whole of her South American possessions, and place these under her former rigid and absurd Colonial system—even we say, were she able to accomplish this, the trade would not be lost to this country. It might be deranged for a time and driven into different channels, but the trade would be carried on as before the opening of the ports of these countries, from the British West India Islands, particularly Jamaica. How ever much Spain might wish to prevent this, her situation and financial necessities are such, that she would be compelled in future, as formerly, to allow it in order to raise a revenue from that trade to enable her to defray her Colonial expences. In this manner the trade was carried on before the complete emancipation of those Colonies, when, in fact, Great Britain had the whole in her own hands. Similar results would allow a similar state of affairs.

That the trade of South America must continue to increase as the population increases, and the energies of that population are set at liberty, to call forth the vast resources of the country and capability of the soil, can admit of no doubt. In that increase Great Britain will always come in for her prepond rating share; but of the same time we must bear in mind, that the exertions of other nations will have free scope to compete with us.

Even the complete subjection of Spanish South America to the Mother Country again, cannot destroy our trade to those countries, and in our opinion would take away but a small portion of it, while the increasing population and intelligence of that vast Continent will occasion an increased demand for our goods, greater in proportion than what these restrictions imposed by the jealousy of the Mother Country, would tend to do away.

Again, with all her colonial possessions subjugated, which, however we deem impossible, still the Brazils independent and open vast roads by which goods could find their way directly into the very heart of all the Spanish dominions, in what is properly called South America. Look at the map, and from Patagonia—even allowing the Brazil territories extended no further west on the Marunon—and from that point we shall perceive that by means of that river and its tributary streams, the trader may reach all the countries from 19 deg. south lat. to 4 deg. north lat. much easier than from any point on the sea coast, from the Gulph of Paria, to the Isthmus of Darien, while even were the mouth of the La Plata and open still from Rio Janeiro, a short distance by land brings the merchant to the Parana, descending which, and then ascending the Paraguay and the Piicomayo, streams navigable from one to two thousand miles, goods would expeditiously find their way into every part of South America, from 19 deg. south lat. to 30 deg. south lat. But when these vast regions become a little more populous it is idle to dream of their obeying European power.

All the power of France and Spain could not shut up a tenth part of the coast, bays ports, and navigable rivers of South America, from the rest of the world—from the flag of Great Britain.

POETRY.

THE DEATH-BED OF THE RIGHTEOUS.

Sweet is the scene where virtue dies,
When sinks a righteous soul to rest;
How mildly beams the closing eyes!
How gently heaves the expiring breast!

So fades a summer cloud away;
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er;
So gently shuts the eye of day;
So dies a wave along the shore.

Triumphant smiles the victor's brow,
Fann'd by some angel's purple wing;
O grave! where is thy victory now?
Invidious death! where is thy sting?

A holy quiet reigns around;
A calm which nothing can destroy.
Nought can disturb that peace profound,
Which the immortal's souls enjoy.

Farewell! conflicting joys and fears,
Where light and shade alternate dwell!
How bright the unchanging morn appears.
Farewell! inconstant world! Farewell!

It duly done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load, the spirit flies!
While Heaven and Earth combine to say,
"Sweet is the scene where virtue dies."

NATURAL HISTORY.

The Wapeti are very extraordinary non-descript animals, of the cervus or deer genus, but as large as the horse, and nearly as gentle as the lamb; as they will caress their visiters, and receive food from their hands.

It is remarkable that the Wapeti have scarcely been mentioned by any European naturalist, and the history of them is consequently very limited. They were first introduced into the United States at Baltimore, by a German naturalist, who was employed some years in exploring the Upper Missouri, where they are domesticated by the Indians, drawing their sleighs at a rapid rate, and supply them with the most delicious venison as food. They are naturally very timid animals, and at the same time of such power and activity when grown, that it is not possible to take them out of the forest alive. The natives, therefore, catch them in nets when young and rear them in their houses with great care and kindness; they then use them for carrying burdens; or drawing their sleighs in winter over the snow and ice. In their native wilds, each male Wapeti has his own peculiar family or fraternity; each family its own peculiar range of pasture; and their attachment to each other is so strong, that the hunters know, if they kill one of a family, they can easily get the remainder, who can scarcely be forced from the body of their slain companion.

These animals, whose aboriginal name is that of Wapeti, are known to the settlers in North America by the name of the Elk, and are supposed to be of the same species as the great antediluvian Elk, whose enormous fossil remains are frequently found in this country; and of which specimens may be found in the British Museum.

The head of the Wapeti resembles that of the common american deer and of the horse; but it is pointed, and is in its action like the camel. The legs are admirably formed for strength and activity, resembling those of race horse, particular the hinder legs. On the outside of each of these is a protubrance covered with yellow hair. In this a gland is seated that secrets an unctuous substance, which the animal applies to smooth and dress its coat; and when it is thus dressed, it becomes so impervious to rain or to water, even in swimming a river.

The Wapeti has an oblique slit or opening under each eye, of nearly an inch long, which appears to be an auxiliary nostril. The animal has no voice like the horse or the ox, and this organ seems to be given him as a compensation, for with it he can make a noise or loud whistle.

The Wapeti have the cloven foot, and chew the cud like an ox; but they have the bridle tusk like the horse. The Wapeti are about twelve years old before they come to maturity, and they are then about sixteen hands high. Their horns, which are nearly five feet in length, weigh upwards of fifty pounds. They live to a great age, so that the Indians when speaking of an old man, say he is as old as a Wapeti. The food of the Wapeti, in a domestic state, is the same as the horse; and they are, if properly managed, as tractable.

The Wapeti is justly esteemed the pride of the American forest, and is the handsomest and most noble quadruped yet discovered in this country.

YORK, 25th FEBRUARY, 1824.

We publish below, the proceedings of the petitioners for the Welland Canal Company at Niagara, and are happy to learn that a fair portion of the Stock in that Company has been taken up in this place; the Hon. J. H. Dunn, His Majesty's Receiver General, with his usual public spirit, has taken a warm interest in the measure.

At a numerous meeting of the Inhabitants of the District of Niagara, assembled at the House of Mrs Rogers in the Town of Niagara, on Saturday, January 31st, convened under the authority of an Act of the Provincial Parliament of this Province passed last Session, entitled "An Act to incorporate sundry persons therein mentioned, and their associates, under the style and title of the Welland Canal Company," whereat on motion of the original petitioners being then and there present, a Chairman and Secretary to such meeting were duly appointed. The Act of Incorporation being read by the Chairman, and the object of the meeting explained, it was then 4th Resolved, That the Chairman, in behalf of the Petitioners, address letters to such Gentlemen, in either Province, as he may consider would take an active interest in promoting any laudable and enterprising undertaking of the kind. particularly the Hon J. H. Dunn, His Majesty's Receiver General at York, the Hon Geo. Markland, of Kingston the Hon. John Richardson, of Montreal, and the Hon. James Irvine, of Quebec, soliciting their support and assistance, in aiding Mr. Merritt, by recommending subscribers in the said Corporation.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—The following melancholy occurrence happened on Sunday forenoon last in the River, between Lewiston Ferry and Queenston; Mrs. Gordon, wife of James Gordon, Esq. and daughter of Thomas Merritt, Esq. with her daughter, and another young lady, Miss Stevens, of Lewistown, embarked in the ferry boat on the American shore, with E. Smith an experienced ferryman; when about the middle of the river, Smith saw a cake of ice coming down, and in order to avoid it unfortunately got into a whirlpool, which instantly sucked the boat from underneath the passengers and ferry man;—when the boat came up, it was bottom upwards, and the ladies and ferry man clung to it as long as they could. The scow crossing the river from the British shore at the time, went down to their relief, and picked up Mrs. Gordon and Smith, and made every exertion to pick up the two young ladies, but in vain.

When Mrs. Gordon was taken into the scow she had no appearance of life, and was immediately brought ashore to the ferry house on this side;—medical assistance was procured, and every means tried for her recovery, which unfortunately proved ineffectual. The bodies of the two young ladies have not yet been found. Smith, though almost chilled to death with the cold, is recovering.

AMERICAN CLAIM TO THE NAVIGATION OF THE ST. LAWRENCE.

An important Debate on this subject took place in the House of Assembly of this Province on Tuesday, on the question of concurrence in an Address from the Legislative Council to His Majesty's Government in England, against granting this privilege to the Americans.

The decision was postponed until Friday. Messrs. Oldham, and Vigor spoke in favour of the Address, and Messrs. Papineau, Mr. Speaker, Neilson, Bourdages, and Davidson, against it. The sense of the House, generally, appeared opposed to any interference in the negotiations stated to be going on between His Majesty's Government and the United States; unless that it should be manifestly made apparent, that the particular interests of the Colony were likely to be injuriously effected by the result. The allowing the free Navigation of the Saint Lawrence to the United States, did not, it is said, appear to threaten the Colony with any disadvantages, but quite the contrary. The increased prosperity of the Province in 1809 and 1810, when a great proportion of the trade of the country on the waters of the St. Lawrence within the United States passed through the St. Lawrence, was instanced as a proof of the good effects likely to result to the country from a free Navigation of the St. Lawrence by the Americans. The idea of danger to the loyalty of the people from a freedom of trade and increase prosperity was treated with severity. The danger to the Revenue, it was maintained, could be easily avoided, as the Sovereignty belonged to Great Britain. On the other hand, the case of New Orleans; the ambition which the United States had shewn to extend their Territory, was cited. The introduction of contraband goods and smuggling, it was said, could not be prevented, if such a privilege was granted to the Americans—the house of the country required the claim to be resisted.

NAYS.—Messrs Peterson, Jones of Leeds, Burwell, Clark, Ruttan, and Bostwick —6.

Question gained—Majority, 14, and the Address was signed by the Speaker, as follows:—

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

We, Your Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, most humbly beg leave to approach Your Majesty, and to submit to Your Majesty's most gracious consideration our earnest supplications in behalf of the Clergy and Members of the Established Church of Scotland in this portion of Your Dominions.

When the Kingdoms of England and Scotland were [happily for both] united under the British Crown, the Subjects of each were placed on a footing of reciprocity; they were to enjoy a full communication of every right, privilege, and advantage; and their respective Churches were established as "True Protestant Churches," within their particular limits —the Clergy of both might therefore reasonably expect equally to participate in the benefits which might result from the Union.

Viewing the conquests of these Provinces from the Dominions of France, by the united exertions of Great Britain and Ireland as one great advantage resulting from the Union, we humbly conceive that the Churches of England and Scotland had, after such conquest, equal rights, as to the exercise and enjoyment of their respective religious privileges therein, and an equal claim to enjoy any advantages or support which might be derived from the newly acquired territory.

By an Act passed in the 31st year of the Reign of our late revered Sovereign, whose memory will long live in our hearts, an appropriation is authorized to be made of One seventh of the Lands of this Province, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy in this Province, and under the general words of a Protestant Clergy, used in that Act. Your Majesty's Subjects in this Province who belong, and are particularly attached to the Church of Scotland, fondly hoped that a provision had been made for the Clergy of that Church, as well as for those of the Church of England; and, though the allotment of Lands for the Church of Scotland, has hitherto been in a great measure unproductive, they felt a degree of confidence that it would eventually afford a fair support to the Clergy of both Churches. The Lands reserved under the said Act, being claimed and enjoyed, exclusively for the support and maintenance of the Clergy of the Church of England. In this Province, We humbly entreat Your Majesty's consideration of the subject, and, if in the legal construction of the said Act it is considered that no provision for the Clergy of the Church of Scotland was contemplated thereby, We would most respectfully and earnestly express to Your Majesty our hope that Your Majesty will be graciously pleased to extend to them Your Royal protection and consideration, by directing such a provision to be made for their maintenance and support as to Your Majesty may appear proper.

That Your Majesty may long reign in the confidence and affection of all your Subjects, to guard and secure their rights to every portion of Your widely extended Dominions, is the prayer of Your Majesty's faithful Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada.

(Signed) LEVIUS P SHERWOOD,
SPEAKER.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons—and that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration having, the unique Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk Ex'v. Council

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR
In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one session seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue when requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets, a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

Selections from British and Foreign Journals

LONDON, Dec. 13.—It is rumoured that the despatches which were received yesterday from Sir W. A'Court at Madrid were not of a very pacific description. Ferdinand having received with great displeasure the announciation of the appointment of Consuls and Commercial Agents to represent British interests in the new American Republics, the population of which a few years ago, were his legitimate subjects. It is further rumored that His Most Catholic Majesty had refused to confirm the treaty concluded in March last, for the reimbursement by Spain to British subjects, of the losses to which they had been subjected, by the spoliations committed on their property at sea by Spanish Royalist renegadoes, and it is known that the British Ministers are committed for the fulfilment of every iota of this treaty.

These rumours, and the preparations for raising four additional regiments of the line, evince little confidence in the friendly assurances of His Most Christian Majesty, and are probably rendered necessary by the deplorable state into which the Peninsula has been reduced by legitimacy—a state of degradation to which it is utterly impossible that the people can long submit.

The British Traveller intimates that the recent visit of Lord Liverpool, to Lord Grenville is reported to be connected with a new political arrangement, which is likely to be carried into effect before the meeting of Parliament. It was also rumored among the public offices that a partial change is about to take place in the Administration, which is to be reinforced by the Marquess of Hertford.

Captain Franklin is again to be sent out on an overland expedition to Mackenzie and the Copper-mine rivers; and from the union of the North west and Hudson Bay Companies every facility for so arduous an undertaking may be expected. Captain Franklin will be ready to start early in the spring.

It is directed that no British subjects shall accept a foreign order, or wear its insignia, without having previously obtained a warrant under the Royal Sign Manuel, (directed to the Earl Marshal of England,) authorizing them His Majesty's permission to accept and wear the same.

The Turks boast of having gained some advantage over the Greeks, but there appears to be no lack of firmness on the part of the latter, but much of union in opinion, and concert in action. The capture of Corinth by the Greeks is a very favorable circumstance to their cause.

Russian vessels of war, by a late arrangement, are to be entitled to enter and refit in the ports of the Netherlands.

From the unreserved manner in which the Courier speaks, it appears certain that three or four regiments more will be raised.

By the present organization of the Indian army, every two regiments have but one Colonel, and each regiment of infantry is composed of two battalions commanded by one Colonel. By the new organization, each regiment of cavalry will have its own Colonel, and each regiment of infantry will be divided into two regiments, with a Colonel to each. By this arrangement, forty Lieutenant Colonels upon the Bengal establishment will obtain regiments—viz. four additional ones to the cavalry; thirty two to the infantry; and four to the four irregular regiments of infantry.

The following undress for Officers of infantry has met with the approval of His Royal Highness the Commander in Chief and is to be adopted forthwith—viz Blue frock, Prussian collar, epaulets, black waist belt, sash, &c and cocked hat and plume. The hat to be worn on all occasions, except on parade, when the chaco is to be worn.

The receipts of Drury Lane and Covent garden Theatres, on the nights His Majesty honored them with his presence, were as follows:—Drury lane, near £900. and Covent garden, £941

The Editor of the London Courier in alluding to the situation of Europe asks:—

"Are there no clouds rising?" "Will any man be so gulled as to suppose that the policy of Catharine has been abandoned by Russia, and that she has relinquished all designs against the Porte? But the time is yet to come. Is the Holy Alliance framed and linked together for peace alone, but not for war?" Is there nothing in the present policy towards Spain which excites suspicion in our minds? Is it not evident that Ferdinand is tied and bound down to the policy of the Holy Alliance? We do not say that he would, of his own free will, recognize the Independence of the South American Colonies, but is he not pledged to his continental Allies to refuse all recognition? Hasit not been more recently asserted in the correspondence and speeches of the Russian minister Pozzo di Borgo, during his residence in Madrid? Are there no germs of misunderstanding—no seeds of dissention in this? Is it likely that the power, or powers, that have de facto, or shall, recognize the Independence of the colonies and the powers that refused such recognition, will live in the same uninterrupted harmony and intercourse together—that the latter will see the former exclusively extending their sphere of commerce and enriching themselves without the least ill will or ill humour?

"Is there any man who can believe that Russia and Austria and France and Spain, pledged against any acknowledgement of South American Independence, will view with pacific eyes, another power in possession of all the advantages that must be derived from her recognition and consequent friendly intercourse with those immense and fertile regions?"

"But is it to be inferred from this, that we are inviting this country to exhibit a hostile spirit against the European powers, or to adopt any hostile measures? —Certainly not. But do not let us be the wilful agents of their policy;—do not let us aid them in their means and also their preparation. It is quite consistent with a state of peace, to prevent them from raising loans in this country. In what way this can best be done, we know not; but we are quite sure it ought to be done, both as it regards the interests of the State and of individuals, and that the sooner the Legislature adopts some decisive measures upon the subject the better. We hope they will not have to regret that they did not adopt it six years ago."

From the London Papers, we learn that an important change has been made in the French Chambers. One fifth of the deputies have heretofore been elected annually. The Chambers have been dissolved, and the new elections are to be for seven years, for the whole number of deputies.

The French Papers do not conceal the designs of the Holy Alliance against South America.—The Etoile says, that the men of war San Pablo, San Blas, and three corvettes, are arming in the port of Cadiz, that the expedition is destined for the Pacific; and that with this maritime force the "Viceroyalty" of Peru will soon find itself in a condition to destroy the revolutionary army of Chili, as well as the Forces from Terra Firma, (Colombia) which now desolates that beautiful region.

The Pilote, a Paris Paper, announces on the authority of a letter from Toulon dated December 9th, that six frigates, and eight sloops of war, were fitting for sea in that port, whose destination was said to be Brazil and the South Seas.

A letter from Madrid of the 9th Dec. says—"The new government does not renounce the colonies; a small expedition has already sailed from Cadiz, (but without troops) for Lima."—The Madrid Gazette, of the 4th of December, contains an article on "The state of the Two Americas," in reply to an assertion of the London Courier, that South American colonies were independent de facto, and of course de jure. The Madrid papers says, that Buenos Ayres, Peru, and Chili, are free from the influence of the miserable and insignificant revolutionists, and all the rest of those countries under the peaceful control of General de Sense.—It will be recollected that the last arrival from Lima brought the news of the entire overthrow of Gen La Serna.

FROM MARTINIQUE.—The Savannah Georgian, of the 6th instant contains late intelligence from Martinique. Martial law had been proclaimed on that island, in consequence of the contemplated insurrection of the free people of colour. From thirty to forty of the ringleaders had been arrested, and tried at Fort Royal, and nine of them banished from the island, some of which were people of property. It was their intention to murder all the white population, on the night of the 17th of December, but their design was frustrated by the arrival on that day of a detachment of troops from France. They then put off the execution of the plot to the 24th, previous to which, the government had obtained information of all their plans.

The Governor hourly expected to receive from France an ordinance, making Martinique a free port, under certain qualifications.

LONDON, December 11

MR. BELZONI.—At length some intelligence has arrived of the intrepid and indefatigable traveller. Mr. Belzoni. We have been favored with the following extracts of a letter which has been received from him. We regret to say, that neither place nor date are given to the letter, for reasons which Mr. Belzoni subsequently states:—

"It would be difficult for you, my dear friend, to believe to what an excess the revenge of petty men is carried. You will have seen by my letters from Fez and Gibraltar, how far I had advanced in the good will of the Moorish people and what were my hopes of success. But I was so cruelly disappointed! I must tell you that my progress in that quarter was stopped, not by the Moors, but by the intrigues of some persons in office, by the envy of the members of the occasional authority given to them by the supreme, to send their spies on any unprotected individual who refuses to stoop and pay court to them. Mortified with the disappointment they occasioned, I find (if the information which I received by the last packet to the Brazils that knocked at Fezzan be correct) that they have accused me of making an improper use of some letters of introduction which had been given to me, and of endeavoring to pass myself off as an agent of the British Government. You will know that I distinctly stated to you in my letter from Tangier, that I had nothing to do with the English Government, and that I relied entirely on my own resources. This letter, I am happy to see by an English paper, now before me, you have made public, and to corroborate I shall enclose to you the copy of a letter I received from the Moorish Minister at Fez. It is hard to consider, that instead of being supported, I am persecuted; but I must have patience, and if I succeed, why, the mortification will be with my adversaries. I am now in the latitude of 21 degrees north; that is all I can tell you for the present, for fear my enemies should come to the knowledge of where I am. Excuse my hasty scrawl."

The following is the copy of the letter to which Mr Belzoni refers, and the original of which, in Arabic, is in his possession:—

"Know, that his Imperial majesty has ordered this communication from me, Sidi Benzelul, to the friend and gentleman Belzoni. We have received your letter, by which we observe your arrival at Tangier, and that you wish to come to the Royal Presence. You will come, and every thing you want shall be granted agreeable to your wish, with the help of GOD. Judah Benolish, our agent at Gibraltar, has written to us on the subject, and he requested me to pay you every attention, and to facilitate every thing you wish—there was no necessity for it, as I am well aware of your attention more than he has explained—it is quite sufficient what you say that you are the man I knew at Egypt. My master, whom GOD preserve, has already ordered that you proceed to Fez, with due honour and attention, and you shall be before his high Majesty. I will get you the order to pass and repass to the cities you may please, with respect and honour."

We regret to learn, from Mr Belzoni's own statement, that the expences of his journey to and from Fez and residence there, together with the necessary presents and other articles, amounted to the sum of one thousand pounds, defrayed by himself. We understand, that through the interest of the Moorish minister at Fez, an express dromedary has been sent from Fez to Timbuctoo, with money and letters for Belzoni, in case the caravan should have already departed for Timbuctoo. No Extract from the Glasgow Chronicle.

A SCOTCH BARBER.—On Friday afternoon, at four o'clock, an instance of very sudden death occurred in Calton. While Mr. John Falconer, hair dresser, Rick street, was in the act of shaving a man, he staggered, and just was falling when he was placed on a chair, and expired in five minutes. He will long be remembered by hundreds who where his customer: his shop was the arena of all local discussion; it was, in fact, denominated the Calton coffee-room, and was the resort of all the born-nigh politicians. His father and he have been in the trade for upwards of half a century. His father was the first who reduced the price of shaving to a halfpenny; and when his brethren in the town wished him to raise it, old Strap replied, "Charge a penny! I will and may see just standing about lowering it to a farthing." He would never take more than a halfpenny though it was offered him; and being very skilful at his business, and of a frank jocular turn, he had a large share of public favour, and was enabled, even at this low rate, to gather money and build a house. About sixteen years ago he died, and his son carried on the business; but he often said others wrought for need, but he did it for pleasure or recreation, and never was so happy as when he was improving the countenances of the lieges. He was generally allowed to be at the top of his profession; and there were some old men whom he and his father have shaved for fifty years, and whose beast it was that they were never touched by another; one very old customer regularly came for many a year to his shop every Saturday night, from the western extremity of the town. His shop was furnished with two dozen of antique chairs, as many pictures, and a musical clock, and for a long time he had a good library of books, but they at length nearly wholly disappeared and he took up to his trade, and ere-ended their discharges without receiving a farthing. He left behind him property worth between two and £3000.

Extract from an Account of the Ball, in aid of the Greek Fund, held in Baltimore Assembly Rooms.

From the New York Spectator.

On entering the principal room, the eye was arrested by the appearance of a beautiful transparent Greek Cross, formed of variegated lamps, and placed in the centre of the western side of the room. Around the Cross were inscribed, in a circle, the celebrated words of Constantine.—"By this sign conquer" immediately in front of the cross upon a marble pedestal, was placed the bust of Botzaris, the Greek Hero, who lately fell in storming a Turkish Camp, by a shot which he received after he had surprised and seized the Turkish Commander in his tent, and was carrying him off as a prisoner.

Around the walls were placed the names of ancient and modern Greeks who had distinguished themselves in the service of their country—as Leonidas, Miltiades, Cimon, Leonidas Odysseus, Epaminondas, Maycomichalis, Themyshalus, Mayrocordato, Philopœmon, Botzaris, Hasmodius, Tyrtæus; and under each name hung a wreath of laurel. Encircled also with laurel, and noted the name of Aspasia, Misolungki, Calamata, Tripolizza, Thermopylæ.

In the centre of the floor was delineated in chalk the ancient Lyre of Greece, and in a circle around it was inscribed "March 25th. 1821." the day of the Declaration of Grecian Independence. Parallel with the sides of the room was a large border, in the angles of which were seen the devices emblematic of the power, commerce, navy and army of Greece. The pillars supporting the orchestra, were entwined with wreaths of laurel interspersed with roses.

The second room was converted into a spacious tent by military and naval flags, so arranged as to decorate the walls and conceal the ceiling. At the upper end, opposite to the orchestra, was a transparency representing Botzaris, in the act of scaling the Turkish Camp, with the standard of the cross in his hands, and leading on and encouraging his followers, who are seen climbing up the rocks after him. Below, printed on satin in large characters, and surrounded by a laurel and cypress wreath were the following lines composed by J. H. B. Latrobe, Esq. for the occasion.

Thus march'd BOTZARIS in his bold career,
Hope nerv'd his arm, and Vengeance steel'd his ear;
High in the air he wav'd his banner proud,
The hero's glory,—soon the hero's shroud.

Like rocket hurrying through the gloom of night,
To burst in splendour at its farthest flight;
So flew BOTZARIS o'er the rocky steep,
And gain'd the Turk, reposed in careless sleep.

Rais'd his loud voice, and spoke—sharp'd the startled foe,
And victory gain'd, ere'er'd the fatal blow;—
Then to his battle-fled flag will cheer clung,
And died with GREECE and FREEDOM on his tongue!

On one side of the transparency was placed the standard of Greece—on the other that of the United States. Near the Greek standard was that of the Colombian Republic, and in the centre groups of splendid standards of military corps of the city. In the centre of the floor were delineated in chalk, military trophies, surmounted by the cap of liberty. The motto around the whole was, ubi libertas ibi patria.

popean, on whose sanctity we can depend, has hitherto reached No extraordinary city—it will be a fine field for Belzoni's enterprise, and he deserves the patronage and the good wishes of the liberal and enlightened of all countries.—Cambridge Chronicle.

The London Courier of the 6th is nearly filled with the Trial of the murderers of Mr. Weare which commenced that day at Hertford, and was forwarded every hour by express to the editors of the London evening papers.

The Courier contains the quarterly report of the Revenue. In every item of income there has been an increase beyond the corresponding quarter of last year, except in the assessed taxes, upon which a large reduction was made. In all the great sources of Revenue, the Customs, the Excise, the Stamps, the Post Offices, and Miscellaneous there has been an increase. The surplus of the quarter, that is, the excess of income beyond the charge, is £3,104,773 being above three millions beyond the surplus of the corresponding quarter. In the net produce of the Revenue for the last year, there has been a decrease of £630,000 owing to the diminution of the Revenue raised, and to the reduction that took place last year in the Assessed Taxes. But the Customs increased above a million last year, and there was also an increase in the Stamp, Post Office, and Miscellaneous Duties The Courier remarks, that the statement which they have published will give universal satisfaction to the nation.

Mina had arrived in London. The papers state that this heroic man has, by his conduct since his arrival in England, added new laurels to his brow. His answer to the offer of a public maintenance of esteem on his entry into London, is worthy of the firmness of a Roman patriotism and devotion. He emphatically says: These testimonies of kindness tear my soul. I am received as a conqueror; I am dragged to spectacles; festivals are offered to me, while I only desire, as it is my duty, to deplore in mourning and solitude the misfortunes and slavery of my country." To an invitation to a public dinner he replied,—"I am in ill health; an unfit guest for the rich repast; I am unhappy: I have left behind me an oppressed country; a wife and parents, a brother and friends are still there. These are no subjects for mirth and feasting." The Spanish Committee have addressed a letter to Mina, with a tender of five hundred pounds, for his own immediate use. The General, since his arrival in England, has addressed a letter to Mr. Canning, (as asserted by great elevation of sentiment, in which he alludes, in a most affecting manner, to the fate of his unfortunate country. The Right Hon. Secretary, it is said, was so pleased with this epistle, that he has shown it in most of the diplomatic circles, and especially to Count Lieven.

Madam Riego, in her answer to the address from Liverpool, concludes with this sentence:—"If the sacrifice of Riego be not lost; if, hereafter, her idolized country should recover that liberty which he with so much ardor restored, and which he sealed with his blood, remember, then the virtues which shall adorn Spain in her political regeneration, will diminish in the heart of his wife the intensity of the bitterness which now affects her. The widow of Riego accepts from the friends of freedom in the town of Liverpool, the donation which they have presented to her, in order to frustrate the intentions of those who wish to carry their vengeance even beyond the grave."

The radical Doctor Watson has left England for New Orleans.

Sir Walter Scott's new work, "St. Ronan's Well," translated into French, was published nearly as soon in Paris as it was in London. The Journal Des Debats says that it is to be immediately followed by a new work from the same author, in which will re-appear the principal characters of "Waverley." The title is to be "The Siege of Ptolemy; Extract of a History of the Crusades, by Josiah Corgill, Evangelical Minister of St Ronan."

A Nuremburg paper states, that Sir C. Bagot, the British Ambassador, at St. Petersburg, has addressed a note to Count Nesselrode, demanding explanations of the policy which Russia intended to adopt respecting South America.

Melancholy Casualty.—A young Lady named Margaret Thompson, possessing a considerable share of beauty, and scarcely 18 years of age, has been residing for some time at Thuknock, a little beyond Bailieston, Dundrum, at the foot of the Dublin Mountains, under the protection of a gentleman of this city. On Sunday evening, this young lady being alone, requested of Mrs. Cardiff, in whose house she lodges, to allow her daughter, a young woman about her own age, to sleep with her and Mrs C having consented, the two young ladies retired for the night. On Monday morning, some time having elapsed beyond the usual hour of Miss Cardiff's rising, without her having made her appearance, Mrs. Cardiff proceeded to the chamber where they had slept, and knocked at the door repeatedly without receiving any answer. The door was then burst open, and the agonized mother beheld her daughter and the other young lady lying lifeless. The reports through town yesterday respecting this melancholy occurrence were very erroneous; but particularly observe, that when the Janitor was in the act of putting on the gown, his countenance assumed an expression of intense seriousness and deep concern.

death is supposed to have occurred in consequence of a charcoal fire being kept in the room where they slept which was ill ventilated and the chimney closed. This dangerous kind of fuel, it is believed, thus caused them to be suffocated. Surgeon M'Namara has examined the contents of the stomachs of both the deceased, we understand they exhibit no symptom or appearance of poison. A Coroner's Jury sat on the bodies yesterday. The Jury adjourned, without returning a verdict, until this day.—Dublin Morning Post.

Lord Selkirk's Colony.—A member of the American Congress lately presented a petition from the inhabitants of Pembina, on the Red River of Hudson's Bay, praying that measures may be taken to secure them in the possession of their property, and extend to them such privileges as are enjoyed by the citizens of the United States. It appears from the memorial, that most of these colonists are natives of the U. States; that all of them have resided at Pembina for the last five years; that they have built houses, cultivated the soil, erected a Church, and made other valuable improvements. They were induced to settle at this place by the late Lord Selkirk, who purchased a large tract of country from the Indians. At the decease of Lord Selkirk, they were left destitute of those privileges and immunities, which were to have been granted to them. By the late determination of the boundary line between the territory of the United States and Great Britain, made by the expedition under the command of Col Long, they find themselves on the territory of the U States, and without any possibility of acquiring the advantages resulting from the administration of justice. The memorial is signed by about forty inhabitants, out of whom, only half a dozen could write their names, which is a proof that they have not yet made very great advances in civilization. From their names they appear to be of French extraction, probably from Michigan.

Important Discovery in the Manufacture of Gas.—On the 20th ult the town of Abergavenny was for the first time lighted with gas, upon a new and improved method, recently discovered by the engineer Mr. Simons of Broadmead. The discovery promises considerable advantage to gas establishments, by superseding the necessity of the retort and purifier, as the common coke or coal tar now answers the purposes of the retort, and the purifier is rendered altogether useless. By the method adopted by Mr. Broadmeadow, the quantity of inflammable gas is increased till one-third, and by the action of atmospheric air rendered perfectly pure and free from sulphur. This undoubtedly is one of the greatest discoveries hitherto made in the manufacturing of gas, and may be equally applied to gas manufactured from oil, as well as that manufactured from coal; and as the advantages likely to result from the discovery are about to be secured by a patent to the inventor, it may not at present be prudent to give any further explanation.—Gloucester Journal

INSTALLATION OF DR. CHALMERS IN THE UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS.

At one o'clock the party proceeded to the robing room of the College, where the Professors were assembled, and soon thereafter the Very Reverend, the Principal and Professors went in solemn procession, preceded by their macers, to the University Hall, where Dr Chalmers' induction was to take place. The Doctor, we observed, was among the last in the procession, but as soon as he came within the view of the numerous group of students who were assembled in the yard, the lo-ging eyes of the multitude were eagerly fixed upon him with feelings of deep and evident interest, and every expression of deference and respect was instantly manifested.

The Very Reverend Principal having taken the Chair, the Professors arranged themselves on his right hand, while Dr Chalmers stood in the centre. After the usual forms observed at the induction of Professors, which were a prayer, address, and reading of the laws, all in Latin, the presentation of a book, and the administering of the oath de fidelis, the Reverend Doctor was declared legally and solemnly installed into the Moral Philosophy Chair of St Andrew's. The Doctor seemed to be much affected during the whole of the ceremonie; and we could not but particularly observe, that when the Janitor was in the act of putting on the gown, his countenance assumed an expression of intense seriousness and deep concern.

On Crowning the Bust of Rozzaris, the following Ode was delivered by one of the Managers :—

ODE.

I.

Who knows not the land so refulgent in glory;
The cradle of Liberty, Science, and Song:—
The land that through time is still brightest in story,
Tho' the dark veil of night hath hung o'er her so long,
The land that now struggles through war's desolation,
For the rights that again shall create her a nation,
From the shore thro' the isles, from her isles to the sea,
Ever shall resound again—Greece shall be free!

II.

O monteuous Hellene! again shall return,
Thy sea of heroes, of poets, and sages;
Thy matrons and maidens no longer shall mourn,
The souls and the deeds that have slumber'd for ages;
For thy sons with the valor of freemen oppose
The sword and the cross to their infidel foes,
As from shore thro' the isles, from the isles to the sea;
Ever shall resound again—Greece shall be free!

III

Come, swear ye an oath, and record it in heaven,
To be worthy the names that your history adorn,
When your temples and altars to sacrilege given,
And your wives and your daughters to slavery born;
O swear to revenge them, or die in the cause,
While the world's distant regions shall ring with applause,
And from islands to shore, from the shore to the sea,
In peace resounds again—Greece must be free!

IV.

See the wreath we have braided for Bozzaris's brow,
The warrior who sleeps upon victory's breast—
To the cross, when the crescent and scymetar bow,
He shall rise with the spirits of them that are blest;
For he who for country undauntedly dies,
Shall again in his own lov'd Elysium arise;
And shall hear from the shore, through the isles, o'er the sea,
Ever ring to heaven, thy country is free.

V.

No longer shall Greece lack a name or a station,
Worth the brightest and best of her history's page;
For her sons are no longer vile slaves, but a nation
Expelling her tyrants, redeeming her gage.
Flow, Hellespont, flow! in thy dark murmuring wave
Full many a hero shall find a proud grave,
As from shore to the island that shatter thy sea,
They shall hear the chant ring o'er them, Greece still is free!.

VI.

Then thy valleys shall bloom, and thy wrongs fade away,
For thy streams shall flow silver untainted with blood;
Then the dance and the song round thy altars shall play,
And thy heroes be crown'd by the brave and the good.
Thy sires and thy daughters no longer shall roam,
But the land of their fathers be liberty's home;
Thy shore tell the isles, the isles tell the sea
That the Crescent hath fallen, the Cross is now free!

VII

Hail, hail to the day, to posterity's glory,
When man shall unite in an Holy Alliance;
When the world shall not know but in fable and story
Of the blood that is shed to bid slavery defiance.
Let tyrants and despots then frown from on high,—
We are free, and will live so—in peace or in war;
Our continent's shore and the isles of the sea,
The great truth proclaiming that ALL MEN are free!

COMETS.

The following remarks are extracted from an English work They refer to some observations which had been made by Dr. Hershall, on the Comet of 1811.

The Comet of 1807, in its approach to the sun, advanced within sixty-one millions of miles of it, and its tail, when longest, covered an extent of nine millions of miles. The late Comet, in its perihelium did not pass so near the sun by about thirty six mil lion of miles, being about two thirds only of the closest approximation of the preceding, and nevertheless acquired a tail of upwards of a hundred millions of miles.—May we not then conclude, as he suggests, that the consolidation of the comet of 1807. when it reached its perihelium, had already been carried to a much greater degree of density than that of the last comet, by some former approach to our sun, or some similarly constructed celestial bodies, such as we have reason to believe the fixed stars to be? And that comets may pass round other suns than ours is rendered probable from our not knowing with certainty as yet, the return of more than one comet among the great number that has been observed?

De Lagnes enumerates two or three hundred comets mentioned by Chinese writers. Doubts, however, have since been thrown upon the authorities referred to.

Extensive as are orbits of comets, from their eccentricity, that have approached much nearer to the sun than any of the planets, for the comet of 1680, when at its perihelium, was at the distance of only one sixth of the sun's diameter from its surface. yet, from the very inconsiderable density of their enormous tails, and even of the greater part of the nucleus itself, should it ever happen to a planet, of which there is but very little probability, to fall in the way of a comet, it is supposed that the inconvenience suffered by the inhabitants of the planet might be merely temporary, and local; the chances are, however much greater, that a comet might interfere in such a manner with a planet, as to deflect it a little from its course, and retire again without coming actually into contact with it.

Nearly five hundred comets are recorded to have been seen at different times, and the orbits of about a hundred have been correctly ascertained—but we have no opportunity of observing a sufficient portion of the orbit of any comet, to determine with accuracy the whole of its form as an ellipsis, since the part which is within the limits of our observation, does not differ from parabola, which would be the result of an ellipsis prolonge without end. Two comets at least, or perhaps three, have been recognized in their return. A comet appeared in 1770, which from perin ss-ected to move in an orbit materinily different from a parabola; Mr. Lexell determined its period to be five years and seven months, and its extreme distance to be between the orbits of Jupiter and of Uranus—but it does not appear that any subsequent observations have confirmed his theory. It has, however been calculated, that supposing the theory correct, it must afterwards have approached so near the orbit of Jupiter as to have the form of its orbit entirely changed

Dr. Halley predicted the return of the comet about 1758, which had appeared in 1531, in 1607, and in 1682 at intervals of about 75 years, and with a Clairant's further correction for the perturbations of Jupiter and Saturn, the time agreed within about a month. The mean distance of this comet from the sun must be less than that of the Georgian planet; so that by improving our telescopes still more highly, we may, perhaps, hereafter be able to convert some of the comets into planets, so far as their remaining always visible would entitle them to the appellation.—Dr. Halley also supposed the comet of 1680 to have been seen in 1106. in 531, and in the year 44 before Christ, having a period of 575 years; and it has been suspected that the comets of 1556 and 1264 were the same, the interval being 292 years; a conjecture which will either be confirmed or confuted in the year 1848. Some persons have even doubted of the perfect coincidence of the orbits of any comets, seen at different times, with each other, and have been disposed to consider them as messengers forming a communication between the neighbouring systems of the sidereal world, and visiting a variety of stars in succession, so as to have their courses altered continually, by the attraction towards many different centres; just considering the coincidence of the calculation of Halley and Clairant with the subsequent appearance of the comet of 1759. this opinion can scarcely be admitted to be in any degree probable with respect to the comets in general, however possible the supposition may be in some particular cases.

THE COSSACKS.

The Following amusing Anecdotes of this interesting people are derived from a work recently published, entitled "Characteristic Portraits of the various Tribes of Cossacks atta ked to the Allied Armies in the Campaign of 1817. Taken from Life at Paris, and accompanied by historical particulars," &c. Speaking of the period when they were at Dresden, the writer thus proceeds :—

"It appears that these rude people are by no means insensible to the charms of music, for which they manifest a strong predilection. A party of them, attracted by the solemn peal of the organ, entered the church, and while it was playing, continued fixed in silent attention. Its tones ceased, and the officiating clergyman commenced his sermon. This address in an unknown language, soon began to excite symptoms of impatience in the strangers; one of whom stealing softly up the steps of the pulpit unobserved by the minister, startled him not a little by tapping him on the shoulder in the midst of his harangue, and inviting him, as well as he could by signs, accompanied with all sorts of grotesque gestures, to descend, and no longer interrupt the gratification, which the organist afforded to himself and his companions. Notwithstanding the solemnity of the place, the gravity of the minister and his congregation were not proof against this attack, and it was some time before the former could so far recover from its ludicrous effect as to resume his discourse.

"This fondness for music was displayed on other occasions:

"A young lady, of a respectable family, was seated at her piano forte, playing and singing. She was heard by a Cossack who was passing under her window. As if enchanted, he followed the melodious sounds, pursued his way up stairs, from room to room, and, after traversing several apartments, discovered the right one. He entered, and stood listening behind the lonely musician, who, half dead with fear on perceiving the figure of her martial visitor in a mirror, would naturally have run away. He detained her, and, in an unintelligible language, but with friendly gestures, begged for a Da Capo; and, without ceremony, fetched his comrade out of the street. The music soon relaxed the joints of the bearded warriors, and in a few moments they struck up a charming Cossack dance in the best room in the House. The trembling girl was obliged to summon up all her courage and strength, that her fingers might not refuse to perform their office in this critical juncture. She returned sincere thanks to heaven when the dance was over, and was not a little surprised when one of the delighted performers, with the most cordial gestures, laid a piece of gold on the piano forte. It was to no purpose that the young lady refused it; the donors retired, leaving behind them the piece of money, which the fair owner will doubtless preserve with care, as a memorial of the lovers of dancing and music from the deserts of Asia.

"The naivite of these people were (was) expressed in a very different manner towards another young lady, like case of a genteel family, who out of economy, and supposing her guests to be so inured to hardship as to be proof against all sorts of weather, had directed that no fire should be made in the quarters destined for them. Though the almanack had for some days announced the return of all reviving spring, the Cossacks experienced none of its enlivening effects in their uncomfortable quarters. Dissatisfied with the place, they sallied out in quest of a warmer lodging. It was not long before they discovered one. This was the apartment of the young lady of the house.— " here woa'm— here good—stay with mamsell. So saying, the reconnoitering party took a strong position against the cold in mamsell's room; thither all the baggage also was soon transported Mamsell, unless she had chosen to turn Cossack too, was obl ged too relinquish her apartment to her ungallant guests, and to procure in another the climate that she had quitted.

"A servant maid, groaning under the weight of a large basket of damped linen, met a party of Cossacks. They took the basket from her, convinced her by their gestures that they intended no harm, and intimated by signs to the poor girl, to shew them which way she was going. They not only carried the basket to the mangle, but helped to turn it for a whole hour: and, when they had done, desired nothing but a kiss for their pains.

"A Cossack surrounded by a legion of boys, whom he sometimes took by the hand, and sometimes set a running by throwing his cap for them to bring back again, met a lad selling cakes. He immediately laid an embargo on the whole stock of the itinerant trader, which he divided among his merry companions, reserving for himself about a dozen cakes, which he put into the pockets of his wide breeches. Whilst occupied in housing them, he spied an elegant lady coming towards him, but who was about to turn off to avoid the crowd of boys. The Cossack ran up to her, pulled the cakes three at a time out of his magazine, and offered them to the lady, half dead with fright. Mamsell. good!—Dobre, Mamsell! said he, with a friendly smile. When however, neither kind words nor gestures could prevail on mamsell to accept the cakes, he thrust them into her ridicule, and respectfully kissed her fair hands, in spite of all her endeavors to disengage them from his grasp. The lady made a precipitate retreat, and the Cossack watched as long as she was in sight with a look of concern.

"The booksellers' shops, where representations of all the Russian nations were to be seen in the windows, were always be set with crowds of Cossacks, who manifested the greatest joy on discovering themselves a-

The Address was read the third time, passed and signed by the Speaker, as follows:—

To His Excellency SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K.C.B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada. Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces, &c. &c. &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.

WE, His Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada in Provincial Parliament assembled, have taken into consideration an extract of a dispatch from His Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, communicated to us by Your Excellency during our last Session, on the subject of Half Pay for the late Battalion of Incorporated Militia of this Province, which had been sanctioned for that Regiment as being constituted in the same manner as the Voltigeurs of Lower Canada to whom it has been granted; and we feel called upon a gain to bring the matter of our application before the considera tion of His Majesty's Government. We are happy to perceive that His Majesty's Government entertains with us so just a recollection of the gallantry and usefulness of the Incorporated Militia of this Province during the late war with the United States, and that a supposed distinction in the constitution of the two Corps above mentioned, has alone prevented His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies from recommending the prayer of the Joint Address of the two Houses of the Legislature of this Province to the favorable consideration of His Majesty—No obstacle we trust can be removed, as the accompanying documents will satisfactorily establish the similarity of constitution of the Voltigeurs of Lower Canada and the Incorporated Militia of this Province, and we cannot but feel that the claim of the latter for any consideration must, from these documents, appear in a more favorable light than that of the former.

The well known justice and liberality of His Majesty's Government will not allow us to entertain the idea that a distinction, in name only, can operate against the Battalion of Upper Canada, while in usefulness and efficiency, it was in every respect equal to the only Corps resembling it in our sister Province.

We are assured that a reference to the Laws to which the Battalions alluded to, were respectively subject in their several Provinces, will result in the conviction that the services of the Incorporated Militia of this Province might have been demanded on all occasions in which those of the Voltigeurs could not.

It may not be known to His Majesty's Government that the Incorporated Battalion of this Province was regularly enlisted and attested, under certain regulations established by the Administrator of the Government, and Commander of the Forces then in Upper Canada, who was authorised by Law, "to make such rules and regulations for the Government of the Regiment as to him should seem proper and adapted to the nature of the service."—That they might have been ordered into the Province of Lower Canada in the event of invasion or insurrection, or in pursuit of an enemy—that their services might have been required in an enemy's country for the destruction of any vessel, built, or building, or any Depot or Magazine, formed, or forming, for the attack of any army embodied or marching for the purpose of invading this Province, or of any Fortifications, erected to cover the invasion thereof.—Their services, indeed, might have been demanded, and we are well assured, would have been readily afforded upon all occasions which could possibly occur to require the Services of His Majesty's Regular Forces in this and our Sister Province during the late war with the United States;—on the other hand, it appears, on reference to the conditions under which the Voltigeurs were enlisted, that they were raised subject to the British Laws, and for the service of Lower Canada.—The difference in this comparison we hum bly submit, is in favor of the Battalion of Upper Canada: other distinctions might be pointed out, but we will only add, that the operations of the enemy during the late war with the United States, being directed throughout almost exclusively against Upper Canada, the Corps of Voltigeurs had not an equal opportunity of service in the face of the enemy, while the Battalions of Incorporated Militia, as will appear to His Majesty, by the honorable testimony of His General Officers in command, from a very early period of the war, were engaged in constant operations against a superior force, and shared with such fidelity the dangers of actual service, that their casualties, in killed and wounded, were not less, in proportion to their numbers, than those of the Regiments of the Lines with which they were brigaded.

Feeling a lively interest in the success of the application which we have, in conjunction with the Honourable the Legislative Council, made in behalf of the Incorporated Militia, and ensured that every information may be afforded which can assist his Majesty's Government to decide upon the Subject, we humbly request that your Excellency will be pleased to transmit the accompanying documents in support of the application alluded to.

(Signed,) LEVIUS P. SHERWOOD, Speaker.

Commons House of Assembly, 6th January 1824.

On motion of Mr. MORRIS, Messrs Burwell and Chisholm were ordered as a Committee, to wait upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to know when His Excellency would be pleased to receive the Address of the House on the subject of the late Incorporated Militia, and to present the same.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the Burlington Bay Canal Bill was read the second time.

On motion of Mr. CROOKS, the House went into Committee on the Bill

The Chairman reported the Bill as amended.

On the question for receiving the report, the House divided

YEAS.—Messrs Gordon, Nichol, Robinson, Jones of Grenville, Randal, Clark, Hamilton of Wentworth, Wilmot, Badwin, Baby, Horner, Petrie, Rattan, McMartin, Peterson, Aby General Kerr, Chisholm Wilson of Prince Edward, Crooks, Morris, McDonell, Burwell Bostwick, and Hamilton of Lincoln.—25

NAYS.—Messrs Jones of Leeds, Casey, Walsh, and White, —4.

The question was gained, by a majority of 21, and the Report was received accordingly.

On motion of Mr. CROOKS, the Burlington Bay Canal Bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time on the morrow.

On motion of Mr. JONES of Grenville, Messrs Atty General, Hagerman, Nichol, and Gordon, were ordered as a Committee to confer with a Committee of the Honourable the Legislative Council, pursuant to the Report of the Committee of Conference on the subject of the Resolutions of the House of Assembly, respecting the Tobacco Trade of this Province, and that the same should be a free Conference

On motion of Mr. JONES of Grenville, Messrs. Gordon, and Baby, were ordered to inform the Honourable the Legislative Council of the same

Agreeably to notice, Mr. NICHOL moved that the House should resolve itself into a Committee of the whole, to take into consideration the reply of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to the Address of the House on the Boundary between this Province and the United States of America.

Which was carried

The Chairman reported that the Committee had agreed to several Resolutions, which he was directed to submit for the adoption of the House.

The first was ordered to be received, and the Resolutions were severally put and carried, as follows:

RESOLVED.—That in the year 1822, a Public Instrument in writing from the Department of State of the United States addressed from the Department of State of the United States addressed from the Department of State of the United States of America, purporting to be the award of the Commissioners under the Treaty of Ghent, for ascertaining the boundary Line between Upper Canada and the State, by which Barnhart's Island, which had been, from the conquest and cession of Canada, occupied by British Subjects, and under His Majesty's Government, was declared to be a part of, and within the boundary of the said United States.

RESOLVED, 2d.—That in conformity to the said declaration, the State of New York, within whose territorial limits the said Island has been declared to be situated, has disposed of, and granted letters patent for the same, and has exercised jurisdiction by executing legal process therein.

RESOLVED, 3d.—That Barnhart's Island extends to within one hundred and thirty yards of the British shore, and that, by its having been yielded to the United States, the whole navigable water of the St. Lawrence have been ceded to that Government, whose jurisdiction is thereby extended to within thirty yards of the Canada Shore, and His Majesty's Canadian Subjects have been deprived of all access to Lower Canada by water, unless by passing through the territory of a foreign power.

RESOLVED, 4th.—That Barnhart's Island is much nearer to the main Canadian Shore than to any of the United States of America, and that the only safe channel for navigation is on the south side of the said Island, being between it and the main shore of the United States, while it is wholly impracticable for Boats of Timber, Steam Boats, and other Lumber vessels are among the principal Exports of Upper Canada to descend by the intricate and shallow channel on the north side thereof, even were it ceded exclusively to His Majesty.

RESOLVED, 5th.—That it appears by a message recently sent by the President to the Congress of the United States of America, that a negociation is now pending with His Majesty's Government for the free navigation, by the subjects of that power, of the River St. Lawrence to the Ocean.

RESOLVED 7th.—That in the opinion of the House such a measure, if acceded to by His Majesty's Government, would have a direct tendency to destroy the connexion between these Colonies and the Parent State, would injure to an incalculable extent their Commerce and Revenues, and would by admitting a direct Trade under a foreign flag (of almost every British enjoyment) facilitate the illicit introduction of foreign Merchand ze and afford advantages to the subjects of a foreign State not enjoyed by those of His Majesty in this Province, for which the restoration of Barnhart's Island and the free navigation of the South Channel of the St Lawrence, situated as these objects are, would not be an adequate compensation

RESOLVED 8th.—That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty founded on the preceding resolutions and imploring His Majesty to take into his most favorable consideration fully the unhappy situation in which His Majesty's faithful subjects on Upper Canada have been placed, by the unfortunate determination of the Commission under the Treaty of Ghent respecting the Boundary line of the St. Lawrence, as well as the question run which point on the Line to British Islands within the River, it the object of the Government of the United States to the free navigation of the St Lawrence shall be recognized, and earnestly entreating His Majesty to direct the attention of His Majesty's ministers during the negociation, and to be depending, such measures as may essentially secure the present and future interest of His Majesty's Canadian Subjects

On motion of Mr NICHOL it was ordered that a copy of the Resolutions on the Boundary line should be sent to the Honourable the Legislative Council for their concurrence therein, and that Messrs Hagerman and Jones of Leeds should carry up the same.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the Bill sent down from the Honourable the Legislative Council, entitled, "An Act to make further provision for the affairs of the Pretended Bank of Upper Canada," was read the second time.

On motion of Mr NICHOL the aforementioned Bill was ordered to be referred to the Committee of the whole on the Kingston Bank Bill.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the House went into Committee on the Kingston Bank Bill

The House resumed to receive a message

Mr. BOULTON Master in Chancery, brought down from the Honorable the Legislative Council the King's Bench Bill, which they had passed with some amendments, and to which he was directed to request the concurrence of the House of Assembly, and having withdrawn the amendments were read

On motion of Mr. JONES of Grenville, the Fifth Rule was dispensed with, and the amendments to the King's Bench Bill were read a second time, concurred in, and signed by the Speaker.

On motion of Mr. JONES of Grenville, a message was sent to the Honorable the Legislative Council, informing them of the same

Mr BOULTON Master in Chancery, brought down from the Honorable the Legislative Council a message informing the House of Assembly, that they had appointed a Committee to confer with the Committee of the House of Assembly on the subject of the Tobacco Trade.

The House went again into Committee on the Kingston Bank Bill

The Chairman reported a Resolution and obtained leave to sit again on the following day.

The Report was ordered to be received, and it was Resolved that a conference should be requested with the Honorable the Legislative Council upon the Bill sent down from that House, for settling the affairs of the late Bank at Kingston.

On motion of Mr. GORDON, Messrs Nichol and Burwell were ordered to request the said conference.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the Highway and Road Bill, were read the second time

On motion of the ATTY GENERAL, the House went into Committee on the Bill

The House resumed to receive a message

The House went again into Committee on the Highway and Road Bill.

The Chairman reported progress and obtained leave to sit a gain on the following day.

SPAIN.

The Madrid dates are to the 21st of December. Ferdinand presided at a Council of State on the 19th; the object of the meeting is said to be the granting an amnesty, which was expected to be published on the 30th. On the other hand, we find it stated in a letter of the 17th, that the "general amnesty, so long expected, is still a disputed point; a majority of the Council of Castile oppose it, and the fanatics do their utmost to excite discontent in the minds of the people, both here and in the provinces, with respect to the conciliatory measures, which to the moderate seem indispensable. Addresses and remonstrances to the King succeed each other: several are written in such violent language, and hold up to the Sovereign the prospect of so many evils and disasters, if he pardons and unites round his throne so many thousands of misled subjects, that his Majesty, naturally inclined to listen to the Serviles, will very likely follow their advice, in spite of all the objections and the efforts of the Foreign Ministers, and the counsel of some wise Spaniards, who feel that reconciliation is necessary. Meantime the prisons are full, the trials of the unhappy persons confined in them are without any relaxation of severity, and though the war has been terminated these three months, 12,000 prisoners of war endure, in the depots in France, a very different fate from which was promised them before the King left Cadiz to join the French Prince."

The son of the Marquis de Casa Iruco, has been mortally wounded in a duel with a French officer at Madrid. He was 22 years of age, and on the point of a matrimonial alliance: it is said the origin of the dispute was more political than amorous.

The prelates and all the ecclesiastics who are at Madrid, have presented a petition to the king, for the establishment of the Inquisition. The king answered that he was not authorised to do it by the powers of the Pope.

The Duke of San Fernando has been banished to his estates, for having refused the embassy which was offered him.

It is stated that the people of Grenada had proceeded in a mob to the prisons of that town, and assassinated more than 2000 Constitutionalists.

CHEERING NEWS FROM GREECE.

The London Morning Herald of January 6th, states, that the doubts that had been thrown upon the accounts of the naval advantages obtained by the Greeks over the Turks are removed by the late arrivals. The Turkish fleet is said to have been obliged to lay out at Constantinople for repairs. A letter from the Greek Admiral, dated on board his ship the Mauly, on the 1st of October, confirms the defeat of the Turkish fleet in the last week of September, which the Greeks had found an opportunity to attack in separate division with their fire ships. The Naval Power of the Captain Pacha is thus accounted for—11 Turkish ships were destroyed, one frigate of 24 guns was captured, 15 were at that period blockaded in the Gulph of Volo, and the remainder had fled in great confusion for the Dardanelles. Were they are known to have arrived. Letters dated on the 9th Dec. were received in London from Odessa, by which information from Constantinople to the 1st. was communicated. The Captain Pacha had arrived in the Dardanelles with a part of his fleet, the remainder of which is accounted for above, and he had been ordered to appear at Constantinople, and to give an account of the great advantages which the sublime Empire had reaped from the exercise of his naval talents during his summer's cruise. If (says the Morning Herald) the Czar of Muscovy be restrained by England and France from interfering with the Empire of his good brother the Grand Seignior, the Ottoman Power will soon disappear in Europe, and the standard of the Cross will, before a distant period, float in that Christian country, which is at present polluted by the presence of the Crescent

The Morning Herald states that the Turks had been obliged to raise the siege of Mi-solunghi—an event, which, if true, would be likely, by inducing Arcanania and Albania to decide in favour of the Greeks, to have a strong influence on the issue of the war. The financial distress of the Turks is said to be extreme—and they have been obliged to adulterate the currency. An extraordinary Divan had been held, and the result is stated to have been a determination to propose an amnesty to the Greeks, and to offer to place them under governors of their own, like Moldavia and Wallachia.

It is again stated that Corinth is in the power of the Greeks.

PORTUGAL.

It is stated in a letter from Bayonne of the 27th of December, that a courier has arrived at Madrid from Lisbon, bringing news that a very serious and extensive conspiracy had been discovered just as it was on the point of breaking out that three Ministers had been dismissed, that the King had ordered the Queen and several persons of distinction to be arrested, and that they were to be brought to trial. These reports need confirmation.

The Gazette of Lisbon, of the 19th December, contains a decree ordering the Farmers of the duties on Tobacco and Soap, (which are mortgaged for the payment of the principal and interest of the Loan of one million and a half sterling contracted with the house of B. Goldschmidt & Co in London.) to pay the amount into the bank of London declaring it to be at the disposal of the President of the Royal Treasury for the time being, to be employed in the manner directed in the general bond, signed by his Majesty, dated. October 9

A French paper announces, on the authority of letters from Lisbon, that the King of Portugal is about to give his subjects a new constitution!—by the advice of Marshal Beresford.

A letter, dated Lisbon the 23d of December, to a gentleman in England, says, that the Portuguese Government, much distressed for money, and quite desponding at the total loss it has sustained of its South American possessions. Every article imported is taxed to the utmost; and an additional new crown has been levied on each pound of tea, piece of handkerchief, and all other imported articles; and a forced loan is in contemplation, to include all classes of people, native as well as foreign merchants.

POETRY.

THE HORSES OF LYSIPPUS.

We stated a few weeks ago, that the first attempt in making a fac-simile of the celebrated horses of Lysippus had been completed by the artists in Mr Thomason's manufactory in Birmingham; and that they are about five feet four inches in height; and exhibit a splendid achievement in the improvements of the arts, and a novel experiment in sculpturing. In 1816, these horses formed the subject of the Oxford Newdigate Prize Poem; the successful candidate for which was Mr. Macdonell of Christ Church, whose elegant composition we now present to our readers:

"If e'er my soul, o'er Pindar's living lyre,
Thy fancy hung, and caught the poet's fire;
If e'er enraptur'd o'er each glowing song,
She sent the letter stand, and burn'd them bound along;
Mount up my soul, and with excursive eye,
Behold where Venus proudly courts the sky;
Behold, where, beauteous 'mid the wreck of years,
Each matchless courser warm with life appears.

"With many a pause majestically slow,
Proudly they tread the sacred arch below,
Pleas'd, in each limb the artist's skill we see,
Boldly correct, and temperately free;
Here—the arched neck, and gently heaving side,
Manifes with grace, and swells with generous pride,
There—chastening Art her softer touch applies,
And strength reveal'd with skill'd concealment, vies.
Though every vein with temperate current flows,
Though every muscle rests in calm repose;
Yet there's the force to whirl the warrior's car
Triumphant, 'midst the embattled ranks of war;
Or o'er Olympia's glowing course to fly,
Borne on the winged speed of victory.

"Such are the forms that once in bold relief,
Enhanc'd the glories of some conquering chief,
Doom'd on the high encastur'd arch, to bear
The laurell'd victor and triumphant car,
Methinks I see, with haughty mein, above
In trophied state, the son of Libyan Jove;
From conquer'd earth to heaven his looks aspire,
And the proud courses share their master's fire!

"What changes witness'd, and what wanderings past,
Ye rest in peace, immortal steeds! at last.
Ye mark'd, from her Tarpeian eyry's height,
The bird of empire wing her upward flight;
Ye mark'd her, drooping on the Pontic shore,
Sink midst Byzantium's towers to rise no more!
Ye saw the new born star of Learning rise
In life and gladness o'er Hesperia's skies;
From Venice torn ye saw its withering breath
O'er Gallia's plains shed pestilence and death!

"But see! triumphant Justice sheathes the sword—
The spoiler vanquished, and the spell restor'd;
See Venice, smiling 'midst her tears, receives
The gift which Valour gain'd—which Virtue gives:
With pleasing transports, each fam'd steed surveys,
Which o'er'd her brightest—cheers her gloomiest days,
Thus, when her palaces in dust decay—
When e'en her Titian's colours melt away—
Their matchless beauty shall her walls adorn,
And bear Lysippus' fame through ages yet unborn!"

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT

York, March 1st.

The account we have heard of this melancholy occurrence is as follows.—This afternoon, as Mr Spalding was returning to his house in the vicinity of this Town, having occasion to visit, on his way, some workmen who were falling trees on his grounds, he was in the act of giving some directions, when the tree under which he stood, being nearly chopped through, suddenly fell, and before he could get out of the way, unfortunately struck him.—It is said he was shockingly bruised; and, in spite of every effort to save him, expired in a short time.

The deceased was one of the very earliest settlers in York, having come over with General Simcoe.—He was highly and justly respected by all who knew him; and has left a widow and three promising boys to lament his fate.

QUEBEC, 19th February, 1824.

It appears from a notice in the paper, published by authority, that His Excellency the Governor in Chief, "will go home on private affairs for a few months, but his return to administer the Government of this Province may be relied upon."

A friend informs us that a dividend of thirty per cent. has been paid this season, upon the stock of the Dalhausie Steam Boat which plies between Prescott and Kingston. This is unprecedented in Canada.

Extract of a Letter, dated from Quebec.

A WONDERFUL SHIP.—"Do you know I came out to Canada, to take the command, and carry home an extraordinary ship, of a new construction and immense magnitude. She is now building by Mr. Charles Wood, of Port Glasgow. Dimensions as follows:—Length of keel, 294 feet, (with a flat bottom,) breadth of beam 50 feet—depth of hold 32 feet—length on the upper deck 300 feet; and will admeasure 3,600 tons, or there abouts, with a fine clear run, fore and aft, and I have no doubt she will sail well. She is to be rigged with four masts and a bowsprit and is expected to be ready for crossing the Atlantic about the later end of June. Her name is the Columbus, in honour of the first discoverer of the New World.

NEW FAIR.—We perceive that by Proclamation of His Excellency the Governor in Chief, a Fair is authorised to be held at the Parish of Charlesbourg, in the County of Quebec, once in every year, that is on the last Monday and Tuesday of September.

Executive Council Chamber
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration taking the unique Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

Executive Council Chamber,
at York, 26th Jan. 1824.

PRESENT;
HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

THE limitation of such a measure to one session seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government is admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1824.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Located Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Com.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that it all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragment thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

ENGLAND.

From the Courier, of Nov. 29.

We have received Jamaica papers Their contents are of considerable importance, considered in connection with the alarm and agitation which have been produced, it seems, throughout the whole of the West India Colonies, by the discussions which took place last session in Parliament, and the consequent apprehension that they were intended to lead to some final measures for the gradual emancipation of the negro population. These papers contain a mass of matter upon the subject, which cannot but excite the anxious consideration of those in whose will it lies to calm or aggravate the fears thus inspired. Meetings have been called in almost every parish in Jamaica, and the language employed in many of the Resolutions, breathe a temper which should make us pause before we proceed further.

LONDON, Nov 24.

The Secretary of the Shipowners' Society had, on Saturday, an interview with Government, at the instance of several of the merchants and ship owners engaged in the trade with Spanish America, for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was any real foundation for the rumours which have been circulated by some of the newspapers, of its being the intention of the French Government to assist Spain in attempting the reconquest of her late Colonies. The most satisfactory and unqualified assurances were given by Government that there was not the slightest pretence for imputing any such design to the French Government—that the French brigade Jean Bart, which had sailed some time since from France for the West Indies, was on her return to France, and that no force whatever was gone from France to the West Indies, excepting 800 men for relieving the garrison of Martinique and Guadaloupe. It was stated to Government, that for two months there were now loading in London and Liverpool for Spanish American ports, and that, of course, if the rumour alluded to had been well founded, it would be prudent for the merchants to continue sending their property in that direction. The answer given to this was, that Government saw no reason why the commercial intercourse which individuals might think proper to carry on with those Countries, should be suspended.

Touching the report, that there was to be an addition of 20,000 to the standing army, it is answered that nothing of the kind is in contemplation. Some recruits will be raised to supply the place of the regiments under orders for the West Indies

In the teeth of these pacific indications, we have to state, on Saturday last, the Victualling Office published a tender for a further supply of 3000 tierces of Prime Irish Beef, and 3000 tierces of Irish Pork.

Remarks on the above by the Editor of the Waterford Mirror:—

"If we judge of Government by the Courier, and at this moment we hear no organ more accredited, we shall pronounce ministry in a complete state of oscillation between interference and neutrality, between war and peace. In sober fairness we have seldom known a conjuncture which more fully illustrated the trite metaphor of Scylla Anaybdin, a choice of dangers. To allow France not only to occupy Spain and influence Portugal, but to re-conquer South America and Mexico, is pregnant with unprecedented hazard to our naval supremacy. Perhaps no indocement could prevail upon the Britains of the last century to expose the Empire to this hazard. But their descendants wish to be wise as well as merry. They have turned over the page of the chronicler of accidents, and they see dangers written upon the other side likewise. Without French aid, possibly enough even with French aid, Spain has lost her Colonies for ever. Portugal is not likely to be finally more successful. Britain has long lost her great hold of North America. If to these circumstances we superadd the very possible chance of a war between Britain and North or South America, or both, what may our West India Islands be worth especially now that Florida is in American hands? Possibly not the expense of watching. How with the circumstances of Canada be augmented! Might not the proclaiming of such a war be tantamount to casting the New World adrift from the Old? These possibilities may be distant, but they are serious; they are not merely visionary; with such importance we have been long impressed. It may be that we have dwelt too much now upon the subject"

LONDON, Nov. 22

This evening, (Saturday) arrived the Preston frigate, Captain Henry, E. P. Strut. from Vera Cruz. and Havanna, having left the last named place on the 29th Sept. with Dr. Mackay, a gentleman who had been deputed by His Majesty's Government to execute an important mission with the existing Government of Mexico, which we understand, he has most satisfactorily effected. Dr. Mackay landed at 7 P. M. and set off for the Foreign Office. We learn by her, that a French fleet of five sail of the line, two large frigates, and eight large frigates, under the command of Admiral Bergier, was lying at Martinique and Guadaloupe. What object they had in view had not appeared; it is asserted that they have any troops on board, but it is known that the garrisons of these two Islands are very numerous The Thracian was at the Havanna The Preston left Jamaica so long since as the 25th of June She has brought despatches for Government, and three millions of dollars, and a quantity of coffee, on merchants' account. We regret to hear that the Lynx and Banterd have been extremely unhealthy at West Key, as also the American Squadron and Garrison at West Key.

Colonel Stanhope has reached Florence on his way to Greece.

A Report is current among the Lisbon Houses, that Lord Beresford has accepted the chief command of the Portuguese troops, &c. There is no authentic account in town of any such circumstance. The understood object of Lord Beresford's voyage to Portugal, is the examination into and the final adjustment of the accounts of prize money, which have remained unliquidated since the period of his military services in that country

THE GLOBE AND TRAVELLER —(London Papers) say, "Greece as well as South America, is to be the subject of a congress. If so, alas for Greece! She had shewn herself able to withstand her infidel enemies—she has been able to make her way at the Congress of Verona, and Russian Diplomacy, and the Holy Alliance combine to bless her after their paternal fashion, by even the skill and bravery and per-severance he has shewn will hardly avail her."

November 29

It appears that a Congress is to be held at St Petersburgh, to the arrangement of the affairs of the East; and another is to be held at Paris, for the settlement of the South American Colonies. To the latter it is almost certain that England will not be a party; and in the former, it is highly probable she will not join.

It is believed that France is determined not to assist Spain, by force, in reducing the South American Colonies. This is good policy, as the attempt would certainly fail

There was but little done to day in the funds, this being pay day on the N vember account. No deputies have been dealt with Consols for money opened at 8 114 184. and are now 84 —buyers.

LORD BYRON.—A letter from Cefalonia, received on Friday, dated Oc ober 10, says,—"Lord BYRON, who came here in Augu last, with the intention of joining the Greeks, has found them in such a state, that the Lordship has deferred his plan for the present, and sent over two gentlemen to examine more closely into their circumstances before he goes amongst them. His Lordship professes his willingness to give his personal aid to the cause, with a donation of £5,000, and to spare £3,000 per annum out of his income, for the same noble purpose He lives retired, and it is understood occupies himself in the continuation of his Don Juian, which he means to carry through a great many cantos

STEAM PACKET ON THE DANUBE.—A recent letter from Vienna states that on the 15th ult. the first Steam Boat on the Danube commenced its voyage from that city to Pest, in Upper Hungary, where. notwithstanding its exposure to one of the most violent storms of wind, it arrived safe on the morning of the 16th. It was greeted on its arrival with a sa ro of artillery.

ROYAL MARRIAGE BY PROXY.—The marriage of the Princess Elize of Bavaria, to the Crown Prince of Prussia was celebrated by proxy at Munich on the 16th November. She was to be married at Berlin on the 29th.

Villanueva and others of the Spanish Cortes have arrived in Ireland Arguelles has arrived in Plymouth, England.

We are happy to learn, that His Majesty's health continues in the best possible state. We are assured that he very recently declared to one of his industrious relatives, that, for the last ten years, he had not found himself in such good health as at the present moment. It is with regret, however, we add, that the health of His Royal Highness the Duke of York is far from satisfactory.

On Saturday evening arrived at Portsmouth His Majesty's Ship Jupiter, 60, Capt. Geo A. Westphal, from Calcutta, whither she took the Right Honourable Lord Amherst, Governor General of India, and suite, who landed at the Presidency in good health, on the 20th of July, after a pleasant passage of four months and fifteen days The Jupiter left Lord and Lady Amherst in good health on the 19th Aug.

COMET.—One of those Bearded Strangers, called Comets which in the days of superstition and astronomical ignorance, used to excite, by their appearance, the most alarming apprehensions of War, Pestilence, and Famine, has been observed on our horizon for some days past On the evening of the 9th instant, it appeared, surrounded by a Coma, close to that star of the fourth magnitude in Ursa Major marked 69 of Flamsteed. On the evening of the 25th it was observed a little above that situation, having travelled towards Dubhe, the first polar pointer in Ursa Major. In a direction nearly parallel with Alioth and Mizar of the same constellation

This celestial visitor was observed last evening nearly in the direct line between the Polar Star and the first polar pointer of Ursa Major.—N Bruns Cour.

EXTRAORDINARY FORTUNE.—Sidney April 3.—Captain Edwards of the "Sampet, brings from New Zea and two chiefs one of whom is accompanied by his family. One of them is a youth of about 16 and the other 30 years old The name of the latter is James Caddel, an Englishman by birth and whose history is briefly as follows:—In 1807 or thereabouts the ship Sydney Cove, a store ship from this port, was cruising in the Bay of Islands, and had either stationed or dispatched a boat's crew, consisting of five men and a boy, James Caddel, the present chief to one of the islands in quest of seals. The boat was taken by the savages in the vicinity of the Southern Cape and the hapless men, with the exception of Caddel, were killed and eaten. Fortunately, in his flight, the boy flew to an old chief for mercy, and happened to touch his ha hah how (the outward and left of the chief;) and thus his life became preserved, as his person was then held sacred Being in too distant a part of New Zealand to indulge the hope of hastily escaping from a rather disagreeable captivity. Caddel became resigned to his apparent destiny, and insensibly adopted the manners and customs of the natives A few short years since he was allied to a chief's daughter, who also is sister to a chief, and, by this two fold tie, he became a prince of no small influence among such subjects as those barbarous despots are destined in the present constitution of things to have the control of Caddel lost his own language, as well as Christian name, and soon became transformed from the English sailor boy into the dauntless and terrifying New Zealand chief I required some argumentation to induce him to visit New South Wales; and he would not have come without his partner, to whom he appears to be tenderly attached.

SPAIN

Extract of a letter from Madrid dated Nov 7.

EXECUTION OF RIEGO.—A soon as His Royal Highness the Duke d'Angoulême had quitted the capital, (which was on the 24th) the second Court of Alcades d'Causay Corte had entered the necessary preparations for finishing the ill fated Riego drink the last drop of the chalice of bitterness.—Many of the occurrences in these preparations had but eight months before nailed him as shero. He was transferred from the prison where he had hitherto been, to the public prison of an unusual hour of the night; there his sentence was read to him, which was as follows:—"D n Rafael Riego is condemned to the capital punishment of the rope!!; he is to be dragged through all the streets leading to the place of execution, his property to be confiscated to the King's Chamber, and he is to pay the expences of his trial

At ten o'clock on the morning of the 8 h he was led into the Burning Chapel (a room lighted up with funeral candles, and other emblems of death.) In this situation which struck with fear every man possessed of a spark of proper feeling. Riego showed the most unshrinking firmness. All he said was, "may God grant that my death may conduce to the happiness and tranquility of Spain." These words will not be forgotten. The unfortunate Riego was sent to the scaffold in virtue of an ex post facto law, a circumstance which history will not forget, in recording these deplorable times It was during the night of the 5th that preparations were made for the execution. Amongst the crowd of ferocious people, who looked on with pleasure at the progress of this fatal work, some were remarked and fully recognized to be the same who, on a very different, but not distant occasion, had shouted in the ears of Riego, "Viva el heroe de las Cabezas!" To day (the 7th) the execution took place at the Puerta de la Cebada Here and in all the adjacent streets there was an immense crowd of people amongst whom were numbers of monks and priests, as also in the windows. Silence prevailed during his passage from the prison to the place of execution

During this agonising march, and to the last instant of his existence, he exhibited all the calmness and serene courage of a generous nature, willing to be sacrificed in the cause of his country.

On mounting the scaffold, his legs appeared to be feeble they were evidently swelled, probably in consequence of his recent illness and the weight of the irons with which he had been loaded. When the executioner made a sign that he had ceased to exist, a rire was sent forth by a number of persons close to the gibbet which was of an immense height . . .

From the Madrid Gazette . . .

LI Gen. Pozzo di Borgo, Ambassador extraordinary from the Emperor of Russia to his Catholic Majesty, was presented to his Majesty at Madrid on the 15th November. when he addressed his majesty as follows:

"Sire; When rebellion rose against the sacred rights of your Majesty's throne, the Emperor, my august master, foresaw, in his wisdom, the whole extent of the evils which the author of this criminal attempt were preparing for Spain. The most painful experience confirmed these well founded presentiments, which were shared by alarmed Europe, as the deeds of violence and injustice, committed by the usurpers of the public power, gradually destroy the hopes of the most sanguine. The necessity of checking the fatal consequences of a state of things which had become dangerous to all, induced the Sovereigns assembled at Verona to put an end to it, even by open force, if the obstinacy of the disturbers of general tranquility should render this determination indispensable. It was for France to take the initiative in this noble enterprise. She has gloriously accomplished it, and your Majesty is restored to his people and to his Allies, in the fullness of his legitimate power; a condition necessary to the happiness of Spain, and to the maintenance of peace. The whole world, Sire, expects to see these just hopes realized. The difficulties which your Majesty will undoubted meet with in attempting to apply his extensive dominions, will but heighten the merit of overcoming them. The happy results of your firmness, Sire, and the wisdom of your own resolutions, in the virtues of its people, and in the interest with which your Majesty is sure to inspire his Allies; and those will put your majesty have the glory of terminating, in a last of revolutions, by fairness which prevented their breaking out again, and by clemency which ceases them to be forgotten.

"It was under the influence of such sentiments, Sire, that the Emperor, my august master, commanded me to offer to your Majesty his most sincere congratulations upon an event he had so much at heart, and for so many reasons—and to communicate to your majesty his hopes, which are all those of his Allies, respecting the happiness which your wisdom, Sire, is preparing to confer upon his numerous kingdoms, the fate of which is essentially connected with that of Europe."

His majesty answered in the following terms:—

"I receive, with the utmost satisfaction, the expression of the sentiments of friendship and interest professed by the Emperor, your master. The part which his imperial majesty and his gallant Allies have taken in the deliverance of Spain, has shortened the period of her calamities. The interest which the Emperor, your master, testifies on the happiness of my people, cannot but be highly grateful to me. I am exerting myself to rid them of the evils with which they have been afflicted; and I trust in Almighty God that I shall obtain this great object, the only end of my solicitude

"I am particularly pleased that you should have been chosen by your sovereign to convey to me sentiments upon which I set the highest value"

H M has conferred the Order of the Golden Fleece upon Sir Pozzo di Borgo, and with his own hands, decorated him with the insignia.

The ex minister San Miguel, it is said has been arrested, and was on his way to Madrid, under a military escort.

SCOTLAND.

DISCOVERY OF A ROMAN TOWN, &c. &c. AT THE NORTH BACK OF THE WEST LOMOND HILLS, FIFE-SHIRE.

In the parish of Strathmiglo, (Fife-shire) there was lately discovered, within four feet of the surface, six bronze vessels of different capacities, from 1½ mutchkin to 10 pints Scots, or 20 gallons of English, unquestionably of Roman antiquity. These, however, have proved to be only a presage of still greater and more important discoveries recently made. A Roman town, the Urbs Orea of Tacitus and Ptolemy, so long the object of the most anxious researches of the most zealous antiquary, has been also discovered at a short distance, consisting of about thirty houses, in three rows, whose foundations are yet distinctly visible, with the fragments of three or four different specimens of urns round about these ancient ruins. About a mile west, nigh about forty bronze Roman military weapons, of different kinds have been found all lying together.—A little to the north a Roman urn and two Roman coins have been recently picked up one of them the Emperor Domitian's coin, in excellent preservation, which, with one of the spears in vessels, and four of said military weapons, are now in the possession of the writer of this article. In the centre ground, around which all these discoveries have been made, a very bloody and obstinately contested battle has been fought, on the banks of the Eden. where four cairns are erected, near each of which the Romans had buried their dead. The many Roman urns found near them—the burning of the dead in four different places, pointing out where the battle had raged, and where the Caledonians that fell in the battle had been burned, all co-operate to prove, in the strongest manner, that it had been unquestionably a battle fought by the Romans.—When this again is compared with the account given by Tacitus, it exactly corresponds in all its leading features with his description of the great battle fought betwixt Galgacus and Agricola inherto supposed to have been at the foot of the Grampians. It is obvious, however, that he had mistaken the West Lomond Hill for Mount Grampius, and this may be considered the source of all that ambiguity that has hitherto prevailed about it

Tacitus says, that "when Agricola was come near to the Grampian Mountains, he saw the enemies drawn up, to the number of 30,000 besides volunteers," &c. The spot where these also vast military weapons were found, exactly suits the place where he would get the first view of the Caledonian army drawn up on the other side of the Vale of Eden. He carefully, however, conceals the cunning artifice the Romans had to keep themselves to, in order to entice the Caledonians from their advantageous position across the Eden down to a ford called Merals or Marvellous Ford, from the circumstance of the slaughter being so great on the banks of a small brook running into it, that according to the opinion of the country still kept up, the Eden ran red with blood for two days) We have here also the small bid and plain mentioned by Tacitus, on which a body of the Caledonians were stationed, who when attempting to surround the wing of the victorious Romans, were attacked by four squadrons of horse. This had necessarily brought on a dreadful and sanguinary conflict, a little south from the rest of the field of battle, where all that had fallen there, so as to have been burnt on one grand funeral pile, the timber yet rising four feet above the brook.—The horse had then passed north through a small gap, or opening of the hill, and attacked the Caledonians in flight on the plain, (and the burning of the dead in the two different places on it, seems to confirm this, which is said by Tacitus to have decided the fate of the battle) The very camp occupied by Agricola after the battle, remains exactly according to Tacitus' description of it. half entire, and of the rest easily traced. What appeared to be most remark able was the new discovered town Orea, as a stupendous triangular table, cut of the freestone rock, upon a pedestal and pillar, and standing, with little alteration, as the Romans had left it. This seems to have been a table to the gods, and an inseparable appendage to all the Roman towns A more full and particular account of all these are now drawn up, and recently published, wherein the line of Agricola's march is endeavored to be traced. from where he landed in the south of Galloway, by the forts that he had built.

ANECDOTES.

ANECDOTE OF THE LATE LORD RODNEY.—During Sir George Rodney's residence in Paris, so great was his indigence, that he frequently knew not where to apply for a dinner. Monsieur de Sartine, no stranger to his professional abilities, thought this a proper time to wean his affections from his country, and therefore employed the Duke de Biron to make him an offer of the command of the French West India fleet, with a sum of money that should restore him to independence. The Duke, in consequence of this, invited Sir George to spend a month at his house, and in the course of that time frequently sounded him with great delicacy on the subject; but not being able to make himself properly understood, at last openly declared to him, that "as his royal master meant the West Indies to be the theatre of the present war, he was commissioned to make the handsomest offers to Sir George, if he would quit the English Service, and take upon him the command of a French Squadron,"—Sir George, after hearing him with great temper, spiritedly made him this answer:—"Sir, my distresses, it is true, have driven me from the bosom of my country, but no temptation whatever can estrange me from her service; had this offer been a voluntary one of your own, I should have deemed it an insult; but I am glad to learn that it proceeds from a quarter that can do no wrong!" The Duke de Biron was so struck with the public virtue of the British Tar, that he instantly exclaimed. "It is a pity so gallant an officer should be lost to his country; will a thousand Louis d'or enable you to revisit it, and to tender your services to your Sovereign?" The other replied they would; the Duke immediately advanced him the sum, with which Sir George set out the next day for England, where he had not arrived a week before he returned the Duke's loan, accompanied with the most grateful letter, for the singular obligation he had so politely conferred upon him.

ANECDOTE OF CORNELIUS JOHNSON.—Col. Johnson, who served (I believe) under the Duke of York in the Netherlands, was celebrated no less as a gentleman than as an officer, he was every inch a soldier, and had reaped glory and scars in the battle's rage. He was an excellent swordsman, and his extreme height of person and length of arm, rendered him a dangerous antagonist, even to more skilled opponents. Travelling on the Continent, accompanied by a single groom, he on one occasion halted at a small Inn, glad to seek any where rest for himself, his servant, and the jaded steeds. The only decent apartment in the house was pre-occupied by a party of French officers; and the provisions the house afforded they had bespoken, and the Colonel was informed that not a rag nor a omelet was to be had for love or money. A soldier's education seldom deserts him on an emergency: it was but a minute's employment to decide, and another, to send a polite request to the party, that a British officer might be permitted to share in the rations of their messboard The envy of Republican France overcame its politeness, and his messenger was sent back with rudeness and denial. Col. Johnson possessed, under utmost discretion, the coolness and intrepidity of his country. He commanded that the joint, then being dished up, should be laid before him; he and his servant fared sumptuously; and with fear and trembling "mine host of the Garter" carved the mutilated remains to the impatient and vociferating guests of the parlour. Affrighted and astonished, their disappointment and chagrin were soon converted into impotent railing and the breathings of revenge. At that period, the transmission of a watch, a glove, a ring, or any article of which the transmitter stood possessed, was considered the gage of defiance, and our Colonel soon found his table in the kitchen glittering with mementos of chalenge daring. He allowed the challengers to finish their abreviated repast, calmly took his medicum of wine, and then, followed by his servant, strode into the apartment. Drawing his sword, and placing on its blade the first article of defiance, at the same moment raising his fine person to its utmost height, and darting an eye of indignation around, as if singling out his victim, he coolly desired its proprietor to redeem it. The effect was prodigious. There was a pause denoting be-station—a bur, but nothing palpable; and, after a full minute had elapsed, the watch was handed over to his bowing lacquey, and a ring dangled on the still extended weapon; that too became the undisputed property of the domestic; and so with the rest. "Men but in appearance—soldiers but in name!" exclaimed Colonel Johnson, as he drew his hand across his blade, ere he deposited it in his sheath—"learn from thence forward how to respect the rights of hospitality. I have been told that cowardice is ever the companion of audacity; and that those who know how to convey an insult have rarely the courage to redeem it. I regret that it should have been my fortune to witness, beneath the French uniform, the combination of these degraded alliances."

A Dean of Canterbury, remarkable for holding a great number of church preferments, travelling slowly in his chariot to that city, was overtaken by a poor parson, who had somehow procured the loan of a good horse. The parson, en passant, bowed most respectfully to the Dean, who desired him to stop, begged he would call at the Mermaid, at Rochester, and order him a dinner, to be ready at a certain hour. The parson accordingly called on the host, told him he would be honoured with a visit at such a time, and must provide a good dinner. "For how many, an please your honour?" says Boniface. "Why," replies the parson, "I can't well say how many persons the whole company will consist of, for I only saw the Dean of Canterbury, the Canon of Winchester, the Provost of Litchfield, the Rector of Orpington, the Vicar of Romney, and one of the King's Chaplains." The parson then proceeded to his own home, which was within a few miles; and the landlord began to make ample provision for the numerous guests he expected to entertain. Accordingly, when the Dean arrived, a large table was set out, and the cloth laid; "How's this," cried his Reverence, "you have shewn me the wrong room; this surely is intended for a large company." "An please your honour," replied the landlord, "Parson Singlechurch called about an hour and an half ago, and told me I must provide for your honour and the Canon of Winchester, and the Rector of Orpington, and one of the King's Chaplains too, and I don't know how many more; and so I thought, an please your honour, I'd get enough.—" Oh very well, coolly answered the Dean, who now recollected himself, 'I ought to have asked Mr. Singlechurch to have stayed and dined with me."—The Babbler.

The Cossack Colonel, Prince G——n, was quartered with a lady of rank. The footman of the latter, going out of the house one evening about nine o'clock, observed a Cossack before the door, holding 2 horses. To his utter astonishment, he soon discovered that it was no other than Prince G. his mistress's guest.—'Good God!' said he, 'is your Highness holding horses.'—'Yes; a Cossack who did not know me, just as I was coming out of the house, asked me to hold them for a moment. I did not like to refuse him; but the fellow stays rather too long. I have been standing here almost an hour.'—'Let me take the bridle I will hold the horses.'—'No; I must keep the promise, which I have given the Cossack. A Cossack never breaks his word' Whilst the servant was expressing his surprise at this kind of observance of the word of a Prince, the Cossack came up, recognized the illustrious horse-holder, and threw himself at the feet of his Colonel, who mildly said, as he went away, 'Another time don't stay so long.'

ARTS AND SCIENCES.

MEDICAL QUALITIES OF OYSTERS IN FEVERS AND CONSUMPTIONS.—Oysters are a mild, balsamic and cooling article of food, and are of the utmost benefit to those who are troubled with warm flushings of the face, and other feverish symptoms, usually felt in declines, and nervous and irritable constitutions. It is quite possible, indeed, by making them a principal part of a meal, to prevent, in a great measure, the irritation and heat which produces the hacking and distressful cough in the more advanced stage of consumption.—Oysters, indeed, and other nourishing, mild food, will often altogether prevent consumption in those who are disposed to it from hereditary cause.

A young lady, of very narrow chest, and slender consumptive make, whose mother and two sisters died of declines—by avoiding beef, mutton, pork, and all sorts of red meat, and confining herself wholly to a diet of oysters, and other shell fish, while they were in season, and to boiled chicken and other white meats, with biscuits instead of bread, and rice instead of vegetables, soon became healthy and active, and escaped for many years the dangerous decline which threatened her. It is to be remarked, however, that oysters when too copiously eaten, are too cold for weak stomachs, unless accompanied with good pepper, or cayenne. Vinegar ought never to be used by those who eat oysters "to enrich their blood," or to prevent consumptions. Instead of vinegar a very little white wine may be added; but no wine when there is a fever or cough. When too many oysters have been incautiously eaten, and are felt lying cold and heavy on the stomach, we have an infallible and immediate remedy in hot milk, of which half a pint may be drank, and it will quickly dissolve the oysters into a bland, creamy jelly. Weak and consumptive persons should always take this after their meal of oysters.

The London Courier of the 15th of December, states, that Mr. Jukes attended at St. Thomas's Hospital on Wednesday evening with his elastic gum tube and double tube stopcock syringe. At the conclusion of the lecture he presented himself to the class, and having drank a small quantity of the solution of the extract of licorice with four tumblers of water, he introduced the tube into his stomach. Mr. Scott applied one of the stopcocks of the syringe to the tube and immediately pumped out the whole of the liquid taken into the stomach. Thus the experiment completely succeeded, to the great satisfaction of Sir Astly Cooper and the other gentlemen present.

Dr. Pearson, of George street, Hanover square, in lecturing a few days ago upon the stomach, observed, that this organ had no power over substances endued with vitality; and that this circumstance accounted for the fact of the Prophet Jonah having remained undigested in the stomach of the whale for the space of three days and three nights. Dr Pearson's discovery is highly important, both in a medical and theological point of view.

POETRY.

THE DRUNKARD TO HIS BOWL.

A PARODY

Vital spark of hellish flame,
Enter quick this mortal frame;
Trembling, reeling, belching, blinking,
Oh, the pain—the bliss of drinking.
Haste, sweet brandy down my throat,
Nor let me languish for a bloat,
Hark! they whisper Lesper tipplers say,
Brandy's syphilis! come this day.

What is this absorbs me quite,
Steals my senses, dims my sight,
Drowns my sorrows, gives me spunk—
Tell me, my bowl, can I be drunk?

The room goes round—each thing appears
With wrong end upwards—in my ears,
Sweet sounds satanic ring;
Lend, lend, your arms! I reel! I die—
Oh, Rom! in this thy victory,
Oh, Grog! is this thy sting.

From the Canadian Magazine.

THE POET.

Oh! say not that truth does not dwell with the lyre,
That the minstrel will feign what he never has felt;
Oh! say not that love is a fugitive fire,
That o'er the snow mountains will sparkle, not melt.

Ah! deeply the minstrel has felt all he sings,
Ev'ry passion he paints, his own bosom has known;
No note of wild music is swept from the strings,
But first his own feelings have echo'd the tone.

Then say not his love is a fugitive fire,
That the heart can be ice while the lip is on flame?
Then say not that truth does not dwell with the lyre,
The pulse of the heart and the harp are the same.

SONNET.—TO M——,

It is not that upon thy cheek, the rose,
Hath shed the softest influence of its dyes;
Nor that the lustre of thy dark blue eye
With all that sparkling tenderness o'erflows,
And wins, wherever it wanders, as it throws
Its animated glances, wild and warm:
Nor, for thy snowy bosom's bounteous form
Where love hath rear'd a dwelling to repose
In soft enchantment's arms: that thou art prized,
But 'tis the spirit of that airy grace,
Which beams in animation undisguised,
Lighting the glowing features of thy face,
That makes thee lovelier, than if beauty's whole
Coeius of charms were join'd, without thy soul!

MURDER OF MR. WEARE.

TRIAL OF THURTELL AND HUNT, AT HERTFORD, JAN. 6.

(By Express.)—Hertford, Tuesday Morning, 9 o'clock.

All was bustle and activity throughout yesterday, in preparing for the trial.

At eight o'clock the sound of the trumpets announced the arrival of the Judge; and in a few moments Mr. Justice Park entered, and took his seat on the Bench.

The Judge then informed Mr. Wilson (the jailor) that the Court was waiting.

Mr Wilson immediately brought Hunt and Thurtell into the dock. Hunt came rather before his companion, and having bowed to the Court, stood at the right hand corner of the dock, where he was placed before. Thurtell also bowed to the Court as he advanced, and stood by the desk which we have mentioned as having been put up for his accommodation. Thurtell wore a brown coat and white waistcoat. Hunt was dressed in black as on the former occasion. In the face of the latter those near him thought an expression of sadness might be remarked which was not observable before. Thurtell had no appearance of hardihood or indifference, but seemed perfectly calm and collected.

Probert did not come forward with the other prisoners. In about 10 minutes afterwards, he was brought into the dock. Probert was dressed as before. His manner was less flurried than when he first appeared in the same situation.

The Crier having made the customary Proclamation.

Mr. Knapp, the Clerk of the Arraigns, read the Indictment against Thurtell and Hunt, and the Inquisition against Thurtell, Hunt, and Probert, all three being at the Bar.

Mr. Gurney said he had to apply to the Court that Probert be allowed to have a verdict of acquittal entered against him. He should adduce no evidence against Probert.

Mr. Justice Park, stated no there was no intention to adduce any evidence against Probert on the Coroner's Inquisition. the Jury must pronounce him Not Guilty but there were other objections indeed to the evidence under the Inquisition; the prisoner however, was entitled to his acquittal.

Mr. Knapp.—How say you Gentlemen of the Jury, is William Probert guilty or not guilty.

Mr Brown the Foreman.—Not Guilty.

Probert then bowed to the Court and withdrew from the Bar

Mr Thesiger now proposed to offer the affidavit of Hunt, the object of which was to shew that a promise of the Royal mercy had been held out to him in consequence of his disclosure.

Mr. Thesiger then put in an affidavit of Hunt, stating in substance, his inducements to make a confession—that he did make it with certain omissions owing to his distracted state of mind—that he subsequently supplied those omissions—that he relies to Mr. Noel and the Magistrate—that during his examination he was treated as like a prisoner or a murderer, and in fact, was promised pardon upon his making the disclosure he has done, made with the hope of pardon.

The Learned Counsel next put in the affidavit of John Noel, the person alluded to in Hunt's affidavit, who corroborated his statement, and added, that but for Hunt's confession, the body of the murdered Weare would never have been found, and consequently that no trial could now take place. That the Magistrates procured Hunt their interference—that they received his evidence, which met their unqualified approbation;—and the deponent, Mr. Noel, conclude- his affidavit by stating as his belief that, but for the promise of the Magistrates to secure Hunt, the body would never have been found

Mr Thesiger.—These affidavits being now read, I have to move your Lordship, if not to delay the trial, at least to make a sufficient recommendation to the proper quarter.

The Judge was most clearly of opinion, that notwithstanding the case had been argued with great vehemence and propriety by the Learned Counsel, that no argument was adduced which was applicable to the Court. Whether or not, that which had now been urged might not be made the ground of a future application to the Crown was another question; but he had heard nothing to induce him to put off the trial

Mr. Broderick having formally opened the indictment,

Mr Gurney rose to address the Court and Jury —After considerable delay, they were called on to decide the important case They would listen to the evidence which would be adduced, and act on that evidence alone. The crime was of no common importance. and of no ordinarily aggravated character. It was a crime of the deepest dye, and it was attended with no common circumstances Evidence would shew that the murder was not the result of the moment; it was the consequence of deliberate pre-counsel The evidence respecting the murder, and against the prisoners at the bar, would be such as to leave no rational doubt in the mind of any man of the guilt of the parties The circumstances of the case, as they had remained were of no common character. The prisoners, particularly Thurtell, had lived in terms of acquaintance, if not of friendship with the individual whom they had murdered. Mr Weare It was alledged, on the part of one of the prisoners (Thurtell) that he had sustained some former conversation, injury from the late Mr Weare; but no previous injury was urged on the part of the other person, as instigating him to seek revenge by the murder of the party, who had inflicted the injury. No wrong from Mr Weare towards Hunt was even alledged; and yet it would be found that he had been privy to the murder, particularly connected with the preceding circumstances. Both indeed he repeated, should have such evidence adduced against them as would leave no rational doubt in the mind of any man as to the guilt of both prisoners. With respect to the character of the evidence that could be adduced in all such cases, they would recollect, the murderer chooses his time, place, and opportunity. He chooses a time when he thinks no human eye can see, when there is no ear to hear; and therefore, there is more difficulty to detect him without the eye and the ear of an accomplice. Besides this, however, there is a species of evidence, arising out of the combination of circumstances, which presents a more ready conviction to the human mind, than the positive testimony of an accomplice.—In all such cases, it is desirous that criminals should be reached by the arm of justice; but as that is not always possible, it is sometimes necessary to compound felony, and to arrive at that end no guilty to use the less guilty. From a most anxious view of the case, his Learned Friends and himself resolved to admit the evidence of one of those charged with participation in this crime. That one, you, Gentlemen, have just now acquitted. Something has been said about another; and upon that I can safely say there has been no breach of faith, nor a shadow of one. Faith is to be kept on both sides, and if the condition of either party be not performed, no claim to the observance of the compact can exist The first character which I shall introduce to your notice, Gentlemen, is the deceased, Mr. Weare He was, it is said, addicted to play, and connected with gamesters Whether he was the worst or the best estimable of society, is of part of our investigation The prisoner, John Thurtell, had been in habits of play, and it is alledged that he had some cause to complain of Weare with respect to some play transactions. The other prisoner, Hunt, is a public singer. He knew Weare; but he was not aware whether he had been been in habits of friendship with him. Probert had a cottage in a place called Gill's Hill Lane—a by lane out of the high road to St Albans. This cottage was conducive to the committing of the crime charged upon the prisoners—Probert was much in town; his wife lived at the cottage, which was small, and ill-adapted but little accommodation, and that was pretty fully occupied by Miss Noyes, the children of Thomas Thurtell, a maid servant, and a boy, besides Probert and his wife. It would seem that Weare had been invited, or had made an engagement with John Thurtell to take a few days' shooting in the neighbourhood A few days before the 24th of October, Thurtell met Weare at some billiard rooms of a person of the name of Rexworthy, on the night before (Thursday) Thurtell, Hunt, and Weare, met together at this house, on Friday Weare was in the forenoon with Rexworthy. He afterwards went to his chamber in Lyons Inn; took a chop there, wrapped up some clothes sufficient for a few days' absence, took a double-barrelled gun, a backgammon board with him, and dice, and with them got into a hackney coach. which was fetched by his laundress at three or four o'clock in the afternoon of that day. He first drove to Charing cross; thence to Maddox street; thence to the New road, where he went away from the coach, and after some time came back with another person, and took the things out of the coach. He undoubtedly at this time had the expectation of reaching the cottage of Probert; but it was not intended that he should do so.—The Learned Counsel next stated what he would premise a few circumstances which it was necessary to make the Jury acquainted with. The prisoner, Thurtell and his brother were desirous of a temporary concealment, in consequence of a charge of some misdemeanour against them. For this purpose they had hired lodgings at a public house called the Coach and Horses, in Conduit street, kept by a person named Tetsall They went there in October and continued to frequent that place for two or three weeks before this murder was committed On the morning of Friday two men answering the description of Thurtell and Hunt, went to a pawnbroker's in Shaple Bonne, and there purchased a pair of pocket pistols. Hunt, it would be proved to them, had hired a gig for that day at one place, and a horse at another, with a view to be stated, of going to Dartford. It would also be shewn that he asked, at one or other of these places where he could be able to purchase a sack, for which purpose he was directed to some place over Blackfriars-bridge On the same day Hunt, Thurtell, Probert, I Thurtell and Noyes, were assembled at the Coach and Horses; but he must say, that it did not appear that Thurtell or Noyes were privy to the criminal intent of the former. Some circumstances had transpired, which, at first sight, there was reason to conclude, implicated them in criminal knowledge of the matter; such as Hunt stating that he had been at Gill's Hill cottage, and that Probert if he should be found guilty of it," and things of that kind, which, however, it appears were not regarded as serious Thurtell left this house between four and five o'clock on the day in question, mentioning to Probert that he was going to take up a friend who was to be killed before Probert did not believe. Before he went away, he asked him to bring Hunt down. That evening it would be shewn Thurtell was seen in a gig driving a horse of a remarkable appearance, being a roan or iron grey, with a white face and white legs. He was seen by a patrole on the road to Edgeware. He was afterwards seen beyond Edgeware by the landlord of a public house, where he called; but from that time till he reached the cottage of Probert no one could speak positively as to his appearance, with the exception of one landlord of a public house, who could prove seeing him with a friend in his gig; Probert went down the same night to the cottage; he had a better horse and although he and Hunt did not set off till some time after the others, they overtook Thurtell and Weare. Thurtell told them to go on before, and keep always a head; they stopped at three public houses after that period, in consequence of which Thurtell and Weare passed them unobserved. They loitered for some time in hopes of their coming up. but this did not happen. Arrived at Gill's Hill lane, at about one mile from the cottage, Hunt got out of the gig, saying he was to wait there for a friend. Thurtell, who had arrived at the cottage by this time, met Probert, and told him that without Hunt's assistance he had killed his friend, and he desired Probert would return to fetch Hunt. Probert did so; and he told Hunt what had been said. Upon this Hunt observed, "Why it was to have been done here." first professing that it was his purpose in getting out of the gig to assist in the murder, and in locating himself in the full guilt of the transaction Hunt then got into the gig; but before they arrived at the cottage, they met Thurtell, who reproached him with not being punctual to his appointment Hunt said it was no great matter, since he had done it without him. Thurtell then said, that the pistol he had given him was no better than a pop gun; that he had shot it in his friend's face, who then got out of the gig, and ran away, saying, he would give him back the money he had won of him, if he would spare his life. No further stated, that he had followed him and cut his throat, but he had not killed him enough, had thrust the pistol into his brain, and turned it about there in order to be sure of doing the job. It would be shewn to the Jury, that on that night a gig was driven at a quick rate down the lane. The servants of Probert expecting their master's arrival, were on the look out, listening for that purpose, and their evidence would go materially to elucidate the facts of the case. The report of a pistol was heard by some persons who were at the distance of 3 or 400 yards, and voices accompanied and followed the report, after which groans were heard of some one labouring and faster and faster. Now, the Jury would find that at about nine o'clock at night, Thurtell arrived at Probert's cottage, although he had set out for that destination at an early hour; that he who had been seen going in the direction of the cottage, accompanied by a friend, whose gun and back gammon board had been put into the gig, did not reach that cottage until that late hour and then that he was alone, having a space of four hours, which were unaccounted for otherwise than in the direct journey Upon arriving at the cottage he enquired for Probert and Hunt; stood at the gate; went out again and returned with Probert and Hunt, both of whom were in the gig. From Probert the boy took the horse, and Thurtell and Hunt, neither of whom were expected at the cottage accompanied Probert into the house Thurtell, who was intimate with the family, introduced Hunt A supper of pork chops was ordered to be got ready, and Thurtell, accompanied by Hunt and Probert, went out, pretending to call upon Mr. Nicholls, but in reality to go down the lane, where the body, which had been dragged through the hedge, and covered with a sack. Thurtell rifled the pockets, saying he had taken part before. It would be proved that Thurtell before he again went out, got a large sponge, and carefully sponged his clothes, in the stable, but not so effectually as to efface the mark which were seen by Probert's boy, and which were still visible upon the clothes

At supper, Thurtell produced a gold watch and a gold curb chain, which, though fit for a watch, was, when single, adapted to a lady's neck, and it was said, at supper, that the chain was more fit for a lady than a gentleman, upon which Thurtell presented it to Mrs. Probert. Afterwards an offer of a bed was made to Thurtell and Hunt, and it was proposed that Miss Noyes should sleep with Mrs. Probert to put that arrangement into effect; but that project was given up, and Mrs. Probert, upon retiring, did not go to bed. Something suspicious in the conduct of the three men struck her, for, under such circumstances, it was impossible but that some disorder of mind or demeanor should be visible. Mrs. Probert opened her window and looked out. It would be stated in evidence that Thurtell, Hunt and Probert, went out while she was in her chamber, repaired to the body, placed it upon a horse, put stones in the sack in which it was contained, dragged it through Probert's grounds, and threw it into the pond. Mrs. Probert, upon looking out of the window, saw something drawn by them through the garden, which she believed to be a corpse. After disposing of which they returned to the house. Mrs. Probert listened to them upon their return, and heard them dividing the contents of the purse of the deceased between them. Those contents amounted to £5 or £6 a piece. They remained up to a late hour, and Probert upon going up to bed, astonished at finding his wife up At as early an hour as it was in the morning, Hunt and Thurtell went down to the cottage from which they had removed the body, and were seen by some laboring men looking about the place. Thurtell upon seeing the men said he had been nearly capsized in a gig.

One of the men hoped that he was not hurt.—"No, no," said he, and then they returned. The men, however, perceiving that they had not found what they had been looking for, searched about, and perceived marks of blood on the place. They also found a pistol of which was one of those that had been purchased by Thurtell and Hunt, and which was covered with blood and brains; and a penknife, which was also bloody. From these evidences there could be no doubt of the commission of murder on the spot. Afterwards the gun and back gammon-box and bag of the deceased were found in Hunt's lodgings. It would be seen that on the succeeding Monday morning, Hunt was observed very shabbily dressed, and that he went up stairs in his lodgings, and returned dressed in a very fashionable manner; that on Saturday night, he had purchased a new spade, and told Thurtell that it was to bury the body with. After those circumstances a report reached the ears of Probert, Thurtell, and Hunt, that a murder had been committed, and they were inspired with a desire to remove the body from the pond behind the cottage. Probert said he would not suffer it to remain, and Thurtell and Hunt promised to return on Monday night, and remove it. They accordingly did return on the Monday night, and Hunt kept Mrs. Probert in conversation while Probert and Thurtell went to take the body out of the pond. At ten at night, Hunt and Thurtell went away, taking the body in the gig, but Probert did not know to what place they conveyed it. Next morning the gig was found to be in such a state as to justify the conclusion that a murdered body had been carried in it, for there was a quantity of blood at the bottom. The subsequent finding of the knife, and other circumstances, having raised the suspicions of the Magistrates against Thurtell, Probert and Hunt, they were apprehended. Hunt had resorted to means of escaping detection, for when he had hired the gig he was observed to have a pair of large whiskers, but on the Thursday after, the whiskers were found to be shaved off—an expedient which altered the appearance very much. Further inquiries were instituted by the Magistrates, but still it was unknown where the body was or whose it was. At length it was found in a pond near Elstree, and the spot was pointed out by Hunt. There was evidence out of Hunt's own mouth to convict himself. If a man mentioned where goods where to be found which he had stolen, the finding proved the truth of the robbery, and in this case the finding of the body was evidence against the person who pointed it out. Those were the principal facts, and they were connected together by a most perfect chain. The Learned Counsel, after some comments upon the evidence of Probert, who must be looked upon with suspicion, repeated the leading features of the case, and added that it would also be proved that round the neck of the deceased was found a red shawl, which was the property of Thurtell.

PARIS, Jan. 11.

(By Express)—London, Jan. 8.—Hunt and Thurtell have been found guilty by a verdict of the jury, and condemned to death.

Thurtell addressed the Court for three hours in his defence, during which he maintained perfect composure, and concluded by saying, 'I am innocent, so help me God!' Hunt was so agitated that his defence was read by the Clerk, of the Court.

HIBERNIAN BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.—Nearly a year ago a few persons in this city, natives of Ireland, with a spirit of benevolence for which their country is proverbial, entered into an association for the purpose of raising a fund, to be applied in ameliorating the distresses of their fellow creatures, and gave to their assembly the above appropriate title. A knowledge of the existence of such a society was soon possessed by the public, and many of the most respectable characters, not only in this city, but in the Province, soon had their names enrolled on the list, as members. Although this society bears the spirit of "Hibernia," it is by no means necessary for the members to belong exclusively to Ireland; we are happy to understand that the narrow principles of confining their numbers to those of either a particular nation or creed, are excluded, but as the idea was first suggested by Hibernians, the society still bears its original name. The prosperity of this infant establishment has been beyond the most sanguine expectations of its founders, the numbers we understand already amounts to upwards of 150 and the fund is now more than £100, which is to be deposited in the Savings Bank of this City.

An application is to be made to the Legislature of the Province for an act of incorporation, and there is every probability of the "Hibernian Benevolent Society" of Montreal, becoming the source of much benefit to those whose necessities require relief. When such are the laudable intentions of this establishment, we are certain that every well meaning person in the community will join us in wishing it success.—Montreal Herald.

Executive Council Chamber
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

His EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER,
AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT;

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR
In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the Home of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one session seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government is admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province does decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years, from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

POLITICAL.

From the London Morning Chronicel. December 27.

The American papers received yesterday, contain the accounts of the opening of Congress, and the message of the President of the United States—The communication of the Chief Office Bearer of the Great Republic to the Legislature at this critical period, when the ambition of Kings, not satisfied with the calamity which it has occasioned in Europe, threatens to rekindle the flames of war throughout the Western hemisphere, was looked forward to with the utmost anxiety.—It is worthy of the occasion, and of the people destined to occupy so large a space in the future history of the world.

What a contrast between the manly plainness of this State Paper, and the Machiavelism and hypocrisy of the Declarations and Manifestos of the Governments of the part of the World!

Whatever lately were the intentions of the French Ministers respecting South America, it is now asserted, from undoubted authority, that English policy has prevailed in Paris over that of Russia, and that not only will France not assist Spain in any attempt to subjugate her former American Colonies, but will view, not with indifference, any support which Russia, or any other nation may lend her for this purpose. This is certainly a wise resolution on the part of the French Government, for this independence of the New American States must extend their commerce, and thereby increase the prosperity of Frenchmen

Russia blocked up nearly half the year by impenetrable ice, can never partake of Southern commerce until a port be opened for her in the Dardanelles, and hence the anxiety exhibited by her to involve France in the expensive and hopeless employment of reducing America to the yoke of the Bourbons, for without this or some other occupation for the French armies, and the British navy, he has not the most distant chance of accomplishing the long and ardently cherished designs of this empire against ancient Greece, now in possession. The union of France and England in the great cause of American independence, is another strong ground for expecting the continuation of the blessings of peace, and consequently an improvement in the public credit of nations The Speech of the President of the United States, so full of wisdom and just ideas, has, however, had more effect on the opinions of the dealers in national Securities, than the abundance of money, or the changed policy of France, for in it they see a sufficient guarantee for the maintenance of the freedom of the American Continent. There is no part, however, of the speech which can afford more genuine satisfaction to every civilized nation, than the notice which it takes of the extraordinary and gallant struggle made at present by the Greeks, in the cause of general independence.

From Bell's Weekly Messenger, of December 29.

The main object of any interest during the week now passed, is the arrival of the Speech of the President of the United States. It is a document of the first interest and importance. It is interesting, because the brief, simple, and direct expose of Republican Government; always true, plain dealing, and sincere. It is important, because, fearing nothing, it conceals nothing, and is totally divested of all that trickery, artifice, and common place jargon, which render the diplomacy of Europe so much more than merely negatory.

There are three passage in this Speech which very mainly deserve the attention of the reader:—The first is, when the President, in referring to certain pending questions between the United States and Russia, says, very briefly and energetically.—"This occasion has been judged proper for asserting as a principle, that the American Constituents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power."

It is scarcely necessary to observe, that this is a most important principle, and one which the English Government in particular, will find great difficulty in admitting. For example, suppose Franklin, or Captain Barry, had got behind the North West point of America, and, upon coming on the bank of that continent, had discovered a vast uninhabited tract of fertile wilderness—swamps, the back parts of Canada (the extreme back parts) should invite future settlement. It is needless to multiply examples, to which the above principle will apply. So far as regards Russia, we should be happy to see the principle established, and we should be satisfied if our own Government would concede it. Long, very long, have we wished that Canada might be sold or exchanged with the United States. Exchanged for what, it may be demanded? Why, for such an annuity for a term of years, as would redeem what remains of the English Funded Debt, and abolish it then for ever.

If America would give us enough for this purpose for five or ten years, the natural prog ess of our Revenue would do what would be required after that time Add this, that we would save upwards of half a million yearly in the expenses of the Canada Government, and nearly as much more in the reduction of the army which it would allow This has long been our own view, and we are persuaded, that half, at least, of our best statesmen unite with us in it. As to the right of doing so, there can be no doubt, the Canadians would agree; and for this reason, —because it is their decided interest to do so, and because (if we know Canadians) we should not hesitate one moment.

The second point of this speech is, where the President expresses a hope, and asserts that he is making the attempt, to banish the system of privateering on the seas in case of any future war; and to confine the ravage and spoilation of war to what is necessary to subdue the enemy.

To this point, it is scarcely necessary to answer. that England will have the same difficulty of assenting, because it affects the value and efficacy of her maritime predominance, and therein proportionately reduces her defensive and offensive strength for, to what purpose shall we possess this predominance, if we, by this principle, tie ourselves up from its use? And how long shall we possess it, if we cut off one main channel, by which our naval strength is fed and maintained?

The third point in the speech is, where the President asserts that, "he owes it to candour, like to declare that the U States would consider any attempt on the part of European monarchies to extend their system to any portion of the western hemisphere; as dangerous to their peace and safety;" that, "with the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power, they have not interfered, and will not; but that any interposition for the purpose of oppressing or controlling any of the States, whose independence the Republic has, after mature consideration, acknowledged, she would consider in no other light than as the manifestation of an untriendly disposition towards herself or other words. as a just cause of war

We have long, very long, anticipated, that the United States would thus speak, and it puts an end at once to all apprehensions that may be entertained by the Holy Alliance, or Congress. For, how can these Despots assemble any navy, which for an instant, can meet the American navy or the South American navy, when manned and commanded by American seamen and American naval officers?

This is by far the most important point in the speech, and settles (in our mind) the most important of all pending political questions.

The London Courier makes the subjoined comments on Mr Webster's resolution respecting Greece.

"We dare say Mr Webster was quite sincere in the wish he expressed that the United States' Government should not commit itself in any European contest; but we know of no way so likely to lead to that which is deprecated, as a proneness to meddle and interfere with European questions. It is very true that the United States have divers interests in the Mediterranean,' but there are other powers, too, who have divers, and more immediate, and more important interests there, and who may reasonably be expected to look with a jealous eye upon the creeping of conflicting interests. Our radical politicians are very fond of reproaching the Old Monarchial Governments of Europe with ambition and officious interference. Let them look at the Young Republican Government across the Atlantic, and note its policy. The whole New World is too limited for its movements already. To Europe, it says, here you shall colonize no more—here you shall interfere not—while, in the same breath almost, it betrays a disposition to proclaim its own rights of being heard and recognized, on a matter of purely European interest. We know not what may be the fate of Mr Webster's motion, but, in our opinion, it would be wisdom to reject it. The adoption would only excite the suspicion that interference of some kind or other was intended. If Agents or Commissioners be sent to enquire into the actual state of affairs in Greece, it may be supposed their enquiries will not lead, like the poet's "long passage," to nothing.—Commissioners, we remember, were sent to Buenos Ayres, Columbia and, we believe, Chili; and the recognition of their independence by the United States followed. We do not say that an exactly similar course is to be expected with regard to Greece; but we do think, as a matter of propriety and good taste, merely, that it will be as well, while the United States' Government prohibits European interference with North and South America, if it abstain from all shadow of interference with regard to Greece."

The London Courier of 20th Dec. observes, that if the inhabitant of Cuba proceed to declare themselves independent the United States will have them; and America being once master of the Travana, Great Britain may see adieu to her West India Possessions; but on the contrary, Great Britain holding Havana, would be able to curb the ambition of the United States.

A writer in the London Courier recommends the occupation of Havana, by Great Britain, as a maritime station, to facilitate her commercial intercourse with Columbia.—another recommends the occupation of Bluefield's harbor, on the Southern part of the Mosquito shore, "a country," he adds, "totally unoccupied by Spain; the harbor is safe, of great extent, and capable of being easily fortified; it is adjacent to a plentiful though neglected country, opening an intercourse with the richest treats of Spanish America."

LONDON JAN 11.—The English Government have sent to Bornou, the capital of a great kingdom in the interior of Africa, south of Fezzan, a mission, compose of Dr Oudney, Major Denham, and Lieut Clapperton The quarterly Review, which appeared in London on January 1, announces that the government have received letters from these travellers. They had arrived in February last, at the kingdom of Bornou and had made many important discoveries They had coasted along a fresh water lake named Iraad. 220 English miles in length, which they supposed reached the Niger and emptied into the Nile They supposed themselves to be 1000 miles south of Mourzouk, and to have arrived within 800 of the coast of Guinea

TRADE TO SOUTH AMERICA.—Two Mexican companies are forming; one in Paris by the houses of Hullett & Co and another in London by Messrs Barclay, and others The object of these companies is to work the Mexican mines, which have for some time past been neglected, and are inundated with water. The progress of the former company is a matter of some short time to make new arrangements. The latter consists of £100 shares in a joint stock company, which are already at 18 1-2 per cent. premium

PRESENCE OF MIND.—On Thursday se'nnight, as Mr. Evelyn, of Sheerness, who had been on shore to Globe Tavern, Chatham, where he received between three and four hundred pounds, was proceeding to Gillingham in the evening, where he was stopped in a field beyond the Lines by two men; one of whom came to Mr Evelyn, and said, "Give me your money, or——" "What" said Mr Evelyn, interrupting him; "why, man, I am upon the same business; there is a person coming from Chatham, who I know has received a large sum of money, and if you like to join me we will attack him together" The proposal was immediately acceded to, and the party loitered about for some time, till Mr Evelyn suggested that they might be observed if they remained much longer in the open space where they then were, and proposed that they should proceed to a field near Gillingham. In which there were two paths, the one leading to the church, and the other to the middle of Gillingham street; and that, to escape notice, they should separate, but that they should keep near enough mutually to assist one another. This arrangement they also fell in with, and Mr. E. having got rid of his troublesome companions, gave the other the slip, effected his escape, and saved his money Kent paper.

At a meeting of the committee of shipowners in London, the following important information was given:—

RUSSIAN UKASE.—The committee having observed that a ukase or order had been issued by His Majesty the Emperor of Russia, prohibiting foreign vessels to touch at the Russian establishments on the north west coast of America, from Behring's Straits to 54 degree north latitude—as well as in the Aleutin Islands on the coast of Siberia, and the Kurile Islands, (that is to say) from Behring's Straits to the South Cape in the Island of Oerrup, viz. in 45 deg. 52 min. north latitude; and to the distance of 100 Italian miles; and it being apprehended that the seizure and confiscation of British ships fishing in those seas might take place, upon the plea of their having been within the prohibited limits, the committee thought fit to make application on the subject to His Majesty's Secretary of State, and had the satisfaction of being informed in reply, that representations have been made to the Russian government, and that, in consequence orders have been sent out by the Court of St. Petersburgh to their naval commanders, calculated to prevent any collision between Russian ships and those of other nations; and in effect suspending the ukase.

Within the last two years, fifteen thousand new houses have been added to London and its vicinity.

CHURCH ESTABLISHMENT IN IRELAND.—The Clergy of the Established Church in Ireland, consists of 4 Arch Bishops, 18 Bishops, 300 Dignitaries, and about 1,200 Parochial Incumbents, and the tithes and church revenues, which, in 1799 amounted to £15,000, are at this time supposed to be of the value of £670,000 per annum. Mr. Wakefield, from the estimate of well informed persons, has given the value of a few of the Bishoprics, as follows:—The Primacy (Armagh) £14,000, Derry, £8,000, Cork, £6,000, Kilmore, £10,000, Waterford, £7,000 Clogher, £10 000. Down (Canadian) we should not hesitate one moment.

The second point of this speech is, where the President expresses a hope, and asserts that he is making the attempt, to banish the system of privateering on the seas in case of any future war; and to confine the ravage and spoilation of war to what is necessary to subdue the enemy.

To this point, it is scarcely necessary to answer. that England will have the same difficulty of assenting, because it affects the value and efficacy of her maritime predominance, and therein proportionately reduces her defensive and offensive strength for, to what purpose shall we possess this predominance, if we, by this principle, tie ourselves up from its use? And how long shall we possess it, if we cut off one main channel, by which our naval strength is fed and maintained?

The third point in the speech is, where the President asserts that, "he owes it to candour, like to declare that the U States would consider any attempt on the part of European monarchies to extend their system to any portion of the western hemisphere; as dangerous to their peace and safety;" that, "with the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power, they have not interfered, and will not; but that any interposition for the purpose of oppressing or controlling any of the States, whose independence the Republic has, after mature consideration, acknowledged, she would consider in no other light than as the manifestation of an untriendly disposition towards herself or other words. as a just cause of war

We have long, very long, anticipated, that the United States would thus speak, and it puts an end at once to all apprehensions that may be entertained by the Holy Alliance, or Congress. For, how can these Despots assemble any navy, which for an instant, can meet the American navy or the South American navy, when manned and commanded by American seamen and American naval officers?

This is by far the most important point in the speech, and settles (in our mind) the most important of all pending political questions.

The London Courier makes the subjoined comments on Mr Webster's resolution respecting Greece.

"We dare say Mr Webster was quite sincere in the wish he expressed that the United States' Government should not commit itself in any European contest; but we know of no way so likely to lead to that which is deprecated, as a proneness to meddle and interfere with European questions. It is very true that the United States have divers interests in the Mediterranean,' but there are other powers, too, who have divers, and more immediate, and more important interests there, and who may reasonably be expected to look with a jealous eye upon the creeping of conflicting interests. Our radical politicians are very fond of reproaching the Old Monarchial Governments of Europe with ambition and officious interference. Let them look at the Young Republican Government across the Atlantic, and note its policy. The whole New World is too limited for its movements already. To Europe, it says, here you shall colonize no more—here you shall interfere not—while, in the same breath almost, it betrays a disposition to proclaim its own rights of being heard and recognized, on a matter of purely European interest. We know not what may be the fate of Mr Webster's motion, but, in our opinion, it would be wisdom to reject it. The adoption would only excite the suspicion that interference of some kind or other was intended. If Agents or Commissioners be sent to enquire into the actual state of affairs in Greece, it may be supposed their enquiries will not lead, like the poet's "long passage," to nothing.—Commissioners, we remember, were sent to Buenos Ayres, Columbia and, we believe, Chili; and the recognition of their independence by the United States followed. We do not say that an exactly similar course is to be expected with regard to Greece; but we do think, as a matter of propriety and good taste, merely, that it will be as well, while the United States' Government prohibits European interference with North and South America, if it abstain from all shadow of interference with regard to Greece."

was very slender, and his height about five feet nine inches.—He wore a mustachio on the upper lip, and was dressed in grey pantaloons, black waistcoat, and covered with a dirty smock frock which had been once white; he was d gnised as much as possible. I observed the greatest joy among the multitude, and I saw many persons embracing under the yallows. A French officer in my room, cried out "Shame! shame!" and retired disgusted.

"The General Iturbide, once Emperor of Mexico, was not wrecked, as has been stated, after having embarked at Leghorn; but he put on board which he proceeded to sea, the George and Mary, returned to port on account of adverse winds. He then set off by land for England, accompanied by his two eldest sons—the object of his journey being to procure for them the advantages of an education in this country His family and establishment are still at Leghorn, in Italy The General visited Florence of late, and lived on a footing of intimacy with the most distinguished residents there."

On Tuesday forenoon a very serious accident occurred at the weaving factory at Dalmarnock. A young woman while in the act of combing her hair, dressed herself—it caught by a shaft having furiously round; the whole head was instantly uncovered, and the skin and hairy scalp turned round with the machinery; the skin covering the brow, eye lids, ears, and cheek bones, was also torn off; the pupils of the eyes were forced out. Mr Arthur, tenter master, who was in the flat below, with the greatest presence of mind, instead of running to see what was the outcry, instantly stopped the engine The poor girl, however, was never off her feet Mr Arthur put a handkerchief on her head, and in the mean time Mr M'Arthur put the skin and covering of the upper part of the face into a drawer On the arrival of the Surgeon, about twenty minutes after the accident, Mr Smith replaced the scalp and the other integuments on, and dressed the head. Under the superintendence of Mr M'Arthur the greatest good order was preserved and the surgeon was thereby enabled to proceed as regularly as if he had been in an hospital. The greatest attention was paid to the sufferer, and she was subsequently sent to the Royal Infirmary. Last night (Wednesday) she was calm, and perhaps much better than might have been expected. The head has not been undressed yet; but the edges of the wounds on the face seem, eyes, and neck, have become swollen slightly, and inflamed; indicating, in no considerable degree, suffering or growing further.—There is a probability that the whole scalp will adhere Between eight and nine years ago a similar accident occurred to a person of the name of Devon She, however, recovered in a short time, and is now employed in the hospital with the whole scalp burned and remained in the hospital upwards of twelve months. Since that time she has been married, and lives at present in Bridgeton.

BERLIN Dec 4.—A dreadful event on which our public journals have observed a strict silence, took place in this city on the occasion of the solemn rejoicings for the Prince Royal. To facilitate to the people the passage of the Spree, a temporary bridge had been constructed, destined exclusively for foot passengers, while the carriages were to be conducted and passed proceeding to Gillingham in the evening, where he was stopped in a field beyond the Lines by two men; one of whom came to him, and said, "Give me your money, or——" "What" said Mr Evelyn, interrupting him; "why, man, I am upon the same business; there is a person coming from Chatham, who I know has received a large sum of money, and if you like to join me we will attack him together" The proposal was immediately acceded to, and the party loitered about for some time, till Mr Evelyn suggested that they might be observed if they remained much longer in the open space where they then were, and proposed that they should proceed to a field near Gillingham. In which there were two paths, the one leading to the church, and the other to the middle of Gillingham street; and that, to escape notice, they should separate, but that they should keep near enough mutually to assist one another. This arrangement they also fell in with, and Mr. E. having got rid of his troublesome companions, gave the other the slip, effected his escape, and saved his money Kent paper.

At a meeting of the committee of shipowners in London, the following important information was given:—

LONDON JAN 11.—The English Government have sent to Bornou, the capital of a great kingdom in the interior of Africa, south of Fezzan, a mission, compose of Dr Oudney, Major Denham, and Lieut Clapperton The quarterly Review, which appeared in London on January 1, announces that the government have received letters from these travellers. They had arrived in February last, at the kingdom of Bornou and had made many important discoveries They had coasted along a fresh water lake named Iraad. 220 English miles in length, which they supposed reached the Niger and emptied into the Nile They supposed themselves to be 1000 miles south of Mourzouk, and to have arrived within 800 of the coast of Guinea

TRADE TO SOUTH AMERICA.—Two Mexican companies are forming; one in Paris by the houses of Hullett & Co and another in London by Messrs Barclay, and others The object of these companies is to work the Mexican mines, which have for some time past been neglected, and are inundated with water. The progress of the former company is a matter of some short time to make new arrangements. The latter consists of £100 shares in a joint stock company, which are already at 18 1-2 per cent. premium

PRESENCE OF MIND.—On Thursday se'nnight, as Mr. Evelyn, of Sheerness, who had been on shore to Globe Tavern, Chatham, where he received between three and four hundred pounds, was proceeding to Gillingham in the evening, where he was stopped in a field beyond the Lines by two men; one of whom came to him, and said, "Give me your money, or——" "What" said Mr Evelyn, interrupting him; "why, man, I am upon the same business; there is a person coming from Chatham, who I know has received a large sum of money, and if you like to join me we will attack him together" The proposal was immediately acceded to, and the party loitered about for some time, till Mr Evelyn suggested that they might be observed if they remained much longer in the open space where they then were, and proposed that they should proceed to a field near Gillingham. A SURPRISING ESCAPE FROM THE GRASP OF A TIGER IN INDIA.—It was after a long day's march of 18 miles, some of which were through a jungle, that we arrived at a jungle unusually swampy, which, from its size, and the fatigued state of the whole party, we found it impossible to get out by the rains, with here and there upright stones learned every thing suitable to her expectations and condition; the only acts of which she was still ignorant were dissimulation and insincerity—the only quality she needed was suspicion, which, in these times, is too often requisite as a safeguard to innocence against the machinations of libertinism. After an intercourse of two or three months, the Captain made a private declaration of what he termed a sincere and unchangeable affection, and a reciprocal feeling was admitted, with the most confiding generosity—the most captivating naiveté by the unsophisticated girl; whom, however, he enjoined to secrecy on the subject for a few months longer, until his uncle's approbation of their union could be obtained, alleging, as a plea for the delay, that he was entirely dependent on his uncle's favour for future independence. His desire, in this particular, met immediate compliance, for she loved him but too well to have caused him even one moment's uneasiness. The interim thus obtained was employed in accomplishing the ruin of this lovely and unfortunate creature, who, in an unguarded moment relinquish her honour and happiness, for the gratification of a man that could not have loved her. In October last, this betrayed girl gave birth to a child, who must blush for the sins of its father, and weep for the sorrows of its mother, now in a state of confirm'd lunacy, produced, no doubt, by the exposure of her shame, and the desertion of her heartless paramour, who on learning that procedings were about to commence against him, flung of the being he had ruined, to infamy, disgrace, and want. The action has been instituted by the lady's uncle, who has provided for her future support, and for that of the infant.

Distressing Fire at Bath.—On Wednesday morning last, soon after midnight, a fire broke out at the lower village in Bath, N. H. in a Goldsmith shop, and communicated to the stores of Messrs. Edson and Josiyn and of Col. J. Hutchins and Sons. Every article, including the books and papers in the first named store which was full of goods, was destroyed, a part of the goods in Messrs. Hutchins' store was saved. The loss by this fire is estimated at $11,000

MARTINIQUE.

By the arrival of the French brig L'Amazonne, at Boston, information has been received that two or three hundred Mulattoes, accused of a conspiracy against the Government, had been put on board two frigates and sent to France for trial; and it was reported some had been sent from Port Royal. It was also reported that a branch of the conspiracy had been detected at Guadaloupe, and that many arrests had been made there. Martinique was not expected to be made a free port.

Emancipation of Slaves in the United States.—The following resolutions have, as we learn from the Ohio papers, passed the Legislature of that State.

Resolved, That the consideration of a system for the gradual emancipation of the people of colour, held in servitude in the United States, be recommended to the legislature of the several States of the American Union, and to the Congress of the United States.

Resolved, That in the opinion of the General Assembly, a system of foreign colonization, with correspondent measures might be adopted, that would in due time effect the entire emancipation of the slaves in our country without any violation of the national compact, or infringement of the rights of individuals; by the passage of a law by the general government, (with the consent of the slaveholding States) which should provide that all children of persons held in slavery, born after the passage of the law, should be free at the age of twenty one years, (being supported during their minority by the persons claiming the services of their parents,) providing they can consent to be transported to the intended place of colonization.

Resolved, That it is expedient that such a system should be predicated upon the principle that the evil of slavery is a national one, and that the people and the States of this Union ought mutually to participate in the duties and burthens of removing it.

Resolved, That his Excellency the Governor be requested to forward a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions to his Excellency the Governor of each of the United States, requesting him to lay the same before the legislature thereof, and that his Excellency also also forward a copy to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, requesting their co operation in all national measures having a tendency to effect the grand object embraced therein.

New Voyage of Discovery.—It appears by the last papers from America, that a Col Sims has proposed to the President to discover a new world, and has demanded a squadron for the purpose. This terra incognita he maintains is to be situated within our own globe—that the old earth, in fact, has a young one in its stomach; and the arguments by which he supports this strange discovery are both numerous and plausible. If Columbus, by merely consulting a map of the world, became convinced that the equipoise of the system required a counter ponderant continent in the southern ocean, the Colonel insists that we may a fortiori conclude that the earth must contain another within it. In the first place he observes, that nature is ever economical of her means, creating nothing in vain; but that if we presume the whole contents of our planet, which is nearly 8,000 miles in diameter to be solid, there would not only be an incredible waste of matter, but that the weight of such a prodigious mass would infallibly drag us out of our sphere in the system of the universe, and precipitate us into the blind abyss of space. M. Dupin calculates the weight of the great pyramid, at above ten millions of tons; yet what is this huge pile, enormous as it is, compared to a single mountain? and what are all the mountains and seas upon the surface of the earth, compared to its cubic contents? By supposing it to be hollow, its buoyancy in space becomes no longer inexplicable; and the principal difficulty that remains, is to discover the door of entrance, which the colonel confidently professes to be situated at the North Pole.—It is conjectured that all the mountains of undiscovered land are formed of load-stone; and that the position of the aperture leading to them occasions the polarity of the needle. Its name occasioned some little difficulty the term New World being already applied, the new N. World being deemed tautologous; Simira was rejected as not being classical, Sima as exposed to a lude vous perversion, Subterranea as not strictly accurate, the country being rather within than beneath our own on which account it was finally resolved to term it Interranea. A loan has already been asked for the new Government, and the Interranean 5 per cents. are quoted at 96, having been done at 100. A bookseller in the Row has given a considerable sum for the copyright of the voyage, and the public of both Continents (who now discover the appropriateness of that designation, since they contain another within them) are looking with the utmost anxiety for the results of this interesting voyage."—New Monthly Mag.

Preservation of the Human Body.

Capt. Sabine, in the Griper, arrived in England on the 19th Dec from Spitzbergen. The ship penetrated to lat. 81 N. long. 75 20 E. Rein deer were found in great numbers at Spitzbergen, the fat on some of them was four inches thick. A most astonishing circumstance occurred; on some of the officers visiting and inspecting the tombs and graves, in which some Russians had been buried for 85 years,—when the lid or grave-stone was removed, the body appeared in a perfect state, the flesh still remaining, and with a colour on the cheek similar to life. All the bodies were dressed in the costume of the country, with night-caps, boots and stockings, on. This wonderful preservation of the subject induced Capt. Sabine to bring one to England; also one of the tomb gravestones.

New Atmospheric Engine.—An Engine has, it is said, been constructed, which will produce a sort of revolution in mechanics; it will supersede altogether the use of steam, and may be termed an Atmospheric Engine; its power may be multiplied ad infinitum, the expense of working it, compared with the steam-engine, will save nine parts out of ten. The original cost will likewise be comparatively small, and its application to every purpose to which steam can be applied. A patent has been taken out for England, and those for Scotland and Ireland are in progress, and when completed, the engine will be exhibited to the public.—Liv Pap

Experimental Chemistry.—M. Roulle, the most eminent French Chemist, was one the most cautious of operators. He observed to his auditors, "Gentlemen, you see this cauldron upon this brassier; well, if I were to cease stirring a single moment an explosion would ensue that would blow us all into the air." The company had hardly time to reflect upon this uncomfortable piece of intelligence before he did forget to stir; and his prediction was accomplished! All the windows of the laboratory were smashed to pieces, and two hundred spectators whirled away into the garden. Fortunately no serious injury was received by any one, the greatest violence of the explosion having been in the direction of the chimney. The demonstrator was quit with the loss of his wig only.

Vaccination.—The Medico-Chirurgical Review, published in London, states that in Russia no less than 1,200,000 received the benefit of vaccination, between the years 1804 and 1812. In Denmark, the small pox no longer exists; and in a circular, addressed in July, 1816, to all magistrates and bishops in that country, it was ordered that all should be vaccinated, without a compliance with which injunction, no individual could be received at confirmation, admitted into any school or public institution, or bound apprentice to any trade. Priests were also forbidden to marry those who had not either the small pox or cow pox. In Prussia, if any person happened to die of small pox they were directed by an edict, published in 1816, to be buried within twenty four hours, silently and unattended, without the tolling of a bell; and in such veneration is the great discoverer of vaccination held, that the 14th of May is made an annual festival to commemorate the day on which he made his first experiment.

Improvement in Printing.—The London Courier announces that the press work of that paper is now executed by a machine of such extraordinary mechanical power, that it is capable of throwing off considerably above two thousand papers per hour. It, indeed, on one occasion, produced at the rate of 2,880 impressions within the hour! No steam apparatus is employed, but two men alternately turn a fly wheel which acts as the impelling power. Similar machines are employed by other London Journals, and now supercede the necessity of setting up part of each impression in duplicate and triplicate for speed.

NATURAL HISTORY.

The Queen Bee.—On Saturday, 22d November, the Edinburgh Wernerian Society met for the first time this season, and we were happy to see a numerous meeting.—The first paper that was submitted to their notice, was on the conversion of the larvæ of a working bee into a queen bee," by the Rev. Mr. Dunbar, of Applegarth. Mr. Dunbar states that he noticed the operations of a hive on the loss of a queen; for the first day all was noise and confusion when the loss was discovered. After this had a little subsided, in consequence of the loss being ascertained, the bees, to avoid a state of anarchy, laid the foundation of five royal cells, and of four more the next day, and placed the larvæ of (what is supposed to be) the working bees in them. At the end of fourteen days, a new queen issued forth from one of the cells, and with an instinct equalling Turkish wisdom and policy, proceeded immediately to tear open the other royal cells, no doubt with the determination of destroying what was likely to produce a rival to her power. The working bees rebelled against unconstitutional exercise of authority, and hauled her majesty away from her job. They succeeded in protecting the junior branches of the royal family, and were rewarded for their loyalty by the birth of a princess. But it was of no avail; for the Czarina, who had, as it should seem, a preferable claim, in virtue of the priority of her birth, killed her fair and unfortunate rival.

Mr. Dunbar, in corroboration of the above fact, of the formation of an artificial queen, narrated an instance of its having been done by an artificial swarm also. A number of bees (not an uncommon circumstance) depended in a large cluster at the door of the hive; he suddenly removed the hive from the right, and placed another in its room, containing empty cells, having previously taken the precaution of putting into it about three inches square of pure honey comb containing larvæ and honey, and the astonishment of the bees was very great when they entered the new hive, and missed their stores and their beloved monarch, the air and stately queen; they bustled about in every direction; but the next day, finding that the royal family had removed, and taken away the treasury, they began to lay the foundation of royal cells, and in the course of time made to the newly-a a new queen. Mr. Dunbar has repeated the latter experiment with great success.

The Air Flower of Cuba.—One of the most remarkable instances of vegetable life being supported without roots, is to the air flower of Cuba. It is a plant without roots, and consist of a single shoot, resembling the stalk of Gilli flower, but with thicker and larger leaves, which feel like wood. Its native situation is an arid rock or dry tree, on which it entwines itself. Each stock or shoot has two or three white and transparent flowers, resembling the lilly, in size, shape, and odour. It may be transported many hundred miles, and suspended on a nail or peg, where it will bloom annually.—Supplement to Molina's History of Chili.

POETRY.

The lovers of Poetry are this week presented with no common specimen of lyric excellence—The Jubilee Ode by Mr. Sprague, is worthy of Oxford or Cambridge. With the pathos of Gray, is mingled the fire and impetuosity of Collins, and although the imagery is not always correct, and the harmony of the numbers has in two or three instances been sacrificed to the sentiment, yet take it all in all, we have not looked upon its like, as the offspring of this Western hemisphere.

PRIZE ADDRESS.

FOR THE SHAKESPEARE JUBILEE,

(At the Federal Street-Theatre—Boston.)

Written by Charles Sprague, Esq.

God of the glorious Lyre!
Whose notes of old on lofty Pindus rang,
While Jove's exulting quire,
Caught the glad echoes, and responsive sang—
Come! bless the service and the shrine
We consecrate to Thee and Thine.

Fierce from the frozen north,
When havock led his legions forth,
O'er Learning's dawn groves the dark destroyers spread;
In dust the sacred statue slept;
Fair Science round her altars wept;
And Wisdom cowled his head.

At length, Olympian Lord of morn,
The raven veil of night torn,
When through golden cloud descending,
Thou didst hold thy radiant flight,
O'er nature's lovely regent bending,
Till Avon roll'd all sparkling to thy sight!

There on its bank beneath the Mulberry's shade,
Wrapped in young dreams a wild-eyed Minstrel strayed.

Lighting there, and lingering long,
Thou didst touch the hard his soul;
Thy fingers struck his sleeping shell,
And round his brows a garland cushed;
On his lips thy spirit fell,
And bade him wake and warm the world!

Then Shakespeare rose!—
Across the trembling strings
His daring hand he flings;
And to! a new creation glows!—
There, midst the gorgeous round, subsidive to his will,
Fate's vassal train his high commands fulfil.

Madness with his frightful scream,
Vengeance leaning on his lance;
Avarice with his blade and beam;
Hatred, blasting with a glance;
Remorse that weeps, and Rage that roars;
And Jealousy that dotes, but dooms, and murders, yet adores

Mirth his face with sunbeams lit,
Waking Laughter's merry swell,
Arm in arm with fresh eyed Wit,
That waves his tingling lash, while Folly shakes his bell.
From the feudal tower pale Terror rushing,
Where the Prophet bird's wail
Dies along the dull gale,
And the slopping monarch's blood is gushing,

Despair that haunts the gurgling stream,
Kissed by the virgin moon's cold beam,
Where sweet lost maid with dishevelled wreathes,
And swan like, there her own dirge breathes,
The broken hearted, sinks to rest.
Beneath the bubbling wave that shrouds her maniac breast.

Young Love, with eye of tender doom,
Now drooping o'er the hallowed tomb,
Where his plighted victim lie,
Where they first met, but met to die;—
And now, when crimson buds are sleeping,
Through the dewy arbor peeping,
Where beauty's child the frowning world forgot,
To youth's devoted tale is listening,
Rapture on her dark lash glistening, [spot
While fairies leave their cowslip cells, and guard the happy

Thus rise the phantom throng,
Obedient to their master's song.
And loud in willing chains the wandering soul along,
For other worlds see Shakespeare rove and reign!
The rapt Magician of his own wild toy.
Earth and her tribes his mystic wand obey;
Old ocean trembles, thunder cracks the skies;
Revenge with shaped, and fell tread, counts the victim's prize;
Time yields his trophies up, and death restores
The mouldered victims of his voiceless shores;
Night's pattering hags their fearful orgies keep,
And lurking guilt unseals the lip of sleep.
The fi elds beneath, and the sedate pace,
The crime that cursed, the deed that blessed an age,
All, all come forth, the good to charm and cheer,
To scourge bold vice, and steel the generous fear,
With pictured folly rousing fools to shame,
And guide young Glory's foot along the path of fame.

Mark the sceptred Traitor slumber ing!
There fits the slaves of conscience round;
With boding tongue foul murders numbering,
Lest's leaden portals catch the sound;
In his dream of blood for mercy quaking,
At his own dull scream behold him waking;—
Soon that dream to fate shall turn,
For him the living furies burn;
For him the vulture screams on yonder misty peak,
And either ocean sighs, moaning night, and wheels her hungry beak.
Hark! the trumpet's warning breath
Echoes round the vale of death,
Where through the maddening ranks the God of slaughter rides,
And o'er the mounting trunks his rocking axle guides;—
Unbeared unbelmed, disdaining shield,
The taunting Tyrant scours the field,
Vengeance! he meets thy dooming blade!
The scourge of earth, the curse of heaven,
He falls unwept and unforgiven,
And all his glories fade
Like a crushed reptile in the dust he lies,
And hate's last lightning quivers from his eyes.

Behold you crowd less king—
You whitelocked, weeping sire;
Where heaven's unpiller'd chambers ring,
And burst their storms of God-and fire!—
He gave them all—the daughters of his love;
That reverent pair—they drive him forth to rover
In such a night of woe,
The cubless regent of the wood
Forgets to bathe her fangs in blood,
And cowers with her fear!
Yet one was ever kind—
Why lingers she behind?—

O pity!—view him by her dead form kneeling,
Even in wild phrensy holy nature feeling,
His aching eye hath strain
To search, as curtain'd orbs untold,
That beauteous bosom heave again,
But all is dark and cold.
In agony the father shakes;
Grief's clinking sobs
Swells in his throat,
Each withered heart string tugs and breaks!
Round her pale neck, his dying arms he wreathes,
And on her marble lips his last, his death-kiss breathes.

Down trembling wing—shall insect weakness keep
The son defying eagle's sweep?
A mortal strike celestial strings,
And feebly echo what a seraph sings!—
Who now shall grace the glowing throne,
Where all unrivalled, all alone,
Bold Shakspeare, eye-rooked, eye-soaked, counts us through,
The minstrel monarch of the worlds he drew?

That throne is cold—that lyre in death unstrung,
On whose proud note delighted wonder hung.—
Yet old Oblivion, arm in wrath he sweeps,
One spot shall spare—the grave where Shakespeare sleeps.
Rulers and ruled in common gloom may lie,
But nature's favorite lords shall never die.
Art's chiselled bust, and glory studded shore
Must live in numbers, or can live no more.
While sculptured Jove some nameless waste may claim,

Still rolls th' Olympick Car in Pindar's fame;
Troy's doubtful walls in ashes passed away,
Yet from on Greece in Homer's deathless lay:
Rome, she by sinking in her tumbling fame,
Stands all immortal in her Maro's strains:—
So, too, you giant Empress of the isles,
On whose broad sway the sun forever smiles,
To time's unsparing rage one cry must bend,
And all her triumphs in her Shakespeare end!—

O Thou to whose creative power
We dedicate the festal hour,
While Grace and Goddess round the altar stand,
Learning's anointed train, and Beauty's rose tipped hand—
Beams yet unkenown, in accents now unknown,
Thy song shall learn, and bless it for their own.
Deep in the West as independence rose,
His banners planting round the land he loves,
Where nature sleeps in Eden's infant grace,
In time's full hour shall bring a glorious race!
Thy name, thy verse, thy language shall they hear,
And deck for thee the unsbed temple there.—
Our Roman hearted Fathers broke
Thy proud empire's galling yoke,
But thou, harmonious Monarch of the mind,
Around their sons a gentler chain shall bind;
Once more, in Time, shall Albion's sceptre wave,
And what her mighty Lion lost, her nightier Swan shall save.

POT ASHES —The following statement gives a most favorable idea of our trade in the article of Pot Ashes to Liverpool, in comparison to that of the United States.

Extract of a letter from Liverpool, dated Dec 1st. 1823.

"The Imports of Ashes from Canada since the St. Lawrence opened, up to this day, has been 21347 bbls.
From the United States, 3610 do.

Making a total of 24957 bbls.

Added to this, the vessels yet to arrive from Canada will bring not less than 4000 Barrels.—Last year the entire import from Canada and the United States was, 16800 barrels. Although our market at the commencement of the season was certainly exceedingly bare, the great excess of supply this year will, we feel persuaded, deter the speculators from coming into the market; and without them and the regular consumptive demand will not of itself be sufficient to raise prices. Indeed, we much doubt if it will keep them where they are

Our market last week has been very heavy and dull, for both Pot and Pearl Ashes; and prices have declined about one shilling per cwt. The highest rate now for Canadian brand of either sort is 42 shillings.—A fortnight ago, 44 shillings was paid."

At the date of this article, some of the best vessels had not arrived, and their freights will perhaps overrun the estimate made above. The making of Pot Ashes has become more general in this country, and we must say, that the clearing of the land for the hand of the husbandman advances in an equal ratio. Every barrel of Canadian Ashes which goes from this country, seems to us a trophy of the victory which commerce and enterprise are daily gaining over the wilderness which civilization must in time pervade.

The second performance of the Canadian Gentlemen Amateurs took place last Saturday, at the Little Theatre of Mr. Roy, New Market. The very favourable account of their first representation, prepared us to look for the encrease of satisfaction which their future efforts afforded eye. The performance of Saturday obtain'd the highest praise. The different parts were allotted with discrimination and were supported with great effect. The characters of Crispin in the Play, and Mirobolan in the After Piece, appear to have been sustained with peculiar talents, as were those of Argante, Geronte, Scapin, and Sylvestre in his character of a Spadassin, in the latter. The exertions of the whole Amateurs indeed, merit the greatest applause; and combining so interesting an amusement with the beneficent views of Charity, adds still greater interest to their talents and public feeling.

FERRY.

Executive Council Office, York, 4th March, 1824.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to Establish a Ferry from the Landing, near the Residence of Thomas Dorland, Esq. in the Township of Adolphustown, to the Landing near Vanalstine's Mills, in the Township of Marysburgh, in the Midland District,

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN,

By Order of His EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR in Council, that Sealed Proposals, Post paid, for a Lease of the said Ferry, to be given to the highest Bidder, for the term of Three Years, Endorsed "Sealed Proposals for Ferry," will be received at the Office until the First day of May next.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Chamber, York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
IN COUNCIL.

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration failing, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER, AT YORK, 26th JAN. 1824.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
In Council

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office, York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants; is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Grantee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office, York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

A Township North of Mariposa, advertised from the Surveyor General's Office on the 19th of October, as

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

LONDON, JAN. 12.

The Courier states, that great naval preparations have been secretly making for seve ral months in the port of Brest. According to the report of a master of a vessel lately arrived from that port, it is stated, that during November and December, 14 Russian, Prussian and Swedish vessels arrived with lumber, hemp, &c. which were placed in the arsenal; and that the labourers were at work every day in the week. The Courier remarks:

The squadron which is arming is composed of eight ships of the line, five large frigates of a new model, carrying 60 guns each, four frigates of ordinary size, four brigs, and five corvettes—in all 26. The greater part are ready for sea. We would not excite alarm, certainly not unnecessary alarm, but we have not forgotten what happened a year ago, when the most satisfactory assurances of the pacific intentions of the French government were given at the very moment when the King announced to Europe that he was going to send the Duke d'Angoulesme into Spain at the head of 100,000 men. It is true that we were not the dupes of what was going on; but that did not prevent a gross delusion being created by the world for constantly maintaining that war was inevitable.

Supported by these recollections, and other considerations no less powerful, we shall content ourselves with saying, that we shall not be surprised to see the spring of 1824 develope projects which will not differ very widely, in principle, from those which marked the commencement of 1823.

Finally, such is our opinion and, as we acted during the Spanish war, we submit this opinion to our readers with the grounds on which it rests.—It is for them to form their own opinions on the subject.

Thurtell was executed on the 9th of January. Probert was unable to get admission in a single house, such was the public indignation against him, and was obliged to resort to the jail for a lodging place at night.

The privy council have commuted the punishment of death to which Hunt had been condemned as an accomplice in the assassination of Mr. Weare; he is to be transported for life.

The Courier says that indirect measures are taking to dethrone Bernadotte.

The King of Spain has published a decree, which, in the actual state of things in South America, is extremely ridiculous. It orders, among other things, that in his councils beyond the sea "no Deputy shall be sung for his happy deliverance; and "these possessions," says a Paris Editor, "might have been more briefly expressed by merely mentioning Cuba."

Sir Robert Wilson and Col Light, who was with Sir Robert, and wounded at Corunna, are no both in England. Nothing is yet said of the course Parliament may think proper to take should Sir Robert Wilson attempt to resume his seat in the House of Commons in contravening the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Bill, by taking part in the Spanish war. Col Light is represented to have said, that Monkie wished to put him to death but he was saved by the French General.

CONTROVERTIBLE NEWS FOR SCOTCH LAWYERS.—Mr Bell, the Professor of Scots Law, in the University of Edinburgh, stated in the course of his first Lecture for their Session, on the 29th October, that the Law Commission (of which he was a member) would in his opinion, reduce the Law pleadings in Scotland to one half of what they are now, and that half the present number of lawyers would be more than sufficient. He therefore strongly recommended to those students who had not yet made up their minds, to betake themselves to other professions.

BRITISH COTTON TRADE.—The Cotton trade in Great Britain continues to increase amazingly. The Glasgow Chronicle of November 27, says that new cotton works containing 750,000 spindles are contracted for, to be finished next September. Of these, 600,000 are for England. They will spin 18,000,000 lbs of yarn in a year. It is computed that the looms moved by mechanical power save now the labour of 100,000 weavers.

ENGLISH CHAMPION.—The battle between Spring, the English champion, and Langan, the Irish pugilist, has at length been decided; after a brutal fight of 80 rounds, victory declared herself for Spring. Several persons were seriously injured in consequence of the falling of some stands.

THE IRISH BELLY CHALLENGED.—DUBLIN, NOV. 28.—In the Court of King's Bench here on Tuesday, Mr. French, for finding, and Mr. Shea, for carrying a hostile message to Mr. O'Brien, were brought up for judgment; when Mr. French was sentenced to pay £100, and to be imprisoned in the county Gaol of Cork for one month; and Mr Shea to pay a fine of £10, and be imprisoned in the same Gaol for a fortnight.

AN EXAMPLE FOR LAWYERS.—Chamillart, comptroller general of the finances in the reign of Louis XIV. had been a celebrated pleader. He once lost a cause in which he was concerned, through his excessive fondness for billiards. His client called on him the day after in extreme affliction, and told him that if he had made use of a document which had been put into his hands but which he had neglected to examine, a verdict must have been given in his favour. Chamillart read it, and found it of decisive importance to his cause. "You saved the defendant," said he, "for 20,000 livres." You have failed by my inadvertence. It is my duty to do you justice. Call on me in two days. In the mean time Chamillart procured the money, and paid it to his client, on no other condition than that he would keep the transaction a secret.

On the 11th instant during the trial of a case in the Court of Exchequer Dublin the day being very cold. Sir Wm Stamer, foreman of the jury, addressed the court, and stated that the cold was so excessive, he hoped he should be indulged with the liberty to wear his hat. The Chief Baron replied, that he thought a hat looked rather awkward if worn in court, but if Sir William pleased he might be indulged with a wig! Every body strove to stifle a laugh, but it could not be kept down—from the court it was soon caught in the hall. The worthy baronet sat down without adopting the suggestion of the Chief Baron.

Dublin Morning Post

POPULAR REASONING UPON MR. MARTIN'S ACT.—Mrs Margaret Moody, an Irish Cyder woman, applied for a warrant against her husband. She had a pair of black eyes, and was severely bruised in several parts of her body by the beating she had received; she said to the Magistrate, on approaching to him "please your honour Sir, I want a warrant for my husband, for beating and murdering me as you see here," lifting up her dress—Magistrate—Mrs Moody, I am not a doctor, and don't want to see your wounds, only relate your murder—Mrs Moody. Your worship, I was last night having my supper and sup you know, when Mr Moody flew into a passion and murdered me as you see. Larry Hacken, the watchman, came in, but when he saw it was Moody and myself, sure he would not meddle with us; so I wants to be parted from Mr Moody, if you please—Magistrate. I cannot part a man and his wife. You had better go home, and Mr Moody will be kinder to you—Mrs. Moody. Your honour, sir! Sure I am his lawful wife, and works hard for a bit of bread; and you don't give me law, when I tould him I would have the law of him—Magistrate. You drink too much gin I believe—Mrs. Moody. Your honour, sir, if you went for fish to Billingsgate, you would want a sup after carrying your load. It is very strange, and hard too, that a wife cannot get as good law as a horse. You fined a man for baiting his own horse, for I heard it in the paper—Magistrate. I have no power to fine a husband for beating his wife. Go home and humour him. He will not beat you again—Mrs. Moody. Oh hone! the blackguard will A horse can get law, but a woman cannot—Mrs Moody then left he office.

LONGEVITY OF THE HORSE.—We have often read what we consider extravagant accounts of long lived horses; but we have been made acquainted with the following facts, which may be relied on, and which, if doubted, can be substantiated on the authority of the owner in this city. Mr John Cornish cartman, aged 73 years, now drives a horse 31 years old, which he has had in constant use before the cart for 25 years. This horse is only 4 1-2 feet on the withers, and to all appearance is as well, and as able as ever, to perform all the labour of a cart horse.—Almost three years since, he took a load of iron of 3000 wt. from Peck slip to Rivington street. This horse is uncommonly sagacious, and is easily kept, as he refuses no kind of nourishment commonly used by man, such as bread and butter, beef pork, &c. Mr Cornish stands at the corner of Cherry and Rutgers streets, where he and the horse may be seen. This singular animal has often been seen to drive all other horses off the stand, and then return and take his own; and although irritable in temper never refuses the orders of his owner, with whom he is a great favorite, and most useful servant.—*N. JAMAICA, JAN. 10.—On the 15th of January, at 4 o'clock in the morning, Jose Antonio Arana and Juan Beltran, who had been convicted of piracy on board the British sloop Elisa, and American schooner Freemason, were embarked at Kingston for Gallows Point, Fort Royal, where they were executed.—These men were both officers. Arana made several attempts to take his life while in prison; first with a knife; secondly, by immersing his head in a pail of water—He afterwards attempted to stick a fish bone in his wind pipe, which broke in his throat; and then to knock his head to pieces against the wall, which caused his head to swell to an immense size. He also broke up the platform of his cell. He for a long time refused to have any thing to say to the Priests, pronounced them impostors—he afterwards received them. Beltran's conduct was of the opposite character.—When they arrived at the place of execution, Arana cast a look at the gallows, and exclaimed, "that's not a fit place for a Spanish gentleman to die on." They both asserted they were murdered by perjured witnesses. Beltran said he did not fear death for himself, "but" he exclaimed, "my beloved wife and children! Oh my God! my God! what will become of them. Oh Jesus, Saviour of the world, protect the wife and children of a man who guilty in thy sight of many offences, is yet to die this day unjustly." Previously to being swung off, they both prayed fervently. Their bodies were thrown into a hole—no coffins having been provided, as the House of Assembly refused to pay for them.

The Porte has laid such restrictions upon foreign vessels going up the black sea, that all that commerce is suspended. The Turks show great unwillingness to permit any intercourse between foreigners and the Russians.

Since the return of the Ottoman fleet, the Greeks have recommenced the blockade of all the ports occupied by the Turks on the coast of Asia Minor, and have already taken a great number of Turkish merchant vessels which they have destined free plunder, and among them are some with very rich cargoes. Mausolonia is nearly free from Ottoman troops.

A naval expedition is preparing at Constantinople against the Greeks; but it is believed it will never leave the port

A large ship has arrived at Constantinople, from Arabia, having doubled the Cape of Good Hope in a remarkable short time—She is loaded with coffee, and her cargo is worth two millions of piastres, which is selling on account of the government.

CADIZ, DEC. 16.—The greater part of our vessels of war, since the 15th of this month, are going to Malta, in obedience to orders from the British government, where a large fleet is assembling. A captain from Mityleno, informs us that the object of this armament is to compel the Dey of Tunis to restore the Greek prisoners who have been taken and reduced to slavery. If this os, edition is not really so serious as is imagined, the armament of Malta will always have for an ultimate object to force the Ottoman fleet, which contains several Barbary vessels, to draw off from the Gulf of Lepanto.

EXTENT AND POPULATION OF AMERICA.

The following estimate of the extent, in square leagues, and population of the Continent of America, in 1822, was lately transmitted by Baron de Humboldt from Paris, to President Bolivar, with the accompanying letter:—

		Sq. Leagues	Pop.
Mexico, or New Spain		73,630	6,500,000
Guatemala		16,740	1,650,000.
Cuba and Porto Rico		4,480	800,000.
Colombia	Venezuela	32,240	900,000.
	New Grenada	56,350	1,200,000.
Peru		42,150	1,600,000.
Chili		14,240.	1,100,000.
Buenos Ayres		126,770.	2,000,000.
Total formerly Spanish		372,140	16,400,000.
United States		125,440	10,200,000.
Brazil		256,990	4,000,000.

"The above surfaces have been calculated with great care on maps rectified by astronomical observations. The calculations have been several times repeated by el Mathieu, Member of the Board of Longitude and of the Institute, as well as by myself. The results differ from those published in 1809, in my Political Essay on Mexico. Then the inhabited parts alone had been calculated, without including the desert regions, over which the independent tribes of the indigenous inhabitants wander. Now the whole extent of each country, to its furthest limits has been measured."

"The population of the different parts of el devant Spanish America is very uncertain, nevertheless each portion has been calculated according to the latest data which have reached me. The present Estimate ought to be considered in this same light is all or other works on America; they are no other than Essays, in which every thing will have to be done over again. Statistitical calculations can only be rendered perfect by degrees, in like manner as the elements of meteorgical and astronomical tables."

COMPARISON.—Spain contains 16,004 square leagues; Europe contains 204,710 square leagues; and the whole of Southern America 661,821 square leagues.

POETRY.

(to the Eastport Sentinel)

Our readers doubtless recollect the affecting particulars of the suffering of a Mr. Blake, with his wife and child, in a snow storm, as they were attempting to cross the Green Mountains, last winter. They proceeded in their sleigh till near perishing with cold, when Mr. Blake went on ahead, on foot, to seek help and shelter; but sunk under the power of frost, though he was afterwards saved. His wife during the night froze to death; but the child was found alive the next day, wrapped in the mother's mantle; the last circumstance occasioned the following lines; they appeared first in the Portland Argus.

The cold winds swept the mountain height,
And pathless was the dreary wild,
And 'mid the cheerless hours of night
A mother wander'd with her child;
As through the drifting snow she press'd,
The babe was sleeping on her breast.

And colder still the winds did blow,
And darker hours of night came on,
And deeper grew the drifts of snow—
Her limbs were chill'd, her strength was gone;
O! God, she cried, in accents wild,
If I must perish—save my child.

She strip her mantle from her breast,
And bar'd her bosom to the storm,
And round the child she wrapt the rest,
And nestl'd to think the babe was warm.
With one cold kiss, one tear she shed,
And sunk upon a snowy bed.

At dawn a traveller pass'd by,
And saw her 'neath a snowy veil—
The frost of death was in her eye,
Her cheek was cold and hard, and pale—
He mov'd the robe from off the child;
The babe look'd up and sweetly smil'd.

THE LOVER'S INVOCATION.

By the charms which deck thy face,
Jetty locks with artless grace;
By the witchery that lies
In the expression of thine eyes,
By the bonied sweets that rest
On thy lips when fondly prest;
By the tender warm desires
Thy matchless bosom swift inspires;
Be not coy when fondness woos,
Nor a lover's suit refuse.

Days, and weeks, and months and seasons,
Roll their rapid course and say
That the lover's vow is reason,
Life's too short for long delay.

THE PRINTER'S HOUR OF PEACE.

Know ye the PRINTER'S hour of peace?
Know ye an hour more fraught with joy,
Than when the dark wing'd tempests cease,
And fears no more our peace annoy?

'Tis not when at the setting sun,
His glimmering fire he lovers near,
And heedless of the coming dun,
Grows merry o'er a pint of beer.

Nor is it when with numerous names
His length'ning roll of vellum swells,
As if were touched by conjurer's wands,
Or grew by fairies' magic spells.

Not reader no!—the Printer's hour,
His hours of real sweet repose,
Is not when by some magic power
His list of patrons daily grows.

But ah! 'tis when, stern winter dress,
Comes robed in snow, and hail and vapour,
He hears in whispers soft and dear,
"We've come to pay you for your paper."

GAZETTE OFFICE,
YORK, MARCH 20th.

Our American files received this day, furnish the Albion up to the 6th inst. which last contains His Majesty's Speech (by Commission) on the opening of the Imperial Parliament, which we now lay before our Readers. The remainder of the supplement is occupied with the last War Office Report of Military Promotions and Exchanges, but its great length far exceeds the space our limited columns can afford for its insertion.

We have likewise inserted the very animated and liberal Appeal to His Majesty, from the Commons of Lower Canada, on the subject of the Presbyterian Claims to a free participation in all Church Emoluments in this Country; also, the Resolution of the House on the Governor's Message respecting our financial claim on the Lower Province, with His Excellency's Speech on closing the present Session of Parliament.

OPENING OF THE IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FEB. 3

This day Parliament was opened by Commission The Commissioners appointed by His Majesty were, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Earls of Westmoreland, Harrowby and Shaftsbury. The Commons being in attendance, the Lord Chancellor read the following Speech:—

TUESDAY, FEB. 3.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"We are commanded by His Majesty to express to you, His Majesty's deep regret, that in consequence of indisposition, he is prevented from meeting you in Parliament upon the present occasion.

"It would have been a peculiar satisfaction to His Majesty, to be enabled in person, to congratulate you on the prosperous condition of the country.

'Trade and commerce are extending themselves both at home and abroad.

"An interesting activity pervades almost every branch of manufactures.

"The growth of the revenue is such as not only to sustain public credit, and to prove the unimpaired productiveness of our resources, but (what is yet more gratifying to His Majesty's feelings,) to evince a diffusion of comfort among the great body of his people.

"Agriculture is recovering from the depression under which it laboured, and by the steady operation of natural causes, is gradually re-assuming the station to which its importance intitles it, among the great interests of the nation.

"At no former period has there prevailed throughout all classes of the community in this island a more cheerful spirit of order, or a more just sense of the advantages which, under the blessing of Providence, they enjoy.

"In Ireland which has for some time past been the subject of His Majesty's particular solicitude, there are many indications of amendment; and His Majesty relies upon your continued endeavours to secure the welfare and happiness of that part of the United Kingdom.

"His Majesty has commanded us further to inform you, that he has every reason to believe that the progress of our internal prosperity and improvement will not be disturbed by any interruption of tranquility abroad.

"His Majesty continues to receive from the powers, his allies, and generally from Princes and States, assurance of their earnest desire to maintain and cultivate the relations of friendship with His Majesty; and nothing is omitted on His Majesty's part, as well as to preserve general peace, as to remove any cause of disagreement, and to draw closer the bonds of amity betwixt them other nations and Great Britain.

"The negotiations which have been so long carried on through His Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, for the arrangement of differences between Russia and the Ottoman Porte, are, as His Majesty flatters himself, drawing near a favourable termination.

"A convention has been concluded between His Majesty and the Emperor of Austria, for the settlement of the pecuniary claims of this country upon the Court of Vienna. His Majesty has directed that a copy of this Convention shall be laid before you, and he relies on your assistance for the execution of some of its provisions.

"Anxiously as His Majesty deprecated the commencement of the war in Spain, he is every day more satisfied, that on the strict neutrality which he determined to observe in that contest, (and which you cordially approved) he best consulted the true interests of his people.

"With respect to the provinces of America which have declared their separation from Spain, His Majesty's conduct has been open and consistent, and his opinions have been at all times frankly avowed to Spain and to other powers.

"His Majesty has appointed Consuls to reside at the principal ports and places of those Provinces for the trade of his subjects. As to any further measures His Majesty has reserved to himself an unfettered discretion to be exercised as the circumstances of those countries and the interests of his own people may appear to His Majesty to require.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons

"His Majesty has directed me to inform you, that the estimates for the year are prepared, and shall be forthwith laid before you.

"The numerous points at which under present circumstances, His Majesty's naval force is necessarily distributed, and the occasion, which has arisen for strengthening his garrisons in the West Indies, have rendered unavoidable some augmentation of his establishments by sea and land

"His Majesty has, however, the gratification of believing, that notwithstanding the increase of expense incident to these augmentations, it will still be in your power, after providing for the services of the year, to make arrangements in some parts of our system of taxation, which may afford relief to certain important branches of National Industry.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"His Majesty has commanded us to acquaint you, that he has not been inattentive to the desire expressed by the House of Commons in the last Session of Parliament, that means should be devised for ameliorating the condition of the Negro Slaves in the West Indies His Majesty has directed the necessary information relating to this subject to be laid before you. His Majesty is confident you will afford your best attention and assistance to any proposition which may be submitted to you, for promoting the moral improvement of the negroes by an extended plan of religious instruction, and by such other measures as may gradually conduce to the same end. Yet His majesty recommends to you to treat this whole subject with the calmness and discretion which it demands.

"It is a subject perplexed with difficulties which no sudden effort can disentangle.

"To excite exaggerated expectation in those who are the objects of your benevolence, would be as fatal to their welfare, as to that of their employers. And His Majesty assures himself you will bear in mind, that in the correction of a long standing and complicated system, in which the fortune and the safety of large classes of His Majesty's Subjects are involved, that course of proceeding alone is likely to attain practical good and to avoid aggravation of evil, in which due regard shall be paid to consideration of justice, and in which caution shall temper zeal."

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF LOWER CANADA.

Mr Papineau moved the subjoined Address to His Majesty. Mr. Neilson moved in amendment to substitute an Address similar to that of the Assembly of Upper Canada, on the same subject, which was negatived, and the original motion carried, Yeas—17. Nays.—6

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,

WE, Your Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, Your Commons of Lower Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, humbly solicit your particular attention and paternal benevolence in favour of your faithful subjects, the Clergy and People of the Established Church of Scotland in this Province, and in favour of Your other faithful Protestant Subjects dissenting from the Established Churches of England and Scotland

We respectfully represent to You, that since Canada has become a portion of the vast and flourishing empire, over which long may your Majesty Reign, emigration to this Country has constantly been much greater from Ireland and Scotland, than from the other parts of the Empire. That the causes which have produced that effect continue, and will probably continue, to act in future and produce the same result, so that there is every appearance that the Members of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland and the Dissenters will continue to be as they are at present much more numerous than the members of the Church of England.

That it is with lively satisfaction that your faithful Commons can assure your Majesty, that no feeling of religious animosity has disturbed the harmony and concord among your Subjects of the various religions, persuasions in this Province, and we are persuaded that the most effectual means of perpetuating among all a spirit of peace and charity and the same sentiments of devotion and gratitude towards your Government, is to extend your Royal favour, and protect equally by just Laws, the same for all

That the advanced state of civilization and knowledge has a revived all minds that the principles of religious toleration are an imprescriptible right of mankind, and ought to be exercised in the fullest manner. And we have seen with sentiments of the liveliest gratitude, those principles reduced into practice in the Province during the reign of your late August Father of happy memory, and during your Majesty's Reign, by several Acts of the Imperial Parliament, and especially by the Act constituting the Government of the Province.

By this Act all the lands to be granted in the Province, is reserved and set apart for the support of a Protestant Clergy, a proportion which, if it could be construed as being reserved for a single Ecclesiastical establishment, would entitle that Church to a far greater proportion than any other Christian Church has in any Age or Country been enriched.

That those reserves which might hereafter become an Endowment, much too opulent for the support of a single Ecclesiastical establishment, not having hitherto, from their situation in parts of the Country as yet thinly peopled and unimproved, given a revenue, its distribution has not as yet given rise to divisions and rivalships among the Protestant Churches in the Province. But your faithful Commons see with disquietand sorrow that the time cannot be remote at which so happy an order of things must be altered, if the interpretation which some persons endeavour to give to the said Act were supported by the Constituted Authorities in the Province, and its liberal provisions were construed in a narrow unfavourable sense as if what is meant to have been enacted for the benefit of your Protestant Subjects had been done exclusively in favour of the Anglican Church, whose Members in this Province, are, comparatively to those of other Protestant Churches, among the least numerous.

That by the Act of Union between the Kingdom of England and Scotland their respective Churches have been acknowledged as true Protestants Churches in the Territory of each of the said States, and the subjects of the two Kingdoms were put upon an equal footing of reciprocity so as to enjoy in common the same rights, privileges and benefits. That it results from that disposition, that when your subjects of either Kingdom emigrate into any of your Colonies, some of them ought not to be entitled to civil advantages from which the others would be excluded, which would be the case if the Ministers of the Church of Scotland had no other resources than their personal and voluntary contributions for paying the Ministers necessary for the religious instruction, while your subjects of the Church of England would be freed from that expense by those reserves, if by Law they had been set a part in their favour exclusively out of the territorial property in this Province.

Your dutiful Commons conceive that the true sense and meaning of the said Act gives an equal right to the Clergy of the established Church of your Kingdom of Scotland to participate in common, with that of the Established Church of England, in the advantages and revenues which will arise from the seventh of the Lands which have been reserved for the support of a Protestant Clergy, and that if the Ministers charged with the religious Instruction of the very numerous class of your faithful Protestant dissenting subjects, have not an equal right to participate in the Revenues which those Lands might produce, they have equitable claims for some participation in those Revenues, in consideration of their utility with respect to the religious instruction which it is just to facilitate to a class so numerous in this Province, as that of your dutiful Protestant subjects dissenting from the Established Churches of England and Scotland, who, in consequence of that separation, a conscientious one on their part justly authorized by the Laws, ought not to be excluded from civil advantages nor from any Act of Royal Munificence and protection which other classes of your faithful subjects enjoy.

The House went into Committee on the Governor's Message relating to the awards of the Arbitrators between the two Provinces, and passed the following Resolution

RESOLVED, That the Arbitrators appointed by virtue of the Act of the Provincial Parliament of the third year of His Majesty's Reign, Chap. 119, having by their last Report of 27th August 1823, determined that the amount of the Arrears due to Upper Canada was £19,221 17 6 Currency, and their decision being final, that sum had been forth ceased to form part of the disputed claims of this Province, ought to have been paid to that of Upper Canada, and not to have been retained towards paying the Public Officers up to the first November, last six months of their Salaries; and that by suspending the execution of the said Act of the Imperial Parliament, His Excellency the Governor in Chief, has exposed this Province to the misfortune of a renewal of the difficulties with the Province of Upper Canada.

The House divided; YEAS 15; NAYS.

His Excellency then addressed both Houses in the following Speech:

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,

Gentlemen of the House Assembly

I am now to close a Session of the Parliament the result of which, I am much afraid will prove to be of little public advantage; at the same time, your long and laborious attendance is entitled to my best thanks;—but before I prorogue this Parliament, I think it important to the Country, that I should here, as His Majesty's Representative, express my sentiments upon the general tenor of your proceedings, during the several Sessions in which I have met you. I declare those sentiments in an earnest desire to attract the serious attention of every Member of this Parliament, of every man who values the prosperity of Canada; and I trust I know too well the principles of the British Constitution to express myself in any manner inconsistent with that respect which one branch of the Legislature owes to another, or with those rights and privileges which belong to each respectively.

A claim has been made to an unlimited right in one branch of the Legislature to appropriate the whole revenue of the Province, according to its pleasure, including not only that part of it here tofore granted to His Majesty, and which is appropriated by Acts of the Provincial Parliament to specific purposes, and subject to such distribution as the King may see fit, but even that portion of the Revenue which is raised by the authority of the Imperial Parliament appropriated to defray the expenses of the administration of Justice, and of his Majesty's civil Government in this Province and directed by an Act passed in the British Parliament long before the Establishment of the present Constitution in this Province, to be so applied, under the authority of the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury. this claim made by one, has been formally denied by the other two branches of the Provincial Parliament, and the supplies granted in aid of the civil LITERARY AND HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—A General Meeting of this Society was held at the Castle of St. Lewis, on Monday last, the 1st inst. The laws and by-laws for the Government of the Society, as prepared by the Committee, were submitted, and ordered to be printed for the use of the Members, previous to their final consideration, which is fixed for the 15th. His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, President of the Society, announced to the meeting that His Lordship the Governor in Chief, had, with a discriminating munificence, directed an annual subscription of £100, currency, to be added to his name. A donation of two scarce and valuable books was made to the Society by Andrew Stuart, Esq.

Our Provincial Parliament, it is understood, is to be prorogued on Tuesday next.

It gives us great pleasure to observe that the Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce, has offered a handsome premium for the encourage of the growth of HEMP in this country

[FROM THE N. B COURIER OF THE 14TH]

It is our solemn and painful duty this day to record the death of our worthy and lamented President, the Hon. WARD CHIPMAN, which happened at the seat of Government on Monday last, at the advanced age of 70 years: he has gone down to the dust accompanied by the tears of his friends and the public who were able to appreciate his merit. To the Province, in regard to the high office to which the demise of our late Lieut. Governor had elevated him, this event is at the present moment a very serious loss, and in regard to the office of Judge, which he so long, so faithfully and honourably discharged, it is a loss that will never be repaired. He Honour was a native of Massachusetts, and came to this Province on its first erection, and was the last survivor of those who held public situations at that time." His liberality of sentiment and endeavours to promote the interests of all those who had any dependence upon him, will leave a lasting impression upon the hearts of his friends. In consequence of this event, the House has adjourned for a few days.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A Friend of Economy will perceive from our crowded Columns of this week, the reason why his clever Communication has been left out. Mr. OSGOOD is requested to accept of the same apology.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN,

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that Sealed Proposals, Post paid, for a Lease of the said Ferry, to be given to the highest Bidder, for the term of Three Years, Endorsed "Sealed Proposals for Ferry," will be received at this Office until the First day of May next.

Executive Council Chamber
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council,

HIS Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration being, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council

Executive Council Chamber,
at York, 26th Jan. 1824.

PRESENT;

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, In Council

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant Governor submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Season only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs' do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that it all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in Council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in those Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the great part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farm that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 24th 1824

TO THE INDEPENDENT FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

AFTER the very flattering and successful support which I received from you at my last Election after four years of zealous and honest service, and after the renewed solicitations of many of you, it cannot be my duty to decline offering myself a Candidate for the ensuing Election.

The labours and anxieties of a faithful Representative, great beyond what you imagine, might perhaps induce me to withdraw from this honourable trust, but that public duty commands me in a measure, at least to offer myself again to your choice; and if the result of such offer should be the Election of another, I will be happy in the hope that you shall have chosen one more able; but be assured that none can be chosen more attached to your interests and to the honour and prosperity of the Province, than

Gentlemen, your faithful
Friend and Servant,
W. W BALDWIN,

Spadina, 12th
February, 1824

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY OF DURHAM.

GENTLEMEN,

IT is no less a duty incumbent on me, than it is a pleasure, to return you my warmest acknowledgements for the favourable opinions you have been pleased to express in my behalf during the short residence I have recently made amongst you. They are the more honourable to yourselves and gratifying to me, as being wholly voluntary and unsolicited. Since I was first declared a Candidate for the honour of representing you in Parliament, I have asked NO MAN FOR A VOTE, much less have I endeavoured to bribe or corrupt the honest and independent Freeholder, however poor and needy he might be, by any insidious attack on his integrity through the medium of flattery, or hope of reward.

Believe me, Gentlemen, I have no desire to represent bondsmen and slaves, by whatever name or pretext they may be called free, and he who is willing to sell the freedom of a representative Government for a few dollars, or for any petty, personal, consideration, is undoubtedly a bondsman and a slave, more culpable far than the poor Negro of Africa, because he ought to know better. I have no hesitation in saying that he who is willing to barter away the Birthright of a BRITON, or of a BRITISH SUBJECT, after having tasted the sweetness of freedom in all the fulness of its reality, is equally as capable of selling the offspring of his own loins, and subjecting them to a Tyranny and Cruelty no less revolting than that of the Egyptian Task Master, or of the Negro Slave Driver.

It is no inconsiderable privilege to have a Voice in the Legislation of our Country, by which the future destinies of our children are to be in a great measure governed and regulated; and yet, I have been told, there are individuals in the New Settlements, who have been willing to sell, and even have sold this precious right for little more than "a Mess of Pottage," even for half a dollar, the price of a Deed for a gratuitous Grant of Land But I cannot, —I will not, believe so foul a calumny; for on every side, during my recent visit. I heard the voice, and beheld the sparkling eye of Freedom and Independence,—and I feel assured that, to a man, you will spurn the wretched Creature who would attempt the repetition of so gross an insult as the purchase of your suffrages.

I have before told you, Gentlemen, and I must again repeat it, that I should as soon think of interfering with a Man's Religion as his Politics; to attempt biasing either the one or the other, in an unlawful manner, for sinister Ends, is a species of Treason of the most abominable kind. The one having to do with the Government of his worldly affairs—the other with his eternal welfare. both are of too serious a nature to be trifled with, or made the subject of joke. Barter. Bargain, Sale. Monopoly, or Jobbing of any kind All that a Candidate can do with propriety, is to make his principles. and the line of conduct he means to pursue, fully known in a clear, open, and candid manner. It is for the Electors to determine the degree of preferrence or eligibility.

The exposition I have to make will be reserved to the day of Election In the mean time I can say with great sincerity that such is my own sense of what is due on this subject, that I would sooner have a minority of Honest and Independant Votes, than an immense majority obtained by a system of Bribery and Corruption of the Meanest Character, and which is equally disgraceful to every party concerned. But I am thankful that your assurances leave me but little to fear for the honour of the County of Durham. I deeply regret that an accident, together with the great depth of snow then upon the ground, prevented my visiting the more remote Settlements, but it is my determination, as soon as circumstances will permit, to pay my respects in Person to all those whom I have not yet seen, in order that I may leave no room for regret hereafter.

Having experienced many of them in common with you, I know your wants; and, I think I know some of the deep and late it causes why this fine Country has so long languished in a state of comparative stupor and inactivity, whilst our more enterprising neighbours are laughing us to scorn. All I desire is an opportunity of attempting the cure of some of the evils we labour under;—and, if I am not egregiously mistaken, you are about to give me that opportunity.—I am already assured of a large Majority—and I trust it may be so, for I am anxious to Fight your Battles. Be steady to your purpose and we must conquer —many efforts will yet be made to seduce you into a forgetfulness of what is be-fitting the character of free-born and independent men. But I know you are now upon your guard, and will be able to treat those who would blind your eyes, or tamper with your Rights, as they deserve.

If all is well I shall have the honour of again seeing you before the day of Election.—In the mean while let our Motto be.

"AGRICULTURE and INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT, without the aid of those who EAT more than they EARN."

I have the honor to subscribe myself,
Gentlemen,
Your most devoted servant
CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

Colonial Commerce.

THE most gratifying intelligence among the recent news from Europe, is the prospect of an effectual tranquilization of poor Ireland—that fine country, which has so long been distracted by internal discord and calamity.—Even Mr. BROUGHAM admits that the measures of Government, in this respect, are likely to be crowned with success; remarking, in his usual energetic manner, on the recent Speech from the Throne, that he had listened to certain expressions from the lips of Ministers, "with the utmost satisfaction and delight"—that it is at length the design of His Majesty's Ministers to rule Ireland, on a consistent, intelligible and uniform system;—that they are resolved no longer to have one officer and member of the Government at thwarting another; and thus, perhaps, neutralizing the efforts of both;—that the people of Ireland are at length to be restored to their rights; and that those difficulties by which the great measure has hitherto been attended will be removed, and that this blessing and more to Ireland than to the whole Empire will probably be conferred in the only way in which the object can be accomplished in any ordinary period—by its being effectively and honestly patronized by the Government.

To give another proof of our independence and impartiality we have inserted the Queries of a "Friend to the Farmer" in our present number; but, at the same time we have to observe, that such a number of electioneering squibs and addresses are upon our table, that, unable to publish a tenth part of them we have come to the resolution of printing none others than those which are to be paid for as advertisements.

A notice "that a petition for the removal of the Gaol and Court House of the District of Ottawa, to the Township of Plantagenet will be presented at the next Session of Parliament," has been received, signed by "An Inhabitant;" but, as there are many inhabitants in that District, we beg leave to ask through this medium, to which of them we are to apply for payment of the advertisement, after a six months' insertion?

On looking over the multitude of communications before us, for electioneering purposes, we find so much merit in the address of an "Friend to Economy," that notwithstanding our resolution to charge for lengthy insertion of such a nature, he writer is to charge for lengthy insertion of such a nature, he writer will oblige us by expunging from his address in our next, without any charge—we know his candour, public spirit, and liberality, too well to suppose he is influenced by private animosity. The Dial can easily laid himself open to attack from all parties; and, if he knew how many squibs aimed at him, were suffered to be exploded on our table, unheard by the public, he would assuredly pardon us when a cracker now and then slipped through our fingers, and hit him.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

The King's health is completely restored.

Sir Robert Gifford, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and Sir Wm. Alexander, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, were to be sworn in as Privy Councillors at Brighton

Lord Byron and the Honorable Leicester Stanhope, were recently at Zante, on a visit to Sir Frederic Stovin the Governor. These intrepid patriots and travellers were then most sanguine in their hopes for the ultimate success of the cause of the Greeks.

A late English paper states that a butcher at Calne, killed a bullock which was reared on the plains of Waterloo, and on weighing him found 3 market balls, two nails, and the button of a soldier's coat.

Wines have been produced in New South Wales, the first samples of which were transmitted to London, to be presented to the Society of Arts. Every fresh ingenious of the inhabitants of the interior tends to confirm the excellence of the soil and climate of this country.

HINT.—This wretched culprit, on arriving on board the hulks at Woolwich, whence he will be conveyed to New South Wales had his hair and whiskers shorn off and was stripped and scrubbed in a tub of water, as is customary.—He was still further accused of the felonious larceny by being attired in the costume of the other prisoners—a suit grey jacket, white cap, and trowsers yellow stockings and coloured night cap. He was regarded by his new companions with a mixture of curiosity and contempt. He is extremely anxious to see his mother and brother before he leaves forever his native country.

RUSSIA.

The Emperor Alexander has issued a decree, making known his choice of the Princess Charlotte, of Wirtemburgh, as the consort of his brother, the Grand Duke Michael. [A subsequent account states that the marriage took place on the 17th of December.]

An Ukase of the Emperor of Russia allows all Jews residing in the Russian Empire, who have embraced the Catholic religion according to the rites of the Greek Church, to enter the ecclesiastical orders of that religion.

It is stated (from Warsaw, Dec. 28,) that the Jewish Rabbies and Elders have met in a general assembly at Plotzkow and have decided that the celebration of the seventh shall be changed to the sunday.

The forty-seventh anniversary of the Emperor's birth day, was celebrated at St. Petersburgh, on the 23d of December. Numerous promotions were made in the army on this occasion.

The funeral of Gen. Count Schouwaloff took place, with the greatest solemnity, on the 19th. The Emperor, the Grand Dukes, and the Prince of Orange attended. The Stars of the Twelve Orders, worn by the deceased, were borne alternately by twenty four officers to the grave.

IONIAN ISLANDS.

Sir Thomas Maitland, Governor of the Ionian Islands, is dead. A short time previously to his decease, he complained of the violation of neutral territory by the Greeks, and placed the Islands of Ithaca and Santa Martha under the quarantine laws on that account. Upon this subject the Morning Post exclaims—"What! because the crew of a Greek vessel, recollecting the conflagration of their houses, the destruction of their families, their wives brutally violated or carried into slavery, and their children dashed against stones or buried living into the flames are said to have pursued on shore the equipage of a Turkish brig of war, which they had driven on the rocks; to have killed and wounded a few, and wreaked their vengeance on the bodies of the dead, are we to be told that the eight or nine millions of whom the Grecian people is composed, 'are unfit for political independence, and that it is an odious fraud which is palmed upon us, when we are invited to assist the brave, the magnanimous, the persecuted, the Christian Greeks?' Yet this is the doctrine which has been promulgated!—Since when have the unauthorized acts of individual revenge been visited as national crimes?! Two of the most important vacancies occasioned by the death of the late Sir Thomas Maitland, have been filled up. The Marquis of Hastings is appointed Governor of Malta, and Sir Frederick Adam Lord High Commissioner in the Ionian Islands.

DIRECTIONS TO MAKE BUTTER OF GOOD QUALITY.—The milk should be most carefully strained through a fine strainer, so that it may be quite free from the dust and hairs that fall in the milking.

The milk in the pans and churn should be kept in a cool airy part of the house or dairy, quite free from smoke.

When the butter is gathered off the churn, great care should be taken in the milking, to expel the milk, by repeated washing with clean cold water;—and afterwards by frequent pressures of the hands, all the watery particles must also be expelled; this is a principal object, for if milk or water be left in it, a strong smell and unpleasant taste will soon afterwards be the consequence.

The great fault of Irish butter is excessive saltness; this has been long complained of, and but little improvement has yet been made. There should never be more salt used, than in the proportion of one ounce of salt to a pound of butter,* which is four pound to a firkin—even less than this is sufficient. The finest salt should be used—if coarse, it should be beaued fine.

By using the proportion of only half an ounce of salt, and one eighth of an ounce of salt-petre, to each pound of butter, it will have the sweetness of the Dutch, which is so greatly prized in the London market.

The precise proportion of salt used for one making should be used after the other; for if in packing the butter finds one layer more salted than the rest, he must mark it with a lower character. It is a very wrong practice to keep a making of butter to the next.

Where only one or two cows are kept, as that some days will intervene between the packing of each churning, it is recommended that after the new made butter is well packed in the firkin, it should be covered with a clean linen towel, damped with pickle.

* It is necessary to state, in respect to the quantity of salt, that this applies to the Irish lb. of 16 ounces.

FOR THE WEEKLY REGISTER.

Queries to be answered by the gallant Col. who assumes the name of "An Old Farmer," in the Weekly Register, and of a "Real Britain," in the Observer; or other-wise known by the name of Justice Shallow, alias, Col. R O

1. Are our roads as remarkably good as not to be capable of improvement?

2. Is it a crime to assert that to be low which must be so, to entitle our child of the Farmers, and those the first settlers, to their lands?

3. Is it a crime to oppose a mode of obtaining relief, the exposure of which, amounts to one half the value of the relief when obtained?

4. Is it a crime to reprobate any measure which the Governor happens to approve?

5. Is it a crime to oppose an Assessment Bill which adds to the burthens of the Farmers?

6. Is it a crime to propose relieving an unfortunate race which we have corrupted by our vices, and poisoned by our liquors?

7. Is it a crime to be of opinion that the bounty on hemp would be best bestowed, by being given to the person who exports it, and thus gets it out of the country, and makes others pay for it, be he Farmer or Merchant?

POETRY.

The following song, put into the mouths of the Negroes of the West Indies, appears in a tragedy, of some merit, lately written by Mr. Dallas.

THE BANJA SONG.

What are the joys of white men here;
What are his pleasures? say:
He wants no joys no life me fear,
But on my Banja play.
Me sing all day, me sleep all night,
Me hab no care, my heart is light;
Me tink not what to-morrow bring,
Me happy, so me sing.

But white man's joys are not like mine,
Dho' he look smart and gay.
He proud, be jealous, haughty, fine,
While I my Banja play.
He sleeps all day, he wakes all night,
He full of care, his heart no light,
He great deal wants, he little get,
He sorry, so he fret.

Me envy not dhe white man dhen,
Me poor, but me is gay;
Me glad at heart, me happy when
Me on my Banja play.
Me sing all day, me sleep all night,
Me hab no cares, me heart is light;
Me think not what to-morrow bring,
Me happy, so me sing.

RESOLVED, 2d, That from the seat of war having been principally in Upper Canada, and three Districts thereof, alternately in possession of His Majesty's Forces and those of the United States, this Province unavoidable suffered much more extensively from the ravages and devastations incident to a State of actual Warfare, than Lower Canada.

RESOLVED, 3d. That from the causes before mentioned, great individual sufferings have been sustained and many of the Inhabitants once affluent, have been reduced to indigence, and deprived of the means from which in happier times, they had anticipated a suitable provision for their families.

RESOLVED, 4th, That the unfortunate situation of this class of His Majesty's Subjects, has engaged the sympathy of His Most Gracious Majesty, His Majesty's Lieutenant Governor having, by Message at the last Session, acquainted the House of Assembly, that "His Majesty had acceded to a request preferred by Mr Galt, he Agent for the Sufferers, that a loan should be raised of one hundred thousand pounds, of which His Majesty's Government would guarantee half the interest, (two thousand five hundred pounds per annum) the Province providing for the remainder, which amount should be applied in satisfaction of such Claims of Sufferers by the invasion as might be established before a new Commission."

RESOLVED 5th, That the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, in their last Session, concurred in the passing of a Bill in compliance with His Majesty's recommendation, granting the said sum of two thousand five hundred pounds Sterling per annum, on the revenues of the Province, which Bill, from an apprehension of delay or in sufficiency in the receipts into the Provincial Treasury, was reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure thereon, and has not been returned to this Province with the Royal Assent.

RESOLVED 6th. That His Majesty, with the most benevolent consideration for His unfortunate Subjects the Sufferers in Upper Canada, has directed the sum of fifty seven thousand pounds Sterling (equal to about one fourth of the losses admitted to have been sustained) to be distributed among them.

FERRY.

Executive Council Office,
York, 4th March, 1824.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a Ferry from the Landing, near the Residence of Thomas Dorland, Esq. in the Township of Adolphustown, to the Landing near Vanalstine's Mills, in the Township of Marysburgh, in the Midland District,

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN,

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that Sealed Proposals, addressed to the Secretary, for a Lease of the said Ferry, to be given to the highest Bidder, for the term of Three Years, Endorsed "Sealed Proposals for Ferry," will be received at this Office until the First day of May next.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 31st January, 1824.

PRESENT,

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor,
In Council.

His Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations;

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was fixed in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration falling, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships Surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council

Executive Council Chamber,
at York, 26th Jan. 1824.

PRESENT;

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor
In Council.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for the Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one session seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government is admitted, and the circumstances of the Province require it, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where requisite; but, as the respective Reports from the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL. Clk Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged of the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, or that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Settling Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office.
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

FRED. FREITAG.

Humber Plains, April 3, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no motive in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't.
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York,
February 25th, 1824.

TO THE INDEPENDENT FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

AFTER the very flattering and successful support which I received from you at my last Election, after four years of zealous and honest service, and after the renewed solicitations of many of you, it cannot be my duty to decline offering myself a Candidate for the ensuing Election.

The labours and anxieties of a faithful Representative, great beyond what you imagine, might perhaps induce me to withdraw from this honourable trust, but that public duty commands me in a measure, at least to offer myself again to your choice; and if the result of such offer should be the Election of another, I will be happy in the hope that you shall have chosen one more able; but be assured that none can be chosen more attached to your interests and to the honor and prosperity of the Province, than

Gentlemen, your faithful
Friend and Servant,
W. W. BALDWIN.

Spadina, 12th
February, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

ON reading over the York Observer of the 8th inst I was surprised at a Speech delivered by your Member, on the subject of Clerks' Salaries.—If you think the following observations will shew the subject in its proper light, I shall feel gratified.

THE liberal and watchful Doctor therein asserts, "an extravagant expenditure in the payment of the Clerks within this "Province wholly unwarranted. A Clerk in the Admiralty had "only £70 a year, while a Clerk in a Public Office here, received "£150; and there was one in the Governor's Office who had "£180 a year from the people of this Province, while he, at the "same time, was Student at Law, and acted as Clerk to his Master; attending to his own private business."

GENTLEMEN, nothing can be more incorrect than part of the above statement. If your respectable Representative had known any thing of the Admiralty, he would have told you, that the Secretary of that Department, has £2,500 a year, the Chief Clerk £2000, and the Junior Clerks not less than £200.

GENTLEMEN, you will not be surprised at the statement of your Member, when I make known the causes by which he was actuated.—It must be known to most of you that his conduct in Parliament has disappointed the expectations of his warmest friends. On all questions relating to the liberty of the subject, he invariably voted for curtailing that liberty, and on all questions in which Lawyers were interested, he as invariably supported those Bills which went to take the money out of your pockets, to increase their fees;—he also was the loudest Member in the House in his declamation against the admission of gentlemen of character and talent, from Great Britain, to practice at the Bar of this Province.

PERHAPS, in order to think, in some degree, his subsequent flattery to the Leader of the House of Assembly; indeed, his own political views, he commenced, at the close of the Parliament, to attack, over the shoulders of a respectable Clerk, the Government.—This, Gentlemen, is the mode adopted by all hackneyed politicians; they proceed upon the principle of an animal which heedly abandons the flock to be devoured by wolves, while, in order to satisfy its master of its watchfulness, commences barking at the moon.

BUT, GENTLEMEN, you are too sensible to be led by this miserable attempt at patriotism;—you all know what sum it requires to support a person in York, who is obliged, from the nature of his situation, to appear respectable; the sum of £150 a year may sound large in the ears of many of you; but will the Clerk receiving that Salary, be as well able to provide for his offspring as one of you who has a farm of fifty acres of clear land? You know he cannot. When such a person dies, his family, unfortunately, all have to suffer,—the situation of his children becomes deplorable;—not bred to habits of industry, it not unfrequently happens that persons of this description are obliged to drag out a miserable existence. Of all the situations in life, that of a family thus circumstanced appears to me the most wretched.

THE Doctor's attack upon the Clerk in the Governor's office is almost too contemptible to notice. If that Gentleman performs the duty assigned to him, he has a right to his pay; and if, after fulfilling his engagements to the Government, he devotes his leisure hours to study, is it not highly creditable to him?—Compare the conduct of such a person with one who, the moment the office hours cease, goes to the haunts of gamblers, or wastes his time in attending to the chit chat of the town, and you must applaud him for his industry and ambition;—he has before his eyes the hopeless situation of a family who has to depend upon a miserable salary; the capriciousness of offices; and the uncertainty of life; and by a noble struggle he endeavours to shun those shoals which have shipwrecked thousands.—But when the Doctor touched upon this string, he ought not to have confined himself to a particular case—he should have been more general in his observations. Is it not wonderful, Gentlemen, that in speaking of the Clerk in the Governor's Office, he omitted to inform the House, that his own nephew got three dollars a day during the Session of Parliament while he, at the same time, was a Student at Law and acted as Clerk to his Master, (who is the Patriot himself,) and attending to his own private business.—If the Doctor had done so, and begged of the House to place heads of families, (many of whom were in actual want at the time) in those situations, it would have been doing that which would redound to his praise;—but, no, Gentlemen, self, self, was there,—and self and the Doctor are inseparable.

I am, GENTLEMEN,
A FRIEND TO ECONOMY.

Editorial Commentary.

We have an extraordinary instance of liberality and public spirit before us, in the receipt of a list of no less than twenty four respectable names, as Subscribers to the CANADIAN LANCASTERIAN, from a single Village, Hamilton, near the Head of Lake Ontario, with a probability of more from the same quarter.—This instance of enlightened and generous feeling not only calls for our warmest thanks, but merits this particular and public notice, in as much as this great national work, the utility of which cannot fail to be generally admitted hereafter, would never languish for want of patronage, if only a tythe of the same spirit was evinced in every other part of the country. When it is considered, that a sum not less than Five Hundred Pounds must be actually sunk, before even the first volume of this work can make its appearance, it may be readily conjectured how grateful the proprietors and editor must feel for a few such instances of liberality as that we have thought it right thus to notice.—The names of the twenty four Gentlemen alluded to, together with their distinction they so justly merit.

A more deplorable proof how far the soul of man may be debased by a long course of profligacy, and disregard of religion, may not perhaps be found in all the annals of public delinquency, than in the last moments of the wretched Thurtell, lately executed for murder.—Instead of that absorption of every mental faculty on the awful scene before him, and on the terrors of the long, long night of death, and a fearful eternity, we find this great moral leading his gaoler, but a few minutes before his exit, whispering, on account had been received of the battle between Spring and Langdon, and which of the horses came off victorious;—on being informed of the result, he expressed himself in terms of the highest satisfaction, saying, "I am glad Spring has won—God bless him; he is an old friend of mine, and is a good fellow."

Hostilities have actually commenced between Great Britain and Algiers; an Algerine Corsaire of 18 guns & 100 men, being captured within sight of Algiers, on the very day in which the British Consul left the barbarians with his Family. The Greek continue to be successful, and the independence of South America is gradually consolidating.—More particulars in our next.

The Communication of a "LOYALIST" will appear in our next.

SELECTIONS FROM BRITISH AND FOREIGN JOURNALS.

THE KING'S ANSWER TO THE ADDRESSES.—The following is a copy of His Majesty's answer to the Address of both Houses of Parliament, on the Lords Commissioners' Speech on the opening of the Session. The answer was delivered to the Lords by Lord Liverpool, and to the Commons by the Hon. F. Robinson Chancellor of the Exchequer, on Tuesday Evening:—

"I thank you for this dutiful and affectionate Address.

"Nothing can be so gratifying to me as the expression of your cordial approbation in the manner you have done it; nothing so near to my heart as to maintain the greatness of the British name, and to promote the welfare and prosperity of my people.

"The King's Speech is usually deemed the Minister's Speech because they are held responsible; but the above answer is understood to have been personally penned by His Majesty.—Courier.

NAVY ESTIMATES.—In the House of Commons, February 17th the navy estimates were voted, 29,000 men, being an increase of 4000 on last year's estimates, were granted. In the discussion some allusion having been made to the probable reason for augmenting the naval force Mr. Canning said in explanation of a passage in the King's Speech, that there never was a period in which the country might with greater certainty expect a continuance of peace; but added "It must be clearly seen that there never was a period in which there was so much agitation, and across any only that we should be ourselves satisfied, but the conviction should prevail in all parts of the world, that the nation was ready to maintain its rights." In the three great straits, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, and now South America, it was necessary to have an increased force. On the same day the Quarry Laws Repeal Bill, was read a second time on a division of 120, to 23.

The Morning Chronicle, of Feb 19th says, "Advices from Lisbon received this day, and dated on the 3d instant, are perfectly pacific. No expedition was fitting out in the Tagus for the Brazils, nor was any one in contemplation." The same paper copies from an evening paper a paragraph, of a similar import to what has been repeatedly circulated of the King of France, that it is said in a letter from Paris, that a number of Physicians had declared that the state of the King's health was dangerous, and it was improbable that he could outlive the month of March. The King may die, but this assertion does not deserve the least credit.

BRITISH NEWSPAPERS.—Mr. HUME has given a notice of a motion in the House of Commons to enable persons in the Colonies to receive Newspapers from the United Kingdom free of postage. This motion, if carried, will be the most useful and agreeable thing that he has done for some time.

FRANCE AND SPAIN.—The Paris Moniteur of Feb 16, announces officially, that the King of Spain, at the solicitation of France, has signed a decree granting a liberty of free trade with South America to all nations, on the footing of an equality of duties. A convention had also been signed, regulating the occupation of Spain by the French troops, and a treaty recognising a debt of 94,000,000 of francs to France.

ROYAL COACH.—This morning a vast assemblage of persons collected round the church of St. George, Hanover-square, in consequence of the above once celebrated coach-man leading to be the figure head of the Lord Mayor's state barge, and undergoing punishments, and possessed of a handsome fortune. The lady's name is said to be Robertson. The bride and bridegroom left the residence of the latter, No. 23, Dover-street, Piccadilly, in a travelling carriage and four; the postilions were attired in white jackets and caps. Mr. Coates wore his inestimable court dress with his valuable sword hanging by his side. The lady was also very elegantly dressed. On arriving at the church, they were met by a party of friends to an extensive and early breakfast, preparatory to the same costume as those of the bride and bridegroom. After the ceremony, the happy pair set off for Portsmouth, where they will spend the honey moon.—London Times.

FOREST REMARKS.—In digging the Union Canal, near the west church of the Clifton hall estate, and adjoining the river Almond, on the 18th July, an elephant's tooth was dug up, measuring upwards of three feet long, and a double breadthenence; it was in a state of perfect preservation. In the possession of Sir Alexander Maitland Gibson. This is the second time remains of this animal have been found in Scotland. A similar tooth, found near Eglinton-castle, is now in the College Museum.

NAVAL ENTERPRISE.—Capt. Cochrane has at length, found out a passage between the Continents of Asia and America.

PORT OF LIVERPOOL.—The number of ships which entered the port in 1823 was 9647, being more than double the number which entered the three principal Ports of the Netherlands, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and Antwerp.

WEST INDIA BISHOPS.—Two Bishops are to be sent out to the West Indies, with salaries of £4000 each, and a retiring pension of £1000 after twelve years residence. The Rev'd. Messrs. SPENCER and COLERIDGE have been fixed upon as the new Bishops.

OPIUM.—This vegetable is supposed to have been originally brought from Egypt, where they must have possessed a most bewitching taste, since the Israelites would fain have returned to bondage, for the sake of enjoying it once again. Alexander the Great sent them to Greece, and from thence they became common on the whole continent. It is remarkable that the particles emanating from this delicious fruit are so valuable and so keen, that they instantly operate on the external surface of the body, and if it is more curious still, that if, when peeling an onion, the cook wishes to be spared this lachrymatory affliction, a small piece of bread placed at the end of the operating knife, will absorb the effluvia and prevent the disagreeable effect.

POST AND ICE-HOUSES.—Take an iron bound butt, or puncheon and knock out the head; then cut a very small hole in the bottom, about the size of a wine cork. Place inside of it a wooden tub, shaped like a churn, resting it upon two pieces of wood which are to be used in touching the bottom. Fill the space round the inner tub with pounded charcoal, and fit to the full a cover, with a convenient handle; having inside one or two small books, on which the bottles are to be laid, during the operation. Place on the cover a bag of pounded charcoal, about two feet square; and over all place another cover, which must cover the head of the outer cask. When the apparatus is thus prepared let it be placed in a cold cellar, and buried in the earth about four fifths in height; but beware, said the cellar must be dry or the ice will not answer, and a sandy soil is the best. Fill the inner tub, or nearly so, with pounded ice; or, if impracticable in winter, with snow well pressed down, and the apparatus will be complete.—If however it is wished to make ice, take off the upper cover, then the sack or bag of pounded charcoal, unstopped the vessel containing the liquid to be frozen to the bottom inside of the inner cover; then close up the whole as before directed—in an hour, when the operation will be completed, provided care be taken to exclude external air.

SOUTH AMERICA.

(From the Morning Chronicle, Feb 11.)

It will no doubt be highly consoling to the public to know that the affairs of South America are daily improving to a permanency, and that the independence of that interesting portion of the Globe is on the eve of being on the most secure basis, recognized. We say on the most secure basis—because we have every reason to believe that the plans about to be adopted in Europe are not such as tend, not only to secure, but to consolidate, the new State, with apprehension of external danger, but also to afford their respective governments considerable, although indirect, aid in the promotion of their own interests—a service not to be considered infinitely more important than the mere ceremony of a formal recognition in the diplomatic way, and without which, the good effects of the latter might possibly be lost.

On the highest possible authority we now proceed to state, that the overtures and propositions respecting the recognition of South America, to which Mr. Canning alluded the other night in the House, were made by Great Britain direct to Spain, and in terms of a strong and explicit, that they were properly attended to the moment they reached Madrid. In consequence, the Duke San Carlos, at present the Ambassador of Spain at the Court of France, was appointed to a special mission to London, and the necessary credits and funds for carrying into effect this special mission had been forwarded to him from Madrid when the last accounts came away.

We feel, indeed, perfectly confident that Ministers have acted a wise and liberal part in the affair, and that upon it there is no sort of clear understanding, from which there has been an Agent, with very full powers, has been dispatched to one of the sections of South America. The whole of the Allied Powers, since they heard the language in which England has expressed herself, have deemed it advisable not to risk the tranquility of Europe. They even seem inclined to believe, that the opening of an immense Continent, extending from the Mississippi to Cape Horn, will form the basis of a new commercial system highly interesting to all; and that those States which may be the first to arise strongly early to avail themselves of it. We therefore confidently give it as our opinion, that the relations of Europe with South America will soon be placed upon a regular established footing, founded on the firm and lasting basis of mutual interest.

GREECE.

GREECE AND TURKEY.—The French papers contain extracts from the German journals, on the affairs of Greece, to the following effect:—The Greeks have taken possession of the village of Vostia by a corps de reserve, consisting of seven Turkish boats, which they sent to Lepanto. The insurgents have died and made prisoners of a great number of Turks.—A portion of the garrison of Corinth made a descent at Aponiano. The Greeks occupied Corinth with a corps of 300 men, without fighting. The central government of Greece is transferred to Argos.

This intelligence (which has reached us from Constantinople) has caused the overthrow of the Ottoman Ministry. Great events are on the eve of taking place in the East.

BRAZIL.

SHOCKING RELATION.—A letter from Para, Brazil, Nov. 24, received in England, relates a most horrible occurrence on board the prison ship, which contained about 256 individuals. About 9, on the night of the 10th, the sentinels on deck heard a great noise below, and repeatedly ordered quietness without effect. In a short time they found the prisoners were forcing the hatches, and they immediately fired one or two volleys among them, after which every thing was quiet. In the morning they took off the hatches to remove the dead, of which they found only about of the 256 alive! The place presented a most appalling spectacle of lacerated and mangled bodies. Some had their eyes thrust out; the tongues of some hung out of their mouths; others had their ribs starved in; some from an attempt to eat one another, were hanging by their handkerchiefs, by the neck; others by the middle, with their heads down; and some had undergone mutilation too horrible to be described. The writer had this account, to which human nature shudders, from an eye witness of the first discovery of the brig, who saw that vessel moored in the morning. It appears the carnage commenced by a party of them wishing to murder all the Europeans who were their fellow prisoners, (about perhaps 80 or 90 in number,) but that being in the dark, they mistook many who were red, which exalted ill blood. They did not, moreover, all agree upon escaping by force, which increased the animosity amongst them, and a massacre of the most savage nature commenced; for they had no edge or pointed weapons, but their hands and their handkerchiefs. They were all naked, their clothes having been from their backs. They had piled up the dead bodies under the hatches to form a kind of pillow to enable them to reach the grating, and one of these dead bodies was Europeans. A total 30 men killed by the discharge of musketry. The four who were found alive had hidden themselves under some casks at the commencement of the fray, and had not, it appeared, suffered in the affair. One man was found nearly strangled, but life could not be died on the way to the Hospital, from a slight fall.

* Another second supposes they had destroyed each other in a fit of insanity or desperation.

Provincial Parliament.

JOURNALS OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

MONDAY, 12TH JANUARY, 1824.

RESOLVED. 9th. That Lower Canada, though a separate Colony, was distinctly identified with Upper Canada, in the issue of the late contest with the United States of America, and was in a great measure preserved from the dangers and devastations of war, by the successful resistance made to the enemy in the Province of Upper Canada, at no ordinary expense to the fortunes of many of its inhabitants, and that an appeal may properly be made to the justice and sympathy of Lower Canada to participate in the payment of the indemnity to which the Sufferers have so direct a claim.

Mr. HAGERMAN, from the Committee, to wait on His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor with the Address relating to gallantry of the Canal Commissioners, reported the Supplementary Report of the Canal Commissioners, recorded delivering the same, and that His Excellency had been pleased to make, thereto the following reply :—

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

I shall take an early opportunity of transmitting to His Majesty's Government, a copy of the Supplementary Report of the Commissioners of Internal Navigation, and of the plans and Estimates connected therewith, with such observations as may occur to me thereon.

Mr. GORDON moved, that the following Resolution which had been adopted by the House, might be rescinded :—" That Duties imposed on the following articles would be most acceptable to this Province, and least felt by the consumer.

" On Wines, per gallon.
" On Refined Sugar, per pound.
" On Muscovado Sugar, per pound.
" On Merchandize, subject to ad valorem duty."

Which was lost.

Mr. BOULTON, Master in Chancery, brought down from the Honorable the Legislative Council, Messages requesting a free conference on the subject matter of the Duty Bill, and informing the House of Assembly that that Honorable body had agreed to a conference on the state of the Library, and had appointed a Committee for each purpose.

On motion of Mr. McDONELL, Messrs. Hagerman, Gordon, and Wilmot, were ordered as a Committee, to confer with the Committee of the Honorable the Legislative Council, on matters concerning the Library.

On motion of Mr. ROBINSON, Messrs Attorney General. Hagerman, Gordon and Morris, were ordered as a Committee to confer with the Committee of the Honorable the Legislative Council, on the subject matter of the Duty Bill.

On motion of Mr. NICHOL. it was ordered that Copies of the several Resolutions of the House, on the subject of ways and means, and the Claims of the Sufferers by the late war, should be sent to the Honorable the Legislative Council for their concurrence therein.

The House then adjourned 'till five o'clock.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the House went into Committee of Supply

The Chairman reported that the Committee had arisen.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the Statute Printing Bill was read the second time.

On motion of the ATTORNEY GENERAL, the House went into Committee on the Statute Printing Bill.

The Chairman reported the Bill without amendment.

The Report was ordered to be received.

On motion of the ATTORNEY GENERAL, the Statute Printing Bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time on the following day.

Agreeably to notice, Mr WILMOT moved, that Messrs. Nichol, Jones of Grenville, Jones of Leeds, and Crooks, should be a Committee to report upon the Contingent Accounts of the House of Assembly for the Session.

Which was ordered.

Mr ATTY GENERAL, from the Committee to whom was referred the Petitions of the Sheriff and Inhabitants of the District of Ottawa, reported as follows:

The Special Committee to whom was referred the Petition of certain Inhabitants of the District of Ottawa, praying the interference of the Legislature in appointing the Seile for the Jail and Court House to be erected in the said District, have considered the matters stated in the said Petition and are of opinion that as new Settlements are said to be extending rapidly in the District of Ottawa, and as it may be very important to the future interests of the District, that the Jail and Court House should be placed in such a situation as is likely hereafter to become most convenient to the Inhabitants at large, without reference to the particular portions exclusively which happen to be at present settled. It is expedient, to prevent the possibility of the Seile which the Petitioners apprehend, by delaying the appointment of the seite until the next Session of the Legislature, when the inhabitants of the other part of the District may, as well as the present Petitioners, make known their opinion on the subject.

Your Committee have prepared a Bill for effecting this object, which, together with the Report, they humbly submit to the consideration of the House.

J. B. ROBINSON,
CHAIRMAN.

January 12th, 1824.

The Special Committee, to whom was referred the Petition of the Sheriff of the District of Ottawa, have considered the same, and beg leave to report to the House, that in their opinion, the inconveniences complained of by the Sheriff, result from the present state of the District, and must gradually disappear as it advances in wealth and population; that the emoluments of the Sheriff will necessarily, in the mean time, be like those of the other District Officers, inconsiderable, and he must patiently wait for the change of circumstances, or determine whether it is worthwhile to retain the Office.

The subject last mentioned in the Sheriff's Petition, namely, the charge he has been put to in executing certain acts of his duty, appears to your Committee to be one on which the Petitioner should exclusively address himself to the Executive Government.

J. B. ROBINSON,
CHAIRMAN.

January 13th, 1824.

The Reports were ordered to be received, and the Bill was read the first time.

On motion of Mr. ATTORNEY GENERAL, the Ottawa District Jail and Court House Bill was ordered to be read again the following day.

Mr. HAGERMAN from the Committee of conference on the subject matter of the duty Bill reported as follows:

Report of the Joint Committee of conference on the subject of the Duty Bill.

Resolved by the Joint Committee of conference, that it would be expedient to provide some remuneration to the Commissioners of Customs to be appointed under the proposed Act, and that it was not considered that such a provision could properly be made by way of amendment. The Committee of Conference on the part of the House of Assembly agreed to recommend to their House to pass a distinct Bill for effecting that object.

On motion of Mr. MORRIS, the recommendation of the Joint Committee of Conference on the Duty Bill was concurred in.

Adjourned

TUESDAY, 13TH JANUARY, 1824.

Agreeably to the order of the day, the Debenture Bill was read the third time.

And further, that for the current year he would order such second circuit into those Districts only, where upon a report of the Sheriff it might appear to His Excellency necessary to deliver the Jail thereof.

On which the House divided.

THE UNION.

We are pleased at having heard that Charles R Ogden, Esq of this city, has been appointed by His Majesty's Government to the office of Solicitor General of this Province; a situation which his talents merit, and which he will fill with high credit. From the same source whence we obtained this information, we learn that soon after having been made acquainted with his appointment, Mr. Ogden intimated to Lord Bathurst his intention of returning immediately to this country; but was requested by that Nobleman to delay his departure for a few weeks, as Mr. Stuart was shortly expected, on the arrival of whom the Union Bill was to be brought under immediate discussion, and the testimony and information of Mr. O would be required. We have reason to believe the above to be a correct statement; and look with more anxiety—at the same time with confidence—to the consummation of the measure, which present circumstances demonstrated to be absolutely necessary, to preserve the country from deeper ruin than that in which it is at present involved.

NAVIGATION OF THE ST. LAWRENCE.

We copy the following from the Montreal Herald :—It is with the greatest satisfaction we acknowledge the favour of being permitted to lay before our readers the following Extract of a Letter from a highly respectable House in London, in the Canada Trade, dated the 16th Feb.

" The Canada Merchants have had a meeting to day with Ministers relative to that part of the American President's Speech, which spoke of negotiations for giving the Americans the right of navigating the St. Lawrence. The business is in good hands—they are not disposed to yield such a point by any means."

We are particularly happy in having it in our power to make public so early an assurance on this subject; and we are convinced that the opening of our noble River will be again hailed, and unalloyed by one doubt, that it is a British River, and that we may say with Sir John Denham, in addressing the Thames,

" Visit the World, and to thy flying Towers
" Bring home wealth, and make both Indies yours;
" Find out with where 'tis bestow it amidst want,
" Cities in deserts—woods in cities plant;
" So that to us no thing, no place is strange,
" While thy fair bosom is the world's exchange."

On the same subject, from Neilson's Gazette,

With respect to the Citizens of the North American Republic, who are settled on the west side of the St. Lawrence, it cannot be denied but that they have a natural right to communicate with the sea, the great highway of nations, by the natural channel. Natural rights are regulated by positive laws; the great Code of Law among nations, but it is a moral Code, which is enforced by no earthly tribunal. Rights under that Code are very properly made the subject of negotiation between the parties interested, as has been the case in the present instance. Great Britain will no doubt take care of her own interests, and the interests of her subjects generally. Our opinion is, that at least the article of G. B.'s Treaty of 1794, which allows the U. States to navigate the St. Lawrence to Quebec, will be granted to the Americans; and in such a measure we see no more ground for alarm than there existed at the time this right was allowed to them. Advantitious circumstances alone prevented it from having its full execution.

DIED,

On Sunday the 21st March last, in the Township of Hope, District of Newcastle, in her eighteenth year, Miss Ann Maria Burk, eldest daughter of John Burk Esquire. She was a very amiable young lady, and much respected.—Her funeral was numerously attended, and the Rev Wm. Macaulay delivered an excellent discourse from the 23 & 24 verses of the 11th Chapter of St John, in the new Church of Port Hope upon this solemn occasion

At Albany on Wednesday, the 25th March last, aged 69 years, Robert Kerr, Esquire, of Niagara, Upper Canada; Surgeon in the Indian Department.—Mr Kerr was one of the oldest inhabitants of Upper Canada; he was a man of great respectability, and conspicuous for his loyalty; during the late war, he was with his three sons actively employed in his Majesty's service.

The funeral of Dr. Kerr, was attended by a large concourse of Citizens and Members of the Legislature.—He was indeed universally respected.—Being a Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Upper Canada, the Masonic Brethern of Albany, under the superintendence of the officers of Mount Vernon Lodge, paid the last tribute of affection to their good and worthy brother, and dropped the sympathetic tear over his grave. The Lodge resolved to wear crape on the left arm for 30 days, as a testimony of their respect to their excellent mason, whose memory they revere; and whose loss they deplore.

At Amherstburgh, in the Western District, on the 7th March, Mrs. Susan McGregor, aged 64 years, widow of the late Col. Gregor McGregor.

FERRY.

Executive Council Office,
York, 4th March, 1824.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to Establish a Ferry from the Landing near the Residence of Thomas Dorland, Esq. in the Township of Adolphustown, to the Landing near Vanalstine's Mills, in the Township of Marysburgh, in the Midland District,

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN,

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that Sealed Proposals, Post paid, for a Lease of the said Ferry, to be given to the highest Bidder, for the term of Three Years, Endorsed as "Sealed Proposals for Ferry," will be received at this Office until the First day of May next.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Chamber,
York, 6th January, 1824.

PRESENT,

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor,
In Council,

His Majesty's Government having recently extended their assistance to the class of Emigrants, which it was intended to relieve by gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres of Land, in conveying them to their respective locations:

IT IS ORDERED, that from the first day of May next, no gratuitous Grants be made of any quantity of Land to other than privileged persons.—And that as the Fee on Two Hundred Acres was raised, in order to defray the gratuitous Grants of Fifty Acres, the consideration being, the future Fee on Two Hundred Acres is reduced to Eight Pounds Four Shillings and One Penny Sterling; the existing Fee before 1819, and the Fee on all other Grants, in Townships surveyed since that time, to be the same as established by the Order in Council, of 5th January, 1819.

N. B. Possessors of gratuitous Grants for Fifty Acres, may, by paying the Fee on One Hundred Acres, receive a Grant of the adjoining Fifty Acres if vacant.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Ex'v. Council.

Executive Council Chamber,
at York, 26th Jan. 1824.

PRESENT;
His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor,
In Council

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor submitted to the consideration of the Board, the Sheriffs' Reports of their respective Gaols, together with other Documents relating to a Winter Circuit, by which it appeared that the House of Assembly had addressed His Excellency to that effect, for this Session only; and obviously for the Delivery of the Gaols in the several Districts.

The limitation of such a measure to one season seeming to militate with the Provision of the Law, that when the Communication from the Seat of Government admitted, and the circumstances of the Province required, there should be a regular Second Circuit, the Board would prefer to recommend that Special Commissions to deliver particular Gaols should issue where the Sheriffs do not, in the opinion of the Board, require any unusual interposition, His Excellency, with advice of the Council, postpones a Second Circuit until the circumstances of the Province more decidedly require it.

JOHN SMALL,
Clk. Executive Council.

Executive Council Office,
York, February 7th 1821.

WHEREAS it has been represented, that many persons who have received Locations of Land, have, from Sickness, and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulfil the Settlement Duty in the time required by the Location Ticket, and have neglected to apply to His Excellency in Council for an extension of the period, for performance of such duty.

BE it Known that the period for completing the Settlement Duty, is hereby extended to Two Years from the date of Locations until further notice shall be given.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

WHEREAS by the Tenor of the Location Tickets a Certificate is required to be lodged at the Settlement Duty being done within two Years, and that the said Location should be forfeited, and in case of Locations not gratuitous, that one third of the Patent Fee be lodged with such Certificate; AND WHEREAS it is represented, that in many instances, Certificates of performance of the Settlement Duty, have been withheld from the inability of the settler to deposit such proportion of the Patent Fee, it is deemed expedient to relieve the settler from forfeiture of his location, when he may actually have performed his settlement duty—Notice is hereby given that in all cases where Settlement Duty has been performed within the limited period, the settler shall, on filing Certificate thereof within six Months of this date, be exempted from forfeiture notwithstanding the non-payment therewith of such portion of the Patent Fee, provided the Patent is sued out within One Year from the filing of such Certificate.

And further; His Excellency, in the hope of avoiding the necessity of rescinding any of the Militia grants, is pleased to direct this Public Notification; that all Lands granted to Militia Men, upon which the Settlement Duties shall not have been performed within the limited period, will in pursuance of general instructions given to the Surveyor General in all similar cases, be declared vacant, and will be granted within Six Months after the expiration of that period, to the first applicant, unless the Original Nominee, shall before such subsequent application, have lodged a Certificate of his having performed the Setting Duties.

JOHN SMALL, Clk. Ex. Coun.

Executive Council Office,
York, 7th Nov. 1821.

WHEREAS it has become expedient to establish a line of communication through certain remote Townships, for encouragement thereof, Grants will be made to actual Settlers in the Townships hereinafter named on the condition of Settling within two years from the date of the Location, at the reduced Scale of 5th January, 1819, viz.

A Township North of Mariposa, advertised from the Surveyor General's Office on the 19th of October, as

N. of Ep-		Fenelon

Government House, 6th March, 1820.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor is pleased to direct that no Location requiring Settlement Duty shall be Confirmed by Patent, without a Certificate from the Land Board of the District in which such Location may be situate, that the Settlement Duty required by the Order in council has bona fide been performed within the time specified by the Location Ticket.

FRED. FREITAG.

Humber Plains, April 3, 1824.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greatest part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer, for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,

Brother Farmers,

Your most Obed't,

Humble Servant

GEORGE T. DENISON.

Township of York, } February 25th, 1824. }

TO THE INDEPENDENT FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

AFTER the very flattering and successful support which I received from you at my last Election, after four years of zealous and honest service, and after the renewed solicitations of many of you, I cannot be my duty to decline offering myself a Candidate for the ensuing Election.

The labours and anxieties of a faithful Representative, great beyond what you imagine, might perhaps induce me to withdraw from this honourable trust, but that public duty commands me in a measure, at least to offer myself again to your choice; and if the result of such offer should be the Election of another, I will be happy in the hope that you shall have chosen one more able; but be assured that none can be chosen more attached to your interests and to the honour and prosperity of the Province, than

Gentlemen, your faithful
Friend and Servant,
W. W. BALDWIN.

Spadina, 12th }
February, 1824. }

TO THE FREEHOLDERS OF THE HOME DISTRICT.

FELLOW SUBJECTS,

As Mr. Baldwin has again offered himself as a Candidate to represent you in Parliament; and, as I was formerly one of his most strenuous supporters, by using all my influence in his favour, (the only political sin, and a great sin I acknowledge it was, that I was ever guilty of,) the only atonement I can now make, is to lay before you, in addition to the observations of the Old Farmer" and the "True Britton," a few more remarks upon his Political conduct for the four years which he has been so "zealously" and "honestly" employed in your service in the House of Assembly.

BEFORE I make these Comments, I beg to declare, that I am not actuated by any private pique, or resentment against Mr. B—, as a private Gentleman, for as a Husband, a Father, a Brother, a Christian, and an Acquaintance, he is possessed of all the social virtues—it is with his political conduct that I am at residence, and it is that conduct which, I am bold to say, every friend of his in this Province has viewed with regret and astonishment for the last four years.

LET us see in what manner that long parted lien been employed for your interest.—More than 130 Acts have been passed by the Legislature during the last Parliament. I will ask Mr. B how many of those Acts were framed by him and brought before the Committee in the House of Assembly; not one single Act, that has a general operation to the Province?!! and during all the time that he was so "zealously" employed, there are only three Bills at all, of any description, that he was able to carry through the House,—viz. "A Bill to alter the holding of the Quarter Sessions District Court in the Home District," and as that did not interest his purpose, he, the next year, brought in another Bill to alter it again!!! The third Bill went to regulate the Fisheries in the different Rivers of this Province; but let me ask this honourable gentleman how much of that Bill was framed by himself, as it now stands in the Statute Book? I must answer for him, there is not one single clause of that Bill, except the Preamble!!! There is one circumstance more, I beg leave to mention, although I cannot exactly point out the Bill I have reference to—but I will explain it, in such a manner that the honorable gentleman may recollect it—It was a measure brought forward by the Attorney General—Mr. B. was Chairman of the Committee; and, in the course of debate, he got up and opposed the Bill in every stage, which so much surprised the Attorney General that, in reply to Mr B—, he observed that before he had introduced the measure before the House, he had consulted with Mr B. on the subject, and that gentleman had expressed his thorough approbation as to the principles of the Bill!! This, my fellow subjects, is the amount of the four years great "zeal" for our interests I will now make a short statement of the "expenses" which this "great zeal" has cost the District and Province. During the last four years the Legislature have sat in Parliament about nine months, or 270 days, and the sergeant will stand thus:—

270 days at 30s. per day is	£135 0 0.
The Road Bill cost the Province	10 0 0.
Stationary, as the gentleman wrote Volumes of useless Resolutions and Bills, I cannot estimate at less than four Reams of paper at 20s.	5 0 0.
The expences of the House are about £30 daily; the period of nine months, therefore, amounts to the very large sum of £8100—this is far below the real expenditure, and it is agreed on all hands that Mr B took up one tenth of the time, it naturally cost the Province the sum of	810 0 0.
Which makes a sum total of	£961 0 0.

Now, for all this money, what has the Home District received from the exertions of the Honourable Member who now offers himself again as a Candidate?—ABSOLUTE NOTHING!!! Should this be said on the subject of the next Election. We do not there will be a Union of the Legislatures of the two Provinces; and, after the speech of Mr. STRANG in the House of Assembly of Lower Canada,—"I think there are few men who do not see the absolute necessity of a Union; however they may have been opposed to the measure before; and, as the "Old Farmer" justly observed, we ought to pause before we pledge ourselves to any one Candidate before the day of Election.

LET me therefore urge you, one and all, to suspend your judgment until that day arrives,—See who are the Candidates, and then be free to give your votes to those who possess the greatest abilities, to discharge the great and important duty required at the hands of a Representative of the Loyal Inhabitants of the Home District.

A LOYALIST.

N. B. See the contrast between Mr. B. and the other Representatives, Mr. P. Robinson, who has expended all his in donations; and, the ATTORNEY GENERAL, who has served with out pay!!!

Editorial Commentary.

The accounts from Greece are greatly exhilerating. Lord BYRON has become a prominent figure in the eastern drama, and furnishes an interesting subject of contemplation in his new political, and, perhaps we may have soon to add, his new warlike character.—Happy will it be for him, and his friends, should his conduct be such as to prove a splendid atonement for the many criminal aberrations of which he has been accused.

Our Consuls in South America have dispatched one of their number, from Mexico, with the most favourable accounts of that extensive region,—and of the good disposition which the Inhabitants bear towards Great Britain.—The happiest results will no doubt follow.

We have perused with much satisfaction a paper, under the signature of "Paterfamilias," in a late number of the U. C. Herald, which a want of room alone prevents us from republishing. It is on the subject of our law of descents. We cordially approve the arguments therein adduced, and fully participate with the writer in his hope, that a change will be eventually adopted.—The law of primogeniture is undoubtedly a remnant of the feudal code which, even in England, ought to have been abolished long ago. One family of Christians, and one alone, as far as we know, having seen its injustice, have acted on a more upright and liberal maxim, by making it a standing rule of their Society, that each members, who is the head of a family, shall have a Will voluntarily by him, in order to prevent any of those injurious consequences which frequently result from sudden death, and an unequal distribution of property:—we speak of that respectable class of persons denominated Quakers, whose moral code is indeed truly excellent:—Neither the subject nor the argument, so ably brought forward by "Paterfamilias," will be lost sight of by us—and he may rely upon all the assistance we may be able to render his views.

Without seeking to busy ourselves with the town rumours and tea-table scandal of this wooden metropolis of a wooden world, the brisk of an extraordinary circumstance, and which deserves the particular notice of one exercising the functions of a public censor, has reached our ears.—It is probable, hereafter, we shall make it the subject of a particular essay;—in the mean while, we think that one of our worthiest, and most respectable Public Officers has great occasion to join in the invective which SIR RICHARD STEELE so strongly urged in the 101st page of the TATLER, against a species of injustice for which, in that day, there was no legal remedy, and which he thus characterizes:—

"This iniquity is committed by a most impregnable set of mortals, men who are rogues within the law; and in the very commission of what they are guilty of, professedly own that they forbear no injury, but from the terror of being punished for it. These miscreants are a set of wretches we authors call pirates, who print any book, poem, or sermon, as soon as it appears in the world, in a smaller volume; and sell it, as all other thieves do stolen goods, at a cheaper rate,—I was in my rage calling them rascals, plunderers, robbers, highwaymen—But they acknowledged all that, and are pleased with those, as well as any other titles; nay, will print them themselves to turn a penny."

As this species of iniquity is now severely punishable by the LAW of England, it ought to be, and, we suppose, is so, there, if any dependance can be placed upon the opinion of one of our Crown Lawyers. But, this is not what we desire to discuss. It is rather to lament, with the deepest regret, as all classes of men ought to do, that the high sense of honour for which the British name has been so long, and so widely, famed, and which has probably done more towards the establishment of her greatness, both at home and abroad, than any other cause, should be so totally disregarded by her children and descendents on this continent.—What is it that, on the continents of Europe, Asia, and Africa, makes an Englishman's word go farther than the bond of any other foreigner; but his high sense of honour, from which he can never be made to depart; no, not even in death?—What is it that extinguishes this noble feeling, and throws darkness on every ray of the light of this glorious character, in the United States, and in this country?—Shall we say that it is because it cannot breathe the same air with the clouds of mosquetoes and black flies, and the hosts of ravenous bull frogs which infest the intermingable forest? Is it not here notorious that a man who may have been guilty of misdemeanors held to be infamous in Britain, who may even have been publicly whipped and kicked, times without count; nay, who may have been guilty of every crime (save that of poverty,) holds up his head with as much shameless, fearless, impudence as ever?—And why is all this abomination? Even because his compeers or associates exist in him, or appear to esteem him, not the less.—Oh, 'tis a shocking, 'tis a horrible state of society! Alas! "The beauty of Israel is slain: Tell it not in Gath; publish it not in the streets of Askelon, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph."

WHAT are the prospects we are holding forth to our children;—what our hope for the future character of our adopted country—if we allow the word "honour" to rest in our halls?—If we are willing to pride ourselves on a near relationship to the Baron Nam ht ow shew, also, what is the strength of our claims to the BRITISH CHARACTER! and let us not hesitate to hoot from our fellowship all those who would degrace it;—and; are there not many calling themselves honourable, and filling honourable stations—and very right honourable, in their own estimation, that are guilty of peccadillos—to say the least of it—"—would degrace them for ever in that and where rank is a deepness, rather than an extenuation of guilt?

Some may be ready to ask what is this honour about which you are expounding so much?—From the many definitions which crowd upon our recollection, we shall lose the remark with the following from Lord CHESTERFIELD:—"The word honour, in its proper signification, (by the by implies, the unit a sent. ments of virtue, truth, and justice, carried by a generous mind beyond these mere moral obligations which the laws require, or can punish the violation of.—A true point of honour will not content himself with the literal discharge of the duties of a man and a citizen; he raises and dignifies them into magnanimity.—He gives where he may with justice refuse:—he forgives where he may with justice resent; and his whole conduct is directed by the noble sentiments of unknown unvitiated heart; a more and more scrupulous guides than the laws of the land, which being calculated for the generality of mankind, must necessarily be more a restraint upon vices in general, than an invitation and reward of particular virtues."

LONDON Feb 28th.

Very interesting information relative to the affairs of Greece has been received in London. The Hon. Leicester Stanhope, who had been attempting for some time to form a corps of artillery has at length succeeded to the utmost extent of his wishes, and now boasts that the Greeks have a force more than sufficient to reduce all the Fortresses in the hands of the Turks. Mr. Stanhope was receiving assurances of support from all parts of Greece, and earnest requests that he would intercede with England to procure pecuniary and other means for the establishment of national schools throughout the country. Lord Byron continues to be the soul of the Greek Cause, and is every where popular. The Primates of Missolonghi have elected him a member of their Council. His Lordship has undertaken to provide for the expenditure of the war in Greece, until the produce of the loan shall have been received, and for this purpose has sold an estate in England, the amount of which is placed in the hands of Messrs. Ransom, and Co. to be remitted to Greece according to his order.

The Morning Chronicle of the 26th, contains the following article respecting the affairs of Greece:

"Advices were received this morning, dated in Missolonghi on the 30th Dec. which are of great importance. Capt. P——, an Englishman, and an eminent engineer, had been intrusted by the Prince Mavrocordato and Gen. Colocotroni, with the siege of the Castle of Lepanto, and also with that of the fortress of Patras. A summons to surrender had been forwarded to the Governor of the former, and it was supported by the Prince in person, and 8000 Suliots. Capt P—— had promised to reduce it in a few days, if the Barbarians did not in the meantime submit, for he possessed all the means necessary to batter the Castle, and to effect breaches which would render the success of an assault certain. Patras was neither supplied with provisions, nor with any of the necessaries for a protracted siege, so that we certain. This eloquent will clear the Gulph of Lepanto of the enemies of civilized society, and will enable the Christians to direct their attention to Thessaly, where the Mahomedans are most vulnerable, for even at the latest advices from this District by the attorney General—Mr. B. was Chairman of the Committee; and, in the course of debate, he got up and opposed the Bill in every stage, which so much surprised the Attorney General that, in reply to Mr B—, he observed that before he had introduced the measure before the House, he had consulted with Mr B. on the subject, and that gentleman had expressed his thorough approbation as to the principles of the Bill!! This, my fellow subjects, is the amount of the four years great "zeal" for our interests I will now make a short statement of the "expenses" which this "great zeal" has cost the District and Province. During the last four years the Legislature have sat in Parliament about nine months, or 270 days, and the sergeant will stand thus:—

270 days at 30s. per day is	£135 0 0.
The Road Bill cost the Province	10 0 0.
Stationary, as the gentleman wrote Volumes of useless Resolutions and Bills, I cannot estimate at less than four Reams of paper at 20s.	5 0 0.
The expences of the House are about £30 daily; the period of nine months, therefore, amounts to the very large sum of £8100—this is far below the real expenditure, and it is agreed on all hands that Mr B took up one tenth of the time, it naturally cost the Province the sum of	810 0 0.
Which makes a sum total of	£961 0 0.

Now, for all this money, what has the Home District received from the exertions of the Honourable Member who now offers himself again as a Candidate?—ABSOLUTE NOTHING!!! Should this be said on the subject of the next Election. We do not there will be a Union of the Legislatures of the two Provinces; and, after the speech of Mr. STRANG in the House of Assembly of Lower Canada,—"I think there are few men who do not see the absolute necessity of a Union; however they may have been opposed to the measure before; and, as the "Old Farmer" justly observed, we ought to pause before we pledge ourselves to any one Candidate before the day of Election.

LET me therefore urge you, one and all, to suspend your judgment until that day arrives,—See who are the Candidates, and then be free to give your votes to those who possess the greatest abilities, to discharge the great and important duty required at the hands of a Representative of the Loyal Inhabitants of the Home District.

Editorial Commentary.

The accounts from Greece are greatly exhilerating. Lord BYRON has become a prominent figure in the eastern drama, and furnishes an interesting subject of contemplation in his new political, and, perhaps we may have soon to add, his new warlike character.—Happy will it be for him, and his friends, should his conduct be such as to prove a splendid atonement for the many criminal aberrations of which he has been accused.

Our Consuls in South America have dispatched one of their number, from Mexico, with the most favourable accounts of that extensive region,—and of the good disposition which the Inhabitants bear towards Great Britain.—The happiest results will no doubt follow.

We have perused with much satisfaction a paper, under the signature of "Paterfamilias," in a late number of the U. C. Herald, which a want of room alone prevents us from republishing. VICE-ROY OF IRELAND.—It is rumoured, says the Irish Times, that the Marquis of Wellesley will shortly retire from the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland; and the Duke of Buckingham is spoken of as his successor.

IMPORTANCE OF LIVERPOOL.—Liverpool is already nearly equal in importance to London, as a commercial town. But it requires a very small share of discernment to see, that in a few years, Liverpool will leave London far behind it.

The receipts of duties at the Liverpool Custom House for the year 1823, amounted to the enormous sum of £1,800,402 12s 6d The whole of the customs duties of Scotland, for 1822, amounted to £780,706 7s 9d., so that the customs of Liverpool are nearly three times as high as those for all Scotland. The customs of the whole empire, or the year last ended, amounted to £20,406,00 so the considerably more than one sixth of the duties of Great Britain are received in Liverpool.

From the 9th Report on the customs, it appears, that the declared value of British and Irish produce and manufactures, exported from Great Britain, in 1819,

Amounted to	£37,939,668
From Liverpool alone	12,792,331
That is, one third of the whole, but deduct Scotland, £4,000,000
and we have,	£8,792,331
Liverpool	£8,792,331
Other ports of England	21,057,180

The number of ships, foreign and coasters, reported inwards in Liverpool, in 1823, amounts to 9577. The number of ships, which entered the principal ports of the Kingdom of the Netherlands, in 1822, was,

MARITIME EXPEDITION OF THE ROMANS.—It appears from the last number of the Annales des Voyages, that M. Simonoff, Professor at the University of Kasan, has given a detail of the voyages of the Russians to the South Pole, which is full of interesting matter. In Europe it is not generally known, that the circumnavigators sent by the powerful Emperor of the North, have made, between the parallels of sixty and seventy degrees, a voyage round the Pole, much more extensive and instructive than that performed by the celebrated Captain Cook. The island situated farthest south which is at present known, bears the name of Alexander the First.—Journal des Debates

DISCOVERY IN WELVERLEY CASTLE.—As some workmen were digging amongst the ruins of Welverley Castle, near Winchester, they found, to their great surprise, an entrance into a large vault; it was perfectly square, containing fifty pillars quite perfect and beautifully carved. In the middle of the vault was a box of very thick brass, containing many coins; three of which are found to be gold, and two of silver; the three golden ones bear the head of Canute; the silver are so mutilated they could not be made out. Many other copper coins were found deposited in the same corner; but they all prove to be of the commencement of the reign of the Norman Saxon. What the use of this vault was is above conjecture; it was in a perfect state, and is proved to be the remains of a woman. Notwithstanding the many searches that have been made by archæologists in the neighbourhood by this Castle, this is the first discovery (which was accidentally met with) that has taken place for at least the last twenty years.

HOW TO PRESERVE PHEASANTS RAVENOUSNESS.—Some Ladies having been stolen from the church yard of a remote parish in Northumberland, the owner of the estate, to prevent such depredations in future, has directed that graves are to be made rather shorter than the coffin, and to be secured at the bottom, so as to admit the head under the solid ground. It is then impossible to raise it by the feet

THE PACHA OF EGYPT.

The Pacha of Egypt is a very extraordinary character. By birth a Greek, and enslaved in his early youth, he enjoyed no advantages of education; but in the course of his administration of the Government of the celebrated province at present under his control, he evinces the wonderful effect which may be wrought by a mind naturally sagacious and energetic. Having Established himself as a military chieftain, too formidable to be controlled by the Divan of Constantinople, he has of late years devoted himself to commercial enterprises, which, if his life be spared, or if they are continued after his death, must tend to the speedy recivilizing of the ancient parent of the arts and sciences. He first directed his attention to the cultivation of sugar, of which he grew a considerable quantity; but as the quality was coarse, by the aid of a Scottish agent he established an extensive sugar refinery, the produce of which has occasionally been found a matter of soulety to the European dealers in refined sugar in the Levant. In the course of the process of refinement he had occasion for a steam engine, with which we have been informed, he was supplied by the British Ministry, who wished to conciliate his favour by so acceptable a present; which, however, as we have been told, he pretended he wished to possess only as an object of curiosity.

At a later period, an English gentleman, high in his confidence, advised him to turn his attention to the cultivation of cotton. He accordingly procured from the United States, in separate quantities, so as to produce no alarm, several tons weight of the best cotton seed, which he has sown in spots on the banks of the Nile, favourable to the growth of the cotton plant. His success in this new speculation has hitherto been decisive. A few months ago, a hundred bags of his cotton were sold at Liverpool, and is found, on working, to be superior to the Sea Island Cotton. Several vessels have within these few days cleared out from Liverpool to Alexandria, where he has thirty thousand bags ready for sale; and his next year's crop is expected to be one hundred thousand. If the civilization of his people is within many degrees commensurate with his progress in agriculture, so that they can take a tolerable participation of our manufactures in exchange for the raw material, Jonathan may look about him. At present the purchases are made from the Pacha in hard dollars.

It will easily be imagined that the rising power of this extraordinary man is viewed with extreme jealousy by the Porte. Accordingly, a short time ago, the Grand Seigaior sent an agent with a couple of executioners, with instructions to bring his head to Constantinople; but the Pacha's spies gave him speedy intelligence of the danger which awaited him. He made his preparations accordingly, and the ministers of death, instantly on their arrival in Egypt, and before they could display the fatal firman, were deprived of their heads, which the Pacha pickled and sent to the Sublime Porte, with a history of his providential escape from the plots of assassins. Since then he has remained unmolested in the prosecution of his grand and useful designs, and all who wish well to the progress of civilization in Africa, will pray that he may live a thousand years.

The Pacha, we further learn, bought from Rundel and Bridges the Pitt diamond, and has paid for it. The diamond was lately consigned to the care of the captain of a British ship of war.

COUNTY OF MIDDLESEX.

AT a Meeting held at the House of J. B Flemming, in Westminster, Dec. 16, 1823, for the purpose of nominating a fit person to be recommended and supported at the next Election, for Representation in the next Provincial Parliament,—the same was adjourned to the 26th Feb. 1824, to meet again at Archibald McMillin's, with a view to give more extensive Publicity of the same; at which time and place of adjournment, a large number of the Freeholders and Electors again convened, and,

Mr. Duncan McKenzie was called to the Chair;

Mr. John Siddal, chosen Secretary, when it was

Resolved,—That we want an Honest Independant Man to Represent us in Parliament; one who, while he sincerely regards the rights of the Crown, will never consent to vote away the Rights of the Subjects and DRAIN the POOR to add increased wealth to the already opulent Office-holder, or sinecure; and such a man, from our personal acquaintance, we believe to be

CAPTAIN JOHN MATTHEWS.

Resolved, therefore,—That we will support him as one of the Candidates, with such other respected character as may be fixed upon by our good and loyal fellow subjects, in some other part of the country, to be supported with him.

DUNCAN McKENZIE, Chairman.
JOHN SIDDAL, Secretary.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

HAVING been solicited by a number of my brother Farmers and Freeholders of several of the Townships in these Counties, to come forward as a Candidate at the ensuing General Election, to represent you in Parliament, I now take the Liberty of offering myself in that capacity for your consideration.

Having been raised among you from my youth, and having had the pleasure of serving my King and Country, through the whole of the late war, with the greater part of the young men of our Townships, I therefore believe there are but few of you to whom I am not known.

Gentlemen, I do declare that I am a Free and Independent Farmer; for it is by my Farms that I have to live; and as I have no other occupation, I can have no view in soliciting your support but that of supporting, to the best of my abilities, all measures, which tend to advance the Agricultural interests and the general good of the Province.

I shall not, Gentlemen, presume to say, that I am in every respect qualified to discharge the duties of so important an Office; but I will venture to assert, that the few talents which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon me, shall be devoted to the benefit of the Country and the welfare of the Farmer.

I have the honor to be,
Brother Farmers,
Your most Obed't,
Humble Servant
GEORGE T. DENISON.

TO THE INDEPENDENT FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTIES OF YORK AND SIMCOE.

GENTLEMEN,

AFTER the very flattering and successful support which I received from you at my last Election, after four years of zealous and honest service, and after the renewed solicitations of many of you, it cannot be my duty to decline offering myself a Candidate for the ensuing Election.

The labours and anxieties of a faithful Representative, great beyond what you imagine, might perhaps induce me to withdraw from this honourable trust, but that public duty commands me in a measure, at least, to offer myself again to your choice; and if the result of such offer should be the Election of another, I will be happy in the hope that you shall have chosen one more able; but be assured that none can be chosen more attached to your interests and to the honour and prosperity of the Province, than

Gentlemen, your faithful
Friend and Servant,
W. W. BALDWIN.
