YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1826.

BY AUTHORITY.

ANNO SEPTIMO
GEORGII IV. REGIS.

CAP. LXVIII.

An Act to amend so much of an Act of the Thirty-first Year of His Late Majesty, as relates to the Election of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada.

[2th May 1826.]

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the thirty-first Year of the Reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act to repeal certain Parts of an Act passed in the Fourteenth Year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled 'An Act for making more effectual Provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America,' and to make further Provision for the Government of the of the said Province, it is amongst other things enacted, that no Person shall be Summoned to the Legislative Council in either of the Provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada who shall not be of the full Age of Twenty-one Years, and a natural-born Subject of His Majesty, or a Subject of His Majesty naturalized by Act of the British Parliament, or a Subject of His Majesty having become such by the Conquest and Cession of the Province of Canada; and it is thereby further provided, that no person shall be capable of voting at any Election of a Member to serve in the Legislative Assembly in either of the said Provinces of Upper Canada or Lower Canada, or of being elected at any such Election, who shall not be of the full Age of Twenty-one Years, and a natural-born Subject of His Majesty, or a Subject of His Majesty naturalized by Act of the British Parliament, or a Subject of His Majesty having become such by the Conquest and Cession of the Province of Canada: And whereas it is expedient that Persons naturalized by any Act of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, assented to by His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, should be enabled to be summoned to the Legislative Council of the said Province of Upper Canada, and of voting at the Elections of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province, or of being Elected at any such Election; Be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same,

Persons naturalized in Upper Canada may be summoned to the Legislative Council & vote at Elections

That all Persons naturalized by any Act of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, assented to by His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, shall hence forth be and be deemed competent in the Law to be summoned to the Legislative Council of the said Province of Upper Canada, and to vote at the Elections of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province, and to be Elected at any such Election.

Naturalization Bills not to have effect till they have been received His Majesty's Assent.

Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, That when ever any Bill which has been passed by the Legislative Council and by the House of Assembly in the said Province of Upper Canada, for the Naturalization of any Persons or Person, shall be presented for His Majesty's Assent to the Governor or Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, or to the Person Administering His Majesty's Government there in, such Governor or Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, shall and he is hereby required to reserve every such Bill for the Signification of His Majesty's Pleasure thereon; and no such Bill shall have any Force or Authority within the said Province of Upper Canada until the Governor or Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, shall Signify, either by Speech or Message to the Legislative Council and Assembly of the said Province or by Proclamation, that such Bill has been laid before His Majesty in Council, and that His Majesty has been pleased to assent to the same; and no such Bill shall have any Force or Authority within the said Province unless His Majesty's Assent thereto shall have been so signified as aforesaid, within the Space of Two Years from the Day on which such Bill shall have been presented for His Majesty's Assent to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors, of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights Citizens, and Burgesses of our said Province; to our Provincial Parliament at our Town of York on Monday the Thirtieth day of October inst. to be Commenced, Held, Called, and Elected, and to every of you

GREETING

WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the Twenty-fifth day of September last, we thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament to the Thirtieth day of October instant, at which time, at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear.

NOW KNOW YE, that we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you that on Tuesday the Fifth day of December next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, FOR THE ACTUAL DESPATCH OF PUBLIC BUSINESS, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces thereof, at York, this Twenty-first day of October in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

D. CAMERON, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer, to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided, always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. Executive Council Office,
York, 23rd March, 1826.

NOTICE is hereby given, by Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.
No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must, at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

MY TRANSMOGRIFICATIONS.

Miss Mitford, in a very clever little sketch published in Ackerman's pretty "Forget me not," has very amusingly detailed the continual transmigrations of the Female part of humanity in its progress through childhood, girlhood, womanhood, to marriage and old age. But to us of the more Lordly sex she has denied a mutability which perhaps she has not so much observed—this is surely because she is not one of us, and could scarcely have opportunities of remarking our changes as closely as those of her own sex. She observes, "there is very little change in men from early boyhood, and that they keep the same faces however ugly." In some instances it may be so, but in general there are very few animals more unlike than the boy and man —But perhaps Miss Mitford, in this sweeping indistinction, only alluded to the 'wearers of smock frocks.'—in that case there is an end of the argument; but supposing the contrary, (which I do, otherwise an excellent article would be lost,) I will proceed to detail the history of my own "Transmogrifications."

I cannot say I recollect myself, but I perfectly well remember a portrait that strongly resembled me, painted when I was two years old, for my dear and tender mother, and valued accordingly. It represents a fat, roguish, black-eyed, curly-headed urchin, sitting on a bank with a lap full of flowers, which showed out magnificently from the white frock beneath them. There was happiness, round, rich, luscious, rosy happiness, in every little feature; and altogether it was such a child as a mother might be proud of. Three years after I can recollect myself—the fat was passing away—I was growing tall, slender, an impudent self-willed imp, the delight of my father, the torment of my sister, and the curse of servants. My god-father gave me a guinea, and I gave it to a sweep, as a bribe to let me mount his horse and ride him a few yards to water. I had a new beaver hat—I had no objection to sunbeams, and thought I could turn it to better account—I cut it into the shape of a very tolerable boat, and sent it down the stream, that, innocent of mischief, flowed quietly through the grounds. Yet amid all this wildness, there might have been seen "sparkles of better nature;" for I had much tenderness in my composition, glimpses of enthusiasm, and some queer undefined notions of the beautiful; for instance, a gang of gipsies sometimes favoured "our village" by pitching their tents in the outskirts; and many a time have I slipped away from the paternal care of "Old John" to listen to the voice of one dark-eyed girl among the troop, who had fascinated my young heart, or (I rather suppose) my ear, by her singing. How often have I wept over the melancholy fate of the Lady, who, in the storm at sea, told her lover to "Take a white napkin, and bind my head softly,

And then throw me overboard myself and my baby!"

and have been frequently elevated to heroism by the splendid portrait of that hero who was martyrised at Tyburn; his constancy at his trial won my fervent admiration.

"I stood as bold as John of Gaunt,
All in my natty attire;
I ne'er seemed daunted in the least,
Which made the folks admire!

"That all the people they may say,
That I am no dis-orter;
For the captain he must lead the way,
And the men must follow a-ter."

My wild spirits were really taken captive by these vagabonds; the lawless independence of their children was my envy; they had no lessons to learn, no elder sisters to keep them in order, no elder brother to thump them out of their pocket money; their whole existence to me was paradisical. I believe if they had attempted to steal me, they would have found the business half done to their hands.

At seven years old I was breeched—I had had a cloth jacket and trowsers—I was told that I was a man; and I thought it incumbent on me to be "grave and gentleman like." I paid more attention to my lessons and the young ladies, and thought it an imperative duty to discover they were more amiable and pretty than boys. Soon this affectation became sincere. My sister was better beloved than all my kin; to her I flew to roar away my grief, when my father took out Henry, and left me at home, or when he threatened to sell my poney, or give him to my playfellow, Richard Howard, whom I hated ever after. In her I reposed all my confidence, and in her gentle bosom deposited my tutor's severities, and my brother's wrongs—I was in truth "a most pathetical nit."

But at ten, O what a change was there! No Chrysalis' metamorphosis was ever greater. I had grown accustomed to my breeches, and no longer held them in any consideration; I was impudent to my sister, contradicted my father, fought my own battles with my brother, and played truant with my tutor, till he made a solemn complaint of my manifold abominations. I scrambled all over the country, and came back with scarcely a rag on my back, and what were left me were so defaced by mud, or dust, as the weather would have it, that their quality could barely be discovered. My mother wept, my father swore, my tutor said the devil was in me. I was up to all sorts of villany. I stuffed a goose with gunpowder in the absence of the cook, who was preparing to put it down to the spit, and I felt no sort of compunction for her intense fear and agony, when on applying the lighted paper to singe it, it blew into ten thousand pieces, and nearly knocked her eyes out. I had thrashed my brother into respect for me; and my playmates consoled themselves for not being able to master me, by bestowing upon me the very expressive cognomen of "Gallows!" At length I tired them out; my tutor gave in, and my mother acquiesced with my father in thinking school alone could preserve me, so to a public school I went, to learn decorums and obedience.

In four years more, there were no traces of Young Gallows, but I came home a monkey still, only melancholy instead of mischievous. My early enthusiasm returned, and my intense love of the beautiful, undirected by reason, exhibited itself in the most ridiculous forms—I read novels, and the pathetic stories in the magazines. I contemplated the setting sun—fell in love with the moon, and made verses to every little star that twinkled behind the clouds and before the clouds. I would not have read or written any thing lively for the world; I should have thought fun an insult to my feelings; and understanding I was a slender boy, with long arms and legs, of an active light figure, but delicate constitution—every body said I should be tall—I had looked in the glass, and observing a pale, dark face, inclining to sallow, masses of black curling hair, and a somewhat serious look, I conclude that I should be a tall, thin, pale, pensive-looking young-man, and acted up to the character accordingly. I loved to be thought an invalid, and frightened my mother to death by the affectation of a hectic cough, which I pretended to consider as a warning that I should die early of a decline. I wrote a long string of verses, called the "Dying Boy," in which I lamented my early doom, expressed my resignation, and took a tender and pathetic farewell of the trees, and the moon, and the flowers. It brought the tears into my own eyes to read it—(I have since learned it had the same effect upon others, but from a very opposite emotion) —I sent them to one of the most pitiful magazines, where they were (God knows why) inserted. Oh, how proud was I—I was a Scholar and a Poet! There was wanting but one thing to complete me—I should fall in love—and so I did; but the affair was more serious than I could have imagined—more of real feeling mingled with the thing than I expected—the passion of a boy of fourteen has something desperate in it always; and that mine had an uncommon portion of sincerity, was obvious from the character of the object of my choice. She was a beautiful, accomplished woman of twenty-two (the daughter of an intimate friend of my father.) A girl of my own age would not have been endurable. "I never told my love" to this charming creature for many months that she was on a visit to my sister and resided in my neighbourhood; but I endeavored to make it apparent by every possible pathetical mode—I looked at her till I could not see, and listened to her till I could not hear; I gathered flowers to twist into her bright hair, and when they were dead, wept over them for envy at their fate, and deposited them next my shirt—I read to her, in the most tender voice, all the amatory verses I could put my hands on, launched out on the happiness of domestic love, and affected to caress little children in her presence—I never ate any dinner when she was at table, but, with an air of desperation, gulped down as much wine as I possibly could, without incurring my father's observation—now, I thought, I should like to be a king, and place her on a throne; then, a warrior, that I might win her country might offer her homage—love and a cottage had its charms, and sometimes I thought how delicious it would be to suffer for her sake. These thoughts became feelings, and what was begun as a matter of course, terminated in real tenderness, no less ridiculous. I was a diffident lad, exceeding modest: judge then of my sincerity by its effect. Finding my self alone with her in a beautiful bower by moonlight, I fell upon my knees, seized her fair hand, and made a vehement declaration of my passion; I besought her to have compassion upon my youth, and not by coldness to destroy its hopes—I vowed eternal truth, and swore desperately I could not live without her—I drew a glowing picture of the delights of married life, and expatiated warmly on the tyranny of parents and friends—I promised to make the best of husbands, the tenderest of fathers, and shuddered at the prospect of separation, shed real tears at the bare imagination of her indifference; and finally, rising with my subject, assured her that I had ten pounds untouched, and besought her to commit herself to my protection, and elope with me that night. I was too much agitated in the first instance to observe the effect of my pleadings, but I was soon most fearfully enlightened. Imagine my boundless horror, my stupefaction of feeling at hearing her burst into a loud laugh, and seeing her spring from her seat, and dart rapidly out of the bower; I was agonized beyond all description; I rubbed my eyes and my nose, and tried to persuade myself that all that had passed was a dream. Presently my brother came into the arbour, he had an unspeakable grin upon his odious face, but he said nothing, affected to look for some unmissed article, and went out again; next, my father walked slowly past, whistling, as if perfectly indifferent to my movements, but I noticed a quick queer, shrewd, merry-look glance that was not to be misunderstood. The story soon travelled; my acquaintance tried hard not to laugh in my face, and the more they stifled their mirth, the more frightful seemed its occasional ebullitions; and she, the cruel cause of all this misery to me, she married in about a week after this event, a man of thirty, who, as Blackwood says, shaved twice a day," and no doubt entertained him mightily with the pathos of the smooth-chinned boy, who had the presumption to try to supplant him.

This adventure cured me completely of sentiment; I ceased for a time, all attempts to captivate fair ladies, and turned an eye of admiration on myself. At seventeen I was a puppy, a dandy; my dress and appearance the only subjects worthy my contemplation; I detested poetry, the moon, and little children, and generally gave these last a sly pinch or kick, when they had the presumption to expect I should play with them. This state continued a few years; and then, last stage of all, came whiskers, mustachios, love real love, marriage, business, bustle, and twenty nine; here I pause; it would be egotism to say further; my friends alone must decide whether they will be like the man; I think not; so, with the burden of nearly thirty years on my shoulders, all the usual cares of life, and some, perhaps, that are not usual, I take my leave, to fight out the remainder as I may.—Reader—Vale.

Salt.—Mr. Russell, in his tour in Germany, says if the experience of Austrian and Silesia be correct, wood will not burn when fully impregnated with salt. Learned societies have recommended that the wood to be used in roofing should previously be saturated with salt, in which state, they say, it will resist fire as effectually as either slates or tiles will do. Mr. R. says the wood, which supports the vaulted roofs of the salt mines of Wieliczka in Poland, is now as hard as a rock, and he was assured that the dead bodies of animals and men, which remain in the salt caverns, do not putrify, but become as dry and hard as mummies.

Methodist Bishop.—We copy the following paragraph from the Liverpool Advertiser:—"The unassisted establishment of the Methodists seems to be assuming the form of a regular hierarchy. At the conference just ended, it has been determined to appoint three of the leading preachers, as heads of the church, with an Episcopal or overlooking power, similar to that of the Bishops in the early ages of Christianity, but no doubt this new prelacy will acquire and sustain a new portion of worldly dignity. It cannot be indeed expected, that the simplicity and equality which distinguish a sect in its origin, will continue after the society has become numerous and powerful. As the events have rapidly numerous and increasing religious democracy becomes safer in the state, and more stable in itself, by the ordination of a gradation of ranks among its priesthood.—The gentlemen to be invested with this new dignity we are informed, are the Rev. Mr. Bunting, Rev. Mr. Watson, and the Rev, Mr. Newton."

A Female Veteran.—Mary Hyde, now living at Chorlebottoms, in Lancashire, 94 years of age. On Saturday, September 2, she buried the last of her children, in the whole, nineteen sons and one daughter. The day following she said, "Now I have buried all my children, and my two husbands; thanks be to God, I have seen them all removed from sorrow and care, and I am ready to follow." She stated that she lost ten sons in the army and navy. "My eldest boy," she said, "lost his leg in an engagement with De Grasse. He died in the West Indies. I was not 16 when he was born. Two were killed at Guadaloupe, two with Nelson at the Nile—four of my sons were there; two died at Chelsea, one having lost a leg, and the other an arm. One died at Newcastle, in the 69th regiment; another at the same place, on board the Tender; and the 10th took his life in going to Dublin." She was born in Mecklenburgh, and came to England with a Mrs. M'Mullin, when eleven years of age. She says her first husband was in the army, but afterwards became a soldier's wife. She was nine months with him at Gibraltar, and then went to America, and landed at Boston. I was never in the field, (she said,) whilst the battle lasted, but I have been to plunder afterwards. They won't allow them to plunder now as they did in those days; there is a deal of opposition to it now. I can recollect the first field of battle very well. I have reason to recollect it; but one's head cannot contain all—it was above Charlestown. I was wounded there by one of their bush-fighters, who lay concealed. I have been upon many fields besides that, but never was wounded since; my husband received a wound in America, and died afterwards in England. I was with him eight years and three months." This veteran received 18d. per week from the parish of Pendleton, near Manchester. She recently applied for some increase of allowance; but shameful to relate, they threatened to place her in the workhouse.—Birmingham Chronicle.

EMIGRATION MINUTES.

Appendix to Minutes No. 1.

Referred to in Mr. Boulton's evidence, March 20, p. 8.

Extracts from the Reports of the American New-York Canal Commissioners, and other Documents relating to the Erie Canal; published in pursuance of the Act for reporting the Laws and other official Documents relating to the Erie and Champlain Canals; passed February 10th, 1825.

[To render the following Extracts quite intelligible, it is necessary to premise that before the present Grand Erie Canal was begun, two plans were in agitation, the one to connect the waters of the Upper Lakes would, on their passage to the Ocean, come into Ontario, and when there the locksage to the tide waters of the St. Lawrence being only 200 feet, while it is 568 to the tide in the Hudson, there would be danger of the whole Lake trade being diverted to the Port of another Nation (namely, Montreal).

Again.—"It is sufficient to say here, that articles for exportation, when once afloat on Lake Ontario, will, generally speaking, go to Montreal, unless our British neighbours are blind to their own interests; a charge which ought not lightly to be made against a commercial nation.

"Freight from Niagara to Oswego will, from the difficult and dangerous access to the harbour, be as high as per ton as the Rapids be among the Thousand Islands in the River St. Lawrence. The descent from thence to Montreal is less than the ascent from Oswego to Rome. It is true that Lake Ontario is estimated at one hundred and ninety-six feet above the tide water, and the Rome level only one hundred and eighty-four feet above the Lake; but there is a considerable descent in the River St. Lawrence, in a distance of about seventy miles, to the lower end of the present sloop navigation, through which the current is sometimes rapid. There is also a considerable descent from Montreal, in a distance of about thirty miles, to tide-water in the Lake St. Peter's. Perhaps it will be found that an average of a few years (three inches per mile (in the whole, upwards of twenty feet) is not too much, and that the River at Montreal is not one hundred and seventy feet below the upper surface of the Galloo Rapids. Of these events there is, rapidly increasing, and increasing religious democracy becomes safer in the state, and more stable in itself, by the ordination of a gradation of ranks among its priesthood.—The gentlemen to be invested with this new dignity we are informed, are the Rev. are open; and when it is considered that (if the means of easy export be supplied to the inhabitants who may settle near the great Lakes) that country will in no distant period furnish a more abundant stock of commodities for Foreign Trade than is now sent from all the Atlantic Ports of the Union, it would be absurd to doubt whether, in the competition for that commerce, our neighbours will employ the means in their power, nor must it be forgotten that the revenue, which under present circumstances is raised from commerce, and which no probable change can ever have below an adequate duty of ten per cent, cannot but operate in favour of our rivals. True it is, that as far as it regards the pecuniary benefit of those who may settle along the Lakes, the route by which their products are sent abroad, and their supplies of Foreign articles introduced, must be to them a matter of little consequence; but the political connexion which would probably result from a commercial connexion, certainly deserves the consideration of intelligent men.

Again.—"On the superior (that is, to the American Erie Canal) facilities afforded by this River (St. Lawrence) for the transportation of produce, I perfectly agree with the Commissioners, having traversed it twice between Kingston and Montreal, and each time viewed it very attentively. I can therefore assert with confidence, that I know of no existing Navigation, on which so little can be rendered perfect at so small an expense. However, should your noble plan of uniting Lake Erie with the Hudson be carried into effect, you have to fear no rivalry. The commerce of the enormous extent of country bordering on the Upper Lakes, is yours for ever; and to such an incalculable amount as would baffle all conjecture to conceive."

Again.—"That it will be finished (that is, for the Americans to cut a Canal round the falls of Niagara, on their side, and thus unite the waters of Erie and Ontario) may be proved by facts visible to every one who chooses to open his eyes. In the Gazettes of this City are advertised, the rates at which goods will be carried from the Ports of Lake Ontario to Ogdensburgh, and thence to Montreal; the first are lower than have been many times paid from Lewiston and Oswego; the second are fifty-five cents in sows, and eighty-eight cents in boats, for a barrel of flour. Bett to accord Oswego River by Locks, and then, after crossing Wood Creek, to ascend Wood Creek in boats, which for great part of the way must be rowed by men, would it is believed, cost not less than fifty cents per barrel; because if three men bring up thirty barrels in a day, at fifty cents per barrel, they would earn only one dollar per day each, allowing for toll nothing; for delay, while waiting for freight, nothing; for wear and tear of the boat, nothing; and nothing for the return empty, if no freight could be offered.

"Thus it seems probable that produce could not be taken from Oswego to Rome for less than from Ogdensburgh to Montreal; so that the communication which professional men of the country consider as impracticable, unless at an enormous expense wholly disproportionate to the object, but which some gentlemen assume, without examination, to be very simple, may be completed, be of no avail. Instead of drawing to us the trade of our neighbours, it would turn much of our trade to them."

Again.—"When a large vessel from Lake Erie shall have brought her cargo within a small distance of the Cataract, it would be ridiculous to put it on board of small boats, merely to descend by Locks to Lake Ontario, and then put it again on board of large vessels to cross the Lake. It would be equally ridiculous to attempt the transportation on either Lake in small boats. The locks, then, to be of use, must be such as will take up and let down vessels which can navigate the Great Lakes; then are the Locks which the State is desired to make, in the expectation, that after a vessel from the Upper Lakes shall have descended into Ontario, she will stop at the difficult and dangerous Port of Oswego, instead of going on easily and safely to Ogdensburgh. The inventors and abettors of this project may have the best and most patriotic intentions; but their plan, if carried into effect, would increase (by the resources of New York) the wealth of Canada, and the power of Great Britain."

Again—"The Commissioners are of opinion, that the route from Erie to the Seaboard will be the most eligible; and would, moreover, have the most immediate tendency to divert the trade from passing down the Oswego River to Lake Ontario and Montreal, to permit which, to the exclusion of New York, is adduced as a foreign and rival Nation commercial advantages which ours may not enable us to reclaim. The difficulty of diverting the fixed currents of trade is obvious and well known, and the importance of the policy of directing that of the western section of the State to the Hudson is equally evident; and the Commissioners conceive that the present moment, while this section of the State is yet comparatively in its infancy, is most favorable for forming and establishing such connexions between the Lakes and our Atlantic waters as will effectually disappoint the views of our rivals, and promote the honor and advantage of the State."

Again.—"If we were to suppose all the Rivers and Canals in England and Wales combined into one, and discharging into the Ocean at a great City, after passing through the heart of that Country, then we can form a distinct idea of the importance of the projected canal; but it indeed comprehends within its influence a greater extent of territory, which will in time embrace a greater population. If this work be so important when we confine our views to this State alone, how unspeakably beneficial must it appear when we extend our contemplations to the great Lakes, and the country affiliated with them! Waters extending two thousand miles from the beginning of the Canal, and a Country containing more territory than all Great Britain and Ireland, and at least as much as France."

Again.—"As the Upper Lakes have no important outlet but into Lake Erie, we are warranted in saying that all their trade must be auxiliary to its trade, and that a favorable communication by water from Buffalo will render New-York the great depôt and warehouse of the western world."

The same may be said of Montreal with additional force, when the Welland Canal is finished.

Again.—"The most serious objection against the Ontario route (that is, the route by which the Lakes Erie and Ontario would be connected, which is effected by the Welland Canal) is, that it will inevitably enrich the territory of a Foreign Power at the expense of the United States. If a Canal is cut around the Falls of Niagara, and no countervailing or counteracting system is adopted in relation to Lake Erie, the Commerce of the West is lost to us for ever. When a vessel once descends into Ontario, she will pursue the course ordained by nature. The British Government are fully aware of this, and are now taking the most active measures to facilitate the passage down the St. Lawrence.

"It is not to be concealed that a great proportion of the productions of our western Country are now transported to Montreal, even with all the inconveniencies attending the navigation down the Seneca and Oswego Rivers; but if this route is improved in the way proposed, and the other not opened, the transportation will be almost entirely lost. A barrel of flour is now transported from Cayuga Lake to Montreal, for $1 50, and it cannot be conveyed to Albany for less than $2 50. This simple fact speaks a volume of admonition to mankind."

Again.—"In general it may be observed, that the difference between a single and double freight forms an immense saving. Goods are brought from Europe for twenty cents per cubic foot; whereas the freight from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia is equal to ten cents. This shews how far articles, once embarked, are conveyed with a very small addition of freight; and if such is the difference between a single and double carriage, how much greater must it be in the case under consideration?"

Speaking of the importance of their own Canal from New-York, as a means of easy transport, they infer that it will tend to prevent smuggling from Canada, and to secure the revenue of the State.

That, "it is with inconceivable regret we record the well known fact, that Merchandize from Montreal has been sold to an alarming extent on our borders, for 16 per cent below the New-York prices."

Again.—"The immense Forests which have been entertained of a dismemberment of the Union by collision between the North and the South, it is to be apprehended that the most imminent danger lies in another direction, and that a line of separations may be eventually drawn between the Atlantic and the Western States, unless they are cemented by a common, an ever acting, and a powerful bond. The navigation of the Ocean, and the Trade of the Lakes, passing through one channel, supplying the wants, increasing the wealth, and reciprocating the benefits of each great section of the Empire, will form an indissoluble cement of connexion, and an indissoluble bond of union. New-York is both Atlantic and Western, and the only State in which this union of interest can be preserved and perpetuated; and upon which this great centripetal power can be energetically applied.—Standing on this exalted eminence, with power to prevent a train of the most extensive and afflicting calamities that ever befell a country (for such a train will inevitably follow a dissolution of the Union) she will justly be considered an enemy to the human race, if she does not exert for this purpose the high faculties which Almighty has given her hands."

Apply these suggestions to Montreal, which, by the improvements in the St. Lawrence and the Welland Canal, must become the Port of these vast Countries, in spite of the advantages possessed by New-York.

Again.—"But considerations of a political nature seem to us most urgently to recommend the construction of these Canals. The great influence exercised over the Western Indians, even in our own territory, by the subjects of a Foreign Government, we have always had numerous reasons to wish destroyed: this influence depends materially upon establishments which the former have formed at the Port of Trade. Any measure that would open, between one of our sea-ports and the region where Furs are collected, a road in all respects preferable to any which they have yet known, would, in a few seasons, prostrate the whole of that establishment, and, by the subversion of that influence, and in the mean time offer to us important facilities for controlling it.

"The Trade of the Province of Upper Canada and the Canadian Provinces is already considerable, and is rapidly growing. The fruits of the earth, from the Southern shores of Erie and Ontario, and from the Western parts of Canada, find their way to the Ports of our Northern neighbours cheaper than they can to any which offers a market of our own, and are there exchanged for the various commodities of Foreign Countries. This Trade is indeed profitable to many of our citizens who engage in it, but it is much more so to the British. Subject to their control, they direct it to the advancement of all their public interests, and it is no mean instrument of that advancement; it is evidently the vital spirit of their internal navigation, which it cannot fail to exalt into a consequence that may hereafter greatly affect us. Would not the prosecution of our projects to complete effect result immediately in giving to the citizens of the United States the entire profits of this Trade, and to Government all which they now derive from it?"

SUMMARY.

Lord Wellesley.—We can state on very high authority, that there was no foundation whatever for the late rumour, that a change was about to take place in the Lieutenancy of Ireland. —Dublin Morning Register.

Bolivar.—The Peruvians, we learn, are very much dissatisfied with the Liberator, Gen. Bolivar, and look upon his conduct and movements with a jealous eye; and that many of the well-informed in that country believe that his views are to engross the whole of the state in his own hands.

Broom hints to City Sportsmen.—If there are three of you, be sure to hire a post chaise, as it cuts a dash and comes cheap. By all means have it painted, and be sure to put on a quarter of a yard on each side of the chaise, and in front, to show all the people on the road that you are sportsmen.

On no account begin shooting for game before you get to Bunkney, Camberwell, Kentish Town, Mile End, top of Kent-street Road, or any place of equal distance from town.

Take care you do not shoot a sheep or a cow instead of the bird you take aim at.

The guns of least repute among common sportsmen are the best, those that Scatter their shot the widest, as there is more chance of hitting them—if one, as the saying is, won't the other will.

There is nothing like a sure shot, many a bird has been missed by firing hastily at too great a distance; but be sure to put in a large shot piece close to his head, thus the body is not torn.

Taking aim with both eyes shut is not so good a method as with both open, as cunning birds have been known to take advantage of the moment and fly away.

In choice of dogs, that species of the Spaniel called the Spitalfields hie-away is to be preferred, as he will hunt every kennel as well as ditch, and run over most ground.

Patridge Shooting Extraordinary.—We understand that three crack shots of this town killed, on Friday last, one hundred and ninety four brace of birds! a sufficient proof that there is no lack of game in the County of Dorset.—Dorset Chronicle.

As a proof of the abundance of game in the Isle of Arran this season, Ld. Fincastle, the Hon. C. Murray, his brother, and two friends, have, in nine days, averaging not more than four hours shooting each day, killed 250 brace of grouse and cocks. One of the gentlemen shot only on four days.—Glasgow Courier.

The Potatoe Crop.—The following is an extract from a letter, which was received on Saturday last by a clergyman of this town, from a respectable gentleman in the county of Galway, Ireland :—

"The most perfect tranquility prevails throughout this county. The potatoe, the peasant's food, will, it is thought, prove a full crop, and the price at which it sells at market now is not very dear—from 3d. to 4d. per stone of 16lbs."—Leeds Intelligencer.

Dr. Stephens, of Southfield, is spoken of as very likely to be appointed to the vacant Bishopric of Calcutta.

It is said that General Lord Lynedock, G. C. B. will be appointed to the 14th Foot, vice General Sir Harry Calvert, Baronet, deceased; that Major General Lord Frederick Bentinck will obtain the Colonelcy of the 56th Foot, Lord Lynedock, appointed to the 14th Foot, and that Lieutenant General Sir Alexander Hope, G. C. B. and M. P. will succeed the late General Sir Harry Calvert, as Lieutenant Governor of Chelsea Hospital.

The statue and ornaments intended for General Picton's monument are shipped, and are now on the way to Carmarthen. The monument having attained its greatest height, was last week stripped of its scaffolding, and its proportions shows to great advantage. When surmounted by the statute of the General, upwards of eight feet high, and ornamented with relievos, military trophies, &c. its effect will be grand and imposing.

Yesterday afternoon, between five and six o'clock, a girl about twelve years of age fell into the Clyde at the new Quay, Broomielaw, and would inevitably have been drowned, had it not been for the exertions of John Wilson, ship carpenter, who plunged into the water with his clothes on, and succeeded in bringing her safe to land. This young man was the carpenter on board the Frances and Mary, from St. John's N. B. for Liverpool, who was picked off the wreck, with seven others, the 7th March last, (after subsisting on the bodies of their companions for eighteen days) off the banks of Newfoundland, by His Majesty's ship Blonde, commanded by Lord Byron.

Some material alteration, we hear, has been determined on, so as to render the militia effective; a part of them, it is said, will remain constantly embodied, from which the regular army is to be kept complete, by allowing a portion of the militia to enlist therein annually; which will obviate the present mode of recruiting the army, and prevent the numerous illegal enlistments of militia men which now takes place into the line.—Caledonian Mercury.

The Directors of the East India Company have generously granted a pension of £50 per annum to Mrs. J. Brown, (now in indigent circumstances,) mother of the late Captain Brown of the 81st regiment native infantry, who fell in the assault of Bhurtpore, in the East Indies, in January last. Mrs. Brown resides at Montrose, of which place Captain Brown was a native.

The brig Betsy Caines, which arrived in Lieth harbour from Drontheim, with a cargo of deals, on the 14th instant, is the identical vessel which brought over King William, of glorious memory, from Holland, 137 years ago. The Betsy Caines was at the memorable era a royal yacht, and is now probably the oldest vessel in existence.

Transmission of sound.—' The extreme facility with which sounds are heard at a considerable distance, in severely cold weather, has often been a subject of remark; but a circumstance occurred at Port Hoven, which deserves to be noticed, as affording a sort of measure of this facility, or at least of conveying to others some definite idea of the fact. Lieut. Foster having occasion to send a man from the observatory to the opposite shore of the harbour, a measured distance of 6,696 feet or about one statute mile and two tenths, in order to fix a meridian mark, had placed a person half-way between, to repeat his directions; but he found on trial that this precaution was unnecessary, as he could, without difficulty, keep up a conversation with the man at the distant station.'—Parry's Voyages.

Lord Cochrane was at Messina on the 20th August where he had been for some time incog, under the name of Mr. Blair, waiting for steam vessels from England. His private secretary had gone to Malta, to discover the feelings of the government and what forces they had. He intends, if he operates against the Turks, to run a small cutter between Malta and his cruizing ports.

Com. Hamilton was at Tinos on the 24th July, with an Englishman on board, sent to search for British pirates. The Cambrian's had seized two small private vessels.

A detachment belonging to the Royal Staff Corps, under the command of Major H. De Vernet, has received orders to embark, for conveyance to Quebec.

ENGLAND.

Singular and Affecting Instance of Remorse.—On Saturday, the 26th of Aug. at Malverton, in the County of Somerset, an upper servant in a large and very respectable Ladies' Boarding School, became violently agitated, from some unknown cause, and under its oppressive influence, was heard to reproach herself in the most sorrowful terms, for the worthless and sinful life she had been pursuing. Some secret which she dreaded to divulge was evidently preying on her mind, and at length produced a degree of mental aboration, during which some expressions escaped her, which revealed her implication in a long-continued system of robbery, committed on the property of both her mistress and the pupils. It seems that the young ladies had, in a most unaccountable manner, from time to time, missed their silver thimbles, scissors and other articles, and upon searching the servant's trunks, these were found in a most extraordinary quantity, together with other purloined property. The girl's frenzy continued to increase, until it reached the crisis of raving madness, and at the end of ten days after her removal to the house of her father, who is a humble and industrious man at Fitzhead, the unhappy maniac expired! During the few lucid intervals she experienced, she solemnly cautioned those around against the commission of dishonesty, and implored them to profit by the dreadful lesson her unhappy condition presented. Her two fellow servants have been committed to Ilminster jail for trial.

The Globe of the 20th states, that it was reported that Mr. Canning, while in Paris, would attempt to arrange a commercial treaty between the two countries, and that, though the efforts of Mr. Huskisson on this subject were unavailing, yet the chances were rather in favour of Mr. C's. mission as he went armed with high authority.

Mexico Bonds have risen in England, to about 65.—It is said that agents of the Government of Buenos Ayres, are endeavouring to make proposals to obtain a loan of 15,000,000 dollars in London. From the redundance of money unappropriated, it was thought they might succeed.

In the Philosophical Transactions which have just been published, there is an interesting case recorded of a lady who had been born blind, receiving her sight, after she had entered on her 47th year. Mr. Wardrop operated upon her on the 26th of January, and the 8th and 17th of February, with complete success. From this period till the time of her leaving London, on the 31st of March, being 42 days after the operation, she had acquired a pretty accurate notion of colours, their different shades and names.

The village of Ryton, near Coventry, was thrown into a state of great agitation on Thursday week, by a most tragical event that of a father shooting his own son. The perpetrator of this unnatural crime is Mr. Eburne, a respectable farmer and miller, of Ryton, and the victim was Francis, a son, about twenty years of age, and much esteemed by his neighbours and friends. The melancholy circumstance took place about half-past nine o'clock at night, in the house of Mr. Eburne, and the young man lingered in much agony till Saturday night, when he expired. An inquest was held on the body of the deceased on the following Monday, when it appeared that, on the day on which the shocking event happened, young Eburne had been at Warwick races, on horseback, and, on his return home in the evening, passed his father on the road, but did not speak to him. When Mr. Eburne, sen. reached home, his son was in the stable, cleaning his horse: shortly afterwards the young man came into the house, and his father instantly ordered him to go out. A quarrel ensued. The father struck and kicked his son several times, when the latter struck his father with considerable violence on the ears and nose. Mr. Eburne, sen. then fetched a loaded gun, and discharged the contents at the unfortunate young man, who immediately fell to the ground. A verdict of "wilful murder" was returned against the father of the deceased, who surrendered himself before the jury separated, and was committed, under the coroner's warrant, to Warwick gaol, to await his trial at the next assizes.

On Tuesday a route was received in Enniskillen by the 73th Regiment for a division to march on Friday last for Westport, Newport, Foxford, Killalla, Crosmolina Ballina and Ballycastle to relieve detachments of the 10th Regiment quartered in those places and now under orders for foreign service—we believe the Cape of Good Hope. The head quarters division will march for Castlebar after the arrival of the 62d Regiment in Enniskillen from Derry, which is expected on Wednesday next.—Cork Paper, Sept. 18.

On Monday morning, about five o'clock, a detachment of Royal Engineers left Woolwich, and proceeded to the British Museum, for the purpose of removing the magnificent remains of antique capitals, columns, &c. which have lain so long neglected in the Court-Yard, to Windsor, in order to form of them a representation of an ancient Temple in ruins. The detachments, consisting of forty men, arrived at the Museum about half past nine; they succeeded in removing three columns, one of which was understood to weigh 7 tons 13 cwt; and it was drawn by 12 horses, which left at half past one o'clock proceeded to Hounslow, and from thence to Windsor. It is expected it will take six weeks to complete the removal of the whole. —ib.

SCOTLAND.

On Sunday afternoon last, during the thunder storm, which passed over Edinburgh, a number of little casualties took place, which in many instances awakened emotions in the spectators not very accordant with the solemnity of the visitation or the sanctity of the day. It happened very unfortunately, that the electric cloud hovered directly over the city immediately at the conclusion of the afternoon's service. The rain at this time fell in torrents, and as soon as the churches and chapels had dismissed their several congregations—'ah! then there was hurrying to and fro," and a terrible commotion ensued. The dandies looked aghast, and so did the dowdyetts. Men, women, and children, were seen flying in all directions to seek refuge from "the peltings of the pitiless rain," while itinerating hats and balloonish umbrellas, career'd on the wings of the gale! But the most imposing exhibition of all, took place at the College Kirk, at the foot of Leith Wynd. The congregation assembled there, and wisely determined on keeping their seats till the plump had slackened its severity. The sun at length broke through the cloud, and the grave assembly opined to disperse. But, well-a-day! on coming to the threshold of the Kirk, their astonishment may easily be imagined, in finding the area in front of the doors completely flooded, and that except by wading nearly knee-deep, there appeared no other practicable method of egress from the sanctuary. Necessity, however, is the mother of invention, and with the help of a few planks, chairs, stools, &c. a bridge was speedily constructed over the waters, by means of which, part of the worshippers were enabled to pass from the Kirk to the opposite shore. To expedite the release of those still in durance, a ladder was procured, and placed to one of the windows on the south of the building, by which a number more made their emancipation. Had this novel method of getting out been adopted at getting in to the Kirk, we fear the honest hearers might have fallen under the stigma of "thieves and robbers." As it is, however, the verius virtuoso can identify them with no such characters, for we heard a felicitous youth at the bottom of the ladder compliment the descent (at least of the fair sex) in a very different style—"Strike me beautiful!" exclaimed the gallant swain, "they are like angels emerging from a cloud!" We are happy to add, that by five o'clock, the whole of the good people were once more secured on terra firma, and well pleased, no doubt, with their escape from a dilemma, that at least, looked ominous to an elegant flounce, and boded no good to "Warren's jet."—Scotsman.

The Scotch Episcopalians.—We understand that there has been for some time in agitation, amongst the influential members of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, a plan of erecting an Episcopal College in this city (Edinburgh), where a course of study, similar to that pursued in the English universities, will be adopted. At a convocation of the bishops, which was held here lately, the subject was taken into consideration, and measures, we believe, are now in progress for the establishment of an institution, which cannot fail of diffusing amongst the Episcopalians in Scotland, more accurate knowledge of the principles of the Apostolic church to which they belong.—Edinburgh Observer.

State of Trade in Glasgow.—The demand for our manufactured goods of all descriptions is rather on the increase, corresponding to the general tone of the country; but prices in most cases remain stationary.

It gives us pleasure to state that the iron trade of Scotland is rather on the ameliorate. The stock of some works has materially decreased of late; and as there is every prospect of a better demand the manufacture of iron is going on with increased briskness. The export to Ireland has lately been considerable.

We have heard that the duty on printed cotton goods will be repealed at an early period after the meeting of Parliament.—Glasgow Courier.

There are about 1500 quarters of oats in bond at Glasgow, deliverable under the late proclamation; but there are no peas, beans, nor rye. The duty on potatoes imported is 2s. per cwt.

The Crops in Scotland.—In the parish of Lesmahagow, the crops are cut down, and a great proportion got into the stack yard. The oldest farmer living in that part of the country does not recollect of a year in which the harvest has been in so forward a state. At Anchinlochan, the seat of John Brown, Esq. all the different kinds of grain were cut down in the month of July. The oats are good in quality, but very light. We have an excellent crop. Potatoes at one time threatened a complete failure; but, since the late rains, they have so much improved that they will be reckoned a middling crop. They are selling at from £16 to £20 an acre. The pastures, that were so much burnt up as to cause a reduction of one-third in the quantity of milk, have also greatly improved of late by the plenteous rains.

The Lord Provost and Magistrates of Glasgow have placed the liberal sum of fifty pounds at the disposal of the Committee of the Highland Society, of Scotland, to be awarded as extra premiums at the great show of live stock in that city, on the 27th inst.

Trade has considerably revived at Glasgow and in other towns. A cotton work in Renfrewshire, which was valued by competent persons in July last at £11,000, was offered at public sale in September, at Paisley, he "upset price" of £11,500, and after keen competition, was sold at £14,500.

Foreign Intelligence.

A letter from Moscow of the 4th, said to be from a person who has access to the best information, contains the following paragraph: —"The Emperor shows a disposition to deviate very much from the European policy of his defunct brother, wishing thereby to become popular, and to nationalize himself as much as possible. The storm that menaced on the side of Turkey is not yet dissipated, and another is rising on the side of Persia. If the first is to take effect, a great expulsion will follow; as in that event the Emperor is to head the army, and push quickly the contest to an end. Here every body seems to think success a very easy matter; but I am not of that opinion, and believe that such an expedition will meet the fate of former ones directed to the same purpose."

Official accounts have been received at St. Petersburgh, that the Persians have made irruptions into several parts of Russia.

Through a private and most respectable source of information, in the Persian capital, we learn that the Persians have actually resolved to embark in a war against Russia, and that the Prince of Persia had left the capital, with a large military force, to proceed to the Russian frontier. The Russian force in that quarter amounts to upwards of 80,000 men, under the command of one of the bravest and best of her Generals (Yermaloff), a force, we conceive, sufficient to sweep the Tigres and the Araxes, of any force which may venture to attack or oppose them, and to plant, in a few months, the Russian standards in Teheran.—Glasgow Courier.

A letter from Amsterdam dated the 11th of September, states that since the intelligence had been received that England had opened her ports for foreign grain, and would probably draw from foreign countries 3,000,000 quarters of oats 2,000,000 of rye, and 1,000,000, of barley, the price of grain has risen cent per cent. in most parts of Germany. The crop, with the exception of oats not having been abundant, either in Germany, Poland, or Russia, it is thought that England must employ a capital of at least a hundred millions of francs for the purchase of foreign grain, and that in consequence of this the continent will return a part of the sum in the purchase of English merchandise, which must necessarily give a new impulse to the manufactures of Great Britain.

Accommodating Jailor.—The police have just arrested at Bordeaux, a fugitive galley convict whose history represents something remarkable. He had been jailor of the prison of Poitiers, at which time he frequently made noctural excursions with the prisoners in custody, for the purpose of committing robberies. —At length, the good jailor was taken in the act with some of his boarders, and condemned to the gallies for 20 years.

LATEST FROM FRANCE.

The differences between Russia and Persia assume a delicate aspect. It seems that the Persians, without any previous indications of hostility, had made an incursion in Russia with 10,000 men, and burned several villages and carried off a number of persons. Many of the Persian soldiers were dressed in English uniforms. A further report adds, that the war has been pushed on by foreign influence, and that 200,000 Russians, commanded by English and French officers, were on their march to the Russian frontiers.

It is said, by the last advices from Constantople, that Col. Fabvier had driven the Turks from Athens, and opened a communication with Negos and Napoli. A grand national Assembly was to have been held on the 12th Sept. in the Morea.—Lord Cochrane had not arrived. Ibrahim Pacha was at Mistra with a reinforcement of 4000 Arabs. No news of the Turkish fleet since it was defeated at Samos. Colocotroni is every where raising troops to attack Ibrahim before Tripolitza. It appears to be admitted, that if the Greeks will act in concert, the Turks must be defeated.

Much trouble and disaffection towards Portugal is evinced by the Spanish Cabinet.

A great destructive fire broke out at Constantinople on the 31st of August, in the neighborhood of the Seraglio, which continued to rage on the 3d of September, the latest date. It commenced in a baker's shop, and was supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

We find it stated in a letter from Paris, that it is reported in the political circles of the French capital, that the Emperor of Russia has addressed a circular to the several Cabinets of Europe, protesting against the proposed levy of 30,000 men by the Turkish Sultan. The report state that the Emperor declares the existence of such a Turkish force, trained in the European tactics, inconsistent with the rules laid down at the conclusion of the war, by the Allied Powers, and incompatible with the safety of countries situated nearest to Russia.

GREECE.

We have but little to add to our former intelligence on the affairs of Greece, but we think that appearances are more favourable.

The French papers of the 19th Sept. contain some intelligence from Greece, communicated by a French Volunteer, the Count d'Harcourt, and highly cheering to the Christian cause.

Athens is closely blockaded by the Turks, but they have no artillery to act against the citadel. Ibrahim has marched from Tripolitza towards the plains of Corinth. A small party of Arab foragers have been surrounded and made prisoners by the Greeks.

UNITED STATES.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 21.

STEAM NAVIGATION IN THE WINTER.—Capt. Ward proposes to connect his newly invented apparatus to Steam-Boats, for the purpose of navigating our rivers during the winter season, by cutting a passage through the ice. The bows of the boat are to be defended by a frame-work of timber, which will come in contact with the floating masses, while several large circular saws, seven feet in diameter, with heavy hammers, all worked by a steam engine, will cut and break the ice ahead, and open a way of more than sufficient width to admit it. It is needless to say, that if this invention should prove successful, even so far as to render the Hudson river navigable for four, three, or two months longer than it is at present, it would prove of great advantage to the city, and to those who adopt the plan. The model has received the approbation of experienced men.—D. Adv.

It is a striking illustration of the decay of the commercial marine of Spain, that since 1819 not a single Spannish ship has passed the Sound. The number of British that passed last year was 5186.—N. Y. Paper.

Nearly double the fodder is, every year, and by almost every farmer, expended than would be sufficient, was it properly and economically prepared and fed.

It is ascertained that Hay goes much farther by being cut into Chaff before it is foddered out. Many scientific and observing men have ascertained by actual measurement, that a saving of nearly one half, and some say more, is effected by this means.

But if it be not true that Hay is doubled in value by cutting, it cannot be denied that in applying this economy properly to the coarser kind of fodder, such as straw, cornstalks, outs in the sheaf, &c. a saving of one half, at least, may be made—Ver. Pat.

The Alexandria Herald states, that a young gentleman in this place, has, in possession, a Journal, which Washington kept of his life from the time he entered the public service till he was taken sick.

Remarkable Preservation.—A log house in the town of Lebanon, New York, was blown down on the 27th ult. in which were Mr. Littlefield, his wife and a child, who were asleep when a gust struck the house, and carried the whole away down to the third log from the foundation. Some of the logs passed over the bed others fell in every direction round it, not even sparing the bedstead, and its occupants were unhurt. The greatest part of the furniture was carried away. The tornado extended but a short distance.—Hamilton Recorder.

WOOLLENS.

A meeting of the Manufacturers of woollens has recently been held at Boston. The Courier states that the subject which occupied the attention of the meeting was the present depressed condition of the woollen manufacturers of the country. "The causes that have operated to produce the extraordinary depression that prevails among the class of manufacturers, were stated and explained by several gentlemen who addressed the meeting; and a proposition to apply to Congress for an increase of duties on foreign woollens was supported, as the only means that afforded a prospect of relief calculated to place this branch of industry on a sure and permanent foundation It was voted unanimously, as the sense of the meeting, that the best interests of the community require, and that it would be sound policy in the government to afford additional protection to the woollen manufacturers of the country. It was also voted that it is expedient to apply to Congress at their next session for an increase of duties on foreign woollens, or for a reduction of duty upon foreign wool."

COLONIAL.

St. John's, Newfoundland, Sept. 26.

FIRE.—A most destructive fire broke out in the King's road, about two o'clock this morning, which consumed six or seven houses (in which resided about fourteen families) before its ravages could be effectually got under.

College of New Brunswick.—On the 15th Sept. the corner-stone of the College of New Brunswick was laid with much solemnity at the capital of the sister Province. Upon the stone there was engraved an appropriate inscription, in Latin, prepared by the Rev. B. G. Gray, Rector of St. John. His Excellency Sir Howard Douglas delivered an excellent address, in which he took occasion to state the object of the Institution and the principles of its management. The President and other Professors must be of the established Church of England, but it is to be open to students of all sects and denominations; and no tests are to be exacted either at matriculation or graduation except when application is made for Degrees in Divinity.

From the Kingston, (Jam.) Public Advertiser, Sept. 25.—We do not anticipate any great evils to arise from the consequences of the British Order in Council. It will bear hardest upon the Americans, and bring them to a conviction of the necessity of entire reciprocity. It will benefit the Trade of Ireland and the British Colonies in North America, and great advantage will accrue to the British manufacturers.

This country will be under the necessity of paying a higher price for American produce; but this good will ensue, that the produce of the country, its plantations, its cocoas, and its yams, will be more attended to, and the country not left dependent upon a foreign nation for the staff of life.

This expected prohibition will give life to all the speculators in American produce, some of whom were trotting about nimbly yesterday, looking for sellers who had not heard of the news.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New Invention.—A patent has been granted to Justin Jacob, of Montreal, for the invention of a new engine for propelling the machinery of mills, &c. The moving power is a perpendicular lever hung like a pendulum, the vibrations of which move a pair of hands to and fro upon a rag wheel, by which the labour of two men is sufficient for propelling the machinery to any use required. A model of the same is now lodged in the Provincial Secretary's Office.—Old Quebec Gazette.

Ordination.—An ordination was held on Wednesday the 1st inst. being All Saint's Day, by the Lord Bishop of Quebec assisted by the venerable Archdeacon Mountain, in the Cathedral church of that city, at which Mr. William Arnold was admitted to the order of Deacon.

Mr. Arnold, we understand, is appointed to the important mission of Gaspe.—Kingston Chronicle.

His Excellency Governor Reidy, we are informed, had intended to leave England in the Thalia, arrived here but was unable to make his arrangements sufficiently early for her sailing. He and his family were to leave London early in the month of September in the ship Mary, which would proceed from the Thames direct to Charlotte town.—Nova Scotian.

Free Warehousing Ports.—Lord Bathurst, in a letter to Major General Nicolay, Gov. of Dominica, states that various applications for the extension of the privileges of Free Warehousing ports from that and other Colonies in the West Indies, have been referred to the Lords Commissioners of Privy Council for Trade; who will suspend their decision respecting the Ports, until they shall have received the Report of an Officer who has been sent out to enquire into their comparative eligibility for Warehousing Ports The letter is dated May 24th 1826.—Journal.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER, 18, 1826.

We have no later news from Europe to lay before our readers, than was contained in our last number.

We are indebted to the politeness of a friend, for the appendix to the minutes of evidence, before the Committee of the House of Commons, on Emigration, connected with the subject of Canada. This appendix, consists of extracts from the Report of the American Commissioners, submitted, previous to the commencement of the Erie Canal, and from these it will be seen, that the superior advantages which Canada presents for a communication to the Ocean, were at that time, duly appreciated by our neighbours. We have now every prospect, that we shall before long, reap their full benefit, as the Government is actively employed, in developing the great natural resources of the country, and using the most efficient measures for ensuring to us, all the advantages of which they are susceptible.

The Welland and Rideau Canals, constructed on a scale sufficiently extensive, to admit vessels of the same tonnage, as usually navigate the Great Lakes, will afford a communication for the purposes of Commerce, unequalled as to distance, by any country in the world. For more than a thousand miles, this route will present an uninterrupted navigation, flowing through a rich and fertile country, and the completion of these, and other works of magnitude now in progress, as well for the security, as the prosperity of the country, will no doubt afford additional inducements for emigration to Canada, and give a rapid increase to our population.

The sum of Money employed on these public works, will create a demand for the produce of the country, in consequence of which, the Farmer will find a better market than heretofore, and the large sums of money which will be expended, will have the effect of giving increased activity to the Trade of the country.

A late American paper, speaking of the Erie and Welland Canals, as rival avenues from Lake Erie to the Atlantic, expresses its opinion, that the subject is one, which should be seriously considered by the Legislature of the State of New-York, and thinks it may be advisable, in order to counteract the threatened new destination, of the produce of the West, to lighten the tolls upon heavy articles, passing on the Western, and Middle Section, of the Erie Canal, towards tide water. The lessening the dues on the Erie Canal, will however have little effect in drawing Commerce to it, in preference to the Canada route, because the objection of reshipments will still remain, which will be completely obviated, by the size of our Canals. The Welland, being intended for a sloop navigation, and the Government having decided, on making the Rideau Canal of the same dimensions, a cargo of goods or produce once shipped, will be conveyed to its destination, without the necessity of breaking bulk, at any intermediate place. This will more than counterbalance any advantage which may be offered, by lightening the tolls on the Erie Canal, and in this respect, we are inclined to think, that it is not at all probable that the tolls on our Canals, are likely to be any higher, if as high, as those on the American side. The greater part of the route, being cut by Government, as a national improvement, and more with a view to promote the settlement and commerce of the country, than from any consideration of it being a lucrative speculation, in a competition of low tolls, it is evident that the advantage will be on our side. The Welland Canal affording the only communication into Lake Ontario, must command the Commerce of the Upper Lakes, and once afloat on Lake Ontario, its destination to the Montreal markets may be considered as certain. These causes, operating so strongly, against the future prosperity of the Erie Canal, may account for the policy of the State of New-York, adopted by the general Government, in claiming a right to the Navigation of the St. Lawrence, through Canada, to the Ocean.

We are informed that the Engineer and Contractors of the Welland Canal, are preparing a Report, showing the progress of the work, during the last season. We have no doubt it will be satisfactory, and it will afford us much pleasure, to communicate its contents to the public.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, Lady Sarah Maitland and family, arrived here on Thursday last from Stamford, and have taken up their residence for the Winter Season, in the Government House.

At the latest dates the Steam Boat Niagara was still aground. The greatest exertions are making by Capt. Mosier to get her off. The weather has been tempestuous, but we are happy to hear that the Niagara has not received any material injury.

From an extract in this days Paper, it will be seen that a Detachment of the Royal Staff Corps, under the Command of a Major, is ordered to Quebec. This Detachment it is probable will be employed on the Rideau Canal. From the great preparations which are making, and the number of Officers sent out, to superintend the construction of public works, we may anticipate that the ensuing season, will be one of particular interest, throughout Canada.

The Catholic Bishop of Upper Canada, The Rt. Rev. Mr. McDonald, arrived in Town on Sunday last, and we are informed intends spending some time in York.

COMMUNICATION.

Communicated by a Lady for an insertion in the U. E. Loyalist.

Jonathan Walton, Esquire, of Schenectady (with that spirit of liberality which so eminently distinguishes him) has presented to the Episcopal Church at Port Hope, a fine mellow-ton'd Bell, of a size adapted to the use of that sacred Edifice. The value of this acceptable present is much enhanced from the consideration of its being entirely an act of disinterested munificence; the generous donor having long since disposed of his property in this Village and the adjacent Country.

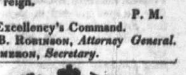
PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councellors, of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights Citizens, and Burgesses of our said Province; to our Provincial Parliament at our Town of York on Monday the Thirtieth day of October inst. to be Commenced, Held, Called, and Elected, and to every of you

GREETING



WHEREAS by our Proclamation bearing date the Twenty-fifth day of September last, we thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament to the Thirtieth day of October instant, at which time, at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear.

NOW KNOW YE, that we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you that on Tuesday the Fifth day of December next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, FOR THE ACTUAL DESPATCH OF PUBLIC BUSINESS, there to take into consideration the state and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary, and herein fail not.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-first day of October in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the occurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. Executive Council Office,
York, 23rd March, 1826.

NOTICE is hereby given, by Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.
No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2. All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands alreaday Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

The U. E. Loyalist.

VOL. I. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1826. NO 26.

POETRY.

ORIGINAL.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

Lines on the death of GEORGE ENGLAND LEONARD, only son of Major Richard Leonard of Drummond-Hill, Niagara Falls, who was drowned in the Chippawa River, on Saturday, July 8, 1826.

The boy has quitted his peaceful home,
That home he sho[illegible] see no more! [his lips.
There is bloom o[illegible]n cheeks, there are smiles on
As he bounds from the cottage door.
Light is his heart, and his spirit is high,
And his step is light as he goes:
Who would think that there, so young and so fair,
Would be cold, ere the evenings close!

In a treacherous bark he has left the shore,
For the boy is fearless and brave,
He is gone, he is gone, he is seen no more;
He is sunk in a watery grave!

Ah! who will comfort his Father now
That his hope and his pride are gone;
And who will speak peace to his Mother's grief,
For he was their only son.

His bloom is fled—and his lightsome step;
And his cheek is pale and fair—
And his bright eyes are clos'd—and his lips are blue,
But their smile still lingers there.

And is it all over—so soon, so soon;
Has that bright yo[illegible]rit fled,
And has that form, [illegible] and so lov'd,
Gone down to the silent dead.

Yes, that form so lov'd, reposes in death,
And that spirit has fled away
To a happier world and a better home,
In the realms of eternal day.

Shall they not be [illegible]rs of joy that flow
For a child so early bless'd;
Shall the Mother who lov'd him lament that so soon
He has enter'd his Father's rest.

Oh no, there is comfort for those who mourn,
And it whispers to him who weepeth,
Lament not as one without hope, for "Lo!
"The child is not dead, but sleepeth."

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LAST COFFIN.

FROM THE GERMAN.

The watchman upon the turret had cried the midnight hour; the heavens shone in all their starry splendour; and the ground glittered with myriads of brilliant specks. Every sound of living breath seemed benumbed by the frost, and every murmur that arose from the sleeping city was borne away upon the blast. Fearfully now resounded the footsteps of the sentinels, as, muffled up in their long white cloaks, and high black caps, they wandered to and fro, with measured pace, like spirits of the departed.

Lo! an aged prince passes through the postern gate of his castle into the neighbouring park. His faithful attendants, who have watched his steps for a period exceeding the usual span of mortality, would fain implore their lord to screen his hoary head, now that the last branch of his royal house is withered; but the earnestness of death darkens the king's countenance,—silently they bow their heads before him, for their lips refuse their office, and they follow him sorrowfully with their eyes.

With impetuous haste the frozen prince totters through the glittering evergreens. He feels not the cold, nor the frosty breath of the wind that tosses the few scanty, grey locks upon his bare head. He thought he would ascend to the destiny that seizes with icy hand upon his trembling heart.

He has arrived at the verge of his park, near the humble dwellings of his workpeople in the employment of the court.—He stands still,—Oh Fate! though shouldst have spared me my one, last, solitary child!" sighed he. "Oh, happier than thy country's prince art thou, humble artisan, even though thou wakest amid thy sleeping little ones with care, because thou hast not wherewithal to satisfy their hunger on the morrow! Thou livest among them in them—but with me, my whole race descend into the grave."

He advanced a few steps forward; a noise met his ear; it was the grating sound of a saw.

"Who works so much beyond the midnight hour? Doubtless," continued he, replying to himself, "it is the coffin-maker, preparing his coffin. Man! thou might'st become rich, if now thou madest him a cradle."

He had approached nearer to the house whence the sounds proceeded; when the sawing ceased, and he distinguished the tones of a deep male voice. It was an old strange melody, harsh and monotonous as the words which grated on his ear.—

The fiend of death has seized his bow,
His shaft unerring flies—
No power of strength can ward the blow:
The mighty mortal dies!

Ye powers of craft and malice, ho!
Your murderous deeds proclaim—
Malice has wrought its owner's woe;
His craft has turned to shame.

Behold the pit—by man of sin
A snare for others laid—
But Fate has call'd, and see, within
His own death-bed is made!
Then hail! oh hail, Eternal Power!
In whom is placed my trust;
I know thy strength is peril's hour,
Omnipotent and just!

The king listened; anon the song ceased, and a noise resounded from within as of tools thrown aside.

"But no guilt rests upon my brow," said the prince. "I have seen two generations spring up and fade: I have ruled them justly."

A frosty shudder agitated his feeble frame—at length he became more composed. He opened the door; a hot vapour rushed forth, and a large apartment presented itself to him, illuminated by many lights. At a long working bench stood a tall, haggard form, busied upon an almost finished coffin. No life, no emotion, nor dash of sensibility beamed from the workman's glassy eyes, as he continued his employment, regardless of the monarch's entrance.

"So late at your duty, master?" said the prince. "Every man," returned the joiner, "performs the work to which the Eternal Master calls him; and he has sent me to you to prepare your race a resting place."

"Man! how can God have called thee to that work?" exclaimed the raging prince. "Madman! wouldst thou add to my anguish?"

"Sire," resumed the coffin-maker, undismayed, "madness will vex thee! But," continued he, after a pause, "if you would fain bear my history and your own, sit you down upon that coffin-lid; it is the coffin of your own heir, for whom I have now seat in the place. See, it is masterly work; this sculpture upon it is the design of a church crumbling to pieces, with its tombstones and crosses, the tokens of death, overgrown with rank weeds. Why dost thou stand staring so wildly at my work? Make no ceremony, but be seated, that I may proceed; the job is almost done, and will occupy me just as long as my song."

As if pressed down by some invisible power, the prince seated himself upon the coffin-lid, as it lay upon the floor; the coffin itself stood upon the bench. The joiner tucked up his wide sleeves about his nervous arms and began to plane it, while, with his eyes fixed upon his work, as if he heeded nothing else, neither the high personage who listened to him, nor the import of his own words, or rather as if the latter were spoken by another mouth, or at least another spirit, he began:

"Sir, did you know the deceased, Prince Sigismund?"

"My ancestor," answered the king gloomily, "the last of his family, as I of mine."

"My grandfather," said the workman.

"Thy grandfather," replied the prince with surprise. "Remember what form suddenly presents itself to my memory!"

"My history will explain all," rejoined the coffin-maker. "When I first came into the world there was little prospect that the golden circle would ever deck your brow; and just so much the more wildly was the storm to rage amid the clustering branches of our family, till none were left but my grandmother and her only daughter. Then your father mounted our house's throne. The prince's widow was little heeded: God's judgment upon her, because she herself was wanting in maternal love, and at length thrust her daughter out of her own house, after disturbing her mental peace by her tyrannical and immoral conduct. Then the latter gave up all earthly glory, and desired, after so deep a deception, nothing more than to live in the bosom of the quiet peace of obscurity. She found both in my father; for although he was not of princely descent, he possessed a lofty mind and a towering spirit. She brought him six sons; to them the last was born, her measure of duty was performed. My father could not survive her, and yet durst not die: the departed drew him after her; his children held him. He lived to see with her the life of a saint in an inseparable union of souls; I never saw him either joyful or sad like another mortal. His thoughts were constantly turned inward, and one could see in his eyes that his soul already belonged to another world. One care only had he for this; to instil into his sons their mother's lofty spirit, and to prepare such a fate for them that the workings of that spirit in them might not be oppressed by an overpowering weight of worldly misery. He ordered their education accordingly, and dedicated his undivided attention to it: and as he possessed, himself, but little of the world's goods, he doubled not but your father would at least bestow some portion of them upon the descendants of a man from whom he had obtained all, and whose throne he occupied. His entreaties found no way to the prince's heart. Then you, his only son, ascended the throne. You, at least, he hoped, having received such signal bounty from heaven, and expecting to become the founder of a race far extending into futurity, would be willing to deserve such grace, by shewing some commiseration for the last withering branches of your own stock. But he received his letters of credence, granted supplications; and when at last he attempted to approach your person, your sentinels thrust him back with their halberts. Therefore has God sent the destroying angel into your house, where no entrance on sensities can prevent. But I am anticipating my story. Attend!"

The monarch, trembling with fear and agitation, supported himself against the pillar which sustained the wide roof. The coffin-maker went on with his narration without interrupting his work.

"Just as my father received this rude repulse, the time had arrived when my three eldest brothers were to enter on the career that had been selected for them. He called us all together, 'God,' said he, 'has determined otherwise than we wished.' Proceeding then to acquaint us with his circumstances, he conjured us to give up all ideas of grandeur, and follow the humble vocations which he had already made choice of for us. We were silent, because we would not distress our father, but the spirit of the departed princes burst upon the breast of my grandsons. At night we all ascended to the topmost room of the house. There we resolved rather to relinquish life than degrade ourselves by any mean occupation; but we left the house as drag down our ungrateful race with us to perdition.

"An inexpressible inward anxiety betrayed to our father what was passing. On a sudden he appeared in the midst of us—and his stern brow there in a circle, with their daggers raised in their right hands to swear, and their eyes, especially those of the youngest, though he had not completed his fourteenth year, flashing with indignation. Our arms dropped mechanically as he regarded us with his placid look, and our anger died away when he addressed us: 'Children, have I dedicated ye to the dark dwelling of hell? Is the lovely light from yonder, where your mother beckons ye, extinguished in your breasts?' Every wrathful feeling was eradicated as he spoke, and all power of volition destroyed. In due proportion as our courage was reproved, an unusual softness stole more and more to animate our father:—his eyes beamed so brightly that we durst scarce look at him; a spirit of prophecy came over him, and with a terrific energy he exclaimed—'Stain not your hearts and hands! Vengeance is His, He will repay!' It was clear to us, then, that we must leave it to God to judge; and the hands which we had raised to indulge vengeance, were now uplifted to confirm the vow that we would never seek for revenge on the foe who had wronged us in our parents."

Without leaving off his work, the coffin-maker stopped a second, as if to give the king time to recover himself, for he had swooned away.

"Sir," continued he, then I was the youngest. It was late at night when my father called me forth out into the garden. The weather was sultry, and the atmosphere exceedingly oppressive; while the thick darkness was only occasionally relieved by the faint glimmer of distant lightning. Silently we sat myself down, exhausted in spirit and in body, and fell asleep. Singular dreams flitted before my troubled mind; but when I awoke they were all vanished, distinctly as I had seen them. Moreover, the words which one apparition had whispered to me, echoed articulately and intelligibly in my soul. 'Gird thyself to prepare the coffins, in which the unrighteous generation of princes be carried to grave!' And as I now observed that I had fallen asleep beneath my favourite rose tree, on which were six roses, its first bearing, which had all opened in the night and withered during the night, I looked upon this as a token of the certain fulfilment of my vision.

"Like my brothers, I relinquished my ambitious hopes, and entered the next morning into the service of a joiner, by whom I speedily began to learn. I acquainted nobody with the least circumstance of my dream. I worked indefatigably, and when my time of servitude expired, I wandered into many foreign parts, seeking employment as a journeyman. I never gave my relations any tidings of me, for I knew that in obscurity alone could I follow my obscure calling. I obtained reputation as a mechanic; then you appointed me to your city. I knew it must so happen; but a few years elapsed before I found employment, so that I had opportunities of inventing curious ornamental devices for coffins, and in many an hour of the night I worked up my material's to emblematical portraiture. I was offered great prices for my work—'They are bespoke,' said I, 'and must be got ready before-hand.' Such a work is not to be performed in the hour of need." Notwithstanding, I laboured alone knew what I meant. I was afterwards appointed coffin-maker to your household. Now, thought I, business will begin. But your house's splendour glowed on with increasing lustre;—your children grew up in strength and beauty; and you were esteemed the happiest of princes. But the spirit in my spake—'They must be exalted high, that their downfall may be too greatest,' and I waited patiently for the accomplishment of that, which I knew must come to pass.

"It happened that one clear spring day I went out of my workshop, and wandered through the green meadows. Suddenly the sky darkened above me, and the hail fell and destroyed the fresh seed that was just beginning to shoot. While I reflected upon the passing scene, a voice within me said, 'The first things shall be first sacrificed.' I understood this not but went home;—then the cry of despair assailed my ears. The twin sons thy wife had first borne thee were gone; a malignant disorder had quickly swept them away, both in one hour. Then I thought of the sculpture of the pair of doves offered up in the temple—and I looked them out and fitted them to the coffin in which your twin sons repose under the cold sod.

"Years rolled on: it was summer. I ascended a hill where I was accustomed to quench my thirst at a fresh draught from a lucid spring that collected in a stone basin, under the shade of a lofty beech-tree that stood on the skirt of a mountain meadow. Far extends the glance from that elevation over a flat fertile land, dotted with innumerable cities and villages, the fairest portion of your kingdom. But when I had reached the spot, the channel was dry in which the streamlet used to pant, and the basin empty. Then spake the voice—'Now the spring fails.' I hurried home and got ready the sculpture of the parting mother, for I well knew that soon would your royal spouse depart this transitory life.

"The circling years again rolled on, and I stood one day in autumn beneath the favorite tree that you planted with your own hand; and while I gazed upon the withered leaves that the storm had caught the arms and branches, and shook them so that all the fruit fell off. The voice said, 'Now the fruit falls!' I returned homeward immediately, to prepare the sculptures of the broken lily's stem, the bursting pod with its nuts, and the withered rose; and as I entered the city, the wailings of the people burst upon my ear, and I learned that the carriage which bore your daughters, three lovely brides, betrothed to princes, had been overturned and dashed down a precipice; and just as I reached the boundary of your park, they brought the lacerated corpses of your beloved children upon litters, covered with costly canopies, through the postern entrance.

After this, a long period elapsed. Mightily appeared your race to rustle with the destruction that impended over it. Powerfully grew your youngest son, a bold hero in the field of slaughter. He established the prince's martial fame. He brought conquests to your country; his bed was unblessed. In the winter hall both meadow and stream in chains; all nature reposed; but restlessly raged on the fury of mankind in reckless bloodshed.

"I went out into the dark and deep green forest. There was an aspiring fir, to whose proud summit I often looked up in admiration of the mighty artisan who had formed so proud a work; its long straight stem lay extended at the feet of lowly shrubs! There I was taught what was to be done with it. Once more, 'Now is the axe laid to the trunk!' Without delay, I bent my steps homeward, and scarcely had I looked out the sculpture of the fallen temple, when the joyous cry of victory resounded through the city; but suddenly every tongue was stilled—and quickly followed the direful news, that the crown prince had fallen on the field! Not for his own sake has he aggrandized his kingdom—others will now possess it. Now, Sir, my story is finished, and I have no more emblems." The king cried, as if struck with madness, "and hast thou no coffin left for me?"

"Thou wilt not need a coffin," answered the workman, "but permit me to try the lid; let us see if all the parts correspond."

He placed the lid upon the coffin, and examined the whole with the scrutinising eye of a proficient in his art.

"These figuers do not harmonize well," said he, "I must chaunt my old burthen once again: thus will the work be best completed." He sang:

Behold the pit—by man of sin
A snare for others laid—
But Fate has called, and see, within
His own death-bed is made!
Then hail! Eternal Power!
In whom is placed my trust,
I know thy strength in peril's hour,
Omnipotent and just!

The King was senseless. Supported against the bench, he might have remained a long while in that day's memorial was presented to him, and he felt deep commiseration for the indigent father and his six young sons; but his courtiers dissuaded him from affording them relief, and since then no complaint of theirs had reached his ear.

Now his last son was at rest, enclosed in the narrow coffin, and buried deep below the earth. The king, tired of life, mounted his judgment-seat once again, and commanded those unfeeling counsellors before him, and punished them. He caused the grand-children of his ancestor to be sought for, but none of them were to be found in his kingdom. Some dwelt in foreign countries, in the peaceful enjoyment of domestic happiness, and despised the gifts which he now proffered too late. The name of his race was not extinct, but had descended from the princely dignity to the middle station of life. Insanity at length seized on the hapless prince, and hoarse as the ocean was raging with its wildest fury around the rocks upon which it had stranded, the lofty turrets, the throne himself headlong down from the battlements into the foaming flood. His corpse was never found; the coffin-maker had said "thou wilt not need a coffin."

A boundless ocean swallows up, at last, all generations of men—some rise above, some sink below. Yet who rise, compassionate the sinking, for ye are supported only by Divine mercy.

SUMMARY.

Several counterfeit sovereigns are in circulation, bearing the date of 1822. Their edges are broader than the genuine coin, and they are extremely light.

A great alarm has been excited among cutlers and toymen, arising from a number of informations which have been laid against the sellers of gold and silver articles not having a license. By the last Act of Parliament, it is declared, that every person offering for sale any article of gold or silver, however small it may be, and not taking out an annual license, is liable to the penalties affixed. We understand, that the names of above 800 individuals have been given in to the Exchequer, and above 200 writs are issued.

A present was landed on Tuesday last, from the Russian ship, the Baltic, on which Grace the Duke of Wellington, from the Emperor Nicholas, consisting of three looking-glasses. They were manufactured at the Imperial Factory in Russia. The largest plate was broken in the conveyance. It measured 169 inches long and 53 wide.—21st Sept.

In the course of twelve months, namely, from June 1825 to June in the present year, there was held no less than one thousand seven hundred and thirty-eight coroner's inquests, of which nine hundred and seventy-five were in the town and neighbourhood of Manchester alone.

The importation of grain at Leith still continues, and it has been proceeding, pari passu, at Grangemouth.—Between the 25th August and 4th September, eight vessels loaded with grain from Riga, Hamburgh, &c. entered that port.

The College of Surgeons in London have announced the current week, an important relaxation of their rules respecting the qualification by hospital study, required by them from candidates for their diploma. The purport of this change is, that attendance upon provincial hospitals will now be accepted under certain restrictions.

Weymouth, Sept. 20.—We are grie[illegible]d to state that all hopes are vanished as to the safety of His Majesty's Post office packet Francis Freeling. It is generally supposed that she was run down, by some unknown ship, during the late gale. By this disaster the wives of the crew, seven in number, together with upwards of 30 children, are left in the most afflicted state of distress. A public meeting will be held at the Town-hall on Saturday next, to devise means to alleviate their present sufferings. The names of the passengers on board at the time are not yet all ascertained.

Some material alteration, it is said, has been determined on, so as to render the Militia effective; a part of them, it is said, will remain constantly embodied, from which the regular army is to be completed, by allowing a portion of the militia to enlist therein annually; which will obviate the present mode of recruiting the army, and prevent the numerous illegal enlistments which now take place in the line.

It is known to our readers that a frigate for the Egyptian Pacha, was built at Marseilles, and that in attempting to launch her, she stuck in the mud. The attempts have been renewed but as yet without success.

Portugal.—Couriers arrive frequently at the French, Spanish and English legations in Lisbon—which indicates the belief that some important measures are on the tapis.

Two officers from one of the ultra montane provinces have been arrested at Lisbon, and sent to prison. They had with them a good deal of money, and various inflammatory proclamations.

The Turks express their hopes in strong terms for the success of the Persians over the Russians. They had circulated a report that Teflis had been taken by the former.

The last Blackwood's Magazine has a strange rumour in it, that Washington Irving is in a fair way of marrying Her Highness the Archduchess of Parma, the widow of Napoleon! At the Congress of Verona, it is said she walked arm-in-arm with the Duke of Wellington, when her husband was at St. Helena.

Defence of the Seaboard.—An interesting and highly important document, relative to the defence of our maritime frontier, communicated to Congress at the close of the last session by the board of Engineers employed to survey the coast, has been published in the National Intelligencer. The whole line of seacoast, which extends 3330 miles, is divided by the Engineers into four distinct parts, and they enumerated the positions to be fortified and the cost and advantages of each. The whole expense is estimated at $6,557,454 —that for the additional defence at Boston alone, at 1,279,429 dollars. The fortifications recommended are divided into three classes, more or less necessary, and therefore not requiring to be all completed at once.—Salem Reg.

Capt. Parry is about to marry the beautiful daughter of Sir John Thomas, of Alderly Park.

Three hundred jurymen have been summoned to attend the next session of the court of Oyer and Terminer, to be held on the third Monday of the present month. The trials of the persons indicted for conspiracy, therefore, are most probably to be at that time resumed. —N. Y. paper.

Thousands of persons have made application to Government, for the means of emigrating.—Dublin Freeman's Journal.

The ship Augustus-Frederick, of Newport, whilst on a whaling voyage in the Pacific Ocean, lost one of her boats, with 15 men, in consequence of the boat being drawn under by a whale.

Bishop of Calcutta.—The late Dr. Reginald Heber, whose death we announced in our last, was brother of the late Representative of Oxford University, and was first of Brasenose College, whence he was elected a Fellow of All Souls. In 1801 he gained the Chancellor's Prize "Carmen Seculare," Latin verse; in 1803, "Palestine," English verse; and in 1805, "The Sense of Honour," an English Essay. He was Bampton Lecturer in 1822, and was chosen Bishop of Calcutta in 1823. As a Divine and Scholar, his "Bampton Lectures" place him among the best prose writers, as his poetical compositions entitle him to a conspicuous place among the poets of the present day. He took the Degree of M. A in 1818, and that of D. D. (by Diploma) in 1823.

Extraordinary Lusus Naturæ.—A most beautiful racing mare called 'Jenny,' has been exhibited here during the week, possessing seven perfect legs. This remarkable animal is mentioned in the Racing Calendar for 1822-23, as a very superior runner; and it was not until three years old that the transformation of nature commenced. Her extra far hind leg, which is hanging appendage, is found to appear next her near hind leg; and next her far fore leg; and at this time there is one making its appearance down her near fore leg. She is shod on six feet, and the main bones of her extra legs are set on from the hips and shoulders, and have beautiful muscular shape. This extraordinary mare is the property of Mr. Checketts, of Belgrave-hall, Leicestershire.

The connoisseurs in razors will be glad to hear that a discovery has been made, that thousands ground into powder make an excellent composition for razor strops. This sounds any thing but economical, and seems to invert the order of things according to the old system; paste has before been taken for diamonds, but never diamonds for paste, that we have heard of.

ENGLAND.

London, Sept. 25—2 P. M.—The Consol market has remained steady during the whole of this morning, with a fluctuation of about 1-4 per cent. Consols, which closed at 80 80 1-8, for the account soon after became heavy, and receded to 79 7-8, and for money 79 3-4; but a slight reaction took place, when the market improved, and consols may be quoted, up to the present time, at 80 1-8 for account, and 80 for money, alternately buyers and sellers. In the foreign market there is little doing. Mexican, in the previous part of the morning, was done at 62 1-4, since which they have fallen to 61 1-4, with a heavy market.—Courier.

The great anxiety which was felt during the whole of Saturday, concerning the truth of the letter received at the North and South American Coffee-house from Portsmouth, of a Spanish fleet from the Havana, landing at Tampico from 5 to 6000 men, increased to such a degree in the evening, that the Coffee-house was crowded to excess, both with Mexican bond holders and subscribers, to ascertain if Mr. Davis had received any further information on the subject of the above intelligence. Mr. Davis, whose exertions and endeavours are unremitting to procure the earliest intelligence for his friends and subscribers, immediately despatched his head waiter, Mr. Chas. Mansfield, to Portsmouth, to ascertain if any such passenger had landed at that port from New York, and was the writer of the said letter. This morning at an early hour, Mr. Mansfield returned with the account that on his arrival at Portmouth, he proceeded to the custom house, and searched the books, he also proceeded to every inn in the town, but neither the arrival of the vessel nor of the person was known. Consequently the whole of the letter is a forgery.—Mr. Davis posted up a reward of £100 to any person who may discover the author of the forged letter.

The London Courier of the 25th says, that fine samples of Wheat supported the prices of that day week; Barley sold readily at 40s. There was no alteration in Flour; Wheat quoted at 50 a 52s.

Liverpool, Sept. 28th.—The accounts from Manchester are very favourable, a great deal of business having been done, and some advances in prices obtained. There is at last an arrival of Rice, which is not yet landed. The grain market is very dull, and flour neglected at 28s. a 28s.

Betting, at the late great St. Ledger race in England, seems to have been pursued to a great extent. The greatest winners are said to be Mr. James Bland, £30,000; Mr. Redesdale, £5,000; Mr. Holyoake, £5,000; Capt. Miller, 5,000; and Mr. Canty, £3,000. One of the great betting men, says the Courier, loses a hundred. Tetrarch being the worst horse in the race for him. There is only one levanter of any consequence for £5000. On the morning afterwards his landlady found the following on her table:

"My dear Madam,—I am sorry to say that I am obliged to leave London in so very dishonourable a manner; but I have lost that sum which obliges me to do so, and cannot meet the people with a good face. For God in Heaven's sake, do let me impress this upon your mind—that is, pray keep your son from attending races, and all those evil ways, for, if he does not, it will ultimately lead to ruin and an untimely end. Inclosed is sufficient to pay my expenses. Send my trunks and books as early as possible. God Almighty bless you, and believe me ever,

"Your truly unfortunate friend."

The winner of the St. Ledger was so lame that he could not turn in the stall, and it is supposed he never will be able to run again—this was the case with Jerry in 1824.

Mr. Watt, owner of Belzoni, might have sold him for 500 guineas previous to the race after which he was sold to Mr. Dilly for 600.

Drury Lane Theatre opened on the 23d of Sept. to a house, as the Courier says, "tolerably well filled for the season."

It is said that Mr. Rotchschild receives from France weekly, about £800,000 in gold bars and sovereigns.

SCOTLAND.

Dundee, Sept. 15.—It appears from the declarations which have been taken regarding the sloop Archduke, which disappeared from our harbour some time back, that instead of conveying her vessel had drifted away with him during the night, and was then about twenty miles off the land. In this ticklish situation he succeeded in getting the vessel put into sailing trim, and about ten o'clock on Monday evening she neared Elie Ness Head. With great exertion he continued to tack the sloop to keep her to windward, till, being quite exhausted, he abandoned her in despair, and took to the boat, about 5 o'clock on Tuesday morning—leaving the solitary bark under sail with head to the south. He had gained shore in the neighbourhood, near Redhugh, and after some time, observing that the vessel had run aground, and seeing persons on board, he put off in the boat for the purpose of reaching her, when he was picked up, as formerly stated. This story was credited, and he was set at liberty.—Dundee Courier.

Lamentable occurrence.—A Lady shot.—On Monday afternoon, a most distressing accident occurred at the country seat of Mr. John Lang, writer, which is situated near Kirkintilloch. Mr. Lang's grandson, a little boy, had unfortunately laid his hands upon a loaded pistol, which Mr. L. thought he had deposited in a place of sufficient security, and with it in his possession, he came to the lobby, where his cousin was standing, the lady of Mr. Wright, an Advocate, on a visit to her grandfather, in Edinburgh, who desired him to lay it down, on which he said, "O, there is no danger, there is nothing in it," and holding it in the direction of Mrs. Wright; pulled the trigger, when, most melancholy to relate, the ball which the pistol contained, went through her head, and she almost instantly expired! Mr. Wright, it is said, is still ignorant of the calamity, or has come to the knowledge of it very recently, he being gone with a shooting party to the moors. Some accounts say that she had her infant child in her arms at the time of the accident. She was only two years married. The distress that this mournful event has occasioned, is beyond description.

Foreign Intelligence.

One day later from London.—The ship Gem, Captain Farrier, from Liverpool, brought a Liverpool paper of the 28th of September, containing London dates of the evening of the 26th, one day later than before received. The probability of a war between Russia and Persia, is confirmed. The report, received via Paris, that the conference at Ackermans had been broken off, is confirmed. The Russian Commissioners, wearied with the evasive answers of the Turkish Commissioners, had sent them a note, in which all the demands made by Russia for some years past, are completely embodied, and if a satisfactory answer be not received by the 7th of October, it was believed that a Russian army would pass the Pruth, and occupy in arms Moldavia and Wallachia.

The British ship Monarch, which was recaptured from a Brasilian prize crew, about 100 miles from Rio, as stated in the American papers some time since, has arrived in safety at Liverpool.

London, Sept. 26.

City two o'clock.—In the course of the morning Consols were done at 80 3-8, and at 80. Exchequer Bills are 15 to 16 pm. The South American Securities are extremely heavy.—Mexican Bonds are at present 61 11-42; Colombian 35 1-2 6; Chilian 39 1-2. We find by letters from Vienna of the 15th inst. that the Metallaques declined 2 per cent. in consequence of the failure of a large operator of that name of Callimani; but after the first burst of business, they had recovered their former price."

London Markets, Sept. 26.—The business in cotton has not been very extensive last week. This morning the sale at the India House went off 1-8 to 1-4 per lb. and the inferieor qualities at 1-4 to 3-8 higher. The price of coffee was lower last week and business dull.

Extract of a letter, dated Liverpool, Sept. 28.

We have again had a very good demand for Cotton to-day; the sales are supposed to be at least 3000 bags, partly to the trade and partly speculators—the advance in the present week, is not less than 1 and per pound, but it is chiefly on the middling and fair qualities of Uplands and Mobile. We now quote 6 1-4 to 7 1-2d. The accounts from Manchester are very favorable, a great deal of business having been done, and some advance in prices obtained. There is at last an arrival of Rice, which is not yet landed. The grain market is very dull, and flour neglected at 22 to 23s. About 4500 bbls. Turpentine have been sold 9s 6d to 10s 3d. The Panthea and Columbia, from New-York, arrived on the 25th.

SPAIN.

Extract of a private letter of the 14th instant from Madrid:—"The desertion in our army becomes alarming. According to the official reports received from the Captains-General of the provinces of Estramadura and Galicia, the desertion which followed that of the two squadrons of horse chasseurs, has deprived the Spanish army of 3400 men, of whom 2,000 entered Portugal by Alentejo, and 1400 by the province of Trassos Montes. The former column presented itself to the Governor of Yelves, and the second to that of Chaves. A remarkable circumstance is, that the desertion appears to proceed from a well combined system, and that there is unity in its object, for both the above columns announced that their aim was to induce the Spanish Government through the medium of Portugal to return to a system of moderation compatible with the right and wants of the nation, and to accomplish it, they marching preferred coming to Portugal, to marching straight upon Madrid: but that if the Portuguese Government should think it expedient not to meddle in this affair, the columns would plead their own cause by marching into Spain with arms in their hands. The Governors of Yelves and Chaves had sent for instruction to Lisbon. It must not be supposed that the desertion proceeds from accidental causes, but from a fixed and invariable idea, of the necessity of obtaining a reform in our actual Government—the necessity of seeing an end put to the measures and persecutions which have for three years desolated Spain. It is rumored that the troops gone into Portugal will be formed into regiments there, and that General Mina will have the command of them. On the other hand it is known that a great part of the Spaniards who had taken refuge in England, at Gibraltar, and upon different parts of Africa, have already gone to Lisbon; and there is no doubt that if the Portuguese Government will consent thereto, a considerable Spanish army will be formed on the frontiers of Portugal, and have at its head the most distinguished of our warriors and statesmen. Great alarm prevails at Madrid on account of the effervescence which manifests itself amongst the royalist volunteers. One of them convicted of murder was to have been hanged, but the Government alarmed at the attitude of the volunteers, pardoned the assassin, although the Court of Justice which condemned him set forth that there were not any extenuating circumstances in his case. M. Carnerero, formerly Secretary of our Embassy at Paris, arrived here two days ago with dispatches, since which it has been rumored that France and England have united to impress upon Spain the absolute necessity of effecting some important reforms in her system of government."

We copy the following from the Courier Francais:—"The relations between the Cabinet of Lisbon and those of Spain and Vienna appear every day to take a less amicable turn. The Court of Madrid has refussed to receive the Portuguese Minister, the Count de Villa Real. He was informed that as a private individual, he might remain at Madrid, but that his admission as Minister, would depend upon arrangements to be made with certain Cabinets, and which were not yet agreed on. The Infant Don Miguel, has not made oath to the Constitution, notwithstanding all the Portuguese who are at Vienna, have fulfilled their duty."

Madrid, Sept. 11.—Our Gazette of this day, announces officially, the desertion of the two squadrons of the 4th regiment of cavalry of the line. The following is the Gazetted account:—

"The Captain-General of the province of Estramadura has made known to his Majesty, thro' the medium of myself, (the Minister of War,) that on the morning of the 2d inst. 115 armed footmen, and 111 horsemen, of the regiment No 4 of cavalry, which was in garrion at Olivenza, deserted, taking the direction of Yelves in Portugal. The Lieutenant of the said corps, Don Jose Moncada gave orders to take horse, seconded by his comrade, Lieutenant Don Cajatono of Ghent, and they departed by the city gate, situated behind the barracks, after having attacked the guards of that gate, and wounded the sentinel."

This communication is followed by a royal decree, of which the following are the principal provisions:—

"His Majesty, to whom I submitted the reports containing these facts, beheld with the greatest indignation a crime so scandalous, which, although abominable in itself, would only have been followed by just measures against the delinquents, if the absolute necessity of maintaining with the most inflexible vigour the military ordonnances did not constrain his Majesty, to renew those adapted to the good order and discipline of the corps, to the better service of the King, and the honour of the army."

Here the decree refers to the different anterior decrees and ordonnances, in virtue of which the chiefs and officers are responsible for the plots of their corps, upon pain of dismissal from the service, when they neither discover nor prevent them.

Next comes another paragraph, in which it is said, that the king, although benevolent and paternal in the execution of the civil laws, finds himself constrained to be inflexible in the execution of the military laws, and to proceed against the officers of the 4th regiment of cavalry who have remained behind although by their services they have given full proof of their fidelity; "for," says the paragraph, "the deed of Olivenza requires an example of discipline."

Then come several provisions. The first condemns to be hanged, as soon as they shall be taken, the deserters of the 4th, those who counselled them, and those who were acquainted with them, and did not make a revelation; the second spares the lives of the corporals and privates, who may present themselves within eight days after the publication of the decree; the third dissolves the 4th regimeat of cavalry, and sends the men of it to the other corps of the army; the fourth suspends from their posts all the staff-officers of the place of Olivenza, and all those of the 4th regiment of cavalry who were at that place at the period of the desertion; the fifth ordains the creation of a Court Martial, which is to act promptly and summarily, in order to ascertain whether those officers fulfilled their duty;—the judgments pronounced by this Court will be executed immediately, without it being necessary, to have the previous approbation of the King; the sixth enjoins the Inspectors-General to observe great circumspection relative to the officers which they may propose to be employed: and the seventh commands the Captains-General to render an immediate account of the officers not entitled to their confidence.—The decree concludes by the following observations.—

"Lastly, his Majesty has pleasure in hoping that his royal guards and the army, are filled with noble indignation against those who have so greatly violated military honour, and that they will lose no opportunity of manifesting that loyalty and honour are their distinctive virtues, and of purging their ranks from the individuals who may be ungrateful towards the royal munificence, and unworthy of belonging to their profession and their country. The guards and the army, by observing strict discipline, and showing themselves to be animated with a good spirit, will prove that they are the worthy inheritors of that ancient Spanish loyalty, which had become proverbial throughout the world."

"I give you notice thereof by the King's command for your own governance, and that you have it circulated and published upon the General-Orders of the army, corps, and places under your command.

(Signed) "SAMBRANO."

September 2, 1826.

It is positively predicted in most of the Paris journals, that the new Portuguese Constitution will not permit the absolute monarchy of Fedinand the Seventh to survive for two years longer.

GREECE AND TURKEY.

Col. Fabvier has at length driven the Turks from before Athens, and opened a communication with Argos and Napoli. A national Assembly was to be held in the Morea on the 12th of September, at which it was hoped Lord Cochrane would be present. Colocotroni was collecting troops to attack Ibrahim at Tripoliza and Caudtins, who is said to have got a reinforcement, but it will be easy to crush him. A letter from the French Agent to the Greek Committee at Paris, dated at Napoli di Romani, July 21st, states that twelve vessels from England and France, laden with amunitions, &c. had arrived in safety.—A great fire broke out at Constantinople on the 31st of August, which continued on the 3d of September, when the last accounts were received. Flakes of fire were then falling upon the Seraglio, the gates of which were opened to all the fugitives who had favored the reformation. Several thousand houses, it was believed, had fallen a prey to the flames. It is added that the people opposed the measures to extinguish the fire, observing that it was a punishment from heaven for the late destruction of the Janissaries. The fire had penetrated from the garden gate to the mosques of the sultans Amurat and Bajazet, thence along the walls of the Seraglio to the Sea of Marmora, taking in its routes many palaces of the great, containing immense riches.

On the authority of the French papers, it is stated that Com. Hamilton has communicated to the Greek Authorities, that the British Ambassador at Constantinople, is authorised by the European powers to treat with Turkey for a settlement of the differences with Greece, but that the negociations have been delayed in consequence of the recent difficulties in Constantinople.

An impressment of all able bodied men was ordered at Constantinople, who were to be brought before commissioners for examination—such as had good excuses were to be set at liberty, and the rest placed in the army.

Tinos, July 27.—More than 200 fugitive Samiots have arrived at Tinos. Three vessel loads are also at Syra. It is said the Turks were to land 18,000 men there on the 25th. It is added that propositions were received from the captain Pacha, by an Austrian ship of war; but that the arrival of an English vessel, which brought intelligence of the approach of the Greek fleet, encouraged the Samiots to reject them entirely.—By the same way they also received the most urgent pursuasions from Com. Hamilton to resist them to the utmost.

Metylene, Aug. 12.—The captain Pacha anchored here on the 9th instant, with his squadron; 2 ships of the line, 8 frigates 5 sloops of war, 15 brigs and a schooner. He sailed again the following day, we known not whither. An epidemic prevails on board, so that 20 men die a day. The Greeks had thrown away three fire ships on them.

Rhodes, July 29.—A schooner of Mehemet Ali Pacha has arrived here from Navarin and landed a Tartar, with despatches from Ibrahim for Constantinople. He brings intelligence of the capture in the last district of the Maniotes, which renders Ibrahim master of the whole interior of the Morea. The Greek forces are concentrated within the walls of Napoli, Malvoisiu and Corinth.

The Captain Bey and Reale Bey arrived at Navarin the 15th July, with 23 vessels of war, to be at the disposal of Ibrahim.

The Captain Pacha was at Tcheseme, with 33 vessels of war to take on board the Asiatic troops assembled there; thence they were to proceed to the attack of Samos.

The troops at Alexandria, to embark for the Morea, amounted to 8 or 9,000; but the Viceroy has informed the Porte that he has not the funds to undertake another expedition; and such frightful stories are told by those who have returned from Greece, that 4000 have deserted.

There was a report that the Pacha of Widrin had revolted, and invited all the Janissaries to join him.

Mr. Canning was still at Paris, and had attended a splendid dinner given by M. Villele. The papers of the 28th announce that Mr. Brown, the American Minister, was to give a dinner on the 28th, at which Mr. Canning was to be present, with all the foreign ministers.

The Haytien Commissioners, who carried out the first instalment of the debt to France, left Paris on the 27th of September, on their return to St. Domingo.

In order to encourage the journeymen weavers of Lyons, and augment their resources, the ladies of that city have determined to wear nothing but silk dresses during the winter.

RUSSIA.

The intelligence from St. Petersburgh is to the 5th of September. It is stated in the Paris papers that there is no probability of an amicable adjustment of the differences between Russia and the Porte.

The Persians are said to have invaded the frontier of Russia with a powerful army from Georgia, and Russian troops have marched for the Crimea. Forty-five thousand men, are ready to cross the Pruth, and one hundred thousand are on their way to reinforce.

The authorities at Dantzig have announced that there is a deficiency of coarse grains in that place and vicinity, and not sufficient for consumption during the winter. Potatoes had risen 400 per cent.—and the poor were threatened with a famine.

UNITED STATES.

Boston, Oct. 26th.—At a numerous meeting of Manufacturers of Woolens, held at the Exchange Coffee House, Oct. 23, the Hon. Bezaleel Taft of Uxbridge, was called to the chair, and J. B. Brown was appointed Secretary.

A very general and free interchange of opinion was communicated by gentlemen from different parts of the state, on the Woolen Manufactures in this country. Its unparalelled depression, and the causes that have produced this depression, were dwelt upon at considerable length by the Hon. Mr. Tufts of Dudley, Colonel Shepherd of Northampton, Mr. Wolcott of Southbridge, and by Mr. Abbot Lawrence and Mr. J. Clapp of this city. The Chairman and the Secretary addressed the meeting. The sentiment in favour of memorialing Congress in general, and a vote, that it was expedient to adopt a memorial at this meeting for an increase of duties of Woollen Goods, to be forwarded at their next session, was unanimous.

Since public attention has become directed to the distress of the woollen manufacturers; it is frequently asked where the depression is seen of which so much is said. We answer, it is seen in every manufacturing village in the country. In the reduction of wages, in the cessation of machinery, in the number of unemployed workmen travelling through the country making unsuccessful applications for employment, in waggons loaded with wools, returning to the former unable to find a market: and though last not least in a reduction of one half in the prices of manufactured goods.

The calamitous state of manufacturers in 1824 was so excessive, further protection was deemed imperiously necessary. And a revision of the tariff was accordingly made by Congress. But the distress of manufacturers in 1824, were not actually so great as at the present time. Establishments conducted by the most skilful mechanics and in the most economical manner at that time incurred but small losses. But at the present time no woollen manufactory can be conducted by any known system of economy without from fifteen to twenty per cent actual loss.

The depression is not temporary, it is the natural event of permanent causes. Manufacturers who heretofore strenuously advocated the let-us-alone system and have predicted the final success of the manufacturing interest whether protected by government are now stopping their wheels; satisfied that if Congress do not impose further duties on manufactured goods, closing their works is the only alternative to avoid bankruptcy.

An establishment upon which during the last eighteen months half a million dollars have been expended is not manufacturing a yard. The proprietors deeming it more for their advantage to loose interest of capital, deterioration of stock, machinery, &c. than by going into operation incur the necessary loss upon manufactured goods. Another, which three years since was the most extensive woollen establishment in New-England, have dismissed most of their workmen and will stop entirely in a few weeks—others in Worcester county have stopped portions of their machinery and more extensive cessation is in immediate contemplation.

A gentleman of Baltimore, a civil engineer, has made an important discovery in the means of moving machinery and of propelling boats, &c. By comparative trials of this engine with the ordinary modes of using steam, at least fifty six per cent, is saved in the consumption of fuel and of water, while a reduction in the weight and capacity of the boiler is effected in the same ratio. A pressure of 15 lbs. to the square inch is found, by observation, to be all that is requisite.—Balt. Amer.

NEW YORK, November 1,

By the brig Aspasia, Captain Massicott, arrived at Baltimore from Vera Cruz, intelligence from Mexico is received to the 25th of September. It is stated that the "Panama Congress," opened its session at Acapulco on the 4th September, continued its sitting a few days, and then adjourned, to assemble at Tacubaya, where it was expected that all the deputies, ministers and agents from foreign powers would be present.

Extracts from the proceedings of the Legislature of the state of Vermont.—

"A memorial of the Iroquois Indians, praying to be restored to the possession of a certain tract of land lying between Lower Canada and Vermont, of which they consider themselves unjustly deprived, is read and referred to a committee of four to join from Council.

"A bill ceding to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over ten acres of land to locate and erect an arsenal at Vergennes (Lake Chaplain,) is passed."

H. M. Ship Niemen, 28, on the Halifax Station, anchored at Boston on the 30th ult. and exchanged salutes with Fort Independence. She was erroneously said to have brought the mutineers of the American Schooner Fairy, who landed some time ago at Cape Breton.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

On Monday morning last, about five o'clock, the steam boat NEW-SWITSURE, on her passage from Quebec, was ran aground about twenty miles below this city. The LADY OF THE LAKE, on passing the Swiftsure was hailed by the latter, and immediately had the engine stopped, and sent a boat along side. A number of the passengers who had been in the Swiftsure at the time of the accident, were taken on board the Lady of the Lake and conveyed to Montreal; others remained and have not yet made their appearance.—We were informed by the passengers that the accident was entirely owing to the negligence or ignorance of the pilot, who mistook the regular channel, and thus caused the delay of the Swiftsure, which at this season of the year must be a serious inconvenience to the Company.

The Lady of the Lake left Quebec at half-past eleven o'clock on Saturday night, and arrived here a little after ten on Monday morning: she is a very swift boat, and her accommodations much superior to what her external appearance indicates.—Canadian Courant.

Quebec, November 11.

On Thursday His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief inspected the Quebec Troop of Cavalry, under the command of Captain Gugy, in the yard of the Castle of St. Louis. There was a full muster, and the Gentlemen were in general well mounted, and exhibited a very soldier like and uniform appearance. His Lordship on dismissing the Troop put into the hands of Lt. Col. Bell, a memorandum of his high approbation of the state and conduct of the Corps.

We have been favoured with a copy of this Documeni, which is as follows:—

"The Governor-in-Chief requests Lt. Col. Bell, commanding the several Volunteer Corps in Quebec, will convey to Capt. Gugy, commanding the Troop of Cavalry, his thanks personally, for the zeal with which he has brought forward this Troop—The numbers are not yet complete, but they are well mounted and well appointed.

"Lieut. Col. Bell will also convey to the Troop, generally, the thanks of the Governor, for the acuve part taken lately in aid of the Police Magistracy, for the apprehension of the robbers at Point Levi—this is the spirit which he wishes to arouse in this Province—he knows it is in the people, though languid and asleep at present:—it only requires the example which Capt. Gugy and his Troop have shewn so well, and which he considers an important public service.

"The Governor will have great pleasure in seeing the Troop in the spring, and trusts to see the numbers considerably increased."

Execution.—Yesterday morning, at 10 o'clock, the awful sentence of the law was executed, on the new drop in front of the Gaol, upon John Hart, who was convicted, at the last Criminal Term for this District, of sacrilege, in committing a robbery in the Roman Catholic Church of this city. The unfortunate culprit, who thus paid the forfeit of his life to the offended laws of his county, had long persevered in a course of crime, in this and the neighbouring provinces. He was a native of Fredrick-town, N. Brunswick, and had served in the 104th and 76th Regiments, from the last of which he is reported to have been discharged with ignominy.—Since his conviction, the Venerable Archdeacon of Quebec, and the Reverend Mr. Archbold, who have been unremitting in their spiritual exertions, succeeded in bringing the unhappy man to a feeling of his condition, and Hart, who evinced a due sense of the enormity of his past life and his unfitness to live, availed himself of the short remainder of his days to duly prepare for the dreadful fate which awaited him. He conducted himself with great calmness and resignation, and shortly before quitting the prose-room made a confession of many other crimes, but to the last persisted in assorting that he was innocent of that for which he was going to suffer. He ascended the platform with a firm step, and, after the cap was drawn over his face, addressed the spectators in a clear firm tone, warning them of the danger of pursuing such courses as had brought him to the ignominous death he was about to suffer; he then remained for a short period in prayer, and gave the signal for the fall of the grating by dropping a handkerchief. The chains were then loosed, and the platform fell, and, after a few conclusive struggles, the victim of the laws ceased to exist. There was an immense concourse of people to witness his exit.

Notwithstanding Hart's assertion that he was innocent of the robbery for which he suffered, a letter was written by him to one of his female companions, and which came into our hands, from an authentic source shews that he would have had recourse to perjury to clear himself of the the charge; and that he despaired of doing so by other means.

Shortly before the execution took place, a respite was received by the Sheriff for Lavoie, convicted at the same Term, for a robbery in the house of the Rev. Mr. Masse, at Point Levi, and who was also to have suffered. It is said to have been granted at the earnest and repeated intercession of the reverend gentleman before mentioned.

The notoriety of Hart's character, and the extent and the variety of the scenes of iniquity in which he had been concerned, has induced a gentleman of this city to draw up a short Memoir of his life.

The Army.

WAR OFFICE, 18th Sept. 1826.

71st Highland Light Infantry.—Capt. W. Stewart, from the 26th Foot, vice Park, who exchanges, dated August 31, 1826, and Lieut. N. A. Connor, vice Dashwood, promoted.—September 19th 1826.—To be Capts. 76th Regiment, Capt. W. Bampton, to be Major by purchase, vice Coles, promoted, dated September 19th, 1826. Lieut. A. H. Grubbe, from the half-pay, to the Captain, vice Bampton, promoted, dated September 19th, 1826.—Lieut. P. H. Mitchell, from the 19th Foot, to be Lieut. vice Edwards, who exchanges, dated August 14th, 1826.

Unattached.—To be Lieutenant-Colonel of Infantry, by purchase, Major R. B. Coles, 76th Foot. To be Major, Captain A. W. Dashwood, 71st Foot.—The same Gazett also contains the promotion of Brevet Major Elliot, 68th Light Infantry, (Brigade Major at Quebec,) to be Major, on half-pay, according to the General Order of the 25th April, 1826.

Dangers of the Ice-Berge.—"The ice soon beginning to close around us, our progress became very slow. On the 17th (July) we saw a ship at the margin of the park, and two more on the following day. We supposed these to be whalers, which, after trying to cross the ice to the northward, had returned to make the attempt in the present latitude, (60°) in search of seals. This supposition which our subsequent difficulties served to strengthen. From this time, indeed, the obstructions from the quantity, magnitude, and closeness of the ics, were such as to keep our people constantly employed in heaving, warping, or sawing through it, and yet with so little success, that at the close of the month of July, we had only penetrated 70 miles to the westward, or to the longitude of about 62. 10. Here, while closely beset, on the 1st of August, we encountered a hard gale from the south-east, which pressing the ice together in every direction, by mass overlaying mass for hours together, the Hecla received several very awkward 'nips,' and was once fairly laid on her broadside by a strain which must inevitably have crushed a vessel of ordinary strength. In which cases, the ice is forced under a ship's bottom, on one side, and on the other up her side, both powers acting in such a manner as to bring her on her beam-ends. This is, in fact, the most favourable manner in which a ship can receive the pressure, and would, probably, be overcome with one comparatively not very heavy, though sufficiently so, it is said, to have run completely over a ship in some extreme and fatal cases. With ice of still more formidable dimensions, a vessel would, probably, by an equal degree of pressure, be absolutely crushed, in consequence of the increased difficulty of sinking it on one side, and causing it to rise on the other."—Captain Parry's third Voyage.

EDUCATION.

A public examination lately took place in London, of eight young persons, half of each sex, and of the number who had been educated for the last three years after two methods; one, by the ordinary method of teaching, as formerly adopted in all popular schools, and the other by the new method of questions, without answers, called the Interrogative System, invented and introduced by Sir Richard Phillips. There were about sixty schoolmasters and governesses present, and nearly 200 heads of respectable families. The books used by each in their studies were arranged before them for reference; and then, of 200 questions in popular branches of knowledge, put to the four on the old system, they, collectively, answered but thirty-three correctly; while the same questions, the four new pupils, under the new system, answered 156 correctly, and the with slight errors. The superiority of the new system over the old one, may therefore be considerded as six to one, independently of the greater facility which it confers in writing, spelling, and grammar, which was made evident by the time employed. The questions in each case were spontaneously given in writing by the company, and answered in writing; yet the answers to the 38 questions employed two hours and a half, and the 151 answers but three hours and five minutes, or less than a minute to each. It seemed like inspiration, and drew forth peals of applause from the enlightened company assembled.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER, 25, 1826.

London dates to 26, Sept. have been received at New York, by the Ship Gem, from Liverpool, but they convey no additional intelligence.

The Emigration Committee, appear to have devoted much of their attention, to the commercial concerns of the British Provinces, as being connected with the subject referred to them. We have already adverted to this, as far as Upper Canada is concerned, and from the appendix to the minutes of evidence, which we published last week, it may be inferred, that the public works which have been commenced in the Province, have resulted from their investigation. We have now before us, an abstract of the evidence, of the Hon. R. Uniacke, and Mr. Henry Bliss, relating principally to the Fisheries of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.—From the statements made by these Gentlemen it appears, that about 20,000 persons in both Provinces, are employed in the fisheries, the annual produce being estimated at, from 250, to 300,000 quintals of fish, and about 250,000 Barrels, including Salmon, Mackarel, Herring, &c.

The fishery, ranging all round the coast, although occasionally, it is comparatively bad reason, as it is termed, may occur, is thought to be inexhaustible, and that it is almost incredible to conceive, to what extent it must be carried on, before it would fail.—The principal demand for Barreled fish is in the United States, and the Southern States particularly, consume great quantities of salted Mackarel. A large consumption also takes place in the West Indies, of both dried and barrelled fish, and quantities of the former are disposed of in the markets of South America, Spain and Portugal.

With respect to the American fishing trade, carried on in the Bay of Fundy, it is stated, that, "if they were excluded from our ground, they would have no fishing at all, for that fishing ground is ours, but they will come and fish there, though they have no right to do so—the fishing establishments in the United States, are so remote from the fishing grounds, that when we can make four voyages, they can scarcely make two."

The fisheries are shared wholly for their supplies of Provisions upon Canada and the United States, Provisions which New Brunswick furnishing but very little, except Potatoes and some salt Pork, and those not to any great extent.

The object in view from the evidence adduced on this subject, appears to be the removal of part of the population, from the Scilly Islands, and some parts of Scotland, who having been long engaged in the fishing trade, might be more profitably employed for themselves, and the country, than they are at present, and Louisburg is particularly mentioned, as being a desirable place to give them a chance of sucess.

We shall close this notice of the subject, with an extract from the statement of Mr. Bliss, which we think will be found intresting, as it contains a brief account of the rise and progress of the settlement of New Brunswick, and points out in a concise manner, its commercial value, and political importance.

"New Brunswick, with the Gulf of St. Lawrence on one side, and the Bay of Fundy on the other, possesses a valuable fishery on its own shores, and lies not far from those of of Newfoundland and Labrador. Its coasts are indented with numerous bays and harbours, and the whole country intersected by rivers and lakes, and innumerable smaller streams, to such a degree that there is not, it is said, a point in the province eight miles distant from a navigable stream. In fertility of soil, it yields to no part of America. The face of the country is level, and is covered with an almost inexhaustible forest of large and fine timber; beneath are mines of coal, free-stone lime and gipsum; and it may be added, that the ports of the Bay of Fundy are the only harbours, north of New York, that are never obstructed by ice.

"That these advantages are not merely speculative, is shown by the progress of the colony. Forty-three years ago the country was one vast wilderness; uninhabited, except by a few French Canadians, and the thin and wandering tribes of the native Indians. At present it contains and supports 80,000 inhabitants, whose exports are I think underrated at £500,000 annually, which are principally exchanged for British manufacturers, and which give employment, (a thing of far [illegible] is consequence) to above 150,000 tons of British shipping, and more than 7,000 seamen. The Colonists have been able to exchange their trees with the mother country for her various manufactures, their fish with the West Indies for sugar and rum, and gold and silver, and even their very stones for bread with the United States.

"In addition to these, there are I think other reasons, of a political nature, for directing to this province the course of the proposed emigration. New Brunswick is at all times the principal, and for the greater part of the year the sole route of communication, not only between the colonies themselves, but between the Canadas and the mother country, excepting through the United States. The United States may possibly again become an enemy's country, and the advantages in that case, of possessing, not merely a route for the mails, but a military line of communication through this province, with Nova Scotia, with the sea, and with Great Britain, must, I conceive, most forcibly show the necessity of not only securing for New Brunswick a defensible frontier, which shall include and protect that communication, (an object which we are, I fear, in some danger of losing) but also in filling up the vacant land with a body of loyal and industrious emigrants, who, instead of being a burthen at home, would find immediate employment for their own industry, and, becoming consumers of British manufacturers, would add to the industry of the mother country, and to the strength and defence of the empire in an exposed and important point."

Accidents in the London District.—A man by the name of Adams, of the Talbot Settlement, was, some days since, severely wounded by the fall of a tree, during a violent tempest, in which he was overtaken. On being conveyed to a neighbouring house, amputation of the leg was found necessary, which being performed by Dr. Dunscombe, hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

Mr. Ezekiel Evens, of the North Talbot Road, in attempting to stop his Horses, while in the act of running away, was thrown under their feet, and the waggon passing over him bruised his head in a shocking manner—he died on the fourth day after the accident.

Died,

NOTICE

To Merchants, Farmers, Millers, & others.

AT a Meeting held this day, at Mr. Duggan's Tavern, on Yonge Street, to take into consideration the state of the Flour Trade in this District, the following resolutions were agreed upon:—

1st—That in order to create a ready market for the principal production of the soil, strict attention should be paid to its being properly prepared for export.

2dly—That an improvement in the Manufacture of Flour in this District is absolutely necessary, for the benefit of all parties.

3dly—That the plan which, in other Mills, now in repute in the more western parts of the Province has been found necessary, would, if adopted in this District, facilitate such improvement.

4thly—That this Meeting be adjourned till Saturday the 9th December, at twelve o'clock, at which, the attendance of all concerned is earnestly solicited, when such regulations will be suggested and entered into, as will tend to the general improvement of the Trade; and Millers, conforming to them, will be entitled to such return as such meeting shall determine upon, for the Manufacturing of Flour that will stand Montreal and Quebec Inspection.

ON THE DEATH OF LORD BYRON.

Translated from the German of H. Muller.

Seven-and-thirty funeral shots! for whom! I fain would know!
Art they seven-and-thirty fields, in which he met and smote the foe?
Are they seven-and-thirty wounds, which on his breast the hero bears?
Name me the mighty deed, whose loss his country's grief declares.

It speaks no wounds, no victories, that thunders sullen roar,
Which from Missolonghi's ramparts high, roll deep-ening to the shore,
And which, like a dungeons echo, summons up to life again,
The heart which sorrow's tidings, had benumb'd with fear and pain.

Seven-and-thirty years—'tis this those numbered thunders say;
Byron, Byron! thine the years of life, which Hellas weeps to-day.
Are they years which thou hast lived and pass'd! No; those no tear shall claim,
For they are and shall forever, in the quenchless light of fame.

On the eagle wings of song upborne whose never wearied stroke,
The souls of sleeping heroes, o'en with their rustling shake,
No, I weep the years through which your course was fated not to run,
The years of all the glory, which for Greece you fain had won.

Such years, such months, such days, to me those funeral sounds recall;
Alas! what strains, what anthem, what wounds, and what a fall!
Seven-and-thirty funeral shots, thunder, thunder through the world,
And toss them o'er your wastes, ye waves, on all your billows hurled;
To the native land that reared him, bear the sound o'er ocean's bed.
Though she banished forth the living, let her still lament the dead.
All the wrongs that she has done to us, in counsel or in deed,
To wipe them from our memory, for Byron was decreed;
O'er his bier the hand of Friendship to his country we extend,
Land of the Free, accept it—be our refuge and our Friend.

YOUNG HEADS ON OLD SHOULDERS.

From the New Monthly Magazine.

The personage who last employed my pencil had an old head upon young shoulders. I have had a subsequent sitter in an opposite predicament.

Into the magnificent eating room of the Union Club House, on Wednesday last, at half past seven o'clock, there entered one of those very numerous people whom we middle-aged gentlemen about town have known by sight for the last five-and twenty years, and whom we always accost with a mental ejaculation of "Who is that man?" The stranger had a lean long body, which in the natural course of events, would have been cased in flecey hosiery, but which, upon the present occasion, was arranged in an olive brown Wellington frock-coat, and white jean waistcoat and trousers. His cravat was of light blue silk, his back was as stiff as a Peer at a bachelor's-square dinner-table, and a small moss rose bloomed in his bosom. Every member of the Union Club is enquired by its Regulations to write his name upon the small piece of ruled paper upon which he inscribes the particulars of his proposed repast. I overlooked one of the old shoulders of the unknown while in the act of performing that operation, and read to myself, "Sir Jerk Withers." Fortunately for the world of Paul Pry-head, rad equally unfortunately for Sir Jerk, the new book of Peerage includes the Baronets. The precious volume, bound in red morocco, lay in the newspaper-room. I requested the ball to inspect it, and turning to the W's read as follows: "Sir Jerk Withers, son of Sir Jerom and Dame Arrabella, born the 14th of January, 1776." Good, thought I: this makes him sixty years old in January last.—I now returned to the dining-room: and while Sir Jerk Withers was paying his respects to a ragout of veal and a pint of burgundy, I availed myself of that opportunity to re-peruse his face and person.

Time sometimes makes his chief inroads upon the face, sometimes upon the figure, and sometimes, like fiddlers at an auction, in two places at once. When he helps us to fat, the face continues to look young and the body gets old. When he helps us to lean, the body continues to look young and the face gets old. A bulky body is not easily managed: for fat, if dislodged from one station takes refuge in another; and tight lacing only makes the matter worse. As Swift says, "you lose in coach-hire what you save in oats." I could name an eminent lawyer, who, on dropping her fan as a lure to Archer, would be terribly puzzled how to pick it up again, if that seeming serving-man should fail so to do. Now, Sir Jerk Withers having been complimented by old Scythe and hour-glass, with a man body, ought in equity to have had a young looking one. But a tropical climate has given it a bend. Still he carries it jauntily with an air, as who should say "Hey, damme." Which of us semi-centenarians does not remember Billy Lewis the Comedian? There was a man for a fight with Time! he drew up his chest, grasped the lapels of his coat, forged, minced from one stage door to the other, with a stiff knee and a harlequin head, and seemed like old Æson, to shake forty winters from his shoulders in less time than it would take a flying man to quicken the Jack Robinson. "Even such a man" is Sir Withers; rather older, indeed, in the body, but proportionallyyounger in the head. I, will not positively assert that the gentleman wears the club room, but that it is, that whilst he was in the act of giving directions to one of the dome-buttoned waiters to pull down a window-blind, in order to put out of view the circuitous stand of hackney coaches, which was performing a hippodrome revolution, in what once was the King's Mews, I could not but remark that his shirt collar was slightly tinged with vermilion. Nature made the gentleman sanguine: but I know not what mothers call auburn, and all the rest of the world red. These have been cautiously dyed of a sort of mahogany colour. So, too, he intended to dye the hair of his head, but his valet was misinformed. The process was terrific: few more so since the days of the Martyrs. Sir Jerk's head was rubbed with a magical composition, and he was enjoined to sleep in a cotton night cap with a cabbage leaf between his scalp and his night-cap, to awaken the virtues of the fluid. He adjourned to the inn at Salt-hill during the experiment, that nobody in St. James's might be privy to it. He went to bed on the morning ensuing his arrival, with high expectations of his own irresistibility. He unbarred his window, like a male Aurora; and, after taking a peep at the little green hillock on the opposite side of the road to which the triennial highway robbers of the Alton Boys have given a celebrity rather disproportionate to its bulk, he proceeded to his mirror, and cautiously removed the cap and cabbage-leaf, in the full hope of finding his grey nodule transformed to a beautiful chestnut brown. Alas! the virtues of the fluid were not awakened, but those of the cabbage leaf were! Sir Jerk's hair had become peagreen! half distracted, he drove home in a hack-cutaire at night, hoping in the recesses of his lodgings, in hackle-attire to be the Green Man and Still. Fate ordered it otherwise: an alarm of fire hurried him from his bed at three o'clock in the morning: he bolted out at the street door with such precipitance, that his night cap fell from his head. A Phœnix fireman, who had dipped into the classics, qualified in the dead languages by a new system of instantaneous education, espying his wild aspect, mane like hackle-attire to be the Green, and exclaimed, with a Latin ostio—"Ah right—here's Rex Flaviorum come to put out the flames! Sir Jerk Withers has since taken refuge in a wig, and has sported a pea-green coat, with a single grey hair in their wig. This is what the lapse of years call proving too much. Ever while you live "Eye Nature's walks," and where she has planted grey ash trees, endeavour not to ground by denuding the top of the head, do not fly in her face by ordering home a hyacinth cæson, with one of those curls, sometimes called love-locks, and sometimes heart-breakers, playing carelessly over a forehead, where the crow has been busily treading beforehand. One would thing that this mode of making bad worse would be of rare occurrence,—quite the contrary. No sooner does a man take to the hair than he forthwith resolves to clap a young head upon his old shoulders, and Sir Jerk Withers is too modish a man to be second in the race. In fact, his wig is juvenility itself, and is the only part of him that is at teens. The outside of the head is, in that particular, a remote from the age of discretion as is the inside of it.

When Sir Jerk Withers had despatched his dinner, he adjourned at eleven to the library, and I did the same. Here he seated himself at the central table, and his back to the light, as by-gone beauties are apt to do. I once dined with a certain German princess, at a certain house on the banks of the Thames, to which a subsequent resident gave much celebrity. The German princess had been a favorite toast in her day, but that day was forty years ago. Accordingly her highness manœuvred to avoid fronting the light, with all the skill of an admiral getting the weather gauge. The contrivance answered so well that I did not look upon her as being older than two-and-forty; when suddenly a city barge, intent upon swan-hopping, sailed up the river. Her Highness was thrown off her guard; she beckoned me to the window to behold the gilded and turtle-fraught vessel; Apollo looked her full in the face: I did the same; and her Highness shewed seventy-two! A similar accident nearly occurred to Sir Jerk. He had enabled to another table to fetch away a Transatlantic Review. The canvass blind was down, and just as Sir Jerk was stooping in hear of his prize, an unlucky waiter, conceiving that the room wanted more light, touches a spring. The blind flew up; the slanting sun darted his rays from the apex of Warwick-house into the Baronet's face. Exit blooms outre wrinkles: and I verily believe if the Club, like that of the University, had admitted Ladies, Sir Jerk would have hurled the waiter out of the window, across the street, even as Richard in Arbiate, ejected the friar three miles into the Mediterranean.

Hardly had Sir Jerk Withers smoothed his ruffled plumes, when General Fitz Meadows, an old-school Peninsular Baronet, entered the club room, and placed himself at the same table with the latter. "Ay," thought I to myself, as I surveyed their contrasted exteriors, "this is what a Gentleman of sixty ought to be." The General's hair is bald at the top, and the hair, which curls above the ears, is for the most part grey.—His face is ruddy with exercise, and not with rouge His body swells towards the chest, his Banonet, unseen the club room, and placed himself at the same table with the latter. The General's hair is bald at the top, and the hair, which curls above the ears, is for the most part grey.—His face is ruddy with exercise, and not with rouge His body swells towards the chest, his Banonet, unseen the club room, and dies at his age to swell. This is a matter of no moment to him. He does not, like his friend the Baronet, pinch his unhappy loins in stays, and pride dye the hair of his head in spite of baldness and informed. The process was terrific: few more so since the days of the Martyrs. Sir Jerk's head was rubbed with a magical composition, and he was enjoined to sleep in a cotton night cap with a cabbage leaf between his scalp and his night-cap, to awaken the virtues of the fluid. Hardly had Sir Jerk Withers smoothed his ruffled plumes, when General Fitz Meadows, an old-school Peninsular Baronet, entered in approbation of her conduct. The mother of the unfortunate girl, who had just arrived from Manchester to see her daughter, quite unconscious of her illness, at that instant rushed into the room, threw herself down in a paroxysm of grief and implored the Coroner to let her see her dear Ellen. The scene became too distressing, and the poor afflicted mother was obliged to be removed. The Jury returned a verdict, " Died by the visitation of God."

The Commerce of Liverpool.—The annual finance accounts have just been published, by order of the House of Commons. By this document it appears, that the whole of export duties for Great Britain and Ireland, for the year ending 5th of January last, amounted to £125,972. 19s. 8d.—Thus showing an increase upon the amount of the preceding year. Of this sum nearly £50,000, or the great proper of two-fifths of the whole, was collected at Liverpool, whilst London contributed scarcely £30,000.

SPAIN.

The deserters from Spain act by concert: for two bodies of about 2000 each entered Portugal by different points, presented similar declarations, saying that if the government would not aid them in carrying a better system into Spain, they would go to Madrid themselves. " What will Spain do," inquires a Paris paper—the government placed confidence in the troops; and they have just asked in vain of the Madrid Merchants a paltry loan of two millions.

The arrival of English troops in the Tagus is spoken of; but they come as to an ally. The English squadron is still there; and a Paris paper inquires what nation will dare to interfere against another constitution, after what she experienced of France?

The British embassy are very active at Madrid.

The Prior of the richest convent in Bercelona has been assassinated, probably for having said that the Clergy ought to support the state.

Propositions have been made to the King of Spain, by a Frenchman, offering to secure, in the name of the Knights of Malta, the coast of Spain from the insults of the Barbary powers, on condition that he will give them the Island of Minorca. They would, further, renounce all claim to their possessions in Spain, and take their Chief from the Royal Family.

Gou. Rodil has received from the King the Grand Cross of the Royal American Order of Isabella the Catholic, for his defence of the Castle of Callao. It will be recollected that this post was held out in express violation of the capitulation of Ayacucho; and that, notwithstanding this breach of good faith, the Peruvians strictly performed the stipulation.

A letter from Tricato, says, the Island of Milo has been ceded to the christian nations, as a port for their vessels.

FRANCE.

Extract of a Letter, dated, Paris, Sept. 28, 1826, to the Editor of the New-York Commercial Advertiser.

Europe seems on the eve of another mighty struggle. France appears quiet, but the knowing ones say that the appearance is deceitful. I think myself that war will take place between Russia and Turkey. It is said here, that France and England will unite to keep the power of the former country within salutary limits. Mr. Canning is here, and in good favour. The King is not liked, but his successor, the Dauphin, is rather popular, being considered a thoroughly honest man.

A Diligence, on the route from Brussels to Paris, was lately set on fire by the pipe of a traveller on the top, and injured some of the baggage.

A Society has been formed in France to encourage the colonization of French Guiana, for the purpose of obtaining wood for ship and other building, as also for cultivating the soil. The first company of colonists were to sail the beginning of October. The climate is considered healthy. The King of the Low Countries has granted permission to the children of the great painter, David, to erect a monument to their father, in the cemetery of Saint Gudule.

The line of succession to the throne of Austria, is said to be not determined, as the Imperial Prince is not inclined to the system of M. Meternich. The second son of the Emperor would in that case be substituted.

RUSSIA.

In Moscow there is a continued succession of entertainments. On the 13th there was a masqurade in the National Theatre; on the 15th, a ball at the Club of the Nobility; on the 16th, the merchants were to give a grand dinner; on the 17th, a ball at the Duke of Ragusa's; on the 19th, 21st and 23d, balls at the Duke of Devonshire's, Prince Jussupof's and Countess Orloff's.—On the 24th, there was to be all kinds of popular amusements; and, in conclusion grand fire-works on the 25th.

General Paskewitsch, with two divisions of infantry, and General Illowraisky, with 20,000 Cossacks, are ordered to the frontiers of Persia, there to receive further orders. By his Majesty's commands, all soldiers wearing the honorary medal for 20 years faithful services have been asked whether they will continue to serve with triple pay, or receive their honorable discharge in order to accept, besides their pension, a more comfortable situation, on which they are to decide freely.

UNITED STATES.

Destructive Hurricane.—One of the most tremeudous, awful and destructive hurricanes, of which we have any record, passed through the country about 25 miles above here, in nearly an east direction, on Friday evening the 20th instant The current of wind was only about 100 yards in width. In its course it swept away every thing from the ground; such was its resistless fury, that the sturdiest oaks, and the heaviest rocks, were torn from the earth, and blown off like feathers before an ordinary wind. This is extravagant language we know, but it is no more so than the reality will bear us out in using. The forest where the hurricane passed, was levelled with the ground! presenting the appearance of a meadow of luxuriant grass, with a single swath mowed through the centre of it. Wherever it passed a plantation, it totally annihilated every thing in its course. The greatest sufferer we have heard of, is Samuel Jones Esq. (late shoriff of this county)—The hurricane unfortunately passed directly over the most valuable improvement on his plantation near the Yadkin river, about 25 miles above this; and it left desolation and death in its wake. His large dwelling, the kitchens, smoke houses, negro houses, and a great number of other out houses, with all their conteuts, were entirely swept from the ground, where they stood, and blown off in thousands of atoms, and scattered over the country for miles around. Three negroes were killed, and another not expecedt to live. Fortunately a number of negroes, on hearing the coming of the wind, ran into a large barn, which was but little injured, the current of wind passed east of it. On the north east side of the river, the hurricane in its course passed directly over the farm of Mr. Jacob Hoover; swept away all his building and every thing in them; and killed his daughter, aged about 11 years. We have not learned the whole extent of the hurricane.

To give some idea of the tremendous force of the wind, we can state on the best authority, that large timbers 12 inches square, and 20 or 30 feet long, were carried two and three miles; some of the wearing apparel, blown from Mr. Jones' house was found lodged 6 or 7 miles from there; knives and forks were blown two and three miles, and some of them stuck fast in trees at that distance. We could name hundreds of other instances, seemingly as probable as the above, which are vouched for in a way that will not admit a doubt of their correctness.

It is almost impossible to estimate the loss Mr. Jones has sustained; it cannot be less than $2,000.—Salisbury, [N. C.] Carolinian.

Steam-Boat Burnt.—We regret to have to state the loss of the elegant steam-boat Emerald by fire. It is perhaps generally kown that this boat belonged to the proprietors of the Union Line between this city and Philadelphia, the Emerald running from New-York to New-Brunswick. She arrived at the latter port on Saturday afternoon, and was to have left for this city on Sunday morning at 6 o'clock. At half past one o'clock yesterday morning she was discovered to be on fire by one of the persons who was asleep in the cabin, and who was aroused by the suffocating smoke. He gave the alarm, and the commander, Capt. Vanderbolt, whose residence was within a few yards, repaired immediately to the scene of conflagration, but the boat was, in a few minutes, in a sheet of flame. Every exertion in the power of the Inhabitants of New-Brunswick was rendered, but it being necessary to part the fasts, to prevent other vessels from taking fire, the engines could render but very little service. Besides the loss of the boat, which was valued from sixty to seventy thousand dollars, Captain Vanderbolt lost many valuables, and himself and crew all their clothes. The boat was owned by Mr. Gibbons. An express was sent off to Elizabethtown for the steam-boat Beland to proceed to New-Brunswick to bring on the passengers who were bound to this city, and who arrived at that boat yesterday.

The cause of the fire is not positively known, but it is conjectured to have been communicated by the brick furnace to some timber connected with it.

INTERESTING TO NAVIGATORS.—We received by the last mail the following interestin, letter:—

OPELOUSAS, Parish of St. Landry, Louisiana, September 27, 1826.

The enclosed is a copy of a card found in a bottle on the mouth of the river Calcacesa, in this parish, by Major Cowarn, a respectable gentleman residing upon that river. The mouth of the Calcacesan is about two hundered miles west of New Orleans, in a direct line. It may be of great importance to navigators, I therefore enclose it for publication.

Yours respectfully,
R. D. MARKHAM

(COPY.)

" This bottle was thrown overboard from the brig Jack Tar, of London, in latitude 34°. 35°. N. and long. 16°. 1 W. This is intended to ascertain the current—whoever picks it up is requested to acknowledge it by publication.

NORTHERN OVERLAND EXPEDITION.

" Fort Franklin, Great Bear Lake, Feb. 1826.

" After remaining as long at New-York as our desire to commence our journey would permit, we proceeded to Lake Ontario, crossed it to York, the capital of Upper Canada, and from thence travelled by land and water, in carts and in boats, to Penetanguishine, a naval depot in Lake Huron; here we embarked in two canoes, manned by 24 Canadian voyagers: our party previously consisting of five officers and four mariners, and, coasting Lakes Huron and Superior, arrived at Fort William, a post belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company, on the 10th of May, 1825. At this place the expedition embarked in four small canoes adapted for the navigation of small rivers, and proceeding in two divisions by the Lake of the Woods, Rainy Lake, Lake Winnipeg, and the River Saskatchew, came to Cumberland House where the seamen attached to it, and who had been sent out with three boats passed the winter. We arrived at Cumberland House on the 15th June, twelve days after our seamen had resumed their voyage for the summer, and losing no time in following them, we overtook them on the 29th of the same month, near the height of land which seperates the rivers flowing towards Hudson's Bay, from those which fall into the Aretic Sea; our progress after this was more slow, from the accumulation of our stores and provisions, which we had been picking up at the different trading ports on our route; the different portages detained us considerably, as the crews had to make five or six, and the boats were carried seven or eight trips across Methy; the longest portage on the route is about 13 miles statute in length, and occupied us seven days We arrived at the Lake of the Hills on the 15th of July, at Slave Lake the 28th, and entered Mackenzie's river on the 31st. On the 3d of August we arrived at Fort Simpson, situated at the junction of the river of the mountains with the Mackenzie. On the 6th came to Fort Norman, another of the Company's posts, situate on the Mackenzie, about two hundred miles further down; on the 7th entered Bear Lake River, and on the 10th arrived at this place, which we have since named after our commanding officer. Mr. Back arrived next day with the detachment of canoes under his charge, Captain Franklin and Mr. Kendall having descended the river to the sea in a boat with six seamen and an Esquemaux interpreter. They came to the mouth of the river six days after leaving Fort Norman, having past the last of the Company's posts about half way. From Garry's Island, lying 28 or 30 miles to seaward of the river's mouth, they had a wide prospect of salt water free from ice, and abounding in seals and white whales. This was a cheering prospect; after remaining a day on the Island to ascertain by astronomical observation its position, and which they found to be lat. 69 deg. 29 min. north, long. 135 deg. 41 min. west, they reascended the river, and joined us here on the 23d of September. The expedition up to this latter date had travelled from New-York 5,180 miles, or from Penetanguishine, the out-post of Canadian settlements, about 4,444 miles, from the 23d of April.

" Captain Franklin was very desirous of opening a communication with the Esquimaux at the mouth of Mackenzies river, but did not see any of them. He left, however, presents of iron work at several encampments, which appeared to be of recent erection, and we have the satisfaction since the commencement of winter of learning, through the medium of an adjoining tribe, that they received them, and are desirous of evincing their gratitude by receiving us kindly next season."

Presentiment.—The power of presentiments is extraordinary. During the reign of terror in France, the Baron of Marivet was continually tormented by the apprehensions that he should die upon a scaffold. All the cares of his wife were employed unsuccessfully to calm his fears. He sometimes indulged himself with the hope, that if his birth-day passed without his being arrested, he should be delivered from the weight which pressed upon his heart, and might perhaps be saved. Upon one occasion, he gazed, in a fit of deep melancholy, upon his son, who was then about two years old, and exclaimed,—" I shall never live to see this child in male clothing;" an observation which his lady carefully treasured up in her memory. The horrors of the revolution appeared at length to draw to a close, and the birth-day of Baron de Marivet had arrived. His wife was preparing a little feast for him upon the occasion, and the hour of supper was fixed upon for enjoying it. Wishing to give her husband an agreeable surprise, and to belie his presentiments, Madame de Marivet, about seven o'clock, when they were just serving the dessert, left the table, and returning a few moments afterwards with her son in her arms dressed like a sailor, she gave him to her husband, whom she tenderly embraced, and exclaimed " you now see your son, my dear, in man's clothing, and your birth day has already passed!" ' Not yet,' was the reply, ' midnight has not yet struck.' His friends shuddered at the words, and anxiously turned their eyes upon a time-piece, the fingers of which they silently regarded, as they moved towards the wished for hour. It was just on the point of twelve, when a thundering knock was heard at the door. M. de Marivet turned pale; all who surrounded him were struck dumb with terror; the door opened, and gave admission to the emissaries of the revolutionary committee, who were come to seize him. M. de la C., whom, in a letter, he had advised to emigrate, had not taken the precaution to destroy his papers. After his departure they had been transported, amongst his other effects, to the house of M. de Piepape, his grandfather. The latter had been imprisoned on suspicion, and seals had been placed upon the property at his house. He died in prison, and the agents of the committee, who were present when the seals were removed, found, in an earthen vessel, amongst some torn papers which were destined to be burnt, the letter in which M. de Marivet advised M. de la C. to emigrate. This letter was his sentence of condemnation. M. de Marivet was summoned before the revolutionary tribunal, condemned to death, and lost his head upon the scaffold, just before Thermidor.

A serious alarm was excited a few nights ago, in Cowan-street, occasioned by the absence of three young children from the paternal roof for some hours after the gloaming. Search however having been made in all directions without success, the despairing parents were upon the point of sending through the drum, for the purpose of advertising them, when, fortunately, a little girl happening to go to a sow house immediately behind the dwelling, with meat to grumphy was surprised at the appearance of something black lying coiled up in a corner thereof. Having gone and procured a light, she returned with some others, and proceeding (not without fear,) to explore the mystery, was saluted with a sonorous and deep-drawn snore, somewhat different from the monotonous grunt which Saunders was in the habit of sending forth, which amazed them exceedingly; they, however, upon again recovering their courage, cautiously approached to the mysterious spot—when, lo, they discovered the three renegadoes most lovingly locked in the close embrace of the said sow, and all four fast asleep.—Stirling Journal.

COLONIAL.

A Commissioner has been appointed for the carrying into effect of certain improvements to the Navigation of the River St. John, below Fredericton, viz:—Removing such sunk logs or trees from the bed of the river, as will be pointed out, and making iron rings and fastening bolts, and attaching the same in a secure manner to such places of the rock on the banks of the narrows near Indian Town, as may be required.

HALIFAX, Oct. 28.

Yesterday morning, two of the men taken into custody at Cape Breton for Piracy and the murder of the Captain and Mate of the American schooner Fame, of Boston, were carried to jail under a strong guard. We understand that it is the intention of the American Government to send down an armed vessel to take these people to Boston, in order to have them tried there. Halifax has seldom been the scene of, executions, and we are happy that in the present instance we shall be thus relieved from the disagreeable duty of carrying the law into operation, as such scenes have generally no good effect either upon the morals or feelings of the spectators.

CAPE BRETON.—The following is an extract of a letter from an emigrant from Scotland, who arrived in Cape Breton, in July last:—" We have been traversing the country in quest of a settlement, and have now fixed on one on the Grand River Mire. We intend passing the winter here. You wished me to communicate to you what remarks I might make on the state of the country and inhabitants. Regarding the former—the soil is, in general thin, though by no means unproductive. The rearing of grain is very precarious, an instance of which has appeared this season, the crop having greatly failed, owing to the destructive influence of heavy mists, which are very prevalent here. As to the people—the inhabitants in this quarter are composed of Scotch, English, French, Irish, and native Indians; the majority are Scotch Highlanders from Barra. Among such a mixture of nations, one may expect to find great diversity of character—a very prominent feature of which is hospitality; another obvious trait is ingenuity. A landholder here makes his own house—implements of husbandry,—builds his own boats—makes his own clothes—and every other requisite to, if not the luxuries, at least the necessaries thing of life. The unsettled state in which I now am has precluded the possibility of my writing you so fully as I would wish.—Montreal Herald.

SHIP BUILDING.

PICTOU, Oct. 17.—Launched, yesterday, for R. McKay, Esq. at his ship yard, on the river John, the brig Earl of Dalhousie, of 315 tons. Also, on same day, for Mr. Hatton, at the ship-yard of Mr. George Walker, in Merigomish, the bring Henry Tent, of 157 tons. This day, in the town, for Mr. John Taylor, and from his ship-yard, the Jennet, of 300 tons; at the same time, from the ship-yard of Messrs. Crichton and Son, the brig Tay, 240 tons. All those vessels are coppered-fastened, and said to be well finished.

These, with those already launched, together with a few at present on the stocks, and included in the following list of ships built and building here during the present yerr with an account of their tonnage.

The Militia was reviewed on Monday and Tuesday last, on which latter day, His Excellency the Lieut. Governor was present, and expressed himself highly pleased in the manner in which they acquited themselves in their exercises.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

MR. ALEXANDER GIBBS, of Montreal, Surveyor and Draftsman, proposes, to publish, if he receives a sufficient encouragement, a Plan and Section of the Lachine Canal. Although compared with the gigantic artificial navigation in the neighbouring state of New-York, the Lachine Canal may be considered as insignificant, it derives consequence from the magnitude of its utility, and as being the first attempt, made in these Colonies, at improving the communication between the great western waters and the waters navigable to the ocean; it may, not unaptly, be considered as the parent of the canals since undertaken, either by Government or by the exertions of spirited individuals, in other parts of the provinces, and in point of the general style and solidity of its execution, may vie with any other similar work on this continent at least. Mr. Gibbs' Prospectus is with Mr. Thompson, at the Exchange Reading-Room, who is authorized to receive subscriptions.

We understand that the printed Report of the Committee of the House of Commons on Emigration, with the evidence taken on the subject, has been officially received. Mr. WILMOT HORTON was indefatigable in his attention to this Committee, and obtained the attendance and evidence of every person connected with the Canadas, who happened to be in LONDON while the investigation was going on last spring. From the desire expressed by Mr. HORTON that the utmost publicity might be given to the Evidence and the Report, as well in the Colonies as at home, we doubt not that the whole will eventually be laid before the public, and circulated in the most general manner. We have already perused with great interest the evidence of the Honorable RICHARD UNIACKE, and that of HENRY BLISS, Esq. relating more particularly to the fisheries, and to the Province of NOVA-SCOTIA.—Quebec Official Gazette.

The weather has been variable during the past week; the cold which was experienced in the early part, subsided on Thursday, since which there has been a continual thaw. The winter roads are again broken up and travelling must be bad, as the Montreal post had not arrived at 3 o'clock.

Most of the outward bound vessels are ready for sea. The Ottawa, Douglas, for London, as well as several others will sail to-morrow, should the wind continue fair as it is at present. Quebec Mercury.

The official paper recommends a Light House on the Island of St. Paul at the entrance of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, to be provided for by a duty of 1d. per ton on shipping arriving at the Port of Quebec and the Ports in the Gulf. For the duty at the latter, it would, of course be necessary to have the co-operation of New Brunswick.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1826.

By late arrivals at New York London dates to 14, and Liverpool to 16, October were received. We have copied the principal items of news. The accounts are satisfactory, respecting the amendment in the trade of the country.—the money market is improving, and confidence in a great measure restored.

Mr. GALT, Secretary to the Canada Land Company, has arrived at New York, in the ship Brighton from London. We may therefore shortly expect to learn the plans proposed by the Company, for the disposal and settlement of their Lands, in this Province.

The Parliament of Lower Canada, by Proclamation in the Official Gazette, meets for the dispatch of business, on 23, January.

We have heard, that it is intended to remove the Troops and Public Stores from Fort George next Spring, and that preparations are making for carrying the object into effect. The contemplated works at the Short Hills, in Thorold, we understand, will be commenced early next season, and when completed, will be occupied instead of Fort George.

The Woolen Manufactures of the United States, appear to be in the most depressed state, and Congress is to be petitioned at its next sitting, to take the subject into its consideration. Meetings have lately been held in Boston, and resolutions passed, setting forth the embarrassed state of the Trade, and a Committe appointed to correspond with other parts of the Union, on the subject of the intended memorial. The "Circular" Letter of this Corresponding Committe states, that "the fact of the unprecedented depression of American Woolen Manufacturing establishments is undeniable; and that their increased distress and probable ruin, unless ample protection is speedily extended to them by Government, are clearly forseen."

The duty on imported Woolen Cloths in the United States in 1816, was 25½ per cent, and a petition that year to Congress, resulted in an increase of 8 per cent, making the present duty 33½ per Cent. The duty on imported Wool is 30 per Cent. The remedy proposed by the Boston Meeting for the difficulties under which the Woolen Trade labours, is an additional duty on imported Woolen Cloths.

Passengers in the Brighton from London—John Galt, Esq. of London; Col. Evans, C. B. 70th Regt. Hon. George Markland and lady, of Kingston, U. C.

From the Niagara Gleaner.

On Sunday last, at the Garrison Service in this Town, one of the most eloquent and elegant discourses, upon the death of the Hon. Wm. Claus, (an event which we recorded in our last number,) was preached by the Rev. Thomas Handcock, the Acting Chaplain to the Forces at this Post. Whether we consider the style of composition, or the sublime doctrines it so ably developed of the value and immortality of the soul, we are equally sensible of its impressive effect; and we are convinced that the many who were deprived of the benefits of its instructive nature, by absence, unite with us in the hope that he may be induced to publish a composition that so eminently displays the powers of the Christian Minister and the Scholar, and the circulation of which must be a subject of improvement and moral advantage to all.—(COMMUNICATED.)

NOTICE

To Merchants, Farmers, Millers, & others.

AT a Meeting held this day, at Mr. Duggan's Tavern, on Yonge Street, to take into consideration the state of the Flour Trade in this District, the following resolutions were agreed upon:—

1st—That in order to create a ready market for the principal production of the soil, strict attention should be paid to its being properly prepared for export.

2dly—That an improvement in the Manufacture of Flour in this District is absolutely necessary, for the benefit of all parties.

4thly—That this Meeting be adjourned till Saturday the 9th December, at twelve o'clock, which, the attendance of all concerned is earnestly solicited, when such regulations will be suggested and entered into, as will tend to the general improvement of the Trade; and Millers, conforming to them, will be entitled to such return as such meeting shall determine upon, for the Manufacturing of Flour that will stand Montreal and Quebec Inspection.

Upper Canada Gazette EXTRAORDINARY.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, TUESDAY DECEMBER 5, 1826.

By Authority.

YORK, U. C TUESDAY DEC. 5, 1826.

This day at One o'clock, HIS EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR proceeded in the usual state, from the Government House, to the Chamber of the Honorable the Legislative Council, where being arrived and seated on the Throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was sent with a Message from His Excellency to the House of Assembly, commanding their attendance. The Members present being come up accordingly, His Excellency was pleased to open the Session of the Legislature, with the following

SPEECH:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and
Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

AFTER the usual interval, you are again convened to discharge those duties, of which the correct and diligent performance, is most essential to the welfare and happiness of the People.

Since you were last assembled, no material change has taken place in that general condition of affairs, upon which I had it in my power to congratulate you at the opening of the last Session; except, that from causes variously assigned, the Commercial and Agricultural interests of Great Britain have experienced depression, to a degree of which few examples are to be found in her history. We have reason now to indulge a confident hope that the calamity is fast passing away; and in the mean time it must confirm our admiration of the excellent civil institutions of our Parent State, to find, that under so extraordinary a pressure, they have continued unbaken; and that she is even at such a moment extending, in the fullest degree, the blessings of her protection and care to every portion of her Dominions.

During the recess I have had it in my power to visit the several Districts of this Province, and I have been exceedingly gratified to find in all of them, unequivocal proofs of advancement; and to receive from the People the most earnest assurances of their contentment, and of their very grateful sense of the abundant good which they enjoy, under the truly paternal Government of their Sovereign.

The advancement which I have every where observed is the more satisfactory, as it is not the hasty work of speculation, and depends on no doubtful basis; but is, on the contrary, substantial, and regularly progressive.

In contemplating the growth of civil society in this Province, it cannot escape attention, that as the interests of individuals are becoming more important, and their combinations more various, the want of Courts of Equity, and perhaps some other imperfections in our system of jurisprudence, which may for a long time have been little felt, must soon produce serious inconveniencies, if remedies are not applied. To these subjects, whenever the fit opportunity may appear to present itself, I shall be happy that you apply your earnest attention.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The Public Accounts, and Estimates, shall be laid before you; and I trust that you will make the necessary provision for the service of the ensuing year.

I will put you early in possession of His Majesty's pleasure upon your several Addresses of the last Session, so far as it has been communicated to me.

Honorable Gentlemen and Gentlemen,

The prospect now opening to the inhabitants of Upper Canada is very cheering. The system of facilitating emigration which the British Government has recently adopted, and which having been applied in practice to this Province, can here, be best appreciated, appears to have attracted, after a minute investigation, the favorable attention of Parliament, and in no small degree of the Nation at large.

We have reason to be well assured that of the benefits which may result from such a policy extensively pursued, this Colony will enjoy its full proportion: and if, from the actual state of Trade and Agriculture in Great Britain, and from the operations of the Canada Land Company, it shall happen, that persons possessed of moderate capital shall be induced to become Settlers among us, we shall enjoy in greater perfection the advantages of an increase of population, by receiving at the same moment, a proportionate accession of intelligence and wealth.

The Report of the Military Commissioners who visited this Province during the last year, has led to the resolution of adopting such measures for our Military defence, as will be commensurate with the object; and I have great satisfaction in communicating to you, that even now the execution of this provident and vigorous policy, may be fairly said to have commenced.

The works projected, must in their execution, add materially to the stock of public wealth, by furnishing employment to labor; and it cannot be necessary to remark upon the object to be attained by their completion.

The Report of the Military Commissioners, has served to strengthen the appeals which have been made from this Province, respecting the improvement of its Internal Navigation. An Officer of rank and science has recently arrived in Canada, for the purpose of superintending the execution of a Canal, to lead from Lake Ontario to the River Ottawa, on a scale more extended than we had ventured to suggest. I am happy to acquaint you that the opinions which have been expressed by that Officer, both in regard to the value of this work and its practicability, are in every respect satisfactory.

The Welland Canal, scarcely less an object of interest, although we owe it to the enterprize of a private Company, is proceeding with rapidity, and its present state, affords a reasonable promise of its successful accomplishment. I must strongly recommend this work to your favor and protection.

While these extensive improvements in our communications by Water are in progress, without burthening the Provincial Treasury; I cannot but direct your attention to those more obvious and easy improvements, in our Highways, for want of which, the people of this Country may even find it difficult, to avail themselves of all the advantages, which those great works would otherwise present.

I shall make an early communication to you of the instructions which His Majesty has been pleased to transmit for my guidance, in respect to the Naturalizing of such Aliens as have become resident in the Province: and if other subjects shall present themselves, which I shall find it my duty to submit to your consideration, I will lay them before you in the course of your Session.

ANNO SEPTIMO
GEORGII IV. REGIS.

CAP. LXVIII.

An Act to amend so much of an Act of the Thirty-first Year of His Late Majesty, as relates to the Election of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada.

[26th May 1826.]

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the thirty-first Year of the Reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act to repeal certain Parts of an Act passed in the Fourteenth Year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled 'An Act for making more effectual Provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America,' and to make further Provision for the Government of the of the said Province, it is amongst other things enacted, that no Person shall be Summoned to the Legislative Council in either of the Provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada who shall not be of the full Age of Twenty-one Years, and a natural-born Subject of His Majesty, or a Subject of His Majesty naturalized by Act of the British Parliament, or a Subject of His Majesty having become such by the Conquest and Cession of the Province of Canada; and it is thereby further provided, that no person shall be capable of voting at any Election of a Member to serve in the Legislative Assembly in either of the said Provinces of Upper Canada or Lower Canada, or of being elected at any such Election, who shall not be of the full Age of Twenty-one Years, and a natural-born Subject of His Majesty, or a Subject of His Majesty naturalized by Act of the British Parliament, or a Subject of His Majesty hrving become such by the Conquest and Cession of the Province of Canada: And whereas it is expedient that Persons naturalized by any Act of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, assented to by His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, should be enabled to be summoned to the Legislative Council of the said Province of Upper Canada, and of voting at the Elections of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province, or of being Elected at any such Election; Be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, That all Persons naturalized by any Act of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, assented to by His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, shall hence forth be and be deemed competent in the Law to be summoned to the Legislative Council of the said Province of Upper Canada, and to vote at the Elections of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province, and to be Elected at any such Election.

Persons naturalized in Upper Canada may be summoned to the Legislative Council & vote at Elections.

II. Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, That when ever any Bill which has been passed by the Legislative Council and by the House of Assembly in the said Province of Upper Canada, for the Naturalization of any Persons or Person, shall be presented for His Majesty's Assent to the Governor or Lieutenant Governor of the said Province, or to the Person Administering His Majesty's Government there in, such Governor or Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, shall and he is hereby required to reserve every such Bill for the Signification of His Majesty's Pleasure thereon; and no such Bill shall have any Force or Authority within the said Province of Upper Canada until the Governor or Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government, shall Signify, either by Speech or Message to the Legislative Council and Assembly of the said Province or by Proclamation, that such Bill has been laid before His Majesty in Council, and that His Majesty has been pleased to assent to the same; and no such Bill shall have any Force or Authority within the said Province unless His Majesty's Assent thereto shall have been so signified as aforesaid, within the Space of Two Years from the Day on which such Bill shall have been presented for His Majesty's Assent to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government.

Naturalization Bills not to have effect till they have received His Majesty's Assent.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot, Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. D. Cameron, Secretary.

Executive Council Office,
York, 23rd March, 1826 }

NOTICE is hereby given, by Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in Council, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.

No. 9 1-f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Goyernment, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 23 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of those general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

POETRY.

THE CLIFFS OF DOVER.

By Mrs. Hemans.

Rocks of my country! let the cloud
Your crested heights array,
And rise ye like a fortress proud,
Above the surge and spray!

My spirit greets you as ye stand,
Breasting the billow's foam;
Oh, thus forever guard the land,
The sacred land of home!

I have left sunny skies behind
Lighining up the classic shrines,
And music in the southern wind,
And sunshine on the vines.

The breathings of the myrtle flowers
Have floated o'er my way,
The pilgrim's voice at vesper hours,
Has sooth'd me with its lay.

The isles of Greece, the hills of Spain,
The purple heaven of Rome—
Yes, all are glorious; yet again
I bless thee, land of home!

For thine the Sabbath peace, my land;
And thine the guarded hearth;
And thine the dead, the noble band
That make thee holy earth.

Their voices meet me in thy breeze;
Their steps are on thy plains;
Their names, by old majestic trees,
Are whisper'd round thy fanes:

Their blood hath mingled with the tide
Of thy exulting sea;
Oh, be it still a joy a pride,
To live and die for thee!

MISCELLANEOUS.

At Grove Park, near Warwick, the seat of the late Lord Dormer (father of the present Lord) Dr. Parr was a frequent guest. Indeed, he often went there without invitation, and in his most ordinary costume. Thither, also, he occasionally sent me on an embassy to obtain the Courier newspaper; and, upon my return, he made me read to him the parliamentary debates which were at that period full of interest. In the delivery of Mr. Pitt's speeches, I sometimes took a malicious pleasure in giving the utmost effect to the brilliant passages, upon which the Doctor would exclaim. "Why, you noddle, do you dwell with such energy upon Pitt's empty declamation? Don't you see it is all sophistry?"

At other moments he would say, "That is powerful; but Fox will answer it." When I pronounced the words, "Mr Fox rose," Parr would roar out, "Stop!"—and after shaking the ashes out of his pipe, and filling it afresh, he would add, with a marked emphasis, "Now, you dog, do your best!" In the course of the speech in question, he would often interrupt me, in a tone of triumphant exultation, with exclamations such as the following,—"To be sure!"—"Capital!"—"Answer that, if you can, Mr. Pitt!"—and at the conclusion, "That is the speech of the orator and the statesman; Pitt is a mere rhetorician;" adding, after a pause, "a very able one, I admit." Sometimes, after hearing the first three or four sentences of a speech of Mr. Pitt, he would say,—"Now, the dog is thinking what he shall say; Fox rushes into the subject at once." Here let me remark, that when Parr called any of his pupils noodle or dog, or even in some instances "blockhead," it was a proof that they were in high favour; and on those occasions, his goodnatured smile showed that he spoke in perfect good humour, but the word, "dunce" he always used contemptuously. When engaged in our lessons, he assumed a magisterial gravity of manner, but at other times he conversed with us as friends, and not as pupils, and frequently entertained us with the most amusing anecdotes.—Recollections of Dr. Parr by a Pupil.

Joint Stock Bubbles.—There have been three public meetings extraordinary within the last week. One of the constituents of Mr. John Wilks, junior, to consider the conduct of that honorable gentleman in not realizing their expectations of him, either in point of character, or (a more important particular with independent electors) the payment of their expenses; another, of the Vigo Bay Company; and a third, of the Chilian Mining Association. All these speculations have been signally unfortunate, though commenced with the most flattering hopes. The Chilian, which was to raise copper ore at no expense but that of labour, has been dissolved; the Shareholders not thinking it advisable to answer a call of fifteen pounds a share, when shares were to be bought in the market for one pound! The Vigo Bay Company were to have fished up an immense treasure from Spanish galleons sunk a century ago; but they succeeded in getting only a prodigious quantity of mud out of these vessels. The speculation of the independent electors of Sudbury in Mr. John Wilks, jun, has not been more fortunate. They, too, ventured for treasure, and made a dirty acquisition. They flattered themselves that they had got "an angel" in Mr. John Wilks; but lo! this angel has not realized their expectations in the main angelic article of pay. One of the electors, in describing how their hon. representative had humbugged them, stated that on one occasion, having met him on a Sunday pending the election, and having mentioned some business connected with it, the saintly candidate replied, "Do not name it to me now, Sir, I can listen to nothing of that sort on the Lord's day." "Who would not have been imposed upon by such a man?" observed the narrator. Who could be imposed upon by such a man? we should rather inquire. The greediness of the Sudbury hands must have had much to do with the credulity of their heads. It was the promise to pay that made the saint, we are inclined to think, and the default that has made the devil.—Atlas.

Statute of Memnon.—It is known to all classical scholars that Strabo has recorded a wonderful property of the Statute, which was erected to the memory of Memnon in Troas. He was killed at the Trojan war by Achilles. The statute, or something near it, uttered a melodious sound, like the twang of a harp string every morning at sun-rising, and a mournful tone at the sun-setting. Strabo witnessed this effect himself. When Sir A. Smith was at Thebes he went at six o'clock in the morning, and distinctly heard the sounds, so much talked of in former times. The statute was dismantled by the order of Cambyses, when he conquered Egypt, but the ruins, by their grandeur and beauty still astonish the beholder—and from the pedestal, Sir A. Smith heard this mysterious sound, the cause of which has never been ascertained.

A modern Robinson Crusoe.—The Thetis transport, Lieutenant Hopkins, which arrived here a few days since from the Pacific Ocean, had occasion to touch at the Island Mocho for water, the only inhabitant on which was an English seaman, of the name of Joseph Richardson, a native of Adlington, near Ashford, in Kent, who like another Robinson Crusoe, or Alexander Silkerk, had made choice of such a solitary houseless spot, upwards of three years since, for a residence, when he was landed at his own urgent desire, from a patriot ship of war commanded by Capt. Robertson. The island is about 60 miles in circumference, and about 60 miles from the coast of Chili, in latitude 39 South. It is very seldom visited by ships, as it does not afford necessary supplies of wood, but it does of water in abundance. It is remarkably fertile, and abounds with hogs and horses. Richardson has cultivated two gardens, on the vegetable produce of which, with pork, young horse flesh, and wild pigeons, he lives. He hunts the former animals with dogs, a fine breed of which he has broken; The pigeons are so numerous that he has little difficulty in obtaining them, and a few other kinds of birds, though the only fire-arms he possesses is an old musket, with a broken lock, which he discharges by means of a match; but by patient watching under the trees, he contrives, with such defective means, to vary his diet as oten as he wishes. About nine months since, the Indians hearing of his desolate situation, though not at all disposed to join in community, landed two of their native girls on the island. Richardson instantly made choice of one of them as his consort, and proclaimed her Queen of the island, and the other he calls his cook. The distiction between these individuals was quite perceptible on the present visit. Richardson having no means of amusement besides the necessary employment of obtaining subsistance, at his own request, Lieutenant Hopkins supplied him with a bible and prayerbook. Lieut. H. offered to take him off the island, but he refused to leave it, declaring his determination of passing his life in his own government. He had commenced erecting a fort to protect himself from the Indians. There was no present appearance of any increase of his subjects.

SUMMARY.

His Majesty's Ministers have done an act which is a further proof of the humane feelings which they entertain towards their suffering countrymen. They have presented to the London Committee a large quantity of militia cloathing, to be distributed to the labouring classes in the manufacturing districts. The following is the exact inventory: 4,000 soldiers' coats 3,000 waistcoats, 10,000 pairs of cloth trowsers, 10,000 pairs of cloth gaiters, 500 shirts 2,500 pairs of half hose, 2,500 pairs of shoes, 2,000 great coats, 1,250 rugs, 5,000 blankets, and 2,000 flannel waistcoats.

EXTRAORDINARY GAZETTE!—Most cordially do we congratulate the commercial world on the pleasing and gratifying aspect of the London Gazette of last night, which, from its announcing only two new bankruptcies, may well and truly be deemed the most novel and extraordinary production of its nature that has appeared for some time.—British Travel r October 7.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—The first order that the East India Company gave for the importation of tea was in 1667-8. It was for the weight of the best tea that you can get." In the year 1816, there was consumed in England no less than 24,640,000 lbs. yielding a revenue from this article alone of £4,130,000. Since then the importation of that celebrated exotic has been yearly on the increase.

His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief has issued a PROCLAMATION offering a reward of £25 to any person who shall apprehend Pierre Beaudry, late of the parish of Quebec, labourer, otherwise called Pierre Duniel, who, with six others, stands charged on oath with the robbery of the Rev. We are enabled to state, that the paragraph which has appeared in some of the morning papers, respecting the reported unfortunate fate of Major Laing and all his party, is wholly destitute of truth.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 16.

Death of Mr. Stanley.—On Sunday last, at his residence, Vernon House, aged 64, died Alexander Stanley Esqr. Comptroller of the Customs at this port.

Lord Cochrane has at length actually arrived at Napoli di Romania, on the 8th September. It is said he wishes to be commander-in-chief of the marine, with the old admirals under his orders. He brought with him seven American, French and Dutch vessels, and only a single English one.

The second expedition of the Captain Pacha against Samos has completely failed; and it will be a long time before another attempt will be made against the island.

The news from Erzeroum, Smyne, &c. &c. is that the Janissaries forbade the firman to be read to suppress their order; and the country for more than fifty leagues is said to be in a state of revolt, crying "War with Russia! war with Infidels!" The value of the Turkish pastres has so much depreciated, that it may be considered merely nominal.

Cranbourne Chace.—The quantity of nuts in the Chace woods may be imagined to be very great in this most abundant year. A gentleman at the dinner, who lives in the Chace, said, that he and another person had one year collected from the nutters and sold 1,000 sacks.

This immense right of Chace, the greatest ever possessed even by any Monarch in this country, extending over no less than 500,000 acres of land, is the sole property of George Lord Rivers, who has repeatedly refused offers of purchase made by other noblemen, but has recently proposed to the Landowners to disfranchise it, on their binding themselves to a payment to him and his heirs of 1,500*l* per annum.

Cobbet.—This political whirligig has taken up the defence of King Ferdinand of Spain, and the enlogy of his subjects. Among other ridiculous assertions, he says that the mass of the people of Spain are better off, better fed, and better clothed, than the people of any other country in Europe, and much better than the people of England are. He says, "I applaud the King of Spain. I do not much like weasels, but I hate rats, and therefore I say success to the weasels, and concludes his essay with an anathema upon Quakers, whom he accuses of defrauding the British people by monopolizing all the tea that is imported by the East India Company.—*N. At a grand Court ball at Moscow, given on the 8th September last, were present the Khans of the Kirguis and the Circassians, with their retinues. The Khan of the Kirguis had with him the chief Sultanna, his wife, and five other inferior Sultanas. The face of the wife was uncovered—her features and complexion were good, but altogether Chinese.

Affecting Circumstance.—The feelings of the passengers in the stage from Bristol, to Easton Pean, were much excited on Saturday last by the sudden death of an infant son of Mr. Thomas Bullman, of the latter place. The mother of the child when within half a mile of Newport was affectionately carrassing it, and the little innocent, apparently in perfect health, was delightfully returning its mother's fondness by its playful laugh. Fears for its health induced the parent to wrap it closer up. In five minutes after the statge stopped at Newport, the mother uncovered the child, it was dead. The scene that ensued can be better immagined than described.—Apollo.

Junius.—We find the following curious article in the Carlisle Penn. Republican of the 15th inst:—A gentleman a few days since, looking over some old indictments in the office of the Clerk of Quarter Sessions, was struck with the resemblance of the writing to the fac similes in Woodfall's Junius. These indictments were written by Tench Francis, a relative of Sir Philip Francis, the supposed author of Junius. Similar handwriting is frequently observed to prevail in families, and the writing of Tench Francis, is said to be precisely similar to that of Sir Philip Francis. Does not this give increased strength to the opinion that Sir Philip Francis, is really the author of Junius.

The contemplated repairs of Windsor castle, will cost 250,000 pounds sterling. The building of Buckingham Palace, and the improvement of the grounds will cost 250,000 pounds.—The alterations and additions to the King's Palace in St. James' Park, will cost 250,000 pounds.

Egypt.—Letters from Alexandria, of August 1st, state that the Exchequer of the Pacha of Egypt is so exhausted by the expeditions to Greece during the last three years, that he has signified to the Porte, that he is unable to continue these exertions. Several of the Egyptians, who were sent to the Morea, have returned to their own country, and have given such a frightful description of the hardships and privations which they endured in the Morea, that whole bodies of the troops trained in the European fashion in the camp near Cairo, ran away, for fear of being embarked for Europe.

The account which has appeared in several of the London Journals of a young lady, the daughter of a farmer near Hampstead, named Hinde, having been seduced by an Officer of Dragoons—and of having subsequently committed suicide—together with the inquest held on her body at the Crown Inn at Hampstead, &c. &c.—is from beginning to end a mere fabrication. There is no public house of the sign of the Crown at Hamstead; and the dramatis personæ of this tragical narrative never existed except in the imaginative brain of the writer of the article.—Morning Chronicle.

LONDON, Oct. 13.

ACCIDENT AT THE TWOPENNY POST-OFFICE.

Wednesday evening about six o'clock, the immediate neighbourhood of the Post-Office, Lombard-street was thrown into the greatest alarm in consequence of a loud report proceeding from the office where the letters to be forwarded by the two penny post are stamped. It was immediately conjectured that an explosion of the gas had taken place, but this supposition proved unfounded, the report having proceeded from quite a different cause, and a more shameful transaction than that which led to the accident we are now about to relate has not been made public for some time. The following are the particulars:—It appears that a man named Westbrooke, one of the letter-stampers at the Twopenny Post Office, was, as usual, marking the letters previous to their being despatched from the office to their various destinations, and he had not been long at his post, ere a loud report equal to that of a small cannon completely paralyzed all the officers of the establishment, and the gas was partially blown out. This was occasioned by a letter having been put into the Post-Office loaded with detonating powder. The stamp being thrust upon the letter by Westbrooke, it immediately exploded, and his right hand was nearly blown off. The nails on each hand were all blown off, as well as most of the flesh up to the knuckle. The right hand presented a horrid sight, as the flesh of the third, fourth, and of the little finger, was severed from the bone, which was fractured in many places. The flesh of the right arm up to the elbow was torn in numerous places, and the poor man's face and neck were also severely scorched. Another man named Sadler, who was standing next to Westbrooke, taking the letters as they were stamped, was blown over by the whole of the explosion, and his face very much disfigured. A third person also had his hand much burnt. The table on which the letters are stamped, such was the force of the powder contained in the letter, was completely broken through, and many of the letters destroyed. The entertaining the powder was of course immediately consumed, and no trace is left for detecting the author. Westbrooke was taken immediately to the Mail-Coach public house, in Sherborne-lane, and medical advice procured. The wounds are rather dangerous, and the medical advisers feared it would be necessary to resort to amputation of the right hand. The pain endured, on the hands being thrust into cold water, must have been excessive. Poultices were administered, after the wounds had been washed, and the poor man will, as soon as practicable, be removed to his own house. This scandalous transaction will, no doubt, be sifted to the bottom, and a reward offered for the detection of those who have thus risked human life; for had Westbrooke's face been sufficiently near, the explosion would inevitably have killed him.

Fever in Dublin.—We lament to find that fever is greatly on the increase in this city. There can be no doubt of the fact, because the information comes from the very best authority—the Board of Health, and also from the Physicians who preside over several of the charitable institutions. It is impossible to contemplate the alarming announcement of such an increase, without being impressed with the necessity that some immediate public measure must be taken to arrest the calamity. Much has been done by establishing new Hospitals; but still the disease is found to increase, and to draw within its vortex a greater number of sufferers.—Freeman's Journal.

A poor man named Macbride, living in Kevin street, Dublin whose wife had been for some time confined in a fever hopital, received a notification from the hopital on Saturday that his wife had died, and requiring him to send a coffin. The husband repaired to the hospital with an oak coffin, which was received from him at the gate, and shortly afterwards returned, containing the body. The husband and several friends had the corps conveyed to the Cabbage-gardens, Kevin street, and there interred. An hour had scarcely elapsed, when sitting alone in his house, he was startled by the sound of a well known voice at the door. On opening the door he almost sunk to the earth on beholding what he conceived to be the apparition of his departed wife, but which was in reality herself. The mistake was now traced to the hospital notification having been sent to the wrong person. The shock, however, proved too much, and he yesterday became an inmate in the same hospital in which the mistake had occurred.—Dublin Morning Post.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

The packet ship Stephania, Capt. Pell, arrived yesterday in twenty-nine days from Havre, bringing Havre papers of the 26th of October, and Livepool dates to the 23d.

Mr. Canning appears to be the toast of Paris. He had dined at the Tuilleries with the King and royal family. The Paris papers say, in referring to this fact, "That the superstitions of etiquette and the vanities of the Court have just received a check which disconcerts them. The minister of a foreign government, a plebian, who has no other title than that of being a great orator, a skilful statesman, and an eloquent proclaimer, of a system of civil, commercial, and religious liberty, has had the honour to sit to-day at the king's table."

Talma, the prince of the French drama, is no more, and his obsequies received the honours of a highly gilded man. He has probably left no one his compeer.

Russia has issued a formal declaration of war against Persia; but prior to the promulgation of this document hostilities had already commenced.

Letters from Alexandria of 29th Sept. state it as a fact that the English Consul had received orders from his government not to allow any property belonging to the subjects of the porte to be shipped in the name of English subjects, and that he is imperiously required to exact from the shippers on oath that the property shipped is theirs. It is also expressly forbidden to British vessels to load with any merchandise but that belonging to the France, as in case of difficulty no protection will be given by the British naval forces. We received this information by the Echo, which vessel arrived at Toulon on the 19th October with General Boyer and his staff.

GREECE.

Constantinople, Sept. 11.

Notwithstanding the damage occasioned by the fire, great progress is making in the new organization of the army. The Sultan wishes, 60,000 infantry and four regiments of cavalry (exclusive of the topachis) armed and equipped in European style. But where will the money necessary for these armaments come from? From the pockets of his subjects. The project of establishing an equality of imports for the Turks and Greeks, is spoken of.

Incendiary attempts increase. On the night of the 5th a Turk attempted to set fire to the quarter of Pera.

Many individuals have been arrested and exiled or put to death. The discontent of the people daily increases and is more and more marked.

On the 27th instant, there was a grand Council at Porte. A firman was read in the mosques forbidding all conversation respecing public affairs and the late fire. Any man who violates this order, is to be strung up on the spot, and females who contravene it, are to be tied up in a bag and thrown into the sea.

The Lausanne Gazette contains the following article, dated Corfu, Sept, 12 which seems to reconcile the contradictory accounts given of the state of things at Athens:—

The Turks, who made themselves masters of all Attica, and closely besieged Athens, succeeded at length with 15,000 men, in taking possession of it. Gouras alone with 1,5000 men retired into the citadel and maintained the siege. An energetic Proclamation of the Government re-animated the courage of the garrison, and they swore that they would bury themselves amidst the ruins of the ancient monuments rather than capitulate. Several Greek corps, to the number of 6,500 men, had just united in the isle of Salamis. They disembarked on the 18th of August at Eleusis, and after having crossed Mount Icario and the Gulf Eleusino, encamped on the 19th at Hermos. The Turks, upon learning their march, abandoned the town went out against them, and met them in the plain of Athens. The action commenced immediately and lasted more than five hours, when the Turks, after a severe sideralle loss, were forced to retreat to Eleonora. In this engagement Col. Fabvier and the French Philhellenists particularly distinguished themselves. Giovny Bajsetar, who commanded the attack, was made prisoner, and his horse and standard were taken. Since this period Redschid Pacha, being beaten under Athens, continued his retreat upon Negropont and from thence upon Carysto, where he remained with the Pacha of the province, notwithstanding the animosity existing between them, and the Greek General Karaiscaki, who advanced at the head of 3,000 men, blockades them closely. Thus Athens is again occupied by the Greeks. We learn by letters from Zante, that Ibrahim Pacha being reduced to despair, set fire to Tripolitza, and with-drew to Coron and Modon. The Constantinople squadron has abandoned its projects against Samos, and taken refuge in the Dardanells. Its troops were disembarked at Echelle Nuova. The Greek squadron is now at Samos.

RUSSIA.

The intelligence from St. Petersburgh is to the 8th of September. It is stated in the Paris papers that there is no probability of an amicable adjustment of the differences between Russia and the Porte.

The Persians are said to have invaded the frontier of Russia with a powerful army from Georgia, and Russian troops have marched for the Crimea. Forty-five thousand men, are ready to cross the Pruth, and one hundred thousand are on their way to reinforce.

The negociations at Ackerman have been suddenly suspended, in consequence of the Turks attempting to prolong them. General Yermaloff has been ordered to oppose the Persian army, said to be 80,000 strong; and the army of Pruth is kept in readiness to march. The coronation of the Emperor as King of Poland, it is supposed, will therefore be postponed. This news sunk the Austrian funds in Vienna in one day from 30 ⅛ to 89 money.

LONDON, October 13.

From the Etoile, dated Wednesday.

ST. PETERSBURGH, Sept. 21.—The Emperor has ordered numerous bodies of troops towards the Caucasus to reinforce the army in Georgia. The Persans, on their side, have advanced, and have excited a revolt in two of the three Musulman provinces belonging to Russia, which adjoins the frontiers; they are doubtless those which are situated beyond the Kur, which passes by Tiflis and crosses all Georgia. That which was the least depended on has remained faithful.

A war with Persia is detrimental to Russia. Whatever be the chances, it will cause a great embarrassment in its finances. When a Russian army passes its European frontier, it meets with great facilities for its support, and for the conveyance of artillery, stores, &c. But on the Asiatic frontier, every thing must be created and paid for. Russia making war with Georgia, carries it upon its own territory, and the conquest will bring no advantages. On the other hand, the Emperor, whom his inclination, his military ardour, would lead to place himself at the head of his army, and push the operations with vigour, cannot, under present circumstances, leave his European dominions; and notwithstanding the activity and talents of Generals Yermaloff and Paskewitsch, affairs will not be carried on with the concert and rapidity which the presence of his Majesty would produce.

SPAIN.

Madrid, Oct. 2, (Private correspondence.)

After having received an extraordinary Courier, Mr. Lamb sent a note to M. Salmon, requiring the payment of a loan of 30 millions of reals due to Britain. It is generally believed that this note concluded by insinuating that in case of non-payment England would take possession of some place as a guarantee for the re-payment. The name of the place is not mentioned, but the reports which were in circulation several months since, respecting its being the Island of Majorca are renewed.

The transmission of this note appears to confirm the report that France and England had combined to force our government to change her political system; for, if it be not so, England, who is well aware that we are not able to pay, would not at this time ask us for money; and, on the other hand, the general topic at the Palace, is the instructions said to have been received by M. de Mousta or not to interfere in any measures relative to the management of our Government.

The Police have received information from Valencia, which causes us to suspect the officers of artillery garrisoned there.—This is the reason assigned for the departure of Mr. O'DONNEL, Inspector General of Artillery, for Valencia, who, they say, intends to satisfy himself of the feelings of the officers, and to return those who appear to be less devoted to the government.—Journal des Debats.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Politically important.—A letter from a correspondent, dated in Guayaquil, Aug. 31st, has this important paragraph:—

"A conspiracy has been discovered at Lima, directed against the liberator Bolivar. Among the conspirators were some of the principal chiefs of Peru, who were all immediately arrested, and put in close confinement, the instant the plot was discovered by the authorities.

"What connection there may be between the present plot, and some singular rumors in Chili, I am unable to say; but one thing appears to be understood, that the communication between the countries is likely to be suspended as far as relates to Peruvian and Chilian vessels."

A letter from Havana, dated 30th ult. states, that a great panic had been excited there a few days previous, by a report that Commodore Porter had appeared off the South side of the Island with a Mexican fleet of eleven sail, threatening a descent. Two regiments of troops marched from Havana the same night, in that direction, and two frigates and two brigs were getting ready for sea, with all possible expedition. At the date of the letter, however, the alarm had, in some degree, abated.—Charleston Courier.

UNITED STATES.

Meeting of Congress.——The session commences on the first Monday of December; but alas! what will the records of the Editors of the National Intelligencer! Their valuable gazette continues to arrive day after day, in due course of mail, laden down with the ponderous speeches of the last session; and in the paper now before us, the sickening words—"Debate to be continued,"—appear for the thousand and sixteenth time. Why will not the members have wisdom? Why do not the great body of them thank fortune and king caucus that they ever got there, and hold their peace, like respectable people, for the most part they would appear to be, if they would but keep silence! Why affict us with those never-ending harangues, upon all subjects and all occasions? The people never read them; and indeed they would be great noodles if they did. After half a dozen of the ablest debaters have spoken upon important questions, the subject is generally exhausted, and the long array of speeches that follow, from third and fourth rate members, are but dull and attenuated repetitions of the arguments of the great master-spirits, who alone ought to engage in debates upon the more commanding subjects of legislation. Instead of which, day after day rises another, and another, and another, with—" Mr. Speaker: I am unwilling to occupy the time of this house in protracting a debate which has already continued more than five weeks, but nevertheless I feel anxious to state the result of my reflections upon this important subject," &c. &c. &c. And then away he goes on a two day's chase in pursuit of the ideas which have been presented in every possible shape fifty times before while the great body of the members amuse themselves by walking about, writing letters, reading newspapers, and cracking jokes and pen-nuts. The truth is as we have urged before, a reform is necessary in our congressional practice. This meeting and going into the committee of the whole and hearing one long speech a day and then adjourning is intolerable. Let them imitate the British Parliament; that is to say, let sufficient notice be given when important questions are to be called up, and when they are called, let those members upon both sides, who are able to grapple with it, take it up like men, and dispose of it. Two days, or three at most is time enough to dispose of any question. All that need be said, can be said in that time; and all that is said beyond that, is at the expense of the patience and pockets of the people. Open this subject of a reform, the editors at Washington could do much. Instead of these forty-column speeches, let them agree among themselves to report condensed views of the debates. Give the speeches of such men as Webster, Storrs, M'Lane, &c. upon one side, and M'Duffie, Van Buren, Forsyth, &c. on the other, pretty good length; for these men talk because they have something to say; but in general close abridgments are all that is necessary. We could then copy more of the debates, and the public would read them and be better informed than they are at present. But from any more debates like those of last winter, which have lasted the whole year, we beseech our editorial brethren at the capital, in mercy to spare us. Any one paper should contain all that should appear of any one day's debate.—N. Y. Spectator.

Fire.—About six o'clock on Monday morning a fire broke out in Utica, which proved the most destructive of any with which the enterprising citizens of that place was ever visited. The fire broke out on the west side of Genesee street, nearly opposite to Gay's Hotel.

Two of the Utica papers inform us that the loss of property by this fire could not immediately be ascertained. A third paper says the loss cannot be less than thirty thousand dollars. We are glad to find that most of the property was insured.

THE CANADAS.

With a wise precaution for the future, we perceive that the colonists, aided by the mother country, are repairing their military waste places, and erecting also fortifications upon some advantageous sites, not hitherto occupied. For several years, which have intervened since the last war, both nations seem, as if by concert, to have withdrawn every thing, which indicated a remnant of hostile relations. But if Great Britain is looking to her fortifications, and is rubbing the rust from off her firelocks, it behooves us to do the same. In saying this, we do not mean to intimate, for we do not believe, that there is a probability of an immediate rupture, between the two countries. God forbid that it should ever again take place! We would hope that the two nations, connected by political institutions, differing but in name, possessing the same religious faith, speaking the same language, mingling daily in the most confidential relations of business, and those relations cemented by personal attachments, might move on together without severing those ties by the sabre, and consummating in blood an unnatural rupture. But still it is our duty to take note of the signs of the times, and to be prepared for any issue which may await us.

BRITISH COLONIAL TRADE.

From the Nyvascotian.

We beg to announce that in our files of American papers, received by the late arrivals, we perceive a communication, copied from the Norfolk Beacon, which gives a very full and intelligent statement of the points in dispute, between the two Governments, and the advantages which the Northern States derive, from the Colonial trade. It commences with a review of the objections which were contained in the Report of the Senate upon this subject during last session of Congress—these are resolved into six—and are known by the writer to be founded either in error or misconception. Our limits do not allow us to give this part of the article entire, which, however, is the less to be regretted, as most of the objections have already been exposed and attacked, both in the Albion, and in a late number of this paper. The review, however, of the fifth objection, as it brings forward some strong facts, and places them in a prominent point of view, we deem it advisable to give in its original form:—

"The Fifth objection is, that enorous and heavy duties and colonial fees are exacted, amounting in some instances to the value of the cargo; while the fact is, there are hardly any fees charged in the British Islands; in most of them none, and where they are still continued they are very moderate, and the same on British as American vessels; and the duties charged in them, on our leading exports are so far from being heavy, that they are, on an average, hardly one tenth of the per centage we charge on the articles they have to send us in return; and on our domestic cottons and other manufactures, the Duty in the British Islands, is about one third what we charge on similar articles from Great Britain. But to take one of the articles of greatest export to the Islands, and subject to nearly as heavy a duty in them, as any other, Flour—it pays about 1 dol. per barrel (exclusive of the discriminating duty, which is only continued in the British Islands until we remove it from their vessels, and was only laid to countervail that imposed by our government) and the cost of flour being 5 dols. per barrel, it consequently pays 30 per cent duty on its cost, while rum costing 25 cents per gallon, pays a duty of 42 cents for 5d. proof: or equal to 170 per cent on its cost; salt costing 10 cents per pushel, pays per cent 56 lb. or about 275 per cent on its cost; sugar costing 4 dols. per 100 lbs. pays 3 dols. duty, equal to 75 per cent on its cost, and in proportion as the duties on their produce are heavy and onerous, so do the discriminating duties fall more heavily on British than American commerce."

"Having," says the author, "given the objections which were made in the report to the Senate, to the want of a just reciprocity in our trade with the British West India Islands, it may be here proper to state the restrictions to which British vessels are liable in their intercourse with us, and which have called forth the order in Council closing their ports."—These are stated to be:—First, "a tonnage duty of 1 dollar per ton, and a discriminating duty of 5 per cent on their cargoes, which is represented as so onerous a burden, as even to exceed the freight, and to induce a West India merchant, sending his vessel here (States) for a cargo, to allow her to come in ballast, and to charter an American vessel to bring home the rum and sugar, to pay for his cargo, rather than ship it by his own vessel."—next, a British Colonial vessel is said to be subject to a charge of 25 per cent additional pilotage, over what an American vessel pays; and lastly, "that British vessels are not allowed to come from Europe, and load for the Colonies, nor when they come from the Colonies to load for any other port, except a Colony, and heavy bonds are required that they land their cargoes at some specified port."

The writer closed this communication as follows:—

"From 1816 till 1822, the years of our restrictive system, our trade fell off annually, but since our renewed intercourse with the British Islands, it has gone on gradually improving, till our exports have got to be four times what they were in 1822. Those who think lumber can be transmitted through the Neutral-Islands to the British Colonies, know but little of the Geography of the West Indies, where the currents and trade winds render such an intercourse impracticable; for the vessels required to carry it on must be sharp and are quite unfit to carry lumber. It will not, however, be necessary for them to resort to this, while the North of Europe is sending out large supplies, which, in cheapness and goodness of quality, are already rivaling us, even while we have the ports open; and although with an open intercourse we can pay the moderate duties charged on our lumber, and undersell the Canadian, yet that would be impossible, if we have double freights, and the expense of transhipment at a Neutral-Island to pay.

"Our restrictions, from 1818 to 1822, taught the planters in the British Islands a lesson which they have not forgot; previous to this we used to send them very large supplies of corn and course bread stuffs, to feed their negroes; but we closed our ports against them and threw them on their own resources. They made less sugar, and raised their own corn, and soon found this more profitable than the old system of making all the sugar they could, and buying their corn from us. Thus it is the trade is not to the extent expected; for, while we compelled sugar planters to raise corn, we also taught the Canadians to make staves to an extent they had never thought of, by giving them for four years, the market we used to supply, and have thus raised permanent competitors. In the same time we have, by continuing restrictions on British shipping, brought about closed ports to us in the British Islands, which are now open to the North of Europe, from those Countries an extensive trade will at once be built up and into existence, and should the markets in the Islands afterwards open to us, we need expect no benefit from having left them for a time entirely to our rivals.

"Viewing the prosperity that has, since the renewed intercourse with the British Islands, existed throughout this district, in which all the small towns had again resumed the appearance of flourishing industry and active business, we cannot but feel our hearts sicken at the thoughts of the change with which we are threatened. Among our merchants we may expect events such as followed the closing of the ports in 1812: the country store-keepers will again see the stocks of lumber they have collected to meet the expected demand of this winter, rot on their hands: but to the farmers the change will be even more cruel, and particularly to the poorer class of them who depend on a sale of their produce, and the lumber they have been cutting for the means of obtaining the necessaries and little luxuries within their reach, to render them comfortable during the approaching inclement season. I will not pursue the picture further, but close this, already too great tax on your patience, by an enquiry of the cause for which we are thus to suffer?"

The following curious extract from The Scotsman appeared in Billing's Liverpool Advertiser of the 10th September:—

Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.—These countries have been unaccountably overlooked hitherto by speculators on the subject of emigration. Including Prince Edward's Island and Cape Breton, they are fully as large as England; they embrace thirty five millions of acres; and though much of this soil may be poor or barren, the two provinces could contain three millions of inhabitants. Their present population is about 200,000. The climate is rigorous, but healthy; the long winter, which lasts five months, is their greatest disadvantage. They are about 1000 miles nearer than Upper Canada, and the voyage is reckoned one third shorter. The length of inland navigation too, from the point of destination is much less. The expense of settling British Emigrants in these provinces is estimated by Col. Cockburn as follows:—

Transport to place of settlement,	1 10 0

We may mention it as an amusing circumstance, that Col. Cockburn laments the numerous lines of communication which have been opened between Lower Canada and the United States. The bush that is, the natural trackless forest he considers as the best barrier of Canada against the Americans: and in its room, he suggests that French Canadians should be planted as thick as possible along the frontier, because they differ in manners from the Yankees in religion and manners, that "they will not, he firmly believes, be induced to mix or traffic with them." In America, it appears, there is no safety for an English community, unless it be protected against the approach of Yankees and democracy by a desert, or a barrier of Frenchmen!

Without the least detracting from the tried gallantry, unquestionable loyalty of His Majesty's Canadian subjects of French origin, than which a more efficient barrier against the progress of American encroachment, in whatever shape it might come, could not be found, still the inference drawn by The Scotsman, from Lieut. Colonel Cockburn's evidence is incorrect. Events which occurred, during the late war with the United States of America, shewed that it need neither "a desert" nor a "barrier of Frenchmen" to protect an English community. The defence of Upper Canada, in the first years of that contest, was effected by the exertions of its gallant Militia, and by the aid of the small handful of Regular troops, thinly scattered in weak detachments, over an extensive frontier, and but indifferently supplied with many of the essential munitions of war. Certainly, the intrepid and lamented officer who so gallantly withstood the first shock of the invading army, and prematurely fell in the hour of victory could oppose to the surpassing numerical strength of his enemy, no militia calculated to inspire an overweening confidence in those hardy cultivators of the soil, who nobly stood forward to defend their rights and property from the grasp of a foreign spoiler, yet they proved that they were neither to be seduced by the blandishments, nor intimidated by the arms, of the invader. The population of Upper Canada is chiefly of English descent; it is therefore absurd to contend, in the face of facts, that they are less attached to His Majesty's Government than those fellow subjects in this province, and we feel convinced that the gallant officer, lately at the head of the Quartermaster General's department in the Canadas, could not have intended by his evidence, to convey the meaning "The Scotsman" imputes to his words. Quebec Mercury.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Quebec, November 25.

On Monday last, His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief inspected the Military Schools in the Garrison, attended by the Chaplain to the Forces, and his suite. We understand His Lordship expressed himself much satisfied with the interesting exhibition.

It is our painful duty to have to relate a most melancholy accident which happened in the course of last Monday night. A pilot boat, No. 80, had started from the Lower-town, to sail for Beaumont, but foundered, as it is believed, between the two Churches, and every one on board, to the number of five persons, were drowned.

INQUEST.

From the Novascotian.

This morning, about 9 o'clock, the report of Lt. Colonel Huxley, Inspecting Field Officer of Militia, having committed suicide by cutting his own throat, was circulated in Town. The report seemed so improbable that in the first instance it could scarcely be believed, but subsequent accounts corroborated the event so positively, that the public at length listened to the melancholy and afflicting intelligence.

Shortly after, James Gray, Esq. summoned a Jury, and at 10 o'clock these proceeded in a body to the residence of Mr. Melchoir Artz, in Lockman street, where Col. Huxley has resided since his late arrival from Canada. On reaching the house the Jury were immediately conducted into the bed-room where the fatal deed had been committed, and a sight was here presented which was sickening and horrible.

The deceased, dressed in his ordinary apparel lay extended on the floor,—the neck seemed nearly severed from the body, as the throat was cut deep from ear to ear—the ground and clothes were covered with clotted blood, and the razor, with which the deceased had committed the lamentable act lay exposed to view.

On the Jury being sworn they moved into an adjoining apartment, and Mary Burns, spinster and daughter of the owner of the house, was first called in and examined. She deposed that between 7 and 8 o'clock, she had been in the room in which the Jury then sat, and that when she left it without her seeing them, the deceased lying on the floor, and immediately ran out to the kitchen and called to her sister to come in, which she did, and was either then or shortly after informed of the information and said "she was always hearing something remarkable."—Shortly after her sister went into the room and came running out, calling that the Colonel was either dead or had fainted. She immediately ran without doors, for the purpose of getting Lemmons the servant of the deceased who had gone out to purchase bread &c. for breakfast.—When he came in she accompanied him into the Colonel's bed room and there saw the deceased bleeding on the floor.

William Lemmons, was sworn, and stated—that he was a private of the 70th Regiment and was a servant of the deceased. Had attended him for 3 or 4 years. This morning a little before 8 o'clock had gone into the bedroom, for the purpose of lighting the fire—deceased was then sitting on the side of the bed, and the window was open. Col. Huxley called him and also to clean his galoches. Lemmons then brought him in water for shaving and then took out his boots and shoes for the purpose of cleaning them. On returning with them he found his Master had risen and was SHAVED! and dressed. He put on his galoches and the witness went down and tied them. The witness asked what he would send down to the auction-room, knowing that it was Colonel Huxley's intention to proceed to England and that he had made arrangements to dispose of his furniture, &c. at public sale. The Col. described them and he immediately retired. The Col. went out and returned again in about five minutes. Witness went into his bed room where the deceased was to leave a second pair of boots which he had just cleaned. Found the Col. at the table with a dressing case open before him in which he kept his razor, &c. On his coming in the Col. walked into the adjoining apartment. Witness followed him and asked what time he would send the articles down; when the deceased replied "Any time after breakfast, William."

Inferring from this that the deceased intended breakfasting at home, shortly afterwards he proceeded out to a neighbouring shop to buy bread, &c. As he was called back by Catharine Artz, who told him that Col. Huxley was dead. Immediately returned and on going into the room, accompanied by her, saw the deceased lying on the floor which was covered with blood. Ran instantly to the residence of Major Blair, knowing that the Col. was very intimate with the family. Related the circumstance, to Mr. A. Blair, Junr. who ordered him to run immediately and call a Surgeon.—The deceased was a mild, even-tempered and cheerful man extremely affable and pleasant in his conversation—always spoke to witness with kindness. Has remarked since Monday last a change in his manner. The deceased either on that day or Tuesday said to him that the difficulties he had met with in preparing to go home, were enough to drive him mad. Deceased has said little since Monday, and witness remarked the change to the family. Could not account for the lamentable event. Knew that the deceased lived happily with his wife, Mrs. Huxley had gone home last Spring from Canada to Scotland, for the purpose of seeing her mother. About a fortnight ago, deceased received letters from his wife, part of which he read to witness. Saw him this morning bring a number of papers from his bed-room and throw them into the fire. Could not tell whether they were letters or not.

Captain Hamilton, of H. M. sloop Dotterel, was next examined: has been very intimate with the deceased for these four or five weeks past, and dined with him last evening, at Admiral Lake's. Thought his appearance at the table was very cheerful, even to gaiety; he seemed in fact, so far from having any thing weighing upon his mind, to be in an exuberant flow of spirits. Came home part of the way with him, and left him perfectly sober and collected, and he gave witness on parting, directions to avoid an obstruction which was in the street. Deceased remarked to him that he had enjoyed himself much at evening, but that his pleasure would have been greater had he been in the society of his friends in England. Had often said to witness that the trouble of preparing to go home, the voyage &c. would be amply repaid by enjoying the society of his friends. Deceased to look forward with peculiar delight to his expected residence at Abbotsford, this winter, the estate of Sir Walter Scott, the wife of the deceased being a niece of that celebrated author. Deceased expressed to witness repeatedly the difficulty he would have in procuring a passage; but nothing in his conduct could lead him to form an opinion of his insanity or even that he laboured under a depression of spirits. The deceased was universally respected for the mildness and placidity of his temper.

Surgeon Grant of the 74th Regt. was next called and sworn; on being informed of this fatal act he came instantly to Col. Huxley's residence, joined on the way by Dr. Carter. On going into the bed room found the deceased lying on his back, and extended on the floor—the floor and the clothes of the deceased were covered with blood. The razor was grasped in the right hand of the deceased. Life was completely extinct in the body. Turned it over to examine the wound. It covered that of Carotid artery on the left side, and the windpipe were both cut. The wound was produced by two or three incisions, and must have caused immediate death. Had not the least doubt the deceased had committed the act himself.

Dr. Baxter, Inspector General of Hospitals, on being sworn stated, that he was on the most intimate terms with the deceased. On Monday last had a conversation with him relative to his voyage to England. Deceased stated repeatedly that he would be unable to get away, although witness mentioned to him four or five vessels which would sail shortly, in any of which he could procure a passage. Was then induced to believe that the deceased was in a state of hypocondriasm and believed that he has since continued in that state, and that the fatal deed was committed in a paroxysm of the disease. This was his professional opinion.

Here the evidence closed. The Coroner and Jury then examined the writing desk and papers of the deceased, but could find no document which threw light upon this distressing and singular affair. The Coroner then addressed the Jury on the law of the case and the bearing which the evidence had upon it. The room was then cleared and the Jury after 2 o'clock, after a short consultation returned a verdict to the following effect.—"That the deceased had committed suicide while in a fit of momentary insanity."

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1826.

We copy the following from the Albion of 25th November.

The British North American Provinces.—" The Government of the mother country seems unwearied in its attention to the happiness and welfare of those Colonies. Not content with opening canals, erecting fortifications and resorting to various other measures for the internal advancement of the country, His Majesty's Ministers now contemplate the most important changes in the form and system of the local government. We are not at liberty to disclose from what source we derive our information, but suffice it to say it is no less accurate than confidential.

His Majesty's Government conceiving that the welfare of these fine Provinces would be promoted if placed under one general, vigorous, and effectual Government, at our informant instructs us, formed the plan of Uniting them in ONE CONFEDERATE STATES. Each Province will still retain its own local Governor and two Legislative bodies, as they at present exist, with some modifications; but it will be required, and a pleasing requisition it will doubtless be, to send a certain number of Delegates or Representatives to to the place of general government to enact laws for the whole. At the head of this Grand Confederation will be placed some distinguished individual, appointed by the Crown, whose business it will be to report to the general govern ment of the empire at home, the proceedings of the body over which he presides.

We will not pretend to speculate upon the nature, tendency, and probable effects of this vastly important measure. The project is not effected yet, and we fear that there will be much preliminary proceeding necessary—much prejudice to overcome, both at home and in the colonies—and many jarring interests to reconcile before so great a scheme can be carried into effect. Perhaps no point will be more difficult to settle than that of fixing upon the geographical position for the seat of the general government. Some have urged Halifax from its comparative proximity and ready communication with the mother country. Others recommend Quebec as the ancient capital of the Canadas, and present residence of the Governors General; while a few are in favour of Montreal as a more central, wealthy, and improving commercial emporium.

The rumour of this project is not entirely new; a similar project was in circulation a year or two ago, but was then treated as an idle chimera. We however know that the subject occupies the most serious attention of government at the present moment: that a gentleman lately in office of the Colonial government of Nova Scotia actually drafted the Bill during his recent visit to London, and that the measure will very probably be brought before Parliament at its next session.

While upon this subject we cannot avoid touching upon the seedless alarm raised in some minds relative to the fortifications about to be erected in Canada. One very obvious but important fact seems to have been entirely overlooked, namely, that the fortified works spoken of, are entirely for defensive purposes. Nothing can in our opinion be more absurd than to suppose that Great Britain has any hostile views, either now or more remotely, on the United States. Invasion, if any should hereafter take place, will, we imagine, be of and not from Canada. The policy of England is decidedly pacific, and she is not likely to depart from it to pursue any visionary schemes against a nation with whom it is her interest to cultivate the best understanding. We doubt, moreover, if the magnitude of the works in contemplation, very far outstrip, in necessary proportion, the increasing wealth, prosperity and population of the country."

Being aware of the impossibility of a weekly newspaper giving the whole of the proceedings in Parliament, it is our intention to restrict ourselves to a Summary, in which we shall use our best endeavours to lay before our readers, the most important matters that come before the Legislature during its present Session.

The LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR's Speech, at the opening of the Session is already in the possession of our Subscribers in an EXTRA Sheet issued on the 5th inst. The Communications it contains of the deep interest felt by the Government for the welfare of the Province, and of the Great public works which have already been commenced, for the military defence, and Commercial prosperity of the Country, are highly gratifying.

It is with pain that we announce in this paper the melancholy intelligence of the death of Lieutenant Colonel HUXLEY, late of the 70th Regt. Inspecting Field Officer in Nova Scotia. Colonel HUXLEY had resided some years in these Provinces, and was universally respected and esteemed. The Colonel has left a young widow (daughter of the late Paymaster SCOTT, of 70th Regt. and Niece of Sir WALTER SCOTT) and a son, to mourn his untimely end.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

House of Assembly, Tuesday Dec. 5.

His Excellency's Speech being read, a committee was appointed to draft a reply thereto.

Mr. Ralph gave notice that he would on Wednesday move for leave to bring in a Bill on the Alien question.—[The title of this Bill we do not recollect.—In his Speech from the Throne His Excellency says,

"I shall make an early communication to you of the instructions which His Majesty has been pleased to transmit for my guidance, in respect to the Naturalizing of such Aliens as have become resident in the Province."

We are not aware that the Communication alluded to by His Excellency, had been made to the House of Assembly previous to Mr. Ralph's notice.]

Several members gave notice of Bills on other subjects.

Wednesday, Dec. 6.

The Yeas and Nays being called for on Mr. Ralph's motion on the Alien Bill, and a quorum not being present the house adjourned.

Thursday, Dec. 7.

Mr Ralph's Alien Bill went through a first reading.

And the house adjourned.

The Alien Bill.—The object of the Bill introduced by Mr. Ralph, on the first day of the Session, is to set at rest the doubts which exist respecting the civil rights of certain persons in this Province. A limited period is given to all persons interested to express their assent or dissent to its provisions, by recording the same in one of the Public Offices in each District.—We shall give further particulars of the Bill after its next reading.

Friday, Dec. 8.

The House was principally occupied this day in debating Resolutions on the Address in reply to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor's Speech—and a Committee was appointed to draft the Address pursuant to the Resolutions passed. Members gave notice of several Bills to be brought in.

A Committee of seven, on motion of the Attorney General, was appointed (by ballot) to take into consideration the Assessment Law, to report by Bill, or otherwise, what Amendments, if any, are considered necessary in that Statute. (It will be remembered that under this Statute, the Sale of Lands, for non-payment of Taxes, takes effect on 1st January, 1828.]

Died,

On the 20th September, in his 66th year, Brownlow Bertie Mathew, Esq. Nephew of the last Duke of Ancaster.

The above paragraph appears in a London paper, and, we understand, was the occasion of the Dinner Party at the Government House on Thursday being postponed —The deceased was the maternal Uncle of His EXCELLENCY.

We have received a very interesting letter from a friend who has recently been in London, and make the following extract :—Albion.

"You have no idea how London is improved.—All the way from Primrose Hill to Carlton Palace is now a splendid ride, with masses of magnificent masonry, in houses, churches, public buildings, and shops on each side. In the centre of the Regent's Park, (late the Marylone fields) are villas, artificial mounts, shrubberies, streams, and every description of park-like ornament, you can imagine. In an English summer-day, the effect is beautiful. Carlton Palace is taking down, and noblemen's seats are to be built on the site, with a National Gallery, and the splendid mansion of the United Service Club.—The Duke of York's new Palace is finished—the King's, worthy the Monarch who is to live there, 600 feet front, is nearly complete. It contains a gallery of paintings 150 feet long. Opposite the Duke of Wellington's house in Piccadilly, is a grand Triumphal Arch, of vast dimensions, which will form the grand approach to the King's new Palace. St. George's Hospital is to come down—the turnpike gate at Hyde Park Corner is removed to Knight's Bridge—new entrance gates to the Park here have been made, and every thing has been done to make the palaces of London no longer a reproach to the British mode of lodging their Sovereigns.—Charing Cross has been thrown open to St Martin's Church, which is now visible from Pall Mall. In fine 5000 houses are building in the vicinity of the Park, so that altogether, you would hardly recognize it."

Arrival of Mr. J. W. Parkins.—This celebrated personage, better known in London under the name of Ex-Sheriff Parkins. and whom the late London papers announced was on his way to the New World, has actually arrived and is now in this city. The Ex-Sheriff looks remarkably well and is in fine spirits.—ib.

The Provincial Parliament of Upper Canada will assemble at York, for the despatch of business, on Tuesday next; and from the "modes of preparation," we have witnessed through the medium of the public Journals, we anticipate a busy and interesting Session, and we hope a useful one to the country.—Farmers' Journal.

To the Stockholders of the Steam-Boat "Canada."

GENTLEMEN,

IT having been decided at a Meeting of the Stockholders, held on board the Canada, that I should be invested with the sole charge and management of the Boat the ensuing year, unless, at a Meeting to be held the first Monday in March, other arrangements take place, I seize this opportunity, on the eve of my departure for England, to assure the Stockholders that I have made every arrangement for the safety of the Boat, and the necessary repairs. And at the same time, I respectfully submit to them the ostensible motive of my voyage. Gentlemen, I am so deeply embarked in the speculation I have entered into, that the prospect of the Stock depreciating, and of the Boat's services, and my own labours being rendered abortive in so lucrative a ferry as that betwixt York and Niagara, mainly by a plurality in the management, fills me with dismay. And, as I trust I am entitled to the confidence the Stockholders generally placed in my abilities, and am convinced, that unless the power of management be invested in one person to act with all his energies in the scene of profits, to seize the advantages of market in the economy of the outlay, with the discretion of a sole owner, loss and ruin to myself must ensue. With this view of the subject, I embark for England to endeavour to raise funds and relieve those gentlemen who are averse to my management, and to take up the remainder of the Stock, that they who so kindly confided in my assurances of individual profit, and placed implicit reliance in my integrity and abilities may not be disappointed in their fair expectations. Confident that I possess the hearty wishes of success, from many valuable patrons, in taking leave, I am happy to subscribe myself,

GENTLEMEN,
Your most obedient humble Servant,
HUGH RICHARDSON.

Upper Canada Gazette.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1826.

BY AUTHORITY.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

May it Please Your Excellency,

WE HIS MAJESTY'S most Dutiful and Loyal Subjects the Legislative Council of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled, beg leave most respectfully to present to Your Excellency our grateful acknowledgements for Your very gracious Speech at the opening of this Session.

Feeling as Children for the distress of a Parent, it would have been a source of deep lamentation to be apprised by Your Excellency that there should have been any exception to the general condition of affairs in our Mother Country with which we were congratulated at the opening of the last Session, but for the confident hope which Your Excellency consolingly holds out, that the calamity produced by the depression of the Commercial and Agricultural Interests of Great Britain is fast passing away.—That notwithstanding this extraordinary pressure our mighty Parent should still be enabled to extend, in the fullest degree, the blessings of her protection and care to every portion of her wide spreading Dominions, is an irrefragable proof that Britain is Britain still.

We notice with grateful feelings Your Excellency's announcement of having visited the several Districts of this Province, it being an additional proof of Your Excellency's Paternal anxiety to ascertain the real state and wants of the people committed to your care; and we sincerely rejoice in the representation made of the substantial and regularly progressive improvements which your Excellency witnessed on your tour, and of their natural result, the contentment of the People.

The judicious remark of your Excellency upon the growth of Civil Society in this Province, and the consequences likely to arise therefrom, could not fail to impress on our minds their great importance; and whenever fit opportunities may present themselves of supplying and remedying the wants and imperfections pointed out, our most zealous co-operation may be depended upon.

The very cheering prospect held out by your Excellency of the system of facilitating Emigration which the British Government has recently adopted, and which, from the experiments already made, has been most satisfactorily experienced in this Province, calls for our warmest gratitude for the further benefits we anticipate therefrom; and it is in the highest degree encouraging to find, that when experiment is found to be advantageous, it is forthwith resolved into system—such the wise councils of the Imperial Government.

We fully appreciate with your Excellency the great advantages to be derived from an accession of intelligence and wealth to the province, combined with an increase of population, and we shall rejoice to find that the operations of the Canada Land Company, with other causes for emigration, may be the means of procuring those advantages so highly essential to accelerate the march of improvement.

An additional theme for strong attachment to the Parent State presents itself in your Excellency's mention of the Report of the Military Commissioners, who visited this Province during the last year, and of the important measures which have in consequence been resolved upon. To be assured by your Excellency that the execution of a Canal to lead from Lake Ontario to the River Ottawa, upon even a larger scale than we had ventured to suggest, is now in course of superintendence under an Officer of Rank and Science, could not fail to produce the feeling above expressed, the improvement of our internal navigation being of paramount importance, as well for our Military defence as for the vast advantages to our Commerce and Agriculture, which such an undertaking must necessarily combine.

The Welland Canal must naturally be an object of interest, and as remarked by your Excellency, scarcely less so than the former; and it is highly gratifying to find such a spirit of Enterprise, so essentially important to the true interests of the Province, should emenate from the breasts of Private Individuals.

The strong recommendations of your Excellency for our favor and protection of this work will ensure it the attention which its importance deserves.

The recommendations of your Excellency directing our attention to those more obvious and easy improvements in our Highways (without effecting which the great improvements in our water communications will produce but partial good effect) is too striking to be lost sight of, and our concurrence will be cheerfully afforded to every measure which we may deem calculated to effect the desired object.

In reference to your Excellency's announcement, that an early communication will be made of His Majesty's intentions in respect to the naturalizing of such Aliens as have become resident in this Province, and this if other subjects should present themselves, which your Excellency should feel it your duty to submit to the consideration of the Legislature, that they will be laid before them, we feel it not merely as our duty, but as our inclination, to assure your Excellency, that we shall ever receive with becoming attention, whatever to our Sovereign, or His Representative, may seem fitting to communicate.

Finally, we hail with gratitude, and feel with fervor, the general tenor of your Excellency's communications of our Revered Monarch's constant paternal care over us, which clearly evinces that we are not merely considered as integral, but as interesting parts of the British Empire.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL,
SPEAKER.

REPLY.

Honorable Gentlemen,

I thank you for this very Loyal and affectionate Address; and I rely with confidence on your assurances that you will proceed without delay to the consideration of the important matters I have recommended to your notice.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces there in, &c. &c. &c.

WE His Majesty's Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament Assembled, humbly thank Your Excellency for Your Speech from the Throne, at the opening of the present Session, and assure Your Excellency that we fully feel the high responsibilities attached to us, upon being convened in Provincial Parliament to discharge those duties of which the correct and diligent performance is most essential to the welfare and happiness of the people; to whom we can with confidence and satisfaction appeal for the zeal, diligence and caution, with which we have served them.

We regret to find that the Commercial and Agricultural interests of Great Britain have experienced so severe a depression; and rejoice to hear that confident hope may be entertained that the calamity is fast passing away; and when we find the excellent Civil Institutions of that great and glorious Nation remaining unshaken amidst an unprecedented a pressure, and extending still to every portion of her Dominions, the blessings of her liberality and protection, we feel additional reason to admire and imitate her illustrious example.

We learn with satisfaction that Your Excellency found leisure, during the recess, to visit the several Districts of this Province; and moreover that Your Excellency feels satisfied that prosperity and contentment pervade them all—and we should be wanting in candour towards your Excellency, and justice to ourselves, were we not to express our sincere regret that Your Excellency thought proper, in some instances, to receive, and answer with complacency, addresses which contained unwarrantable reflections upon a co-ordinate branch of the Legislature.

We are happy to learn that Your Excellency considers the advancement of this Province to depend on no dubiful basis; but that it is substantial and regularly progressive; and we hope that the people warmed by the generosity and munificence of the Mother Country, will be awakened into a spirit of enterprize that will happily accelerate the future improvement of this Province.

We assure Your Excellency that, whenever the fit opportunity presents itself, we will be happy to direct our earnest attention to such changes in the Jurisprudence of the Country as may conduce to the happiness and security of the People.

We likewise assure Your Excellency that we will pay every attention to the Public Accounts and Estimates, and make such provision for the Service of the ensuing year as our public duty shall require.

We will be most happy to receive the pleasure of our Most Gracious Sovereign upon our several Addresses of the last Session, so far as it has been communicated to Your Excellency.

We are gratified to find that a state of Emigration has been adopted by the British Government, and that it has recently attracted the attention of the Imperial Parliament and the Nation at large.—We hope that this Province, possessing such great natural advantages, will share the benefits which may arise from such a system, and we anticipate with pleasure the introduction of Capitalists, by the Canada Land Company, which we are happy to learn, has so far surmounted its obstacles as to go into operation, and likely to realize the most favorable expectations.

We are happy to be informed, by Your Excellency, that the Report of the Military Commissioners, who visited this Province during the last year, has led to the resolution of adopting such measures for our Military defence, as will be commensurate with the object—and we are satisfied that the works projected, must, in the execution, add materially to the stock of public wealth, by furnishing employment to labor.

It is with high satisfaction we learn that the Report of the Military Commissioners has led to the improvement of the internal navigation from Lake Ontario to the Ottawa, on a scale more extended than we had ventured to suggest.

We are also happy to learn that, in the opinion of Your Excellency, the Welland Canal is proceeding with rapidity, and that its present state affords a reasonable promise of its successful accomplishment.

We shall feel particularly gratified to find that these extensive improvements in our communication by water, are in progress without burdening the Provincial Treasury; and will therefore direct our attention to those more obvious and easy improvements in the highways, without which the people of this Province may soon find it difficult to avail themselves of all the advantages which these great works would otherwise present.

Deeply sensible of the great importance of the question, we will take the very earliest opportunity of considering what further security may be necessary for the Civil Rigts of the inhabitnts of this Province.

We will be happy to receive such Communications from time to time, as Your Excellency may find it your duty to submit for our consideration.

JOHN WILSON,
Speaker.

Commons House of Assembly,
12, December, 1826.

REPLY.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you for the assurance that you will direct your attention to the objects I have recommended to your notice.

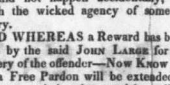
I cannot, however, but observe that the usage and courtesy which prevail with the Parliament of the Mother Country in answering Speeches from the Throne, and which appear hitherto to have been respected by the Legislature of this Colony, have, perhaps inadvertently, been deviated from in your Address.

Although I hope I have not been altogether unsuccessful in my endeavours to promote harmony between the several Branches of the Legislature; it is not in my power to ensure a good understanding between you and your Constituents—that must necessarily depend upon their opinion of the zeal, diligence, and caution with which you say you have served them—an opinion which the British Constitution has never denied the People the right to express, but which I can never desire to find conveyed in exceptionable language.

To have refused the Addresses which were presented to me on my tour through the Province, would have been to adopt a course not reconcileable with the spirit of our Constitution; and they deserved my warmest acknowledgments—not on account of any mention they might contain of a co-ordinate Branch of the Legislature; but as conveying the generous and dutiful sentiments of a Loyal People, who to appreciate, and solicitous to do justice to the benevolent intentions of their Sovereign.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.



To all to whom these Presents shall come

Greeting:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. John Large, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said John Large for the discovery of the offender—Now Know Ye That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime.

Given under my hand &c.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign.

Executive Council Office,
York, 23*rd March*, 1826.

NOTICE is hereby given, by Order of His Excellency the Lieutenat Governor, in Council, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.

No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21*st November*, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Ceut will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GREENWICH PENSIONER.

Why, this Greenwich pensioner is in himself a record of the last forty years' war. He is a breathing volume of naval history; not an event but is somewhere indented in him with steel or lead; he has been the stick in which the English Mars has notched his cricket-matches, when twenty-four pounders were balls, and mainmasts wickets. See, in his blinded eye is Howe's victory on the glorious First of June; that stump of what was once an arm, is Nile; and in his wooden leg, read Trafalgar. As to his scars, a gallant action, or a desperate cutting-out, is noted in every one of them. And what was the old fellow's only wish, as with a shattered knee, he lay in the cockpit under the surgeon's hand—what was his earnest supplications to the wet-eyed messmate who bore him down the hatchway? Simply, that he would save him one of the splinters of the mainmast of the Victory, to make of it a leg for Sundays! His wish was granted; and at Greenwich, always on the seventh day, and also on the 21st of October, is he to be seen, propped upon the estimable splinter, which from labour, time, and beeswax, has taken the dark glossiness of mahogany, What a face he has! What certain consciousness of his superiority on his element at times puffs out his lip, and gives a sudden twitch to his head! But ask him in what quarter sets the wind—and note, how with his one eye he will glance at you from top to toe: and, without ever raising his head or hand to make a self-inquiry, answers you at once, as though it was a question he was already prepared for! And so, indeed, he is; it being his first business, on rising, to consult the weather. The only way to gain his entire confidence, is at once frankly to avow your utter ignorance, and his superiority; and then after he has leered at you with an eye, in which there is a meeting of contempt, good-humour and self importance, he is wholly your own; and will straightway launch into the South Seas coast along the shores of Guinea, where —by the bye, he will tell you he once fell in love with a negress, who, however jilted him for the cook,—and then he will launch out Admiral Duncan—take you a voyage with him round Cape Horn, where a mermaid appeared, and sung a song to the ship's crew; and who, indeed, blew aside all the musket-shots that were ungallantly fired at her in requital of her melody. But our pensioner has one particular story; hear him through that, suffer yourself to be wholly astounded at its recital, and, if you were not a landsman, he would instantly greet you as his dearest friend. The heroes of this same story, are our pensioner and a shark: a tremendous shark that used to be the terror of the harbour of St, Thomas's. Upon this shark, and the piece of the mainmast of the Victory, is our pensioner content to rest all his importance during his life, and his fame with posterity. He will tell you that he, being caterer of the mess, let fall a piece of beef out of the port-hole, which this terrible shark received into its jaws, and twisted its body most provokingly at the delicious mouthful. Hereupon our pensioner—it was before, he reminds you, he had lost a limb —asks leave of the first lieutenant (for the captain was ashore) to have a bout with the shark:—leave being granted, all the crew are quickly in the shrouds, and upon the hammock-netting, to see Tom—"tackle the shark." Our pensioner now enters into a long knife, he jumped overboard, dived under the shark, whom he saw approaching with distened jaws, and inflicted a tremendous wound with the knife in the belly of the fish; this is repeated thrice, when the shark turns itself upon its back—a boat is let down, and both the conqueror and the conquered are quickly received upon deck. You are doubtless astonished at this; he, however adds to your surprise by telling you that the mess regaled off the piece of beef recovered from the fish; be more astounded at this although mingle no doubt in your astonishment, and he will straightway promise some day to treat your eyes with a sight of a set of chequer-men, cut from the very dorsal bone of the immolated shark! To be the hearer of a sailor's tale, is something like undergoing the ancient ordeal of red-hot ploughshares; be innocent of unbelief, and you may, as was held, journey in safety; doubt the smallest point, and you are quickly withered into nought. What an odd contrast to his early life in the state of a Greenwich pensioner! It is as though a part of the angry and foaming sea should lie stagnant in a bathing-tub. All his business is to recount his former adventures—to plod about, and look with a disdainful eye at trees, and brick and mortar; or, when he would indulge in a serious fit of spleen, to walk down to the river's side, and let his gall feed upon the mishaps of London apprentices, who, fearles of consequences, may have ventured some five miles from home in not a "rum-built wherry." A Greenwich pensioner fresh from sea is a most preposterous creature; he gets up every morning for a week, a month, and still finds himself in the same place; he knows not what to make of it—he feels the strangeness of his situation and would, had he the patience and the wit, liken himself to a hundred unsettled things. Compare him to a hippopotamus in a gentleman's park, and he would tell you he had in his day seen a hippopotamus, and then, with a good-natured grunt, acquiesce in the resemblance; or to a jolly-boat in a flower-garden; or to a sea-gull in the cage of a canary; or to a porpoise upon a heath-rug; or to a boatswain's-whistle in a nursery; or to a marling-spike in a milliner's work-room; or a tar-barrel in a confectioner's; with any or all of these manufactured articles would our unsettled pensioner sympathize, until time shall have reconciled him to his asylum; and even then, his fancy, like the shells upon our mantle-piece, will sound of the distant and the dangerous ocean. At Greenwich, however, the mutilated old sailor has time enough to indulge in the recollection of his early days, and, with what wisdom he may, too make up his mind to meet in another world those whom his arm may have sent thither long before. Death at length gently lays the veteran upon his back—his last words, as the sailor puts his withered hand upon his heart, are "all's well," and sea and earth have passed away. His body, which had been for forty years a bulwark to the land, now demands of it but "two paces of the vilest earth;" and if ought could spring from the tomb characteristic of its inmate, from the grave of the pensioner would arise the stout, unbending oak—it would be his fitting monument; and the carolling of the birds in its branches would be his loud, his artless epitaph.

SUMMARY.

FRANCE.—Mr. Canning was to leave Paris for London on the evening of the 25th October.

The late fire at Constantinople had caused much uneasiness among certain houses in Marseilles, who had made advances on consignments from that city of nearly half a million.

A letter of a recent date from Bayonne, announces that several commercial houses in that town have suffered severely by the numerous failures that have lately taken place in Spain.

The Duke of Devonshire, British Ambassador to Russia, gave a splendid fete at Moscow, in honor of the coronation of the Emperor of Russia. It is said it cost £60,000. Among the guests was the American Minister.

The King of Spain was very ill at the last accounts. The Queen it is said was seriously indisposed.

An army of observation is forming to watch the movements in Portugal; Gen. Quesada is appointed to the command. Alarming accounts continue to be received from the Provinces.—The sale of wool, which is the principal resource of Spain, will in a great degree fail this year, owing to the long drought.

PORTUGAL.—The Cortes was convoked for the 30th October. Gen. Silviera has been ordered to quit the Kingdom, and has proceeded for France.—Gomes, the Portuguese charge des Affairs at Madrid, who refused to make oath the Constitution, accompanied him.

Among the members of the Cortes are several individuals who belonged to the last Cortes. Pinheiro, formerly minister of foreign affairs, and General Sapaya are of the number.

RUSSIA AND PERSIA.—The Emperor of Russia published a formal declaration of war against Persia, on the 28th September; but a battle had previously occurred on the 24. in which the former were victorious. The Russians attacked the Persians at the Chamora, 10,000 strong, and killed 1000.

A letter from St. Petersburgh has the following passage:—"The Persian war with this country resembles the Burmese war, the Persians having taken a fancy to conquer Russia with 20,000 men. The result of such affairs with the Persians is generally the loss of a few heads and noses among the unlucky counsellors."

A letter of the 17th October, from Frankfort, announces that a courier from Vienna had just brought intelligence that the Ultimatum of Russia had been definitely acceded to by the Porte. This intelligence reached Ackermann on the 6th, and the Russian Plenipotentiaries left that place on the following day for Odessa. Several couriers were immediately dispatched to the different commercial towns. The public effects got up in consequence.

A letter from Constantiople, of Sept. 26, states that the British Ambassador, had delivered a note urging the Porte to enter into a negotiation with the Greeks. To this it is said a reply was made that the Porte understood his own affairs, and did not wish the interference of the English Ambassador.

Other reports state that Constantinople continued convulsed by the machinations of the friends of the Janisaries, and that the Porte was wholly unable to carry on the war with vigor.

Newspapers in India.—The number of newspapers published in the India languages and designed solely for native readers, has increased, in the course of seven years, from one to six. Four of these are in the Bengalee, and two in Persia.

There are no less than 65 coaches which daily run from Mary-le-bone to the Bank; each coach makes four, and some of them five journeys each day, and are licensed to carry thirteen passengers; thus upwards of 3,000 individuals may be conveyed daily from the West End to the city, and return the same day.

Letters from Marseilles state, that Lord Cochrane having accidentally been introduced to a house in that city which is favourable to the Turks, has been invited, with some hopes of success, to enter the service of the Pacha of Egypt. Letters and newspapers from that place all agree in saying that he is going for a short time to Geneva. It appears however that he says nothing of his intentions; and we cannot but hope that this is all conjecture, and that he goes to Switzerland to consult with the friends of Greece.

A violent pamphlet has appeared in London on the pretended encroachments made by the state of Maine on the British Territory.

The Etoile says the allied powers are unanimous to stop the effusions of blood in Greece.

The Earl of Egremont, who was the earliest patron, if not the originator, of the Portsmouth and Arundal canal, has, to enable the Commissioners to complete it, surrendered to the Company the whole of his shares, which cost him £15,730; and has engaged to pay to Government the debt due from the Company for Exchequer Bills borrowed, for the amount of which he had become the guarantee.

Messrs. Cappurino, brothers, of Turin, have presented to the Academy of Sciences of that city several specimens of paper for writing and printing, made of the bark of poplars and willow. The report of the Society was highly in its favour, and the manufacturers have obtained a patent from the King of Sardinia.

The father of Marshal Ney died lately at Nancy, in France. He had reached a great age, and was universally esteemed in the place where he lived for the excellence of his conduct.

ENGLAND.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Our accounts are from London to the 23d, and Liverpool to the 22d of October.

A meeting of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of London had taken place for the purpose of petitioning Parliament for a repeal of the corn law, and to effect a reduction of the public expenses. The meeting viewed with alarm the actual state of the country when the agricultural and manufacturing population is reduced after so many years of peace to live on subscriptions and alms when the interests of navigation and commerce are compromised, the public revenue diminished, and the number of crimes increased to a frightful degree. It was said, moreover, that the corn law adopted under the specious pretext of favouring the general interests of English Agriculture had no other effect than to keep the funds at their highest rates.

It was reported in London on the 20th, that Minister would propose Parliament to a tax of five per cent on all real property, and that in order to make the measure less burdensome to the owners of lands and the public funds, the "assessed tax" would cease to be exacted. According to the Sun, the effect of the measure would be to raise, on the amount of dividends paid to the public, £1,500,000.

An English papers announces that Sir Walter Scott would leave London for Paris on the 20th. It appears to be certain that the illustrious author of Waverley has nearly finished his "Life of Napoleon." It is to be issued in February next, and will form six large octavo volumes.

Foreign Intelligence.

GREECE.

Extract of a letter from Smyrna, Oct. 9.—"The affairs of the Greeks continue, as far as I can judge, as good as they have been for some time past. Ibrahim Pacha can make no movements, and his father is unable to make any effort in his favor, and has need of assistance. The Captain Pacha continues cruising off Mytelene. The Greeks are waiting with anxiety, the arrivals of Cochrane. The affairs with Russia, it is expected, will be amicably arranged."

UNITED STATES.

Important.—It is not generally understood, (says the Philadelphia Gazette) that British vessels which may enter the ports of the United States, after the first December next, from any of the ports included in the late Orders of Council will be liable to be confiscated.

The act of May 6th 1822, gave authority to the President, to open our ports for British vessels from the colonies, on principles of Reciprocity, but the 6th section of the 1st March, 1823, says, "that if at any time, the intercourse between the U. States and any of the above enumerated British colonial ports, should be prohibited by a British Order in Council, from the time the same shall commence to be in force," the act of 1st, 1823, shall cease to operate in their favor, and the act of April 18th, 1818, shall revive and be in full force.

The act of April 18th, 1818, which is thus virtually revived by the late British Order of Council, is very positive, declaring, "that the ports of the United States shall be and remain closed against every vessel owned wholly or in part by subjects of his Britannic Majesty, coming from any part or place in a colony or territory of his Britannic Majesty, that is or shall be, by the ordinary laws of navigation, closed against vessels owned by citizens of the U. States." And, furthermore, that every such British vessel entering one of our ports shall, with her tackle, cargo, &c. beforfeited to the United States.

From the Auburn Free Press of Nov. 29.

The Congress of the United States will meet next Monday.

We may hope that this session of the grand concil of the nation will be characterized by more of moderation, dignity and propriety, than was the last. The eyes of the world are upon this government, watching its conduct and its motions.

The system of personal abuse and general violence which marked the course of certain members, tending to disgrace the nation, and ultimately to confusion and anarchy, was doubtless a source of satisfaction to all the enemies of the country.

If any member sees cause for arraying himself against the administration, let him do it. In such a case it would be his duty to do so. But let the cause be real; and let his opposition be manly, dignified and parliamentary.

Trade with the British West Indies.—

This is the day upon which the retaliatory laws between the United States and Great Britain, go into operation, in regard to the colonial trade of the British West Indies; and many people suppose that British vessels which may enter the ports of the United States, after this day, from any of the ports included in the late Order of Council, will be liable to be confiscated. Such, however, is not the fact.

"The act of May 6th, 1822, gave authority to the President to open our ports for British vessels from the colonies, on principles of reciprocity; but the sixth section of the act of March 1st, 1823, says "that" if, at any time, the intercourse between the United States and any part of the above enumerated British Colonial ports, should be prohibited by a British order in Council, from the time the same shall commence to be in force," the act of March 1st, 1823, shall cease to operate in their favor, and the act of April 18th, 1818, shall revive and be in full force—" proclamation to that effect having been made by the President of the United States."

"The act of April 18th, 1818, which is thus virtually revived by the late British Order in Council, is very positive, declaring, "that the ports of the United States shall be and remain closed against every vessel owned wholly or in part by subjects of his Britanic Majesty, coming from any part or place in a colony or territory of his Britannic Majesty, that is or shall be, by the ordinary laws of navigation, closed against vessels owned by citizens of the U. States." And, furthermore, that every such British vessel entering one of our ports shall, with her tackle, cargo, &c. beforfeited to the United States.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

House of Assembly, Monday, Dec. 11.

Religious Societies Relief Bill (enabling them to hold Lands in a Corporate capacity)—Mr. Rolph said that in bringing in the bill he explained that the principle of the Bill was similar to one introduced by him last Session—during the recess, however, he had given the subject his consideration, and the conclusion was, that a general Bill, giving power to all Religious Denominations of Christians to hold Lands, would be preferable—his wish was to be liberal to all.

The Attorney General stated to the House that he was in favor of the principle of the Bill—it had heretofore been with him a favorite measure—he was not prepared, however, to concur in the Bill in its present shape—he would prefer that the several Denominations should be particularly named, including such Christian Denominations as were known, and not those of whom the house knew nothing. It was not the wish, he believed, in any Country in the world, and would lead to difficulty if adopted in this—new Sects might spring up, and the Courts of Law might be called upon to decide upon their peculia teasets and to determine, what the house themselves seemed unwilling to determine—whether they were to be considered as Christian Denominations.

Mr. C. Jones had always concurred in the principles of the present measure—he had on a former occasion stated his sentiments to the House on this subject, and agreed in the opinion expressed by the Attorney General.

Mr. Morris thought that 100 Acres for a Parsonage would not be too much, and he should give his vote for that quantity of land, besides enough for a Church and Burial Ground.

Mr. Bidwell said that it was his desire to afford to every man the right of worshipping God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and he thought the present measure connected with this right—he should therefore give the Bill his support.

The Attorney General in reply, said he was not aware that in this Country there was any thing to prevent any man worshipping according to the dictates of his conscience—the allusion made on this subject was in his opinion uncalled for, and in no manner connected with the question—he had never heard of any complaints on the subject, and the measure now before the House, whether adopted or not, would in no wise interfere with that Religious toleration which had always existed in the Country.

Mr. James Wilson would give his support to the Bill.

Captain Matthews thought that in this case the example of Turkey was worthy of imitation—there all denominations were tolerated, could build Churches, &c. It had been objected on a former discussion of the subject to admit Unitarians to enjoy the advantages of the provisions of the Bill, on the ground that they were not Christians—he however contended that they were—he himself was an Unitarian and he was proud to avow it.

Mr. Rolph moved the filling up the blank with 100 acres.

Mr. J. Jones would have had no objection to have gone beyond 100 acres, if the Bill was limited to known denominations of the ministry established by the British Parliament—would they there find any precedent for such a step? the Speech from the Throne announced that certain instructions will be laid before the House, and before even a Reply is made to that Speech, a Bill is introduced on the subject. If any good reason could be given for this unprecedented haste in such an important matter, he would vote for the Preamble of the Bill, but not till then.

Mr. Bidwell did not expect to hear such objections now—it was not the proper time to make them—they should have been brought forward when the Bill was first introduced—it was now before the House in a Parliamentary manner, and he saw no good reason for delaying its considerations—the same objections had been made before but not attended to. This House was not to delay for the purpose of registering the Edicts of Government—they were authorised to Legislate without any such interference, and in doing so he thought they shewed no disrespect to Government—the instructions alluded to were not for the guidance of this House—but for that of the Executive—the House was not to be governed by them—public opinion called for this measure, and by that alone were they to be governed. The Attorney General had objected to the unusual haste evinced in this matter—it was not so—the same time had elapsed between the different stages of this Bill as all others, and was according to the Rules of the House—the people have had time to express their opinions upon it—no disrespect had been shewn in not answering the Speech—that had been proceeded in with all proper haste, and no blame could be attached to the House for attending to the business of the Country. The measure now before the House had been fully discussed upon a former occasion, and the opinions of Members were therefore made up—the subject was important, and he would give it his support.

Mr. J. Jones was in favor of the Preamble of the Bill, but would delay until the instructions were communicated to the House. Last Session the Resolutions proposed by the honorable Member for Lenox and Addington went to make all subjects—on the other side, this measure giving power to Legislate was proposed—this however was rejected by the majority. He would tell that honorable Gentleman and this House, that the communications alluded to in the Speech were not the Edicts of a Tyrant, sent to this House to be recorded and implicitly obeyed, but instructions from a Gracious King for its consideration, and if seriously disposed to benefit their Constituents and the Country, as they said they were, surely they were bound to receive them. If those instructions were such as the House thought they could not adopt, they need not to follow them; it would be only decorous, however, as is usual in such cases, to afford an opportunity of their being placed in the possession of the House. It was absurd, he thought, to pass a Law contrary to the known intention of His Majesty—the people of the Country expected and wished that the House should act with decorum, and Legislate on this subject effectually, the people should not be trifled with, but their rights should be effectually secured, and these he thought would best promoted by being acquainted with the instructions. His own Constituents felt deeply interested in this question, and if no Public Act was passed, had prayed for a Private Act to Naturalize them—one of them was formerly a Member of this House. He again repeated that he was in favor of the Preamble of the Bill, but thought it improperly brought forward; on other matters of less importance courtesy grants more time—in this case, respect to the Executive—respect to ourselves, and justice to our Constituents, requires, in order that we may Legislate with more certainty and effect, that the House should wait until the Communications alluded to in the Speech were made.

Mr. Rolph contended that he had not varied from opinions expressed by him on former occasions—he could give the best reasons for bringing forward the present measure; the Bill of the King had formerly prevented their Legislating on this subject, that power was now given them by an Act of the Imperial Parliament: he valued the gift highly, and as it gave the power he would act upon it without waiting for instructions sent for the guidance of the Executive—he would not reject so liberal a measure. What injury would the present Bill do the people? he should ever be proud of being a subject of His Majesty, and was it an urgent matter to confer the same distinction on others? he would pledge himself to pass a Private Bill conferring this distinction, if asked for, but at the same time he would not say those were Aliens who were not. The learned Attorney General had almost made use of threats—he could not tell him if he declined the present measure, they must go on without him; he was unwilling to separate the objects embraced in this Bill, they must stand or fall together. Civil Rights and Titles he would combine; he had heard no good reason why they should not be blended together in one Bill; he would oppose any delay on the subject, it was before the House in a Parliamentary manner, and with the Act of Parliament giving them power to Legislate, he saw no necessity of deferring the matter for the instructions—he saw no necessity for them, they were not needed. An attempt had been made to betray the House last Session by the Bill sent down from the Legislative Council; the House was now called upon to trust to instructions—we were not sent here to trust, but to protect the rights of the People—these instructions were not for the guidance of this House; the Act of the Imperial Parliament points out the duty of the Executive to reserve the Bill for the King's assent—why then should the House wait; why delay to be guided? he denied that there was any want of confidence, and thought there was no necessity of dictation in such a case—the House was competent to judge—the Bill afforded relief, and it would be the duty of the Government to send it home.

Mr. D. Jones had stated his objections when this bill was first proposed—he would concur in the Preamble, but agreed in thinking that it would be more conducive to the interests of the people that they should defer further consideration, until the instructions were communicated to the House; they could then Legislate with a better prospect of usefulness, and he hoped the good sense of the House would so decide. No address had been made in reply to the Speech, and Communications of the utmost importance could not be made; little chance was therefore afforded of doing justice to the people in passing Bills with unknown and hasty clauses of their succeeding—he would not be tied down by those instructions, but he thought it idle and a waste of time to Legislate without them; delay would not frustrate the object, but might essentially promote it.

Mr. Cameron thought that the present proceeding looked like throwing down the gauntlet of defiance; courtesy usual on such occasions required that the House should wait for the Communications made by His Majesty's Government. He did not wish to interfere in the measure, but had no wish to be rash in proceeding to its consideration before the instructions were laid before the house; not as being necessary for his guidance, but as a common courtesy which had always been considered due on former occasions; he saw no reason for deviating from that course on the present occasion, and should therefore prefer that the matter was delayed.

Mr. Hamilton was suspicious, and thought he had a right to be so from the proceedings of last year; he had not heard any objections raised against this Bill—no fault had been found with the delay was required. He would not consent to divide the Bill—he would confirm Titles, and would not declare those to be Aliens who had saved the Country when it was invaded; he was not sent here to obey the instructions of Government—he saw no reason for waiting for these instructions, and would not consent to delay the consideration of so important a measure, on which they were fully competent to act, without being guided by instructions sent only for the guidance of the Executive.

Mr. Clerk was in favor of the Preamble of the Bill, but would vote for delaying the further consideration of the subject; he had every confidence in the intentions of Government, and thought that the Answers to the Addresses of the House of last Session should be waited for before going into so important a measure.

The Preamble of the Bill was adopted—Committee rose, reported progress, and asked leave to sit again to-morrow.

The Felon's Counsel Bill went through a second reading—no particular discussion took place upon it.

The Guardian Bill, 2d Reading.—Mr. Bidwell stated that an honorable Member, now not in his place, having expressed a desire to peruse the Bill more particularly, he would prefer that it should stand over for the present; the Bill was important and he had no desire to urge it upon the house—he moved the adoption of the Preamble.

In reply to some observations from Mr. Jones,

Mr. Bidwell said that this was a measure much required by the Country—he repeated that he had however no desire to urge its consideration on the Committee, until Members had examined the several provisions of the Bill, to which perhaps some useful and necessary amendments might be proposed.

At two o'clock the House went up with their Address in reply to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor's Speech at the opening of the Session. The House being returned, a Message was received from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, communicating Despatches from His Majesty's Government, on the subject of several Addresses of the House, transmitted last year, and on the subject of the payment of debts.

Mr. Hamilton moved that John Carey, Printer, having intruded himself with the Members of the House into the presence of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, when presenting their Address this day, has been guilty of a high breach of the Privileges of the House—that he be taken into the Custody of the Serjeant at Arms, and be brought to the Bar of this House to answer for his conduct.

By order—the House was cleared of strangers.

The doors opened.—Mr. Hamilton moved that a Committee be appointed, to enquire whether John Carey has been guilty of a breach of the Privileges of this House, with power to send for persons and papers—Carried.

MOTIONS MADE—by Mr. Morris, for a Committee on the subject of the Despatch communicated by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, on the subject of the Clergy Reserves.

By Mr. Peterson, for leave to bring in a Bill to repeal the 44th of the King.

By Mr Rolph, for an Address of thanks to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for his Message of this day.

By Mr. Rolph, for a Committee of the whole to-morrow, on the subject of the several Communications made to the House by Messages this day.

By Mr. Hamilton, for an Address to His Excellency, praying that he will be pleased to inform the House what Members have received Appointments or Pensions during this Parliament.

By Mr. Perry, for Printing 500 copies of the Messages and Communications made to the House this day.—Adjourned.

Wednesday, Dec. 12.

House in committee of the whole—2d Reading Religious Societies relief Bill.

Mr. Rolph should consider it his duty if no amendment was proposed, after moving the adoption of the Preamble, to delay the further consideration of the Bill, and that the committee should then rise and report it to the House again. Some members were of opinion that the quantity of land with which the blank had been filled up was two great—he had no desire to hurry the matter, but wished that members might have an opportunity of examining the several provisions of the bill.

Capt. Matthews would give 12 months for the registry of Deeds.

Mr. Hamilton would extend the provisions of the Bill to all Sects—he had nothing to fear from Christians.

Mr. Peterson would prefer that delay should be made before going on with the Bill—thought that the particular sects should be named—in its present general shape much difficulty might arise—he would Legislate for sects that were known, but thought it unnecessary to do so for those who were not known.

Mr. Cameron was thought that the name Christian was enough—it was not for the house to judge mens hearts and say who were, and who were not Christians—the term Religious Denomination satisfied him perfectly he had always expressed these opinions, and he saw no reason for changing them now.

Mr. Perry said that if the delay was required for the purpose of naming particular sects he should oppose it, he would vote for it as it now stood without making any distinction—he would not legislate down, any sect—if they held to fix opinions they would soon put themselves down.

Captain Matthews said the Bill did not even in its present shape go as far as he wished—he would have it go to all Classes professing any Religion—as the House however did not concur with him in this respect, he should vote for the Bill as it stood.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) was opposed to delay.

Mr. Beardsley hoped that if delay was given, it would not be for the purpose of narrowing the principles of the Bill—he would vote for all without distinction—he should vote for the Bill, but would oppose any postponement.

The Committee rose, and reported the Bill as amended—3d reading for Friday next.

Mr. M'Birdis brought in a Bill to amend the Ale and Beer Licence Bill.

Absconding Debtors Bill—Mr. Rolph moved the adoption of the Preamble—the Bill he said went to attach the property instead of the Person, it was securing property for the payment of debts a principle which he hoped would meet the concurrence of the House.

Captain Matthews asked if this Bill passed, would it amount to abolishment, of imprisonment for debt—if it did he would support it, and otherwise.

Mr. Rolph replied that it would be optional with Creditors—he had however brought in another Bill for abolishing imprisonment for debts—this was to secure property for the payment of debts.

Captain Matthews whould then withold his assent to this Bill, till the other was passed.

Mr. James Wilson opposed the Bill, if it passed into a law it would destroy hundreds of families, and fill the pockets of Lawyers and Sheriffs, who had already more to do than they could attend to.

Mr. J. Jones would have no objections to attach the property of persons who have Actually left the Province, but not of those who remained in the Country on a bare suspision of their intention to leave it—he proposed an amendment to this effect.

Mr. Coleman thought the present time improper for introducing this Bill—a general Commercial depression had been felt throughout the world, and the Province had not yet recovered from the share it had experienced—if such a Law as now is might produce great sacrifices of property—he should vote against the Bill.

The Preamble with Mr. Jones' amendment was adopted and the committee reported progress—to sit again to morrow.

Town Representation Bill, brought in by Mr. Rolph.

Mr. Rolph stated that this was the same Bill which had been introduced twice before, but which had shared the same fate in the Legislative Council by being laid under the table, as other measures had—the independence of Parliament required that members should be paid—the people thought so themselves, but they were not to be allowed to reward their own Servants—political leeches might find their way into the House, who would not express their opinions in a fearless manner—some offices were held during pleasure and one member of this House who had held such an office, had been twised out of it for the free expression of his sentiments—that subject might yet be brought forward.—He proposed the present Bill, which he said all members might be placed on the same footing, Town as well as County.

Mr. J. Jones had voted against the Bill last year and as he did not think it expedient to make any provision on the subject, he should vote against it now; he would like this opportunity to inform the House that he himself held official situations—he was willing that every vote he gave in the House should go to his Constituents, as they were the best judges whether his holding such situations destroyed his independence.

Mr. Hamilton considered the present measure as necessary to secure the independence of Parliament—the Country could not be fairly represented if they were not paid—the Country required that they should be compensated for their service—he should give the Bill his support.

Preamble of the Bill adopted—Committee reported progress and asked leave to sit again.

Mr. Rolph brought up the report of the committee appointed to enquire into the breach of Privilege committed by John Carey.

By order—the House was cleared of strangers.

The door being opened.

The Attorney General moved for leave to bring in the Justice Fee Bill—he explained the object of the Bill which was to regulate the Fees to be taken by Magistrates in certain cases—much difficulty had heretofore existed from the want of such a Bill—he should move the adoption of the Preamble, and its second reading on Monday next in order that members might have an opportunity of examining its several provisions—Carried.

Mr. Rolph of the Committee appointed to draft an Address of thanks to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for his Messages of yesterday, reported that the Committee had prepared an Address and was ready to deliver it—Ordered to be received.

On reading the Address

The Attorney General remarked that the Address went to thank His Excellency for the Communications he had been pleased to make to the House, for the answers to the five Addresses of last year, but did not thank him for the instructions, on the Alien Question—these he thought should be included as well as the others.

Mr. J. Jones said that the committee were instructed by the vote of the House, to thank His Excellency not for a part—but all the Communications made to them—he thought it rather strange that the directions of the House had not been complied with.

Mr. Rolph said that the report of the Committee was now before the House, and in order to save discussion on the subject at present, he should move that the House go into a committee of the whole upon it, to-morrow.

Mr. J. Jones hoped the Hon Gentlemen would not pursue such a course—he appealed to the Speaker, whether such a mode of proceeding was usual.

Mr. Rolph explained that the Committee had reported as far as was practicable—his time had been occupied in attending to other business and the fact was that the Committee had not yet prepared themselves to report the address on the instructions considering the Communications made to the House as distinct, they had now reported an address of thanks on the one subject, and shall probably be ready to report on the other to-morrow—in the mean time he should move that the House go into Committee of the whole to-morrow on the report now made—the Speaker replied to the appeal made to him by Mr. Jones, but his words we could not hear.

Mr. Rolph's motion was put and carried.

The House adjourned.

Thursday, Dec. 14.

The House adjourned for want of a Quorum.

THE U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1826.

There is not any later news from Europe.

We have given a sketch of the debates in the House of Assembly to the 14 inst, it will be continued, and we hope by following this method to keep pace with the proceedings of the House. Long columns of Parliamentary proceedings we are aware fail to interest the reader when they are presented to him months after the speeches have been delivered. In the plan we have adopted it is our desire to afford the earliest intelligence in the shape of a Summary.

Clergy Reserves.—The House was yesterday in Committee of the whole on the Despatch of Lord Bathurst on the subject of Clergy Reserves.

Mr. Morris brought the subject forward and moved Resolutions, and for leave to bring in a Bill to sell all Clergy Reserves, for the purposes of Education. Many have supposed that the question respecting these Reserves was determined and had been decidedly answered.

The Bill for appointing Guardians, introduced by Mr. Bidwell, is certainly an important question, and we were happy to observe that the Honorable mover expressed his desire, that it should receive due consideration. It is very proper that important measures of this kind should not be taken up in a hurried manner, and we were pleased to hear Mr. Bidwell state his willingness, not to urge the matter on the attention of the House, even at the request of one Member, who at its second reading happened not to be in his place, in order that sufficient time might be given for mature consideration. The delay too proposed by Mr. Rolph, on the Religious Societies' Relief Bill, was equally proper, as both these subjects are interesting and important. It may perhaps be thought by many, that under the peculiar circumstances of the case, a similar mode of proceeding with respect to the Civil Rights Bill, might have been attended with beneficial consequences.

Light House.—The want of a Light House at the eastern extremity of the Lake has often been complained of. The subject may probably present itself to the attention of Parliament.

Burlington Canal.—We are happy to learn that the Schooner General Brock with a Cargo of Merchandize passed through the Canal on Saturday last. This fact will remove whatever doubts may have remained as to the success of this work.

Shocking occurrence.—A man by the name of Peter Swears, of Townsend in the London District, whilst assisting at a Raising in Waterford Village, on Wednesday last, fell down in an Apoplectic fit, as is supposed, and immediately expired. Mr. S. was a little intoxicated at the time, but manifested no indisposition; it is evident however that his constitution had been much injured by the baneful practice of a too frequent application to the intoxicating bowl—he has left a large family in indigent circumstances to deplore his untimely death.—Com.

Caution to Parents.—A child of four years old, belonging to William Cunningham, of Townsend, on the evening of the 6th inst. fell into a kettle of hot fat, which had been carelessly set on the floor without using the precaution of placing over it a covering. The child lived in much pain until the afternoon of the next day and then expired.—Communicated.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

FIRE!

This morning, between 4 and 5 o'clock, the town was alarmed by the cry of fire. The destructive element was found to proceed from St. George's Inn, near the Market Square, kept by John Scantlebury. The wind blew strongly from the south, and the progress of the fire was astonishingly rapid—so much so, that the inmates of the St. George's had scarcely time to save themselves—several having made their escape by the windows. In a very short time the whole of that building, including the shops occupied by Mr. Driscoll and Mr. Binley, Druggist, were totally consumed. The house occupied by Mr. Crosby, the tenement belonging to Mr. Rutter, both fronting on the Market Square, and the property of Mr. M'Cunniffe, in Brock-street, (all of which were bounded by the buildings of the St. George's) were also wholly destroyed. The fire, it appears had originated in Mr. Scantlebury's bar-room—but how, or in what manner, is not, we believe, as yet exactly ascertained.

Every exertion was used both by the inhabitants, the military, and all the public departments, to arrest the progress of the flames. The bugles of the 68th sounded the alarm in notes calculated to arouse the most drowsy slumberer. That Regiment, both officers, non-commissioned officers and privates, were exceedingly active—and Major Winnett kindly set guards to protect the exposed property. The thanks of the public are also due to the Royal Artillery for their activity on the occasion. The Engines belonging to the Dock-Yard and the Ordnance Department, were brought from Points Henry and Fredriok with a degree of promptitude that reflects credit upon those at the heads of these Departments.

The active energy displayed by the Fire Company of the town, calls for the unqualified approbation of the inhabitants. Indeed the whole range of buildings on the east side of the Market Square would have been inevitably consumed but for the intrepidity of some of the Gentlemen composing that company, especially Mr. Norton.

Mr. Shaw's large brick building, which form the corner of Brock and King-street, was at one time in very imminent danger—and it is thought that the safety of that house, and perhaps of the whole range of buildings on the south side of King-street, owe their safety to the manly conduct of a Mr. Gilbert, Mr. Robert Cassidy, and several others of our active townsmen.

The property destroyed on this occasion, must amount to several thousand pounds.

Mr. Rutter's property, we understand, was not insured—nor was that of Mr. Binley. Mr. Scantlebury's furniture, we learn, was insured in the "Protection Company," of Hartford, Connecticut, to the amount of £600. Mr. Driscoll's goods, which were partially damaged, are insured in the London Alliance Company for £750—and Mr. M'Cunniffe's property is insured with the same Company for £250.—Kingston Chronicle.

We regret to announce, on the authority of private letters from Quebec, that the transport containing the division of the staff corps, under Major Duvernet, at the time of departure from England was formerly announced, ran ashore on Crane Island. It was rumoured in Quebec, on Tuesday, that she had become a total wreck.—Montreal Herald.

On Saturday a coroners inquest was held at the Military Hospital on the body of John Heffaren, aged 20, private of the 71st regiment. It appears that the deceased died from a blow with a fist received in a contest with George Sharpe private of the same regiment on the 14th instant in the Barrack yard. The head was opened by Dr. Barlow and upon examination a fracture of the scull, of about three inches in length with extravasation of blood, was discovered. The scull presented an unusual appearance being composed of but one single plate, with no marks of diploe, and was quite transparent in many places—a steel probe might have been passed through it without difficulty. The Jury pursuant to the charge of the Coroner returned a verdict of Manslaughter against Sharpe who was previously in the custody of the Civil Power, and who probably will be tried at the March Criminal Term of the King's Bench.—Old Quebec Gazette.

The letters, memoirs &c. of General Wolfe, which are now in the hands of Mr. Murray, London, will shortly be given to the public.—Ib.

MELANCHOLY EVENT.—We regret to have the painful task of recording the premature death of ANN youngest daughter of JOHN YULE, Esquire, of Chambly, and wife of Mr. JOSEPH SHAND, whose marriage we announced in the Gazette of the 22d of June last. The deceased left her Father's tea-table on Tuesday evening about seven o'clock, and was not heard of till the following morning, when her body was found opposite the Fort, having floated thence, it is supposed from her Father's wharf.—Montreal Gazette.

The St. Lawrence steam-boats have all left for their winter quarters with the exception of the Edmund Henry and the Laprairie. The latter arrived this morning from Quebec.—Ib.

His Lordship the Governor in Chief and Commander of the Forces has been pleased to appoint Major General Darling to be Deputy Superintendant General of Indian Affairs vacant by the death of Colonel Clause. His Lordship in consideration of the advanced age and long services of Sir John Johnson, Superintendant General, has further directed that M. G. Darling shall remain at Head Quarters to relieve that tried and a venerable loyalist in the laborious duties of his Department.—

A letter from an Officer recently arrived, in this Command from England, states that Lieut. Colonel Cockburn, late Dy. Quarter Master General in Canada, is to be appointed to the situation of Slave Protector, under the Abolition system, in Jamaica with a salary of £3000 per annum.—Quebec Mercury.

We must go from home to learn news.—The Montreal Herald has the following paragraph:

"We regret to announce, on the authority of private letters from Quebec, that the transport containing the division of the Staff corps, under Major Duvernet, whose departure from England we formerly announced, ran ashore on Crane island. It was rumoured in Quebec, on Tuesday, that she had become a total Wreck."

We have heard nothing of this accident, nor is any such intelligence upon the Exchange Books.—Ib.

We understand that the Deputy-Post-Master General has received information of a plot having been concerted for robbing the mail between Quebec and Montreal.—The principal in this scheme is, said to be, a person named Little, who, with various accomplices, was to effect the robbery in a convenient spot for that purpose, and reliys of horses being provided to escape into the U. States with such booty as they might have acquired. It is hoped that the matter having been discovered this nefarious plan may be effectually discovered. at all events, it is well that the public should be on their guard.—Quebec Gazette.

Died,

On Monday last. Mr. John M'Dougall.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1826.

BY AUTHORITY.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND K. C. B. LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. JOHN LARGE, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said JOHN LARGE for the discovery of the offender—NOW KNOW YE That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime.

Given under my hand &c.

UPPER CANADA.
P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.
J. B. ROBINSON, Attorney General.
D. CAMERON, Secretary.

Executive Council Office,
York, 23rd March, 1826.

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL,
C. E. C.

No. 9 1. f.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

POETRY.

ROMAN GIRL'S SONG.

Roma, Roma, Roma!
Non è più come era prima.

Rome, Rome! thou art no more
As thou hast been!
On thy Seven Hills of yore
Thou sat'st a Queen.

Thou hadst thy triumphs then
Purpling the street:
Leaders and accepted men
Bow'd at thy feet.

They that thy mantle wore,
As gods were seen:
Rome, Rome! thou art no more
As thou hast been!

Rome! thine imperial brow
Never shall rise!
What hast thou left thee now!—
Thou hast ti.. skies!

Blue, deeply blue, they say,
Gloriously bright!
Veiling thy wasted afar,
With colour'd light.

Thou hast thy sunset's glow,
Rome! for thy dower,
Flushing dark cypress-bough,
Temple and tower!

And all save sunsets are thine,
Lone city to hear!
While Night, o'er tomb and shrine,
Rests darkly clear.

Many a solemn hymn,
By starlight sung,
Weeps through the arches dim
Thy wrecks among.

Many a flute,' low swell
Out thy soft air,
Lingers and loves to dwell
With Summer there.

Thou hast the South's rich gift
Of sudden song;
A charmed fountain swift,
Joyous and strong:

Thou hast fair forms that move
With queenly tread;
Thou has rich tones above
Thy mighty dead.

Yet wears thy Tiber's shore
A mournful mien;
Rome, Rome! thou art no more
As thou hast been!

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

House of Assembly, Friday, Dec. 15.

Mr. Boulton presented the Petition of the inhabitants of Clarke and Darlington.

Mr. Scollick p esented the Petition of the inhabitants of Nelson—for 12 mile Creek Bridge.

Mr. J. Jones presented the Petition of Wm. Merrick.

FELON'S COUNSEL BILL went through a third reading—and on motion of Mr. Bidwell, the Bill passed, and a committee was appointed to carry it up to the Legislative Council to request their concurrence thereto.—Previously however.

The Attorney General stated his objections to the Bill—as the law stood in this Province, he said that the Crown prosecutor had a simple duty to perform in submiting to the Court and Jury a plain statement of the facts of the case and such he believed would always be the case if such a law as the one now before the House did not pass—in the event of its becoming law, he contended however, that it might become the duty of Crown prosecutors, in reply to Counsel on behalf of the prisoner, to take some less favorable to accused persons—Counsel would no doubt make strong appeals to the feelings of the Jury, and as the due administration of Criminal Justice might be interfered with by such appeals, it would become the paramount duty of a Crown prosecutor, who must always have the right of reply, to address the Jury in a different manner, from that which now he found it necessary to do, Criminal Justice has always been administered in the Province with humanity—in England a Bill of the same kind had been introduced in the British Parliament—a great difference of opinion had existed there on the subject, but after ample discussion, it had been rejected—in that Country public opinion was against it and such a Bill would never pass there—the idea was abandoned—He said that the passing of this Bill would tend to delay the administration of Justice, as an entirely different mode of conducting prosecutions would take place—if he thought that under the present law an innocent man stood any chance of being convicted he would support the Bill—the practice shewed that this was not the case, and if in some cases that admitted of a favourable construction the party had been convicted, the Justice and clemency of Government had not put the sentence into execution—under the present mode, there could be no differing among the Gentlemen at the Bar—no excitement produced in the mind of the Judges—the Juries were unbiassed—the Crown prosecutor met them for the first time when impannelled in their Box to try the case; no strong appeals were made to their feelings—no necessity for a display of talent—the facts were submitted——witnesses examined, and cross examined in a dispassionate manner and the law clearly explained in the Judges charge, this mode he said afforded the most reasonable prospect for the acquittal of innocent persons, and as the measure now before the House, professed to have this object in view, on the score of humanity, and thinking that object already fully provided for, he should vote against the passing of the Bill.

Mr. Bidwell was happy that every measure he brought forward should be fully discussed, he had however not heard any good argument from the learned Attorney General against the Bill—he could not consent, that it was equally humane to allow the law to remain as it was—every man was the best judge of his own particular case and this Bill gave him the licence to choose a Bill defence by Counsel if he thought it expedient—he was perfectly satisfied with the manner in which Crown prosecutions were now conducted, but a difference of temper and zeal might arise in those entrusted with that duty hereafter—he thought the course adopted in trials for Treason should extend to all others; as to the objection of the Attorney General that such was not the case in England, this was with him a strong argument in favor of the measure. for it had always appeared to unprejudiced Foreigners as an anomaly in the institutions of that country, that while matters relating to property between individuals, were fully discussed by Counsel on both sides, the same right was not extended to those, whose lives dependend upon the issue of the trial, he thought that humanity called for this Bill and that Justice would be promoted by it—he had no objection however that it should be considered as a temporary measure, and if an amendment were proposed to limit it for a certain number of years he should not oppose such an amendment.

On the Question being put—the Bill passed.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIE'S RELIEF BILL, 3d Reading—Mr. Bidwell, moved that the Bill do now pass.

Mr. Sollick before the passing of the Bill, would state his objections, he thought the Bill went too far and that its general provisions for all without distinction, would defeat the interests of those whom it was wished to serve, as in its present shape no reasonable hope could be felt of its passing the Legislature; he would name those sects for whom it was considered proper to make provision, but not those who were not even in existence—it would be time enough to do this he thought when application was made to the House on behalf of sects as they might arise.

Mr. J. Jones should vote against the Bill, he had always been willing to extend the provisions of such a Bill, as this to know sects, he would do so now if names of different Denominations were introduced, he objected to this by pursing the present course, but little design was manifested on the part of others that at the Bill should be sanctioned by the Legislature; he hoped that on a future occasion the House Bill like this, and concur in one that would afford a better prospect of being passed into a law.

The Question being put—the Bill passed and a committee appointed to carry it up to the Legislative Council for their concurrence.

The Speaker informed the House that he had received, from the President and Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada, a statement of its affairs, in compliance with the Law.

The statement being read, it was referred to a select committee. (We shall endeavor to get a copy of it.)

INTESTATE BILL, according to notice, Mr. Bidwell brought in this Bill—he said that its provisions with some immaterial alterations, were the same as those contained in the bill, he had introduced last Session, it had then undergone a thorough discussion, and he considered it unnecessary to make any further observations at present, he should reserve these for its second reading, and was desirious that it should then be fully considered. 2d Reading ordered for Tuesday next.

WHIPPING ABOLITION BILL—Mr. Bidwell in bringing in this Bill, said he hoped the day was not very distant, when the consideration of the punishment of criminals, would come fully under the notice of the House, as the present mode was objectionable on many accounts—the object of the law in inflicting punishment was not only the security of society against crime, but the lessening of crime by effecting a reformation in the criminal; the punishment o Whipping, debased the mind in his opinion, and rendered the latter object more uncertain, and he thought that one less objectionable might be substituted, he hoped that but one sentiment would be felt by the House on the subject; at all events he felt assured that the House would agree in exempting females from this punishment, they were so now in England, and they should be so here.

The Attorney General agreed with the last remarks of the learned gentleman, as respected females, he thought they were different with regard to males; he would not only establish whipping, but Pillory also in the case of females, it would however he thought be difficult to say what other punishment should be inflicted on hardened male offenders, if a fine were imposed, in many cases such persons could not pay it, and our Jails were not adequate for their reception for solitary confinement, want of means prevented our providing as in other Countries, for their being employed in labor; he had given the subject of a public Penetentiary much consideration, but had hitherto deferred submitting any measure on that subject to the House, as he thought the resources of the country were perhaps inadequate to the support of such an institution; at some future day it might become the subject of consideration, some interior situation or some Island might be selected for its establishment, and he should then most heartily concur in abolishing the punishment altogether.

Mr. James Wilson for once would concur in the opinion expressed by the Attorney General, he was happy to hear that the subject of a Penetentiary had occupied his attention; hoped he would before long bring the measure forward and would give it his support.

Mr. Bidwell was not pertinacious in his opinion on the subject, he was aware of the difficulty of providing other punishment for male offenders, but had introduced it in this way in order to afford discussion on punishment generally, and was satisfied that the consideration of this measure had given rise to the mention of a Penetentiary which an honorable friend now informed him, he intended bringing forward this Session, he would agree with the Attorney General in not urging the total abolishment of the punishment, but hoped that females would be exempted from it—and would also agree in the proposition of the Attorney General with respect to pillory.

Mr. James said that the mind of every person must revolt at the punishment of whipping females, he should not object to abolish it.

Mr. Hamilton considered that the administration of Justice, as far as carrying the law into execution was concerned was in a deplorable state—Horse thieves generaly escaped punishment altogether, they were imprisoned from time to time, the laws were not executed, and he thought it necessary that alteration in many respects should be made, and would give his support to a Penetentiary.

Mr. Scollick said that as a punishment for crime he should be in favor of profitable labor, the good effects of which had been felt in England.

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL—House in committee of the whole.

The Attorney General said that being desirious to legislate effectually on this important question, and as the instructions of His Majesty's Government were now before the House, before any further discussion took place on the subject of the present Bill, he could offer a motion to the House which he hoped would be acceeded to—he moved that a Message be sent to the Hon. the Legislative Council, requesting a joint conference on Thursday next on the subject of naturalizing Aliens, and taking the Despatch of Lord Bathurst into consideration.

Mr. Rolph thought that the Attorney General's motion was premature and out of order; The instructions had been printed, and he had not had an opportunity of reading them more than once, and had therefore not been able to give them the attention they required—he was not prepared for a joint conference, and thought it proper that the measure should be fully considered by this House first—he would propose an amendment, that the Bill be referred to a select committee of this House—the House would by this means become better acquainted with the subject, he had no desire to hurry the matter; and the House might hereafter request a joint conference if it thought it necessary—he moved an amendment that the Bill be referred to Messrs. Bidwell, Mathews, Thomson (Frontinac) and Beardsley, as a select committee.

Mr. J. Jones preferred the mode proposed by the Attorney General; if a select Committee is appointed the Bill will be reported, and then a joint conference could not take place—he thought we ought first to have this consideration, where a calm and dispassionate discussion would take place, and such a Bill digested as would be agreeable to both Houses, and have a better prospect of becoming a law.

Mr. Bidwell objected to the Attorney General's motion as being premature, the House should be cautioned against pledging itself, and would therefore prefer Mr. Rolph's motion; the House by this means would be better prepared, for a joint conference after a full discussion among themselves; he thought that the House would not find it expedient to separate the objects of the Bill, and that the Despatch itself did not require it.

The Attorney General, on reflection thought that perhaps there could be no objection to the Bill embracing two objects, but yet considered two Bills necessary as the Estate of persons deceased must be considered a distinct subject, they could not be affected by the measure, he hoped the same course would be taken as attended with beneficial results in other important cases would be adopted here, and that the motion for a joint conferrence would prevail—On the Tea Trade, the Revenue, the Trade Act and other great measures, this course had been adopted, and good results had followed, and he thought this great question should be conducted in the same way—he hoped that this case would not form an exception.

Mr. Hamilton would vote for the amendment, he thought the House should first say what they wanted for themselves, and saw no ne essity for a joint conference.

Mr. Rolph said they should first bestow their wisdom upon the subject, and then submit it to the wisdom of the Legislative Council, he would not go to a joint conferrence without having first formed his opinion in committee here.

The amendment was carried and the Bill referred to a select committee of the House.

THE GUARDIAN'S BILL, was read a second time, some amendments were made in committee, the Bill reported, and leave given to sit again.

CLERGY RESERVES.—According to notice, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the whole, on the Despatch of Lord Bathurst, on the subject of Clergy Reserves.

Mr. Morris said he should propose a series of Resolutions to the consideration of the House—he considered the Despatch as containing no satisfactory answer to the Address of the House. An Act had been passed appropriating the Funds arising from the sale of half of these Reserves, and the construction of that Act had been that a further quantity of Land was to be set apart for the Clergy—the Despatch says this is not the intention, but the Law says so. The Answer was unsatisfactory in as much as the Address went further—it stated that these Lands ought not to be exclusively enjoyed by one Sect, but that the money or Lands should be divided among all, or devoted to purposes of general Education—on this subject the Despatch was silent, and therefore he considered it unsatisfactory. The Church of Scotland, he contended, was entitled to a part of these Reserves—it had so been decided by a majority of the House six years ago, when an Address was sent to the King on this subject—subsequently the House had addressed the Throne to divide them among all Sects, and yet no answer was received on the subject. The Act of Union had expressly provided for the free participation of all rights and privileges in behalf of the Church of Scotland, and yet in this Country, before a Scottish Minister could perform the functions of his office, he must attend before Magistrates with half his congregation at his heels to obtain a licence—he might be accused of treason, and although he had expressed as varying from opinion to his opinion on this subject. The Clergy of the Church of England, by enjoying the whole Reserves, were depriving those of Scotland of their rights—he urged that claim on constitutional grounds. The Act of Union gave to them the same privileges as the Church of England could marry, while the same right could only be obtained by those of Scotland by an application before Magistrates. He should now propose that the Reserves be sold for the benefit of all Sects, for the purposes of general Education—the House was empowered to Legislate on the subject, and he though it better to do so, than to send Addresses year after year, to which no satisfactory answer was given—they were a bone of contention and it would be better to get rid of the question by passing a Bill on the subject; it was time to do so now, as the Imperial Parliament might pass a Law to dispose of them for the benefit of the Church of England. The Despatch of Lord Bathurst now before the House was address of the "Established Church," the 31st of the King, no appropriates these Reserves for a "Protestant Clergy"—the Debates in the House of Commons shewed that they were not meant exclusively for the Church of England. It was true that the 31st of the King mentioned Rectories, but that the establishment Church was not an opinion of Lord Bathurst. He would express his dissatisfaction of His Lordship's answer, and adopt the Resolutions, and bring in a Bill for the sale of all the Clergy Reserves—the House was empowered to Legislate, and he thought it was exercise that right; they might deprive them of an invaluable part of the Constitution, and the Imperial Parliament may even now be disposing of these Reserves, which would be a loss to the Province.

Mr. James Wilson would support the Resolutions, and should concur in a Bill. The Reserves he considered a burden; he would have no Reserves, no tythes, there had been side winds enough of late; these lands will be sold for Gentlemen this House ought not to support, and would only tend to make then children of Beelzebub. He thought this was the best way that could be done—they would become idle and neglect their flocks, while the good and faithful Clergyman was starving.

Mr. Coleman was of opinion that 1-7th of the Lands was too much for any one Sect, yet had no doubt the Church of England was one. The Church of Scotland was, in his opinion, an Established Church, but thought by the Act they could not claim any part of the lands.

The Attorney General regretted that the Hon. mover of these Resolutions had thought it necessary to make such a Speech on the occasion, during which, as essentially from former opinions expressed by him on this subject. As to the Despatch being unsatisfactory, he said that Lord Bathurst could not repeal the Law. The Hon. mover complained that a free communication of the rights and privileges was not enjoyed by the Church of Scotland—on referring to the Treaty itself, it would be found that the rights of that Church were expressly provided for, and restricted to the Kingdom of Scotland; there it was an Established Church. As well might the Hon. mover contend that if a Scotchman were accused of murder in this country, he ought to be tried by the Laws of Scotland; but the contrary was the fact, he had no such right, he must be tried by the Law of England. On former occasions the Hon. mover had contended that other Sects were not entitled to a part of these Reserves, but he had changed his mind, whether from a wish to deprive those who were entitled to them, or from a conviction that his former opinion were incorrect, he could not determine, it appeared, however, more like a change of expediency than of conviction. He would remind the House, that a Law on the Statute Book, which had received the King's Assent, abolished tythes in this country; what did that statute say? it recites that, whereas a provision is already made for the Clergy of the Established Church in this colony, by an appropriation of one seventh of the Lands, and whereas it is expedient to remove doubts as to the right of collecting tythes, it is enacted that no tythes shall ever be collected; would the House, then, after having deprived them of the right of tythes, deprive them of that, which had been declared to belong to them in lieu of tythes? would they first induce the King to assent to such a Bill, and then declare that the appropriation which that Bill acknowledged, should be taken away from them and sold for the benefit of all? he considered this unjust. The Hon. mover had, however, a right to introduce such a Bill, but if he was not mistaken, the claim of the Church of Scotland had been answered, in consequence of representations it had made on the subject. Having offered these remarks, he should vote against the Bill when it was introduced.

Mr. Rolph said that the Attorney General had indirectly charged the Hon. mover of the Resolutions with inconsistency of conduct; he contended that the question was, in substance, whether the Church of England to monopolize these Reserves? it appeared to him that the Despatch considered them as belonging exclusively to that Church; it was time for the House to be roused when such answers were received to their addresses, and trusted that it would not pass unnoticed—he would support one, tant the voice of the country might be heard on the subject. It this House is not prompt in their measures the Reserves will be disposed of; the representations of a certain Colonial Divine would be attended to, but the loyal and faithful Commons of Upper Canada were not attended to, or received unsatisfactory answers. He said that in other countries this monopoly was not allowed; he would not imitate the example of England in this respect, he would not a great and overgrown system as existing could by some gentlemen might be anxious to do so—Poor Laws and Rotten-boroughs too; he would imitate only what was desirable. He had travelled through the United States, and enjoyed the bounty of Government to a greater extent than ever he expected, had spoken on this subject, he should think he was insulting him if he said that Hon. Gentleman was less independent on that account, although the present mode of grant did not call for it.

Mr. Hamilton, disclaimed any personality; offences are now trifling, they may become of more consequence, it was proper to make a beginning now—the amendment went to destroy the original motion.

Mr. Dejoin, did not think the original motion changed by the amendment he should vote against it; he did not think so, and he should therefore support it.

Mr. Lefferty would support the motion and amendment too; if members came here with clean hands they should return to their constituents in the same way; he considered that any application of money should also be punished.

Mr. Gordon said he was not aware of any law which would disqualify a member, having a situation under the Government, holding a seat in the House of Assembly was the object of many—he thought the discussion a loss of time, a person accepting an office in the Excise and Customs in England vacated his seat, and in no other case he believed, he could not see what advantages were expected from this measure.

Capt. Matthews, would include the Legislative Council in the motion, he knew some there who held unaccounted monies.

The motion, with Mr Jone's amendment, was then put and carried.

The address of thanks to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor for his Message of 12th Dec. was read a third time, passed and signed by the Speaker.

Estray Bill—2nd reading—House in Committee of the whole. The several clauses of the Bill underwent discussion. The Committee rose, reported progress and asked leave to sit again to-morrow.

ROADS—Mr. Thomson, (Frontenac) according to notice moved for the appointment of a Committee of seven, by ballot, he explained that the object was to make an inquiry into the state of the Highways in the Province, which were in a deplorable state, and in order that every information might be obtained on the subject, he hoped Gentlemen from different parts of the Province would be named.—The house then proceeded to ballot and the following Gentlemen were named as the Committee—Messrs. Morris, Thomson, Gordon, Att'y. General, Walsh, Burnham, and Ingersoll.

The Secretary of the Province attended at the Bar of the House, and delivered the Public Accounts.

Prince Edward Division Bill.—Mr. Peterson brought in the Bill, to erect the County of Prince Edward into a seperate District, by Proclamation, as soon as His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, shall be satisfied that a good and sufficient Gaol and Court House is erected for the administration of justice. The same arguments were used for and against the measure, as were urged on former occasions, those have been laid before the public two previous Sessions, and it is therefore considered unnecessary to repeat them. The Petition states the population of Prince Edward to be nearly ten thousand, and its insular situation is urged as a reason for the seperation. The only new feature which has presented itself on the occasion is, that the County of Hastings has made a similar application, and it has been suggested by some members, that Prince Edward, and Hastings, with some of the Townships in Newcastle District, would be a more advisable separation than the one proposed by the Bill.

The Bill went through a first reading was reported as amended and leave obtained to sit again to-morrow.

Mr. J. Jones, hoped that although the proceedings of the Printing Committee had been suspended in consequence of the appointment of another Committee, who had not yet reported to the House, no delay would take place in having the Public Accounts, handed in this day by the Secretary of the Province, printed for the use of members.

The Speaker said that being aware of the necessity of having these accounts printed, in compliance with a standing order of the House, and the Printing Committee having been suspended, he had taken upon himself to give directions to a certain Printer to have them printed.

Mr. J. Jones, was aware that it was a standing order of the House that the Public Accounts should be printed, but he hoped that the rules of the House in other respects would be observed with respect to printing.

The Attorney General, thought that during such a discussion the House should be cleared of strangers.

By order the House was cleared of strangers.

The doors opened.—The House adjourned.

Tuesday, December 9.

Mr. Mc Donald, brought up the Petition of the inhabitants of the Ottawa District, for Courts of Quarter Sessions and Assize.

Mr. Coleman, brought up the Petition of the inhabitants of Hastings, for separate District.

Mr. Atkinson, brought up the Petition of Magistrates and others of the Midland District, for additional rate of a half-penny in aid of the District funds.

Mr. Walsh, thought it would be well to negative the leave for this Petition at once, he should vote against it in Committee.

Mr. Atkinson, hoped that a Petition respectfully worded would be entertained by the House, he thought that members should not be induced to treat it with contempt until acquainted with its merits, such information might be elicited as would enable it to favorable consideration.

The Petition with others was laid on the table.

The House proceeded to ballot for a Committee of Seven on the Public Accounts, the following Gentlemen were chosen, Messrs. Morris, Thomson, Scollick, Gordon, Bidwell, Hamilton, and Lyons.

The Committee on Expiring Laws made their Report to the House, with a Bill for continuing the Law for Salaries to Sheriffs—Second reading on Friday next.

Mr. Rolph reported on the encouragement for Reporting the Proceedings of the House. The Report of this Committee recommends that encouragement be afforded by giving to the most competent persons the Printing of the House, at New-York prices. (By a Rule of the House, the Printing has formerly been given to the Person who offered to do it at the lowest rate, by Contract.)

MARRIAGE BILL, 2d Reading—House in Committee of the whole.

Mr. Bidwell moved the adoption of the Preamble, after having offered explanations on the Bill.

Mr. J. Jones would rather see the provisions of this Bill separated; two Bills he thought were necessary, one confirming Marriages

Mr. J. Jones, moved that the address as amended by the Att'y. General be engrossed and read again that day.—Carried.

Mr. Hamilton, according to notice, moved an address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to be informed what members have accepted of places or pensions during this Parliament.

Mr. Boulton thought it incumbent on the Hon Gentleman to explain the object of his notice.

Mr. Hamilton had no objection to explain—he thought, if any such persons were in the House as were mentioned in his motion, they should be sent back to their Constituents, to determine whether they were willing to continue them in their seats while they were receiving favors from the Executive.

Mr. Beardsley said it might tend to much disagreeable discussion—it might next be inquired whether there were any Aliens in the House.

Mr. D. Jones thought that the Hon. Gentleman should have brought forward such a motion before—he was surprised at it now—at a late period such as this it did not shew good feeling as a public body.

Mr. J. Jones, thought there could be no objection to the motion—he should vote for it with an amendment which he should propose, praying that His Excellency will also be pleased to inform the House what members have monies in their hands received from the military chest in the Province unexpended and unaccounted for.

Mr. J. Wilson would rather support the original motion; thought that place holders should be sent back to their Constituents.

Mr. Hamilton would not object, but thought the amendment was proposed to defeat the object.

Mr. J. Jones had no intention to defeat the object, his amendment included persons equally dependant, as those holding situations or pensions, and he wished that they should be included.

Captain Matthews would support the original motion but opposed the amendment, he was not seat here to be intimidated but to inquire into every thing.

Mr. J. Wilson, would extend it further if the amendment was carried, and include those to whom grants of land had been made or mill seats given.

Mr. D. Jones, if he held no official situation would vote against the motion, as he did however he should not oppose it, one member who enjoyed the bounty of Government to a greater extent than ever he expected, had spoken on this subject, he should think he was insulting him if he said that Hon. Gentleman was less independent on that account, although the present mode of grant did not call for it.

Mr. Hamilton, disclaimed any personality; offences are now trifling, they may become of more consequence, it was proper to make a beginning now—the amendment went to destroy the original motion.

MARRIAGE BILL, 2d Reading—House in Committee of the whole.

Mr. Bidwell moved the adoption of the Preamble, after having offered explanations on the Bill.

Mr. J. Jones would rather see the provisions of this Bill separated; two Bills he thought were necessary, one confirming Marriages and another giving the power to certain Denominations to solemnize Marriage, and in this latter Bill he would give the power to Ministers to marry any persons, whether they were of their own Church or not, provided they were obliged to keep a Registry under a certain penalty; he would also confine it to subjects of His Majesty. He was desirous to afford the required relief, but if the Bill passed in its present shape he was apprehensive it would fail; he considered it therefore better that it should be passed in such a shape here as would at least ensure the accomplishment of a desirable object, and not risk its being rejected altogether; at all events he would denominate the particular Sects who should be authorised to marry.

Mr. Bidwell would have no objections to any amendments proposed to the Bill, and would designate the Sects if it were thought necessary, but saw no necessity to make two Bills on one subject. He concurred in the extension proposed by Mr. Jones of allowing to marry all persons who came to Ministers for that purpose, whether they were of their Congregation or not; his only wish was to meet the wishes of the people. He objected, however, to the restrictions as to Ministers being British subjects, they were not transient persons, and the provisions of the Bill were, in that respect, sufficiently guarded.

Mr. Thomson saw no necessity for dividing the subject. He was followed to the same side by Messrs. Morris, Matthews, Lefferty, and others.

Mr. Walsh thought that if the Bill passed in its present general shape, the principal object of it would be defeated.

The Committee reported the Bill as amended, and obtained leave to sit again to-morrow.

The House resolved itself into a Committee of the whole on the CANADA TRADE ACT.

Mr. Perry introduced Resolutions, with respect to the importation of hogs and live cattle, and the free entry of salt.

Mr. Thomson thought it would be advisable to address the Imperial Parliament on this Act, as far as it relates to Canada; its provisions were not applicable to the Trade of the Country. Salted provisions were prohibited; live cattle and hogs could be brought in at a duty of 10 per cent, and salt came free; the consequence was, that Americans drove their cattle in, brought salt in barrels, slaughtered and packed for exportation, and thus evaded the prohibition. The loss of the duty on salt amounted to about £1500 a year, the barrels paid no duty, and the advantages were in favor of Americans; the Act was in other respects defective, and he would ask for its repeal as far as Canada was concerned.

Mr. Atkinson would prefer petitioning the Imperial Parliament to allow the Country to regulate its own Trade, it knew best what was for the interest of that Trade, and it would be better if it were left to their own management.

Mr. Perry had no objections to go as far as the last speaker, in the mean time, he would be pass the Resolutions to shew their sense of the impropriety of the Law. The Imperial Parliament, at such a distance from Upper Canada, could not judge of the wants of their Trade. The Act was in many respects, inconsistent; some of its provisions might be good, but in the part which the Resolutions embraced it was defective; large quantities of pork were packed in the country.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) said that he did not observe the Attorney General in his place, but some other gentleman might be able to inform him whether any discretionary power was given to the Governor to grant licences for the importation of articles prohibited by the Canada Trade Act.

Mr. Hamilton thought the Governor could; it had been done in the case of horses, and in one instance a quantity of pork had been allowed to be imported, by a favored individual.

Mr. Jeffery would vote for a free Trade, if for any thing; the present system was demoralizing—whiskey and pork were brought in in open day and by force, Revenue was lost to the country by high duty on whiskey; the duties looked very well upon paper, but the law was not regarded, and the practice of smuggling led to every kind of vice.

Mr. James Wilson would prefer passing a Law to have the Trade Act repealed altogether as far as Canada was concerned; he would reduce the duty on whiskey, and the licence on stills, and impose a tax on retailers, which would leave the amount of Revenue the same; large duties were prohibitions and these always encouraged smuggling.

Mr. Walsh saw no necessity for such Resolutions; or a law to repeal the Trade Act. The Act of the Imperial Parliament did not, in his opinion, prevent the House imposing duties or restrictions, and a Bill, if passed into Law, would have effect; Addresses were a roundabout way of Legislating which he did not like, and occasioned a great loss of time; he regretted the interference of the Imperial Parliament on such matters, which could be much better judged of by this House; but their Act did not prevent the House imposing duties.

Mr. Coleman thought the regulation of the Trade of the Country should be left to the House; in consequence of interference, our Revenue decreased, and the injurious practice of smuggling was encouraged.

Mr. Rolph said that he had not been able to give the Trade Act that attention which other gentlemen had bestowed upon it; on looking over it, however, in a cursory manner, it struck him that some of its provisions were an infringement of the Constitution of the Province. Considering it in this serious point of view, he would prefer that the present discussion should not be proceeded in, or the Resolutions hastily adopted; he should therefore propose that the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The Committee rose, reported progress, and leave was given to sit again to-morrow.

STREET SURVEYORS BILL—2d Reading, brought in by Mr. Coleman.

This Bill authorises Street Surveyors to be sworn in by Magistrates in the Township where they are appointed, without going to the Quarter Sessions for that purpose, a certificate being forwarded to the Clerk of the Peace for the District.

The Bill was reported, and ordered for a 3d Reading on Thursday next.

REPEAL 44th KING.—Mr. Peterson moved for leave to bring in the Bill.

Mr. Lefferty thought it useless and a waste of time to le year after year on this subject, and spe the money of the Country, unless members were determined to do their duty, and join hand in hand to take effectual measures to have this law repealed, it had been sent from the last session to the Legislative Council and had been rejected, it would be sent up again and be tomahawked there; he would not trifle any longer with the people on the subject, he would send a committee to the Legislative Council, he would have the whole House go in a body to ask them, and ask for its repeal, if it was refused he would address the executive, to send them back to their constituents, as it was useless for them to legislate year after year without any prospect of success, he considered it derogatory to the House, and an absolute waste of time and money.

Leave was given to bring in the Bill and it was read a first time—2d Reading for Friday.

JUSTICE FEE REGULATION BILL, House in committee of the whole.

The Attorney General had explained the object of the Bill when he first introduced it, he considered it necessary that an uniform system should be observed in taking fees throughout the Province—Magistrates were now at a loss in many cases as to what is a proper that a reasonable compensation should be allowed for their trouble, he hoped the Bill would be supported by the committee; at all events it was necessary to declare what fees if any should be taken by Magistrates, and this was the sole object of the Bill.

Mr. Bidwell was not disposed to throw obstacles in the way, but did not feel perfectly satisfied with the principle of the Bill, he thought it burdensome and improper, that individuals should identify themselves as prosecutors when they should stand free and impredjudiced; by making them prosecutors it might create partizanship.

Mr. J. Jones thought that the question was whether it was necessary to authorise Magistrates to receive fees, and what amount; the necessity and justice of the measure could not be thought be questioned; he would certainly agree in allowing a fair remuneration for their time, but would not fix the amount so as to make it more than a fair recompense for their services.

Mr. Lefferty said that an allowance should be provided for Witnesses attending Court; a Magistrate held an honorable and desirable situation, and could transact business at his own house, but witnesses had to attend a long distance from home and without remuneration; the poor should have warrants given to them without fee.

The Attorney General said that a misconception seemed to exist in the minds of some honorable gentlemen with respect to the Bill; no change was contemplated by it, fees were already taken by Magistrates, in some cases more perhaps than was proper, in others Magistrates were at a loss what was the proper charge, the Bill went not to effect any change, but to fix a regular table of lawful fees to be taken by Magistrates, he believed they were entitled to fees in all other Countries in England, and the United States, he considered it necessary that some law should be passed, and if the committee decided that Magistrates should not have any fees, the Bill could be so amended, and the law would be ascertained on the subject—he thought this would however be unjust, Magistrates were responsible and liable to actions if they acted improperly, though without malice, and it was but reasonable that some compensation for their services should be allowed to them.

Mr. Lefferty, if there is no law for their taking fees though he did not wish them punished for it, considered it wrong; he repeated his desire that Witnesses attending Courts should be provided for.

Mr. J. Jones, in the Johnstown District a Table a fees had been approved by the Chief Justice, and the Magistrates had acted under it; they were larger than those now proposed.

Mr. Lefferty said a Chief Justice was a law giver and not a law maker, and if he sanctioned such Tables he should be punished for it.

The Attorney General was not surprised that the last speaker should not know the law on the subject, but he was surprised that being ignorant of it, he should thus express himself; a British act of Parliament gave the Judges power to approve of Tables of fees so prepared, and it was a common practice in England. The subject now was to establish an uniformity throughout the Province and to ascertain what fees, if any were to be taken.

Mr. Perry would extend the Provisions of the Bill to regulate the fees to be taken by all Official persons in prosecutions—Clerks, Magistrates, Crier of the Court and Attorney General; he understood that great corruption prevailed among the Magistrates in that part of the Country where Capt. Matthews came from, and he regretted that Capt. Matthews was not in his place to make it known.

The blanks in the Bill, of fees to be taken, were filled up, and the Committee reported progress and obtained leave to sit again to-morrow.

Mr. Coleman gave notice that he would on Thursday move for leave to bring in a Bill, for establishing a Market and Police in the Town of Belville. Adjourned.

Wednesday, December 20.

The Petition of the Directors of the late Bank of Kingston was brought up.

Also the Petition of the Indians on the River Credit.

Mr. Rolph, moved, seconded by Mr. Perry, that the Report of the Committee, on the subject of affording encouragement for reporting the proceedings of the House, and submitted to the House yesterday be adopted—he urged its adoption he said on the ground, that the evidence taken by the Committee, went to shew that there was not enough encouragement or patronage given to any one Printer, by the circulation of his newspaper, to give all the debates and proceedings of the House—when it had been done by a competent person, others had copied from him, and availed themselves of his labor; in England the case was different, the patronage of newspapers was so extensive that Editors generally employed persons to attend and report the debates of the House of Commons—here one reports and all others copy from him—the question therfore was, whether it was necessary to afford encouragement—last year a sum had been voted for the purpose, but was not paid—he wished to avoid any contention on that subject, but would not suppress the publication of the debates—the encouragement might be afforded either directly or indirectly—directly by voting a specific sum, not for reporting but for printing the votes of the House during the Session—indirectly, by giving all the printing of the House to one printer, at New York prices, with the understanding that the debates were to be taken by him—this latter mode he thought would effect the object without any burden on the Country, as the New York prices for printing were those paid last Session, when competetion was allowed among printers—a diffusion of political knowledge among the people was to be desired, and the Country was anxious to be informed of the proceedings of the House, and opinions of members.

The Attorney General was a little surprised that the proposition made in the commencement of the Report, now moved to be adopted by the House, of following the practice which prevailed in England on this subject, had not being continued throughout that report—but the practice in that Country whose example we profess to follow, was suddenly lost sight of, and a proposal made to the House that its printing should be bestowed exclusively on one person, and that at New York prices, why not have said Quebec, or Montreal, or even York prices—the same facilities were afforded here to reporters as in England—the doors of the House were thrown open to Editors—and even their convenience was attended to, by affording them every necessary accommodation—editors were interested to give the proceedings of the House—but if the House paid them for doing so, they must stand between them and individuals in the event of actions being brought against them for libel—in such a case the reporter would say to the House, as your servant, and being engaged by you as the most competent person to report, I have done so but I am prosecuted and I am come to you to pay the damages recovered against me—the House must indemnify him—in the House of Commons all Editors could come, and all publish the debates, but they did it, as they did all other things, at their own risk. The practice heretofore pursued by the House was always contrary to his opinion, and he must say that he had been disgusted at the manner in which the debates had been given—the speeches of some Gentlemen were given at great length, while the arguments on the other side were suppressed—no explanation given—whatever suited the reporter was set down—this might be acceptable to some, but he thought the House should not appropriate money to such purposes, and this had invariably been his opinion, from the first time the subject was agitated—heretofore there had been a departure from the practice in England, and from the evil consequences which had resulted, he hoped the present discussion would end in a determination to return to the more desireable one of allowing all Editors to report the debates in their own way, and at their own risk, without any being paid for it—he knew of no Colony which departed from the English practice in this respect—in Lower Canada, it was not considered proper to pay a reporter—only three in the House of Assembly there were found to support such a proposition, and it had not been attempted a second time—as to the necessity of the thing, if the public considered it so absolutely necessary to acquire political information, by seeing the debates of the House, he thought they would give encouragement by taking the papers of those Editors who reported the proceedings—and as to the manner of doing this, he thought a Summary of what was going on in the House would be preferred—the people he was convinced did not require more, than the Substance of opinions expressed by members and how they voted—beyond this he considered it useless, for who would feel any particular interest in reading debates, six months after the measures to which they related were decided upon—in England where the House of Commons sat for a long period, and legislated for a great Empire, for more than 40 Colonies, & 20 millions of people, where the most important domestic and foreign relations were discussed, the public journals kept pace with their proceedings by affording the information he had described, and it was all that was required. The present question was one which had always produced much unpleasant discussion in the House—he hoped that the House would now decide on returning to the proper course—continue to give the free access and accommodation to Reporters, which had never yet been denied to them, and leave the subject of printing where it should properly be left by a Rule of the House, to a Committee appointed for that special purpose.

Mr. Bidwell, said that the example of England did not in his opinion apply to the present case—the extensive patronage afforded to newspapers in that Country enabled Editors to go to the expense of hiring persons at high wages to report the proceedings, and to give them speedily to the public—it was different in this Country and it was undeniable, that sufficient encouragement was not given to any paper to authorize an Editor to go to such an expense, and it could not be denied that it was desirable that the people should be acquainted with the proceedings of the House—the question therefore resolved itself to this—whether they should be invited or not—he thought they should—on account of members themselves, whose votes and their constituents might be informed of their views on different questions—it was also desirable on account of the public who were interested, that the language of members should be given, and their reasons for voting known—public opinion called for such information, and by affording it, the wishes of the people would be better known—the debates when given create interest, and excite attention—they become the subject of conversation, and an opportunity is afforded for enabling the public to expresss their sentiments on the various subjects which are discussed, and by this means at the next Session the opinion of the public was better known—the New York prices he considered reasonable—and doubted whether any established prices existed in Montreal—last year the New York prices had been paid for the printing under the direction of the Committee being the lowest offered—as to the debates being continued so long after the Session, he thought this was not an objection as the laws themselves did not get into circulation through the Country, until quite as late a period—he thought the mode proposed for reporting the debates a desirable one, because it proceeded on a principle of economy, and would not burthen the Country, and he should therefore vote for the adoption of the report of the Committee.

Mr. J. Jones for every Session 5 or 6 years past had voted for encouragement in reporting proceedings, and if that was the question now, would support it—merely giving the votes of the House was not satisfactory—members in many cases might even vote against Bills which they had brought in themseves in consequence of amendments, made and if reasons were not given, it would be unsatisfactory—he considered that a Summary of the proceedings was all that the people expected or wished for, and no Printer he thought would omit giving it, as important to the interests of this paper—this was as much as could be expected, and would be more desirable than giving a month hence, the subjects discussed this week, and this could be done by Editors—he thought that the votes of Members with the substance of what they said was sufficient.

Mr. D. Jones was in favor of affording every facility to Reporters for giving publicity to the proceedings of the House—on former occasions he had seen long Speeches given when others were totally suppressed—the substance of a debate was all that was required, and would be more satisfactory than continuing them long after the Session when the Public mind was not occupied with such things—he admitted that it was impossible to give all during the sitting of a Session, and for that reason he considered a Summary much better—it was done in this way in Lower Canada without compensation, and would no doubt be done here—even in England it was not attempted he believed to give more than a general Summary except on some very important questions—Encouragement was already given by this House in affording free admittance and accomodation to Reporters, and he thought the people would take those papers which gave a correct report of what was going on—he considered it unnecsary, therefore, to vote public money for such a purpose to Reporters who had not given faithful Reports heretofore—he would appeal to honorable members, and readers, whether they had been truly Reported—members had been misrepresented and the people misled—he had himself detected improper and incorrect Reports, where the arguments on both sides had not been fairly stated—he was desirous that information should be afforded to the Country—he thought this would be done, and that the interest of Editors being concerned, they would attend the House, and Report the Proceedings.

Mr. Lefferty was always anxious that encouragement should be given to Reporters, but now thought it wrong that they should be paid for it by the House. Last year important measures had been smuggled through, and the Reports said nothing about them, because the interest of Reporters was concerned; not a word had been said on the subject of the Welland Canal—it had been suppressed, because it would have shewn the motives of some Directors, and the Stock would not have been taken; he was, therefore, not inclined to pay money to any person who did not Report faithfully.

Mr. Morris said that if the Report was adopted, it might have the effect of paying a Reporter to libel the House with impunity; the public, he admitted, should know what was going on in the House, but he would not consent to pay for it with the public money; there was no embarrassment in the way of Reporters, nor any wish to suppress the Reports being given to the public; the doors of the House were open to them, and every convenience afforded them; the House had involved itself in the present discussion, by staying the proceedings of the Printing Committee, appointed under one of its own Rules; he should oppose the measure, and leave it to Editors to Report, without being paid.

Mr. Perry was in favor of encouraging a Reporter, in either of the ways proposed, in order that the people might see the Debates. He knew that sufficient encouragement was not given by subscribing to Newspapers; the information was obtained by several persons in a neighborhood, clubbing together and taking a paper; but this did not give sufficient support to the Printer; by adopting the indirect mode proposed, the House would save the expense of any actions that might be brought against the Reporter. With regard to the Printing of the House, they might be imposed upon, as it was easy for Printers to unite and get any price; the present mode proposed New-York prices, which were reasonable, and the same as those paid last year, and by giving all the Printing to one person, he would then Report the Proceedings of the House, and information would be conveyed to the people.

Mr. Coleman said that the Debates should be freely given to the public, but regretted that incorrectness had prevailed heretofore; he would not depend upon one Reporter; he would oppose any specific sum being paid, as he thought it would extinguish free Reporting.

Mr. Beardsley considered it an important question, and that the Debates were much desired by the people; their being given has had influence hererofore; he could not, however, acquiesce in the Report, because he considered it unjust and partial, and contrary to the Rules of the House, which afforded a free competition to all Printers for the work of the House, and who had prepared themselves for it; he would propose that the money to be paid for Reporting should be included in the Bill of Supply, and then it must pass; he would not, however, confine the payment for Reporting to one person.

Mr. James Wilson said the Country wanted the Debates and votes, and he should therefore feel it his duty to support the Report of the Committee; it would not cost the people half a farting a piece, and would not be grudged; and he would agree in making it form an item in the Supply.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) thought it would be premature to adopt the Report; the Rule of the House must first be set aside; the Printing Committee should receive instructions from the House to relieve them from the embarrassing situation in which they had been placed, in consequence of their proceedings having been stayed.

On the question being put on Mr. Rolph's motion for the adoption of the Report,

YEAS—12,
NAYS—21.

And the motion was lost.

Mr. Rolph said, as his motion had been negatived, he would ask whether he could move the Resolutions he had intended to submit, if it had been carried.

A conversation took place on the subject, and Mr. Rolph was informed by the Speaker that he could submit any motion relating to privilege, unconnected with the report of the Report which the House had declined adopting.

Mr. Rolph then moved, that the sum of £100 be paid to Francis Collins, for Printing the votes of the House during the Session, to be charged in the contingencies.

The Attorney General proposed an amendment to this motion,

"That it is expedient to ascertain during the present year whether the affording every convenience and full facility of access to such persons as may be desirous to publish the debates and proceedings of the House, will not have the effect of conveying to the Public the information which it is the wish of this House should be afforded to them, in order that the House may discontinue in future the practice of employing such Reporters, and paying them out of the public funds, a practice which is in opposition to the usage of Parliament in England."

Which was lost.

YEAS—15.
NAYS—18.

Mr. Beardsley also proposed an amendment,

"That the sum of £100 be paid to Francis Collins, and £100 to John Carey, for Reporting, and that these sums be included in the Bill of Supply."

Which was lost.

YEAS—2.
NAYS—32.

Mr. Rolph's original motion for £100 to Francis Collins was then put,

YEAS—11.
NAYS—23.

Negatived by a majority of 12.

The Bill for the more easy recovery of Dower, was then read a second time, The Bill was Reported and leave given to sit again.—Adjourned.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1826.

The American papers contain the Presidents message to Congress, b the press of Parliamentary matter prevents our giving any part of it at present. With respect to the West India Trade it speaks of countervailing restrictions, and the subject is specially referred to the serious consideration of Congress, but without any specific recommendation

Our report of proceedings in the House of Assembly is continued to Thursday last. Yesterday the Clergy Reserve question occupied the House, and several resolutions passed. Messrs. Morris, Rolph and Bidwell are appointed a Committee to draft a Bill, for the sale of the Reserves, for the purposes of general Education, a Public Seminary, and building Churches for all denominations.

The Welland Canal. The Stockholders, and all others interested in the prosperity of the Country, will learn with pleasure, that the Government has with its wonted liberality, presented the Company with £16,000, in aid of the work, on condition that Government Vessels and Boats shall navigate the Canal free of Toll. A message was received yesterday by Major Hillier, from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, by the House of Assembly, with a Despatch from Lord Bathurst, communicating this pleasing intelligence.

We are requested by Mr. Galt, to state that while he was out in this Province, the Editor of the Colonial Advocate, and the Editor of a Montreal Journal, sent him their papers, with some remarks complimentary to himself. Mr. Mackenzie's present, an entire file of the Colonial Advocate, was too bulky not to call for some expression of civility; Mr. G. accordingly returned a note intended as such, and availed himself of the occasion to give Mr. Mackenzie a hint that he disliked his intemperance. On returning to America, Mr. Galt heard that Mr. Mackenzie had made use of the note in question, as evidence that Mr. Galt approved of the manner in which the Colonial Advocate was conducted; on reaching Niagara the effect of this was brought particularly to his attention, and induced him to write the following letter:—

Niagara, Decr. 10, 1826.

SIR,

On my arrival in America, I heard, with extreme surprise, that you had produced in a late action for damages, a letter from me, commending the manner in which you conducted the Colonial Advocate.

You had, Sir, the courtesy, when I was last in the Province, to send me a file of your Paper, and I returned of course a civil note for the present—the contents of that note I do not recollect, but as my political sentiments differ from yours, I cannot conceive how any expression of mine, even complimentary to your talents, could imply that I approved of the style and temper of the Colonial Advocate.

As I wish my political opinions not to be misunderstood, I should be obliged to you to publish this, together with the letter produced in Court.

I am, SIR, &c.
JOHN GALT.

MR. MACKENZIE,
Of the Colonial Advocate.

Mr. Galt, since his arrival at York, applied to Mr. Mackenzie, for a copy of the letter, and has received the following as a transcript:—

York, March 28, 1825.

SIR,

I am very much flattered by your attention, and it gives me unaffected pleasure to receive the numbers which you have taken the trouble to preserve and to send me of your spirited paper.

I do undoubtedly dissent from some of your sentiments, but I can appreciate the talent with which they are supported—Indeed I esteem an open opponent much more than I do those sort of pluckless partizans, who "like the Cat in the adage let I dare not wait upon I would."

I have been too short in this country to form any opinion of its political temperament, and I have besides been the greatest part of the time confined to my room by indisposition. But it is candid in you to acknowledge that you have in some degree changed your opinion of certain public characters. * Probably in Colonies and places remote from the Supreme Government, persons in public trust are apt to consider themselves as parts of that great abstraction Government, and to mistake attacks on their own conduct as factions and seditious movements. On the other hand, the motions and machinery of Government being in a much smaller compass are seen more in detail than at home, and the workings of personal feeling are apt in consequence to excite a more acute invidiousness. To this I partly ascribe the tone of your letter to Mr. Robinson, which displays very superior powers indeed of sarcasm; but it must occur to yourself now that the value of it would not have been lessened had some of the points been sheathed in softer language.

But I ought to ask your pardon for this criticism, while I should be thanking you for flattering favor. You can have no better task than the upholding the frank courageous spirit of independence among a remote people. It is that which has made the great island of our birth what she is—and when we compare her small natural bounds and resources with the vastness of her moral and political dominion, we may rest assured that with all the faults of her public men, her government has hitherto been one of the greatest practical wisdom that has yet withstood the test of time and the prostrations of revolution and of war.

I remain, Sir,
Your respectful and obliged Servant,
JOHN GALT.

Mr. Galt adds that he has some recollection of having enquired in this letter if Mr. McKenzie was from Ayrshire.

It is necessary to trouble the public of this metropolis with another circumstance. On leaving the Province, Mr. Galt, conceiving that the Canada Company was interested in every thing regarding the Country, directed that all the newspapers, both in Upper and Lower Canada, should be sent to the Company's Office in London, and among others of course the Colonial Advocate.

As the Editor of that Journal had been more civil to him than the others, he addressed him a second time, and the following is a copy of that letter:—

(COPY.)
York, May 1, 1825.

Dear Sir,

It was my intention, as soon as I had obtained a little leisure, to call on you to thank you for your very great civility in sending me your paper, and to beg that you will consider the Canada Company as one of your regular subscribers to be supplied with it in London as often as possible. Mr. Malcolm, who has taken the charge of this, will pay the subscription.

The Commissioners having closed their enquiry, those who return to England set out on their journey to-day, and as I am of that number I am sure when you consider my continued indisposition, which obliged me to keep out of the open air as much as possible, and the incessant application required, at the Board, you will have the goodness to excuse the seeming want of that sense of obligation which your politeness has conferred.

I am, Dear Sir,
Your most obedient Servant,
(Signed) JOHN GALT.
W. L. Mackenzie Esq.

* This was said with reference to some acknowledgment on the part of Mr. Mackenzie, that he had been too severe in his animadversions on Mr. Robinson, the Attorney General. J. G.

† This is said in allusion to the acknowledgment already refered to. J. G.

SUMMARY.

The Duke of Devonshire is expected from Russia in ten days. The Order of the Garter awaits him on his arrival.

Mr. Canning has returned from France.

The Duke of York's health is improving.

The papers contain accounts of some advantages gained by the Russian General Yermoloof over the Persians. The probability from present appearance is, that the war between those powers will last but a short time.

There is no news of importance from Greece.

Lord Viscount Middleton has directed that employment should be given to one hundred of the poor of Middleton, in levelling and repairing the road approaching to that town, at his private expense

Lord Bulkeley's residence at Eaglefield-green, with a farm of forty acres, has been sold by auction for £6,567.

Tenders have been made for building the new University in Gower-street. The highest sum demanded was £128,934 in the name of Harrison; and the lowest, signed Lee, was £107,767. There were six Intermediate bidders.—Literary Chronicle.

London, Oct. 20.—City, 2 o'clock.—A sudden advance has taken place in consols within the last hour, from 81¼ to 81⅜. Several reports are in circulation to account for this improvement; but none that we have been able to ascertain the truth of.

Foreign Intelligence.

The packet ship arrived last night from Liverpool, bringing London papers to the 31st of October.

There have been further insurrectionary movements in Portugal, but they do not seem to excite very serious apprehensions. One regiment, however, had been seduced from its duty.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The answer of the Ministers to the deputation of manufacturers was most decided. There is to be no reduction in the duty on calicoes.

City, 2 o'clock—The funds continue heavy with the business limited. Consols have been done at 81 ¼ for the Account; they have since recovered to 81⅜. Exchequer 24 26. The settling in the foreign market has passed over without any difficulty. The South American Securities have declared about one per cent. which is owing more to the state of the account than any other cause. Colombian bonds 38¼—Mexican 64.

The Corn Laws.—At a meeting of the Livery of London, (called expressly for the purpose,) a petition to the legislature was agreed to, without one dissentient voice, praying for a repeal of the corn laws, as equally injurious to the agriculturist and the community at large, and a meeting of the "working classes and others" of Manchester was held 26th October for a similar purpose.

Accounts from many of the manufacturing districts represents business more languid than for the previous weeks.

The London papers contain a great deal on the subject of the Greek Bonds, in which it appears a great deal of speculation has been carried on, and a great Many impositions are said to have been practised. The bond-holders complain of Mr. Luriottes, and he lays the blame on Mr. Ricardo.

The Woolen trade in Yorkshire was nearly stationary.

Greece.—Very little that can be depended upon has been received from that country. The Trieste papers states that letters to the 6th Oct. communicate another report of the surrender of the citidel of Athens; but this is extremely improbable. That fortress, we have been lately informed, was provisioned for at least two years—the Greeks said it was supplied for seven. Several new instances of piracy are mentioned, committed by men driven in desperation by the invaders.

Turkey.—A passenger in the steam boat from Hamburgh, arrived on Monday, states, that when the vessel was under sail, a report was brought on board, of an express arrived, with accounts of the assassination of the Grand Seignor, at Constantinople.

Letters from Naples announce the death of General Baron de Keller, Commander-in-chief of the Austrian army in the Kingdom of Naples. He was the general officer who, in 1814, accompanied Napoleon to the island of Elba.

It is currently reported in the high military circles that an arrangement is about to take place, very acceptable to the army, showing the Commander-in-Chief's gracious dispositions to its interests, whilst he recommends a reward for past services to the needy but meritorious officers who cannot get on by purchase.

The outlines of the plan appear to be that, in time of peace, for the sake of regimental duty, the brevet is not to go any further down than the Lieut. Colonels; but that in the other ranks there is to be a promotion (as recently) on the half pay, viz. subalterns having served 13 years or upward (and nine as Lieutenants) to be Captains—Captains 21 years and upwards (and seven as Captains) to be Majors—and Majors serving 25 years and upwards, (five as Majors) to be Lieut. Colonels on the half pay, from which they are to be replaced in the service by those young and active officers lately promoted, amongst whom the field officers are generally those who have been Captains or Subalterns in the late war—thus old officers rusting in the service will be promoted on the half pay, from which the army will receive the young but unexperienced field officers now lounging about our streets and taverns.

Whether this is a correct statement of the proposed measure we cannot confidently state, but it appears to be one which will be highly beneficial to the service, and will afford another proof of the illustrious Duke's care and solicitude for the interests of our army, which under His Royal Highness's controul and command has risen to the highest pitch of Military glory.—John Bull.

Married, at Alderly Church, Captain William Edward Parry, R. N. the celebrated voyager, to Isabella Louisa, fourth daughter of Sir John Thomas Stanley, of Alderley, Bart. Amongst those present were the Earl and Countess of Sheffield, Sir John and Lady Stanley, and their relatives. The bride was plainly but elegantly dressed in a white robe: she wore a veil. Her sisters had similar dresses, but they had no veils. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward Stanley, uncle of the bride, and her father gave her away.

76th ditto. Capt. B Scott, from half pay 25th Light Dragoons, to be Paymaster, vice Furlong, appointed to the 2d Dragoon Guards, dated Oct. 5, 1826.

The undermentioned officers having Brevet rank superior to their regimental commissions, have accepted promotion upon half pay, according to the General Order of the 25th April, 1826:—

Brevet Lieut. Col. A. Rumpler, from the 74th foot, to be Lieut. Col. of Infantry and Brevet Maj. G. Hillier, from the 74th foot, to be Maj. of Infantry, both dated Oct. 17, 1826.

Shubenaccadie Canal.—The reports for the months of August, September and October, as furnished by Francis Hall, Esq. Engineer, of the progressive improvement of this undertaking, the first ever attempted in either this or sister Province, are highly favourable, and bid fair to meet the most sanguine expectations of those Gentlemen by whose spirited and strenuous exertions the present state of forwardness is chiefly to be attributed. Mr. Hall in his report for October observes:

"After repeated experiments upon the various lime stone of the country, I have at length succeeded in forming a Hydraulic composition, superior in tenacity to the average of Parkers or Roman Water Cement. I beg leave to submit specimens from Keys, and Fort Ellis, also of Parker's Cement, all placed at the same time under water, and where they remained during 21 days.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Last night a serious accident happened in the back store of Mr Daniel Fisher, of this city. Between five and six, as that gentleman was searching among some old papers, for one of which he had need, he discovered several barrels, the contents of which, were unknown to him. On enquiring respecting them, he was told they contained damaged gunpowder. He gave instant orders for their being emptied into the river. Five of them were disposed of in this manner. One of the men employed in removing them, had the curiosity to try in the house, whether the powder was capable of ignition, and applied a light to some which he took on his hand, without effect. He next tried a greater quantity, which took fire, and communicated with a cask which exploded. The powder must have been very weak, otherwise the destruction of several lives, and indeed the house itself must have been the inevitable consequence. As it was, Mr. Fisher was scorched severely, his face was completely blackened, and his hair burnt off. His coat, vest and trowsers, and even the wrists and collar of his shirt was burned and torn. He had the presence of mind, on reaching the door, to lie down in the mud, which fortunately for him the fresh weather had rendered plentiful, and by this means he extinguished the flames.—Our readers will be happy to learn that, notwithstanding the perilous situation in which Mr. Fisher was placed, there is no apparent danger of Montreal, being by this means, deprived of an universally respected citizen. Mr. Maxwell, a clerk in Mr. Fisher's employment, was scorched by the explosion; the force of which drove him violently against a back stair, by which means he received some severe but not dangerous bruizes.—Montreal Herald.

At a Meeting of the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec, holden at the Castle of St. Louis, on the 27th day of November, 1826, Lieutenant Baddeley, of the Royal Engineers (one of the members), exhibited a number of specimens of minerals, productions of Canada, and he gave a paper in explanation of them. The Society voted him their thanks for this communication, and ordered that it be inserted in the Quebec Gazette.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1826.

BY AUTHORITY.

Government House,
York, 27th December, 1826.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to appoint Daniel and David Jone's, Esquires, Associate Judges of the District Court for the Eastern District.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.
John B. Robinson, Attorney General.
D. Cameron, Secretary.

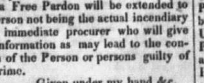
A PROCLAMATION.



By His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come Greeting:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. John Large, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said John Large for the discovery of the offender—Now Know Ye That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime.

Given under my hand &c.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Boards, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K.C.B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces thereon, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign.

P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.

D. CAMERON, Secretary.

Executive Council Office,
York, 23rd March, 1826

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENAT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.
No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the gran, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

JOHN SMALL,
No. 1.—tf. Clk. Ex. Council.

POETRY.

ELIJAH'S INTERVIEW WITH GOD.

On Horeb's rock the Prophet stood:
The Lord before him past.
A hurricane in angry mood
Swept by him strong and fast.
The forests fell before its force,
The rocks were shiver'd in its course;
God was not in the blast.
'Twas but the whirlwind of his breath,
Announcing danger, wreck, and death.

It ceased. The air grew mute—a cloud
Came mustling up the sun;
When through the mountains deep and loud
An earthquake thunder'd on.
The frighted eagle sprang in air,
The wolf ran howling from his lair;
God was not in the sun.
'Twas but the rolling of His car,
The trampling of His steeds from far.

'Twas still again, and Nature stood
And calm'd her ruffled frame:
When swift from Heaven a fiery flood
To earth devouring came.
Down to his depths the ocean fled,
The sickening sun look'd wan and dead;
Yet God fill'd not the flame.
'Twas but the terrors of His eye
That lighted'd through the troubled sky.

At last a voice all still and small
Rose sweetly on the ear,
Yet rose so clear it shrill, that all
In Heaven and earth might hear
It spoke of peace, it spoke of love,
It spoke as angels speak above,
And God himself was here.
For, oh, it was a Father's voice,
That bade His trembling world rejoice.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

Letter from an Old Member of the Lower, to an Old Member of the Upper House of Parliament.

MY DEAR LORD,

HAVING resolved to decline a return to Parliament after the Dissolution, my political life is drawing rapidly to its close. I have been reviewing it, therefore, in the prospect of that examination, with more than ordinary interest; and, it has been regulated chiefly by your example and advice, I consider a report of my reflections to be due to your Lordship, as the head of a department of which I was but a subordinate officer. Having mentioned the singularity of our stations, I must, at the same time, acknowledge that it was justly accommodated to the disparity of our characters, with a comparison of which I shall begin:—

Nature had gifted your Lordship with talents of the highest order, and especially with that promptness, faucity, and force of expression, which are more admired by the multitude, than the soundness or utility of what is expressed; and which sometimes tempt their possessor to mislead his auditors, that he may feel the gratifying assurance of his rhetorical power made doubly sure, by its triumph over truth. In fluency I was inferior, not only to you, but to most of our early compeers; and this inferiority was increased by my paucity under the consciousness of it. I was mortified by perceiving that my language never did justice to my thoughts, nor conveyed them fully and fairly to others; and my dread of a failure in public, rendered highly probable by my experience in private, has sealed my lips in the senate for almost half a century. I was, at the same time, perfectly aware that my judgment was stronger, my conceptions juster, and my reasoning closer, than those of many of the orators whom I envied and applauded. Had I confided in the suggestions of my own understanding, they would probably have shaped for me a better course than any pilotage whatever; but having fallen into the error, which is neither unusual nor unnatural, of identifying superiority in speaking with superiority in thinking, I distrusted the correctness of my own ideas, on finding them become less correct, when I embodied them in words. This diffidence have convinced me that my duty was to act under a leader, and my duty to select the best, I had no hesitation in fixing on your Lordship, for, all those who set out abreast with me in life, your abilities were the greatest, and were magnified to my eye, beyond their real dimensions, by the blaze of eloquence, through which I viewed them.

As soon, therefore, as I entered on those political functions, to which my birth and circumstances gave me a fair pretension, I tacitly resolved to secure myself against any material error by following the course which your Lordship should adopt. To this resolve, suggested by an honest desire to acquit myself blamelessly I have adhered with an inflexibility, which after the disclosures I am about to make, will, I fear, be partly imputed to indolence and timidity. I need scarcely add, that my chief employment as a Senator, has been, with few exceptions, to obstruct and vilify the executive Government. Of the propriety of this I was frequently in doubt; but before I could screw my courage up to the painful effort of deserting my party, the moment of decision came, and I voted with it as usual, trying to salve my conscience, with an indistinct hope that my own private judgment had been wrong. I make this acknowledgment, and mean to specify some of the cases in which I allude, not a matter of complaint or crimination against your Lordship, (the fault being entirely my own,) but as a warning to our parliamentary successors, not to confound opposition with patriotism; nor to incorporate themselves with a party so closely, as to render occasional separation from it difficult or disreputable.

When you entered the House of Commons, you at once took the side of Opposition; chiefly, I hope, from motives of conviction, and partly, I doubt not, from a pardonable desire of obtaining for your brilliant talents that advantageous field for display, which is always more open to an assailant than to a defender; and also that notice and applause which their display would secure. Though perfectly qualified yourself to have been the leader of the party, yet, as you found that station had been, for some years, in the preoccupation of Mr. Fox, instead of struggling for supremacy, or even coordinancy, you volunteered your services under his command. I, of course, did the same, though not without some apprehension that it might prove an imprudent outset talia jurare in verba magistri. Mr. Fox was then the most splendid character in the nation. With engaging manners, and a kind disposition, he united the highest recommendation of talent, of real, economizing, and of fashion. He was the central figure in the very uppermost circles of politics, literature, and courtly dissipation; so that his presence gave more eclat to the assemblies even of a Royal Duchess, than that of the Heir-Apparent. To be honoured with praise, or even with recognition, by Mr. Fox, stamped the young aspirants after distinction with a value, which nothing else could confer, and at once gave them currency, in the society to which they were ambitious of being. It is not surprising, therefore, that men of your rank and fame should have been desirous of this honour; and should not have hesitated to purchase it, by an understood, though tacit, pledge of our political service. There were, however, some circumstances, which we ought to have taken into our calculation, and which should have led us to pause, before we paid so high a price.

Mr. Fox had already deviated from the conduct which should be observed by the great Whig Aristocracy of England. No human beings, if they avoid such deviations, enjoy a more dignified position, than the members of that illustrious body. We see in them men of the first consideration, for wealth, rank, and character, keeping themselves equally independant of the Crown and of the populace, that they may either as ministers conduct with the purest integrity, or as members control with equal integrity, the measures of government. But in order that they may serve their country, in the fit of these capacities, it is proper that, in the last, they should carefully confine their censures to the servants of the Sovereign; while they maintain with the Sovereign himself such respectful language, and so decent a degree of personal connexion, as may enable him to call them into office, without any awkwardness, or soreness of feeling, to either party. This constitutional and prudential rule Mr. Fox had transgressed. He had become individually obnoxious to the King; a disadvantage necessarily shared by his adherents, who had, therefore, a fair right, before they became so, to consider whether they would take part of a penalty, for which Mr. Fox was singly responsible, and voluntarily encounter not only the usual bars to advancement, but this additional and avoidable one besides.

But the circumstance I have mentioned had still worse effects. Mr. Fox was by no means unconscious of the pre-eminence of his talents, nor of the consequent pre-cminence of his claim to a high ministerial office, by his eagerness for which, and the slenderness of his expectation from the Crown, he gradually slid into more republicanism of principle than is consistent with the equal balance of our monarchical constitution, or approved by the wisest and most respectable part of the nation. He wished the dislike of the King to be paralyzed by the compulsory influence of the people; and while we were aiding him in this object, I never was free from a strong persuasion, that, on the one hand, we should be charged with the adoption of all his principals, and that, on the other, our popularity was neither of an anomalous great, nor of a species so valuable, as we believed. We carried with us a large portion of the noisy part of the community. We were cheered by mobs, who always oppose their rulers: and we stood high in favour with speechifyers, versifyers, pamphleteers and journalists. But we were supported by few of the men of business understandings, who, thou silent and unobstrusive, have far more influence than the talkers and scribblers, who struggle more to obtain it.

In every town and province, numbers of the first description are to be found, who judge of public affairs with the same close reasoning, and comprehensive sagacity, which they exert in conducting their private concerns. Most of them, from want of practice, being neither fluent in speaking, nor skilful in writing for the public, they very seldom, and never uncalled, engage in either. On them the sophistry and declamation of parliamentary orators is entirely lost. They form opinions for themselves, with a natural logic, which, on a political question, requires as little aid from the leading article of a newspaper, as in making a purchase, from the puffing flourish of an auctioneer. In ordinary times they avoid acting, and leave their shallower neighbours to babble and blunder as long as they see that these can do no harm; but when a crisis of sufficient interest and importance occurs, they start forward and act with vigour and effect. They promote petitions against improper measures; they guide, by their example, to the choice of fit Representatives; and they assist in checking the disturbers of peace, and deluders of the populace. I have sometimes had a strong proof of the power of such men, as I am describing, when on a Jury, where all were equally anxious to decide fairly and wisely. I have observed the majority, who are often too dull or timid to judge for themselves, swayed at first, by the narrow but plausible views of a Lawyer: and guided at last to a proper verdict by a few plain, though perhaps vulgar, words from a neighbour, of whose shrewdness and penetration they had conceived a high idea from their practical success. It is to such men I should wish to confine the word PEOPLE, which, being used by every party in a different sense, has come indicating a different portion of the people, conveys no precise or intelligible meaning whatever. But as this is a hackney term, so convenient for all purposes, my appropriation of it would probably be refused, and therefore I shall call the persons to whom I allude the Business Men.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

Thursday, December 21.

Sundry Petitions were brought up.

On motion made the Rev. THADDEUS OSGOODE was heard at the Bar of the House on his Petition on the subject of the Society formed in London for affording instruction to the Indians and destitute Settlers in Canada.

The Petition of the CATAROQUI BRIDGE COMPANY was referred to a Committee —Attorney General, Bidwell, Atkinson, and Thomson of Frontenac, to report by Bill or otherwise, with power to send for persons and papers.

Mr. M'Bride obtained leave to bring in the JAIL LIMITS' Bill—the Bill proposes to extend the Limits of Jails to a mile square —2d Reading on Monday next.

STRAYS' SURVEYORS' BILL, read a third time and send to the Legislative Council for their concurrence.

ALE AND BEER LICENCE BILL.—2d Reading—this Bill authorise the issuing of Licences at any time throughout the year instead of being confined to the first Monday in May as provided for in the present Act. The Bill was reported as amended—3d Reading for Saturday.

MILL DAM BILL.—2d Reading.

(This is one of those measures which has been discussed in two previous Sessions, and as the arguments on both sides have been as often repeated, and communicated to the public it is considered unnecessary to do so now.)

The Committee on this Bill reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again to-morrow.

DISTRICT COURT BILL—Mr. J. Jones according to previous notice moved for leave to bring in the Bill—he said it was the same which he had introduced two years ago, and as it had been printed for use of Members he had no doubt that it had received their attention, and that they were now prepared to express their sentiments upon it—it contemplated no increase, either in the jurisidiction, or the fees of the District Courts—the removal of difficulties and inconveniencies which were felt in its sole object.

Mr. Lefferty would have no objection to extend the jurisdiction of the District Court, as it might effect a saving to suitors.

Mr. James Wilson would take twelve years to understand such a Bill, it was so extensive—he had seen the Printed Bill but had not given it particular attention—he knew that Lawyers took small suits into the Court of Kings Bench, and was aware that this required some remedy—there was enough law already, and the District Courts had enough business—as the House should not Legislate for Lawyers but for the Country, he hoped this Bill would not be entertained—he should propose its being read again not this day three Months, but two years, and leave it for another Parliament.

Leave was given to bring in the Bill, read a first time—2d Reading on Monday next.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) of the Committee on the Petition of John Cumming and others Directors of the late Bank at Kingston, reported by a Bill, repealing the clause of the Pretended Bank Act, which binds the real estate of the Directors— and Mr. Thomson moved the 2d Reading of the Bill on Monday next.

Mr. Morris would recommend the House to pause, and be cautious, how they proceeded in this measure—the creditors of this Bank were not yet paid, and it was necessary to be careful before they so completely exonerated the Directors.

Mr. Bidwell thought the Bill reported by the Committee was misunderstood—the personal estate of the Directors of that Bank was also held formerly and had been released—this Bill went to release their real estate also—the law which had been passed with respect to the Directors he considered an unjust one—it had brought disgrace on honest and innocent men—two of them were now dead, and the bequests in their wills of their real estate was void under the law, without affecting any good to the public as the heirs would claim it—the interference of the Legislature had been unfortunate and unjust, as he believed the affairs of the Bank would have been settled by the Directors, if it had not taken place—two of the Commissioners under the Bank Act had resigned, and the law became ineffective—the present Petition was signed by one of them—on a former occasion the Directors had offered to take back the management into their own hands, but had been refused though they offered security to pay all the debts.

Mr. Gordon would not consent to the Bill—it was neither wise nor just to release the Directors from their responsibility—the case might be an unfortunate one for them—but it was equally and more so for the creditors of the Bank that the Directors had not paid proper attention to the conduct of their servants—and if any suffer for the want of that attention it should not be the creditors of the institution.

Mr. James Wilson thought the Bank Act as unjust one he knew honest men who had suffered by its operations.

The Attorney General was not in this Country when the Bank Act was passed—but had heard that when the failure of the institution was first announced a great degree of indignation had been expressed against the Directors—subsequently against Parliament for its interference—and then against the Commissioners under the Act—the measure he admitted was a strong one, but not stronger than the case at the time required—the public had suffered in consequence of the failure of the Bank, and he was not prepared to say that it would be advisable to absolve the Directors from the responsibility they had incurred, from the remiss manner in which they had overlooked the Officers of the Bank.

2d Reading of the Bill on Monday next —Carried.

COUNTY COURT BILL—brought in by Mr. M'Call the object of this Bill is the establishment of Courts of Assize in every County, as soon as Jails and Court Houses are erected—imposing an additional assessment for that purpose—and authorising loans for their erection.—2d Reading on Tuesday next.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) gave notice that he should on to-morrow, move for the appointment of a select Committee, with power to send for persons and papers to enquire, if any and what quantity of Salted Pork has been permitted to be imported into this Province, and under what authority such importation has been made.

Mr. Coleman gave notice of a Bill for erecting the County of Hastings into a separate District.—Adjourned.

Friday, Dec. 22.

On motion of Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) a Committee of seven was chosen by Ballot, to take into consideration the establishment of a Public Penetentiary.

CLERGY RESERVES—House in Committee of the whole on Mr. Morris' Resolutions.

Mr Rolph said that he should propose an amendment—repeated applications had been made on this subject by address, which perhaps had never reached His Majesty—it was useless he thought to expect that the wishes of this House would be complied with as long as an individual could go home and frustrate its intentions —but person was sent home for the purpose by the Provincial Government, and he might now be successfully urging the application of these Reserves for ever for the Church of England—it therefore became the House to take every step to prevent a measure which would be the ruin of Upper Canada—the whole of these Reserves would otherwise be sold and the proceeds vested for one sect, and this he thought would be a stigma on the Province —the House should lift up its voice against it—he would adopt another policy from that heretofore pursued, and try another remedy—he should therefore propose in amendment that an address be sent to the House of Lords, in which twelve Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church had seats, and ascertain whether they were inclined to bind Upper Canada in Ecclesiastical chains—Bills are now passed without our consent or knowledge and invisation of our Constitutional Charter—the voice of the Country expressed year after year was unheard—he would establish only one Church, and that should be a Christian Church embracing all denominations.

Mr. Morris thought that the amendment proposed had better be withdrawn—the House was empowered to Legislate on the subject, and it might be said they had not exercised that power, and it was therefore most prudent to do so in the first instance, if a Bill was rejected he should then agree in an address as proposed.

Mr. James Wilson was apprehensive that the Imperial Parliament might now be Legislating on this subject and would for ever close the scene upon us, and the remonstances of this House might never be heard—he would join in an address to Lords and Commons—the King was prevented from hearing them—it was bad policy to devote these Lands to any one sect as it would tend to ruin of both Soul and body—the Reserves would be an inducement for an enemy to attack the Province, tens of thousands of volunteers would be found, to invade the Country if they were held out to them as a reward—he House would evince a proper spirit by adopting the amendment and the Resolutions, the interests of the people had been played with long enough—time had been spent on trifling measures, while the one thing needful had been neglected—it was now time to set to work with heart and might or the door would be shut upon them.

Mr. Rolph said that while there was life there was hope, but the remedy proposed of sending a Bill to the Legislative Council he considered, though the most prudent, yet the most hopeless—in compliance with the wishes of the Hon. mover of the Resolutions he would with permission withdraw his amendment.

Captain Matthews would not consent to have the amendment withdrawn—it would insure an immediate hearing at Home—he had no confidence in the Legislative Council—a Bill would be kept on their table to the last moment, and it would be objected to—a Bill of the Imperial Parliament would be irrevocable, and the House should lose no time in expressing its desires—he had heard a good deal said of tythes—these were first intended to provide for the poor, but they were now reaped by rapacious men, Wolves in Sheeps clothing, who took not only the wool but the skins of their flocks—he was not opposed to tythes however, if the collection of them were confined by sects to their own Church, and in this case he though there would be no danger of seeing the Clergy of the Church of England too rich.

Mr. Bidwell hoped the amendment would be withdrawn—the other mode was the most prudent, though he considered it hopeless to expect a Bill to pass the Legislative Council—he would do so however to shew that they had used every means—if however after a reasonable time the Bill was not returned from the Legislative Council, he would then search their Journals, and if it appeared that there was no prospect of its receiving the assent of that body, he would then adopt the mode proposed by the amendment—he saw no other mode to save the Province from an Established Church with all its intolerance and vices, which had been found so injurious in other Countries.

Mr. Gordon said that this subject had been discussed often before—the appropriation might appear large, but it was not productive—it might hereafter be disproportioned, to one sects, he had no doubt that these Reserves were intended for the Church of England and he would go any reasonable lengths to ensure a participation for the Church of Scotland which he thought was equally entitled to them; this had formerly been the opinion of the Hon. mover of the Resolutions, but disappointment had carried him too far, and he could not go to the same lengths—he considered the Resolutions unreasonable and absurd, they went to strip the Church of England altogether, and could it reasonably be expected that the Imperial Parliament would consent to do such a thing.

Captain Matthews said that the idea of two Established Religions was absurd, and would create dissatisfaction among other sects—the same dissatisfaction existed against one, and if persisted in the Clergy would before long drag down the Government; the people would resent it—the discontent of Ireland might be traced to Religious intolerance—an established Church held out a premium for hypocrisy; for fat livings men would change their minds; discontent would be created among some, and envy hatred and malice among others, he would therefore do away all disunctions among sects.

The Committee rose and reported the Resolutions as amended.

Before receiving the Report.

Mr. Rolph said that a difference of opinion existed among Lawyers, as to the meaning of "a Protestant Clergy," some thought it to mean the Episcopal Church, others all Protestant Christians—he most heartily agreed with the latter opinion and he should propose an amendment to that effect to shew in what sense the House considered it, the claim of the Protestant Episcopal Church to the Reserves he considered as repugnant to 31st of the King and most injurious to the interests of the Province. Amendment carried, he should propose another amendment and tell the whole truth—if we desire success as strong a case must be made out as the case admits of—the Resolutions stated that the members of the Episcopal Church in the Province were a small, an inconsiderable part of the community—he would say that they were the most inconsiderable and formed a very small part—the Methodists he said were the only bush Preachers, and but for their exertions the Province would long ago have been on all fours in Religious matters.

This amendment also carried and Messrs. Rolph, Bidwell, and Morris appointed a Committee to draft a Bill for the sale of the Clergy Reserves, pursuant to the Resolutions.

CONTROVERTED ELECTION BILL—2d Reading.

Mr. J. Jones said that as the law which he had introduced on a former occasion, and which had been acted upon was about to expire, he had thought it his duty to bring in the present Bill, which would make it perpetual—the beneficial effects of it had been fully tested, and the only amendment he should propose in its provisions, in accordance with the wishes of several members, was one giving the power to take evidence on Contested Elections in the several Districts, instead of requiring the attendance of Witnesses at the Bar of the Committees appointed to try them. It had been admitted that under the provisions of the present Law, much time had been saved in those trials, its provisions generally were the same as those of the Grenville Act in England; there it had at first met with opposition, but the minds of all persons were now satisfied with the results it had produced.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) would support the Bill with the amendment proposed.

Mr. Lefferty was opposed to the Bill; he thought the best mode of settling contested Elections would be to name five persons in the District and leave it to them to determine, it would save expense and time.

Mr. Hamilton admitted that the Grenville Act was the speedier mode, but the Province was now a long way round was sometimes the shortest way home, and he thought the House should not adopt the Bill hastily.

Mr. Perry agreed with the last Speaker; he preferred that these trials should take place before the whole House—by the Grenville Act, two Committees might try the merits of Elections under the same circumstances and yet give different decisions; this could not happen in a trial before the whole House.

Mr. Beardsley preferred the former Law, and thought an open trial before the House the best. Committees resembled secret inquisitions; there were no Reporters, and principles were not known—the saving of time here was not of so much consequence as in England—as to inconvenience of witnesses attending the House, he did not care for that, if necessary he would pay them—the public good required their attendance; thinking the old Law the best, he should oppose this Bill altogether.

Mr. Coleman, with the amendment, would support the Bill, limiting its continuance, however, to four years, as he disliked perpetual Laws; he thought it a hardship to bring witnesses from a long distance.

Mr. James Wilson was always afraid of Bills coming from the quarter which this did and he should oppose it, it was hatched in intricacy; he preferred the former Law as it afforded an opportunity of bringing out the truth at the Bar of the House, he did not dread a fair open Election, but some men would sell their country for three or four hundred a year, and come into this House, plastered with Offices, such as Judges, Collectors, and paid by the Executive, be guilty of corrupt conduct—he would guard against intricacy and promote simplicity, he would have no trick, no bribery; he considered that the freedom of Election depended on the independence of Members, and as he thought it looked like planning to do away the independence of the Parliament of Upper Canada, he should vote against the Bill.

The Attorney General, after the experience the House had received of the benefits of the Grenville Act, was surprised that the present measure should be objected to—under the former Law, much time was occupied in the trial of contested elections, from the manner of conducting them at the Bar of the House—the party complaining, was first heard by Counsel—witnesses were called, and questions put by Members through the Speaker—long discussions arose, as to the propriety of certain questions proposed by Members—the objections of Counsel were heard upon them—the opposite Counsel replied; when this was gone through, the sitting member was allowed to make his defence, and again the same process took place—Counsel on the other side then claimed the right of reply—and during all this time, every other kind of business which related to the Country was totally suspended; by the Grenville act this was avoided, and justice was equally done to the parties—he would only ask honorable Members to compare the two modes, and say which was preferrable. As to the trial before Committees, he said they were not secret—Counsel, Witnesses, and Reporters attended—any person might be present at the Bar of the Committee as well as at the Bar of the House. The mode under the Grenville Act was one which would meet the appropation of any reasonable man—forty names were first drawn by ballot, the parties appointed nominees, these alternately struck off one from the whole number until it was reduced to nine, and these, with the two nominees, formed the Committee of eleven to try the Election—was there any thing like design in this? the trial was as open as a trial by Jury, and Reporters could attend if they pleased to give publicity to the proceedings.

Mr. Atkinson would support the Bill, with the amendment for taking evidence by Commission, but would not make the Law perpetual.

Mr. Baby opposed the Bill—he had himself, in the case of his own Election, suffered from it.

Mr. Rolph would not make the law perpetual, some amendments were desirable but was not prepared to say what, Committees had been objected to and he thought very properly.

Mr. D. Jones, till some better mode was pointed out, should vote for this Bill, it had produced a saving of time and done justice.

The Bill was reported as amended, and leave given to sit again.——Adjourned.

Saturday, Dec. 23.

Sheriff's Salary Bill was read a second time and reported as amended. The Bill continues the former Law for 4 years. 3d Reading on Tuesday next.

Sedition Law Repeal Bill.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) said that the merits and demerits of the Law had been so fully discussed on former occasions, that he considered it unnecessary to make any further remarks upon it now—he moved the adoption of the Bill.

Mr. Perry would propose an amendment in the preamble—it stated the reason for a repeal to be "the present tranquil state of the Province," now he contended that such a Law was never necessary, if these words were inserted it would be admitting that there had been a necessity for it—he proposed an amendment to this effect, which was carried. The Bill was reported as amended, 3d reading for Tuesday.——Adjourned to Tuesday.

Tuesday, Dec. 26.

The Sheriff's Salary Bill, read a 3d time, passed, and sent to the Legislative Council.

The Address of thanks to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for his Communication on the subject of the Welland Canal, was read a third time, passed, and signed by the Speaker, and a Committee appointed to present the same.

Mr. Gordon expressed his surprise at the delay of the Committee on the Alien Bill, at the commencement of the Session a great degree of haste had been evinced on the subject. The motion for bringing in a Bill on the Petition of the Inhabitants of Johnstown, was on the order of the day, and he hoped the Gentleman who was to bring it forward would not delay it in consequence of no Report being received from the Committee.

Mr. J. Jones was not aware what delayed the Report of the Committee, he supposed, however, that it would soon be made, and he should wait until then before he brought in the Bill alluded to by the honorable Gentleman.

Canada Trade Act.—House in Committee of the whole on Mr. Perry's Resolution.

Mr. Perry said that it had been stated that a duty could be imposed by the House on certain imported articles, notwithstanding the Act of the Imperial Parliament, and on that case he would prefer passing a Bill at once for the Importation of Beef and Pork, at a specified duty.

Mr. Atkinson would also reduce the duty on other articles, they were imported into Lower Canada and our Revenue suffered in consequence—the Law required several modifications.

Mr. Perry thought it was the opinion of the Committee, that the House could not put a duty on prohibited articles, he would then address the King to allow us to regulate our own Trade.

Mr. Morris said that the Resolutions went to an extraordinary length, they interfered with the regulation of the Trade of the West India Islands, it was quite enough that we should protect our own if thought necessary without interfering with others.

Mr. J. Jones though the honorable Gentleman who had introduced the Resolutions, would find that they were unnecessary, as a Law had been passed on the subject since the Canada Trade Act went into operation; he had no doubt, however, but that the honorable Gentleman was perfectly acquainted with the subject he had introduced or he would not have submitted it to the consideration of the House.

Mr. Gordon thought that the introduction of these Resolutions had placed the Committee in an awkward situation; he was not prepared to vote on the subject, until he saw the Law passed lately by the Imperial Parliament; the Resolutions interfered with the Trade of other Colonies.

Mr. Perry was not aware of any other Law on the subject, he had thought it his duty to make a representation with respect to Beef and Pork, which was packed in the Country and evaded the Law.

Mr. McLean had no doubt that laudable motives actuated the honorable mover of the Resolutions; he would propose, however, from the situation in which the Committee was placed, that the subject be referred to a Select Committee, they would then see the law lately passed, at present the House was completely in the dark, not being aware of the provisions of that Act.

The Committee rose, reported progress, to sit again on Wednesday next.

On motion of Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) Messrs. Atkinson, Lyons, M'Donell, and Lefferty, were appointed a Committee to enquire and report what quantity of salted Pork has been imported into the Province, since the 6th Geo. 4th (Canada Trade Act) has been in operation, and by whose authority such importation had been made.

Mr. J. Jones suggested substituting the word what for whose, which was agreed to.

Controverted Election Bill, read a second time. Some amendments were made, the Bill reported, and leave given to sit again.

Hasting's Division Bill.—Mr. Coleman introduced the Bill—the Petition from Prince Edward to be erected into a separate District has been entertained and passed into a Bill by the House, he asked the same indulgence for Hastings; did not expect that either would pass the Legislature, but hoped both would be allowed to make the attempt.

Mr. Thomson had opposed Prince Edward and should also oppose Hastings—he was followed on the same side by Mr. Atkinson.

Mr. J. Jones thought the reasons for a division were more in favor of Hastings than Prince Edward, but considered both unnecessary at present. The latter contained only about 24 Townships of Land, the former 12 Townships; the extremity of Prince Edward was 70 miles from the County Town, while the distance in Hastting was 90 miles.

Mr. James Wilson thought this Bill was brought in to frustrate the wishes of the people of Prince Edward—from a former decision they had a fair claim for a division; he, however, had no objections to make subdivisions, and thought they were beneficial, and should not, therefore, oppose the Bill.

The Bill passed to a second reading.

Division Line Fence Bill.

Mr. Perry introduced the Bill, the object of which, he said, was to make each person pay an equal proportion of the expense for erecting Fences on their division line.

Second reading for Friday next.

Mr. Morris gave notice that he should on to-morrow move for the reading of that part of the Journals relating to the late Pretended Bank at Kingston, at the time of its failure, with a view to have the statement of its affairs printed, in order that the public might see that there were means at the time to meet the demands against it, and what persons were indebted to it.

Adjourned.

Wednesday, Dec. 27.

Intestate Bill—2d Reading.

Mr. Bidwell said that in introducing this Bill, the opinions he had expressed on former occasions remained unchanged—the measure was called for by the people, and as it had been so fully discussed before, he considered further remarks at present unnecessary.

The Attorney General agreed in thinking that further discussion was in a great measure unnecessary—he had always opposed, and should continue to oppose this Bill, as he considered it contrary to the spirit of our Constitution, it had been said that it was called for by the people, but he was of opinion that the evils which they would be plunged into by such a Bill had never been properly represented to them, and from which they were now exempt under the present law—its provisions were inconvenient and would create confusion —he would suppose a person possessed of 100 acres of land with a family, and many persons in this country were not possessed of more—if such a person were asked whether he would make such a distribution of his land as this Bill contemplated—he thought the reply would be that it would not be his desire to subdivide a property into six or eight parcels—it was generally speaking in cases such as these that the person died Intestate—those possessed of larger properties made wills—on searching the Surrogate Offices in the Province where persons holding even small properties had made wills, he thought it would be found that a distribution such as the Bill proposed, had not been made—the Bill before House would abolish all hopes of ever attaining to the same state of Society as existed in England, which he thought desirable—there the beneficial effects of the law of primogeniture had been acknowledged, and in other Countries where a different system was pursed the state of Society was not so good and agriculture in a miserable state from the many subdivisions of property—the Bill before the House would interrupt the harmony of familes, as in the event of a person of small property dying Intestate and in debt, each portion of the land was liable to contribution for payment, and in the event of each child not contributing his proportion, actions might be brought, which would tend to destroy the bonds of affection. Foreign experience, and the reseaches of learned authors on the subject pointed out the inconveniences that would arise from the projected measure—it would prevent the younger branches of families from rising into importance, and entail a needy population on the Country—its consequences had been regretted by intelligent men in Lower Canada, and he hoped the House with the benefit of experience before them would not support the Bill.

Mr. Bidwell had not heard any objections from the Attorney General which had not been repeated before—with respect to Scotland, he would take the opportunity of admitting that he had been misinformed in that respect and was now aware, that a subdivision of property did not take place, where persons died Intestate—setting aside however the examples of other Countries, the question was, whether the state of Society in this Province required that the present law should be continued or the change introduced which this Bill contemplated—he considered it as an alternative between the two cases, and one desired by the people—natural justice called for such a measure, as it would prevent younger children being cast off as beggars and Orphans—it was true the Legislative Council, had last year rejected a similar Bill but they had once passed such a Bill which was rejected by this House; as to the state of Society in England, it was different from this country there immense wealth and refinement existed and being a manufacturing country afforded employment to thousands which in this country must be found in agricultural pursuits; he did not consider that the Bill was opposed to the spirit of the Constitution—the 31st of the King had left us free to Legislate on the subject and if it had been considered as subversive of the spirit o the Constitution, it would have contained a special restriction on the subject.

The Attorney General in reply said, that he had not heard any thing from the learned gentleman, which removed the objections he had made—the generality of persons in this country were possessed of small properties—he granted that some of them made wills, but not disposing of these properties as this Bill would do—he did not deny that the Legislative Council had once sent a Bill on the subject for the concurrence of this House, but when that case was alluded to the Hon. gentleman had forgotten to state the peculiar circumstances which had induced that Hon. body to do so, at that time a doubt existed whether real Estate in the hands of Executors was not liable to execution for debt, and as it was a question whether the surplus of any should remain in the hands of the Executors until the heir arrived at age they had passed the Bill, to render it the same as goods and chattels—a decision had since then taken place, by which real estate was not liable to such executions, and the necessity of such a Bill was therefored done away; under the operations of the law now proposed he would suppose the case of a person dying Intestate possessed of 100 acres, owing a debt of £50, half the value of the property, with a family of five or six children—an equal distribution takes place of the property, and equal contributions are required for the payment of the debt as provided for by this Bill—some of the family would be unable to pay their contributions, and actions would immediately be brought against them by the other—whereas if the eldest son had the property in his possession he would be better enabled to pay off the debt and provide for his younger brothers and sisters, and for the credit of human nature he was disposed to hope that such would be the feeling of elder brothers in ninety nine cases out of a hundred—another objection to the distribution of property into minute parts, was the increased consumption of Firewood, for however plenty that article might appear to be now it was necessary that a certain portion of it should be reserved on every farm, and especially as he had never yet heard of any coal being found in the country: in many places it had already reached a high price, and the poor obtained it with difficulty—the 31st of the King did not certainly limit us in this respect—but yet it might as well be said that we should not assimilate ourselves to England in other important respects, on which we were equally free to Legislate—he trial by Jury for example and other useful institutions might be done away—the fact was, we had been left to our own good judgment in this respect, and so far we had availed ourselves of those constitutions which had promoted the greatness and happiness of the parent country—the Hon. gentleman now admitted that he had been mistaken with respect to the Law of Scotland on this subject, and the argument he had derived from that country, though it had been so strongly insisted on by him, must after such an admission fall to the ground—he was not borne out by the example of England—he had been mistaken with respect to Scotland, and where would he then go to furnish examples of the benefit of his Bill—would he adduce Ireland as worthy of imitation in this respect when it was universally admitted by the best informed persons that the unhappy state of that country was to be attributed in a great measure to the long continued practice of the subdivision of property—could France be adduced as an instance in its favor—during the Revolution this was one of the changes effected in that country, and was it more happy than when the law of primogeniture prevailed, and which was now attempted to be restored in that country, as its agriculture had been found to suffer in consequence of the change—in the United States where such a law prevailed, its evil consequences had been averted to by learned men in that country, and Professor Dwight an eminent writer had condemned it; that country too had resources for its surplus population, which Upper Canada did not possess—and thousands were found constantly emigrating from the older States to the Western country—the population of some of the Eastern States had not increased for some years past, in consequence of the effects produced by such a law as this, the subdivisions of property had compelled many to remove to those places which presented them better prospects—he considered the proposed change as a dangerous experiment, and if once passed into a Law it must, and if once passed into a Law it would be difficult to remedy the evil which would be brought upon the country by it.

Mr. Hamilton would support the Bill; the instances adduced by the Attorney General he thought were not warranted by the real state of the country; many persons were possessed of 500 acres, they provided for their married children during their lives, and in the event of their dying intestate, he did not apprehend the consequences alluded to by a subdivision of these 500 acres among the remaining children.

The Honorable Speaker had delivered his sentiments on a former occasion, but would take the opportunity of replying to some of the arguments urged against the Bill, which he should support. He conceived that the principles of the Bill were founded on natural justice, and were such as would meet the approbation of every reasonable man—public opinion called for the Bill; he had known instances himself where such a distribution of property had been made, and if the question were put to most people, whether they thought it fair that one child should have the property, he believed the answer would be found in favor of this Bill. The objection with respect to Firewood he did not consider valid; the country in all parts abounded with forests, and the quantity to be consumed would not be affected by this Bill; he had no doubt besides that if necessity called forth research, coal mines would be found. The equal distribution of property was recognized as an equitable principle in ancient times—it prevailed among the Jews, the eldest having two parts—the Romans had adopted it, and prospered under it, when they changed the practice it had contributed to the destruction of their liberty. The great question appeared to him to be whether it was morally just; he contended that England was not indebted to the Law of primogeniture for her greatness; younger sons in that country were provided for in the Army and Navy, and found employment in the pursuits of commerce, while agriculture only presented itself here—justice he thought called for the Law; great negligence prevailed in making wills, and it was proper that the members of a family after the fathers death should be equally provided for.

The Attorney General said, that after so long an experience the people of England had never expressed a desire for a change in the Law on this subject; Honorable Members appeared to confine their arguments with respect to the changes contemplated by this Bill to the present generation only; what would be the effect which it would produce for two generations to come? the greater part of the Lands in Upper Canada were already granted; we had no excessive tracts to open for settlement, and the continued subdivision of property would be attended with injurious consequences—applying the Law to the case of Town Lots, what would be the effect; hereafter, those Lots, which now contained only 1-5th of an acre, might be parcelled out into six pieces, each of what value would the 1-6th of 1-5th of an acre of Land be to any one of a family. The Hon. Speaker seemed to think that large Landholders were opposed to liberty, but he would ask whether Magna Charta was not obtained by the Barons of England, and not by persons of inconsiderable property. If the case was truly represented to the people of the Country, he thought they would not be so much inclined to the Bill as was represented—if the man who owned a comparatively small property were asked whether he would, in making a Will, make such a distribution of his property as was intended by this Bill, and whether he would recommend the same practice to be adopted by his successors, until the property was split into many small pieces—he thought that any reasonable man would answer in the negative, and not be disposed to adopt a principle ruinous to the best interests of the Country.

The committee rose and reported the Bill.

Whipping Abolition Bill.—Second Reading.

After some discussion on this Bill, amendments were made restricting it to females only. The Bill as amended abolishes Whipping and Pillory in the case of females, and substitutes an imprisonment of not more than six nor less than two months, at the discretion of the Judges. The Bill was reported as amended, and ordered for a third Reading.—Adjourned.

Thursday, Dec. 28.

On going into the House this morning, the subject of debate, was on a motion made by Captain Matthews applying for leave of absence during the present Parliament, in consequence of orders received by him from the Master General of Ordnance, to proceed immediately to Quebec, and to embark for England in the Spring—we found the floor occupied by Mr. Rolph, who proposed an amendment to Captain Matthew's motion—he said the insurections which Capt. M. had received to proceed to Quebec, contained charges against that Hon. Members of the most disgraceful nature—he should not be deserved under such circumstances, but an inquiry should be made into his conduct by the House, and this his amendment proposed.

Mr. J. Jones, if the amendment stood alone he should vote for it, but as it was he should oppose it, and vote for Captain M's. original motion—if however the amendment was carried and the original motion lost, he should then support the amendment.

Mr. C. Jones, thought as a Military Officer Capt. M. could obey the order he had received without the leave of the House—his own private interests were concerned, and injustice might be done him by refusing his motion for leave—he might in consequence lose his pay—he should therefore oppose the amendment, and support the Hon. Gentleman's motion for leave.

Captain Matthews, did not wish Gentlemen either in or out of the House, to give themselves any concern about his pay; he was the best judge of his own conduct as a military man, and that consideration need not therefore influence the House.

Mr. J. Wilson, considered it unjust to allow the Hon. Gentleman to go when accusations might be brought against him before an inquiry was made into his conduct by the House—he might be tried before a military tribunal in Great Britain, without having an opportunity of the House expressing its approbation of his conduct.

Mr. Randall, would support the amendment, as he considered the charges made against the Hon. Gentleman to be incorrect.

Mr. C. Jones, said the Hon. Gentleman had misunderstood him if he supposed the remarks he had made were intended as advice to him.

Mr. McLean, thought if leave was not granted the Hon. Gentleman would be without excuse to the Master General of Ordnance in not obeying the orders he had received.

Capt. Matthews, only asked the House to do its duty—and that Hon. Members without adverting to his peculiar situation would do as they would be done by.

Mr. Perry, generally agreed with Capt. M. on most questions, but would not consult his private interest so far as to bring the House into difficulty—if he had done enough to make him lose his pay, he would also vacate his seat—he would not consent to give him leave, as he was not so partial to his interest, as to sacrifice the good of the Province to it.

Mr. Gordon, was not aware what Military duty required on such an occasion—he would not refuse the application for leave now, and if it was considered necessary to afford an opportunity for explanation of conduct, would afterwards vote for the amendment.

Captain Matthews repeated that he only wished the House to do its duty without any reference to his private interests—he had made the motion for leave, but it mattered not to him one farthing if it was refused; if, however, it was granted, and then an inquiry into his conduct was determined on by the House, he should, notwithstanding the leave granted, remain, though the Heavens should fall.

Mr. Rolph said, the Hon. Member had been compelled by the order he had received to make application for leave or go without it—he had been cruelly misrepresented, not only in the Country, where scandal was listened to, but that scandal had been carried to England, and there upheld to his associates in Arms—in justice the House must refuse the application for leave, until the character of the Hon. Member, and of this House, has been cleared up—if leave were first given, and inquiry then instituted, the Hon. Member might be deprived of the opportunity of explanation, and might afford cause of triumph against him in his absence.

Mr. J. Jones—if Capt. M. had said that he was charged with improper conduct, he would have voted for inquiry, but the Resolution now proposed in amendment he did not think the proper course—Officers on half-pay knew when they were elected, and their constituents knew, that they were liable to be ordered on service again—he did not know Capt. M.'s particular case, but if he must obey the order, on his making application for leave he thought the House should not refuse it.

Captain Matthews said, if leave was granted he should be without excuse for disobeying the order he had received—but as the matter stood, it must be either leave or inquiry.

Mr. Atkinson thought that a Military order did not supersede the order of the House, and he thought that inquiry should be made before leave was granted in this case.

Captain Matthews explained, that he was neither on half pay, nor full pay, but on a Pension, and considered that he was not liable to be called on service—he had served twenty-seven years, and on his corps being totally disbanded, he had settled in the Province with the approbation of Government—he had asked leave, not with any desire of its being granted, but that the House might do its duty—One of its members had been charged with conduct utterly void of loyalty—charged anonymously in some of the public prints—the Commander of the Forces had seen it, and tells him it is corroborated, how he could not tell—on such an anonymous charge, he asked the family, at a moments notice, to be moved from one end of the Country to the other—and then to proceed to England, where an inquiry might be made—how was he to meet it there—if the House first granted the leave and then in his absence instituted an inquiry, it would, he thought, be unjust.

Mr. Lefferty—if the Hon. Gentleman was allowed to go away without inquiry, it would be unjust, if it took place before leave was granted, he would have an opportunity of vindicating himself—the circumstance alluded to, he considered unworthy of notice.

Mr. Hamilton was present when the circumstance alluded to took place—it was in a pitiful Play-house—an absurd matter altogether, and such as he would laugh at; the calling for the tune of Yankee Doodle, or Hail Colombia, he considered no disgrace to any member of the House.

Mr. Beardsley had made up his mind to refuse the application for leave—justice to the Member and the Country called for inquiry, and he would make the most minute investigation—he would trace out the calumny, and bring the person who had originated it to the Bar of the House for having done so—the power of the House controlled all Military orders; it was so in Great Britain, and we possess the same authority—if Capt. M. had gone without leave, he would have sent the Sergeant at Arms after him—he would, therefore, reject the original motion and support the amendment.

The amendment as proposed by Mr. Rolph was then put—and carried.

Captain Matthews' original motion was then put and lost.

And a committee appointed to inquire into Captain Matthews' conduct with power to send for persons and papers.

Bill for Sale of Clergy Reserves—as reported by the select committee was then Read.

This Bill authorises the Sheriff's in the several Districts to sell the Reserves at Auction—14-th to be paid down and the balance in 2 yearly payments; the proceeds to be paid into the hands of the Receiver General, to be expended in the purposes of Education—a public Provincial Seminary and erecting places of worship for all Christian Denominations.

On motion of Mr. Morris the 41st Rule of the House was dispensed with and the Bill is to read a second time to-morrow.

Bill for the More Easy Recovery of Dower—was read a second time—several amendments made in it—the committee rose, and the Bill was referred to a select committee.

By Command of His Excellency the Lieutant Governor, Major Hillier delivered several Messages.—Resolutions of the House of Assembly of New-Brunswick, acknowledging appropriations made last year by Upper Canada, in consequence of the great fires in that Province—Report of the Commissioners for erecting Parliament House.—Petition of R. C. Horne, Esq.—And Despatches announcing Half pay to Incorporated Militia.

Captain Matthews moved an address of thanks to His Excellency for his Messages of this day. Passed and signed.

On motion of Mr. Perry, Captain Matthews, and Mr. M'Call were appointed a committee to present the address of thanks to His Excellency. Adjourned.

The U. E. Loyalist.

York, U. C. Saturday, December 30, 1826.

We are interested to the Albion for our extracts of Foreign News, there appears to be nothing particularly interesting.

A good deal of business has been gone through in the House of Assembly during the week. The Report of the Commitee on the Alien Bill will we understand be made to the House to-day, there is every prospect, that this important matter will be settled this Session.

The Letter from Blackwood's Magazine which we publish this day, may afford amusement and instruction to many of our readers. The remainder will be given next week.

During the last week the weather has been very cold—a great deal of Snow has fallen, and the Sleighing is excellent.

Upper Canada Gazette.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1827.

BY AUTHORITY.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.

JOHN B. ROBINSON, Attorney General.

D. CAMERON, Secretary.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. JOHN LARGE, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said JOHN LARGE for the discovery of the offender—Now Know Ye That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime.

Given under my hand &c.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and secured to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.

Executive Council Office, }
York, 23rd March, 1826 }

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENAT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.

No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

NEWS BOY'S ADDRESS TO HIS PATRONS, 1827.

ANOTHER Year—Old Time with rapid flight,
Consigns to shades, of everlasting night;
And to replace it ever bounteous Heaven,
Has sent us, Eighteen hundred, twenty seven.

When friends and neighbours on this happy day,
Their kindest greetings to each other pay,
When sorrow now, to happiness gives place,
And smiling joy, is seen in every face,
When all partake the hospitable cheer,
Which, with kind welcome ushers in the year:
I too my Patrons, fain would join the throng,
And claim attention to my humble song;
For ancient custom bids me to rehearse,
My Annual greetings, in the garb of verse.
The task my Muse would shun, but well she knows,
Her gen'rous friends will kindly interpose,
Safe from the Critics lash, her faults will screen,
And cause her beauties only, to be seen.
Assur'd of this, to distant lands she flies
To note their manners, living as they rise.

Hail; happy ALBION—highly favor'd Isle,
May Heav'n in mercy, still with fav'ring smile,
Behold the place of Liberty's abode,
Within whose bounds, a Slave has never trode,
Preserve thee still, from all the ills of fate,
Direct thy Councils, and regard the State;
May Truth and Justice, still preserve their sway,
And Faith, and Honor suffer no decay.

Hail; happy Land, where blooms the beauteous Rose,
And thou too SCOTIA, where the Thistle blows;
Hail; to the EMERALD ISLE, where fresh is seen
The land adorn'd, with Shamrock, living green;
Long may the emblem buds, in love entwine,
Their beauties mingle, and their graces join,
Round GEORGE'S Crown, a living Wreath compose,
And safe preserve his Throne, from all its foes.

But here forbid by Time, a longer stay,
To the bright fields of FRANCE, I lead the way—
Where now the Peasant, plies his peaceful toil,
And draws abundance, from the fertile soil;
A rightful Monarch, holds a peaceful reign,
And war's alarms, no more invade the plain.

Hark! "preparations note" throughout the North,
The RUSSIAN Monarch calls his Armies forth:
His hordes obey, obedient at command,
To drive the PERSIAN from their native land.

The mind reverts, with sorrow and with pain,
To the once pow'rful, now degraded SPAIN;
The pride of former days, she feels no more,
And Peace affrighted, flies the fatal shore,
Where discord fell, usurps its baneful sway,
And leads the land, to ruin and decay;
And yet, Oh! Spain, the thoughts of thee conspire,
To fill the breast, with patriotic fire:
'Twas on thy Fields, that British valor found,
The freshest, greenest laurels to abound,
And with unfading wreaths her Hero's crown'd.

The Eastern Monarch, of "The Golden feet,"
Had long essay'd, by treach'ry and deceit,
To 'scape the punishment so justly due,
To crimes and vices of the blackest hue:
But soon discovered are his devious ways,
And for his treachery he dearly pays.

The Muse now lingers on the GRECIAN shore,
Justly renown'd of old, for classic lore—
Where now her Heroes, lift the Cross on high,
Nobly resolv'd, to conquer or to die;
A patriot band, united in the cause,
Of Country—Liberty—Religion—Laws:
With these determin'd, or to stand, or fail,
A willing sacrifice they make of all,
Fortune and Life, are thought but trif'ling gain,
If silver'd o'er, by Slavery's abject chain;
And here the Muse, in pity fain would tell,
The cruel fate, which Scio's Sons befell,
Delightful Isle!—her Heroes are no more,
And now her sands, are crimson'd with their gore,
Her beauteous Daughters, weep their Lovers slain,
And Anguish reeds, the Mothers heart with pain,
The barb'rous TURK, nor age, nor sex has spared,
But in one gen'ral ruin, all have shared;
Fair Scio's fate—MISS'LONGIS blood stained walls,
Loudly for vengeance, on th' oppressor calls—
Nor vain the call—the GREEKS, united stand,
To drive th' oppressor from their native land.

Time Homeward now, a quick return commands,
And bids me cease to roam, through Foreign lands,
Nor unwilling, the command obey,
But with permission will a moment stay,
Will take a hasty glance—and let you see,
What's doing in the Land of Liberty;
Assembly men, and Senators have met,
And now in Legislative halls are set,
Important matters there, are long debated,
Arguments both pro-et-con, are stated—
Explained—re-stated—and explain'd again
And further explanations, still remain,
"Debates Continued," will the papers fill,
Repeated arguments, repeated still,
The readers patience, fairly put to test,
Who reads but half—and guesses at the rest—
For 'en Debates, are like some well known tale,
Which oft repeated, will at last grow stale.

At HOME, a cheering prospect meets the sight,
Which all behold, with pleasure and delight:
Few years have pass'd, since first this distant land,
A refuge offer'd to that Loyal band,
Who when Rebellion, urg'd imperious sway,
Refus'd its lawless dictates to obey,
But stood United, to their Sovereign's cause,
And gain'd the meed, of well deserv'd applause,
They from their native fields, compell'd to roam,
Found in Canadian Wilds, another home:
But now, where late the tow'ring Forest frown'd,
Industrious labor, is with plenty crown'd,
The Lakes smooth bosom, which but lately bore,
The Indians frail Canoe from shore to shore,
Now sees the stately Ship, in all its pride,
Majestic sailing on the silver tide;
And on its margin, where the Wigwam stood,
Deep in the shade of some embowring wood—
Towns—Hamlets—Villages, are seen around,
And Commerce with its busy train is found.
Thrice happy Country, 'neath a Parents care,
The choicest blessings, it is thine to share:
That bounteous Parent, who with lib'ral hand,
Abundance scatters, through this favor'd land:
What though Atlantics, angry billows roar,
And far divide us, BRITAIN, from thy shore,
The voice of gratitude, shall still be heard,
For all thy benefits on us conferr'd.

Throughout the Year that's past, we've labor'd hard,
With varying news, to merit your reward;
With season'd wit, the Epicure we've fed,
And to "The Markets" have the "Merchant" led—
The "Corn Laws," to the "Farmer" we explain,
And give "the price" of every kind of "Grain,"
The "Politician," here and there will find,
Enough of "Foreign News", to suit his mind:
Our "Poet's Corner," and our "Miscellaneous,"
Has been made up, of odds and ends most various:
"Houses" and "Lands for Sale," and "Merchandise,"
And "Sales at Auction" too, we advertise.
Our Weekly Bill of Fare, is so selected,
That none, we hope, have found their tastes neglected.

And now my Friends, to close the humble lay,
With which I greet you, on this happy day:
May you and yours, for many years enjoy
Continued happiness, without alloy;
May you the bounties of kind Heaven share,
Be bless'd with wealth—and still have some to spare,
This my kind Patrons—is the fervent prayer,

Of your most Obedient,
and very humble Servant,
THE NEWS BOY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

Letter from an Old Member of the Lower, to an Old Member of the Upper House of Parliament.

With these our unfortunate party never enjoyed much favour, chiefly, I suspect, because we mistook the way to obtain it. At the very outset, I was afraid we should forfeit it, by the Coalition which I joined your Lordship in supporting. We professed, indeed, that the measures had been adopted, solely for the public interest, which then required a strong administration; and we defended the India Bill, its immediate offspring, on a similar plea of the strong corrective which the misgovernment of the Company had rendered necessary. But the Business men suspected something wrong. They sifted both of these measures with their usual severity. They looked the arguments on either side fairly in the face, stripped them of all but their real merits: and, having weighed them by these, they came to the conclusion that we had a design of giving to our own party a preponderance, which should virtually suspend the power of the King to choose his servants from any other. They, doubtless, wished that such a conspiracy against the constitution could have been foiled in a more constitutional manner, than that of acting on the supposition (as was done by Pitt), that the will of the nation had been contradicted by its representatives. But we had unwisely placed the people in a dilemma, which allowed them a choice only between two breaches of the Constitution; and the Business men were at no loss to perceive, and to prefer the least. Thinking the occasion of sufficient moment to call for their exertions, they sent up addresses, confirming the supposition on which our opponents had acted; and our precious experiment ended in attaching these men strongly to Ministers of their own selection.

Having thus begun with alienating their affection, we lost many subsequent opportunities of repairing, or at least of not repeating, our error. One cause of this was the personal anger of our leaders at Pitt, for the manner in which they had been superseded: and their determination to resist all his measures, though many of them could have no other possible motive, than a desire to advance the public good. During the discussions occasioned by the King's illness, in 1788, we took ground which startled me at the time, and, notwithstanding the ability of those who chose it, I have ever since been of opinion that the choice was wrong. Our project to supply the defect of the Legislature, by enlarging the right of hereditary succession, and circumscribing that of the national council, to the Lords in a case left undecided by the constitution, betrayed such obvious scorn of the prime and paramount doctrine of Whigs, that it appeared to me like a public renunciation of all pretensions to sincerity, and a sacrifice of character, as gratuitous as it was great, since we had no prospect of obtaining any thing in return.

In 1790, we were by far too precipitate and peremptory in cheering the French Revolution. We expected, I suppose, to seduce Pitt into a condemnation, or, at least, into cool terms in praise of its principals, and thus to ruin him, and root ourselves, in the favour of numbers of our countrymen, by whom these principles had been suddenly and furiously embraced. But alas! it was only the vain, superficial, or factious, who so prematurely expressed their opinion of changes, which no one, at all acquainted with human nature, or its history, could possibly suppose to be terminated. The Business men, like the Ministers, discerned, in the domination of the Parisian mob, something which induced them to reserve their judgment, till they should see what course that reinless and brainless body would pursue, and our boyish forwardness in not only forming, but proclaiming ours, must have rather sunk, than exalted us in their estimation.

In 1792, I never could rid myself of an impression, that the name of Whigs, to which we laid exclusive claim, required our support of the plan of going to war, though Pitt was its author. A steady characteristic of the old Whig party, was jealousy of the pretension of France to political predominance; and I could not comprehend why her change of government should relax that jealousy, or why we should bear an insult from a Revolutionary Cabinet, which we certainly would not have borne from a Regal one. The Business men took a plain and straight-forward view of the case. They saw war rendered necessary, not so much to repel the petty provocation of opening the Scheldt, and inviting rebellion in neutral states, as to settle, once more, the great question which France had always brought forward in the flush of success, whether the two countries were to continue on a footing, at least, of equal independance, or whether we were, at last, to yield to France the right to act towards other nations, as she would not permit them to act towards her—a concession tantamount to an acknowledgment of supremacy, and, consequently, involving every direct concession she might afterwards be pleased to require. They saw that, after her victory at Jemappe, she calculated her physical force to be sufficient for compelling universal submission; and they knew, as an obvious inference, that physical force was the only means of correcting her miscalculation. They wasted not a thought on the diplomatic subtleties, and hair-splitting distinctions, which employed the time and eloquence of Parliament, but reduced the matter at once to the brief conclusion, that the pesty aggressions of France could be interpreted into nothing else than a challange to a trial of strength, and that we must either accept it, or surrender our political blessings, and the personal enjoyments which flow from them. War therefore, war without end, till these should be out of danger, was, on their part, an easy, because a necessary, choice. In this decision they were joined by the Majority of the Coalition party, who left us, like its pitiful remp, to bear the accusation of opposing a self-defensive war, and the suspicion of endeavouring to obstruct its success. We still, however, retained the shouts of Palace Yard, and the buttered eulogies of tavern banquets; and with this pittance of popularity we were obliged to console ourselves; though we soothed ourselves also with the hope that time would prove the wisdom of our pacific councils. Alas! Time has proved the very reverse; for I doubt if there be, at present, a single Briton who would exchange the pecuniary burdens laid upon us by the war, for the state of feverish solicitude, uncertainty, and danger, in which we should now have stood, had either the Republican or Imperial Government continued permanent in France, with all their terrific power, and menacing ambition.

MESSAGE from His EXCELLNCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, with an Extract from His Majesty's Government relative to Aliens.

P. MAITLAND,

The LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, thinks proper to Communicate to the Common House of Assembly an Extract from a Despatch from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, which accompanied an Act of the Imperial Parliament, recently published by Authority in this Province, intituled, "An Act to amend "so much of an Act of the Thirty-first "Year of His late Majesty, as relates to "the Election of Members to serve in the "Legislative Assembly of the Province of "Upper Canada."

The LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR avails himself of the earliest moment of laying this Dispatch before the House of Assembly, in order that a full knowledge of the sentiments of His Majesty's Government, may precede any discussion upon the important matter to which it relates.

Government House,
December, 1826.

EXTRACT.

Downing-Street.
August 21, 1826.

SIR,

I have the honor herewith to trasmit to you an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament intituled,

"An Act to amend so much of an Act "of the Thirty-first Year of His late "Majesty, as relates to the Election of "Members to serve in the Legislative "Assembly of the Province of Upper "Canada."

You will perceive that by this Statute Parliament has enable Persons, naturalized by any Act of Assembly in Upper Canada, to sit in either House of the Provincial Legislature, and to vote for Members of the Assembly. His Majesty's Government proposed to Parliament this measure in the confident expectation that it would effectually allay the dissentions which have recently been excited in the Province on this subject.

But considering the great importance of this alteration of the Law, and fully aware of the delicacy of the questions to which it might possibly give occassion, they deemed it right to qualify the Proposal, by suggesting the Provision which requires that every Naturalization Bill should be suspended for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure.

Under these circumstances it appears highly necessary that you should be apprized of the conditions on which His Majesty's Government will be disposed to admit Aliens in Upper Canada to all the Privileges of Natural Born Subjects.

I am very unwilling that any misconception on this subject should impose on His Majesty the necessity of disallowing any Bill which the Assembly might pass.

You will therefore understand that it will not be possible to assent to any Acts declaratory of the general Rule of Law, which appears to have been contended for, The Subjects of the United States of America, whether born before or after the Treaty of Peace of 1783, are Aliens; and must, in point of Law, be regarded in that character.

Neither will His Majesty confirm any Act for establishing any General Rule for the Naturalization of Aliens who may hereafter repair to the Province. The Statute 13 Geo. 2 Cap.] has already regulated the manner in which such Persons may acquire the Privileges of English birth; and if those regulations require revision it will be the office of Parliament to review and alter them.

The only measures to which His Majesty's Government are at present prepared to assent are retrospective; and such as are requisite to relieve the actual Inhabitants of the Province from the difficulties in which, from mere inadvertence, they have been involved. It will be fit, therefore, that the enactments of the Provincial Legislature should be confined to the case of those Persons who had their domicile and settled place of abode in Upper Canada, at the time of the passing of this Act of Parliament.

Those Persons may be divided into two Classes. First—Such as had had their settled domicile in the Province for Seven Years previously to the passing of this Act. And Secondly—Those who were at that time bona fide domiciled, but without having completed a residence of Seven Years. The first of these Classes might properly be invested at once with the character of Naturalized subjects. The second Class should not be admitted to that privilege until the Term of Seven Years' residence was complete. In either case it will be necessary that the person to be Naturalized should first take the Oath of Allegiance. For that purpose some proper persons should be authorized to Administer it; and they should be sufficiently numerous, and so distributed over the country, as to render the attendance upon them convenient to the Parties by whom the Oath is to be taken.

Some method must be devised for keeping an accurate Registry of the Persons thus admitted to the Privileges of Naturalization; and that Registry should contain every particular necessary for identifying the Parties. A reasonable period should be fixed, after which the Oath is not to be Administered. The Act by which Aliens are admitted to these Privileges, should distinctly declare, that the acceptance of Naturalization would be deemed a Renunciation of Allegiance to any Foreign State or Power.

The Provisions for carrying these purposes into effect should form the subject of a distinct Act, which should if possible be unincumbered with any question respecting the descent and Alienation of Lands formerly held by deceased Aliens who lived in the Province under the mistaken supposition that they were entitled to the Privileges of English birth. It is manifest that this latter subject will give birth to questions of great difficulty; and I am not prepared to say how far His Majesty's Government would be disposed to confirm any Act which might be passed for the relief of Persons claiming by Descent or Purchase from such Aliens. That question, however, may very properly be left in the first instance to the consideration of the two Branches of the Provincial Legislature, with the assurance that His Majesty will not be indisposed to relieve those who have been the innocent sufferers from the prevailing misconception on this subject, if any just and practicable method can be devised for that purpose.

I have the honor to be,
SIR,
Your most Obedient,
Humble Servant,

SIR,

I have laid before the King the Address of the Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada on the subject of the Administration of Justice, and stating the inconvenience they conceive to result from the Appointment of the Chief Justice as a Member of the Executive Council.

I have received His Majesty's Commands to acquaint you that it is highly expedient that the Governor should have the advice and assistance of the first Law Authority of the Province for his guidance in the Administration of his Government; that the greatest advantage has been derived throughout the Colonies from this assistance, and that it does not appear that there is any thing peculiar in the state of the Province of Upper Canada, which should make it advisable that this system should be changed.

I have the Honor to be,

SIR, 9, June, 1826.

I have received and laid before the King the Address of the Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, praying that the Bounty of Land may be extendedin favor of persons who were connected with the Convention of 1818, and I have to acquaint you that His Majesty has been graciously pleased to give directions that the Grants which it was His Majesty's pleasure, should be given to those who had manifested their Loyalty during the late War, should not be withheld from those individuals who had been deluded by factious persons to attend to the Convention of 1818, as soon as they shall severally assure you of their deep contrition for having belonged to an Assembly, the meeting of which it was the unanimous opinion of the House of Assembly in 1818, was highly derogatory and repugnant to the spirit of the Constitution of the Province, and tended greatly to disturb the Public tranquility.

SIR,

I have laid before the King the Address of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, praying that His Majesty would be graciously pleased to promote the Settlement of the Province, by affording encouragement to Emigration from the United States of America. I am commanded to acquaint you that His Majesty will be always ready to give any encouragement to the cultivation and improvement of the waste Lands in Upper Canada, but he is so assured of the Loyalty of the Inhabitants of that Province, and of their paramount attachment to Great Britain that, he is convinced the House of Assembly would see with extreme regret the adoption of any system which could interfere with the measures now in contemplation for the encouragement of Emigration from his United Kingdom to Upper Canada.

Downing Street,

SIR,

I have laid before the King the Address of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada, praying that His Majesty would be graciously pleased to submit to Parliament the propriety of repealing so much of the Act of 6th Geo. 4 Cap. , as permits the appropriation of Lands in lieu of the Clergy Reserves. I have received His Majesty's commands to acquaint you that he is persuaded the House of Assembly would never have concurred in this Address, if they had been apprized of the true intent of the Act of Parliament referred to, which had not for its object any increase of the amount of the Reserves, specially allotted by the Imperial Parliament for the Established Church.

Answer to Address on Hardy's Petition.

Downing Street, }
12th June, 1826. }

Sir,

I have received and laid before the King the Address of the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada, praying that His Majesty would be graciously pleased to direct the name of Mr. John Hardy to be restored to the United Empire List of that Province. His Majesty is convinced that the House of Assembly would never have concurred in this Address, if they had been aware that Mr. Hardy had been in the service of the Rebels and actually engaged in the invasion of Canada during the Rebellion, that he was taken prisoner in Canada during that War, and then entered the 84th Regiment; he cannot, therefore, be included in the United Empire List, exclusively consisting of those who were honorably distinguished for undeviating and uncompromising Loyalty to the utter loss of their private fortunes, and had special advantages secured to them for this sacrifice, and for their services during the war. Nevertheless, as he appears to have served with fidelity, after having once enlisted in His Majesty's Service, he is fully allowed to enjoy all the advantages granted to those who served during that war, as if he had enlisted in England, but he cannot be restored to the United Empire List, for which his preceding conduct has disqualified him.

I have the honor to be,

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

Friday, Dec 29, 1826.

THE INTESTATE BILL was read a third time, passed and sent to the Legislative Council.

A MESSAGE was received from the Legislative Council, acquainting the House that they had concurred in the Street Surveyor's Bill.

THE WHIPPING AND PILLORY ABOLITION BILL was read a third time, and sent to the Legislative Council.

Sundry Petitions were brought up and read.

Mr. Rolph moved an Address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, praying for information respecting the agreement between His Majesty's Government, and the Canada Land Company, and other information connected with the subject.--Carried. Adjourned.

Saturday, Dec. 30.

Sundry Petitions were brought up.

Major Hillier delived a Message from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with a Report made by the Executive Council, relative to the compensation to be awarded to Mr. Clowes of a Survey of the River St. Lawrence.

On motion made by Mr. J. Jones, 500 Copies were ordered to be printed.

THE MILL DAM BILL--2d Reading.

The Bill was reported and leave given to sit again.

The Attorney General gave notice that he should move the House to resolve into a Committee of the whole on Supply on Tuesday next. Adjourned to Tuesday.

Tuesday, January 2, 1827.

Petitions brought up.

The Speaker informed the House that he had received a letter from Mr. Galt, accompanied with a Map of the Province, presented by the Canada Land Company, for the use of the Library.

The Petition of the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company was read--it prays that the Government may be authorised to take Stock to the amount of £20,000--the loan of £25,000 of last year being considered a part, with the right of appointing two Directors--and for some amendments in the Act of Incorporation.

The Attorney General moved its being referred to a Committee of the whole to-morrow.

Mr. Hamilton expressed his unwillingness to vote so large a sum to the Canal as was prayed for--he had never been sanguine of the success of the undertaking--the present movements should be narrowly looked after.

Mr. Gordon replied and said that if the measure being referred to a Committee of the whole, could be construed as any pledge on the part of the House to adopt any particular course, he should vote against it--not seeing it in this light he should support it--the Directors and all concerned had done their duty the matter was important and should be heard.

The Petition was referred, agreeable to the Attorney General's motion.

Mr. Atkinson of the Committee to whom was referred the Petition of John R. Glover and others, reported by Bill incorporating "The Cataraqui Bridge Company"--Read a first time. The Bill is to be printed for use of Members before 2d Reading. Adjourned.

Wednesday, Jan. 3.

MARRIAGE BILL, House in Committee on the Bill.

Mr. Bidwell proposed amendments giving authority to Ministers of all Denominations to solemnize Marriage, on registering their names and place of abode in the Office of the Clerk of the Peace--and requiring all Clergymen to comply with this condition.

The Attorney General said by the provisions of the Bill as proposed to be amended the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, if he came into this Province to morrow could not solemnize Marriage--the measure proposed he considered could not by reason and communication--he saw no necessity of Legislating to provide remedies for those, who did not labor under disabilities--it never had been denied that Ministers of the Church of England, could solemnize Marriage in any British Colony, and yet this Bill would require them to have been resident in the Province a certain period before they could exercise a right, which had never yet been questioned--he had on previous occasions avowed his willingness to extend the right to settled and stationary Ministers of other Churches with fixed Congregations, but the general terms in which the present measure was attempted, would compel him to dissent from it.

Mr. Bidwell had urged this measure on the consideration of the House in previous sessions--he considered it as the cause of truth, and that it would at last prevail--the only objection he had now heard was that the Church of England was included in its provisions, and he was happy that that point had been brought to issue--it was the subject which might better create great controversy, and should not be deferred, but be settled at once by argument and investigation---he thought that Religion had never gained any thing by an Established Church in any Country--he did not consider that there was any Established Church in this Country, and he never wished to see one---he never wished to see that a dominant Church which consisted of the smallest part of the population---it was contrary to Justice--and Legislation-- bill, in the first instance, themselves. At all events, if they can do so, without any infringement of our privileges, they can yet do it, and after trial is made here, they will be better judges of the necessity and propriety of the measure.

Again, had the Imperial Parliament Legislated finally upon the Alien Question, it must have been upon the principle and according to the instructions sent out by Lord Bathurst to the Lieut. Governor.—Would such a Bill give satisfaction to the obstinate in error?—Would it not have in fact, afforded them some shadow of pretext for their clamour against our Provincial Executive? Would they not say that such course was pursued through the influence of the enemies of the Aliens in this Province? Would they not call it an Act of arbitrary power? They would say so, and a great deal more.

Now, Sir, as on the one hand every appearance of cause of complaint is removed, by referring the final settlement of this question to our own Legislature, so, on the other, an opportunity is afforded of shewing the Aliens that such a bill as is contemplated in the King's instructions, is absolutely necessary to secure their civil rights, and to give to themselves and their descendants the privileges of British birth, by incorporating them, and identifying them in all respects, with natural born subjects of the greatest, and most generous nation in the world. Hence a law passed under the immediate eye of the Aliens themselves, and with their own general and hearty concurrence, and in our own Provincial Legislature, must give them more satisfaction than a law, though equally good passed in England, could or would do.

I am, therefore, led to think, that the course now pursued for the naturalization of the Aliens is most constitutional—is the wisest and the best. The excitement which the agitation of this question at first caused, has, in a great measure, past away—the matter is now well understood, an I should not the present Assembly do the Aliens justice, another may.

It was my intention to make some remarks upon Mr. Rolph's curious bill, in order to shew how inadequate it is to the intended purpose; but perceiving that it has passed out of his hands, and hoping that something better will be done for the Aliens than that manifestly defective and imperfect bill could do for them, I at present forbear.

STEPSURE.

December, 1826.

AT a Meeting of the Inhabitants of the District of Gore, convened by Public Notice, on Thursday the 14th Dec. 1826, for the purpose of taking into consideration the condition of the Gaol and Court House, and situation of the County Town of said District, Colonel Simons being unanimously called to the Chair, and James Hamilton, Esq'r. Secretary, the following Resolutions were proposed and carried:—

1. Resolved, that this Meeting look upon it as a matter involving the most essential interests of the District at large, that the County Town should be in the most central situation.

2. Resolved, that it is the opinion of this Meeting, the Sum of Three Thousand Pounds is adequate for all purposes, in erecting public buildings for this District, of the most substantial and commodious nature, and that with due attention to economy even a less sum may suffice.

3. Resolved, that this Meeting look with confidence, that the warmest support will be given by the Members for this District, to a measure of the most vital importance to their future prosperity.

4. Resolved that the want of a Gaol and Court House, sufficient for the purposes of the District, is much felt; and the obvious necessity of such buildings induce the confident hope in this Meeting, that the Honorable the Legislature, in taking their Petition into consideration, will not overlook the necessity of a speedy relief, to those grievances under which we labor.

5. Resolved, that the want of Magistrates in the newly settled Townships, in a great measure exclude their having a voice in the management of the local concerns of the District, thereby giving the ascendancy to the older settlements, forming but a small proportion either in population or extent.

6. Resolved, That moreover the great distance the Magistrates, living in the Northern and Western Division, have to travel, often preclude the possibility of their attendance upon their public duties, in consequence, leaving it to a few congregated round the present County Town.

7. Resolved, that at the Quarter Sessions, held for this District in July last, a majority of the Magistrates then present were against the erection of Public Buildings, till the voice of the Legislature could be known, that equal justice might be done to all, and the welfare of one of the most important Sections of the Province be consulted.

8. Resolved, that this Meeting cannot but deprecate in the strongest manner, the conduct of certain Magsitrates, who, while a very large majority of the inhabitants of this District are in favor of the removal of the County Town, should take upon themselves to make contracts, & expend the Resources of the Treasury, in laying out buildings in the Town of Hamilton, thereby frustrating the decision of the Legislature, and as if by force, entailing a lasting evil upon the District.

9. Resolved, that the appointment of Commissioners (or such other mode as the Legislature in their wisdom may adopt) appears to this Meeting at once just and equitable, the more so as by such a Commission any undue influence will be prevented.

10. Resolved, that a copy of the Resolutions and Petition adopted by this Meeting, be sent to each of our Representatives in the House of Assembly, and to the Hon. Thomas Clark and the Hon. William Dickson, Members of the Legislative Council, with a request that they will forward the views of the Meeting as expressed in the foregoing Resolutions, and to give it their warmest support.

11. Resolved that the Petition be forwarded to our Member of the House of Assembly, Wm. Scollick, Esq. and by him presented, being first Signed on behalf of the Meeting by the Chairman and Secretary.

12. Resolved that a Committee of the following persons be appointed to Draft a Petition on the foregoing Resolutions, viz. Colonel Simons, James Crooks, Matthew Crooks, John Ross, and James Hamilton, Esquires.

13. Resolved, that the Committee appointed to Draft the Petition be requested to give their attendance upon the House, during the passing of the same.

(Signed) T. G. SIMONS,
Chairman.
JAMES HAMILTON,
Secretary.

14. Resolved, that the thanks of this Meeting be given to Colonel Simons, for his able and impartial conduct in the Chair, and to James Hamilton, Esquire, for his able assistance as Secretary to the same.

(Signed) MANUEL OVERFIELD,
Chairman,
(Signed) ALEX'R. ROBERTSON,
Secretary.

AT a Meeting of the Inhabitants of the Village of Dundass, convened by Public Notice, at George Jones's Hotel, the 29th December, 1826, for the purpose of taking into consideration, the condition of the Gaol and Court House, and situation of the County Town of said District—Manuel Overfield, Esquire, one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, being unanimously called to the Chair, and Joseph Webster, Esq. Secretary, the following Resolutions were proposed and carried:—

1. Resolved, that this Meeting look upon it as a matter involving the most essential interests of the District at large, that the County Town should be restored to its original site.

2. Resolved, That the want of a Gaol and Court House, sufficient for the purposes of the District, is much felt; and the obvious necessity of such Buildings, induce the confident hope in this Meeting, that the Honorable the Legislature, in taking their Petition into consideration, will not overlook the necessity of a Grant of Money sufficient for the work.

3. Resolved, that it appears to this Meeting, Contracts for erecting a new Gaol and Court House in Hamilton, have been prematurely entered into, without the sanction of the Legislature.

4. Resolved, that it appears to this Meeting that Nature has pointed out this place for the future Emporium of the Western country, and as most suitable for uniting the waters of Lake Huron with those of Ontario, by the Desjardin Canal.

5. Resolved, that the Petition submitted to the Meeting by the Chairman, be adopted, and transmitted to both Houses of the Legislature.

MANUEL OVERFIELD, Chairman,
JOSEPH WEBSTER, Secretary.

To the Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Paliament assembled.

The Petition of the undersigned,

MOST HUMBLY SHEWETH,

That the Village of Coot's Paradise was selected as the County Town by a former Governor in person, at a very early day; and is now rapidly becoming a large and populous place.

The Town having been established by a former Governor in person, and all the Location Tickets from the Governor and Council being granted upon the express condition of building Houses, makes it bear hard upon its Inhabitants, who have complied with the tenor of their Grants, to be deprived of the right of its being the County Town: particularly as the faith of Government appeared pledged by the reservation of Lands for a Gaol and Court House, for holding Fairs and Markets, and for the erection of Churches for Public Worship.

Your Petitioners beg leave to draw the attention of Your Honorable House to the advantages to be derived to the inhabitants of the District in general, by restoring the County Town to its original site, from whence it has been improvidently taken and placed in a remote corner of the District, as will appear more fully by the annexed Map of the District, together with a statement of the population of each Township, whereby it fully appears that the removal to Hamilton is prejudicial to the general interest of its inhabitants: and more particularly striking when taking into consideration the settlement of the Townships of Nassagaweye, Erin, Esquesing, Eramosa, and Beverly, at present but thinly inhabited: and the Lands laid open for settlement by the Canada Land Company.

The late Lieutenant Governor Simcoe, with his usual accurate judgment, foresaw the advantages this place presented, in a commercial point of view, over all others in its immediate vicinity; from its being the head of the water communication, and the general depot for shipping the growth of the Upper part of the Country, as also a great part of the Western District.

And when next Spring the Desjardin's Canal shall be put into operation, it will bring shipping into the centre of the Village, and facilitate the transporting of the produce of this fertile section of the Country to all Foreign Markets.

These advantages, together with its being the place where all the main Post roads centre, from Niagara, York, Oxford, Long Point, Talbot Settlement, and the Western District, evidently shews to your Honorable House the great advantages resulting to the public from its being established the County Town, as was originally intended by His Majesty's Government of Upper Canada.

Therefore, your Petitioners most humbly Pray, that your Honorable House will take into your most serious consideration, the Prayer of your Petitioners: doing therein what to your Honorable House shall appear to be for the true advancement of the general welfare of the present and future inhabitants of the District.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

THE following Lots of Land, situated in the Township of Hamilton, District of New-Castle, are offered for Sale, on moderate terms:

HIS EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR has been pleased to grant Licences to Thomas Moore and Andrew VanDyck, Gentlemen, to practice Physic, Surgery, and Midwifery, within this Province.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND K. C. B. LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. JOHN LARGE, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said JOHN LARGE for the discovery of the offender—NOW KNOW YE That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime.

Given under my hand &c.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and retained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province-of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. Executive Council Office, }

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.
No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

FOR THE U. E. LOYALIST.

Paraphrase on Job xxxix, 19, &c.

Hast thou endowed the horse with strength, or cloth'd
His neck with thunder? Canst thou make him fear
Before thee as a trembling worm, or lick
The dust because thou dost command? Lo! from His glowing nostrils terror streams amain!
The valley trembles as he paws the ground,
Rejoicing in his strength, and on he goes
To meet the armed men. He mocks at fear,
Nor turns he back before the glittering sword.
The quiver rattles,—and he bears in scorn;
The spear and shield are stubble in his eye.
He spurns the ground in rage, nor yet believes
The hostile trumpet can awaken fear:
Ha! ha! he saith, is this the trumpets' voice?
He smells the distant fight—terrific joy
Beams from his eye, and swells his gladdened heart;
And, like the wind, he hastes to mingle in
The thunder of the captains and the shouting.

ERIUS.

REPORT,

Of the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company, to the Stockholders.

The President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company, in submitting to the Stockholders a Report of the progress of the work under their superintendance, do not deem it necessary to enter into an exposition of the causes which led to the undertaking, or the advantages expected from its completion. These have been already in various shapes before the public, and their desire is now to afford such general informat on, in regard to the actual state of the Canal, and the affairs of the Company, as the Stockholders will naturally require, and the public, by whose countenance it has been materially aided, have a right to expect.

To enable themselves to judge more satisfactorily, the Directors have frequently inspected the whole line of the Canal, and in addition to such remarks as it occurs to them to afford, they have subjoined the last Report of Mr. Thomas, the principal Engineer, who has had much experience in similar operations; and this Report as it proceeds from a gentleman of established character for integrity, judgment and science, can scarcely fail to be received as a document entituled to the fullest credit.

The present Directors were chosen in April last, when great preparations had already been made for conducting the work during the season which had then commenced; it was consequently left to them either to prosecute the undertaking with the utmost vigor, which the means within their reach would admit of, or by contracting the intended scale of operations to disappoint public expectation, and increase the apprehensions of all, who had appeared to doubt of the completion of the Canal. Such a course would also have brought upon the Contractors the perplexity and confusion which must have followed such a step, after they had prepared to proceed with dispatch; and upon the Company the disadvantage, not easily estimated, of pursuing the least economical method for carrying so great an undertaking to its completion.

Whether the event shall prove that they have done right or wrong, they did not hesitate in their decision; and although the measures they have adopted in consequence have been attended with no little responsibility, and presented serious difficulties, they have persevered to this point, and they are happy to think successfully, without restraining the exertions of the Contractors, from giving way to doubts either as to the result, or as to the possibility of finding means to meet so rapid and considerable an expenditure. The Directors are confident, that if resources are at hand to resume the work during the next season in the same spirit, it will at the conclusion, be apparent to the Company that economy, has been best consulted by the extraordinary exertion which has completed so large a portion within the present year.

After the public discussions which have taken place relative to the affairs and proceedings of the Company, it is to be presumed that it must be generally known to the Stockholders and to others, that of the £300,000, the amount of Stock authorized to be held by the Welland Canal Company, only one half, or £100,000, was actually subscribed when the Legislature in their last Session authorized the advance, by way of loan, of £25,000 in aid of the undertaking. The case is the same at present.—When it was determined upon the suggestion of the principal Stockholders that a Canal upon an enlarged scale, so as to admit of navigation by Schooners, would be much to be preferred both on the ground of utility to the public and profit to the Company, the Legislature was necessarily applied to for authority to increase the amount of Stock in order to meet the great additional cost.

The design appeared to be approved of in every quarter, and as soon as the requisite authority was obtained, those who had then the direction of the Company's affairs were eager to pursue, with the least possible delay, an undertaking which had now acquired so great additional interest and importance. It having been thought expedient to increase the number of Directors, Mr. Simon McGillivray and Mr. Irvine were added by Act of the Legislature to those who had been chosen for the year then current. Mr. McGillivray was at that time in this Province and had the opportunity of consulting with the other members of the Board: the Stockholders resident in New York had communicated their opinions very freely in regard to the interests of the Company, and with a liberality of conduct which has marked their proceeds in every step, had expressed their entire confidence in the propriety of whatever measures should be resolved upon. There cannot therefore be the slightest reason to question that the resolution which was then taken, immediately after the Act had passed, enlarging the Stock and materially changing the character of the undertaking, was one which appeared to the Directors to promise the most substantial benefits in every point of view.

It was thought that the practicability of connecting our great inland waters by a most convenient navigation, and at a cost, moderate indeed when compared to the object, could be demonstrated to the entire satisfaction of our fellow subjects in England; and it was considered little doubtful that when the project could be made plainly to appear a safe and rational one, the same abundance of Capital and spirit of enterprise which were at that time leading to the formation of Companies, for objects comparively visionary, and of which many regarded improvements in Foreign Countries, could be easily enlist to the small extent required in aid of one of the greatest and most useful undertakings of modern times. Indulging this hope it was resolved to throw open no more than £100,000 for Subscription in these Provinces and the United States, and to reserve the remaining £100,000 to be subscribed in London. It was believed that through the intervention of Gentlemen who had commercial connexions and acquaintances in London, the project of the Welland Canal could be so favorably introduced as to meet that confidence which it was known to be entitled to here: that the small sum required would be immediately taken up, if the application were at all successful, was at least as probable, and it cannot be a matter of surprise that the Directors should feel a strong desire to associate British Capitalists in this Provincial undertaking, and thus make it the means of attracting the attention of persons who would have it so much in their power to promote the commercial interests of Upper Canada.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

Letter from an Old Member of the Lower, to an Old Member of the Upper House of Parliament.

(Concluded)

But the error of our party which I regretted most, because I saw it most distinctly and directly to be an error, was our conduct during the Mutiny of the Fleet. Had we acted a generous part at that appalling crisis, we might have covered the multitude of our sins; and our return to office, had it ever occurred, might have met with the approbation of the people, both from their gratitude for our succour in the hour of need, and from their impatience of taxation and disaster. How we lost this irrevocable opportunity, I need not remind your Lordship. Sheridan alone took advantage of it, and had he possessed more respectability of character, and more of the personal qualities requisite in a statesman, no recompense would have been deemed too great for his patriotic merits.

When we at length came into office, not called by the Country, but by the King, in his embarrassment, on the death of Pitt, I was apprehensive that our habitual and unqualified invectives against the plans of that minister, might tempt us, for a show of consistency, into the perilous experiment of changing them. We managed better, however, than I anticipated. We trod in the path of our predecessors. We increased the taxes; we made war with Prussia for the sake of Hanover, and though the Business men smiled at this practical recantation of our errors, yet, with their usual taciturnity they spared their taunts, and were glad to find our brief year of power pass away so harmlessly. I, too, was less dissatisfied on this, than on any other occasion; and though I considered our mode of opening a negociation to be a mighty silly affair, yet, as it helped us to repel the charge of blinking a measure, which we had constantly urged I, concurred in defending it.

During the Radical riots (as they are called) we seemed to repeat the error we had committed during the Mutiny. Our violent censures of the Ministry could not fail to encourage the turbulent, and to give us the appearance of being more desirous to exasperate, than to alleviate the evil. The sober part of the nation were then chiefly anxious for that protection from a maddened rabble, to which they were fairly entitled; but we most injudiciously threw our shield over their intimidators.

I was no better satisfied with the part we took, in the proceeding relating to the Queen. Her impurity was notorious; and the wish of the King to get rid of her, was exactly what every husband among ourselves would have felt in similar circumstances. Yet we strained all our power not only to disprove her guilt but to place her at the head of a Court, where consistency would have compelled our wives and daughters to pay her homage. This outrage against public morals, and consequently against public interest; this reckless and heartless sacrifice of domestic duties, and the prospect of domestic honour, for the sole purpose of political opposition, did not pass unobserved or uncondemned by the Business-men; so that in this, as in other instances, we laboured to injure our own estimation, and forfeited a fair and valuable, for a foul and worthless popularity.

Having enumerated a few specific measures, which I reluctantly supported, I wish to remind you of some general principles which I conceived to be highly prejudicial to the interest of our party. One was our arrogation by a certain style, and still more by a certain manner in which we indulged, of superiority, not in principle only, but also in talent, of a reputation for which men are still more jealous. Our exaggerated praise of all, even of the lawyers, physicians, poets, and artists, who professed themselves Whigs, was felt as an unfair depreciation of all who did not; and as a circuitous mode of charging the latter with dullness or excite the bitterest hatred against their authors; and especially in the Business men, who though far from aiming at a display of talent, like wise, I suspect, than others, to be reproached with the want of it. We had indeed managed so, that the name of Whig, to all but those who assume it, suggests the idea of a pert, self-sufficient being, filled with Pharisaical conceit, equally gratified with notice, which he ascribes to admiration or with neglect, which he imputes to fear; and completely choking up even at his exclusion from influence, because it reminds him of the comparative worthlessness of those to whose jealousy it is owing. If such be the character we have created for ourselves, if we indirectly call a majority of our intelligent countrymen fools or knaves, can we look at any loss to account for our unpopularity?

Another of our incurable imprudencies, was rashness in predicting the failure of ministerial measures, both in war and finance. This did us much discredit with the framers of political worth, who condemned us for taking ground, which could not fail to make us wish for disasters to our own Country; and with the admirers of political wisdom, who scorned our want of it, when these did not take place.

A third self-injuring practice was our keeping the Country in the dark, with respect to private negociations, some authentic, and treated with satisfactory decision. The various constitutions of France, for example, we never distinctly commended, yet we always repelled the objections brought against them. The conduct of Buonaparte was obviously in the most theoretical opposition to our professed principles, than that of any of the European sovereigns, who had only continued, but not created, a despotism; yet, while our invectives against the latter was unsparing and unceasing, we never missed an occasion of praising, and showing a political tenderness for the former. Our conduct towards the Radicals was characterized by a similar irresolution. We appeared unwilling either to agree or to disagree with them; and in spite of their scorn of abuse, we made love to them by various acts of kindness, so that many that were disposed to give us a decided support, and them as decided a resistance, we prevented from knowing if it were possible to do so by our apparent desire that no sharp line should be drawn between the views of the two parties. By this est of vacillation we lost, I suspect, some old adherents, and gained not a single new one.

Even during the present Session, we have added to the number of our follies, by persisting, in spite of the memorable rebuke administered by Canning, to take the whole credit of certain popular measures of our opponents. This, I fear, is thought somewhat childish; for all know that it is the natural and almost unavoidable business of Opposition to declaim against taxes, monopolies, and every thing by which the ministerial influence may be increased. In choosing these topics, therefore, we have merely been copying our predecessors, and without being a whit more successful; since all the late retrenchments and legislative changes have been made by Ministers according to plans of their own, and not, in a single instance, in conformity with our suggestions, either as to time or as to amount. If there be any sense and honesty in the Cabinet (where I suspect, there is as much as among ourselves), we have no just title to suppose but that these measures would have taken place though we had not existed.

Before closing my complaint, I must express the regret which I felt, that we should so frequently have allowed our opponents to excel us in apparent generosity, and high-minded disdain of retaliation, which are rare, and therefore popular, virtues in a statesman. On this head two instances shall suffice. Your Lordship must remember, that, very early in the war, Lord Liverpool (then Mr. Kenkinson), in speaking on the conduct of it, expressed a hope that the Allies might march to Paris; and you cannot have forgot how the wits of our party continued, till 1814, to ring the changes of their ridicule on this expression. You must, no doubt, also remember the unlucky exclamation in Fox's letter to his constituents, beginning, "Conquest of France! O calling to mind Cervantes," &c. Nor can you have forgot how frequently, and how exultingly this passage was appealed to, down to the year I have named; since which we have taken good care that it should never be quoted with many a cordial wish that it had never been written. Now, though by a singular concurrence Paris has been twice occupied, and France twice conquered, under the ministry of the same Lord Liverpool neither he, nor any of his colleagues, have stooped to gall us by any illusion to our inconsiderate sneers, or to the triumphant rebuke they have sustained. Would our friends, with a similar opportunity of revenge, have shown a similar forbearance from its infliction? The other instance relates to something more distressing. You will scarcely deny that the delicacy respect, and sorrow, either actually felt, or most decorously feigned, with which the death of Whitbread and Romilly were treated by the leader and writer of the opposite party, ought to imprint the deepest blushes on ours for the brutal ribaldry, and Satanic epigrams, which followed the death of Lord Londonderry. It may be true, that neither your Lordship nor I countenanced such things, or expressed no indignation at them nor declined the aid and alliance of their authors. Such a contrast of conduct, in a case which every heart could feel, and every head could understand, was marked to our hurt, and will be remembered to our shame.

I shall trouble your Lordship with no further details. Had I meant to continue in Parliament, I should probably not have thought of writing this letter; but should have gone on, from habit, suggesting nothing to the party, opposing no suggestion of others, and silently perhaps sullenly, acquiescing in proceedings of which I dreaded the result. From this unsatisfactory situation a few days will release me. The spell to which I have submitted for more than forty years, will be dissolved; and I shall be free to vent my regret for having sacrificed the time and tranquility of a life drawing near to its close, with so little profit to my country or to myself. There are others of our friends, who, convinced, would, with their hearts, though not perhaps with their hands, subscribe this Jeremiad: and if their minds are constituted at all like mine, they must feel no small solicitude about the character which our party (and consequently such of us who composed it) is likely to hold in the history of our country.

The twenty years embraced by the late war, will certainly be contemplated by posterity with intenser interest, than any equal period in the annals of mankind. The objects, the extent, and the fluctuations of the terific conflict, and the poetical justice of its decisive result, will address the imagination of the reader, with all the attractive force of an epic or dramatic tale; and should he be a Briton, he will be agitated with additional emotions, while conceiving what his progenitors must at that

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

Wednesday, Jan. 3.

MARRIAGE BILL—Continued from Page 254.

Mr. Rolph said that the remarks of the Hon. Member from Kent went to charge the Hon. Gentleman who introduced this Bill of being inimical to the spirit of the Constitution—he reprobated such remarks, which reminded him of what had been called the Cuckoo cry of Loyalty—he however did not consider the measure as disloyal—in order to assimilate ourselves to England in this respect would the Hon. Member from Leeds expel from the Legislative Council in this Province Members of the Church of Rome who are in that body, because they could not do so in England, would he expel them too from the Executive Council—would he introduce Rotten borough because they existed in England—he (Mr. R.) would absolve the Country from Ecclesiastical domination—overawing from what had taken place, and what might happen again he would do this—he held in his hand a book which shewed some of the horros which had been entailed on the world by an Established Church and for the information of the Committee he would read some of them (the Hon. Member here read an account of the death of Bishop Crammer)—many more such instances might be found and that too when a Protestant Established Church had dominion—and wherever power was given its abuse was to be apprehended.—Conscience should be free, but that freedom could not be obtained if it was loaded with restrictions—he agreed with the Hon. mover of this Bill in thinking that Ministers of the Church of England, whom he had properly called nothing more than Missionaries should be obliged to register their names and place of abode as well as all others in order to afford security for the proof of Marriages; the Bill gave a great extension of Religious liberty, but not more in his opinion than was required.

Mr. Beardsley did not approve of the introduction of the Clergy of the Church of England in this Bill—their right had never been questioned, and it appeared to him inconsistent to disqualify them from exercising those rights which never had been questioned, and then to qualify them by the present Bill—as the Bill, however, contained other provisions which he agreed in, he should vote for it; otherwise it might be said about the Country that he was supporting Religious intolerance.

The Attorney General said that from Scripture we learnt that Fools made a mock at Sin, and it appeared that on the present discussion some Hon. Gentlemen were disposed to make a mock of loyalty—he had heard a good deal said about intolerance, and yet the admission of Hon. Gentlemen went to shew that such a thing did not exist among us, when they adduced instances of the most distinguished situations being filled in the Country by Gentlemen belonging to the Church of Rome. As to the persecutions which had taken place in a barbarous age, he thought it absurd and inconsistent to mention them at the present day; 150 years had passed without them, and he saw no grounds for apprehension when it had very properly been stated that public opinion had restrained them. As to the establishment of Ecclesiastical Courts and Tests, the Hon. Gentleman must be aware that they could not be introduced without the concurrence of all branches of the Legislature.

Mr. Scollick thought if Gentlemen were seriously disposed to afford the relief required, they would confine themselves to existing Sects within this Province who sought that relief, and not extend it in its present general shape, to those who did not ask it. The Bill, in his opinion, besides went to destroy the rights of some who were already provided for by Law—Mennonists and Quakers, for example, were already authorised by Law to solemnize marriage among themselves, and this Bill imposed certain conditions which he thought they would not comply with.

Mr. Bidwell said that the Quakers and Mennonists were not affected by the Bill—and in reply to the Attorney General's observation, he said he was not sure but that the Courts might decide that Ecclesiastical Courts might be established and Tests imposed.

Mr. Walsh said that when the subject was before the Committee a few days ago, he understood that leave had been given to sit again with the understanding that in the mean time some modifications should be prepared in its provisions—he was not aware that so general a measure, or so important a change, was contemplated—he considered it necessary, in order to attain the desired object, that the particular sects should be named; without this, he thought it hopeless to expect that relief would be afforded to those whom the House was disposed to serve.

Mr. Clark would briefly state his opinion on this question—he would confirm all past marriages, and confer the right for its future solemnization on Ministers of Sects to be named in the Bill—he would go no further.

Mr. J. Jones had invariably voted for a Bill naming Sects; he would make this as comprehensive as could be desired—he might be called intolerant for not agreeing to a general Bill; this, either in or out of the House, he did not mind—his Constituents knew his sentiments on this subject. He had proposed to the Hon. Gentleman who introduced the present measure, to make it into two Bills, in order that at least one desirable object might be gained; he had, however, thought that the two together would be more likely to succeed. On a future occasion, he hoped that the Hon. Gentleman would see the necessity of making them distinct, and by naming the different Sects, afford a more reasonable hope of both being carried into effect.

The Hon. Speaker agreed in giving his support to the Bill, as containing privileges, to which, resistance would cease; while these were denied, a common cause was made, and much discontent ensued—uniformity in Religious matters had been considered desirable in most Countries; it had long been thought so, but experience of upwards of a century in Spain had not been able to enforce it. In England, the Dissenters were more numerous than the Members of the Established Church, and this, in his opinion, might be attributed to the restrictions imposed upon the former—history proved that the most serious consequences had been produced by attempts to produce uniformity—the people will enforce their opinions. The amendments proposed, he considered, as rational, and such as were desired by the people, and he should therefore vote for them.

Mr. C. Jones said, that if the Bill passed through the House in such a shape, those who professed the strongest desire to afford relief, could not reasonably expect that it would be attended with any success—the measure was one much required, and he hoped that a future Parliament would feel the necessity of divesting the subject of any unnecessary matter, in order that the proposed relief might be obtained.

The Committee rose, reported progress, and leave was given to sit again to-morrow.

The Attorney General, of the Committee to whom was referred the Civil Rights Bill, made the first report of the Committee by Bill. He stated that the Committee had given the subject every attention, and that the Bill they had now reported would be found to agree as nearly as possible with the instructions which had been transmitted to the House—the Committee, he hoped, would be prepared to make their second report to-morrow. The Bill was read a first time—Second reading for Saturday next.

Mr. Bidwell considered the Bill as one of the most important measures before the House, and that every caution was desirable—he should move that 500 copies be printed for the use of Members before its second reading—he had no desire to shrink from the responsibility which the occasion imposed; but responsibility implied a power to act—the instructions, however, had confined the House, and left no alternative. The Bill was not such a one as his discretion would have dictated; he was not at liberty, however, to exercise that discretion—some of the provisions he considered burthensome—and Registry he thought troublesome and unsatisfactory; it might be omitted from various causes, and the benefit contemplated be lost—he should not vote for it if he were allowed to exercise his discretion, but the instructions prevented this, and he had thought it better to pass such a Bill than do otherwise—he made this explanation in order to exonerate himself from any responsibility. The Bill now reported, rendered the measure generally as complete as it could be within the limits of the instructions—he had sacrificed much of personal feeling and opinion on the occasion, and he had done so with pleasure, although the other Bill was more conformable to his sentiments.

Mr. J. Jones suggested that both Bills should be included in the motion for printing, which being agreed, 500 copies were ordered.

Thursday, Jan. 4.

Mr. Scollick moved that the Petition of T. G. Simons, Esq. respecting the County Town in the District of Gore, be referred to the Attorney General and Mr. J. Jones, as a select Committee to report thereon.

Mr. James Wilson objected, and proposed Messrs. Thomson, Beasley, Hamilton, and Scollick, as the Committee.

Mr. Gordon thought that some reason should be given for the alteration; it was unusual to make such objections—the Gentlemen named by Mr. Scollick would, no doubt, do justice; they could not be actuated by any private feeling.

Mr. Hamilton admitted that he was interested and had some feeling on the occasion, but this would not prevent his doing his public duty—if he was named as one of the Committee. The Attorney General last year, in the case of the London District, had made what was called a Grand Circle, and placed the County Town in the centre—he would have no more grand circles, which might ruin the Gore District, as London was—he would sift the the matter to the bottom. As to the Petition, it was only the skeleton of a Petition, and Counter Petitions would be brought in.

Mr. M'Clean would have no objection to add to the number of the Committee, but thought it improper to strike out those already named. As to the Grand Circles spoken of, in the case of the London District, the whole House had concurred in that measure, and no improper motives could be attributed either to the Attorney General, who was one of a Committee who had reported to the House, or to the House who had adopted that report, and acted without feeling or prejudice on the occasion, and in such a manner as was thought most conducive to the General interests of the District.

Mr. Bidwell said that on such questions the Att'y. General represented the views of Government, and any undue influence should be guarded against—he objected to Commissioners naming the place of the County Town, as being liable to influence and favoritism, from which the House was free.

After some further discussion, a Committee of seven was appointed by Ballot, to whom the Petition was referred. The Attorney General and Mr. Jones are of the Committee.

The HIGHWAY COMMITTEE made a first report by Bill. The Bill was read a first time, granting to Mr. C. Beadle the exclusive right of running a Stage from Queenston, via. Head of the Lake, to Sandwich, once a week, for 21 years. Second Reading on Monday next.

DISTRICT COURT BILL—Second reading.

Mr. Beardsley said he was aware the present Law required alteration, but he should oppose this Bill unless the Judges were required to be professional men, or were duly examined—improper appointments had taken place, and might occur again. The Bill now before the House made the business more prolix, and the Table of Fees should be regulated accordingly; the Lawyer should have quid pro quo—with these alterations he should support the Bill.

Mr. J. Jones had introduced this Bill from a conviction of its necessity, and had no doubt that Hon. Gentlemen of the Profession, who were aware of the defects of the present Law, would agree with him that some new enactment was necessary—he had not made any alteration in the Table of Fees, indeed he had not introduced that subject at all; but if any increase was considered necessary in consequence of the additional labors imposed by the Bill on the profession, any Hon. Gentleman could propose a new Table of Fees.

Mr. Gordon thought the discussion of the present measure very properly belonging to Gentlemen of the Profession, yet as far as he could judge of the provisions of the Bill, they appeared to be good—the amendment too, of having the Judges of the District Court Professional men, was proper, if such could be found in all parts of the Country to fill the situation; heretofore it was impossible, and even now might be difficult—the pittance of Fees now allowed was a miserable remuneration for their Services, and in many parts of the Country it might be difficult to find Professional men who would give up better prospects for the purpose of filling the situation.

Mr. James Wilson thought the Bill would increase the burthens of the people, and that Judges of District Courts and Lawyers would participate in the new gain; the Bill would not answer the Country—the cunning of Lawyers would still carry actions into the King's Bench; and while the House was remedying one evil, they might create a dozen more. He would try and stop this Bill which had so many burthensome clauses—he had not yet seen any measure brought in to remove burthens from the people—we had too many Lawyers already; the growth of these, and Established Clergymen and Doctors was oppressive to the Country, and there appeared to be no end to the troubles and afflictions they brought upon the people—he had not heard of any Petition for this Bill, and should therefore oppose it—the people had better settle their differences by Arbitration, and save bills of cost.

Mr. Beardsley would propose his amendment for three Judges to preside in the District Court, one of whom should be a Lawyer. The Court of Common Pleas in England had three Judges.

The Att'y. General said that the Courts of Common Pleas in England, and in other Colonies had a large Jurisdiction, and regular Salaries were paid to the Judges; here the District Court was limited in its Jurisdiction to £40 in actions of contract, and £15 in other actions—if the Hon. Gentleman increased the number of Judges as he proposed, throughout the Province, how would he propose to remunerate them? the present Fees would not do it, and would he then provide Salaries for them?

The Committee rose, reported progress and obtained leave to sit again.

Friday, Jan. 5.

The Attorney General brought up the Petition of certain Ship-owners, praying for the erection of a Light House on one of the Duck Islands in Lake Ontario.

On motion of the Attorney General, the House resolved into a Committee of the whole, to take into consideration, the Petition of the Welland Canal Company—he moved the following Resolutions:

Resolved, That from the great importance of the Welland Canal to the interests of the Province, it is most desirable to insure its accomplishment with as little delay as possible, by affording public aid to the undertaking, if it shall appear to be necessary, and the state of the public Funds and a due regard to other public improvements shall warrant it.

Resolved, That a select Committee be appointed for the purpose of examining and reporting, whether it is necessary, in order to secure the speedy completion of the Welland Canal upon its present enlarged scale, that public aid should be afforded to the Company, and if so, to what extent; and whether such aid would be most effectually extended by making a further Loan, or taking Stock In the name of the Government, or by any, and what other measure. And also to examine and report upon such parts of the Petition of the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company, as do not relate to the application for pecuniary aid, with power to send for persons and papers, and to report on the last mentioned subjects of the Petition, by Bill or otherwise, and that the Chairman be directed to move for the appointment of such Committee.

Mr. Bidwell enquired if these resolutions were intended as conveying a pledge that the House would give support to the Canal?

The Attorney General said that those voting for the first Resolution, would certainly convey a conditional pledge, if the Funds warranted the required support, and other public improvements were first provided for.

Mr. Hamilton would first ascertain the resources of the country, before giving any pledge to support the Canal—the Company were in difficulty, and after having last year obtained £25,000 from the House, they come forward again and ask further assistance. He had heard a great deal of the anticipated benefits from the Canal, but these he considered doubtful.

Mr. Bidwell—if the object of the Resolutions had merely been for the purpose of obtaining information, he should not oppose them, as there were particular reasons why information was necessary—the Canal was at first a great private enterprise; it had now, in some measure, become a public one. He considered the Province to be placed in a delicate situation, with respect to the money already advanced to the Company; and the question now appeared to him to be, whether it was proper to make any further advance for the purpose of endeavouring to ensure the repayment of the £25,000, already loaned to them, or by withholding further aid, relinquish the prospect of ever having that sum returned.

The Attorney General said, that last year it had been resolved as expedient to give assistance to the Canal, and the public confidence had consequently been increased—that pledge had been given after a full examination of the merits of the question. The work was important to the general interests of the Province, and should receive public aid, after other public improvements were attended to, and the Resolutions went no further.

Mr. C. Jones agreed that it was necessary to ascertain how the work was going on, he would therefore support the Resolutions that evidence might be gone into before a Select Committee. He might not find it expedient to vote more money for the Canal, but the Resolution containing no positive pledge to that effect should meet with his support.

Mr. Morris was friendly to the undertaking, but in voting for the Resolution, would not consider himself pledged to vote any additional sum to the Canal.

Mr. J. Jones, was not prepared to give more money to the Canal, unless he was first satisfied that the resources of the Country would authorise it, independent of the necessary sums for other public works.

Mr. D. Jones, thought the resolutions held out an encouragement to the Company that would be considered as a pledge—he would not do this before our means were ascertained—he would not oppose inquiry, but thought the House was not warranted in holding out any encouragement at present.

Mr. Bidwell, thought it very necessary to inquire whether the Company had acted judiciously in their matters, before the Province consented to take stock to a large amount in the Canal. The Company may have been injudicious in their management—and this may be the reason why the remainder of the Stock had not been sold in London and New York—a want of sound judgment, may perhaps render it unadvisable for the Province to embark largely in the concern.

Mr. J. Wilson, thought that information was required—general report says that there is something wrong about the management of the Welland Canal—these reports are injurious to the Company—they may perhaps not be true, but until they were cleared up he could not see the propriety of taking Stock to a large amount —he would have a fair exposure of every thing, and be kept in the dark no longer.

The Att'y. General, was confident that the Company were anxious that their affairs should undergo the most minute investigation, and he was satisfied the more they were known, the better it would be for the Company—the Canal was yet in an unfinished state, and the Company had been unjustly slandered—inquiry would remove all doubts, and this the Company was desirous of—he knew persons who resided within a few miles, who had not seen the Canal, and who from prejudice were opposed to it and had abused it—on visiting the works however these prejudices had been removed, and they now thought it a beneficial undertaking—he was surprised at the apathy evinced with respect to so important a work, which all who had seen it, agreed in thinking as one of incalculable benefit to the whole Province—it certainly was surprising that more interest had been evinced and more known of the Erie Canal when it was cutting, than of the Welland Canal in Upper Canada, intended to open a communication for large vessels, from Lake Erie and the Western Country into Lake Ontario—the demand for all kinds of produce on the Canal had been very extensive, and yet it appeard strange that so good a market had been neglected, and that it had been supplied by foreigners.

Mr. Bidwell, moved that the first Resolution be expunged.—Lost.

The first Resolution was then put—Yeas 21—Nays 15—Carried by a majority of 6.

The second Resolution was carried unanimously—and Messrs. McLean, Att'y. General, Rolph, Bidwell and C. Jones, appointed as the Select Committee, JAIL LIMITS BILL—2 Reading.

Bill Reported—3 Reading for Monday next.

KINGSTON BANK REPEAL BILL.—2 Reading.

A majority of the House decided against adopting the Preamble of Mr. Thomson's Bill for releasing the real Estate of the Directors, and after some discussion—the Attorney General moved as an amendment the preamble of a new Bill, for settling the affairs of the Bank, which was adopted, and the Committee rose, reported the Bill as amended and obtained leave to sit again. [When the Provisions of this New Bill are discussed we shall give the debate upon it.] Adjourned.

Saturday Jan. 6.

Sundry Petitions Read.

County Court Bill—2 Reading.

The Committee rose, reported the Bill, and leave was given to sit again on Wednesday next.

Mr. J. Jones, brought in a Bill to establish a Police in the Town of Brockville. Adjourned.

Monday, Jan. 8.

Jail Limits Bill—read third time, passed and sent to the Legislative Council.

The Petition of the inhabitants of the County of Lincoln was read. The petition prays that Elections may be held as formerly in the several Ridings of the County.

On motion to refer the Petition to a Select Committee :—

Mr. Beardsley, said he should oppose its being referred—the petition contained some respectable names—but among them he saw the name of one who had fled from justice in the United States and was an Alien—it was signed too by office holders, who would destroy the freedom of election.

Mr. J. Jones, did not know the merits of the Petition—he would not however smother any petition coming into the House on such a subject—it related to the elective franchise, and on that question if it were signed by only one freeholder, it should be attended to by the House—he would vote for the petition being referred—as to one of the signers being an alien, he was at a loss so understand the Hon. Gentleman—last year that Hon. Gent. had declared by his vote that any man coming from the U. S. into this Province was a British Subject, and now he calls him an alien.

Mr. Clark, knew that the Petition was fairly got up—it was numerously and respectably signed, and entitled to the consideration of the House—there was no undue influence used—the Ridings were populous, and the petition should be attended to.

Mr. Hamilton—the petition affected the privileges of the people, and should meet with attention from the House—the more general elections were, the more free they would be from influence—he should vote for the petition being referred.

A division being called for—there were,

Yeas—Messrs. Atkinson, Att'y. General, Beasley, Bidwell, Burke, Cameron, Clark, Coleman, Hamilton, Ingersoll, J. Jones, Lyons, McBride, McDonald, McDonell, McLean, Morris, Perry, Peterson, Randall, Scollick, Walker, Walsh, Wilkinson, White, and Wilson—26.

Nays.—Messrs. Beardsley, and Rolph—2.

On motion of the Attorney General, the Petition of certain Ship owners for a Light House on the Duck Islands was referred to Messrs. Clark and Cameron, with power to send for persons and papers.

Bill for Sale of Clergy Reserves—second Reading.

The words "erecting places of public worship for all denominations" were struck out of the Bill, on motion of Mr. Morris—the lowest offer which the Sheriff is authorised to take at any public sale of the Reserves, was filled up with 2s. 6d.

Mr. Perry, proposed an amendment, that the Interest of the Monies arising from the sale of the Reserves only, should be expended, otherwise he said the Receiver General, whose income was already large enough, would reap the interest on those sales paid into his hands—he would give 21 years for the payment of the purchase money, on payment of interest—he thought as the Bill was important, that it should be printed.

The Bill was reported and ordered for a third reading on Wednesday next.

Belleille Police Bill, went through a second reading, reported with some amendment, and ordered for a third reading on Wednesday next.

Hasting Division Bill, second Reading.

Mr. Coleman, explained the peculiar situation of the County as requiring that a Division of the District should take place.

Mr. Thomson, (Frontenac) thought that the claims of Prince Edward were stronger —he had voted against it, and should oppose this Bill.

Mr. Perry, & Mr. Atkinson, should oppose the Bill.

Mr. White, said the people wished for a Division—they were now 90 miles from the County Town, and suffered inconvenience attending Courts, &c.

Mr. Beardsley, opposed the Bill, because he thought it was brought in for the purpose of defeating the Prince Edward Petition.

Mr. McLean, thought it would be better to make one District of Hastings and Prince Edward.

Mr. Peterson, considered the attempt to defeat the Prince Edward Petition unjust—he should therefore oppose the Bill.

After some further discussion, to the same points the Bill was ordered for a second reading this day six months, and is therefore lost.

A Message was received from the Hon. the Legislative Council, informing the House, that they had passed "The Justice Fee Bill,"—"The Sheriff's Salary Bill," and also the "Bill for the more easy recovery of estrays,"—the latter with some amendment.

Line Fence Bill,—2 Reading.

After a short discussion, it was agreed to refer the Bill to a select committee.

The Waterloo School Bill—went thro' a second reading, was reported with amendments, and ordered for a third reading on Wednesday next.

Welland Canal Bill—2 Reading.

The Attorney General, explained that the Bill was in conformity to the Despatch of Lord Bathurst, communicating His Majesty's gracious intention of advancing the sum of £16,360 Sterling, in aid of the work, on condition that the Locks of the Canal should be 22 feet wide, and when completed that Government vessels and stores should pass free of toll—the Bill ensured these conditions.

Mr. Bidwell, thought that the Bill was not satisfactory—by its provisions the Company would be compelled to allow Government vessels and stores to pass free of toll, without any assurance or condition, that the Government would pay the sum mentioned.

The Attorney General, assured the Hon. Gent. that the Company themselves felt no apprehension whatever on the subject, and were not at all inclined to doubt the honor of His Majesty's Government—indeed the munificent grant of land already made to the Company would of itself have been sufficient to have induced the Company to allow the vessels and stores of His Majesty to pass free through the Canal, and the additional aid so liberally afforded it, in the grant of £16,360, could only be considered as gratuitous—the good faith of the Government as expressed in the Despatch was a sufficient pledge that the money would be paid—the Company was perfectly satisfied with it, and he thought it would appear extraordinary indeed, if such an amendment as that proposed by the Hon. Gentlemin could meet with the sanction of the House.

Mr. Rolph said that this was a positive enactment, and the Company might be placed in an awkward dilemma, if the money was not paid—in his opinion the House should not pass such a Bill without a proviso ensuring its payment—the Company should not be pledged to pass Government Boats for ever without a certainty that they would receive the sum named—it had been said on this as on other occasions that the good faith of Government should not be doubted, but he would guard the Company against any such Bill as this—supposing the House of Commons should not sanction this grant of His Majesty how would the Company be secured from the effects of this law.

The Attorney General said that some Hon. Gentlemen appeared to express an unnecessary concern on the behalf of the Company, but it appeared to him that their expressions were rather those of doubt as to the good faith of Government—he again assured those Hon. Gentlemen and the House, that on this subject the Company entertained no doubts whatever, and they were under no apprehension of being placed in an awkward dilemma, by placing the fullest reliance in the faith of Government—and if for the first time, that faith should be broken, and the Government should say, "now we can pass free through your Canal and have a law for that purpose and will not pay the money," would not this House repeal the law? the supposition, however, was disgraceful towards the Government, who had already, by a Grant of Land, rendered such liberal encouragement to the Company, which, as he before stated, would, without the proposed sum, be sufficient of itself to induce the Company to allow Government Vessels and Stores to pass free of Toll.

Mr. Bidwell would model the Bill in such a manner as to guard against any part of the £16,360 being paid from the funds of the Province; it might not be intended, but the House should be cautious—it might give a colouring to devote the provincial funds to such purposes hereafter.

Mr. Rolph said that the House could not be assured, but this bill might hereafter be made use of as a pretext for applying the public funds of the Province already at the disposal of the Executive to works of this kind. In the ordinary transactions of life in business, it was a rule among individuals, to consider each other honest, and he should like to see a clause in the Bill securing to the Company the payment of the £16,360 Sterling.

Mr. J. Jones supposed that the Provincial funds alluded to by the Hon. Gentlemen was the £2500 Act, for the administration of Justice—that act however appropriated that sum annually to a specific purpose and it was in his opinion absurd to suppose that any part of it would be expended in cutting Canals. As to the Hon. Gentlemans maxim of individuals when driving bargains with each other, his argument if it means any thing amounted to this, that this House must consider the King a Rogue—He considered the proposition as being disgraceful, and such as the House should never consent to. The faith of Government stood pledged for the payment of a certain sum of money, on condition that the Company made the locks of their Canal of certain dimensions, and gave free passage to Government Stores and Vessels—the Bill provided these conditions and he hoped the House would not be brought to question the faith of Government, which had never yet been doubted. The Bill was drawn according to the Despacth, and according to the petition of the Company—some Hon. Members were all at once extremely cautious for the interests of the Company, and raised difficulties which the Company themselves could not and did not anticipate—could those Hon. Gentlemen give any reason for such unjust suspicion against the Government—they were absurd, and should not be attended to by the House.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) knew that the £2,500 was not confined to the Administration of Justice.

Mr. J. Jones—then the Hon. Gentleman should cause inquiry on the subject, and not urge it as an objection to this Bill.

Mr. M'Lean thought that the W. C. Company could not be thankful to the Hon. Gentleman who appeared to be desirous of using such extreme caution on their behalf, as that caution might be the means of seriously affecting their best interests—those that the good faith of Government should not be doubted, but he would guard the Company against any such Bill as this—supposing the House of Commons should not sanction this grant of His Majesty how would the Company be secured from the effects of this law.

The Attorney General said that some Hon. YORK, U. C. Saturday, January 13, 1827.

On looking over our file of papers received by the last mail, we do not observe any news of particular importance. We have therefore devoted our columns to local matter.

We have commenced giving the Report of the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company, a document which we have no doubt will be read with interest, by all who desire a successful termination to that important work. From a debate which took place on the subject of the gracious offer of His Majesty, to advance the sum of £16,360 Sterling in aid of the work, and which independent of the support already given to it, can be viewed in no other light than a most liberal gift, the Stockholders, and other well wishers to the Company, will be enabled to judge, who may properly be classed among the real friends, of that great public improvement.

The Intestate Bill, now under the consideration of the Legislature, is one of those measures which has been discussed on former occasions, and though we are not disposed, as some persons appear to be, to question the motives of any Hon. Gent. in bringing forward certain measures, or for the manner in which their votes are given on certain questions, we will not withold the expression of our opinion, that such a Bill if passed into a Law would subject the people of this Province to the greatest evils and inconveniencies—besides which we do consider it, to be at variance with the principles of the glorious Constitution which we happily enjoy.

The last Quarterly Review (September) now before us contains an article on this subject, from which we give the following extract:—

"Observations on the actual State of the English Laws of Real Property: with the outline of a Code. By James Humphreys Esq. of Lincolns Inn, Barrister, London. 8vo.—1826.

To the title of descents, the author has appended a comparison between primogeniture and equal partibility; exemplifying the former by our own system, and the latter by the Code Napoleon. With so strong a disposition to resort to first principles, and so little fear of innovation, as he has exhibited in the preceding chapter, we were not prepared to find in Mr. Humphreys, the champion of an institution bearing among ourselves such unequivocal marks of a feudal origin, and so much at variance with the spirit of what is called philosophical legislation. Though unprepared, however, we were rejoiced to find it so; and still more to discover, in the reasoning by which he supports his view of the question, so much of what we are apt to regard as true philosophy—a wise and temperate regard even to prejudices, (if they must needs be so termed,) consecrated by habitual usage, and which have taken their place de facto among the main-springs of national action.

'Our English law of primogeniture,' he says, 'has often been represented as a harsh and impolitic rule, which, sacrificing natural affection to an ill-regulated passion for family aggrandizement, or to the vanity of supporting an empty name, beggars the younger branches of a family, to enrich the eldest, and prevents the free circulation of property. But, let us view a little in detail, first, the extent of property to which this law applies; next, (as influenced by the preceding topic,) its concurrence with natural affection; and finally its political effects.'

Our author then points out, that the rule in question does not extend to females. 'They all, he observes, 'take equally; and the public sentiment, generally guided by the law, adopts the same mode of disposition among them.' The widow's jointure, and young children's portions are equally exempt from its operation. But, what is of far more importance, and in application so extensive, as actually to convert the rule itself into the exception, is, that it does not extend to personal property: that is to say, to a class of possessions infinite in its qualities and ramifications, and of which one single article, namely, the interest of the national debt alone, exceeds in amount the total of our national rental of land.

'It has been justly observed,' (says our author,) by Montesquieu, that to educate children is a natural obligation on the parent; to give them his property, is one of civil or political institution. Conceding however somewhat of the strictness of this principle, in favour of natural feeling, it has still been shown,' (adds the author, in reference to the preceding part of his discussion,) 'that, in our own country, the portion of land property is not such as to deprive a father of his power, in conjunction with his testamentary right, to make ample provision for all his offspring.'

He exposes the fallacy of the objection, that primogeniture impedes alienation. The rule, as by him demonstrated, has no such necessary consequence.

'The full power of alienation which, in our present laws, each generation in its turn possesses, added, as it frequently is, by the necessity to discharge the portions of the younger branches, or other charges on the estate—by the extravagance or enterprize of the owner—or by the division of the estate among the female line, break down and scatter, from time to time, the largest masses of landed property, with a rapidity which would surprise any but those long conversant with the changes of ownership. The annual extent of alienations of real property may be brought to an unerring test, by referring to the ad valorem duty paid on sales on land, in England and Wales, for the year 1825, being about £440,000, which, at the average rate of 1 1-2 per cent., would give for the aggregate purchase-money upwards of £35,000,000; for the aggregate yearly value of the property sold, taking lands and buildings, freeholds and copyholds, estates in possession and in reversion, at one high rate of third years' purchase, about £1,200,000 per annum.'

In another branch of his argument we follow him with still greater pleasure, dictated, as it seems to us to be, under the influence of some of the best, as they are among the most general sentiments of our nature.

'An attachment to the soil, and a reluctance to part with the seat of one's ancestors, have in all ages, and under every system of succession, attended the possession of land; and this feeling, added to the peculiar stability of land as property, has rendered it the means of preserving the names and dignities of families. We trace the original sentiment in the affecting story of Naboth's vineyard. The more complicated motive developes itself in the brilliant exposition by Montesquieu of the original laws of succession among the Romans. These, while they allowed the property to pass indifferently to all the children of the father, both male and female, under his dominion, kept it always in his family, by not permitting the daughters, who, on marrying, passed into the families of their husbands, to transmit it to their children; since this would have carried it into another house. Here we discover the principle of supporting the importance of families by means of their possessions; with this difference, that, in republican Rome, the dignity was attached to the entire family; while in modren times, it is centered, and along with it the estate, in the head of the family. Despotism has the means of perpetuating their names through their landed property, as the families of modern French at present are, by their rigid system of equal partibility, and, even here we discern an effort towards it, and an attachment to the soil, in the practice among the cohcirs, in agricultural countries, if they cannot conveniently cultivate the property in common, for one of them to take it and pay a rent to the others; or, in richer and more commercial districts, to buy them out.

'To this universal and most natural attachment to the soil, and its connexions as property, under whatever system of succession, for preserving the memory and influence of a family, may be added its peculiar value among ourselves, as connected with primogeniture, in preserving the independance of the aristocratic branch of our Constitution. With privileges rather for the public advantage than their own, less violent and more consistent than the multitude, if, in past ages, a tyrant was to be coerced or expelled, or in present times, a sovereign is to be advised, the arms and the counsel of our nobility have ever been found equally prompt. Without them, whatever may be individual merits, the many are as a rope of sand.'

Our author may be justly proud in having his own sentiments on this important subject supported by those of the most philosophic statesmen of modern times.

'——The law of primogeniture, (says Mr. Burke) with a few inconsiderable exceptions, is the standing law of our landed inheritance, and without question has a tendency (I think a most happy tendency) to preserve a character of consequence, weight, and prevalent interest over others, in the whole; and to the whole state itself.'—Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs.

From this statement of the case in favour of our old English system, the author turns to the other side of the picture, as presented by the Code Napoleon, which, as he observes, in establishing equal partibility among all the children, and all other kindred of equal degree, has not only prescribed a system of succession the opposite to ours, but has given that system a more unbending character, by prohibiting, to a large extent, voluntary gifts, either inter vivos or testamentary. Our space precludes us from following the author with any closeness through this part of his argument; which is, however of sufficient force and originality to merit (as it is sure to attract) the attention of our continental neighbours, so recently engaged in the revision of that very article of their laws of which it is his design to call in question the wisdom and expediency.

'Land,' he observes, 'is, in its nature, incapable of the same easy and complete division as money and other moveables.' The truth of this maxim, in itself sufficiently obvious, is made practically familiar to us by the expensive and vexatious nature of our own proceedings under a commission of partition. These evils among ourselves are confined to a small number of cases, and a very limited description of persons. That, which forms our exception, constitutes their general rule of succession—with this addition, that (unless our author has greatly erred in his estimate) all the inconveniences and expense of a partition among English coheirs occur, in a much greater proportion, in the case of every single succession, regulated by the provisions of the civil code of France."

In our last number we gave the answers received from His Majesty's Government, to several addresses of the House of Assembly, forwarded during the last session, and we are inclined to think that the answers are such as most reasonable men would have anticipated. Could it be expected for example that the King would consent to bestow an honorable distinction on a man who had been found in arms against his cause, by placing his name among those who were to be the partakers of his Royal bounty, for having devoted their fortunes and risked their lives in defence of his Sovereignty?

On the subject of Emigration, it may be easily imagined we think, how much pleasure it would have afforded His Majesty, to have answered an address on such a subject, if instead of praying him to throw open one of his Colonies for the admission of Foreigners, it had represented the beneficial results that might be expected, from the settlement of its fertile soil, by the surplus population of the Mother Country. His faithful Commons in Upper Canada appear to have been desirous by their address, to afford encouragement, rather to strangers, than to their brethren, but their Gracious Sovereign, though compelled to refuse their request having the interest of the Colony and the welfare of his own people at heart, tells them that it his intention to send those who will no donbt be equally, if not more welcome among us—the people of His United Kingdom. The Niagara Gleaner contains the following pertinent remarks on the subject, which will be approved of by the Country:—

"When it is taken into consideration that the taxes are much higher, the prices of the produce of the country much lower in the United States than they are in Canada, and the land dearer, it must clearly appear that had the Government of Great Britain been disposed to encourage emigration from the United States, as requested by a majority of our Representatives in Parliament, the Province of Upper Canada would be inundated with democrats from the United States, which might soon become troublesome. Government in our opinion, has acted wisely by reserving the uncultivated tracts of land in Upper Canada for the redundant population of Great Britain and Ireland."

The "true intent of the Act of Parliament" on the subject of the Clergy Reserves, is plainly enough pointed out, in the answer to the address on that subject; it is however again taken up by the House of Assembly, and for the present at least, we forbear further remark on the subject.

We beg leave to call the particular attention of our readers in the Niagara District, to the debate, on a Petition coming from their part of the Country on the subject of Elections. They will find that there are some Persons, who however loudly they may proclaim the liberties of the people on some occasions, have endeavoured nevertheless in this instance, to prevent their complaints, from even being heard.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1827.

BY AUTHORITY.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come

GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign a Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

P. M.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. John Large, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said John Large for the discovery of the offender—Now Know Ye That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime.

Given under my hand &c.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. P. M.

D. CAMERON, Secretary.

Executive Council Office, York, 23rd March, 1826.

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.
No. 9 - 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, and in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending on the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

AT a Public Meeting, held at Beasley's Hotel at Ancaster, County of Wentworth and District of Gore, this fifteenth day of January, 1827, for the purpose of considering the propriety of Petitioning the Legislature on the subject of a removal of the County Town, and of the building a new Jail and Court House in this District; Matthew Crooks, Esquire, was appointed Chairman, and John Findlay, Esquire, Secretary, when the following Petition was unanimously adopted:—

To the Honorable the House of Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Inhabitants of the Village of Ancaster, and its immediate vicinity,

Respectfully Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioners have learned, with the utmost surpise, that a Petition, purporting to be the Petition of the Inhabitants of Ancaster, has been presented to your Honorable House, praying your Honorable House to pass an Act authorising the Magistrates of the District, to borrow on the credit of said District, a Sum of money for the purpose of erecting a new Jail and Court House in the Village of Hamilton, such a prayer being in opposition to the declared sentiments of the Inhabitants of Ancaster.

THAT the names of but very few persons residing in this neighbourhood were affixed to the Petition aforesaid, that the majority of them were obtained surreptitiously, as will be proved by the accompanying affidavit; and that the name of the signatures were those of mere children, uncapable of comprehending the nature and tendency of the said Petition.

THAT your Petitioners would avail themselves of this opportunity to express, in the strongest terms, their disapprobation of those who, to promote a self interested object, have thus ventured to misrepresent the sentiments of this community.

That though your Petitioners believe the Village of Ancaster to possess advantages as a scite for the District Town, surpassed by no other position in the said District; yet they have no desire in exhibiting their pretentions to disparage the fair claims of the neighbouring Villages.

Your Petitioners therefore pray your Honorable House to pass a Law, authorizing the Magistrates of the aforesaid District to borrow, on its credit, a Sum of Money, not exceeding Three Thousand Pounds, for the purpose of erecting a new Jail and Court House within the District, and that you would appoint, or authorize the Executive of this Province to appoint, a Commission of disinterested Persons, to examine the said District, and select the most eligible scite for the erection of the said Public Buildings.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Resolved, That Mr. George Gurnett, be requested to forward the foregoing Petition to the Attorney General, accompanied by the necessary explanations, and with a request that he (Mr. Atty. General) would take the earliest opportunity of presenting the same, to the Honorable House of Assembly.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting, signed by the Chairman and Secretary, be forwarded to the York Gazette for publication.

MATTHEW CROOKS,
Chairman.
JOHN FINDLAY,
Secretary.

Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be returned to Messrs. Crooks and Findlay, for the able manner in which they fulfilled their respective duties on this occasion.

FOR THE U. E. LOYALIST.

FAREWELL TO THE SHORES OF ERIE.

Land of my birth! one lingering, last adieu,
One fond expression of unfeigned regard,
One kind farewell—for which I deem thy due,
Accept from me, thy native, wayward Bard.
One fond farewell, warm from my deepest heart,
To thee and thine,—tis all I can bestow,
Land of my birth!—To me what'er thou art,
Or what thou hast been, well, full well I know.

Nurst by thy wilds and solitudes my youth
Grew like the plants that flourish on thy soil;
My heart was plain simplicity and truth;
My hands refused no task of rural toil.

The Muse there from amongst my Father's Sons
Was pleased to take me and my heart inspire;—
To me, the humblest of her chosen ones,—
And light my fancy with her dazzling fire.

She taught me to behold in thy pure sky
Its thousand glories with exalted soul;
And when its thunders rais'd their voice on high,
To hear His voice who shakes the utmost pole.

She taught me to behold in field and flower,
In wood and wild the charms of nature glow;
In wind and storm, the emblems of His power—
Nor less when soft the whispering breezes blow:

She led me forth to tread thy forests wide,
Where thy tall pines spread forth their sylvan charms,
Exalt their spiry tops in lordly pride,
And hang eternal verdure on their arms.

She bade me listen to the sprightly song
Whose gay pavillion veils the clear blue sky:
Their notes of joy awakened kindred fire
Deep in my bosom and I knew not why.

In measure wild their hymns of love they sung:
They sung of Spring's delightful Summer's pride
No note of sorrow moved their warbling tongue,
Sorrow and care the thoughts of man divide.

She led me to thy Erie's purple wave:
Heaven's distant verge the world of waters prest:
The foaming billows all their grandeur gave:
And throes till then unfelt disturbed my breast.

She bade me mark thy seasons as they rolled;—
When spring's first bloom with beauty bright expands;
When yellow Harvest lifts his head of gold,
And bounteous Autumn spreads his liberal hands.

Nor less when Winter hurls his gloomy storms,
And shakes the snow drift from his hoary head;
For fancy's fire his icy reign transforms,
And calls up life and beauty from the dead.

All these within my heart shall hold their place,
Land of my birth! when e'er I think of thee;
Thy Erie's winding shores shall memory trace,—
The scenes of childhood and its thoughtless glee.

Yet more:—The Muse seduced me from the plough;
She caught the sickle from my dexter hand;
She bade me tempt the maze of thoughts,—and now,
Because of her, I leave my native land.

The ways of fate I've ne'er been to compare,
In nature's walks, with his displays of Grace.
If here was wisdom, mercy sure was there,
And love divine beam'd from the Father's face.

O! who the sacred charge can rightly fill
Before the presence of the Sovereign Lord?—
Thou who canst arm the weak, thy grace instil,
And give me wisdom to expound thy word.

And thou, my Muse, a truce with thee and rhyme!
Rich themes of grace now may thy force employ;
To holier labors we'll devote our time,
And aim to close our task with heavenly joy.

Land of my birth, farewell—the days of woe
Which thou hast brought me, freely I forgive;
We part as friends should part;—and thou mayest know
The thoughts of thee within my breast shall live

For there are thoughts of thee which cannot die;
And oft they fondly in my bosom start;
And when devotion lifts my soul on high,
Thou shalt be present and enlarge my heart.

ERIEUS.

Saint Thomas, Talbot Road,
26 December, 1826.

REPORT,

Of the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company, to the Stockholders.

Under these impressions it must be presumed the Directors acted in April 1825, when they made this reservation of Stock and in pursuance or their plan, the President was instructed when he repaired to New York in order to confer with the Stockholders resident there, and to procure additional Subscriptions, not to accept of a greater amount of Stock than £50,000, which it was presumed would, in addition to that which had been, and might be subscribed in the British Provinces, make up £100,000. So far from meeting with difficulty in procuring the limited amount, the President was induced by the readiness exhibited to extend the subscription to £75,000, which was instantly taken up, and he returned with the impression that if the whole had been thrown open it would have been subscribed with equal facility. The reference to England, however, had been finally resolved upon, and it was necessary to await the issue.

The Directors of the Company for that year now commenced their work with spirit; they found a large amount of Stock readily subscribed, and they saw a confidence in the undertaking exhibited, which left no room to doubt that the remainder would have been taken in America if it had not been designedly reserved. They may be supposed also to have expected, confidently, that before the progress of the work required it, they would hear of the £100,000 being subscribed in England, and having this double assurance of being in a condition to meet their engagements they entered into Contracts for the completion of the Canal from the River Welland to Lake Ontario, for a sum exceeding by almost one third, the amount of Stock which was actually taken up.

This portion of the Canal, it must be observed, embraces the only serious difficulties which have been apprehended as likely to present themselves—namely, the harbour on Lake Ontario, the descent of the Mountain which includes some rock excavation, and the deep cutting, which through a distance of nearly a mile and three quarters, averages a depth of excavation of 44 feet.

When completed, it will afford a perfect communication with Lake Erie, by the descent of the Welland to the Niagara River, and for this reason, as well as from the desire to shew the practicability of the whole design as speedily as possible, by encountering at once the only difficulties to be dreaded, it was thought clearly expedient to devote the whole of the present means of the Company to the completion of that section, leaving the other to be undertaken so soon as the remaining funds should become available

As the present Directors have adopted and persevered in the course which their predecessors had begun, it may be permitted them to say something, if it be necessary, in vindication of the resolution to proceed with the work, while so great a proportion of the Stock remained unsubscribed. Besides the expectation (amounting, under existing circumstances, to almost a moral certainty) of the remaining Stock being speedily filled up; it is, in the first place, to be born in mind, that had the Stock at once been all taken, it would have been competent to the Directors, and they would doubtless have deemed it judicious to have put both Sections, or the whole line under Contract at the same time. In that case the calls upon the present Stockholders would have been nearly the same, both in regard to periods and amount, as they have been in order to carry on the Section now in progress.

In the next place it is but justice to mention that the Directors of the present year, however much they might have been fairly influenced by these considerations, and notwithstanding their ardour to prosecute the work without without delay, did not in fact proceed except under the fullest sanction of those Stockholders at least, whose share in the undertaking was so great as to make it proper to consult them before embarking in Contracts, which would call for greater and more rapid advances than might appear reasonable.

The Contracts were entered into in the month of July 1825, and considerable progress made in the execution of some of them during the Summer. The Contractors, after the experience that has now been had of them, are stated, with great confidence by the Directors, to be persons as eligible in all respects as they think the Board could have met with; and indeed with a few exceptions, and those not in cases of any moment, they have exhibited a knowledge of their several descriptions of work, and have practised to this time a regularity, economy, and a persevering industry in the conduct of it, which it is believed have not often been excelled.

It was perceived very early in the operations of 1825, that to continue them with the dispatch, which the Contractors pressed upon the Company; and which it was evidently the interest of the latter to facilitate, would demand an expenditure which could not be provided for from the Funds expected to be raised in England, unless the reference for that purpose were promptly attended with success. For giving effect to that reference, it seems that much reliance was naturally placed on the zeal and intelligence of one of the Directors appointed by the Legislature; who desired before he could pledge himself satisfactorily for the success of the undertaking, to acquire from personal observation a more intimate knowledge of it. Circumstances put it out of his power, it appears, to make the desired inspection before the month of September, 1825; and other occurrences to which it is painful to allude, shortly after combined to render his services of little avail.

At this time, however, viz. in September, 1825, it was determined that Mr. Boulton, another of the Directors should proceed to England for the purpose of endeavouring to raise subscriptions of Stock, and he was to be furnished with the necessary powers and instructions. In the month of November such instructions as the Board considered necessary were transmitted to Mr. M'Gillivray, in Montreal, to be forwarded immediately to Mr. Boulton, then in London; but from the unfortunate occurrences already alluded to, they were omitted to be sent, and in the absence of such authority, no direct attempt was made, or could be made by Mr. Boulton to procure subscriptions.

It is not, however, very probable that this delay was of material consequence, for in the first place, means were taken by Mr. Boulton to attract favourable attention in England to the measure, and moreover, that unhappy reverse had occurred in the Commercial World, which not only had disabled many from lending their aid, who might a few months before have cheerfully granted it, but which had the much more general and decided effect of producing an universal suspicion of all such undertakings, and a disinclination to invest Capital in them.

Extract of a letter from a traveller to his friend in Philadelphia, dated Falls of Niagara, October, 1826.

"I understand the Welland Canal Company has a large parcel of land between the Welland and Grand Rivers, now wholly useless, which, by the canal passing through it below the level of Lake Erie, must effectually drain it, and thus create an extensive tract of alluvial land, not to be excelled; thereby adding a value to this part of the country, and giving it an impetus towards improvement scarcely to be calculated.

"The distance from this to the termination of the Welland Canal, on Lake Ontario, is only forty-one and one half miles, being less than from Buffalo or Fort Erie to that point; and any vessel passing down from Lake Erie through this canal, will save the distance from this to Buffalo, which is about fifty miles. This port will be open from three to four weeks earlier every spring, and is much easier both of entrance and departure, than Buffalo harbour; as from the breadth of the lake at this point, vessels may beat out with any wind."

MISCELLANEOUS.

ORIGINAL LETTER OF BONAPARTE.

The following letter from Napoleon to M Champagny, the minister of the interior, displays in a strong light the character of the man, and his custom of not listening implicitly to the decisions of others.

Edinburgh Mag. May, 1807.

MONSIEUR DE CHAMPAGNY,

After having attentively examined the different plans of the monument dedicated to the grand army, I have not been one monument in doubt; that of M. Vignon is the only one which fulfils my intentions. It is a temple that I demanded, and not a church. What could be done in the style of churches to surpass St. Geneviève, even Notre Dame: and above all, St Peter's at Rome? The project of M. Vignon unites with many advantages that of agreeing much better in style with the palace of the legislative body, and of not humiliating the Thuilleries. When I fixed the expense at three millions (120,000*l.*), I wished it to be understood that this temple ought not to cost more than that of Athens, the construction of which did not cost half that sum. It appears to me, that the court entrance ought to be by the staircase opposite to the three. In the definitive plan, M. Vignon will manage so that we may descend under cover. The apartment, also, must be as handsome as possible; M. Vignon might, perhaps, make it double; for the hall is at present too long. It will be equally easy to add a few columns. I will have nothing in wood. The spectators ought to be placed, as I said, on marble steps, forming amphitheatres destined for the public. The persons necessary for the ceremony will be placed on benches, so that the distinction between the two classes of spectators may be very sensible. The amphitheatres, filled with ladies, will form a costume of the personages necessary for the ceremony. The statue of the orator ought to be permanent, and of beautiful workmanship. In this temple nothing ought to be movable or changing; every thing, on the contrary, ought to be stable and fixed in its place. It were possible to place at the entrance of the temple the Nile and the Tiber which were brought from Rome, it would have a good effect: M. Vignon must endeavor to introduce them in his ultimate plan. The place must also be selected for the armour of Francis I. and the quadrige (triumphal car with four horses) of Berlin. There must be no wood in the construction of this temple. Why may not we employ for the dome, which has been an object of discussion, iron, or even earthen pots? Would not these materials be preferable to wood? In a temple destined to subsist several thousands of years, the greatest solidity possible must be studied, and every thing avoided that may be subject to criticism; and the greatest attention paid to the choice of materials. Granite or iron, such ought to be those of this monument. It may be objected that the present columns are not of granite; but this objection is not a good one, because in time they may be changed, without injury to the moment. Yet, if it were proved that to use granite would cost too much, and be too long in obtaining, we must renounce it; for the principal condition of the project is, that it shall be executed in three or four years, or at the most five. This monument has a political object; it therefore should be terminated quickly. It will be well, however, to seek for granite for other works which I shall order, and which, from their nature, may occupy thirty, forty, or fifty years in finishing. I intend all sculptures in the interior to be of marble. Do not propose to me any sculptures fit for the drawing and dining-rooms of the wives of Paris bankers. Whatever is futile is not simple, noble; whatever is not of a long duration is unfit for this monument; I repeat, that there must be only kind of furniture in it, not even curtains. As to the plan which has gained the prize, it does not reach my ideas; it was the first that I rejected. It is true I gave for a basis, to preserve part of the monument of the Magdalen as it exists; but this expression is an ellipsis,—it was to be understood that the most possible of it should be preserved, otherwise there would have been no need of a programme: it was only necessary to execute the original plan. My intention is not to have a church, but a temple; and I further wished that all should be pulled down nor preserved. If the two propositions were incompatible, viz. that of having a temple, or preserving the church of the Magdalen it was right to attend to the definition a temple. By temple, I mean a monument, such as was at Athens, and as is not at Paris. There are many churches at Paris; these are in every village. I should not have taken it ill if the contradiction had been pointed out between having a temple, and preserving what was intended for a church. The first was the principal idea, the second only accessary: M Vignon must, therefore, divined what I meant.— As to the expense fixed at three millions, I do not make an absolute condition; I wished to be understood, that I did not have another Panthéon, such as that of St. Geneviève has already cost above fifteen millions. But in saying three millions, I did not mean that a million or two more should enter into the comparison with having a more or less beautiful monument. I might, if necessary, order five, or even six millions: the definitive plan will regulate this.

You will not fail to tell the 4th class of the Institute, that it was in its own report that I discovered the motives that have determined me.—To which I pray God to have you in his holy keeping.

The Motion was lost,

Registry Bill—brought in by Mr. Walsh —read 1st time—2 Reading on Monday next.

Mr. James Wilson moved that he have leave of absence after Monday next during the present Session.

Captain Matthews would oppose leave being granted—when he had asked for leave it had been refused—he thought the Hon. Gentleman should give some reason for the application.

Mr. Wilson said that he was called to Quebec on business.

Mr. Thomson (Frontenac) said that either Hon. Members might ask for leave for the same reasons—he should oppose the motion.

Leave was given to Mr. Wilson by a majority of 13. Ajourned.

Friday January 12.

WELLAND CANAL BILL—(with Mr. Ralph's Rider)—2 Reading.

The Attorney General, hoped the House would reconsider the matter, and reject the rider—it was an unnecessary caution—there could be no trick or design in the despatch—it contained a gracious offer, and did not convey any other idea than that the money would be paid by the Imperial Government—such an ungrounded suspicion had never before been made, and we should be ashamed to make it now—the money was to be expended for the benefit of the people of this Province—the Company would consider it disgraceful if such an ungrateful return was made for the liberality which had been shown to them—if the House was sincerely desirous to see the completion of this great improvement, it ought not to prevent it, by disgusting the Government when offering its aid—if the Rider passed with the Bill, it would prevent its passing into a Law and injure the Company at a critical moment—at a time when such aid was much wanted—he moved that the Bill be recommitted.

Mr. Rolph, thought that the Rider did not convey any unworthy suspicion—he was sent here not to throw open the rights of his constituents to what was called good faith—not to be actuated by politeness or acquiescence, but to protect those rights—he would do his duty to the Country in such matters, and was assured that the noble mind of George IV would not consider it disgusting—he would ask the Hon. Gent. to look into the public accounts, and let them speak for themselves, and then say whether such a Rider was unnecessary—the Territorial Revenue was said not to be under the control of this House, and the sum named in the Bill might be paid from it for the Canal.

The question for recommitting the Bill being put, there were—Yeas 18—Nays 12—Carried by a majority of 6.

The House then went into a Committe of the whole on the Bill, and after some further discussion, the Rider was, on motion of the Attorney General, rejected from the Bill by a majority of 6—and ordered for a third reading this day. On the third reading of the Bill, Mr. Bidwell again proposed a Rider the same in substance as Mr. Rolphs', which was again rejected. The Bill passed, was signed, and sent to the Legislative Council.—Majority 9.

The Petitions of the Physicians and Surgeons of Kingston, was referred to Messrs. Rolph & Morris.

The House then went into Committee of the whole, on the answers received to the several Addresses of last Session, in consequence of which a Resolution was passed by Mr. Rolph.

It appeared that the Hon. mover of that motion was not prepared to submit any particular course to be adopted by the House, and after some desultory conversation, the Committee rose—to sit again this day week.

Bill for Abolishing Imprisonment for Debt—second reading.

Mr. Rolph, said that in introducing this measure to the attention of the House, he felt himself called upon to explain the objects, and provisions of the Bill. He had brought it forward during the last Session, and the Bill he then proposed had been printed for the use of Members during the recess—it had no doubt received their attention—he considered it necessary to make this explanation, as a similar measure was now pending before the Legislature of the United States, that he might not be considered as following the example of that Country, and therefore draw upon himself the epithet of Democrat. The Bill now proposed went to do away imprisonment for debt—and to release all those now in confinement, on oath and bond, giving bail not to leave the Province—it afforded the security of property when there was any, to the Creditor, but repealed the unjust and arbitrary power, which the law now gave him over the person of his unfortunate Debtor. It provided a punishment to be inflicted on fraudulent debtors, as a crime against society—it punished fraud as a public offence, but did away with the power of incarcerating a man body in a jail for that which might arise properly be considered a misfortune. The barbarous practice of imprisonment for debt had been borrowed by the Romans from the Grecians, and at one time the Roman law allowed the partition of the mans body for the payment of his debts—this was afterwards abolished, and the debtor was confined in Irons. The time was in our own Country when the latter practice prevailed—it however was not now the case, but the body was still liable to imprisonment. The law in its present shape was attended with many hardships and cruelties—an unfortunate debtor at the instance of a hard hearted and merciless creditor might be dragged 60 or 70 miles from his family and be thrown into prison, there to remain cut off from the society of his family and friends, at a time when he most needed their assistance, deprived perhaps of the means of obtaining the common necessaries of life, not for any offence committed against the peace of society, or the public, but in many cases to satisfy the vindictive feelings of some remorseless creditor—he knew of a instance himself, which existed (at least it did exist, unless it had been lately relieved,) where a man who had served his Country for many years, with a Wife and Seven Children, and with Seven Wounds received in defence of his Country, had been kept in jail, and punished by a rigorous imprisonment for years, although his case was one which admitted of doubt whether he really owed the debt or not. The present Bill was such an one as he thought must recommend itself to every humane man, for he considered it the height of cruelty and inhumanity to imprison the debtor who was willing to pay his debts. The Bill offered no injustice to the creditor, as it gave him the security of property, and protected the public against the commission of fraud. The Legislature had from time to time passed laws for the amelioration of Debtors, but had stopped short in their benevolent intentions. They had provised jail limits—they supplied the imprisoned party with an allowance of 3*s* per week, when his means of self subsistence were exhausted—the aged were released—and measures had been proposed for those owing more moderate debts—these were what he would term but morsels of remedies—he would go the full length, and do away with the barbarous custom of allowing any man to measure out the quantum of punishment to be inflicted when he himself alone was concerned, and thus deprive the Country of the benefits of the industry of the Debtor, which would enable him to pay his debts, or readily to discharge his debts—he would not attempt to justify fraud upon any grounds—the man who abandoned his family and left them to starve was justly considered as a spectacle of human depravity—and yet might it not happen that a long and rigorous imprisonment, at the mercy of his Creditor, the Debtor had been driven by despair to make a conveyance of his property, for the support of those who were more dear to him than life, which would be considered as legal and valid, and pleaded in extenuation for the very man whose cruelty had driven him to pursue a course, which had he enjoyed his liberty, his mind would have revolted at.

The Bill would have one good tendency, as it would restrain the custom which prevailed too generally, of fraudulent debtors, in order to conceal property, and the undue obtaining of credit as fraud, while it properly withheld a power which should not be intrusted to the caprice or avarice of any individual, and which power was liable to many abuses—in all other cases the law did not allow any man to punish, or award the amount of damage in his own case, and why should this be the only exception—should it be endured that any man, could at his own instance imprison his fellow creature, during pleasure—and it not repugnant to common sense and humanity—it often happened too, that the imprisonment was visited on the most innocent—misfortune, sickness, or the injustice of others, might throw an innocent and honest man in the power of his Creditor, while the guilty cause of his misfortunes escaped unpunished—the Elements—hurricane and tempest—the loss of office, and with it the loss of bread, might place an unfortunate debtor in the situation he had described. The law was barbarous and should be done away. The Indians were said to be cruel in war, but in peace they exercised no cruelty equal to this. We should give up old prejudices, and do away with this remnant of barbarity. The names of men distinguished for learning and humanity,—Bacon, Blackstone—Eldon—Elenborough and Dr. Johnston, could be adduced as authorities in favor of this measure, as it had received their sanction. The Bill if it should pass into a law, would proclaim a jubilee throughout the Province—it would rescue many unfortunate and innocent men to their families and friends, and reflect the highest honor on the Legislature.

Mr. Bidwell, after the able speech which had been made by the learned Gentleman, considered it unnecessary to make any further observations—he concurred in the opinion, that it was unjust and cruel that any man should be at the mercy of another, and liable to be imprisoned as long as malice might dictate—he would punish fraud as a crime, but not visit the debtor with the hardships which the law now inflicted upon him—the practice was barbarous and should be abolished.

Mr. C. Jones, had opposed the principle of the Bill on a former occasion and should continue to do so—he considered the Creditor as entitled to every consideration, and he believed that in most cases the honest Debtor, always received consideration from his Creditor—if the present Bill, having a retrospective operation too, should pass into a law, it would produce a serious change in our Commercial relations, and seriously affect the credit of the Country.

The Bill was reported as amended, and ordered for a third Reading on Monday.

Mr. M'Bride moved that 500 Copies of the Petition of Robert Randall be printed for use of Members.

Mr. C. Jones objected as it was unusual to print the private Petitions of any person—he could not see the object of the motion unless it was to circulate what the Petition contained throughout the Country—he was surprised that such a motion should be made.

He was followed on the same side by Mr. J. Jones and M'Lean.

The discussion led to a question of order and the House was cleared of strangers.

On the door being opened.

The House Adjourned.

Saturday, Jan. 18.

THE REPLEVIN BILL—was read a first time —its object is to introduce the Replevin laws of England into this Province—brought in by Mr. Fothergill—2d Reading on Wednesday next.

The OTTAWA DISTRICT SCHOOL BILL—Read 3d time reported as amended—3d Reading on Tuesday next. Adjourned.

Monday, Jan. 15.

ABOLITION BILL—3d Reading.

Mr. Perry would move the recommitment of the Bill, as he considered that some of its provisions in their present shape were not calculated to produce a good effect—as the Bill now stood it did not go do, what it professed—it left in cases an abolishment of imprisonment for debt, but he feared that where one was released from prison, it might be the means of sending two or three others to Jail—if Bail could not be found the person must go to Jail—indictments for fraud could be found in the Quarter Sessions but must be transferred to the Court of King's Bench for trial, and the parties might remain in Jail for a Twelvemonth.

Mr. Lefferty would move to commit the Bill to the flames—we had already laws enough to make people honest—this Bill if it passed would cause the ruin of many persons, who had entrusted their property to others—the example of the United States with respect to the non-imprisonment for debt, afford to dishonest creditors to evade the payment of their debts, was enough to shew that such a Bill as this would work injustice, and be the ruin of many families—a late misfortune, had caused him to look on the Bill as it might be said that he was now at the mercy of his creditors—with honest intentions he had nothing to fear from them, without such a law as this—he should oppose it, and move its passing 6 months hence.

Captain Matthews was friendly to the principle of the Bill, but though there were many good, points in it, it had its defects—by its provisions, a man's whole property might be taken from him for the payment of his debts, and if this was not sufficient to satisfy them, the fruits of after industry might be wrested from him also; this he thought improper—after a mans all was once taken from him, he should be free to exercise his industry for the benefit of himself and family, without being liable to be stript and ruined anew—the Bill, however, contained the desirable object of abolishing imprisonment for debt, he should give it his support.

The Attorney General said, that not having been present when the principles of this measure were discussed, and when its different provisions were debated in committe, he had not the opportunity of knowing how far it was supported by the general sense of the House, or whether there would be any use in offering, at this late stage, the objections which he entertained against the Bill. If, indeed, it was one of those measures which were so often characterized in the House as liberal measures, he thought it most probable that he might as well save himself the trouble, and the House the detention, of pointing out the evils which he was convinced, would result from it in practice; indeed, he felt little encouragement at all events to do so, because it was obvious to him, from what had taken place in the last Session, that the Legislature was little likely to agree in any measure of this description. He had himself thought that something might be done to mitigate the apparent rigor of the Law with respect to imprisonment for debt, and as an experiment, and in order to proceed gradually in a matter that might very sensibly affect the Commercial interests of the country, he had last year proposed a Bill, providing that when a debtor should remain imprisoned beyond twelve months, for a debt not exceeding £20, he should be discharged from confinement, on account of that debt, leaving his lands and goods still liable to the Creditor ---so far he thought we might safely and reasonably go; and indeed we had the example of England for it, a similar Statute having been passed there in 1803. In this House, however, it was opposed by some because they thought it went too far, and by others, because it did not go far enough. After discussion, however, it was adopted, but was rejected in the other branch of the Legislature. Now he did not see how, with this declaration of opinion so inconsistent with the Bill at present before the House, any hope could be indulged of such a measure passing---for his part he was decidedly opposed to it, and should not, upon the third reading, do more than state his objections to the leading principles of the Bill, and should not embarrass the discussion by remarking on the several clauses. He trusted that members who could not assent to a Bill so wild in its principle, and defective in its details, would not have credit for less humanity than the hon. and learned member who had proposed it. No doubt, as individuals, they would feel the same compassion for debtors immured in a prison, though they might not feel themselves at liberty, as Legislators, to indulge those feelings, so far as to adopt an innovation which might be ruinous to the interests of the country, and for which an example had not yet been set by other Legislatures upon whom the same feelings upon similar grounds, had been frequently urged---that if the present Bill passed, abolishing entirely imprisonment for debt, it would be found that commerce would be checked, and the monied transactions of the Country seriously affected. He would ask, what would become of institutions, from which so much relief and assistance had accrued to individuals, could, or would, be so liberal in their accommodation, under so entire a change of circumstances? would they venture to lend their Capital to persons who, though they might have the means of payment, might set them at defiance with impunity? Could we expect that our Merchants would hereafter obtain the same advances in Lower Canada, when their creditors found that they had no other security and integrity to trust to, and that they had no longer the means of compelling payment from a dishonest debtor? It had been asked by the mover of this Bill, whether the Merchants in Lower Canada advanced their Money or their Merchandize in the expectation of having the satisfaction of confining their debtor within the walls of a prison? Certainly not---but that was not a fair and reasonable way of putting the question. The Foreign Merchants, he admitted, when they gave their Credit, looked to the means of the party to pay, and made his advances on the faith of those means; but then it was necessary he should possess the power of ensuring the honest application of those means---as the Law now stood he had that power---if this Bill were passed, he would no longer have it. It had often been proposed in the Legislatures of the several States in America, to abolish imprisonment for debt, but the proposition had been usually regarded as one inconsistent with the interest of Society. And in this Province he believed more than in almost any other, we should doubt the safety of so wide a departure from a system that prevails every where else---we border upon a Foreign Country from which strangers of apparently respectable character, are almost daily arriving among us---every year brings thousands of settlers from Europe, whose integrity and means must be judged of from appearances. The credulity of the people of the Province, in reposing confidence in strangers was great, and it was well it was so, as it enabled them to obtain assistance and overcome their first difficulties; but too frequently the trader found he had been imposed upon, and if this last and most effectual measure to compel a fraudulent person to pay his honest debts no longer existed, he feared that the whole course of dealing must be changed, and a very considerable check given to the trade of the country. It was an error to suppose that every person imprisoned for debt, was imprisoned from mere inability to pay---it was often otherwise; obstinacy, a litigious spirit, or a fraudulent disposition, not unfrequently induced persons to suffer a long confinement, which they could avoid if they would. No professional gentleman could have failed to observe many instances of this, and all must know that many an honest debt had been paid, which, but for these means of compulsion, would never have been paid. He thought besides, the abolition of imprisonment for debt would be hurtful to the person dealing, as well as the person dealt with---he was convinced, if the fear of this last remedy no longer impended, many persons would embark more heedlessly in doubtful speculation, and many would, with less reserve, exceed their income, and incur expenses beyond their ability to meet. We should look at the question in all points of view, and if we did, he was satisfied, it was impossible the House could pass this Bill---its imperfections were glaring and manifest---it pretended to afford a protection which in truth amounted to nothing---it charged, provided that if any debtor by fraudulent practices contracted debt or evaded payment, he should be held to bail, or committed for the fraud and subsequently tried for it, and that the fraud must be charged in proper legal form.---This was all very well, but surely the House must see that fraud in a moral view, and what the law designates and treats as fraud were very different things---A Debtor might shew his Creditor enough money to discharge his debt, and yet refuse to pay him---he might be a dishonest---he was dishonest, so the law would be if this Bill should pass---money could not be seized in execution and there would be no fraud. This Bill did not extend the bounds of fraud as an offence against law---it professed to make no change in that---the debtor or person might take up £1000 worth of Goods, and before the credit expired convert them into money, and live upon it, holding his Creditor at defiance---or before execution issued he could sell his personal property and put the purchase money out of reach---as the law now stood he could be put in Jail, and compelled to disgorge---if this Bill should pass there would be no remedy---he could not be punished for fraud, because the law allows him to do so, and this Bill does not declare any thing to be fraud which was not fraud before---he pointed out the injurious effects of the Bill and concluded by expressing his confidence that the House could not think it right to concur in it.

Mr. Hamilton said, that as he considered some of the clauses of the Bill imperfect, he should vote for its being recommitted.

Mr. M'Bride considered the principle of the Bill to be good; it did no injustice to the creditor---as the law now stood, a man might be deprived of the opportunity of providing for his family---he knew an instance of a person had suffered a long imprisonment unjustly, and the Attorney General had been instrumental in getting him liberated---he should support the Bill.

Mr. Baker said that he drew a distinction between fraud and misfortune; the one was deserving of punishment, and this Bill went to inflict it---in this country there was not a Bankrupt Law for the discharge of debtors, and there need be no apprehension of injuring the rights of creditors by this Bill.

Captain Matthews said that confinement for debt was barbarous, and particularly so in some of the Jails in this Province---the Niagara Jail, for example, he said, was not fit to keep hogs in, and he had no doubt that in that Jail the most horrible scenes of profanation of mind which Gourlay laboured under, from confinement in its cells---he himself would rather be sold a slave to the Dey of Algiers, than go to the cursed cell where Gourlay was confined.

Mr James Wilson thought that the Bill should be reheard, the Country was already in an awful state, and did not require so many Bills---few were now able to pay their debts, and it would be better to do something to relieve their distress than to be passing so many Bills---he would compare this Colony to a person in the agonies of death, with a weeping family round him---the Doctor is cramming him with pills, and the Legislature is cramming the Country with Bills---this system of Bill upon Bill would do no good---without time being given, many families might be driven to distress, and he saw nothing doing to assist them---to use a Seamans phrase we should allow the Colony to lie-too a little while, and after a time, when she had recovered herself, it would be time enough to Legislate on such matters.

Mr. Rolph moved that the Bill do now pass.

Mr. Gordon in amendment moved that it do pass this day 3 Months.

On Mr. Gordon's amendment being put there were---Yeas 18---Nays 16.

Carried in the affirmative by a majority of 2, and the Bill is therefore lost. Adjourned.

Tuesday, Jan. 16.

The Petition of the Commissioners of the late Bank at Kingston was referred to Messrs. M'Lean, Attorney General, and Thomson, to report by Bill or otherwise and with power to send for persons and papers.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of the Magistrates of the Midland District praying for additional assessments made their report. They consider it inexpedient to comply with the Prayer of the Petition, until more accurate information is received with respect to the state of the District funds.

The Report was adopted---and 200 Copies ordered to be printed.

A Message was received from the Lieutenant Governor by Major Hillier, transmitting, Further Report of the Burlington Canal Commissioners.

Population Returns for the last year, and a Communication on the subject of the Rideau Canal, in consequence of a representation from Col. Bye---also recommending Legislative provision for the occupation of certain Lands for the purposes of the Canal.

Mr. Morris moved an address of thanks for the Messages of this day. Carried.

The District Court Bill.---several clauses were added to the Committee reported progress and obtained leave to sit again to-morrow. Adjourned.

CLERGY RESERVES.

Resolutions Proposed by Mr. Morris.

1st.---Resolved, that the despatch of the Right Hon. Earl Bathurst to Sir John Colborne Secretary of State for the colonies, communicated to this House on the 12th instant, by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in answer to the address to His Majesty of this House at its last session, respecting the Clergy Reserves and the establishment of a Legislative Assembly, is as much as it is silent on a material part of the respectful representation of this House, contained in the said address.

2d.---Resolved, that the Imperial Parliament, by conferring on the people of Upper Canada, the Constitution and important objects, similar to that enjoyed by the inhabitants of the Parent State, was desirous of promoting the happiness and prosperity of all persons who might become resident in the Colony.

3d.---Resolved, that the appropriation of a seventh of the surveyed lands in the Province, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy, is a striking manifestation of the paternal regard of the Government of the Mother Country to all His Majesty's subjects, and that the Act of any Provincial Legislature thereon, a most important part of the said Constitution.

4th.---Resolved, that the Imperial Legislature foresaw the probability of circumstances in the condition of the inhabitants of this Colony, which might render the attention to the law, with respect to the Clergy Reserves inexpedient, and wisely left the Provincial Parliament at liberty to make such changes therein as the future state of Society might require.

5th.---Resolved, that the construction given to the Imperial Act which appropriates the Clergy Reserves, by individuals connected with the Church of England; and the determination of the Clergy of that Church to withhold from all other denomination of Protestants residing within the said Province, the enjoyment of any part of the benefits arising, or which may arise from the lands so set apart, call for the immediate attention of the Provincial Legislature to a subject of such vital interest to the Public in general.

6th.---Resolved that a comparatively small proportion of the inhabitants of Upper Canada, are members of the Church of England; and therefore ought not in justice to desire the sole enjoyment by their Clergy, of all the advantages which these Lands present to the exclusion of their fellow subjects, although equally loyal and firm in their attachment to His Majesty's Government and the constitution.

7th.---Resolved, that in a thinly inhabited country such as Canada, where the means of moral instruction to the poor are not easily obtained, it is the bounden duty of the Parliament to afford every assistance within its power, towards the support of education.

8th---Resolved, that the present provision for the support of District and Common Schools, is quite inadequate to the wants of the people, and ought by every reasonable exertion, to be increased so as to place within the reach of the poorest inhabitant the advantages of a decent education.

9th.---Resolved, that it is the opinion of a great proportion of the people of this province, that the Clergy lands, in place of being engaged by the Clergy of an inconsiderable part of the population, ought to be disposed of, and the proceeds of their sale, applied to increase the Provincial allowance, for the support of District and Common Schools, and the endowment of a respectable Provincial Seminary for learning.

10th.---Resolved, that it is expedient to pass a bill, authorising the sale of all the Clergy Lands, within this province, for the purpose set forth in these resolutions; and to address His Majesty, humbly soliciting that he will be graciously pleased to give the Royal assent to the said bill.

11th.---Resolved, that the Chairman be instructed to move the house, for the appointment of a select Committee to draft a Bill pursuant to the last resolution.

From the Brockville Recorder.

Mr. Editor,

"To promote Education and Industry among the Indians and destitute Settlers in Canada," is a design so plausible, that in justice to all parties, I beg you will insert a Churchman's reasons for refusing to join with Mr. Osgood in a system of operations for which he claims this imposing title.

1. Because it is not competent to any individual, and that individual a foreigner, to travel about the Province and collect money, or distribute it, for purposes having an important bearing on our civil and ecclesiastical institutions; such matters being properly coupled to persons duly authorized and appointed, viz:—The Bishop and Archdeacons of the Province, the Superintendant of the Board of Education, and the Superintendant of Indian affairs.

2. Because a considerable sum of money has been already raised in addition to a former balance unappropriated, without its appearing from the annual report published, that any good has been effected, or in truth that there is sufficient judicious plan has even been put into operation, the only item of disbursement exhibited being the expenses of Mr Osgood.

3. Because instead of now proceeding to the appropriation of the sum (nearly £200) therein raised, to some wise and benevolent purpose, Mr. Osgood's endeavors are directed to raising additional contributions without any specific objects deserving of further assistance; and the general pretence before referred to of instructing the Indians and destitute Settlers is ill supported by Mr. Osgood's confining himself to those parts where there are very few if any of either.

4. Because when a man professes to be of no particular religion it gives just occasion to doubt whether he be of any profession at all, unless the difficulty should be considered solved by finding that notwithstanding these pretensions he in reality adopts that form which is notoriously hostile to the interests of our Church and in our opinion not conducive to the welfare of the state.

5. Because a sound Churchman is concerned to propagate religion according to the doctrine and discipline of the Church to which he belongs, not deeming it safe to co-operate with those who undervalue the Sacraments and tenets of faith.

6. Because notwithstanding the pretensions of union and peace and brotherly love which accompany the endeavors to obtain support, no expressions or conduct are considered too bad against those who cannot conscientiously join those plans.

7. Because the unjustifiable practice is resorted to of printing the names of persons as specially invited to support these Societies, for the double purpose of deceiving the public with the appearance of their patronage, and holding them up to public odium should they refuse.

8. Because as a refinement on this practice the names of those whose acquiescence is doubtful or improbable are mixed in an ambitory resolution with the names of those who are well known to be active promoters of the cause; a method having an especial tendency to deceive.

9. Because to heighten the appearance of unanimous support, no scruple is made at inserting the names of persons as subscribers, on the express stipulation that they shall pay nothing, but that their subscriptions if paid at all, shall be paid by the Society's Agent, Mr. Osgood.

10. Because no hesitation is felt in using the names of persons as if favorable to his designs, after they are know to be decidedly opposed to them.

Mr. Osgood's schemes for collecting money being multifarious as well as ill-defined, it is necessary to object to them seriatim.

To begin with the professed design of instructing the Indians:—

His interference in this matter is objected to.

1. Because this is a matter which for upwards of a century has been pursued with various success (sometimes of the most pleasing kind) by the Venerable Society for propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts, who still prosecute their endeavors through the Lord Bishop of the diocese in every judicious and practicable method, unless when hindered by want of funds, which it would be far greater charity to assist them with in aid of such a purpose, than to employ in a different direction.

2. That the method of instruction which Mr. Osgood proposes is in contradistinction to that of the Society for propagation of the Gospel, and therefore more calculated to neutralize the effect of their endeavors than to produce any additional good.

3. That it is placing in the hands of a Foreigner an ascendency over the Indians which, because it is needless, is certainly unwise.

Objections to Mr. Osgood's plan on behalf of the destitute Settlers are—

1. That persons of this description are very rarely to be met with in this place, where every labouring man in health may earn as much in two days as will keep him a week, and where the means of education (as also in most parts of the Province) are abundant.

2. Because Mr. Osgood does not appear to visit the extreme confines of population where want is most likely to exist, but where it would be difficult to relieve them.

Female Societies in aid of Mr. Osgood's schemes are objected to—

1. Because public meetings and public societies of women are at variance with the unassuming graces and delicate duties of their sex; adduced privileges and duties which, in direct contrary to the precept, and introductory, if we may believe what history records, of the most alarming subversion of social order.

2. Because the duty of women "to obey their own husbands in all things," is set at defiance by Mr. Osgood, who does not hesitate to solicit their assistance contrary to the positive injunctions of those whom they are bound to obey.

3. Because the duty of clothing the poor is one far better attended to by every female in her own family or in the circle of her immediate relations, than in public Committee with Mr. Osgood at its head.

4. Because it is a reflection upon the female character in Canada which it does not deserve, to suppose that Mr. Osgood must necessarily travel several thousand miles at the public expense in order to incite those who have it in their power to acts of Charity so simple.

Mr. Osgood's plan of a Book Society is objectionable—

1. Because it is a spurious imitation of the plan of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, for parochial lending Libraries, which on a much more advantageous footing, it is the design of various committees in this Province to promote.

2. Because in this part of his system Mr. Osgood acts as the Agent of the Sunday School Union and other religious societies, having no pretensions to the countenance of the Church of England and acting in contradistinction to some of her most valued institutions.

3. Because it is the probable object of these schemes to bring in a mass of publications unimproving and dissipating of the principles of the Church of England, exolling other sects and parties, and especially tending to mislead the public opinion in a country, where our means of counteracting these impressions must be limited.

4. Because Mr. Osgood avows the principle of putting "bane and antidote" both in the hands of the rising generation and if not in respect of some primary truths yet at least with regard to what he calls "most essential" a term of great service to the devil in misleading and destroying the souls of men.

5. Because Mr. Osgood is a known objector to the Catechism of the Church of England, and has been the means of breaking up one School where it was taught.

On general grounds Mr. Osgood is further objected to, because the respectable names by whom he appears really to have been sanctioned are reducible to three classes—

1st. Those who are dissenters from the Church of England, being of the same opinions, at least in the general respect with Mr. Osgood himself, and these seem to constitute the larger proportion of his Committee.

2d. Those whose regard to the peculiar doctrines and discipline of our Church is so far uninfluential that on most occasions they prefer co-operating with Dissenters.

3d. Those who have not very particularly informed themselves respecting Mr. Osgood's plans, and who either from the pressure of more serious duties or an overflow of general benevolence, have unintentionally given countenance to a system at variance with their known opinions.

And last,—Because being blest with Governers, both in Church and State who have the fear of God before their eyes, and a hearty desire to promote any rational and well ordered design tending to His glory, their sanction has not been obtained, and we are bound rather to strengthen their hands in all pious endeavors, than to do the contrary by opposing them.

I am, Mr. Editor,
Your obedient Servant,
CLERICUS.

Brockville, Dec. 1826. Communicated.

UNITED STATES.

Extract form the proceeding of a Meeting held in St. Lawrence County. N. Y.

"Whereas the Imperial Government of Great Britain in and by its several acts of parliament, passed on the 5th August, 1825, and on the 27th June, 1825, have imposed, upon the introduction into the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, of Bread-stuffs, Ashes, Lumber, and various other articles of American produce, such duties of import as in most cases, practically amount to a prohibition of trade and intercourse therein; and in and by the latter act, be actually prohibited, among other things, the introduction into the said provinces, of salted provisions from the United States: effectually depriving the inhabitants of this extensive and hitherto growing frontier of the benefits of its accustomed trade, in the channel pointed out by the finger of nature herself, and heretofore freely and under the high sanctions of the law of nature and nations, the free and unrestricted trade, to a great portion of that period, by amicable treaty regulations—measures tending in their effects, if not seasonably and effectually counteracted to impoverish the natural resources, undermine the prosperity, and fearfully to reduce the population, and consequently, to sap the strength of this important border of the Union; which acts, and all their provisions, whether they have their origin in the predetermined hostility of the British Government, which pervades the enactments in relation to the general Colonial policy as it regards the United States, afford some grounds to fear, or whether they are to be attributed to a total disregard of our rights when they may be deemed by that government to come in collision with their own interests; ought to be met by calm yet determined opposition, and to be counteracted by all the means which either Providence or fortune may have placed within our reach. And whereas, by the late establishment of the boundary line between the United States and Canada, which lies between the point where the 45th degree of north latitude strikes the River St. Lawrence, and Lake Superior, as settled by the commissioners of both governments, under the 6th article of the Treaty of Ghent, the several islands in fifteen miles; thereby enabling the latter power to controul the use of the waters, and to impose, by law, such countervailing duties or burthens on foreign vessels and their cargoes, entering the same, as sound policy, and the ends of substantial justice may require: It is therefore

Resolved,—That in the deliberate opinions of this meeting it is not only the undoubted right, but an incumbant duty, arising from the obligation to extend equal protection to all of the national legislature, satisfied as they must already be that organization affords no reasonable hope of relief, to pass a law imposing upon British products, passing through or upon, the waters and American waters of the St. Lawrence river, duties corresponding in amount with those imposed by the British act of June 27th, 1825, on American products passing into the Canadas, and in every respect countervailing the provisions of the said act of parliament or to adopt such other measures as shall, by affording an adequate compensation for the loss of the markets of the United States, produce relief of our present sufferings.

Resolved,—That the sentiments embraced in the foregoing recitals, and the substance of the preceding resolution, be embraced in a respectful memorial to Congress, to be signed, in behalf of this meeting, by the chairman and secretary, and forthwith forwarded to our Representatives in Congress from this district, and to our Senators in Congress from this state."

Letters from Washington express a belief that, if the British Government persist in refusing to allow us a fair participation in the trade with the West Indies' measures will be adopted to interdict the trade with all their American Colonies. At present, it is thought, a principle of accommodation will be pursued, to give time for further consideration and deliberation.—Mercantile Advertiser.

From the same source we learn that, as a measure of retaliation, it is believed that Congress will interdict the Trade to the British possessions on the Continent of North America, which are not closed by the late Order in Council.—Baltimore paper.

Provincial,

Montreal, January 5,

In the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, on the 21st ult. leave was granted to Mr. M'Donell, to bring up a petition of the Magistrates, and other inhabitants of the Ottawa District, praying for a grant of money to repair the roads leading from the county of Glengary to the Ottawa River. There is scarcely any thing of greater importance in the welfare of a new country, than good roads, as they not only facilitate the intercourse between the inhabitants, enable them to convey their produce to market, and as Sir P. Maitland observed in his opening speech, without the aid of good roads, the people of the province cannot avail themselves of the many advantages which the improvements of inland navigation would otherwise afford. The Ottawa District is likely to become one of the most consequential portions of Upper Canada—its local situation gives it decided advantages over the other Districts, and the public improvements which the home government intend making in that quarter, will raise this thriving settlement into a degree of consequence which was not contemplated only a few years ago, by the most anxious and sanguine of its admirers.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Suicide.—A case of melancholy Suicide took place at Chinguacousy on the morning of the 19th ult. George Paine, of Esquesing, cut his throat with a razor; he survived four hours after inflicting the mortal wound. On making signs for paper and ink he was furnished with them, when he wrote as follows:—"I was afraid to live and in a crazy fit did this."

An inquest was held on view of the body, by Allan Robinet Esq. Coroner and a verdict brought in of "self murder."

Communicated.

The Committee of the Ernest Town and Kingston Road Society, beg leave to present the following report of their proceedings during the present year.

Your Committee, anxious to promote the objects of your society, in the most effectual manner, took an time after their appointment, in addressing a petition to the Provincial Parliament, praying for a pecuniary grant in aid of your Road Society. Committee have the pleasure to state, that the Legislature, duly appreciating your patriotic and liberal exertions, and the beneficial tendency of your example, has given its sanction to the prayer of your petition, by a grant of £100, which sum, through the kindness and liberality of John Macauly, Esq. has been drawn from the Provincial treasury, and paid to the order of the Committee, without any deduction or expense. Your Committee, after adopting such measures as they deemed most effectual for collecting the subscriptions and donations to your funds, proceeded to carry into effect the most prudent means for supplying them; and, finding that the length of the road to be repaired, the insufficiency of your funds to complete the whole in a proper manner, required the considered of Lake, and as imposing on His Majesty's Government, the disagreeable necessity of again refusing that, which it has already denied, in terms not to be misunderstood.

The fourth Resolution is much in the same spirit as the foregoing one.

The fifth Resolution proposes to do, what has already been done, only varying the mode. "The

—has been expended in clearing, turnpiking, gravelling, and other repairs on the York road, between Collins's and Mill Creeks, as most required it, and the further sum of £30, 7s. 11d. has been paid by your Committee in discharging the arrears of last year amounting, in the aggregate, to the sum of £184, 10s. 11½d, expended as above stated. Although the nature of the repairs and improvements are such, that it is difficult to convey a distinct idea of the amount of the labour performed; yet your Committee are persuaded, that all who have taken the trouble to inspect the same, must be fully satisfied that the sum above stated has been faithfully and prudently applied.

The amount of subscriptions and donations received during the present year, including the grant of the Legislature, is £170, 3s. leaving a balance against your Committee of £14, 10s. 11½d.; and your committee are also under engagements for contracts not completed, to the amount of £80, to meet which, there are no other funds than the sum of £46 due on your subscription list—that so large a sum remains unpaid, your Committee believes to be attributed rather to the pressure of the times, than to any unwillingness on the part of those who are in arrears.

Your Committee have further to observe, that, notwithstanding much has been done, yet, that owing to the nature of the soil in the lower part of the road, which, for the most part, requires to be well gravelled and the great amount of travelling thereon, much still remains to be done before the said road can be considered in a durable manner. As the state of the public roads, in some measure, marks the degree of wealth, public spirit, and enterprize in a country, your Committee, therefore, confidently hopes, that your exertions, and the aid of the Legislature, will be continued until your object—a good road—is obtained.

All which is respectfully submitted.

By order of the Committee,

JOSHUA R. LOCKWOOD.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, January 20, 1827.

His Majesty's Speech at the opening of the present Session of the Imperial Parliament will be found in this days paper. There is no other news of importance from England.

The press of other matter has hitherto prevented our giving the Resolutions on the subject of the Clergy Reserves. We give them now, and think we may venture to say, that on making an analysis of them, most persons will be surprised at their contents. The first Resolution, conveys a censure to the Right Honorable the Secretary for the Colonies (or rather to His Majesty's Governors), for having treated what is termed the "respectful representations" of the House of Assembly, with silence. The Despatch will be found to contain an opinion sufficiently conclusive, on the subject of these Reserves, couched in such language, as would lead one to suppose, that it could not well be misunderstood, and such, as would induce any person to pause, before attempting, as it were, to compel His Majesty's Government, by any measures that might be pursued, again to reiterate opinions they had already expressed. We are sure that it is not the most pleasing part of the duty of that Government to refuse requests which are presented to it, or whenever that refusal becomes necessary, it is always conveyed in respectful language.

The second Resolution conveys a sense of obligation for our "inestimable constitution, similar in all important respects to that of the Parent State." And yet, the general spirit of the Resolutions, when taken together, go to destroy every think like an Established Church, one of the most "important" features in the Constitution of that Parent State.

The third Resolution considers the power given to the Assembly to Legislate on this subject, as an important part of the Constitution—doubtless they have the power, and it is certainly important—but under certain restrictions most carefully guarded, least an unwise and improvident exercise of it should take place, and in order that the appropriation of these Lands should not be altered so as to affect the spirit of the Constitution. As far as one Branch (and that an important one) of the Imperial Legislature is concerned, it would appear a fruitless step. Any attempt to produce such a change may therefore be considered as Calm, and as imposing on His Majesty's Government, the disagreeable necessity of again refusing that, which it has already denied, in terms not to be misunderstood.

The fourth Resolution is much in the same spirit as the foregoing one.

The fifth Resolution proposes to do, what has already been done, only varying the mode. "The attention of the Legislature" has already been directed to the subject, and its Address has been answered in a manner which, if received on any other subject, would, to an ordinary mind, be considered as final and conclusive. The opinion of Lord Bathurst may, by some persons, be considered as of little or no value, but it is very clear that the Despatch conveys, not only his opinion, but also that of His Majesty's Government.

The sixth Resolution contains an assertion—and an assertion only. We venture to assert, in contradiction to it, that as an individual Sect of Christians, the Church of England contains more members in this Province, than any other individual Sect—its Clergy is, beyond doubt, the most numerous.

Nor do we admit the fact assumed in the seventh and eighth Resolutions to be correct, with respect to the means of moral instruction. The Parliament has liberally afforded "every assistance within its power to that desirable object," and we regret that they should consider it necessary to censure themselves (tenacious as they are when censured by others) on such a subject. In every District a Public School is established, and respectably supported, and an allowance made for as many Township Schools, as each Township may be able to support.

The ninth Resolution is much in the same tone and spirit as the sixth, and the same remarks apply to it, its object being from assumed facts to induce a different appropriation of the Reserves from what was originally intended.

The tenth and eleventh Resolutions have been acted upon, to their fullest extent, and a Bill is now pending for the Sale of the Reserves Judging from the opinion expressed by his Majesty's Government, conveyed by Lord Bathurst in his Despatch to the Lieutenant Governor, and by him communicated to the House of Assembly, the fate of this Bill, even if should pass here, cannot admit of doubt; and it may then be asked, whether the time of the Assembly, might not have been more usefully employed, than in the re-discussion of a question, to which an express answer had already been given?

Improvement of the St. Lawrence, Mr. Jonas Jones, has moved certain resolutions in the House of Assembly on this subject, and a joint conferrence with the Legislative Council is to be held, to take into consideration the necessity of improving the navigation of the River, by cutting Canals at certain points, and whether that improvement shall be made for a Boat, or a Steam Boat and Schooner Navigation By the report of the Surveyor Mr. Clowes, the former is estimated at £90,000, and the latter at £176,000.

The Resolutions were carried almost unanimously, and when the Report is made we shall endeavor to procure a Copy of it for the information of our readers.

Any improvement however, that may be determined upon, could only be considered as partial, unless Lower Canada joined in the undertaking, by performing that part of it, which lies within her territory. We hope that the Legislature of Lower Canada, which is shortly to meet, will evince a proper feeling, if applied to on this subject, by joining with this Province, in promoting the spirit of public improvement, which is making such rapid progress, and in which the people of both Provinces, are equally interested

The inhabitants of the Townships of Kingston and Ernestown in the Midland District, about three years ago, formed a Society for the improvement of the main Road in those Townships, and their Report for the last year will be found in another part of our paper. The Society is supported by gratuitous Subscriptions, in money and labor, and on their spirited exertions being represented to the House of Assembly last Session, the sum of £100 was voted to them, in aid of the undertaking. The example of the people of Kingston and Ernestown, is worthy of general imitation, and deserves the most unqualified praise. They have very materially improved, what was before an exceedingly bad Road, and if an application should be made on their behalf during the present Session, we hope it may be in the power of the House, to give them the same liberal support, which was extended to them last Year. Even in the event of a sum being voted generally, for the Highways throughout the Province, as the Society is still using its endeavours to make further improvement, they may very properly be considered, as entitled to more than an ordinary share of any amount, that may be so voted, in consequence of what they have already done.

The necessity and utility of good roads, was pointed in the most forcible manner, in the Speech of His Excellency the Lt. Governor, at the opening of the present Session of the Legislature, and the latter part of the Societies Report, corresponds most decidedly. in the opinion expressed by His Excellency.

While on this subject, we would just mention, that the Attorney General's Highway Bill, is again before the House. We have not had time to examine its provisions, but shall endeavour to do so, and give such information respecting it, as may be considered important, at a future period. The Bill forms a part of the Report of the Committee, on the state of the Highways in the Province The Stage Bill, reported by the same Committee, has passed the House, giving to Mr. C. Beedle, the exclusive right, of running a Stage for 21 Years from Ancaster to Sandwich.

"We have received a copy of the Alien Bill, as brought into the House of Assembly, which we intend to insert in our next. It is very different from that that was brought prematurely in by Mr. Kolph. This Bill, we have little doubt, will satisfy all those concerned, and pass through the other Branches of our Legislature, and ultimately receive His Majesty's approbation. It is, in our humble opinion, just what it ought to be."—The Gleaner.

In the Albany Gazette of the 29th ult. it is reported that a vessel had arrived at New York, which spoke the "Silas Richards," that ship in which Kean the actor took his passage for Liverpool, and was informed that Mr. Kean had died eight days after leaving New York.

Canadian Courant.

By the arrival on Saturday night of the ship Cowper, Capt. Mank, from London, and last from Cowes, we have received the London Times of the 20th, and the Courier of the 21st, being three days later than per the Josephine. A boat came off from Cowes, and brought the Courier as the ship was passing. Parliament was opened on the 21st of November, and the King's Speech, which we give below, was delivered by himself in person.—Albion.

At ten minutes before two, the King arrived at the House, and at ten minutes after two, having robed, his Majesty entered, and took his seat upon the Throne. The House of Commons were then summoned to the bar, in the usual form, by the Usher of the Black Rod, and having taken their stations, with the Speaker at their head, his Majesty delivered the following Speech in an audible tone:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have called you together at this time for the special purpose of communicating to you the measure which I judged it necessary to take in the month of September, for the admission into the Ports of the United Kingdom of certain sorts of Foreign Grain not then admissible by law.

"I have directed a Copy of the Order in Council, issued on that occasion, to be Laid before you, and I confidently trust that you will see sufficient reason for giving your sanction to the provisions of that Order, and for carrying them into effectual execution.

"I have great satisfaction in being able to inform you, that the hopes entertained at the close of the last Session of Parliament, respecting the termination of the war in the Burmese Territories, have been fulfilled and that a peace has been concluded in that quarter, highly honourable to the British arms, and to the Councils of the British Government in India.

"I continue to receive from all Foreign Powers, assurances of their earnest desire to cultivate the relations of peace and friendly understanding.

"I am exerting myself with unremitting anxiety, whether singly, or in conjunction with any Allies, as well to arrest the progress of existing hostilities, as to prevent the interrup tion of peace in different parts of the world.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons.

"I have directed the Estimates for the ensuing year to be prepared, and they will, in due time, be laid before you.

"I will take care that they shall be formed with as much attention to economy as the exigencies of the public service will permit.

"The distress which has pervaded the commercial and manufacturing classes of my subjects, during the last twelve months, has affected some important branches of the Revenue. But I have the satisfaction of informing you, that there has been no such diminution in the internal consumption of the country, as to excite any apprehensions that the great sources of our wealth and prosperity have been impaired.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have deeply sympathized with the sufferings which have been for some time past so severely felt in the manufacturing districts of the country.

"I have contemplated, with great satisfaction, the exemplary patience with which those sufferings have been borne.

"The depression under which the trade and manufactures of the country have been labouring has abated more slowly than I had thought myself warranted in anticipating. But I retain a firm expectation that this abatement will be progressive, and that the time is not distant when, under the blessing of Divine Providence, the commerce and industry of the United Kingdom will have resumed their wonted activity."

Married,

On Monday evening last, by the Rev. Mr. Jenkins, Mr. Obadiah Johnson to Miss Grace Lawrence, both of this Town.

Died,

At Glengarry, in the 79th year of his age, after a lingering illness which he bore with Christian fortitude, Allan M'Donald Esquire, a native of Inverness-shire, North Britain, much regretted by his numerous relatives and acquaintances. His remains were interred at St. Raphael on the 15th instant attended by all the Gentlemen of the District, and a numerous concourse of the Inhabitants.

This Gentleman was the last survivor of a party of about three hundred Highland Emigrants whom he headed, and with whom he sailed from Greenock in the summer of 1784, for the Port of Quebec. After a passage of seventeen Weeks they were driven by stress of weather into Philadelphia. Though distant from the place of their destination, and assailed by offers which were sufficiently advantageous to induce them to settle in the United States, Mr. M'Donald's influence over them so prevailed that not an individual remained behind, or departed from his Allegiance. After great privations, and at a considerable expense, the party settled in Glengarry, where their numerous posterity are now enjoying the fruits of his persevering Loyalty, and in the midst of whom Mr. M'Donald was in the Commission of the Peace for thirty years enjoying to the last moment, the affection, the respect, and the confidence of all around him.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 27, 1827.

BY AUTHORITY.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come

GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, as in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency Sir Perregrine Maitland K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. John Large, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said John Large for the discovery of the offender—Now Know Ye That a Free-Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime.

Given under my hand &c.

UPPER CANADA.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woodland Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. Executive Council Office, }

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.
No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathust.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form. Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not prived, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

To the Honourable the Commons House of Assembly in Provincial Parliament Assembled.

The petition of the undersigned, most respectfully sheweth,

THAT your petitioners, in common with the great mass of the inhabitants of the Gore District, being fully sensible of the necessity of erecting a new Gaol and Court House in said District having used their endeavors to effect the same, and caused public notice to be given in the Upper Canada Gazette of their intention to apply to the Legislature for a Law authorizing the Magistrates of the said District to loan a sum of money to enable them to erect such buildings; and the intention of such application having become notorious in all parts of the District, for more than a year past, insomuch that no person or township in any part of the District could possible be taken by surprise, and with a view to further the object and obtain signatures to a petition, avowedly for that purpose, your petitioners went to the village of Ancaster on Monday the first day of January, instant, where your petitioners publicly read a petition, which has since been laid before your Honourable House, and desired all those favorable to the prayer of the same to sign their names—after which your petitioners observed the name of one person, who they were informed was a minor, which name they erased from the petition before transmitting the same to be laid before your Honorable House.

Your petitioners cannot but express their surprise to learn that a counter petition has since been got up in the village of Ancaster, stating that your petitioners had surreptitiously obtained signatures in that place. That your petitioners positively deny having any recourse to unfair means, the truth of which the accompanying affidavits from a number of the most respectable gentlemen of Ancastr will abundantly prove. And your petitioners further state—that in their opinion the most unfair and unjustifiable measures have been resorted to by interested individuals to disturb the harmony of the District, and to bring into dispute many of the fairest characters that have adorned our Courts of Justice, maintained the peace and advanced the interests of society and the District.

Wherefore, your petitioners earnestly trust that your Honorable House will give due weight to the prayer of the great majority of the Inhabitants of the Gore District, and will be pleased to grant the desired aid—and your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray.

(Signed)
WILLIAM PROCTOR.

POETRY.

FAIR IDA.

A BALLAD.

"His boat is on the waters—hark!
I hear the splashing oar,
What though the wave be wild and dark,
I'll venture from the shore;
Love hath a light for deep midnight,
A compass for the sea,
For him I'll fear not ocean's might,
He is my all to me.

"And must I leave my father's hall,
Where I was gently bred,
And climb'd the knee and lisp'd to all,
Unconscious what I said—
Where doatingly a mother's eye—
(Alas that it is closed!)
Gazed on me in my infancy
And watch'd while I repos'd!

"Yes—there's a dearer home for me
Within a lover's arms;
And there my head shall cradled be
In safety from alarms.
I cannot wed the man I hate—
I cannot falsely play,
Though father's threat may not abate—
Though I be spurn'd away.

"My love—he is my life to me,
My nurse, my sire, my home,
He looks upon me smilingly,
And beckons me to come.
He hath his nest of down for me,
His little timorous maid,
Where I shall cower in safety, free,
Nor fluttering nor afraid."

Thus at her window o'er the wave
That gentle maid bested,
The hour was silent as the grave,
No star was overhead.
'Twas ear'd softly on the shore,
And said or seem'd to say,
"I've hush'd for thee the billow's roar,
Come, Ida, come away,

Her lover's bark is on the stand,
His foot upon the beach,
And they are hurrying, hand in hand,
The little skiff to reach:
Her foot is on the floating plank,
Her lover close behind,
And they have left the pebbly bank,
And every fear behind.

There's light within her father's hall,
There's hurrying to and fro,
And voices from her window call,
And from the beach below—
Along the wave a carbine shot
Sings shrilly with its speed;—
Her love—for fate so drew the lot—
Her love alone must bleed.

Frantic fair Ida hears him groan:
Her hand is on the wound;
His heart's blood on her hand is flown
With shot last dying sound.
Back to the shore, go, boatmen, go,
Vain's it our oar employ;
But she, the fair, what is she now,
So late the bride of joy!

A maniac on that ozzy shore
At times seen wandering wild,
Addressing the rude ocean's roar,
In accents of a child:
Or from her window, at deep night,
Asking athwart the gloom,
In fancy of her lover's spirit,
The mysteries of his tomb!

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAY-DAY IN THE VILLAGE.

A SKETCH.

The sun had scarcely risen over Elmwood village, when early all its inhabitants had left their beds, and were rambling through the fields, and along the hedges, to gather green branches and fresh flowers to deck the Maypole, around which the old and the young were to assemble, when Evening, the friend and patroness of innocent amusement, placed in her shadowy mantle over earth. It was the morning that ushered in "the merriest month of all the year," and in the whole village there was but one aching heart. Nearly opposite the spot in which, "time out of mind," on such festal occasions, the villagers had their joyous meetings, was the neat but humble cottage in which Mary Edmonds and her children dwelt. She was a stranger, who had been about three years a resident amongst them and by her kind and gentle manners, her continual anxiety to lessen all difficulties, and to administer to all their their wants, and, above all, by that air of gentility which marked her as evidently superior to the situation she then filled, she had succeeded in gaining not only their esteem, but their affection.

Awakened from sleep that was seldom unbroken, she opened her lattice window, and looked forth upon the laughing crowds, in whose joy she could not participate, and listened to the merry singing, for which her heart had no echo, their voices were loud and cheerful, as they sung the song that had been their favourite, perhaps for ages:

It is the merry month of May,
That laughs all wintry cares away;
O, the merry, merry May!
Now we have had our April showers,
And merry May will bring us flowers;
O, the merry, merry May!
She comes in robe of red and green,
So gay, with diamond gems between;
O, the merry, merry May!
Then look upon her cloudless sky,
And hear her herald lark on high;
O, the merry, merry May!
Then drive all wintry cares away,
And laugh, and be like merry May;
O, the merry, merry May!

Mary Edmonds listened to the gay song of her neighbours; but they little knew the feelings to which their merriment had given rise. The day was to her, one which brought to her recollections the most sad recollections; and when they passed on their way rejoicing, she turned from her window, and bitterly wept.

It was well known to all the neighbourhood, that some cloud shadowed her hopes and her prospects; for in her countenance and manner there was that expression of deep though uncomplaining sorrow, which seldom arises from any wound but that which rankles in the heart, and for which the world's blessings can never provide a cure. Her cottage was neatly and tastefully furnished. It was evident that she possessed a competency sufficient to secure the possession, not only of necessaries, but of comforts. All who knew her were her friends, and it was almost impossible that she could ever have had an enemy. Her habits and her temper were peculiarly domestic and placid, and her children were all that a mother could wish in them—beautiful, interesting, and beloved by all. The unhappiness (for every one felt that she was unhappy) of Mary Edmonds, was therefore a mystery to all the villagers. No one could divine the source from whence it arose. Many indeed were the guesses as to its origin; for though they had often heard her children talk of a father, they had never heard her speak of a husband; and when she came amongst them, her dress was not that of a widow. The day of merriment had passed, and the evening had summoned the old and the young of the village to the open plain that fronted Mary Edmonds' dwelling. She was sitting on the green bank, beneath the aged tree that shadowed the cottage-gate; and as the mingled sounds of music and laughter from the neighbouring crowd met her ear, she pressed her hand to her brow, and seemed absorbed in thoughts that were even more than usually melancholy.

Her little boy had been for some time leaning his head on her lap, and as he found himself still unnoticed, at length he raised his tearful eyes, looked in her face, and asked her why she was so sad, when every body was so happy?

"Put away your daisies, Jane," said he to his young sister, who was sitting by his mother's side, arranging a nose gay of wild flowers—"Put away your daisies, and come and kiss mamma, for she is weeping."

At this moment, a stranger appeared standing within the cottage gate; he wore a dark riding-cloak, the cape of which he held to his face, with the evident intention of concealing his features; and remained for a while unnoticed by those he was so earnestly contemplating.

"Mamma, mamma, do not look so sad!" exclaimed both her children, and Mary Edmonds turned and smiled through her tears as she kissed them.

The stranger advanced a few steps nearer to the group, and withdrew the cloak that more than half hid his face. The expression of his countenance was melancholy also; but it was a melancholy mingled with remorse—very different from that of the woman on whom he was so intently gazing. The fall of his cloak appeared to be accidental; for in an instant he resumed the disguise, and continued to look upon the mother embracing and weeping over her children.

He had not continued in this posture many minutes, before he attracted the attracted the attention of the little boy, who pointed him out to his mother. She rose and politely curtsied to the stranger.

"If you are going to join the crowd of merry villagers, Sir," said she, "you have but to pass this corner, and you will see the light hearted and happy."

The stranger made no reply. "Or, perhaps, sir," she continued, "you are on your way to the village inn; yonder road will lead you to it, but you will find it deserted now."

Still the stranger gave her no answer; and while she stood gazing with some surprise upon him, she saw his bosom heave as if in violent agitation, and a suppressed sob appeared to shake his whole frame.

"You do not know me, Mary!" said he.

Mary Edmonds looked at him fixedly, and while she gazed, he let the mantle fall from his face. She sank upon the green sward, from which she had risen, and appeared to exert more than human strength, while she replied to his question.

"Too well do I know that voice, and those features—Go, my children," said she, "and wait within until I come to you. The little ones immediately passed through the gate, and entered the cottage.

The stranger instantly fell at Mary's feet, embraced them, and wept like a child. Oh!" said he, "I cannot ask for pardon, but for the love of Him who died for sinners, give it to me, Mary—give it to me!"

Mary Edmonds took her husband's hand and her tears fell fast upon it:

—"Oh! why did you desert me?" were the only words she could utter.

"Oh! I have wronged you," he answered, "but I have suffered deeply—most deeply: by day and by night the bitterest remorse has been with me, until my life became a burden, and I have come, on my knees to obtain forgiveness, or to depart from you and die. For the sake of those little ones—I have never seen one of them until this night—forgive me, Mary! for the sake of that God you have always loved, and who has given me a broken and a contrite heart,—forgive me, Mary! Forgive me, even on the return of the very day on which, like a wretch, I left you!"

Mary Edmonds had deeply felt the wrongs she had suffered: deserted by the husband in whom had centered all her earthly hopes & affections,—at the moment, too, when his cares and attentions were rendered doubly necessary,—she had struggled, and not altogether in vain, to forget the days—the words—the looks—the actions of pure and devoted love, in the remembrance of the sin by which he had been led away—he surest death-blow to a woman's peace, and to a woman's pride. But she was a wife and a mother; and the parent of her children, the object of her early and disinterested attachment, was before her—a penitent! She knew that in heaven there is joy over a sinner that repenteth; and few will blame her for raising her husband from the ground, and, amid weeping and thanksgiving to the Almighty for his restoration to virtue, receiving him again to her home and her affections.

Foreign Intelligence.

WAR IN EUROPE.

The Florida has arrived, bringing London papers to Dec. 14.

This vessel has brought the highly important intelligence, that a British army of 5000 men is ordered to Portugal, a part of which is by this time, no doubt, reached that country. This step has been taken in consequence of an earnest application from the Princess Regent of Portugal, calling upon Great Britain for succour against hostile aggressions from Spain. The nature of this application was conveyed to Parliament in a Message from His Majesty, on the 4th Dec. On the 12th the Message was taken into consideration, when a debate—one of the most interesting that ever occurred within the walls of Parliament—took place; at the conclusion of which both Houses pledged themselves, by acclamation, to support His Majesty in any measure having for their object the preservation of Portugal—England's most ancient ally.

The conduct of the Court of Madrid, which has led to this important step, has been of the most disgraceful character—so much so as to leave Great Britain no alternative but the one she has adopted, unless she consented to desert her most ancient and faithful ally, a violation of solemn treaties, and to the detriment of her national honour. Independently of these considerations, the appeal for succour came from a female—a Princess of heroic character and ardent patriotism, who has for some time, with the greatest magnanimity, persevered with all her efforts to secure a rational and constitutional government to her distracted country. This unassuming woman is only 25 years of age, and is said to possess the beauty and amiability of the most favoured of her sex. How then could attributes be withheld, even apart from political considerations.

Such great exertion and some expense we have been able to present our readers with Mr. Canning's two speeches in the House of Commons on this momentous subject. This oration, which is declared by some of the London papers to be his best, throws a blaze of light upon every part of the question: and it is most gratifying to see that France has so far gone with us as to recal her ambassador at Madrid, who left his Charge des Affaires to explain the reason of his departure. So far then there is no fear of England again embroiling herself with that power.

It should be distinctly observed that there is no positive declaration of war against Spain. The British army goes to defend Portugal—not to attack Spain. Neither will the British troops interfere with the domestic politics of Portugal—their whole undivided object will be to defend Portugal from foreign aggression.

The war is exceedingly popular in England. As the Guards marched out of London they were surrounded with an immense concourse of people who testified them with the most enthusiastic cheering. The air was rent with shouts of "Success Guards!" "Portugal forever"—"Bravo"—&c., while many persons rushed forward and shook hands with the soldiers and men as they passed.

The Courier states that no loan or new burthens on the people will be necessary—Lord Liverpool would not have unable to take any part in the proceedings in Parliament—Parliament was prorogued on motion of Mr Peel, Mr. Canning being also ill, on 13th Dec. to the 8th Feb.—Sir James Mackintosh, formerly Chief Justice of Lower Canada, died at Cheltenham on the 8th of November—Mrs. St. Clair, lady of Maj. St. Clair, R. A., and daughter of the late Mr. Head, of Halifax, N. S., died in Sussex on the 5th of Nov.—A dreadful snow storm happened in Scotland in the latter part of November. The ruins of some places are said to have been 100 feet deep. 10,000 sheep, and upwards of seventy human lives were lost.

Consols on 14th Dec., 77 3 8—The Bank of England declared a dividend of 4 per cent. payable 1st January.—The Commissioners of the Navy Office have requested to be furnished with the address of the owners of steam vessels, in the event of their services being wanted.—The 10th Regt. of Foot goes to Portugal.—Lord Kinnaird died at Boyle on 11th Dec.—The King visited Covent Garden Theatre on 30th November to witness the Opera of Oberon.

EXPEDITION TO PORTUGAL.

From the Courier of Dec. 12.

The utmost activity prevails in every department of Government, connected with the immediate embarkation of troops for Portugal. This Morning the following notice was posted at Lloyd's:—

"Navy Office Dec. 12.

"The principal Officers and Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy do hereby give notice, that they will immediately received tenders, at this Office, of ships, for the conveyance of troops from Deptford and Portsmouth to Lisbon, where they are to be discharged, to be hired for the rate of—per ton, for the voyage, or at per ton per calender month, for three months certain.

(Signed) "T. HARDING."

The amount of force which will be dispatched in the first instance and upon the emergency of the occasion, is five thousand. Of the troops composing this force there are to be four squadrons of cavalry, a circumstance which indicates that it is not contemplated their services will be confined to garrison duty only. The following are the names of the regiments, their prescribed movements, and the officers who will have the chief command:—

The 1st Battalion of the Granadier Regiment of Guards will embark to-morrow, at Deptford.

The 2d Battalion of the 3d Regiment of Guards will march to-morrow, for Portsmouth, for embarkation.

The 63 Regiment of Infantry marched, this morning from Windsor, for embarkation for Portsmouth.

The 4th Regiment of Foot, now at Portsmouth, is ordered to prepare for immediate embarkation at that port.

The 1st Battalion of the 60th Rifle Corps, now at Plymouth, is ordered to prepare for immediate embarkation at that Port.

Two Squadrons of the 12th Lancers, and two Squadrons of the 10th Hussars, are ordered to hold themselves in readiness for immediate embarkation.

There are Five Regiments to embark forthwith from Cork for Lisbon. These Regiments are to be selected by Sir George Murray.

The whole will be under the command of Sir W. Clinton. The Cavalry will be commanded by Sir Henry Bouverie and Sir Thomas Arbuthnot. Major General Blackeney will also have a command; Sir Brook Vere will be the Quarter Master General.

The Adjutant General will be appointed by Sir George Murray in Ireland.

Two Regiments, we understand, will also be detached from Gibraltar.

From the Courier of Dec. 12.

Mr. Joliff arrived this morning, in a post chaise and four, at the Foreign Office, with despatches from Lisbon.

According to the latest accounts from Portugal, the rebels in the North had not got much further than Braganza, while the Portuguese troops were concentrating to attack them. In the south, it was believed the rebels had retreated.

We are informed that General Quiroga has declared his intention of immediately leaving this country, and proceeding to Portugal, to range himself under the banners and to fight the battle of the Constitution. It is said that several hundreds of Spanish and Italian refugees have already resolved to accompany him.

In another column our readers will find the Message from His Majesty, communicated yesterday by Earl Bathurst to the House of Lords, and Mr. Secretary Canning to the House of Commons; a question: and it is most gratifying to see that France has so far gone with us as to recal her ambassador at Madrid, who left his Charge des Affaires to explain the reason of his departure. So far then there is no fear of England again embroiling herself with that power.

It should be distinctly observed that there is no positive declaration of war against Spain. Unfortunately, the mind of Ferdinand was not framed to profit from adversity. Liberal views were opposed to his, and he soon learnt to regard England as a foe, because she was a friend to mankind.

Great Britain offended him, because, when events had separated the New States of South America from the Crown of Spain, she acted on the rational part of acknowledging that to be a matter of fact, which had long been notorious to all the world.

When, too, a legitimate and acknowledged Sovereign judged it right to grant his subjects privileges, which, till then, they had not enjoyed. England offended by approving of the change, and the Spanish government has the temerity to take a course which leaves this country no alternative, but to violate her most solemn engagements, or to draw the sword against Spain.

Such are the circumstances under which England has incurred the displeasure of Spain, and under which, to vindicate her charater for good faith, she now prepares for war. It might be presumptuous to predict the issue of the contest. We are not blind to the fact, that consequences, not now to be foreseen, may possibly spr ng from this interruption of the public peace of Europe. We know "that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong," and we will not exult with overweening confidence. War is a calamity, the occurrence of which we had hoped Europe, in general, and this country in particular would long be spared. We know——

"——Reason frowns at war's unequal game,
Where honour gains no more than simple fame."

But if national character have any value, the interests and the dignity of the nation call upon us, imperatively, to hasten to the assistance of an aggrieved ally. The call is unhesitatingly answered by alacrity, and their decision will be responded to by the approving acclamations of the country. It is not a point of nice punctilio, still less is it for selfish purposes of aggrandisement, that we are put in a state of defence of all that is sacred among nations, that the banner of England is raised to confront the unprovoked invaders of a friendly state, and, as we trust, to repel and chastise injustice.

From the Courier of Dec. 13.

Four companies of the Royal artillery have received orders to prepare for embarkation.

One company of the Royal Staff Corps is ordered to proceed to Portsmouth for embarkation

A detachment of the Royal Wagon Train is ordered for embarkation.

The cavalry will be commanded by Colonel Wyndham.

Portsmouth, Dec. 12.

An active bustle pervades most of the public departments. This morning orders were received to prepare for the embarkation of a brigade of Guards, the 4th regiment and strong detachments of Marines at present in garrison.

The 69th Regt. at the Island were instantly sent for.

The Wellesley 74, just arrived from Rio, and the Spartiate, are ordered to take out their lower decks guns and embark troops.

The Depot of 900 were on the beach just stepping into the boats, when they were countermanded, as other transports are ordered to Cork to take on board the troops. The troops embarking at Portsmouth will probably go in the ships of the line. A draft of 160 men is ordered from the vicinity to expedite the Spartiate.

The Gunnir march on Saturday and embark instantly.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

House of Lords, Dec. 11.

MESSAGE FROM HIS MAJESTY.

Earl Bathurst informed the House that he had to deliver a Message from His Majesty.

The Message having been handed to the Lord Chancellor, the Noble and Learned Lord read as follows:—

"GEORGE R.

"His Majesty acquaints the House of Lords, that His Majesty has received an earnest application from the Princess Regent of Portugal, claiming, in virtue of the ancient obligations of alliance and amity subsisting between His Majesty and the Crown of Portugal, His Majesty's aid against an hostile aggression from Spain.

"His Majesty has exerted himself for some time past, in conjunction with His Majesty's ally, the King of France, to prevent such an aggression; and repeated assurances have been given by the Court of Madrid, of the determination of his Catholic Majesty neither to commit, nor to allow to be committed, from his Catholic Majesty's territory, any aggression against Portugal."

Politicians, who marked the course of the last Peninsular war, indulged the hope, that Spain and her Monarch would have been bound to this country by the most enduring ties of gratitude; at least, while those survived who had witnessed the splendid exertions made on that mighty theatre, in behalf of an oppressed people, and in the cause of a legitimate Monarch.

HIS MAJESTY'S MESSAGE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Dec. 13.

Mr. Secretary Canning.—Sir, I rise to move the Order of the Day for taking into consideration the King's most gracious Message to his faithful Commons.

The Order of the Day having been read,

Mr. Secretary Canning rose, and spoke to the following effect.—

Sir, in proposing, as I shall presently have occasion to do, to the House of Commons, to acknowledge His Majesty's most gracious Message, on the subject of the relations subsisting between Great Britain and Portugal, and the present condition of the latter State; and in calling on this House to reply to that communication, in terms which will be, in fact, an echo to the sentiments contained in the Royal Message, and equally in accordance with our unanimous joy at His Majesty's Government—in doing this, Sir, I cannot but feel that, however confident I may be in the justice of the cause, and clear as to the policy which it becomes us, in accordance with the recommendations contained in his Majesty's Message, to adopt; yet Sir, I am free to admit, it will become a British Minister, in recommending a British House of Commons to take any step calculated to lead, upon their country the hazards of war, to make use of the language of regret and sorrow that such a necessity should exist (Hear.) Sir, I assure the House that we is not, within its walks, at this present, any set of men more fully convinced than are his Majesty's Ministers—or any individual more completely convinced than is he who has now the honour to address it—of the great and vital importance of the continuance, undisturbed, the peace and tranquility of this country. (Loud Cheering.) This, I admit. Indeed, so strongly am I impressed with the truth of this fact, and that for reasons which I shall take occasion before I sit down to assign to the House, that I am perfectly ready to declare, no question, involving a doubtful success or contradiction—no consideration of merely present advantage—and, I will go further and add, no anticipation of remote and contingent difficulty—could arise, which I should not a thousand times cheerfully pass over, or, at the utmost, adjourn, than counsel a country to involve itself in the consequences of a war. But, Sir, there are cases which render the adoption of such a course not merely unmeaning and unavailing, but necessary and unworthy; and I am equally certain the present occasion presents such a case; and I feel that what has been acted upon in the best times of our history—what on the present occasion has been acted upon—what has always received the support and concurrence of successive English Parliaments, is an adherence to national faith, and respect for national honour. (Cheers.) These are treaties being now renewed by the high contracting parties, and acknowledged to remain in full force and effect, under that the House may fully understand, and accurately appreciate, the effect of the observations which a perusal of this treaty is calculated to excite, I may be permitted to explain the circumstances of Portugal, and the condition of the reigning family in that country.—In the year 1807, when, by the delusion of Buonaparte, the house of Braganza ceased to reign, the head of that house, under the advice of his Britannic Majesty's Government, set sail for Brasils and established in that country the seat of his monarchy. This step was taken by virtue of a secret convention to conclude between this country and Portugal to the effect, that so long as the house of Braganza remained in that part of their dominions, or in the event of their return, his Britannic Majesty would grant his protection to the ancient dynasty and house of Portugal than the family of Braganza I may be allowed to remark that this convention greatly contributed to the furtherance of a proceeding which placed the family beyond the power of Buonaparte, and consequently promoted the ascendancy of British interests in the Peninsula. It was this secret convention that brought about the emigration, and greatly contributed to decide that step by which the Royal Family of Portugal was removed from the power of France. The King of Portugal having become established upon his Throne, the Articles of the Treaty of Vienna, and was made a part of the law of Nations by the Treaty of 1810, and from that time up to the treaty of Vienna, it was clearly understood throughout Europe, that we had determined to acknowledge any Sovereign in Portugal, except a member of the House of Braganza. But that determination arose solely from the supposition that that Sovereign would be compelled to a forced residence in Brasil. Beyond this it was not binding upon us, as it was felt that the moment the ground of the obligation ceased, there was an end to the treaty. It happened, in consequence of the happy conclusion of the war, that the option of returning was offered to his Majesty, and as it was felt that the force of such a previous obligation no longer existed, the forcible separation from Portugal, which had been effected, it was deemed unstable that we should perform such other obligation as the force of existing treaties rendered imperative upon us.

The King of Portugal came into possession of his European domains, the ground of our former obligation ceased, and the treaty was so far ended. But, when that treaty was so far ended, there came another obligation, which I have just now read to the House. That treaty, I may be allowed to say, was repealed without prejudice to other ancient treaties so long and so happily subsisting, between the two Crowns of Portugal and Great Britain, which were to a certain extent, reserved by the two high contracting parties, and which were to this period when the house of Braganza was placed at the head of the monarchy of Portugal, friendly relations have subsisted between that family and the reigning one in this country—relations which have continued without interruption, and renewed with sincerity, or, I will say, both parts. It has been delivered to in periods when the faith of other alliances has been shaken; it has been victorious in those fields of blood and glory which remain among the most brilliant pages of the history of England. (Hear, hear.) The alliance we have always been scrupulously faithful. Sometimes, I admit, we have found the treaty burthensome to maintain—of that there can be no question—and many are those who may have wished us to shake it off, and free ourselves from the incumbrance of observing it—but a feeling of national honor, and what I may be allowed to denominate a sentiment of national sympathy, joined to a common interest, and a common identified with that country, has induced England to persevere, notwithstanding the difficulties attending upon a continuance of the relations subsisting between the two and Portugal. Sir I feel the considerations to which I have more particularly adverted, present too narrow and limited a view of the case. It is not only among ages long gone by, and in treaties interpreted by time and the course of events, that traces are discoverable of the relations in which Portugal has been considered to stand in regard to Great Britain; for in the latest compact entered into between us and Portugal. Sir I feel the considerations which now forms the patent law of the civilized world—I allude Sir, to the Convention of Vienna—a similar course was taken in the treaty then entered into between us and this country and Portugal. (Hear) At that period, Sir, Great Britain was well aware of the inconveniences which many individuals were fond of representing as arising out of our connexion with Portugal. She was also aware of the obloquy, and I will add, advantage derived from that connexion; and we reserved our obligations to uphold and support Portugal, on future occasions, in terms so strong and unequivocal as to lay a foundation perfectly adequate to support the present proceedings. The terms of that treaty I will take leave to read to the House previous to calling on it to concur in the vote, with which I trust which it is my intention to conclude. The third article of the treaty between Great Britain and Portugal, concluded at Vienna on the 22d of February, 1810, stated that "the treaty of alliance entered into between his Britannic Majesty and the King of Portugal, at Rio de Janeiro, was founded on circumstances of a temporary nature, which had now happily ceased to exist; and on that account the stipulations of the treaty should be considered null and void, as relating to all the parties interested: however, without prejudice to the ancient and established treaties of alliance, friendship, and guarantee, which had so long and happily subsisted between the two countries: these treaties being now renewed by the high contracting parties, and acknowledged to remain in full force and effect, under that the House may fully understand, and accurately appreciate, the effect of the observations which a perusal of this treaty is calculated to excite, I may be permitted to explain the circumstances of Portugal, and the condition of the reigning family in that country.—In the year 1807, when, by the delusion of Buonaparte, the house of Braganza ceased to reign, the head of that house, under the advice of his Britannic Majesty's Government, set sail for Brasils and established in that country the seat of his monarchy. day. of full force and effect. I should also state, that, if all the treaties to which this paragraph referred, were, by some convulsions of nature, or some other accident, stripped to total oblivion, I consider Great Britain to be morally bound to fulfil her obligations, (hear, hear, hear,) and that, in case of necessity, she would be bound, and is bound, to act in the defence of Portugal, (repeated cries of hear, hear.) But, happily, that is not the case—all the preceding treaties are in existence—they are in the full knowledge of all the civilized nations of the world—they are not to be easily referred to by all mankind—they are known to Spain—to all the Continental States of Europe—they are so numerous, and the result of the whole is so clear, that I shall merely select one or two of them, with a view to show the nature of our obligations to our ancient friend and ally—Portugal. The first to which I shall advert, is that concluded in 1666, at the time of the marriage of Charles the Second with the Infanta of Portugal. The obligations of that treaty, after reciting the delivering of Bombay, Tangier, and other places, some of which still remained, and some not, to the Government to whom they were delivered, it was stated that in consideration of those grants, which were of so much benefit to the King of Great Britain, he professed, and declared himself, by and with the consent and advice of his Privy Council, that he would take upon him the defence of Portugal, that he would aid and defend her by sea and by land, to the utmost his power, and in all other manner and respect, even as he were defended Englad itself. By that treaty it was further conditioned, that, in case of necessity, or any foreign attack, he should send a powerful transport, of his own proper-cost and expense, two regiments of horse, of 500 men, and two regiments foot, of 1000 men each. There were other various stipulations, amounting to the same effect which render it unnecessary for me to go farther into it at present. The next treaty to which I beg the attention of the house, is that of 1703; it was a tripartite treaty, made between the States General of Holland, Great Britain and Portugal; it was also a treaty contemporaneous with the famous commercial Methuen, whose provisions still continued to be in full force and effect. But the material point of the treaty of 1703, it was conditioned, that if at any time, and whenever it happened. the Kings of Spain or France, or both, or either of them, should make war on Portugal, or give reason to suspect they had jointly or separately, any intention to make war on her or her colonial possessions beyond the seas; then it goes on to state, that her Majesty shall use her good offices to persuade the said powers not to make war; but in case those offices should not succeed, the third article states, that, provided such interference should not be successful, and that war should actually have been made on Portugal, then the above named contracting powers agreed that they shall make war on the Kings of Spain or France, or both or either of them; and that, while hostile arms shall be borne against Portugal, they shall provide twelve thousand men, armed and equipped, and leave them there while their presence may be deemed necessary.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

Wednesday, Jan. 17.

The House was not in Session on this day, the several Select Committees being engaged to a late hour.

Thursday, Jan. 18.

The Confiscation Bill, and the Initial Letter Bill, were read a third time and sent to the Legislative Council.

The Sandwich Stage Bill, was read a second time. It was supported by Messrs. Gordon, Clark, J. Jones, M'Donell, and the Attorney General—and opposed by Messrs. Bidwell, Fothergill, Perry, and Walsh.

After some discussion, the committee rose, and reported the Bill as amended, and it was ordered for a third reading on Saturday next.

Mr. J. Jones proposed certain resolutions, which were adopted, on the subject of the improvement of the navigation of the River St. Lawrence, and a joint conference requested with the Legislative Council.

The Cataraqui Bridge Bill—2d reading. After several of the clauses had been adopted, an amendment was proposed by Mr. Bidwell, requiring the Company, once in four years, or oftener if necessary, to submit a statement of their affairs to the Legislature, in order to the regulation of the Tolls, and fixing the profit to be derived by the Company at 6 per cent.—which amendment being put and carried,

Mr. Thomson said that he was instructed by the Agent for the Company to say that it would be unnecessary to occupy the attention of the House any further on the subject, as the Company would not feel themselves justified in accepting a Charter with such a provision; he should therefore move that the committee do rise.

The motion was carried, and the committee rose.

Mr. Bidwell subsequently gave notice that he should, on to-morrow, move to have the Cataraqui Bridge Bill again placed on the order of the day.—Adjourned.

Friday, Jan. 19.

Petitions read and referred—One against the passing of the Naturalization Law, as reported by the committee.—Adjourned.

Saturday, Jan. 20.

Colonial Trade.—Mr. Perry proposed certain resolutions imposing a duty of 25 per cent. on cattle imported to be slaughtered.

Major Miller brought down Messages from His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, communicating to the House—Agreement with the Canada Land Company, and information received from the Governor General, with respect to the Road from Coteau du Lac to the Province line.

Mr. Morris moved an Address of thanks for the Messages—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Bidwell, 500 copies of the agreement with the Canada Land Company were ordered to be printed.

The Committee on the Welland Canal, made their first Report. It recommendes the taking of Stock to the amount of £30,000—300 copies were ordered to be printed.

Mr. Lefferty moved an Address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for all communications received, on the subject of Losses sustained during the late War—Carried.

The Registry Bill was read a second time—Progress reported, and leave given to sit—Adjourned.

Monday, Jan.

The Petition of N. Dickenson and others, inhabitants of the Eastern District, praying for a Bill of Naturalization, conformable to the instructions of His Majesty's Government, and a Petition from the Inhabitants of York, against the passing of the Bill on that subject, reported by the committee, were referred to the committee of the whole House, to whom that Bill was referred.

Naturalization Bill.—House in Committee of the whole, second reading.

The Attorney General said, that after the discussion which had taken place on former occasions on this subject, there could be no doubt that the general features of the present measure were well understood by every Hon. Member in the House, and in the country generally; he, however, would take the opportunity of noticing the provisions of the Bill now under discussion in a general manner, and of comparing it with the instructions which had been transmitted to the House, on which the committee had been acting at every attention. After mature deliberation the committee had reported two Bills. one, now before the House, for the confirmation of Civil Right, and enabling those who were embraced by its provisions to hold property: the other related to Estates descended to persons whose Civil Rights were not affected by the other Bill, and of course would form no part of the present discussion. On a former occasion, it had been thought that both objects might be embraced in one Bill—on consideration, however, this had been found to be contrary to the intentions of His Majesty's Government, as would be apparent on a reference to those instructions; and it both measures were made the subject of one Legislative Act, its success might very reasonably be doubted—he should now confine himself to the Bill before the House, offering a few remarks upon it. It would be seen by the Bill that the committee had done something more than confirming Civil Rights—it secured the possession of property, and declared it valid to be, but to have been, legally vested in the party to whom the Bill was intended to relieve—this was not perhaps in strict compliance with the instructions, but the subsequent provisions of the Bill, obviating any difficulty that might be apprehended on this head.

The Attorney General stated the danger of such a retrospective operation was as far as regarded Estates, and to obviate any injustice where lands had been actually paid for, the law was hereby changed, but the Estate was declared to be vested in those who had purchased it. By the provisions of the Bill, all Foreign Allegiance was declared to be renounced—this was but reasonable, in order that a person, availing himself of the benefits of the Act, and being entitled to all the rights of a natural born subject, should not have it in his power, at a future day, to claim allegiance to any other Country. It had been considered necessary, for the purpose of identifying the person, that his name and place of abode should be registered; and to ensure this, false swearing, when making such registry, was declared to be Perjury, but not to prejudice the rights of others—the person himself who should be so guilty of false swearing, would be deprived of the benefits of the Act, but the right of persons claiming to have derived titles from him for lands, would not be invalidated. The provision was not a painful or burthensome one, but such as was required by His Majesty's Government, who were anxious that every facility should be afforded for carrying it into effect. The details of the Bill, in this respect, were such as would ensure, that the registry should be kept in a respectable manner, and such as would make it a proper record to be preserved for the purpose of reference. With respect to the period for the limitation of the law, he was aware that some difference of opinion might exist. In other cases, it was usual he knew for committees to report a Bill with blanks to be filled up by the House—some calculation embracing the cases of different classes was necessary; a some definite period was desirable, the committee had, in this instance, reported by fixing certain periods; they were perhaps hastily adopted, but could, if considered necessary, be easily altered. The subject was one which certainly required mature consideration on the part of the House, and though he was not disposed to urge unnecessary haste, he would remark that a proper degree of expedition should be used, in order that, at this advanced stage of the Session, time might be afforded to another branch of the Legislature, to exercise their deliberation upon it. It had been suggested that the payment of a fee for a certificate of registry, might be considered as a hardship—the committee had not in the Bill alighed any fee for administering the oath, or making the registry; but where a certificate was required for the benefit of the party, they had not thought it unreasonable to allow the Officer a fee of 2s. 6d.; if, however, this should be considered as burthensome, he would have no objection that the certificate should be paid for his trouble from the public funds—some remuneration was certainly due—the person filling the situation was liable to heavy penalties for neglect of duty—his time and attention would be required; and the only question would be, what remuneration should be? As it was desirable to afford an opportunity to all those now resident in the country, to avail themselves of this Naturalization Act, the period of its operation had been limited to the year 1845; it, however, on consideration, that period should not be found sufficiently extensive to embrace the object in view, it could easily be altered, and a further period named. He had been asked whether persons who had complied with the Act 13 Geo. 2, were embraced, or intended to be included in the provisions of the Bill? he would answer, certainly not. At the same time, he thought he might venture to assert, with safety, that none of those persons had complied with the provisions of that Act—the conditions of that Act required that the person should record his name in the Court of King's Bench, and express his intention of becoming a permanent resident in the Province—no such record, he believed, was to be found in the Court of King's Bench.

Some Petitions had been presented to the House against the passing of the Bill, praying that a compliance with the provisions of 13 Geo. 2, should be considered sufficient for the purposes of Naturalization. These Petitions were entitled to be respectfully entertained by the House, but he would ask whether it could e supposed that the Petitioners were fully aware of what that Statute really required, and whether they were as well qualified to judge of its provisions as the House of Representatives? If it should be found that the Petitioners were in error on the subject, it was any Hon. Member prepared to say that it was the duty of the House to comply with their wishes? If there were any who thought so, they must take upon themselves; he would not venture to do it, particularly when other Petitions, numerously and respectably signed, were now upon the table of the committee, from persons deeply interested in the question, praying for the very remedy proposed by the Bill under discussion—should these be deprived of the benefit of such a measure, because others did not wish it? He had but one vote, and one decision on this subject—he wished the matter to be cautiously considered, and to be investigated in a temperate and dispassionate manner—he had formed his opinion after the most mature deliberation, and if he erred, after having bestowed much pains and reflection upon it, he had, nevertheless, the satisfaction of knowing that his opinion was in accordance with late and solemn legal decisions which had been made—it was in conformity to the opinion expressed by the Court of King's Bench in England, and by all the legal advisers of his Majesty; thus tone out, he would be relieved from any more apprehension if the measure should fail—the opinion of the Legislative Council had been distinctly stated—the sense of the Colonial Government, who had pressed the consideration of the subject on the House, was fully known—the declarations of His Majesty's Government, with respect to it, were also known; and he hoped the observations he had offered would prevent any misconception or misunderstanding.

With respect to the preamble of the Bill, before moving for its adoption, he would offer a few remarks. It might be said that the committee, in reporting the Bill to the House, had made particular allusion to persons coming from the United States—as far as he was concerned, it had been his desire to make the preamble as plain and simple as possible, but he felt satisfied that the reasons which had been given, why no particular allusion should be made to those persons, and to place them out of view, were, in fact, the very best reasons why it became necessary that it should be done. Some persons, notwithstanding the opinions expressed by His Majesty's Government, and the solemn decisions of the Courts of Justice, thought that those opinions and decisions were erroneous—such persons thought there was no necessity for a particular reference to those who had emigrated from the United States. This was the very reason why he thought it absolutely necessary, because if they were not so named, it would be in the power of any disposed person to take an improper part and misiead them, by telling them, that as the decisions of the Courts were erroneous, and they were not expressly named in the Bill, there had been no intention to include them in its provisions,—the honest Yeomanry of the Country might be induced to remain in error, and by not availing themselves of the benefit of the Act, entail misery and suffering on their families. It was, therefore, but fair and candid to tell them why it was necessary, particularly to allude to them in the Bill—he would make every allowance for the feelings of those who had so valiantly come forward in the defence of the Country during the late War—but whatever might be the mistaken advertence which rendered the present measure necessary, who was, or who was not in the wrong, was not of consequence, as the Law must be duly administered—the allusion, he thought, would not be considered to extremely repugnant, when it was remembered, that allusion was also made to others, who had served His Majesty in Foreign Corps, and among whom were many Officers of high rank, who had served the King, and fought his battles in almost every part of the Globe. The situation of these persons required such an enactment, and they might, with equal cause, complain that they were particularly alluded to, and objected to the Bill—they had been sent to this Province, and had lands granted to them, which they had improved—they had faithfully served His Majesty, and with equal reason, might complain of particular allusions. No such complaint, however, was made by them—they felt the necessity of the measure, and in fact, whatever allusion had been found necessary, were not intended to wound the honest feelings of any set of men—they were all good, peaceable, and loyal subjects, and the only object in view, was to confirm them in their rights and possessions, without offering any violence to their feelings—should there had been no volunteer offer to attempt to disqualify them, or excite any hard or unpleasant feeling. The Resolutions and Address of this House last year went clearly to shew that the case now required some Legislative remedy—His Majesty's Government had pointed out the mode in which that remedy could be sanctioned by them, and the Bill now before the House provided it. He moved the adoption of the Preamble.

Mr. Bidwell said that he would not detain the committee by offering any additional remarks to those he had previously made on this occasion—he had already stated that the Bill was such a one as would not have met his approbation if the House had been left to exercise its own judgment on the case. His Majesty's Government, however, having assumed the extraordinary power of issuing directions to the Legislature, with respect to the details of the Bill, he felt himself unable to use the free exercise of his own judgment—if this had not been the case, he should have proposed a different Bill—under all the circumstances, he should therefore feel it his duty to support it. Some amendments, however, he considered necessary, and such as were not incompatible with the instructions, but such as would, in his opinion, render the Bill more conformable to them—if the Bill, in any particular, fell short of these instructions, it might be considered as a measure of our own, and be rejected; and to avoid this consequence, he would adhere closely to the instructions. The first amendment he should propose, was in the preamble of the Bill—in its present shape it would excite alarm, and be offensive. The Bill was intended to be a gracious measure, and there could be no necessity for offering offence by naming particular Aliens of any particular Country. The amendment he should propose, would embrace generally all Foreigners, and he thought there could not be a reasonable objection to it—other amendmen s he should offer as the different clauses of the Bill came to be discussed. Some persons might refuse to comply with what they would consider as a degradation, by being obliged to register their names—if there were any such, it was but reasonable that they should have an opportunity of disposing of their property, if they desired it, or to remain in the Province till they had paid the debt of nature, and then part with it as they pleased—they had become possessed of it under the impression that they could enjoy and dispose of it at their pleasure—no fault was to be attributed to them—those who felt inclined to do it, could comply with all the provisions of the Bill, and the amendments he suggested would not prevent their doing so.

Mr. Lefferty was formerly of opinion that the objects could be embraced in one Bill, but was now satisfied that they should be separated—he had, however, always been opposed to legislating for persons not at all, and he was still of the same opinion, because he considered it ridiculous that Aliens should pass Laws to make themselves subjects—he considered the King as his protector, and it was in his power to make him a subject, if he desired it, and he considered it unnecessary to allude to them in the Bill—he would make every allowance for the feelings of those who had so valiantly come forward in the defence of the Country during the late War—but whatever might be the mistaken advertence which rendered the present measure necessary, who was, or who was not in the wrong, was not of consequence, as the Law must be duly administered—the allusion, he thought, would not be considered to extremely repugnant, when it was remembered, that allusion was also made to others, who had served His Majesty in Foreign Corps, and among whom were many Officers of high rank, who had served the King, and fought his battles in almost every part of the Globe. The situation of these persons required such an enactment, and they might, with equal cause, complain that they were particularly alluded to, and objected to the Bill—they had been sent to this Province, and had lands granted to them, which they had improved—they had faithfully served His Majesty, and with equal reason, might complain of particular allusions. No such complaint, however, was made by them—they felt the necessity of the measure, and in fact, whatever allusion had been found necessary, were not intended to wound the honest feelings of any set of men—they were all good, peaceable, and loyal subjects, and the only object in view, was to confirm them in their rights and possessions, without offering any violence to their feelings—should there had been no volunteer offer to attempt to disqualify them, or excite any hard or unpleasant feeling. The Resolutions and Address of this House last year went clearly to shew that the case now required some Legislative remedy—His Majesty's Government had pointed out the mode in which that remedy could be sanctioned by them, and the Bill now before the House provided it. He moved the adoption of the Preamble.

Mr. Bidwell said that he would not detain the committee by offering any additional remarks to those he had previously made on this occasion—he had already stated that the Bill was such a one as would not have met his approbation if the House had been left to exercise its own judgment on the case. His Majesty's Government, however, having assumed the extraordinary power of issuing directions to the Legislature, with respect to the details of the Bill, he felt himself unable to use the free exercise of his own judgment—if this had not been the case, he should have proposed a different Bill—under all the circumstances, he should therefore feel it his duty to support it. Some amendments, however, he considered necessary, and such as were not incompatible with the instructions, but such as would, in his opinion, render the Bill more conformable to them—if the Bill, in any particular, fell short of these instructions, it might be considered as a measure of our own, and be rejected; and to avoid this consequence, he would adhere closely to the instructions. The first amendment he should propose, was in the preamble of the Bill—in its present shape it would excite alarm, and be offensive. The Bill was the measure, he was aware that it was their desire that a Bill, such as the one now proposed, should pass; indeed, without having heard of, or seen, the instructions, they had petitioned for a private Act of Naturalization, on nearly similar terms—they had considered it necessary for their own safety, and thought it no reflection, in order to secure the privileges they prayed for, to register their names. He should support the Preamble, and was happy, in doing so, that he should meet the wishes of his constituents—if the present measure should fail, he should then urge their petition on the attention of the House, and hoped their would be no objection to comply with there wishes—he felt a particular interest in the fate of the Bill, on account of several friends, whose desire it was that it should succeed. What, he would ask, would be the situation of many persons, if amendments were urged and adopted, which would endanger the passing of this Bill? what would be their situation at another election, where all the young Officers would be bound to decide according to law? what adjudgments had lately been made under the law? legal decisions had declared that they were Aliens. Some provision was necessary—we had now the power to provide the remedy, and the responsibility, and it was but right we should rest upon ourselves, if we pass such a Bill as we know cannot be assented to. The interest of his constituents was deeply involved in the question, and he again repeated that if this Bill before the House should be rejected on such a shape as to afford no reasonable prospect of its being assented to, he should then feel it to be his duty to carry their intentions into effect by a private Bill, and as their own interests were concerned, and their petition did not interfere with the rights of others, he hoped it would not be objected, that the usual notice for private Bills had not been given. The last amendment proposed by the Hon. Gentleman, he should not object to, considered as a distinct one, but he could not consent to have it incorporated in this Bill.

Mr. Kiph, considered this as one of the most important questions that had ever been submitted to the consideration of the House. Last year, he said, they were embarrassed in consequence of their incapacity to legislate on the subject—they might have passed a Law if they pleased, which would have been void—they had, therefore, committed themselves by passing only a declaratory law—and asking they had address[illegible] His Majesty and were now invested with power to remove the cloud of doubt and uncertainty which had been cast over the Civil Rights and privileges of a great portion of the people of this colony—he presumed it was the anxious desire of all persons that these doubts should be removed—the only question was how it should be done, in such a manner as to place the matter beyond all uncertainty. He had introduced a Bill, short and comprehensive in its provisions, which imposed no odious burthens, and offered no violence to the feelings of any man—another Bill was now proposed, which required that the persons who were to be benefited by it should purchase that benefit at the sacrifice of feeling, by being required to register their own degradation—he considered it an odious provision—when he asked why these restrictions should be imposed—he was told that we were ordered to do it—and when he asked why the right to hold Estates could not be included in the measure, he was told it was the wish of subjects in States at the time of treaty, who did not, by their own act, after coming to the years of maturity, accept of office, or abjure their allegiance—he was free to admit that there might even now be British subjects in the United States, who were born before 1783, although they were now without the allegiance of the King of England. One Hon. Gentleman had objected to the preamble of the Bill, because it was founded on what he termed an extraordinary interference on the part of His Majesty's Government, limiting the steps to be pursued by this House. The instructions did not, in his opinion, limit the House—any other Bill might be passed, but the Government, as one branch of the Legislature, tell us that they will feel themselves at liberty to assent to an act passed on such terms—this did not confine the House to the passing of such a Bill. It they did not concur in the views expressed by His Majesty's Government, there was no absolute necessity for their passing a Bill in conformity to the instructions. With respect to the Own constituents, who were interested in humiliation—what would the House say if an armed force was sent to compel obedience to these instructions—such, in fact, if like his noble colleague, Capt. Matthews, the should for their disobedience be threatened to be sent to Quebec, and from thence to England—some might tremble and comply—as it was we had no terrors of body, but we should have a terror if we saw the Constitution falling to pieces about us—if the House consented to comply with these instructions, what could they say to the people—the dependence of the Executive and Legislative Council might be talked of, but if the House consented to be governed by these instructions, there was an end to their independence; and should they be the first to set the example to lessen their own importance? The Instructions it is true are registered on the Journals, but the House was not compelled to register its approbation of them by passing this Bill—it still had the power to refuse it, and pursue such a course, as they themselves might deem necessary. To what situation would the House reduce itself if instead of Legislating on its own opinion, it followed the instructions which were laid on the table—they had been told at one time that these instructions were not for their guidance—now that they were received they were told that they were for their guidance—he protested against such acquiesence & injustice, it migh do for the higher circles in York, but it would not do for the people, or for this House. The message sent with these instructions said that they were to be presented in the deliberations of the House, and that unless the correspounding with them was passed, it would not receive the Assent—he had read of secret committees, by which matters were managed in Sweden—and if these instructions were complied with the House would be converted into a Swedish Parliament. In Scotland formerly the Lords of the Articles dictated their terms of compliance—and here too we are to have our Lords of the Articles to dictate to the House. In Ireland the Lord Lieutenant formerly had the power to instruct what should be law—here we are to have instructions sent from the Councillors of the King, or by the Executive, and we are only to have the power to fill up blanks—a mere skeleton of a Parliament—and this to have the effect of precedent hereafter—he would urge a disobedience to the instructions, on constitutional grounds, and because they contained impolitic provisions—the evil was a general one, and he would provide a general remedy, but the instructions said that there was great difficulty on one subject, and it should be odious burthens, and offered no violence to the feelings of any man—another Bill was now proposed, which required that the persons who were to be benefited by it should purchase that benefit at the sacrifice of feeling, by being required to register their own degradation—he considered it an odious provision—when he asked why these restrictions should be imposed—he was told that we were ordered to do it—and when he asked why the right to hold Estates could not be included in the measure, he was told it was the wish of subjects in States at the time of treaty, who did not, by their own act, after coming to the years of maturity, accept of office, or abjure their allegiance—he was free to admit that there might even now be British subjects in the United States, who were born before 1783, although they were now without the allegiance of the King of England. One Hon. The instructions did not, in his opinion, limit the House—any other Bill might be passed, but the Government, as one branch of the Legislature, tell us that they will feel themselves at liberty to assent to an act passed on such terms—this did not confine the House to the passing of such a Bill. It they did not concur in the views expressed by His Majesty's Government, there was no absolute necessity for their passing a Bill in conformity to the instructions. With respect to the own constituents, who were interested in decisions, and comply with the terms of these instructions? No; they would not—their prejudices were so strongly rooted in their minds and affections, that it was impossible—it might be called false shame, but all were possessed of it, and who would like to be tortured on account of his false shame—he would not torture them by calling them Aliens, but would prefer calling them British Subjects. What was Patriotism, but a love of ones Country in preference to all others? these people possessed it, and he would not weaken that noble feeling by calling them Aliens. One witness who had been examined before the committee, on being asked what countryman he was, he said that more of Indian blood flowed in his veins than any other—he was a Mohawk; and well would it be if we had some of the same blood in our veins, for then we would not sit here to obey these instructions.

The oath required by the Bill did not say any thing about abjuration, but what does the Bill itself say—it is left out of the oath, but implied by the terms of the Bill—this might be called refinement; whether a legal one or not, he would not say, but he would say it was detestable—it reminded him of the General who had induced a Garrison to capitulate, on terms that no blood should be spilt, and then buried them all alive—the oath and the provisions in the Bill, were, or implied, an abjuration of all other allegiance. He held in his hand the Report of the Legislative Council on the Alien Question last year, and he would quote that learned body as authority on this occasion—if he had heretofore expressed himself in any manner disrespectful towards them, he should regret it, as he found from that report that they had advocated opinions on this subject in which he fully concurred—what did their report say, why that the oath of abjuration required in the United States from persons wishing to be naturalized, was a principle

M.S.A. 4-6-1827

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, January 27, 1827.

The late news from England is important, and in order that our readers may, as early as possible, have the perusal of the admirable Speech delivered by Mr Canning in the House of Commons, on the King's Message for affording assistance to Portugal, the Ancient Ally of England, we are publishing a Supplement which will be issued on Monday.

After a debate of three days, and after the original Preamble, and several Amendments had been proposed, the following, on motion of Mr. Beasley, has been adopted as the first part of the Preamble to the Naturalization Bill:—

"Whereas many persons have become resident in this Province, who have emigrated from the United States of America, since the year 1783, and have not been Naturalized as British Subjects, by an Act of Parliament."

The remaining part of the Preamble was then adopted without any discussion, and the several clauses of the Bill were gone through, some trifling alterations being made. An Amendment was then proposed by Mr. Bidwell, authorizing persons who did not chose to comply with the conditions of the Bill, to hold and convey real Estate. This was negatived, and the Committee rose, and obtained leave to sit again to-morrow (Thursday), but in consequence of other business being before the House, the subject was not then resumed.

If such an Amendment as that proposed by Mr. Bidwell should be incorporated in the Bill, we are of opinion, that it would prove fatal to it, and would put it out of the power of the King, to give it his assent, as it cannot be considered at all probable, that His Majesty could feel disposed, to have a non descript class of persons living in one of his Colonies, enjoying what in many respects, may be considered as one of the most valuable privileges, that of holding lands to an unlimited extent, without acknowledging any allegiance to him for the protection afforded them, in the enjoyment of such a right; but implying by their dissent, to become his subjects, on such terms as he was willing to accede to, as rather holding an allegiance to some other power. The danger, (to say nothing of the absurdity of a distinct class of persons, such as this would be,) in any well governed State, is so easily perceived, as to need no comment. Enjoying so valuable a privilege, and exempted as they would be, from bearing any part in the discharge of Public duties, such as Jurors, Militia men, or in any Parochial Offices, just cause of complaint would certainly exist on the part of those, who had to bear those burthens, for the protection of a class of people, who might, if the Law passed in such a shape, legally enjoy their properties; and who might also, if in the course of events, they found it expedient, join an enemy, without the fear of incurring any loss of that property. This would be to admit the doctrine of double allegiance, in its most unqualified sense, and would, in fact, amount to offering a premium to those, who should embrace that new fangled and dangerous doctrine. It cannot be supposed that the House of Assembly will be induced at any future stage of the discussion, if the attempt should be renewed, seriously to entertain a proposition, so full of absurdity, nay, of danger, to the interest of the Country. On reflection, they must be convinced, we think, that to adopt a principle which would raise up a class of persons, acknowledging no allegiance, and yet permitted to enjoy one of the most valuable and influential privileges, for which, we venture to assert, no precedent can be found in any other Country in the world, would indeed be humiliating and degrading (to make use of terms much resorted to of late) to those who pride themselves as they ought to do, in the glorious title of British Subjects. The Country expects the House to do their duty in a firm and fearless manner—To the Country they will have to answer if they act otherwise.

The object of the Government on this subject, has been most industriously misrepresented. After the anxious desire they have expressed to secure the rights of all persons, and the disposition they have evinced generally, for the welfare of the Country, it is with astonishment we hear any person bold enough to hazard the assertion that it is their wish or intention to deprive the people of their rights. The assertion is as malicious as it is untrue, and from the great interest which has always been felt by the Government, and which may be recognized in many of its gracious acts, at former periods, as well as on late occasions, to promote the welfare and happiness of the Country, the people will, we have no doubt, unbiassed by misrepresentation or declamation, and unmoved by the vain attempts of a few discontented individuals, exercise their own judgments, calmly and dispassionately. Let them do this, and by a comparison of the past, judge of the intentions of Government on the present occasion, and there can be little doubt that the conviction in every honest mind, will be, that there is no desire to injure them, or deprive them of their rights—no wish to offer violence to their feelings—no intention of offering humiliating or degrading terms to them; but, that actuated by a sincere desire, to remove all doubts on the subject, their only wish is, that such a measure should be carried into effect, as will permanently secure to them all their rights, privileges, and immunities.

As to the attempt which has been made to excite a prejudice against the Attorney General, as being inimical to the rights of these people; we can only say, that those who attended the debate in the House of Assembly on Tuesday last, and heard the conversation which passed between that Gentleman and Mr. George Hamilton, must have been satisfied, that never was refutation of such a calumny more complete or satisfactory. The discussion, and consequent developement which took place, respecting the course invariably pursued by the Attorney General, in his Official capacity, when the interests of these people was concerned, was such, that if the whole Country could have been assembled at the Bar of the House on the occasion, we say, unhesitatingly, that every individual, whatever might have been his previous impressions, would have retired from that Bar, convinced, that if the persons, whose rights he is now maliciously and wantonly accused of wishing to destroy, have ever had a sincere and zealous defender, and one who has labored faithfully and uprightly in their behalf, the Attorney General is that person.

After what we heard on that occasion; and we would even call upon those who are opposed to the Bill now before the House to vouch for the correctness of this statement—after having heard Mr. Hamilton, one of the most strenuous opposers of that Bill, in language which could not be considered as adulatory, say, that the part which the Attorney General had taken, on occasions, which deeply involved the interests of some of those persons, "did honor to his head and his heart"—When after hearing these things in the House of Assembly, we see an attempt made to prejudice the public mind against a person, whose conduct on this occasion has borne the closest scrutiny, and resulted in the conviction of its correctness, even in the minds of his political opponents.—When after all this, we see his motives thus wickedly called in question and misrepresented, we think it but just, that the truth should be told, and that the Country should have an opportunity of fairly judging the conduct of one, who has certainly bestowed much time and labor in the consideration of this important question.

[Since writing the above, after a long debate, and after the House had twice divided, the votes being equal on both sides, the Bill has passed its second reading, and is reported as amended—ordered for a third reading on Monday next.]

We were not a little surprised, and we are sure that every one who reads this remark will be equally surprised, to hear, that Capt. Matthews, one of the Members for Middlesex, in the course of debate yesterday, on the Naturalization Bill, should express his belief, that the object the Government had in view in sending out the Irish Emigrants to this Country at £22 a Head, (he spoke of them as would do of Cattle) was to employ them in creating divisions in society in the Colony. The allusion he made to the Loyal Address which they presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, in which they so nobly declared their determination to defend the Country, if necessity should ever require it, with their Shillitahs, if they had no other weapons, was termed by Capt. M. as an indication on their parts to consider themselves as opposed to other classes of the Community. The reply made to this by Mr. Charles Jones was very proper, and such as the occasion called for in defence of the character of the Irish Settlers, who have conducted themselves in every respect in the most praise worthy manner. He said, that the address alluded to, was one which did honor to the Irish Settlers, and deserved the approbation of every well wisher of the Country. The motives attributed to the Government and the aspersions thrown out against the Irish character were equally unjust and unworthy.—

We were the more surprised at such remarks, coming as they did, from a Captain of the Royal Artillery, enjoying at this moment the bounty of that Government whose motives, in advancing the happiness and prosperity of the Inhabitants of the Emerald Isle, he thus called in question. By the bye, we recollect having heard the Captain, some days since, in the course of debate, say, that he was encouraged by Government to settle in this Province—Did he understand at the time, that this encouragement was held out, for the purpose of getting him here, to promote dissensions in Society.

The charge preferred by the Capt. against the Majority of the House, (unmindful of the odds against him) of Members being Loyal to the Attorney General and voting with him, because he was able to reward them was really so extraordinary that we could not help laughing at it—in our sleeve for though there are many capital things said in the House, it seems that the risible faculties of every person must be kept under restraint, except those of the grave Senators themselves. And while the Attorney General was reading the extract, from Dr. Johnson, (which we shall endeavour to procure and publish for the information of our readers) in reply to this serious charge, we could not help laughing again—in both sleeves—and when the Captain again returned to the charge, and called the extract fine, elegant, beautiful, and, all that kind of thing, in spite of ourselves, we felt the smile curling no our lip, notwithstanding our endeavours to suppress it.

Erratum—In Mr. Lefferty's Speech, on The Abolition Bill, reported in last week's paper, for "laws enough already to make people honest," read "laws enough already to make people dishonest"—The error was one of inadvertence, in the hurry of putting our paper to press.

On Friday the 19th instant, His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor visited the Royal Grammar School, and was pleased to signify his approbation of the manner in which the young Gentlemen performed their various Scholastic Exercises. The company present was numerous, and were highly gratified with the interesting scene. We insert the two following pieces which were spoken on the occasion:—

HYMN.

For the commencement of the year 1827. (spoken by Master G. Sherwood.)

To view the Seasons as they roll,
Each with successive beauties crown'd,
Must cause with joy the thankful soul
Thy praise, Jehovah, to resound.

When memory traces back the past,
With gratitude my heart expands;
O may we still thy blessings taste,
And ope thou still thy bounteous hands!

Our armies by thy guidance led
Victorious to the bloody field,
Drove back their foes with sudden dread,
And made e'en boasted heroes yield.

Peace beams with joyful rays around,
Conducting Plenty in her hand;
Our Ports with num'rous Barks abound,
With wealth of every distant Land.

The trumpets sound, the clash of arms,
No more awake the dawning day;
The cannon's roar no more alarms,
Nor glitt'ring hosts their rigs display.

Thy piercing eye alone, O Lord,
Can this New Year's events behold;
If gentle peace shall still afford
Its blessings, and its stores unfold.

Still let us in thy mercies share,
Still prove our constant fort and tow'r;
Protect us with thy watchful care,
And guard us in the needful hour.

In God let each of us delight,
In Him let all our hopes repose;
'Tis God defends us in the fight,
'Tis God who shields us from our foes.

And not from man alone, O Lord,
We suppliant ask thy guardian care;
O fortify us by thy word,
From our own hearts deceitful snare!

10

Shall I another Spring behold,
The Summer, or the Autumn see?
Or, ere the Sun his course has told,
Be snatch'd into eternity!

11

The present, Lord, alone is mine,
Then let me each new hour improve;
Oh! teach me now to spend my time
In pray'r, and praise, and heavenly love.

TO THE LADIES

(Spoken by Master John Boulton, immediately after he had repeated the original Greek Ode.)

To all that breathe the air of Heaven,
Some boon of strength has Nature given.
When the majestic bull was born,
She fenc'd his brow with wreathed horn.
She arm'd the courser's foot of air,
And wing'd with speed the panting hare.
She gave the lion fangs of terror,
And on the ocean's crystal mirror,
Taught the unnumber'd scaly throng
To trace their liquid path along;
While for the umbrage of the grove,
She plum'd the warbling world of love.
To man she gave the flame refin'd,
The spark of Heaven—a thinking mind!
For thee oh woman! modest, kind,
Was there no bounteous gift design'd!
She gave thee beauty—shaft of eyes,
That every shaft of war outflies!
She gave thee beauty—blush of fire,
That bids the flames of war retire!
Woman! be fair, we must adore thee;
Smile, and a world is weak before thee!

By order of the Board.

THOMAS RIDOUT, Cashier.

Bank of Upper Canada.
York, 23d January, 1827. 3t-2

From these Articles, the House will perceive the nature, if not the extent of our ancient obligations to our ally. I need say to admit, Sir, that either of these Treaties might be, by time and circumstances, supposed to have released us in their force; or it might be, that by one party having withdrawn himself from the responsibility, say Holland for instance, the other should be still considered as bound to adhere to it? It might be said, the language of these Treaties was so loose and prodigal, that they could only have originated in good feeling, and that it was out of nature to suppose any one nation would engage to defend another as she would herself. It might be said, there was something so exaggerated in these treaties, as that they were never intended to be carried into effect. But with regard to this very treaty of 1703, even if I stood upon it alone; even though the circumstances of Holland had changed; even if her sentiments had changed; if her obligations were either altered or done away, the points I need not raise the question whether the Government and sentiments of England not changing, she is now liable or not to perform her obligation. This is not the time to do so, even if I admitted that such objection were to be made. I admitted that such objections, if any, should have been taken at the Congress of Vienna, when the eyes of the whole world were open to our relative situation with Portugal, when it pervaded the continent, the existence of our ancient treaties of defence and effect. But was no such objection made? Was it thought necessary; is there is not as much on the specific articles of the treaties of 1661 and 1703 that we have acted and continued to act, as on the general spirit of the whole engagements, and recognized at the Congress of Vienna. I say Portugal has a right to claim the assistance of Great Britain, as an ally, and call upon her to defend the integrity of her dominions. This is the case of the case as to our moral and political obligations towards Portugal; and I am not ashamed to say—I have a right to say—that when Portugal, in the apprehension of a powerful enemy, applied for our assistance; while we had no hesitation in acknowledging our obligation to afford it, if the casus fœderis had once arisen; yet I say that we were bound to wait till we ascertained the fact upon sufficient authority. Whether delay or difficulty interposed, it was not as to the existence of an admitted obligation, but as to the knowledge of the fact having actually taken place, which it was our bounden duty to ascertain. In this stage of our proceedings, I beg to answer incidently to some charge of delay which has been made against His Majesty's Government on this very important subject. But, for myself, I can state to the House, there is not the shadow of foundation for any such charge. It was only on Sunday the 2d Dec. that I received from the Portuguese Ambassador the official and formal demand of assistance from this country. True, long before that time, rumours were afloat of an unathorized description—rumours, however way from Madrid, where every thing was distorted, through the channels of the French press, where every thing was again disfigured and perverted, to serve party purposes; but until the 4th of Dec. we had not received that accurate information on which alone we could found a communication to Parliament. That precise information, on which we could act, only arrived on Saturday last. The Speech of the Regent, the announcement was taken on Sunday we obtained the sanction of His Majesty; on Monday we came down to Parliament; and on this very day (Monday) we have the honour of addressing the House, British troops are on their march for Portugal. (Cheers.) I trust, therefore, that we are not in justice to be charged with any unnecessary delay: but, on the contrary, while we felt the claim of Portugal to be so clear; our obligation to assist her so binding, and the possible consequences of interference so spreading; it is our duty to act on the case, before we took a step whereon to found any proceedings, to ascertain, to calculate. Rumours and reports, as I have just said, were long afloat, of incursions made by Spain upon our Ally; but, then, they reached us through channels, which gave no confidence in them. We would found any grave proceeding. In one case, at Madrid, they were put forth to deceive; in others, to conceal; and, coming through the French newspaper press, and the suppression of their most such sources, were not to be relied on by His Majesty's Government, and we therefore waited for authenticated facts. in order to come before Parliament with what we might call the truth. In former instances, when Parliament was called upon to assist Portugal, the regular and constitutional power of the monarchy was lodged in the breast of the King; the application of his wish; the expression of his desire; the putting forward his individual claim for assistance: would have been enough, but when it was stated to me that matters had changed; that the Constitution was modified and altered; it became my duty to inquire; first, whether the Constitution of Portugal authorised the claim; next, if it were competent to the authorities making it to do so, and whether the Chambers had given their sanction to the reception of our troops, such as we were to expect for the troops of an old and faithful ally. We were bound to take care, before a single soldier left England, or set his foot upon the shore of Portugal, that the sanction of the Executive, of all the proper authorities, should be obtained; and I beg leave again to state, with reference to the charge of delay, which has somewhere or other been brought against His Majesty's Ministers, that it was only this morning I received the sanction of the Chambers assembled at Lisbon. So far, then, from any charge of delay being justifiably brought against the Government, I am boldly say, had we proceeded faster, we would have acted precipitately, and every caution was necessary to be used, before we involved this country in proceedings, which might be proved to be unnecessary by the result or might expose us to the unpleasant reception of our troops in Portugal. The account which I received to-day, of the proceedings of the Chambers at Lisbon, is contained in a dispatch from Sir W. A. Court, dated the 29th Nov. It states, that the day after the arrival of the news of the entry of the rebels, Ministers demanded the extension of their executive powers, an augmentation of the troops, and permission to apply for foreign assistance. The Deputies assembled, agreed to the demand with acclamation, and a similar spirit operating in the other Chamber, the Members rose in a body from their seats, expressed their readiness to acquiesce in the call, and many of them offered their personal assistance in the cause of their country. The Duke Cadaval, the President, was the first who so declared himself, and the Minister, who described the proceeding to our Ambassador, declared it was a moment worthy of the days of the Portuguese. (Hear, hear.) So far the House will see, we have a reasonable guarantee for the good reception of our troops, and then, the next question remaining for our consideration is, has the constitutional power? Bands of Portuguese, armed and equipped by Spain, made hostile incursions into Portugal at several points; and what was remarkable in this case is, that the attack was made on the very ground on which the application for British assistance has been complied with. The attack in the south of Portugal was stated in the French papers; from Villa Vicosa. I say Portugal has a right to claim the assistance of Great Britain, as an ally, and call upon her to defend the integrity of her dominions. This is the case of the case as to our moral and political obligations towards Portugal; and I am not ashamed to say—I have a right to say—that when Portugal, in the apprehension of a powerful enemy, applied for our assistance; while we had no hesitation in acknowledging our obligation to afford it, if the casus fœderis had once arisen; yet I say that we were bound to wait till we ascertained the fact upon sufficient authority. Gentlemen, to keep these matters separate and distinct; and more than, what I am now going to say, I must bear rather hard on Spain, yet I must say, it is most unjustifiable—it is contrary to all notions of good neighborhood with the Portuguese—it is contrary to the rules of God and man, that Spain should have committed such an aggression upon Portugal. (Hear, hear, hear;) I do not, however, mean to say there is no casus peradventure for Portugal to demand or making redress—no opportunity of retracing the steps she has taken; all I do say is, it is our duty to fly to the defence of Portugal, be the result what it may! (Cries of hear, hear,) but that declaration I consider by no means a necessary ground, on which to call for the unanimous address of this House, in answer to His Majesty's most gracious Message. The present situation of Portugal is so unusual, and the recent years of her history are so crowded with extraordinary events, that perhaps the House will not consider I am unprofitably wasting their time, if I state a few particulars on the subject, and its effects upon a portion of Europe. It is know, that in consequence of the King of Portugal residing in the Brazils, with a view to raise it from a colonial to a metropolitan condition, the King resolved upon his departure to his European states, where there grew up a degree of independence, which threatened the integrity of both countries. (Hear, hear.) So far the House will see, we have a reasonable guarantee for the good reception of our troops, and then, the next question remaining for our consideration, has the constitutional power? I say Portugal has a right to claim the assistance of Great Britain, as an ally, and call upon her to defend the integrity of her dominions. This is the case of the case as to our moral and political obligations towards Portugal; and I am not ashamed to say—I have a right to say—that when Portugal, in the apprehension of a powerful enemy, applied for our assistance; while we had no hesitation in acknowledging our obligation to afford it, if the casus fœderis had once arisen; yet I say that we were bound to wait till we ascertained the fact upon sufficient authority. Whether delay or difficulty interposed, it was not as to the existence of an admitted obligation, but as to the knowledge of the fact having actually taken place, which it was our bounden duty to ascertain. In this stage of our proceedings, I beg to answer incidently to some charge of delay which has been made against His Majesty's Government on this very important subject. But, for myself, I can state to the House, there is not the shadow of foundation for any such charge. It was only on Sunday the 2d Dec. that I received from the Portuguese Ambassador the official and formal demand of assistance from this country. True, long before that time, rumours were afloat of an unathorized description—rumours, however way from Madrid, where every thing was distorted, through the channels of the French press, where every thing was again disfigured and perverted, to serve party purposes; but until the 4th of Dec. we had not received that accurate information on which alone we could found a communication to Parliament. That precise information, on which we could act, only arrived on Saturday last. The Speech of the Regent, the announcement was taken on Sunday we obtained the sanction of His Majesty; on Monday we came down to Parliament; and on this very day (Monday) we have the honour of addressing the House, British troops are on their march for Portugal. (Cheers.) I trust, therefore, that we are not in justice to be charged with any unnecessary delay: but, on the contrary, while we felt the claim of Portugal to be so clear; our obligation to assist her so binding, and the possible consequences of interference so spreading; it is our duty to act on the case, before we took a step whereon to found any proceedings, to ascertain, to calculate. Rumours and reports, as I have just said, were long afloat, of incursions made by Spain upon our Ally; but, then, they reached us through channels, which gave no confidence in them. We would found any grave proceeding. In one case, at Madrid, they were put forth to deceive; in others, to conceal; and, coming through the French newspaper press, and the suppression of their most such sources, were not to be relied on by His Majesty's Government, and we therefore waited for authenticated facts, in order to come before Parliament with what we might call the truth. In former instances, when Parliament was called upon to assist Port the Court of Spain, and directed the Charge d'Affaires, who remained in his room, to inform the Court of Spain, that it was to look for no encouragement or support from France, and recommending to Spain, to recant the sentiments to which she had given utterance, and to pursue a line of conduct of a very different character. I am therefore bound to say, that this Nation has exerted herself in a way that may be deemed most satisfactory. Sir, it will be well for Spain, on hearing of the step that we, in consequence of the Message from His Majesty, are now taking to consider, as I have said, how she will meet the call we are about to make. My earnest hope is, that she will meet it in such a manner as will put a stop to consequences, where I devoutly wish they should stop, and I will not, therefore, pursue this portion of the subject, by arguing upon those consequences which, my hope is, may be averted.

I set out by saying, that there were many reasons which induced me to think, that nothing short of a point of national honour could make desirable any approximation to the danger of war—but let me be distinctly understood as not meaning dread war in a good cause; and I trust that in no other will it ever be the lot of this country to engage; that I dread war from a distrust of our powers and of our resources to meet it—No. I dread it upon far other grounds. I dread it, because I am conscious of the tremendous power which this country possesses of pushing any war in which she may become engaged, to consequences at the bare contemplation of which I shudder. It will be recollected that when, some years ago, I took the liberty of adverting to a topic of this nature, when it was referred to in this house, with respect to the position of this country at the present time, I then stated that our position was not merely one of neutrality between contending nations, but between contending principles & opinions; that it was a position of neutrality which alone preserved the balance of power, the maintenance of which I believed necessary to the safety and welfare of Europe. Nearly four years, or rather three years and a half, of experience, have confirmed, and not altered, the opinion I then declared; and I still fear, that the next war in Europe, if it should spread beyond the narrow compass of Portugal and Spain, will be a war of the most tremendous nature,—because it will be a war of conflicting opinions; and I know that if the interests and honour of this country should oblige us to enter into it, however we might enter into it, as I trust we shall always do, with a firm desire to mitigate rather than to exasperate, to contend with arms and not with opinions; yet I know that this country would not avoid seeing ranked under her banners all the restless, and all the dissatisfied, whether with cause or without cause, of every nation with which she might be placed at variance. I say, Sir, the consciousness of this fact; the knowledge that there is in this country such a tremendous power, [hear, hear,] induces me to feel as I do feel. But it is one thing "to have a giant's strength," and another thing to "use it like a giant." The consciousness that we have this power keeps us safe. Our business is not to seek out opportunities for displaying it in a heap: so that it may be beheld, whether we know it or not we know its proper use; and to shrink from converting the mere into the oppressor!

——— Celsa sedet Æolus arce,
Sceptra tenens: mollit{illegible} animos et temperat iras.
Ni faciat, maria ac terras cœlumq; profundum
Quippe ferant rapid secum, verrantq; per auras.
Sir, the consequences of the letting loose of these passions which are all chained up, may be such as I would lead to a scene of desolation, such as no one can, for a moment, contemplate without horror, and such as I could never be easy upon my couch, if I had the consciousness of having, by one hasty precipitated. This, then, is the reason, a reason the reverse of fear, a reason as contrary of disability, why I dread the recurrence of a war. This reason may be felt by those who are acting on opposite principles, before the time for using our power shall arrive, I would bear much, and I would forbear long; I would almost put up with any thing that did not touch our national faith and national honour, rather than let slip the furies of war, the hade of which is in our hands, while we know not whom they may reach, and doubt where the devastation may end. (Continued cheering.) Such is the love of peace which the British Government acknowledges, and such the dutie of peace which the circumstances of the world inculcate.—(Cheers from all sides.) In obedience to this conviction, and with the hope of avoiding extremities, I will push no further the topics of this part of the address. Let us defend Portugal, wherever may be the assailants, because it is a work of duty; and let us end where that duty ends. We go to Portugal, not to rule, not to dictate, not to prescribe laws; we go to plant there the standard of England, that there foreign dominion shall not come.

The Rt. Hon Gentleman sat down, apparently much exhausted, amidst the loudest cheers from all parts of the House.

Sir Robert Wilson followed, and in an animated speech fully justified the measures taken by the Government, and wished the troops every success.—Success, he said, could not fail to attend our efforts, as it was a cause in which God & justice were on our side.

Mr. Hume, as constant as the polar star to the spirit of opposition, questioned the policy of send ng an army to Portugal, and moved an amendment, that the House resume the subject that day week.

Mr. Wood, of Preston, seconded the amendment.

Mr. Barnes began by saying, that so great was his horror of war, that he had listened with the utmost attention to the hope of finding some law in the case as made out by the Rt. Hon. Gentleman. Sir, Canning; some opening into which he could insinuate an argument against the necessity of an appeal to arms, and he sincerely regretted that he could not. The measures then adopted by his Majesty's Ministers seemed indispensable.

Mr. Brougham made a most eloquent speech, and depicted the horrors of war in strong colours—was fully alive to all its present and future mischiefs, but like the Hon. Gentleman who had just preceded him, he was constrained to say, that no alternative was left to the Government but the one adopted. He paid Mr. Canning the highest compliments for the manly part he had taken in this trying affair, and pronounced his speech to be the best of all his best.

Mr. Hanks, like Mr. Hume and Mr. Wood, objected to the course pursued by Ministers, and were the only dissentients among 300 Members present.

Mr. Secretary Canning.—I do not intend to occupy the House with a reply, but there have been two or three questions taken by Hon. Gentlemen which I should be sorry to leave unanswered. I admit I understated the case against Spain—I did so purposely—I did so decidedly. I wished to show no more of her conduct than was sufficient to establish the casus juderis, but not to state so much as would make it impossible for Spain to avoid war.—The Hon. Gentleman who spoke last, wishes, in his great love for peace, to do that which would make war inevitable. He would not interfere now—he would wish to tell Spain, "you have not done enough to rouse us—you have given no cause of offence—think nothing of your sovereign over my frontiers—I think nothing of your coming in arms, of your ravaging my plains, and carrying destruction into my cities—I think nothing of your collecting traitors, and of your supplying them with food, clothing and arms—nothing of your training them, supplying them with Spanish stores, & of your sending them into Portugal, I will notice all these things; but in order to keep the peace of Europe, which I so dearly love, I call on you to make a declaration of war, and then a I'll come and fight you." (Laughter.) That is the effect of the Hon. Member's speech; that his contrivance to keep the peace. The more clumsy contrivance of Government has been to warn the Spanish authorities that they were known to meditate disturbances in Portugal. His Majesty's Ministers said to them "Beware of your proceedings, for we are sure to avenge your deeds; it is with you to determine if the present misunderstanding shall end in open hostilities." In the meantime the question is open to any means of reconcilement; & whether Ministers or the Hon. Gentleman are right, whether we ought to have endeavoured to obtain the grand object of his chimerious imagination, a trial of that question upon a tented field, and in a listed battle; if it was really our duty, as we ourselves apprehended, to nip the disorder in the bud; or if, according to the Hon. Gentleman, we ought to let it grow up to maturity, in order to mow it down with the more magnificent scythe of war, I leave the House to determine.—(Laughter and cheers.) It has been complained that no papers have been laid before the House; so that the facts that call for our interference might be made as notorious as the noon-day sun. It should be remembered, that if this course had been taken, and a set of inimitable hostility on the part of Spain had been demonstrated by papers laid on the table of the House, Spain would have been precluded from that locus penitentiæ which I was desirous to leave to her. I did not wish to cut off all means of retreat—to drive Spain into a corner from which she could have no escape. I hope I have sufficiently explained the reasons why I understood the case of the noble Lord. With the knowledge which official situation necessarily gives me, I make a statement to the House such as I judge will be sufficient to answer my purpose. It is for the House in general to judge what I have successes. Any hon. Friend, if he ask at the proper time, should that time arrive, will be convinced that it is not from want of evidence that my statement is not so full as he wished it to be. An amendment has been made upon the original proposition, and it has been justified by a reference to a declaration which I made some years ago; when I stated, that it would be exceedingly onerous for this country to engage in war—which declaration has been supposed to be inconsistent with the measure which I now propose. The variation between the two cases upon which I ground the difference of conduct, is that in the one instance I maintained that war was to be avoided, when we were not obliged to engage it; whereas, in the present case, I say, that unless it can be averted by reasonable demonstrations on the part of this country, war cannot be avoided. I do not, therefore, change my opinions as to the desirableness of peace, nor do I the less deprecate the necessity of war; but I say that, in the former instance, though in the opinion of some respectable persons, in and out of Parliament, it might have been politic to embark in war, my argument was, that we were not bound by any engagement of good faith or honour to engage in war,—that our choice, in short, was free, and, being free, my choice was for peace.—My argument, at the present day, is, that we have no choice—our faith is engaged; our honour is pledged; and, with all the same predilections for peace which I then professed, I maintain that no course is left to us on the present occasion, but that which is dictated both by honour and policy, to maintain the faith of the country, and to fulfil the national engagements. It has been suggested, that the Foreign Enlistment Act might be repealed on the present occasion, and Mina and his associates be enabled to rush to the contest, and by that means obviate the effect of the aggression upon Portugal. Believing, Sir as I do, that such a measure would entail the heaviest calamities upon that country, I cannot consent to give it my countenance. I am ready to admit, Sir, in the first place, that the Foreign Enlistment Bill was passed principally at the instigation of Spain, and that, that bill operated more in her favour than in that of any European Power. In the next place, I am ready to admit, that the whole conduct of Spain has been to do directly towards Portugal, those acts, which Spain earnestly implored Great Britain to take away from British subjects the power of doing towards her. If we do what is suggested there would be some ground for saying to this country, you recognized and acted upon a principle in 1819, when you had no private interests to promote; you last year, acting upon principle, refused to withdraw the protection afforded to Foreign Powers by that Bill, but you now withdraw it, and violate that principle where you have a private interests to promote. I admit, there would be strong ground for saying to Spain:—"Since the year 1819, we have given you the benefit of a particular efficient measure, and you have thought proper, since last year, to turn that very measure, conferred solely for your own protection, against the pacific interests of our Ally. Are we not fairly entitled then to place you where you would have been had that never passed?" This would undoubtedly, have justified the revocation of the bill from Spain: that I most clearly admit: but I do not equally well see how it would apply to the other great objects involved in such a question as this, and which I have rather adumbrated than ever stated in my opening speech. The great desire of this country ought undoubtedly to be to effect her purpose by the most lenient means. If circumstances should lead to hostilities, and that war must rage in Spain, the course now taken by Great Britain would rather take from war that most tremendous of all characters which could attach to such an event, were it once driven to assume the name of a war of opinion. [Hear, hear.]

If we aim to have war, let us—if we can take from it the character, which has been so aptly and so eloquently described by an Hon. and Learned Gentleman (Mr. Brougham;) that tremendous character, which must attach to war, when war is let loose, in the shape of war of opinion; (Cheers;) I, Sir, for one, should be extremly sorry to be driven, whatever acts Spain might be guilty of, to have recourse to that most lamentable and disastrous mode of warfare. Another point has been touched upon by an Hon. Member, who, in a speech with which, in no other respect, I find fait, has, in the most laudanme and able manner, stated his reasons for approving of the line of conduct adopted, in this instance, by His Majesty's Government. That Honorable Member has said, "I intend of repealing the Foreign Enlistment bill, call upon France to withdraw her Armies from Spain." There are Sir, so many considerations connected with that subject, that they would carry me beyond what it is necessary to state upon the present occasion. It is enough now to state, that I do not know how the French Army can be employed to promote the views of Spain. I believe the effect of the presence of the French Army in Spain, is the protection rather than otherwise of that very party, to put down which, the aid of that Army was called in; and that my firm belief is, that the first and immediate consequences of the withdrawal of that Army, at a moment of exitement, would be the letting loose of that party rage, of which the party, least in numbers would be the victim. But when it is stated, that the presence of the French army in Spain, has entirely altered the relative situations of France and Great Britain, and that France is thereby raised, and Great Britain, lowered, in the eyes of Europe, I must beg leave, most humbly, to give my dissent to that proposition. The House knows, the country knows; that when the French army was on the point of entering Spain, that I, in common with the other members of His Majesty's Government, did all in my power to prevent it; that we did resist, and that we were most anxious to resist it, by every means short of war. We did not think the entry of that army into Spain a sufficient ground for war on the part of this country; and that, Sir, for various reasons—and, among others, for this, that whatever effect a war, commenced upon the mere ground of the entry of a French army into Spain may have, the effect it would not have, would be this; to get that army out of Spain. I again repeat, that a war, entered into for the express purpose of getting the French army out of Spain, would defeat the object wished to be obtained.

Who ever heard, in the whole history of wars between European powers, or of a war between two great nations, having been ended by the obtaining of the exact, the identical, object for which the war was begun? I believe, that in the whole history of Europe, such an instance cannot be found. I also think, Sir, that the effects of the entry of the French army into Spain have been exaggerated, and think that those exaggerations are to be attributed to these circumstances, that the connexion between France and Spain is mixed up with recollections of the most brilliant, the most glorious—of English history.—Now, however, the withdrawal of that army might be in other respects, and at other times desirable, I cannot allow that it at all effects the present question. On the contrary, I most sincerely believe that the exertions of France are directed to the preservation of existing treaties; and it is my conviction that if the army was withdrawn the situation of affairs would not be remedied; while, in a moment of such excitement, party rage would re-assume its desperate violence, and that class, avowedly the least in numbers, would, beyond question, become its victims. (Hear, hear, hear.) The most exaggerated importance has always, in my opinion, been attached in this country to the connexion between France and Spain. I ask the House to look back to the state of Spain, when the question of the association of France and Spain was agitated. I ask the House to look back to the votes of Parliament when it had voted that no peace could be made between the two countries, whilst Spain remained in the power of France, or rather, whilst a Bourbon sat upon the throne. Look to the exaggerated apprehensions of those days, and see how they have been realized; look back to the state of Spain in those days—look at her when she was a most formidable power—when she was a power of such strength, as to threaten to blow up the whole world. Look at her in those days, and you will see that England was then fixed in a nook of that Spain—that our possession of the Rock of Gibraltar was contemporary with those exaggerated apprehensions.

I do not believe, Sir, that the danger which could accrue from the possession of Spain by France is to be so great as is represented. Spain now, is not what Spain was then. Where can we now find that Spain, in the map of the world, which was to have swallowed up the power of maritime England? Do we not still remain a nook that same Spain—Gibraltar; where we have settled at a period contemporaneous with those fears, holding a firm and tenacious occupation up to this hour? And where, now is that nation, which "was to have shaken us from our sphere?" That Spain of the days of yore was, be it remembered, the Spain, within the limits of whose empire the sun never set—it was Spain with the Indies—where will you find her now?—(Cheers.) When the French army entered Spain, we might, if we choose, have resisted that measure by a war; but, Sir, it we had resisted it by a war, that war would not be war entered into for the same object for which the wars of other days were undertaken; that war, would not have been a war for the preservation of the balance of power in other means should be resorted to for that purpose if necessary. The balance of power in Europe varied as civilization advanced, and new nations sprung up in Europe. One hundred years ago, France, Spain, the Netherlands, and perhaps Austria, constituted the balance of power. Within the next 30 years Russia started up. Within the following 50 years, Prussia became a power of importance, and thus the balance of power, and the means of preserving it, were enlarged. The means of preserving the balance were enlarged, I may say, in proportion to the number of states—in proportion to the number of weights which could be put into the one scale or the other. To take a leaf, Sir, from the book of the policy of Europe in the times of William and Anne, for the purpose of regulating the balance of power in Europe at the present day, is to be utterly regardless of the march of events, and to regulate our policy by a confusion of facts. I admit, Sir, that the entry of a French army into Spain was a disarrangement to Great Britain—was a blow to the feeling of this country. I do not stand up here to deny that fact. One of the modes of resress was, by a direct attack upon France; by a war upon the soil of Spain. The other was to make the possession of that country harmless in rival hands; to make it worse than harmless, to make it injurious to the possessor. The latter mode I have adopted. Do you think that, for the disarrangement to England, we had not been compensated? Do you think that, for the blockade of Cadiz, England has not been fully compensated? I looked, Sir, at Spain by another name than Spain. I looked upon the Power as Spain and the Indies. I looked at the Indies, and there I have called a new world into existence, and thus redressed the balance of power. (Loud and continued cheering.) I redeemed the movement of France, while I left her own act upon her, unmitigated and unredressed; so that I believe she would be thankful to have relief from the responsibility of her assumed undertaking, and to get rid of a burden which has become too bitter to be borne without complaint. Thus, Sir, I answer the question of the occupation of Spain by the army of France. That occupation is an unpaid, an unredeemed burthen in France. I say that France would be glad to get rid of the possession of Spain. I say, Sir, that France would be very glad if England were to assist her to get rid of that possession. I say, that the only way to set France to the possession of Spain is, to make that possession a point of honour. I believe, Sir, there is no other point upon which it is necessary to enable the House with any expectation. I believe no other point has been adverted to by any hon. Members who have so unequivocally and honourably supported this motion, and I should be ungrateful for their support if I were to detain the House with a single observation more than I absolutely necessary. (Hear, hear.) The object of this measure is not war. (Loud cheers.) I trust, Sir, that the object of this measure is not war. The object of this measure is to take the best course of peace. (Continued cheers.) If England honestly promptly go to the aid of Portugal, Portugal will be trampled upon, and England will be disgraced, and then war will come, and come, too, in the train of degradation. If we wait until Spain have courage to ripen her secret machinations into open hostility, we shall have war; we shall have the war of the pacificators, and who can meet say when that war will end.

This Right Hon. Gentleman then sat down amid the most enthusiastic applause, and the motion for the address was unanimously agreed to.

Monday Feb. 21.

THE NATURALIZATION BILL, with this day read a third time in the House of Assembly. The question being put "that the Bill do now pass," there were—Yeas 12—Nays 12.

The Speaker voted with the Ayes, and the Bill is again referred to a Committee of the whole House.

Upper Canada Gazette.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1827.

BY AUTHORITY.

£50 Reward.

HIS Excellency the Lieut. Governor having received a communication from His Excellency the Governor of the State of New York, by which it appears that William Morgan, who some years ago exercised the calling of a Brewer in this place, and who has subsequently resided at Canandaigua, in the State of New York, was some time in the last year conveyed by force from that place and is supposed to be forcibly detained under false pretences in some part of this Province, any person who may be able to afford information respecting the said William Morgan, shall, upon communicating the same to the Private Secretary of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, receive the reward above offered.

Government House,
31st January, 1827.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorised by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused those Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. No. 9 . 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21*st November*, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must, at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

PROSPECTUS

Of a New Religious and Literary Publication, to be conducted by the Clergy of the Established Church, under the Sanction of the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, to be Entitled.

THE CHRISTIAN SENTINEL,

AND

Anglo-Canadian Churchman's Magazine.

"Stand fast in the Faith, be strong, quit you like men, but let all things be done with Charity."

This work to be published every second month—the first number for January and February to be published on the first day of March, 1827, and so on for every succeeding period of two months;—to contain sixty octavo pages, with paper, types, and covers, equal to the late Canadian Magazine. Subscription, Ten shillings per annum, payable in advance; or, if purchased by single numbers, the price of each copy to be in proportion.

The design of this undertaking is, generality, to circulate throughout this extensive Diocese the genuine principles of the Catholic Church of Christ, by the publication of articles, some original and some selected, on topics both doctrinal and practical; —and especially to defend the Apostolic Constitution, Orthodox Doctrines, and Spiritual Ritual, of the National Church of England, by elucidation, by argument, and by appeal to the authorities of Sacred Scriptures, of the ancient Fathers, and of Ecclesiastical History.

In accomplishing this desirable end, all dereliction of Christian charity is strongly deprecated;—indeed, the earnest desire of the Editor is never to act on the offensive, but, like a good sentinel to defend one's own post, and to watch with vigilance the motions of an enemy from whatever quarter.

This work, therefore, in that portion which may be devoted to Polemics, will only defend the Doctrines, Discipline, and Rights of the Church, on points wherein that hollowed establishment may have been previously attacked.

Communications from all quarters will be thankfully received; but it is to be understood that they must be of a description tending more or less to effect the design above stated;—articles therefore, which are purely political, literary, or scientific, will not be admissible. Party politics will be altogether avoided, excepting so far as the indissoluble connexion between Church and State may sometimes render a slight allusion unavoidable. Two or three pages will be open to poetical productions.

The proceedings of religious societies in these Provinces, and in the Parent State, will be briefly recorded; more particularly those two pre-eminent institutions, to which under the Divine Blessing the Anglo-Canadian Church owes the deepest obligations viz. "the Society for the Propogation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," and "the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge." —The leading religious publications of the day will sometimes pass under review, and the Biography of eminent churchmen will it is hoped, occasionally afford pleasure and profit. Ecclesiastical promotions will be nouced, and in short, any proceedings or events likely to prove interesting to the Members of the Church in general, and to the Clergy in particular.

The first number will contain a short memoir of the life, and labors of the late Lord Bishop of Quebec, the venerable Father of the Anglo-Canadian Church.

All communications to be addressed (free of expense) to the Editor, the Rev. B. B Stevens Chaplain to the forces, Montreal.

VOL. I. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1827. NO. 36.

REPORT,

Of the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company, to the Stockholders.

Before, however, it could be known that the application for subscriptions in England was not likely to meet with immediate encouragement, it was thought unsafe to rest in entire dependence upon it. The delay in making it, for wh ch the reasons have been assigned, left it no longer prudent to await its result without attempting to provide other means for prosecuting the work with dispatch, according to the Contracts into which the Directors had entered; and under this impression, relief was sought by applying to the Legislature for an advance of £25,000, by way of Loan, in anticipation of the Company's Funds.

The ready acquiescence of the Legislature has been of infinite use—it has not only enabled the Directors to proceed through the Season in the manner thought most desirable, and to which indeed they were pledged; but it served at a critical moment to give a character to the undertaking and a confidence in its success, for which the Company is most grateful, and for which they trust the Province will at no distant day receive an ample recompence.

With the aid of this advance the Directors have had it in their power to make such arrangements for calling in the Stock as the Stockholders have been enabled to meet, although so great has been the pressure during the last few months upon persons engaged in Commerce, that if it could have been foreseen the Directors would probably have felt it incumbent upon them to have restricted their operations, in order to avoid those frequent calls for large instalments, which they are sensible have borne most heavily upon those Gentlemen at New-York who hold the greatest proportion of Stock, but whoh ave nevertheless answered those calls with a promptness and punctuality in the highes degree honorable.

In the midst of the operations of last Summer, which it required an average monthly expenditure of nearly £7000 to maintain, the Directors found a good deal of uneasiness was naturally excited by the long delay in filling up the Stock. The reference to England had been hitherto ineffectual, and it was strongly pressed by those Stockholders who were sustaining the great weight of expenditure, that a period should be put to this indefinite expectation, and measures speedily taken for completing the subscription in America. The Directors in deference to representations, certainly not unreasonable, determined, though reluctantly, to send instructions to England, that if, within fourteen days after the receipt of their letter, the required amount of Stock was not subscribed, the Books should be closed, and an immediate communication made to this Country, in order that instant measures might be taken for soliciting subscriptions here, and in the United States.

Although sufficient time has elapsed no answer has been returned, and a hope arises, which has been suggested by another circumstance, that the original expectations of the Directors may yet be fulfilled.

Not long after the Directors had written to England in the terms already mentioned, a letter was received from Mr. Galt, Secretary to the Canada Company, apprising them that the following very respectable Gentlemen, Directors of that Association, viz:—

CHARLES BOSANQUET,
JOHN HULLET,
JOHN EASTHOPE, M. P.
MARTIN TUCKER SMITH,
AND HART LOGAN,
} Esquires,

had consented to act as a Committee in behalf of the Welland Canal Company. Upon this intimation, so gratifying to the Directors, no time was lost in transmitting to Mr. Bosanquet, the Chairmain, the necessary powers and instructions to enable the Committee to act, and these documents were accompanied by an account of the present state of the Company's affairs, and of the nature and progress of the Canal. The Communication of the Directors was sent from New-York on the 24th September, and it is to be supposed that a long time will not elapse before some intelligence is received from the Committee in London

To enable the Stockholders in America to bear with the less inconvenience the additional delay of awaiting this intelligence, the Directors have authorized the Agent for the Stockholders in New-York, either to negotiate in the meantime for a Loan on the credit of the Company; or to procure subscriptions to the amount of £25,000, and they have appprised the Committee in London of this step, and of the necessity, in case the £100,000 should be subscribed there of its being accepted, subject to the contingency of a proportional abatement in the subscription of each Stockholder, in case the £25,000 should be subscribed in America.

To facilitate the negotiation for a Loan, if that were thought advisable, the Directors preferred an application to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council, praying that the Company might receive an immediate grant of the tract of Land in Wainfleet, comprising 13,000 Acres, of which, upon His Excellency's intercession, His Majesty's Government in England had authorized a grant to be made to the Company, but which, it had been understood,would not issue until there appeared a reasonable assurance that the objects of the Company would be fulfilled.

His Excellency has been pleased to consider the great exertions which have been made, and the actual state of the work, a sufficient assurance of its completion, and the Grant has accordingly been directed to be perfected, which additional mark of public countenance and support, the Directors cannot but regard as highly favorable to the Company.

Having thus explained the situation of the Company's affairs, and by what means they have been enabled to complete their engagements, the Directors proceed to give some account of the present state of the Canal, and the hopes which, so far as they can judge, may be reasonably indulged, in regard to its completion.

It was a recommendation strongly urged upon the Directors, by the principal Stockholders, that no necessary expense should be spared in procuring Engineers of competent ability and of known character; and accordingly, early in this season, Mr. Alfred Barrett, long employed on the Erie Canal, was engaged as the principal resident Engineer, under whose immediate and constant superintendance the whole of the work has proceeded.

Mr. David Thomas, the principal Engineer, whose reputation and experience were satisfactorily vouched for, has been also engaged at an annual salary, to visit the work at stated intervals, report its state and progress, and offer suggestions of any improvements on the original design which might appear desirable. The Directors have had no reason to regret their selection in either case.

Without descending to unnecessary details the Directors now Report to the Stockholders that up to the 10th November last there has been expended the sum of £69,404 : 1: 10, and that they have with that expenditure, fully complied with their engagements of every description.

The Report of Mr. Thomas states concisely what proportion of the work is done, and what remains to be executed, with the expense which will be necessary to complete it.

The plan which the Directors have appended to this Report exhibits the route and profile of the Canal, and it is thought it may not be uninteresting to inform the Stockholders also, of the names of the Contractors who have undertaken the several sections, 35 in number. This information is given in Appendix [No. 2.]

Of the first section, which commences at the River Welland, and is 66 chains in length, one half is completed, the Canal is filled and the towing path finished, so that it exhibits a fair specimen of this great navigable Channel as it will appear when perfected.

The 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th, Sections comprehend the Deep Cut, and on this part of the Canal the greatest portion of labor has been employed, and the most persevering exertions of the Contractors have been applied to it throughout the season, which has been very favorable to their operations.

The present appearance of the work sufficiently proves how great these exertions have been, at the same time that it affords the means of judging, with tolerable accurracy, of the labor necessary to complete this most arduous part of the undertaking.

It has been already stated in this Report that the extent of what has commonly been called the Deep Cut, is nearly 1 mile and 3-4—the greatest depth of excavation necessary is 56 feet, and the average depth about 44 feet.

In one part of it they have attained the bottom level—in every section great progress has been made, and taking the whole cut through, the average depth of excavation, completed on the 1st November last, is estimated at about 18 feet.

It must be expected, of course, that the labor of excavating and raising each cubic yard will be greater as they descend; but on the other hand it is to be considered that as the Canal contracts greatly towards the bottom, the completion of the first 18 feet has required the removal of a vast deal more of earth than will be necessary for descending an equal distance beyond the present excavation.

The Directors feelt it indispensable, in order to adapt the Canal to navigation by Schooners, to enlarge very materially the dimensions of this Deep Cut beyond the original design. They have been so extended as to afford 15 feet in depth at the bottom level, and the banks rise from thence to the towing path 12 feet, with a slope of nearly 2 feet to 1. The towingpath is to be 10 feet in width, and on the opposite side there will be a berm of 7 feet. From thence the Canal rises with an angle of 45° to the surface. These dimensions give a surface of 43 feet of water on this portion of the Canal, viz. for a mile and 3-4 which it is calculated will admit the passing of 10,000 cubic feet of water at the rate of 1-2 a mile per hour, and thus afford an abundant supply of water for all hydraulic purposes. In the judgement of the Engineer the slope at the bottom is ample, and as there appears to be no reason to apprehend the slipping of the banks, he is of opinion the steeper the cut can be made above the towing path the better, as the less will be the surface exposed to the action of rains and frost.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

Monday Jan. 1.

contrary to honor and probity, and none but those who were lost to every feeling of honor and probity could take such an oath—that it held out encouragement only to the bad to become citizens, while it excluded the good. And yet, by the terms of the Bill now before us, we are about to adopt the same principle, by requiring those persons, by implication, to abjure their allegiance to any other country, in fact, to exclude the good, and encourage the bad. For 35 years past, these persons had been suffered to enjoy all the rights of subjects without any unnecessary restrictions being imposed upon them—they had been trusted through a war, and had behaved honorably, and should they now, in a time of peace, have such barous impositions laid upon them? He should object to the Bill—first, because it was founded on instructions, contrary to facts, and dangerous to the liberties of the people; and secondly, because its provisions were odious, contained a political lie, and were utterly disgraceful to the people—it manufactured subjects—made and unmade them at pleasure, and offered violence to the feelings of the people. The character of the people had been scandalized by the wicked publications of a Cotharus, a people who had always maintained a loyal character—no change had taken place among them—they had enjoyed their rights for 35 years, and conscious that the King would protect them, they felt assured that they would continue to enjoy them for years to come—he would not consent to gain a good for them at the sacrifice of the rights of this Assembly—he would wait till honorable terms were granted—he would maintain the rights of the people and of this House, and trust to an overruling Providence to see us safely through the struggle—he would say, "fiat justitia, ruat cælum."

Mr. Hamilton, said that Lord Bathurst had certainly not given any good proof of his being at all acquainted with Law! last year he had sent a despatch saying that the House might pass an act to make certain persons subjects, when in fact, the House could not exercise such a power—the Parliament legislating at that time on the Subject, he could compare to nothing else than a Yankee Parliament making British Subjects. The late act of the imperial Parliament, had conferred the power upon the House, but the instructions of Lord Bathurst, placed them in a worse situation if possible than before—they were confined as it were in a straight Jacket, & called upon to submit to humiliation and degradation without being left to the exercise of their own opinions on so important a question. If these instructions were submitted to in this instance it might be expected that the compliance of the House on this occasion, would form a precedent hereafter. If instead of being signed by Lord Bathurst, they were signed by the King himself he for one would not consent, to degrade the House and the Country by complying with them. The question of alienage had not been stated when the services of these people were required in the defence of the Country—it had not been urged when the people who had made Upper Canada to bloom like a Rose, had first settled in it by invitation—but now if the instructions are to be obeyed, the House is called upon to declare them Aliens, and to cause them to register themselves as such—he would faithfully do his duty and refuse to do such a thing, having done so, he would willingly take the responsibility of any consequences that might ensue.

Mr. Beardsley felt himself called upon to state his reasons for the vote he intended to give. An amendment had been proposed to the preamble which he should support—he thought the allusions made in the one formerly proposed would tend to annoy the feelings of many persons—besides which he did not see how those who last year voted for a declaratory law, could consistently vote for this Bill—if they did, what would the country say of them and what opinion would be formed of them by His Majesty's Ministers. The instructions he thought should not influence the House in its opinions, they may possibly have never been submitted to his Majesty, and as the Act of the Imperial Parliament gave the power of Legislating without any restrictions he should take that for his guidance—the instructions were at variance with that act inasmuch as they imposed conditions on the House which the act never contemplated—he was satisfied that the Bill in its present shape would not give satisfaction to the Country, many persons would not comply with its provisions—feeling would be excited, and for the sake of peace he would prefer a Bill passed in such general terms as could not give any offence—he would prefer indeed that an address should be forwarded to his Majesty praying him to submit the question to the Imperial Parliament, and that they should legislate on the subject.

Capt. Matthews, said, he should oppose the preamble, vote for the amendment, and then vote against the Bill altogether.

Mr. Randall considered that the welfare of the colony hung on the decision of this important question—if the Bill now before the House should pass, he thought it would amount to a declaration that all those who had taken the Oath to vote at elections were perjured scoundrels—he would not consent to call them so—he had resided in the Province himself 28 years and always considered that he was a British Subject, and he would not consent to register himself now as an alien—he would not consent that his constituents should be compelled to do it.

Mr. Clark was of the same opinion as last year, and could not give his vote to call those persons aliens whom he had always considered to be Subjects.

The Attorney General, after expressing his disappointment that there had been a departure during the discussion from that tone which he hoped would have been preserved in the debate upon this subject, said, that in replying generally to the arguments which had been used, he should in the first instance advert to the course now recommended by one honorable gentleman to be pursued for the purpose of setting the question at rest. That hon. gentleman had proposed, that instead of exercising the power we now undoubtedly possessed of passing such an Act, as the Committee had reported, an address should be transmitted to His Majesty, praying him to submit the matter to the consideration of the Imperial Parliament. Referring to what had taken place, last year on the subject, he could not forbear to remind the House that he had unreservedly expressed his opinion, that this Legislature strictly speaking, had not then the power by any Act of theirs to secure all the benefits proposed to be conferred—he had then submitted a series of Resolutions to the House, and an address to His Majesty founded on those resolutions, precisely to the same effect as the course now proposed by the hon Gent.—he had done so in vain; they were negatived by a majority of the House, who concurred in a declaratory law, which being rejected by the other branch of the Legislature, Resolutions and an address of the same tenor were adopted and transmitted to His Majesty. The attention of the King's Government having been given to the subject, the act was passed which now gave us the power to Legislate under certain restrictions, and under the provisions of this act, the present Bill was introduced. Now then that the power is conferred upon us, what is now proposed to be done?—to retrace our steps; to do that which we refused to do last year, and to make the very sam application which was last year declined, when the necessity has no longer exists. Honorable Gent. had asked what the country and his Majesty's Government would think of the consistency of those, who last year voted for a declaratory law, if they should now vote for the Bill before the House; but he would rather ask, what could be thought of the consistency of this Assembly; if they this year pursued a course which last year they refused to adopt, and should ask the interference of the Imperial Parliament after the power was given which enabled them to Legislate on the subject themselves.

As to the Preamble of the Bill which was proposed to be adopted, its object and meaning had been strangely perverted—it simply states, that many persons have come into this Province from the United States of America who were formerly citizens of those States and who being Subjects of the same have not been naturalized as British Subjects, by any act of parliament—was not this strictly true? or could any act of parliament be produced under which they had been naturalized? assuredly none, and if any had been so naturalized, to them such a preamble could not apply.

The 13 Geo. 2. clearly did not apply to many persons coming from the United States, none who were born there before the year 1783 could come within its provision, and at all events none had observed them. The 30 Geo. 3. was not a naturalization act, it contained no provision to that effect, and all idea that it could be so regarded had been often disclaimed. What other law then could be pointed out, by which these persons had been naturalized; there was none, and the necessity of doing so now must be apparent. The proposed amendment to the Preamble, if adopted expressed as it was in general terms without reference to any particular description of persons, or rather studiously avoiding all reference to those who were most interested in the measure, would amount to an implied declaration after all the arguments that had been used, and industriously published, that as the persons whom the Bill contemplated principally to relieve, were not alluded to in its provisions, they did not require any legislative enactment to entitle them to the rights of Subjects. The responsibility of such a concealment, he would not assume, and whatever other Hon. Gent. might be inclined to do, it was his conviction that this class of persons required protection, and he should feel that the Legislature would not deal honestly with them if they did not plainly give them to understand that the act was designed for them as well as others, and that it behoved them to avail themselves of it. One honorable gentleman had said that he still retained his old opinions, and that he considered the judgment of the King's Bench in England incorrect—he had ventured to add that their opinions should not be attended to here because they were governed by motives of State policy. He was not very greatly surprised at the declaration of that honorable gentleman, as to his own opinion, because he had always hitherto set his own judgment on this question, above those legal authorities which bind us on all other occasions. He had throughout the discussion of this question evinced a decided opposition to a measure intended to afford relief to a considerable portion of the inhabitants of this Province—but he confessed he was surprised that any gentleman of the profession while enforcing his own opinions, to answer a particular purpose, could venture to call in question the purity of the motives which governed the Judges of a Court, the most venerable perhaps for its learning and integrity of any on the face of the earth, charging them, sworn as they were to administer the law truly and justly, with making their decisions bend to motives of State policy, contrary to the solemn obligation which the oath they had taken imposed upon them. It was surely said with but little shew of reason, that Judges so distinguished, as Chief Justice Abbot, Mr. Justice Bailey, and the others who decided the case alluded to, and whose opinions and decisions were looked up to with veneration, did on this particular occasion forget the sacred duties of their situation, and framed their decision for purposes of State policy, contrary to their consciences, and contrary to that obligation which their oath of office imposed. He could not but remark further that this observation had been most unhappily resorted to, to prejudice the authority of a decision made by four Judges of profound learning, not one of whom it happened had ever been connected with the government by any official situation—made too at a time of the most friendly relations between Great Britain and the United States—a decision that had never been appealed from, as it undoubtedly would have been, if it had been unsatisfactory, and which not only excited no surprise in the foreign country whose citizen it affected, but could be easily shewn to be perfectly consistent with judgments previously pronounced on the same question in the Courts of at least two States of the Union, Pennsylvania & Massachusetts.

With respect to the instructions he could not but regret, as a Member of the House, that one honorable gentleman in the course of his observations upon them, had allowed himself, for any purpose, to speak in terms of disrespect of Lord Bathurst, one of His Majesty's Secretaries of State, who at the command of his Sovereign, had communicated the views and intentions of His Majesty's Government on this question to the Lieutenant Governor, who had presided many years in the Colonial Department. The character of that noble Lord was such as, in England, (where his measures could be best appreciated) occasioned him always to be spoken of with respect, and it surely need not be said that in this Colony at least, he should never be mentioned but with gratitude. The charges so gravely made against him of a want of legal knowledge, he must say, came with but a bad grace from a gentleman who was himself no Lawyer, and who, he thought he might say, had neither lived so long in the world, nor had mingled quite so much in its affairs, although it was true he did not hesitate boldly to call in question the decision of the Judges of England. And while on subjects of this nature he would notice the unnecessary and improper personal allusions which another honorable gentleman who had spoken on the question, had so frequently indulged in, in bringing the name of the Hon. Dr. Strachan, a Member of the Legislative Council, into the discussion before the House. This course had too long and too often been indulged in, with respect to the other branch of the Legislature, collectively and individually, contrary as it was to parliamentary usage, and in terms sometimes most unwarrantable. He would now say once for all, that observations of this nature degraded the character of the Assembly—that they were discreditable, in his opinion, to the Hon. Member who used them, and that if respect for the gentleman of whom he spoke did not restrain him, he ought at least to have been restrained by respect for the House and for himself. As to the Hon. Gentleman to whom he had alluded (Dr. Strachan) he would seize this opportunity to say, what indeed he of all others could say sincerely and feelingly, that there were many single acts of his life, by which this Province had been, and would continue to be more benefited, than it could ever be by the best exertions of those who traduced him, even if those exertions were honestly applied.

Last year it was agreed by the majority of the House who voted for the Resolutions, one and all, that it was necessary to address the King, to declare all persons resident in the Province, Subjects, whose rights were questioned, and particularly to afford security to this class of people.—Then we assured His Majesty that we trusted implicitly to the anxious desire, which we felt assured he possessed to afford the relief we asked for on their behalf—and now, it was declared that the transmitting the instructions by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to the House for their information was a breach of privilege, though they merely informed us of His Majesty's sentiments upon the subject of our Resolutions. It was no breach of privilege; on the contrary, an act of naturalization being an act of grace, usually and according to the Constitution as we are told, commences with the King, and is sent down first signed by His Majesty, for the concurrence of the other branches of the Legislature. The reason for desiring to convey this information to us is given in the despatch itself, where it said, that His Majesty would feel a reluctance in refusing his assent to any act the Legislature might pass, and he therefore points out in the instructions how that refusal may be rendered unnecessary. Those terms are reasonable and such as he thought would meet the approbation of the people, if the same pains were taken, fairly and candidly to explain them, as was taken to prejudice their minds by creating alarms, and exciting unreasonable and unjustifiable suspicions against that Government, whose most anxious desire was to afford the relief which they so much required. Supposing on the other hand that these instructions had not been submitted to the House for its information, would it not then, and very properly, be called an ungracious concealment on the part of the Executive, and if, with such a document in its possession, it had allowed the Legislature to remain in ignorance of His Majesty's sentiments, and to pass in consequence a Bill which it was known to His Excellency would not be assented to; would not the complaint be long and loud against the Government. There had been no such concealment on the part of the Executive, and although it had been just stated that when on the very first day of the Session an honorable member, before any other business had been attended to, and before the Speech from the Throne had received any consideration, had given notice of a Bill on this subject, we knew nothing of any instructions, he contended the House did know something of them, for the Speeech just delivered to them, had told them that there were such instructions, and that they would be sent for their information. And when at last the Speech did come under consideration, delayed as it was until after that honorable gentlemans' Bill, upon a subject particularly mentioned in it, had been introduced and once read, an attempt was made to prevent the instructions being sent unless at the-risk of a breach of privilege—that attempt however fell failed, and the instructions were received, not as some Hon Gentlemen were pleased to term it for the guidance of the House, but for their information—they did not command, nor did they ask the House to pass any Bill, but they pointed out the terms on which His Majesty would assent to a Bill affording relief to the persons interested.—An address was concurred in, and presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, thanking him for the information he had afforded, and should it be said now, that his having sent that information, was a breach of privilege—now that the information has been afforded, the House is at perfect liberty to pursue its own opinion on the subject.

Some Hon. Gent. had said said that it appeared ridiculous, that members who were themselves Aliens, should be sitting here and passing laws to make themselves Subjects. In this there was really nothing like argument—how could it appear to the House that there were any such. Of members sitting there was nothing known, but that they had been returned by their constituents, and no objection to their eligibility could be presumed or heard of unless it was preferred by petition, and properly substantiated. It was true there might be Aliens in the House, or persons without qualification, or preachers, or minors, and as well might it be said that if a minor had been returned to this House, and retained his seat, not having been objected to, that all acts passed during the time he had held his seat in it, should be deemed void, although no objection to his qualification had ever been made. In the British Parliament this case had more than once occurred.

With respect to the Preamble of the Bill, he considered it necessary, in order to remove all doubt as to who were the persons intended to be relieved by the Bill, that they should be expressly referred to, and then they would not be left longer in uncertainty, as to the necessity of their compliance with its terms. A general provision such as that proposed might involve this doubt, and perhaps be the means of withholding from many, the rights which the Bill contemplated to show them—for that reason he would include all in distinct terms who could be affected by it.—One Hon. Gent. in a long speech had endeavoured to shew that this was unnecessary and had indulged in a strain of declamation, against the injustice, and degradation which he said this Bill would entail on the people, and to prove this imagined degradation unnecessary he had said a great deal not certainly in the tone of argument, to shew that all Legislation for their relief was uncalled for—he would put it to that Hon. Gentleman frankly to acknowldge, how much of that speech, in his own opinion, would pass current in a Court of Justice, if he was there called upon to vindicate the rights of one of the persons embraced in this Bill, in the event of those rights becoming questioned before such a tribunal. Surely that Hon. and learned Member must well know that it would be to little purpose there to talk of invitations or Proclamations, or to resort to any of those topics of hardship which he has now so largely dwelt upon. He knows that he could but be told, that who is a Subject and who is not, is a question of law, not of expediency—he would be told, if all you say is true, apply to your Government and to your Legislature for a remedy—here there is but one answer that can be given to you, and it could not be better given than in the very words with which the Hon. Gentleman chose to conclude his Speech "fiat justitia, ruat cælum."—Could that Hon. Gent. say in sincerity that such opinions as he had expressed ought to reverse the law of the land, or that however he might consider it a question of expediency here, he could have any desire that such considerations should be mixed up with the administration of the law—however such arguments might answer the purpose here, there they could not be listened to, or there would no longer be any security for life or fortune. The Judges of the land and the honest Juries of the Country, in passing judgment between their fellow subjects could not bend their decision to opinions of expediency—they could not act contrary to law, and to repeat the learned Gentlemans quotation the maxim with them must be "fiat justitia, ruat cælum."

Could it be considered desirable by an honest Legislature, professing an anxious desire to remove all doubts on so important a question, to leave the matter, subject to misconstruction and uncertainty; and was it not rather their duty to make the law clear and distinct, and comprehensive to all those whose rights were concerned? This was the object of the preamble, which, after mature reflection of the question in all its bearings, he had proposed. The amendment was designed to encourage in a fatal delusion persons who might be misled, to believe that the Act was not intended for their benefit, and it was advocated by those only who would not subscribe to the law of the land—in his opinion, it was decidedly, not such as ought to be adopted. He relied with confidence on the correct feeling of a great majority of those persons who were interested in this question, desirous as they were of being confirmed in their rights as British subjects; and if the preamble was not adopted, would meet with their approbation, and that they could not be persuaded that it was intended needlessly to offend their feelings, or even their prejudices; and he should oppose the amendment, which might defeat the passing of a Law which they anxiously desired, or render it less useful.

It had been said in the course of debate, that invitations had been held out to encourage emigration from the United States; that argument had been used on former occasions and fully examined, and admitting that it were even true, could it, in any manner, alter the legal character of those persons, or at all govern the decisions of our courts of law—he denied, however, that such invitations had been held out, and certainly not to thousands of persons who may have come from the United States. If the question was to be put to these persons severally, what inducement they had to emigrate to this country, we should find the answers very various—some to attempt to establish themselves as mechanics—some to push a particular speculation—and some perhaps would be found who, if they gave the correct reason, would admit that they came into the Province because they could no longer remain where they were. Supposing, under such circumstances, that these persons had resided twice 30 years in the Province, would such residence alone make them subjects; or if the hon. gentleman who had used such reasoning, instead of being in this Assembly, was in a court of Justice, with his gown on his back, would he venture gravely to adduce such arguments in proof of their civil rights. The 31st of the King declared who were the subjects intended by it, and in its provisions, there is nothing of subjects by invitation. Proclamations had often been referred to—he had never seen any of them, such as he had heard spoken of, but from public documents published at the first settlement of the colony, it would be seen, that precautions had been taken on this very subject, amounting to any thing but an invitation to all Americans indiscriminately to settle in it. But supposing even that such a Proclamation had been issued, and that every man had come in under it, and had signed his name to a roll appended to it, would any such formality make him a subject, contrary to the express principles of common law? Would hon. gentlemen, who now appeared to lay so much stress upon Proclamations, as to entitle them to superior power to the law itself, be content to admit the force of a Proclamation, if it were now issued, declaring, contrary to law, that the lands and rights of subjects should be taken away from them? If any invitation had been given, to whom did it apply? not surely to all the people of a country who had but lately been in arms against us. But there have been invitations to foreigners to settle in Upper Canada. At the time of the Revolution in France, England had generously extended her protection to many of the subjects of that country, and had afforded them an asylum in this Province, where tracts of land were expressly reserved for them—these had been more than invited to settle in the Provine—they had been assited to do so—they were even sent at the expense of the British Government —pecuniary assistance was rendered to them, and for a certain period they received rations—they had received grants of land from the Crown, and had faithfully performed all the duties which had been required from them. But had all this made them subjects? clearly it had not, and could not. The officers and soldiers of several foreign corps who, at this moment, were receiving half pay, and enjoying pensions from His Majesty, were similarly situated. They had most of them spent their lives in His Majesty's service—they were allued to in the preamble as requiring, on their own account, an Act of Naturalization, and no complaint was heard from them of degradation or hardship, on account of the provisions of the Bill, nor was any made on their behalf. They were doubtless satisfied, that as the law now stood, their rights and properties were insecure, and conscious that the Government, who had so long protected them, and whose bounty they were still enjoying, had no design of offering them either insult or injury, they felt none of that false delicacy which had been so feelingly urged in behalf of others—they expressed no repugnance to comply with conditions which would for ever remove all doubt with respect to their rights and properties, but were willing to avail themselves of the opportunity which presented itself of confirming them.

The address of the House of Assembly of 1817 and 1822, had first brought this question into discussion, and from the first moment that it had come under consideration of his Majesty's Government, they had evinced the most ardent desire of quieting the minds of the people. After all that had been done and said, would it now be proper to view the matter with indifference, and when legislating on the subject, and professing to legislate with effect, to pass such a Bill as might yet leave many persons in doubt whether they were really intended to be embraced in its provisions. Some hon. gentlemen had said that they would support the Bill, if they could do so consistently with the votes they had given last year; but he would ask those gentlemen if their errors were never to be corrected, and whether they would return to their constituents, and tell them, that having established the infallibability of a former Session of Parliament, they must now refuse to provide a remedy which was acknowledged to be necessary? With respect to the allegiance due to other countries, and which some hon. members thought it harsh to ask them to renounce; some of the persons alluded to, it had often been told us, had been magistrates and militia officers; and would they be ready to acknowledge that they cherished a double allegiance? No oath of abjuration is indeed required, but by requiring the oath of allegiance in the Bill, we are told that we shall bring down on our backs a host of patriots—he hoped, and believed, there were few such patriots in the country, who, if this construction of double allegiance were admitted, might, in time of peace, wear their red coats as militia officers, or even legislate for the country, and for the safety and property of its inhabitants; but who, in time of war, might find it convenient to choose a favorable moment for exemplifying the doctrine of double allegiance, and join our enemies. The people themselves, he was convinced, would disclaim such an idea as this. The remedy required should be freely and fully given, but not in such a way as to confer privileges (if they could be so called) which British born subjects did not possess—we wish to put them precisely on the same footing with ourselves—to extend the relief in its fullest sense—to give them all the rights of subjects, with all their obligations. This was the desire of his Majesty's government, and more than this ought not to be the desire of the House. What was the policy of the United States in this respect? If the hon. gentleman who had quoted from the report of the Legislative Council of last year, had gone a little further, he would have found that an oath of abjuration was required in that country, by which the person who took the oath, renounced all former allegiance, and particularly to the country of which he had last been a subject. The Government of the United States, with a professed liberality, opened their arms to the people of every country, and if they asked such a precaution, independent of other requisitions, before they admitted to the rights of citizenship, shall it be said that we offer injustice or degredation when, from the citizens of the same country, we require less?

It had been said, that by the provisions of this Bill, there would yet be many cases unprovided for, but although this had been advanced as an objection, none had yet been pointed out; not that he denied the Bill might be defective, and he would, in the progress of it, do all in his power to render it complete.

An allusion had been made to ancient history, and the Romans had been spoken of as admitting foreigners freely to the rights of citizenship; but who did not know, that no nation, ancient or modern, ever set a higher value upon the peculiar privilege of being born a Roman citizen. In the present case, all the rights and privileges of natural born British subjects were to be conferred; and yet, because certain conditions were prudently required for securing the proof of those rights to the persons interested, it was called degrading and unsatisfactory. We were asked what we should get, if we passed a law declaring them all aliens? He, in reply, would ask what would be gained, for that we wished to serve, if we declined passing the law in such a shape as would alone secure to them the rights of subjects?

With respect to the petitions before the House against the passing of the Bill, he would remark, that although they were certainly entitled, as all others were, to consideration, yet it would be found, on examination, that the persons who signed them, could not, many of them, be affected by the measure. He had an opportunity of knowing this, from his personal knowledge of many of the parties. That from York was signed by several persons, who had emigrated from Great Britain; and could it be supposed that they have examined the measure so attentively, or can be so anxious for its being properly disposed of, as the many persons whose properties and rights are at stake, and who have petitioned for the Bill. There was another petition from Whitby, signed by many persons born in the Province, or who came from Europe—and what did these petitions (printed too) ask for? Why that all persons should be considered as having complied with the provisions of 13 Geo. 2, and be confirmed as British subjects. Now, were these petitioners aware of the provisions of that Statute, or is it likely that they ever knew of the existeace of such a Statute, before the printed petitions were put into their hands? Certainly many of us did not, till we had been drawn into discussions here, which had enabled us to judge more satisfactorily of these questions. On the other hand, the petitions in favor of the Bill were signed by hundreds of persons who were interested in the issue of this question. The views and intentions of his Majesty's Government were fully known to them, as communicated in the despatch of Lord Bathurst, which had been printed; and which of the two, he would ask, ought in reason and justice to have the most influence on the decision of the House? Should the benefit be withheld from those who needed, and asked for it, at the instance of those who had no reason to feel much interest in the matter? If the House, giving credit to the Government for the desire it had expressed of removing all doubt on the subject, were at pains to satisfy the people of their kind intensions towards them, and embrace, for their sakes, the opportunity of setting at rest this discussion, which had already occupied so much time, we should hear no more of public excitement, and the people would be secured. If, however, by misstatements, a contrary effect should be produced, and the gracious intentions of Government fail of being carried into execution, he at least could retire from the discussion, with a consciousness of having used his utmost endeavours in behalf of those whom the Bill was intended to relieve, and of having merited most the thanks of those who had the deepest interest in the measure.

One hon. gentleman had remarked that the people, by the instructions, are placed in a straight jacket—but he thought rather that some hon. members of the House were in the straight jacket; they had placed themselves in it by their unreasonable opposition to this measure, and they seemed not to find it very easy to escape.

Captain Matthews believed that the Attorney General had said, that the Government was desirous of affording relief to these people, but he believed at the same time, that the Government were laboring under fatal delusions as to the proper course to be pursued, in consequence of misrepresentations made to them on the subject—he would include both objects in one Bill; otherwise, separated as they now were, one of the Bills might be assented to, securing civil rights, and the other rejected, which would leave the properties of these persons in an insecure state.

Downing Street,
23 May, 1826.

At a Meeting held this day at the Colonial Office, at which Lord Bathurst, & Messrs. Downie, Hullett, Fullerton, McGillavray, Logan and Gale, were present, the following arrangement was made and concluded between Lord Bathurst on behalf of His Majesty's Government and the said Messrs. Downie, Hullett, Fullerton, McGillavray, Logan and Gale, on behalf of the Canada Company.

1st. It appearing from the award of the Commissioners that the Clergy Reserves valued by them comprised 829,430 Acres, valued at 3s 6d Cy. per Acre, the Company would have had to pay on His Majesty's Government the sum of £145,150 5 0 Current money of U. C. if those Clergy Reserves had been conveyed to them. In lieu of the before mentioned 829,430 Acres, His Majesty's Government will grant and convey to the Canada Company for the same price of £145,150 5 0 Cy. a Block of land containing One Million of Acres in the territory lately purchased from the Indians in the London and Western Districts.

2d. One third part of the beforementioned Sum of £145,150 5 0 Cy. shall be expended by the Canada Company in Public works and improvements within the said Block of Land, and the remaining two thirds parts only of the said sum of £145,150 5 0 shall be actually paid to His Majesty's Government.

3d. By the terms "Public works and improvements," will be understood, Canals, Bridges, High Roads, Churches, Wharves, Schoolhouses, and other works undertaken and calculated for the common use and benefit of His Majesty's subjects resident within that part of the Province of Upper Canada, in contradistinction to works intended for the use and accommodation of private individuals.

4th. The plan and Estimate of every, such undertaking will originate with the Company, and must be invariably submitted by them, to the Governor in Council prior to his consent being given, that the expense of such undertaking shall be received in part payment, and in the event of difference of opinion, arising between the Company and the local Government respecting the advantage or expense of any such proposed undertaking, or respecting the time or mode in which the same may most conveniently be carried into execution, the question is to be referred to the Secretary of State whose decision shall be final.

5th. Upon the completion of such undertaking, the Company should lay before the Governor in Council a Statement of the cost incurred by them in effecting the same, and if the Governor and Council shall deem such work to have been duly executed according to the plan upon which the Estimate was founded, and in such a manner as was intended at the time that the Estimate was formed, the Company shall be allowed credit in account, for the amount actually expended, provided it has not exceeded the Estimate. If however the expense should in any instance exceed such Estimate and the Governor in Council shall deem such excess to have been insulted by special circumstances, the Company shall in that case also be allowed credit in account for the amount actually expended provided such sums do not exceed in the whole one third of the said purchase money of the said Million Acres.

6th. The Block of 1,000,000 Acres of land to be allotted to the Company shall be selected by them from such part of the lands lately purchased from the Indians, as are situated in the London and Western Districts. The Block shall be marked out by the Surveyor General or his Deputies, and shall approximate to the form of some regular mathematical figure, as nearly as may be consistently with preserving any well defined natural land marks or boundaries.

7th. The provisions contained in the original Contract of 26th Nov. 1824, respecting the resumption of Lands by His Majesty for public services, and generally all the provisions contained in those arrangements for the security and benefit of the Public shall be applied, and affect the Lands to be substituted for the Clergy Reserves.

8th. The Block of One Million Acres of Land will be surveyed and a Road will be made through the Blocks of Clergy Reserves, in the District of Gore, such survey and Road will be made at the expense of His Majesty's Government. The Company shall be allowed Sixteen Years to commence from the 1st July 1826, for the fulfillment of their Contract with His Majesty's Government.

9th. In substitution for the provisions contained in the minutes of the agreement respecting the mode of paying the purchase money to His Majesty's Government, it is agreed that the Company shall pay in the Year commencing the first of July 1827. . .	£20,000	0	0

In the year ending the 1st July, 1828. . .	15,000	0	0
In the year ending the 1st July 1829. . .	15,000	0	0
In the year ending the 1st July, 1830. . .	15,000	0	0
In the year ending the 1st July, 1831. . .	16,000	0	0
In the year ending the 1st July, 1832. . .	17,000	0	0
In the year ending the 1st July, 1833. . .	18,000	0	0
In the year ending the 1st July, 1834. . .	19,000	0	0
In the year ending the 1st July, 1835. . .	20,000	0	0

And in each of the seven succeeding years the sum of £20,000.

The sums above mentioned are the amount which the Canada Company is actually to pay to His Majesty's Government and do not include the sums which they are to invest in public works and improvements in the Block of Land in the London and Western Districts.

The preceding sums are the greatest amount which in each of the years above mentioned, the Canada Company shall be obliged to pay to His Majesty's Government, but this arrangement is not to prejudice the right of the Company to lay out any greater sums of money in any of those years according to the terms of the original contract.

11th. In the year ending the 1st July, 1843, the company shall either take up on the terms already stated all the lands then remaining to be taken up, or shall terminate the contract or abandon all claim to such lands as have not at that time been taken up by them.

12th. If any of the lands to be sold to the Company shall be alledged by them to be altogether unfit for cultivation either in arable or in pasturage, arbitrators shall be appointed in the manner prescribed in the 31st article of the contract; and such arbitrators shall decide both whether such lands or any of them are totally unfit for cultivation and what is the amount of the compensation or equivalent to be allowed to the Company in respect of any such lands, and the lands which shall have been thus decided to be totally unfit for cultivation shall be thenceforth considered as having lapsed to the crown and belonging exclusively to the crown.

13th. Lord Bathurst will immediately take the necessary measures for completing the Charter of the Company with all practicable despatch.

Lord Bathurst does not consider that the formation of high roads would be a legitimate application of money within the meaning of clause No. 3 except in those peculiar and special cases in which the formation of the road may be directly conducive to the public interest of the Province, and his Lordship will instruct the Lieutenant Governor, that he is to approve of expenditure on high roads under this clause, only in those cases where such general interests may be promoted by the undertaking,

SUMMARY.

LONDON, Dec. 14th. 2 o'clock,

A petition had been presented to Parliament from a number of persons in Glasgow and neighbourhood praying aid from Government to transport themselves and families to His Majesty's possessions in North America. The petition was received, but not acted upon.

The ships of war equipping in the port of Brest, are estimated at 27 of all sizes. They continue to excite some speculation.

The English papers state that the traitors in Portugal have displayed the most inveterate hostility to the English residents who were singled out by them, and their families most shamefully treated. One of them, a woolen house, had lost 25,000 pounds, and the families insulted.

The Bank of England has declaerd a half yearly dividend of 4 per cent.

On the 12th the King's assent was given to the Exchequer bill, and to the oats and importation bill.

Cobbett has relinquished the project of contesting the Preston election.

GREECE.—If the news from this country may be depended upon, the affairs of Greece are opening a more favourable aspect On the 16th of October Ibrahim Pasha was near Argos, on the Corinthian road—his soldiers without pay, and himself without money. He was not to return to Modon until the arrival of money from Egypt.

The weather in Scotland at the close of November, was very severe. On the 24th and 25th particularly. The accounts from Aberdeen state, that at least twenty human beings are known to have perished in the snow, and from the effects of the tempest.

The Royal George, of 100 guns building at Cathams, is ordered to be finished with all possible speed.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY, December 8.

EMIGRATION.

The Marquis of LANSDOWN said, he held two petitions which prayed that pecuniary assistance might be afforded in order to enable the petitioners to transport themselves and their families to His Majesty's Colonies in North America, or to some other part of the world, instead of that which they now found incapable of affording them the means of subsistence. They were persons who had not incapacitated themselves by a departure from the ordinary mode of obtaining their living. They had not manifested any discontent with respect to the habits and institutions of the country in which they lived; but it was owing to the unhappy circumstances in which many of the manufacturers of this country had been lately placed, that they had no other remedy than to seek in other climes, under the protection of the parent government, the means of support for themselves and families.

Earl BATHURST, said the consent of His Majesty's Government to any reasonable plan for the improvement of the condition of the petitioners would not be refused. The subject had occupied the attention of a Committee elsewhere. His object was to move, that consent be given to a message for the purpose of having the report of that Committee laid on their Lordships' table. It was impossible to hear of the distress which the petitioners experienced, without sympathizing in their misfortunes, and he could wish to have the consolation in saying, that these distresses were confined to the districts from whence the petitions came. He believed there hardly ever was a time when there was such general distress throughout the manufacturing districts of this country, and when that distress was borne with so much forbearance.—(Hear, hear.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, December 8.

EMIGRATION.

Mr. W. HORTON was anxious to correct an erroneous idea that has gone abroad on the subject of a supposed encouragement which had been held out to emigration by His Majesty's Government. He denied that the statement of his Rt. Hon. friend yesterday evening was different in spirit from the answer which Lord Bathurst had returned to the applications which had been made to him on the subject.

Sir J Graham allowed the Rt. Hon. Gentleman was very much guarded in his expressions last night. Somehow or other, however, hopes were held out on the subject, and it was supposed that those hopes proceeded from influential members of the cabinet. He regretted that any misunderstanding had arisen on the question. The matter was of so urgent a nature, that the delay of a few months might be most extremely injurious.

COLONIAL EXPENDITURE.

Mr. Hume wished to ask the Hon. Secretary opposite if he was prepared, as he promised two years ago, to lay before the House a detailed account of the income and expenditure of the various colonies?

Mr. W. Horton replied, that he had applied himself to the subject, but that at present he was not prepared to make the statement required by the Hon. Gentleman.

ROYAL SESSION.

Paris, Dec. 12.—This day, the 12th of Dec. the King opened the Session of Chambers, at Louvre. The King pronounced the following

SPEECH.

"Gentlemen,

"Important labours have been prepared for this Session. Being well assured of your zeal, I have not hesitated to assemble you earlier than usual.

"Two Codes will be submitted to your examination. They are intended to improve the laws respecting Forests, and to settle the regulations of military jurisdiction. I have admitted little innovation into these works. The bases have been taken from the actual regulations of the army, and from the Ordonnance of my august predecessor respecting Forests.

"I wish that it had been possible to avoid all interference with the Press; but in proportion as the power of publishing writings have been developed, it produced fresh instances of abuse, which require to be restrained by more extensive and efficient measures. It was time to put a stop to these afflicting scandals, and to preserve the Liberty of the Press from the danger with which it is threatened by its own excesses.

"A project of law will be submitted to you for the attainment of this end.

"Certain inperfections had been discovered in the organization of Juries. I shall order a project of law to be proposed to you for their improvement and for regulating the same conformably to the letter of this institution.

"The penalties enacted against the Slave Trade proved deficient in efficacy; and their infliction was liable to be eluded. A more complete legislation became requisite. I have ordered a project, Gentlemen, to be proposed to you on this subject.

"I continue to receive from all foreign Governments the assurance of their most friendly dispositions, which are in perfect concordance with my own wish for the maintenance of peace.

"Disturbances have lately broken out in some parts of the Peninsula—I shall unite my efforts to those of my allies, to put an end to the same, and to obviate their consequences.

"The progressive increase of the produce of indirect taxation will permit me to augment this year the funds available for the publick service, by a sum equal to that of which the contributors have been exempted by the last financial enactments.

"This increase will prove a real releif to my people. It will free the communes from the supplementary sums which they pay; and the indigent classes will find abundant resources in the fresh activity and impetus given in the construction of our highways, fortresses, and naval arsenals.

"I have reason to hope, that the allotments which are to be made for the public service, will, for several years, suffice for all their wants, and that I may in future apply the surplus of produce to the reduction of the most burthensome taxes.

"Let us return thanks to Divine Providence Gentlemen, for having placed us in circumstances so highly favourable, and let us join our efforts to augment and corroborate the same, that my people may, for a long time reap the fruits thereof, France will acquire a new species of greatness, by industry and tranquility, and her success in peace will prove as productive of glory, as her warlike and military virtues, should honour oblige her to display them."

The King's speech being concluded, and the newly elected Deputies having taken their oaths, the Chancellor declared by the King's command, that the Session of the Chamber of Peers, and of the Chambers of Deputies for the year 1827, was opened, and that each of them was requested to meet to-morrow, at noon, in the usual place of the Sessions, to commence the course of their labours.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, February 3, 1827.

We have selected such items of news from the latest English dates, as appear interesting. Our Quebec papers did not reach us by the last mail, and we are therefore disappointed in not being able to give the Speech of the Governor General, at the opening of the Session in Lower Canada. We hope to be able to give it next week,

The Welland Canal.—A Bill authorising the Government to take stock in this Canal to the amount of £50, 000, on account of the Province, has passed through its several stages, and is ordered for a third reading on Monday next.

The objections to this measure, as we understand them, are, that the undertaking having originally commenced with a private company, the public should not become stockholders, and that it is doubtful if they should, whether the Stock would become profitable.

There can be no doubt, that the Canal when completed, no matter by whom it is cut, will be a general benefit to the whole Province, and if the means of a private company in accomplishing such an object, on the extensive scale proposed, should not be adequate to the undertaking, we can see no reason why the public who are to be materially benefitted by it, should not become partners in the work.

The profitableness or unprofitableness of that Stock should not we conceive, form any consideration, because in any work of general utility, this certainly should not be considered as the principal object in view. The opening of this Canal by uniting the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario for a Schooner navigation, would open a way to market for a portion of country containing at the present day upwards of 50,000 inhabitants, whose enterprise has hitherto in a great measure been checked from the want of such a conveyance for the fruits of their industry. The soil and climate of that part of the country is superior, and the increase that would take place in its population, if the inducement for settling in it was enhanced, by the certainty of having a communication to Market, would be very great.

These considerations would of themselves be sufficient to justify the policy of taking Stock in the Canal on public account, because if no immediate return was realised from it in the way of Revenue for tolls, yet indirectly the general prosperity of the country, and consequently its wealth, and with it its general revenue would be materially increased.

We shall not here enter into any calculation of the profit that may be derived from the Canal, as the argument we have adopted does not require it. It might however be done from a comparison with other countries, possessing the same amount of population, and with perhaps fewer natural advantages, in such a manner as would be sufficient to satisfy the mind of any reasonable man. that such a profit was more than probable. If however it were demonstrated to a certainty that no profit whatever would ensue by taking Stock, yet if the public utility of the work is generally admitted, the argument gains additional strength from such a demonstration, and is of itself the best reason that could be given, why the public should embark in an undertaking, by which the Province alone could be materially benefitted. To acquire works of public utility at private expense, cannot be considered as creditable to any country.

The Bill for the improvement of the navigation of the River St. Lawrence, has been read a first time. It authorizes the cutting Canals at such places as may be required, from Prescott to the Province line, of sufficient dimensions for Steam Boats and Schooners. It is intended that part of the work shall be completed during the ensuing season.

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of the Ship Owners and Masters on Lake Ontario, have recommended the immediate erection of a Light House on one of the Duck Islands, and that £1000 be appropriated for that purpose, to be repaid by a Light duty on vessels navigating the Lake. The report is referred to the Commitie of Supply.

We refer our readers to an interesting document on the subject of the agreement concluded between His Majesty's Government, and the Canada Company for a Block of 2 millions of Acres in the London and Western Districts. It will no doubt be read with interest, particularly by the inhabitants of the Western part of the Province.

Cataraqui Bridge Bill.—We are happy to inform our friend the Editor of the Kingston Chronicle, that his predictions, are not verified, and that the Bill is not, as he supposed, consigned to "the tomb of all the Capulets." Mr. Bidwell's motion for restoring it to the order of the day, after it had to all appearance met with its fate, has saved it; and we hope we may now congratulate the inhabitants of Kingston, on the prospect of soon enjoying the advantages of this great public accommodation. Yesterday, on motion of Mr. Atkinson, seconded by Mr. Bidwell, the Bill passed the House of Assembly, and is sent to the Legislative Council for their concurrence.

The Naturalization Bill is ordered for a third reading on Monday next. After having been recommitted, it is again reported without amendments.

We could scarcely have supposed, that the remarks which we made last week, on the discussion which took place between the Attorney General and Mr. George Hamilton, on the Naturalization Bill, would have given any thing like offence, to the Honorable Member from Wentworth. Those who have read the remarks must be satisfied, that any one who could imagine they contained any thing libelous, must indeed be extremely ignorant of what constitutes a libel. We repeated the expressions of Mr. Hamilton in a public debate in the House of Assembly, and if to do so can be termed libelous, then we must plead guilty to the charge.

If the annoyance, for so it rather seems to be, arises from a supposition, that we may have induced any persons to think, that Mr. H. at all coincided in the Bill then under discussion, or agreed in opinion with the Attorney General, as to any part of it, we can easily remove that annoyance, by the assurance that such was not the case.

All we meant to say, was, and we now repeat it, that Mr. Hamilton, although strenuously opposed to the Bill, and evincing, as he does by his general conduct, that he is one of the Attorney General's most determined political opponents, was nevertheless constrained to admit, after having himself elicited an explanation of some part of that Gentleman's official conduct, on occasions which deeply involved the interests of some of the persons interested in the fate of the Bill, that the course he had pursued on those occasions, did honor to his head and to his heart. This is the truth. Mr. Hamilton calls it a libel—let the public judge between us.

In our last number we adverted to certain remarks which fell from Captain Matthews in the House of Assembly, on the subject of the Address presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant, Governor by the Irish Settlers at Peterborough. We are accused of having slandered Captain Matthews—Now we have no hesitation in repeating that the Slander was directed against the Irish Settlers, aye, and against the Government too. Was it not said by Capt. M. that the object in sending these Settlers out to this Province; was to divide and govern, and that too at an expense of £22 a head? And was it not said that the Irish Settlers had intimated their knowledge of such an object, by stating in their address, that they were ready to make use of their Shillilahs for that purpose? If this was not the purport of the remarks used by Captain Matthews, we must confess that we are completely at a loss to know what he did mean. The fact is, his words will not admit of any other interpretation.

When such an unjustifiable attack on a body of peaceable and well disposed Settlers, is made and repelled—when such an unworthy motive is attributed to the Government, and exposed, the cry of Slander is attempted to be raised against the person who unmasks them. But we shall follow the remark a little further. The Captain said that the object of the Government ought, on the contrary, to be, to unite and defend. A reference to the Address of the Irish Settlers, and the answer to that Address, will shew, that such in truth has been the object of the Government, notwithstanding the unfounded assertions to the contrary. What says the Address?—

"Please your Excellency, we agree very well, and are pleased with the proceedings of the old Settlers amongst us, as it is the interest of us all to do the same. And should an enemy have the presumption ever to invade this portion of His Majesty's dominions, your Excellency shall find, that we, when called upon to face and expel the common foe, will, to a man, follow our brave Commanders. Not as Irishmen shall stay behind, and if we have no better weapons in our hands, mow them down with our Irish Shillilahs."

To which His Excellency is pleased to reply as follows:—

"With the good disposition you have evinced, I have no doubt your friendly intercourse with your neighbours will continue uninterrupted, and as the best means of causing this, I trust both the earlier Settlers and yourselves, will feel the propriety of dropping, in this Country, all associations which have their rise in a difference of Religion, or in differences of any kind, and that you will hereafter consider yourselves as one people"

After this brief explanation, we leave it to the common sense of any man to determine to whom the charge of Slander more properly attaches itself.

We shall conclude these remarks by giving, as we promised to do, the extract from Dr. Johnson, which the Attorney General, in his reply, addressed to Captain Matthews for his information.

"A Patriot is he whose public conduct is regulated by one single motive, the love of his Country; who, as an agent in Parliament, has for himself neither hope nor fear, neither kindness nor resentment, but refers every thing to the common interest.

That of five hundred men, such as this degenerate age affords, a majority can be found thus virtuously abstracted, who will affirm? Yet there is no good in despondence; patience and activity often effect more than was expected. Let us take a Patriot where we can meet him; and that we may not flatter ourselves by false appearances, distinguish those marks which are certain from those which may deceive: for a man may have the external appearances of a Patriot without the constituent qualities; as false coins have often lustre, though they want weight.

Some claim a place in the list of Patriots by an acrimonious and unremitting opposition to the Court. This mark is by no means infallible.—Patriotism is not necessarily included in Rebellion. A man may hate his King, yet not love his Country.

He that has been refused a reasonable or unreasonable request, who thinks his merit underrated, and sees his influence declining, begins soon to talk of natural equality, the absurdity of many made for one, the original compact, the foundation of authority, and the majesty of the people. As his political melancholy increases, he tells, and perhaps dreams, of the advances of the prerogative, and the dangers of arbitrary power; yet he sleeps, in all his declamation, is not to benefit his Country, but to gratify his malice.

These, however, are the most honest of the opponents of Government; their patriotism is a species of disease; and they feel some part of what they express.

But the greater, far the greater number of those who rave and rail, and inquire and accuse, neither sus-pect, nor fear, nor care, for the Public; but hope to force their way to riches by virulence and invective, and are vehement and clamorous, only that they may be sooner hired to be silent.

A man sometimes starts up a Patriot, only by disseminating discontent, and propagating reports of secret influence, of dangerous counsels, of violated rights, and encroaching usurpation.

This practice is no certain note of Patriotism. To investigate with vengeance with rage beyond the provocation, is to suspend public happiness, if not to destroy it. He is no lover of his Country, that unnecessarily disturbs its peace."

To this we will add the following from the same author:—

"To fill the newspapers with sly hints of corruption and intrigue, to circulate the Middlesex Journal and London Packet, may indeed be zeal, but it may likewise be interest and malice. To offer a Petition, not expected to be granted; to insult a King with a rude remonstrance, only because there is no punishment for legal insolence, is not courage, for there is no danger; nor Patriotism, for it tends to the subversion of order, and lets pick-pockets loose upon the land, by destroying the reverence due to Sovereign authority."

VOL. I. NO. 87.

Upper Canada Gazette.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1827.

BY AUTHORITY.

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

We the undersigned, inhabitants of Whitchurch and East Guillimsbury, are happy in the opportunity your Excellency has afforded us of assuring you, personally, of the high regard we entertain for your Excellency, and of our perfect confidence in your Excellency's disposition to promote the welfare and happiness of all classes of people under your Government.

We rejoice to hear that His Majesty's Government has decided upon opening a Canal from Kingston to the Ottawa which, when completed, will give us great facility in the transport of our produce to market; and we indulge the hope that means may be found to improve the Highways leading through the country in a manner, that may enable us to participate with the inhabitants of the other parts of this Province, in the benefits that must necessarily result from so great a work.

Notwithstanding the present depression of the times, so generally felt, it must be gratifying to your Excellency to observe the many improvements that have been made since your last visit, and the increased comfort of the inhabitant of these Townships.

That your Excellency may long enjoy the distinguished situation you hold, and be blessed with health and happiness, is what we most sincerely wish.

Newmarket, 12, Jan. 1827.

To which His Excellency was pleased to make the following reply:—

Gentlemen,

I thank you for your very dutiful and loyal address.

You do me justice in believing that I have experienced great satisfaction in witnessing the many improvements which have been made in these beautiful and valuable settlements, and I trust the improvement of our Highways will keep pace with the progress of the great work to which you have alluded, and that you will be enabled to derive all the important advantages which it is calculated to offer when completed.

My cordial acknowledgments are due to you for your good wishes towards myself, and I must beg you to be assured that it always will gratify me to promote, as far as in me lies, any measure which may tend to the advancement of this interesting portion of the Province.

To His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

We His Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the inhabitants of West Guillimsbury, Tecumseth, and Adjudo, humbly beg leave to express to your Excellency the great pleasure we feel in seeing you come amongst us, and we gladly embrace this opportunity of assuring your Excellency, of our gratitude for the warm interest you have always shewn, in promoting the prosperity of the New Settlements of the Province.

It cannot but be a matter of exultation to your Excellency to see this portion of the country, which but a few years ago was in the undisturbed possession of the Indians, now peopled by an industrious, and we trust, loyal and grateful population.

Your Excellency's intimate knowledge of the country, will enable you to judge how far we have improved the advantages bestowed on us, and we hope that the progress we have made in clearing our lands and opening the roads, will warrant your Excellency in representing us to the Government of our Mother Country, as not unworthy of its continued fostering care and protection.

We heartily thank your Excellency for this gracious visit, and beg that you will accept the assurance of our warm attachment to your person and Government and we sincerely hope that you may always enjoy the confidence you so justly merit of our most gracious King.

January 11, 1827.

To which His Excellency was pleased to make the following reply:—

Gentlemen,

I thank you for your dutiful and loyal address.

The kind welcome you have given me has added to the pleasure which I have received on witnessing the improvements you have made, in this tract of country, singularly favored in the excellence of its soil, but separated from the older settlements by great natural obstacles. The proof which you have given of your resolution and perseverance in overcoming those obstacles, by forming the convenient road by which I arrived in your settlement, is highly honorable to yourselves. And I shall be happy in mentioning this part of the country to His Majesty's Government, to have the conduct of its loyal and industrious inhabitants in the light which it deserves,

I beg you to accept my cordial acknowledgements for the kind expressions you have used in respect to myself—and you may be assured it will always be matter of sincere pleasure to me, to concur in promoting any measure calculated to assist the advancement of this valuable portion of the Province.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith;

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for ——term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B, Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

£50 Reward.

HIS Excellency the Lieut. Governor having received a communication from His Excellency the Governor of the State of New York, by which it appears that William Morgan, who some years ago exercised the calling of a Brewer in this place, and who has subsequently resided at Canandaigua, in the State of New York, was some time in the last year conveyed by force from that place and is supposed to be forcibly detained under false petences in some part of this Province, any person who may be able to afford information respecting the said William Morgan, shall, upon communicating the same to the Private Secretary of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, receive the reward above offered.

UPPER CANADA.

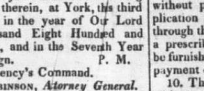
P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.



Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign.

A PROCLAMATION.

By HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND K. C. B. LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. JOHN LARGE, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said JOHN LARGE for the discovery of the offender—Now Know Ye That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime. Given under my hand &c.

In Council 21st November, 1823.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form. Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant.

It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

POETRY.

[From the Edinburgh Magazine].

"I came to the place of my birth, and said "the friends of my youth, where are they ?" and echo answered,

"WHERE ARE THEY."

Long years had elapsed since I gazed on the scene,
Which my fancy had robed in its freshness of green,
The spot where a school-boy all thoughtless I strayed,
By the bank of the stream in the gloom of the shade.

I tho't of the friends who had roamed with me there,
When the sky was so blue, and the flowers so fair;
All scattered, all sundered, by mountain and wave,
And some in the cold, silent womb of the grave.

I thought of the green banks that circled around,
With wild flowers, sweet briar, and eglantine crowned,
I thought of the river, all stirless and bright,
As the face of the sky on a mild summer's night.

And I tho't of the trees under which we had strayed,
Of the broad leafy boughs, with their coolness of shade;
And I hoped, tho' disfigured, some token to find,
Of the names and the carvings impressed on the rind.

All eager I hastened the scene to behold,
Rendered sacred and dear by the feelings of old;
And I dream'd that smaller'd my eye should explore
This refuge, this haunt, this elysium of yore.

'Twas a dream;—not a token, or trace could I view
Of the scenes that I lived, or the trees that I knew,
Like the shadows of night, at the dawning of day,
Like the tale that is told—they have vanish'd away.

And I thought the lone river that murmur'd along,
Was more dull in its music, more sad in its song,
Since the birds' that had rested and warbled above,
Had all fled from its banks at the fall of the grove,

I paused and the moral came home to my heart,
Behold how of earth all the glories depart;
Our visions are baseless, our hope but a gleam—
Our staff but a reed, and our life but a dream.

Then, oh! let us look—let our prospects allure
To scenes that can fade not, to realms that endure;
To glories, to blessings, that triumph sublime,
O'er the blightings of change, and the ruins of time.

REPORT,

Of the President and Directors of the Welland Canal Company, to the Stockholders.

It is impossible that earth more favorable for such an operation could have been met with. There is no rock to impede the excavation, and although the soil, a stiff clay, is more expensive to remove than lighter earth, that difficulty is amply atoned for by the solidity and tenacity of the banks, and the assurance there seems to be that they will sustain, without material alteration, the influence of the weather. Experience has given no reason for appreension on this head. When the excavation of the Canal is finished, so that the margin can be dressed, and the water led off from it by small drains, it is not probable that any considerable quantity of earth will be crumbled by frost and thaw or washed down by torrents; and it is conceived that whatever portion shall be from time to time detached from the sides, will be conveniently intercepted by the towing path on the one side, and the berm on the other, and be removed from thence in scows with little difficulty.

The alteration in the dimensions of the Deep Cut, has rendered an additional excavation necessary of 115,090 cubic yards, but it is conceived that the obvious advantages of it will fully justify the measure. It will be seen in the Engineer's Report, before referred to, in what state of advancement the Locks now are. The Contractor has had difficulties and disappointments to contend with, but has, nevertheless, proceeded with much activity, and from present appearances there is every reason to trust that this important part of the work will be executed to the satisfaction of the Company.

Three Locks of 32 feet in width, and 125 feet in length with 5, 7, and9 feet, lifts between the village of St. Catharines and Lake Ontario, on a level of 5 miles, will, it is expected, be completed this autumn and will be navigable by means of a feeder from the West Branch of the 12 Mile Creek. On the section including the ascent of the Mountain 4 Locks will be finished also this season, with the exception of the gates.

It has been a matter of much consideration with the Directors, whether it would not be advisable to construct the Locks throughout of the width of 32 feet, in order to admit of a continual navigation by Steamboats from the one Lake to the other, but they found that the increase of expense would be more than they dare venture to incur; besides that from the greater length required, there would not be room to descend the Mountain without a combination of Locks, which it is very desirable to avoid. The object however is so important of admitting navigation without transhipment by Steam-boats which, it is to be supposed, will in time be almost exclusively employed in transporting the productions of the Upper Countries, that the Directors deem it right, notwithstanding this apparent inconvenience, to call the attention of the Sctockholders to the subject, while the progress made in the Locks is not yet such as to increase greatly the difficulty of the alteration. To make the suggestion the more intelligible, it is to be observed, that Steam boats entering the Canal from the Welland, would, from the large scale on which it is made, have no difficulty to encounter in passing through the Deep Cut and along the Canal to the 1st Lock, from whence, in the course of 4 miles and 32 chains, including the descent of the Mountain, there will occur 32 Locks of 100 feet in length and 22 in width, demensions too small to admit of Steam-boats; and this distance of 4 miles and 32 chains, so long as these 32 Locks remain of these mall dimensions, will constitute one only interruption to the passage of a Steamboat from the one Lake to the other, and indeed from Lake Huron to Prescott on the St. Lawrence.

From the foot of this chain of Locks to Lake Ontario, there are indeed three other Locks; but the Directors have thought it advisable to construct these of such a width as to admit Steam-boats, which will therefore have no difficulty in ascending the Canal to the Village of St. Catharines, a distance of 5 miles. Throughout the greater part of this distance, such is the peculiar make of the banks along the 12-mile-Creek, that the navigation will rather resemble, in some places, a basin, and in others, a large river, than a Canal. The additional cost of constructing these Locks on the enlarged scale, is about £125 each Lock, an expence which, it is believed, will be amply compensated by the increase of tonnage on the Steamboats, and by the convenience they will afford to navigation.

The dimensions of the Canal, with the exception of the Deep Cut, are as follows: 26 feet on the bottom, with slopes of 2 to 1 up to the towing path; and a breadth of 56 feet on the water line. These dimensions are sufficient for vessels of 22 feet beam to pass each other, and none of larger size can enter the Locks. The ordinary depth of water will be 8 feet.

For the progress of the intervening sections of the Canal which present no particular feature, the Directors refer to Mr. Thomas's Report. It will be seen by it that the distance of 4 miles and 61 chains from the harbor at the 12-mile-Creek upward, will most probably be completed, even before the operations of this season are absolutely closed. And when this is considered, in coniunction with the labor done at the Deep Cut, and the proportion of the work performed along the whole line, it cannot but be admitted, that immense progress has been made during the last year in this most desirable undertaking.

In regard to the harbor itself, so far as the opinion of several Engineers can be depended upon, and which opinions, it is said, are confirmed by the concurring testimony of Col. Sir James Carmichael Smith, of the Royal Engineers, who visited the work last year, during his tour through this Province—so far also as the judgment of the Directors, unskilled as they certainly are in matters of this kind, can be thought of any value, they are happy to express their belief that there is no good reason to doubt its successful completion. Great progress is made in it, all that has been done appears to be sufficiently substantial, and they expect early in the next year it will be finished, and present a capacious and secure port, the access to which will have a depth of water of 12 feet.

Reviewing at once the whole of the line now in progress from the Welland to Lake Ontario it is estimated that 1,330, 704 cubic yards of earth have been excavated, and 202,707 yards of embankment made, besides finishing a culvert of solid masonary, and it is expected that at the end of the present month ten miles of the Canal will be finished. It appears also, by Mr. Thomas's estimate, that on the 1st November last there remained still to be excavated 1,-126,534 cubic yards and 155, 445 yards to be embanked. The greater part of the materials for the Locks is in readiness, and also the timber for piers at the harbor.

The erection of buildings, stables and out-houses, necessary in the conduct of so great a work, forms no in considerable part of the operation. This labor is surmounted—every section of the Canal is in a state of forwardness, and the clearing and grubbing is now completed.

Many of the Contractors commenced late in the season, and yet they had on the 1st of November last excavated 204,-176 yards, and embanked 47,262 yards more than remained then to be done; so that unless some unforeseen obstruction occurs, there seems every reason to anticipate that the work will be completed, or certainly very nearly so, during the next year.

The full amount of Stock being not yet subscribed, the Directors have not proceeded to Contract for the Western section of the Canal, leading from the Welland to the Grand River, but so soon as the necessary funds are available they will enter upon this part of the work; as it is sufficiently evident that neither the Company nor the public will reap the full benefit of what is now doing, until this part of the Canal is also finished.

According to the provisions of the Statute passed last year, an arbitration was held at St. Catharines in August last to determine the amount of damages to be paid by the Company to proprietors of land along the course of the Canal from the Welland to Lake Ontario. With the exception of a very few individuals (one of whom, and the only one whose claim can be considerable, has since been settled with for the sum of £800,) all persons, who can have demands upon the Company, in respect to that portion of the Canal, submitted them to the arbitrators, and a final award has been made, which directs the Company to pay claims amounting in the whole to £1,794.

The Directors cannot close this Report without desiring to pay a just tribute to Mr. Merritt, the Agent of the Company, to whose indefatigable exertions, intelligence, and uncommon perseverance, displayed from the original conception of the work, to the present moment, it would be most unjust not to ascribe, in a great measure, its present encouraging state.

They can best appreciate the difficulties he has had to encounter, and have had the best opportunity of judging of his conduct and motives. Of the latter they would not take the liberty of speaking, if they were not sensible that injustice has been sometimes done to them, which makes it a duty to declare their entire approbation of Mr. Merritt's proceedings in all that has fallen under their observation.

The Directors have acquired information of several facts tending to demonstrate that an immense intercourse through the Welland Canal must necessarily and speedily followits completion; and to hold forth every motive, both of public feeling and of private interest, to the people of this Province, to desire the success of this work, with an ardor of which they cannot but remark how small a degree has on this occasion been hitherto exhibited by the inhabitants of the Country generally, and even by many who reside in the vicinity of the Canal.

But they do not consider this the proper occasion for entering into detailed calculations necessary to illustrate the value of the object which the Company is endeavouring to obtain.

JOHN H. DUNN, President.
W. ALLAN, J. B. ROBINSON, H. J. BOULTON, & JOHN CLARK, Directors.

Since the Report was put to Press, a most gratifying letter, of which the following is a copy, has been received by the President, from Major Hillier, Secretary to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, enclosing a copy of a Despatch from the Right Honorable Earl Bathurst, His Majesty's Provincial Secretary of State, which being communicated at a Special Meeting of the Board, it was directed that they should be added to the Report. Nothing could be more agreeable, and more highly satisfactory to the Directors, than to have it in their power thus to conclude their Report, by recording another act of the munificence of the British Government, extended to this highly favored Colony. An act the more gratifying, as it has been entirely unsolicited on the part of the Company, and adds, at a moment when it was unlooked for, the encouraging patronage and support of the Imperial Government, to an undertaking which had before experienced the assistance of the Government and Legislature of this Province.

The Directors have resolved immediately to prefer a petition to the Legislature for the enactments necessary to carry into effect His Majesty's most gracious intentions.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
DECR. 21, 1826.

SIR,

I am commanded to convey to you, for information of the Directors and Stockholders of the Welland Canal Company, the enclosed copy of a Dispatch from His Majesty's Government, from which I am to assure you His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has derived the highest gratification; and has charged me to lose no time in communicating it to you.

I have the Honor to be,
SIR,
Your most Obd't. Humble Servant,
G. HILLIER.

THE HON. J. H. DUNN.

DOWNING STREET,
September 30th, 1826.

SIR,

His Majesty's Government having granted the Sum of Twelve Thousand Pounds, in aid of the expense of constructing the La Chine Canal in Lower Canada, upon condition that all Boats and Vessels with Public Stores should be permitted to pass without the Payment of any Toll or duty; and considering that the Welland Canal, now in progress on the Niagara Frontier, will afford great facility in forwarding Stores to Lake Erie and the upper parts of the Province of Upper Canada, and that by constructing the Locks of the width of twenty-two feet, it would become a work of much greater public utility. I am to desire that you will acquaint the Directors that His Majesty's Government would be willing to afford the same degree of assistance towards the expense of the Welland Canal which was given to that of La Chine, which was about a ninth of the estimated sum required in its completion; and as the estimated expense of the Welland Canal is One Hundred and Forty-seven Thousand Two Hundred and Forty Pounds, the Sum to be contributed by the Public for the privilege of forwarding Government Stores, &c. would be Sixteen Thousand Three Hundred and Sixty Pounds.

In the event of the Directors agreeing to this proposal, it is necessary that a Provincial Act should be passed, in which the Company shall engage to construct the Locks of the Canals of the width of at least twenty-two feet, and securing the use of the Canals to all Vessels and Boats, the property of His Majesty; and also, to all other Boats and Vessels, when engaged in carrying Government Stores, without the payment of any duty or toll, in consideration of the Sum of Sixteen Thousand Three Hundred and Sixty Pounds; to be paid in four equal annual instalments, or sooner, if the Canal should be completed at an earlier period.

I have the Honor to be,
SIR,
Your most Obedient,
Humble Servant,
(Signed) BATHURST.

A True Copy.

MAJOR GENERAL SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. &c. &c. &c.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

Monday Jan. 22.

Mr. Fothergill was opposed to the Bill, because he thought it contained restrictions with which the House should not comply, and such as he was of opinion would not be satisfactory to the people—he was a warm admirer of the British Constitution, but deeply regretted that the Constitutional power of the House had been interfered with by the instructions—he would recommend the House even yet to retrace its steps, pass neither of the Bills, but again address his Majesty to submit the case of the people to the Imperial Legislature to provide the remedy required. The people of Upper Canada he considered a brave and loyal people, who would not grumble without cause, indeed he thought their conduct on the present occasion was the best proof of their being otherwise, for if such a question was started in England, he had little doubt it would cause an insurrection—the conduct of the people spoke volumes in their favor, and care should be taken not to wound their feelings unnecessarily—he thought there were many of them who would not comply with the provisions of the Bill by registering their names—he had himself known Englishmen and old soldiers who would not ask for lands, because on making application they were required to take the oath of allegiance, having taken it before; and why should these persons be again asked to take it? he considered the instructions as bold an attempt as had ever been made to put down the rights of a brave and loyal people, and the Bill, if passed, might inflict a wound which would not easily be healed—the British Parliament would rise in arms against such instructions, and we should do so too, and reject them. The Act of the Imperial Parliament gave the House the power to Legislate on the subject, but it was told that the Bill must be cut and carved according to the instructions—he would still prefer going back to the Imperial Parliament, and leave the matter to their decision—a Bill passed in England would be satisfactory, but the one now under consideration would never meet the approbation of the people if passed by this House.

Mr. M'Lean would ask hon. gentlemen to point out what objections could reasonably be made to the preamble of the Bill as it now stood—he would ask them whether they felt every syllable of it was not strictly true—the interest of the persons concerned rendered it necessary, in order that justice might be done to them, that a reference should be made in the preamble to those coming from the United States. The address of last year to his Majesty for encouraging emigration from the United States, went to admit that such persons could not be considered as subjects: they were not so then, and could not be so now—if they came into the Province without complying with the laws, they could not be regarded as subjects, and the absolute necessity of the Bill now before the House, as well as an immediate allusion to their particular case, must be apparent—he was surprised to hear one honorable gentleman say that the late legal decisions in England had been made subservient to motives of State policy—such an assertion he considered quite absurd, unless it could be supposed that the Judges who made those decisions, who had so long been noted for their legal knowledge, and governed as they always were by the strict rules of justice and honor, had lost all regard for the obligations which the solemn oath they had taken imposed upon them—they were free from any such reproach, and would not mix the administration of justice with matters of political consideration. The persons alluded to in the preamble, by having complied with the provisions of certain laws, on their first coming into the Province, might have entitled themselves to the rights of subjects—the fact, however, was, that they had not done so, and the necessity of a Legislative remedy to provide for that neglect was generally admitted—he could himself bear testimony to the gallant conduct of many of these persons in defence of the country, and for that reason felt anxious that the remedy should be effectual; whatever prejudice might be created against the bill, he would not consent to legislate for the prejudices of the people, but in such a way as he was satisfied would permanently secure their rights, and when the merits of the Bill were fairly understood, he felt convinced that by doing so, he would be entitled to their thanks.

An attempt had been made to raise a clamor against the Government on this occasion; they however had not raised the objections which had been made to the rights hitherto enjoyed by these people—the fact was, the law of the land had discovered that those rights were liable to be legally questioned, and as soon as this was known, and had been brought under the consideration of Government, they had immediately taken such steps as would tend to remove all legal disabilities, and secure the people in the permanent enjoyment of those rights. The instructions he considered, not as a breach of privilege, but as expressive of the terms on which His Majesty would be happy to afford the desired relief; and after such an explicit avowal, if the House passed a Bill, such as it must know the King could not assent to, the refusal to provide the remedy which the case called for, could not, with propriety, be charged against His Majesty's Government—in such case the blame or failure would more properly be attributable to this House—In the course of debate it had been said that a Bill passed by the Imperial Parliament would have given satisfaction to the people—if such a course had been pursued, no less clamor would have been excited, against the Government, for what would then have been termed an improper interference with a subject of local importance and which should have been left to ourselves to settle.—It was easy to prejudice the public mind on such questions and he believed pains had been taken to do so—he was satisfied however that any error which existed would be rectified in a short time be removed, and that those whose interests were concerned would be convinced that the instructions were satisfactory, and such as the case required, in order to give permanent security in the enjoyment of those rights which were now liable to be legally questioned. The Petition from the Eastern District for a private bill of Naturalization, asked for it merely on the same terms as were pointed out in the instructions—The persons who signed it were all deeply interested in the question, and their Petition was signed before the Instructions were communicated to the House.—In giving his support to the Bill he felt that he was faithfully discharging his duty to the people, and when the subject was fairly stated to them he was convinced that it would meet with their decided approbation.

Mr. C. Jones said, that his only object was to remove all doubts on this subject, and to secure the people in the enjoyment of those privileges which they had hitherto possessed—many arguments had been used in the course of debate, which would mislead public opinion—he therefore felt it necessary to state, that the Government, in his opinion, feeling itself bound to secure the people in their rights, and to save time and prevent inconvenience, had honestly declared in what manner the King would exercise the power which the Act, enabling the House to legislate on the subject, had given him. That law reserved any Bill that might be passed here for his Majesty's assent, and the instructions informed us how that assent would be given. If those instructions had not been communicated to the House, and a Bill passed to which the assent of the King could not be given, then it would have been said that the Executive, by withholding them, had allowed the House to legislate without effect, and the charge of concealment would have been urged against them—it was not necessary that the House should absolutely follow the instructions—they were sent for its information, and to acquaint them of the manner in which His Majesty would exercise the power which was vested in him. If the Bill passed in such a shape as would enable his Majesty to give his assent to it, all doubts as to the rights of these people would be removed.

Mr. Hamilton still considered the instructions as disgraceful, and the registry odious—he had always stood out against the measure and should continue to do so—a loyal people were required to register themselves, and less favorable terms were now proposed than had been offered last year; if these were not complied with they were threatened with the loss of their elective franchise. If the Government chose to do such a thing, let them, and he would say, in God's name, take away the Constitution from us altogether.

Mr. Wilkinson would not take upon himself to say that any excitement was felt on this question in the District he represented; he believed, however, that the Bill was not such as would meet the wishes of the people—he preferred the Bill first brought in by Mr. Rolph, and thought that a preference would be given to it by his constituents and the people generally.

Mr. Coleman, thought he should not be doing his duty to his constituents, whose interest he felt deeply at heart, if he did not give his reasons for voting for the preamble of the bill—such arguments had been adduced in favor of it that he thought no tenable grounds were left for opposition, and therefore hoped that the honorable and learned member from Lincoln would spike his threatened artillery and make an honorable retreat whilst it was in his power.—The language of some honorable as well as learned members opposed to the bill, however ingeniously enforced, was calculated to inflame the feelings of the public and excite universal discontent—they were trampling on the interests of the people to gratify their own ambition—they were sowing the seeds of deception, and would reap the tears of disappointment—they were grasping at the shadow and losing the substance. The preamble of the bill contained the substance of the subsequent clauses which very properly provided against those who might feel disposed (if it was otherwise worded) to take advantage of its provisions by seeking or claiming a double allegiance as it would suit their purpose—such as contended they were not Aliens were not compeled to subscribe to them—a decision of the Judges of England has been given as to those people from the United States who have not complied with the Imperial Acts of Naturalization, amongst whom he had many valuable friends and some near relatives whom he knew had not such nice scruples as would make this bill objectionable to them on other odious or objectionable—(Here the hon. member adverted to, and read a communicatson from one of his constituents informing him those he had spoken to were satisfied with the provisions of the bill as reported by the committee) it was worded with as much delicacy as the circumstances of the case would admit of, and he would pledge his life the British government had no other object in view than that of serving a people, who by their meritorious conduct in the late war, were considered as deserving their confidence—were not the Germans and French who fought and bled in the same cause placed in the same situation—though they had received the royal bounty by patents for lands they were still considered in the eye of the law aliens. It was intended this bill should have a retrospective view only—they (the British Government) had a superabundant population (one great cause of the commercial distress) and they had no more accessible cultivatable lands than was required for them. He hoped the two bills would be separated touching their respective rights according to the royal instructions, that they might not endanger each other—the one might receive the royal assent whilst the other might require some modifications—they were intended to confer all the rights and privileges of British born subjects on those who are declared, by the Judges of England to be Aliens, and as he had a sincere desire to see them qualified in those rights, in every respect equal with himself, he hoped their expectations would not again be frustrated by the sophistry of flaming patriots or by the declamation of those who talk much and mean nothing—he would pay every respect to the wishes of his constituents, particularly to that class of people affected by the provisions of the Bill, and render it as little objectionable to their prejudices (which he would always respect) as the nature of the royal instructions would warrant with safety to the bill. He would ask what would be the consequence at another election if this bill did not pass into a law? Would not the returning officers feel it their duty not to receive those people (whom the law declared aliens) either as candidates or electors? Most assuredly they would. It was said by some honorable and learned members that the Imperial Parliament might at once, with a dash of the pen, have enacted a law to confirm their rights—undoubtedly they might—but he was of opinion, as many objections would have been raised the to act as to the present bill before the house—we should have said—if they give us a right why should we not exercise it—do they know our local necessities?—why then shall they presume to legislate for us—such language has been held forth on former occasions relating to our intercourse laws with the United States. Through the perverseness of members this bill should fail he would get a private bill passed next session upon the petition of those whom it immediately concerned in his own neighbourhood.

Mr Bidwell said that the letter produced by the Hon. Member, was from a gentleman of the first respectability, but who had not been long enough in the country to form a very correct opinion on this question—he too could produce a letter from a person of equal respectability, who had resided here many years, and was personally interested in the Bill. This letter (which he read) stated that the Bill, in the part of the country where the writer lived (Bath), was not approved of by those who had seen it.

[After some further discussion the preamble proposed by Mr. Beasley, was adopted—we have already given it in a former number of our paper.]

On Friday, Jan. 26, the discussion was again resumed, when

Mr. Rolph proposed the introduction of the Bill he had brought in at the commencement of the Session.

On the question being put it was lost.

Mr. Rolph then moved an amendment to the Bill, to except those from its provisions who had served during the war—Lost.

The committee then rose and reported the Bill as amended.

On the question for receiving the report, there were, Yeas, 20—Nays, 20.

The hon. Speaker voted with the Nays, and the committee resumed.

On motion, the committee rose and reported the Bill as amended.

On the question for receiving the report, Yeas, 20—Nays, 20.

The Speaker voting with the Nays, the committee again resumed, and the same result followed.

The question being put a fourth time, for receiving the report, Yeas 21—Nays 19.

And the Bill was ordered for a third reading on Monday.——Adjourned.

Saturday, Jan. 27.

The House was occupied this day on the Welland Canal Stock Bill; not being present during the discussion, we are unable to give the debate. The Bill was ordered for a third reading.

Monday, Jan. 29.

NATURALIZATION BILL, third reading—The Atty. General moved that the Bill do now pass.—Yeas, 19—Nays, 19.

The Speaker voting with the Nays, the Bill was lost.

Mr. Rolph then moved that the Bill be referred to Messrs. Perry, Peterson, and Wilkinson, as a select committee to report thereon.

This was decided to be out of order, no Bill being now before the House.

Mr. Rolph then moved that the Naturalization Bill be again placed on the order of the day.—Carried.

THE CONTROVERTED ELECTION BILL, read a second time, and reported as amended—ordered for a third reading.

Mr. Morris moved an address to his Excellency the Lieuteuant Governor, to be informed what number of acres of land, are reserved in the Province, for a Protestant Clergy—Carried.——Adjourned.

Tuesday, Jan. 30.

A joint conference appointed on the subject of the public buildings, for the use of the Legislature.

Mr. J. Jones brought in a Bill, which was read a first time, on the Petition of the Inhabitants of the Johnstown District, praying to be naturalized as British subjects.

NATURALIZATION BILL—in committee.

Mr. Perry proposed an amendment to the preamble, expressed in general terms—Lost.

The committee rose, and reported the Bill without amendments.

On the question for receiving the report—Yeas, 20—Nays, 20.

The hon. Speaker voted with the Nays. The committee resumed.

Mr. Wilkinson proposed an amendment requiring all persons to take the oath of allegiance according to the provisions of the Bill—Lost.

Mr. White proposed an amendment that all persons who had resided in the province 7 years before the war, and who should produce a certificate of having taken the oath of allegiance, should be exempted from the provisions of the Bill—Lost.

The Committee, on motion, rose and reported the Bill without amendments—for receiving the report—Yeas, 20—Nays, 20.

The hon. Speaker voted with the Nays.

The committee resumed, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again tomorrow.——Adjourned.

Wednesday, Jan. 31.

CONTROVERTED ELECTION BILL, read third time, passed, and sent to the Legislative Council. This Bill continues what is commonly called the Grenville Act—an amendment was made which authorizes Commissions to be held in the several counties for taking evidence, where elections are contested.

THE CATARAQUI BRIDGE BILL, second reading, reported as amended, and ordered for a third reading on Saturday.

COUNTY COURT BILL, second reading, reported as amended, third reading on Saturday.

DISTRICT COURT BILL—Committee reported progress and leave was given to sit again to-morrow.

MAGISTRATE'S ACCOUNTING BILL, second reading, the Bill was reported as amended, third reading on Saturday. The Bill requires that the Magistrates shall publish in the papers, annually, the public accounts of the several Districts; and provides, that the situations of Chairman of the Sessions, and Treasurer of a District, shall not, in future, be held by the same person.

Adjourned. Thursday, Feb. 1.

Mr. Lefferty brought up the Petition of Caleb Hopkins, and others, against the Naturalization Bill.

The Petition of White, and others, against the same Bill, was, by a resolution of the House, declared to be not respectfully worded, and that it would not be entertained by the House. It was withdrawn by Mr. Lefferty, who had presented it.

WELLAND CANAL STOCK BILL, second reading—The committee rose, reported progress, and leave was given to sit again to-morrow.——Adjourned.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

House of Commons, Dec. 7.

EMIGRATION.

Mr. Wilmot Horton presented a petition from Glasgow and Calton on the subject of Emigration.

Mr Hume said it was of great importance to have the question of Emigration settled. He thought that Ministers should state explicitly what measures they intended to adopt on this important subject, It was proper that the country, and particularly the many thousands of poor now out of employment, should know at present how far the House would take up their case; otherwise they would be obliged to wait in great anxiety for two or three months.

Mr. Wilmot Horton said he was on the point, when the Hon. Member rose, to give notice that it was his intention to move, on Thursday the 15th Feb. for a new Committee on Emigration. Till more inquiry should be made, and better information obtained on this subject, it would be impossible to come to any decision. He hoped, therefore, that the question would not be prejudged by any premature discussion, but that Members would wait till all the information was laid before them.

Mr. Abercromby thought that Ministers ought to state more explicitly what their intentions were.

Mr. Grattan expressed himself to the same effect.

Sir James Graham thought it was not the policy of this country to encourage emigration. It was contrary to the ancient policy of our laws. It was the duty of Ministers, however, to devise some specific remedy for the present distress of the labouring and manufacturing classes. He could state from local observation, that there was not only a great want of employment, but the wages of the artisans were disproportionably low. Many were favourable to emigration. There was something, however very plausible in it; and he hardly could conceive any thing more degrading than for respectable individuals to be petitioning Government to be sent out to some distant colony, such as Van Diemen's Land, more like felons than colonists. He hoped that before the House met, after the recess, some specific remedy would be devised for the present distresses. (The Hon. Baronet spoke in such a low tone of voice, that the purport of many of his sentences could not be ascertained.)

Mr. Wharton said there was one difficulty with regard to emigration, which he would suggest to the House. A certain capital was to be advanced, and this was to be repaid by the produce of the lands. He could not see how this produce was to be converted into rent, or how the corn was to be remitted to this country.

Mr. Peel called upon Members to keep their minds open, and not pledge their opinions one way or other, till the Report of the Committee should be laid before them. There were certainly many important points which they had to consider, the two principal, however, were, how far emigration would tend to alleviate the present distresses, and how far it might benefit the colonies. In his opinion it was quite impossible that the distress could be alleviated to any great extent by emigration. The expense attending the emigration of each individual would be £20 at least, and it must, therefore, be evident that there could not be any sanguine expectation of relief from this measure. If, however, emigration to any great extent was practicable, it no doubt would benefit the colonies, and likewise this country, as it would create a demand for British manufactures. In this point of view it would be most beneficial, but the expense of sending out so many thousands that are now out of employment, would be so enormous, that he despaired of mitigating the distress by this means. He was surprised at the manner in which the Hon. Baronet had spoken of emigration. He seemed to suppose that those who went out as colonists to a distant country were in the situation of convicts. Such a supposition was most erroneous.—(Hear, hear.) In the one case there was no penalty attached. In the other, there was a stigma and an infamous punishment. Convicts could not go out as free settlers; their labour was appropriated to other individuals, and brought them in no return. From many parts of Scotland men possessed of considerable capital had emigrated to our distant colonies, because, with a grant of some hundreds of acres, they considered they could employ their capital better than in this country. He had no doubt that much useful information would be obtained by the appointment of a Committee. The evidence of Colonel Cockburn, who had resided for some time in Canada, and who had turned his attention to emigration, would probably be found most useful, as he perhaps possessed more information on the subject than any other individual. He hoped, therefore, that till all necessary information were laid before the House, Members would not pledge their opinion.

Major Maberly hoped the House would take the advice of His Majesty's Ministers, and wait till the evidence was laid before them. When, on a former occasion, a grant of public money was made to Ireland, it was regarded as an exception to the general rule, which was, that the interference of Government was improper. At this time some similar grant, perhaps, was necessary, in order to encourage emigration. Indeed, he could not see what other means there was to prevent a redundant population.

Mr. Benett (of Wiltshire) thought that if the embargo of taxation on our waste lands were removed, much more good would arise from this than from emigration. If the title on waste lands were taken off, a much greater quantity would be brought into cultivation, and there would be an increased demand for our manufactures. According to many writers of good authority, there were about 22 millions of acres of waste land, 11 millions of which were capable of improvement. If an arrangement be given to cultivate this land, and a remedy would soon be found for the present distresses. —Something too ought to be done for Ireland. If there was sufficient security for property in that country, Englishmen and Scotsmen would soon embark their capital, both in the purchase of land and in manufacture. If the plan, however, which the Hon. Member (for Aberdeen) so strongly advocates—the abolition of the Corn Laws, were carried into effect, we should soon have a greater number candidates for Botany Bay. It would throw so many labourers out of employment, that they would find a similar course necessary. By improving the waste lands of this country, its wealth would be able to pay the taxes.

Mr. Grant (Inverness-shire)—If the Hon. Member for Wiltshire would allow him, he would propose him as one of the Committee; and he had little doubt he would soon be convinced, that it was much better that persons should leave this country to cultivate the richest lands in some of our colonies, than remain here to cultivate the worst.

The petition was then ordered to be printed.

Foreign Intelligence.

POSTSCRIPT.—The Edward Bonaffe arrived last night from Havre. Bringing Paris papers to the 15th December.—Albion.

There is nothing later from England. The news of the sending of troops to Portugal, with Mr. Canning's Speech, &c. had just reached Paris, and the public were awaiting with great solicitude, to see what course the French Government would adopt. It appears that the concluding passage in the address of Charles 10th, in which he refers to the French arms, had caused a great fall in the funds in Paris, and the first report of the measures in England produced a panic; but the declarations in the Speech of the King of England, of the favorable disposition of the powers to the preservation of peace, had caused a rise. It is now reported that the concluding passage was inserted in the French King's Speech, in consequence of the keeper of the seals having suddenly deserted M. Villele, and taken sides against the specific party. A private letter from Bayonne states, that the troops were to be withdrawn from Spain, to avoid countenancing the invasion of Portugal: but there appears to be nothing certain in these various rumors.

There is a party in France considered as going hand in hand with the ultra party in Spain, being inclined to a war with England, and having hopes of exciting a diversion in Ireland.

The Chamber of Deputies was to be opened on the 14th December, but after several calls, the requisite number for a Session not being present, it did not take place.

Nothing has transpired to doubt the sincerity of the French Government.

Turkey.—Executions still continue at Constantinople. Mr. Stratford Canning has obtained satisfaction for an insult shewn to his guard; and has accepted for his new guard a detachment of the new troops, in place of the Janizaries, though it is to be only temporary. In the mean time he awaits the arrival of M. Ribeaupierre with impatience, in order to terminate the negotiations concerning Greece.

Spain.—Madrid dates to Dec. 4th, on which day his Majesty rode into the town smoking a cigar with quite an air; a certain sign of his being in good health.

Portugal.—Report says that Lord Beresford is to take command of the Portuguese troops. He had had several conferences with the Minister at war, and it was determined that the army should be put on the same footing as it was twelve years ago.

Italy.—The Austrian Army will be withdrawn by the middle of the year 1827.

AWFUL CALAMITY IN ALEXANDRIA.

It is with feelings of the deepest concern and sympathy, we perform the painful duty of recording the calamity that befel our sister City, Alexandria, yesterday. An extensive and destructive conflagration has left the most populous & flourishing part of the City in ruins, and filled the bosoms of the inhabitants with grief and desolation. Many families that, yesterday morning, offered up their daily thanksgiving for the blessings of food, raiment, and shelter, were, in the evening, houseless and destitute—thrown, at this inclement season, upon the charities of neighbors almost as ver-bed as themselves, or left to wander amid the mouldering ruins of their once comfortable dwellings in hopeless misery. We have yet been able to collect but a very imperfect account of the extent of the calamity. The alarm of fire was given about nine in the morning, when it was discovered that a Cabinet maker's shop, in the interior of the square and near the intersection of King and Royal streets, was in flames. That house and 8 or 10 others, fronting on alleys were consumed, most of which were the back buildings of houses fronting on King and Fairfax streets. The whole number of houses consumed are hastily estimated at between eighty and ninety. No correct calculation can be made in regard to value of property, but it will not fall far short of $150,000.

General Ripley, who resides in the neighborhood of New Orleans, intends publishing a review of the military operations on the Canadian frontier during the late war.

Trade with British Colonies.—On Monday, in both houses of Congress, reports were made, accompanied by bills, for regulating the commercial intercourse between the U. S. and the British Colonies. The bills of both houses were the same, and provide for the exclusion of any vessels from all the colonies and dependencies of Great Britain, from the ports of the the United States, Upper Canada alone excepted, until Great Britain shall open the ports of her colonies to the vessels of the United States, upon a perfect footing of equality with her own vessels.

COLONIAL TRADE.

Washington, Jan. 22, 1827.

Mr. TOMLINSON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred so much of the Presidents Message as relates to the Commerce of the United States with foreign nations and their colonies, made a report in detail, accompanied by the following Bill:

A BILL to regulate the Commercial Intercourse between the United States and the Colonies of Great Britain.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, from and after the thirtieth day of September next, the ports of the United States shall be, and remain closed against any and every vessel coming or arriving from any port or place in the British Colonies or possessions, heretofore mentioned to wit: the British possessions in the West Indies, and on the continent of South America, the Bahama Islands, the Islands called Baicos, the Bermuda or Somer Islands the British possessions on the coast of Africa, the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope, and the islands, settlements, and territories belonging thereto, and dependent thereupon; the islands of Mauritius and Ceylon, and the several Islands and territories belonging to, and dependent on each respectively; the British settlements in the Island of New Holland, and the several islands and territories belonging thereto, and dependent thereon; the island of Van Dieman's Land, and the several islands belonging thereto and dependent thereon; Lower Canada, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; the Island of Newfoundland; St. John's, Cape Breton, and the dependencies of them, or any other Colony or possession, under the dominion of Great Britain, in the West Indies, or on the continent of America; and any vessel which shall have cleared from any port or place in the colonies or possessions above described, and afterwards taking in a cargo at any port or place, in any of the colonies or possessions aforesaid; or which having cleared from any port or place in the colonies or possessions aforesaid, with a cargo, shall afterwards, in the same voyage, have touched at, or again cleared from, any other port or place, shall, nevertheless, be deemed to have come from a port or place in the colonies or possessions aforesaid, within the meaning of this act; and every vessel, so excluded as aforesaid, from the ports of the United States, that shall enter, or attempt to enter, the same, in violation of this act, shall, with her tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with the cargo on board, be forfeited to the United States.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That, from and after the thirtieth day of September next, the owner, consignee, or agent, of every vessel, owned wholly, or in part, by a subject or subjects of His Britannic Majesty, which shall have been duly entered in any port of the United States, and on board of which shall have been there laden, for exportation, any article or articles of the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, other than provisions and sea-stores, necessary for the voyage, shall before such vessel shall be cleared outward, at the Custom House, for any port, in a sum double the value of such articles, with one or more sureties to the satisfaction of the Collector, that the article or articles so laden on board such vessel for exportation, shall be landed in some port or place, other than any port or place in the above mentioned colonies or possessions; and any such vessel that shall sail, or attempt to sail, from any port of the United States, without having given bond as aforesaid, shall, with her tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with the article or articles aforesaid, laden on board the same, as aforesaid, be forfeited to the United States: Provided always, That nothing in this act contained, shall be deemed, or so construed, as to violate any provision of the Conventions to regulate commerce between the territories of the United States & of His Britannic Majesty, which were concluded at London, on the third day of July, one thousand eight hundred and fifteen, and on the twenueth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and eighteen.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the form of the bond aforesaid, shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Department of the Treasury; and the same shall, and may be, discharged, and not otherwise, by producing, within one year after the date thereof, a like certificate to that required by, and under the regulations contained in, the eighty-first section of the act " to regulate the collection of duties on im orts," passed the second day of March, seventeen hundred and ninety-nine, that the articles of the growth, produce, and manufacture, of the United States, laden as aforesaid, were unladen and landed conformably to the provisions of this act; or in case of loss by sea, by capture, or other unavoidable accident, by the production of such other proofs as the nature of the case will admit, according to the provisions of the eighty-first section of the act aforesaid.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That all penalties and forfeitures incurred by force of this act shall be sued for, recovered, distributed, and accounted for, and may be mitigated, in the manner, and according to the provisions of the revenue laws of the United States.

Sec. 5. Provided, nevertheless, And be it further enacted, That this act shall not take effect, nor go into operation, if, before the said thirteenth day of September next, the President of the United States shall receive satisfactory evidence that the Colonies and Possessions aforesaid, are open to the admission of vessels of the United States, coming from the said United States, that neither such vessels nor their cargoes are subjected to any other or higher duties or charges, than are levied or exacted on British vessels and their cargoes, arriving from the United States, in the said colonies and possessions; and that the vessels of the United States may import into said colonies and possessions from the United States, any article or articles which a British vessel could by law, import from the United States into the said Colonies or possessions, it shall and may be lawful for the President of the United States to issue his Proclamation, declaring that the ports of the United States are open to vessels of the United States and to British vessels coming directly from said colonies or possessions, and also to vessels coming therefrom, which, by treaty, according to the Navigation Act of the United States, may be entitled to bring merchandise from said Colonies and possessions into the United States on the same terms as vessels of the U. States; and that British vessels may enter the ports of the United States, from the Colonies or possessions aforesaid, shall not, after the date of the proclamation last mentioned, be subjected either on their tonnage or their cargoes, to any other or higher duties or charges of any kind, than are levied on vessels of the United States, and their cargoes of similar merchandise, imported from the same Colonies or possessions. And from and after the date of such proclamation, the first and second sections of this act shall be suspended."

This Bill was twice read, and committed to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF Lower Canada.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER.

Quebec, January 23, 1827.

This day at three o'clock His Excellency the Governor in Chief came down in state to the Legislative Council Chamber, and being seated on the Throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was sent down to the House of Assembly to command their attendance before His Excellency, and that House being come up, His Excellency opened the Session with the following Speech:

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I have the honour, as His Majesty's Representative, to meet you for the dispatch of the Public Business in this Session of the Provincial Parliament.

I regret to say, that the distress which has pressed so generally and so heavily upon the Manufacturing Districts and Trade of England, has also been severely felt in our Commercial affairs;—it is the natural and unavoidable consequence of our intimate connexion with those interests of the Mother Country. Notwithstanding this, the resort of shipping here this last summer has not diminished materially, and the Revenue nearly equals that of the year preceding.

If we have felt the stock of adverse circumstances, I trust we may now indulge in the pleasing prospects held out in His Majesty's Speech at the opening of the present Session of the Imperial Parliament, of a progressive return to the wanted activity of Commerce and industry in the United Kingdom.

The unusual drought of the last summer, and the fires which spread in the woods, gave cause for much apprehension, and were indeed destructive in many parts of the Province, I am happy however, to find that though the season did not prove favorable to the grain crop, yet that there is a general abundance of the necessaries of life: I still, therefore, may congratulate you on the peaceful happiness which the Province enjoys under the blessing of Divine Providence.

Gentlemen of the Assembly,

I have directed the Accounts of the Revenue and Expenditure in the past year, to be laid before you, and also an estimate of the supply I am to require for the public Service, in obedience to instructions I have recently received from His Majesty's Secretary of State.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and

Gentlemen of the Assembly,

I must recall your attention to those measures of public interests which I have before recommended to you, and which were left unfinished in the last Session.

Quiet and tranquility as this Province is, yet the population increases so rapidly, and society expands so widely, that I feel every year the necessity more urgent for an extensive and active system of Police to keep pace with that progress. The many changes which are thus operating in the state of the Province, I lament to say that none appears more striking than the increase of crime; to whatever cause it may be ascribed, it is in itself a fact which calls for measures specially and speedily applicable to the evil; the Grand Juries in some of the Districts have made their Presentments in language so forcible, that I shall lay these documents before you, to show the various and serious difficulties to be removed; I am equally convinced, that I would earnestly press it upon your considerations, that the time is arrived for the establishment in every county of those authorities, necessary to enable the Executive Government to watch over and promote the local interests of each.

Other matters of importance will be communicated to you by Message, in order that I may explain them more distinctly than this occasion allows; Be assured of my best and unwearied exertions in that station in which His Majesty has been graciously pleased to place me in this Province; and that it will always be one of the chief objects of my endeavours to concur with you in whatever may tend to the public advantage.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1827.

We have no later news from England. The subject of Emigration appears to attract the attention of the British Parliament—petitions have been presented, the debate on which we have given in this days paper.

The Naturalization Bill, on Monday last, passed the House of Assembly. The Yeas and Nays were as follows:—

YEAS.—Messrs. Atkinson, Attorney General, Burke, Burnham, Beasley, Cryder, Cameron, Conger, Colemas, Clark, Gordon, Ingersoll, C. Jones, J. Jones, J. Jones, Morris, McLean, McBride, McDonell, Scollick, Thompson of York, and Vankoughnett.—22.

NAYS.—Messrs. Baby, Beardsley, Bidwell, Fothergill, Horner, Hamilton, Lefferty, Lyons, Matthews, M'Call, McDonald, Perry, Peterson, Randall, Rolph Thomson of Frontenac, Walsh, and White,—18.

Majority for the Bill passing—4.

We have heard it mentioned that it is intended to get Petitions signed, to be presented to the King, against the Bill. Those who are satisfied that the case is one which requires effectual remedy, will please to show they put their hands to any Petition, the effect of which, if granted, would defeat so desirable a purpose. It has been repeatedly stated, and we mention it again, that the object of the Bill, and the wish of His Majesty's Government, is to secure permanently and effectually, the enjoyment of those rights, which are now liable to be legally questioned. A Declaratory law could not effect such an object.

The Hon. The Speaker has informed the House of Assembly, that he has received an intimation from His Excellency the Lt. Governor, that it is His Excellency's intention to prorogue the Parliament, on or about the 17th instant. There yet remains some important business unfinished, and members appear to be applying themselves diligently to forward it. The Bill for improving the Navigation of the St. Lawrence, is ordered for a third reading this day.

The Highway Bill is not yet reported; but in the course of debate yesterday the Attorney General stated that it was nearly completed, and would soon be submitted. He further stated to the House, that the funds for the desired improvement would be provided for in the Bill, and not interfere with any other works of public advantage.

State of Public Improvements in Upper Canada, under the Administration of His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland.

NEW SETTLEMENTS.

During the last eight years as many as 100 Townships have been surveyed; many of them are fully, and others partially settled. Among the most flourishing of them may be named, the Settlements of Perth, Lanark, Richmond, Dalhousie, and some others in the Ottawa and Bathurst Districts, and the Peterborough Settlement in the New-Castle District. These but a few years ago were one entire wilderness, but are now filled with their thousands and ten thousands of inhabitants. Towns and Villages have sprung up in them, and present the appearance of busy Commercial places. Besides these, Settlements in many other parts of the Country, have made the most rapid progress.

POPULATION.

In 1818 the population of the Province was estimated at about 90,000—it now falls little short of 200,000. Emigration has materially added to it, and will continue to do so, from the consideration of the many advantages which are held out to well disposed persons, who may in a few years attain a comparative state of comfort and independence.

DEFENCE OF THE COUNTRY

With its population, the Province has acquired a greater degree of security in the means of its defence—Public, Military, and Naval works have been completed by Government, and others are in progress or contemplated. The Militia of the Province in 1818, consisted of 35 Regiments; about 13,000 men—it now numbers upwards of 32,000, divided into 56 Regiments.

PUPLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

The Welland Canal; uniting our Inland Lakes, as it were with the Ocean—The Rideau Canal; a stupendous work, of the most vital importance in the event of a war, and opening a communication for the new Settlements—The Burlington and Desjardin's Canals: which will afford the most desirable facilities to the Commerce of a rich and fertile part of the Country—these have all been commenced within a few years. In addition to which may be mentioned the contemplated improvements in the Navigation of the St. Lawrence—the construction of a harbor at Kettle Creek on Lake Erie, and the intended improvements on the Highways throughout the Province.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

The most casual observer cannot fail of having witnessed the rapid growth of every Town and Village in the Province. Within the last few years, they have all of them nearly doubled in size and population—New Jails and Court Houses, and other Public edifices, are to be found built, or building, in almost every principal Town in the several Districts—Churches, &c. are rising up throughout the Country, and many of the private buildings present an appearance of elegance and comfort.

NAVIGATION.

Only one Steam-Boat and a few Schooners navigated the Lakes at the period embraced in these remarks. Eight Steam-Boats, besides other Vessels, are now employed in the transport of Goods, and conveyance of Passengers.

MANUFACTURES

The Manufacture of coarse Linen and Woolen Cloths is becoming more extensive—The Manufacture of Iron, and Hollow Ware, is now carried on extensively at Marmora, and in the London District. A Nail Cutting Machinery is established at Port Hope, supplied from the Marmora Iron works. The Manufacture of Paper has been encouraged, and Paper of an excellent quality may now be procured in the Gore District—a second Establishment of this kind is now forming in the Home District. Saw and Grist Mills—Distilleries and Breweries, are to be found in almost every part of the Province; and as a new article of Commerce, the exportation of large quantities of leaf Tobacco from the Western District may be mentioned.

CHARTERED COMPANIES.

A Provincial Bank is chartered at York, with branches at Kingston, Niagara, and other Towns in the Province. The attention of capitalists in Great Britain has been directed to Upper Canada, and the Canada Company under a Royal Charter may soon be expected to commence active operations.

EDUCATION.

Parliamentary provision is made for a Public School in each of the eleven Districts of the Province, where a classical education may be obtained. Provision is also made by Law for Schools in every Township throughout the Province, according to the means they possess for supporting them. A Board for the general superintendance of Education has been lately established—and Trustees of Public Schools, are appointed in the several Districts. The day is not distant when we hope to see an University established by the zealous endeavors of those entrusted with this important object.

PUBLIC PROFESSIONS.

The number of gentlemen practising at the Bar—those licensed to practice as Physicians and Surgeons—the list of land Surveyors—and the encouragement given to practical Engineers in the public improvements now in operation, are the best proofs that can be adduced to shew, that learning and science are valuable to their possessors in Upper Canada.

PRINTING.

Only two printing establishments were in operation at the time alluded to—their number has increased to nine, and though some of their proprietors complain that the papers they publish are not patronised or paid for, it may safely be attributed to the intemperate manner in which they are pleased to conduct them.

These we should suppose would be considered by every intelligent and unprejudiced person as "unequivocal proofs of advancement." They constitute what may very properly be considered as the essentials in a new country. The refinements, of a more advanced state of Society, such as Painting, Music, Sculpture and Statuary, will follow as a matter of course.

His Majesty held a levee on the 27th of Nov. at St. James Palace, which was attended by nearly all the Foreign Ministers and a large number of the nobility and other distinguished personages. Among the numerous presentations we observe the names of the following:—Major Gen. Sir J. Carmichael Smith, on his promotion and return from British America, by the Duke of Wellington; Mr. Addington, on his return from the United States, by Mr. Canning; Sir Alex. Grant, on his coming to his title, by Mr. Peel; the Rev. Dr. Strachan, Arch Deacon of York Upper Canada, by the Bishop of London; Sir Charles Wetherall, on being appointed Attorney General; Lieut. Gen. Sir Herbert Taylor, on being honoured with the Grand Cross of the Guelphic Order; Col. Brerer, 37th Regt., on his return from Canada, by Gen. Sir C. Green; Captain Edward Parry, on his marriage and appointment to the Hecla for the new polar expedition.—Albion.

Distressing Casuality.—On Saturday last, the 20th ult. about sun-set, the House of Mr. John Harper, a short distance from Waterloo, was consumed by fire, together with every thing which it contained; and, it gives us real pain to add, that his two youngest children a girl and a boy, the one about four, and the other two years of age, were consumed in the flames. The parents it seems were absent from home; and the fire had made such progress, before it was discovered by the neighbors, as to make it utterly impossible to save the little suffering innocents, although their cries were distinctly heard. It is sincerely to be hoped, that this awful visitation will prove a solitary warning to all parents, not to leave children of such a tender age, for any length of time, thus exposed alone, as is too frequently the case; and also to be particularly cautious how straw or any other combustible material may be left in a situation by which fire can be communicated to it, and thus endanger the lives of themselves and families.—C. C. Herald.

A number of bills of the Bank of Montreal are now in circulation, which have been altered from one dollar, so as to pass for ten. The deception may be easily discovered by holding them up to the light, when the parts from which the original letters have been erased to make the alteration, appear much thinner than the rest of the bill. But for this circumstance and the clumsy manner in which the figures are altered on the vignette, they might pass for a considerable time.—Montreal Gazette.

At the North and South American Coffee House, London, Foreign Papers from every part of the world are regularly received and filed. And it being the intention of the Proprietor to form a Library for the use of subscribers and American friends, any Author, Editor or Proprietor, in the Canadas, Nova Scotia, &c. who may be inclined to forward their works, as contributions, will please address them to the care of Mr. John Baird, Montreal.

Birth.

At Cornwall, on the 27th ult. Mrs. P. VanKoughnett of a Daughter.

Married,

At York, on 29th ult. by the Rev. Joseph Hudson, Quarter Master Wilson, 70th Regt. to Miss Hornby, daughter of Mr. P. Hornby Barrack Master.

Died,

On the 19th ult. at Clinton, Mr. James Henry, aged about 70 years.—Mr Henry was one of the oldest settlers in this District. After serving his King and Country for several years in Butler's Rangers during the Revolutionary War, commenced farming on lands received from His Majesty for his meritorious services—and after forty years of industry and economy, has been able to divide a very respectable estate amongst his numerous offsprings, after making ample provision for his bereaved widow.

At Kingston on the 24th ult. Mrs. M Cartwright, relict of the late Hon. Richard Cartwright.

STANZAS

On the Death of Isaac Rose, 70th Regt.

Far, far from the field of his youth and affection,
The Soldier lies low in his cold narrow grave:
The mind never dreamt in its silent reflection,
The body should moulder near Erie's dark wave.

The fields of his youth, Ah! mournful the story,
There, the guide of his childhood—his father still dwells
He thinks of his boy—and he thinks of his glory,
The tale, which to fathers affection still tells.

The fancy enraptured with silent emotion,
Paints fame, with her chaplets encircling his head;
And he prays—and his prayers are the swell of devotion,
For his child among strangers—that child that lies dead.

Oh! sad is the tale, unexpected the story,
That, the breeze from the west shall waft o'er the wave
"Not the fame of his might from the field fresh and gory"
But the knell of his boy who lies low in his grave.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shal come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart, for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign.

UPPER CANADA.

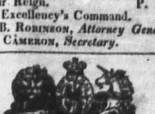
P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.



Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign.

£50 Reward.

His Excellency the Lieut. Governor having received a communication from His Excellency the Governor of the State of New York, by which it appears that William Morgan, who some years ago exercised the calling of a Brewer in this place, and who has subsequently resided at Ca-

naudaigua, in the State of New York, was some time in the last year conveyed by force from that place and is supposed to be forcibly detained under false pretences in some part of this Province, any person who may be able to afford information respecting the said William Morgan, shall, upon communicating the same to the Private Secretary of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, receive the reward above offered.

Government House, 31st January, 1827.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come Greeting:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. John Large, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said John Large for the discovery of the offender—Now Know Ye That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime. Given under my hand &c.

Executive Council Office, York 7th February, 1827.

NOTICE is hereby given, by order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that unless John Bowman, late a private Soldier in the Glengary Light Infantry Regiment, the Original Locatee of Lot number seven, Concession C. Township of Murray, in the District of New Castle, do shew cause within six Months from this date, why the Location should not be rescinded, the Lot will be Granted to William M. Bullock, of Murray, aforesaid, Gentleman.

JOHN SMALL,
38–6m. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1 A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.*

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form. Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2*s.* 6*d.*

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands alreaday Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY,

PROSPECTUS

Of a New Religious and Literary Publication, to be conducted by the Clergy of the Established Church, under the Sanction of the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, to be Entitled,

THE CHRISTIAN SENTINEL,
AND
Anglo-Canadian Churchman's Magazine.

"Stand fast in the Faith, be strong, quit you like men, but let all things be done with Charity."

This work to be published every second month—the first number for January and February to be published on the first day of March, 1827, and so on for every succeeding period of two months;—to contain sixty octavo pages, will paper, types, and covers, equal to the late Canadian Magazine. Subscription, Ten shillings per annum, payable in advance; or, if purchased by single numbers, the price of each copy to be in proportion.

The design of this undertaking is, generally, to circulate throughout this extensive Diocese the genuine principles of the Catholic Church of Christ, by the publication of articles, some original and some selected, on topics both doctrinal and practical; —and especially to defend the Apostolic Constitution, Orthodox Doctrines, and Spiritual Ritual, of the National Church of England, by elucidation, by argument, and by appeal to the authorities of Sacred Scriptures, of the ancient Fathers, and of Ecclesiastical History.

In accomplishing this desirable end, all dereliction of Christian charity is strongly deprecated;—indeed, the earnest desire of the Editor is never to act on the offensive, but, like a good sentinel to defend one's own post, and to watch with vigilance the movements of an enemy from whatever quarter. This work, therefore, in that portion which may be devoted to Polemics, will only defend the Doctrines, Discipline, and Rights of the Church, on points wherein that hollowed establishment may have been previously attacked.

Communications from all quarters will be thankfully received; but it is to be understood that they must be of a description tending more or less to effect the designs above stated;—articles therefore, which are purely political, literary, or scientific, will not be admissible. Party politicts will be altogether avoided, excepting so far as the indissoluble connexion between Church and State may sometimes render a slight allusion unavoidable. Two or three pages will be open to poetical productions.

The proceedings of religious societies in these Provinces, and in the Parent State, will be briefly recorded; more particularly those of a pre-eminent institutions, to which under the Divine Blessing the Anglo-Canadian Church owes the deepest obligations viz. "the Society for the Propogation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," and "the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge." —The leading religious publications of the day will sometimes pass under review, and the Biography of eminent churchmen will it is hoped, occasionally afford pleasure and profit. Ecclesiastical promotions will be noticed, and in short, any proceedings or events likely to prove interesting to the Members of the Church in general, and to the Clergy in particular.

The first number will contain a short memoir of the life, and labors of the late Lord Bishop of Quebec, the venerable Father of the Anglo-Canadian Church.

All communications to be addressed (free of expense) to the Editor, the Rev. B. B Stevens Chaplain to the Forces, Montreal.

THE POET'S HOME.

An unsubstantial fairy place—
That is fit home for thee.—Wordsworth.

Though the lark is of the sky,
Singeth loud and soareth high,
He, the minstrel of the morn,
Hath his nest beneath the corn.—
Poplars and their kind, may flaunt
Towering in the public haunt;
Violets, deathless in perfume,
Have a hidden place of bloom;
Then should poet choose his home
Underneath a gaudy dome?
He, to bird and flower akin,
Dwell amid the city's din?
Listen Child of Song to me,
I will deck a bower for thee.

Low, and white, yet scarcely seen
Are its walls, for moulding green:
Not a window lets in light,
But through flowers clustering bright;
Not a glance may wander there
But it falls on something fair:—
Garden shrubs, and fairy mound,
Only that no elves are found;
Winding walk, and sheltered nook,
For student grave, and graver book;
Or a bird-like bower, perchance,
Fit for me and romance.
Then, far other scenes shew
Of wide and sun-lit waters seen;
Hills, that in the distance lie,
Blue and yielding as the sky;—
And nearer, closing round the nest,
The home—o'all, the "living crest."
Other friends and monuments,
Ragged, as a guardian beauty,
Like those that did in fable old,
Elysium from the world enfold:

Poet, though such dower be thine,
Deem it not as yet divine.
What shall outward sign avail,
If the answering spirit fail?
What this beauteous dwelling be
If it hold not hearts for thee?—
If thou call its charms thine own,
Yet survey those charms alone?
List again:—companions meet
Thou shalt have in thy retreat.

One of long tried love and truth,
Thine in age, as thine in youth;
One whose locks of partial grey
Whisper somewhat of decay;
Yet whose bright and beaming eye
Tells of more that conceal'd lie:
Then, a second form beyond,
Thine, too, by another bond,
Sportive, tender, graceful, wild,
Scarcely woman, more than child,
One who doth thy heart entwine,
Like the ever-clinging vine;
One to whom thou art a stay,
As the oak, that scarred and grey
Standeth on, and standeth fast,
Strong and stately to the last!

Poet's lot like this hath been,
Such perchance may I have seen;
Or in fancy's fairy land,
Or in truth, and near at hand;—
If in fancy—then forsooth
Fancy had the force of truth;
If again a truth it were
Then was truth as fancy fair:
But whichever it might be,
'Twas a Paradise to me!

Miscellaneous.

PAUL THE PROJECTOR.

Our readers may implicitly rely upon the authenticity of the following narrative; although the individual to whom the events happened, may have good reasons for wishing his full name to be withheld. We will, therefore, be content to call him by the style and title of Paul the Projector.

To go back to the nursery adventures of the unhappy Paul, would scarcely, (whatever discoveries we might make,) repay us for the trouble of the search. And the fact is, that the history of his infancy, like that of many other great men, is involved in almost impenetrable obscurity. Even the anecdotes which were, doubtless, delivered with regard to him by his mother and his nurse, have long been fogotten. At school, however, it is certain that Paul began to display his incurable propensity to projecting. He was constantly making experiments for the invention of a new birdtrap, or a new cross-bow, or some other extraordinary implement, for every boyish purpose under heaven. At every possible game he was practically the worst player in the school: but then, upon the theoretical principles, he had, (as he conceived), formed some very wise notions of his own. Cricket was his peculiar study; it is true, that he could never defend his wicket for a minute; but then he could always suggest some indisputable improvements in the shape of the bat.

As Paul entered upon the career of youth his projecting propensities "grew with his growth, and strengthened with his strength." He never saw a carriage without having some improvement to propose as to its construction, its colour, or its springs: although no wise person, who set the slightest value on his life, would ever trust himself to the guidance of Paul, in any vehicle, for a moment. Moreover, in the "history" and "philosophy" of dancing—for in this age of refinement we must use grand terms upon every occasion—he was a perfect adept; of the sameness and want of inventive genius displayed in our English dances, he bitterly complained: he would even talk of introducing the Pyrrhic dance, the Romaic dance, and a thousand other dances, ancient and modern, with all sorts of steps, from all sorts of places; he had, beside, a magnificent project of making a kind of composite order of dancing out of them all. In the meantime, the common dances which were practised in his youth, were quite beyond him: he never went through a country-dance without a mistake, or performed the evolutions of a reel without being in every body's way.

These are trifling things; but trifling things, as the wise know, not only make up the sum of life, but are the best index of character. Paul proceeded in his career —every art and science supplied him with matter for cogitation, and for a scheme. He laboured at a new style in architecture, sculpture and painting; he wished to improve their principles, and to enlarge their boundaries.

It was fortunate that the reign of alchemy had passed away before the birth of Paul the Projector, otherwise, his existence would assuredly have been wasted in search of the philosopher's stone, or the elixir of life. The time, however, was now arrived, when his various petty projects were either abandoned and forgotten, or concentrated and absorded in vast and splendid schemes of political and moral regeneration; a thousand plans, one after another, crossed his soul, like the meteoric flashes of a northern sky, beautiful and bright—but impalpable, unsubstantial, and fugitive. His friends were naturally anxious for him to apply himself to a particular profession: for it was evident to them, that if the talents which he certainly possessed, were steadily employed upon any single subject, he might raise himself, with comparative ease, to eminence and wealth. But Paul, alas! had other views;—he become a mere drudge, and plod onwards along a beaten track with the common herd! They who gave him such advice might have excellent intentions, but they could comprehend neither the grasp of his intellect, nor the magnitude of his designs.

Paul was an orphan: and among the friends on whom he principally depended was a rich uncle, who had gained his fortune by trade. Now it happened, in the course of time, that the tide of Paul's finances was at its lowest ebb, and that at the same identical period he was in a fever of agitation to commence a most magnificent scheme, which required, at the outset, the moving power of certain funds, which he was unfortunately conscious could not be drawn, by any imaginable device, from his own pocket. He determined, therefore, to make an application, in the first instance, to the said uncle; but Paul felt at the moment, that the most sublime projector who ever schemed himself into poverty, cuts but a sorry figure when he appears in the shape of a petitioner. He, however, introduced himself to his relation, as he sat writing at his desk, and began the conversation as follows:—"My dear uncle, you have often promised to assist me, and I feel assured, from your uniform kindness,"——"Stop, Paul,—no mummery,—I have promised to assist you, and I will, as soon as you prove to me that I can be of real and essential service. What is it that you want?" "You would confer an eternal obligation upon me, if you would just lend me a few hundred pounds." "For what purpose, Paul?" "I have a scheme in my head"——Umph! I suspect that you will not get a farthing from me in furtherance of your scheme; you have had too many schemes in your head,—but what is it?" "I wish to buy a piece of land, for the purpose of forming an establishment somewhat similar to Mr. Owen's at Lanark, where I may introduce a new state of society, and a new system of education." "God bless the boy! How old are you Paul?" "Three & twenty"——"A pretty modest age! and pray how do you expect to subsist in your new establishment?" "Oh, by farming and manufactures, and by disseminating my opinions through the medium of the press." "What do you know of farming?" "Not much." "Of manufactures?" "About as little." "So I thought. You cannot buy land for nothing, Paul." "No, Sir,—not good land; but we wish to get some waste land, and put it into cultivation; so we shall confer a benefit on the country, by adding to the quantity of wholesome food." "Even this point is doubtful, Paul; the time may come when we shall hear of the necessity of throwing lands out of cultivation. But Paul, what capital security do you offer me for the repayment of my money?" "Oh, you might have any share of the profits of the speculation." "Indeed! profits of the speculation! Now listen to me, Paul. A certain loss, or what is equivalent to a certain loss, a loan of money to you, is something; but to be made a partner in one of your speculations, by consenting to have a share in the profits, is nothing more or less than ruin complete and final. The largest fortune upon earth could not stand it; Paul, Paul, let me give you a little wholesome advice, once for all. Be a lawyer, be a parson, be a physician, be anything; only be something. Descend from the clouds, for one moment, and just consider what you are about. Writing is a bad trade, at least so they tell me, You ought to be steadily engaged in some honourable profession, which will not allow your head at any time to go a wool-gathering; else, Paul, you will get connected with some profligate adventurer, who will make a prey and booty of your simple enthusiasm, by stripping you of your fleece, and then leaving you to take care of your carcase. Within a year I suppose you will have schemed yourself into the King's Bench; Paul, I will not hold out a helping hand to your ruin, by lending you a farthing. You have heard my determination; I am busy with my accounts, so good morning to you."

Paul, in whose composition, although there was much which was speculative, was nothing which was dishonest, immediately desisted from his scheme, when he found that he could not obtain the necessary supply of money from his uncle. He therefore changed his plan of operations, and wrote to the then existing administration, proposing a variety of schemes for the employment of the poor, the establishment of colonies, the liquidation of the national debt the eradication of diseases, the prevention of crime, and sundry other projects, equally Philantropic and impracticable. Truth, however, compels the statement, that he met with very little success in his application to the ministers; he never received from them a letter of thanks, a letter even of acknowledgment, or perceived that they had made any use of any of his suggestions.

We are now arrived at another important epoch in the life of Paul the Projector. Paul fell in love; this, perhaps, was the only thing which he ever did, without a scheme. But men can no more scheme themselves into love, than they can reason themselves out of it. Love, too, as has been observed, laughs at all dissimilarities in taste and character; and delights in joining, by links of mutual attachment, persons, with regard to whom there were a thousand reasons why they should never come together. In one respect the love of Paul was fortunate; he inspired the affection which he himself felt. But the parents of her of whom he was enamoured, were rich, plain, honest, straight-forward people, who at first could not regard him without evident suspicion; and the young lady herself was more remarkable for strong native sense, than for high-flown and romantic notions; and the extent of her ambition was to enjoy the comforts and elegancies of life in the regular way: and confine her benevolence and charity to her immediate neighbourhood.

It so happened, however, that, while Paul was uncertain as to the issue of his suit, the anxiety, occasioned by an ardent passion, was a sufficient excitement to his restless spirit; and not only drove all his other projects from his mind, but even seemed to have obliterated them from his memory. Even his uncle had some hopes of him: while the father and mother of his intended bride were agreeably surprised in seeing some-thing like steadiness and sobriety, instead of the visionary absurdities of which they had so often heard.

But alas! this halcyon calm was deceitful and short-lived. The good star of Paul was not destined long to remain in the ascendant. His evil genius, like the devils of old, soon returned, and took possession of him. When security had succeeded to doubt—when he knew that he was loved —his inveterate habit of scheming seized hold of his mind again. One day, at dinner, he shocked his intended mother-in-law beyond description, by stating, that in his family he should wish to introduce a strictly vegetable diet; as he had just discovered, that the use of animal food rendered the blood gross and impure, instilled a savage ferocity into the human character, and was, in short, the main cause of all the vice and misery under the sun.

This was bad enough, but "worse remained behind." On a fine evening, in July, when the earth was green beneath their feet and the heavens blue and cloudless above them, Paul was enjoying a long and interesting conversation with his mistress, free from the fear of intrusion or interruption. In that evil hour, he gave the reins to the warmth of his imagination and the expansion of his soul; he had heated himself with talking of the depravity and wretchedness which prevail in all existing societies of Europe; and he at length hinted at the formation of a colony, with a few friends, in a remote settlement, where they might carry their own views into execution—where they might realize in actual life the poetic descriptions of Arcadia, and return to the primeval innocence, simplicity, and happiness of mankind. Alas! the forbidden glance with which Orpheus looked back upon the half-regained Eurydice, was not more fatal than this unfortunate suggestion of poor Paul to his betrothed bride. It struck upon his ear like the knell of departing hopes: her countenance fell, and became blank. What! exchange the comfort of a substantial, stone-built tenement; the polished pleasures of an English drawing-room, and the society of old and valued friends, for such a state of exile, as he proposed, considered even at its best, without taking into the account the inconveniences and privations which would probably, and almost inevitably attend it! The very idea —the very probability of such a thing, was infinitely too great a trial of her love, and of her forbearance. She asked him if he was in earnest. "In earnest," repeated the unsuspecting Paul; "certainly, I am in earnest." An altercation ensued; begun in dangerous playfulness, and ending in an irreparable breach. Paul defended his notions: and the young lady overwhelmed them and him with all the artillery of ridicule, and all the readiness of female wit. Paul was piqued; the lady was angry; reproach followed reproach, and on both sides those unkind things were precipitately said, which, although they may be mutually forgiven, always leave behind them an impression and a sting. In the end, the unhappy suitor was discarded forever; and the young lady was congratulated by her friends on her fortunate escape. Thus ended the loves of Paul the Projector.

This disappointment was a grevious blow: and he endeavoured to banish the recollection of it, by devoting himself more entirely than ever to the meditation of his mighty projects. But Paul was poor; his uncle was tried and disgusted with his follies; and the mournful anticipations of that worthy relation seemed about to be fulfilled. Paul was involved in debt, and sometimes, as he was rapt and absorbed in his brightest dreams of reforming the universe, and diffusing plenty and happiness among nations he had never beheld, a single loud, determined rap at the door would at once awaken him from his trance, recall him to a sense of his real situation, and his real wants—until the soul was depressed and sickened by that benumbing anxiety, with which low petty cares, daily and unavoidably distresses, must weigh, at last, upon an ardent and visionary spirit. Often, when he had caught a glimpse of some new project for the improvement of society, and the regeneration of millions, his reverie was disturbed, the charm broken, the illusion destroyed, by the appearance of one stern, importunate creditor, whom he was thoughtlessly defrauding, and perhaps contributing to ruin.

These things, however, could not again and again occur, without at length opening his eyes, and compelling him to perceive the error of his ways. Paul has, therefore, retired upon a small annuity to a remote part of the country, where he weans himself by degrees from the earth and its concerns; where he reflects, with a sigh, that men of the best intentions may become useless and even mischievous, for want of sober views and temperate discretion;—where he laments over the vanity of human projects; and where he declares the utter decay of all his hopes, that the world will ever be better than it is, or that any beneficial change can be effected in the moral, political, or social condition of mankind.

Such is a true account of a few passages of the life of my friend, Paul the Projector.

A CANADIAN CAMPAIGN.

(By a British officer.)

The Garrison of Amherstburg, at the commencement of the war, consisted merely of a part of the first battalion of the 41st regiment, and a single company of artillery. Situated at the head of Lake Erie, and forming the key to our relations with the Western Indians with whom an extensive and interesting trade in furs had so long been established by the North West Company, this post became an object of additional interest to the enemy. With every opportunity of ascertaining the weakness of its defences, and the almost utter impossibility of its obtaining supplies, the fall of Amherstburgh was looked forward to by the Americans as an event which admitted not of doubt. With this view, the division under General Hull, consisting of three thousand, men had been urged forward with all possible despatch to Detroit, a fort established on the river of the same name, and at a distance of eighteen miles beyond Amherstburgh, an attack on which latter place was immediately contemplated. Having collected his boats, and every other necessary preparation, the American general effected his landing three miles above Sandwich, a small town nearly opposite to Detroit, and within view of a corps of observation, which, in conformity with its constructions, retired on his approach. Colonel (now Major-General) St. George, inspecting Field-officer, and then commanding at Amherstburgh, with that spirit and activity by which he was distinguished throughout the war, made every judicious disposition for his reception. The militia were called out and, through the exertions of the various agents of their department, a body of one thousand Indians were soon collected. At a distance of eight miles from Amherstburg, and traversing the high road, is the Duck River, which empties itself into that of the Detroit and is impassable even by cavalry,—save this, and near its mouth, a bridle compound entirely of timber, had been constructed. Seizing at once the advantage of their position, & determining to profit by the delay the enemy must consequently experience, Colonel St. George instantly caused the bridge to be destroyed, and a body of marksmen to be posted among the long grass and bushes which grow on the banks of the river are covered for the purpose of annoying such of the enemy as appeared for its reconstruction. The Queen Charlotte, a vessel of twenty guns, was at the same time anchored at the mouth of the river, for the purpose of keeping them more effectually in check,

On the 9th August, information having been conveyed to Colonel St. George, that a body of the enemy was on the march to cover a quantity of provisions for the use of the garrison at Detroit, Brevet-Major Muir, with a detachment of a hundred and fifty men of the forty-first regiment, and a few companies of militia, received orders to cross the river and occupy Brownstown, a small village on the American shore through which they were expected to pass. On our arrival at this post, we found that their advanced guard had fallen in with, and been defeated by a party of Indians a few hours before, and that the main body had in consequence retired with much precipitation on Detroit.

It was on this occasion that one of those cruel practices, common to the Indian race, fell for the first time beneath the observation of the indignant soldiery. Their horror at the atrocious act was such as might naturally be expected from men, to whose humanity the voice of a suppliant for bad never been used to tender an instinctual appeal. Among the number of those who had fallen in the morning, was a young Shawanee chief, named Logan, killed by almost the last shot fired from the enemy. Speaking the English language with facility, he was known to many of the officers with whom his mild and unassuming nature had rendered him a great favourite, and he was sincerely regretted by all. Shortly after our arrival, the body of the warrior was brought in, and placed in a tent, where it was immediately surrounded by the female relatives. It is customary with the Indians when a man falls in battle, either to fill up the void by an increase occasions in the family by the adoption of a prisoner, or to sacrifice one to his shade. While the howling and lamentation of the women were at their height, two Indians suddenly appeared with a captive, who, in his attempt to extricate himself in the woods in which he had been lost during the affair of the morning had fallen into their hands. He was a finely proportioned young man, and the air of dejection which clouded his brow, gradually gave way to a more cheerful expression, when, on approaching the encampment, he perceived those from whom he expected protection. Several of the men ascended to meet and converse with him, and the poor fellow had apparently banished all feeling of apprehension for his future fate, when an aunt of the deceased issued from the tent, and stole cautiously behind him. She was a tall, stout woman, with a fiend like expression of countenance, and the fires which extreme age had taken from her eye, were for a moment rekindled by the spirit of demoniac vengeance that trembled through her frame. Even at the moment when the mind of the prisoner was most lulled into confidence, and without any previous admonition, the heartless woman drew a tomahawk from beneath her mantle, and buried its point in the skull of her victim. Stunned but not felled by the wound, the unhappy man...his whole countenance expressing horror and despair, grasped at a tree for support; but the blows were repeated so suddenly, and with such violence, that he soon fell panting and convulsed to the earth. Fortunately he was not destined to linger in his agony. The Indians around instantly despatched and scalped him, stripping the body of its clothes, and committing violations on his person which it would be indecent to detail, and in which the consent of Logan bore a principal share. The indignation of the men was excessive; but any attempt to interfere, could they even have foreseen the occurrence in time to render interference effectual, would not only have cost them several lives, but produced the most alarming consequences to our cause. Their displeasure was, however, expressed by their murmurs, and the atrocity of the act became the theme of conversation throughout the camp. At the moment of its perpetration, I had myself approached within a few paces of the group, and became an unwilling spectator of the whole transaction. The wild expression of the sufferer's eye; the supplicating look which spoke through the very distortions of his features; and the agony which seemed to creep through every limb, were such as no time can ever efface from my recollection.

On the morning of the 9th, the wild and distant cry of our Indian scouts gave us to understand that the enemy were in sight. In the course of ten minutes afterwards they appeared issuing from the wood, bounding like wild deer chased by the huntsman, and uttering that peculiar shout which is known among themselves as the scalp-cry. From them we ascertained that a column of the enemy, consisting of eight hundred, cavalry and infantry, were on the march to attack us but that the difficulty of transporting their guns rendered it improbable they could reach our position before night, although then only at a distance of eight miles. It being instantly decided on to meet them, the detachment was speedily under arms, and on its march for Magagga, a small village distant about a league. The road along which we advanced was ankle deep with mud, and the dark forest waving its close woven boughs over our heads, left no egress to the pestilential exhalations arising from the naked and putrid bodies of horses and men, which had been suffered to lie unburied through our feet. The rain which had for some time caused step of the troops interrupted the solitude of the scene, rendered more imposing by the wild appearance of the warriors, whose bodies stained and painted in the most hideous manner, and with the scalps, gilded by us with almost noiseless velocity, without order, and without a chief: some painted white, some black, others half black half red, half black half white, and with their hair plastered in such a way as to resemble the bristling quills of the porcupine, with no other covering than a cloth round the loins, yet armed to the teeth with rifles, tomahawks, war-clubs, spears, bows, arrows, and scalping-knives. Uttering no sound, and intent only on reaching the enemy unperceived, they might have been taken for spectres of the wood, but for the ruthless demons which war had unchained for the punishment and oppression of man.

Having taken up a position at about a quarter of a mile from the enemy's line of defence which we were speedily made, the rustling of the leaves alone breaking on the silence which reigned throughout our line. Following the example of the Indians, the troops threw themselves on the ground to avoid being perceived until within a few yards of the enemy. At the expiration of an hour the report of a single shot echoed throughout the wood; and the shrill war-whoop of the Indians, and the yells of the Indians, followed by a heavy and desultory fire, appraised us that they were engaged. The action then became general along our line, and continued for half an hour, without producing any material advantage: when unluckily, a body of Indians that had been detached to a small wood about five hundred yards distant from our right, were taken by the troops for a corps of the enemy endeavouring to turn their flank. In vain we called out to them that they were our Indians. That fire which should have been directed against the enemy served upon their friends, who, falling into the same error, returned it with equal spirit. The fact was, they had been compelled to retire before a superior force, and were consequently ignorant of the cause of the error of the troops. That order and discipline which would have marked their conduct as a body in a plain, was lost sight of, in a great measure among them, when engaged in a close fire in a wood, where every man, following the example of the enemy, was compelled to shelter his person behind the trees as he could. Closely pressed in front by the enemy, and fired on by our own men in the rear, as was imagined, the troops were at length compelled to yield to circumstance and numbers; the Americans suffering us to retire without molestation from the woods, by which we the same evening regained the Fort of Amherstburg.

This affair, the first that took place since our rupture with America, cost us Lieutenant Sutherland of the 41st Regiment, and about twenty men. The loss of the enemy we subsequently found to have been nearly the same, and principally sustained from the fire of the Indians. From what was then seen of the Americans, perceiving the extreme disadvantage of opposing regular troops to the enemy in the woods. Accustomed to the use of the rifle from his infancy—calling that his measure at which the intricacies of which he is perfectly acquainted and possessing the advantage of a dress which renders him almost undistinguishable to the eye of an European, the American marksman places his opponent on a secondary security into a contest with the English soldier, whose glaring habiliment and accoutrements are objects too conspicuous to be missed while his utter ignorance of a mode of war in which courage and discipline are of no avail, renders the struggle for mastery even more unequal. The different armies to which the right division was opposed during the war consisted of regular and well disciplined troops, but levies of men taken from the forests of Ohio and Kentucky, scarcely inferior as riflemen to the Indians themselves. Dressed in woolen frocks of a grey colour and trained to cover their bodies behind the trees from which they fired, without exposing more of their persons than was absolutely necessary for their aim, they offer led us, on more than one occasion, the most convincing proofs that without the assistance of the Indian warriors, the defence of that part of Upper Canada entrusted to our care, would have been a task of the utmost difficulty and doubt.

Major general Brock having reinforced the garrison of Amherstburgh early in the following week, with the remainder of the 41st regiment, and a few companies of the York Militia, resolved at one bold and decisive stroke to attempt the annihilation of the enemy's power in this Western District. With this view both ears were instantly erected opposite to the fort of Detroit, and the whole of his disposable force marched with the utmost expedition to Sandwich. At day break on the morning of the 16th the troops were embarked in boats and canoes of every description, covered by the flotilla under the command of Captain Hall. Meeting with no opposition, and forming on the beach as they landed, the columns were soon within view of the enemy's works, there occupied in returning the heavy and well directed fire from our batteries. Arrived within a few hundred paces, a position was taken up on an eminence, and the various columns disposed for a general assault. Our whole force consisted of about 1200 men, exclusive of Indians, and a few pieces of light artillery. While awaiting the order to advance, a white flag was suddenly seen waving on the ramparts of the citadel, and in less than two hours the divisions moved forward to take possession of the garrison which had surrendered. Every mind was filled with astonishment at the event which had occurred. Detroit, defended by five and thirty pieces of cannon, and garrisoned by 2000 men, thus falling into our possession without a single shot being fired—without the slightest effort being made on the part of the enemy, or a circumstance to excite surprise, nor was the general satisfaction less, since with its capture not only vanished all immediate apprehensions for the safety of Amherstburg, but an important object has been obtained in the possession of a fortress, from whence every possible obstacle might be thrown to impede the march of a future invading army.

The articles of capitulation having stipulated that the troops composing the garrison of Detroit should be suffered to return to their respective homes on parole, they were accordingly embarked, and sent down the lake to Buffalo, the nearest American post, and opposite to our small fortress of Erie.—Leaving a garrison sufficiently strong to keep the inhabitants in awe, General Brock lost no time in leaving the conquered post, and hastening to Niagara—a command he had only relinquished for the purpose of undertaking an achievement which the public voice pronounced to be the most splendid alone have crowned with such unqualified success.

Thursday, Feb. 8.

The Bill for settling the affairs of the late Bank at Kingston, was read a second time, and after some discussion, was referred to a select committee.

Colonel Reynolds of the committee on the Petition of the inhabitants of the Ridings in the Niagara District, was received and read. On motion of Mr. McBride, it was ordered for a second reading this day three months.

Friday, Feb. 9.

ST. LAWRENCE CANAL BILL.—The discussion, when we entered the House, was with respect to the appointment of Commissioners to superintend the improvement.

Capt. Matthews proposed that they should be nominated by the House, and not by the Executive.

Mr. Hamilton was not inclined to give the Bill his support, unless with a certainty that Lower Canada would join in the undertaking.

Mr. J. Jones said the work was one which would be of benefit to the whole province, and was entitled to the support of the House. Each section of the work, as soon as completed, would become productive, and yield a revenue for the prosecution of the remaining parts of the intended improvement.

Mr. Morris would support the Bill generally, reserving his opinion as to the appointment of Commissioners—he considered it as a great improvement.

Mr. M'Lean spoke in favor of the improvement. The Commissioners, he thought, should be appointed by the Government, because, in the event of their refusal to act if named by the House, or in case of any errors being committed by them, there would be no remedy until the next meeting of the Legislature, and the work would be delayed.

Mr. Beardsley thought the nomination of Commissioners should be made by the House.

Mr. C. Jones considered it only as a question of expediency—the appointment, if made by the House, would leave the Government without any control, and the power of removal, in case of a want of due attention, could not take place till next year.

After some further discussion, Messrs. C. Jones, Morris, and VanKoughnett, were named as Commissioners, and inserted in the Bill.

A Message was received from the Hon. the Legislative Council, informing them that they had passed the Welland Canal Stock Bill, the Cataraqui Bridge Bill, and the repeal of 44th of the late King, with some amendments.

The amendments made to 44th King were read, and on motion of Mr. Perry, were ordered to be read a second time this day three months.

Saturday, Feb. 10.

MARRIAGE BILL—Read third time, passed, and sent to the Legislative Council.

ST. LAWRENCE CANAL BILL—3d reading.

Mr. Bidwell was opposed to the Bill, because the ways and means were not pointed out for the accomplishment of the work. Salt had been mentioned, and a duty on it proposed for that purpose—this he thought was the last article which should be taxed, it was an equally required by the poor, as well as the rich. This was contrary to the spirit of taxation, and though he was desirous that the improvement should be made, yet, under all circumstances, and a regard to the financial concerns of the Country, he felt it to be his duty to vote against the Bill—Lower Canada, he thought, should join in the work, otherwise the benefit would be only partial.

Mr. Fothergill, was not disposed to increase the debt of the Province, by undertaking this work at present—without an alteration in our boundary line, which would give us a port of entry, we should not be able to reap all the benefits of such an undertaking.

Mr. M'Lean was of opinion that the expenses incurred in the transportation of Goods from Lower Canada, from the difficulties in the Navigation, operated as a heavy tax on the people of the Province. The duty on Salt would be less felt, if heavy Goods could be carried up and down the St. Lawrence at less expense. The benefit would be a general one to the whole Province, and he was surprised that it should meet with opposition—the expenses incurred would be met by the revenue arising from the Canals.

On motion of Mr. Perry, the Bill was ordered to be read a 3d time this day 3 months—Yeas 19, Nays 18—Majority against the Bill 1.

THE HIGHWAY BILL—Read second time.

THE DISTRICT COURT BILL—Read third time, and sent to the Legislative Council.

(We were not present during the discussion on these two Bills.)

Monday, Feb. 12.

HIGHWAY BILL—third reading.

Mr. Perry moved that it pass three months hence—he said he disliked the detail of the Bill, as credit was given to purchasers, and the money, when paid, was to be lodged in the Bank.

Mr. Hamilton would prefer that the operation of the Assessment Law, on Lands of non-residents, should first be tried—the present Bill did not meet with his concurrence.

Mr. Lefferty thought that the Bill would work injustice, and he would not vote for it—after five years the land might revert to Government, and a purchaser who would not pay the purchase money, might strip the land of all its valuable timber.

Capt. Matthews was opposed to the Bill, because he thought it would have the effect of destroying confidence in the King's Patents—persons might be employed to purchase lands at a high price, with a view to their reverting to Government.

Mr. Rolph, said that although improvements on the road were desirable, they should not be made by interfering with private rights which ought not to be trespassed upon by the Legislature—the sacrifice of private property would more than overbalance the public good to be derived from such a measure.

The Attorney General, said that the measure was one which had been under consideration for two years, and he believed, met with the concurrence of the majority of the House. The Bill could not be opposed as an injustice, as it only required the actual settlement of lands on the great Highway throughout the Province. The industrious settler would be benefited by it, as it compelled his more wealthy neighbor whose land was unoccupied, to place some person on it, for the purpose of opening and keeping the road in a proper state of repair.

Mr. Bidwell was opposed to the Bill, he thought it unequal in its operation as it tended to tax the worst quality of lands, as high as those of a superior kind.

On the question for the Bill passing.—Yeas 20.—Nays 18—majority 2.

The Bill passed and was sent to the Legislative Council.

THE DISTRICT COURT BILL read 3d. time passed and sent to the Legislative Council.

A Message was received from the Hon. the Legislative Council requesting a conference, on the subject of the improvement of the Navigable waters in the Home and New Castle Districts—and a Committee was appointed.

THE GORE DISTRICT COURT HOUSE BILL—read 2d. time reported as amended—and ordered for 3d. Reading.

A Message was received from the Hon. the Legislative Council informing the House that they had passed the Naturalization law.

RIDEAU CANAL BILL—2d Reading. The Bill was reported and ordered for a 3d Reading.—It authories the occupation of Lands by the Government, through which the Canal may pass, to be paid for at the valuation of a Jury, or by Arbitration.

KETTLE CREEK HARBOR BILL—read 2d time and ordered for 3d Reading—£2,500 to be raised by loan or debentures for the construction of a Harbor at the mouth of Kettle Creek on Lake Erie—Principal and Interest to be repaid by a Tole on Goods and Merchandise passing through the Harbor.—The improvement is considered a desirable one.

Wednesday, Feb. 14.

KETTLE CREEK HARBOR BILL—read 3d time passed and sent to the Legislative Council.

THE BURLINGTON BAY CANAL BILL—was read a second and third time this day, passed, and sent to the Legislative Council. It appropriates £3000 for the completion of the work.

THE ALIEN ESTATE BILL—for securing Titles to Lands derived through Aliens, was passed and sent to the Legislative Council.

An Address was moved by Mr. McLean and carried, praying His Excellency the Lieut. Governor to cause to be opened in the name a more distant day than Saturday next for the prorogation of the House.

Leave of absence was granted to Messrs. Morris, J. Jones, C. Jones, and White, after Saturday next.

Thursday, Feb. 15.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS BILL—passed and sent to the Legislative Council.

EASTERN DISTRICT JAIL AND COURT HOUSE BILL—passed and sent to Legislative Council. The scite of the former buildings is retained in the Bill for the erection of the Jail and Court House.

Doors closed.

On the doors being opened the House resolved itself into a Committee of Supply—reported certain Resolutions and obtained leave to sit again to-morrow.

THE KING'S VISIT TO COVENT GARDEN THEATRE.

London, Friday, Dec. 1.—Much interest was yesterday excited at the intelligence of His Majesty's intention to honour this theatre with his presence. As early as four o'clock the avenues leading to the pit and galleries were crowded with persons anxious to gain admittance, and the rush upon the opening of the doors was tremendous.

On the King's entry at 7 o'clock, the anxiety which had been all along manifested, burst out in long and repeated shouts of applause, and warmest greetings. His Majesty walked with a firm step to the front of the box, and bowed several times to the audience. God save the King was immediately sung by the whole vocal corps, and joined in at the end of every stanza by the audience. No sooner was it finished than an enthusiastic call procured its repetition. The overture then began, and the opera proceeded, with which His Majesty seemed highly delighted, keeping time with his hand during most of the musical pieces, and expressing his approbation of the exertions of the performers. His Majesty, whose correct ear and fine taste in music are well known, has often expressed himself an ardent admirer of Weber's compositions, a proportionate anxiety was of course felt by the performers to do their best in "such a presence," and the Oberon never perhaps went off with greater eclat. We never heard Miss Paton in finer voice; the same stimulus, probably, excited Braham to more than his wonted exertion, and the applauses, in which royalty itself condescended to join most warmly, were commensurate. His Majesty commanded her duet with Madam Vestris to be repeated; and especially applauded her verse in Rule Britannia, which was given with astonishing brilliancy and effect, and excited a strong sensation in the house.

At the conclusion of the Opera an instantaneous call for God save the King took place, and the national anthem was again sung, the audience responding each verse, and standing as before. It was followed by Rule Britannia.

After the fall of the curtain, God save the King was once more repeated, and joined in as before. His Majesty again gracefully bowed to the audience, and retired amidst fresh tokens of public regard.

The King's appearance, we were gratified to observe, indicated most perfect health, and he was in most excellent spirits.

MR. HUME & THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

MR. HUME on the 30th Nov. brought forward a motion on the subject of the Half-pay, which motion produced a long dull speech from the Honourable Gentleman, and an able and animated one from LORD PALMERSTON, who, in acceding to the motion of the Honourable Gentleman, defended what no man, except the Honourable Gentleman, we believe, has ever felt inclined to question—the pure political impartiality of His Royal Highness the Commander in Chief in the regulation of military promotion. The Noble Lord defended with spirit and ability the system which MR HUME specially condemned, and completely succeeded in removing the unsoundness—in fact of that Honourable Gentleman upon all parts of the subject which he had ventured to touch.

But never did MR. HUME miscalculate more wofully than he did upon the effect to be produced by the collection of military biography with which he favored the House—the Hon. Gentleman's motion called up MR. CALCRAFT, who thus expressed himself with regard to the DUKE OF YORK and the regulation of the army, which MR. HUME's motion went to impugn:

"It was only fair that Gentlemen who sat on Opposition benches should, when the opportunity occurred, manifest their readiness to bear testimony to the fair and impartial manner in which His Royal Highness administered his duties in this situation, (Hear, hear.) He, for one, was anxious to express his conviction of the equitable and unbiassed way in which promotion was distributed by the Royal Duke; and he trusted that all Gentlemen, who, sitting on the Opposition benches, had had a similar opportunity with himself of that Noble Personage's impartiality, would come forward with a like expression of their feelings. (Hear.) He spoke on this subject, it was true, not as it regarded any personal experience of his own, but as it respected the treatment certain members of his family had received; treatment than which it was impossible any thing could be more perfectly impartial, or less influenced by political views, or motives of any description. (Hear, hear, hear.) A vast number of individuals holding the same political opinions with himself were in a similar situation, and experienced treatment precisely the same. He repeated, no person could administer the duties of his office in a way more dignified and impartial than the Royal Duke at the head of the Army. (Cheers.) That Noble Personage never stopped to inquire the political views or connexions of the candidates for promotion in his department, but appeared solely influenced in his determination by a regard to the claims of individual merit, and the interests of the public good. (Hear, hear.) The army was conducted as a military, not a political, department, and its illustrious leader never stopped to consider whether an aspirant for promotion wore a buff waistcoat, or one of a different colour. (Hear, hear.) He felt particularly bound to make this declaration, as he had the misfortune, at one period of his life, to adopt a line of conduct, which must have been personally offensive to His Royal Highness. But he (MR. CALCRAFT) had never found his conduct on that occasion make the slightest difference, or interfere in the least degree, with the interests of any portion of his family connexions in the army. Such conduct he considered highly to the credit and honour of His Royal Highness, and he thought it but right to bear this public testimony to his GREAT & ILLUSTRIOUS CHARACTER. (Cheers.) With respect to the species of promotion complained of by the Hon. Member for Montrose, he was of opinion the expense incident to it were more than counterbalanced by the public advantage which might be expected to result from its adoption. It was impossible to keep up an efficient standing army in a state calculated for active service without an adequate promotion in time of peace."

This was the opinion of a Whig civilian—now, let us hear that of a Whig soldier—SIR ROSALD FERGUSSON!—

"SIR ROSALD said, no public officer, possessing the control of a high and important department, like that of the Army, had ever managed his department, and discharged the duties of his office, with greater fairness and impartiality, than His Royal Highness the DUKE OF YORK. (Cheers.) Among Hon. Gentlemen who occupied the benches where he (SIR R. FERGUSSON) had hitherto sat, and where it was probable it might still be his unfortune to sit during the remainder of his political career, he thought there could be but one (and that a favourable) opinion of the merits and services of His Royal Highness."

It is highly gratifying to see this sort of praise elicited from quarters in which, if there were any fault to find, other Honourable Members would be just as glad as MR. HUME to pick holes. The motion, however, turned out to be one of what are now called MR. HENRY blunderbusses—noisy explosions from an ugly mouth—which universally recoil upon the Honourable Gentleman who fires them.—John Bull.

Charles Bonaparte, (nephew of the late Emperor Napoleon, and eldest son of Lucien Bonaparte,) recently arrived in this country from New York, presented himself before the proper Authorities on Friday last, for the purpose of conforming to the Rules and Regulations of the Alien Act. On calling at the office he delivered his card to the person in attendance—Charles Bonaparte, Prince of Monsignano, Holding's Hotel, Dover-street. He is a very interesting and gentlemanly young man, 23 years of age, dark hair, dark and penetrating eyes, with a very fine intelligent countenance, stout in person, in stature about five feet seven inches, of an elegant and easy deportment, and without the least tincture of affectation; is perfectly affable and communicative in conversation. He is perfect master of the English language, which he speaks fluently, and appears to give it the preference, as when addressed in any other, he answered in English; this, however, he might have deemed (on the occasion) a point of etiquette. He was dressed in a blue coat, fancy vest, dark trowsers and boots and unattended. He is stouter than his uncle Napoleon was in the early part of his life, and taller, but his countenance bears a very marked resemblance to the portraits of the Ex-Emperor when about forty years of age, a handsome likeness, but a very striking one. There are certain questions necessary to be answered by foreigners arriving in this country, amongst others, whether the party has been in England before? On this question being put to the Prince, he answered he had, but as a prisoner, at least such was the impression upon his mind. This, however, was not the case; his father, Lucien Bonaparte, requested and obtained permission of the British Government to take up his abode in England, which he did in 1810, and with his family resided here for some time, during the very zenith of his brother Napoleon's power. After the Prince's requesting and being presented with the address of the Netherlands, Austrian, Bavarian, and Sardinian Ambassadors, he still signed the books at the office, expressing his intention of quitting England for Ostend, via Dover, on his way to Italy, where he is going to join his family. The following is the description taken in his declaration at the Alien Office:—"Native of Rome, aged 23, complexion dark, hair dark, eyes dark, height five feet seven and a half inches, nose Grecian: known to Messrs. Cropper and Benson, Liverpool.

FROM THE

SUPPLEMENT TO THE ALBION.

New-York, Monday, February 5.

The packet ships Leeds and Canada have arrived from Liverpool with London papers to 1st Jan.

We lament to state, that a great alteration has taken place in the health of His Royal Highness the Duke of York, and who has probably ere this paid the debt of nature.

We have given copious extracts from our papers below. There is no danger of any war growing out of the affairs of Portugal. The vapouring of Chateaubriand and his adherents in the French Parliament is of very little importance, as is proved by the immense majority with which the Ministers carried the address. The assurances, too, of the French Ministers that England acted by and with the advice and consent of the powers of Europe, is conclusive evidence of their pacific feelings. Chateaubriand was one of the chief promoters of the invasion of Spain in 1823, and therefore feels a little nettled at some of the remarks in Mr. Canning's Speech—which was to be expected. We repeat, then, that there is nothing in the late news to authorize any apprehension of a general war.

The Duke of York, at the last dates, was dangerously ill. The sacrament was administered to him by the Bishop of London, on the 23th of December.

The Austrian Observer states expressly that the Infant Don Miguel had not refused to take the oath to the new constitution of Portugal.

M. Poietica, (late Russian Minister to the United States,) has been appointed by the Emperor of Russia, to the station of Inspector of the civil establishments in the Government of St. Petersburgh.

The New-York Packet ship Canada, was seized at Liverpool, by the officers of the Customs, in consequence of having on board 70 hogsheads purporting to be filled with Quercitron bark, but in reality filled with tobacco and snuff. Jeremiah Platt, the consignee of the hogsheads, was taken into the Liverpool Custody, and proceeded against and fined £100.

Several outrages have been committed by the turn-out spinners at Oldham. The injury done to the works and workmen was considerable.

The converts from Catholicism to Protestantism are getting to be very numerous. Some times they amount to 5 or 6 in a day. In Act. On calling at the office he delivered his card to the person in attendance—Charles Bonaparte, Prince of Monsignano, Holding's Hotel, Dover-street. He is a very interesting and gentlemanly young man, 23 years of age, dark hair, dark and penetrating eyes, with a very fine intelligent countenance, stout in person, in stature about five feet seven inches, of an elegant and easy deportment, and without the least tincture of affectation; is perfectly affable and communicative in conversation. Dublin, Dec. 19.—It would be difficult to describe the joy with which the intelligence of the speedy arrival of our troops has been received by the public.

"The gloom and despondency which had been hanging over all, for the last fortnight, have at once dispersed, and hope and confidence have revived, as if by magic.

"Her Royal Highness, the Infanta Regent, the Ministry and the Chambers, are all equally warm in the expression of their gratitude to His Majesty—not only for His Majesty's ready acknowledgment of the obligations of Treaty, but for the extraordinary promptitude with which effectual assistance has followed that acknowledgment.

"The King's Message to the two Houses of Parliament was communicated to the Chambers this morning, and received with the greatest enthusiasm.

"The occupation of the forts at the entrance of the Tagus, by the British Marines, has been readily agreed to by the Portuguese Government, and will be carried into effect on Thursday or Friday.

"Dec. 25.—The Pyramus is the only vessel of the expedition that has yet arrived; but it is said that there are four large ships now in the offing, completely becalmed."

CITY, 2 o'clock.—The Funds have improved materially this morning, in consequence of the arrival of the Sir Edward Banks steamer, at Portsmouth, from Lisbon, which left on the evening of the 28th. The accounts said to be brought by her are extremely favorable. A part of our Troops had already landed, and two men of war were entering the harbor at the time the Edward Banks was leaving the Tagus.

The first price of Consols was 86 3-8 1-8; the nearest quotations is, at present, 81. Exchequer bills are 19 20 pm.

The Foreign Securities are also much better—the last transactions are few. Mexican bonds are 66 ex-dividend; Colombian 85, Peruvian 32 35, Spanish 12 3-4 13 1-4, Greek 15, ex-dividend. Most of the Shares also keep their prices. Anglo Mexican 2 1-2, 2½ discount. New United, 4½ to 4⅝ discount; Colombian £17, buyers, par shares.

An express has arrived from Paris. The three per cents closed, on Saturday evening, at 88f. 15.

GENERAL ORDER.

Horse Guards Dec. 27, 1826.

"His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief having submitted to the King, that His Majesty may be pleased to take into his consideration the situation of claims of a very numerous class of officers of the army, the old lieutenants, who are unable to purchase promotion, and whose prospect of advancement may, in many instances, be still very remote; and being desirous of giving effect to some arrangement by which deserving individuals shall be rewarded or relieved, without entailing such charge upon the public as should render the measure objectionable, His Majesty has been graciously pleased to command,

"That the officers actually serving upon full pay in Regiments of the line, whose commissions are dated in or previous to the year 1811, shall be promoted, at their option to the unattached rank of Captain, and placed upon the old rate of half pay of that rank, viz. five shillings per diem; and

"That they shall be replaced by lieutenants from the half-pay list who are in receipt of four shillings per diem.

"That the widows of the lieutenants so promoted shall be admitted to the pensions of captains' widows.

"That the officers so promoted shall be eligible for employment on full pay as captains, according to the means which actual vacancies arising from death, augmentation, &c. may offer.

"That in order to extend the advantage to those who are seniors of their rank in the several regiments, without depriving them of their better prospect of promotion, these, and those only, shall, in the event of companies becoming vacant without purchase within two years from their acceptance of the promotion to the unattached rank, be appointed to them, from the half-pay, in preference to the next senior lieutenant, who, in consequence of the former's acceptance of promotion under this arrangement, would have become the senior serving with the regiment.

"That in order to offer greater facility to a Captain on the old rate of half-pay to return to full pay, he shall be at liberty to do so, by paying a difference to the captain on full pay, who may be disposed to retire on the lesser rate. The difference in such case to be fixed at £300 instead of £511 to make up for the difference between the old and the new rate of half-pay.

"That a further facility shall be afforded to old officers who have been promoted to the unattached rank of Captain on the old rate of half-pay, by declaring them eligible to be removed to the full pay of vacancies by purchase, where the candidates in regimental succession may have no claims to such promotion. The young lieutenant shall then have the option of purchasing the unattached company (on account of the officer selling the regimental company) provided such young candidate shall be senior for purchase in his own regiment and, and shall have completed two years effective regimental service as subaltern.

"That the young officer, so promoted, shall then pay the increased difference (£300) to get on full pay, the Captain with whom he exchanges taking his place on the old rate of half-pay.

"The Lieutenants of and previous to, the year 1811, actually serving on full pay in regiments, who may be desirous of availing themselves of the provisions of this arrangement, will communicate the same through the commanding officers of their respective regiments, or depots, to the Commander-in-Chief's Military Secretary.

"By His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief's Command.

"H. TORRENS, Adjutant-General."

DEAF AND DUMB.—Dr. Newbourg, of Brussels, has just obtained complete success in his operations on five individuals, viz: Charles Destree, aged 11; Louis Delsorge, aged 19, and Barbe, Jean, and Henry DeLaloy, aged 18, 16, and 15 years respectively. On the 22d Nov. he had the honor to present one of them to his Majesty, and having been since invited by the provincial Medical Commission at Brussels, to present these individuals at their meeting, on Friday last, he went there with the unfortunate young people on whom he had bestowed his care. The members of the commission examined them all respectively, and were convinced of the goodness of the operation performed by Dr. Newbourg, and the cannulon proved, that they have had acquired hearing and speech, of which they had been destitute from their birth. Dr. de Newbourg shewed the instrument with which he performed the operation, and by the explanation of the parts operated upon, he proved that the cure would be durable.—Brussels Paper.

The Lady of the Lake.—This little barque, so well known upon the lake during the late war, has met a most disastrous fate. She left Niagara in a gale, on the 7th of December, for Oswego, and has not since been heard of. The Rochester Telegraph says there is no longer any reason to hope for her safety. All on board must have perished. The passengers were a lady from Oswego, her two children, sister and father. The crew consisted of Capt. John Rogers and three hands.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1827.

We have copied from the Supplement to the Albion, the latest items of English and Foreign news.

Most of our readers, we think, will be disappointed to hear that the Bill for the improvement of the Navigation of the St. Lawrence has been lost in the House of Assembly. We must confess, after the general approbation it appeared to meet with on its introduction, that we are a good deal surprised at its failure. On the question for reading the Bill this day three months, on motion of Mr. Perry, the Yeas and Nays were as follows:

YEAS.—Messrs. Atkinson, Baby, Beardsley, Bidwell, Fothergill, Hamilton, Hornor, Lefferty, Lyons, Matthews, M'Call, McDonald, Perry, Peterson, Randall, Rolph, Thomson Wlah, and White,—19.

NAYS.—Messrs. Attorney General, Boulby, Burke, Cameron, Clark, Coleman, Crysler, Gordon, Ingersoll, C. Jones, D. Jones, J. Jones, McBride, McDonell, McLean, Morris, Thompson and Vankoughnet.—18.

On Sunday last at about 12 o'clock, the Government House was discovered to be on Fire, and on the alarm being given, the inhabitants of the Town hurried to the spot. The Fire Company under the command of its Captain, Thomas Carfrae, Jr. very promptly brought up the new Fire Engine. Fortunately the flames were prevented from extending their ravages by the timely exertions of some persons who happened to be near the place when the fire was first discovered.. had they made any progress the preservation of the building would have been extremely doubtful, as the wind was rather high at the time. The exertion of the Fire Company on this occasion is the best proof, how valuable their services would be, in the event of their Townsmen being visited by the most dreadful of all calamities.

The following remarks are taken from a late Edition of Blackstone's Commentaries. They apply so directly to the Felon's Counsel Bill, which has been under discussion during the present Session of Parliament, that we are induced to give them a place.

The Edition we refer to, has been received in the Country since the debate in the House of Assembly on the subject:

"The rule (that no Counsel shall be allowed a prisoner on his trial, &c.) extends to all felonies, but is limited to addressing the Jury, it being now, I believe, considered that the prisoner has a right to the assistance of counsel for every other purpose; certainly, in practice he has it without asking any permission of the Court. With great deference to the author, it seems very questionable whether, upon the whole, any alteration of the rule as now limited would not be rather prejudicial, than advantageous to the prisoner. At present, if the case be simple or unimportant, the counsel for the Crown commonly abstains entirely from addressing the Jury; and in all cases where he thinks it necessary to address them, his own feelings on the interposition of the Judge (seldom if ever necessary) limit him strictly to a bare exposition of the evidence which he intends to produce; he aggravates nothing unfavorable, he omits nothing favorable, to the prisoner, and he abstains from all comment or appeal to the passions. It is obvious that this dispassionate and candid mode of address could not, in the nature of things, long be preserved, if the counsel had to anticipate an answer in which every exertion of sophistry and eloquence would be deemed within the line of duty—and as the prosecutor in a vast majority of instances must have the strongest case, the fair inference, assuming an equality of talent and industry will be, that this counsel would in general produce the stronger impression on the Jury. But the change which must take place in the summing up of the Judge, would be of the most serious prejudice to the prisoner—at present, nothing having been suggested for him, it is the Judge's part, a part in general most cheerfully and ably sustained, to suggest all the favorable constructions which can be put on the facts. But if a defence had been already made, it must have been made to a clear case or a doubtful one—a really doubtful one needs no advocate with an English Jury; and to a clear one, the defence must be founded in fallacy. Now, it would become the duty of the Judge to detect and lay open that fallacy to the Jury, and thus, in spite of himself, his superior skill, accuracy, and authority, would be arrayed against the prisoner. We well know too, what is the effect on the mind of detecting a single fallacy by which we have been led astray—a suspicion is immediately thrown upon the whole cause which it was used to support. I believe the experience of other countries, in which counsel are allowed to address Juries on behalf of prisoners, fully warrants this reasoning; at the same time, I am well aware of a growing feeling, and most respectable opinions against the present practice; and it is so important, that not only real, but seeming hardships should be removed from the administration of justice, that it seems desirable to alter the present practice, if it can be done without sacrificing the prisoners interests or those of justice. If I might suggest the principle on which an alteration might be made, it would not be that of admitting the prisoner's counsel to plead for him, but the taking from the prosecutor his opening address, and making the whole a mere examination of evidence. By this rule, both sides would be placed on an equal footing; time would be saved, and the counsel would be compelled to a very careful and judicious examination of the witnesses, in order to lay the facts intelligibly before the Jury—at the same time, the Judge furnished beforehand with the depositions, would be fully able to supply any defects in the course of his summing up. If to this rule it be objected that some cases, which are to be proved by a long and minute chain of evidence, cannot be made intelligible to a Jury, without a prefatory statement and application; in such cases, I should be inclined to admit, that justice required an address to the Jury on those facts, in behalf of the prisoner, each minute fact being perhaps capable of two bearings, and varying in consequence in its application, ought not to be presented to the Jury only in one way—and the prisoner is no more to be compelled to take the Judge for his advocate, than he is to be debarred from his challenge to Jurors, of whom he may have an unfavorable opinion. This suggests a modification of the present practice; the rule might be to have no speech on either side. The exception might be left at the option of the prosecutors counsel, upon condition that if he thought his evidence required to be stated and applied, the prisoner's counsel should be entitled to address the Jury also."

Shocking Accident.—The following is the best report we can procure of the casualty which happened in the Lower Town on Tuesday; we are indebted for it to a Correspondent:—

On Tuesday afternoon, about four o'clock, three sailors, who had been out shooting in the morning, went into the Three Crowns public-house in the Lower Town, where two other sailors, named Wm. Bird and John Ward, were sitting, playing at cards. They had been drinking a little, and one of their guns had been previously discharged by the landlord of another public-house where they had taken some liquor. On entering the Three Crowns they began to amuse themselves by fencing with their muskets, and while so engaged, one of them named John Douglas, jocosely said to the two men who were playing at cards, "I'll shoot ye." Bird replied, "Do, but don't shoot me first." Douglas, however, did not then pull the trigger of the piece, which was the unloaded one, but entered into some further general conversation, in the course of which he put the gun down.—It was unfortunately removed, and a loaded gun placed in its stead. This gun Douglas afterwards took up, and, unaware of the exchange, presented it at Bird, fired, and lodged part of its contents in his forehead. It was heavily charged with duck shot, and some of the shot glancing along Ward's left temple, also wounded him in the eye so severely, as to deprive him of the use of it. Douglas, on discharging the musket and finding it was loaded, exclaimed, "Good God! what have I done!" and ran out of the house for medical aid. He speedily returned with Dr. Bernard Murray, who inspected the wounded men, and having obtained the assistance of Dr. Caldwell, made the necessary surgical applications. Douglas meanwhile left the house, and has not since been heard of; the two other men were taken into custody the same evening.—Quebec Official Gazette.

We learn that Douglas surrendered himself on Thursday night, and is now, with the two other men, out on bail. The wounded men are proceeding to convalescence as speedily as can be expected.—Mercury.

EXTRAORDINARY.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY FEBRUARY 17, 1827.

By Authority,

York, U. C. Saturday Feb. 17, 1827.

At Three o'clock this day, His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor being seated on the Throne, in the Legislative Council Chamber and the House of Assembly being present, His Excellency was pleased to Prorogue the present Session of Parliament with the following,

SPEECH.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

In closing the present Session, I have much pleasure in observing the several objects of public interest, to which you have directed your attention.

The last few years have been happily distinguished from the preceding, by that spirit of enterprise in public improvements, which the increasing intelligence and number of our population have naturally produced. I am sensible how much of your time has been necessarily given to deliberations upon matters of this nature, and I most sincerely trust, that the aid which you have so liberally applied to the several public works now in progress connected with Navigation, may produce that return of benefit to the Province, which is now expected from them. I feel the responsibility which you have assumed, in thus giving so great additional support to the Welland Canal Company, but I am convinced that you have seen the necessity, and I very cheerfully share with you that responsibility.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I thank you in His Majesty's name for the Supplies granted for the Civil Service of the Province.

You may be assured that considering how small our Revenue is, in proportion to the many objects which in a Country so new and extensive, press for the assistance of the Legislature, I have ever felt it to be my duty, to guard strictly against any unnecessary augmentation in the expenditure of the Government, and so long as a just economy is observed, I am confident I shall continue to receive from you the support necessary for the Public Service.

Honorable Gentlemen and Gentlemen,

The Bills which you have passed for the relief of persons requiring to be Naturalized, and for confirming titles to real Estate, are necessarily reserved for His Majesty's consideration.

If among that portion of the people for whose relief alone these measures are intended, there are any who do not readily perceive and thankfully acknowledge, the unremitted efforts of the Government for their security, it ought to be sufficient for them to know, that if they do not require the relief intended by these Acts, none of their provisions can affect them; and that if they do, the want of any other remedy in some cases, and their own omission in others, to comply with the requisitions of the only Statute under which they could be Naturalized, will be repaired by the measures you have passed, in the manner best calculated for their security.

The powers and facilities provided by the Act which you have passed, in relation to the projected Rideau Canal, will, I doubt not, be entirely satisfactory to His Majesty's Government.

I trust that in the interval which may elapse before you are again convened, this Province will continue to be favored with the abundant blessings which have long distinguished it. When you return to your several Counties, your presence and exertions may be of much use, in giving a right direction to that enterprize and intelligence, which it is most satisfactory to see increasing with the growth of the Colony; and it is my earnest hope, that each succeeding Session may add a new impulse to the prosperity of Upper Canada, and strengthen the claims of the Legislature, to the gratitude and confidence of its inhabitants.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1827.

BY AUTHORITY.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
York, 23, February, 1827.

HIS EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR has been pleased to appoint, the Rev. John Wenham and Charles Jones Esquire, Trustees for the Johnstown District School.

To His EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

May it Please Your Excellency.

WE His Majesty's Dutiful and Loyal subjects, the undersigned, inhabitants of the Eastern District, beg leave most respectfully to address your Excellency on a subject which cannot but be extremely interesting to our fellow subjects throughout the Province.

We have always considered it the undoubted right of British Subjects to approach their Sovereign or His Representative, and to express, in respectful terms, their opinions of public men and measures, and we have felt it a particular duty to pay attention to the measures and conduct of our Representatives, entertaining no doubt of our Right, fully to canvass their proceedings and as freely to express our opinions of them.

Possessing these feelings and impressions on the subject, we were not surprised to observe our fellow subjects in other Districts of the Province exercising that right in their several addresses to your Excellency, during your last visit to the Eastern part of the Province; but we must confess we were utterly astonished to observe in the reply of the House of Assembly, to your Excellency's Speech at the opening of present Session of the Legislature, a most unusual, and as we presume to call it, ungracious reproach to your Excellency for having received addresses conveying the sentiments and opinions of their Subscribers, as to the conduct of a certain portion of their Representatives.

We therefore protest against the doctrine attempted to be established by the House of Assembly, that the people of this Province are not at liberty to express to your Excellency, in such language as they may consider most fit, their opinions of the measures of their Representatives, or that your Excellency shall not be at liberty to receive addresses couched in other terms, than those which may be palatable or acceptable to the House of Assembly, or any portion of its members.

We beg to assure your Excellency, that we are duly sensible of the weight which the House of Assembly ought to hold in the Government of the Province, and shall always desire to treat that honorable House with every possible respect, but while we entertain these feelings, we would desire to see our Representatives, as a Body, deserve the good opinion of their Constituents, by their zeal and attention to the best interests of the Province, rather than by any attempts to surpress the expression of public opinion.

We beg leave to renew to your Excellency the assurance formerly given, of our affection to His Majesty's Person and Government, and to express our earnest hopes that your Excellency may long continue to Administer the Government of this Province, and promote, as zealously as your Excellency has invariably done, its true Interests.

Cornwall, 25, January, 1827

{Address Signed by JOSEPH ANDERSON and Ninety Eight other persons.}

To which His Excellency was pleased to direct the following Reply to be given:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
YORK, 21 FEB. 1827.

Sir,

The Address of the Inhabitants of the Eastern District has been duly submitted to the Lieutenant Governor, and I have been commanded by His Excellency to request, that you will assure the Signers of that Address, that His Excellency is much gratified by the renewed assurances of their affection to His Majesty's Person and Government, and that His Excellency cannot but set a high value upon the sentiments which they have been pleased to express, with respect to the measures He has hitherto pursued.

The Lieutenant Governor feels that He need scarcely again assure the Signers of this Address, that the satisfaction He derived from His last visit to their District was much heightened, by the expression of a generous and loyal feeling, with which His arrival there was welcomed.

The right inherent in the People to convey in a constitutional manners upon such occasions, or upon any other, their sentiments upon public measures cannot be doubted; and His Excellency feels assured that it must be equally matter of regret to the people, as it is to the Government, when in the exercise of this right a necessity is thought to exist, for speaking otherwise than with approbation of either branch of the Legislature.

I have the Honor to be,
Sir,
Your most Obedient
Humble Servant,
G. HILLIER.

To
JOSEPH ANDERSON, Esquire.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said CROWN Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. P. MAITLAND,
Lieut.-Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade, We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, t shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commissi n under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our farther Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. £50 Reward.

HIS Excellency the Lieut. Governor having received a communication from His Excellency the Governor of the State of New York, by which it appears that William Morgan, who some years ago exercised the calling of a Brewer in this place, and who has subsequently resided at Canandaigua, in the State of New York, was some time in the last year conveyed by force from that place and is supposed to be forcibly detained under false petences in some part of this Province, any person who may be able to afford information respecting the said William Morgan, shall, upon communicating the same to the Private Secretary of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, receive the reward above offered.

Government House, 31*st January*, 1827.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND K. C. B. LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein—&c. &c. &c.

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS a house in the township of Markham in the occupation of Mr. JOHN LARGE, was consumed by fire on the Morning of the seventeenth day of August last between one and two o'clock, and there is reason to apprehend that the same did not happen accidentally, but through the wicked agency of some incendiary.

AND WHEREAS a Reward has been offered by the said JOHN LARGE for the discovery of the offender—NOW KNOW YE That a Free Pardon will be extended to any person not being the actual incendiary or the immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the Person or persons guilty of such crime. Given under my hand &c.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OFFICE, York 7th February, 1827.

NOTICE is hereby given, by order of His EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR in Council, that unless John Bowman, late a private Soldier in the Glengary Light Infantry Regiment, the Original Locatee of Lot number seven, Concession C. Township of Murray, in the District of New Castle, do shew cause within six Months from this date, why the Location should not be rescinded, the Lot will be Granted to William M. Bullock, of Murray, aforesaid, Gentleman.

JOHN SMALL,
C. E. C.

38–6m.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be paya ble annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to an Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

STANZAS

Addressed to the British troops when on their march for embarkation to Portugal, Dec. 14, 1826.

By Miss Anna Maria Porter.

A blessing on your banners high!
A blessing on your swords!—
So firm ye tread while marching by,
Ye look Creation's lords!
Ye look the men Spain ought to fear;
True sons of Freedom all;
Who, when their brothers cry, they hear,
Start instant at the call.

Though some are from the peasant's cot,
And some from lordly dome,
From lowly life, or shelter'd lot,
Yet all have left a home!
And all of that free home will think,
As on they rush to save,
In brave relief they cannot shrink
Before a Bigot's slave.

And if ye struggle for the right,
In God's protecting name,
What boots it though the mortal fight
May gain ye nought but fame?
For if ye win—or if ye lose,
Where laurels wave not high,
The Christian palm more nobly strews
A field where heroes die.

And to your bloody bed shall bands
From earth's far regions come,
To build with pure and patriot hands
Your honor's lofty tomb;
And mothers o'er such sons shall weep
No tears of frenzied woe;
But tears that bind the laurels they steep,
Embalming where they flow.

On, then! with banner and with brand!
In pomp of gallant show,
Ye warriors of my own dear land!
I bless ye as ye go.
Your smile bids in my soul rejoice,
Like glory's breath of flame;
For glory past his Prophet-voice,
And tells of future fame.

Go! pour that music's rousing air
The hills of Spain among,
And every echo wakes there,
Shall be proud memory's song!—
Go! triumph o'er her mountain holds;
There bid your banner's crests;
The lion on their turrets fold,
The cross within your breasts!

Miscellaneous.

JACK NORAN'S FOLLY.

Do you see the light wreath of smoke that rises from below that wooded promontory overhanging the sea? It is not as you would fancy, some fisherman caulking his boat, or some idle boys roasting periwinkles on the beach of the little sunny bay. It is a human habitation, ay, and one of the most ingenious and delightful ever achieved by human energy and industry.

You have now a full view of Jack Noran's Folly, as it is called by some who do not know better, while a sagacious friend of mine says Jack is the only man who ever found the philosopher's stone.

Where rises that neat, nay elegant cottage, with its trellissed verandahs, and chimneys half concealed by ivy, a few years ago stood a barren and shapeless mass of rock, against which the waves murmured and broke, almost half way up the present garden, where now may be heard the busy hum of Jack Noran's bees. The spot was a mere slip of rocks and sand, excluded by its worthlessness from the grounds of two noble proprietors, whose lofty and wooded promontories sheltered it on either side, and gave it an air of exquisite seclusion and repose.

Jack was born and bred in the neighbourhood, and had sat on these rocks when a boy; and often in after life, as his gallant bark skimmed along the coast of his native country, he had fancied how nicely a cottage would stand in that snug nook, were there level to put one down. Jack, in the mean time, traversed the wide world, a bold and enterprising sailor; was always in luck when there were blows going, but seldom, or never, when prize-money followed.

As long as Jack was heartwhole, this troubled him little; but he fell in love, according to the sailor's immemorial custom, and kept as bad a reckoning as usual, for the pretty Marion had not a shilling in the world. Jack was now, however, a lieutenant; and in the simplicity of his heart, would, on the strenght of that imposing character, have married immediately; but Marion had luckily prudence for both. "Jack," said she, "I love you too well to marry you at present, but we can afford to wait; and sail where you may, you know I will never marry any one else. I do not bargain for a coach and six," added she playfully, "or a service of plate, but a house of my own I should like; and when you can find me one, Jack, come and claim me."

A house of his own! Jack, in the natural course of things, was as likely to have a gold mine; but fortune in a good-humoured moment sent a ship with some such precious freight in his way, and our lieutenant became master of £500! he paid dearly for it, however; for the Spanish prisoners rose in the night on their captors, a skirmish ensued, and Jack's right leg was the sacrifice. Half-pay and a pension was now Jack's portion for life, and these he was sure Marion would share with him, provided the precious £300 were invested in a house.

Many decent dwellings might have been had for the money, but Jack was ambitious, and wanted an estate. Though social in the highest degree, he did not wish a neighbour on each side of him; he chose to say like Alexander Selkirk, "I am monarch of all I survey:" and to a sailor, invalided at thirty, the sight and smell of the sea were indispensable. His thoughts immediately recurred to the little cove at F., and without saying a word to Marion, who was on a visit in Ireland, he introduced himself and his wooden leg to both the noblemen, whose debateable land the spot of his affections might have been, and obtained from each a charter of possession, as eagerly coveted as the investiture of a principality.

Jack set to work in divesting his new property of its only production, viz. the huge black rock stone, (fortunately of a soft and easily worked description,) part of which served to rear his dwelling, and the rest, which it might have puzzled him to dispose of, found vent in the repairs of a neighbouring harbour.

No sooner was a level spot procured, than Jack's house began to rear its head; and Jack had not traversed all climates without learning to join true British comfort with something of the picturesque air of a Sicilian or Provençal cottage. There were the substantial walls of the north; with the low spreading roof of the south; the snug chimneys for winter, and the shady verandah for summer, in a spot, where other shade was not of course to be expected. Crowned with Jack's little observatory, and flag-staff for days of rejoicing, the habitation was soon the very beau ideal of a sailor's paradise.

Marion had stipulated for a house, and here it was; but Jack was determined she should have a garden; and as nothing was wanting but space and soil, he forthwith set about usurping the former from his old enemy the rock, that still frowned contemptuously on his labors; and as fast as huge blocks of the aforesaid rock got notice to quit Jack's premises, the rich dilluv earth which crowned the hoary summits, (where a sheep scarce ever scrambled, tempted by the sweet short herbage,) found its way to the kindlier aspect, and humbler level of Jack's embryo garden. The harbour which Jack's stones went to enlarge, made a courteous return of some boat-loads of mud, precious as gold dust to the delighted horticulturist; and cabbages, the sailor's joy, and the first infant offspring of the art in most situations, soon flanked Jack's sunday piece of beef.

Jack loved cabbages—but he was a florist and a lover, and nothing would satisfy him but roses—and they came with another summer. The same auspicious season brought Marion, in utter ignorance of Jack's purchase and creation, back to Scotland, after burying the old relation she went to attend, and inheriting a most seasonable supply of Irish linen, and a fortune (not Irish currency) of £3000! Here was with inexhaustible and mutual surprise for Jack dreamt as little of hard cash, as Marion of house and land. The legacy was duly funded for a rainy day, Jack's El Dorado having sufficed to furnish, as well as erect the family mansion. People may talk as they please of pomp and pageantry; coronations and installations may be pretty things; but I would not have given Jack Noran in his glory, the day when the manned and streamered barge of his late frigate, landed Marion at her own threshold, amid three deafening heart-felt cheers, for the Autocrat of all the Russias.

Marion is just the wife to appreciate Jack, and make him as happy as he deserves. They have just family enough to keep the house merry, without making the penniless lieutenant sigh as he looks at them. One chubby boy shoulders Jack's crutch, and helps him to work in the garden; and Marion has one little maid girl to keep the chickens from the flower beds, and water the roses with her fairy watering-pan.

There, there they are, the whole happy group in the garden! Jack, in shirt-sleeves and hatless, gathering his best of everything, and Marion surrounded by a host of warm-hearted tars come to spend the day. I see their boat lying moored just below, and Jack's flag is up too—Is it for Howe or Duncan, the Nile or Trafalgar? No! I have it now—it is Jack's wedding day, and the old Clorinde's men are come to make merry with him. I have a great mind to go—there will be sailor's fare, and hearty welcome. Nay, we must go, for Jack has spied us out, and ere we can say "Jack Noran," he will be here with his press-gang, and lind us both at the Folly

Shipwreck, and discovery of an Island in the South Seas.—By the accident of the Antelope, East India Packet, being wrecked in 1783, the Pelew Island (18 in number) were discovered. By a similar and late event of the Ship Valetta, a private Indiaman, commanded by John W. Phillips, a new and rich coral rock, in 21 degrees south latitude, 143 degrees east longitude, hitherto unknown, were discovered on the 10th of July, 1825. It appears that the Valetta sailed from Port Jackson, New South Wales, on the 15th of June, in ballast; but on the evening of that day, the wind suddenly shifted, and blew very strong from the north, which occasioned a heavy swell. Breakers and a reef being descried, every exertion to work the ship off was made; but a tremendous swell baffled the most skilful efforts; and she struck so forcibly on the reef, as to occasion the loss of her rudder. With much hazard, an anchor was got out, and many articles thrown overboard, which so effectually floated the vessel, that they successfully brought her into a safe cove, with no less than 4 feet water in her hold. By hauling the ship up, on examination, it was found, that any attempt to repair such material injury, would be nugatory. There being no alternative, she was reluctantly abandoned; and a ship's boat (conjectured the launch) was equipped in the best manner their situation would allow; and, after a sojournment of 92 days on the island, they proceeded on their destination to Calcutta, where they safely arrived. No mention has been made of the inhabitants. There can exist no doubt of the accuracy of surveying in this discovery; Mr. Phillips being an intelligent and eminent gentleman in his profession, a Lieutenant in the Royal Navy, and nephew to the late Rear Admiral Burney, who accompanied Captain Cook on his last two voyages.

PLYMOUTH.—Emigration to New South Wales has been encouraged here by the flattering accounts received from several individuals, natives of this town, who have settled in that rising colony, and have realized handsome fortunes. Last week the Elizabeth sailed from this port with several settlers, among whom was Major Elrington, of this town, who has sold his commission, and received a grant of 2,000 acres, situate about 150 miles from Sydney, which he intends to cultivate.—Devonport Telegraph.

Summary.

Mr. Secretary Canning, and not Mr. Huskisse, as the Commons' Vote erroneously stated, will bring forward the question of the Corn Laws after the recess.

We regret to learn, by the last accounts from India, that Lord Amherst had lost his eldest son, who died at Barrackpore, after a few days illness, on the 3d August, in the 26th year of his age.

A Report is current among the members of the legal profession, that Baron Graham is about to retire from the Bench, and that his probable successor is Mr. Sergeant Vaughan.

The Duke of Wellington, amongst his numerous acquisitions of Portraits of the Sovereigns of Europe, which are placed in his gallery at Apsley House, has eight or ten Portraits of Napoleon Bonaparte, painted by distinguished artists.

The Commercial Treaty between this Country and Mexico was signed on Tuesday. M. Bocafuerte sailed on Wednesday for Mexico—Dec. 24.

At the East India House, on Tuesday, on the motion of Mr. Forbes, a vote of thanks to Lord Combermere, for taking Bhartpore, Dr. Gilchrist stated, that his Lordship's name alone had been of no small advantage to our arms. A superstitious opinion, founded on an alleged prophecy, prevailed in that part of India, that the fortress of Bhurtpore could never be taken until all the waters of its ditch should be swallowed up by an alligator; and it fortunately happened that the corruption by the natives of Lord Combermere's name, turned the scale in favour, which, in their language, signified alligator, or crocodile, and indisposed them to resistance.

The Bath or Imperial State Carriage of the Russian Emperor was sold at Auction on Monday, at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, for 1,000 guineas, and the Throne of His Burmese Majesty was disposed of for 50 guineas.

It is stated that four two-decked first rates are ordered to be laid down in the Royal Dock-yards—two at Pembroke, one at this yard, and one at an Eastern yard. The length of each of these ships is to be 15 feet greater than that of the Caledonia, and it is supposed that in twenty months these immense ships will be ready to be launched.—Plymouth Journal.

His Grace the Duke of Wellington succeeds the late Marquis of Hastings as Constable of the Tower—His Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester succeeds the Duke of Wellington, it is said, as Governor of Plymouth. Sir Lowry Cole succeeds to Lord Hastings' Regiment as the 37th foot—and Sir James Brisbane succeeds Sir Lowry Cole in the 34th Regiment.

The Government do not intend to fill up the Government of Malta—the Government will be vested in a Lieutenant Governor, for which office Major General Frederick Ponsonby, now second in command in the Ionian Islands, has been selected.

Mr. Newman, a stockbroker, forged a stock warrant on Friday week, for £4000, and on finding the crime had been discovered, on Saturday morning went into a field behind his house at Hampstead, and shot himself through the head. He expired instantly. Several additional forgeries to a great extent have been discovered since his death.

A meeting of the Shakspearean Club was held at Stratford-upon-Avon last week. Mr. Matthews, lately elected an honorary member was present, and it is understood he strongly recommended to the club that the sum of £700 or £800, already subscribed towards the erection of a new Theatre there, should be subscribed towards the erection of a Mausoleum in honor of the Poet. A plan of this kind, it may be recollected, was proposed some years ago, but it fell to the ground, notwithstanding His Majesty offered to subscribe £100.

The Cottage System has been introduced in the neighbourhood of Wells, with the happiest results. In consequence of a representation to the Bishop of the Diocese, his Lordship granted one of his best fields, fourteen acres, for a trial of the system: the field was divided into lots of a quarter of an acre each, at the low rent of 10s. per annum; and so pleased was the Bishop with the result, that he has latterly granted three more fields, of ten acres each, for a similar purpose; he has also caused a good road to be made to the cottages, and has adopted every other means of convenience the tenants could require.

The London Gazette announces, that His Majesty has been pleased to confer the honor of knighthood on N. C. Tindal, Esq. Solicitor General.

Female Fashions for January, 1827.

MORNING COSTUME.—A gown made partially high, of sage green gros-de-Naples, bordered with two scalloped flounces, edged with a bias binding of satin. The body is cut plain with a fichu pelerine, forming a sort of a stomacher, which, falling over the shoulders in cleft mancherons, somewhat elevated, gradually terminates in a point under the belt. From the throat over these, falls a Maltese collar of fine India Muslin, with a double quilling round the edge, called tulle. A bonnet of bird-of-paradise yellow, is ornamented with puffs of yellow sarcenet, with bows of slate-coloured gauze next the crown, brocaded with black flowers. This bonnet ties close under the chin, on the left side.

OPERA DRESS.—A dress of ethereal blue, or of pink crepe lisse, ornamented at the border with roulenux, in festoons, and bows of satin: a full wadded roulenx next the shoe, concealing the hem: the body ornamented crosswise, with satin straps. The sleeves very short, and bracelets worn over the gloves, of coral in oval pieces, each surrounded by filagree gold. Hat of black velvet, with superb white plumage; a rich group of feathers appearing in front, and one very long feather drooping over the left shoulder, towards which side the hat is conspicuously inclined. On the side of the hair that this obliquely discovers, are two short marabout feathers placed under the brim of the hat. The mantle, which is of the Venetian form, is of violet or puce-coloured chequered silk, with a light green rice cape, and is lined throughout, according to fancy, with either white satin, or a colour the same as the cloak.—La Belle Assemblee.

THE DUKE OF YORK.

From the Courier of Jan. 1.

We extremely regret to say, that the flattering hopes which were entertained a few weeks since by the Faculty attending His Royal Highness the Duke of York, of the Royal Duke's permanent recovery, have within these few days been destroyed. Till about ten days since, His Royal Highness enjoyed most excellent repose, had a very good appetite, and only appeared to want the means of fresh strength to restore him to perfect health; but, about nine or ten day's since His Royal Highness's appetite failed him, so that he eventually refused solid food, and has since that time remained in a state of the most alarming debility, which, the Doctors had flattering hopes up to last Tuesday, provided they could in three days have restored the tone of his stomach, so as to enable him to take solid sustenance, and we understand made a report to that effect to the King, when His Majesty was in London, but which, we lament to say, they have not been able to accomplish. The Royal Duke enjoyed some refreshing sleep on Thursday for eight hours, but we are sorry to say, that Friday and Saturday were sleepless nights with the Royal patient, and of course the Royal Duke's health, generally, was much worse.

The Dukes of Clarence and Sussex, and the Princess Sophia, during their visit on Saturday, were extremely affected, on beholding the lamentable change which had taken place.

The King, on parting with his afflicted brother, on Friday evening, was evidently greatly distressed.

Sir Herbert Taylor, Military Secretary to His Royal Highness, has slept in Rutland House since last Tuesday.

Mr. M'Gregor and Mr. Simpson, the surgeons, have also slept in the house during the past week.

The dangerous state of the Royal Duke within these few days, has excited the greatest sympathy among all ranks, so much so, that on Friday, Saturday, and yesterday, Arlington-street was thronged with persons who expressed the most anxious solicitude to know the state of the Royal Duke's health. The knocker of the lodge gate was checked yesterday. An Official written notice was given at the lodge to prevent the admission of any person to the house except the Royal Family and official gentlemen.

The Duke of York received a visit yesterday from his Royal Sister the Princess Sophia. Among the distinguished personages who called were Earl Bathurst, Viscount Melville, Mr. Canning, Viscount Strangford, the Duke of Somerset, the Duke of Argyle, the Solicitor General, &c. The Princess Augusta has been prevented from visiting the Royal Duke within the last few days, owing to the fall which her Royal Highness had in her garden at Frogmore.

Yesterday morning at eleven o'clock, Sir Astley Cooper, Henry Halford, Dr. Macmichael, Mr M'Gregor, and Mr. Simpson were in attendance at Rutland House. They remained in consultation about an hour, when Sir Henry Halford and Dr. Macmichael left. Sir Astley Cooper, remained some time after. Sir Henry Halford returned again in about an hour, but remained but a short time.

Sir Astley Cooper was in attendance again at four o'clock. A messenger was sent to the King after the consultation of the medical gentleman, with their report of the state of the Royal Duke.—Their general report to the enquirers was, "His Royal Highness has past another restless night, and is no better."

On the latter part of the past week, the Princesses Feodore and Victoria, called to enquire after the health of His Royal Highness.—The Royal Duke experienced some alleviations of the sufferings yesterday, and on Saturday, by some refreshing sleep at different intervals.

The personal appearance of His Royal Highness has, as must be expected, undergone a great change for the worse, he being amazingly reduced.

[From the Morning papers.]

We lament to say that the report of the state of the Duke of York was nearly the same up to a late hour last night as it was in the morning. His Royal Highness was worse than he was yesterday, but was rather more composed.

The answer to the enquiries made at the Duke of Rutland's yesterday evening was—"His Royal Highness had passed a restless night, and the symptoms of his disorder had not abated."

Arlington-street, half past 1 Monday Morning.

His Royal Highness is much about the same; their is neither a change for the better nor for the worse.

The decidedly serious attack on the Duke of York's health was water on the chest, which, continuing, affected the arteries, and produced dropsy throughout the system. Its subsequent progress, if it could be accurately described, it is not necessary minutely to detail now; suffice it to say, after many changes (all of them for the worse and some considerable pain alleviated) a decided and fatal alteration took place in the Duke's health a week ago—namely on Sunday preceding Christmas Day. These was then an effusion in the head, a result that is fatal to the patient within a limited period. His Royal Highness shrunk to skin and bone. As may be imagined by those who remember his fine and portly person, it would have been difficult to believe in the identity of the individual, except from having constantly witnessed the decay, or from the representations of others. The head dropped forward, and sometimes the Royal Highness could not be aroused to observe those who were about him. The Royal Duke was in this situation, stationed in a large chair in his usual position, when the King visited his Royal brother, and when that agitation on the part of His Majesty occured, the fact of which has already been mentioned in previous publication, but without adequately describing the cause of the King's sudden and excessive grief. The Duke of York as already intimated, is completely worn away—his frame quite attenuated—and such great change, together with the Duke's head leaning forward, the chin on the breast, and the Duke apparently in a state of expiring insensibility, had the most remarkable and sudden effect on His Majesty, so as to induce the King involuntarily to rush out of the room. The first impression on His Majesty was, the extraordinary similarity between the Duke's general appearance and manner, and the looks of his revered father at the moment of dying; and besides the likeness between the late King and the Duke, His Majesty was also fully impressed with the conviction that His Royal Brother was then dying, or dead! Hence the sudden quitting of the Duke's apartment. It was some time before the King could return to the room, although persuaded that the Duke existed—the impression of the similarity between the Duke's general appearance, and the late King's in his last moments, remaining so strongly fixed on His Majesty's mind. The Duke was on this day unable to answer any remarks made by His Majesty. Shortly after the King's departure, the Princess Sophia, who has ever been so unremitting in her attentions to the Duke of York, visited her Royal Brother; and after she had been in the room a short time the Duke told her that "His Majesty had been there," and, the Duke added "His Majesty thinks me worse." This showed that the Duke was conscious, in some degree, of what had passed, without having been able to speak to, or answer the King's conversation. On Thursday, when the King again visited the Duke, His Majesty took with him some part of the soup, of which he requested the Duke to have for merly tasted with pleasure; the King, in his anxiety, personally handed some of it to his Royal Brother, who appears to be sensible of the attention, and slightly tasted of the once favourite soup. During Friday night and Saturday morning, the Duke experienced a good deal of pain; and at five o'clock Mr. M'Gregor, the medical practitioner, who has long attended on His Royal Highness, and who for some time, has slept or stayed very late at the Duke of Rutlands mansion, was called. The Duke was pronounced to have observed to this gentleman—"Is it M'Gregor, when is this pain to have an end?"

We received information last night, that His Royal Highness's Physicians, at a consultation yesterday were of opinion that all radical hopes or the recovery of their patient were at an end; and an Express was sent off in the afternoon, by Sir Astley Cooper, to the King, at Windsor, to inform His Majesty of the melancholy tidings.

A fortnight ago, Sir Astley Cooper, and others of the medical attendants, admitted that they had no hopes of His Royal Highness's recovery, unless they could keep solid food upon his stomach, which it had rejected for some days, and restore its digestive powers. All their efforts to accomplish these objects failed; and the deadly anguish of the Duke, that he never reposed, except when under the influence of powerful narcotics. The quantity of aliment taken by His Royal Highness has been so inconsiderable, that he, day by day, has gradually declined in strength, and on Friday last, so very much he was reduced in size, and so altered in his appearance, that persons who had previously known him would have scarcely recognised His Royal Highness; and, in fact, His Majesty, on Friday, was so shocked at the appearance of His Royal Brother, that he was obliged to be supported from the apartment. During the whole of last evening the neighbourhood of Arlington-street was thronged with nobility, gentry, &c. who evinced the strongest anxiety to learn the state of His Royal Highness's health. At twelve o'clock last night, the gate leading to the Duke of Rutland's house was closed, and the answer at that hour given to inquirers was, "that His Royal Highness was no better, but was gradually getting weaker."

Foreign Intelligence.

A New-Orleans paper says:—"A gentleman who left Bluffton, Alabama, on the 20th December, gives the following information; A packet from England arrived at Kingston on the 19th of December, after a passage of 35 days. It was reported that she brought instructions to the British Admiral on that station, to be prepared to act against the island of Cuba, which it was supposed the British meant, to seize, in case Ferdinand VII. persisted any longer in refusing to indemnify English merchants for piracies on the commerce as well as settle with the government itself for money lent."—N. Y. Statesman.

RUMOURS.

There was a rumour in town yesterday, that government had ordered the naval force on the Philadelphia and New-York stations to be fitted for for sea. We cannot trace the rumour or account for the order, if made. A force may be necessary near the Brazils or for observation in the neighbourhood of Cuba; but we see no prospect of a war with with any European power.—N. Y. Enquirer.

NATURALIZATION BILL,

(Reserved for the Royal Assent.)

WHEREAS many persons have become resident in this Province who have emigrated from the United States of America since the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, and have not been naturalised as British subjects by any act of parliament;—and whereas there are also in this Province many persons who have come from other foreign countries, and many reduced officers and soldiers of foreign corps, late in his Majesty's service, who are not subjects of His Majesty, by birth or naturalisation: And whereas of the persons above described the greater number came to this province intending to become permanent settlers therein, and having been formerly considered to be entitled to all the rights of subjects, have been heretofore permitted to exercise the same, and from the impressions which have formerly very generally prevailed with respect to the civil rights of persons emigrating to this province it would be difficult to provide an adequate remedy by any other than a general provision: And whereas by an act of the parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, passed in the 7th year of his present Majesty's reign, entitled, "An act to amend so much of an act of "the thirty first year of his late Majesty as relates to the election of Members to serve in the legislative assembly of the Province of Upper Canada," it is enacted, that all persons naturalized by any act of the legislative council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, assented to by His Majesty, his heirs or successors, shall thenceforth be and be deemed competent in the law to be summoned to the legislative council of the said Province of Upper Canada, and to vote at the elections of Members to serve in the Legislative Assembly of the said Province, and to be elected at any such election: And whereas it is expedient that all the persons above described, be, at the time of the passing of this said act were resident in this Province should be naturalized in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

Be it therefore enacted, &c, That all persons actually domiciled in this Province on the 26th day of May, 1826, who are not now legally entitled to be regarded as natural-born subjects of His Majesty, but who have inhabited and resided in this Province, or elsewhere within His Majesty's dominions, for the space of seven years next before the twenty-sixth day of May, in the year aforesaid, without having been, during that time, stated residents in any foreign country, or who, being actually domiciled in this Province, on the said 26th day of May, in the year aforesaid, shall continue to reside therein until they shall have been resident inhabitants of the said province, or of some other part of His Majesty's dominions, for the space of seven years continually, without having been during that time, stated residents in any foreign country, and who being of either of the descriptions of persons above mentioned, shall take and subscribe the oath in the Schedule to this act annexed, marked A. or being of those persons who, by the laws of this Province, are allowed to affirm in civil cases, shall make affirmation to the same effect, before some one of the persons duly authorised under the provisions of this act to administer such oath, or take such affirmation, shall be deemed, adjudged, and taken within this Province, to be, and so far as respects their capacity at any time heretofore to take, hold, claim, recover, convey, devise, or transmit any real estate in this Province of any kind or nature whatever, to have been, His Majesty's natural born subjects to all intents, constructions, and purposes, as if they and every of them had been born within this Province.

II.—And be it &c. That every person claiming to be naturalized under this act shall be deemed and taken to have renounced freely and for ever, without reservation, all allegiance to any foreign state or power.

III.—And be it &c. That any person who shall wilfully swear falsely or make false affirmation in regard to any matter to which he may swear or affirm under the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury, and that every such person shall, on conviction thereof, forfeit all the privileges and advantages which he would otherwise have been entitled to under this act; but that the rights of others in respect to estates derived from or held under such persons shall not be thereby prejudiced.

IV.—And be it &c. That from and after the passing of this act it shall be in the power of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to appoint by instrument under his sign manual, from time to time, in each and every District of this Province, such and so many persons as to him may seem meet for administering the oaths and taking the affirmations required by this act, and that each and every of such persons, so to be appointed, shall administer the oath or affirmation by this act required to any person above the age of sixteen years who shall desire to take the said oath or make such affirmation for the purposes intended by this act, and shall keep books of registry, in the beginning of which shall be written the oath and affirmation required by this act, and which shall contain the columns and specifications described in the second Schedule to this act annexed, marked B, and that in the column appointed for that purpose, the person making the oath or affirmation shall set his signature, or, if unable to write, his mark, in the same line of the register in which entry is made of the name and description of such person.

V.—And be it &c. That duplicate books of such registry shall be kept, both of which being originals shall contain the actual signatures or marks of the person Subscribing, and that on or before the thirty-first day of December in each and every year, the person making and keeping the said register shall deposit one of the originals thereof in the office of the clerk of the peace of the District where such persons shall reside, and transmit the other original register for the same year to the secretary of the Province for the time being—and that the said books of registry shall remain and be preserved as public records in the said offices respectively.

VI.—And be it &c. That if from any casualty either of such original registers or any part thereof shall be lost or destroyed, it shall be supplied by a copy taken from the other original of such register remaining in the office of the clerk of the peace, or secretary of the Province, (as the case may be) and attested as a true copy upon the oath of the officer having custody of the same, made before any Commissioner for taking affidavits in the Court of King's Bench, which copy, so attested, shall be regarded to all intents and purposes as the original register.

VII.—And be it further enacted &c. That a copy or extract taken from any book of registry made under the authority of this act of the whole entry made in such register with respect to any person whose name is recorded therein, and certified by the clerk of the peace, or secretary of the Province for the time being, or their respective deputy or deputies, or by the person keeping such register, before the same shall have been transmitted to the clerk of the peace or secretary, shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient evidence of the naturalization of the person therein described.

VIII.—And be it further enacted &c. That no person who, on the said twenty-sixth day of May, in the year of our Lord 1826, had been resident in this Province, or elsewhere in His Majesty's dominions, as aforesaid, for the space of seven years, shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he shall take the oath, or make the affirmation and subscribe the record thereof required by this act, on or before the first day of March, which will be in the year of our Lord 1830; and that no person who, being resident in this Province on the said twenty-sixth day of May, had not then been resident therein, or elsewhere in His Majesty's dominions as aforesaid, for the space of seven years, shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he shall take the oath, or make the affirmation, and subscribe the record thereof required by this act, within the space of three years from the completion of his residence for the space of seven years, as aforesaid: Provided always nevertheless, that if any person, at the time of his being entitled by residence to claim to be naturalized under this act, shall be under the age of sixteen years, it shall and may be lawful for such person to avail himself of the provisions of this act, at any time within three years after his attaining the age of sixteen years.

IX.—And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that if any person not entitled to be regarded as a natural born subject of His Majesty, who on the twenty-sixth day of May one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six was domiciled in this Province, shall die before the period limited by this act for his taking the oath according to the provisions thereof, such person shall be nevertheless deemed to have been a natural born subject of His Majesty so for as regards the holding and transferring of any real estate by devise or inheritance.

X.—And be it further enacted &c. That after the first day of January in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-five, the several officers to whom it shall belong, shall without delay, transmit the registers then remaining in their custody to the secretary of the Province and the clerks of the peace respectively as directed by this act, and that after the said first day of January no further oaths shall be administered, or proceedings had for the purpose of being naturalised under this act.

XI.—And be it further &c. That whenever any of the persons appointed to administer the oaths and make the record thereof required by this act shall transmit any book of registry to the office of the clerk of the peace or to the secretary of the Province, as hereinbefore provided, he shall at the end of such book of registry verify the same on oath, to be taken before some one of His Majesty's justices of the peace, in which he shall depose that such book of registry forms a true and correct record of the statements made to him by the several persons therein described and which they severally verified by oath or affirmation taken before him.

XII.—Provided always, and be it further, &c. That if any person to whom it shall belong to attest the truth of any such record, shall neglect or omit to attest the same in manner aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of £200, to be recovered by information in His Majesty's Court of King's Bench; but such omission shall no prejudice the right of any person who may have taken the oath or made the affirmation required by this act, or preclude him from receiving a certificate or extract according to the provisions thereof.

XIII.—And be it &c. That a general alphabetical list shall be made and kept by the secretary of this Province and the several Clerks of the Peace, of the surnames and Christian names of all persons whose names and descriptions are recorded in the several books of registry, referring to their place in such books respectively—and that such list and books shall be open at all times to inspection, during the hours of business in such office, and that any person desirous of searching in the said list or books, shall pay to the officer keeping the same one shilling for each person on whose name he shall desire to search for.

XIV.—And be it further enacted &c. That nothing in this act contained shall be taken to repeal or in any manner alter or affect any statute passed by the Legislature of this Province respecting the qualifications of voters for members to serve in the Assembly of this Province or the eligibility of members to serve in the said assembly or in any manner to affect or interfere with a certain act of the Legislature of this Province passed in the 54th year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to declare certain persons therein described Aliens and to vest their estates in His Majesty" or with any proceedings had thereupon, or to repeal any laws now in force in this Province for the Naturalization of foreigners.

XV.—And be it &c. That from and after the passing of this act, no person shall be disturbed in the possession or shall be precluded from the recovery of any lands tenements or hereditaments in this Province, on the ground of his or her being or having been an Alien, or on the ground of any person from or through whom he or she may claim, being or having been an Alien, provided the person against whom such disability shall be so objected, being a female, was resident in this Province on the twenty sixth day of May, one thousand, eight hundred and twenty six, or being a male, was resident in this Province, on the twenty sixth day of May aforesaid, and was then actually under the age of sixteen years.

XVI.—And be it &c. That in all cases where any person claiming to hold as next entitled on account of any person near in the line of descent having been an Alien, shall have actually sold or departed with, or shall have actually contracted to sell or depart with his real estate before the passing of this act, no person being at the time in adverse possession of the same, the provisions of this act shall not extend to render invalid any right or title to such estate but such right or title shall be taken and adjudged to be, as if this act had not been passed.

A

I do swear, (or being one of the persons allowed by law to affirm in civil cases, do affirm) that the entry in this book of registry contained, in one column of which entry I have subscribed my name, (or set my mark, (as the case may be) is true in every particular to the best of my knowledge and belief; and that I have resided seven years in His Majesty's dominions without having been, during that time, a stated resident in any foreign country; and that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the Sovereign of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of this Province as dependant thereon.

THE BOUNDARY QUESTION.

Having before had occasion to remark on the pretensions of the United States to a large and valuable tract of land in New Brunswick, we reprint the following extract from the London Pamphlet relating to this question, attributed, we know not how correctly, to the pen of Sir Henry Bliss of Nova Scotia. It shows more at length, and more specifically than we had it in our power to do, the extent of their pretensions, and the principle on which they seem founded. As this is, doubtless, considered an important matter both at home and at Washington, we recommend the following extract to the attentive perusal of our readers.—Gazette by Authority.

"In exploring this Boundary, the American Government seems to have assumed the principle, that if no such High Lands existed, or existed where they would not be intersected by the North line, or, intersected, would not divide rivers agreeably to the strict letter of the treaty, they were then to go up to the St. Lawrence, and fix the north-west angle of Nova-Scotia on the very shore of that river. Accordingly they pass over a high and extensive range of table land, which, compared with the other heights and features of the whole tract, would readily be called and recognized as The High Lands in the treaty, because though these would indeed divide the heads of rivers, and give them the course and source of all that flow into and through the United States and use of all that flow into and through the provinces, yet if the streams on this side empty into the Atlantic, those on the other do not join the St. Lawrence. They pass on, therefore, and meet the St. John's. And here it should be recalled to mind, that neither their predecessors in negotiation at Ghent, nor their agents under the first Commission, had ever dreamed of extending the most extravagant of their pretensions beyond the right bank of this river, which they wished to be accepted as the real St. Croix, but which, in each instance, was rejected, and finally relinquished by them. Indeed, both the language and the principle of the treaty are conclusive evidence that its negotiators could never have entertained the intention, nor conceived the possibility, of touching or intersecting this river; or else in describing a boundary, which, as evidently to pursue the great natural land-marks of the country, they had never not only neglected so important a feature, but adopted a principle of separating heads of rivers, utterly inapplicable to the tract to be divided. Now, however, the Americans have the courage to pass the stream, which the left bank push on their north line. Having intersected the St. John's, leaving the lower half to us and the upper to themselves, they proceed in their course to intersect its numerous branches, the lower parts of which are to be theirs and the upper for us. They pass on, over a beautiful and well-wooded country, of gentle hills and valleys, till instead of streams running westerly to the St. John's they meet with waters that flow easterly to the Bay of Chaleur, a branch of the Gulf of St Lawrence. These they intersect, taking the source and upper part to themselves, and leaving the rest of the stream to us. They pass on, and when a few miles more would have carried them into the Gulf or River of St. Lawrence, by whatever name the arm of the sea at that point is to be called, and they meet a stream flowing into it, they have the consolence to stop. And here is the north-west angle of Nova-Scotia, and if there chance to be a hill in the neighbourhood, these are the High Lands. Here they turn upon their heel, and follow these High Lands down to the south-west and south, dividing, first, the streams that flow into the River St Lawrence, from those that empty part of the Gulf called the Bay of Chaleur, both within our territories; next, the waters that flow into the River St. Lawrence, from those that flow into the St. John's, both within or falling into our acknowledged territories; keeping often in sight of, and never at any great distance from the very bank of the former stream; until, at last, to get round the sources of the Chaudiere, they must turn almost to the south-east, and making a considerable bend, join the High Lands upon which both parties are agreed.

"And this, they would persuade us, is the execution of that treaty, which had proposed for its object 'the reciprocal advantages and mutual conveni nces of both parties'—this the country which has stripped us of a natural and defensive frontier 'to exclude all partial advantages'—intersected waters in a manner to leave no question of navigation uninvolved that 'the seeds of discord might be removed'—and planted, in fine, the American posts and people in the rear of the St. John's and the mouth of the St. Lawrence, 'to promote and secure to both countries perpetual peace.'"

Jamaica papers to the last of December have been received at Charleston. The Colonial House of Assembly had adjourned, after a very long session, on the terms of perfect good humour with the Governor—both in favour of preserving good terms with the mother country. The Legislature had made provision for paying the salaries of the custom house officers; and the Governor had stopped the island duties.

RIDEAU CANAL.

This immense undertaking is now fairly in progress, and is to be finished, if possible, in the space of four years. Its length from the Falls of Chaudier, on the Ottawa River, to Kingston on Lake Ontario, is 133 miles. There will be 47 locks on the Line, as there are 320 feet to lift to the Grand Summit Level of the Rideau Lake, and many heavy Dams and Guard Gates will be required on the River Rideau to surmount the wild rapids therein—huge gullies and ravines have to be passed over, requiring extensive Aqueducts.—The work taken altogether is certainly the most stupendous and extensive at present going on in the world, and when completed, will form a piece of ingenious art almost without a parallel. More than one thousand masons and four thousand labourers will find employment on it during the present summer, and as there will always be much quarrying required, the work, in consequence, will not be suspended, even through the inclemency of winter, but continue in operation the whole year round.—What grateful news are these to Canada—to Great Britain—and to the world at large.—Never could British capital be expended in a more noble and useful undertaking. By so doing, she opens up a glorious highway through the bosom of one of her most interesting colonies—on either side of which, are Lands, not only able to support thousands and thousands of human beings, and thereby relieve distress to any extent that a surplus population or other causes may create; but planted by nature with forests of beautiful oak which could supply (never to be missed) formidable armadas.—This Canal falls into the Ottawa, or Grand River, 120 miles from Montreal. Masons and labourers may be transported thereto from Quebec for about three dollars by the Steam Boats, and Americans from the United States may reach the work in a less distance, where provisions will be open to receive them, and all the comforts of humble life to the industrious.

By this Canal the treasures of Canada will be opened and herself protected from the invasion of enemies—not only this, but it will be the means of making the wilderness smile with improvement. When it and other Canals will be finished, which are now in progress in Canada and the States of America, a Steam-boat navigation will be opened from Quebec on the St. Lawrence, or from Halifax on the Atlantic Ocean to New Orleans in the Gulf of Mexico —an inland route of many thousand miles—and certainly the longest that will or can be on the face of the earth.

We have been favoured with this information from the Royal Engineers now returned to Montreal, after exploring the country, running the levees and making the necessary surveys.—Montreal Herald.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF LOWER CANADA.

(From the Quebec Mercury, of Feb. 10, 1827.)

In the House of Assembly on Monday evening last, when, pursuant to order, the Petition of divers Electors of the Borough of Three Rivers against the return of Mr. Ogden, was taken into consideration, Mr Berthelot, in bringing forward the subject, commenced a dissertation on the laws against bribery and corruption. He was met immediately by the Honorable and Learned Solicitor-General, who said he would spare the time of the House, and the Honorable Mover the trouble of any long disquisition on the Law of Election, by admitting that the acts alleged to have been committed by him were in contravention of the Statutes in force against bribery and corruption; he would go further, and declare, that if one half only of the allegations in the Petition were true, if he could have been guilty of conduct such as was therein charged against him, he should indeed be unfit and unworthy of a seat in that Honorable Assembly. But he felt conscious of his innocence. The charges advanced by his antagonists had their origin in malice, were without foundation and unsupported by fact. He felt confident that, on a fair investigation, he should be able to overthrow the machinations of his enemies.

On Wednesday evening, the House being in Committee of the whole, on the motion for erecting a new District South of Montreal, the Hon. the Speaker having indulged in some rather severe marks upon the conduct of the Judges, whom he represented as instruments of a despotic tyranny, the same Honorable and Learned Member gave that gentleman a seasonable and temperate rebuke. He begged him to recollect the high and dignified situation he held in that Assembly, and how unjust it was to attack, in a legislative body, protected by privileges, the conduct of persons holding judicial situations, who had no means of defending themselves from such imputations. It was true speeches made in that House were supposed to be addressed only to the Members, but custom had authorized the admission of persons not of that body, to hear the proceedings of the Assembly—many persons in the gallery and below the bar, were less enlightened than that Honorable body, and would carry away with them the most unfavourable impressions from assertions advanced, perhaps, in the heat of argument; and the very privilege, he contended, by which freedom of debate was preserved in that Assembly ought to render Members more particularly guarded in their expressions; that justice and every proper feeling alike required that a licentiousness of expression within those walls should be restrained, the indulgence in it being fraught with the most serious consequences since the more inviolable the privilege of the Member, the greater was the injury inflicted on the individuals he attacked; that if the Judges were not rendered independent, the fault lay with that House, since the Despatch last year received from the Colonial Minister declared that the Royal Assent would be given to such a measure, provided a retirement was insured to them when, by length of service, they were no longer able to fulfil the duties of the Bench.

The following spirited extract is taken from Mr. Bliss's Pamphlet on the subject of the Boundary Line, between the United States and the Province of New Brunswick:—

"Certainly a more barefaced aggression, so solemnly resolved, so boldly executed, and so openly proclaimed, has been seldom suffered, or suffered with impunity, between two Nations. Not that the United States have never before sent emissaries to seduce the subjects, or usurp the dominations of a friendly Power, but always with some pretexts to excuse, or in a manner to palliate the intention, or at least secrecy to conceal it. But here no circumstance of injustice and contumely appears to be wanting. A people with whom we are on terms of the most confident amity, with whom the King has long been endeavoring to settle, by reference and by negotiation, questions of Boundary, and every other difference, are not afraid nor ashamed, by the deliberate act of two Legislatures, to declare an extensive territory, (of which, to say nothing of right, we are in possession to a period older than their existence), to be their own public undivided Lands; to affect to consider and treat its inhabitants and Authorities as trespassers and criminals, order them to be dispossessed, and brought to justice; send thither their public agents to cut and seize the King's timber, to resume and sell the land he had granted, intrigue with and seduce his subjects, supersede his government, establish the civil jurisdiction and military organization of their republic; and, in short, completely transform themselves, without further ceremony, the full sovereignty and property of the whole country. The attention of the public in England is so constantly engaged by objects of more immediate, and more alluring interest, that it can hardly for a moment be directed to a matter so remote and so imperfectly understood; but in this quarter of the Empire, this event has been beheld with astonishment and indignation by all classes of the King's subjects. In the most solemn manner their situation and constitution admit, they have hastened to send home their humble representations of the injury done and threatened, to their properties, and their Sovereign's right, and lay at the foot of the throne, their earnest prayers for protection; and are now looking with anxious eyes to the conduct of the Imperial Government, to learn whether they will still suffer their facility or indifference to be cajoled by the fair professions of that republic, or will at last be awakened to its real character of turbulence and aggression, and convinced of the necessity of never yielding to such a nation, whose demands rise upon every concession, and whose strength is increasing with every demand. For it is indeed a melancholy thing, particularly to British subjects, who have no other Colonies, to see Great Britain, their Mother Country, that once possessed the whole Continent of North America, driven in this manner from the Kenebec to the Penobscot, and from the Penobscot to the St. Croix, from the St. Croix to the St. John's, and now finally, from the St. John's up to the very verge and shore of the St. Lawrence, not by conquest or the decline of her power and Empire, but through the mere address and cunning of a people who seem ashamed of no means in advancing a pretext, and regard neither the rights nor the common courtesies of Nations in asserting their claims. Still more humiliating must it be if Great Britain has now to endure from that Republic, on the eastern extremity of their dominions, the same violation of territory, which they inflict with so much insult and triumph, on the King of Spain in the south. "The Americans have no conscience, Father," said the Indian Chief, in his talk to Sir George Provost, "they have no heart; they will drive us beyond the setting sun!"—and they will yank you into the Sea, he might have added; for unless a stand be now made to prevent it, they eventually will."

The N. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, February 24, 1827.

The latest accounts from England, give not the least hope of the recovery of His Royal Highness the Duke of York. At the time of the King's visit to His Royal Brother, it appears he was not sensible of his presence, and the distressing state in which he found His Royal Highness, produced the most painful effect on His Majesty's feelings.

The Naturalization Bill, as it passed both Houses and reserved for His Majesty's, pleasure, is given in this days paper. An attentive perusal of the Bill, will satisfy those who are interested in the measure, that by its several provisions, an effectual remedy is proposed for the permanent and undisturbed possession, of their rights and privileges. We are aware that much pains has been, and is still used, to misrepresent the matter to the people, and by persons too, who having no personal interest in it—without any thing at stake themselves, and carrying but little consequences may result to others, have made it their study to prejudice the public mind on this question, against the Government. The object of the Bill has been most industriously misstated, and attempts have been made to induce the people to believe, that it is intended to declare them Aliens, and deprive them of their rights and privileges. Now we only ask those who are interested in the matter, to read the Bill which is before them, carefully and attentively, and setting aside any representations which may have been made to them, to exercise their own unbiassed judgments, and then say if any thing can be found in it, which will bear the construction, that its object is to declare them Aliens, or to deprive them of their rights; but whether on the contrary, it is not the object of the Bill to remove all doubt on the subject, to provide legal remedies, for legal disabilities, and to confirm them and their children permanently and securely in the undisturbed and unquestioned possession of all their rights, privileges, and immunities. The necessity of such a remedy is admitted on all hands—the "objectionable feature," as it is called, is, as to the manner of applying that remedy. The most strenuous supporters of the declaratory law of last year, have felt themselves constrained from the overwhelming weight of fact and law, to admit this necessity, and to relinquish the positions they had assumed on a former occasion. The absolute necessity of declaring that to be law which was not law, and that to be fact, which was not fact, they now appear to admit themselves, but yet, they contend that as the case is a general one, a general remedy is all that is required. To this it is replied, that the case though a general one, must be provided for in such a manner, that the remedy will apply itself to each particular case. If a Country was afflicted with a fatal disease, and some skilful physician should discover a cure for the malady, would it not be considered as downright quackery, in any one who pretended to such discovery to each individual case. And with a view to this, the preamble declares the fact generally, and its several provisions prescribe the remedy to each individual case. An Oath is required, and a registry of particulars is made, on which a certificate is granted, which completely and most effectually removes every defect, and neutralises all legal doubts and disabilities. The production of this certificate at all times, and on all occasions, is unquestionable proof, that the individual has availed himself of the remedy—the cure is infallible, and his rights and privileges which before were liable to be legally questioned, are restored to a state of perfect health and security. If in the course of events, these rights and privileges should ever again be questioned, the production of the certificate, current as it must be in all Courts of Justice, would at once remove all doubt and difficulty, and the individual would reap the full benefit of the remedy, which he had applied to his own particular case.

Supposing on the other hand that it was otherwise, and that nothing more than a general remedy was provided, without prescribing any particular provision for individual cases, and that the rights of these individuals should hereafter come to be questioned. Their plea would then be, that they were included in the general remedy, but without proof of their being entitled to it, this plea would not avail them in a Court of Justice—from the length of time that might have elapsed after the death of parties, it might be impossible for them to procure the necessary proof, and this something more than doubt would hang over them—a designing person would have it in his power to destroy all their hopes, at a time when they supposed the general remedy had put it out of the power of any person to do so. Thus it will be seen that this proposed general remedy, although it may be artfully stated, so as to appear specious on the surface—danger lurks at the bottom of it, because it professes more than it can accomplish, by promising general security without any specific remedy for individual cases.

The Bill on the contrary provides an ample and simple remedy, applicable to every individual case, and furnishes the party who avails himself of its provisions, with testimony which never can be shaken—not liable to be destroyed by the death of witnesses—and subject to no casualties whatever. A public record, which stands coeval with the existence of the Province, is at all times open to examination—the party may have his proof in his own possession—it is recorded in the District where he resides, and is lodged amongst the general archives of the Country. With this tripple security he may defy the arts of designing men, and rest secure in the enjoyment of all the rights and privileges of a natural born British Subject. Can he do so now? or is it probable he could, if a general remedy only, without these necessary securities was provided, without any reference whatever to his particular case. And here a most distinguishing "feature" of the Bill deserves to be particularly noticed. The securities which it affords are all obtained on the testimony of the party himself—he is admitted as a witness in his own case; whereas, in a Court of Justice if he failed in establishing his right to the general remedy, by other testimony than his own, the law must inevitably take its course against him. This fact may be considered as one among other proofs, of the equitable nature of the Bill.

In short, the object of the Bill, and the object of the Government, is to provide a remedy for the security of these people, which shall be permanent in its nature, and not liable to be questioned hereafter. The opponents of the present measure, have not attempted to deny that the Bill will effect this desirable purpose. They have it is true proposed a general remedy, but have not shewn by any detail, how it could be made to apply itself to particular cases. The result of so loose and careless a provision, if adopted, would inevitably be found to be inadequate and defective, and while it professed to remedy the disease, would only render it more difficult of cure hereafter.

Parliamentary Proceedings.—In our last number our summary was continued to Thursday 15, inst. The two following days, previous to the prorogation, were principally occupied on the Supply Bill, and in passing the Contingent accounts of the Two Houses.

IV.—And be it &c. That from and after the passing of this act it shall be in the power of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to appoint by instrument under his sign manual, from time to time, in each and every District of this Province, such and so many persons as to him may seem meet for administering the oaths and taking the affirmations required by this act, and that each and every of such persons, so to be appointed, shall administer the oath or affirmation by this act required to any person above the age of sixteen years who shall desire to take the said oath or make such affirmation for the purposes intended by this act, and shall keep books of registry, in the beginning of which shall be written the oath and affirmation required by this act, and which shall contain the columns and specifications described in the second Schedule to this act annexed, marked B, and that in the column appointed for that purpose, the person making the oath or affirmation shall set his signature, or, if unable to write, his mark, in the same line of the register in which entry is made of the name and description of such person.

V.—And be it &c. That duplicate books of such registry shall be kept, both of which being originals shall contain the actual signatures or marks of the person Subscribing, and that on or before the thirty-first day of December in each and every year, the person making and keeping the said register shall deposit one of the originals thereof in the office of the clerk of the peace of the District where such persons shall reside, and transmit the other original register for the same year to the secretary of the Province for the time being—and that the said books of registry shall remain and be preserved as public records in the said offices respectively.

VI.—And be it &c. That if from any casualty either of such original registers or any part thereof shall be lost or destroyed, it shall be supplied by a copy taken from the other original of such register remaining in the office of the clerk of the peace, or secretary of the Province, (as the case may be) and attested as a true copy upon the oath of the officer having the custody of the same, made before any Commissioner for taking affidavits in the Court of King's Bench, which copy, so attested, shall be regarded to all intents and purposes as the original register.

VII.—And be it further enacted &c. That a copy or extract taken from any book of registry made under the authority of this act of the whole entry made in such register with respect to any person whose name is recorded therein, and certified by the clerk of the peace, or secretary of the Province for the time being, or their respective deputy or deputies, or by the person keeping such register, before the same shall have been transmitted to the clerk of the peace or secretary, shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient evidence of the naturalization of the person therein described.

VIII.—And be it further enacted &c. That no person who, on the said twenty-sixth day of May, in the year of our Lord 1826, had been resident in this Province, or elsewhere in His Majesty's dominions, as aforesaid, for the space of seven years, shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he shall take the oath, or make the affirmation and subscribe the record thereof required by this act, on or before the first day of March, which will be in the year of our Lord 1830; and that no person who, being resident in this Province on the said twenty-sixth day of May, had not then been resident therein, or elsewhere in His Majesty's dominions as aforesaid, for the space of seven years, shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he shall take the oath, or make the affirmation, and subscribe the record thereof required by this act, within the space of three years from the completion of his residence for the space of seven years, as aforesaid. Provided always nevertheless, that if any person, at the time of his being entitled by residence to claim to be naturalized under this act, shall be under the age of sixteen years, it shall and may be lawful for such person to avail himself of the provisions of this act, at any time within three years after his attaining the age of sixteen years.

IX.—And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that if any person not entitled to be regarded as a natural born subject of His Majesty, who on the twenty-sixth day of May one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six was domiciled in this Province, shall die before the period limited by this act for his taking the oath according to the provisions thereof, such person shall be nevertheless deemed to have been a natural born subject of His Majesty so far as regards the holding and transferring of any real estate by devise or inheritance.

X.—And be it further enacted &c. That after the first day of January in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-five, the several officers to whom it shall belong, shall without delay, transmit the registers then remaining in their custody to the secretary of the Province and the clerks of the peace respectively as directed by this act, and that after the said first day of January no further oaths shall be administered, or proceedings had for the purpose of being naturalised under this act.

XI.—And be it further &c. That whenever any of the persons appointed to administer the oaths and make the record thereof required by this act shall transmit any book of registry to the office of the clerk of the peace or to the secretary of the Province, as hereinbefore provided, he shall at the end of such book of registry verify the same upon the oath to be taken before peace, in which he shall depose that such book of registry forms a true and correct record of the statements made to him by the several persons therein described and which they severally verified by oath or affirmation taken before him.

XII.—Provided always, and be it further, &c. That if any person to whom it shall belong to attest the truth of any such record, shall neglect or omit to attest the same in manner aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of £200, to be recovered by information in His Majesty's Court of King's Bench; but such omission shall no prejudice the right of any person who may have taken the oath or made the affirmation required by this act, or preclude him from receiving a certificate or extract according to the provisions thereof.

XIII.—And be it &c. That a general alphabetical list shall be made and kept by the secretary of this Province and the several Clerks of the Peace, of the surnames and Christian names of all persons whose names and descriptions are recorded in the several books of registry, referring to their place in such books respectively—and that such list and books shall be open at all times to inspection, during the hours of business in such office, and that any person desirous of searching in the said list or books, shall pay to the officer keeping the same one shilling for each persoon whose name he shall desire to search for.

XIV.—And be it further enacted &c. That nothing in this act contained shall be taken to repeal or in any manner alter or affect any statute passed by the Legislature of this Province respecting the qualifications of voters for members to serve in the Assembly of this Province or the eligibility of members to serve in the said assembly or in any manner to affect or interfere with a certain act of the Legislature of this Province passed in the 54th year of His late Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to declare certain persons therein described Aliens and to vest their estates in His Majesty" or with any proceedings had thereupon, or to repeal any laws now in force in this Province for the Naturalization of foreigners.

XV.—And be it &c. That from and after the passing of this act, no person shall be disturbed in the possession or shall be precluded from the recovery of any lands tenements or hereditaments in this Province, on the ground of his or her being or having been an Alien, or on the ground of any person from or through whom he or she may claim, being or having been an Alien, provided the person against whom such disability shall be so objected, being a female, was resident in this Province on the twenty sixth day of May, one thousand, eight hundred and twenty six, or being a male, was resident in this Province, on the twenty sixth day of May aforesaid, and was then actually under the age of sixteen years.

XVI.—And be it &c. That in all cases where any person claiming to hold as next entitled on account of any person nearer in the line of descent having been an Alien, shall in virtue of such claim, have taken actual possession of any real estate before the passing of this act and have made improvements thereon, and also in all cases where any person claiming to hold as next entitled on account of the person nearer in the line of descent having been an Alien, shall have actually sold or departed with, or shall have actually contracted to sell or depart with his real estate before the passing of this act, no person being at the time in adverse possession of the same, the provisions of this act shall not extend to render invalid any right or title to such estate but such right or title shall be taken and adjudged to be, as if this act had not been passed.

A

I do swear, (or being one of the persons allowed by law to affirm in civil cases, do affirm) that the entry in this book of registry contained, in one column of which entry I have subscribed my name, (or set my mark, (as the case may be) is true in every particular to the best of my knowledge and belief; and that I have resided seven years in His Majesty's dominions without having been, during that time, a stated resident in any foreign country; and that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the Sovereign of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of this Province as dependant thereon.

THE BOUNDARY QUESTION.

Having before had occasion to remark on the pretensions of the United States to a large and valuable tract of land in New Brunswick, we reprint the following extract from the London Pamphlet relating to this question, attributed, we know not how correctly, to the pen of Mr. Hyde Bliss of Nova Scotia. it shows more at large, and more specifically than we had it in our power to do, the extent of their pretensions, and the principle on which they seem founded. As this is, doubtless, considered an important matter both at home and at Washington, we recommend the following extract to the attentive perusal of our readers.—Gazette by Authority.

"In exploring this Boundary, the American Government seems to have assumed the principle, that if no such High Lands existed, or existed where they would not be intersected by the North line, or, intersected, would not divide rivers agreeably to the strict letter of the treaty, they were then to go up to the St. Lawrence, and fix the north-west angle of Nova-Scotia on the very shore of that river. Accordingly in the space of 90 miles high and extensive range of elevated land, which, compared with the other heights and features of the whole tract, would readily be called and recognized as The High Lands in the treaty, because though these would indeed divide the heads of rivers, and give them the course and source of all that flow into and through the United States and use of all that flow into and through our territories, yet if the streams on this side emptied into the Atlantic, those on the other do not join the St. Lawrence. They pass on, therefore, and meet the St. John's. And here it should not be recalled to mind, that neither our Ministers in negotiating the treaty, nor their agents under the first Commission, had ever dreamed of extending the most extravagant of their pretensions beyond the right bank of this river, which they wished to be accepted as the real High Lands, but which, in this instance, was resisted by us, and finally relinquished by them. Indeed, both the language and the principle of the treaty are conclusive evidence that its negotiators could never have entertained the intention, nor conceived the possibility, of transferring or intersecting this river; or else in describing a boundary, which was evidently to pursue the great natural land-marks of the country, they had never not only neglected so important a feature, but adopted a principle of separating heads of rivers, utterly inapplicable to the tract to be divided. Now however, the Americans have the courage to pass the stream, and on the left bank push on their north line. Having intersected the St. John's, leaving the lower half to us and the upper to themselves, they proceed in their course to intersect its numerous branches, the lower parts of which are to be theirs and the upper for us. They pass on, over a beautiful and well-wooded country, of gentle hills and valleys, till instead of stream running westerly to the St. John's they meet with waters that flow easterly to the Bay of Chaleur, a branch of the Gulf of St Lawrence. These they intersect, taking the waters and upper part to themselves, and leaving the rest of the course to us. They pass on, and when a few miles more would have carried them into the Gulf or River of St. Lawrence, by whatever name the arm of the sea at that point is to be called, and they meet streams flowing into it, they have the conscience to stop. And here is the north-west angle of Nova-Scotia, and if there chance to be a hill in the neighbourhood, these are the High Lands. Here they turn upon their heel, and follow these High Lands down to the southeast and south, dividing, first, the waters that flow into the River St Lawrence, from those that empty into a part of the Gulf called the Bay of Chaleur, both within our territories; next, the waters that flow into the River St. Lawrence, from those that flow into the St. John's, both within or falling into our acknowledged territories; keeping often in sight of, and never at any great distance from the very bank of the former stream; until, at last, to get round the sources of the Chaudiere, they must turn almost to the south-east, and making a considerable bend, join the High Lands upon which both parties are agreed.

"And this, they would persuade us, is the execution of that treaty, which had proposed for its object 'the reciprocal advantages and mutual convenience of both parties'—this the boundary it contemplated and described—which is to sever the British Provinces from each other, and the Canadas from Great Britain, 'upon principles of liberal equity and reciprocity'—which has stripped us of a natural and defensive frontier 'to exclude all partial advantage'—intersected waters in a manner to leave no question of navigation uninvolved that 'the seeds of discord might be removed'—and planted, in fine, the American posts and people in the rear of the St. John's and the mouth of the St. Lawrence, 'to promote and secure to both countries perpetual peace.'"

Jamaica papers to the last of December have been received at Charleston. The Colonial House of Assembly had adjourned, after a very long session, on the terms of perfect good humour with the Governor—both in favour of preserving good terms with the mother country. The Legislature had made provision for paying the salaries of the custom house officers; and the Governor had stopped the island duties.

RIDEAU CANAL.

This immense undertaking is now fairly in progress, and is to be finished, if possible, in the space of four years. Its length from the Falls of Chaudier, on the Ottawa River, to Kingston on Lake Ontario, is 135 miles. There will be 47 locks on the Line, as there are 280 feet to lift to the Grand Summit Level of the Rideau Lake, and many heavy Dams and Guard Gates will be required on the River Rideau to surmount the wild rapids therein—huge gullies and ravines have to be passed over, requiring extensive Aqueducts.—The work taken altogether is certainly the most stupendous and extensive at present going on in the world, and when completed, will form a piece of ingenious art almost without a parallel. More than one thousand masons and four thousand labourers will find employment on it during the present summer, and as there will always be much quarrying required, the work, in consequence, will not be suspended, even through the inclemency of winter, but continue in operation the whole year round.—What grateful news are these to Canada—to Great Britain—and to the world at large.—Never could British capital be expended in a more noble and useful undertaking. By so doing, she opens up a glorious highway through the bosom of one of her most interesting Colonies—another side of which, are Lands, not only able to support thousands and thousands of human beings, and thereby relieve distress to any extent that a surplus population or other causes may create; but planted by nature with forests of beautiful oak which could supply (more to be missed) formidable armadas.—This Canal falls into the Ottawa, or Grand River, 120 miles from Montreal. Masons and labourers may be transported thereto from Quebec for about three dollars by the Steam Boats, and American goods from the United States may reach the works at a less expense, where houses will be open to receive them, and all the comforts of humble life to the industrious.

By this Canal the treasures of Canada will be opened and herself protected from the invasion of enemies—not only this, but it will be the means of making the wilderness smile with improvement. When it and other Canals will be finished, which are now in progress in Canada and the States of America, a Steam-boat navigation will be opened from Quebec on the St. Lawrence, or from Halifax on the Atlantic Ocean to New Orleans in the Gulf of Mexico —an inland route of many thousand miles—and certainly the longest that will or can be on the face of the earth.

We have been favoured with this information from the Royal Engineers now returned to Montreal, after exploring the country, running the levees and making the necessary surveys.—Montreal Herald.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF LOWER CANADA.

(From the Quebec Mercury, of Feb. 10, 1827.)

In the House of Assembly on Monday evening last, when, pursuant to order, the Petition of divers Electors of the Borough of Three Rivers against the return of Mr. Ogden, was taken into consideration, Mr Berthelot, in bringing forward the subject, commenced a dissertation on the laws against bribery and corruption. He was met immediately by the Honorable and Learned Solicitor-General, who said he would spare the time of the House, and the Honorable Mover the trouble of any long disquisition on the Law of Election, by admitting that the acts alleged to have been committed by him were in contravention of the Statutes in force against bribery and corruption; he would go further, and declare, that if one half only of the allegations in the Petition were true, if he could have been guilty of conduct such as was therein charged against him, he should indeed be unfit and unworthy of a seat in that Honorable Assembly. But he felt conscious of his innocence. The charges advanced by his antagonists had their origin in malice, were without foundation and unsupported by fact. He felt confident that, on a fair investigation, he should be able to overthrow the machinations of his enemies.

On Wednesday evening, the House being in Committee of the whole, on the motion for erecting a new District South of Montreal, the Hon. the Speaker having indulged in some rather severere marks upon the conduct of the Judges, whom he represented as instruments of a despotic tyranny, the same Honorable and Learned Member gave that gentleman a seasonable and temperate rebuke. He begged him to recollect the high and dignified situation he held in that Assembly, and how unjust it was to attack, in a legislative body, protected by privilege, the conduct of persons holding judicial situations, who had no means of defending themselves from such imputations. It was true speeches made in that House were supposed to be addressed only to the Members, but custom had established the admission of persons not of that body, to hear the proceedings of the Assembly—many persons in the gallery and below the bar, were less enlightened than that Honorable body, and would carry away with them the most unfavourable impressions from assertions advanced, perhaps, in the heat of argument; and the very privilege, he contended, by which freedom of debate was preserved in that Assembly ought to render Members more particularly guarded in their expressions; that justice and every proper feeling alike required that a licentiousness of expression within those walls should be restrained, the indulgence in it being fraught with the most serious consequences since the more inviolable the privilege of the Member, the greater was the injury inflicted on the individuals he attacked. —that if the Judges were not rendered independent, the fault lay with that House, since the Despatch last year received from the Colonial Minister declared that the Royal Assent would be given to such a measure, provided a retirement was insured to them when, by length of service, they were no longer able to fulfil the duties of the Bench.

The following spirited extract is taken from Mr. Bliss's Pamphlet on the subject of the Boundary Line, between the United States and the Province of New Brunswick :—

"Certainly a more harefaced aggression, so solemnly resolved, so boldly executed, and so openly proclaimed, has been seldom suffered, or suffered with impunity, between two Nations. Not that the United States have never before sent emissaries to seduce the subjects, or usurp the dominions of a friendly State, but always with some pretexts to execute, or in a manner to palliate the intention, or at least secrecy to conceal it. But here no circumstance of injustice and contumely appears to be wanting. A people with whom we are on terms of the most confident amity, with whom the King has long been endeavoring to settle, by reference and by negotiation, questions of Boundary, and every other difference, are not afraid nor ashamed, by the deliberate act of two Legislatures, to declare an entire, sive territory, (of which, by the solemn right, we are in possession, a possession too, older than their existence), to be their own public undivided Lands; to affect to consider and treat its inhabitants and Authorities as trespassers and criminals, order them to be dispossessed, and brought to justice; send thither their public agents to cut and seize the King's timber, to resume and sell the land he had granted, intrigue with and seduce his subjects, supersede his government, establish the civil jurisdiction and military organization of their republic; and, in short, completely transfer to themselves, without further ceremony, the full sovereignty and property of the whole country. The attention of the public in England is so constantly engaged by objects of more immediate, and more alluring interest, that it can hardly for a moment be directed to a matter so much and so imperfectly understood; but in this quarter of the Empire, this event has been beheld with astonishment and indignation by all classes of the King's subjects. In the most solemn manner their situation and condition admit, they have hastened to send home their humble representation, of the injury done and threatened, to their properties, and their Sovereign's right, and lay at the foot of the throne, their earnest prayers for protection; and are now looking with anxious eyes to the conduct of the Imperial Government, to learn whether they will still suffer their facility or indifference to be cajoled by the fair professions of that republic, or will at last be awakened to its real character of turbulence and aggression, and convinced of the necessity of never yielding to such a nation, whose demands rise upon every concession, and whose strength is increasing with every demand. For it is indeed a melancholy thing, particularly to British Subjects in those Colonies, to see Great Britain, their Mother Country, that once possessed the whole Continent of North America, driven in this manner from the Kenebec to the Penobscot, and from the Penobscot to the St. Croix, from the St. Croix to the St. John's, and now finally, from the St. John's up to the very verge and shore of the St. Lawrence, not by conquest or the decline of her power and Empire, but through the mere address and cunning of a people who seem ashamed of no means in advancing a pretext, and regard neither the rights nor the common courtesies of Nations in asserting their claims. Still more humiliating must it be if Great Britain has now to endure from that Republic, on the eastern extremity of their dominions, the same violation of territory, which they inflict with so much insult and triumph, on the King of Spain in the south. "The Americans have no conscience, Father," said the Indian Chief, in his talk to Sir George Provost, "they have no heart; they will drive us beyond the setting sun." and they will push us into the Sea, he might have added; for unless a stand be now made to prevent it, they eventually will."

YORK, U. C. Saturday, February 24, 1827.

The latest accounts from England, give not the least hope of the recovery of His Royal Highness the Duke of York. At the time of the King's visit to His Royal Brother, it appears he was not sensible of his presence, and the distressing state in which he found His Royal Highness, produced the most painful effect on His Majesty's feelings.

The Naturalization Bill, as it passed both Houses and reserved for His Majesty's, pleasure, is given in this days paper. An attentive perusal of the Bill, will satisfy those who are interested in the measure, that by its several provisions, an effectual remedy is proposed for the permanent and undisturbed possession, of their rights and privileges. We are aware that much pains has been, and is still used, to misrepresent the object to the people, and by persons too, who having no personal interest in the subject any thing at stake themselves, and caring but little what consequences may result to others, have made it their study to prejudice the public mind on this question, against the Government. The object of the Bill has been most industriously misstated, and attempts have been made to induce the people to believe, that it is intended to declare them Aliens, and deprive them of their rights and privileges. Now we only ask those who are interested in the matter, to read the Bill which is before them, carefully and attentively, and setting aside any representations which may have been made to them, to exercise their own unbiassed judgments, and then say if any thing can be found in it, which will bear the construction, that its object is to declare them Aliens, or to deprive them of their rights; but whether on the contrary, it is not the object of the Bill to remove all doubt on the subject, to provide legal remedies, for legal disabilities, and to confirm them and their children permanently and securely in the undisturbed and unquestioned possession of all their rights, privileges, and immunities. The necessity of such a remedy is admitted on all hands—the "objectionable feature," as it is called, is, as to the manner of applying that remedy. The most strenuous supporters of the declaratory law of last year, have felt themselves constrained from the overwhelming weight of fact and law, to admit this necessity, or to relinquish the positions they had urged on a former occasion. The absurdity of declaring that to be law which was not law, and that to be fact, which was not fact, they now appear to admit themselves, but yet, they contend that as the case is a general one, a general remedy is all that is required. To this it is replied, that the case though a general one, must be provided for in such a manner, that the remedy will apply itself to each particular case. If a Country was afflicted with a fatal disease, and some skilful physician should discover a remedy for the malady, would it not be considered as downright quackery, in any one who pretended to do it, that the general evil could be remedied, without an application of the fortunate discovery to each individual case.

So with this Bill—the preamble declares the fact generally, and its several provisions prescribe the remedy in each individual case. An Oath is required, and a registry of particulars is made, on which a certificate is granted, which completely and more effectually resolves every defect, and neutralises all legal doubts and disabilities. The production of this certificate at all times, and on all occasions, is unquestionable proof, that the individual has availed himself of the remedy—the cure is infallible, and his rights and privileges which before were liable to be legally questioned, are restored to a state of perfect health and security. If in the course of events, these rights and privileges should ever again be questioned, the production of the certificate, current as it must be in all Courts of Justice, would at once remove all doubt and difficulty, and the individual would reap the full benefit of the remedy, which he had applied to his own particular case.

Supposing on the other hand that it was otherwise, and that nothing more than a general remedy was provided, without prescribing any particular provision for individual cases, and that the rights of those individuals should hereafter come to be questioned. Their plea would then be, that they were included in the general remedy, but without proof of their being entitled to it, this plea would not avail them in a Court of Justice—from the length of time that might have elapsed the death of parties, it might be impossible for them to procure the necessary proof, and this something more than doubt would hang over them—a designing person would have it in his power to destroy all their hopes, at a time when they supposed the general remedy had put it out of the power of any person to do so. Thus it will be seen that this proposed general remedy, although it may be artfully stated, so as to appear specious on the surface—danger lurks at the bottom of it, because it professes more than it can accomplish, by promising general security without any specific remedy for individual cases.

The Bill on the contrary provides an ample and simple remedy, applicable to every individual case, and furnishes the party who avails himself of its provisions, with testimony which never can be shaken—not liable to be destroyed by the death of witnesses—and subject to no casualties whatever. A public record, which stands coeval with the existence of the Province, is at all times open to examination—the party may have his proof in his own possession—it is reported in the District where he resides, and is lodged amongst the general archives of the Country. With this tripple security he may defy the arts of designing men, and rest secure in the enjoyment of all the rights and privileges of a natural born British Subject. Can he do so now? or is it probable he could, if a general remedy only, without these necessary securities was provided, without any reference whatever to his particular case. And here a most distinguishing "feature" of the Bill deserves to be particularly noticed. The securities which it affords are all obtained on the testimony of the party himself—he is admitted as a witness in his own case; whereas, in a Court of Justice if he failed in establishing his right to the general remedy, by other testimony than his own, the law must inevitably take its course against him. This fact may be considered as one among other proofs, of the equitable nature of the Bill.

In short, the object of the Bill, and the object of the Government, is to provide a remedy for the security of these people, which shall be permanent in its nature, and not liable to be questioned hereafter. The opponents of the present measure, have not attempted to deny that the Bill will effect this desirable purpose. They have it is true proposed a general remedy, but have not shewn by any detail, how it could be made to apply itself to particular cases. The result of so loose and careless a provision, if adopted, would inevitably be found to be inadequate and defective, and while it professed to remedy the disease, would only render it more difficult of cure hereafter.

Parliamentary Proceedings.—In our last number our summary was continued to Thursday last. The two following days, previous to the prorogation, were principally occupied on the Supply Bill, and in passing the Contingent accounts of the Two Houses.

The Estimate for the Public Service for the year 1827, was, ... £7,476 0 0

From which was deducted the probable amount to be realized for duties received from Lower Canada, and under Provincial Acts,	4,000	0 0
Balance to be provided for by Parliament,	£3,476	0 0

a smaller sum than has been required for some years past. The Bill passed agreeably to the Estimate by a majority of 21.

The Speech of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor on the Prorogation of Parliament, is contained in a Gazette Extraordinary published on Saturday last, and a Schedule of Bills which have received the Royal Assent, and those reserved for His Majesty's pleasure, is given in this day's paper.

The manner in which we have given the proceedings in Parliament, has we hope proved satisfactory to our readers. It has been our anxious endeavour, to communicate whatever appeared to be interesting. The limits of a weekly paper, preclude the possibility of giving the debates at greater length than we have done, within that period when they excite any attention, and when we state that it was said of one Hon. Member, that he had spoken Thirty nine times to one question, it may be doubted whether even a daily paper could keep pace with them.

Contracts are offered in the Montreal Papers, by Colonel By, for the construction of the first eight Locks of the Rideau Canal, and for about 750 Tons of Timber for the works. It is stated that in the ensuing season, as many as 1000 Masons and 4000 labourers, will be employed on the Canal.

Commissary General Randolph J. Couth Esqr. and family, have arrived at New York, in the Packet Ship Canada. He relieves Commy. Genl. Turquand, in the charge of the Commissariat Department in Canada.

VOL. I. NO. 40.

Upper Canada Gazette.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, MARCH, 3 1827.

BY AUTHORITY.

CHAP. I.

An Act to confer upon His Majesty certain powers and authorities, necessary to the making, maintaining, and using the Canal intended to be completed under His Majesty's direction, for connecting the waters of Lake Ontario with the River Ottawa, and for other purposes therein mentioned.

[Passed 17th Feb'y. 1827.]

WHEREAS, His Majesty has been most graciously pleased to direct measures to be immediately taken, under the superintendance of the proper Military Department, for constructing a Canal uniting the waters of Lake Ontario with the River Ottawa, and affording a convenient Navigation for the Transport of Naval and Military Stores; and whereas, such a Canal, when completed, will tend most essentially to the security of this Province, by facilitating measures for its defence, and will also greatly promote its Agricultural and Commercial Interests; and it is therefore expedient to provide by Law any necessary facility towards the prosecution of so desirable a Work

Be it therefore enacted, by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act. passed in the Fourteenth Year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province,'" and by the authority of the same, That the Officer employed by His Majesty to superintend the said Work, shall have full power and authority to explore the Country lying between Lake Ontario or the waters leading therefrom, and the River Ottawa, and to enter into and upon the Lands or Grounds of, or belonging to, any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, and to Survey and take Levels of the same or any part thereof, and set out and ascertain such parts thereof as he shall think necessary and proper for making the said Canal, Locks, Aqueducts, Tunnels, and all such other Improvements, matters, and conveniencies, as he shall think proper and necessary for making, effecting, preserving, improving, completing, and using in the said Navigation; and also, to bore, dig, cut, trench, remove, take, carry away, and lay earth, soil clay, stone, rubbish, trees, roots of trees, beds of gravel or sand, or any other matter or things which may be dug or got in the making of the said Canal, Locks, Tunnels, Aqueducts, or other Improvements, or out of any Lands or Grounds of any person or persons adjoining or lying contiguous thereto, and which may be necessary for constructing or repairing the said Canal, or other the said Works or Improvements, or which may obstruct the making or maintaing the same; and also, to make, build, erect, and set up, in and upon the said Canal, or upon the Lands adjoining or near to the same, such and so many Bridges, Tunnels, Aqueducts, Sluices, Locks, Wears, Pens for water, Tanks, Reservoirs, Drains, Wharves, Quays, Landing Places, and other Works, Ways, Roads, and Conveniences, as the Officer aforesaid shall think requisite and convenient for the purposes of the said Navigation; and also, from time to time to alter the route of the said Canal, and to amend, repair, widen, or enlarge the same or any other of the conveniences above mentioned, as well for carrying or conveying Goods, Commodities, Timber, and other things, to and from the said Canal, as for the carrying or conveying of all manner of materials necessary for making, erecting, finishing, altering, repairing, amending, widening, or enlarging the works of, and belonging to, the said Navigation; and also, place, lay, work, and manufacture the said materials on the grounds near to the place or places where the said works or any of them are or shall be intended to be made, erected, repaired, or done, and to build and construct the several Locks, Bridges, Works, and Erections, belonging thereto; and also, to make, maintain, repair, and alter any fences or passages over, under or through the said Canal or the Reservoirs and Tunnels, Aqueducts, Passages, Gutters, Water Courses, and Sluices respectively, which shall communicate therewith; and also, to make, set up, and appoint Drawing Boats, Barges, Vessels, or Rafts, passing in, through, along, or upon the said Canal, as the Officer aforesaid shall think convenient, and to construct, erect, and keep in repair, any Piers, Arches, or other Works, in, upon, and across any Rivers or Brooks, for making, using, maintaining, and repairing the said Canal, and the Towing Paths on the sides thereof; and also, to construct, make, and do all other matters and things which he shall think necessary and convenient for the making, effecting, preserving, improving, completing, and using the said Canal, in pursuance and within the true meaning of this Act, doing as little damage as may be in the execution of the several powers to him hereby granted.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That after any Lands or Grounds shall be set out and ascertained to be necessary for making and completing the said Canal, and other purposes and conveniences herein before mentioned, the Officer is hereby empowered to contract, compound, compromise, and agree with all bodies politic, communities, corporations, aggregate or sole, guardians, and all other person or persons for themselves, or as Trustees, not only for and on behalf of themselves, their Heirs and Successors, but also for and on behalf of those whom they represent, whether infants, lunatics, ideots, femmes covert, or other persons who shall occupy, be possessed of, or interested in, any Lands or Grounds which shall be set out, or ascertained as aforesaid, for the absolute surrender to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors of so much of the said Land as shall be required, or for the damages which he, she, or they may reasonably claim in consequence of the said intended Canal, Locks, Towing Paths, Rail-ways, and other Constructions and Erections, being cut and constructed in and upon his, her, or their respective Lands, and that all such contracts, agreements, and surrenders, shall be valid and effectual in Law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever any Law, Statute, or Usage, to the contrary notwithstanding.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That such parts and portions of Land or Lands, covered with Water, as may be so ascertained and set out by the Officer employed by His Majesty as necessary to be occupied for the purposes of the said Canal; and also such parts and portions as may, upon any alteration or deviation from the line orginally laid out for the said Canal, be ascertained and set out as necessary for the purposes thereof, shall be forever thereafter vested in His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if before the completion of the Canal through the Lands of any person or persons, no voluntary agreement shall have been made as to the amount of compensation to be paid for damages according to this Act, the Officer superintending the said Work shall, at any time after the completion of such portion of the Canal, upon the notice or request, in writing, of the Proprietor of such Lands, or his Agent legally authorized, appoint an Arbitrator, who at a day to be named in such notice, shall attend upon the Premises in question, to meet the Arbitrator appointed by such Claimant, and such two Arbitrators shall and may, before proceeding to consider the claim, appoint a third Arbitrator; which three Arbitrators, being first sworn by some one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace then there present, to give a just and true Award upon the claim submitted to them, shall, upon the statements of the Parties and view of the Premises, and upon the testimony of Witnesses to be examined upon Oath or Affirmation if either Party shall require it, (which Oath or Affirmation any one of the said Arbitrators is hereby author zed to Administer), make their Award in writing under their hands, of the amount of damages to be paid to such Claimant.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if either the Officer superintending the said Work, or the Party claiming damages as aforesaid, shall decline to abide by any such Award, such refusal shall be declared in writing within ten days after such Award, and damages upon such claim shall be there after assessed in manner following, but at the sole expense of the Party refusing to abide by such Award.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases in which Awards shall be made, to which either Party shall refuse to conform as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the Party dissenting from such Award, to serve on the other Party a notice in writing, appointing a day, not less than thirty days from the time of serving such notice, for having the damages for which he is is entitled to claim compensation according to this Act, assessed in the manner hereinafter provided; and that the Party giving such notice shall also specify some day therein, which shall be at least ten days before the day appointed for such assessment, and not less than ten days from the time of serving such notice, at which he will attend at the Office of the Sheriff of the District in which the Lands lie for the purpose of striking a Jury to assess the damages so claimed as aforesaid.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on the day appointed as last aforesaid, the Parties, their Attornies or Agents, shall attend at the Sheriff's office, and that the Sheriff shall at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon proceed in the presence of the Parties, or such of them their Attorney or Agent as may be present, to select the names of forty one persons from among those qualified to serve on special juries, and in the manner directed by law for selecting special juries, and that the names of such forty one persons so drawn being fairly written out by such Sheriff, each Party, or his Attorney or Agent attending for that pourpose shall alternately strike off one, that Party beginning at whose instance such jury is struck, until the whole number is reduced to seven, and that such seven persons shall be a jury for assessing the damages to be paid to such claimant as aforesaid. Provided always, that in case either Party omit to attend personally or by Agent at the time appointed, the Sheriff or his Depy. shall strike in behalf of such person not attending

VIII And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the seven persons so struck to serve as aforesaid shall be summoned by the Sheriff to attend upon the premises in respect to which the damages are claimed as aforesaid, giving not less than ten days notice of such attendance, and that the Sheriff or his Deputy shall also attend at the time so appointed, and shall administer to the five persons who shall first answer upon being called in the order in which they shall stand upon the original list the oath following, that is to say —"I A. B do swear that I will well and truly assess the damages upon the claim of C. D. according to the Act in that behalf," and thereupon the said jury having viewed the premises and received the testimony upon oath, or affirmation, of such witnesses as shall be brought before them, (which oath or affirmation the said Sheriff or his Deputy is hereby authorized to administer) shall deliver their virdict by the opinion of the majority of such jury of the amount of damages to be paid to such claimant.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in estimating the claim of any individual to compensation for property taken, or for damage done under the authority of this Act, the arbitrators or jury assessing such damages shall take into their consideration the benefi cial effects to accrue to such individual from the construction of the said Canal by its enhancing the value of his property or producing other advantages: Provided always nevertheless, That it shall not be competent to any Arbitratrators or Jury to direct any individual claiming as aforesaid to pay a Sum in consideration of such advantages, over and above the amount at which the damages of such individual shall be estimated.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Party desiring such Jury to be summoned, shall pay to the Sheriff for striking and summoning the same, and for attending and taking the verdict, the Sum of Five Pounds, and to each Juryman attending in pursuance of such Summons, the Sum of Fifteen Shillings.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when it shall appear necessary to cut into any Highway, in order to conduct the said Canal through the same, the Officer aforesaid shall, within one month cause to be constructed a secure, sufficient, and commodious Bridge, for the passing of Carriages, in order to re-establish the communication between the several parts of such Highways.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons shall wilfully or maliciously break down, damage, or destroy, any Bank, Lock, Gate, Sluice, or any Works, Machine, or Device, to be erected or made by virtue of this Act, or do any other wilful act, hurt, or mischief, to disturb, hinder, or prevent the carrying into execution, or completing, supporting, or maintaining the said Canal, every such person or persons so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

XIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person shall float any timber upon the said Canal, or shall suffer the overloading of any boat or vessel, or raft navigating in or upon the said Canal so as by such overloading the same to obstruct the passage of any other boat, vessel, or raft, and shall not immediately upon due notice given to the owner or person having the care of such boat, vessel, or raft, so obstructing the passage aforesaid remove the same so as to make a free passage for other boats vessels or rafts, every such owner or person floating such timber or having the care of such boat vessel, or raft, so obstructing the passage as aforesaid shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of five pounds, and if any person shall throw any ballast gravel stones or rubbish into any part of the said Canal or locks, every such person shall, for every such offence forfeit a sum not exceeding Five pounds.

XIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any boat vessel or raft, shall be placed in any part of the said Canal so as to obstruct the navigation thereof, and the person having the care of such boat vessel or raft shall not immediately, upon the request of any of the persons employed by the officer in charge, made for that purpose, remove the same, he shall for every such offence forfeit a pemalty of Ten Shillings for every hour such obstruction shall continue, and it shall be lawful for the agents, Toll-gatherers or others employed by the officer in charge to cause any such boat vessel or raft to be unloaded if necessary, and to be removed in such manner as shall be proper for preventing such obstruction in the navigation and to seize and detain such boat vessel or raft and the cargo thereof, or any part of such cargo, until the charges occasioned by such unloading and removal are paid, and if any boat or vessel shall be sunk in the said Canal, and the owner or owners, or the person or persons having the care of such boat or vessel shall not without loss of time weigh or draw up the same, it shall be lawful for the agents, Toll gatherers or other persons employed by His Majesty to cause such boat or vessel to be weighed or drawn up and to detain and keep the same until payment be made of all expenses necessarily occasioned thereby.

XV And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the owners and occupiers of any Lands adjoining to the said Canal to use any boats thereon for the purpose of husbandry or for conveying cattle from one farm or part of a farm or lands to any other farm or lands of the same owner or occupier (not passing through any lock without the consent of the officer or person in charge for the time being) without interruption, and without paying any rate or duty for the same so as the same be not made use of for the carriage of any goods wares or merchandise to Market or for sale, or for any person or persons for hire, and shall not obstruct or prejudice the navigation of the said Canal or the towing paths thereof.

XVI And wheras it may hereafter happen from floods or from unexpected accident that wears, flood gates, dams, banks, reservoirs, trenches, or other works of the said navigation may be damaged or destroyed and the adjacent lands or the property thereon thereby damaged and that it may be necessary that the same should be immediately repaired or rebuilt to prevent further damages, Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when and so often as any such case may happen, it shall be lawful for any person or persons employed by His Majesty from time to time without any delay or interruption from any person or persons whomsoever to enter into any lands grounds or hereditaments adjoining or near to the said Canal or branches reservoirs or trenches or any of them (not being an orchard garden or yard) and to dig for, work, get and carry away, and use all such stones, gravel and other materials, as may be necessary or proper for the purposes aforesaid without any previous treaty whatsoever with the owner or owners, occupier or occupiers of, or other person or persons interested in such lands, grounds or hereditaments or any of them, doing as little damage thereby as the nature of the case will admit of, and making recompense for such damages to the owner or owners of, or other persons interested in such lands, grounds property or hereditaments within the space of Six calendar months next after the same shall have been demanded, for all damages which shall or may be done by means of such accident, and means of the digging for, getting, working, taking, carrying away, and using such stones, gravel, and materials or any of them, which damages and the satisfaction and recompence in respect thereof shall be settled, adjusted, ascertained and determined, by the ways and means hereinbefore described, with respect to the other damage done by the making and completing the said navigation.

XVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the officer employed by His Majesty shall and may in such parts of the said Canal as shall not be of sufficient breadth for admitting a boat, vessel or raft, to turn about or lie, or for two boats, or other boats, vessels, or rafts to pass each other, to open or cut proper spaces or places in the lands adjoining to the said Canal at convenient distances from each other for the turning, lying and passing of any such boat, vessel, or raft, and that the said boats, vessels, and rafts, being hauled or navigated upon the said lands, shall upon meeting any other boat or vessel stop at or go back to and lie in the said places or openings in such manner as shall be publicly notified by the officer in charge of such Canal.

XVIII. And for preventing disputes touching the tonnage of any boat, barge, or other vessel, navigating upon the said Canal, Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the owner or master of every such boat, barge, or vessel, shall permit and suffer every such boat, barge, or vessel, to be gauged or measured, and refusing so to permit and suffer, shall forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings, and it shall be lawful for the toll gatherer, or such other person or persons as shall be appointed for that purpose, and such owner or master, each to choose one person to measure and ascertain such tonnage, and to mark the same on such boat, barge or other vessel, which mark shall always be evidence of the tonnage in all questions respecting the payment of the aforesaid rates or dues and if such owner or master shall refuse or decline to choose a person in his behalf as aforesaid, then the person appointed on behalf of His Majesty shall have alone the power of ascertaining such tonnage.

XIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all persons whatsoever shall have free liberty to use with Horses, cattle and Carriages, the roads and ways to be made as aforesaid, (except the towing paths) for the purpose of conveying any goods, wares, merchandize, timber, and commodities, whatsoever, to and from the said Canal, and also to navigate on the said Canal with any boats, barges, vessels or rafts, and to use the said wharves and quayes for loading and unloading any goods wares, merchandize, timber, and commodities, and also to use the said towing paths with horses for drawing and hawling such boats and vessels, upon payment of such rates and dues as shall be established by His Majesty

XX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case of refusal or neglect of payment of any such rates or dues as may be imposed by His Majesty for passing along the said Canal or of any part thereof, on demand, to the person or persons appointed to receive the same, such person may in his own name sue for and recover the same in any Court having jurisdiction thereof, or the person or persons to whom the said rates or dues ought to be paid, may and he is and they are hereby authorized and empowered to seize and detain such boat, vessel, barge, or raft, for or in respect whereof such rates or dues ought to be paid, and detain the same until payment thereof

XXI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all penalties and forfeitures for offences against this Act or against any rule, order, or bye-law of the said Officer to be made in pursuance thereof, shall, upon proof of the offences respectively before any two Justices of the Peace for the District in which such offence has been committed, either by confession of the party or parties, or by the oath of one credible witness, be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattles of the parties offending, by warrant under the hand and seal of such Justices, and the overplus, after such penalties and forfeitures and the charges of such distress and sale are deducted, shall be returned, upon demand to the owner or owners of such goods and chattles, and in case such sufficient distress cannot be found, or such penalties and forfeitures shall not be forthwith paid, it shall be lawful for such Justices, by warrant under their hands and seals, to cause such offender or offenders to be committed to the Common Gaol of such District, there to remain without bail or mainprize for such time as such Justices may direct, not exceeding twenty days, unless such penalties and forfeitures and all reasonable charges attending the same shall be sooner paid and satisfied

XXII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all Penalties imposed by this Act, when levied and satisfied in manner aforesaid, shall be paid to the said Officer, to be by him transmitted to His Majesty's Receiver General of this Province, to be accounted for to His Majesty through the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, in such manner as His Majesty shall be pleased to direct

XXIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and singular the powers and authorities given by this Act to His Majesty, or to the Officer to be employed by His Majesty in superintending the construction of the said Canal, or to the Officer at any time hereafter in charge thereof, shall extend so far as may be required for the purposes of this Act, to all and every the persons employed or to be employed in the execution of any matter authorized to be done by this Act.

XXIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and every the powers, authorities and privileges by this Act given, relating in any manner to the Canal intended to be made as aforesaid, shall extend and apply to that part of the Navigation to be made or improved, which shall lie along the Lakes or Rivers as well as to such parts as shall require to be wholly made and excavated through Lands affording now no natural Channel.

XXV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for any Officers or persons employed by His Majesty, in case His Majesty shall desire to improve the Navigation of the Rivers Tay and Goodwood, which empty their waters into the River Rideau, to enter into or upon the Lands or Grounds of or belonging to any person or persons on the borders of the said Rivers Tay and Goodwood, in the same manner and for the like purposes, and subject to the same conditions as His Majesty is by this Act authorized to do with respect to the Lands bordering on the River Rideau.

XXVI And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any Plaint shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons for any thing done or to be done in pursuance of this Act, or in execution of the powers and authorities, or the orders and directions hereinbefore given or granted, every such suit shall be brought or commenced within six Calendar months next after the fact committed, or in case there shall be a continuation of damages, then within six Calendar months next after the doing or committing of such damages shall cease, and not afterwards; and the Defendant or Defendants in such action or suit, shall and may plead the General Issue, and give this Act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this Act, and if it shall appear to be done so, or if any action or suit shall be brought after the time hereinbefore limited for bringing the same, then a verdict shall be given for the Defendant.

XXVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be deemed a Public Act, and shall be judicially noticed as such in the several Courts in this Province.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.

D. CAMERON, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, t shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorised by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.

THE PALM-TREE.

By Mrs. Hemans.

.....Has his heart forgot, so far away
Those native scenes—those rocks and torrents gray;
The tall bananas whispering to the breeze;
The shores—the sound of those encircling seas
Heard from his infant days—and the piled heap
Of lofty stones, where his fathers sleep?—Bowles.

It waved not through an eastern sky,
Beside a fount of Araby;
It was not fanned by southern breeze,
In some green isle of Indian seas;
Nor did its graceful shadow sleep
O'er stream of Afric lone and deep.

But fair the exiled palm-tree grew
'Midst foliage of no kindred hue;
Through the laburnum's dropping gold
Uprose that stem of orient mould
And Europe's violets, faintly sweet,
Purpled the moss-beds at his feet.

Strange looked it there!—the willow streamed
Where silvery waters near it gleamed;
The lime-bough lured the honey-bee
To murmer by the Desert's tree;
And showers of snowy roses made
A lustre in its fan-like shade.

There came an eve of festal hours—
Rich music filled that garden's bowers;
Lamps, that from flowering branches hung,
On sparks of dew soft colours flung;
And bright forms glanced—a fairy show—
Under the blossoms so and fro.

But one, in one, 'midst those the throng,
Seemed reckless all of dance or song;
He was a youth of dusky mein,
Whereon the Indian sun had been.
Of crested brow, and long black hair—
A stranger, like the Palm-tree, there.

And slowly, sadly moved his plumes,
Glittering athwart the leafy glooms;
He passed the pale green olives by,
Nor won the chestnut-flowers his eye;
But when to that sole Palm he came,
Then shot a rapture through his frame.

To him, to him, its rustling spoke,
The silence of his soul it broke!
It whispered of its own bright isle,
That lit the ocean with a smile;
Aye, to his ear that native tone
Had something of the sea-wave's moan!

His Mother's cabin-home, that lay
Where feathery cocoas fringed the bay;
The dashing of his brethren's oar;
The conch's wild note along the shore:—
All, through his wakening bosom swept:
He clasp'd his country's tree and wept.*

Oh! scorn him not!—the strength, whereby
The patriot girds himself to die;
Th' unconquerable power, which fills
The freeman, battling on his hills—
These have one fountain, deep and clear—
The same whence gushed that child-like tear!

* This incident is, I think, recorded by De Lille, in his poem of Les Jardins.

Miscellaneous.

ROB ROY.

This reputed chief of the warlike Macgregors was the hero of various exploits, commemorated in traditional story; and many of his "deeds of fame" display a generous magnanimity, which in happier circumstances, might have rendered him an eminent benefactor of the human race. In early youth, he was distinguished by a passionate admiration of the poesy of his country, and he is said to have recited several thousand lines. Rob Roy's intimate acquaintance with the soul-exalting relics of bardic composition, no doubt, tended to inspire the liberal humanity, which softened the harsher features of his intrepid—or, perhaps, desperate character. The love of nature had been in boyhood, and in maturer age, to delight in wandering alone through the hills and glens of his native land. In peaceful times, he would, probably, have been conspicuous as a poet; and if, instead of aggression, he had found protection from the powerful borderers of his little property, he was gifted with talents to anticipate the translator of Ossian. Tradition makes him the deliverer of many distressed damsels. On one occasion, travelling alone, through the suggested passes of Glenetive, his natural taste for the sublime was excited by the picturesque grandeur of those romantic scenes.—The sun had nearly dipped his golden hair in the western main; but some parting tinges played upon the rugged towering pinnacles of Chrurachan, and the profound tranquility of nature was unbroken, except by gentle murmurs of the tide, that with solemn placidity gave a character of life to the waters of the lake. He threw himself along a mossy rock, and gazed on the magnificent perspective until the slim outline could scarcely be traced, between him and the horizon. From enrapturing reveries, he was startled by female shrieks; and drawing his trusty blade he sprung forward to follow the sound. The shrieks were stilled; but the voices of men drew nearer, and they seemed in hot altercation. Rob Roy laid himself down among "tall rank grass of the wild," and distinctly could hear two persons disputing in a high English accent. The one expostulated in behalf of a captive lady—the other insisted upon his right to extort a compliance with his dishonourable solicitations. They still proceeded, through trackless paths; and Macgregor, with silent determination, pursued. They soon disappeared, as if elves of the wood had descended to their Tomhans. The screams of a female furnished a direction; while the Celt no longer stood in perplexity, and he lost not a moment in shaping his course according to the sounds, which led him to a ruin, that on the one hand remains of a fortress, situated upon a craggy eminence. The voice was, at times suppressed, and then burst forth with frenzied energy. Rob Roy feared not the face, nor the arm of man; but he afterwards confessed, that early impressions of supernatural agency daunted his courage. Again he recollected, that, "the gleaming counter-spell, the steel of the mighty was in his hand," and he pressed onwards to unravel the mystery. He could discover no door, no window, in the half-ruined tower; but he perceived, after surrounding the rock, that from a tangling thicket the tones of female distress were most audible. The moon emitted some feeble rays, by which he discerned a vaulted passage, which with cautious steps he explored. A faint glimmering of light guided him, where, with disordered dress, dishevelled tresses, and a lovely countenance, marked by tears, he found in a large apartment, a female stretched upon some grass, nearly exhausted by violent efforts. On seeing Rob Roy, she attempted to rise, saying, "if you come to end my life, cheerfully shall I meet the blow. Death is my only refuge." "Vield not to despair, lady," he replied, "Rob Roy Macgregor comes to release you. But every moment is precious, quickly tell me your name and your wrongs." "I am," said the lady, "a daughter of the chief of——, treacherously decoyed from the castle of my father, by a knight of England. He and his friend were my only company personal my mother to let me go out to ride with them, to learn some of the fine performances of English ladies in hunting; and after going some miles, I was forced into a stranger sloop, and carried away. I now find that each of the friends had designs on me. They deceived each other; but the younger has honour and pity." "Remain as you are," said Rob Roy, "I hope soon to return with good tidings."—The chief, with an air of authority, stalked into a vault, where two gentlemen were harshly debating, and three armed men paced the floor. They all shrunk from the terrific apparition. "Shame to manhood!" said Macgregor. "A lady of high birth insulted! tremble! for even the demons of darkness are stirring in her cause." After a pause, the elder knight said, "You, at least, are no airy demon, but substantial flesh and blood, and shall feel this, if you do not instantly take yourself off." He made a push at Rob Roy, as he spoke; but the chief was the most dexterous swordsman of the age, and soon laid his adversary at his feet. Calling for a parley, the younger knight was disposed to restore the lady; nor did the mercenary seamen oppose it, being unwilling to risk the consequences, when no further reward from the employer could be expected. Rob Roy bound up the wound of the elder knight, and by a shorter way, he and the lady were conveyed to the sea-side. In less than forty hours, the battlements of——castle were visible. At some distance from the common landing place Macgregor desired to be put on shore. He proceeded with rapid steps to the castle, to inform the cheif of his daughter's safety, and to claim his hospitality for the wounded knight, for whose security he had pledged his honour. The younger knight, was married to the lady, and the elder suffered to depart, unmolested, to his own country, for the cheif considered himself bound in honour and gratitude, to fulfil the terms promised by Rob Roy.

In ancient times, and among chiefs of more modern date, the engagements made by a friend were esteemed inviolable by the party concerned.

A rivulet, which runs through the spot where Fletcher of Cameron, a follower of the Macgregor chief, murdered the boys who came as spectators of the battle of Luss, is called the stream of young Ghosts; and it is beleived, that if crossed by a Macgregor after sunset, he will be scared by unhallowed spectres.—This is a remarkable proof that superstition is not only irrational, but unjust; since neither of the alleged murderers were of the Macgregor clan, and the chief when he compelled the boys to enter the church, instead of standing exposed to random shots from the combatants, had no view but to preserve their lives, and to detain them as hostages, if circumstances required a pledge for the safety of his own people.—Yet superstition represents the ghosts of the victims peculiarly hostile to the clan of Macgregor. So late as the year 1757, every spring the tragical fate of the scholars of Dunbarton was commemorated by the boys of that ancient town. The aftenoon of the supposed anniversary; the dux of the highest class was laid on a bier, covered with the clergyman's gown, and carried by his companions to a grave, previously opened. The whole school, bearing wooden guns reversed, performed the ceremony of interment, and recited Gaelic odes over the dead, allusive to the horrible massacre. They returned, singing songs of lamentation in the same language.

There are records to show that Sir Humphrey, laird of Luss, under pretence of desiring a permanent reconciliation, invited Macgregor of Glenstrae, and the principal vassals of his clan, to meet him at Lennox, but he prepared five hundred horsemen, and three hundred foot, to form an ambuscade, and cut off the retreat of the Macgregors. Their chief came from Ranock, with only two hundred followers; but they were accompanied and confined them in the church, as we formerly related. The Macgregors had no friend at court to contradict the misrepresentations of their powerful foes. All their loyal services were forgotten—all they had done and suffered for the house of Bruce—all their achievements with Glencairn, and several Highland clans, when they defeated Cromwell's troops at Aberfoyle. They were prohibited from bearing their hereditary name, and hunted with bloodhounds, like the most noxious beasts of prey. These cruelties form the best apology for Rob Roy and his clan, in retaliating upon their oppressors; and no act of cruelty or meanness has been imputed to Rob Roy. The lawless propensities of a freebooter were softened by the humanizing influence of a poetical imagination, and in some measure exalted by the pride of ancestry, and natural greatness of soul.—His death was entirely conformity to the romantic peculiarities of his life. A life of harassing vicissitude had undermind his robust constitution, but his spirit was unsubdued, though his person evidently sunk under decay; and after manfully resisting his infirmities, he was confined to bed, when a gentleman who had done him a wrong came to see him. Being informed, that the stranger asked admission to his chamber, he exclaimed that an enemy must not behold Rob Roy Macgregor in the posture of defeat." He made his family raise him up, put on his clothes and warlike accoutrements, and then received the visitor with dignified civility. When his guest, after dying man desired to be again laid in the bed, and ordered the piper to be called in. He cordially shook hands with "the voice of war," instructing him to play, "cha teill mi tuille"—(I shall never return), and not to cease sounding the pipes while breath remained in the breast of Rob Roy. He was punctually obeyed, and expired with "the voice of battle," pealing around him. His funeral was respectably and numerously attended.

The chivalrous reliance on the steel of their fathers, which formed a prominent feature in the characteristics of the Gael, has, in some instances, produced heavy loss to their posterity. Macdonald of Kesshock was offered a written charter for his lands in the fourteenth century; but he spurned at the proposals, saying, "no clan-donald shall hold his right by a sheep's skin. The sword of their fathers shall remain, as it has been from the earliest time, a sufficient charter for the brave." In the sixteenth century, the superior reclaimed those lands, and they were lost to the family of Kesshock. The accomplished and valiant descendant of the first mentioned leader of the brave, being asked, in the year 1744, the average revenue of his estate, replied, "I can bring to the field five hundred fighting men." The feudal power his lands afforded was all he deemed worthy of computation.

In the reign of George the First, the Grant cheiftain was offered a patent of nobility, which he declined, saying, "who then would be laird of Grant?" This feudal chief felt, and expressed in a few emphatic words, that no euphony of sounds could add to the wealth and power derived from his wide streching and populous lands.

THE IRON MASK.—It has been discovered that the person who was known by the appellation of the "Man in the Iron Mask" was no other than a Count MATTHIOLI, Prime Minister of the Duke of MANTUA. It appears that the cause of his imprisonment was his having sold to Spain the secret of a negociation between his master and LOUIS XIV. for the surrender of Casale, the capital of the Duchy of Montserrat. The French KING; being much enraged at his perfidy, gave orders to his Minister to take measures for his capture. This was effected by enticing him to the French frontier, where a troop of horse was in readiness to secure him. The prisoner was confined at first in Pignerol, from which place he was afterwards removed to the Bastille. His confinement on this change in the place of his confinement was owing to the appointment of the Governor of Pignerol to the Bastille. This transfer was considered expedient on account of the stratagems of the prisoner, inasmuch as it was not thought safe to intrust him to the care of a person who was not aware of his scheme and character. The story of his writing his history on a silver plate is not true. Such a circumstance did take place, but it was at Valzin; a poor Hugneot who was confined there inscribed some texts of Scripture on a plate, in hopes that some of his friends might come to it, and thereby discover the place of his imprisonment. This occurrence has been mingled with the history of the Piedmontese prisoner. The Iron Mask was confined in the strict manner generally described, in consequence of his disposition for intrigue, which rendered him obnoxious and dangerous to Louis XIV. This account, which is founded on papers in the Depot of Foreign Affairs at Paris, was published many years ago. So prepossessed, however, were people in favour of the marvellous, that they rejected the truth. The prisoner was buried on the 3d of March, 1703; a few days before his death, he told his physician that he believed himself to be about sixty years of age. If he reckoned correctly, he must have been born in 1643.—Morning Paper.

Summary.

It is said that four two-decked first rates are ordered to be laid down in the Plymouth Dock-yard—two at Pembroke, one at this yard, and one at an eastern yard. The length of each of these ships is to be 16 feet greater than that of the Caledonia, and it is supposed that in twenty months these immense ships will be ready to be launched.—Plymouth Journal.

WAR.—Recruiting has been briskly going on for two weeks past, and on Sunday night an order arrived in Glasgow, lowering the standard from five feet eight to five feet six inches.—Glasgow Chronicle.

Progress of the Reformation.—Yesterday 19 persons, lately professing the Roman Catholic religion, renounced the errors of Popery, in the parish Church of Cavan. This fact is peculiarly gratifying under existing circumstances, and proves that the Prelates possess no more power than the Priests in repressing that spirit of inquiry which is abroad, and which, we trust, will be generally persevered in. We had some observations prepared upon the subject, which we are reluctantly compelled to postpone until Wednesday.—Dublin Evening Mail.

Huddersfield, Dec. 23.—The trade of this town and neighbourhood is improving a little, and public confidence is gaining strength, but the number of unemployed poor is still very great, and the consequent distress requires every exertion which humanity can dictate for its alleviation.

Halifax, Dec. 23.—Our stuff market was not quite so brisk last saturday as that of the preceding week. There was, however, more business done than is usual at Christmas.

An ingenious artist, named Wilcocks, residing at Exeter, has, it is said, invented a self-acting pianoforte, well calculated to serve for a family quadrille or country dance; so as to obviate the necessity of the best-tempered girl in the company losing her share of the amusement.

That splendid specimen of eastern magnificence, the Burmese imperial state carriage, was sold by auction on Monday week, at Pegu castle. The unknower estimated its original cost at a lac of rupees; the number of stones set in it amounted to twenty thousand; but he was not authorized to vouch for them as being precious. After a good deal of preliminary pushing, the first bidding he obtained was 100 guineas, on which the auction ended, and was ultimately knocked down for 1,000 guineas. The throne of the Burmese Monarch was bought by the same purchaser for fifty guineas.

At the conclusion of the Special General Meeting of the Proprietors of the East India Stock, which took yesterday, Sir Charles Forbes expressed his hope that the next occasion on which the Proprietors should be assembled, would be to pay some mark of respect to the memory of that great and good mad, the Marquis of Hastings. [Loud and continued cheering.] He said that he was glad that such a proposition would be unanimously adopted, and he trusted that, ere twelve months should elapse, the statue of that lamented and noble individual would be seen adorning that court, which would be the most striking testimony of respect they could possibly pay to him. This information was received with loud cheers by the whole Court.—Dec. 24.

[From the Dublin Freeman's Journal.]—73d on march to Cork, commanded by Colonel O'Connell—56, marched yesterday morning for Naas, but to proceed for Cork, commanded by Colonel John, to embark for Portugal.

Staff.—Major Belcher, Aid-de-Camp to Sir George Murray, is appointed Deputy-Adjutantant-General—Major Craig, Assistant-Adjutant-General, to the army in Portugal. The latter sailed from Hull yesterday morning.

Town-Major White, of Dublin Garrison, is appointed Provost Martial to the Army in Portugal.

The 10th and 11th Regiments ordered to Cork, preparatory to their embarkation for the Cape of Good Hope and Ceylon, are expected to be in Dublin on Thursday. The transports at Cove—the Arab and Jupiter, with the head quarters of the 22d Regiment of infantry, and the first Division of the 34th Regiment, detained for the West Indies, and where part of the former Regiment has already sailed for, have been detained by contrary winds.

Milford Dec. 23.—So mild a Christmas day has not been known for many years. There was scarcely a zephyr stirring and the sun shone quite warm. The thermometer stood in the shade at 75. Indeed, the season altogether is more than Italian. The fruit and vegetation all alive—"the birds gaily singing" in every direction. In fact, none can imagine the scene but such as witness it.

Lord George Beresford has been for some time very alarmingly ill in Dublin. The complaint under which his Lordship labours is, we understand, a cancer of the worst and most incurable character in the nose. It is said that his physicians are anxious for His Lordship's removal to London, but are apprehensive that his complaint may prove fatal before his arrival there. His Lordship is at present living in Harcourt-street.—Waterford Chronicle.

Singular fact.—At the embarkation of the troops last week from Deptford for Portugal, one old woman took leave of six of her sons, all fine young fellows, belonging to the company in the Gua ds,

WHITEHALL, Dec. 29 1826.—The King has been pleased to appoint the Most Noble Arthur Duke of Wellington, K. G. and G. C. B., to be constable of the Tower of London, in the room of the Marquis of Hastings, deceased.

The King has also been pleased to appoint the Most Noble Arthur Duke of Wellington to be His Majesty's Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the Tower Hamlets, in the room of the Marquis of Hastings, deceased.

CANADA COMPANY.

A meeting of the Proprietors of the Canada Company was held yesterday at the City of London Tavern

At one o'clock Mr Bosanquet (the Governor) took the chair. He stated, that this Half-yearly Court was called, pursuant to the provisions of the charter (and the Directors would be happy to give the Subscribers any information as to the Company's affairs. The principal object of the Directors was to obtain the authority and sanction of the Shareholders for carrying into effect the resolutions of July last. The following are the resolutions referred to:—

At a general meeting of the Shareholders of the Canada Company, assenting to the new agreement made with His Majesty's Government, on the 23d of May 1826, held at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, on Wednesday, the 12th of July, 1826, Charles Bosanquet, Esq. in the chair.

It was resolved,

1. That by a Report of the Court of Directors read at this Meeting, it appears that the holders of only one thousand and ninety-five shares had, on the 14th ultimo, refused to accede to the new arrangement with his Majesty's Government.

2. That, in consideration of the dissentients bearing so small a proportion to the subscribers assenting to the new agreement, it is expedient to authorise the Directors, and they are hereby authorised, when the charter shall have been obtained, to pay them off, at the rate of £10 per share.

3. That, it appears by the Report of the Directors that the whole amount of the sum to be paid to His Majesty's Government is now accurately ascertained, and that no further advance of capital will be required, for at least two years, on the reduced number of shares; it is therefore, not expedient to issue any new shares in lieu of the one thousand and ninety-five shares of the dissentients.

The chief object of the Meeting, then, was to pay off the dissentients, if he might so term them—that was to say, pay back to those individuals the sums they had advanced on their several shares. For the last two years, the company had been involved in many disagreeable discussions with the government, the object of which would be seen by those who read the Report.

The Report having been read to the meeting:—

The Chairman said, that upon the latter portion of it he had to propose—"That the resolutions of the 12th July, 1825, be adopted by the meeting, and that the Directors be authorised and empowered to carry them into effect."

On the motion being put from the Chair.

Mr. Anderton said, that as the charter had been obtained by the exertions of the Directors, he would propose, first, "that the thanks of the Court be given to them;" and, secondly, "that, as the proprietors of 1,095 shares had expressed a desire to withdraw themselves from the Company, their shares should be offered to the proprietors at par, and that a proper transfer should be made accordingly."—These resolutions he should propose as an amendment to the one proposed by the chairman. And, as there had been much said about the dissentients, and as their dissent had given rise to much difficulty, he had no doubt but that this would obviate all.

W. Williams, Esq. M. P., said that the wisest and the best course to be adopted, was to pay the dissentients the £10 for their shares; and then to unite to see what was to be done for the good of the Company. The Directors had been obliged to apply for another charter, in consequence of the difficulties that arose from the transfer of crown and clergy reserves, and he did not think that the latter charter was so good as the first, but still it was good. If the resolution that had been just moved were suffered to pass, it would certainly be the downfall of the Company. It had certainly come from a very high quarter, but also from a very interested one. He did not mean to say any thing disrespectful of the gentleman, but no human being could totally divest himself of interested feelings.

Mr. Thomas Wilson supported the resolutions which had been moved by Mr. Anderton. He thought it would be the best course that could be adopted; for he questioned whether, having once formed a partnership, any number of those parties could be let out without causing its destruction. He should therefore give his vote for the amendment that had been proposed.

Mr. Williams said, that those resolutions could not be carried into effect without ruining the Company.

Mr. D. Caruthers objected to the mode proposed by the Directors, and could support the amendment.

Mr. Easthope, M. P. conceived that the simple question for the Meeting to consider was, whether the Company could or could not bind the dissentients? The Directors had had two opinions from very high authority, and they had decided that the dissentients could not be bound. They could, therefore, do nothing with them but pay them off. Then came the only question, whether for their shares they should be allowed £9 as, the real worth of the assets of the Company at the time of the dissent, or £10, the amount they had advanced? and the Directors had decided on the latter;

Mr. J. Bowring conceived that the second charter was only the first somewhat modified; and that it was not fair to consider the Company as a new Company, but merely as somewhat changed from its original form. He thought, therefore, that the subscribers ought to be equally bound by it.

Mr. Fresfield said, it was impossible for any person who had read the prospectus of the Company and its Charter, not to know that there was a material difference between the first charter and the second. It was, in fact, the same as saying—"You shall buy land at an arbitration price," and "you shall buy land at the price we choose to put upon it." It was not a modification, but a vital alteration, of which the dissentients complained, and there was clearly no way of dealing with them but by paying off the deposits on their shares.

Some conversation took place between the Chairman and Mr. Anderton, relative to the first of his resolutions, which was withdrawn.

The Chairman then proceeded to put the question on the second resolution, but was interrupted by the shareholders, who expressed his regret that Mr. Williams, one of the directors, should have thought the second agreement made with Government an unfavourable agreement.

Mr. Williams explained.—He never meant to give his opinion to such an effect: he certainly did not think the second agreement so good as the first, but on this point there was a variety of opinion among the Directors. He conceived the present agreement to be a very beneficial one, and that it would be most successful.

The Chairman, after stating the original resolution to be merely a confirmation of those passed on the 12th July, moved the amendment—"That the 1,095 shares of the holders, who desire to withdraw from the Company, shall be offered to the proprietors at par; and be transferred to them accordingly."

The amendment was then put, and lost by a shew of hands.

The Chairman then put the original motion, which was carried.

The Directors are therefore authorised to pay off the dissentients at the rate of £10 per share.

The meeting then adjourned.—New Times.

Decree of the King of France against the Slave Trade.

Charles, by the grace of God, King of France and Navarre, to all who shall see these presents greeting.

We have ordained, and do ordain, that the project of a law of the following tenor shall be presented to our minister secretary of state to the department of the marine and the colonies whom we charge to explain its object and to support it in discussion.

Only article.—In case of a co-operation or participation, by any means whatever, in the traffic known under the name of the negro slave trade, the proprietors, and undercargoes; the insurers who insure it knowingly; the captain or commander and other officers of the vessel; shall be punished with banishment, and a fine equal to the value of the ship and cargo.

The fine shall be pronounced conjointly against the individuals designated in the preceding paragraph.

The captain and officers shall be further declared incapable of serving, under any title, in the King's Navy or the French Merchant service.

Other individuals belonging to the crew shall be punished with imprisonment from three months to five years. From these are excepted such of the abovementioned individuals as shall, within fifteen days of the vessel's arrival, declare to the Commissary of marine, or the magistrates in the French ports, or the French consuls in foreign ports, the facts which they shall know.

The vessel shall be seized and confiscated.

The penalties under the present law are independent of those which shall be pronounced, in conformity with the penal code, for other crimes or offences which may have been committed on board the ship.

The law of April 15, 1818, abrogated.

Given in our palace of the Tuileries, December 27, 1826: and, of our reign the 3d.

CHARLES.

COMTE DE CHABROL.

Domestic.

While the Royal Engineers were exploring the Upper Country for the Route of the Rideau Canal, they discovered in a mountainous range in the township of Hull, an immense bed of Iron Ore of the richest quality, specimens of which have been brought with them to Montreal; also in the same mountains were found, amazingly large blocks of white, green and variegated marble, with blue, black and silver granite of the most valuable description, in consequence of which a party of outcgoing gentlemen had entered into a covenant to work these mines, designated the "Hull Mining Company." It is certainly pleasant to reflect that the more Canada is explored, the more interesting she becomes. There is a wealth in her wilderness, yet undreamed of; her mountains swell with valuable ores; her rivers swarm with fish yet unbooked; her plains teem with fertility, and her forests worth more than ten times the timber they contain. As yet, she had been viewed only by the eyes of lumberers and furriers, the former with their hatchets, the latter with their guns; now she is undergoing the strict inspection of men of science, under the aid of a liberal Government, who look not to this object nor to that, for the benefit of particular interests but to the country as a whole, embracing a thousand objects interesting to mankind.—Montreal Herald.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 3, 1827.

There is no later intelligence from Europe.

The most active preparations appear to be making for carrying on the works at the Rideau Canal.—We mentioned last week that notices for Contracts were given in the Montreal papers for part of these works—the following is a list of the Advertisements,

For excavating 1200 feet of the Canal.

For 744 pieces of Timber from 15 to 60 feet long.

For Constructing the first Eight Locks—and for Building Barracks for Officers, and 60 men at its mouth on the Ottawa River.

The Act passed during the last Session of Parliament respecting the Canal, will be found in this days Gazette.

A Petition to the Imperial Parliament against the Naturalization Bill has been published, and "every liberal minded man in the Province," is called upon with no small degree of assurance, to "express his approbation of the matter it contains," by putting his name to it. On looking it over, it contains so many statements at variance with fact, and so many aspersions against the Government, whose only desire is to set for ever at rest, all doubt on a question of importance, that we should recommend every prudent man to whom it may be presented, to read it, before he puts his name to it. The Bill passed by our Legislature is reserved for the Royal Assent, agreeably to the Act of the Imperial Parliament which conferred the power of Legislating on the subject.

The Prerogative of assenting, or witholding the assent to that Bill, is vested in His Majesty. The Petition, wilfully forgetting this, is addressed to the "Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, in Parliament assembled." The Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, we should think, are too well acquainted with Constitutional forms and proceedings, to interfere with a prerogative vested in the King by an Act of Parliament.

It has always been considered as a high honor to be admitted to the privileges of a British Subject, and the King, as the fountain of all honor, happens very properly and constitutionally, to be vested with the power of conferring it. In England, No-

sequence of the said intended Canal, Locks, Towing Paths, Rail-ways, and other Constructions and Erections, being cut and constructed in and upon his, her, or their respective Lands, and that all such contracts, agreements, and surrenders, shall be valid and effectual in Law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever any Law, Statute, or Usage, to the contrary notwithstanding.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That such parts and portions of Land or Lands, covered with Water, as may be so ascertained and set out by the Officer employed by His Majesty as necessary to be occupied for the purposes of the said Canal; and also, such parts and portions as may, upon any alteration or deviation from the line originally laid out for the said Canal, be ascertained and set out as necessary for the purposes thereof, shall be forever thereafter vested in His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if before the completion of the Canal through the Lands of any person or persons, no voluntary agreement shall have been made as to the amount of compensation to be paid for damages according to this Act, the Officer superintending the said Work shall, at any time after the completion of such portion of the Canal, upon the notice or request, in writing, of the Proprietor of such Lands, or his Agent legally authorized, appoint an Arbitrator, who at a day to be named in such notice, shall attend upon the Premises in question, to meet the Arbitrator appointed by such Claimant, and such two Arbitrators shall and may, before proceeding to consider the claim, appoint a third Arbitrator; which three Arbitrators, being first sworn by some one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace then there present, to give a just and true Award upon the claim submitted to them, shall, upon the statements of the Parties and view of the Premises, and upon the testimony of Witnesses to be examined upon Oath or Affirmation, if either Party shall require it, (which Oath or Affirmation any one of the said Arbitrators is hereby authorized to Administer), make their Award in writing under their hands, of the amount of damages to be paid to such Claimant.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if either the Officer superintending the said Work, or the Party claiming damages as aforesaid, shall decline to abide by any such Award, such refusal shall be declared in writing within ten days after such Award, and damages upon such claim shall be thereafter assessed in manner following, but at the sole expense of the Party refusing to abide by such Award.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases in which Awards shall be made, to which either Party shall refuse to conform as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the Party dissenting from such Award, to serve on the other Party a notice in writing, appointing a day, not less than thirty days from the time of serving such notice, for having the damages for which he is is entitled to claim compensation according to this Act, assessed in the manner hereinafter provided; and that the Party giving such notice shall also specify some day therein, which shall be at least ten days before the day appointed for such assessment, and not less than ten days from the time of serving such notice, at which he will attend at the Office of the Sheriff of the District in which the Lands lie, for the purpose of striking a Jury to assess the damages so claimed as aforesaid.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That on the day appointed as last aforesaid, the Parties, their Attornies or Agents, shall attend at the Sheriff's office, and that the Sheriff shall at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon proceed in the presence of the Parties, or such of them their Attorney or Agent as may be present, to select the names of forty one persons from among those qualified to serve on special juries, and in the manner directed by law for selecting special juries, and that the names of such forty one persons so drawn being fairly written out by such Sheriff, each Party, or his Attorney or Agent attending for that purpose shall alternately strike off one, that Party beginning at whose instance such jury is struck, until the whole number is reduced to seven, and that such seven persons shall be a jury for assessing the damages to be paid to such claimant as aforesaid. Provided always, that in case either Party omit to attend personally or by Agent at the time appointed, the Sheriff or his Depy. shall strike in behalf of such person not attending.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the seven persons so struck to serve as aforesaid shall be summoned by the Sheriff to attend upon the premises in respect to which the damages are claimed as aforesaid, giving not less than ten days notice of such attendance, and that the Sheriff or his Deputy shall also attend at the time so appointed, and shall administer to the five persons who shall first answer upon being called in the order in which they shall stand upon the original list the oath following, that is to say —"I A. B do swear that I will well and truly assess the damages upon the claim of C. D. according to the Act in that behalf," and thereupon the said jury having viewed the premises and received the testimony upon oath, or affirmation, of such witnesses as shall be brought before them, (which oath or affirmation the said Sheriff or his Deputy is hereby authorized to administer) shall deliver their virdict by the opinion of the majority of such jury of the amount of damages to be paid to such claimant.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in estimating the claim of any individual to compensation for property taken, or for damage done under the authority of this Act, the arbitrators or jury assessing such damages shall take into their consideration the benefit likely to accrue to such individual from the construction of the said Canal by its enhancing the value of his property or producing other advantages: Provided always nevertheless, That it shall not be competent to any Arbitratrators or Jury to direct any individual claiming as aforesaid to pay a Sum in consideration of such advantages over and above the amount at which the damages of such individual shall be estimated.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Party desiring such Jury to be summoned, shall pay to the Sheriff for striking and summoning the same, and for attending and taking the verdict, the Sum of Five Pounds, and to each Juryman attending in pursuance of such Summons, the Sum of Fifteen Shillings.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when it shall appear necessary to cut into any Highway, in order to conduct the said Canal through the same, the Officer aforesaid shall, within one month, cause to be constructed a secure, sufficient, and commodious Bridge, for the passing of Carriages, in order to re-establish the communication between the several parts of such Highways.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons shall wilfully or maliciously break down, damage, or destroy, any Bank, Lock, Gate, Sluice, or any Works, Machine, or Device, to be erected or made by virtue of this Act, or do any other wilful act, hurt or mischief, to disturb, hinder, or prevent the carrying into execution, or completing, supporting, or maintaining the said Canal, every such person or persons so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

XIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person shall float any timber upon the said Canal, or shall suffer the overloading of any boat or vessel, or raft navigating in or upon the said Canal so as by such overloading the same to obstruct the passage of any other boat, vessel, or raft, and shall not immediately upon due notice given to the owner or person having the care of such boat, vessel, or raft, so obstructing the passage aforesaid remove the same so as to make a free passage for other boats vessels or rafts, every such owner or person floating such timber or having the care of such boat vessel, or raft, so obstructing the passage as aforesaid shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of five pounds, and if any person shall throw any ballast gravel stones or rubbish into any part of the said Canal or locks, every such person shall, for every such offence forfeit a sum not exceeding Five pounds.

XIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any boat vessel or raft, shall be placed in any part of the said Canal so as to obstruct the navigation thereof, and the person having the care of such boat vessel or raft shall not immediately, upon the request of any of the persons employed by the officer in charge, made for that purpose, remove the same, he shall for every such offence forfeit a penalalty of Ten Shillings for every hour such obstruction shall continue, and it shall be lawful for the agents, Toll-gatherers or others employed by the officer in charge to cause any such boat vessel or raft to be unloaded if necessary, and to be removed in such manner as shall be proper for preventing such obstruction in the navigation and to seize and detain such boat vessel or raft and the cargo thereof, or any part of such cargo, until the charges occasioned by such unloading and removal are paid, and if any boat or vessel shall be sunk in the said Canal, and the owner or owners, or the person or persons having the care of such boat or vessel shall not without loss of time weigh or draw up the same, it shall be lawful for the agents, Toll-gatherers or other persons employed by His Majesty to cause such boat or vessel to be weighed or drawn up and to detain and keep the same until payment be made of all expenses necessarily occasioned thereby.

XV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the owners and occupiers of any Lands adjoining to the said Canal to use any boats thereon for the purpose of husbandry or for conveying cattle from one farm or part of a farm or lands to any other farm or lands of the same owner or occupier (not passing through any lock without the consent of the officer or person in charge for the time being) without interruption, and without paying any rate or duty for the same so as the same be not made use of for the carriage of any goods wares or merchandise to Market or for sale, or for any person or persons for hire, and shall not obstruct or prejudice the navigation of the said Canal or the towing paths thereof.

XVI. And wheras it may hereafter happen from floods or from unexpected accident that wears, flood-gates, dams, banks, reservoirs, trenches, or other works of the said navigation may be damaged or destroyed and the adjacent lands or the property thereon thereby damaged and that it may be necessary that the same should be immediately repaired or rebuilt to prevent further damages, Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when and so often as any such case may happen, it shall be lawful for any person or persons employed by His Majesty from time to time without any delay or interruption from any person or persons whomsoever to enter into any lands grounds or hereditaments adjoining or near to the said Canal or branches reservoirs or trenches or any of them (not being an orchard garden or yard) and to dig for, work, get and carry away, and use all such stones, gravel and other materials, as may be necessary or proper for the purposes aforesaid without any previous treaty whatsoever with the owner or owners, occupier or occupiers of, or other person or persons interested in such lands, grounds or hereditaments or any of them, doing as little damage thereby as the nature of the case will admit of, and making recompense for such damages to the owner or owners of, or other persons interested in such lands, grounds property or hereditaments within the space of Six calendar months next after the same shall have been demanded, for all damages which shall or may be done by means of such accident, and means of the digging for, getting, working, taking, carrying away, and using such stones, gravel, and materials or any of them, which damages and the satisfaction and recompence in respect thereof shall be settled, adjusted, ascertained and determined, by the ways and means hereinbefore described, with respect to the other damage done by the making and completing the said navigation.

XVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the officer employed by His Majesty shall and may in such parts of the said Canal as shall not be of sufficient breadth for admitting a boat, vessel or raft, to turn about or lie, or for two boats, or other boats, vessels, or rafts to pass each other, to open or cut proper spaces or places in the lands adjoining to the said Canal at convenient distances from each other for the turning, lying and passing of any such boat, vessel, or raft, and that the said boats, vessels, and rafts, being hauled or navigated upon the said Lands, shall upon meeting any other boat or vessel stop at or go back to and lie in the said places or openings in such manner as shall be publicly notified by the officer in charge of such Canal.

XVIII. And for preventing disputes touching the tonnage of any boat, barge, or other vessel, navigating upon the said Canal, Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the owner or master of every such boat, barge, or vessel, shall permit and suffer every such boat, barge, or vessel, to be gauged or measured, and refusing so to permit and suffer, shall forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings, and it shall be lawful for the toll gatherer, or such other person or persons as shall be appointed for that purpose, and such owner or master, each to choose one person to measure and ascertain such tonnage, and to mark the same on such boat, barge or other vessel, which mark shall always be evidence of the tonnage in all questions respecting the payment of the aforesaid rates or dues and if such owner or master shall refuse or decline to choose a person in his behalf as aforesaid, then the person appointed on behalf of His Majesty shall have alone the power of ascertaining such tonnage.

XIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all persons whatsoever shall have free liberty to use with Horses, Cattle and Carriages, the roads and ways to be made as aforesaid, (except the towing paths) for the purpose of conveying any goods, wares, merchandize, timber, and commodities, whatsoever, to and from the said Canal, and also to navigate on the said Canal with any boats, barges, vessels or rafts, and to use the said wharves and quayes for loading and unloading any goods wares, merchandize timber, and commodities, and also to use the said towing paths with horses for drawing and hawling such boats and vessels, upon payment of such rates and dues as shall be established by His Majesty.

XX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case of refusal or neglect of payment of any such rates or dues as may be imposed by His Majesty for passing along the said Canal or of any part thereof, on demand, to the person or persons appointed to receive the same, such person may in his own name sue for and recover the same in any Court having jurisdiction thereof, or the person or persons to whom the said rates or dues ought to be paid, may and he is and they are hereby authorized and empowered to seize and detain such boat, vessel, barge, or raft, for or in respect whereof such rates or dues ought to be paid, and detain the same until payment thereof.

XXI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all penalties and forfeitures for offences against this Act or against any rule, order, or bye-law of the said Officer to be made in pursuance thereof, shall, upon proof of the offences respectively before any two Justices of the Peace for the District in which such offence has been committed, either by confession of the party or parties, or by the oath of one credible witness, be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattles of the parties offending, by warrant under the hand and seal of such Justices, and the overplus, after such penalties and forfeitures and the charges of such distress and sale are deducted, shall be returned, upon demand to the owner or owners of such goods and chattles, and in case such sufficient distress cannot be found, or such penalties and forfeitures shall not be forthwith paid, it shall be lawful for such Justices, by warrant under their hands and seals, to cause such offender or offenders to be committed to the Common Gaol of such District, there to remain without bail or mainprize for such time as such Justices may direct, not exceeding twenty days, unless such penalties and forfeitures and all reasonable charges attending the same shall be sooner paid and satisfied.

XXII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all Penalties imposed by this Act, when levied and satisfied in manner aforesaid, shall be paid to the said Officer, to be by him transmitted to His Majesty's Receiver General of this Province to be accounted for to His Majesty through the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury in such manner as His Majesty shall be pleased to direct.

XXIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and singular the powers and authorities given by this Act to His Majesty, or to the Officer to be employed by His Majesty in superintending the construction of the said Canal, or to the Officer at any time hereafter in charge thereof, shall extend so far as may be required for the purposes of this Act, to all and every the persons employed or to be employed in the execution of any matter authorized to be done by this Act.

XXIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and every the powers, authorities and privileges by this Act given, relating in any manner to the Canal intended to be made as aforesaid, shall extend and apply to that part of the Navigation to be made or improved, which shall lie along the Lakes or Rivers, as well as to such parts as shall require to be wholly made and excavated through Lands affording now no natural Channel.

XXV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for any Officers or persons employed by His Majesty, in case His Majesty shall desire to improve the Navigation of the Rivers Tay and Goodwood, which empty their waters into the River Rideau, to enter into or upon the Lands or Grounds of or belonging to any person or persons on the borders of the said Rivers Tay and Goodwood, in the same manner and for the like purposes, and subject to the same conditions as His Majesty is by this Act authorized to do with respect to the Lands bordering on the River Rideau.

XXVI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any Plaint shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons for any thing done or to be done in pursuance of this Act, or in execution of the powers and authorities, or the orders and directions hereinbefore given or granted, every such suit shall be brought or commenced within six Calendar months next after the fact committed, or in case there shall be a continuation of damages, then within six Calendar months next after the doing or committing of such damages shall cease, and not afterwards; and the Defendant or Defendants in such action or suit, shall and may plead the General Issue, and give this Act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this Act, and if it shall appear to be done so, or if any action or suit shall be brought after the time hereinbefore limited for bringing the same, then a verdict shall be given for the Defendant.

XXVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be deemed a Public Act, and shall be judicially noticed as such in the several Courts in this Province.

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof,

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reservers," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.

JOHN B. ROBINSON, Attorney General.
D. CAMERON, Secretary.

UPPER CANADA.

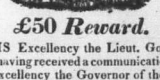
P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, t shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.



Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.

J. B. ROBINSON, Attorney General.
D. CAMERON, Secretary.

£50 Reward.

HIS Excellency the Lieut. Governor having received a communication from His Excellency the Governor of the State of New York, by which it appears that William Morgan, who some years ago exercised the calling of a Brewer in this place, and who has subsequently resided at Canaudaigua, in the State of New York, was some time in the last year conveyed by force from that place and is supposed to be forcibly detained under false petences in some part of this Province, any person who may be able to afford information respecting the said William Morgan, shall, upon communicating the same to the Private Secretary of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, receive the reward above offered.

Government House,
31st January, 1827.

THE ISLE OF FLOWERS.

The isle of flowers is in Lake Huron—the author has visited it, and knows that the Indians regard it with superstitious awe, as the abode of a different order of beings, by whom their adoration is required, and they never pass it without making what they conceive to be an acceptable offering.

Far to the west is a silver lake,
Where the sultry sun his thirst doth slake,—
Where the evening star is nightly borne
To follow after the steps of morn,
To sprinkle her path with pearly rain,
And lead her up to the east again.
Within its bosom so calm and deep,
Where the winds are hush'd and the bright waves sleep,

A fair and beautiful Isle is placed,
Like the bower of Hope on the desert waste.
Its founis are bright, and its groves are seen
All gemm'd with flowers and bathed in green,—
Where the wild blossom rose and the blue harebell
'Mid clouds of perfume and incense dwell:
By the beams that steal through the dews at night,
Or the first faint streaks of the morning light,
When the dappled lark from his watch mate's eyes,
Scales with strong pinion the azure skies,
And soars far over the path of *Thon
To watch when the day springs in the dawn.

The tawny Soc, in his bark canoe,
As he floats along in the moonlit dew,
When the purple shades of the evening fall,
And the pine tops wave to the windy call—
Believes that the spirits of pure delight
Inhabit the beautiful flowers by night;
Whence, soft as the star-light wood'ring down
Through the amber air or the shadows brown,
Wild music is heard from their lips to break,
And warble over the silver lake.

There, to her moorings, the snow white swan
Stoops nightly before the cloud couse on,— Secure her arching crest to lave
And sleep in peace on the azure wave.
Oh, lead me then to the shades I love,
Where none but the sylphs of the green Isle rove,

By the tangled briar, and the wild flower sweet,
Unstained by the print of mortal feet;
There let me rest, from the world retired,
My soul with the streams of song inspired,
Till my harp shall cease—and my fame be won,
Till my heart grows cold, and my days are done;
When death may number the happy hours,
And lay me down in the "Isle of flowers."

MY MAIDEN BRIEF.

In court many are the vexations of the briefless. The Attorney is a cruel animal; as cruel as a rich Coxcomb in a ball-room, who delights in exciting hopes only to disappoint them. Indeed I have often thought the communications between solicitors and the bar has no slight resemblance to the flirtation between the sexes. Barristers, like ladies, must wait to be chosen. The slightest overture would be equally fatal to one gown as to the other. The gentlemen of the bar sit round the table in dignified composure, thinking as little of briefs as a young lady of marriage. An Attorney enters—not an eye moves; but somehow or other the fact is known to all. Calmly the wretch draws from his pocket a brief: practice enables us to see at a glance that the tormentor has left a blank for the name of his counsel. He looks around the circle as if to choose his man; you cannot tell but his eye rested on you—he writes a name, but you are too far off to read it, though you know every name on you circuit upside down. Now the traitor counts out the fee and wraps it up with slow and provoking formality. At length all being prepared, he looks towards you to catch (as you supposed) your eye. You nod, and the brief comes flying; you pick it up, and find on it the name of a man three years your junior, who is sitting next to you; you curse the attorney's impudence, and ask yourself if he meant to insult you. Perhaps not, you say, for the dog squints.

My maiden brief was in turn. How well do I recollect the minutest circumstances connected with that case! The rap at the door! I am a connoisseur in raps—there is not a dun in London who could deceive me, I know their tricks but too well; they have no medium between the rap servile and the rap impudent. This was a cheerful touch; you felt that the operator knew he should meet with a face of welcome. My clerk, who is not much under the influence of sweet sounds, seemed absolutely inspired, and answered the knock with astonishing velocity. I could hear from my inner room the murmur of inquiry and answer; and though I could not distinguish a word, the tones confirmed my hopes; I was not long suffered to doubt; my client entered, and the pure white paper, tied round with the brilliant red tape, met my eyes. He inquired respectfully, and with an appearance of anxiety which marked him in my mind for a perfect Chesterfield, if I was already retained in—— v. ——. The rogue knew well enough I never had had a retainer in my life. I took a moment to consider; and after making him repeat the name of his case, I gravely assured him I was at perfect liberty to receive his brief. He then laid my papers and the fee upon the table, asked me if the time appointed for a consultation with two gentlemen who were 'with me' would be convenient; and finding, that the state of my engagements would allow me to attend, made his bow and departed. That fee was sacred gold, and I put it to no vulgar use.

Many years have now elapsed since that case was disposed of, and yet how fresh does it live in my memory; how perfectly do I recollect every authority to which I referred! how I read and re-read the leading cases that bore upon the question to be argued. One case I so bethumbled, that the volume has opened at it ever since, inevitably at the page. Every book of a lady's maid proffers the service of matrimony. My brief related to an argument before the judges of the King's Bench, and the place of consultation was Ayles's Coffee-house, adjoining Westminster Hall. There was I, before the glass, hard at work striking the notes of My brief I knew by heart. I had raised an army of objections to the points for which we were to contend, and had logically slain every man of them. I went prepared to discuss the question thoroughly; and I generously determined to give the leaders the benefit of all my cogitations—though not with out a slight struggle at the thought of how much reputation I should lose by my magnanimity. I had plenty of time to think of these things, for my leaders were engaged in court, and the attorney and I had the room to ourselves. After we had been waiting about an hour, the door flew open, and in strode one of my leaders, the second in command, less in haste (as it appeared to me) to meet his appointment than to escape from the atmosphere of clients in which he had been enveloped during his passage from the court—just as the unwashed canines loss stood into a gallop, to rid himself of the flies that are buzzing around him. Having shaken off his tormentors, Mr.——walked up to the fire—said it was cold—nodded kindly to me—and had just asked what had been the last night's division in the house, when the powdered head of an usher was protruded through the half open door, to announce that "Jones and Williams were called on." Down went the poker, and away flew —— with streaming robes, leaving me to meditate on the loss which the case would sustain for want of his assistance at the expected discussion. The door again opened, further space, I heard a rustling of silks, and the great ——, our commander-in-c[illegible] sailed into the room. As he did not run foul of me, I think it possible I may not have been invisible to him; but he furnished me with no other evidence of the fact. He simply directed the attorney toprovide certain additional affidavits tacked about, and sailed away. And thus ended first consultation.

I consoled myself with the thought that I had at least all my materials for myself, and that, from having had so much more time for considering the subject than the others, I must infallibly make the best speech of the three.

At length the fatal day came. I never shall forget the thrill with which I heard —— open the case, and felt how soon it would be my turn to speak. Oh, how I did pray for a long speech! I lost all feeling of rivalry: and would have gladly given him every thing that I intended to use myself, only to defer the dreaded moment for one half hour. His speech was frightfully short, yet, short as it was, it made sad havoc with my stock of matter. The next speaker was even more concise, and yet, my little stock suffered again severely. I then found how experience will stand in the place of study; these men could not, from the multiplicity of their engagements, have spent a tithe of the time upon the case which I had done, and yet, they had seen much which had escaped all my research. At length my turn came. I was sitting among the back rows in the old Court of King's Bench. It was on the last day of Michaelmas Term, and late in the evening. A sort of darkness visible had been produced by the aid of a few candles dispersed here and there. I arose, but I was not perceived by the judges, who had turned together to consult, supposing the argument finished. B—— was the first to see me, and I received from him a nod of kindness and encouragement which I hope I never shall forget. The court was crouded, for it was a question of some interest; it was a dreadful moment; the ushers stilled the audience into an awful silence. I began, and at the unknown voice, every wig of the white inclined place at the upper end of which I was standing suddenly turned round, and in an instant I had the eyes of seventy 'learned friends' looking me full in the face! It is hardly to be conceived by those who have not gone through the ordeal how terrific is this mute attention to the object of it. How grateful should I have been for any thing which would have relieved me from its oppressive weight—a buzz, a scraping of the shoes, or a fit of coughing, would have put me under infinite obligation to the kind disturber. What I said, I know not; I knew not then, it is the only part of the transaction, of which I am ignorant; it was a 'phantasma or hideous dream.' They told me, however to my great surprise, that I spoke in a loud voice, used a violent gesture, and as I went along seemed to shake off my trepidation. Whether I made a long speech or a short one, I cannot tell. All I had My brief I knew by heart. I had raised an army of objections to the points for which we were to contend, and had logically slain every man of them. I went prepared to discuss the question thoroughly; and I generously determined to give the leaders the benefit of all my cogitations—though not with out a slight struggle at the thought of how much reputation I should lose by my magnanimity. Shocking transactions at New-London.—We learn from a correspondent at New-London, that on Monday the 6th inst. a quarrel took place in a cellar occupied as a grocery, be tween a man by the name of Spencer, and two brothers by the name of Forsyth. Spencer was, or had been a sailor. After he left the cellar, the Forsyths offered the fireman of the steam-boat Long Reach, who was present, three dollars if he would "go and beat the d—d rascal," while they were to stand by with clubs, and knock the first man down who attempted to interfere. The fireman closed with the proposal, followed Spencer, and knocked him down in the street. After some struggle, Spencer succeeded in getting to the Hole-in-the-Wall public house, though not until he had received a severe flogging. The fireman afterwards went to Spencer, expressed his sorrow for what he had done, and by way of settling pair him the three dollars received from the Forsyths, and took his receipt in full for the flogging. Spencer afterwards died, and on Saturday the fireman and two Forsyths, were lodged in goal to await their trial. That day the brother of Mr. Spencer, being somewhat intoxicated, met a Mrs. Barnes, who was no friend of hers. A quarrel ensued, severe blows were interchanged, and Mrs. Barnes went off severely pounded. Yesterday morning she died; and the deceased Spencer's widow was lodged in the goal with those who had compassed the death of her husband—all to meet their trials together.—N. Y. Spectator.

Summary.

The Morning Chronicle of Jan. 1, confidently asserts that the Lord Chancellor has determined to resign.

The late Marquis of Hastsngs, in a letter found amongst his papers after his death, requested that on his disease, his right hand might be cut off, and preserved until the death of the Marchioness, when it was to be interred in the same coffin with her Ladyship; in pursuance of his direction, the hand has been amputated.

We have great pleasure in stating that there is a considerable improvement in the receipts of the Revenue of the present Quarter. The improvement has rapidly continued lately; and there is the most cheering prospect, that when the accounts are finally made up, on the first of next month, they will afford infinite satisfaction, and shew that the returning prosperity of the country is likely to speedily terminate our present distress. As a proof of the improvement, the receipts in one week of the Quarter was greater by £100,000 than the corresponding of last year. The improvement is not confined to the Excise, but it is also considerable in the Customs.—Star.

The annual consumption of wheat in Great Britain is estimated at twelve millions of quarters.

Since the communication of His Majesty's Message, relative to the war between Spain and Portugal, the gun makers in the neighbourhood of Goodman's-fields have been in full work.

Houses are now open on Tower hill for the recruiting of sailors. A considerable number of seamen were yesterday pressed into His Majesty's service in the vicinity of East Smithfield.

The Revenue is already considerably increased—Commerce has assumed more activity and enterprize—The Coasting Trade is in a thriving state, and the condition of almost all classes of People has materially improved.

Our prospects probably were never more encouraging than at the present time. and under the Blessings of Divine Providence, Nova Scotia cannot fail to attain an high state of Commercial and Agricultural Prosperity, if due advantage is taken of her local situation and her manifold resources.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I shall direct the public accounts for the last year to be laid before you, for your inspection, and I trust that you will find the Supplies, granted to his Majesty in the last Session, have been faithfully applied.

The Revenue has been collected with great regularity, and it is highly creditable to the Mercantile Community, and gratifying to me, to state, that it has not been found necessary to put a single Bond for Duties in suit during the year.

I shall also direct the usual Estimates to be

Sir Charles Wetherell, for the Borough of Plympton Earl, in the room of the Hon Geo. Edgecumbe; and Col. J. L. Lushington, for Hastings, in the room of Sir William Curtis.

SPAIN & PORTUGAL.—Extract of a letter from Madrid:—"Many Regiments have been marched towards the frontier of Portugal, to protect there a military line. It appears that it is the intention of our Goverument to have upon that point a body of 10,000 men, of whom 3,000 are of the Guard Royal. These forces will form two divisions, of which one will garrison the frontiers of Estremadura. Generals D'Espagne and Saedfield are designed for the command of those two divisions."

PROVINCIAL PALIAMENT OF NOVA SCOTIA.

At three o'clock on Thursday, His Excellency the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, attended by his Suite, entered the Provincial Building, and proceeded to the Council Chamber, where being seated the usual Message was sent, commanding the attendance of the Representative Body. The Members of the Assembly accordingly attended—and pursuant to the order of His Excellency withdrew to make choice of a Speaker. They shortly returned with S, G. W. Archibald, Esq. at their head, who after being approved of by his Excellency the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR the usual privileges of freedom of debate, exemption from arrest, &c. after which His Excellency opened the Session with the following

SPEECH.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of His Majesty's Council.

Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

IT affords me sincere pleasure to have it in my power, at the opening of this Session of a New Assembly, to use the same language of congratulation respects the peace and prosperity of the Province, in which I addressed the Legislature at its last meeting,

Although the last harvest has been less productive than usual, and the Season proved rather unfavourable to our fisheries; yet I have reason to believe, that a steady and progressive improvement has taken place in almost every branch of our domestic Industry.

Several circumstances have, I think, contributed to effect a prosperous change in the general state of the Province, within the last two years.

The people, I am led to believe, have become more provident and more diligent in the management of their own affairs. They seldom engage in Speculations beyond their means—&c they already feel in a sensible degree, the good effects of the liberal policy of the Mother Country, in extending to her Colonies the blessings of Commercial freedom, and affording new facilities to their trade and navigation.

I expressed a confident expectation, at the opening of the last Session of the Legislature, that these enlightened measures of His Majesty's Government would be productive of many advantages to this Province; and I have great satisfaction in being able to inform you that the hope I then entertained has not been disappointed.

The Revenue is already considerably increased—Commerce has assumed more activity and enterprize—The Coasting Trade is in a thriving state, and the condition of almost all classes of People has materially improved.

Our prospects probably were never more encouraging than at the present time. and under the Blessings of Divine Providence, Nova Scotia cannot fail to attain an high state of Commercial and Agricultural Prosperity, if due advantage is taken of her local situation and her manifold resources.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I shall direct the public accounts for the last year to be laid before you, for your inspection, and I trust that you will find the Supplies, granted to his Majesty in the last Session, have been faithfully applied.

The Revenue has been collected with great regularity, and it is highly creditable to the Mercantile Community, and gratifying to me, to state, that it has not been found necessary to put a single Bond for Duties in suit during the year.

I shall also direct the usual Estimates to be submitted to you, and I confidently rely on your making the necessary Provision for the services of the Current year.

Mr. President, and Gentlemen of His Majesty's Council.

Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

As every important Political event, which affects the Parent State, must be deeply interesting to her Colonies; I think it proper to inform you that His Majesty has found it necessary, to send a British Force to Portugal (in conformity to the terms of a solemn Treaty) to aid His Majesty's ancient Ally, the Sovereign of that country, against an hostile aggression.

The prompt and vigorous measures which His Majesty's Government have taken on this occasion, to uphold the National Faith and in support of Constitutional Liberty, have been most cordially approved of by Parliament, and by all classes of His Majesty's subjects in Great Britain, and sanguine hopes are entertained that Peace may be still preserved;

But far removed from the scenes that are now passing in Europe, living under the paternal protection of a powerful Empire and in a Country where Party or Faction of any kind is happily unknown; our own domestic concerns, the various interests of the Province upon which its prosperity depends, and the measures most conducive to the general welfare and happiness of its Inhabitants, are the objects which call for your deliberations; and to them I feel pesuaded that you will give all the consideration which their importance requires.

It will be my duty to make an early communication to you by Message of some matters of Public Interest which have occurred since the last meeting of the Legislature: and to lay before you a detailed report of the proceedings which have taken place under the Law, passed in the last session for establishing Schools in the different districts of the Province, in order that you may see how far it has been carried into operation, and be enabled to form a judgment of such further facilities as may be requisite to render the very important objects of that Act more generally beneficial.

Other objects will present themselves in the course of the Session which I may feel it my duty to submit to your consideration, and I confidently rely on a continuance of that harmony which has so long distinguished the Legislative proceedings of this Province.

My ardent desire to promote the public good is unabated, and you will ever find me disposed to concur with you in every measure tending to that end. JAMES KEMPT.

RIDEAU CANAL.

System proposed by the Royal Engineers, for conducting the Works of the Rideau Canal, in Upper Canada.

As the Rideau Canal is evidently an undertaking of great enterprise, it therefore requires that a proper system should be adopted as soon as possible; and that the execution of the same be carried into effect in the best and most economical manner possible.

The British Government have resolved to proceed with this liberal system, which if acted on will surely accomplish the work in question.

Melancholy Accident.—We are sorry to learn that on Wednesday afternoon last, Mrs. JACOB BOYER, of Grand Island, and her daughter, a child of two years old, were drowned under the following circumstances:—It appears that Mr. Smith was about changing his residence to a place three miles further up the Island: and on the afternoon of Wednesday, Mrs. Smith, her two children and her brother, Wm. Bush, proceeded on the ice in a sleigh, which contained several articles of furniture, to the new residence. In passing along the Batteau channel they came to bad ice, which giving way, the horse and sleigh went into the water; Mrs. Smith succeeded in getting out with her children. She did not proceed far, however, when the ice gave way under her, and she and her little daughter sunk to rise no more. Bush, who ran to the assistance of his sister, with great difficulty was able to save one of the children, a little boy, who, we understand, is doing well, Mrs Smith was daughter of Mr. Frederick Bush, of Long Island; was about twenty six years of age and at the time of her death far advanced in pregnancy.—Kingston Chronicle.

From the St. Catherine's Farmer's Journal,

The Alien bill is so clear and so explicit in all its provisions, and so particularly clear in all parts that relate to the security of property and privilege, that it must be in itself a full and sufficient answer to the falsehoods and slander it has occasioned.—Most anxiously do I desire all who are interested in it, to examine it carefully line by line, and they will find that every one who has a claim to the protection of the British Government in is this bill amply provided for: that those who are now Aliens in law, will, on complying with this act, be Aliens no more, and that every means that every means has been taken that good faith good will, and justice could suggest, to prevent any individual from suffering through the long neglect of this most necessary measure. Let the people now judge for themselves, who are their true friends and who are their most treacherous enemies. Let every man, whose mind has been agitated and alarmed by the cry, "that Government was about to make us all aliens, and to deprive us of our rights and properties," remember who it was that misled him, and distrust for the future, those clamorous and unprincipled mischief-makers.

I am well aware that there are many among those who were startled by this slanderous report, who hesitated to believe that the British Government at this most powerful, the most independent, the most honourable, and the most wealthy in the world,) would so far forgot its high character as to commit, or to sanction an act of deliberate treachery towards one of her own most cherished colonies—an act which was suggested by the most indelible stigma that name hitherto untarnished; but they had been told that this was the fact by persons who had the means of knowing the truth, and were not prepared to doubt assertions so boldly made in the very face of truth and honour.

How the persons who made those assertions will get out of the scrape, I am at a loss to conjecture. Assuredly, when they invented the slander they could have had no expectation that the bill would pass two branches of the Legislature and be published to the complete exposure of their falsehoods. They cannot pretend that the bill has been altered or amended in any of its important provisions, by the House of Assembly; becau e Lord Bathurst's official letter to Sir Peregrine Maitland on the subject has been published, and whoever will compare the act as now passed with that letter will find, that in all that relates to the security and property, the bill is framed on that document. The preamble is in the very spirit of what they represented as so mortifying and degrading to the persons therein alluded to, and the oath and registry, which we have been told was so revoltin to our feelings, and which many of us could not take without forswearing ourselves, turn out, after all, to be nothing more than the common oath of allegiance and a registry of circumstances, which can in no way be so construed as to be in the slightest degree offensive to the nicest feelings of any individual.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 10, 1827.

We are as yet without any later intelligence from England.

A Bill has passed the Senate of the United States, lowering the duties on the importation of Teas and Wines. The duty on Woolen Cloths is increased in such a proportion, as will amount to a prohibition if the law should be passed, of which there appears to be little doubt.

BRIDGE OF THE CHAUDIERE.—A correspondent in the Montreal Herald, gives the following account of this interesting work.

'I witnessed an event no less interesting than novel, namely, striking the wooden Supporters from under the first arch in the chain of bridges to be passed across the falls of the Chaudiere. The time and circumstance led me to delay my journey for one day. Of the bridges employed in similar enterprises—and the answer to these, confirmed in my mind the importance of the imposing operation to which I had been an eye witness. I find this beautiful arch was suggested by Lieutenant-Colonel Bye, of the Royal Engineers—planned by Mr. Macfaggart and executed under the appropriate superintendance of Mr. M'Kay, of Montreal, Architect. At the same time it ought not to be forgotten, that the important duty of striking the centres was entrusted to Mr. Drummond, Architect. To all equal praise is due in their respective situations, for each and all have done their duty.

The bridge is one of the most beautiful specimens of rough Masonry on the Continent of America.—It is built of stone, hammer-dressed to the size of the arch. The Work has been carried on in the depth of a Canadian winter, and during a season unusually severe—an effort reflecting the highest credit on both the architect and superintendants.

The bridge is one of Communication with the Chaudiere Canal, a work which when finished, will penetrate into the very centre of the Upper Province, and by this bridge will lead directly to the central

PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:
To all to whom these presents shall come

GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

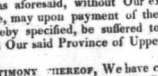
GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:
To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches.



And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY THEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—WITNESS, Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of Our said Province, and Major General Commanding Our Forces therein, at York, this third day of May in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Six, and in the Seventh Year of Our Reign. Clerk of the Crown, &c. 40-5*w*

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3. All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending on the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

Miscellaneous.

GRACE NEVILLE.

BY MISS MARY RUSSELL MITFORD.

Two or three winters ago the little village of Ashley had the good fortune to have its curiosity excited by the sudden appearance of a lovely and elegant young woman, as an inmate in the house of Mr. Martin, a respectable farmer in the place. The pleasure of talking over a new comer in a country village, which, much as I love country villages, does, I confess, occasionally labour under a stagnation of topics, must not be lightly estimated. In the present instance the enjoyment was greatly increased by the opportune moment at which it occurred, just before Christmas, so that conjecture was happily afloat in all the parties of that merry time, enlivened the tea-table, and gave zest and animation to the supper. There was, too, a slight shade of mystery, a difficulty in coming at the truth, which made the subject unusually poignant. Talk her over as they might, nobody knew any thing certain of the incognita, or her story; nobody could tell who she was, or whence she came. Mrs. Martin, to whom her neighbours were on a sudden most politely attentive in the way of calls and invitations, said nothing more than that Miss. Neville was a young lady who had come to board at Kibes Farm; and except at church Miss Neville was invisible. Nobody could tell what to make of her.

Her beauty was, however, no questionable matter. All the parish agreed on that point. She was in deep mourning, which set off advantageously a tall and full, yet easy and elastic figure, in whose carriage the vigour and firmness of youth and health seemed blended, with the elegance of education and good company. Youth and health in her bright hazel eyes, with their rich dark eyelashes; health in the profusion of her glossy brown hair; health in her pure and brilliant complexion; health in her red lips, her white teeth, and the beautiful smile that displayed them; health in her very dimple. Her manners, as well as they could be judged of in passing to and from church, leading one of the little Martins by the hand, and occasionally talking to him, seemed as graceful as her person and as open as her countenance. All the village agreed that she was a lovely creature, and all the village wondered who she could be. It was a most animating puzzle.

There was, however, no mystery in the story of Grace Neville. She was the only child of an officer of rank, who fell in an early stage of the Peninsular war; her mother had survived him but a short time, and the little orphan had been reared in great tenderness and luxury by her maternal uncle, a kind, thoughtless, expensive man, speculating and sanguine, who, after exhausting a good fortune in vain attempts to realize a great one, sinking money successively in farming, in a silk-mill and a mine, found himself one fair morning actually ruined, and died (such things have happened) of a broken heart, leaving poor Grace, at three-and-twenty, with the habits and education of an heiress, almost totally destitute.

The poor girl found, as usual, plenty of comforters and advisers. Some recommended her to sink the little fortune she possessed in right of her father in a school; some to lay it by for old age, and go out to look at the world through the back windows—as a governess; some hinted at the possibility of matrimony, advising, but at all events so fine a young woman should try her fortune by visiting about amongst her friends for a year or two, and favoured her with a husband-hunting invitation accordingly. But Grace was too independent and too proud for a governess; too sick of schemes for a school; and the last matrimonial had effectually prevented her from accepting any, even the most unsuspected, invitation. Besides she said, and perhaps she thought, that she was weary of the world; so she wrote to Mrs. Martin, once her uncle's housekeeper, now the substantial wife of a substantial farmer, and came down to lodge with her at Ashley.

Poor Grace!—what a change! It was a midwinter; snowy, sleety, foggy, wet.—Kibes Farm, an old manor-house dilapidated into its present condition, stood with half its windows closed, a huge vine covering its front, and ivy climbing up the sides to the roof—the very image of chillness and desolation. There was, indeed, one habitable wing, repaired and fitted up as an occasional sporting residence for the landlord; but those apartments were locked; and she lived, like the farmer's family, in the centre of the house, made up of great, low, d[illegible]ooms with oaken pannels, of long rambling passages, of interminable galleries, and broad gusty staircases, up which you might drive a coach and six.—Such was the prospect within doors: and without, mud! mud! mud! nothing but mud! Then the noises;—wind in all its varieties, combined with bats, rats, cats, owls, pigs, cows, geese, ducks, turkeys; chickens and children, in all varieties also; for, besides the regular inhabitants of the farmyard, biped and quadruped, Mrs. Martin had within doors sundry coops of poultry, two pet lambs, and four boys from six years old downward, who were in some way or other exercising their voices all day long. Mrs. Martin, too, she whilome so soft-spoken and demure, had now found her scolding tongue, and was indeed noted for that accomplishment all over the parish: the maid was saucy, and the farmer smoked.

Poor Grace Neville! what a trial! what a contrast!—She tried to draw; tried to sing; tried to read; tried to work; and, above all, tried to be content. But nothing would do. The vainest endeavour of all was the last. She was of the social, cheerful temperament to which sympathy is a necessity: and having no one to whom she could say, how pleasant is solitude! began to find solitude the most tiresome thing in the world. Mr. and Mrs. Martin were very good sort of people in their way—scolding and smoking notwithstanding: but their way was so different from hers; and the children, who she might have found some amusement in spoiling, were so spoilt already as to be utterly unbearable.

The only companionable person about the place was a slipshod urchin, significantly termed "the odd boy;" an extra and supplementary domestic, whose department it is to help all the others out of doors and in; to do all that they leave undone; and to bear the blame of every thing that goes amiss. The personage in question, Dick Crosby by name, was a parish child, taken from the work-house. He was, as nearly as could be guessed (for nobody took the trouble to be certain about his age), somewhere bordering on eleven; a long, lean, famished-looking boy, with a pale complexion, sharp thin features, and a sunburnt hair. His dress was usually a hat without a crown; a tattered round frock; stockings that scarcely covered his ankles; and shoes that hung on his feet by the middle like clogs, down at heel, and open at toe. Yet, underneath these rags, and through all his failings and cuffings from master and mistress' carter and maid, the boy looked, and was, merry and contented; was even a sort of wag in his way; sturdy and independent is his opinions, and constant in his attachments. He had a pet sheep-dog (for amongst his numerous advocations he occasionally acted as undershepherd), a spectral, ghastly-looking animal, with a huge white head and neck, and a gaunt black body—Mephistopheles might have put himself into such a shape. He had also a pet donkey, the raggedest brute upon the common, of whom he was part owner, and for whose better maintenance he was sometimes accused of such petty larceny as may be comprised in stealing what no other creature would eat—refuse hay, frosty turnips, decayed cabbage-leaves, and thistles from the hedge.

These two faithful followers had long shared Dick Crosby's affections between them; but, from the first day of Miss Neville's residence in Ashley, the dog and the donkey found a rival. She happened to speak to him, and her look, and smile, and voice, won his heart at once and for ever. Never had high-born damsel in the days of chivalry so devoted a page. He was at her command by night or by day; nay, "though she called another, Abra came." He would let nobody else clean her shoes, carry her clogs, or run her errands; was always at hand to open the gates and chase away the cows when she walked; forced upon her his own hoard of nuts; and scoured the country to get her the wintry nosegays which the mildness of the season permitted, sweet-scented colts-foot, china roses, laurustinus and stocks.

Summary.

Anecdote of the Duke of York.—Shortly after the death of the very amiable Duchess, whose domestics continued some months on the establishment, the Royal Duke, arriving at St. James's Palace, observed the housekeeper turning away a miserable looking woman from the door; he inquired who she was; the housekeeper replied, "a beggar woman, a soldier's wife." His Royal Highness looked with a reproving countenance on the domestic, rejoining in these words, "And was not your mistress a soldier's wife?" He ordered the poor woman to be recalled, and personally relieved her.

Rear Admiral Sir Charles Ogle, Bart is to succeed Rear Admiral Willoughby Lake, as Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's ships on the North American station.

On Monday last, the remains of the late Mr. Gifford were enterred in Westminister Abbey. The hearse was followed by five mourning coaches, filled by several literary and other distinguished characters, friends of the deceased: in the train were the carriages of Lords Grosvenor and Belgrave the Dean of Westminister, &c. &c. The grave in which the remains of the deceased were placed, is opposite to that of Dryden, and immediately below the monument to the memory of Camden and Garrick.—Jan. 14.

On Tuesday the remains of Mr. Sergeant Lens were interred in Bishop-gate Church. The funeral was conducted on a splendid scale.—Ib.

It is expected that a public monument will be erected to the memory of the Duke of York.

Lord Palmerston is provisionally appointed to perform the duties of Commander-in-Chief. No successor to the Duke of York will be appointed until after the funeral.

The packet ship Panthea, Hathaway, from this port for Liverpool, was stranded in attempting to make a harbour in Holyhead Bay, on the 14th of January, 20th day out—her sails having all been blown from the yards in a tremendous gale off the Head. The passengers and crew were all saved, as were some of her letters, and a box of gold. The cargo consisted of between 10 and 11,000 bushels of Indian corn, about 300 bales of cotton, about 100 barrels of apples and 2 boxes of gold. The ship, frieght, and most of the cargo, were insured in this city. The letter bags saved, reached Liverpool previous to the sailing of the Britannia.

From the Morning Herald of the 13th Jan.

There is a rumour afloat in the city, that a small naval armament is about to proceed to the West Indies. It will consist, it is said, of five sail of the line, one 50-gun ship, and two frigates. This squadron is to be composed of a detachment from the ships now in the Tagus, and will be under the command of Sir Thomas Hardy.

FROM HOLLAND.—Brussels papers are to the 18th of January. The Court of the Netherlands has gone into mourning for twelve weeks, beginning the 16th Jan. on account of the death of His Royal Highness the Duke of York. The first six weeks deep, and the last six weeks half-mourning.

It is some criterion of the astonishing influx of poultry into London at Christmas, that one carrier at Peterborough actually carried up forty tons of loading, consisting entirely of packages of geese, between the Tuesday and Thursday. Thirteen tons of this surprising quantity were sold by one goshard at Deeping.

On Monday, a lovely girl, 13 years old daughter of Major Wilson, of the 74th Regiment, was crushed to death by the hind wheel of the Fair Trader Coach, in the streets of Drogheda.—Dec. 30.

THE DUKE OF YORK.

Throughout Thursday night His Royal Highness enjoyed no rest, and he continued to grow worse and worse till one o'clock on Friday afternoon, when his state became so very alarming that the physicians pronounced that he could not possibly survive the day.

The answers given on Friday to the numerous inquiries which were made was simply, 'that His Royal Highness was worse,'

The Duke of Wellington, Earl Bathurst, and Mr. Secretary Peel, called frequently during the day; and Prince Esterhazy, the Austrian Ambassador and the Speaker of the House of Commons, were among the numerous inquirers at the Rutland House.

Two messengers were despatched at different times in the course of the day, to the King, at the Royal Lodge in Windsor Park.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex arrived at Rutland House as early as nine o'clock on Friday Morning, and the Duke of Clarence at twelve o'clock. They were with the Duke till within half an hour of his death. The Duke of Clarence then withdrew; the Duke of Sussex remained in the anti-room till His Royal Brother was no more. When informed by the physicians that his brother was in the agonies of death, he was deeply affected.

His Royal Highness, who had only been able occasionally to recognize his attendants, became totally insensible about one o'clock. The mortification had then nearly reached the vital organs.

His Royal Highness continued in the same state during the evening, with scarcely any change. The narcotics administered produced occasional repose, but soon after nine o'clock the approach of death became manifest.

At twenty minutes past nine, his Royal Highness, whose respiration had scarcely been perceptible for some time, breathed his last without a struggle.

The instant His Royal Highness's death was announced, a message was despatched to the Castle at Windsor, to announce the melancholy intelligence to His Majesty.

The body of His Royal Highness was laid out, and proper persons stationed in the apartment, until the Lord Chamberlain sent a deputy to take possession of it.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, after the last spark of life had fled, left the chamber, and proceeded to his mansion at Kensington.

During the whole of his protracted illness, His Royal Highness bore his sufferings with the most manly fortitude. He attended even to business, when labouring under great pain, with an equanimity which has seldom been equalled. He yielded only to his disease, when his powers fairly sunk under its influence.

On Monday the body of His late Royal Highness was placed in a coffin of mahogany lined with white silk; having been previously wrapped in a cerecloth—he was afterwards coffin was then filled up with spices and inclosed with a leaden one, which was soldered up.

HIS LATE ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF YORK.

Horse-Guards, Jan. 12, 1827.

General Orders, in aid of the Ceremonial to be observed at the Funeral of Field Marshall His late Royal Highness the Duke of York and Albany, Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Forces.

A Captain's Full Dress Guard from the Grenadier Guards, with a colour, will mount at St. James's Palace, at eight o'clock in the forenoon of Thursday, the 18th Jan. as a Guard of Honour over the remains of His late Royal Highness, which will, during that and the following day, lie in State, from ten o'clock in the morning, until four o'clock in the afternoon of each day.

A Captain's Guard from the 17th Lancers will mount at the same hour and place, on the 18th and 19th instant, in order to secure ready access to the Palace, and to preserve order.

On Saturday, the 20th January, the Royal Body will be removed from St. James's Palace to Windsor, under the Escort of a Field Officer's Guard, with a Standard, consisting of one hundred and twenty men, to be furnished by the 2nd Regiment of Life Guards. This Escort will assemble at the Palace, at seven o'clock in the Morning of that day, and be relieved at Cranford Bridge by a similar Guard, to be furnished by 1st Regiment of Life Guards, which will proceed with the body to the door of St. Georges Chapel in the first Escort to fall in the rear, and form the Rear Guard.

The Horse-Guards (Blues) to take the duty in Windsor, and a Detachment of the Regiment, dismounted, to attend within the Chapel, every fourth man bearing a Torch. The Commanding Officer of the Horse Guards (Blues) will communicate with the Superintendent of the Lord Chamberlain's Department, as to the number of men that will be required for this service.

A Battalion of Grenadier Guards will line the approach from the Castle-gate to the entrance of St Georges Chapel.

A select detachment, consisting of the oldest soldiers of his late Royal Highness's regiment, will line the immediate approach to the entrance, and the space in the Chapel where the body comes into the line of the procession.

A Subaltern's Guard from the Foot Guards is to mount at the Porch Gate, and be responsible to keep all that space clear from interruption.

A Double Line of Guards and Infantry of the Line will form from the Porch down the street, as far as their numbers will admit, when the cavalry must line the remainder of the road as far as Frogmore to be kept up by Patroles, in which the rear Guard will take a part as soon as the processions arrives at Frogmore.

A small picquet of the Household Brigade of Cavalry must be placed at the junction of the Roads on the London side of Frogmore, and at Eton Bridge.

These Patrols and Picquets must remain on duty until day break of the morning of the 21st January.

The troops for the above service will be as follows:—

Two Regiments of Life Guards.
Royal Horse Guards.
17th Lancers.
Grenadier Guards, 2d Battalion.
Ditto 3d Ditto.
Coldstream 1st, Ditto.
Third 1st Ditto.
67th Regiment of Foot.

The Royal Horse-Guards (Blues) and the 67th Regiment of Foot being already stationed at Windsor, will take their Duties from their present Quarters.

But the Two Regiments of Life-Guards, and the Foot Guards, will receive Orders to assemble at, or in the vicinity of Windsor, on the 19th instant.

A Captain's Guard of the 17th Lancers will relieve the Life Guards on duty at the Horse-Guards at Four o'clock, on Thursday, the 18th instant, and the whole of the 17th Lancers will move into London to furnish the Duties in the absence of the Life-Guards until the 22nd inst. when the whole of the Troops will return to their former Quarters.

Major-General Sir Hussey Vivian will take the Command of the whole Troops.

Colonel the Hon H. B. Lygou will Command the Household Brigade.

The Foot Guards will be Commanded by Colonel M'Donell of the Coldstream.

All the Troops employed on this duty are to be in Full Dress.

The Master General of the Ordnance will be pleased to make arrangements for providing a detachment of Artillery to fire Minute guns in Windsor Park, as on former similar occasions.

By His Majesty's Command.
HENRY TORRENS;
Adjutant General.

On Tuesday a Court of Aldermen was convened, when the following resolutions passed unanimously:—

Resolved—"That this Court deeply sympathise with His most Gracious Majesty, the Royal Family, the Army, and the Nation, in their affliction occasioned by the demise of His Royal Highness the Duke of York and Albany, His Majesty's next brother, a Prince who by his zealous attachment to the Protestant Religion as by law established, his sincerity and consistency of character, his attention to the discipline of the Army and the Comforts of the Soldier, his endeavours to promote the cause of Charity, and his urbanity and condescension to all classes, has justly endeared himself to his cotemporaries and whose memory will be revered to the latest posterity."

On the same day the workmen commenced their preparations in St. James' Palace for the reception of the Royal Corpse, and the ceremonial of lying in State. The coffin will be laid under a splendid canopy, before the portrait of Queen Anne, in the Great Chamber; and all persons dressed in decent mourning will be admitted without restriction to view the solemn scene.

The State Coffin is of crimson velvet, highly ornamented with the coronets and other insignia of His late Royal Highness's Orders, in all amounting to forty-four plates. A large plate is to be on the lid with the following inscription, which was issued from the Herald College on Monday:—

He died on the fifth day of January,
In the Year of our Lord MDCCCXXVII.
In the 64th year of his age.

Summary of the Duke of York's Service—His Royal Highness entered the service on the 1st of Nov. in 1752, as Colonel by brevet; was appointed on the 23d March, 1782, Colonel of the 2d Regiment of Grenadier Guards; was made, on the 20th of Nov. 1782, Major-General; on the 27th of October, 1784, Colonel of the Coldstream Regiment of Guards: on the 12th of April, 1793, General; the 30th February, 1795, Field-Marshal; on the 23d August, 1797, Colonel-in-Chief of the 60th Regiment of foot, and on the 5th of September, 1805, Colonel of the Grenadier Regiment of Guards. He was appointed in February, 1795, Commander-in-Chief, retired from office in March, 1809; and was re-appointed May, 1811.

The Revenue has been made up to the 5th of January, 1827, and exhibits a most favourable result. It has been steadily increasing every quarter since the great fall in January, 1826. The Quarters. Total amount of April 5, 1825, £9,829,768.—July 5, £12,000,227.—October 5, £12,296,592.—Jan. 5, 1827, £12,524,085. For the whole year, £46,650,672. For the corresponding previous year, £48,573,820.

Consols, Jan. 15, 78⅞: Greek Bonds, 15¾; Mexican, 63¾; Chilian, 36¾.

A dreadful storm occurred at Liverpool on the 14th which did much damage to the shipping on the coast. The packet ship Panthea was lost in Hollyhead harbour—crew and passengers saved. She sailed from New York on the 24th Dec. A brig of war was also lost at the same time.

The King has sent £100 to the distressed persons in the Barony of Renfrew, in his character of Baron Renfrew.

The Thames Tunnel is making great progress, and several gentlemen dined on the Twelfth day under one of the great arches.

Foreign Intelligence.

The latest news from Madrid that has been received, is of the 26th December, of which date as well as of the 13th and 21st, there were some articles in the unofficial part of the Monitor of this morning.

"It is, however, confidently asserted, that the demands addressed to King Ferdinand, were the following:—

"1st A disavowal of every thing that has been done by the Spanish Authorities to favour the invasion of the rebels in Portugal, a change of his Ministers, &c.

"2nd. Finally to recognize the Constitutional Government of Portugal.

"To these demands Ferdinand replies:

"1st. That he will not change his Ministers; that he sends to the Frontiers an army of 9,000 men, for the purpose of disarming and sending into the interior the insurgents who shall return into Spain.

"2nd. That he would end a Charge d'Affairs to Lisbon, but that he would not otherwise recognize the Constitution of Portugal.

"It is evident that this answer is not such as was desired."

London, January 15

We have received the Paris papers of Friday, and the Etoile dated Saturday.

In the Quotidienne of the former day, the news from Spain continues of a warlike character; so far, at least, as preparations are concerned. Troops, we are told, are not only marching towards the Portuguese frontiers, but to reinforce the camp at St. Roche, "in order to observe Gibraltar;" and it is aded, "if England should declare war against Spain the latter would march an army into Portugal, and the five or six thousand soldiers of Gen. Clinton would have to combat, besides the 40,000 Portuguese who will soon be under the walls of Lisbon, 20,000 Spanish Troops."

It is worthy of observation, that there seems to be a sort of quiet activity, if we may so term it, in the military administration of France.

The journal des Debats mentions, upon the authority of a private letter from Madrid, that M. Calomarde had incurred the displeasure of Ferdinand, in consequence of various original orders and instructions, sent to the Captains-General commanding the frontier Provinces of Portugal, having fallen into the hands of Mr. Lamb. It is said, they prove to demonstration, what has been the real conduct of the Spanish Government, and that they could have been obtained by the English Minister only through the treachery of the subordinate persons in M. Calomarde's office. Measures had been adopted to prevent a repetition of this alleged misconduct.

London Jan. 10.—It is apparent, from the intelligence in the French papers that Ferdinand has not been induced to make the concessions demanded by England and France, though these concessions merely amount to an observance of his treaties, and a performance of his promises. It is positively stated in a letter from Paris, that an order has been despatched to Madrid to withdraw the French troops from that capital. It does not appear probable, however, that the other French troops in Spain will be withdrawn.—These troops are now confined to the garrisons of a few of the great fortresses—Cadiz, Barcelona, Pampeluna, and we believe, St. Sebastian's.

It is not impossible that Ferdinand, pressed on the one hand by the representations of England and France, is exposed to representations equally strong, and danger, perhaps more eminent, in another direction. The exasperation and the violence of the Apostolic party in Spain would make a recognition by him of the Portugal Constitution, perhaps, not a very safe step. A manifesto in which he is denounced as "stupid and criminal," and is threatened with death or dethronement, because he was suspected of intending to acknowledge the Portuguese Government, has been published, and is said by the persons in London best acquainted with Spanish affairs to be genuine, and there is not the least doubt that it speaks the sentiments of a large party in Spain.

The Legislature of New-Brunswick, met on 8th Feb'y.—the following extracts are given from the speech of His Excellency SIR HOWARD DOUGLAS:—

"Mr. President, and Gentlemen of His Majesty's Council;

"Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly;

"I have great satisfaction in keeping in existence to the completion of its Constitutional period, a Legislature whose efforts have been zealously, wisely and harmoniously devoted to the Public welfare, in the deliberations to which I have already called you; and I open this, the last Session which the Constitution will admit of this present Assembly, with entire confidence that, at its close, I shall have again to exercise a pleasing duty in giving my concurrence to measures conceived in the spirit I so cordially greet, and calculated, as your former proceedings have eminently been, to advance the Public Interests.

"I did not fail to transmit to His Majesty's Secretary of State, to be laid before His Majesty, your Loyal and dutiful joint Address, on the attempts which had been recently made by certain American Land Agents, to disturb the Possession of His Majesty, and the jurisdiction of this Province in certain tracts of the country.—His Majesty, with that gracious attention and regard to the rights and interests of His North American Dominions, for which they have so much reason to be grateful, received your Address most graciously, and directed that important document to be transmitted to His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs for further consideration.

"Together with explanations given in reply to the representations made by His Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary, against those encroachments, very satisfactory assurances have been conveyed to His Majesty's Government, that is the earnest wish of the Government of the United States, to reciprocate the conciliatory disposition and procedure observed on the part of the British Government; and that the American Secretary of State had been directed by the President to inculcate on the Governments of the adjoining States, the observance of a like course of conciliation and forbearance; and to be careful to do no act which might change the state of the question, as it is existed when the Treaty of Ghent was executed. The communication further states, that respectful regard would be paid to the observances thus inculcated, and that no steps are in contemplation which can in any degree tend to produce further excitement.

"Reviewing the past year with all the devout sentiments and grateful feelings which are most due, when we carry that retrospect into the awful occurrences of the preceding period, and reflect upon the interpositions of Divine Mercy which we then experienced; considering, too, the profound state of suffering which has existed at home, the people of New-Brunswick have much reason to be thankful.—The traces of the dreadful conflagration are rapidly disappearing; and the steady industry of our people, quickened and supported by the means which have been so generally contributed to their relief, and which your liberality has considerably augmented, have, in general, placed improved establishments on the sites of those which had been consumed; a season particularly auspicious has favoured the labours of the People; and, in most parts of the Province, has blessed their Agricultural Industry, with abundant returns.

"I am happy to assure you, that a spirit of improvement in Agriculture continues to manifest itself in all parts of the Province, and that great advantages in modes of cultivation, increased production, and improvement in the breed of Cattle, have already been produced by those Institutions which you have enabled me to form: and I have further the satisfaction to acquaint you, that the measure of uniting the Emigrant and Agricultural Societies according to the constitution which has been given to them, has been found to produce very beneficial combinations in the settlement and cultivation of the Province in all the Districts in which those measures have been tried; and that a system has thus been matured, which will be eminently serviceable to the Province, should the proposed system of Emigration from the Mother Country, be directed in any extent, and with the means and facilities which have been recommended, to settle and cultivate the ungranted Lands of a Province, in the extent of whose local capacities, and in the industry and stedfast Loyalty of whose Population, the foundations and principles are firmly laid, of what is first rising to be one of the most valuable Colonies of the British Empire.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF LOWER-CANADA.

FRIDAY, 23rd FEBRUARY, 1827.

Mr. VIGER reported on Mr. GALT's petition for the sufferers during the late war in Upper Canada; in substance, that the claims of the petitioners ought to be favorably considered, and a principle established whereby the sufferers by war in both Provinces, for common defence, should be indemnified by the mother country and jointly by both Provinces; but that to enable this Province to effect such an object, it would be necessary to procure a repeal of the 25th and 26th clauses of the Canada Trade Act, and that measures ought to be taken in concert with Upper Canada to that effect: committed for Friday next.

Mr. Secretary COCHRAN was admitted, and presented a Message from His Excellency the Governor in Chief in favor of the Welland Canal Company, with a favorable despatch on the subject from Sir Peregrine Maitland.

The Army.

From the London Gazette of Jan. 2.

Whitehall Dec. 1826.—His Majesty has been pleased to nominate and appoint Maj. General Sir Archibald Campbell, Knight, Commander of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath, to be a Knight Grand Cross of the said most Honourable Military Order.

His Majesty has also been pleased to nominate and appoint the under-mentioned officers to be Companions of the said Order:—Lt. Colonel J. W. Mallet, 86th (late 89th) foot; Lt. Col. W. Smelt 41st foot; Maj. James L. Basden, 89th foot; Major Peter L. Chambers, 41st foot.

Domestic.

BRETOWN.—We rejoice to hear that it is resolved to build a town of the above name near the Rideau Canal, in honor of Colonel BYE, of the Royal Engineers, under whose direction the Canal is forming. The town is to be situated between the River Rideau and the Rideau Canal, and about 250 feet above the level of the Ottawa. The soil is excellent and the site is said to be beautiful. Lots are also giving away to respectable tradespeople and labourers who will be employed in the construction of the Canal. The size of a lot is 66 front and 198 feet back. Each person taking a lot bound to build a house of thirty feet square upon it by the beginning of August, 1827, which entitles him to a location ticket. He also becomes bound to pay the small sum of 2s. 6d. annually, which goes to the improvement of the town. It may be useful to many to know that Mr. Borrows, at the Rideau Canal, will show the lots to the applicants. We wish all prosperity to attend the undertaking.—Montreal Herald.

Mr. MERRITT, Agent for the WELLAND CANAL Company, is on a visit to Quebec on business connected with that valuable undertaking. We are happy to learn that the object of his mission will be attained, which we understand is to petition the Legislature to take Stock to the amount of £25,000.—Quebec Gazette.

From the Canadian Courant.

Upper Canada.—In the absence of more important information we have inserted at length the Militia Bill as it passed the House of Assembly & received without amendment, the sanction of the Legislative Council. The Lieut. Governor has left it for the Royal Assent which no doubt it will obtain. We must confess that on the most minute examination of its provisions, we appear to have any reasonable ground for the warmth with which its opponents have attacked it.

It had become necessary that something very similar to this bill should be enacted, to secure the rights and privileges of those, who do not wish to hold property upon a tenure that can be legally questioned.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT IN WATERLOO.—On one of the damp days, about two weeks ago, Mr. Christian Martin, (son of Peter Martin) carried into his kitchen a quantity of flax to dry, preparatory to breaking it; when, by some accident, it caught fire.—This was mid-day.—Every effort was made to extinguish the flames; and it was not until every exertion proved in vain, and every part of the building was on fire, that it was recollected there were two children up stairs in bed.—They had been running about till they got tired, and had laid down to rest themselves, when they fell asleep. It was now too late to effect their rescue; and dreadful to relate—they, together with every thing in the House, became a prey to the flames.—Gore Gazette.

PORT HOPE MEETING.

A Meeting was convened at Port Hope on Saturday the 6th inst. pursuant to notice of Mr. Leonard Soper "for the purpose of taking into consideration the expediency of petitioning the Imperial Parliament against the ALIEN Bill lately passed by our Provincial Legislature, and for the purpose of providing the necessary funds to carry the same into effect."

Mr. Leonard Soper not being in attendance at 2 o'clock, J. T. Williams Esq. moved, That this Meeting do now proceed to consider the matters for which it was called, and that Thomas Ward Esq. be called to the Chair which being unanimously agreed to, Mr. Ward took the Chair, and Mr. G. M. Boswell was appointed Secretary.

The Naturalization Bill was then read and explained by the Chairman, and J. Boswell, and H. Ruttan Esqrs.; after which the following resolutions were put and carried:

1st. Moved by John Boswell Esq. and seconded by Dr. John Gilchrist.*

That this Meeting views with grateful satisfaction the benevolent policy of His Majesty's Government towards those persons, some of whose rights as British Subjects have been questioned, and who have settled in this Province with the wish and intention of becoming such.

2nd. Moved by J. T. Williams Esq. and seconded by E. Jones Esq.*

That the Naturalization Bill passed at the last Session of the Legislature of this Province, is in the opinion of this Meeting well calculated to effect its object, & by the simplicity of its provisions is suited to the ease and convenience of those, who are desirous to take the benefit of it.

3d. Moved by H. Ruttan Esq. seconded by R. Henry Esq. and J. D. Smith Esq.*

That the registry clauses in that Bill are viewed by this Meeting as highly beneficial, inasmuch, as a permanent record is thereby provided from which all evidence, now difficult to be obtained, may be obtained by those interested therein, of their having complied with the requisition of the law.

4th. Moved by J. D. Smith Esq.* and seconded by D. Sumers Esq.*

That this Meeting fervently hope that this Act may obtain His Majesty's Royal Assent.

5th Moved by H. Ruttan Esq. seconded by Mr. N. Wheeler.

That an address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor be founded on these resolutions and that G. S. Boulton, D. Smart, J. T. Williams, J. G. Bethune, and E. Jones, Esquires, be a Committee to draft the same.

Moved by Wm. Sowden Esq. seconded by R. Henry Esq.

6th. That the Thanks of this Meeting be given to the Chairman for his attention in the Chair.

T. WARD,
Chairman
G. M. J. BOSWELL,
Secretary.

*Those Gentlemen against whose names as asterisk is placed, come under the provisions of the Act.

Communications.

Our Correspondent "Vindex" will perceive, that we have exercised the discretion he was pleased to allow us, by making some necessary alterations in the following Communication received from him.

To the People of the London District

FELLOW CITIZENS,

Having awaited with intense anxiety the fate of the Alien Question lately decided by the Provincial Parliament, having attentively weighed the arguments of its friends and its adversaries upon beholding, as I do, in its enactment the strong excitation of the public mind, in consequence of the way it has been disposed of, I cannot quietly rest without making some attempt to appease those feelings, which already enkindled by the fire of an enthusiasm ardent beyond all precedent, will, I fear, if not speedily extinguished, result in flames which may consume the very altar of our Country's loyalty.—The golden opportunity for shaking your attachment to our happy Constitution has arrived; the Demon of political discord is abroad; the demagogue and his emissaries are awake; I witness their exertions—I lend an attentive ear to their arguments; they are indefatigable; they are omnipresent; "they go about like roaring lions seeking whom they may devour;" and while I can despise the flimsy shallowness of their reasonings, I cannot help dreading the consequences, which may result from their industry and their influence.

The question to which I have alluded is now decided, twenty two of our Representatives voting for the Bill, and eighteen against it: amongst the majority are, I perceive, several Members, who are themselves individually interested. The Bill, as it has passed agreeably to the instructions of His Majesty, will most indubitably become a law—my present intention is therefore to shew you, that some such enactment is indispensible for the security of your property, and the protection of your Civil Rights.—That the Bill which has passed hath in it nothing degrading; nothing oppressive; nothing that can hurt the feelings, or wound the pride of the most scrupulous individual, for whose relief it is intended; if that individual has attachment to the Constitution of this Country, would justify him in swearing fidelity to it. In order to effect these objects, I shall first endeavour to shew who are Aliens, and who are not, as I find a great diversity of opinion upon this subject, and as a correct understanding of the point, is of the very first importance.—A very general idea prevails among the great mass of the people, whose sources of information are very circumscribed, and whose capability of entering deeply into the consideration of so intricate a question, is a natural consequence of their insulated condition, little calculated to lead to correct results, that if the Provincial Parliament did not by assenting to this Bill, declare them to be Aliens, they should still, as they ormerly were, be regarded as subjects—others again imagine that by their persisting in a declaration that they are not Aliens, they will not be under the necessity of conforming to the provisions of the bill.—These ideas, manifestly erroneous as they are, pervade the mind, of threefourths of the people. Decisions however, lately obtained in the higher Courts in England, where the subject has undergone a fair investigation, demonstrate, beyond the possibility of a doubt, that all subjects of the United States, born either before or after the treaty of 1783, are Aliens, to all intents and purposes; and must, unless naturalized by an Act of Parliament, be so regarded by the eye of the law—more particularly so, when the party residing in the United States, now resident in this Province. They may I think be divided into two classes, viz:

1. All those, who tho' born within the allegiance of His Britannic Majesty, assented to the Treaty of 1783, by aiding in the establishment of the Republic, accepting office, or exercising any of the rights of citizenship within the pale of its authority.

2. All persons born in the United States since the Treaty of 1783, whose Parents were not natural born Subjects of Great Britain.

I am well aware that many, very many, of both classes will be ready and willing to acknowledge themselves Aliens, although failing under one or other of the above heads. They will say, I came here by the invitation of the British authorities, and have fought in defence of British principles, and how can I be regarded as an Alien—But whatever claims such persons may have to British protection and British sympathy, they certainly have now to British citizenship—it should be recollected, as it respects those persons whose claim to the rights of Subjects, is founded upon the fact, of their having come into the country, by the invitation of one of the legislatures of the Province, and who have since manifested their loyalty, by fighting in defence of its liberties, that it was not, and is not, in the power of the King himself, to make them Subjects—that fighting in defence of His Crown and Dignity, could not do it; that in fact, nothing short of an Act of Parliament, assented to by His Majesty, could, or can ever entitle a Foreigner, to the rights of British natural born subjects in any of her dominions.—Those persons will not, I know, easily assent to the fact of their being Aliens, but in conversing with many individuals of the Canadian militia, that fighting in defence of His Crown and Dignity, could not do it; that in fact, nothing short of an Act of Parliament, assented to by His Majesty, could, or can ever entitle a Foreigner, to the rights of British natural born subjects in any of her dominions.—Those persons will not, I know, easily assent to the fact of their being Aliens, but in conversing with many individuals of the Canadian militia, in the country, ever maintained a different doctrine. They loudly complain of being deceived, of being allured here under false pretences, and boldly assert their right to property, on the ground, that they hold the King's faith, the validity of which it would be high treason to impeach.—The fact however is, that until the decision of the English Judges, to which I have alluded in a former part of this Communication, were made, the Home, as well as the Provincial authorities, imagined that the subjects of the United States who came into this country, with the knowledge and approbation of the British Government, and who on their arrival here swore allegiance to the King, were entitled to hold property, exercise the elective franchise, and become Members of the Provincial Parliament: But those decisions once made, the case assumed a widely different aspect. It now appears beyond the possibility of doubt, that none but Natural Born Subjects of His Majesty, or Subjects Naturalized by some existing Statute, have, according to the Laws of England, any right whatever to purchase, hold, transfer, or otherwise possess themselves, or dispose of estates in lands or tenements, within the dominions of His said Majesty—that none others are eligible to office—capable of exercising the elective franchise, or in any wise entitled to any of the rights of Natural Born Subjects, or Subjects legally Naturalized. This is precisely the condition of all the Subjects of the United States of America, now resident in this Province. Must it not therefore appear evident to the commonest capacity, that some amendment is indispensible, to the security of persons so very unfortunately situated. That any difference of opinion should exist, respecting such a proposition, is another of the many proofs which we daily have, of the insufficiency of human reason, to decide justly, regarding matters affecting our own interest.

My next object is to shew, that the Act passed by our Parliament, hath in it nothing degrading. It simply requires every person coming under its enactments, to register his name at a proper and convenient office; to take the oath of allegiance—thereby abjuring all allegiance to any other State or Power: and having done this, he is at once admitted to all the rights of a Subject WITHIN THIS PROVINCE, as fully and as effectually, as if he were a Natural Born Subject.

As this registry and renunciation of allegiance, are the great objections to the Bill, let us see how far they are objectionable.—What is required of persons who emigrate to the U. States, as a condition precedent to Naturalization? All such persons are obliged to go into open Court, register their names, & absolutely and entirely renounce allegiance to any foreign Prince, Potentate, State, or Sovereignty, whereof they were born Citizens or Subjects. This, Fellow Citizens, is the condition to which I, as a British Subject, should submit, were I desirous of becoming a Citizen of the American Republic; and can that, which under that far famed popular Government, is regarded as indispensible to the security of her adopted children's loyalty, be here considered, as uncalled for, or oppressive? Can that be wrong on the Northern shores of the St. Lawrence, which is right on its Southern banks? Or must the Sons of Columbia be treated with more respect here, than are the Sons of Britain there? But you will perhaps say, the case is different—very justly and fairly you state the trouble I shall prove it to be so. The Subjects of Great Britain, yea, even her Soldiers and Sailors, on arriving in the United States, and seeking to become Citizens, are insulted, grossly insulted, by having an oath administered to them, which to take, is to commit direct perjury: for in England it is a well known fact, that allegiance is not a transferable commodity. Extensive as is the Commerce of Britain, she allows not her Sons to traffic in affidavits—Allegiance is there regarded, as binding upon the individual who swears it, until the tongue that utters it, shall be traceless in the silent grave. Very, very, different is the case in the United States; allegiance is there, and ever must be regarded, as a transferable commodity—binding on the individual so long, as he cannot find a better and no longer. This, I say, MUST EVER be the case, else, how can they ask a man, to abjure his natural allegiance, unless they concede to him, the privilege of abjuring his acquired allegiance.—I know, by conversing with many natives of the Sons of Columbia, that fighting in defence of His Crown and Dignity, could not do it; that in fact, nothing short of an Act of Parliament, assented to by His Majesty, could, or can ever entitle a Foreigner, to the rights of British natural born subjects in any of her dominions.—Those persons will not, I know, easily assent to the fact of their being Aliens, but in conversing with many individuals of the Canadian militia, in the country, ever maintained a different doctrine. They loudly complain of being deceived, of being allured here under false pretences, and boldly assert their right to property, on the ground, that they hold the King's faith, the validity of which it would be high treason to impeach.—The fact however is, that until the decision of the English Judges, to which I have alluded in a former part of this Communication, were made, the Home, as well as the Provincial authorities, imagined that the subjects of the United States who came into this country, with the knowledge and approbation of the British Government, and who on their arrival here swore allegiance to the King, were entitled to hold property, exercise the elective franchise, and become Members of the Provincial Parliament: But those decisions once made, the case assumed a widely different aspect. It now appears beyond the possibility of doubt, that none but Natural Born Subjects of His Majesty, or Subjects Naturalized by some existing Statute, have, according to the Laws of England, any right whatever to purchase, hold, transfer, or otherwise possess themselves, or dispose of estates of any other Country; else why make choice of one of her Colonies, in which to spend the flower of their lives, redeeming it from the barrenness of nature. I do not know what you and other men may think of loyalty, but for my single self, I had as lief not be, as live to be the subject of any Country, whose laws and institutions did not so far accord with my feelings, as to induce me to swear perpetual allegiance to her.

The Bride whose lover should if required on the moment of being united, refuse to vow eternal fidelity to her, on the ground that he might at some period meet a damsel better suited to his roving fancy, would I guess be regarded as a rather cool lover for the latitude of 41 1-2.

Having endeavoured to shew that the bill contains no very obnoxious clauses, that it requires no condition to which a really loyal man may not cheerfully assent; let us examine the arguments of its adversaries. Among those, the most distinguished, is our talented representative Mr Rolph. His Speech on this occasion, is beyond doubt a speech of great ingenuity, evincing powers of mind which seldom fall to the lot of man, but it is a speech, it is one which rejects with all the fastidiousness of an epicure, the most delicious morsel, simply so necessary, and so peculiar to that subtle character. He has certainly pleaded hard for his clients, but in doing so, his deductions are seldom the fair inference of his premises. It is to the clause of registry that he seems most opposed, against this he directed his heaviest battery; in fact whenever he alludes to this ODIOUS, THIS HUMILIATING CLAUSE, the pressure of his steam is so high, that when the explosion of his boiler does not follow, his argument invariably blows up. As a specimen take the following. He is labouring to convince his audience how disgraceful it would be, to submit to the odium of registry, but if his arguments prove any thing, they certainly prove the propriety of it. Adverting to the language of some other Member of the House, he observes—"to be an Alien it is said is no disgrace, and therefore those who obstinately refuse to confess their dilemma deserve no commiseration. It is no shame says Mr. Rolph, to have unfortunately contracted the ITCH, yet no man so afflicted denies to register his misfortune, or to be told of it wherever he goes." If it is meant by this delicately sublime simile (to the very smell of which I have an implacable antipathy) to shew the falsity of his adversarys assertion, he certainly has fallen far short of his object: for what Alien or Subjects of the United States register themselves afflicted with the ITCH of Alienation or not, all who know them to be subjects of the said United States, know them to be Aliens. Very different is the case with an unfortunate person, afflicted with the beautifully loathsome disease of itching disease—it certainly would be imprudent in him, to make any public entry of his misfortune, for if he neither records it with a goose quill, manifests it by his finger nails, or blabs it about with his tongue, the world may remain as ignorant of it, as the fondest lover of merit of a beef steak. After some other allusions to subjects of false shame, he says, as further proof of the odium of a registry.—"The Nobility of England estimate their importance, by a long line of ancestry, and look with not a little self conceit at a long story of their Peers but yesterday." True, but the same Nobility, or rather their ancestors, were careful to preserve records of their origin, and tell you with not a little self conceit a long story of their descent, and the deeds of their progenitors—and if I, Fellow Citizens, who boast no character, they seem quite as proud of their American origin, as are our English Nobility of their Roman, Saxon, or Norman descent, & if proud of it why object to a public record of it. Their Children may yet rejoice in the opportunity thus afforded them, of proving their descent from the Heroes of George Washington, instead of mingling as they otherwise might, with the Nobility of George Rex. But to this Mr. Rolph has a decided objection, his language is—"The moment the political distinction is created, against which he is generally heard—the Irish to this day maintain distinctions, which sometimes lead to painful consequences, and they wear their badges of distinction." I am quite certain that Mr. Rolph knows enough of Irish History to tell the House, why those distinctions exist in Ireland—but this would spoil his argument.

Had the Irish been admitted to the privileges of their English conquerors, on the same easy and equitable terms that are now proposed to American Subjects, in order to entitle them to the rights of British Subjects, the distinctions he alludes would never have existed. Unfortunately this was not the case; for while the American * Citizens, who never shed a drop of blood in defence of England, and never paid a sixpence towards the support of her constitution, is offered in this Province all the rights of a Natural Born Briton, by simply abjuring all foreign allegiance, the Irish, whose blood shed in defence of England, if it could now be collected into one vast reservoir, might rival the ocean in magnitude, and whose gold for upwards of 700 years, has contributed to the support of the State, have yet to seek for equal rights, although owing no other allegiance, and desirous of living and dying within the Dominions of their lawful Sovereign.

Mr. Rolph's next argument, is to shew the imprudence of disturbing the rooted belief of the people, that they are Subjects—and this argument is just as philosophical, as those already noticed. He says, "Cicero punctuating with futurity through the medium of Heathen Religion and Pagan Philosophy, thought he discovered a hope of the immortality of the Soul, and upon being accused of holding a superstitious opinion, he answered that it was an innocent and comfortable error, which it would be cruel to take away from him." That the belief of being a Subject of Great Britain, when entertained by a person who really is not one, is a comfortable sort of error, I can easily believe, but that it is not innocent, in your common acceptation of that term, is equally certain; yet strange and paradoxical as it may seem, it requires no great eloquence to prove, that it is at least as dangerous, as it is innocent and comfortable. Cicero's belief in the immortality of the Soul, even if it had been irrational, could never be productive of injury to him, inasmuch as he had nothing to lose should the notion be but chimerical: but the man whom the laws of his adopted Country declares to be an Alien, may by the indulgence of an innocent and comfortable error, in the full belief, that he now disgraceful it would be, to submit to the registry, even if it had been irrational, could never be productive of injury to him, inasmuch as he had nothing to lose should the notion be but chimerical: but the man whom the laws of his adopted Country declares to be an Alien, may by the indulgence of an innocent and comfortable error, in the full belief, that he now day find himself in a most uncomfortable predicament.

Again, the Dr. says, "what sort of Subjects must we presume those to be, who profess to owe allegiance in all its solemnity, and renounce it in the same breath?" Is this an Irishman's fashion to answer one question by asking another, I shall thank Mr. Rolph to say, what sort of subjects he would wish to see, inhabiting a British Colony? Not I trust the attached Subjects of another Government, professing the ITCH, yet no man so afflicted denies to register his misfortune, or to be told of it wherever he goes." If it is meant by this delicately sublime simile (to the very smell of which I have an implacable antipathy) to shew the falsity of his adversarys assertion, he certainly has fallen far short of his object: for what Alien or Subjects of the United States register themselves afflicted with the ITCH of Alienation or not, all who know them to be subjects of the said United States, know them to be Aliens. Very different is the case with an unfortunate person, afflicted with the beautifully loathsome disease of itching disease—it certainly would be imprudent in him, to make any public entry of his misfortune, for if he neither records it with a goose quill, manifests it by his finger nails, or blabs it about with his tongue, the world may remain as ignorant of it, as the fondest lover of merit of a beef steak. After some other allusions to subjects of false shame, he says, as further proof of the odium of a registry.—"The Nobility of England estimate their importance, by a long line of ancestry, and look with not a little self conceit at a long story of their Peers but yesterday." True, but the same Nobility, or rather their ancestors, were careful to preserve records of their origin, and tell you with not a little self conceit a long story of their descent, and the deeds of their progenitors—and if I, Fellow Citizens, who boast no character, they seem quite as proud of their American origin, as are our English Nobility of their Roman, Saxon, or Norman descent, & if proud of it why object to a public record of it. Their Children may yet rejoice in the opportunity thus afforded them, of proving their descent from the Heroes of George Washington, instead of mingling as they otherwise might, with the Nobility of George Rex. But to this Mr. Rolph has a decided objection, his language is—"The moment the political distinction is created, against which he is generally heard—the Irish to this day maintain distinctions, which sometimes lead to painful consequences, and they wear their badges of distinction." I am quite certain that Mr. Rolph knows enough of Irish History to tell the House, why those distinctions exist in Ireland—but this would spoil his argument.

Had the Irish been admitted to the privileges of their English conquerors, on the same easy and equitable terms that are now proposed to American Subjects, in order to entitle them to the rights of British Subjects, the distinctions he alludes would never have existed. Unfortunately this was not the case; for while the American * Citizens, who never shed a drop of blood in defence of England, and never paid a sixpence towards the support of her

To the Editor of the U. E. Loyalist

SIR,

Having made the tour of Europe, and attended with lively interest to all I saw there, I proceeded to the Continent of America, and on Saturday last I arrived at a very pretty village in the District of Newcastle, called Port Hope, which I saw a greater seven-blage of persons than I could conceive inhabited that place—upon inquiry I found that a Mr. Fothergill, or some such name, who, I was informed is a Member of the Parliament of Upper Canada, intended to address them on the subject of the grievances, under which he said they laboured. I had not much time to spare, but the next day being Sunday, a day of devotional exercises, I determined to remain. Soon afterwards the people went into a large room in the Tavern, where the political meeting was supposed to be held, and I followed them; but instead of political discussion, I found a Mr. Auctioneer, disposing of some trumpery articles of crockery ware. I inquired of a decent looking man who stood near me, what was the meaning me to commence, and whether this Mr. Fothergill of whom I had heard so much had yet arrived—there's Mr. Fothergill said he, pointing as I thought to a man in spectacles, who was the Auctioneer, and the meeting will take place after he has concluded his sale. I was a little surprised at his communication, for though I was aware that under the admirable Constitution of which I am a native, a man's calling, be it what it may, did not deprive him of any privilege, yet I had never heard of an Auctioneer being a Member of Parliament. However, the Gentleman who was in spectacles, who was the Auctioneer, and this not help agreeing with him—he moved a resolution in approbation of the Bill which was adopted. Several others of the same tendancy were afterwards adopted, and the meeting was over. I still however followed the crowd, and away we hustled up stairs to the Auction room. You may suppose Mr. Editor I was not a little astonished, when I found the Auctioneer's Clerk occupying his employers place, and in a high toned strain addressing the chairman, whom I afterward learned was one Smith, a Coiner of Port Hope! What said I has become of Mr. Fothergill? Why don't you see him speaking said somebody near me. O! then I was mistaken I replied, the Member for Durham is not an Auctioneer, he is only his Clerk—Clerk to Mr. Thomas Turner Orton. But what is he saying—surely he cannot be speaking of the Bill I heard read below. An infamous law—run the people—bring civil war into the land—separate the Colony from the Parent State—Liberty—Constitution—bled for their Country—Proclamation—Registering names—Aliens—degradation—Oath of Allegiance—perjured scoundrels—abjuration forever—want to leave the Country—can't go—sophistry—delusion—his friend Ralph—loyalty—Patriotism!!! Such frothy declamation composed the speech of Mr Fothergill Auctioneer's Clerk, Member for Durham. He made indeed very bold statements and drew very threatening conclusions—but his arguments, if he had any, were neither so bold or so threatening, for they never made their appearance. When he had finished, Mr Bowell rose and replied to him—Truth prevailed, I saw satisfaction on the countenances of the persons who surrounded me. Mr. Fothergill Auctioneer's Clerk Member for Durham (I like to give the whole name) replied—He was not so mouthy as before, but he gasconaded for a long time without any apparent success, and did not fail to accuse the persons who were in favor of the Act of having interrupted his Sale, and intimated that he expected they would be answerable for the damage he had sustained.—So much for Patriotism!!! He was answered by two very respectable looking Gentlemen, whose names I have since been informed are Burnham and Ruttan. The people seemed to listen to them with much satisfaction, and after they had concluded, retired peaceably to their homes.

Allow me Mr. Editor, stranger as I am, to say a few words of this Mr. Fothergill, Auctioneer's Clerk Member for Durham. I am of opinion, notwithstanding I have been told he is a great Patriot, that he prefers "solid pudding to empty praise"—I cannot therefore help admiring his policy, in having his Auction on the day appointed for the meeting I am sure Sir you will agree with me in giving him much credit for this ingenious contrivance for procuring bidders, though I fear it must be at the expense of his claim to the title of a Patriot. I cannot but admire too, the strong sense of duty which induced him to stick to his Auction business, after he knew the meeting had begun, thus suffering what he called the "all important question" to be discussed, without the presence of so able an advocate on the side of liberty. He would introduce a new kind of allegiance, which you might put on or off as you do your coat—very convenient I must acknowledge. He would have the people fight the King's battles if it suited them, or if it suited them better, fight against the King—excellent Loyalty! He would have them refuse the benefit of an Act made for their relief—kind advice! He would have a Petition to the Imperial Parliament signed, and a Subscription raised to send him home with it, because he is anxious to go there on his own business—admirable economist.—Professed politician!—Disinterested adviser!—What more Mr. Editor can I say of him?—Need I have said so much?—Are not all these truths marked upon the name of Charles Fothergill Esq. Auctioneer's Clerk Member for Durham.

I am Sir,
Your obedient Serv't.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, March 17, 1827.

The melancholy intelligence of the death of His Royal Highness the Duke of York, was announced to our readers, in an Extra Sheet, issued from our Office on Saturday last. We have made copious extracts, from our late papers of the circumstances connected with this mournful event, which will be found in our columns to-day.

The other news from Europe is important.

Welland Canal.—The House of Assembly in Lower Canada on the 5 inst., in Committee of the whole, voted £25,000 for the purpose of buying shares in the Canal. The vote was unanimous, thirty-eight Members being present. The following remarks are taken from the Quebec Mercury:—

"We are happy to say that Mr. Merritt's application to the Legislature, for aid in completion of the Welland Canal, has been successful, and that the House has voted a sum of £25,000, to be expended in shares in that undertaking."

A Report has been made by a Committee of the Assembly of Lower Canada, on the subject of the claims for losses during the late war. The Report concludes as follows:—

"Acting under the sympathy which Lower Canada has always entertained for the Sister Province and from a sense of common interest, so soon as the Legislature of Upper Canada shall have appointed Commissioners to meet an equal number on the part of this Province to consider of and determine what measure should be recommended to the Imperial Parliament, with a view to obviate the difficulties which result from the Standard whereby the present distribution of Revenue to both Provinces has been established, together with a revision of the 28th and 29th clauses of the aforesaid Act, this House should consent that an annual sum, equal to the moiety of the annual sum required, be provided by this Province, to enable Upper-Canada to avail herself of His Majesty's gracious accession to the arrangement made for the liquidation of the claims in question; and that in the event of any disagreement in opinion between the Commissioners where on the Votes may be equal, your Committee are of opinion that the several parties should state their respective reasons of disagreement in writing, and the matter in dispute be referred to the arbitration of the Right Hon. F. Robinson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his private capacity as an Umpire."

The Editor of the Gore Gazette, concludes some very pertinent remarks, on the Naturalization Bill, with the following recommendation to those who are interested in the measure.
