"Being convinced, therefore, as we really are, that the sole intention of the British Government in recommending the passing of a Bill, and that of the Provincial Legislature in framing the one in question, was to confirm the individuals alluded to in the full and unquestionable enjoyment of their property and political rights, we should feel that we were doing them, and the country in which we reside, an injustice, were we to recommend to them any other line of conduct, than that which will put them in immediate and unalienable possession (in this Province) of all the liberties, rights and immunities of British Subjects."

The Editor of the Upper Canada Herald, has fired a friendly shot at us, with respect to some of our remarks on the Naturalization Bill. He "hopes," that such of his contemporaries as are "labouring hard to convince the Public that the Bill is just and equitable in all its provisions, may be successful." So far our hopes, are the same. But, continues the Editor of the Herald, the persons most deeply interested in the measure, are capable of reading and judging for themselves."

So we think too; and what we desire, and have always recommended, is that they should read and judge for themselves If they do this, uninfluenced by the representations of "some of our contemporaries" we have no doubt of the result, and that they will be satisfied that the Bill is just and equitable.

The Editor has "only time at present to notice one error" which he says we "have fallen into." We stated, that on complying with the provisions of the Bill, the persons interested, might "rest secured in all the rights and privileges of Natural Born British Subjects. "This says the Herald, is a mistake, the Bill only professes to make them Subjects within this Province."

This is a surprising discovery indeed—Speaking of a Law passed by the Parliament of Upper Canada, it would certainly have been strange, if we had asserted, that they professed by their Act, to establish rights "in every other part of His Majesty's Dominions."

The Herald concludes by saying, that "in every other part of His Majesty's Dominions, their rights may be questioned hereafter." We will only ask the Herald in reply to inform us what rights they professed heretofore, in any other part of His Majesty's Dominions!

We should not be surprised to hear it professed, that a Foreigner settling in Upper Canada, is, and of right ought to be entitled to all the privileges of a Natural Born Subject, "in every other part of His Majesty's Dominions."

We for our parts profess, that we do not believe the Parliament of Upper Canada, has any authority to Legislate, for every other part of His Majesty's Dominions—they are no doubt a very powerful body, but their powers, have certain constitutional limits.

When the Editor of the Herald, has more time, he may perhaps come forward and assist in the labor which he hopes may be successful:

We profess, it would afford us much pleasure to see him engaged in so praise worthy a work.

The value of Goods and Merchandise paying 3½ per Cent, imported at Quebec for the year 1826, amounts to £730,922 12s 11d.

We are informed that a Public Meeting has been held at the Township of Burford, in the London District, to take into consideration the Petition against the Naturalization Bill. Mr. Whitehead, we understand, addressed the Meeting, and explained the object of the Petition. Dr. Dunscombe in reply, pointed out the object of the Bill, in which he is personally interested. On mature consideration, and from a conviction of the necessity, and justice of the Bill, we are told, the Meeting rejected the Petition.

While speaking of the London District, we would take the opportunity of mentioning, that a circumstance has been related to us, which serves to shew, that the opinions of their Constituents on this "all important question," were not very strictly attended to, by the Members from Middlesex.

It has been stated to us, that after the Bill was reported by the Committee, a copy of it, (together with that proposed by Mr. Rolph), was sent by that Gentleman, to an intelligent person at London, in order that both might be read to the people, at a Meeting to be called for the purpose.

The Court of Quarter Sessions, it so happened, was sitting at the time of its receipt, and a great number of people being in attendance on the Court, a most favorable opportunity presented itself for ascertaining their opinions. The Bills were first read in the Grand Jury room, and afterwards to the people who were brought together for the purpose of hearing them, and a decided preference was given to that reported by the Committee, which has since passed. This, it is said, was communicated to their Member, who, notwithstanding, represented his Constituents as being averse to the measure, and continued his opposition to it.

The above circumstance, which has been related to us by a person from that part of the Country, may perhaps serve to throw a ray of light upon the inconsistency of conduct on the part of the honorable Gentleman, who so strongly opposed the Bill at first, and when it was rejected, moved to have it "again placed on the order of the day."

The proceedings of a Public Meeting, held at Port Hope, on the subject of the Naturalization Bill, and the proposed Petition against it, will be found in another part of our paper. The member for Durham, we understand, was present on the occasion, and addressed the Meeting in a long Speech, repeating the arguments made use of by himself and others, in the House of Assembly, and urging the adoption of the Petition for signature, to be sent to England by an Agent. We believe we use his own words, when we state, that in the course of his address, the Member for Durham, said, "that he was unexpectedly opposed by all the wealth, power, and influence of an adjoining County." The object of the Bill being explained by several Gentlemen, the Meeting approved of it, and rejected the Petition; and such, we have little doubt, would be the result generally, if an opportunity was afforded, of placing both sides of the question fairly, before the people. But at Public Meetings, such as the one held at York, where only those "Friends to the Union," were requested to attend, the people are deprived of that opportunity. These may be very friendly Meetings, but it may be questioned, whether they strictly deserve the appellation of Public Meetings.

That at Port Hope, appears to have been called by Mr. Soper, on more liberal terms. All were invited to attend, as is usual on matters of public import, and reason and argument allowed to have their due effect.

With respect to the matter generally, the best mode, in our opinion, to be adopted with those who have any doubts on the subject, is to place in their hands a copy of the Bill, with a request that they will read it carefully, and then express their unbiassed opinions upon it. If this was done, without attempting to excite their prejudices, or misrepresenting the intentions of the Governament, we venture to say, that in nine cases out of ten, those most deeply interested in the measure, would be satisfied with the provisions of the Bill.

GRACE NEVILLE.

(Concluded.)

It was not in Grace's nature to receive such proofs of attachment without paying them in kind. Dick would hardly have been her choice for a pet, but being so honestly and artlessly chosen by him, she soon began to return the compliment, and showered on him marks of her favor and protection; perhaps a little gratified, so mixed are human motives! to find that her patronage was still of consequence at Kibes Farm. Half-pence and sixpences, apples, gingerbread, flowed into Dick's pocket, and his outward man underwent a thorough transformation. He cast his rags, and put on for the first time in his life an entire suit of new clothes. A proud boy was Dick that day. It is recorded that he passed a whole hour in alternate fits of looking in the glass and shouts of laughter. He laughed till he cried for sheer happiness.

I have peen thus particular in my account of Dick Crosby, because, in the first place, he was an old acquaintance of mine, a constant and promising attendant at the cricket-ground—his temperament being so mercurial, that even in his busiest days, when he seemed to have work enough upon his hands for ten boys, he would still make time for play; in the second, because I owe to him the great obligation of being known to his fair patroness. He had persuaded her, one afternoon, to go with him, and let him show her the dear cricket-ground; I happened to be passing the spot, and neither of us could ever remember exactly how he managed the matter, but the boy introduced us. He was an extraordinary master of the ceremonies, to be sure; but the introduction was most effectually performed, and to our mutual surprise and mutual pleasure we found ourselves acquainted. I have always considered it one of the highest compliments ever paid me that Dick Crosby thought me worthy to be known to Miss Neville.

We were friends in five minutes. I found the promise of her lovely countenance amply redeemed by her character.—She was frank, ardent, and spirited, with a cultivated mind and a sweet temper; not to have loved her would have been impossible; and she, besides the natural pleasure of talking to one who could understand and appreciate her, was delighted to come to a house where the mistress did not scold, or the master smoke? where there were neither pigs, children, nor chickens.

As spring advanced and the roads improved, we saw each other almost every day. The country round Ashley has a pretty pastoral character: meadows and coppices, winding lanes and a winding trout-stream, from its principal features; but their combination is often very pleasing, and the soft skies and mild breezes of April, and the profuse floweriness of hedgerow, wood and field, gave a never-failing charm to our long rural walks.—Grace was fond of wild flowers, which her protegé Dick was assiduous in procuring. He had even sacrificed the vanity of sticking the first bunch of primroses in his Sunday hat to the pleasure of offering them to her. They supplied her with an indoor amusement; she drew well, and copied his field nosegays with taste and delicacy. She had obtained, too, the loan of a piano, and talked stoutly of constant and vigorous practice, and of pursuing a steady course of reading. All young ladies, I believe, make such resolutions, and some few may possibly keep them; Miss Neville did not.

However lively and animated whilst her spirits were excited by society, it was evident that when alone poor Grace was languid and listless, and given to reverie. She would even fall into long fits of musing in company, start when spoken to, droop her fair head like a snowdrop, and sigh—oh, such sighs! so long, so deep, so frequent, so drawn from the very heart! They might, to be sure, have been accounted for by the great and sad change in her situation, and the death of her indulgent uncle; but these griefs seemed worn over. I had heard such sighs before, and could not help imputing them to a different cause.

My suspicions were increased when I found out accidentally that Dick and his donkey travelled every morning three miles to meet just such another Dick and such another donkey, who acted as letter-carriers to the whole village of Ashley; They would have arrived at Kibes Farm by noon in their natural progress, but Grace could not wait; so Dick and the donkey made a short cut across the country to waylay his namesake of the letter-bag, and fetch disappointment four hours sooner. It was quite clear that whatever epistles might arrive, the one so earnestly desired never came. Then she was so suspiciously fond of moon light, and nightingales, and tender poesy; and in the choice of her music, she would so repeat over and over one favourite duet, and would so blush if the repetition were remarked!—Sure she could not always have sung La ci darem by herself. Poor Grace Neville! Love was a worse disease than the solitude of Kibes Farm.

Without pretending to any remarkable absence of curiosity on the one hand, or pleading guilty to the slightest want of interest in my dear young friend on the other, I was chiefly anxious to escape the honour of being her confidante. So sure as you talk of love, you nourish it: and I wanted hers to die away. Time and absence, and cheerful company, and summer amusements would, I doubted not, effect a cure. I even began to fancy her spirits improving, when one morning, towards the middle of May, she came to me more hurried and agitated than I had ever seen her.—The cause, when disclosed, seemed quite inadequate to produce so much emotion. Mrs. Martin had received a letter from her landlord, informing her that he had let to a friend the apartments fitted up for himself at Kibes Farm, and that his friend would arrive on the succeeding day for a week's angling. "Well, my dear Grace, and what then?" "And this friend is Sir John Gower!" She hesitated a little—"What do you know of him?" "Oh, he is the proudest, sternest, cruelest man! It would kill me to see him: it would break my heart, if my heart be not broken already." And then, in an inexpressible gush of bitter grief, the tale of love which I had so long suspected burst forth. She had been engaged to the only son of this proud and wealthy baronet, with the full consent of all parties; and on the discovery of her uncle's ruined circumstances, the marriage had been most harshly broken off by his commands. She had never heard from Mr. Gower since they were separated by his father's authority but in the warmth and confidence of her own passionate and trustful love, she found an assurance of the continuance of his. Never was affection more ardent or more despairing. No common man could have awakened such tenderness in such a woman. I soothed her all I could, and implored her to give us the happiness of her company during Sir John's stay at Ashley; and so it was settled. He was expected the next evening, and she agreed to come to us some time in the forenoon.

The morning, however, wore away without bringing Miss Neville. Dinner-time arrived and passed, and still we heard no tidings of her. At last, just as we were about to send to Kibes Farm for intelligence Dick Crosby arrived on his donkey, with a verbal request that I would go to her there. Of course I complied; and as we proceeded on our way, I walking before, he riding behind, but neither of us much out of our usual pace, thanks to my rapid steps and the grave funeral march of the donkey. I endeavoured to extract as much information as I could from my attendant, a person whom I had generally found as communicative as heart could desire.

On this occasion he was most provokingly taciturn. I saw that there was no great calamity to dread, for the boy's whole face was evidently screwed up to conceal a grin, which in spite of his efforts, broke out every moment in one or other of his features. He was bursting with glee, which, for some unknown cause, he did not choose to impart; and seemed to have put his tongue under a similar restraint to that which I have read of in some fairy tale, where an enchanter threatens a loquacious waiting-maid with striking her dumb if, during a certain interval, she utters more than two words—yes and no. Dick's vocabulary was equally limited. I asked him if Miss Neville was well? "Yes." If he knew what she wanted? "No." If Sir John Gower was arrived? "Yes." If Miss Neville meant to return with me? "No."

At last unable to contain himself any longer, he burst into a shout something between laughing and singing, and forcing the astonising donkey into a pace, which in that sober beast might pass for a gallop, rode on before me, followed by the barking sheep-dog, to open the gate; whilst I, not a little curious, walked straight through the house to Miss Neville's sitting room. I paused a moment at the door, as by some strange counteraction of feeling one often does pause when strongly interested, and in that moment I caught the sweet notes of La ci darem, sung by a superb manly voice, and accompanied by Grace's piano; and instantly the truth flashed upon me, that the old Sir John Gower was gathered to his fathers, and that this was the heir come to woo and to wed. No wonder that Grace forgot her dinner engagement! No wonder that Dick Crosby grinned!

I was not mistaken. As soon as decorum would allow, Sir John carried off his beautiful bride, attended by her faithful adherent, the proudest and happiest of all odd boys! And the wedding was splendid enough to give a fresh impulse to village curiosity, and a new and lasting theme to the gossips of Ashley, who first or last could never comprehend Grace Neville.

FUNERAL OF HIS LATE ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF YORK.

For several days previous to the movement of the Procession, the intended course of which had been announced, applications were made by many of the respectable housekeepers in St. James's street and Piccadilly, for families of the highest distinction, for whole floors and windows, from whence to view the passing scene. Seats were let, as at the time of the Coronation, at various prices, from 5s. to five guineas; and this may be said to have been the case throughout the whole road to Windsor.

Many hours before daylight dawned, every street leading to St. James's Palace presented a stream of well-dressed persons, men, women, and children, thronging toward the points from which the funeral procession of His late Royal Highness could be seen to the greatest advantage. Indeed, so great was the anxiety of the public to witness the commencement of this last sad act of the melancholy drama, that immense numbers of persons, anticipating a repetition of similar inconveniences attending the approach to the solemn scene which had prevailed during the two preceeding days, had taken the precaution to bivouac in the immediate neighbourhood of St. James's Palace, and in all those situations from which a good view of the mournful cavalcade could be obtained.

Even so early as four o'clock, notwithstanding the extreme severity of the weather, the road had collected in no inconsiderable numbers, and the carpenters were busily engaged in erecting all descriptions of scaffolding for the accommodation of the Public, in every position which commanded a view of the line of route to be pursued by the Procession. The latter attending the operation, with the gleam of the torches by which the workmen were lighted to pursue them, presented a singularly romantic spectacle. All these seats were occupied as soon as completed.

In its vicinity, not less than in the metropolis itself, the bustle of advancing multitudes was glee, which, for some unknown cause, he did not choose to impart; and seemed to have put his tongue under a similar restraint to that which I have read of in some fairy tale, where an enchanter threatens a loquacious waiting-maid with striking her dumb if, during a certain interval, she utters more than two words—yes and no. FUNERAL OF HIS LATE ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF YORK.

For several days previous to the movement of the Procession, the intended course of which had been announced, applications were made by many of the respectable housekeepers in St. James's street and Piccadilly, for families of the highest distinction, for whole floors and windows, from whence to view the passing scene. Seats were let, as at the time of the Coronation, at various prices, from 5s. to five guineas; and this may be said to have been the case throughout the whole road to Windsor.

Many hours before daylight dawned, every street leading to St. James's Palace presented a stream of well-dressed persons, men, women, and children, thronging toward the points from which the funeral procession of His late Royal Highness could be seen to the greatest advantage. Indeed, so great was the anxiety of the public to witness the commencement of this last sad act of the melancholy drama, that immense numbers of persons, anticipating a repetition of similar inconveniences attending the approach to the solemn scene which had prevailed during the two preceeding days, had taken the precaution to bivouac in the immediate neighbourhood of St. James's Palace, and in all those situations from which a good view of the mournful cavalcade could be obtained.

Even so early as four o'clock, notwithstanding the extreme severity of the weather, the road had collected in no inconsiderable numbers, and the carpenters were busily engaged in erecting all descriptions of scaffolding for the accommodation of the Public, in every position which commanded a view of the line of route to be pursued by the Procession. The latter attending the operation, with the gleam of the torches by which the workmen were lighted to pursue them, presented a singularly romantic spectacle. All these seats were occupied as soon as completed.

In its vicinity, not less than in the metropolis itself, the bustle of advancing multitudes was similar. The numbers that poured over Vauxhall bridge were tremendous; and even so early as half past four, the inhabitants of Brixton, Clapham, Stockwell, South Lambeth, Kennington, and the Kent Road, commenced their journey.

The west end of the town, long before daybreak, in consequence of these converging movements, and of the ringing of its own inhabitants, presented a show of the utmost bustle and activity.

It was yet dark, but the early lights in the windows shed a partial illumination, which gave a solemn and impressive aspect to the scene. The bells of the different Churches tolled a funeral knell to the memory of the illustrious dead; and that, in fact, was the only sound that broke on the stillness of the hour.

There was, indeed, even in the most youthful and unthinking of the congregated mass, an appearance of solemnity well befitting the occasion.

It had been previously understood that all the shops should be closed, and, in fact, the whole appearance of the town was that of the celebration of some solemn fast. All business was suspended, and the public offices, except in cases of unavoidable necessity, were closed. A proclamation was issued by the Lord Mayor, on His Majesty commanding that course, as a tribute of respect and affection to the memory of the illustrious deceased. It was announced, too, that service would be performed in all Churches and Chapels, and these edifices, throughout the country, were placed in mourning, while funeral sermons, suited to the occasion, were preached from the pulpit. The whole nation, as it were, united in testifying its respect, by every possible means, for the memory of the deceased.

Shortly after six o'clock, a squadron of the 2d Regiment of Life Guards under the command of Col. Lygon, marched into the Park, from the Regent's-park barrack, and formed in the Tilt-yard, where ten mourning carriages had arrived. These were followed by the carriages of the Duke of Sussex, Princesses Augusta, Sophia, and the Duchess of Kent. Shortly after seven o'clock, a body of outriders, in deep mourning, entered from the yard. These were followed by the Knight's Marshal of the highest distinction, for whole floors and men, at the head of whom was Mr. Lee. Shortly after, an advanced guard of the 2d Regiment of Life Guards, took their station in St. James's-street, to lead the way, and in a few minutes after, the whole detachment came to a halt, making way for the mourning coaches.

The road from Hyde Park Corner looked as if London had poured out its whole population, to pay a last tribute of respect to the remains of the departed Prince.

At the Cannon Brewery, Knightsbridge, three rows of casks were placed in the front, decreasing in size from the back to the front, and making a sort of amphitheatre, to which the Public were admitted.

At Knightsbridge Barracks, the great extent of wall was literally besieged by persons of all descriptions, among whom several females actually mounted the top of the wall by ladders, and many of whom were left in rather an unpleasant predicament, by the lamplighter leaving them after he had drawn his charge, and they were actually obliged to fee others, before they could descend from their perilous situation.

At the entrance of Kensington the cavalcade made a general halt, and the detachment of the 17th Lancers, which had accompanied the procession from St. James's Palace, and also the Yeomen of the Guards, who had attended it on foot, were despatched from duty, and proceeded back to town.

Pursuing an easy pace, the procession arrived at Hammersmith, a few minutes past ten o'clock. Here not only the windows, but the roofs of the houses, were crowded with spectators.

The procession passed, and the greatest possible demonstrations of public feeling and public grief—a dead silence prevailed, over the thousands, we might almost say, millions, assembled to witness this mournful scene. The countless numbers that followed the cavalcade were like the waves of a deluge, and for the space of a mile, hardly a yard of the road was left unoccupied, and presented one continued stream of anxious individuals, thousand of whom must have been disappointed in their expectations of reaching it; but still continued to press forward with unwearied perseverance.

Upon leaving Hammersmith the procession moved forward at a quicker pace, and occasionally the hearse was allowed to trot. At Westminster Bridge became almost impassable, from the crowds who were directing their course towards the Bird Cage Walk, and so through Chelsea, and up Constitution Hill.

Farther to the West the appearance was similar. The numbers that poured over Vauxhall bridge were tremendous; and even so early as half past four, the inhabitants of Brixton, Clapham, Stockwell, South Lambeth, Kennington, and the Kent Road, commenced their journey.

The shop windows were every where closed, as on the Sabbath, and the fronts of many houses displayed festoons of black cloth.

At Hounslow, as at the other towns, through which the mail passed, the windows and roofs were filled with spectators; and every part of the house from which a view could be had was occupied. On Hounslow Heath, the crowd was as dense as it had been at Piccadilly, and the same eager, but respectful, anxiety was evinced. A solemn knell was tolled during the early part of the morning, the ground was hard and slippery, in consequence of the severe frost of Friday night. Many horses fell.

On the Heath, seats were erected, from which the public were allowed to view the procession.

At Cranford a Bridge, multitude of persons from the adjacent villages assembled at a early hour, and every spot commanding a view of the procession was occupied long before its arrival. The 1st Regiment of Life Guards arrived there from Hounslow at about one o'clock, and took their station on the side of the road. Shortly before two o'clock the procession came up, and halted a considerable time, in order to allow the soldiers and other persons engaged in it to refresh themselves. The 1st Regiment of Guards then joined the procession, and left Cranford Bridge at half past four o'clock, and proceeded at a quick pace towards Windsor.

Among the numerous equestrians on the road was a young lady of elegant appearance, and mounted on a very spirited horse. The latter took fright, and started across an open field by the road side, but was finally curbed by his spirited rider, after exciting great anxiety among the crowd for her personal safety.

Windsor and its vicinity.—In front of a nursery ground between the entrance to the Park and Frogmore, a wooden building of two stories, covered with canvas, was erected. In the upper part of this building, which was the place in which, were eagerly sought after as the programme of the funeral ceremonies announced that their Royal Highnesses the principal mourners, would fall into the procession at the Princess Augusta's Lodge.

So early as Friday morning the town began to exhibit the external symptoms of the preparatory bustle for the Royal Funeral. The Mayor, on that day, issued a notice to convene a public meeting of the inhabitants in the Guildhall on Monday next, for an Address of Condolence to His Majesty upon this melancholy occasion: and notice was also issued, that at eleven o'clock on Saturday, Divine Service at the parish Church would be performed, to suit the approaching solemnity. The road from town to Windsor presented a military spectacle during the whole of Friday and Saturday. On the former day, a large body of Foot Guards, upwards of 800 in number, marched to occupy the stations assigned them in Windsor and its neighbourhood, as well as some detachments of the Lancers, who halted on various parts of the road, where they maintained the order of the funeral procession.

The whole of the military detachments for the town and immediate vicinity of Windsor, arrived on Friday evening, and were stationed at Datchet and near the Castle.

Early in the evening two brigades of Artillery, with twelve six-pounders, arrived, and immediately took up a position in the Long Walk, within a short distance of the enurance. The guns were placed in line—the caissoons disposed in the usual manner; sentinels were mounted, a tent was pitched, and all the necessary preparations for a bivouac, were promptly made, and the soldiers were permitted to rest, after their long and fatiguing march. The streets of the town were crowded by officers of the Household Cavalry Brigade—of the Brigade of Foot Guards—of the 17th Lancers—and of the 67th Foot, quartered at Windsor.

At half past seven o'clock on Saturday morning the Artillery above-mentioned received an order to stand to their guns, and at eight o'clock precisely the first gun to the right of the line was fired—coinciding with the moment appointed for the departure of the funeral procession from St. James's Palace. This was followed, at intervals of five or ten minutes between each, throughout the day, by the whole of the guns from right to left. At the same instant too, the bells of St. George's Chapel, and of the parish Church of Windsor, began to toll, and continued to do so in the usual way during the whole day. All the shops remained shut.

At eleven o'clock, the Mayor and Corporation, with their attendants, proceeded, in their robes to the parish Church, where the morning service was performed, and a funeral Sermon was preached by the Rev. F. Gosset, Vicar of Windsor, and Chaplain to the Corporation. The Psalms chosen, as suited to the solemnity, were the 89th and 90th; the first lesson was the 14th chapter of Job, and the second lesson the 8th chapter of the second Epistle of St. Peter. The text which the Rev. Vicar chose for his discourse was the 32d chapter of Deuteronomy, the 29th verse,—"O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they considered their latter end." The preacher appropriately seized upon this mournful occasion which had called his congregation together, to enforce on them the duty and consideration of the end of all mankind; and he placed this important subject of Christian meditation in the most forcible point of view. The certainty of death to all men led him to contemplate the equal certainty of that resurrection to immortality which Christianity has dissolved to the world. From these general reflections the reverend Vicar naturally adverted to the character of the illustrious Prince, the melancholy occurrence of whose demise had thus caused his congregation to unite in the worship of the Most High. The feelings of all present were in unison with this subject; and he therefore felt that he was not departing from the simplicity and sincerity of a minister of the gospel, in adverting to the points of his public character of that great personage whose loss they deplored in terms of respectful praise. His then left upon the peculiar merits of His late Royal Highness—his discharge of the high office of Commander-in-Chief in a manner which had most essentially advanced the military power of his country—his universal benevolence and humanity—and his respect for the civil and Religious liberties of the nation. Upon the latter point, the reverend preacher observed, that however different might be the opinions of individuals upon political matters, upon points of this nature, was in the highest degree illustrative of his manly and sincere principles. In conclusion, he called upon his congregation to sympathise in the grief of the Royal Family—and to unite in prayer to the throne of all national blessings, that the union between Prince and people might long be preserved, that, as in the present time, we might be Godly and quietly governed.

At the termination of the Church service the town began to assume a busy aspect. In the interval a number of strangers had been numerous, all of whom, with the persons who had attended in Church, and indeed, the principal part of the inhabitants of Windsor, were attracted to the Long Walk by the firing of the artillery. Nothing could exceed in finer effect the effect of the cannons' thunder, as it rolled through the thickly wooded park. The weather was beautiful;—a sharp frost had set in, the sun was resplendent, the carriage-way and footpaths were perfectly dry, and the Long Walk, as well as the road to Frogmore, soon became thronged. Notwithstanding this great influx of persons, nothing like the usual gaiety of a crowded promenade was observable. Every person, without exception, was dressed in deep mourning, even some soldiers, who were not employed on service, and who were to be seen in the roads and streets, had provided themselves with crapes. The countenance and demeanour of every one proved that the mourning was not merely put on in commendable compliance with the royal order. All were grave—and never before had so many persons assembled in public to behold a spectacle, or rather to pay a last tribute of affection and respect to an illustrious individual, among whom reigned such unbroken silence.

Sir Richard Birnie arrived in Windsor on Friday.

At an early hour in the afternoon, the Royal Dukes, the brothers and cousin of the King, and of the illustrious deceased arrived at the Princess Augusta's Lodge, Frogmore, where they remained until they took their stations in the head procession. A party of the principal nobility and some of the Cabinet ministers were to be seen walking in different parts of the town.

The military now began to appear in greater numbers. Most of the officers had exchanged their undress suits for the full uniform of their corps, but their gorgeous trappings and appointments were shrouded with crape. The bustle increased every moment, and the numbers, the air, and the occupations of the various military men, now to be seen, gave to the streets and squares and avenues the appearance of a very crowded fortified town. Sir Hussey Vivian, in the full dress uniform of the late 13th Hussars decorated with the insignia of several Orders, attracted much attention. Several carriages, containing the Ministers of the Royal Chapels, and other professional musical persons, arrived, the former in their state dresses.

At four o'clock, the troops quartered in the town were marched upon the points indicated in the orders, and took up their respective positions. A rocket having announced the departure of the procession from Datchet, which was repeated from the Park, a double line of Guards, and of Infantry of the Line, was formed from the gate, of the Lower Ward, down Castle-street, and through High street and Park-street. The Cavalry then took up their line, and they continued to line the road to Frogmore. At the junction of the roads to Datchet and Staines, where a party of the Royal Horse Guards was stationed, the communication was kept up to Datchet Bridge by Patroles. In the Lane (leading to Frogmore) a guard of honour of the 1st Life Guards was stationed. All the troops were provided with torches, in the numbers specinded; of the manner in which they were used, we shall speak hereafter.

The pace at which the procession advanced was generally slow. Two miles and a half an hour, shortly before twelve, it reached Hounslow, and at five minutes past one arrived at Cranford-Bridge, where it had been arranged that a stoppage for refreshment should take place, and where relays of horses and of the Life Guards were in waiting.

The procession left Cranford-Bridge at four minutes past two, the horsemen and escort of cavalry lighted their torches. Previous to the cavalcade reaching Datchet-Bridge the patroles had lighted their torches; and when it approached Frogmore, the illumination became more complete. The whole line from the civil end of Datchet of the Chapel, was lighted by torches borne by the military.

The night fell upon the funeral procession about a mile on the other side of Colnbrook, and the soldiers then lighted their flambeaux. It advanced at a more rapid pace towards Datchet-Bridge. Considerable crowds of people were assembled there, as well as in the higher parts of the Great Park, to behold it. The supply of flambeaux was here insufficient to furnish the soldiers with the regular quantity which was originally intended, and the air, which was previously frosty, became clouded, with a slight fall of snow. This did not prevent the effect of the range of flambeaux from being very interesting, and shedding upon the bright arms and accoutrements of the military, a brilliancy which had a fine effect.

Arrival of the Procession at Frogmore.

Shortly before eight o'clock, the distant glare of torches, and the melancholy note of the approaching of the cavalcade, gave notice that the Procession was near at hand, and the servants and grooms of His Majesty and of the Royal Family, to the number of nearly one hundred, in deep mourning, each bearing a flambeau, accompanied by the Band of the Royal household, with their fifes and drums, stood prepared to receive it at Frogmore. The pitchy darkness of the night was now, in a great measure, dissipated by the light of the torches, and the appearance of the whole, at this junction, exhibited a gloomy grandeur, perfectly in unison with the character of the scene.

Their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of Clarence, Sussex, and Gloucester, after a moment's delay entered their respective carriages, and the order of the procession being now complete, at a signal given its solemn march was resumed, and the artillery commenced firing minute guns.

Arrival of the Procession at Windsor.

At seven o'clock, the troops line the road and streets received orders to light their torches. Soldiers were supplied with flambeaux, in the Great Park.

At the moment when the first man in the procession "touched" the military line, the soldiers reversed their muskets, and placed themselves in that attitude of grief of which our readers are already aware, from our description of the Funeral at Windsor. The procession moved onwards through the thronged streets, in almost unbroken silence, and nearly undeviated darkness, at the time when it had passed, the spectators could hardly persuade themselves of that fact. A circumstance created much disappointment and surprise to those unacquainted with the forms observed at the Funeral ceremonies of the Royal Family. Nearly at the head of the procession (as appears above) the bands of three regiments of Guards marched, playing several instruments, but

Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note!

The prescribed forms for the obsequies of Members of the Royal Family may be imperative on this point; but our much-beloved and now deplored Prince, had been the Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Army, and the funeral of His Royal Highness was ordered to be conducted with reference to that character. Why, therefore, grave military music should not be performed on this melancholy and, we must say, important occasion, we know not.

This procession advanced through the town at a slow pace, and reached St. George's Chapel at ten minutes before nine o'clock. It is almost needless to add, that the streets were crowded to excess.—The windows of all the houses, and, in some instances, the roofs were occupied.

Ceremonial within the Chapel.

As we have already observed, the bustle in the streets leading to, and round the Chapel, increased as the dusky-light began to fade away. The Grenadier Guards lined the footpath at either side, while several dragoons marched their horses along the Chirrage-way, interspersed among whom were a considerable number of Constables, who, with very little ceremony, and still less courtesy, insisted on first examining the tickets, although at some distance from the point where they were to be presented. The delay in procuring these necessary "passes," in this unexpected manner, produced much confusion, and gave rise to some altercation between the various parties and personages, whose will was neither to be questioned nor resisted. Several Officers of the Guards, however, who appeared to be still higher in the direction of affairs, occasionally interfered, and we believe the cases were always satisfactorily settled when referred to them.

The only parts of the Chapel prepared for the reception of visitors were the North Aisle and the Organ gallery, where a platform was erected, but capable of containing no more than sixty or seventy persons. In the North Aisle accomodation was provided for perhaps eight hundred. The issue of tickets of admission was confined to the Lord Chamberlain's Office. The entrance of the funeral procession, as before stated, was at the south side of the Chapel, where a temporary building of considerable extent had been erected. This terminated in a capacious portico in front of the South Porch. By this arrangement, while the coffin was being removed from the hearse to the door of the Chapel, the Chief Mourner and his supporters, train bearers, and assistants, as well as the other Princes of the Blood Royal, alighted from their carriages; and that part of the procession which followed these distinguished personages was also arranged. Another porch was erected at the one end of the Chapel, leading to the Cloister Gate. These buildings were lined with black cloth, and the exterior was painted of the same colour. They were lighted within by patent lamps. These exterior buildings, as well as the platform leading down the South Aisle, and up the Nave to the Choir, with a gradual ascivity, were erected in a few days by Mr. Tebbott, His Majesty's builder.

In consequence of an official notice having been issued from the Lord Chamberlain's Office, informing all who possessed tickets of admission to the North Aisle, that no tickets could be received after half past six, a considerable number of persons had assembled round the north entrance so early as five o'clock, and soon manifested considerable impatience to be admitted within. It is scarcely necessary to state that they were, generally speaking of the higher classes of society, and there were few who did not appear in deep mourning. The ladies for the most part, wore head dresses of black crape. At half past five the door was opened, and the candidates for admission here underwent another scrutiny before they succeeded in gaining the interior of the Chapel. The North Aisle was soon filled, but by no means crowded—indeed we imagine that the issue of tickets might have been nearly doubled, without producing any material inconvenience.

On entering the Chapel, a most striking and impressive coup d'œil was presented; but few of the lights were burning at that early hour, and these were merely sufficient to display the scene, without taking from the awful solemnity of the noble and venerable building, whose lofty columns were still left in shadow. The military were at their posts, along the South Aisle, and at the porch; where the melancholy procession was to enter, a number of veterans from each of the regiments of Guards were stationed. They were chiefly those who had fought at Waterloo, and to them was assigned the post of honour. Their colours, surmounted with crape, hung heavily above them. Along the west end of the Nave, and at either side of the South Aisle, were placed the dismounted soldiers of the Blues, of course in full dress, with their bright steel breast plates, which afterwards reflected the light from the tapers which every third man carried, so as to produce a peculiarly striking and splendid effect. The platform from the south entrance, round the Chapel, along the North Aisle, to the choir, was covered with black cloth; and to and fro, along this platform, the military Officers passed rapidly while, every now and then, some herald, in his gaudy dress, flitted by, giving directions, and their hum of business mingling with the clanking of the swords, and the sounds of the heavy tread of the Officers, formed a strange contrast to the deep, attentive silence that pervaded every other part of the building. The stillness in that portion where the public could was considered more remarkable, in consequence of the very judicious manner in which the arrangements had been made. The walls, to a great height, were covered, and a carpet of thick black cloth was laid along under foot; so that if a movement were made, it was scarcely audible, and each individual appeared too much impressed with the solemnity of the scene, and the occasion to speak above a whisper. We did not notice a single civil officer within the Chapel, nor was such control rendered in the least degree necessary, At a quarter past seven, the whole of the torches, borne by the military, were lighted up. The various persons who were to take part in the procession then began gradually to assemble, and the Heralds became actively employed in arranging them in their proper places. The Officers, in their white robes, first passed along the platform, bearing their lights and entered the choir. Their numbers had been much increased, and among them we noticed Messrs. Knyvett, Hawes, Nield, Evans, Sale and Salmon, of the Chapel Royal, & Messrs. Francis, Miller, Hobbs, sen. and jun., West, French and Rutter, of the Windsor Choir. The Poor Knights of Windsor, the Naval Knights of Windsor, the Pages of the Royal Family, the several official personages of His late Royal Highness, the Coporation of Windsor, &c. &c. &c., successively entered the platform, and took their stations.

At half-past eight o'clock the procession within the Chapel was formed, and awaited the approach of the mournful cavalcade that was to issue from without.

It was before nine o'clock the procession reached the Chapel door, and, with the Banner advanced into the Cha[illegible] placed on the funeral [illegible] solemn pace, the whole [illegible] following order along the Chapel:

The Yeomen of the Guard, with their partizans reversed, closed the mournful procession.

Instantly on the procession began to move, the Organ sounded a few bars of a grand, and immediately after the Choir opened with the sublime Burial Service by Croft:—

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord; he that believeth in me, though he be dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.

"I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself; and mine eyes shall behold, and not another's.

"We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

The effect of this beautiful opening of the sublime Burial Service of our Church was more overpowering than can be conceived by those who have never heard it chaunted in such a place, and under such circumstances, echoed as were the sounds from all parts of the lofty and magnificent building round which they passed. Neither whisper nor footstep were heard.

As the procession passed along, the soldiers who lined the platform, stooped down, bending the head, and turning it upon the right hand, in the attitude of deep mourning. His remains next to the whole were had entered the choir; but those who had borne torches stood erect, and placed the light somewhat in advance. This point in the ceremony was peculiarly interesting and effective.

We were particularly struck with the extreme precision with which the opening Service was proceeded till the whole of the procession had reached the Choir, and the principal personages had taken their places. The Body having been placed upon the platform ascending to the Royal Vault, His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence took his seat in a chair at the head of the coffin (the foot being towards the Altar;) the Duke of Gloucester was seated on his right, and the Duke of Gloucester on his left. The venerable Earl Harcourt, who bore the Baton of His late Royal Highness, stood at the foot of the coffin, opposite the Chief Mourner. The Lord Chamberlain was in the same position. The Duke of Wellington, who supported the Pall first on the left hand, retained his place with the other five Dukes who were pall bearers, on the sides of the coffin. The six Banners, which were carried by the officers of the Army, were arranged between the coffin and the Altar. The Bishops took their seats in the stalls nearest the east end; the Knights of the Garter not bearing the pall, sat in their respective stalls. The remaining stalls were occupied by His Majesty's Ministers, and other distinguished personages. The Marquis Camden, Lord Steward, occupied one of the lower stalls near the place of interment; and we perceived many other high public officers in the same stalls. The Canons of Windsor sat in the stalls near the Organ, under the Knight's stalls; and the Dean stood, in the earlier part of the Service, under the Sovereign's stall. A vast number of Peers, Privy Councillors, and private friends of His late Royal Highness, followed the body into the Choir. Amongst these distinguished personages were noticed the Speaker of the House of Commons, Mr. Canning, Mr. Peel, Mr. Croker, and several other of His Majesty's Ministers. Great numbers of these illustrious Members could not be accommodated with seats, but stood in the body of the Choir, which was completely filled by those attending the Ceremonial.

These arrangements having been completed with great promptitude and silence, the Choir began to chaunt, with marked solemness, and with exceeding particularly impressive, both the Psalms appointed for the Burial Service. The Dean then, standing at the West end, read the sublime Lesson from Corinthians. The fine Anthem by Kent, was then performed. The words were as follows:—

PSALM LV.

"Hear my prayer, O God; and hide not thy face from my petition.

"Take heed unto me, and hear me, how I mourn in my prayer, and am vexed.

"My heart is disquieted within me: and the fear of death is fallen upon me.

"Then I said, O that I had wings like a dove, then would I flee away and be at rest."

Nothing can be imagined of greater sweetness and pathos than this exquisite performance. The musical composition is of the most delightful simplicity. The principal part of the anthem is a duet of two treble voices; on this occasion, the duet parts were doubled. We have not learnt the names of the young gentlemen who executed this beautiful production; but every person who heard it was struck with the perfection of its execution. In the passage, "O that I had wings like a dove," the alterations of the duets and the chorus produced in effect most overpowering.

The Dean having proceeded to the grave, read the solemn sentences previous to the body being lowered. At the proper moment, the coffin, upon which the Coronet and Baton had been placed, began slowly to descend by imperceptible machinery. The effect, as in all previous cases, was most solemn.

After that part of the Service, which concludes with the Lord's Prayer, the Choir performed the following Anthem, the music composed by Handel for Queen Caroline, grandmother to His late Majesty, and which was so finely, and so impressively, sung at the funeral of the ever-lamented Princess Charlotte:—

"When the ear heard him, then it blessed him; and when the eye saw him, it gave witness to him.

"He delivered the poor that cried, the fatherless, and him that had none to help him.

"Kindness, meekness, and comfort, were in his tongue; if there was any virtue, and if there was any praise, he thought on those things.

"His body is buried in peace, but his name liveth evermore."

The Burial Service being concluded, Sir George Nayler, Garter King of Arms, proclaimed His Royal Highness's styles as follows:—

"Thus has it pleased Almighty God to take out of this transitory life unto His Divine Mercy, the late most illustrious Prince Frederick of Brunswick and Lunenburgh, Duke of York and Albany, Earl of Ulster, of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and Knight of the most honorable Military Order of the Bath, Brother of His most Excellent Majesty, George the Fourth, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, whom God bless and preserve with long life, health and honor, and all worldly happiness."

In the Choir (near the altar) the number of lights was not increased beyond that which is used on ordinary occasions. On the Communion Table, there were but two, and no plate of any kind was placed upon it: although, under similar circumstances, the practice has been to load it, not only with that which belongs to the Chapel, but with that of the Chapel Royal.

The Duke of Sussex was greatly affected through out the whole of the solemn ceremony and service.

The Chief Mourner, and the other distinguished individuals who formed the mournful procession, having retired, the entrance to the choir was opened, and the public, by whom the Chapel had been filled, was admitted to view the coffin. It was very nigh the surface of the descent, and was without any covering, except the Coronet and Baton, which were placed across it on cushions.

The people then slowly and respectfully retired, and it was not difficult to read in almost every countenance, the effect which the solemn service and ceremony had produced.

Immediately after the obsequies had been concluded, the Royal Dukes returned to Frogmore. The persons who had borne a part in the mournful ceremonies, and the spectators, then retired. In half an hour afterwards the military had returned to their quarters, with the exception of the patroles of cavalry, which were kept up until day-break yesterday morning. A great number of the strangers left Windsor on Saturday night, and by two o'clock on Sunday, scarcely one of the many thousands who had been attracted thither to witness the funeral of His Royal Highness the Duke of York, remained at Windsor.

(From the Albion.)

Congress having been adjourned without passing the Colonial Intercourse Bill, it may be interesting to our distant readers to know the failure. We have before stated that a bill was brought which passed the Senate and was passed that body, and was sent to the lower House for concurrence. The following extract from the National Intelligencer will show its reception there:—

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
March 2, 1827.

Mr. TOMLINSON having moved the consideration of the bill from the Senate to regulate the commercial intercourse between the United States and the British Colonies, the third section was read in the following words:

"Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That at any time before the thirty-first day of December next, the President of the United States shall receive satisfactory evidence, that the prohibition to the commercial intercourse between vessels of the United States and the Colonies and dependencies of Great Britain, mentioned in her order in Council, of the twenty-seventh of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, has ceased, or been revoked, and that no discriminating duties of tonnage, or impost, are imposed or levied, within the ports enumerated in the first section of this Act, upon vessels wholly belonging to Citizens of the United States, or upon merchandise, the produce or manufacture thereof, imported into the said ports, the President is hereby authorised to issue his proclamation, declaring that the acts mentioned in the second section of this act, are altogether suspended and repealed; the said suspension and repeal to take effect from the time of said satisfactory evidence being received by the President."

Mr. TOMLINSON then proposed to amend the Bill, that the third section should be in the form following:—

And be it further enacted, That if, at any time before the 31st day of December next, the President of the United States shall receive satisfactory evidence that the prohibition of commercial intercourse in vessels of the United States, between the said United States and the Colonies and dependencies of Great Britain, mentioned in the British Order in Council, of the 27th of July, 1826, has ceased or been removed, and that no higher or other duties of tonnage or impost are imposed or levied, in the ports enumerated in the first section of this act, upon vessels of the United States, or upon merchandise the produce or manufacture of the United States, when imported into said ports, in vessels of the United States, than such as are, or shall be levied on British vessels arriving in said ports from the United States, and their cargoes, being the produce or manufacture of the said United States, the President is hereby authorized to issue his Proclamation, declaring that the acts mentioned in the second section of this act are repealed; such repeal to take effect from the time of such satisfactory evidence being received by the President; and if no such proclamation shall be issued, on or before the 31st day of December next, then, from and after that day, the aforesaid act of the 18th of April, 1818, and the aforesaid act of the 15th of May, 1820, shall be in full force, and the aforesaid act of the 1st of march, 1823, as also the first section of this act, shall be repealed and annulled.

Mr. Tomlinson's amendment being adopted by the House, the bill was sent back to the Senate for approval. The Senate, however, refused to sanction the amendment, when a conference was asked by the House of Representatives. The Committees of Conference met, but each party adhering to its own measure, the time prescribed by the Constitution for the duration of the session expired, and the Bill failed.

The point of difference seems to be this:—The House of Representatives was desirous of attaching an alternative to the bill, or in other words, of holding out a threat to Britain; while the Senate urged what may be considered the more generous and liberal mode—that of throwing open the ports unconditionally. The latter plan would have been, perhaps, the more judicious; it certainly would have been the most conciliatory, and we are sure would not have been lost upon the British Government. The House of Representatives, however, thought the honour of the country would be compromitted by such a concession. In either case the effect, in effect, would have been the same, since the lower House was willing to postpone the interdict until the 31st of December. Had the views of the Senate been acceded too, no ill could have ensued, for Congress would have been in session early enough in December to have removed the interdict craved by the House of Representatives if Great Britain continued to withhold her contingent of the concession necessary for the settlement of this perplexing question.

The President has it in his power, by virtue of a former act, to declare void the admission of British vessels arriving from places where American vessels are not permitted to enter; and as this is the case with the West India Islands, it is supposed by some that the President will forthwith issue his Proclamation for this purpose; and this opinion, indeed, is strengthened by the tone of the Washington papers since the fate of the bill has been known. We believe (for we have not the act at hand) that it is in the power of the President to make the interdiction immediate or prospective; but the best informed person are of opinion that he will adopt the latter, as all parties in both Houses were in favour of extending the interdict to the 30th of September, at least; and it is fair, we think, to presume, that he will conform to the obvious feeling of Congress, since the matter is left to the exercise of his discretion. This point, we know, is of much moment to our friends in the West Indies, and we regret that we cannot speak with more certainty upon it. A short time, however, will determine it. The trade with the North American Colonies, where American vessels are admitted under the Order in council, must remain in its present state until the next session of Congress, unless some arrangement shall be made between the two governments in the mean time.

PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT OF LOWER-CANADA.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Wednesday, 7th March, 1827.

THIS DAY, at Three o'Clock, His Excellency the GOVERNOR-in-CHIEF came down in State to the Legislative Council Chamber, and being seated on the Throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, was sent to command the presence of the Assembly, which being come up His Excellency was pleased to prorogue the Legislature and deliver the following

SPEECH:

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council;
Gentlemen of the Assembly,

"I come to close this Session of the Provincial Parliament, convinced, by the state of your proceedings, that nothing likely to promote the public interest can be now expected from your deliberations,

"To you Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, who have attended your duties in this Session, I offer my thanks on the part of His Majesty, as an acknowledgment of the regard, which, by your presence, you have shewn to the welfare of your Country, and also of that proper respect which you have manifested for the Sovereign from whom your honours are derived.

Gentlemen of the Assembly,

"It is painful to me, that I cannot speak my sentiments to you in terms of approbation and thanks. The proceedings of this Session impose upon me a duty, of which, however unpleasant, I may acquit myself as a faithful Servant to my King, and a sincere friend to the Province.

"Many years of continued discussion on forms and accounts have proved unavailing, to clear up and set at rest a dispute, which moderation and reason might have speedily terminated. It is lamentable to see, that no efforts or concessions of His Majesty's Government has succeeded in reconciling those differences of opinion in the Legislature; but it is infinitely more so, that differences on one subject should cause a rejection of every other measure which His Majesty's Government recommends to your consideration.

"The duties expected of you in this Session were not difficult; among the first was an examination of the Public Accounts of last year, and a report upon them, whether of approval or otherwise; ha that duty been done so that your country may know the result?

"Have you considered the Estimated Expenditure for the current year, and granted the Supply required in His Majesty's name? Or have reasons been assigned for the refusal of them, that can be known and understood by the country?

"Have the Messages from His Majesty's Representative been duly acknowledged, and answered according to the rules and forms of Parliament, or according with the practice which is due to each Branch of the Legislature to the others?

"Have the Rules or Orders of proceedings in the House of Assembly been duly attended to, in so far as they affect and recognize the Prerogative Rights of the Crown?

"These are questions, Gentlemen, which you are now to ask yourselves individually, and answer to your constituents on your return to them.

"These are questions, which you are to answer to your own consciences, as men who are bound by oaths of fidelity to your Country and to your King.

"In my administration of this Government, I have seen seven years pass away without any conclusive adjustment of the public accounts; thus accumulating a mass for future investigation, which must lead to confusion and misunderstanding. In the same years I have seen the measures of Government directly applicable to the wants of the Province, thrown aside without attention and without any reason assigned. I have seen the forms of Parliament utterly disregarded; and in this Session a positive assumption of Executive authority, instead of that of Legislative, which last is alone your share in the constitution of the state,

"The results of your proceedings in this Session have been, the refusal of the Supplies necessary for the ordinary expenses of Government, the loss of the Militia Bill, the failure of all provision for the maintenance of Prisoners in your Gaols and Houses of Correction, for the support of Insane and Foundlings, and for the establishment of Education and Charity, and a total obstruction of local and public improvement.

"In this state of things, and with this experience of past years it is now no longer consistent with a proper discharge of the high trust committed to me, to entertain hopes of a return to better reason in the representative branch of this Parliament; but it is still my duty to call upon you as public men, and to call upon the country, as deeply interested in the result, to consider seriously the consequences of perseverance in such a course.

"I shall conduct the Government with the means in my power, with an undiminished desire to do good; but while I must submit myself to the interruption of all public improvement, under the authority of the Civil Government, I will declare my deep regret at such a state of things: I think it right to convey to the Country, a free and unreserved expression of my sentiments upon these public misfortunes, and I will leave no doubt on the public mind of my determination to persevere firmly in the path of my duty, with a faithful regard to the Rights of my Sovereign, with which are combined the best interests of the Province.

"It only remains for me now, compelled by existing circumstances, to Prorogue this Parliament, whatever may be the inconvenience resulting to the Province from such a measure."

His Excellency then gave the Royal Assent to nineteen Bills; among them the Welland Canal Bill, and the Bill allowing the limits of towns to include debtors.

The Bill to confirm the new parochial divisions, and the Bill to vacate the seats of Members accepting places under the Colonial Government were reserved for His Majesty's Assent.

His Excellency then Prorogued the Legislature to the 16th of April next.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 24, 1827.

The interesting account of the Funeral obsequies of His late Royal Highness the Duke of York, which we have given to our readers, has from its length prevented us occupying our columns as fully as we otherwise should have done, with the news received by the late arrivals from England. For several extracts which appear the most interesting, we are indebted to the Albion.

LORD DALHOUSIE, has prorogued the Parliament of Lower Canada. His Lordship's Speech on the occasion is contained in this day's paper, and from its tenor a dissolution may be expected The cause of prorogation appears to be the refusal on the part of the Assembly to vote the supplies in the constitutional manner.

The Montreal Herald expresses the following opinion on the subject:—

"We cannot avoid expressing our regret that the House of Assembly should persist in conduct by which, in no possible contemplation of events, the Province can be benefited. The law and the constitution give to the Executive Government the disposal of the revenue, and for either of the other branches of the Legislature to grasp at this prerogative, is a breach of both. We agree with the Quebec Mercury in its opinion of the Gover.or's Speech. "It is firm, clear and conclusive, and renders comment superfluous."

Petition against the Naturalization Bill.—We have accounts of meetings at Hamilton, "in consequence of notices extensively circulated" and of the Inhabitants of Ancaster and Barton "by verbal request." At the former place, the Hon. the Speaker of the House of Assembly, and Mr. Hamilton Member for Wentworth addressed the Meeting. The former Gentleman in concluding his address stated that "he would not put hand or thumb to any Petition." The latter suggested a Petition and the necessity "to send out a fit person to carry the object through" stating at the same time that he must be "well paid," and that "two or three Dollars each" would be requisite.—"This seemed to conclude the business. No Petition or Resolutions were proposed for the adoption of the Meeting—nor did there appear any of that dissatisfaction, which many have stated to have prevailed so generally in the Country, on the subject of this Bill."

At the Meeting of the Inhabitants of Ancaster and Barton, it was proposed that the Speeches of Mr. Rolph and Fothergill, against the Bill, should be read. On the other hand it was proposed that the Speeches of other Members in favor of it should also be read—neither of these proposals appear to have been acted upon. The petition was subsequently submitted to the Meeting; but upon examining its merits "the people dispersed without determination to read the Bill, and judge of it according to its literal construction, before they would be induced to sign a Petition, the object of which it was difficult to understand, unless each signature was to be accompanied by a contribution of money for the purpose of defraying the expense of a mission to London."

The account of these Meetings is contained in the last Gore Gazette, which speaking more particularly of that at Hamilton says,

We have not been informed of the method by which these meetings were convened, as Public Notice has in no instance we believe been given of them; except in the case of that in Hamilton.—At the meeting in the latter place several hundred persons were assembled, but no resolutions were offered, nor any proposition in reference to Allen's Bill submitted to the meeting.

The meeting was conducted with the strictest order and propriety, and the greater part of the persons present were evidently satisfied with the explanations given them—and dismissed, as we have before stated, without adopting any resolutions on the subject of the Bill in question.

Among the many misrepresentations made use of to induce the people to sign the Petition against the Naturalization Bill, the following we have no doubt will be read with astonishment. In the course of the present week a respectable looking Farmer from the London District called at our Office, and in the course of conversation stated that he had signed the Petition, and had given Five Dollars towards defraying the expences of the Mission to London.—One of the reasons he gave for signing it, and contributing so liberorally was, that "he had been told, that unless exertions were made to prevent the Naturalization Bill becoming a Law, every man interested in it, if it should receive the Royal Assent, who did not comply with its provisions, would be liable to a fine of Two hundred Pounds"!!

The eleventh clause of the Bill, imposing a penalty to that amount on any Commissioner who may refuse to administer the oath, on application being made to him for that purpose, has been represented to this man as bearing the above construction.

Another reason assigned by this person for giving his signature to the Petition accompanied with his Five Dollars was, "that he had been told that the Bill might introduce Tythes into the Province" !!

What we would ask, must be the reflections of those, (if they have any) who are thus deceiving the people, when their misrepresentations come to be exposed—how will they answer to the people when "truth at last prevails"?

As the introduction of Tythes has been spoken of, we take this opportunity of giving the words of the Statute, to which the Royal Assent was promulgated by Proclamation on 20th Feb. 1823, as the best contradiction to the misrepresentation on the subject.

"Be it enacted &c., That no Tythes shall be claimed, demanded, or received by any Ecclesiastic Person, Rector or Vicar of the Protestant Church within this Province, any law, custom or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Young Mr. Maitland, son to His Excellency, disguised himself one night last week, in ragged and uncouth apparel, for the purpose, it is said, of ascertaining whether the guard at the South side of the Garrison, was on duty. He climbed up the bank, the Sentinel was on duty, and hearing some one approaching, ran for his musket, presented his bayonet to the stranger, who cried for mercy, and told his name; the Sentinel, however, did not permit him to enter the Garrison by that ascent. He had to go round to the gate, and give the regular countersign previous to his admission.—[Communicated.—York Colonial Advocate.]

Having made inquiry with respect to the above Communication to the Advocate, we state most positively, that it is altogether. a most infamous falsehood.

The "Constant Correspondent," in the same paper, speaking of the Editor of the Farmer's Journal at St. Catharines, as "a man from the States yesterday," says, "the Government Office protects him, however, and sends him Jobs and Office Notices to print." This is as destitute of truth, as the other—We know it to be a falsehood.

Communications.

[We cannot refuse the request of the very respectable individual who has sent us the following Communication, on a subject in which he is personally interested. In giving it a place, we recommend it to the perusal of others who are similarly situated. The advice it contains, coming from one who is himself deeply interested in the measure, is entitled to consideration.]

To the Editor of the U. E. Loyalist.

SIR,

Being one of the persons described in the Naturalization Bill, who have not been naturalised as a British Subject by any Act of Parliament, although having enjoyed for many years all the rights and privileges of a natural born Subject of His Majesty; and as a feeling of discontent has been excited in this Province, through the instigation of designing men, whose views are (no doubt) to prevent, (was it in their power) so salutary a measure from going into effect, by means of all others the most futile; and feeling myself deeply interested in the question, I beg leave to suggest to all whom in any way concerned in this long neglected measure, to pause and consider their ways, to do nothing prematurely, nor presume to prejudge.—All allow the propriety and necessity of being naturalized—but we do not like (say they) to be made Aliens. This is reversing the Bill with a witness, for if I comprehend its meaning in any degree, its expression is to make us alien (by legal naturalization) Subjects; and so counteracting upon us all the privileges of English birth. But say they again, we fear there is some trick in it!—that terrible word in the second clause of the Bill "forever" we do not like, we fear there is some deep lurking at the bottom of all such expressions—such want of charity—such black ingratitude, speaks volumes against themselves. With as much propriety (in a measure) might the favored objects of Divine Providence suspect the clemency of the Parent of the Universe, whose paternal benedictions they have so amply enjoyed—say "although we have experienced the richest blessings at His hands, yet we will not be thankful—we will not keep his commandments for fear of owing allegiance to, and participating in the blessings of that government under which we have been fostered." Let any man produce an instance where any have been deceived, either in the honor or faith of the British Government, and then I will retire from my position, and may the execrations of an enraged people pursue my retiring steps. And who was the man, who stood forth as the triumphant advocate of this much desired measure?—Who stood foremost in convincing the House of Assembly (or some of its Members) of the extent of its benefits?—Who devoted toilsome days and sleepless nights to demonstrate, by every data, and every argument, the practicability and advantages of quieting and confirming the people in their possessions and their civil rights?—Who placed in jeopardy his hold on public confidence and respect?—Who waded through streams and torrents of ridicule, calumny and insult, in the prosecution of that measure?

Need any man pause, like Brutus among the Romans, for a reply—The Attorney General was the man—and the heart of every loyal man in the Province will bear testimony to his services, and their tongues utter his praise.

CATO.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

SIR,

I am informed by the public print, from your part of the Country, that you consider a Petition to the Imperial Parliament, against the Naturalization Bill, as a necessary measure—and that the persons or persons who are to be "sent out" with it, must be well paid. You say to the people—"Half a Dollar each will not do—you must pay two or three Dollars each.'

I have made a little calculation on this Poll Tax, which you advocate so warmly; its result will perhaps astonish you—I think it will astonish the people. Yourself and the other opponents of the Bill have always contended that a "large majority" of the inhabitants are interested in it—"two thirds of the people," it is said are to be robbed of their property—(the robbery has commenced already as I think's) and deprived of their rights. But—to my calculation.

The population of U. C. is estimated at	200,000
Of these I suppose there are men	40,000
Two thirds of this is	26,666
Which at two Dollars and a half, the mean of your estimate gives £16,666 5 0 Cy.

Your Mission would be well paid indeed at this rate.—How beneficially might such a sum be expended in improving the Country.

To the Shareholders in the Canada Steam Boat.

GENTLEMEN,

IT must be fresh in the memory of you all, that I am the original projector of the "Canada"—that my abilities, in whatever light they may be viewed, were wholly employed in planning, constructing and fitting her out.—Facts have already proved that I led no one astray by false theories in her construction, and her Engine is upon the model of the very best now generally in use in England. I have been all along by far the largest shareholder, and nearly the whole of the shares were taken up by Gentlemen upon my personal solicitations. In doing which I did not fear, in the strongest language I was master of, to pledge the success of the undertaking, not only on the prospect of the lucrative ferry, but also upon the faith of my own personal exertions. Then do I infer too much by saying, that a friendly disposition towards me, a confidence in my abilities, and, my integrity (with very few exceptions) was the basis upon which I met with such general patronage?—However, after a certain period it was no longer possible to raise sufficient stock to complete the vessel; the expedient of borrowing was resorted to, and a debt of £1,200 contracted with the Bank. Upon this the Boat commenced her operations, and ran from the 7th of August, a period of 98 days; during which time, Gentlemen, I look upon it as a matter of congratulation, that at her very first starting, having an American Boat to oppose her, the proceeds of the "Canada" not only paid her current expenses, but also a sum of upwards of £200 in extraordinary outfit, including £40 insurance on money borrowed, also the interest thereon, £50 nearly for replacing her wheels, repeatedly destroyed, and considerable repairs. I see nothing but what is most flattering in this her first outset. Thus it would have appeared had I made my report—and had I done it in the most favorable light, I should have thought, as one of the guardians of the property intrusted to my charge, that I was only fulfilling a duty I owed the stockholders when I enhanced, rather than depreciated its value. At the end of the season, from disappointments and expenses in collecting the amount of the shares taken up, there was found still wanting a sum of £400, and at the last general meeting this further sum was borrowed, hampering the Boat with a debt of £1600—At this crisis, at a very great personal expense, and at a greater sacrifice of domestic comfort, I set out for England to trespass upon my own immediate friends, and now return prepared to relieve the embarrassments of the Boat, and am willing in the face of representations, that went to disparage the stock, to invest a much larger capital in the "Canada."—in doing which I confer a benefit upon the whole, and trust I give further proof of the sincerity of my professions, when I undertook the arduous task of getting up a Steam Boat. But Gentlemen, things have not gone as I wished, or as I intended; and perhaps I am the only person who will have property invested in this vessel to such an amount as to make it of vital importance that success should attend the adventure. Therefore upon this ground, upon the ground of my being the projector of this vessel, upon the responsibility of my situation as master, ostensible agent, and possessing owner, I most earnestly solicit your particular support to the appointment as managing owner to the vessel; and to that effect may I again solicit the most general attendance of the stockholders at the meeting to be held on board the Canada the second of April.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your very obedient
And very humble Serv't.
HUGH RICHARDSON.

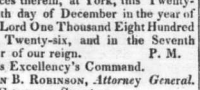
GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:



KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands alreaday Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

MORAR.

A TRADITION OF THE WESTERN HIGHLANDS.

Angus Macdonald, a son of Clanranald, having quarrelled with his neighbour and namesake the Laird of Morar, he made an irruption into that district, at the head of a select portion of his followers. One of his men was celebrated for his dexterity as a marksman; and on their march he gave a proof of this, by striking the head off the canna, or moss cotton, with an arrow. This plant is common on mossy ground in the Highlands; it is as white as the driven snow, and not half the size of the lily.

Having got possession of the cattle, Angus was driving away the spreith to his own country; but Dugald of Morar pursued him with a few servants who happened to be at hand; and, being esteemed a man of great bravery, Angus had no wish to encounter him. He ordered the marksman to shoot him with an arrow; but the poor fellow being unwilling to injure Dugald, aimed high, and overshot him. Angus observed this, and expressed his surprise that a man who could hit the cross yesterday, could not hit Dugald's broad forehead that day and, drawing his sword, swore, that he would cleave the marksman's head should he miss him again. John then reluctantly drew his bow, and Dugald fell to rise no more. Angus got into his hands the son of the deceased Morar, then very young; and the treatment which the unfortunate boy received was calculated to injure his health and shorten his life. Tradition says that he was often tempted to pursue an apple around a large fire until he was half-roasted; that twice he had put on him except a poor girl who attended the calves. She made many shifts to save the child, but found that her conduct had given offence; and at last she contrived means to carry him away, wrapped up in a large fleece of wool.

The route which the girl took, is still well known; and having escaped from her pursuers, she made her way to the house of Cameron of Lochiel. Here she and the boy were most hospitably received; and, according to the custom of the country in those days, they passed a year and a day without being asked any question. At the end of that period, Lochiel made inquiry regarding the boy, and the girl candidly told her story; He thus discovered that the boy was the son of his own wife's sister; but he concealed the whole from his Lady, of whose secrecy he was not very confident. But he treated young Ronald with great kindness. Lochiel had a son much of the same age; the two boys frequently quarrelled, and the Lady was angry to see her own son worsted.—She at last swore that the girl and her vagabond must quit the house next morning." The generous Lochiel set out with the boy to Inverness, where he boarded him under a false name, and he placed the woman in the service of a friend in the neighbourhood, where she might have an easy condition.

Ronald received such education as befitted his birth; and when he grew up to manhood he paid a visit to Lochiel his kind benefactor, in Lochaber, who was so much satisfied with him, that he determined on giving him his powerful assistance in recovering his paternal estate, which was then in the possession of Angus. Lochiel ordered a hundred men to attend himself and Ronald on this occasion; and they arrived in Morar on a Sunday, when the usurper and all his people were in church at mass. He congratulated the young man on the fortunate opportunity he now had of avenging his father's blood, and destroying all his enemies at once, by burning them in the church. Ronald saw that this could be easily effected; but he benevolently remarked, that though many of the persons then in the church were guilty of his father's death, and deserved any punishment that could be inflicted on them, but there were others innocent of that crime: and he declared that if his estate could not be recovered otherwise, he would rather want it, and trust to Providence and his own valour. Lochiel did not at all relish such sentiments, and left Ronald to his fate.

Ronald took refuge in a wood, where the cavern in which he abode is still well known; and the daughter of Angus, his only child, frequently passed that way in looking after her father's fold. He sometimes got into conversation with her, and though but a child, she became attached to him. He prevailed upon her to get his shirts washed for him. Her father, having accidentally discovered the linen bleaching, observed the initial letters of Ronald's name; and making inquiry into the circumstances, soon suspected that he was at hand. He attempted to persuade his daughter to decoy Ronald into his power; but she told the young man of all that her father proposed to her; and he finding that Angus was still thirsting for his blood, immediately left the country, and took the girl along with him. With much difficulty he conveyed her in safety to Inverness, from whence he procured a passage to France, where he placed her in a convent. He entered the French army, and was much distinguished for his bravery; he was thus enabled to support himself and to defray the expense of her education. When the young woman was of age they were married, and soon returned to Scotland. Ronald having obtained strong recommendations to the King, he found means of being reconciled to Angus, who set them all, and had become very penitent. He made great professions of friendship and attachment to Ronald; but his daughter was always doubtful of his sincerity, and it would appear that she had justly appreciated his disposition. One night, Ronald having feigned intoxication, and retired to rest, the old barbarian calculated that he would sleep very soundly, and slunk into his apartment armed with a dirk, to stab his son-in-law; but the young man watched this treacherous hypocrite; and put him to death.

Ronald obtained possession of his paternal estate, and after a long and prosperous life, became the founder of a very respectable family.

The time of these occurrences was the beginning of the sixteenth century.

Summary.

The British Parliament was to assemble on the 8th, and the great topic of interest was the corn laws. Ministers have however announced that the subject would not be brought forward until the ninth of Feb. Mr. Canning is to introduce the question to the Commons, and Lord Liverpool in the House of Lords.

The Duke of Sussex had been dangerously ill, but at the last accounts he was convalescent.

The Countess of Shandon died at Castlemartyr on the 31st Jan.

Mr. Shiel has been prosecuted for the treasonable language lately used in one of his speeches.

LIVERPOOL, 1st Feb. 1827.

Canada Ashes have met with a very limited sale of late, and although the principal holders are not pressing sellers, the prices have given way further; Pot may be quoted at 26s., Pearl at 27s. a 27s. 6d. per cwt: and it is difficult to realize even these rates, excepting in small retail quantities.

Capt. Bennett, of the ship New-York from Liverpool, informs that when he left, it was generally believed that the English ports would shortly be open for foreign grain.

On Monday the corporation of Bath unanimously voted the freedom of the City, in a gold box, of fifty guineas, to Mr. Canning. The Right Hon. Secretary attended in the Hall of the Corporation, and received the honorary gift from the hands of the Mayor, who presented it as a mark of the high sense entertained by the Corporation of "his transcendent talents and eminent services."

It is said, upon what authority we know not, that the Ordnance Office will be abolished, leading directly to a satisfactory adjustment of affairs, both in Spain and Portugal.

England.

BRIGHTON—JAN. 24.

The King (accompanied by the Marquis of Conyngham) arrived at the Pavillion last night, just as the clock struck nine.

It having been known in the course of the day, that dinner was preparing for His Majesty, and that this coming was no longer doubted, which feeling was strengthened by the arrival of a van, containing His Majesty's plate, and other baggage, together with a number of the household—a vast crowd had assembled about five o'clock, at the entrance to the Pavillion, and notwithstanding the severe frost and cold, they remained until the Royal carriage passed through. His Majesty was received with the most solemn and profound respect by the crowd, to whom he condescendingly bowed graciously.

Sir Edmund Nagle, and several other members of His Majesty's household, arrived in the course of this morning.

His Majesty's private band have also arrived, and are ordered for rehearsal to-morrow.

His Majesty looks exceedingly well.

Foreign Intelligence.

The packet of the 8th February has just arrived in York. The news by her is of a most gratifying nature. It would appear that the disturbances in Portugal may be considered as being at an end. The great overthrow of the rebels was achieved by the Marquiss de Flor; he having defeated a body of 11,000 men. During the action it is stated that the news of the British was received, whereupon the rebels with a seasonable regard to their own safety, took to their heels and ran away.—Albion.

Three transports, which had arrived at Portsmouth with troops on board additional troops for Portugal, had been ordered to leave that port, from which it is inferred that no more troops are to be sent out.

From the Courier, Feb. 8.

We have received since our last, the Paris papers of Friday and Saturday, with the Etoile, dated yesterday. The intelligence they bring will be found in a preceding column. It corroborates all our preceding accounts from the Peninsula, and prepares us to expect that every succeeding arrival will disclose fresh events, leading directly to a satisfactory adjustment of affairs, both in Spain and Portugal.

FROM JAVA.

From the Courier, Feb. 8.

We have received the following disastrous account from Batavia under the date of the 9th of October:—

About the first of October, a battle took place between the Dutch forces, commanded by General Van Geen (who is next in command, and next to General De Kock, who is Lieut. Governor and Commander-in-Chief), and the insurgents, commanded by Djuro Nagoro, in person, and we lament to add, that the Dutch forces were totally annihilated, and the General only saved by leading himself aboard the Herald yacht.—It is expected that Mr. Plasta, of the Foreign Office, will succeed Mr Lushington at the Treasury.

Mr. Baron Graham has resigned his seat in the Exchequer, and Mr. Sergeant Vaughan, it is said, is appointed to succeed him.

The Will of his late Royal Highness the Duke of York was proved yesterday; in which his Royal Highness declared that he most sincerely and confidently hoped that the produce of his real and personal property would support a fund more than amply sufficient to pay his debts. He gives all his real and personal property to Sir Herbert Taylor and Colonel Stephenson in trust, to pay all his just debts, and the interest of such debts as carry interest, and pay over the residue to the Princess Sophia. Will dated 26, Dec. 1825—Sir Herbert Taylor & Col. Stephenson, Executors. The personal estate was sworn under £ 180,000.

It is not unworthy of remark, as a proof of his Royal Highness's consideration and kindness, that all that part of the Will expressive of his anxiety concerning his debts, is written in his Royal Highness's own hand. The King has promised to pay the residue of the debts, should the Duke's property be insufficient.

From the Canadian Courant.

UPPER CANADA.—Naturalization Bill.—Messrs. Jonas and Charles Jones have published a pamphlet containing a copy of the Naturalisation Bill as it passed both Houses, and was reserved for His Majesty's pleasure, accompanied by an address to the Inhabitants of the District of Johnstown, explanatory of the objects and provisions of the said Bill. As the Alien Bill, in the form in which it passed, seems to have given dissatisfaction to a number of the inhabitants, (if we rest our belief on the assertion of some of the Upper Canada papers) this measure was called for; and although, as we have before expressed, we should feel repugnant at any infringement on the rights of the people, we must confess that the Messrs. Jones' explanation is to us satisfactory, and gives us to believe that the bill is the nearest possible method which the Legislature of that Province could have adopted in order to place those who have removed thither from any foreign country on the same footing with natural born subjects, entitled to all their rights and privileges, and subject to all their duties, responsibilities and obligations. The address explains the situation of persons now settled in that Province who will be affected by the law, should it go into operation—they are,

"First,—All persons born in any foreign country, other than the United States of America.

Second.—All persons born in the now United States before 1783, who were opposed to His Majesty's arms during the Rebellion.

Third.—All those who did not take up arms during the Rebellion, but after the treaty of 1783, and before their removal into this Province, by oath or acceptance of office or otherwise, unequivocally declared themselves to be Subjects to the Government of the United States.

Fourth.—All those born in the United States since 1783, whose fathers were opposed to the British arms in the Rebellion, or who became Subjects of the new Government as last mentioned."

Those four descriptions of persons were aliens on coming into the Province, nor could they be legally regarded as British Subjects until they had complied with the following Article, 13th Geo. II. Chap. 7, which is in brief the provisions of the Naturalizing law of Great Britain.—"Any Foreign Protestant who shall come into His Majesty's Colonies in North America, and shall reside therein seven years, take the Sacrament in some Protestant Church, (not the church of England exclusively) and within three months thereafter take the oath of Allegiance and Supremacy in Court, and register said oath in the office of the Secretary of the Province, is entitled in the Colonies to all the privileges of natural born Subjects.," None have done so—and consequently those who have not complied with it cannot now be legally regarded as british subjects; therefore the Naturalization Bill takes away none of their privileges—but on the contrary it is a means by which such persons will be enabled to become British Subjects in reality, and rest secure in their titles to lands and property, which heretofore it is evident they could not do. The address also describes the denominations of persons who will not be affected by the Bill—they are,

"First,—All persons born within His Majesty's Dominions throughout the world, except the Colonies now comprising the United States of America.

Second.—All persons born in the Colonies now the United States of America before 1783, who adhered to the British Crown during the Rebellion, and who had of course preserved with their allegiance their characters of British Subjects.

Third.—The children and grand children of those last mentioned.

He returned to Samarang without a single follower.

"We know not" observes the writer of the letter, from which the above account is derived, "what troops are coming from Europe, but if five or six thousand men do not arrive in a few weeks, twenty thousand will not save Java, for every mile the Insurgents advance, their strength increases."

Fourth,—Those born in the United States before the Rebellion, but who, from their tender years or other cause, took no part therein, and who after the treaty, neither by taking allegiance to the British Crown, nor in any other manner, manifested their election to become subjects of the United States."

By the provisions of this Bill the person who complies with them renounces all allegiance to any other country, to most of that description of persons who come under the denomination of Aliens the renunciation were unnecessary; but then they can have no hesitation in complying with them, whereas to any who might be inclined to desert the country in the hour of danger, the measure is absolutely necessary. On the whole, we do not think that a Bill could easily be framed more exactly to secure the rights of those becoming British Subjects, at the same time that it would secure their undivided allegiance to the Crown of Great Britain, than the one which has just passed, and which seems to have given so much dissatisfaction to some of the inhabitants.

Communications.

We have received Mr. Fotherghill's Letter—as it is addressed to us in our Editorial capacity, with a request to make it public, we have done so, giving, at the same time, our reply to its several paragraphs.

Port Hope, March 21, 1827.

To ROBERT STANTON, Esq.
Editor of the U. E. Loyalist.

Sir,

As you have, on several occasions, professed liberality of sentiment and fairness of conduct in your new situation, as Editor of the U. E. Gazette, &c. (although I am constrained to say this fairness was not very apparent in your report of the Proceedings of the Parliament), I ought not to suppose you have any deliberate intention to depart from the rule you seemed to have laid down for your guidance, in order to single me out for personal injury and insult.

REPLY.

This paragraph, Sir, appears to be intended more particularly as a criticism on the manner in which my paper is conducted—this I have no reason to find fault with. You have undoubtedly a right to express your opinion as to the merits of any public journal. And as the Proprietor of a public journal, you will, I think, admit that I have an equal right to conduct it, in such a manner as I conceive will give general satisfaction. The success of this must depend on the reception it meets with from the public generally; and from the patronage the U. E. Loyalist has received from which, I do assure you, that I have reason to believe that its tone and tenor are approved, and that it has always been found to uphold those principles of loyalty and attachment to the British Constitution and Government, which its prospectus promised.

I am not surprised that you should not like the manner in which I reported the Proceedings of Parliament—I should be surprised if you did. The readers of the U. E. Loyalist generally, were not a little gratified that, by the method I adopted, they not only were put in early possession of those proceedings, but in many instances, were furnished with the ipsissima verba, who set up for faithful witnesses of the passing times." Verily their reward goes with them !"

I might, if I pleased, go further—but I refrain. Let me now ask you, Sir, if you have ever seen in the columns of the "U. E. Loyalist," scurrility, such as is above quoted from the "Weekly Register"? You never have, Sir, and you never will.

I can easily imagine that you will urge in extenuation for having made use of language so intemperate, the "scurrilous" attacks made upon you; but I think you must now be constrained to admit, that with persons so utterly wanting in all principle, as you appear to have considered those alluded to in your "Editorial Commentary," the opportunity was afforded you of putting into practice, the knowledge you say "you had since learnt you" to treat "low scurrility with the contempt it merits." Had you made this practical use of the knowledge, you had "long since" acquired, you might have saved yourself the mortification of the present exposure.

LETTER.

Common tales of falsehood, and that kind of low scurrility which is so current in this Province, no matter how copiously poured forth, I have long since learnt how to treat with the contempt they merit. It is not therefore to cavil with the precious Communication alluded to, merely on account of its low abuse, or of its general falsehood, that I have been your pen, but for considerations of a more serious nature.

REPLY.

Without meaning to flatter you, I sincerely respect your good judgement in this particular—but am not a little surprised, that with all that good judgement, your professions and practice seem to be at variance with each other, by attaching "considerations of a serious nature" to those very things which, but a moment before, you say you "have long since learnt how to treat with the contempt they merit."

LETTER.

I have had the honor of being in the Commission of the Peace in this Province for about nine years, and during that time I have never, in a single instance, to my knowledge, compromised my own honor and integrity as a magistrate, or have for one moment thought that what was due to my King and to my Country—and I defy even the bitterest of my personal enemies (for some it appears I have) to point out any breach of faithfulness to the solemn obligations I have entered into, on my part. I might here, on the contrary, speak of many occasions wherein I have been complimented for what I conceive very opposite in that you and your friend have dared to reprobate with "all the allegations of this anonymous assassin are true; I am base, disloyal and seditious, but am actually liable to indictment for Treason." This, Sir, is carrying scurrilous and party scribbling a little too far, and although probably the last man in the province who would willingly go into a Court of Justice for a redress of private wrong, I cannot submit to labor under such an aspersion, both public and private duty forbid that I should tamely submit to so abominable an outrage.

REPLY.

With the history of your magisterial life, I have never intermeddled—it is sufficient for me to say now that there is nothing in it "to my knowledge," which you have committed a "breach of the solemn obligations entered into;" and I most sincerely hope that you may continue to discharge the engagements, which you say have been paid you, for your conduct in that important situation. The dereliction of duty on the part of your brother Magistrates, as stated by you, in the Letter signed Philo, when you informed the House, that on certain occasions when their presence was necessary to quell tumults, you alone stepped forward to preserve the peace of your Country, is a fact worthy of finding behind barrels and wash-tubs, fairly entitles you to these "compliments."

The charges you make, and the conclusions you draw from them in the latter part of your Letter in the latter part of this paragraph, with the "redress" you speak of " in a Court of Justice," precludes the necessity of my saying any thing respecting them. I do not mean, as I presume the Champion of my Correspondent, nor will I anticipate a legal investigation of the allegations which you say he has made.

LETTER.

I therefore demand, Sir, in the first place, the name and address of your Correspondent who signs himself SCHACKENBERGER; and, in the next, that you will make this letter as public in your next paper, as the publication of the "Weekly Register" entitled "To the Public" in which I complain.—And I only waiting your compliance,

I remain, &c. &c.
CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

REPLY.

I should have supposed, Sir, that your own experience in the charge of a public newspaper, must have satisfied you that a demand of this nature is more easily made than complied with, and that to give even the most distant hint of Communications which are entrusted to us, would indeed be making us a "Pawkie" business of it.

I have told you, Sir, that it is not my intention to enter into the field of controversy with you—and that I will not by any means anticipate a public legal investigation. Do not suppose, however that I mean to shelter myself behind his Communication; long ago have I learnt, that "in our days as ever pleased on a certain occasion to say yourself of one of your Correspondents, "he is safe"—his name is entrusted to my safe keeping, and shall be sacred, unless he authorizes me to divulge it. Without that authority, you must excuse my not complying with your "demand."

I remain, &c. &c.
ROBERT STANTON.

To CHARLES FOTHERGILL, Esq.

POSTSCRIPT.

March 28, 1827.

Since writing the above, I have received a little surprised at finding your letter to me published in two of the York papers of this day. To the Editor of the Advocate you address a note, of which the following is a copy :—

Port Hope, March 26, 1827.

MR. MACKENZIE,

Sir,

Mr. Stanton having neglected to publish the following Letter in his last U. E. Loyalist, a Letter which circumstances obliged me to address to him, I will thank you to give it a place in your next Advocate, and oblige

Your most Obedient,
Humble Servant,
CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

Now, Sir, I can only tell you that it was utterly impossible to publish your Letter in the last U. E. Loyalist as the Mail which conveyed that Letter to me did not arrive at York until 6 hours after the last U. E. Loyalist had been published. Had your "anxiety" suffered you to wait, until the appearance of the next number of the paper, after the receipt of your Letter, you would have seen that I had neglected you.

From the circumstance of your note to the Editor of the Advocate, being dated the same day, as that, on which at 12 o'clock noon, the Mail left York with the last U. E. Loyalist, I am induced to ask you whether you really were in possession of the last U. E. Loyalist when you wrote that note?

As I happen to know something of the manner of conveying the Mails, particularly at this Season of the year when the Roads are so bad between York and Port Hope, (a distance of sixty miles), I must say that I am somewhat astonished at the unusual celerity of our Mail carriers on this occasion.

ROBERT STANTON.

THE CHRISTIAN SENTINEL.—We have seen the first number of this religious periodical, for the months of January and February, published in Montreal, in a neat pamphlet of 64 octavo pages. Amongst its contents we notice an introductory letter, which may be considered as a further elucidation of the Prospectus —a very interesting memoir of the late venerable Bishop of Quebec—an article on the Baptismal Service—a brief account of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge in Foreign Parts, with an abridged detail of the proceedings of the Quebec Diocesan Committee since its establishment in 1818—the Churchman's Sunday Evening Fire-side, a simple and affecting family picture, evidently drawn from life, and admirably calculated to inculcate a proper observance of the Lord's Day in families. These, with several judicious selections, render the number before us an acceptable present to the serious and reflecting Christian; and there is every reason to believe that it will be conducted in the same spirit with which it has been commenced.—Quebec Mercury.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

A petition of remonstrance against the Naturalization Bill has appeared in Print, which some one has been wicked enough to sign; and others weak enough to sign; weak enough I say because they submitted so to do, as children sometimes submit to be whipped, without knowing why or wherefore. They say un'testood neither the Petition itself, nor the Bill of which it spoke. My first objection is, that it is addressed to the House of Commons, and not to the King. The framers of it had no love for Kingly Government, which is one of the evils of this double allegiance, and they thought it but consistent with their principles, to disregard the Royal Prerogative, and obtrude themselves irregularly upon the British Commons. They suppose, no doubt that any appeal there, however indecent or unconstitutional, will be hailed with cheers and triumphantly received. Time will correct their error.—They should certainly get Mr. Gourlay to forward it, for he has been wonderfully successful with his own.

The Petitioners are modestly made to say, they, "presume on the well known rights of Englishmen, in which they ardently desire to participate." They presume a little too much upon clamorous opposition, and unreasonable aversion to Government in His Majesty's Government. The rights of Englishmen though well known, should not be made too cheap to those who do not know how to appreciate them, and who would wrest and force them from us, rather than respectively solicit and thankfully receive them. Many enough too, are the well known framers of the Petition, think they must speak of "in a Court of Justice," precludes the necessity of my saying any thing respecting them. I do not mean, as I presume the Champion of my Correspondent, nor will I anticipate a legal investigation of the allegations which you say he has made.

LETTER.

I therefore demand, Sir, in the first place, the name and address of your Correspondent who signs himself SCHACKENBERGER; and, in the next, that you will make this letter as public in your next paper, as the publication of the "Weekly Register" entitled "To the Public" in which I complain.—And only waiting your compliance,

I remain, &c. &c.
CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

REPLY.

I should have supposed, Sir, that your own experience in the charge of a public newspaper, must have satisfied you that a demand of this nature is more easily made than complied with, and that to give even the most distant hint of Communications which are entrusted to us, would indeed be making us a "Pawkie" business of it.

I have told you, Sir, that it is not my intention to enter into the field of controversy with you—and that I will not by any means anticipate a public legal investigation. Do not suppose, however that I mean to shelter myself behind his Communication; long ago have I learnt, that "in our days as ever pleased on a certain occasion to say yourself of one of your Correspondents, "he is safe"—his name is entrusted to my safe keeping, and shall be sacred, unless he authorizes me to divulge it. Without that authority, you must excuse my not complying with your "demand."

I remain, &c. &c.

POSTSCRIPT.

March 28, 1827.

Since writing the above, I have received a little surprised at finding your letter to me published in two of the York papers of this day. To the Editor of the Advocate you address a note, of which the following is a copy :—

Port Hope, March 26, 1827.

MR. MACKENZIE,

Sir,

Mr. Stanton having neglected to publish the following Letter in his last U. E. Loyalist, a Letter which circumstances obliged me to address to him, I will thank you to give it a place in your next Advocate, and oblige

Your most Obedient,
Humble Servant,
CHARLES FOTHERGILL.

Now, Sir, I can only tell you that it was utterly impossible to publish your Letter in the last U. E. Loyalist as the Mail which conveyed that Letter to me did not arrive at York until 6 hours after the last U. E. Loyalist had been published. Had your "anxiety" suffered you to wait, until the appearance of the next number of the paper, after the receipt of your Letter, you would have seen that I had neglected you.

From the circumstance of your note to the Editor of the Advocate, being dated the same day, as that, on which at 12 o'clock noon, the Mail left York with the last U. E. Loyalist, I am induced to ask you whether you really were in possession of the last U. E. Loyalist when you wrote that note?

As I happen to know something of the manner of conveying the Mails, particularly at this Season of the year when the Roads are so bad between York and Port Hope, (a distance of sixty miles), I must say that I am somewhat astonished at the unusual celerity of our Mail carriers on this occasion.

ROBERT STANTON.

To the Editor of the U. E. Loyalist.

SIR,

If the following description of a scarcely precedented squall is worthy a place in your columns, it is at your service :—

THE SQUALL AT SEA, Feb. 24.

It was not such a day, when with studding-sails low and aloft, the wide spread silver canvases of the stately vessel were but gently elood magically reeling in the ethereal vault of Heaven.—It was not such a day, when in this silver clouded nest of zephyrs, the rough intrusion of a top-gallant breeze would be dignified with the name of squall.—No! alone reefed topsails, and storm staysails, had already filled the volume of our sea journal for weeks. Our latitude was now 56 N. and Lon. 45 W. It was about 8 P.M.; I was lying in my birth reading, as was usual with me, when the motion of the vessel was such as to abstract my thoughts, and render it fatiguing to sit up when thus employed. I was a sudden awoke from my reverie with "come up here all hands." There was nothing uncommon in the summons to the ear of a sailor; but it had this peculiarity in it, that it was the first time I had heard the voice of the Master in a similar way. The sailors, who were busy repairing sails in the Larfted Cabin, were quickly on deck. I saw all the passengers on the move upwards. Altho' not much accustomed to notice occurrences on board, I thought I would go too, and leisurely brought up the rear. The order had been given to clue the topsails up. The wind blew in heavy gusts from the N.W., and had already an hour previously split the foresail, which was now stowed. I cast my eyes to windward, and in that quarter a dense black cloud, skirted by a thin vapour, was rapidly rising before it a fleecy drift, obscured the horizon. Dark and indefinite gloom marked its near approach. The topsails were now closed up, but not stowed; and two new storm staysails were all the canvass spread. Anon—whistling of ropes through the sheaves of a cataract—and the appalling blast! The stout vessel reeled over; shook as with an earthquake, and sunk half buried in the sea. In such a moment all seamanship is at fault! A footing, we presume, is the first step towards Constitutionally, but factiously; and who, having no reasonable cause for complaint, forget that gratitude is due for favors and protection, or that there is such a thing as pure Loyalty and undivided Allegiance and attachment.

Let these non-contents to the Bill now ask themselves, what motives prompted them to remove hither, and upon what special encouragement or seducing promises of the Government, they were induced and charmed to turn Canadians? I apprehend few of them can answer that they knew or though of any Government encouragement, unless it were the well known goodness and benevolence thereof; and I have the best reason to believe, that all who looked or sought for the patronage of the Government, considered a proof of their loyalty in the Rebellion, and of their attachment to the King afterwards, a sine qua non, in its attainment. Let it be tried who was encouraged, man by man, as he is Naturalized, and we shall find, that not a few considerations than encouraging Statutes; or fascinating Proclamations, (of which not one in a hundred ever thought or heard) operated upon their minds as inducements to wend their way to the wilds of Canada. We shall perhaps find, that such persons at first sought less the land, and are now unwilling to pay the duties—that they were originally of illegal importation, contraband subjects, who now wish to pass current, as if all the Laws by which alone they could be legalized, had been most rightly complied with. Pity there was not in the Registry, a clause for all non-contents to swear to the specific encouragement, upon which they came to us! What a variety of temptations would swell the column! We have next rather an overcharged account of their qualifications and merits, but as no consequences favorable to the Petitioners can be deduced from the facts, that the framers, the architects, of this handy-work, or the signers, are mere journey men drudges, that they have hitherto enjoyed fully the rights of Britis birth (now about to be permanently secured, not wantonly disturbed); that they have been admitted to fill various Offices in the Colony, and that in war they were not treacherous; it is needless to waste time for the purpose of ridiculing the egotism which the unwary Petitioners have been prone to display; Cortes the trumpet of fame never sounded more loudly in their praise. Would that truth had lent her breath, to give it utterance.

WE are requested by Mr. G. W. Whitehead, of Hartford, to say that the account published in the U. E. Loyalist, of a meeting lately held in that township on the subject of the Alien Bill, is not strictly correct, inasmuch as it is calculated to leave an impression on the mind of the reader, that he supported the petition proposed upon that occasion; the fact being, that the sentiments of Mr. W. are decidedly favorable to the Naturalization Bill—and, it was principally owing to his exertions on the electors of that hall, that the meeting rejected the petition which was submitted upon that occasion. Mr. W.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 31, 1827.

THE NEWS from Europe is of such a nature as leads to the supposition, that there cannot be the least apprehension, that its general peace, will be disturbed. The energetic measures of the British Government, in affording the most prompt assistance to Portugal, has not been without its effect.—It is thought the presence of the British Army, will alone be sufficient, to restore things to their proper order, and that fortunately there will not be a necessity, for their taking any further active measures. We have given the most interesting extracts on the subject.

We are at all times happy to correct any errors which may be found in our columns. Our apology is due to Mr. G. W. Whitehead, which we beg he will accept, and trust, that the explanation afforded us by the Gentleman, with which we conclude this article, will be sufficient to do away any impression on the minds of our readers, that Mr. Whitehead "supported the petition on that occasion." Mr. Whitehead may be assured that the error was as he says "unintentional on the part of the U. E. L."

Another, a "Constant Correspondent" of the same paper, (with a name) "William Woodruff," complains "that the youth of this Country, are now only to become subjects from the date they comply with the present Act." The YOUTH OF THIS COUNTRY ARE BRITISH BORN SUBJECTS, no matter who or what their parents are, and the Naturalization Bill does not therefore affect the youth of this Country in the least—they are British Subjects, and do not require Naturalization. This proves to us, notwithstanding Mr. Woodruff's assertion to the contrary, that he does not understand the Bill.

The Colonial Advocate pretends to persist in the assertion, that the Farmer's Journal, gets jobs and office notices to print from the Government Office—it is all gratuitous however—for the Editor himself says "he has seen the extra papers distributed Gratis, with George R——'s advertisements in hot columns" Gratis, it must have been indeed, for we know that not so much as the scrags of a pen, was ever sent to him from the Government Office to print. The fact however of his giving publicity to notices, which he thinks may be interesting to his readers, gratis, shews good feeling, and bespeaks liberality.

As to the facts copied [copied from where?] into our last, respecting Mr. Maitland, we have made strict enquiry, and believe they were very correctly stated—[Colonial Advocate.]

We, on the other hand, have made strict inquiry, and know that there is nothing like fact about it—it is altogether a fabrication.—[U. E. L.]

The disorders in the Peninsula, lately so threatening in appearance, seem to have subsided, and the rebellion against the Portuguese Constitution has taken a shape which leaves us no reason to doubt that it will be extinguished by the Government, without requiring aid from any foreign State, with the exception of that which Spain offers, to disarm the malcontents who may seek shelter in her territory.—Albion.

BY AUTHORITY.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, April 3, 1827.

HIS EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR has been pleased to grant a Licence to James Fairfield, of Ernestown, Gentleman, to practice Physic, Surgery, and Midwifery, within this Province.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To our beloved and faithful Legislative Councillors, of our Province of Upper Canada, and to our Knights Citizens, and Burgesses of our said Province, to our Provincial Parliament at our Town of York on Wednesday the Twenty-eighth day of March inst. to be Commenced, Held, Called, Elected, and to every of you

GREETING:

WHEREAS on the Seventeenth day of February last, we thought fit to prorogue our Provincial Parliament to the Twenty-eighth day of March instant, at which time, at our Town of York, you were held and constrained to appear.

NOW KNOW YE, that we taking into our Royal consideration the ease and convenience of our loving subjects, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Executive Council, to relieve you and each of you of your attendance at the time aforesaid, hereby convoking and by these presents enjoining you and each of you that on Friday the Fourth day of May next ensuing, you meet us in our Provincial Parliament at our Town of York, there to take into consideration the State and welfare of our Province of Upper Canada, and therein to do as may seem necessary and, herein fail not.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this nineteenth day of March in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-seven, and in the Eighth year of our reign.

P. M.

By His Excellency's Command.
D. CAMERON, Secretary.
JOHN B. ROBINSON, Attorney General.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

May it Please Your Excellency,

We His Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, Inhabitants of the District of Newcastle, beg leave to represent to your Excellency our unfeigned satisfaction at the benevolent designs of His Majesty's Government towards those persons who have settled in this Province with the wish and intention of becoming British Subjects, but who are not legally entitled to be considered in that light.

It affords us much pleasure to find, that a Naturalization Bill has passed the Legislature of this Province, by which, an easy and expeditious method is afforded such persons to obtain all the Rights and Privileges of British Subjects in this Province.

We view the Registry clauses of that Act as highly beneficial, inasmuch as a permanent record is thereby provided, from which, all those interested therein, can obtain full and satisfactory evidence of their having complied with the provisions of the law.

We fervently hope this Act will obtain His Majesty's Royal Assent—and we further beg leave to request, that Your Excellency will be pleased to use every means in your power to accomplish this desireable object.

(Signed) T. WARD.

And 222 others.

To which His Excellency was pleased to direct the following Reply to be given.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE York, 3 April, 1827.

SIR,

The Address of the Inhabitants of the District of Newcastle has been duly received and laid before His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and I am commanded by His Excellency to request you will be pleased to assure those who have signed it, that His Excellency will transmit it to His Majesty's Secretary of State.

His Excellency desires they may be well assured that it was no ordinary anxiety to protect from inconvenience that class of our population for whose interests this Address bespeaks concern, which could have incited the Government of this Colony to persevere, as it has done, against every difficulty in the attempt to secure their property, and to obtain for them a full and certain admission to Civil Rights.

The Lieutenant Governor is not unaware what efforts have been used, and what misrepresentations have been resorted to for the purpose of exciting opposition to a measure, which must have been generally viewed by men of sound understanding, and of good principles, in the same light as it appeared to the signers of this Address; and His Excellency regrets, that a due regard to official forms prevents His communicating to the people of the Province, until it has been received by the Secretary of State, the despatch with which he accompanied the Bill; because he thinks it would have shewn those who anxiously desire, and fairly deserve this relief, that their interests have not been abandoned on account of any groundless clamour—and have afforded at the same time the plainest assurance to others, that their conduct has not been misunderstood.

His Excellency is convinced, however, that justice will at last be very generally done to the motives and intentions of the Government, and that the only difficulty which will remain, will be for those who now actively oppose the enactment of which this Address approves, to reconcile their conduct hereafter with the dictates of good sense, and sound and loyal feeling.

It ought to be sufficient for those who are unfavorable to so reasonable and so liberal a measure to know, that as it decides upon no person's case, and makes no change in the law, it can have no other effect than to confer privileges upon those who apply for them as the Act provides; and those on the other hand who are anxious that the measure should be confirmed, may, it is imagined, rest assured that the Government will not allow them to suffer for the want of a remedy which they anxiously desire, but that they will perceive it to be more just to suffer the Act to take effect for their protection, while they may prevent by a special enactment, the possibility of its applying to any one of those who have expressed by Petition, their desire likewise to be naturalized upon the terms which His Majesty has recommended, and leave them to apply for private Bills which His Majesty can sanction or not, as He may be graciously pleased to approve of their provisions.

By such a course, those who wish for protection will immediately obtain it, and those who declare themselves dissatisfied with the Bill, cannot complain if they find themselves wholly exempted from its provisions. This has, however, presented itself to His Excellency merely as an alternative; and he will be better pleased to find that His Majesty's Government has discovered nothing in the objections raised against the Bill, to prevent their giving it general and immediate effect, because he is convinced that many have been induced to petition against the Bill by the grossest misrepresentations, and in ignorance of its real provisions, and He should regret to see them suffer inconvenience for the faults of others.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Your Most Obedient,
Humble Servant,
G. HILLIER,

To
THOMAS WARD, Esq.
First signer of Address.

An Act to amend the Laws regulating the practice of Physic Surgery and Midwifery in this Province.

[Passed 17. February, 1827.]

Poetry.

The following HYMN was sung in St. James's Chapel, on Sunday last, after the delivery of a Sermon on the occasion of the Death of the Duke of York.

Sove'reign of all! whose will ordains
The powers on earth that be;
By whom our rightful monarch reigns,
Subject to none but Thee.

Lo! in the arms of faith and prayer,
We bear him to thy throne:
Receive thy own peculiar care,
The Lord's anointed one.

With favor look upon his face;
Thy love's pavilion spread;
And watchful troops of angels place
Around his sacred head.

Guard him from all who dare oppose
Thy delegate and Thee;
From open and from secret foes,
From force and perfidy!

Let us for conscience sake revere
The man of thy right hand.
Honor and love thy image here,
And bless his mild command.

To those, who Thee in him obey,
The spirit of grace impart!
His dear, his sacred burden lay
On every loyal heart!

Still let us pray, and never cease:—
"Defend him, Lord, defend!
"Stablish his throne, in righteousness,
"And save him to the end!"

Miscellaneous.

ALMURATH, AN EASTERN TALE.

My Father was an eminent merchant in Bagdad, and by a long course of indefatigable industry and perseverance he amassed a very considerable fortune; I being his only child, he bestowed upon me the most liberal education which could be obtained. And I was instructed by the Magi in all the scientific and abstruse learning of the east, but was never called upon to apply myself to business of any kind; in short, with the exception of my studies, from which I could not by any possibility escape, I led a life of indolence, ease and luxury. On my Father's death, which happened when I was scarcely twenty-three years of age, I inherited all his immense wealth, which I increased very little more than I found it; for I should have known how to obtain it by my own industry. Led by the ardour and precipitancy of youth into all the vices, follies, and extravagancies of the age, which the liberal supplies of my father in my younger days had enabled me to pursue and indulge in, I now thought of nothing but ease and luxury, and a gratification of the passions. I purchased a splendid mansion in the suburbs of Ispahan, where, surrounded by servants, and with a princely establishment, scarcely equalled in magnificence by that of the Shah himself, I revelled night and day in every thing which could intoxicate the intellectual or moral faculties of the soul.

An old Dervise, far famed for his wisdom and knowledge of the world, frequently visited me, and took every opportunity (which I assiduously avoided,) of endeavouring to awaken my reason; I was deaf to his admonitions and entreaties, and fain would have dispensed with his visits; but gratitude, and parental esteem, prevented me from offending him, for he had been an old and valued friend of my father, who charged me on his death bed always to shew him every respect and attention in my power for his sake, which I promised to do.

One day the old Dervise caught me alone, as I was reclining on a sofa in the heat of the day. I could not escape, and placing himself beside me, and after a few compliments and ceremonies had been exchanged, he began, in his usual manner, to bestow some of his sage advice respecting my conduct, which was not very acceptable to me; after listening a while I affected to be asleep, and soon was so in reality. The visions of the night visited me; I fancied I was by some means or other, in a large populous place, where the Governor had just issued in order for every man to be supplied with a vessel of water, as a trial of their fidelity and obedience to his laws, and every one was to be judged by the use he made of this water. I saw the Officers of Government deliver the vessels, which were all of one size, and amongst the rest I was supplied with one. Some of them were quite full, others were three fourths, and others were half full of water, while some contained but a little. At a certain hour an aperture on the bottom of each vessel was to be opened, so as to suffer the water to escape at pleasure.

I wondered at this strange law, and though I asked several the meaning of it, they all seemed too much engaged to attend to me; I saw some who had the art of catching the water as it ran off and turning it into gold, which they laid up with great care; others made a sort of menstruum of it to dissolve gold and the other precious metals, which it did with a wonderful facility, so that some were quickly left without a sufficient quantity to purchase the necessaries of life, and would fain then have followed the method of the others, who were enriching themselves by the water, but which they were for the greater part incompetent to effect. Many not only turned the liquid into food and raiment for themselves, but had an ample supply for the poor, and such as had thoughtlessly, or for want of skill, let their vessels nearly empty themselves, without appropriating the water to any profitable use; some sacrified or sanctified a part, and others all of their stock to the service of the great Alla, which I observed was well received, and produced infinite comfort to its possessors; whilst many took no notice of the running stream, but let the whole contents of the vessel fall upon the ground and disappear in the earth. I observed that those who had artfully turned the water into gold, which they preserved with so much care, had laboured in vain, for the moment the last drop was run out all their glittering heaps vanished, and they were left with nothing more than those who had suifered it to escape without care or trouble.

I had been so attentive to the actions of others that I forgot my own vessel was all this time discharging its contents, and when I looked round, behold it was nearly exhausted; I sought for it, but it had either evaporated or sunk into the earth, and I bewailed my negligence in vain, for I found all hopes of redeeming my time was fruitless. The period now arrived when all were called before the Governor in Council, to give an account of the manner in which they had acted, and I, amongst the rest, stood trembling at the bar of the tribunal: evasion or excuse was of no avail, for the officers of justice had watched us so narrowly, and noted down every circumstance, that it required only their evidence to decide our fate. First those who had converted the water into necessaries for the supply of themselves and less fortunate neighbours, and those who had sacrificed to the supreme Alla, were rewarded with situations and posts under the government according to their original quantity of water, and the extent of their liberality, and piety, of which there were many degrees or gradations among them, and they had robes given them agreeably to the different situations they were appointed to fulfil; after which, those who converted the water into gold; those who dissolved the precious metals with it, and those who suffered it to drain useless away, (of the last of whom I was unfortunately one) were, under the severest censures and anathemas of the Judge, condemned to various penalties and punishments according to the various circumstances of aggravation attending their crimes; for my part I was condemned to the galleys for life; I wept most bitterly as the inexorable sentence was passed, and cried out in the anguish of my heart, "Oh, what would I give to have the same opportunity again!" As I uttered these words I awoke in a swoon, and neither heard or saw any more, till I awoke and found myself in the arms of Alhaddin, the faithful Dervise, who had been sitting by me the whole time, and witnessed the anguish of my soul, in the last moments of my unquiet sleep. I looked wildly around me, and it was some time before I was convinced my dream was not real, till, at last I was sufficiently composed to relate the story; but the vision had made such an impression on my mind, that it had quite unmanned me.

Alhaddin heard me relate my dream with the greatest silence and composure, and almost without moving a muscle of his face, whilst his eyes were rivetted on the floor, as if in a deep reverie; when I had finished, he lifted his hands and eyes to heaven, and exclaimed with the greatest emotion, "Gracious Alla! I thank thee!" then addressing himself to me, with an emphasis and irresistible earnestness of expression, which I shall never forget, he said, "Oh, Almurath, my son, thou hast cause with me to be thankful; the finger of heaven has warned thee of thy fate, and may it not be lost upon thee. The people thou sawest in thy dream were the inhabitants of the earth, of whom thou art one. The water was the water of life, or rather life itself; the hours, the days, and the years of which thou hast been so long letting run to waste; oh, see thy folly ere it be too late, and let not the shade of thy venerated father, and my departed friend, accuse thee of evil, or me of supineness. Thy vessel is not yet empty, I therefore beseech thee to employ the remainder of thy time in good works; let thy days be devoted to Him who has filled thy vessel with the precious water of life, and let the poor share thy vast substance, so shalt thou be happy and blessed, far beyond thy most sanguine expectations, and thy reward shall be a thousand fold: my grey hairs shall be thy faithful monitors, till I lay my head in peace in the grave of my fathers, and future generations shall bless thy name, long after thou art passed to the tomb, and time shall have crumbled the marble thereof into dust." My dream, and this address of my venerable friend, had such an effect upon me, that I instantly determined on a reform of my life, making a vow that no day should in future pass away without my being able to look back and see that I had employed it to a good purpose. I now bestow my bounty cheerfully on the poor and needy, and sincerely do I thank the mighty Alla, that he has given me wherewith to do so; my time hangs no longer heavy on my hands, nor is it wasted in vain pleasure. I have found true happiness, which before, I never knew, and, with the assistance of the worthy Alhaddin, I hope to make my peace with Him before whom all flesh is as chaff, and every man's life as a drop of water: then shall I lay up a crown in Heaven, and complete that inexpressible and eternal beatitude of which I have already a foretaste here.

England.

Several persons of distinction have died in consequence of colds caught at the funeral of the Duke of York. The Duke of Sussex, and Mr. Canning, are indisposed from the same cause. The Bishop of Lincoln, and Sir Geo. Beamont, are among the unmber deceased.

An arrangement with Spain for the settlement of the British claims was finally agreed to in Paris on the 4th ult. It will be effected by an issue of debentures for the sum of £3, 000,000 sterling, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable half yearly in London.

Myers' Mercantile advertiser of the 12th ult. makes the following, among other remarks relative to the Corn Laws, which subject was about to engage the attention of Parliament: "Where so many parties are deeply interested, conjecture has, of course, been busy with respect to the intention of his Majesty's Ministers, as they have undertaken to bring the subject under consideration in the present Parliament. We do not presume to penetrate into the undeclared intentions of the Government, but there appears to us some foundation for the general belief that the system of averages will no longer be employed to regulate importations, but that, like other articles, Corn will be subjected to a fixed duty. Which scale will be proposed and adopted cannot, of course, be predicted. The scale of 1828, Wheat at 12s &c. is looked upon as the maximum, by those favourable to importations.

The widow of the celebrated circumnavigator, Cpt. James Cook, is still living at Clapham, in the full injoyment of all her faculties.

The exports of British produce to the new states of America and Brazil, exceed the amount of exports to the United States.

The accounts from the Manufacturing districts, continue to be favorable.

The Corn Question has been again postponed to the 26th of February, in consideration of Mr. Canning's illness, which has so far removed as to leave little doubt that on that day the Right Hon. gentleman would be able to bring the question forward.

Addresses of condolence to the King, on the occasion of the death of the Duke of York, were moved in both houses of Parliament, on the 12th of February. In the Lords, the address was moved by the Earl of Liverpool, and in the Commons by Mr. Secretary Peel. They were carried unanimously. Even Mr. Brougham and Sir Robert Wilson spoke in favour.—Mr. Peel, in the course of his speech, mentioned one interesting circumstnce, which showed (says the Courier) with what undiminished ardour and anxiety the departed Prince connected every feeling of his heart with the honor of the British army:

"I shall not soon forget," said the Right Hon. Gentleman, "the last words I heard from the lips of the Royal Duke. when, nine days before his death, bearing of the landing of part of the troops at Lisbon, he said, with a faint expression of honest triumph, "I wish any man could compare the state of the brigade of British troops disembarked at Ostend, in 1794, with that of the corps now landed at Lisbon. These, on my honor, were the last words I heard from the lips of the Duke of York.

The motion of Mr. Wilmot Horton, for the re-appointment of the Emigration Committee, was to be discussed in the House of Commons on the 15th. The Courier anticipates an important debate, and in reference thereto takes an extended and approving view of a pamphlet upon the subject of Emigration, by Dr. Strachan, Archdeacon of York, Upper Canada.

The death of two Generals is announced within the second week in February, namely: Gen. W. Cartwright, (Colonel of the 1st dragoon guards); and Lt. Gen. Ramsay, of the royal artillery.

It is said to be the intention of the British Admiralty, to build six steam ships of the largest size, capable of carrying 100 carronade guns of increased calibre, and to be propelled by two engines of two hundred horse power each.

January 20.

A very interesting scene took place yesterday morning; 1000 of the boys belonging to the Royal military Asylum established at Chelsea, and founded by the late much-lamented Royal Duke, were admitted into the Palace Yard at Chelsea, before the public were admitted. This Juvenile regiment was dressed in the undress military uniform, under the command of its Commanding Officer, Lieutenant-Col. J. Williamson, and other officers. Two of the Juveniles carried their small standards, with "Royal military Asylum" written on them. They were proceeded by their band, with their drums muffled with black cloth; and were followed by their nurses, thirty-six in number, dressed in uniform straw hats and red gowns.

The late Duke took much interest in this instruction, and visited it sometimes as often as once a-week. He was in the pleasing and condescending habit of calling them his children; and many of them were observed to shed tears on witnessing the sombre spectacle.

The following circular has been issued to the Members of the House of Commons, from the Treasury.:—

"IMMEDIATE.

"Your attendance is most earnestly requested upon the resolutions respecting the Corn Laws, on Monday the 19th February, instead of Monday the 12th, the day mentioned in the Notice Paper of the House of Commons.

The short sleeve is full, and set in a band round the arm; the long sleeve is large and of crape, with a coronet cuff of gros de Naples fastened by a wrought iron cameo clasp. The skirt is ornamented with an intermixture of gros de Naples and crape of a fanciful pattern, headed by a narrow rouleau of satin which is repeated between the trimming, and the skirt is terminated by a wadded hem. The headdress consists of a very full wreath of black crape flowers, and a light crepe lisse hat, a la Marie Stuart, with long lappets of crape to the waist. Large diamond-shaped black brooch in the front of the bust; German cast-iron necklace earrings, and bracelets, with cameo clasps. Black kid gloves and chamois shoes.

From la Belle Assemblee.

DINNER PARTY DRESS.—A dress of black bombazin, bordered with a double bouillon trimming of crape, enlimacon; each scallop of which is confined by a ring-ornament of fluted crape. The body is made plain, and is ornamented round the tucker part with a vandyke trimming of crape, at each point of which are rosettes. The sleeves are short and full, of the same materials as the dress. A fichu pelerine of white crape, with a double trimming of the same round the edge, is worn over the shoulders. The head-dress consists of a Turkish turban of white crape, ornamented with a trimming of jet. Necklace and ear-pendents of beautifully cut jet.

EVENING CUSTOME.—A dress of black crepe-lisse over black satin, ornamented at the hem next the shoe, with a ruche of crape, pinked at the edges; over this ruche is a Vandyke ornament of braided crape, surmounted by a trimming of a lighter kind, pinked. The corsage is a la Sevigne; with a belt of black satin, and a large rosette, formed of jet, heads, in front. The sleeves are short, and are ornamented in a corresponding manner with the skirt. The hair is arranged in large curls on each side the head, with a Necklace and ear-pendants of jet; the former set a Pantique.

Mr. Cobbett's Accuracy.—In a letter addressed to Mr. Canning, in the Register of the 25d of December, speaking of the United States of America, Mr. Cobbett says—"You must know that there is no country in the world. You may know that she could send out pretty nearly thirty ships of the line, and twice as many frigates, each frigate being (as our blue and buff swear) equal to an English 74." On the same subject, the President of the United States, in his late Message to Congress, says—"We have twelve line of battle ships, twenty frigates, and sloops of war in proportion."—We wonder whether the veracious man of Kensington will be willing to admit that, on this point, Mr. Adams is more likely to be correct than himself.—Manchester Mercury.

ANECDOTES OF THE LATE DUKE OF YORK.

During the campaign in Flanders, His late Royal Highness was frequently attended by James Haddfield, then a private in the 15th Regiment of Light Horse, as an orderly dragoon. This individual at one time had the good fortune to save the Duke's life—or at any rate to prevent his being taken prisoner, by bringing him timely intelligence of the enemy surrounding that part of the staff with which he was reconoiting at some distance from the main body of the army. Hadfield always spoke in the highest terms of the Duke's courage and intrepidity. Ever accustomed to expose his person to the hottest fire, receiving and dispatching his orders in pencil notes with the utmost coolness, while cannon-balls and even musketry, mowed down officers and soldiers in his right hand. Amongst other exploits, Hadfield values himself upon having had the honour of dinning with His Royal Highness; and upon his audience expressing some scepticism respecting the probability of a Royal Duke admitting a private dragoon to his dinner table, Hadfield protested his assertion to be strictly true, and explained himself in the manner following:—

"Whilst the army was manœuvring before the enemy, and in sight of the French near Tournay, the Duke halted late in the afternoon; his mules and pack-horses laden with provisions were ordered up, and His Royal Highness and Staff, dismounting from their horses, sat down on the ground, which happened to be a turnipfield, and devoured their viands ravenously. I pulled up some turnips, and sitting but a few yards distant from the Commander in chief, under the canopy of Heaven, thus satisfied the cravings of nature with these nutritious, roots and drank success to His Majesty's arms in the hearing of the Duke whilst all our horses were grazing. Thus certainly no one can doubt my having dined, in every sense of the word, with the Duke of York, though only in the humble capacity of orderly dragoon." During the retreat of the army, poor Hadfield, whilst endeavouring to cut his way through a detachment of the enemy's horse, to carry some intelligence to the Duke of York, was overpowered, severely wounded & taken prisoner. Upon being brought to the hospital at Lisle, he overheard the French surgeon declare, that it would not be worth while to dress the wounds in his head and face, as he could not survive half an hour; however, by his youth and good constitution, and the attention subsequently paid him, he recovered, and after suffering unspeakable hardships, in 1796 found his way back to England, after he had been reported as dead in the regimental returns a twelve month before, among the killed and wounded. Covered with scars and lamed in his left arm, he was discharged from his Regiment with no other provision than fourpence a day pension. Crippled as he was, he returned to his former trade as a shoemaker, and on the morning on the 15th of May, 1800, frenzy or despair prompted him to fire a pistol at His late Majesty, King George III. and he was instantly taken into custody, the Duke of York saw and immediately recognised him at the examination at Bow-street, or at the Secretary of State's Office at Whitehall, and addressed him in these words:—" Ah! Hadfield! Hadfield! Is it possible! Is it you?" and added in his usual hurried manner, "What made you shoot at my father? Do you bear me any ill will?" &c. "None, in the least," was the reply. Mr. Pitt and the Privy Council examined Hadfield on that very night, and committed him to Cold-bath Field Prison. During the examination, Hadfield counted the Members of the Privy Council, and when asked why, he compared himself to former Judges Pontius Pilate and the Pharisees. His attempt was at first supposed to be connected with some machinations of the Corresponding Society—with Jacobins, and other political discontentment; a suspicion which proved totally destitute of foundation, as was fully proved by afterwards under a Special Commission by Lord Kenyon at Westminister, when the late Lord Erskine defended him at the expense of the Crown, and obtained a verdict of NOT GUILTY, but insanity. His Royal Highness the late Duke of York sat on the Bench, and bore witness to Hadfield's good conduct, loyalty, and bravery as a soldier; and as soon as the Duke of York had given his evidence the Prisoner at the bar broke out in cheers and buzzas, and was with difficulty restrained to observe the decorum due to the place and occasion. Recommitted to Bedlam, under the general no law for detention of persons, Mr. Pitt brought in a bill (Stat. 39 and 40 Geo. III. ch. 96,) authorizing the detention of criminal Lunatics during His Majesty's pleasure; under a retrospective operation of which expost facto enactment, Hadfield was transported from Newgate to Old Bethlem in Moorfields, chained to his bed-post for many months, effected his escape, was taken at Deal on his way to France, from whence he had the imprudence to write to his wife for money, who, for a pecuniary reward discovered his retreat to the Secretary of State. Old Bethlem not being deemed sufficiently secure for his safe custody, he was, in 1802 or 1803, again committed back to Newgate, with an allowance of about £100 per annum, until the criminal wing annexed to New Bethlem in St. George's-Fields was completed, whither he was transferred in the year 1816. In March, 1817, His Royal Highness visited Hadfield in his new habitation. The prisoner was quite overpowered and moved to tears at this act of condescension. The Royal Duke himself seemed to be much affected, and made some promise of his powerful intercession for his release, which must have been thwarted in another quarter, as poor Hadfield did not live to see the promise of Princely patronage, which sufficed, however to restore to nother prisoner, of the name of Newcomb, formerly His Royal Highness's boot-maker, but then a perfect idiot, to his liberty. In the mean time it is quite clear that the late Duke did not forget his former orderly dragoon, as the Duchess of York shortly afterwards visited him in his confinement; and as His Royal Highness the late Duke of Sussex goes to see him once or twice every year, and never leaves him without some little present, and the assurance of his regret to be unable to procure the liberation of so conversant and well-behaved a man, who, in case of the late Duke ever ascending the throne of these realms, would have stood a very good chance of recovering his freedom by an act of Royal clemency, as the Commander-in-Chief would not have been afraid of his old orderly even being again so disorderly as to injure himself or his subjects, exclusive of his temper being soured, and perhaps irritated by 37 long years of imprisonment, Hadfield appears to be perfectly harmless.

A short time previous to the commencement of the lamented Duke of York's fatal illness; His Royal Highness was met by three young ladies as he was walking into the Horse Guards, by the entrance of the Stable-yard; they presented a letter to him which he received with his usual affability. His Royal Highness opened the letter and read it, and after asking a few questions of it, desired them to call on him on the following day at the Horse Guards. The young ladies were daughters of an officer who had been killed in battle, and consequently enjoyed small pensions, but which were to cease on their marriage. One of them was about to be married, and the application was for her pension to be transferred to her sisters, which the Royal Duke very kindly consented to, and promptly settled it when they called on him the following day.

Among the works which were in the press at London, in January, was a "History of the Rise and Progress of the States of North America till the British Revolution in 1668, by James Graham, Esquire."

We have remarked among the American papers, an article in the shape of a political disquisition on the relations between Great Britain and the United States, which, after spinning out a good deal of republican common place, tells us that our old contempt, hatred and Country has "assumed the strange feeling of mingled fear and friendship." Now we do believe, that there is some real friendship, somethings of the warmth of relationship, felt by numbers of enlightened Englishmen towards the United States; and that from the prevalence of this feeling among the wise and manly part of the nation, it is affected, for fashion's sake, by others who do not feel it. But the American would do well to cease flattering themselves, that the Englishman who is weakest in intellect and spirit, has ever yet suffered one particle of fear to mingle with his sentiment of friendship (whether that friendship be well or ill merited) towards the United States. If the stupidity or carelessness of our Ministers has given the Republic advantages by treaty, to which by war she had not been entitled, there is nothing easier than to mend our hand at negociating; while at fighting, should (which God forbid!) an unfortunate necessity for such an appeal be again imposed upon us from the same quarter, we respectfully hope that we have not furnished friends nor enemies with much solid cause for "contempt."—Times.

Ireland.

A prosecution has been issued by the Crown against Mr. Shiel, for the treasonable and seditious tendency of the speech, delivered by him in Doublin, on the subject of foreign invasion.

It is understood that Shiel, the Irish Barrister is to be put on his trial for some ultraviolence in one of his recent harangues. "This," says Mr. O'Connell, "will make him dearer to his countrymen than ever." So it may; but it will depend on the result of the trial, and the magnitude of the sentence, whether it may not be found that such "dearness" may be bought too dear. The orator himself defends his violence of speech, by adducing his moderation in act. "I shall always support measures of a temperate character, (he says) but I shall not cease to deliver strong sentiments in a strong way." Did Mr Shiel never read Æsop's very applicable fable of the Trumpeter? "Why would you punish me?" said that windy functionary; "what do I do, but merely blow the trumpet? I never fight, not I." They hanged him though, and he well deserved it. The sentiments of violence, while he is more contemptible, is also more criminal, than the ignorant and abused tool.—Edinburgh Weekly Journal.

Foreign Intelligence.

SPAIN.

Three of the English ships of the line that were in the Tagus have sailed to return to England.

The Madrid Gazete of 25th January contains a Decree of the Princess Regent of Portugal, ordering the Minister of War to dismiss from the Portuguese army all the Spaniards serving in it.

Madrid dates are to the 2d of February inclusive. The King has ordered a separate list to be made out of all the officers, either absent or on unlimited furlough, or retired, who were in the Royalist Volunteers; and that these officers are to be paid as regularly as possible by the local authorities.

RUSSIA AND PERSIA.

St. Petersburg papers are to the 17th of January. They contain some intelligence of the operations in Georgia. It appears that the Persians have entrenched themselves in the impenetrable ravines and defiles of their frontier, and consequently hostilities must be suspended till the return of spring, when the war will be renewed with great vigor on the part of Russia, unless in the mean time a peace should be concluded through the mediation of England.

United States.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas by the sixth section of an Act of Congress, entitled "An act to Regulate the commercial intercourse between the United States and certain British Colonial ports," which was approved on the first day of March, in the year of our Lord 1823, it is enacted "that this act, unless repealed, altered or amended, by Congress, shall be and continue in force so long as the above enumerated British colonial ports shall be open to the admission of the vessels of the United States, conformably to the provisions of the British act of Parliament, of the twenty-fourth of June last, being the forty-fourth chapter of the Acts of the third year of George the fourth; But if at any time the trade and intercourse between the United States and all or any of the above enumerated British Colonial ports, authorized by the said act of Parliament, should be prohibited by a British Order in Council, or by act of Parliament, then, from the day of the date of such Order in Council, or act of Parliament, or from the time that the same shall commence to be in force, proclamation to that effect having been made by the President of the United States, each and every provision of this act, so far as the same shall apply to the intercourse between the United States and the above enumerated British Colonial ports, in British vessels, shall cease to operate in their favor; and each and every provision of the Act concerning Navigation, approved on the eighteenth of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, and of the act supplementary thereto, approved on the fifteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, shall revive and be in full force."

And whereas by an act of the British Parliament, which passed on the fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord 1825, entitled "an act to repeal the several laws relating to the customs," the said act of Parliament of the 24th June, 1824, was repealed; and by another act of the British Parliament, passed on the fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord 1825 in the sixth year of the reign of George the Fourth, entitled "an act to regulate the trade of the British possessions abroad," and by an order of his Britanic Majesty in Council, bearing date the 27th July, 1826, the trade and intercourse authorised by the aforesaid act of Parliament, of the 24th June, 1822, between the United States and the greater part of the said British colonial ports therein enumerated, have been prohibited upon and from the first day of December last past, and the contingency has hereby arisen on which the President of the United States was authorised by the sixth section aforesaid of the act of Congress of 1st March, 1823, to issue a proclamation to the effect therein mentioned.

Now, therefore I, John Quincy Adams, President of the United States of America, do hereby declare and proclaim that the trade and intercourse authorised by the said act of Parliament of the 14th June, 1824, between the United States and the British Colonial ports enumerated in the aforesaid act of Congress of the 1st March, 1823, have been, and are, upon and from the first day of December, 1826, by the aforesaid two several acts of Parliament of the 5th July 1825, and by the aforesaid British Order in Council of the 27th day of July, 1826 prohibited.

Given under my hand, at the City of Washington, this 17th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1827, and the fifty-first of the independence of the United States.

Communications.

SIR,

Mr. Fothergill, the Member for Durham and a Magistrate of nine years' standing, in his Communication to you has thought proper to call my letter "as errant a tissue of Falsehood as ever was engendered in the heart of profligate and abandoned man." It is easy for that gentleman to make broad assertions—but I ask him if it is in his power to point out a single sentence in that paper which has not truth for its basis Let him compare the facts I have mentioned with the occurrences of the meeting and the speeches which he made on the occasion—and the imputation of falsehood will fall back upon himself. I have looked over my former letter several times and the strongest expressions I find in it are these. "He wants to introduce a new kind of allegiance which you might put on or off as you do your Coat." He would have the people fight the King's battles if it suited them—if it suited them betray the cause of the King." I did not, nor do I now, give these words as Mr. Fothergill's, but as the natural inference to be drawn from what he said.—Speaking of the Bill he called it an infamous Law—he said that it would bring ruin on those persons whose rights it pretended to protect—it confined the people to this little corner of the earth and demanded their Allegiance "for ever"—that after having taken the oath if they should be found in arms against the King they would be hanged as traitors.—He complained of this as a hardship, as an insufferable hardship, that would be likely to bring civil war into the land and separate the Colony from the Parent state. Let me ask Mr. Fothergill if he did not make these statements—I have a host of most respectable witnesses to prove them. I will now answer the sum justified in the conclusions which I drew from these statements. The Parliament has a right to make any laws it thinks proper for the good of the whole Empire, or the Petitioners may remonstrate against them, but they have no right to dictate to the Legislature. The Parliament has a right to declare that no person shall be a Member for Durham that he does not like, or to legal measures as speedily as in how honesty.

"There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats,
For I am armed so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me as the idle wind
Which I respect not."

For my name which he demands so loudly I gave it in full length in my former letter—if it does not suit his honor I cannot help it—I am too rough for his utterance, he must blame my ancestors who will answer for it—as I am about to proceed to England, where I suppose Mr. Fothergill will soon proceed with his Petitions, I have farther to say to me he may hear of me, at Messrs. Holenstenfelt, Merchants, Charing Cross, London.

I am
Sir
Your most Obedient Servant,
SCHNACKENBERGER.

If any of the Petitioners had read the Despatches—proposed Statutes—and other documents relating to the question, so far from a disposition to regard them in any other light than British acts, they would have been discovered that the utmost solicitude prevailed to confirm them as such, and that the "new discovery," (as the Constitutional exposition of the Law by the Judges of England is impertinently termed) is not so novel as they imagined, and is now, to the greater readiness then had been shewn to prevent that "discovery" operating any injury or inconvenience to them. Again, how could they "have indulged more than a hope" that "a simple and comprehensive enactment" would "confirm one question of Allegiance for ever." When they stoutly maintained that the new discovery was no discovery, and that they required not the healing aid of any Statute to help the past, or provide for the future—and when a general Act, simple and comprehensive, open to all, but otherwise to none, is proposed, had not the Government more than a right to refuse it would be received in the spirit with which it was offered? But it seems the Provincial Government "embarrassed the House—the Constitutional discretion of the House," with "certain despatches." The House has seen no? or is this a new discovery of the Petitioners, not visible to the shorter sighted champions in the House. A "discovery" too of "a new construction" of "the Constitutional discretion" of the House; for the despatches are nothing more or less than the sentiments of His Majesty, officially conveyed by his Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, upon a subject (Naturalization) which being matter of grace and favor, Constitutionally, and by His Prerogative, properly should spring from the Throne. It is clear at any rate that the "discoveries" are mutual, and doubtless His Majesty will be highly pleased with the discovery of the Petitioners, and hereafter govern himself accordingly. Is not this Petition designed to embarrass the Constitutional discretion "of the King"? Then it would seem that these despatches were "threatning in their tone" and "dictatorial in their style"; but the monstrous passages are generously concealed, lest His Majesty's faithful Commons should be overcome with indignation at language so humiliating to the Assembly, and so grievously tormenting to their humble Petitioners. Worse than all, "the House," it seems, "submitted to pass a Bill" after the Speaker had been considerate enough, good man, to send it back among the patriots time and again, after the Bill had once been actually thrown out and restored to the order of the day, by the voice of the Patriots, who "submitted" to revive it upon the mere motion of Mr. Rolph, who "submitted" to move its revival. I think this in the opposition looks rather absurd; and the language of the Petitioners tends not a little to slander the House, independent of the way in which the Bill itself is spoken of. Doubtless the British House of Commons will be astonished and indignant that the Petitioners should presume to slander and libel the majority of the infallible House of Assembly. Methinks I hear Mr. Hume vauntingly holding forth: How dare the Petitioners censure or calumniate the majority of that House? How dare the Aliens go about signing libels and collecting slanders upon that honorable body? I never will submit that the majority of the House or Assembly of Upper Canada shall be so slandered and traduced. The Radicals—hear, hear, hear—cheers!!!! Mr. Rolph should be sent home to vindicate the majority of the House at any rate, if he cannot submit to vindicate the Bill; you know he will not allow any Petitioners to slander the majority, at least he would not long remain in power, such principles are not changeable as the Seasons. Further, we find the Bill is distressing to their feelings, because they are called upon "openly to declare themselves subjects, without longer living in a questionable enjoyment of usurped rights," though offered to "so confirmatory privileges to their interests," not as concerning their rights or properties, for they are most expressly secured; but because they are to be cut short of a double allegiance, and to be considered as subjects of the United States. It requires some ingenuity to discover how, if they have been so long in Canada, many half a Century, and if all design to continue permanently therein) how, I say, their interests can be ruined by a proceeding that to ordinary minds seems to confirm their privileges to them; all this, too cruel to relate, is "wholly at variance with former instructions." Former instructions which the House formerly "submitted" to "discover," required no attention, gave no authority; and if they did, that its exercise was not required: at any rate, these latter despatches did not embarrass the discretion of the House, so the House does not uniformly "submit" to despatches.

By this Bill the Half-Century Petitioners, as they call themselves, it is complained, must register as Aliens. Suppose they all registered as Chinese; would that make them such? Or were not Chinese? Does any man think that registering as an Alien can make him an Alien? Suppose that Lord Bathurst himself were to visit Canada, and by way of securing beyond question his new, the greater readiness then had been shewn to prevent that "discovery" operating any injury or inconvenience to them. Again, how could they "have indulged more than a hope" that "a simple and comprehensive enactment" would "confirm one question of Allegiance for ever." When they stoutly maintained that the new discovery was no discovery, and that they required not the healing aid of any Statute to help the past, or provide for the future—and when a general Act, simple and comprehensive, open to all, but otherwise to none, is proposed, had not the Government more than a right to refuse it would be received in the spirit with which it was offered? (To be continued.)

(For the U. E. Loyalist.)

Wednesday, 21st March, being appointed by the Magistrates, Clergy, Half-pay Officers, and other gentlemen of the Bathurst District, a day of mourning for the unlookedfor decease of His Royal Highness the DUKE OF YORK, at day light the flag was hoisted half mast high in the Town of Perth, and other preparations made for solemnizing the occasion, which passed off in the following order. The Rev. Michael Harris, Rector of Perth, having been requested to preach a Funeral Sermon, a great concourse of people had assembled at an early hour. Two field pieces were placed on an eminence near the middle of the Town; and under the direction of Captain Mason of the Militia Artillery Corps, minute guns commenced firing at 12 o'clock (noon) and continued one hour. The day was calm and beautiful.—The loud roar of cannon, being fired sixty times at regular intervals—the solemn pace of the Church bell, heard by almost every inhabitant, wafted on the wings of the wind, the awful communication, that, "there has fallen this day, in our Israel, a Prince and a great man." The Officers and hardy veterans of the Military settlement pressing forward to the Church, to pay their last tribute of respect to their much beloved Commander-in-Chief; with a slow pace, and a countenance that bespoke the grandeur of the occasion, the Rev. Michael Harris, Barron's Lodge" of Masons, in deep mourning, moving in tardy procession at the summons of those loud messengers of mortality—the loyal Orange Association, to the number of nearly one hundred, marching in rear of the Masonic craft, with muffled flag, and all the insignia of their order decked in the sable garments of the grave—added a solemn grandeur to the scene, and reinforced it peculiarly, though mournfully interesting. At one o'clock service commenced; the Church being then crowded to such an excess, that they could hardly find room even in the aisles. The pulpit and desks were decorated with black. The Rev. Michael Harris, assisted by the Rev. Rossington Elms, performed the service; and the Rev. John Wenham of Brockville preached a Sermon from 2 Samuel xiv. 14 "For we must needs die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again: neither doth God respect any person." From these words the Rev. Gentleman forcibly and with much pathos and sublimity; and on alluding to the mournful event on which they had convened, he pronounced a high eulogium of His Royal Highness with such a masterly hand, and so feelingly succeeded to draw tears from almost every eye. He represented him as the widow's stay—the orphan's protector—the friend of the friendless—the soldier's friend, and a hand to relieve human misery, in what form soever it met his view. The proud and unrivaled national superiority of military discipline, at which the British soldier has ever arrived, he ascribed solely to the wise and prudent superintendance of the Royal Duke; and then leading the minds of his audience to the reflection that that heart, which once beat high for his Country's welfare and honor, which swelled with pity for the orphan, whose father's blood had been lavished in buoying up the oak of British liberty; or overflowed with philanthropy for the widow's soldier, was now motionless and chill in the cold damps of death One simultaneous feeling of sorrow appeared to diffuse itself through the whole congregation. The Rev. Gentleman's himself was visibly affected. Not a sob was heard throughout with the most marked attention. Sermon being ended, both Lodges marched to one Lodge room, in the same order as they had proceeded to Church.

YORK, U.C. SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 1827.

There is no additional Intelligence from Europe.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR and Family left York for Stamford on Wednesday morning last, on board the Steam Boat Queenston. His Excellency's departure, was announced by a Salute from the Garrison.

The last Gore Gazette, speaking of the Naturalization Bill, says:

"It is, gratifying to observe, that whatever erroneous impressions many persons may have imbibed —that however highly the public mind may have been excited, and may even yet, in many instances, be excited—those impressions, and that public excitement are evidently yielding to the slow but sure progress of truth:—as far as respects our own neighbourhood, we speak with perfect confidence when we say, that the Petition, and the Bill, have ceased to be in a greater or less degree applicable to the whole of this section of the province."

The President of the United States has issued his Proclamation, prohibiting the Trade with the British possessions, "from and after the first day of December last." It does not affect Upper Canada. The American papers confidently expect, that the negotiation now pending in London, will terminate in an amicable adjustment of the subject. A Copy of the Proclamation will be seen in another column of our paper.

EMIGRATION.—This subject will, it is said, be again brought under the consideration of the British Parliament, during its present Session—an important debate is expected. From a paragraph in this days paper it will be seen that the attention of the British Public has been directed to this important subject, in a Pamphlet by Dr. Strachan, which is highly approved. The exertions and talents of Dr. Strachan are indefatigably employed in promoting the best interests of the Country, and we have no doubt that in applying them to this question, the most beneficial results may be anticipated.

Errors and misrepresentations in Public Journals corrected—The last Colonial Advocate is noticing the reward of $2000 now offered by His Excellency Governor Clinton, of the State of New York, licenced after examination by the Medical Board, or upon the production of a Diploma Licence Commission or warrant as hereinbefore provided, stating that they are acquainted with such applicant, and that he is in their opinion competent to practice Physic Surgery and Midwifery or either of them, the Governor Lieutenant Governor or person Administering the Government may grant to him a Licence to practice Physic Surgery and Midwifery or either of them conformably to the last mentioned Certificate in the same manner as if the said applicant had obtained a Certificate from the Board mentioned in the said second clause of the said recited Act passed in the fifty ninth year of the Reign of His late Majesty.

V. And be it &c.—That it shall and may be lawful for any person who has been appointed a member of the Board mentioned in the second clause of the said recited Act passed in the 59th year of His late Majesty's Reign, or any person while employed on actual service in His Majesty's Naval or Military service as Physician or Surgeon to practice Physic Surgery or Midwifery in this Province, without any Licence.

VI. And be it &c.—That it shall not be lawful for any person, not being as aforesaid a Member of the Medical Board, or not being Licenced as aforesaid, or not having been heretofore Licenced by any Medical Board, or not being actually employed as a Physician or Surgeon in His Majesty's Naval or Military Service to practice Physic Surgery or Midwifery in this Province for hire gain or hope of reward. Provided that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to prevent or prohibit any female from practicing Midwifery in this Province, or to require such female to take out such Licence as aforesaid.

VII. And be it &c.—That the practice of Physic Surgery or Midwifery, for hire gain or hope of reward by any person not Licenced as aforesaid, or notbeing actually employed as a Physician or Surgeon in His Majesty's Naval or Military service, shall be a misdemeanor and may be prosecuted and punished as any other misdemeanor can be, and that upon the trial of any person charged with such misdemeanor the burthen of proof as to the licence or right of the person tried to practice Physic Surgery or Midwifery, in this Province shall lie upon the Defendant but no prosecution shall be commenced for such misdemeanor after one year from the offence committed, and no person convicted of such misdemeanor shall be sentenced therefor to a longer period of imprisonment than Six Months or to a greater fine than the sum of Twenty-five Pounds.

VIII. And be it &c.—That it shall be lawful for the Private Secretary of the Governor Lieutenant Governor or Person Administering the Government of this Province to ask demand and receive for any licence granted under the provisions of this Act of and from the person receiving such Licence, the sum of Twenty Shillings; and that it shall be lawful for the Clerk of the Peace to ask demand and receive for drawing up and signing any Certificate under the provisions of this Act, of and from the person receiving such Cerificate, the sum of Five Shillings.

CHAP. VII.

An Act to declare what Fees shall be received by Justices of the Peace for the duties therein mentioned.

[Passed 17, February 1827.]

WHEREAS it is expedient that the Fees to be taken by Justices of the Peace for the services hereinafter mentioned should be ascertained and authorized by Law.

Be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the Fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province;" ' and by the authority of the same, That from and after the first day of November next, the following Fees, and no more, shall be taken from the parties prosecuting, by Justices of the Peace in this Province, or by their Clerks, for the duties and services hereinafter mentioned, that is to say:—

For an Information and Warrant for Apprehension for an assault or other misdemeanor, Three shillings and nine pence.

Discharge of the Defendant, One shilling and three pence.

Information and Warrant for surety of the Peace, Three shillings and nine pence.

Discharge of the Defendant, One shilling and three pence.

Every Recognizance, Two shillings and six pence.

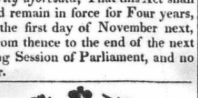
Each Information, besides that of the Complainant, One shilling and three pence.

For every Warrant of Commitment, Two shillings and six pence.

II And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the costs to be charged in cases of conviction under penal Statutes, when the Fees are not expressly prescribed by any Statute, shall be as follows, that is to say:—

For Information and Warrant of Summons, Three shillings and nine pence.

For every Subpœna to a witness, six pence.



For every Conviction under a Penal Statute, Seven shillings and six pence.

For every Warrant to levy a Penalty, Two shillings and six pence.

For making up every Record of conviction when the same is required to be returned to the Sessions or on Certiorari, Ten shillings.

Provided also nevertheless, That in such cases as admit a summary proceeding before a single Justice of the Peace, and wherein no higher Penalty than Three Pounds can be imposed, the sum of Two shillings and six pence only, shall be charged for the Conviction, and Two shillings and six pence for the Warrant to levy the Penalty.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be and remain in force for Four years, from the first day of November next, and from thence to the end of the next ensuing Session of Parliament, and no longer.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Founds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. 1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All cotrespondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservatiofls of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing brough the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of wh. will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

Kingston, January 30th, 1827.—37 tf for the discovery of Wm. Morgan, would have "the inhabitants of Upper Canada" believe, that there is something very mysterious with respect to "the Government Press on this subject.

"Even the Government Press of this Capital" says the Advocate, is "silent as the Grave."

We notice the article merely to say that this is not fact. The Government Press of this Capital offers a reward of £50, to any person who may be able to afford information respecting the said Wm. Morgan.

The Advocate had better remain "silent as the Grave," than make representations, so completely at variance with truth.

Our readers will find in the Gazette of this day, the Address voted at a Public Meeting at Port Hope, on the subject of the Naturalization Bill, with His Excellency's reply; and we have no doubt they will be read with interest, although we are aware, as some of our brother Journalists have assured us, that the excitement so ungenerously raised against this measure, has very much subsided. Certainly nothing can be more plain, candid, and intelligible, than the assurances which His Excellency has given the inhabitants of the District of Newcastle. The possible effect of the very silly opposition which is made at the instance of a few individuals is alluded to, and if abundance of evidence had not been afforded on other occasions, it is clear that no one need any longer be in ignorance of the sentiments of the Government upon this question. With those who do not admit their justice, it would be idle to enter into discussion.

A public dinner was given by a numerous and respectable party of gentlemen at Cobourg, in the district of Newcastle, on Monday the 19th inst. to the Rev. William Macaulay, as a parting testimony of respect to him on his leaving the Parish. An excellent repast was put on table at 5 o'clock, and the chair taken by Robert Henry, Esq. supported by Captain Boswell, R. N. as croupier. After "the King" and some other patriotic toasts were drank, John Covert, Esq. rose, and in a neat and very appropriate address, expressed the regret of the meeting at parting with an individual so highly esteemed as their guest, and to whose exertions they were so deeply indebted for the building the first Episcopal Church in the District. He concluded with proposing Mr. M's health, which was drank with the warmest applause.

In returning thanks, Mr. Macaulay paid a high compliment to the District generally, and particularly to those among whom he had so long resided. A feeling of regret seemed to weigh on every mind—on the one part, that of losing a pastor justly esteemed for his public and private virtues—on the other, on account of leaving a neighbourhood in which, during a long residence, he had received so many proofs of respect and attachment.

Poetry.

A FATHER'S GRIEF.

To trace the bright rose fading fast,
From a fair daughter's cheek;
To read upon her pensive brow
The fears she will not speak;
To mark that deep and sudden flush,
So beautiful and brief,
Which tells the progress of decay—
This is a Father's grief.

When languor, from her joyless cough,
Has scared sweet sleep away,
And heaviness, that comes with night,
Departs not with the day;
To meet the fond endearing smile,
That seeks, with false relief,
A while to calm his bursting heart—
This is a Father's grief.

To listen where her gentle voice
Its welcome music shed,
And find within his lonely halls
The silence of the dead;
To look unconsciously for her,
The chosen and the chief
Of earthly joys—and look in vain—
This is a Father's grief.

To stand beside the sufferer's couch,
While life is ebbing fast;
To mark that once illumin'd eye
With death's dull film o'ercast;—
To watch the struggle of the frame
When earth has no relief,
And hopes of heaven are breath'd in vain—
This is a Fathers grief.

And not when that dread hour is past,
And life is pain no more—
Not when the closed tomb has clos'd
O'er her so lov'd before;
Not then does kind oblivion come
To lend his woes relief,
But with him to the grave he bears
A Fathers rooted grief.

For, Oh! to dry a mother's tears,
Another babe may bloom:
But what remains on earth for him
Whose last is in the tomb?
To think his child is blest above—
To hope their parting brief,—
These, these may soothe—but death alone
Can heal a Father's grief

Miscellaneous.

ON CONTENTMENT.

There is scarcely a situation in life totally exempt from occasional recurrences of uneasiness and discontent. Equanimity of temper, and health of body, wait upon eventful circumstances and pleasing sensations, with the same certainty that misfortunes and disappointments ruffle our humours and agitate our frames. The naturally gay must sometimes feel sad, and the grave man will often smile under the sunshine of life: thus he who acts from the most correct principle would require more fortitude than humanity can boast, and more firmness of resolve than has ordinarily fallen to man's lot, to maintain undeviatingly the same strictness or austerity in practice of which he approves in theory.

"Give me that man
Who is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core; ay, in my heart of hearts."

Perverted indeed must his judgment be, who will not admit the wisdom and propriety of resolving, and striving to exercise the faculty of reason in overcoming the affections of the mind, and establishing a habit of content and endurance under every event of an adverse nature which can befall us on earth. It manifestly is the great end of life, and the proudest spirit that a man can display, to school himself into contentment.

"What is this world? Thy school, O Misery!
And he who has not learnt to suffer,
Knows not how to live."

I apprehend it will be too often found, that the discontented man is a prey to physical evils or constitutional disorders, and that mental and bodily afflictions generally beget and nourish each other; while on the other hand a proper control over the inclinations will in most cases master the diseased action of the one, and chase away spleen and dissatisfaction from the other. Not even the severest affliction or greatest disappointments and crosses in life, can give a splenetic or discontented sensation to minds duly skilled in the school of self-examination. And an uniform complacency will beget that strength of intellect essential to the task of obliging ourselves to be contented, while every moment of our lives will thus become a happy and blessed portion of our existence.

Indeed, the prospect of long life will be rendered more certain by the absence of those conflicting events and feelings, which, when yielded to, but shorten our days, and deprive us of every real enjoyment. We insensibly become, by such habits, industrious, economical, and happy; our associates will respect us for the virtues we thus display; and the felicity which our example consequently disseminates around us, will afford to us pleasing retrospections and delightful anticipations. We to the man, who, borne down by the neglect of himself, views the conduct of others with whom he is connected through a discoloured medium! His thoughts must be to the happiness of his mind, as daggers to his body; and the discontent to which he voluntarily condemns himself, is like a hell to his heart and is the bane of his existence.

Reflection will hardly allow us to deny, that, to order our lives and conversations aright, constitutes the wisdom of our being; and the same train of thought will convince us, that health of body and soundness of mind attend upon the exercise of a wise control over our passions and inclinations. In one word, the slightest deviation from the paths of virtue and honour, is attended with as serious consequences to the mind and happiness of an individual, as a hazardous exposure of the body is with danger or destruction to it; and where nothing important or laudable can be obtained or achieved, the greatest judgment will ever be evinced in abstaining from indulgences, how harmless soever they appear in themselves.

Moreover, the exercise of discretion will strengthen, quicken, and correct the operations of reason. That distinguishing faculty of man, viz. the power of reasoning, will again, in its turn, from being repeatedly called into action with an honourable and happy effect, transmit a share of its benign and godlike nature and strength to the other faculties, and communicate a cheerful and animating sensation to all the powers of the understanding. Thus I maintain, that how great pleasurable the indulgence of our feelings and inclinations, reason ought never for a moment to be allowed to sleep; for, if it be once lulled, and the impetus of our constitution obtain the government of our actions, though our enjoyment may be unbounded, it will destroy our cheerfulness, if it should at all arrive at the point of satisfying us, will be but transient and deceitful.

The mind may for a while bear with such artificial nourishment, but time which trieth all things, will break up the delusion like the bursting from a volcano, or the gloomy progress of a dreadful storm. Our intellects will then be left a prey to the desolation and discontent incident to a neglect of the proper cultivation of reason, and we shall learn, perhaps when too late to amend, the wisdom of a due admixture of that noble faculty in the minutest affairs of life.

I apprehend it will appear from the foregoing remarks, that reason produces cheerfulness, and cheerfulness is evidently akin to contentment. To arrive at that happy temper of mind which characterizes man as his Maker intends him to be existent on earth, little else is necessary than the proper cultivation of reason. Yet some men, from a too long neglect of this, acquire habits, energies, and sentiments, at variance with its judicious exercise, and consequently destructive of its heavenborn effects. Before such men, then, can hope to attain this glorious summit of existence, they must divest themselves of such previous acquirements and standing prejudices as hinder the establishments of fresh principles, for first impressions are the liveliest and most lasting, and ought therefore to be the wisest and best selected. I would thence infer, that, of all studies, that of reasoning closely and clearly should primarily be made an attractive object to the mind of youth; and, although at first its difficulties may make it to most men not a little disagreeable, it will ultimately become the most engaging, and produce the most permanent and beneficial effects. It will inhibit from the mind all seeds of discontent, and encircle this earthly pilgrimage with a radiance of placidity, delight, and enjoyment, analogical to the felicity anticipated in the realms of eternal day.

Summary.

The late Duke of York.— An emergent or Special General Meeting of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England was held at the Freemason's Hall on Wednesday, Feb, 7, the Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master on the throne. An address of Condolence, couched in terms of sympathy and genuine masonic feeling, was, on the motion of two Brothers of the Lodge, unanimously adopted, and resolved to be presented to their Royal Brother the King, on the death of the late Duke of York, in whose lamented demise the ancient and loyal Order of Masons has sustained a severe loss.

A supplement to the London Gazette, which was published on Monday, is entirely filled with addresses of condolence to the King on the death of the Duke of York.

The 33 mites between Liverpool and Manchester are performed by coaches in two hours and three quarters! Half a minute is allowed for changing horses, at which eight persons are employed, four to remove the horses, and four to place fresh horses to the coach.—Leeds Mercury.

At a meeting by deputation of almost all the Emigration Societies at Lanark and Renfrewshire, held on Thuesday evening, it was resolved that they would adhere to their former resolution of abstaining from soliciting subscriptions, till the decision of Parliament was known on the provisions for emigration; and they also agreed to solicit all the outstanding Societies to co-operate with them, and take part in the discussions which might arise from the correspondence of their agents in London, who are to attend the House of Common Committee, which will likely sit on the 15th inst.

It is reported that all the settlements to the leeward of Sierra Leone will be immediately abandoned, and that the rendezvous for the squadrons for the suppression of the Slave Trade will be the island of Fernando Po, in the Bight of Benin, which is represented to be very healthy.

Emigration to Canada.—The following, which is the leading article in the Courier of Feb. 14, shows that emigration is an object of primary consideration at this time with his Majesty's Government. The personal exertions and influence of Dr. Strachan will doubtless give an accelerated impetus to this great national object.—Albion.

"A motion stands in the Order Book of the House of Commons, for to-morrow, to which we are desirous of directing public attention. It is that of Mr. Wilmot Horton, for re-appointing the Emigration Committee, whose Report of their inquiries and proceedings last Session, conducted under the personal superintendence of Mr. Horton himself, contained such a mass of valuable information. This Report, which consisted of nearly four hundred folio pages, besides not being accessible to every one who might feel deeply interested in the subject, was of too voluminous a character to be generally read. We are glad, therefore, to find, that the Report itself has been published, without abridgement, accompanied by a brief analysis of the evidence and appendix, in a compact octavo volume of about two hundred pages; thus placing within the reach of the public, generally, all the more essential parts of this most important document.

We observe, also, that Dr. Strachan, Archdeacon of York Upper Canada, has just given to the world a pamphlet addressed to Mr. Wilmot Horton, entitled Remarks on Emigration from the United Kingdom. In this pamphlet, Dr. Strachan, adverting to the Report of the Committee, observes, that "It contains so much important and various information, that every means should be adopted for promoting its circulation; but," continues the writer, "as the copies printed are limited in number, and in appearance not of the most attractive form, it is within the reach of very few readers—and still fewer are disposed to wade through the mass of evidence which it contains. A summary, therefore, of the Report, condensing the more important parts of the evidence, and showing the principal facts which it clearly proves, may not be a barren service, and may win the public attention to a subject which involves the most momentous interests, and on which the peace and happiness of society particularly depend. The following facts appear completely established:—

1. That there is a redundant population in the United Kingdom.

2. That the Colonies to which this redundant population may be sent, are well adapted to their reception offering good neighbourhood, health, independence, and even opulence.

3. That the experiments made, both by Government and individuals, have been eminently successful.

4. The pauper emigrants will, after seven years, be able to repay, with ease, the expense of their emigration and settlement.

Dr. Strachan then proceeds to prove, and, we think, successfully, that all these propositions are well founded, both by the evidence produced before the Committee, and by facts coming within the range of his own personal observation. We have not room to-day, to extract his reasonings, and the circumstances on which they are founded; but we very strongly recommend the perusal of this pamphlet to every one who feels any interest, however remote, in the question which it discusses. One of the concluding paragraphs we must lay before our readers, because though brief, it enforces an important truth. "If it be asked," says Dr. Strachan, "why there is such a clamour against emigration as a national measure? I answer, that it is a question which has never yet been carefully examined: its philosophy has not even been touched upon, nor its consequences, as a State measure unfolded. It presents itself as an untrodden field for the political economist who will take common sense along with him, well deserving his most serious attention."

We look forward, with confidence, to the discussion of to-morrow night, as one of the occasions on which the individual who has taken up this subject with so much honorable zeal and unquestioned ability, will develope some of those philosophical views of it, to which Dr. Strachan refers.

DISPUTES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES and Great Britain as to our Colonial Trade and the Navigation Laws.

(From Bell's Weekly Messenger, Jan. 4.)

The merits of the case, as now agitated between the United States and Great Britain, the reader will collect from the following facts:

England, in 1822, opened, partially, the trade between the United States and our West India Islands; for the 3d Geo. IV. c. 44, permitted certain enumerated articles to be imported, subject to be fixed duties, into certain specified ports in the West India Islands, from any foreign Country; and the same Act gave authority to export to any other Colony, or to the United Kingdom, the articles which should be so imported. This privilege, though extended in name to all the countries of America, was, in reality, a boon to the United States alone; for the other States and Provinces of America had nothing that deserved the name of a Commercial Marine. The permission thus given to the United States to trade with our Colonies in their own ships was an indulgence which they had no right to demand; and which, in fact was not granted to the subjects of any European Power.

What return did the United States make to us for this relaxation of our laws in their favour? In the month of March immediately following, they passed a law, imposing an Alien duty of ninety-four centimes per ton, on British vessels coming from the West Indies, and an additional duty of ten per cent on goods imported in them. This enactment was, in itself, as ungracious and unfair as could be devised; but, in order to make it still more objectionable, the law provided, that these alien duties should continue in force—not until the ships of the United States were admitted into our Colonies on the same terms as our own ships—not until the commodities of the United States were admitted upon as favourable terms as those of any foreign country—but, until the goods, wares, and merchandize of the United States should be admitted upon the same terms with the goods, wares, and merchandise of Great Britain and Ireland! America, forsooth, was to be on the same footing in some of the markets of our Empire, as ourselves were! She forgot her own tariff, with its constantly augmenting imposts; she forgot, that, if she expected us to admit her produce into our markets unburdened by any duties which our own subjects did not pay, it would be well for her to set us an example, by repealing the duties on the importation of cotton and woolen manufactures, and by allowing the cotton of our East Indian possessions, and the sugars of our Colonies, to find their way unimpeded to the markets of New Orleans and New York. Had we advanced any such pretension, the President would have exhibited against its extravagance; yet, can he assign any reason, why if American goods are to be imported into Jamaica on the same terms as English goods, the sugars of Jamaica should not be imported into New-York or Boston on the same terms as the sugars of Louisiana?

We met this proceeding on the part of the United States, not by concession, but by a retaliatory measure, imposing equivalent duties on American ships entering the ports of our Colonies. Negociations had been begun upon the subject: but these were cut short, by the peremptory declaration of the American Envoy, that no proposal would be acceded to, unless we should consent to put American goods, and wares on the very same footing as our own in the Colonial markets. It was impossible that we should, under any circumstances, submit to so extravagant a demand, and matters, therefore, remained in that state till 1825.

In 1825, our commercial laws underwent a further change. The indulgence which the Act of 1822 had given to American vessels, was extended to the ships of all friendly States. Foreign ships were permitted to import into our Colonies, any commodities, (with the exception of a few prohibited articles,) being the growth or produce of the country to which the ship belonged, and to export the produce of the colonies to any country except the United Kingdom and its dependencies. Thus a still greater scope was given to the intercourse of America with our colonies than had been permitted by the Act of 1822. Her unfriendliness produced no effect on our policy; it did not incline us to any concession; it did not even put us out of humour with the liberal and enlarged system on which we were acting.

The Act of 1825 contained a clause (6 Geo. IV. c. 75, s. 8.) that it should be lawful for His Majesty to prohibit the intercourse with any country in Europe, having possessions in America or the West Indies, which did not confer on our ships the privileges which we, by that Act, granted to foreign ships. By a subsequent Act of the same Session (6th Geo. IV. c. 114, s. 4.) it was declared that the privileges of intercourse with our Colonies should not be enjoyed by the ships of countries not having colonial possesions, which did not place our commerce on the footing of the most favoured nation, unless His Majesty should deem it expedient, by an Order in Council, to make an exception in their favour.

Such is the state of facts between the two countries; and we ask, of what had the United States to complain? They may enjoy, if they like, a freedom of trade with our West India Islands larger than has been conceded to any other country; but they must not require us to throw these Colonies completely open; or demand of our Parliament to cancel in their favour all the rules and principles of our Navigation Laws. Concession must stop somewhere.

What America now asks, is,—to trade with the West Indies as she trades with Liverpool and London; or, in other words, as we trade with them, and that our colonies should be deemed precisely the same as if they were part of the soil of Great Britain. To this we reply,—trade with these colonies as the most favoured nation trades; but we cannot throw open the market altogether to you, and repeal the laws of many centuries in your favour; or strike the flag of the British marine to the American pennant.

OBSERVATIONS on the PETITION against the NATURALIZATION BILL.

(Concluded.)

The next grievance is that by "thus degrading themselves" they become "British Subjects only in Upper Canada," degrading themselves by taking the oath of fidelity which, every Member of the Assembly must degrade himself by repeating after every new election—degrading themselves by repeating that character which they have already "frequently confirmed under oath" now, if so why not once more? From which number does the degradation reckon? And "sealed with their blood"—was it a degradation so to seal it with their blood—was it a degradation in those days, if not why so in the present? Then as to the Local Privileges, that point has been already frequently answered. When they repair to Lower Canada or any other part of His Majesty's Dominions they will be provided for. Let them take no heed for that season, sufficient for the day is the evil thereof. But if a renunciation of Allegiance to the United States will either here or there "cover them with confusion" or "condemn them as Traitors," let them save their blushes by avoiding Registry, and avoid Treason by going back to the Land of Liberty.

Did not a Lawyer or two pen this petition? In what Statute or book of common Law do they find that simply Foreign Allegiance is treason in the United States. That exportation is Treason in this? It smells like a new discovery in the construction of the Law—both novel and absurd. I did not know before that a man by any simple Act here in time of peace could be considered a Traitor in the United States, but it seems otherwise, strange Land of Liberty that. What commiseration this passage of the Petition will excite in the House of Commons. They will picture to themselves the crimson suffusion of the Loyal American Canadian followed by the "stoss and wonting fanger of scorn" through the streets of the Union—they will fancy all his fears of the gallows as a self-condemned Traitor—they will assuredly intercede to save him—they will doubtlessly enter fully into the delicate sensibilities of such worthies as would feel degraded, covered with confusion, and as committing Treason, by being naturalized in one of His Majesty's finest Colonies; where they have lived, fattened and prospered, some of them say half a century. Why in the name of goodness did they come here if love for the "Lion" is so closely connected with treachery to the "Star spangled Banner."

Further it seems the poor creatures are "to be imprisoned in a manner" in Upper Canada —a very odd manner—a new system of imprisonment, People come from abroad to settle amongst us, want to be naturalized, and the moment we offer to comply—they say, they are destined to imprisonment, and as close Liberty. So people naturalized in the United States, are imprisoned in the very focus of Liberty. Englishmen are imprisoned in England—Frenchmen in France. Yet strange enough the Inhabitants of these countries have taken the liberty of roaming and settling themselves all over the world in a manner, "in a manner" is well put in to make the absurdities as indefinite as possible, granting people a free participation in all our rights and privileges in a manner, is an imprisonment in Upper Canada, in a manner. That opposition logic is in a manner, and after a very long consideration too. The poor petitioners are afraid they will not be allowed the benefit of the Ottawa Canal; would it could afford an transit for all their grievances and complaints! Pray would they contribute a shilling to open it? Would their friends in the Legislature contribute a shilling to carry it on? Did they not refuse? Let them answer this. Let them first aid and assist the Canal, and I will guarrantee its free enjoyment. How the House of Commons will stare at such powerful reasoning. Surely an opposition Lawyer drew up this petition. He is not void of "discovery" either—he has built upon something novel enough in the municipal Laws of the Land of Liberty, for it seems, that although they naturalize no one who does not swear Allegiance to them and abjure his Native Country; yet they hold such of their own Subjects who do so fit only for the Gibbet. I did not know that the Gibbet was in such common use there or that with them expatriation was so great a crime. I had heard their Laws sanctioned it—how strangely people are misinformed. Pray Gentlemen of the long Robe (for you should know best) where is this Law "registered"—where can an "Index" be found to this odious record?—It would seem also that those valiant heroes who fought and bled so freely last war are prudent in their courage nevertheless, and rove not through a long vista of years perceive another conflict, and dread the chance of being hanged and quartered. Let them (as they have lived to fight another day) repel the enemy, and they will not be hanged. If after fighting bravely, they should be caught and "covered with confusion" let them trust in the country which adopts them to save them from the gibbet. Do they forget that in the last war the Americans threatened to hang man for man if we executed our subjects captured on board their Ships or in their Fortresses, whether naturalized by them or not? Do they forget the Military orders issued on the occasion—and do they not know that England would equally protect them, and with far better reason? Did the contending parties hang and gibbet each other in the rebellion—did they do it in the last war—is it likely they will do it in the next? The Petition speaks the language of cowards; and the British Commons (a corps of gallant men) grants no refuge in concealment to such as fear to do or die.

The Report of the Legislative Council, which was last year despised, denied, and ridiculed, is now pressed into the service to prove the hardship of renouncing foreign Allegiance; the Report says, abjuring it under oath not required here. If the Petitioners mean to adopt that Report, well and good—take it all together, and then we shall know where to find them. But they shall not select and single out that part of the whole case; because, without the context, it cannot properly be understood. If the Petitioners feel the grievance "inconsistent with honor and probity, and suited only to the refuse of Society," then, though the Act pass, it passes not for conscience are not constrained to sully their purity by entering it; but then "mind" means to say, that inference can be drawn from the assertions or reasonings of the Council, then I say they do not understand them—indeed. I question if more than one or two of the Petitioners ever read this Report. It would open their eyes, more than this Petition will those of the British Commons.

The House of Commons is next informed that this Bill would operate as "a severe penal enactment." I thought it must have been a Bill of Pains and Penalties, "and that every man will be ruined who omits, from any cause, to comply therewith,"—but how ruined the House is not told, nor conjectured—nor. The idea of a Naturalization Bill, to which a person may become a party or not, just as he pleases, ruining any one, is what I call the quintessence of nonsense. One reason is intended as absurd as the conclusion it is meant to add to, that the persons of German extraction never will comply—and never be convinced that it is necessary. It is not a bad policy in the Petitioners to shift off their shoulders the odium of non-compliance, and place it upon the good-natured Germans. They as much as say they themselves will (if needs must be) comply; but they are sure the Germans never will. Is not this a discovery tending to slander the Germans? Ignorant as they would make the Germans to be, they know how to secure their own rights, and know their value as well as the Petitioners: and as to losing their Farms, there is the same law in a manner about Titles to Farms, except securing them; and let the Germans alone, they will secure themselves as well as other folks. I wish all persons were as peaceable and as well disposed as the Germans. Let me tell the Petitioners, that Germans are not quite so unanimous-Aliens. You ought to be ashamed to urge such false reasoning and gross fabrications upon the House of Commons. How dare you libel the Germans so? The Petitioners having waded through their long remonstrance, exultingly draw a little town-talk from the one hatched by the opposition.

Domestic.

Belleville, April 7, 1827.

Pursuant to adjournment, a Meeting was this day held at the house of Daniel Dulmage, innkeeper, which was previously ordered on the 28th ultimo, agreeable to an anonymous notice that expressed for its object, "To Petition against an Ignominious Alien Bill, which has recently been passed by a few deluded lunatics."

Several of the respectable inhabitants of the place deemed it their duty to attend in order to explain the Provisions of the Bill, and thereby prevent the absurd and erroneous impressions entertained by many on the subject. The Meeting having proceeded to the appointment of a Chairman and Secretary, Mr. Peter Vanalstine Bill being read, Thomas Coleman, Esq. explained the several parts thereof, and in a very appropriate manner addressed the Meeting. Some Resolutions were then proposed by the party at whose instance the Meeting was called, which were read, amidst a general tone of disapprobation, and not moved or seconded.

The following Resolutions were then proposed by Robert Smith, Esq. seconded by John Turnbull, Esq. and received by the Meeting with much satisfaction and decorum:—

Resolved, That the expressions above extracted, as forming the printed notice by which the adjourned Meeting was convened, are grossly indecorous and insulting—conveying a most infamous and shameful censure upon the Legislature of this Province, and therefore merit the unbounded contempt of all loyal and respectable persons.

Resolved, That this Meeting views with unfeigned gratitude, the benevolent disposition of His Majesty's Government towards this Colony, evinced in the Act of the Imperial Parliament, by which the Legislature of this Province has been made competent to pass an Act, whereby the invaluable privileges of natural born subjects may be extended to those who, by late decisions of the first legal authorities in England, have been pronounced Aliens.

Resolved, That this Meeting views with regret and abhorrence the attempts that are made in different parts of the Province, by unprincipled and designing persons, to misrepresent the intentions of Government in the question alluded to, and to mislead the public as to the true meaning and spirit of the Naturalization Bill, and the extent of its application.

Resolved, That the Naturalization Bill, passed at the late Session of our Provincial Parliament and reserved for His Majesty's assents, present, under the existing circumstances of the inhabitants of this Province, the most effectual and salutary means of removing, and forever setting at rest, all doubts as to the civil rights of those who come within its provisions, and thinks proper to avail themselves thereof; and that for the accomplishment of a measure so important to the interests of a considerable portion of the inhabitants, the most grateful acknowledgments are due to our Legislature; and in our very inferior degree, to John Ralph, Esquire, individually!!! at whose motion in the Commons, said Bill was restored to the order of the day after being thrown out in Committee!!!

Resolved, That the form of Registry connected with said Bill, and the several clauses thereto relating, are most important and essential parts thereof; inasmuch as without the same, will become accessible to the Public, and the American Ambassador at London will doubtless procure a copy for future use—we shall, I dare say, see all the names in print here in a few months, and then the "confusion" and "the finger of scorn" will be busy enough—will spread another "melancholy gloom over the whole face of this fine Country." Upon the folly, the falsehood, the sophistry, and weakness of this Petition, one might descant line by line, word by word, for a week to come; but enough, more than enough has been said. The mock Patriots, some of whom wish to raise the wind to go home, possibly for good reasons best known to themselves, never to return, may quit the people to back such absurd pretences with their hard earned money—they may with their emissaries industriously succeed, and the simplicity of the ignorant and misinformed may again minister to their designs; but the prospect opens of a speedy termination to this political juggling. I beg the people to judge for themselves—let them take now the Petition opposed to it, and ask themselves what any Member in the House of Commons can reasonable urge against the former, and what any other Member cannot say against the latter.

That the people's eyes may be opened to their own true interests, is the sincere wish of their Friend,

I would advise, for the credit of the Country, that this loyal well-disposed inhabitants should have their turn of meeting now, and Petition His Majesty for the passing of the Naturalization Bill, as strenuously as the others have been made to remonstrate, or rather roar, against it. But let them Petition the Throne as in duty bound—and try and get a Petition drawn up little less absurd than the one hatched by the opposition.

On examining his body, the following morning, one hundred and forty-nine marks were counted on his side; and it was also discovered that several of the shot had penetrated the thorax, and had injured some of the most considerable viscera. The shot was found to be mixed. From the extent over which the shot spread, the instrument of death would appear to have been a blunderbuss. This conjecture is further confirmed from the quantity of the shot, for, besides those found in the body, there was several found in the pocket of the deceased, which had been obstructed in their progress by striking upon some money, which was nearly pierced through by them.

Thus was cut off in the vigour of youth, and by an act, of which it would be difficult to find language sufficiently strong to describe the enormity, a gentleman, whose strict integrity and honourable feeling as a merchant, made him be universally respected*—while his good nature, benevolence, and warmhearteddess endeared him to all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. From the instant he supposed himself to be dying, which as we hinted above, he knew before any of his friends, he was completely resigned, and bore his fate with the most unmurmuring patience. It is difficult to attach suspicion to any one; for as he himself bore ill-will to none, he did not suppose that any one had him at all at enmity, to say nothing of the mortal hatred which must have influenced his cowardly assassin. The deed was most deliberately perpetrated, on the morning of Monday previous, a lath of the blind was forcibly taken a way, through which space, the piece was levelled. Mr. Watson was distant only about four yards from his murderer when the shot was fired.—We have only to add, that a person has been taken up on suspicion, for a variety of circumstances, which for, the present, we refrain from publishing.—New Montreal Gazette.

A Jury has returned a Verdict of Wilful Murder against some person or persons unknown.

* As a proof of the respect in which Mr. Watson was held in Montreal, we may mention that his funeral yesterday was attended by upwards of one thousand of the most respectable citizens.

ASSASSINATION OF MR. WATSON.

On Friday night, about ten o'clock, a murder was perpetrated which, for dastardly and cold-blooded barbarity, has never yet been equalled in this country, and but rarely exceeded in any other. On that evening, Robert Watson, Esqr., Inspector of Flour for this District, was sitting in an apartment in the ground floor of his house, along with the Rev. Mr. Mathieson, of St. Andrews Church. Mr. Watson had left the room only an instant before. Mr. Watson was sitting with his right side to the window, and had thrown his right arm over the back of the chair, so that more of his person was exposed than he would naturally gave. He held a newspaper, which he had been reading immediately before, in his left hand. While so situated, a tremendous report was heard at the window, but seemingly within the house, which was instantly completely filled with smoke. Mr. Watson started from his chair, placed his hand upon his right side, and exclaimed "What is that?" Mr. Mathieson, at first, did not suppose that the noise proceeded from fire-arms; but imagined that some crystal vessel had exploded, as the sparkling of the glass falling was distinctly heard. Mr. Mathieson and Mr. Watson if he was hurt, and Mr. Watson answered "I am afraid I am." Mrs. Watson, who had been alarmed by the report, rushed into the room, and both she and Mr. Mathieson supported Mr. Watson. The wife enquired "Do you think they have killed you?"—to which he answered, "I believe they have." His vest was removed, when a vast number of wounds were observed. Mr. Mathieson, about a minute after the report, ran to the door, and listened for the sound of footsteps, but heard nothing. He gave the alarm, and afterwards ran for medical aid, which was promptly procured. Finding one of the shot immediately under the skin, the medical gentleman entertained hopes that, as Mr. Watson was corpulent, it was probable none of the vital parts might be damaged. Mr. Watson himself, however, shortly after receiving the shot, said, he felt it in his bowels.

On Saturday, morning Mr. Watson sat up in his bed, and said he felt little pain, but considerable depression. His family and friends now began to entertain sanguine hopes of his recovery, but towards the afternoon, less favourable symptoms began to appear, and by six o'clock all hopes of his recovery were given up. About seven o'clock he expired. He was sensible to the last, and it appeared, from his conversation, that he was aware of the fatal nature of his wound before any other person.

The following (says the New York Enquirer) is a copy of a letter from Colonel Bye, of the Engineers, to a Gentleman in this city, dated Mount Pleasant, March.

"I feel indebted by your communication of the 6th instant, relative to Artificers, and request you will inform all applicants that I can offer constant work for four years, winter and summer, to stone cutters and miners; and that to such as have the means of building a house 30 feet square, I can give a village lot, 66 feet front by 198 feet deep; and to keep down the imposition of the neighbouring stores, the workmen may take pork, flour, rum, gunpowder, and tools, out of the King's magazines by paying the price at the most Government. The miners I divide into small parties, and pay them by the cube yard, according to the nature of the rock, which is in most parts grey limestone. The masons are paid by the superficial foot, and I conceive there is sufficient work on the Rideau Canal to employ at least 1000 miners, and the same number of stone cutters, as I have 50 locks to execute in four years. I shall also require a great number of labourers and excavators, but I fear I cannot give them employment during the winter.

As the works already commenced at Nepean Point, near Hull, on the Ottawa, men may obtain immediate work on their arrival there."

THE LAKE TRADE WITH CANADA.

(From the New York Evening Post.)

It is an ill wind, says the proverb, that blows no one any good. In conformity with the old adage, we had, therefore, believed, that that singular series of complicated mistakes and neglects, by which our administration has lost the West India trade to the navigation commerce of our sea coast, must, however, have been unaccompanied by any injury to the internal commerce, and even resulted in positive benefit to the navigation of our lakes. But we learn that it is not so. We have before us letters from respectable and intelligent men of business in the western part of this state, complaining of the grievous impediments to all fair trade with the Canadas, arising from the continued exaction of the discriminating, alien, and tonnage duties upon our side, and the consequent countervailing duties upon our trade, to an equal amount upon the Canada side. These duties, one of our friends states, are the more oppressive, because they are, in fact, far heavier than the same description of charges on the sea-board. The voyages are short, the articles of trade (lumber, staves, &c.) bulky; and thus the port charges of a vessel, whose freight would not earn $300, may amount to $100 or $150! This burden will, it is said, except under peculiar circumstances, amount almost to a prohibition of intercourse.

We can only reply to our friends in the north and west, that all this state of things has resulted from the very same infatuation in our cabinet, which has induced them to neglect or refuse every opportunity of adjusting our intercourse with the other British Colonies on fair and advantageous terms till it was too late. For the proof of this, we refer to the documents on the Colonial Trade, communicated to Congress at the commencement of the last Session.

Mr. Gallatin, in his letter to Mr. Canning of 26th August, 1826, (Doc. p. 104,) observes, that "he takes it for granted that it is not intened to extend the countervailing duties to the intercourse by land or internal navigation between the United States and the British possesions in North America, if it shall be found, as he believes to be the case, that the discriminating duties of the United States do not apply to that intercourse." In this, Mr. Gallatin was much mistaken. The discriminating duties, whether legally applying to that intercourse or not, were then, and have been since, enforced and collected by the authority of our administration. M G. is perhaps not to be blamed; but what shall we say of our administration, who could suffer their minister to remain uninstructed and misinformed upon so important a point of the subject entrusted to his negotiation?

Mr. Canning, in the postscript to his letter of September 11, 1826, frames replies.

"In respect to the second point, relative to the intercourse by inland navigation between the United States and the British North American provinces, the undersigned begs to inform Mr. Gallatin, that that intercourse so far as relates to the Canadas, is regulated by the Act of Parliament of 1825, by which the same duties are expressly imposed on the vessels and boats of the United States, importing any goods into either of those provinces, as are, or may be for the time being, payable in the United States of America on British vessels, or boats entering the harbours of the State from whence such goods shall have been imported.

"The discriminating duties, besides, only apply to trade by Sea:—and if, in any instance, they have been levied upon American goods brought into His Majesty's possessions by inland navigation, or on the boats and vessels employed in that navigation, there will be no difficulty in directing the amount so levied to be repaid, unless it should appear that the like duties had been levied in the American ports, upon the inland navigation and trade of the British provinces."

From this, it is evident, that any measure of our government (and probably an order from the treasury to the collectors was all that was needed) which would have put a stop to the collection of these onerous charges on our side, would have been followed, of course, by a remission of the British duties on theirs; and this might have taken place two years ago: Why these offers were not accepted, we have never been able to learn, nor can we offer any reasonable conjecture.

As it is, if we do not widely mistake the history of the business, our northern friends have nobody to thank but Mr. Adams and his cabinet for thus having entangled their commercial interests as well, as ours in his ingenious "diplomatic involutions." (to use Gov. Clinton's phrase) which have placed us in a situation "where we can neither advance without hazard, nor retreat without dishonour."

It has not yet been made even a subject of discussion, in any of our public papers, that we have seen, what will be the possible or probable result of the Colonial Bill, on our East India trade?—May it not draw after it, in its train, consequences that no man at present dreams of!

Bermuda, Jan 17—The question of the legality of importing the produce of the United States from the foreign Islands, was yesterday put at rest by Mr. Woodhouse, the Inspector-General of the Customs, who is now here. He says there is nothing in the Act of 6th Geo. 4 to prevent it, nor does the Order in Council interdict it; and has accordingly instructed our Custom-house to permit our articles to an entry in British vessels, paying the same duty only as if brought direct from the United States.

From the Barbadian, February 13.

It now appears beyond a doubt, that an indirect intercourse with America will be renewed, and that American articles will soon be poured into the Colonies through the medium of the Foreign Islands. An Order has been issued to that effect, which reached this Island by the last packet, thus confirming the opinion held by Mr. Commissioner Woodhouse on the subject, as stated in former papers, and in direct contradiction to the construction put upon the Act 6th Geo. 4, by the Counsel whom our Acting-Collector and Comptroller thought it their duty to consult upon this important point. The news, too, received by the brig Kate which arrived from Norfolk on sunday last, 14 days passage, has given rise to some expectation that matters will resume their old footing as respects the direct intercourse betwen America and the British West India Colonies.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1827.

By the Ship Trident arrived at New York, on 30 March, London dates to 16th and received to 17th February, are received.

Mr Canning had a fresh attack of his illness—he was mending again on 15th.

In the House of Lords, upon the Subject of the Corn Laws, Lord King expressed himself as follows:—

"Lord King said he had a great number of petitions to present on the same subject, some of which he should present to-night. They prayed for no alteration of these laws. He was desirous to see them amended—he could not see that an alteration of these laws could in any way injure the landed interests—he was a landed proprietor, and nineteenths of his property consisted of land, and he was willing to part with the Corn Laws. The first petition he should present was from the inhabitants of Dysart, in Scotland—the petitioners complained that they worked 16½ hours, a day, and could not earn more than 8s. 6d. per week.—They were desirous of having the Corn Laws amended—they wished that the Poor Laws rather than the Corn Laws might be extended to Scotland. The petition was then read and ordered to lie on the table. The other petitioners were from Elgin, and from the six incorporated trades of the Royal Burg of Banff to the same effect."

Liverpool, Feb. 17th.—200 Bbls. Montreal Pot Ashes, have been sold at 29s 6d—a small lot of Flour has been sold at 27s 7d which is a little higher than any yet sold.

From the United States.—The national Journal on the subject of the Colonial Trade has the following Editorial paragraph:—

"A report having found its way into several papers, that an arrangement of the difference on the Colonial question with Great Britain had been made by Mr Gallatin, we have taken some pains to inquire into the truth of it. We learn that there is no ground whatever for the report; but that on the contrary, Great Britain perseveres in altogether refusing to treat on that question. Things, therefore fore, no prospect whatever of any adjustment of it by convention."

Another Steam Boat Accident.—The boiler of the Oliver Ellsworth which plies between New-York and Hartford burst on the evening of the 21st ulto. Seven of the passengers and three of the crew were scalded, one mortally, another dangerously, and several badly.

LATEST FROM PORTUGAL.

Captain Allen, of the Benezet, arrived at New-Bedford on Wednesday, in 42 days from Lisbon, reports, that an engagement took place about the 6th or 8th February, near Oporto, between the constitutionalists, under the Count de Villa Flor, and the rebels, under the Marquis of Chavres, when the latter were completely routed, with loss of 150 to 200 killed, 300 prisoners, several pieces of Artillery, and baggage. The rebels retreated towards Calicia.—N. Y. Spectator.

The Assizes for the Home District, terminated on Monday last. The following is a list of the Convictions:—

William Boreland—Blasphemy—Six months imprisonment—to stand half an hour in the pillory, and to give surety for good behavior during life—himself in £50 and two others in £25 each.

John Jones—Grand Larceny—Six months imprisonment

William Cleveland—Petit Larceny—One month imprisonment.

The ship Trident, from Liverpool, brings London dates to the 16th ult. The intelligence from Portugal is satisfactory—a small body of the rebels were moving towards Oporto, but Villa Flor had taken measures to secure the city. Mr. Canning is much better. The Emigration question was discussed in the House of Commons on the 15th, and a Committee appointed. The King has called on Parliament to make a suitable provision for the Duke of Clarence, now the heir presumptive to the throne. Consols, 82¼

Bolivar has written a letter to the President of the Senate of Columbia abdicating the Presidency of the Republic. All we can say of this letter is, that it is a most singular document.

The Board of Commissioners at Washington, for the settlement of the first article of the Treaty of Ghent, has adjourned sine die the functions of the Board having been superceded by the late Convention. Mr. Jackson still remains at Washington. Mr. Baker, Secretary to the commission, is about to make a visit to England and will sail to morrow in the Cortes.—Albion.

Died,

On the 2d instant, full of years, Mr. WILLIAM MAY, of Grantham, aged 84 years, or, perhaps more.

Mr. MAY was one of those tried loyal subjects, who would never take up arms against his Lawful Sovereign. He escaped from the clutches of the Rebels, leaving family, estate, and all, behind, and joined the British Standard at Fort Niagara in 1778; and assisted in defending the soil in which he now rests, from the grasp of an ambitious foe, till the peace of '83: he then located himself on land given him as a reward for his meritorious services, and accumulated considerable property, and left a fine estate amongst his offspring all whom, we believe, possess the loyal, patriotic spirit of their progenitor.

CHAP. XVII.

An Act for affording Public aid towards the completion of the Welland Canal.

[Passed 17th Feb'y, 1827.]

WHEREAS it is necessary to afford Public aid in furtherance of the great undertaking now in progress for uniting the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario by a Canal, navigable for such Vessels as are ordinarily used for Transport on the Lakes:

Be it therefore enacted, by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the Fourteenth Year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province;'" and by the authority of the same, That at any time before the first day of April next, it shall be in the power of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, to direct His Majesty's Receiver General to subscribe Stock in the Welland Canal Company to the amount of Fifty Thousand Pounds, which Stock shall from thenceforth be held as, and deemed to be Public Stock, and that the Government of this Province shall, as the holders of such Stock, be subject to the same conditions and have the same powers, advantages, and privileges, as other Stockholders in the said Company.

II. And whereas, it will afford great relief to the said Company to be enabled to avail themselves of the whole funds thus subscribed by the Government, without the delay of calling in Instalments; and such advance will further enable the said Company to resume and continue their operations without the necessity of exacting from individual Stockholders such rapid advances of Capital as they have hitherto, at great inconvenience, been compelled to furnish; and whereas, it is reasonable that, in consideration of such facility to be afforded to the Company, the Government should be relieved from the immediate payment of interest on the Sum to be immediately advanced to them: Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That before such Sum of Fifty Thousand Pounds shall be advanced by the Government to the said Company, a written assent under the Seal of the said Company shall be deposited with His Majesty's Receiver General for the time being, signifying that they are willing to accept the said Subscription of Stock and the payment of the same in full, upon the condition that the said Company shall pay to the Government half yearly the Interest upon the said Sum of Fifty Thousand Pounds, from the time of the same being advanced until the expiration of one year from and after the completion of the Welland Canal, from the Grand River to Lake Ontario: Provided always nevertheless, That so soon as the proceeds of the said Canal shall afford to the Company a clear dividend of Six per Centum upon the Capital advanced, such Interest so paid to the Government shall be equitably adjusted as between the Government and the other Stockholders, in any dividends to be thereafter made.

III. And be it, &c.—That the Welland Canal Company shall, before receiving the payment of the Stock to be taken under the authority of this Act, deposit with His Majesty's Receiver General a Bond under their Seal, in the Penalty of Twenty Thousand Pounds, binding themselves to pay annually to His Majesty the legal Interest upon such payment until the expiration of one year after the whole Canal shall be finished.

IV. And be it, &c.—That it shall be in the power of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, at any time in his discretion to direct the Receiver General for the time being, to sell and transfer the Stock so Subscribed or any portion thereof, so soon as its nominal value can be obtained, and that the Sum to be received for the same shall be paid to and remain in the hands of His Majesty's Receiver General for the time being, subject to the disposition of the Legislature thereof.

V. And be it, &c.—That the Interest to be paid by the said Company within the period aforesaid, shall be applicable by His Majesty's Receiver General to the payment of Interest on any Loan that may be contracted by the Government for the purposes of this Act, and that all such payments and dividends as may thereafter be paid to the Government on account of the said Stock, shall and may be applicable to the Public uses of this Province as the Legislature thereof may direct.

VI. And be it, &c.—That the Sum of money herein authorized to be raised by Loan and paid on account of Stock to be held in the said Company, shall not be subject to any deduction of poundage for the Receiver General of this Province.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of tresspass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing hrough the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

VOL. I. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1827. NO. 47.

Summary.

The King is at Brighton, confined with the gout in his left hand and in his feet; but in other respects is well.

Mr. Canning has not been merely severely, but dangerously indisposed with rheumatic pains in the head, but the danger is passed, and the Secretary is now regaining his health.

The health of the Duke of Sussex is improving daily.

The account circulated in the city of the nature of Lord Liverpool's illness is that he was attacked on the morning of the 17th, with a paralytic stroke, and his head was sensibly affected by it.

We have never known in any similar instance more general anxiety expressed to learn his real state, and it is a striking proof of the respect entertained by all ranks for Lord Liverpool. The first circulation of the rumour caused the exchange to be crowded with inquirers, and the nature of the answers, which were as above mentioned, caused universal regret.

The funds have fallen rather more than one per cent. Consols having been done in the course of the day at 82¼, and the closing price 81 sellers.

Mr. Huskisson has recovered from his late indisposition.

PORTUGAL.—The news from Portugal is of a much less favorable character than the previous accounts had led us to hope.

Hurricane.—A letter from Teneriffe to a gentleman of this city, dated 25th January, communicates some particulars respecting the hurricane which commenced on the 7th of November last. The French ship Gabrielle was wrecked off the town, and 15 persons were drowned. Four foreign vessels were wrecked at Santa Cruz. The greater part of the valley of Oratavo was converted into a desert. Lands to the value of $500,000 were swept away. From the returns made, it appears that 245 persons were drowned, 311 houses swept away by the torrent, 112 greatly damaged, and 1009 head of cattle were destroyed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE LATE DUKE OF YORK.

Mr. Secretary PEEL rose, and said, "Sir, in the period which elapsed between the separation and re-assembling of this House, the country has sustained a loss, by the death, of the first Prince of the blood; a Prince whom the probable course of human existence would, at some intervening period, have seated on the Throne of this country. Under such circumstances, at any time, without reference to personal qualities or any extraneous considerations, this House would have thought it, in unison with the general feelings of the country—(Hear, hear,)—to have presented an Address to the Throne, expressive of their respectful sympathy with the feelings of His Majesty. But I feel, I would, under any circumstances, I say, have been induced to adopt that course, from the feelings which must necessarily arise in the bosoms of subjects of a country of limited monarchy, from those feelings that spring from the deep-felt conviction, that there is no other form of Government better suited to the genius and habits of the people of this country, or better calculated to secure the existance of their happiness, and the enjoyment of their rights. The House would, I repeat, have been induced to adopt that course from the influence of these feelings alone; but, Sir, I feel that the circumstances under which we are called upon to present an Address of Condolence to the King, in consequence of the death of the Duke of York, are, in some respects, peculiar, and depart from the ordinary course of events. This Address, if acceded to by the House, will be presented to one who was the companion of the deceased Prince's early years —who had studied with him in his youth, and who had been intimately acquainted with him throughout his life; to one who had watched over him in his dying moments, in the utmost affliction, and who felt his loss with the feelings of a brother. (Hear, hear, hear.) No consolation can be calculated to assuage that affliction can be offered, than the demonstration on the part of this House, that they concur in that universal feeling of respect which has been manifested throughout the country for the Duke of York, and offer their respectful assurances, not only of that feeling of regret, which we should have experienced under other and different circumstances; but that feeling of deep respect which we entertain for the eminent public services of the Individual. (Hear, hear, hear.) There is also to be added to that feeling, one of tenderer and more domestic sorrow, which arises from long experience of the great kindness of his heart, and the benevolence of his disposition—qualities which adorn any station of life, but shine with peculiar lustre when displayed in such exalted rank. I do not stand here for the purpose of pronouncing a set eulogium on the character of the Duke of York. It was well said by an Hon Gentleman opposite, on a former occasion, that "laboured panegyrics on the great, are better suited to the genius of despotic countries, than those who have the happiness of living under noble and free institutions;" and nothing could be more inappropriate to the character of the Duke of York, than that I should ascribe to him qualities which he did not possess—none shall I mention which all do not admit he possessed—nothing shall I say which truth shall not sanction—and I do not think I transgress the truth, when I say, that in his public capacity, of Commander-in-Chief, he inspired the discipline and raised the moral character of the Army; neither do I think I transgress the truth, when I say, that he possessed a combination of singular advantages, and of peculiar personal qualities for discharging properly his duty, and that he lost no opportunity of availing himself of those advantages. Sir, for a period of forty-six years, the Duke of York was a soldier in the British Army, and for thirty-two years of that time he held, with a slight intermission, the situation of Commander-in-Chief. I do not believe there is any man who could do justice to the services which he rendered to this country in that capacity; except, perhaps, those who had had personal experience knows them, or one who has taken the pains to examine the state of the Army, when His Royal Highness assumed the command of it, and its state at the period of his decease. I will relinquished its guidance. I shall not soon forget the last words I heard from the lips of the Royal Duke, when, nine days before his death, hearing of the landing of part of the troops at Lisbon, he said, with a faint expression of honest triumph, "Well, I say any man could compare the state of the brigade of British Troops disembarked at Ostend in 1794 with that of the corps now landed at Lisbon." Those, on my honour, were the last words I heard from the lips of the Duke of York. His Royal Highness had been a General before he became Commander-in-Chief, and when he was appointed to that high post he expressed his determination that no other officer, upon whom the duty of leading the army to the field might devolve, should ever be subject to the same disadvantages under which he had laboured Sir, no one but a man of professional knowledge and experience could properly enter into the detail of the progressive steps by which the improvements were effected—none but such a one could explain the difficulties at first to be met with. It will, therefore, unnecessary to detail the several regulations which were adopted, and the watchfulness which was exerted in seeing them put into execution, for the purpose of correcting the many abuses and defects which prevailed when he assumed the command. There were various regulations connected with religious instruction, and just hopes of preferment held out to the soldier, according to their duty. There were others relating to discipline, and regimental schools established for the purpose of giving education to those who superintended the ranks of the army. At I believe, it would require a man of experience to enter into the detail of these regulations, but it is unnecessary at the present moment; for I ascribe less to them than to the influence which an elevated mind naturally carries with it. It was this influence which was felt throughout the army to do their duty. Every man felt convinced that his merits would be appreciated, and that justice would be done him should any act of oppression be exercised upon him. Sir, the Commander-in-Chief, and not by the regulations, that that great and wonderful instrument, a disciplined army, received all its regularity of movement, and willingness of submission to rule, which constitute the energy which distinguishes the soldier of a free state from the mere passive machine of despotism. During the whole thirty years the Duke of York had the chief command, a period exceeding 10,000 days, I do not believe I exagerate, when I state, that not one of those 10,000 days ever passed without some portion of it being devoted to the performance of the duties of his post. Not a letter arrived at the office without its being immediately noticed, if the subject required it. If it was signed, no matter from whom it came, it was immediately answered. If, by chance, it happened that the individual had made a mistake, and addressed it to the wrong department, he did not receive a dry answer, referring him to the proper department; but every facility was given to him to transact his business. If a letter arrived, not signed, proffering a complaint, it was not neglected for want of the signature; but ioquiry was forthwith instituted into the alleged grievance. On every occasion, when the state of the army, particularly with reference to the promotions, has been brought under the consideration of the House, there has been manifested by all a most anxious desire to do justice to the strict impartiality of the Commander-in-Chief, in that most important distribution of honours. There was no reminssess on his part in attending to every well founded claim for this species of distinction; and certainly no reluctance on the part of the country, and no disposition on the part of the army, to forget how much he had effected, and with what justice and discernment he had acted in this particular. —(Hear, hear.) That illustrious person, never retained any remembrance of any part taken in the debates in that House, however personally unpleasant to him; on the contrary, he showed an earnest disposition to forget all observations and allusions of this kind made by individuals, and above all, not to suffer them to interfere with the fair claims of those connected with the parties who uttered them. It was his duty, Sir, to guard against the influence of prepossessions, to avoid which does require, perhaps, a more vigilant care on the part of those who are placed in high and important posts of this kind, than is necessary in others not so circumstanced; for they are bound to take care, that they be not seduced by the illusions, however dazzling, of military power—nor forget, in affording with more active and exalted candidates for military honours, the cases of those officers who may be deprived, by no fault of their own, of the opportunities of distinction; or may be panting, in foreign countries, for employment, calculated to display their ardour in the service. I think that the whole series of the acts of His late Royal Highness the duke of York. The

and of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor were drank with enthusiasm, and thus closed the proceedings of the day. It may not be improper to add, that a small phamphlet lately published at the Herald Office, containing the bill, Jones' letter, and the Anglo-American's production, was widely circulated. It is asserted (with how much truth we cannot undertake to vouch(that many of those individuals, for whose security the naturalization law is framed, have taken alarm, and are actually sacrificing their property by sudden and ruinous sales. We have indeed one instance within our knowledge of property thus circumstanced, having been sold at half its value, and are inclined to believe the report that there are many others. We repeat that those who have misled individuals so far as to induce them to make these ruinous sacrifices have much to answer for. We think we could without difficulty lay our finger upon the shoulder of some of them, who, if they meet with their deserts, will sooner or later earn the courses, both loud and deep, of the individuals whom they have led astray.

As to those who dislike the law, because they retain their partiality to a foreign government, the sooner we know them the better. Our government cannot desire Subjects of that description; and one of the most beneficial effects of the law will be to bring them into public view, and to distinguish them from the loyal part of the population.—Kingston Chronicle.

ADDRESS OF CONDOLENCE TO THE KING.

Hamilton, District of Gore,
13th April, 1827.

At a Meeting of the Clergy Magistrates, and other Inhabitants of the District of Gore convened by Public Notice pursuant to a Communication from the York Committee to William M. Jarvis Esq. Sheriff of Gore, for the purpose of moving an Address of Condolence to His Majesty, on the Death of His Majesty's Late Brother, His Royal Highness the Duke of York.

John Wilson Esq. Speaker of the Commons House of Assembly being unanimously called to the Chair—and George Rolph Esq. appointed Secretary.

Doctor Dunlop of the Canada Company addressed the Meeting and with great eloquence, and feeling, portrayed the eminent virtues and distinguished services of His Late Royal Highness the Duke of York. And therefore, an address on motion of Doctor Dunlop, and seconded by Hugh Wilson Esq. was proposed and unanimously adopted, and anxiously signed by the whole meeting, who earnestly pressed forward to testify their British feeling, for a lamented and an Illustrious Chief.

GEORGE ROLPH.
Secretary.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, April 21, 1827.

The news by the late arrivals at New York from Liverpool, is rather of an important nature. It would appear by the advices from Portugal that there is a probability of the British Troops being more actively employed. The Observer of the 18th February alluding to the illness of Lord Liverpool, and Mr. Canning remarks

"This is not the only domestic intelligence which has operated upon the Funds. It has been stated in addition, that Ministers, in consequence of the unfavorable character of the latest despatches from Lisbon, and the strong grounds which exist as to the sincerity of the King of Spain, have determined to send out an additional military force to Portugal to the extent of 10,000 or 12,000 men. In the city, it is considered by many that the state of affairs in the Peninsula is worse than it was on the first breaking out of the rebellion, as the Apostolical party, even with the British Troops in Portugal, have the temerity again to raise the standard in opposition to the Constitutional system."

It is greatly feared that Lord Liverpool's resumption of his public duties cannot be expected—a total cessation from all mental exertion it is thought will be imperatively necessary. It was expected that an arrangement would be made in both Houses of Parliament, that only the ordinary routine business should be proceeded in, under the extraordinary circumstances in which the Country is placed, in consequence of the incapacity of the Noble Earl and Mr. Canning to attend in their seats. The Courier speaking of the illness of these distinguished personages, says:—

"An event like this, naturally gives rise to various rumours and conjectures; but we feel no disposition to mix ourselves up with them, for reasons which must be sufficiently obvious. Names are freely mentioned—and supposed party views as freely canvassed—which are in truth, nothing more than the idle gossip of the town, or the loose guesses of those who settle every complicated question of state, in an easy, off-hand manner.

A cabinet council is summoned for 3 o'clock today."

Canada Company.—Mr. Dunlop, the Company's "Warden of the Forests," we observe by a notice in the last Gore Gazette, offers a contract for opening seven miles of a Road, through the Company's Lands, in what is called "the Guelph Block," in the Gore District, and also for erecting two Log Houses at Galt. The tenders are to be received until 30th Instant. This may not be improperly considered as the commencement of "active operations" on the part of the Company, and we have no doubt that in the prosecution of the various improvements they intend making, the Country will be benefitted in a material degree.

We have heard that Mr. Galt intends making a tour during the ensuing summer on the shores of Lake Huron, bordering on the Company's tract of Land in the London and Western Districts.

The soil and Climate of this part of Upper Canada is represented as highly favorable to the purposes of agriculture, and when brought more immediately into notice, under the management of the Company, will no doubt become a desirable residence for the new Settler.

Some of our Provincial Editors, who seem to have a penchant, for fishing in troubled waters, and being at a loss to manufacture troubles themselves; now that they see the public mind resuming its wonted tranquility, on the subject of the Naturalization Bill, notwithstanding the endeavours so industriously used to misrepresent matters to the people. Now that truth begins to have its proper effect, and the period of their exposure in having attempted to mislead and deceive public opinion, is fast approaching; have recourse to a species of importation to gratify the cravings of their troublesome appetites, and with the obvious intention of endeavouring to create something like alarm, telling us "that the eyes of our neighbours are upon us," copy what they no doubt consider an important article from the Buffalo Journal, under the very imposing head of "troubles in Canada."

Many of our readers have never before perhaps heard of the Buffalo Journal; and we think they will indeed smile, when we tell them, that the Buffalo Journal has manufactured, "troubles in Canada" from such a paragraph as the following in the Colonial Advocate:—

"Such a change [the ministers] in the colonial department, might now be the salvation of the Canadas—a little longer—and they are lost, shamefully lost to Britain FOREVER."

"Language such as this" says the Buffalo Journal "from the same source, is not new" [indeed it is not] "but under the present excitement, which seems to be universal, [does the B. Journal get this information from the same source ?—if he does we can only advise him to be more slow of belief for the future] more than ordinary importance may be attached to it."

And pray what extraordinary importance does the Buffalo Journal, wish us to attach to the assertions of the Colonial Advocate, who in an off-hand manner, would "turn out" the whole ministry, because forsooth they are not pleased to consult him, and others of his stamp, respecting the affairs of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, her Colonies and dependencies.

As a set off to the Buffalo Journal's "troubles in Canada," we would just give the following from another paper, published not more than two miles from the same place. The Black Rock Gazette speaking of the Naturalization Bill has the following remarks:—

"In regard to the operation of this act, the people in various parts of Upper Canada fear that it will be oppressive. Meetings have been held in several towns, to petition the Imperial Parliament on the subject.—These meetings as far as our information extends, are in the main, orderly; and we venture an opinion, [notwithstanding various reports] that there will be no disturbance of the public tranquility, at present, in Upper Canada, on account of this act. It is possible that many of those who have set these meetings on foot, have ulterior objects in view —objects of personal advantages to be obtained at the sacrifice of the discretion of the people—a convenient hobby, on whose broad back many an aspiring man of the people may ride into the next Provincial Parliament.

The people of Upper Canada are blessed with a fine healthy climate—a fruitful soil—and, when the improvements in navigation, between the waters of Erie and the St. Lawrence are completed, they will possess commercial advantages superior to any people, [having respect to their population] under heaven. Their importations being chiefly from the mother country, are subjected only to a slight tariff. The support of the Provincial Government, or such part of it as comes from the people's pockets, is not burthensome—their taxes are not as many, or as heavy as ours—and, the expense of the numerous fortifications, and the defence of the country, comes exclusively from the Parent State. It must therefore, be a serious attempt of opposition, which could induce a people thus favored, to disturb the public tranquility."

Bell's Weekly Messenger concludes a review of "the different States and Governments of Europe at the close of the year 1826," with the following language, which will be responded by every sincere lover of his Country.

To some who profess a great veneration for the Laws and Institutions of the Mother Country, we would suggest the propriety (just by way of shewing that they feel a little of what they profess) of giving a place occasionally in their Public Journals to such extracts as the one we are now making, instead of filling their Editorial columns with "difficulty and alarm," which the New York Enquirer has conjured up, as mendacing Old England.

(From Bell's Weekly Messenger.)

"Upon the whole, though England from various circumstances, would find it most beneficial to preserve the peace of Europe, she has perhaps of all the powers, the least to apprehend from a renewal of war. Of invasion she can have no possible dread. Her Navy only requires to be let loose to sweep every flag before it. Her Colonies are in a state of perfect security, except against a black insurrection; and her Military Force, when required to act, will be found as it always has been, invincible. Her Commercial allies form a strong part of her power. She can attack France, at any time, through Flanders, if it be deemed necessary; and in conjunction with Prussia and the Netherlands, could easily check the progress of that ambitious power in all future wars.

"We cannot better conclude these observations than with the forcible and eloquent description of a contemporary writer. Look, says he, at the general progress of the British Empire in the materials of wealth and power, since the beginning of the war in 1793. Her Commerce trebled, her means of productive industry quadrupled, her works of defence, and of communication, by land and by water, her concentration of available riches, her immense acquisitions of exterior strength, which give her the keys of three quarters of the world, and more especially the absolute command over all the direct maritime intercourse which can be carried on by the nations of the North, of central and southern Europe, whether through the road of the Mediterranean or of the Atlantic, with Africa, or with the Eastern hemisphere. The Fleets of England were never so predominant as at the hour which we now describe them, over these of every actual or possible rival. The sinuuns, and frame, and spirit of the Army, never so well arranged or constituted. Her arsenals are provided for more than ten years of war—but above all, and paramount stands that strength, which consists in the spirit and defensive character of British policy, inspiring the great body of nations with confidence, and the members of their several Governments with respect.

"With whatever wonder and amazement those Englishmen, whose duty and genius lead them to conduct the discussions of our national interests, may happen to express their feeling of a public wrong or their solicitude for a remedy, is may bring to respect into an unlucky predicament if they venture on such grounds to build any hope of profiting by our apparent quarrels with each other. In free Countries, where opinion is the great mover of the commonwealth, it is unavoidable to paint grievances in strong colours, that they may catch the eye and fix public attention; but we repeat that the power which fancies that because Englishmen remonstrate boldly with their public rulers, their they feel that some partial defect in the political system might be repaired, they will not therefore make common cause with their Government against the intrusions or of foreigners, will find itself in a very unfortunate mistake, and exposed to perils which it would be wise to avoid by timely abstinence from provocation."

We last week gave the proceedings of a Public Meeting at Belleville, on the subject of the Petition against the Naturalization bill, and in this day's paper will be found the proceedings of another Meeting at Bath, together with the opinion of the Grand Jury of the London District on this question. The last Colonial Advocate, under an article on "the State of the Colony," tells us that, the Editors Table groans under the load of Papers and Letters received on this subject, but for "motives which may appear hereafter," the Advocate "judges it best to withhold the important documents"—Here is a puzzle for the good people of Upper Canada—the "documents" are "important," but they are "withheld," and conjecture is left to busy itself, until the Editor may "hereafter" be pleased to condescend to explain his "motives"—all this looks of a "doubtful character." When we have any thing which we consider good or "important," of a public nature, we should think ourselves wanting in respect to our readers, if we told them we had such important documents on an important subject, and yet withheld them, with the very doubtful" and vague information, that our "motives" might possibly "appear hereafter."

But, says the Advocate, "we perceive that the subject has excited much attention in all parts of the United States." Coupling such an expression as this with an article "on the State" of a British "Colony," we should be inclined to think that the readers of the Advocate will be ready to ask—what does this mean? We will tell them—The Buffalo Journal has seized upon an inflammatory article in the Advocate (which we have alluded to in another part of our Editorial Commentary), and has spun out a long article on "Troubles in Canada," and this we suppose is what the Advocate calls "much attention," for though we have an opportunity of seeing a great many American papers, we do not observe any thing of that "attention" in them, which the Advocate seems so much to delight in. The "attention" of the Black Rock Gazette, appears at least to be of a different kind from that, which the Advocate would have it believed has been "excited."

What the Petitioners against the Naturalization Bill will think of the "sneers" of the Advocate, we cannot anticipate. He complains bitterly that one hundred individuals at Flamborough, owning £50,000 worth of property, have subscribed only one shilling each "in aid of the Mission to England," and insultingly enough addresses them with the following doggerel:—

"To keep the cause of liberty
In Canada from failing;
The patriots about Dundas
Gave each a Dublin Shilling!"

If the honest yeomanry of the Country will suffer themselves to be gulled out of their money, to aid the views of the Advocate, by "coming down handsomely," with Pounds, instead of Shillings, they may expect that he will "land them to the skies"—otherwise they may expect that he will ridicule them both in prose and verse. We would venture to recommend them to prefer the latter—to keep close their purse strings, and save their Pounds and Shillings for better uses.

Accident.—George Reid, Mate of the Steam Boat Canada, was last night drowned, by falling from the plank, leading from the Wharf to the Vessel It is painful to hear that the unfortunate man leaves a Wife and five children to deplore his sudden loss.

To Correspondents.—We have to apologise to "a Friend to the Soldier" for not having before acknowledged his communication. He speaks of "times long past"—not doubting but that these things are better ordered now-a-days, he will excuse our not inserting his communication.

"Argus," will we think appreciate our motives when we inform him, that for the present at least, it is our desire to abstain from further remark with respect to the "infatuated person," he speaks of. If we felt inclined to point out the political inconsistencies which have marked the career of the individual he alludes to, we have volumes, in our possession, penned by himself, which contain his own condemnation—but we refrain, and have no doubt that under present circumstances "Argus" will see the propriety of our conduct.

"N" is unavoidably postponed till next week.

SUPPLEMENT TO
The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1827.

and of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor were drank with enthusiasm, and thus closed the proceedings of the day. It may not be improper to add, that a small phamphlet lately published at the Herald Office, containing the bill, Jones' letter, and the Anglo-American's production, was widely circulated. It is asserted (with how much truth we cannot undertake to vouch(that many of those individuals, for whose security the naturalization law is framed, have taken alarm, and are actually sacrificing their property by sudden and ruinous sales. We have indeed one instance within our knowledge of property thus circumstanced, having been sold at half its value, and are inclined to believe the report that there are many others. We repeat that those who have misled individuals so far as to induce them to make these ruinous sacrifices have much to answer for. We think we could without difficulty lay our finger upon the shoulder of some of them, who, if they meet with their deserts, will sooner or later earn the courses, both loud and deep, of the individuals whom they have led astray.

As to those who dislike the law, because they retain their partiality to a foreign government, the sooner we know them the better. Our government cannot desire Subjects of that description; and one of the most beneficial effects of the law will be to bring them into public view, and to distinguish them from the loyal part of the population.—Kingston Chronicle.

ADDRESS OF CONDOLENCE TO THE KING.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, April 21, 1827.

The news by the late arrivals at New York from Liverpool, is rather of an important nature. It would appear by the advices from Portugal that there is a probability of the British Troops being more actively employed. The Observer of the 18th February alluding to the illness of Lord Liverpool, and Mr. Canning remarks

"This is not the only domestic intelligence which has operated upon the Funds. It has been stated in addition, that Ministers, in consequence of the unfavorable character of the latest despatches from Lisbon, and the strong grounds which exist as to the sincerity of the King of Spain, have determined to send out an additional military force to Portugal to the extent of 10,000 or 12,000 men. In the city, it is considered by many that the state of affairs in the Peninsula is worse than it was on the first breaking out of the rebellion, as the Apostolical party, even with the British Troops in Portugal, have the temerity again to raise the standard in opposition to the Constitutional system."

It is greatly feared that Lord Liverpool's resumption of his public duties cannot be expected—a total cessation from all mental exertion it is thought will be imperatively necessary. It was expected that an arrangement would be made in both Houses of Parliament, that only the ordinary routine business should be proceeded in, under the extraordinary circumstances in which the Country is placed, in consequence of the incapacity of the Noble Earl and Mr. Canning to attend in their seats. The Courier speaking of the illness of these distinguished personages, says:—

"An event like this, naturally gives rise to various rumours and conjectures; but we feel no disposition to mix ourselves up with them, for reasons which must be sufficiently obvious. Names are freely mentioned—and supposed party views as freely canvassed—which are in truth, nothing more than the idle gossip of the town, or the loose guesses of those who settle every complicated question of state, in an easy, off-hand manner.

A cabinet council is summoned for 3 o'clock today."

Canada Company.—Mr. Dunlop, the Company's "Warden of the Forests," we observe by a notice in the last Gore Gazette, offers a contract for opening seven miles of a Road, through the Company's Lands, in what is called "the Guelph Block," in the Gore District, and also for erecting two Log Houses at Galt. The tenders are to be received until 30th Instant. This may not be improperly considered as the commencement of "active operations" on the part of the Company, and we have no doubt that in the prosecution of the various improvements they intend making, the Country will be benefitted in a material degree.

We have heard that Mr. Galt intends making a tour during the ensuing summer on the shores of Lake Huron, bordering on the Company's tract of Land in the London and Western Districts.

The soil and Climate of this part of Upper Canada is represented as highly favorable to the purposes of agriculture, and when brought more immediately into notice, under the management of the Company, will no doubt become a desirable residence for the new Settler.

Some of our Provincial Editors, who seem to have a penchant, for fishing in troubled waters, and being at a loss to manufacture troubles themselves; now that they see the public mind resuming its wonted tranquility, on the subject of the Naturalization Bill, notwithstanding the endeavours so industriously used to misrepresent matters to the people. Now that truth begins to have its proper effect, and the period of their exposure in having attempted to mislead and deceive public opinion, is fast approaching; have recourse to a species of importation to gratify the cravings of their troublesome appetites, and with the obvious intention of endeavouring to create something like alarm, telling us "that the eyes of our neighbours are upon us," copy what they no doubt consider an important article from the Buffalo Journal, under the very imposing head of "troubles in Canada."

Many of our readers have never before perhaps heard of the Buffalo Journal; and we think they will indeed smile, when we tell them, that the Buffalo Journal has manufactured, "troubles in Canada" from such a paragraph as the following in the Colonial Advocate:—

"Such a change [the ministers] in the colonial department, might now be the salvation of the Canadas—a little longer—and they are lost, shamefully lost to Britain FOREVER."

"Language such as this" says the Buffalo Journal "from the same source, is not new" [indeed it is not] "but under the present excitement, which seems to be universal, [does the B. Journal get this information from the same source ?—if he does we can only advise him to be more slow of belief for the future] more than ordinary importance may be attached to it."

And pray what extraordinary importance does the Buffalo Journal, wish us to attach to the assertions of the Colonial Advocate, who in an off-hand manner, would "turn out" the whole ministry, because forsooth they are not pleased to consult him, and others of his stamp, respecting the affairs of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, her Colonies and dependencies.

As a set off to the Buffalo Journal's "troubles in Canada," we would just give the following from another paper, published not more than two miles from the same place. The Black Rock Gazette speaking of the Naturalization Bill has the following remarks:—

"In regard to the operation of this act, the people in various parts of Upper Canada fear that it will be oppressive. Meetings have been held in several towns, to petition the Imperial Parliament on the subject.—These meetings as far as our information extends, are in the main, orderly; and we venture an opinion, [notwithstanding various reports] that there will be no disturbance of the public tranquility, at present, in Upper Canada, on account of this act. It is possible that many of those who have set these meetings on foot, have ulterior objects in view —objects of personal advantages to be obtained at the sacrifice of the discretion of the people—a convenient hobby, on whose broad back many an aspiring man of the people may ride into the next Provincial Parliament.

The people of Upper Canada are blessed with a fine healthy climate—a fruitful soil—and, when the improvements in navigation, between the waters of Erie and the St. Lawrence are completed, they will possess commercial advantages superior to any people, [having respect to their population] under heaven. Their importations being chiefly from the mother country, are subjected only to a slight tariff. The support of the Provincial Government, or such part of it as comes from the people's pockets, is not burthensome—their taxes are not as many, or as heavy as ours—and, the expense of the numerous fortifications, and the defence of the country, comes exclusively from the Parent State. It must therefore, be a serious attempt of opposition, which could induce a people thus favored, to disturb the public tranquility."

Bell's Weekly Messenger concludes a review of "the different States and Governments of Europe at the close of the year 1826," with the following language, which will be responded by every sincere lover of his Country.

To some who profess a great veneration for the Laws and Institutions of the Mother Country, we would suggest the propriety (just by way of shewing that they feel a little of what they profess) of giving a place occasionally in their Public Journals to such extracts as the one we are now making, instead of filling their Editorial columns with "difficulty and alarm," which the New York Enquirer has conjured up, as mendacing Old England.

(From Bell's Weekly Messenger.)

"Upon the whole, though England from various circumstances, would find it most beneficial to preserve the peace of Europe, she has perhaps of all the powers, the least to apprehend from a renewal of war. Of invasion she can have no possible dread. Her Navy only requires to be let loose to sweep every flag before it. Her Colonies are in a state of perfect security, except against a black insurrection; and her Military Force, when required to act, will be found as it always has been, invincible. Her Commercial allies form a strong part of her power. She can attack France, at any time, through Flanders, if it be deemed necessary; and in conjunction with Prussia and the Netherlands, could easily check the progress of that ambitious power in all future wars.

"We cannot better conclude these observations than with the forcible and eloquent description of a contemporary writer. Look, says he, at the general progress of the British Empire in the materials of wealth and power, since the beginning of the war in 1793. Her Commerce trebled, her means of productive industry quadrupled, her works of defence, and of communication, by land and by water, her concentration of available riches, her immense acquisitions of exterior strength, which give her the keys of three quarters of the world, and more especially the absolute command over all the direct maritime intercourse which can be carried on by the nations of the North, of central and southern Europe, whether through the road of the Mediterranean or of the Atlantic, with Africa, or with the Eastern hemisphere. The Fleets of England were never so predominant as at the hour which we now describe them, over these of every actual or possible rival. The sinuuns, and frame, and spirit of the Army, never so well arranged or constituted. Her arsenals are provided for more than ten years of war—but above all, and paramount stands that strength, which consists in the spirit and defensive character of British policy, inspiring the great body of nations with confidence, and the members of their several Governments with respect.

"With whatever wonder and amazement those Englishmen, whose duty and genius lead them to conduct the discussions of our national interests, may happen to express their feeling of a public wrong or their solicitude for a remedy, is may bring to respect into an unlucky predicament if they venture on such grounds to build any hope of profiting by our apparent quarrels with each other. In free Countries, where opinion is the great mover of the commonwealth, it is unavoidable to paint grievances in strong colours, that they may catch the eye and fix public attention; but we repeat that the power which fancies that because Englishmen remonstrate boldly with their public rulers, their they feel that some partial defect in the political system might be repaired, they will not therefore make common cause with their Government against the intrusions or of foreigners, will find itself in a very unfortunate mistake, and exposed to perils which it would be wise to avoid by timely abstinence from provocation."

We last week gave the proceedings of a Public Meeting at Belleville, on the subject of the Petition against the Naturalization bill, and in this day's paper will be found the proceedings of another Meeting at Bath, together with the opinion of the Grand Jury of the London District on this question. The last Colonial Advocate, under an article on "the State of the Colony," tells us that, the Editors Table groans under the load of Papers and Letters received on this subject, but for "motives which may appear hereafter," the Advocate "judges it best to withhold the important documents"—Here is a puzzle for the good people of Upper Canada—the "documents" are "important," but they are "withheld," and conjecture is left to busy itself, until the Editor may "hereafter" be pleased to condescend to explain his "motives"—all this looks of a "doubtful character." When we have any thing which we consider good or "important," of a public nature, we should think ourselves wanting in respect to our readers, if we told them we had such important documents on an important subject, and yet withheld them, with the very doubtful" and vague information, that our "motives" might possibly "appear hereafter."

But, says the Advocate, "we perceive that the subject has excited much attention in all parts of the United States." Coupling such an expression as this with an article "on the State" of a British "Colony," we should be inclined to think that the readers of the Advocate will be ready to ask—what does this mean? We will tell them—The Buffalo Journal has seized upon an inflammatory article in the Advocate (which we have alluded to in another part of our Editorial Commentary), and has spun out a long article on "Troubles in Canada," and this we suppose is what the Advocate calls "much attention," for though we have an opportunity of seeing a great many American papers, we do not observe any thing of that "attention" in them, which the Advocate seems so much to delight in. The "attention" of the Black Rock Gazette, appears at least to be of a different kind from that, which the Advocate would have it believed has been "excited."

What the Petitioners against the Naturalization Bill will think of the "sneers" of the Advocate, we cannot anticipate. He complains bitterly that one hundred individuals at Flamborough, owning £50,000 worth of property, have subscribed only one shilling each "in aid of the Mission to England," and insultingly enough addresses them with the following doggerel:—

"To keep the cause of liberty
In Canada from failing;
The patriots about Dundas
Gave each a Dublin Shilling!"

If the honest yeomanry of the Country will suffer themselves to be gulled out of their money, to aid the views of the Advocate, by "coming down handsomely," with Pounds, instead of Shillings, they may expect that he will "land them to the skies"—otherwise they may expect that he will ridicule them both in prose and verse. We would venture to recommend them to prefer the latter—to keep close their purse strings, and save their Pounds and Shillings for better uses.

Accident.—George Reid, Mate of the Steam Boat Canada, was last night drowned, by falling from the plank, leading from the Wharf to the Vessel It is painful to hear that the unfortunate man leaves a Wife and five children to deplore his sudden loss.

To Correspondents.—We have to apologise to "a Friend to the Soldier" for not having before acknowledged his communication. He speaks of "times long past"—not doubting but that these things are better ordered now-a-days, he will excuse our not inserting his communication.

"Argus," will we think appreciate our motives when we inform him, that for the present at least, it is our desire to abstain from further remark with respect to the "infatuated person," he speaks of. If we felt inclined to point out the political inconsistencies which have marked the career of the individual he alludes to, we have volumes, in our possession, penned by himself, which contain his own condemnation—but we refrain, and have no doubt that under present circumstances "Argus" will see the propriety of our conduct.

"N" is unavoidably postponed till next week.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come

GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K.C.B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

38-6m JOHN SMALL, C. E. C

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, upon at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that it at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

CHAP. XVII.

AN ACT for affording Public Aid towards the Completion of the Welland Canal.

[Passed 17th Feb'y. 1827.]

WHEREAS it is necessary to afford public aid in furtherance of the great undertaking now in progress for uniting the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario by a Canal, navigable for such Vessels as are ordinarily used for transport on the Lakes.

Be it therefore enacted, by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, Constituted and Assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the Fourteenth Year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual Provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further Provision for the Government of the said Province;'" and by the authority of the same, That at any time before the first day of April next it shall be in the power of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or Person Administering the Government, of this Province to direct His Majesty's Receiver General to subscribe Stock in the Welland Canal Company to the amount of Fifty Thousand Pounds, which Stock shall from thenceforth be held as, and deemed to be, public Stock, and that the Government of this Province shall, as the holders of such Stock be subject to the same conditions and have the same powers, advantages, and privileges as other Stockholders in the said Company.

II. And whereas it will afford great relief to the said Company to be enabled to avail themselves of the whole funds thus subscribed by the Government, without the delay of calling in instalments, and such advance will further enable the said Company to resume and continue their operations without the necessity of exacting from individual Stockholders such rapid advances of capital as they have hitherto, at great inconvenience, been compelled to furnish; And whereas it is reasonable that, in consideration of such facility to be afforded to the Company, the Government should be relieved from the immediate payment of interest on the sum to be advanced by them. Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That before such sum of Fifty Thousand Pounds shall be advanced by the Government to the said Company, a written assent, under the seal of the said Company, shall be deposited with His Majesty's Receiver General for the time being, signifying that they are willing to accept the said subscription of Stock and the payment of the same in full, upon the condition that the said Company shall pay to the Government, half yearly, the interest upon the said sum of Fifty Thousand Pounds, from the time of the same being advanced until the expiration of one year from and after the completion of the Welland Canal from the Grand River to Lake Ontario: Provided always nevertheless, that so soon as the proceeds of the said Canal shall afford to the Company a clear dividend of Six per Centum upon the Capital advanced such interest so paid to the Government shall be equitably adjusted as between the Government and the other Stockholders, in any dividends to be thereafter made.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Welland Canal Company shall, before receiving the payment of the Stock to be taken under the authority of this Act, deposit with His Majesty's Receiver General a bond under their Seal, in the penalty of Twenty Thousand Pounds, binding themselves to pay annually to His Majesty the legal interest upon such payment, until the expiration of one year after the whole Canal shall be finished.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall be in the power of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, at any time in his discretion, to direct the Receiver General, for the time being, to sell and transfer the Stock so subscribed, or any portion thereof, so soon as its nominal value can be obtained, and that the sum to be received for the same shall be paid to and remain in the hands of His Majesty's Receiver General for the time being, subject to the disposition of the Legislature thereof.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the interest to be paid by the said Company within the period aforesaid, shall be applicable by His Majesty's Receiver General to the payment of interest on any Loan that may be contracted by the Government for the purposes of this Act, and that all such payments & dividends as may thereafter be paid to the Government on account of the said Stock shall and may be applicable to the public uses of this Province as the Legislature thereof may direct

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the sum of money herein authorized to be raised by Loan and paid on account of Stock to be held in the said Company, shall not be subject to any deduction of poundage for the Receiver General of this Province

VII And whereas, to provide for the payment of the Stock to be subscribed as aforesaid, it is necessary to authorize the raising upon Debenture, the Sum of Fifty Thousand Pounds, in manner hereinafter mentioned: Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be Lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, to authorize and direct His Majesty's Receiver General of this Province, to raise by Loan, at a rate of Interest not exceeding Six Pounds per centum, and as much lower as can be obtained from any Person or Persons, bodies Corporate or Politic, who may be willing to advance the same upon the credit of the Government Bills or Debentures, authorized to be issued as hereinafter mentioned, such Sum not exceeding in the whole, Fifty Thousand Pounds, as may be required for the purposes of this Act.

VIII And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the Receiver General for the time being, to cause or direct any number of Debentures to be made out for such Sum or Sums of Money, not exceeding in the whole the said Sum of Fifty Thousand Pounds, as any person or persons, bodies corporate or politic shall agree to advance on the credit of the said Debentures, which Debentures shall be prepared and made out in such method and form as His Majesty's Receiver General shall think most safe and convenient, and shall be signed by him, and that for each Loan or Advance, three several Debentures shall issue at the same time, bearing date on the day on which the same shall be actually issued, and being each for the payment of one third of the Sum so advanced, at the expiration of the periods not shorter than Two, Four, and Six Years respectively, with Interest according to the rate at which such Loan shall be negociated, from the date of such Debenture until the same shall be discharged.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all such Debentures with the Interest thereon, and all charges incident to or attending the same, shall be, and are hereby charged and chargable upon, and shall be repaid and borne out of the Monies that shall come into the hands of the Receiver General to and for the Public uses of this Province, and at the disposal of the Legislature thereof.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Loan authorized by this Act shall be contracted for upon the express condition, that at any time either before or after the said Debentures, or any of them, which are by this Act directed to be issued, shall become due according to the terms thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, if he shall think proper so to do, to direct a Notice to be inserted in the Upper Canada Gazette, requiring all holders of the said Debentures, to present the same for payment; and if, after insertion of the said Notice for Three Months, any Debenture shall remain out more than Six Months from the first publication of such Notice, all Interest on such Debentures, after the expiration of the said Six Months, shall cease and be no further payable, in respect to the time which may elapse between the expiration of the said Six Months, and their presentment for payment.

XI And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and every the provisions contained in a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the Seventh Year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to authorize the Government to borrow a certain Sum of Money upon Debenture, to be loaned to the Welland Canal Company," respecting the Debentures, authorized by the said Act passing current, with certain Public Accountants, the payment of Interest upon the same by such Accountants, and the suspension of interest in certain cases, the submitting to the Legislature accounts of such Debentures, and the Interest paid thereon and the expenses attending the same, the payment of Interest to holders of such Debentures, the remuneration to the Receiver General for the services required by the said Act, paying off and cancelling the said Debentures; and also, the provision made in the Seventh Section of the said Act, for punishing the Forging of any Debenture thereby authorized to be issued, or of any matter or thing relating thereto, or the knowingly uttering any such Forged Debenture, or other matter as aforesaid, shall apply to, and be in force in respect to the Debentures which shall be issued according to this Act.

CHAP. XIX.

AN ACT to provide for a further Survey of the Works done at the Burlington Bay Canal, and also to afford further aid to complete the same.

[Passed 17, Feb. 1827.]

WHEREAS it appears from the report of the Commissioners for the Canal at Burlington Bay, and the Survey of a Civil Engineer, accompanying the said Report, that the said Work cannot be completed with the funds at the disposal of the Commissioners, but that a great additional expenditure will be necessary for that purpose; And whereas it also appears that a large sum of money has been expended upon the said Work, and that from the nature of the undertaking no public benefit will accrue from such expenditure, if the Canal and the Works necessary for its protection are left unfinished; And whereas the interests and convenience of a great portion of the surrounding Country, as well as the general safety of navigation upon Lake Ontario, hold forth strong inducements to persevere in the Work till it is completed, more especially as there are good grounds for believing that the Tolls which the Canal will yield, will ultimately reimburse whatever advance it may be necessary to make from the public revenue.

Be it therefore enacted, by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and Assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, intituled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the Fourteenth Year of His Majesty's Reign, intituled, 'An Act for making more effectual Provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further Provision for the Government of the said Province;'" and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, to procure a minute inspection and particular survey and report of the work done at the said Canal by two competent Civil Engineers, and if it shall be ascertained that the portion which has been completed is substantially and judiciously executed, so that it may be properly proceeded in and finished according to the present design, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, to authorize and direct His Majesty's Receiver General of this Province to raise by Loan, at a rate of interest not exceeding six per centum, and as much lower as can be obtained, from any person or persons, bodies corporate or politic, who may be willing to advance the same upon the credit of the Government Bills or Debentures authorized to be issued as hereinafter mentioned, such sums (not exceeding in the whole Eight Thousand Pounds) as may be required for the purposes of this Act.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the said Receiver General to cause or direct any number of Debentures to be made out for any such sum or sums of money, not exceeding in the whole the said sum of Eight Thousand Pounds, as any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, shall agree to advance on the credit of the said Debentures, which Debentures shall be prepared and made out in such method and form as His Majesty's Receiver General shall think most safe and convenient, and shall be signed by him, and that for each loan or advance three several Debentures shall issue at the same time, bearing date on the day on which the same shall be actually issued, and being each for the payment of one third of the sum so advanced at the expiration of Three, Six, and Nine Years respectively, with interest according to the rate at which such loan shall be negotiated, from the date of such Debenture until the same shall be discharged.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all such debentures, with the interest thereon, and all charges incident to or attending the same, shall be and are hereby charged and chargeable upon, and shall be repaid and borne by and out of the monies that shall come into the hands of the said Receiver General to and for the public uses of this Province and at the disposal of the Legislature thereof.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the loan authorized by this Act shall be contracted for upon the express condition, that at any time either before or after the said Debentures, or any of them, which are by this Act directed to be issued, shall become due according to the terms thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, if he shall think proper so to do, to direct a notice to be inserted in the Upper Canada Gazette, requiring all holders of the said Debentures to present the same for payment, and if after the insertion of the said notice for Three Months, any Debenture shall remain out more than Six Months from the first publication of such notice, all interest on the said Debentures, after the expiration of the said six months, shall cease and be no further payable in respect to the time which may elapse between the expiration of the said six months and their presentment for payment.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and every the provisions contained in a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the seventh year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to authorize the Government to borrow a certain sum of money upon Debentures to be Loaned to the Welland Canal Company," respecting the Debentures authorized by the said Act passing current with certain public accountants, the payment of interest on the same by such accountants, and the suspension of interest in certain cases, the submitting to the Legislature accounts of such Debentures, and the interest paid thereon, and the expenses attending the same, the payment of interest to the holders of such Debentures, the remuneration to the Receiver General for the services required by the Act, the paying off and cancelling the said Debentures, and the punishment awarded for Forging any of the said Debentures, or for any thing relating thereto, shall apply to, and be in force in respect to the Debentures which shall be issued under the authority of this Act.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Sum of Money herein authorized to be raised by Loan, shall not be subject to any deduction of Poundage for the Receiver General of this Province, any Law, Usage, or Custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be Lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, if the said Sum of Eight Thousand Pounds shall be raised as aforesaid, to appoint a competent Civil Engineer of established reputation, to superintend the said Work, to whom such allowance shall be made for his services as to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, shall seem just.

England.

A meeting of the ship-owners was held on the 23d at which it was resolved that they would do all in their power to impress upon Government the importance of employing British vessels only in the lumber trade. It was expected that they would succeed in this object.

A London paper of Feb. 21st says, we understand that reports have reached town, through the North West Company, that Capt. Franklin had accomplished the objects of his overland expedition, and had fallen in with and embarked on board His Majesty's ship, Blossom, which had been sent for the purpose of meeting him in Behring's Straits. It is added that some of the party who were with him had retraced their steps by their original route.

London, Feb. 23.—The stoppage of the Thames navigation by the frost, has for the present suspended all business on the Corn Exchange.

It is reported that the Ministers are willing to adopt some suggestions to relieve the distress of the ship-owners, and that various expedients are to be submitted to them. The most prominent is the withdrawing of part of the duty on timber from North America. The ship-owners want also a renewed assurance that the Ministers will not relax relative to the intercourse between the West Indies and North America.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Army and Ordnance Estimates.

The only part of the debate which related to America occurred in the discussion of items for the repairs of the Citadel of Quebec; and for Fortifications on the St. Lawrence. In reply to some inquiries of Mr. Baring on those items, Sir H. Hardinge stated, that the increased proportion for the Quebec Citadel was occasioned by a plan, originating in economy, to complete it in a shorter time than at first contemplated, and which required an annual expenditure of £30,000 instead of £15,000, the usual grant, to complete the work within three years. With regard to fortifications on the St. Lawrence, he could state, that no such thing as the construction of them along the river was intended. It was intended merely to form proper depots in Lower Canada, where there was not a place in which they could keep a cannister of powder in safety. In the course of the year 1825, he added, a Commission which had been sent to Canada had recommended, it was true, works to be raised at certain points; but the defence of so extensive a frontier as had been mentioned, was not thought of. There were, undoubtedly, parts which required additional defence; and quarters for a body of troops at Halifax, which had been recommended, appeared to be necessary; because if any enemy turned the sea-batteries, as the place was at present situated, the town must fall into his power. It was also recommended to erect a building, a small work, in Upper Canada, not as a point d' appui, but as a military depot, where troops and stores might be established.—But before any part of this recommendation was carried into effect, the estimates would be laid before the House.

Mr. Hume remarked, that £51,475, was to be paid for expenses in Upper Canada, of which £9,450 was charged for the Illinois (probably Iroquois,) a colony which had been described as a land of milk and honey. Poor England, he added, was to pay for a losing trade, without a remedy. He hoped for some speedy change in the colonial policy.

Sir H. Hardinge said he would not argue the point of expense, but as Canada formed an integral part of Great Britain, its preservation must be attended to.

CLERGY RESERVES IN CANADA.

Mr. W. HORTON rose, pursuant to notice, to move for leave to bring in a bill to enable the King to authorise the alienation of a part of the Clergy reserves in Upper Canada. Some time back an agreement was entered into, between Government and the Canada Company, by which the Company was to have part of the Clergy reserves, on certain terms. The quantity they were to take, was about 129,000 acres. The original agreement had, however, been somewhat altered, and in consequence, it had become necessary to have a power to alienate the lands in question. The necessity of this had been before acknowledged by the House, for in an Act which was passed on this subject, it was stated in the preamble, that the lands were lying waste for want of cultivation, and that the best way to render them of any value, was by selling part, that with the proceeds the rest might be brought into tillage. It was, therefore, enacted, that facilities should be given for selling it. That House had already assented the principle of this arrangement, by giving their sanction to an exchange, which was to have been effected between the Government & the Canada Company, but events that afterwards took place had rendered its execution unnecessary. A subsequent arrangement had been made of the same nature which the Bill now proposed went to authorize; the object of this Bill being to enable the Crown to alienate such lands, heretofore appropriated as Clergy reserves, as the Clergy might be disposed to part with, in order to raise by that means funds applicable to the general improvement of the Colony, and to enhance the value of the lands remaining unalienated.—[Hear.] He should not think it necessary on the present occasion, therefore, to do more than to move for leave to bring in a Bill to enable the King to authorize the alienation and sale of a part of the Clergy reserves, in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

Mr. STANLEY congratulated the House on the view which this application proved that His Majesty's Government now took of the interests of Canada; the vast extent and importance of which, from long acquaintance with that Province and its affairs, he thought that he fully appreciated. Whatever might be the difference upon particular topics of party feeling in that interesting colony—and there was no place in the world, perhaps, where party feeling ran higher than in the Legislative Assembly of Canada—there was no difference of opinion throughout the two Provinces, of the propriety of getting rid of those appropriations of land, called the Clergy reserves. Being convinced that, whatever contrariety of opinion might rest in the Canadas upon other matters, there would be a perfect unanimity on this, he should give his most cordial support to the motion of the Hon. Secretary. (Hear.) He could not, in this feeling, refrain from declaring his satisfaction to the House; and while he congratulated that Honorable Secretary (Mr. Wilmot Horton) upon the zeal and ability which he had displayed in his labours relative to Canada, he would also express his hope that the Hon. Gentleman might live to enjoy, as the best reward of his able exertions, the accomplishment of the confirmed advancement and greatness of that splendid, but hitherto unimproved Colony. [Cheers.]

Mr. HUME was satisfied that nothing would be more grateful to Canada than the measure now introduced by the Hon. Gentleman opposite. [Hear.] There were, however, to his mind, some strange questions connected with this Canada Company; and he should be glad to know when the House were to be put in possession of the proceedings between that Company and His Majesty's Government, relative to sales or exchanges of lands. It had given great dissatisfaction to people in Canada, that any Company should have the monopoly, as it were, of all these Clergy reserves made over to them, and then be permitted to deal them out to purchasers at their own price. He hoped that, in future, the sales of lands in Canada would be more open, and that Government would dispose of them to those, in short, who came with the money to buy them; for, unless the purchases were public, and made with a view to the improvement of the capital invested, the lands would never be really improved, nor the roads and necessary communications completed.

Mr. LOMBE made some few observations; but they were inaudible in the gallery.

Mr. W. HORTON said, that as the Hon. Member for Aberdeen had alluded to the grants of land which were made in Canada, and seemed, on one or two points, to misapprehend the real state of the facts in that particular, perhaps the House would permit him to offer a few words in explanation, which would also have the effect of possessing the House with some facts that it was of consequence they should be apprized of. (Hear, hear.) In the first place he had not the slightest objection in the world to give the information which that Hon. Member called for. As to the impropriety of what the Hon. Member for Aberdeen called, the monopoly of the Canada Company; the House would please to understand, that the very object which that Hon. Member insisted upon—the improvement of the lands—was necessarily the object and end of the Canada Company; for that Company could themselves, derive no benefit, whatever from their transactions, unless they disposed of these lands in the manner, and to the individuals, most calculated to benefit the Colony at large. It was for them to take care that the lands should be brought into that productive state which would make them desirable to the Settlers and Colonists; and if this was not done, they could not attain a single end of their constitution. The paper which he held in his hand, would shew that sufficient provision had been provided for, obliging the Clergy Corporation to adopt, hereafter, all proper and necessary measures for improving the Clergy reserves; so that, not only in respect of those reserves, but in respect of all the others, the objection would no longer apply, that they were permitted to be waste and unprofitable. With regard to what the Member for Aberdeen had said about the expediency of opening the sales and grants of lands, he (Mr. Horton) entirely concurred in the suggestion; and in that trust, that in a committee up stairs, some efficient arrangements for this, and other beneficial purposes, as applying to such sales, would speedily be determined upon. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. A. BARING begged to ask, whether these Clergy reserves were intended solely for the Church of England?

Mr. WILMOT HORTON replied—Undoubtedly. The Act of 1791 provided and enacted, "that one-seventhout of every grant of land should be reserved, for the Church of England."

Mr. A. BARING.—And these reserves, therefore were to be considered as the property of the Church of England?

Mr. W. HORTON.—Yes according to the Act of 1791.

Mr. A BARING observed, that that part of this question which was connected with the inquiry he had just made of the Hon. Secretary, must be considered as standing perfectly distant from all that part of it which related to the disposal of these reserved lands. He had, personally, a strong objection to this appropriation of lands to the Church of England.—(Hear.)—and this, not from any disrespect to that Establishment, of which, on the contrary, he was as zealous and attached a member as any Hon. Gentleman in that House, but from his anxiety that we should not sow in Canada the seeds of that fatal dissension which was now so deplorably ripe in Ireland; and which, if we did not take care, would, at no distant time, shake our connection with that kingdom to its foundation. He wished the House to see, what was the state in Canada of the Church of England, for the welfare of which they were also anxious; and upon this he was convinced that every man of sense must perceive, that, so far from these measures of appropriation protecting and strengthening it, they were rendering it, and its utmost jeopardy—they were destroying that Church itself, if it were liable to destruction; and violating every feeling which could connect the affections of the colony with the Mother Country. As to the other part of the question, relative to the proposed disposal of these Church Reserves, upon that there could be no doubt. These reserve grants were originally made under a total misapprehension of the nature and value, and circumstances, of waste lands, situate in a country like Upper Canada. With respect to the subject of emigration to Canada, he objected to the proposition of the Hon. Secretary, as to the advances to be made by parishes for effecting the removal of their paupers, and the repayments to be made to those parishes. ("No, no," from Mr. Horton.) He might be mistaken; yet he could not help apprehending that such was the substance of the proposition, at least, which had been submitted to the Committee. He that as it might; his object was, in this address to the House, to shew what really was the state of the Established Church in Upper Canada, and to call upon the House to consider how far an appropriations whatever, of this nature, were likely to promote its interests. (Hear, hear, hear.)

Mr. W. HORTON again rose to explain. All that was intended to be effected by the measure now introduced to the House, was shortly this, the alienation of a portion of these Clergy reserves, with a view to enhance the value of the remainder. [Hear.] He would not now enter into the extensive question of the condition of the Protestant Church in Canada; for though the Hon. Member for Callington (Mr. Baring) had adverted to it, it was in no way at present before the House. That Hon. Member would give him leave to repeat his intimation, that he was in error, as to the advances by the Parishes. It was never intended to repay them any part of their advances; what had been suggested to them was, that which he now stated, and had before stated in the House; namely, that there were many parishes in England which would be too happy to pay down one-half of the expenses of the removal of their paupers. [Hear.] As to another point that had been mooted, he begged to state, that what was contemplated by the Committee was, that the monies arising from the quit rents in question, were to be applied to the purposes of the Province itself, and in aid and repayment of those expenses, which would have been entered into, on the part of the Mother Country, on account of the Province. An exemplification of this proposal would occur, if the quit rents should be found sufficient to defray, for instance, the whole of the Military expenses of the Colony, which were paid, under the existing practice, from an immediate vote of the Parliament of this Country. [Hear, hear.] He would shortly lay before the House, a statement of the manner in the terms of the agreement entered into by the Canada Company, as he had before promised. The variation consisted, principally, in the exchange of 1,000,000 of acres lying in one District of Canada for 890,000 of acres situate in another; the 890,000 acres being, clergy reserves' land.

Mr. WARBURTON reminded the Hon. Secretary that, in the United States, reserves of land were made out of their grants for the great and grand purposes of education. Now he wished to ask the Hon. Gentleman opposite, whether the making similar provision for the education of the inhabitants of the vast regions in question formed any part of his plan? Or whether it was his intention, in this respect, to revise that portion of the Canada Act which had appropriated those very large reserves in favour of the Clergy of the Established Church? For his own part, he apprehended that little objection would be offered to this extensive reserve of one seventh of the land under every grant, if it were, at the same time conditioned, that some large proportion of that one seventh should be reserved, again, for the furtherance of Canadian education.

Mr STANLEY, in explanation, declared, that, still adhering to the expressions he had used in the commencement with the question of the Hon Secretary for the Colonial Department, he begged to be understood as most fully coinciding in the opinion of his Hon. friend (Mr. Baring), as to the gross and obvious inconsistency of assigning such large portions of land in favour of that, which, let them call it as they would, neither was at present, nor ever would be an Established Church in Canada.

Mr. N. CALVERT was suggesting that the bill ought to contain a power to the clergy of repurchase, when

Mr. W. HORTON stated, that there was such a provision, which was to take effect after the lapse (we believe) of twenty years.

Mr. Alderman WAITHMAN hoped that Government would take care to prevent all the abuses of those general companies from attaching to the Canada Company; and then he detailed some cases of deception and hardship which had been experienced by emigrants to Colombia, confiding in the promises held out by the Joint Stock Company, under whose auspices they left England, considering with a recommendation to His Majesty's Ministers to keep a very vigilant eye on the Canada Company.

Mr. W. HORTON observed, that this Company, as every Gentleman in that House must know, was invested with certain specific powers by Parliament. Those it could not exceed. As to the general sort of declamation in which the worthy Alderman had indulged against all Companies, because some Companies had misconducted themselves, it was really unworthy the sound judgment which that House ought always to exercise in its deliberations. [Hear, hear, hear.]

Mr. DAWSON [of Louth] expressed his dissatisfaction with these Clergy reserves, as being inefficient for the purpose which they were meant to answer.

Mr. W. HORTON was really unable to do more than repeat the arguments he had already used; and which, he thought, had sufficiently explained the object and the details of the measure.

Leave was then given to bring in the bill.

EMIGRATION.

Mr. WILMOT HORTON rose, pursuant to the notice which he had given before the recess to move for the appointment of a fresh Emigration Committee; and he observed that what he should have to address the House would be more in his character of Chairman of the Committee which sat on this subject, and to explain and give an account of the evidence which had been adduced before it, than to hold out expectations of any definite measure to be adopted respecting it. Perhaps it would be a convenient mode for him to inform the House of the circumstances which led to the appointment of this Committee. In 1823, an Emigration of a few individuals took place from the south of Ireland to Upper Canada; it was indeed of so trifling a nature as to make no sensible diminution of the populous where the chief object of it was to make an experiment how far such a measure might be practicable and beneficial. The Honorable Member said, that he had stated in the Committee relating to the poor of Ireland the plan of Emigration, and they approved of it. In 1825 another vote for an experiment was proposed to this House, and was opposed, as being contrary to sound principle; and it was observed that these partial emigrations could do no good and that to be of any service the plan must be extended on a more general and lenient scale; to this it was replied, that it was merely intended as an experiment and at length, the vote was agreed to on condition that a Committee should be appointed to examine into the subject; that Committee sat last Session, and proceeded to collect and examine evidence to a great extent; but although it had procured much and valuable information, it had by no means exhausted the subject. He should not do justice to the subject if he failed to direct the attention of the House to the evidence given before the Committee respecting the state of Ireland, the country from which the emigrants had proceeded. The dreadful state of that country at the period when the emigrating took place was set forth in the evidence of the Bishop of Limerick, Dr. Doyle, who was a person from who had means of acquiring accurate information on the subject. It appeared from their statements, that, at that time Ireland was overrun with a redundant pauper population, who were actually deprived of the means of existence, for whose labour there was no real demand, and who wandered about depending for subsistence either upon charity or plunder. He would inform the House of the manner in which the emigrants who were removed from Ireland to Upper Canada, under the superintendence of Mr. Robinson, had been disposed of. Of 180 families who went out, 120 had located, and planted themselves. The others earned their subsistence from working as labourers for which purpose they proceeded during the summer to the United States; but as he had before said the 120 families had rooted themselves in the soil on which they were placed, and were at this moment living there, prosperous and happy. By calculations which had been made, and which would be submitted to the Committee about to be appointed it was estimated that the property belonging to the families thus planted amounted in 1826 to £7000; and it was further estimated that at the end of seven years from their first establishment, that property would be augmented to £30,000. Here, then, was the gratifying spectacle of a pauper population removed from a state of utter destitution to a soil incalculably fruitful, where, if it were but scratched, so productive was it, the result would be a harvest as abundant as any that could be raised in this country, notwithstanding all the advantages which we derived from a long-continued course of cultivation. It appeared, also, from the evidence, that the emigrants were perfectly satisfied with their condition. The Right Hon. Gentleman then proceeded to shew the expediency of re-appointing a Committee to inquire into the subject of emigration from the United Kingdom by the unemployed portion of the labouring classes; and after a luminous explanation of the intended purposes, and a most affecting description of the present wants among an almost countless number of the working population, the Right Hon. Gentleman concluded by moving—that the Committee to consider of the expediency of emigration should be re-appointed.

Mr. JAMES GRATTAN objected to the motion as calculated to mislead the public. The Hon. Member concluded by moving, as an Amendment, "That the state of distress existing in this country at present and the still greater distress which has existed for so many years in Ireland, require some more immediate and permanent remedy than that which could be expected to result from the re-appointment of a Committee on Emigration."

Mr. LOMBE seconded the Amendment, which was supported by Mr. Bright and Mr. Hume.

The original motion was powerfully supported by Mr. Brownlow, Colonel Torrens, Mr. Baring, and Mr. Secretary Peel, and was finally carried without a division.

Foreign Intelligence.

Latest from Portugal.—The brig Co facia, Capt. Riley arrived yesterday, in 15 days from Lisbon. Capt. R. furnishes a single number of the "Portuguese" of the 27th of February. It is chiefly filled with the proceedings of the Cortes, which do not, on a cursory examination, appear to be of much interest.

The paper contains a copy of a convention stipulating certain arrangements for the maintenance of the British forces in Portugal, which was entered into at London, on the 19th of Jan. by the Portuguese Ambassador and Mr. Canning, on the part of their respective Governments. By the convention the British troops are to be maintained, while in Portugal, at the expense of that Government.

General Clinton arrived at Coimbra on the 19th Feb. The 23d regiment of British Infantry had come in; three regiments of infantry, a battalion of artillery, and the Prince Regent had arrived on the 15th. Another regiment was expected on the following day.

The two Chambers of the Cortes were in session. A committee was appointed by the Peers to draw up an address to the throne, requesting that pardon might be offered to certain descriptions of rebels. The Count Villa Flor was present, and of course had absented himself from the army.

Jamaica papers have been received at Norfolk, by the ship New York Packet, which confirm the report heretofore published, of the permission granted by the Governor of Barbadoes to import in British vessels produce of the United States from other foreign West India Islands, and it is supposed the like instructions will be given to the Governors of the other Islands.

Domestic.

[The following is an Extract from a Sermon preached in Montreal in St. James's Chapel, by the Rev. Dr. Mountain, on the 18th Instant of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS the DUKE OF YORK.]

"Who can forbear admiring the dignified and humane conduct of the late Duke of York, when the impious and infuriated Robespierre, and his agents, issued an order to the French army, to give no quarter to the English or Hanoverian troops? This order was the cause of the first fruits of that infidel philosophy, which was then in so much repute, and by whith its votaries boasted, they would regenerate the world. The proscription of humanity, followed the proscription of Christianity; and murder was legalized by that pardon might be offered to certain descriptions of rebels. The Count Villa Flor was present, and of course had absented himself from the army.

It surely is the duty of British Subjects, to be patrons of loyalty; to value their privileges —to guard their constitution—and to respect the authority of their Sovereign in himself, and in his representative. For of all the constitutions under heaven, the British is demonstrably the best. It combines the promptitude and decision of a monarchy, with the wisdom and caution of an aristocracy, and the freedom of democracy. It is equally removed from despotism on the one hand, and popular licentiousness on the other. "It has been long tried, and stood the rudest tests. The lapse of ages tends only to invigorate it, and render it more effective. It is an honour to be born under it; a blessing to live under it; and a glory to defend and support it. It is like that mighty tree, described by the prophet, widely diffused in its roots, and vast in its stem: its branches are spread over all the earth, and under them fowl of every wing find shelter. It is the envy of the nations of the world, and should be the boast of its own sons. It is the nursery of every thing pure in religion; sound in policy; good in law; wise in council; deep in learning; and sublime in science?—and, let its enemies know it, resistless in might! It required a thousand years to bring it to its present perfection; were it destroyed, it would require three thousand, to produce one better." Let us then duly esteem and gratefully acknowledge our privileges. Let each of us take the advice of the wise man, and cultivate the sentiment amongst our neighbours:—"My son, fear thou the Lord and the King: and meddle not with them that are given to change." "Peace be within thy walls, O Britain, and prosperity within thy palaces!" May God bless our King, our Country, and all that are in authority over us! May he bless all the nations of the earth! and hasten the period speedily arrive, when "wars shall cease unto the ends of the earth"—where man shall every where recognize in his fellow man, a friend and a brother; and when all shall know the Lord, from the least even unto the greatest!"

Shocking Accident.—On Friday afternoon, the 15th instant, as ELISHA BARNES, residing in the Fourth Concession of the township of Zorra, was chopping down a tree near his house, the tree, contrary to his expectation, fell on his house, broke through the roof and killed his wife on the spot.—Mr. Barnes had removed to this place, from the township of Burford but fifteen days before, bringing with him his wife and seven children; four of whom were in the house and witnessed this dreadful termination of their mother's existence—but the children escaped unhurt. It appears to have been a projecting limb of the tree that struck the unfortunate woman's head, which was literally crush'd to pieces!—Gore Gazette.

Lt. Colonel Cockburn, we are now informed, comes out to this country on business connected with the disputed Boundary question.—Quebec Mercury.

Mr. WATSON—It would seem (says the Canadian Courant) that facts are leaking out concerning the murder of Mr. Watson. The gun spoken of in our last as having been seen by Mr. Watson's servant girl, is now in the Police Office, and is recognized by Mr. Gosselin, to be one which he repaired in October last for Cameron, who is yet confined, awaiting a further investigation of the case. We understand there are marks upon it to which Mr. Gosselin, as well as the girl, can positively swear.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

TO THE ANGLO AMERICANS.

I have read with attention, the Letter of Mr. Geo. Tiffany addressed to you, through the medium of the Gore Gazette, and cannot but approve the spirit and intention of the writer—the confidence he recommends you to place in your Government—the forbearance he urges, until calm reflection shall have matured your judgments—until time shall have proved the expediency of the proposed measures,—until actual experience shall have shown them, in their true and proper light—and practically demonstrated how far your present apprehensions and alarms have just foundation. The tone and temper of the letter evince his solicitude for you, and demonstrate his own sincerity. I cannot but applaud those, who in defiance of clamour, are bold and honest enough, manfully like him, to speak forth their sentiments openly and freely, thereby doing justice to their own feelings and assisting the ignorant or the wavering with the benefit of their opinions and advice. The times and the perplexities occasioned by industrious misrepresentation not only warrant—but render this kind of public avowal of opinion, incumbent as well as praise-worthy.

Of all the various objections I have heard advanced against the Naturalization Bill, that of renouncing foreign Allegiance: appears to me to be, not only the most unreasonable in itself—but least understood.

In the United States, (as very properly remarked by the Editor of the Gore Gazette,) the party naturalized is required to swear, in open Court, in the very outset, that it is his intention to renounce for ever, Allegiance, to his Native Country; and by a reference to the Naturalization Laws, passed by that Government in 1820, it will be found, that at that time there were Aliens there of long standing —still requiring Naturalization—who are required to go into open Court to record their names, and subscribe the Oaths &c. as well as new comers—but in consideration of their long residence, it is provided; "that Aliens of English-men—Irishmen, or Scotchmen for example residing within the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, between June 1798, and April 1802, and who have continued to reside there may be naturalized, without making the previous declaration of intention to become Citizens;"—which declaration is exacted of new comers in open Court under Oath, two years before they are admitted to the privileges of Naturalization. A comparison of this Law with the Bill proposed will shew at once, how much more liberal the latter is, both towards old settlers as well as new. No man with us abjures Allegiance to his Native State; and as the American Government sanction the principle of Expatriation, the Laws would attach no blame to an individual, who (like the proposed Bill implies the renunciation of foreign Allegiance; and by doing so, it implies nothing more, than the Laws of the United States sanction and permit, with regard to American Citizens. All the croaking therefore about Treason to that Country, about lending an Index of revolted Subjects to that Government is furtile and unnecessary. By the Laws of England however, no one can expatriate himself, that is, no one by abjuring his Native Allegiance, can renounce himself from his Birth-right obligations.

The American States knowing this, require it to be done, as the only condition of Naturalization—upon the principle of course, that by their own Laws it is permitted to their own people, when naturalized in other Countries, and that they do not recognize the lex loci of other Powers, whose Subjects they receive. With us, Native Allegiance cannot be cast off. A British Subject naturalized in America still owes to his paramount Allegiance to Great Britain; but an American Citizen, by the Laws of his Country, may when naturalized here, absolve himself from his Allegiance to that State. So it seems that their exactions are made from our Subjects, which our Laws forbid—while here, nothing is required of their Subjects, which their Laws do not sanction.

As far however as an Individual can cast off his Native Allegiance, he is made to do so in the United States, without regard to the municipal Laws of England; and as long as the party resides within the States, he may of course be sent home by the Government, if not by their Laws bound to do so. That Government I am sure, notwithstanding the Oath "for ever," exacted of naturalized foreigners, does not suppose, that a naturalized Englishman is not at liberty to return at any time, to his native home—or that his Naturalization Oath renounces his Native political Obligations, and abandon both the duties and privileges of American Citizenship. "For ever" therefore in his declaratory Oath with a view to Naturalization—and the Oath of Allegiance upon its ultimate completion, must be understood with some qualification. In its largest sense, it can only be co-extensive with the life of the person concerned. When a person seeks for Naturalization in the United States, it may be presumed, he intends to continue until his death the Subject of the Country he adopts; more especially when that Country admits him to all the enjoyments of one Native born; and so with the Oath" forever" may be required—but with an implied right to the party nevertheless, to change his condition when disposed—and to resume his Native rights, or to enter into the Family of other political Societies. When he is asked to abjure all other Allegiance therefore, it must be understood, that he does so as long as he continues an American Citizen—so long—as he enjoys American privileges and receives American Protection;—no longer. A contrary construction would be repugnant to her laws, which as before stated sanction expatriation. "Forever" as used in our Naturalization Bill, must also be understood in a limited sense, as well as in the U. States. With us it means, a renunciation of foreign Allegiance, as long as the naturalized person lives: just as, and to the same extent, as if the person had been a Native born Subject; but in no other sense and to no further extent. An Individual naturalized under the proposed Act, and one born here, will stand on the same footing. The former is politically re born—he becomes bound by a permanent duty to us, just as binding and durable as that of a Native, but no more or less so. He cannot more than a Native expatriate himself afterwards. It will be of course no crime either in him or a Native hereafter to seek Naturalization elsewhere, if the Allegiance due to His Majesty is not infringed. Mere Naturalization abroad is no crime in our Law, but it cancels none of the obligations occurring by birth or naturalization here—it is not with us sanctioned as in the United States. It is not with us as there permitted to Individuals to cease to be Subjects of ours, tho' they may with impunity become Subjects of other Governments. By becoming such foreign Subjects, they are not licensed to side with that Government in hostility to ours. Any Act, aiding or abetting an enemy of ours, would be no less Treason in an Individual because naturalized Subject of that enemy, than if he were a recent diserter from our ranks; however considerations of political expediency might recommend for him a different, or more lenient treatment.

Every British Subject Naturalized abroad, must, in the eye of our Law, owe a double Allegiance:—he owes by birth a paramount Allegiance to his Native Land—he takes upon himself at his private election, the burthen of an Allegiance to a Foreign Land in consideration of receiving Foreign privileges—but he does not, and cannot, relieve himself from those obligations, which commencing with his birth can only terminate with his death, as far (be it always remembered) as he has any individual power over his own political character. But unmuch as the Laws of the United States admit of expatriation, an American Citizen naturalized here, will owe no double Allegiance, because that Government leaves it to his Individual discretion to cease to be a Citizen whenever he pleases, and to become the Naturalized subject of this, or of any other foreign Dominion.

To conclude the subject therefore, it appears that a renunciation of foreign Allegiance forever under the proposed Act, will place the naturalized persons on the same footing as Natives—imposing upon them the same duties of like duration—and extending to them the same privileges of like extent, and that from thenceforward whatever Allegiance is legally due, or do with impunity, they may do likewise. They are not asked to swear, that they will forever hereafter abstain from seeking foreign Naturalization—but at the present moment, (without pledging their future discretion to themselves,) they are understood to renounce forever all foreign allegiance by the implication of the Act, just as a Natural Born Subject is understood to do by the implication, or if you will, the positive provision of the Common Law. And if the implied renunciation, were construed, as having a prospective as well as present operation, it seems the Laws of the Country, from whence the American Aliens came, authorize each individual, to enter into such a political contract, with this or any other Government of which he desires to become the adopted subject.

In my next I shall consider the subject of Government encouragement, and other matters embraced in Mr. Tiffany's Letter.

MR. EDITOR,

At a numerous Meeting of the inhabitants of the District of Johnstown, held at the Inn of N. F. Soper, in Beverly, on Saturday the 17th inst., Mr. Henry Tidd, of Yonge, read to the audience a petition to the Imperial Parliament against the Naturalization Bill, lately passed by the Provincial Parliament, and earnestly solicited signatures to the same; upon which J. K. Hartwell, Esq. rose, and addressed the Meeting in substance as follows:—

Gentlemen—The long acquaintance which I have had with the majority of you, and the deep interest which I feel for the welfare of a people among whom I have resided from my infancy, prompt me on this occasion to rise and entreat you to pause for a few moments before you put your names to the Petition just read, and to which you have been urged to give your support. Never was any person more fully convinced of any fact than he who has now the honour to address you, is assured that the petition before you, so far from having a tendency to promote the welfare of those who may rashly annex their names to it, will only inflict the smart of bitter reflection upon them, when it will be out of their power to remove the stigma which they will thereby put upon their hitherto unblemished characters. I shall not insult your good judgment, Gentlemen, by supposing for a moment that you do not detect the intrigue which may be so easily traced through the Petition, and perceive that the framers and contrivers of it, while they profess to be your friends, are, under a cloak of pretended patriotism, aiming at your ruin. What, Gentlemen, is the purport of the Petition? It expresses (and that in the most uncouth terms) a disapprobation of the Bill passed by our Provincial Parliament, and reserved for the approbation and assent of His Majesty, which secures to you, upon terms the most easy, all the privileges and immunities of British Subjects natives. There cannot, Gentlemen, be a bill introduced better calculated to afford effectual relief to a numerous and meritorious class of the inhabitants of this Province, and, at the same time, to guard the honor and dignity of the British Government, than the one which the framers of the petition before you have the temerity to oppose. Some of you may probably be ready to ask why you are not already subjects. The reason is a very plain one—because you have not complied with the Naturalization laws hitherto in force in the Province. (Here he enquired the requisitions of the 13th Geo. 2. Chap 7.) If you say that you did not know of the existence of such a law, I ask whose fault was this? Was it the duty of the Government to have given you notice, on the arrival of every emigrant from the United States, (many of whom came in for the purpose of speculation, and were actuated by motives of self interest, than sentiments of attachment to the British Government,) of the uniform them personally of the Naturalization laws? Surely not. It was the duty of all those who intended to be subjects to inquire what was necessary to be done in order to become such. Others, you may perhaps say, "had we known that the 13th Geo. 2, was in force, we could not have complied with all its requisites, particularly taking the sacrament." Admit this objection, and it only shows more clearly the necessity of the bill which this petition opposes. This bill, Gentlemen, removes that difficulty, and places you precisely in the situation of the oath of allegiance, places you in precisely the same situation as if you had been born in this Province, subject to all the responsibilities, and enjoying all the same privileges as the natives of British Subjects. Much has been said against the second clause of this Act, which requires you to abjure allegiance to all foreign powers.—And, Gentlemen, much has been said against the second clause of this Act, which requires you to abjure allegiance to all foreign powers.—And, Gentlemen, inasmuch as the Laws of the United States admit of expatriation, an American Citizen naturalized here, will owe no double Allegiance, because that Government leaves it to his Individual discretion to cease to be a Citizen whenever he pleases, and to become the Naturalized subject of this, or of any other foreign Dominion.

Naturalization Bill.—"It is a measure, we think, can never be introduced into this country, unless at the point of the bayonet—nor, acted upon, without the shedding of blood."

Such is the language which one of the public Journals of this Town, dare to make use of, when speaking of this Subject. It is the language of bold defiance, to the King—to the Parliament—and to the constituted authorities of the Land, by whose authority Laws are made, and administered. It is the language of "Treason, plots, and stratagems." If we should call such language by any other name than that of Sedition, our judgment might very fairly be called in question. To the King it addresses itself.—The Constitution has invested you with a prerogative, which if you exercise by giving your Royal Assent to this Bill will be resisted "at the point of the Bayonet" and can only be enforced by "shedding of blood." To the Parliament it addresses itself.—You have constitutionally granted this prerogative to the King, by passing a Bill that your under the authority of which, the Legislature of Upper Canada have enacted a law now submitted to His Majesty for His consideration—we call upon you, in "future" "to undo your own Act—by insulting your Sovereign—by breaking your plighted faith with him—to pass "at once," "without complying with our demands—to compel Him to refrain from exercising His Royal prerogative—we tell you, that unless you comply with these demands, we are prepared to insist upon them, "at every peril" To the constituted authorities of the Land collectively, it speaks in language not to be misunderstood.—If this law receives the Royal Assent, and becomes a part of the law of the Land we tell you that it "can never be introduced into the country, unless at the point of the bayonet, nor acted upon without the shedding of blood"—however constitutional the measure may be, we are prepared to put you "at defiance."

As to the threat that we may take care that we do not meet "with an awful and sad disappointment" Although the threat is made at the "point of the bayonet" we bend in submission to the decrees of the Almighty of our conduct, and the purity of our motives, we can—

"Smile at the drawn dagger, and defy its point."

The threats of misguided men shall never deter us from doing our duty and the people of this Province, when they read the quotation we have made, will be able to judge, who it is, that would, if he possessed the power, lead them "to the brink of a precipice."

The Government are, and always have been, anxious for the welfare of the people of Upper Canada—they have evinced that anxiety, not by professions only, but by substantial benefits conferred upon them. The present measure has been seized upon by certain persons, to work upon the passions of the public—failing in the attempt—their misrepresentations exposed—their inconsistencies exhibited—their arguments refuted—the loyal and well disposed, convinced and satisfied; what is it they have now recourse to? abuse—invective threats—and telling us, with malicious exultation, that a few persons have been credulous enough, to be imposed upon by them, and they say, have "lost all confidence in their Governments," and who, when calm reflection comes to their aid, will bitterly bewail their own folly, and severely deprecate the conduct of those, at whose instigation, they have sacrificed, not only their property, but sacrificed at the same time the opportunity of securing themselves permanently in the most valuable privileges of British Subjects.

The Naturalization Bill, is an Act of grace, and offers a boon, the richest in the gift of the Crown, to all who may choose to accept of it—it will not be forced upon any one, either at the "point of the bayonet," or by "shedding of blood."

As "the select Party of Friends," in opposition to the Naturalization Bill, who "met and dined together at Port Hope," and who, after "drinking several loyal and appropriate toasts," (in Bumpers, we take it for granted), and being in a regular key for business, passed Eighteen (we will not call them loyal and appropriate) Resolutions—As "the select Party," we say, have condescended to select us for

In Council 21st November, 1825.

For the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

Poetry.

From Mrs. A. S. Colvin's Weekly Messenger.

THE RENEGADE.

He had crossed the Desert's wavy sand,
And he stood among the pilgrim band,
That came; (each toil and danger o'er,)
At Mecca's shrine their vows to pour.
Yet seemed he not of the tawny East,
For veil'd was his glittering vest
He drew, to give his bosom air,
For Eastern birth 'twas far too fair.
But dark the scorn upon his brow,
As moslem e'er was seen to show,
And the glance of his eye,—'twas terrible—
It seemed to pierce, where'er it fell;
And his curling lip and lofty stride,
Betokened his nature's fiercest pride.
But his spirit feels it not a pain,
For which a cure is sought in vain?
Those fits of pensiveness that steal,
While e'en his pride can ill conceal,
Oh! tell they not of a secret sore,
That festers e'en his bosom's core?
And now on the Zemzem's marble brink
He stands, of his limpid wave to drink,
Tho' not in the sacred draught he sought
The virtue that moslem faith had thought;
Nor hoped to quench in the deep filled bowl,
The fever that scorched his burning soul.
And now, when all in prayer are bent,
He calls the woes of his banishment,
The happy hours his childhood knew,
Ere passion its chain around him drew;
When infancy owned a mother's care,
Who taught his lips the holy prayer,
And the happy scenes of that happy time,
He had left—never in his native clime:
And the citron grove, and the orange bower,
Where he chased the bee from flower to flower;
And memory of hopes then formed, now clings
As bright as their dear imaginings.
Oh! 'twas too much for his soul to bear,
And he uttered a sigh of wild despair;
And deeply the thought of his own disgrace,
Was read in the tortured lines of his face—
Oh! 'twas too much, for one who had felt
The send'rest throb within him melt;
For the hard strained chords of feeling burst,
When he felt how deeply he was accurst,
The ruin that for himself he'd made,
The curse that blights the Renegade—
Reason forsook her tottering throne,
And he sighs to the breeze, a Maniac's moan.

SELMA.

Summary.

The Globe says—"There is no truth in the rumours which have been circulated of the resignation of Mr. Canning, nor is it believed that any thing is yet settled as to the future Ministry. One of the arrangements talked of, is that Earl Bathurst will be first Lord of the Treasury—that Lord Plamerston will take a seat in the Cabinet, with the office of Secretary to the Colonies, and that Mr. Wynn will go to India. It is supposed Lord Colchester will be the new Member of the Cabinet.

The emigration committee have reported to the Commons, that they will not recommend the application of the national funds to purposes of emigration, except in aid of local contributions. The distressed weavers of Glasgow and its neighbourhood will, in all probability, be the first class upon which the experiment on a large scale will first be made.

Rundell, the silversmith on Ludgate Hill, lately offered his personal property alone to the amount of one million two hundred thousand pounds sterling!

The speculative demand for Ashes, noticed in our last, having subsided, the market this week has been dull, the total sales amounting only to 320 barrels, consisting of 150 barrels of Montreal Pot at 25s. to 25s. 6d. for new, and 24s. per cwt. for old, and 70 barrels Pearl at 25s. for old, and 28s. 6d. per cwt. for new.

Accounts are said to have been received, that Captain Franklin had accomplished the objects to his overland expedition, and had fallen in with and embarked on board his Majesty's ship Blossom, which had been sent for the purpose of meeting him in Behring's Straits. It is added that some of the party who were with him had retracted their steps by their original route.

Letters have been received from Major Laing, dated subsequently to his arrival at Timbuctoo; but by some oversight the particular date is not inserted. The state of this city, so much talked of, and so much sought after by Europeans, together with the rivers and country adjoining, will soon be made known, and by a hand fully able for the work. We regret however, to learn that, instead of proceeding down the river Niger to the sea, as he intended, Major Laing intends returning home by the way of Tripoli.

A BILL

To authorize the sale of a part of the Clergy Reserves in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

Whereas, by an act passed in the thirty-first year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the fourteenth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled 'An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provisions for the government of the said province,'" it is amongst other things enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to authorize the Governor or Lieutenant Governor of each of the provinces of Upper Canada and Lower Canada respectively, or the persons administering the government therein, to make, from and out of the lands of the crown within such provinces, such allotment and appropriation of lands as therein mentioned, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy within the same; and it was further enacted, That all and every the rents, profits or emoluments, which might at any time arise from such lands so allotted and appropriated as aforesaid, should be applicable solely for the maintenance and support of a Protestant Clergy within the province in which the same should be situated, and to no other purpose whatever:

And whereas, in pursuance of the said act, such allotment and appropriation of land as aforesaid have from time to time been reserved for the purposes therein mentioned; which lands are known within the said provinces by the name of the Clergy Reserves:

And whereas the said Clergy Reserves have in great part remained wasted and unproductive, from the want of capital to be employed in the cultivation thereof; and it is expedient to authorize the sale of certain parts of such Clergy Reserves, to the intent that the monies arising from such sale may be employed in the improvement of the remaining part of the said Clergy Reserves, or otherwise, for the purposes for which the said Reserves are reserved as aforesaid:

Coke, of Norfolk, presented a Petition signed by the Archdeacons of Norwich and Sudbury and 900 of the Clergy of the diocese of Norwich, in favour of Catholic emancipation. An immense number of Petitions were presented by various Members from different parts of the United Kingdom, for and against further concessions to the Catholics; Mr. Canning presented two, one from the Catholic inhabitants of Liverpool, and another from the county of Clare.

Sir FRANCIS BURDETT then rose and addressed the House in a long & eloquent speech, in which he particularly dwelt on the Treaty of Limerick, and the necessity of conceding the demands of the Catholics. He concluded by moving—

"That it is expedient for this House to take into immediate consideration the state of the Laws which impose civil disabilities upon the Roman Catholic subjects of this country, with a view to their repeal."

The motion being seconded in an able speech by Lord Morpeth, Mr. Dawson followed in opposition to the motion. Mr. Rice, Mr. Stewart, Mr. Brownlow, and several other spoke in the course of the evening, and the House, after a very animated debate, adjourned at one o'clock in the morning.

House of Commons, March 6.

CATHOLIC QUESTION RESUMED.

Sir John Newport and Lord Elliot addressed the House in favour of the motion, Mr. Hart Davies against it.

The Master of the Rolls then spoke against the motion at great length, and was admirably answered by Mr. Plunkett, the Attorney General for Ireland.

Mr. Secretary PEEL then rose, but the opening of his speech was frequently inaudable. He spoke of the painful nature of the duty he was called upon to perform, in reference to the necessity under which he found himself differing in this only instance from his colleagues. He had no refuge from those painful feelings but in the consideration that he meant to speak the truth, and to obey the dictates of his conscience. He considered not of those, who, after the lapse of two years, might have looked at this question in a different light, and changed their opinions in consequence; so far from it, that if he saw cause to change, it had been effected in his own mind he should have been as ready to declare it, as he had been to assert his former opinion. But as long as he remained unconvicted of the error of that opinion, he would stand up and maintain it; he would not shrink from that duty, though it separated him from his colleagues and from the majorities of the House. He had hoped to be relieved from the painful necessity of referring to any thing of a personal nature to himself—and the only point upon which he should feel called upon to do so was that which related to the Treaty of Limerick—When this question was before the House in 1825, he had said that if he could be satisfied that any privileges were withholden from the Roman Catholics by the treaty of Limerick, they had given any valuable consideration, his judgment would be materially influenced by the proof of such a fact. But having looked with the greatest attention at this point of the subject, he was bound to say, that he was not satisfied of the truth of that assertion, but on the contrary, was more and more convinced that relief from political disabilities was not contemplated by the treaty of Limerick. The terms of the article upon which so much stress has been laid were, that the Roman Catholics should be guaranteed in their religious privileges, and in the exercise of their religious worship without disturbance. This was argued to extend to political privileges; but he asserted that all the writers of the age, Lord Clarendon among the rest, defined the terms as being limited to that which was connected with the profession and practice of the Roman Catholic religion. Besides this he had the words of King William himself, to whom them the greater was the mystery, and the greater his disgust. And when he reflected that this paper was sent by rational men, and received by rational men, for the purpose of seeking out the ignorance and superstition of the uneducated, he thought it pretty evident that there must be other objects than those of religion. Although he held no objection to individuals entertaining a professed creed of the Catholic faith, yet he had a strong objection to the political system connected with it. If he looked to countries where this religion luxuriated and held an undivided sway—if he looked to countries where it was left to struggle with rival establishments—and if he looked at home, where it was hidden with certain limits and restrictions—he was forced to the conclusion, that that state was the happiest and the most fortunate which supported a mitigated, moderate, temperate predominance of the Protestant Church. It would be the natural conduct of Catholics when once admitted to Parliament, to take every opportunity of improving the condition of their religion, and placing it in a more favourable condition in England. It was not the eventual destruction of the Protestant Church which he apprehended, but the conflicts and struggles which must follow any attempt to accomplish that object. His Rt Hon. Friend had told them that this measure would be the final religious words were explained in favour of the Irish." Under these circumstances then, he thought he was entitled to withhold his assent to the motion of the Honorable Baronet, at least upon the ground of the Treaty of Limerick. [Cheers.] He now came to the general question; and here he must confess that no fear was what had been urged by those who had supported this motion, from decreasing his reluctance to grant the general question, that it had only increased his distrust, and aggravated all his objections. When the Hon. Baronet declared there was no difference in the principle which sent a man to the faggot, and that which inflicted the penalties now existing in this country—and when his Right Honorable Friend the Attorney General for Ireland, told him that if they withheld the same power from any body of Englishmen, they would rise in arms—[Loud Cheers.]—when he heard these things asserted for the purpose of influencing the decision of that House, he started from them with abhorrence. [Cheering.] And was he to hear the names of Burke and Pitt leveled to the aid of such abominable doctrines? [Continued Cheering.] Was he to hear his Right Honorable Friend make such a declaration as this when a large body of his fellow subjects in England were actuated by the condition supported upon which he remembered that his Right Honourable Friend presided over the legal administration of Ireland—[Cheers]—and was he to, under such circumstances, agitate? [The Right Honourable Gentleman was here interrupted by immense cheering.] His astonishment increased beyond his power to express it. Mr. Burke and Mr. Pitt utterly repudiated the doctrine these claims could ever be demanded as a birthright.

Mr. Pitt's words were these—"These are the grounds upon which this measure can alone be discussed; for I cannot allow that, under any circumstances of change in the state of affairs, we can enter the discussion of the question as a right. I never was one of those who held the term, 'Emancipation,' as at all applicable to a repeal of the few remaining disabilities. Thus he not only rejected the doctrines of those who now supported the measure, but even their very name. Mr. Pitt then went on to declare his opinion that it must be in human nature to endeavour to obtain, and to advance the interests of their religion, when time and opportunity offered. This was also his (Mr. Peel's) opinion. It was because he held, with Mr. Pitt, that when the Catholics would do all in their power to advance their religion, that he would prefer exclusion to securities, and take his stand at once against further concessions. He would fairly own, that, upon constitutional grounds, he had a distrust of the Roman Catholic religion. He found fault with no man for his faith; he never applied his objections to the individual, but if he found that a particular religious faith, there was, and had been grounded a scheme of worldly policy, he had a right to inquire into its nature; and if he found it pernicious, he was bound to take precautions against it.—[Hear, hear.] Could any man doubt, then, that those who presided over the Roman Catholic religion, had something more than the purity of religious faith in view? When he saw that religion calculated to give man power over man—when he saw such doctrines as those of absolution, confession, and indulgences—what was it to him whether they called it spiritual or temporal authority—here was an authority, an influence exercised over men's minds, which must have some object beyond the simple interests of religion. When he found that so lately as in the year 1807, Pope Pius the VIIth, issued a bull which was promulgated in Ireland, offering three hundred days indulgence to any good Catholic who should devoutly utter pious ejaculations therein named, in favour of the souls then in purgatory, he was astonished and disgusted. As to the attempted explanations of such things the more they explained them the greater was the mystery, and the greater his disgust. And when he reflected that this paper was sent by rational men, and received by rational men, for the purpose of seeking out the ignorance and superstition of the uneducated, he thought it pretty evident that there must be other objects than those of religion. Although he held no objection to individuals entertaining a professed creed of the Catholic faith, yet he had a strong objection to the political system connected with it. If he looked to countries where this religion luxuriated and held an undivided sway—if he looked to countries where it was left to struggle with rival establishments—and if he looked at home, where it was hidden with certain limits and restrictions—he was forced to the conclusion, that that state was the happiest and the most fortunate which supported a mitigated, moderate, temperate predominance of the Protestant Church. It would be the natural conduct of Catholics when once admitted to Parliament, to take every opportunity of improving the condition of their religion, and placing it in a more favourable condition in England. It was not the eventual destruction of the Protestant Church which he apprehended, but the conflicts and struggles which must follow any attempt to accomplish that object. His Rt Hon. CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION.

House of Commons, March 6.

At four o'clock the Speaker took the Chair. Mr. Bernet, upon the subject? After describing the ratification of the Treaty, he adds, "and some anconsumation of all that was wished and hoped for by the Catholics; he did not believe it. He thought that the Catholics once in the House, would soon unite themselves in the the pursuit of ulterior objects, for bettering the condition of their Church, and that they would by degrees find the means of gaining support and perhaps success. As he thought it was to guard against this possible increase of the influence of the Roman Catholics, and that the penal laws were passed; it was in order to continue that safeguard that he now opposed their removal; yet, so anxious was he for the tranquility and security of Ireland, that he had no hesitation in declaring—that if he thought such an immense good could be derived from the present measure, he would be ready to purchase it by the sacrifice of these possible remote effects upon the Constitution. If he was sure, indeed, that this was the way which would lead them to the Elysian Fields, he should think the risk subordinate to the certain advantage of such an acquisition. (Hear.) But he could not make up his mind to any such conclusion The Hon Member for Armagh had said, "Having got thus far, let us now go to the top of the hill," and so he would, could he believe that to be the end. But was perfect one as such, that gained, other heights will be seen, and Alps on Alps arise! He thought that when the Roman Catholics were admitted to an equality, the same disposition to struggle for a little more power which now agitated the country would still be carried on. If the authority of the Priests were to be admitted now, how would they deny it after such a measure? (Hear, hear.) Was this Right Honourable Friend called it patriotism now. (Cheers) Patriotism! (Cheers and laughter.) It was patriotism now, because they supported his Bill. But when that was passed, they would be the judges of what was patriotism themselves; and it would then be too late to deny their right of exercising this spiritual authority for the furtherance of their own views. With regard to the professions of the Resolutions of the Catholic Prelates, he could not, as a public man, give the same confidence which they had so readily obtained from his Right Honourable Friend. (Hear.) Right Honourable Friend had thought it meek as roughly with demagogues as any one could well do. He had admitted that their object was to infuriate the people, and thereby intimidate the House into concessions. But had the House of Commons countenanced these demagogues who so excited his Right Honourable Friend's indignation. Had they advised the Catholics of Ireland to submit to the law, and not to be led away and misled either by the demagogues of the Catholic Association? Or the Catholic Prelates who signed the Petition presented to the House by his Right Honourable Friend, also were members of the Association. (Cheering.) The system which he had been content to follow with regard to Ireland was, to enforce the laws with impartiality, to inquire into all abuses, and to redress grievances when they were found to exist. Further than that, according to the present firm conviction of his mind he could not go. It was with unfeigned sorrow that he differed from his friends around him, whom he in common respected, and from whom he differed upon no other question in the slightest degree.—(Cheers from Mr. Canning.) The interests of some great and illustrious names had lately been put in that state of the question which he advocated. He never had adopted his opinion from the influence of station, however illustrious, or of names, however powerful. He could not be deeply lamented by those whom his country had sustained, it was some consolation to him to feel that he was now continuing to support the cause which he formerly espoused, when no name could illegally support it, or any influence into which considerations of personal advantage could by possibility enter.—(The Right Hon. Gentleman sat down, amidst the loud cheering of the House.)

Mr. Secretary CANNING then rose at half-past two o'clock in the morning, and spoke to the following effect:—"Sir, after the protracted discussion to which this debate has been already extended, the House has a security in my discretion, as well as in my present inability to address it at any considerable length, that I shall not trespass long upon their attention. Indeed, I am principally induced to rise lest it might appear disrespectful to the House and unbecoming in me were I to abstain from stating (at least shortly and succintly,) the grounds on which I give my vote this night. In doing so, I think it may not be inexpedient to recall the attention of the House to the accurate point it has been called during the greater part of the discussion, to the question immediately before the consideration of the House. The Hon. Baronet (Sir J. Burdett) we brought forward a Motion, introduced it with a generosity and prodigality of argument and remark, which prevented him from confining himself merely to the motion itself—to the accurate statement of what the substance of the proposition is. Of that omission on the part of the Hon. Baronet, I must say very unfair advantage has been taken in the course of this discussion. Because the Hon. Baronet, did not distinctly state that the present opposition was one that merely asked of you, the present House of Commons, whether you do or do not, entertain the same opinion as your predecessors of the last session, respecting this important question, I did not expect that, therefore, objection would have been made to him for having omitted to fill up the details of a measure in a preliminary resolution of principle.—(Hear, hear.) I should not have expected this misconstruction of argument from a Member who had only sat in this House for the first time; but I confess I was little prepared to have an example of such a confusion set by judicial accuracy. (Cheers and laughter.) The speech of the Right Hon. Gentleman (the Master of the Rolls,) has been partly historical and partly critical. The historical part, on the admission of the Right Hon. Gentlemen himself, was inapplicable to the present question; and I shall presently show that his critical part was not less inapposite. (Hear, hear, hear.) The Right Hon. Gentleman began, continued, and ended his speech, by complaining that no securities were offered on the part of the Roman Catholics. If the Right Hon. Gentleman were not aware that securities were offered, he might look to the Statute Book, discovered the first instance, introduced a measure in all its details to the House. The Hon. Baronet had done right in omitting to do so. He would have only perplexed and distracted the House, if he had encountered it at this stage of the discussion, with all the topics et cetera which might have been gleaned and collected from the deluge to the revolution. (Hear, and a laugh.) The Right Hon. Gentleman had not of the question. The New York papers just received, bring us no later news.

Among the Resolutions which were "unanimously adopted," by the "select party of the friends of those in opposition to the Alien Bill" (they will persist in giving it this mis nomer) who "met and dined together at Port Hope at the House of Mr. Mark Hewson" and who "after" drinking "several loyal and appropriate Toasts," (secundum artem in bumpers of course) had resolution enough to pass eighteen resolutions; the following is one:—

"That this meeting feels it as by no means the slightest, or least considerable, of the evils of the present administration, that every kind of false and unjust representation of the feeling of the country, or of particular sections thereof, is admitted into the columns of the Gazette, by Authority, and sent to England, evidently for the purpose of creating impressions adverse to our interests, whilst all remonstrance, or refutation is carefully and studiously withheld from that paper, least the public opinion, both here, and in England, should be undeceived."

Now, on looking over the columns of the 'Gazette,' it will be easily seen, that they contain Proclamations —Official Notices—Sheriff's Sales. These are of course inserted by authority, and if by these "the select party" mean the 'unjust representations' which the account of their "dinner" speaks of, it can only be attributed, as that account itself says "to the proper source" namely—that the aforesaid bumpers, had got the better of their understandings. If the attack had been made in sober earnest on the U. E. Loyalist, we might have considered it necessary to take notice of it. But really when "a select party," over their Wine cups, after pouring out several libations to the "Jolly God," appear to be so far gone, as to mistake the U. C. Gazette, for the U. E. Loyalist—'tis laugh-able—and so we dismiss the subject; hoping that the select party, found Mr. Mark Hewson's Port, at Port Hope, of good quality, and that the following morning restored them to a proper use of those faculties, over which the aforesaid "Jolly God" seems for a time to have exercised his sway.

In the reported Speech of Mr. Baring, as contained in some of our Provincial Journals, on the subject of the Bill for the Sale of part of the Clergy Reserves, that Hon. Gentleman is said to have made use of the following language:—

"Before a Committee which sat last year, the Attorney General, or some other law officer from Upper Canada, was examined as a witness on these Clergy Reserves. A question was put to him as to the numercial proportion of the Church of England men in Upper Canada, to Roman Catholics, and Members of other professions. The question was, "How many Church of England men belong to the Legislative Assembly of Upper Canada?"— The answer was, "Two," (hear)—and of these two one was the Attorney General himself."

There must be some mistake in this matter; for we are authorized to say, that such a question was not put either to the Attorney General, or Solicitor General of this Province, as by some means or other we observe, that it is mentioned in one of the Journals, that the question was put to, and answered by the latter gentleman. The impossibility of its having been put to the former, rests on the fact, that he was not in England at the time. That the question, however, was put to another person from this Province, who was examined before the Committee, and answered as stated in Mr. Baring's Speech, there can be no doubt. In the hurry of Debate, it may have escaped Mr. Baring's recollection, that this person is not a Law Officer in Upper Canada. The fact besides is otherwise—we can venture to assert with safety, that there are many more than two Members of the House of Assembly in Upper Canada, who are Church of England men.

It is a falling with some men, when fairly driven from the field of argument, that they have recourse to intemperate language, thereby exposing themselves, and giving the most powerful proof, that they feel their opponent has the better side of the question. Some of our late remarks seem to have fallen like 'Iron blows" on some of our cotemporaries, who, finding their arguments "without a leg to stand upon," have resorted to personalities, which although uttered in the hope of moving our equanimity of temper, we do assure them can only have a directly contrary effect. Whenever we find such persons attempting to mislead public opinion, we shall always feel it to be our duty, to arrest them in their progress of mischief—personal attacks, we shall on all times consider as unworthy of notice.

38-6*m* JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

In Council 21*st November*, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offered for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2*s*. 6*d*.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2*s*. 6*d*.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

Poetry.

ON VIEWING SOME RUINS, OF GREAT ANTIQUITY.

I look'd on the ruin'd castle walls,
Which frown'd in sad decay,
And told a melancholy tale
Of ages past away!

The grass had grown in the noble hall
Where the Norman chieftains sat;
And the clustering ivy had made a home
For the dull and gloomy bat.

Oh! where, I exclaimed, are the knights,
Who fought on yonder plains;
And minstrels, who their praises sang
In loud and swelling strains?

Silent, and gone! the conqu'ring grave
Has long entomb'd them all!
And their bravest deeds are shrouded o'er
By Death's funereal pall.

Never more shall the trumpet's note
Sound to the warlike fight,
For they are deaf to earthly sounds,
And powerless in might:

While those who watch'd their gay career
With bright and beaming eyes,
And gave, with blushing sweetness, then,
The bravest knight the prize,

Alike are sleeping in the dust;
And, though of lofty race,
There is not one memorial left
To mark their resting-place!

Oh! Time! how powerful thou art!
For e'en the strongest tower
Falls, as thy mighty course sweeps on,
Beneath thy with'ring pow'r!

Yet, when thy race at last shall cease,
Then man shall conquer thee;
And, in another world, enjoy
An immortality.

Miscellaneous.

THE MISER

The sole survivor of the wreck, Harold gazed the next morning on the scene of desolation with feelings more easily imagined than described. The waves had washed back some of the bodies of the unfortunate beings which the ocean had the night before engulphed. Harold stooped to recognize them. Here lay one, lately full of rude health and over-joyous spirits, pale, cold, and distorted; there another, whose few grey hairs told of many winters —he had seen his last—the few remaining sands had been rudely shaken from the glass. Not far from him lay stretched a youth of seventeen; and Harold, who had as yet shed no tears, felt one drop as he relinquished the cold hand of the boy, and saw it fall heavy and powerless upon the rock. He remembered the anticipations in which he had so lately indulged, as the approach to England brought the hopes of home still closer to his heart. "Poor lad!" cried Horlald, "would I could give thy heart the warmth of mine, and send thee to joy the eyes, that now are doomed to weep for thee! I could have lain in thy place without costing any in the world a pang" He turned away, and just then a burst of sunshine mocked his heart with its brilliancy. When all is desolate within, how vain the lustre of external objects: there is no chord can be touched in unison with them; the violent contrast creates a jar, a discord, abhorrent to the soul.

They had been wrecked on the coast of Scotland, Harold's Native place. He had left it in the flush of youth, impelled by necessity and allured by hope. The former had brought him back, but the latter had long flown away, with all her fairy-colours, and left his barren fortune such as she first found it. Time had been still more unkind, and one by one had robbed of all that makes country precious. The mother, whose clinging arms circled him in a last embrace the day he quitted home had soon after ended her weary sojourn here: his father had gradually shrunk from all his early friends after the loss of his wife, sought a new scene, and died among strangers; while the few who were Harold's playmates in his little native village, were scattered or dead.

Such were the tidings time had brought him. Having been an only child he was brotherless, and all the fond affections which grow out of the relations of life were wanting to his heart, which, like a country denied the blessing of fertelizing streams, now felt parched and desolate. Nature had given him the quickest sensibilities, and by a singular chance, the circumstances and changes of his fortune had increased them; he was therefore particularly alive to the isolation of his fate. The hopeless man—he who has none to love, to hope, to fear for him—is the most pitiable object in creation. To him the future is a matter of indifference; no eye will brighten at his prosperity, or glisten with a tear at his distress. He grows reckless of all around him, and the chance is that he becomes a bad man, From this Harold's better angel had preserved him, and perhaps few men had reached nine-and-twenty with less of error to bemoan. The sensibilities which betray so many had preserved him; his heart readily attached itself to the unfortunate, and thus he had in turn united himself to many as a friend and benefactor. But an unkindly fate had still pursued him, and in looking back on the past he had to mourn the ingratitude of many and the death of ONE who was never to be replaced in this world; with whose gentle nature blended the firmest virtues, and who endured sorrow and suffering here with the mildest patience, in the bright hope of a transition to that place where they are unknown.

The common, and it is said the strongest principle that actuates the heart of man—self-preservation—led Harold on. The tempest had only paused as if to gather new strength; the winds appeared to have returned with fresh forces to tear the few stunted pines that remained from the rocks; again the waves came on with their high crest of foam, as if indignant that nature should have placed any barrier to their impetuous course, and broke with redoubled violence against the opposing rocks. The skies grew denser every moment, and Harold felt that his exhausted strength could not long bear the buffet of another storm. His soul looked up to the Author and Director of all; and, in the midst of all the horrors that surrounded him, felt the good man's hope. On the inscrutable and resistless power that directed all he threw himself.

The wind again fell; and, cheered by the view of a distant light, Harold renewed his course and re-assured his heart. The day just served him to discern the habitation he approached, and as soon as he had gained it he knocked loudly at the door, No answer was returned. Again he knocked, and convinced by the marks of footsteps outside as well as the light within, though the latter was now extinguished, at least no longer visible, he raised his voice in supplication for shelter and relief. Alas! the waves that beat the distant rocks were not more powerless to impress them, than was the voice of Harold to move the flinty heart that he appealed to. Avarice had left no room for any feeling but the love of gold; that which had been bestowed as a blessing, was perverted to a curse; instead of forming and increasing his means of communication with his kind, it served as a barrier against them; and the wretched miser beheld, in every fellow-being who approached him, the open marauder or the secret plunderer. A good office was looked upon as a covert attack upon his purse, and induced suspicion instead of gratitude; the very commonest interchange of general salutation seemed, to threaten him with leading to an acquaintance which might involve disbursements, and they were consequently avoided. Thus had the old man been suffered to become a complete recluse, seldom seen in the wretched hamlet near which he had fixed his abode, and as seldom thought of.

Among the circumstances of Harold's propitious fortune, perhaps this was the worst. The inhospitable door was immovable. As the winds grew louder, his fainting voice became wholly inaudible—probably as much from that sickness of the soul at the callousness of the being he implored, as from the effects of physical suffering. Crouching himself at the door, he waited till the last vital drop should stagnate, the last pulse of agony cease. He did not wait long; that heart, so warm with sympathy for others, at last grew cold; the languid pulses fluttered for a moment, and then ceased forever! He died and there was none to close the glazed eye, to compose the shrunken limbs, or wipe the last tear of agony from his hollow cheek.

Again with the returning morning the sun looked forth upon him, as powerless to reanimate his heart, as to thaw the frost in which every limb was bound. The bright icicles hung from his black hair; his hands were clasped in the attitude of prayer, or imploring; probably the former, for having proved that, however near, it was vain to hope for human aid, he would naturally turn to that power which he could not appeal to in vain, and in the hope of whose mercy only we can dry the tear that falls to Harold's fate.

With morning, too, the many bars of the miser's door were removed He listened between every one; no sound arose to alarm his fears, and at length the door slowly turned upon its hinges: it opened, and the stiffened corpse fell in! As its cold heavy weight rolled at his feet, even the miser shuddered! The unreproaching silence, the passive helplessness, was more eloquent than its living tones of supplication, and with some feelings of compunction he bent to raise it. The matted and frozen hair had fallen over the face; he pushed it aside from the pale cold brow, and, as he did so, discovered the features of his son—his only son! The unconscious corpse fell from the arms that had too late been stretched forth to sustain it, while a groan, such as never issued before from mortal lips, spoke the horrid compunction and worldless agony of his fathers heart.

After the departure of his son and the loss of his wife, chance had thrown some portion of wealth into the old man's hands. At first he treasured it up for his child, and fed his fancy with the hope of making him rich; but he gradually began to love his gold for itself, and when report told him he was childless, he abandoned himself wholly to the passion of avarice, and made his wealth the only object of his contemplation, the only idol of his worship.

With a delirious yet despairing hope, the wretched old man dragged the remains of his ill-fated child into the house. A few hours sooner, that act would have preserved to him a son to solace his closing years, and an inheritor of his now useless wealth. "Too late—too late!" he gasped at intervals as he madly tried to call back the life he had refused to save. "Too late! Oh! all too late!" he murmured, as he sank and expired on the corpse of Harold.

Summary.

We regret to state that the Earl of Onslow died on Thursday sen'night, at a quarter before five o'clock, at his seat, Clandon, near Guilford, in the 73d year of his age. His Lordship had been confined to the house a few days only. His Lordship is succeeded by his son, Arthur George, Viscount Cranley, born in the year 1777.—March 4.

Death of Dr. Kitchener.—This eccentric but truly amiable man died suddenly at one o'clock on Tuesday morning. For a few previous days he had laboured under a slight indisposition, which, however, gave his friends no reason to apprehend any melancholy result. He had been dining with Mr. Braham, and returned home about 11 o'clock, when he was seized with a palpitation of the heart, a complaint to which he was subject; after lying on a sofa for half an hour, he felt better, and went to bed, where he was attacked still more violently. At his own request a little brandy was administered, when he turned his head, heaved three sighs, and expired. He has left behind him one of the most valuable musical libraries in the kingdom, consisting of the works of most of our native composers, ancient and modern. He composed several pieces of music, particularly in the Opera of Ivanhoe, which have been most favourably received.—An inquest was held on Wednesday, and the evidence of his servants having corroborated the above statement, the Jury returned a verdict "died by the visitation of God."

An unusual sensation was momentarily excited on Tuesday night in the House of Commons, upon the Speaker's pronouncing in a marked tone the name of "Lord Castlereagh's, during the presentation of petitions. All eyes were turned within the House to the quarter to which the Speaker directed their attention, and strangers in the gallery endeavoured, with eager curiosity, to catch a glance. The last time that name was pronounced from the Chair, it was to call up the leading Minister from the Treasury Bench, and some members and strangers stared on this occasion, as if they expected to see his ghost. Their attention was, however, gratified by the appearance of his nephew, who bears his name, and who made a respectable maiden speech in presenting a Catholic petition.

Below the bar, and under the gallery of the House of Commons, on Thursday night, there were many Peers; amongst them the Earl of Harrowby, the Marquis of Lansdown, Lord Clanricarde (Mr. Canning's son-in-law,) &c.; and in the inside, or Member's Galleries, for the want of adequate accommodation below the bar, were the Marquis of Queensbury, Lord Kensington, &c. The roof of the House of Commons was besieged, in the anxiety to hear Mr. Canning; there were several ladies accommodated with chairs there—but they could only hear through the ventilators; the sight of the Commoners is forbidden the fair. The Rt. Hon. Gentleman looked as well as usual on Thursday; but he delivered his speech (which was a much shorter one than had been anticipated) in the most cautious manner, never suddenly elevating his tones, nor indulging in any oratorical display that might have required extra energy of manner and action; and yet the perspiration of his face was tolerably visible, and afforded proof of the weakness resulting from his recent serious indisposition.

On Friday morning the Duke of Wellington attended at the Tower of London, for the first time since his appointment to the office of Constable of that fortress, when his Grace was sworn into the office by the Lord Chamberlain.

It appears, by the Report of the Committee appointed to prepare the Militia Estimates of the charge of the disembodied Militia of Great Britain and Ireland, for the year 1827, that the total amount of charge for Great Britain will be £192,935 11s. 10d.; and for Ireland, £98,750 1s. 8½d.

Maubreuil who robbed the Queen of Westphalia of a number of valuable jewels, and who lately committed a violent assault on Prince Talleyrand, has been sentenced for the latter offence to five years imprisonment a fine of 500 francs, ten years' surveillance of the police, and security of 3,000 francs.

A few days ago, a tesselated pavement was discovered in an arable field, in the parish of the Leigh, the property of Mrs. Hill, near the turnpike-road leading from Gloucester to Tewkesbury. This curiosity is about two feet below the surface of the ground, and is about 60 feet long by eight feet wide.

At a numerous meeting of the Noblemen and Gentlemen, held at the Freemason's-hall, London, on Monday, it was unanimously resolved to erect a monument or statue, as a perpetual token of national gratitude to the late Commander-in-Chief; and it was also agreed, that His Majesty's pleasure should be taken as to the particular part of the metropolis where the monument should be placed. A subscription was immediately commenced, which amounted, in the course of that and the following day, to upwards of £4,000. The highest sum upon the list is that subscribed by Lord Darlington, £800.

The amount of parochial and other subscriptions, collected under the King's letter, for the relief of the distressed manufacturers, is £71-000.

From an account presented to the House of Commons, it appears that in 1826, the total number of acres of land under the cultivation of hops was 50,471.

We cannot speak with certainty (says the Preston Chronicle) as to the precise amount which the respective candidates paid at the last election, but we believe we shall be very near the mark in giving the sum as follows:—The Hon. E. G. Stanley, £3,000, Mr. Wood £4,000, Capt. Barrie £6,000, and Mr. Cobbett £1,000.

The Duke of Athol has transferred to the Crown his interest in the Custom House duties levied in the Isle of Man, for the sum of £30-000. The Crown is now possessed of the entire duties.

CONSOLIDATION OF THE CRIMINAL LAWS.

Mr. Secretary PEEL rose and addressed the House to the following effect:—The motion, Sir, which, in pursuance of a notice I gave at the commencement of the Session, I am now about to submit to the House, will be for leave to introduce four Bills connected with the Consolidation of the Statute Criminal Law. (Hear.) The first of these Bills will have for its object the Consolidation of the Law respecting the crime of theft; the second will have for its object the consolidation of the laws relating to another class of offences against property—namely, malicious injuries to property; the third Bill will comprise the Statute, by the provisions of the various laws which relate to the recovery of damages from the hundred; and, in order that I may not encumber these three other Statutes—which will probably be lengthy—with provisions that require consulted, almost daily—with provisions that it will not be necessary to include in them, I propose to reserve, for the fourth Bill, the repeal of all the existing Statutes, or clauses of Statutes, that may be, by the other Bills, rendered unnecessary. (Hear.) The three Bills, therefore, that will be the subject of the House's consideration, will not be encumbered with any provisions which will not be absolutely necessary to the objects proposed by them. I entered, in the course of last Session, so fully into the details of the consolidation which it was intended to effect, and explained the principles, so carefully to demonstrate the principles of these Bills, that, although I am now addressing a new House, and, indeed, a new Parliament, I am not sure that it will be necessary for me to offer any additional observations or arguments, in order to show the policy and expediency of consolidating the criminal law of this country. Sir, it does appear to me so consistent with common sense and reason, that the law should be rendered as plain and intelligible as possible—that, where all are bound to know that law, its provisions may be known to all—and that its enactments with that view, should be couched in terms that, as far as such an object could be effected, shall be clear, definite and precise—that I cannot but anticipate that this House will concur in the decision of its predecessors, by acquiescing in the motion I make this night, to allow me to submit my propositions to its consideration. (Cheers.) Some of the Statutes have been introduced carelessly, and with reference to preceding Acts; others as encumbered with exceptions, provisions, and clauses, each by reference to one and the same Statute, of the nature of the offence, and the amount of its punishment. (Hear.) There exists at present, in the law of England, and has always existed, a distinction between the crime of "Grand Larceny," and the crime of "Petit Larceny." The whole distinction between these offences depends on the amount of value or the sum stolen. If a man—I am now speaking of simple larceny, independent of any aggravating circumstances—if a man steals an article under the value of one shilling, he commits the offence of petty larceny; if he steals an article of any greater value, he commits the offence of grand larceny. Now, I confess, I cannot see that any good object is gained by the fact of the law's resorting to this sort of distinction. (Hear.) Again, many Courts of inferior Jurisdiction—for example, Courts of Corporate Jurisdiction, have the power of trying the offence of petty larceny, but have not the power of trying charges of grand larceny. What is the consequence of this in point of practice? These Courts of inferior Jurisdiction, feeling, in many instances, the inconvenience and expense of sending to a distant Town, the man who has stolen to the amount of two shillings, or upwards, in order to take his trial for grand larceny—feeling the inconvenience and expense of sending to another Jurisdiction—evade the law, in a manner, perhaps, not very creditable to the law itself. They state in the indictment, that the article stolen is of the value of one shilling—though it is perfectly notorious to every body that the value is much greater,—and they thus preserve their Jurisdiction. (Hear.) Now, Sir, I propose to abolish all distinctions of this nature, between the offences of grand larceny and petty larceny. I believe the maximum of punishment, in all cases of larceny, is, in fact, the same; and that is, transportation for the term of seven years. I think it would be difficult, indeed, to assign any valid reasons, (and I confess I see none myself,) why the inferior or Corporate Court, which has jurisdiction to transport for seven years the man who steals to the value of twopence, should not have the same power of transporting for seven years, (for, neither in this case, be it observed, nor in any other relating to larceny, do I impose the punishment that would have man who has stolen to the value of two shillings. But there is a material difference, as to the penalty, between grand larceny and petty larceny, supposing the offence to be committed by a person against whom simple petty larceny has been repeated, by one individual, five or six times over, that individual, on being convicted for the last offence, is not liable to a greater degree of punishment than he would have incurred for the first. But it is well known, that if he commits the crime of grand larceny a second time, he is liable to that which, by the Law of England, is called, "Punishment by Benefit of Clergy," and becomes liable, on that account, to capital punishment. (Hear.) Now, in the first place, I propose so far as concerns this matter, to do away with a phrase that has long existed in the Law of England, but which, nevertheless, appears to me to have been productive of great confusion in the administration of that law—I mean as to that of distinction of crimes to clergyable or what are called "Clergiable offences." (Hear.) I propose that it would be a most important simplification of the law, if that singular discrimination could be got rid of.—(Hear.) When the law was first obtained, in favor of their own body, this kind of benefit into effect, the precise period of our history—under what circumstances—or on what condition—this distinction crept into the system of our criminal law, it might be at present difficult to state with any degree of accuracy. Certain it is, that a distinction, the origin of which no longer exists—that privilegium clericale, of the older law books, which consisted in allowing persons who had the tonsure, or were members of the Church, to be exempted from certain punishments attaching in the case of all other subjects, to the commission of certain offences—certain it is, that this distinction, however it took its short, and which had been continued down to our times, but with very different application. Instead of saying that a man who has committed grand larceny a second time, has committed what was formerly benefit of Clergy, I propose to say, in future, that he has committed a felony for which he shall be liable to transportation for life. (Hear.) I apprehend that this description will be more applicable to the offence and its penalty, and much more intelligible to every body, than the other; and, on making this proposition, let it be observed, that I advance one step towards the simplification of the criminal law. (Cheering.) I introduce into these measures, as to the nature of punishments. (Cheers.) Where I have made any alterations at all, as to capital punishments assigned in the existing Statutes, I have mitigated those penalties. (Hear.) Wherever I have made any alterations in those penal Statutes, the tendency of my acts is, to reduce the number of capital crimes. And in these, Sir, I think a material alteration, when I say, that a man who has committed grand larceny a second time, shall be no longer liable to the punishment of death for that offence, but to transportation for life. (Hear.) It has been made matter of reproach to us, that a vast number of the crimes designated by those laws, capital punishments are attached, which we are absolutely afraid to carry into execution. (Hear.) In another instance, I propose to mitigate the punishment of the criminal law. (Hear.) At present the stealing to a dwelling house, to the amount of 40s. is a capital offence. The smaller or larger amount of the sum stolen, is no very material matter, as to the moral guilt of the offence; yet it is a sort of test which our law existed in the law of England, and which I am not altogether prepared to abolish. But I am disposed to raise the limit in this instance; and instead of fixing the amount, which shall constitute the offence capital, at 40s., I propose to raise it to some higher sum, and thus to reduce materially, in practice, the number of cases of conviction, at present renders the offender liable to the punishment of capital offence. (Hear.) As I said before, therefore, in every case where I have materially altered the Statutes, which attach capital punishments, the tendency of my Bills will be found to mitigate those punishments. (Cheers.) And this brings me, Sir, to some considerations of great moment and interest. Whether or not, at some future period, it may not be advisable to carry this principle of mitigation yet further, is a question which I shall not now attempt to discuss. But, whenever that question shall come before Parliament, I think I may at least claim the credit of being prepared to discuss it, without any hostile or prejudiced opinions previously conceived on the subject.—(Cheers.) Sir, I believe I may aspire, Sir, to the merit of having already done more to mitigate the severity of the Criminal Law of England, than any other individual in the country. (Cheers.) I understand that I have reduced the number of capital punishments in a greater degree than any other person has yet been fortunate enough to do; and while I am on this matter, I think I may also refer, not without a conscious feeling of gratification, to the practical admendments which the law since I entered upon the office which I have now the honor to fill, in order to prove that I have been actuated by no love of severity, or the frequency, of capital punishments. And I have the pleasure of believing that it will be found, on the comparison of the number of executions, in relation to the number of capital convictions, during the last five years, with five years of any former period, that the merit I do in this instance claim for myself, is confirmed by facts. (Cheers.) Without entering at all, at present, into the particular provisions of the Bill which I hold in my hand, the Committee, of course, will give me credit for condensing the effect of much useless matter, and of various enactments scattered through a multitude of Statutes. I am now only referring to the general principle on which the new Bill is drawn up; and I certainly have, with the very able assistance that I have received in the preparation of this Bill, attempted—I am afraid I might almost say—to set at rest the Committee, of course, drawing up such Bills, for the future, in an intelligible manner. (Laughter.) Not being myself a legislational man, and possessing, of course, no technical knowledge, I am happy to say that there is no task which I contemplate with so much distrust, as the reading through of an ordinary Act of Parliament. In the first place, the long recapitulations, the tedious circumlocution, the useless repetitions, the providing in designating offences, or punishments, for the specific case of men, women and children, and for every degree and relation in society—and the necessity of enacting those several personages and matters by almost as many separate recapitulations, and designations—then the confusion resulting from the attempt to describe and constantly re fer to many different descriptions of property—really, Sir, all these various causes of perplexitations, and references, are so tedious and so perplexing, that I, for one, almost invariably find myself completely puzzled before I get to the end of a single clause. (Laughter.) The plan I have adopted in this Bill, to obviate all this confusion and uncertainty, does seem to me, I speak it with deference, much more eligible and precise than the usual phraseology adopted in these Acts, and which, I cannot help thinking, be pursued with advantage in Bills which may be brought in hereafter. I will give an example—It is enacted in my Bill, that if any person be convicted of entering into and stealing in any house, room, &c. in the night, and all of them, be deemed to intend and demonstrate any number of persons or parties, and of any description of persons or offenders, under this Act. That there may be no doubt arising from want of specification in the act, as to the identity of the offender, there is a clause to this effect:—And, in order to remove all doubts as to the meaning and intention of certain words in this Act, be it hereby further enacted, that wherever the words person, party offender, and so forth, occur in this Act, each, and all of them, be deemed to intend and demonstrate any number of persons or parties, and of any description of persons or offenders, under this Act. If any person, therefore, commit the offence contemplated by that Act, he will, under the general description, be liable to the penalty affixed to such offence. My Bill, therefore, in this description, will include every person, whatever, his station, and of any rank or condition, if offending under its enactments. (Hear.) Some years ago this House appointed a Committee to inquire into the fees, emoluments, and duties of all offices connected with the Law Officers in the existing Establishments of this part of the Country. All the Judges of the Court of Westminster, and all those jurisdictions which may be said to be under our particular cognizance, submitted to the requisitions of that Commission, and to the Bill which contained the provisions of so many previous acts, statements and returns which were called for But very few of those who have been able to learn, was ever unanimous into the duties, fees and emoluments, of those, into whose gains and offices I think it is now high time that some such inquiry should be made—I mean, Sir, the subordinate officers connected with the Administration of Justice in this Metropolis. (Hear.) I will only say, that I did not, and could not, certainly expect that the single statute I had the honor of introducing to the House, consolidated the provisions of so many previous acts, would work with so little difficulty as that has done. I know, Sir, that it was objected at the time that the Larceny Consolidation Act was a futile attempt to reform the Statute Book. It has, however perfectly succeeded, nor have I heard a single complaint made against its operation. I have seen it acted on in several cases, and the Metropolitan have admitted to bail individuals charged with offences under it, but whom they have thought it better, looking to the circumstances and the nature of the charge, so to admit to bail, than to send to prison previous to trial. (Hear.) I have heard it said that the Act of last Session, which enables Judges to award certain expenses in the prosecution of misdemeanors, has enormously increased the expenses of counties; and that, in several cases, it has absolutely had the effect of doubling the County Rates.—I beg way of exemplifying the objections, it has been said, that the operation of the Act has been to burthen the county of Surrey with an extra sum of £500, incurred in the prosecution of two or three individuals who were charged with having committed an atrocious assault some time ago, at Fetcham, in that county. These parties were tried, and no true bill was ever found against them. Of course, it became necessary, in the first instance, to trace those guilty, in order to consign them to the hands of justice. It is, I believe, from this source that most expenses were incurred in apprehending them, and bringing them before the Grand Jury; but is it not evident, that no part of those expenses depended on the enactments of my bill, for that bill regarded solely, prosecutions for misdemeanour. This of course was a case of capital felony. (Hear.) I am not prepared to say whether the outlay of £400 or £500, on this business, was or was not a lavish expenditure of the county's money. Certain it is, I did not authorise an expenditure with which I had nothing to do. There were some expenses occasioned by that case, which I did authorize; but they were defrayed out of public funds placed at my disposal. It is perfectly true, Sir, that the expenses of prosecutions during the two last years were increased, upon a comparison of two corresponding years, out of each year, from £1,697 to £2,343. The statement, therefore, is correct, as to the amount of the expenses incurred; but the writer omits altogether to state, that the number of felonies during the same periods had increased from 406 to 521, and leaves to be inferred that the expense of prosecuting the increased number of felonies remained precisely the same as it stood at in the first of the two periods. Forty-five misdemeanors of a very aggravated nature, such as extorting money, under particular circumstances, attacks on officers in the discharge of their duty, and so on, were prosecuted at those sessions. The parties being in a low situation of life, had, however, prosecuted at their own expense, and the Grand Jury satisfied with the cases they set up, admitted their claims, and directed them to be reimbursed. But the whole expense incurred by the prosecution of these misdemeanours, was but £45 instead of £2,300 as had been alleged; and so far from causing a double expense, as was stated, the whole cost of prosecuting forty-five aggravated misdemeanors only came to this very small sum. I hope I have explained the question sufficiently that there can be no objection to my plan on the ground of additional expense; but in addition, to those who think that the laws shall remain as they are, for fear some persons who, on the other hand, are of opinion that, while going on as they have gone, they have gone, every thing that has been done is totally useless. To those persons I answer in the first place, that I only propose to do as much as can with safety, and that the laws are capable of being put to further experience; and, in the next place, I say to those who complain of the manner of my proceedings that by the course I have pursued, the total expense of the Bill which I have brought in, and my appointment to the office of Secretary of State, and during a period of five years, has amounted to the bar sum of £1,900. (Hear.) My practice has been to keep down the duty and the inquiries necessary for the purpose I had in view upon a single individual, and, upon my honour, I doubt much whether the appointment of Commissioners, with salaries of £1,000 each, would have enabled the country to derive equal benefits, or me to arrive at the same results. (Hear.) By this means, too, I have been enabled to have the advice of the Judges, and of those in the habit of the uniform cheers from all parts of the House, which sustained him throughout. A very important consideration, to which an Honourable Gentleman had adverted, and which had not escaped his own attention. was the melancholy increase of crime throughout the whole Empire. That subject, he repeated, had occupied much of his time and attention, and, although he was not sanguine enough to hope for immediate and effectual change, yet he was far from despairing of ultimate amelioration.

Leave was then given for the introduction of the several Bills proposed by the Right Hon. Secretary.

Railways.—Extract of a letter from a gentleman travelling in England, dated the 14th Feb. 1827:—"The engineer and myself having completed, to our satisfaction, an investigation of the Railways of this Kingdom, the parts from me this day, and proceed down to our first packets for New-York. Although I have been for two months examining railways, I am in a greater state of admiration than ever about them. As to the phenomena of Hetton railway, you can scarcely believe them true when in the midst of them. I will look to you like Rhodomontade to speak of twenty four tons weighing, weighing more than thirty tons, being forced up hill, all the way by steam, at the rate of eighteen miles an hour, and this upon a plane a mile and a half long. I came down the whole length, standing on the fore-end of the hindmost waggon of 54 loaded ones, weighing altogether one hundred tons, they descend the plane by their own gravity, at first slow, and with a solemn sort of grumbling; but, when the acceleration gathers to a head, it is as fearful as it is sublime. They are the popular mode of communication here. Great Britain will soon be covered with them.

Foreign Intelligence.

THE GREEKS.—We have not much of what can be called news, from Greece. Another reverse of the Turks, in the neighborhood of Acarn, is spoken of, in which they are said to have lost 1500 men. The Greeks have re-possessed themselves of the ruins of Missolonghi. Advices from Constantinople, principally thro' the German papers, are to the 17th of February. We copy the following paragraphs, according to their dates, upon the subject of the attempts of the Ministers of other powers to interpose their good offices in behalf of the Greeks:—

"Odessa, Feb. 17.—We have news from Constantinople up to the 9th instant. The English Ambassador, after failing in all his confidential proceedings, with respect to the pacification of Greece, sent an official note to the Reis-Effendi, in which he insisted on a suspension of hostilities, in order that they might endeavour to come to some definite arrangement. The other European Ministers took no part in these proceedings, except M. Minutzicky, who also sent a note, demanding a settlement with the Greeks, in virtue of the protocol of St. Petersburgh, dated the 4th of April, 1826. He added that the Greeks were in such a situation as would sooner or later effect their emancipation; and that should it turn out otherwise, Russia would not remain a passive spectator during their destruction. This co-operation on the part of two preponderating powers, gives hope to the cause of the Greeks."

GREECE.—The information concerning Greece is of considerable interest. Lord Cochrane at last sailed for Greece from St. Tropez, in the beginning of March, in a brig the purchase, fitting out, and arming of which cost 26,000 francs, or about £50,000. He was furnished besides with 355,000 francs to pay the crew and troops under his command, it being thought necessary, for the preservation of harmony, that he should be able to maintain his crews. The steamboat Perseverance, Captain Hastings, which had been sometime in Greece, had done considerable service. Another steamboat the Enterprise, was nearly ready to sail from England for Greece to join the Perseverance. She was tried on the 12th of March, and made a trip to the Nore, running a distance of nearly 50 miles, in five hours and a half.

A letter from Legborn of the 5th of March says: "Yesterday (4th) Lord, with Lord Cochrane on board, appeared off the point of the Mole. It happened oddly enough, that it passed very near the Egyptian corvette; but instead of entering the Port, the Unicorn suddenly tacked, and to day we see it at the distance of 8 miles. It is believed that the only object of this manœuvre was to examine the corvette, in order to pursue it with greater certainty when it shall be time. The appearance of the Unicorn in those seas had excited the greatest terror in the agent of the Pacha of Egypt, M. Rossetti was palpably lowered all the sails of his vessel, though he was ready to depart."

Mr. Gordon is said, in letters of a late date, to be at the head of 5000 men, better appointed and better disciplined than any that have been under the command of the Greek chiefs are represented as only waiting the arrival of Lord Cochrane, who was hourly expected, to commence active exertions. The Neapolitan General Church (an Englishman) and Mr. Lambton, the late member for Durham, have sailed from Naples to join the Greeks.

FROM CARTHAGENA.—Capt. Shipman, of the Athenian, who left Carthagena, on the 4th inst. informs, that the country was considered in rather an unsettled state. The British resident at the Railways of this Kingdom, he has consented to go down to Portsmouth, and there join the crew and troops under his command, it will be Lower-Town. The water rose in St. Paul's Street to the depth of four feet. The wharves have sustained much injury, as did the Government Brig on the stocks; a schooner laden with wheat was crushed, several other and smaller boats injured against the sides of the wharves. The Lower-Town landing place is strewed with wreck. We have also understood that a boy lost his life by falling from a wharf among some floating logs which crushed him.—Trees were blown down in the Upper-Town; and we fear we shall hear of further mischief being done in the neighbourhood, if not to the shipping which may be supposed to have been not very far distant at this advanced season of the spring.—Quebec Official Gazette.

To read the Paragraphs respecting "troubles in Canada" which are circulated in some of the American Papers, it would seem that this Province is in an almost down-right revolt—when in truth the contrary of all this is the fact: the people throughout the Province, are pursuing their ordinary business; and (though perhaps we may be thought odd in our opinion) we really think that four-fifths of the Inhabitants of Lower-Canada trouble themselves very little about which way the bill of supplies is granted. We must, however, express our good opinion of the inhabitants of all denominations, in so far, that if necessity required their joint efforts to repel a foreign invasion, the domestic "troubles" would soon be hushed.—Canadian Courant.

On Friday morning last, the Royal Engineers on the Rideau Canal left Montreal, to pass through the whole line from Hull to Kingston, in order to set agoing the works from the one end to the other.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1827.

By the Ship Emerald arrived at New York London dates to 14th March are received.

Lord Liverpool was convalescent, but did not recover the use of his speech in the same degree as his other faculties.

Mr. Canning was attending to his Parliamentary duties, though not perfectly recovered.

London, March 24.—Consols at 92¼ at 1 P. M. they have since declined full one per cent. The sudden change is accounted for by the various reports in circulation—such as unfavourable news from Portugal, and a change of ministry.

Affairs of Portugal.—It is said that from the general complexion of the conflicting accounts from the Peninsula, it is thought that the rebellion in Portugal is not as completely crushed as was supposed. Fresh Troops were on their way from England. The Globe says, however, "all the reinforcements going to Portugal, amount to a few Horses [less than fifty] and just men enough to take care of them."

Reports were in circulation that Lord Liverpool had intimated his desire to resign.

The Buoy storm in Scotland, had been attended with most disastrous consequences. Many lives were lost in different parts of the Country. It is said to have been the greatest snow storm experienced for 33 years or since the year 1794. A letter from Scotland of 12th March says—"no Post has arrived—no Carriages or Coaches can go out, and the world appears immersed in snow. Many lives and much property are lost."

The discovery Ship Hecla, Capt Parry, was to take her departure from the Nore, the first week in April.—She was to go unattended by any other Vessel, and carries provisions for 19 months—her Crew consists of 64 men.

Burlington Canal.—We have been furnished with the following statement of the undermentioned articles which have passed through the Canal to 1st May, from authenticated documents, and of the total quantity estimated to 8th inst.

Potash, 46 Barrels.
Pork, 70 "
Flour, 7100 "

7216 to 1st May—since that period.

3 Cargoes estimated at 2000
Wheat &c. equal to 2000

to 8th May—11,216 Barrels.

There is now a sufficient depth of water through the Canal to admit the passage of Schooners, and from the above statement, it is evident that the utility of the work is beyond all question, and that the Country is making rapid advances in prosperity.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND and Staff left Niagara, on Tuesday last for Kingston, where we understand His Excellency is to inspect the Troops stationed at that Garrison.

HIS EXCELLENCY the Governor-in-Chief has issued His Proclamation offering a reward of £100 for the discovery and apprehension of the murderer of the late Mr. Watson of Montreal.

It will be seen from an extract in this days paper from the Quebec Gazette, that, that place had been visited by a dreadful storm which has done much damage. High winds have been prevalent during the spring in this part of Upper Canada, and the Season is altogether backward. On Sunday last a good deal of Snow fell on the Niagara Frontier. The fruit trees in that part of the Country are however in bloom. At York vegitation is very backward.

A Pamphlet containing "the Naturalization Bill with observations," which was printed at our Office, and has been in circulation, for the last six weeks, has at this late hour roused the indignation of one of the public Journals in this Town. The plain and irresistible force of its arguments, being incontrovertible, the Editor has contented himself, by throwing out some personalities in his usual style, against those who we are assured consider them of no consequence.—He must guess again, for he is mistaken in the Author. The Pamphlet we are satisfied has had its effect, in counteracting the many gross misstatements which were put in circulation. We recommend it to the perusal of our readers, who will be furnished with a copy of it on application at our Office.

On Wednesday last a quarrel arose between a man of the name of Wiggins, and a Squaw, near the Town, when the latter seized an Axe, and inflicted a severe wound on Wiggins's head. The Squaw has been Committed to Jail. We hear that hopes are entertained that the wound will not prove fatal.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come

GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reservers," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K.C.B. GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation may be better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. We have thought fit to order and direct, and We do hereby order and direct that, until Our pleasure herein shall be further made known, it shall and may be lawful for all Our Subjects inhabiting Our Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada, freely to enter into Our Woods and Forests in such parts of Our said Province of Upper Canada, situate along the Banks of the River Ottawa, or upon the Banks of the Waters running into the said River and within a convenient distance from the same, as shall not have been Surveyed and divided into Concessions and Lots, and to Cut and carry away such Oak and Pine Timber as may be fit for the purposes of Exportation.

Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Red Pine Timber, Four Pounds Three Shillings and Four Pence, being at the rate of One Penny per Foot. Upon every Thousand Feet of Yellow Pine Timber, Two Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence, being at the rate of One Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. NOTICE is hereby given, by order of HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR in Council, that unless John Bowman, late a private Soldier in the Glengary Light Infantry Regiment, the Original Locatee of Lot number seven, Concession C. Township of Murray, in the District of New Castle, do shew cause within six Months from this date, why the Location should not be rescinded, the Lot will be Granted to William M. 38-6m JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules. The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

THE CAPTIVE.

Wake not the waters with thine oar,
My gentle gondolier!
The whispers of the wave and shore
Still linger on my ear.
Lonely the night, and dark its sleep,
And few the stars that glow
Within the mirror of the deep,
That lies outspread below.

But fix the mast, the sail unfurl,
My gentle gondolier!
The wind is soft—the calm waves curl—
The moon is near.
And in this light, our little sail
May well escape his ken!
And we shall meet, ere dawning pale,
Our long-lost country-men.

Long years the iron manacle,
My gentle gondolier!
Hath worn these limbs in death-damp cell,
'Till they are stiff and sere.
Yet little heed I strengthless limb,
Or think of anguish past,
So we escape while night is dim,
And Heaven is overcast.

"Hark! 'tis the wakeful sentry's call!"
Nay, nay, my gondolier!
We're far from castle-moat and wall—
The sentry cannot hear.
'Tis but the plunging sea-dog's feat,
Or wild-bird on the cliff;—
And lo! the wind is in our sheet,
More swiftly shall we skiff.

More swiftly, and more swiftly yet,
My gentle gondolier!
The gale is fresh—our sail is set—
And morn will soon be here.
Oh! we're old friends wondrously
In human heart expand,
As mine, to see thee ere I die,
My own—my own loved land!

Miscellaneous.

MACDONELL'S MESSENGER.

A TRADITION OF THE WESTERN HIGHLANDS.

During the proscription of the last John, Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, letters of fire and sword were granted to the Gordons, the Mackays, and the Mackenzies, against the clan Donald. The lands of the denounced race were in consequence overrun by these families, and not a small part became a prey of the Mackenzies. No charter or transcript, however, conveyed them in right from their former to their latter masters; but each, as he might, held what he had obtained by the strong hand. In the reign of Charles the Second, Lord Macdonell, and chief of the clan Donald, sent a formal summons to the Eral of Seaforth to surrender to him some part of the conquered lands; and in case of his refusal, he desired him to name a day and place on which to meet him with his clan in arms, and decide their dispute by the clay more and the dirk.

The bearer of a message such as this, was always a man chosen from the clan for his circumspection, fidelity, and understanding; one who could not only be trusted to fulfil his charge with diligence, but who could be relied on to remark every circumstance which attended the execution of his mission, and to gather every practical information in the castle, and among the people of the hostile chief. These qualifications were displayed in an eminent degree by the man who in the present instance was the bearer of the letter from Macdonell to Seaforth. He performed his journey with singular despatch, and at his return gave to his chief the following account of his reception and mission.

As I was passing up the stairs of the castle, I overlooked a man in Sleat hose,* and who, from his appearance of travel, I also judged to be the bearer of some letter or message to Mac Chuinich (Seaforth). I did not think any man's messenger had a right to go before my chief's, and I sprung before him, and entered the first room of the Earl of Seaforth, and delivered my letter before the Macdonald man appeared. I observed that when Mac Chuinich read the letter, he looked extremely sad, frowned, and bit his lips, as if in great perplexity. After having read it himself, he handed it round to those who were with him; and all, as they read it, showed the same agitation. Shortly after, the man in the Sleat house was brought in, and also delivered a letter to the Lord Seaforth. When the chief read it, the sadness of his countenance wore away, he smiled, and a sneer seemed upon his lips. He gave the paper to the rest, and as they read it they also smiled, and appeared to recover cheerfulness. I waited very much to know why the letter of my chief made them all look sorrowful, and that of the man in the Sleat house made them laugh; and I thought if you could see it, it might make you laugh also: for this reason I wished to get possession of it. Whilst the Mackenzies were drinking, the letter happened to fall from the table near where I stood; and waiting an opportunity, I got it under the point of my sword and drew it under my foot, and whilst every body was employed in drinking and consulting, I picked it up and put it in my plaid. Shortly afterwards I was dismissed; and here is the paper."

When Lord Macdonell had read the letter, he found it to the from Macdonald of Sleat, son-in-law to Seaforth. The purport of the epistle was to inform the latter of the proposed demand of the old lands of the Macdonells to be made by the Lord of Ross, and also to encourage Seaforth to hold no fear of the threats of hostility which might be used, assuring him that Sleat would assist him with all his power, though it was a gainst his own blood. Encouraged by the tone of confidence, Lord Seaforth had returned an evasive reply to the demands of Lord Macdonell, and proposed an amicable meeting, to discuss and adjust the disputed claims.—Lord Macdonell, however, was determined on unequivocal restitution, and prepared forthwith to carry fire and sword into the country of the Earl of Seaforth. But in the meantime, the latter, unwilling to abide that mode of balancing differences, made application to Lord Lauderdale, (then the man in power, and the mutual friend of himself and Macdonell,) and requested him, by some appointment of the Lord Chancellor's, his advocate in court, in order to divert him from the feud. Lauderdale complied with the views of his friend, and immediately sent an express into Scotland to inform Lord Macdonell that the matter had been pleased to appoint him to a place about his person, and desired him to come immediately to court. Lord Macdonell, as soon as he received this letter, exclaimed, "By G—d, this is Seaforth's contrivance to get me to disregard his appointment, and pursue his hostilities against the Mackenzies at the risk of the king's displeasure. However his friends on cooler consideration prevailed with him, and he set off for the court. In London he was detained by Lauderdale for some time, and finally by the mediation of friends, was induced to marry his son to the Earl of Seaforth's daughter. By this means the disputed lands again returned into the possession of the Macdonells.

FROM THE LATE LONDON PAPERS.

Singular and affecting case.—The distressed situation of six children who were, in consequence of their desolate condition, adopted by a humane named French, and resides in Quebec-street, London, attracted much attention some weeks ago. Sir Francis Burdett was struck with the singular humanity of the butcher, who has a number of children of his own, and directed that inquiry should be made into the circumstances of so unostentatious an act of charity. Finding that the facts were correctly stated, the worthy baronet sent a check for fifty guineas to the butcher, and a second hundred guineas for the use of the poor children. It seems that Sir Francis employed a gentleman to inquire into the circumstances attending the desertion of these children by the father, and the adoption of them by this humane butcher; and the following is an extract from the report made to him by the gentleman who instituted the inquiry:—"Having inquired the character of Mr. French, the butcher, in Great Quebec-street, and ascertained that it was respectable, I went to his house, and entered into conversation with him respecting the six children he has taken into his family. Mr. French, a plain man, of few words, handed me into the parlour to his wife, who, he said, would give me all the information I desired. Mrs. French, a most respectable and intelligent woman, told me, that the father of the children owed them (the French's) nearly £1,500. Upon questioning her how he came to owe them so large a sum of money, she said, that her husband had taken security to the amount of £1,200; that the father of the children ran away, and left them to pay the money: that the money was raised for this purpose from the sale of two houses which he had built, (Seaforth). I did not think any man's messenger had a right to go before my chief's, and I sprung before him, and entered the first room of the Earl of Seaforth, and delivered my letter before the Macdonald man appeared. I observed that when Mac Choinich read the letter, he looked extremely sad, frowned, and bit his lips, as if in great perplexity. After having read it himself, he handed it round to those who were with him; and all, as they read it, showed the same agitation. Shortly after, the man in the Sleat house was brought in, and also delivered a letter to the Lord Seaforth. By this means the disputed lands again returned into the possession of the Macdonells.

On Sunday forenoon, a circumstance of a most distressing nature occurred in Argyle-Street; a spirit-dealer in a fit of derangement, having cut the throat of his own child with a razor. He belonged to Dumbartonshire, and was an auctioneer for a number of years in the Parish of Kilmarnock; some time since he commenced business as a wholesale and retail spirit-dealer; he became unfortunate, and was thrown into prison. After his release he opened a small cellar, which has afforded him a scanty subsistence for some time past; he progressively fell into the deepest despondency, and was in the habit of sitting in the chair two or three nights in the week, brooding over his losses and misfortunes. He sat up on Saturday night, and his afflicted wife kept him company till four o'clock on Sunday morning. About nine o'clock, the poor woman, while nearly asleep, heard the child at her bosom give a gurgle, as if choaking; she started up, and found her infants throat cut from ear to ear. Her screams alarmed the neighbours, and she requested them to take the razor from her husband, lest he should hurt himself. He gave up the instrument with the greatest composure. He stated that he meant to have murdered them all, and then finished himself. He was soon afterwards taken into custody.—Glasgow Chronicle.

The Romney sailed from Plymouth for Lisbon, April 5, with detachments for Lisbon.

It is stated that the London Bankers alone have on hand no less than between forty and fifty millions in the Bank of England, finding no employment for it. Discounts even at a low rate of interest are for this season, sought after with avidity.

The Dublin papers state that the Irish Catholics are determined to pray for a reconsideration of their case in the present Session.

The Hecla, Capt. Parry, had taken her departure on his third northern voyage of discovery.

A letter of March 18th from Florence, announced that the Egyptian corvette which had sailed from Leghorn, has been captured by Lord Cochrane.

Mr. Canning in the House of Commons, March 26th, laid on the table of the House the convention with that country for settling the claims for slaves carried away by the British Army, and copies of the correspondence between the British and U. States Governments respecting the intercourse between this country and the British Colonies Mr. Canning remarked that as a part of the correspondence had been laid before the American Legislature, it was fitting that the whole should be published. Among these documents are a letter of Mr. Canning to Mr. Gallatin of November 13 1826. One of Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Canning of December 26, 1826, and a reply of Mr. Canning to Mr Gallatin of Jan. 27, 1827. These documents being ordered to lie on the table, Mr. Hume asked if the correspondence was final. Mr. Canning replied that "he conceived it to be final, for he had had the last word."

In the letter of January 27, Mr. Canning informs Mr. Gallatin that when intelligence was received of a proposition in Congress to accede to the terms of the British act of 1825, an instruction was sent to Mr. Vaughan at Washington, grounded on the belief of the British Government that Congress would not separate, without adopting the resolution. In that case, and upon receiving an assurance from the American Government that the restrictions and charges on British shipping, and British Colonial produce, would be withdrawn by the United States, Mr. Vaughan was authorized to deliver a note to the American Secretary of State, declaring that the discriminating duties imposed upon American ships and their cargoes, in the West Indies, should immediately cease. Mr. Vaughan was in possession of this instruction when the resolution was rejected. He adds, it was no part of Mr. Vaughan's duty to make any communication upon the subject to the American Government before the result of the discussion was ascertained. We have not time to enumerate the interesting letters of Mr. Canning's letter. After remarking that he shall not allow himself to be drawn again into a discussion of topics already more than once debated, Mr. Canning concludes his letter with assurances of the most cordial desire, on the part of Great Britain, to cultivate the friendship of the United States.

The Pylades Galatea had arrived at Portsmouth from Portugal, having left the Tagus March 23. It is stated, "all the accounts represent the anticonstitutionalists' cause as being at an end."

The state of Portugal is in conformity with the resolutions already published, modified only by the adoption of the Imperial, in place of the Winchester measure, with a corresponding alteration of the address, so as to make the effect the same, was read the second time in the House of Commons April 24, and passed by a vote of 243 to 78. The bill is to take effect from the time of its passing.

Accounts from Corfu to Feb. 16, gave favorable information of the citadel of Athens. A supply of provisions had been thrown into the fortress, and some loss had been inflicted on the Turks in the vicinity.

The King of Great Britain had given £100, which, with a like contribution from the funds of the Philharmonic Society, had been sent to the relief of Beethoven, who was suffering from disease and poverty at Vienna.

The Paris Etoile of the 30th of March give, as among the lies of the day circulated, that Mr. Lamb, the British Ambassador at Madrid, had insisted upon the dissolution of the Spanish Army assembled on the frontiers of Spain, his requiring 78,000,000 francs for the expenses of the war in Portugal, and the hand of Carlotta as security for its payment. Ferdinand is said to have answered very energetically to some demands of this kind, and to have said, that as long as an English soldier remains in Portugal, he will not be dissolved but increased.

So great had been the importations into England of French silks, that persons engaged in the silk trade contemplated a memorial to ministers, representing the ruin that must ensue unless measures were contemplated to lessen the importations. A complete stagnation in the trade was produced in London, and the distress among the weavers in Spitalfields had been exceedingly extended.

A mechanic of Exmouth, (Eng.) had constructed a model of King Solomon's Temple, in shell work and minerals, containing 980 windows 11 towers, 360 pinacles, 180 pillars, formed of 150,000 English shells. The model is four feet ten inches in length, and three feet seven in breadth; the centre tower four feet six in height.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The total value of exports from Great Britain, in the year 1824. (According to M. Cesar Moreau), was fifty six millions and a quarter; in 1825, sixty three millions and a quarter; and, in 1826, sixty millions and three fourths. This fact is so much the more worthy of being noticed, that the excessive production of 1825, has been often and forcibly dwelt on; and many of the evils which have afflicted the country, have been attributed to that cause; yet the exact difference of the exports of 1825 and 1826 amounts only to £3,344,000. The imports present a still more curious result. It has been repeated, until every one believed it, that the artificial stimulus given to commerce in 1825, increased our imports beyond all example, yet in point of fact, the imports in 1825, fall short of those of 1826, by no less sum than £7,467,296.—There is a circumstance connected with the imports and exports of the country which appears, at first sight, inexplicable. In 1824, the country was in the highest prosperity; and, in 1826, it is not to be denied, it has been in a very depressed condition —now, in the former year, the imports and exports fell short of those of 1826, by about nine millions and five millions, respectively; and, therefore, on general principles, we would say, that commerce, in the latter year, was much more active than in the former period. The falling off in the exports of 1826, compared with 1825, is chiefly in the Old World. In the exports to the Peninsula, it amounts to half a million; to Italy, a million; to the East Indies and China, about a million and a half. In the New World, the increase is considerable. The exports to the United States were, in 1825 £7, 150,000; and in 1826, £7,630,000. The exports to Brazil have also increased by nearly half a million, to the West Indies and to British America have fallen off; while in those to Mexico, there is an increase of nearly a million. The total exports to the new American States and the Brazils, last year, amounted to above eight millions and a half, being a million more than the exports to the United States, and upwards of a million and a half more than the exports to the British West Indies and Canada.—Courier.

Very Important despatches were received at the Colonial Office and Admiralty, on 30th April, from Lt. Gen. Sir H. Clinton, at Coimbra, and from Vice-Admiral Lord Amherst in the Tagus. From these documents, it appears that the contest in Portugal is nearly at an end.—Belfast News Letter.

The account of the Quarters Revenue to the 5th April shews a diminuation as compared with the corresponding quarter of last year £489,543. This decrease, all circumstances considered is less than was anticipated and when the causes of it are satisfactorily accounted for it is by no means calculated to excite alarm. The Quarter of last Year included an incidental payment from the Government of the Netherlands, the real produce therefore of the Revenue by taxation, in the present quarter, divested of all incidental advantages, is as nearly equal as possible, and by no means indicates a permanent depression.

Extract of a letter from Liverpool, April 10. 1827.—The present stock of Ashes is very heavy, of Canada there are 7,000 barrels, and 10,000 Pots and about 4,400 States, making in all 21,400 barrels. Some purchases have been made this week for the Irish market, at 24s. per bl. and 23s. 6d. for Pot, Several heavy sales having been advertised for next week, we fear a further reduction in prices will take place, the stock in London and several other quarters is also very heavy.

VERY LATE FROM ENGLAND.

From the N. Y. Albion (Supplement) May 9

THE CABINET.

The arrival of the Dalhousie Castle from Liverpool has confirmed the report received on Sunday from Frances of the elevation of Mr Canning to the high station of Premier, and the resignation of the greater part of the other members of the Cabinet. The latter event is so extraordinary and unexpected, and its causes involved in such inexplicable difficulty that we will not trust ourselves to express any opinion thereon. We have therefore selected the most important articles contained in the London papers, and submit them as they are to our readers. We may, nevertheless, be permitted to say, that we do not believe that all those noble persons have vacated their seats from personal dislike of Mr. Canning—some other cause must have been in operation—doubtless some great point of national policy, and what more likely than the Catholic Question ?

The Dalhousie Castle has brought London papers to the 15th April, at which time nothing was done towards the reorganization of a Ministry. Parliament, it will be recollected, had adjourned to 1st May. The Dalhousie had a remarkably fine passage and beat two of the line ships.

The Corn Bill passed the House of Commons on the 12th April.

RESIGNATION OF SEVEN MINISTERS.

MR CANNING is appointed PREMIER—in consequence thereof, the following seven members of the Cabinet have resigned:

The Lord Chancellor Eldon,
The Duke of Wellington,
Lord Sidmouth,
Lord Bathurst,
Lord Westmoreland,
Lord Bexley,
Mr. Peel.

Lord Louther, son of Lord Londale, also resigned as one of the Lords of the Treasury.

House of Commons, 5 o'clock 12th April.

Mr. Wynn, president of the India Board, moved that a writ of election issue to the borough of Newport, to elect a member in the room of the Hon. Geo. Canning, who had accepted the place of first Lord of the Treasury, (Great cheering from all parts of the House.) Mr. Wynn then moved an adjournment to the 1st May, in order to afford time to Mr. Canning to frame his new Cabinet. Mr. Tierney objected, saying that time enough had been taken to form a new Cabinet, and as it was understood that several of the old members had run away and nobody knew when they would return, it was not worth while to wait. The adjournment, however, was carried.

It is impossible for us, at this distance, to conjecture who will be Mr. Canning's associates. The times of April 14 says—that he, Mr. Canning, having refused to accept the station of Premier unless with unrestrained authority to form a Cabinet, had carried his point, and was perfectly free.

Lord Grenville, the British Ambassador at Paris, is mentioned for the Foreign Secretary, and Mr. Scarlett as the successor of the Lord Chancellor.

London Saturday, April 14.

Half-past 7 o'clock.—Mr. Canning and the character of the administration about to be formed by him, have furnished a most animating topic to-day in the city, and the Exchange has been constantly thronged with inquirers, eager to collect authentic intelligence from the Court-end of the town. The first point which parties have been anxious to establish, is, whether the Minister is in possession of the King's cordial support, and whether he is likely to form such an administration as will secure the confidence of the country, and maintain its ground against the high aristocratical party now avowedly opposed to it. It is understood here, that in the interviews which Mr. Canning has had with the King, in which he delivered in His Majesty the resignation of his colleagues, some very unequivocal assurations were afforded of the effect produced by that event on the King's mind. It has been roused, it is said, to a degree of energy and firmness, for which the public, and probably the ministers who have resigned, will not believe here but that the seceding members of the late Cabinet have calculated on the overthrow of Mr. Canning by this step, and that the offices they held were placed by it, permanently, out of jeopardy. They probably concluded that the King's mind would have been overcome by the desertion at one time, of so many of his supposed friends, and that their resignation would not be accepted. They have been, however, it is said, completely disappointed in this expectation, the King having, without hesitation, signified his acceptance of all the resignations tendered, accompanied with a tone and manner which, in all probability, will effectually preclude their return to office hereafter. The King, it may be affirmed, we believe, is too much irritated at their conduct ever to receive them, willingly, again to favour; and thus is the full tide of royal favour, of course, secured to Mr. Canning. Various lists of Ministers for the new Administration have been handed about to-day, in the City; but it would be idle to repeat what is circulated on such occasions. Among the rumours that appear best entitled to attention, is one, that a very essential change is contemplated with respect to the Admiralty, it being the intention to abolish the Board altogether, and to revive in the Office of Lord High Admiral in the person of the Duke of Clarence, who will conduct the affairs of the Navy with the aid of a council. This is supposed to have been the cause which led to the Duke's visit to Windsor, whither he was sent for by the King, and that his acquiescence in the arrangement was obtained in the interview which followed. The appointment, if the reports on the subject may be relied on, will be a good omen of the tact by which the minister is governed in forming his new arrangements. It is also rumoured here, that the command of the army is to be offered to the Marquis of Anglesea.

Of the motives of the Duke of Wellington in resigning the latter office, there is one account in circulation which is too honourable to his Grace not to be mentioned; particularly as it has obtained belief in the first military circles. In his interview with the King, in which he tendered his resignation of the Ordnance Department, that he reported to have said, that, having declined taking any part in the administration of which Mr. Canning was at the head, he did not conceive that he could consistently retain a post (the chief command of the army) which it was so important to subject to the controul of the new administration. As the Duke of Wellington's motives have been variously explained and commented on, it would be injustice to withhold one explanation which may be interpreted so honourably for his character. It is said, that all the individuals who have received subordinate appointments under the Duke of Wellington, both at the Ordnance Office and at the War Office, will retire with him, and that their number exceeds forty individuals.

Other reports assign the Chancery to Sir J. Copley or Mr. Brougham; and it has been affirmed, with some colour, that overtures to induce the Marquis of Lansdown to form a part of the new administration have been made, and that they have not been rejected. These latter reports, however, are to vague at present to deserve attention.

One decisive and important step has been taken since yesterday; decisive as indicating the feelings which may well be supposed to possess the royal mind under the existing circumstances of his Majesty's Government: and important, as affecting the interests of a popular branch of the public service.

His Majesty has been pleased to appoint His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, to be Lord High Admiral, and we have the satisfaction of being able to add, that it is understood the whole of the present board of Admirality, (with the exception of Viscount Melville, who resigned three days since,) will continue their services, as the Council of his Royal Highness.

The retirement of the Viscount was that which was received by the public, if not with the most regret, at least with the greatest surprise. His Lordship, both in the House of Commons, and the House of Lords, has been a steady voter for the Catholics, so that it was not to have been at all expected, on public grounds, that he would have made common cause with the protestant members of the cabinet, who might (unjustly, we certainly think, but perhaps not unnaturally) have been averse to see a supporter of the Catholic claims at the head of the Government. His Lordship's session seemed to give a different character to the knot of resignations, so that it would have been, had it been composed of protestants only, and appears to warrant a suspicion that there must be some personal motives for the sudden defection of no less than seven members of the late cabinet.

We alluded yesterday to the rumour of the resignation of the Duke of Wellington; it is true he has resigned. His Grace retires, not only from the Horse Guards but from the Ordnance; there seems no sufficient political reasons for this step on the part of His Grace, and we should be sorry to think he is acting from any other motives than such as may be consistently and conscientiously avowed.

We have to announce, also the resignation of some of His Majesty's household. His Grace the Duke of Montrose, Lord Chamberlain; his son the Marquis of Graham, Vice Chamberlain; and His Grace the Duke of Dorset, Master of the Horse, have retired from their respective departments. They are completely subordinate, and not, perhaps, unexpected movements, but what that must the country think of the King's choice in the circumscribe his authority—to abridge His Royal prerogative is not to be found we believe, in the history of this country; certainly not within the last century. We have the satisfaction of knowing, however, that His Majesty views the matter as a sovereign so circumstanced should do; and thus the proof of that can be given of this, if proof were needed, is the promptitude with which the vacancy created by the secession of Viscount Melville has been supplied.

Of the seven retiring ministers, whose names we announced yesterday, we have to state, that Lord Bexley has signified his wish to resign his situation of Chancellor of the Exchequer, which has been accepted. The appointment, if the reports on the subject may be relied on, will be a good omen of the tact by which the minister is governed in forming his new arrangements. It is also rumoured here, that the command of the army is to be offered to the Marquis of Anglesea.

The retirement of the Viscount was that which was received by the public, if not with the most regret, at least with the greatest surprise. His Lordship, both in the House of ning and Mr. Peel, when the former received His Majesty's express commands to form an effective administration, nothing could exceed the frank, manly, and honorable conduct of the latter, or the generous and conciliatory proceedings of the former. There were, however, unfortunately, difficulties in the mind of Mr. Peel which he could not conscientiously remove; and he, therefore, felt it impossible to continue to hold the Seals of the Home Department.

The opinions, we know prevails, that Mr. Peel's decision has been taken in concurrence with that of his colleagues, who have also sent in their resignations. It is of some importance that this erroneous notion should be removed. Without professing to state what may have been the precise motives which influenced the right honorable gentleman, we feel justified in affirming, that he has acted from considerations arising out of views, entirely personal to himself; and we believe we may add, that in separating himself from the government of Mr. Canning, he quits office with the same cordial feelings towards the right hon. gentleman, which have animated him during the whole period of their official connexion.

It has been erroneously stated in some of the morning papers, that Lord Sidmouth is one of those who sent in his resignation. Lord S. is not a Cabinet Minister, and therefore could not be affected by the state of the Ministry.—Courier, April 13.

London, April 16. Evening.—Much as expectation, little effect has been produced on the Funds by the dissolution of one Ministry, and the hostile incidental to the formation of another. COLONIAL TRADE.

The following letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, to the Collector of Boston, is published for the sake of those to whom its contents may be of importance, in the other commercial districts of the Union:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 2. 1827.

Sir; In reply to your letter of the 24th of April, I have to state, that a remission of the forfeiture that attached in the case of the British brig Belfast, and cargo, which arrived at Boston, from Bermuda, having been granted, on satisfactory proof, duly laid before the Department, that no intentional violation of our laws was committed in the case, it follows, that this vessel may now be permitted to depart, with a cargo in like manner as any other British vessel could lawfully do. But it is very clear that she cannot be permitted to take a cargo to any British Colonial port, from which the vessels of the United States have been, by that nation, excluded; to guard against which, you will take care to require the penal bond specially prescribed in such cases, by the act of Congress of the 15th of May, 1820.

I remain your most obedient servant.

SPEECH OF HIS EXCELLENCY SIR JAMES KEMPT, on proroguing the Provincial Parliament in Nova Scotia.

Mr. PRESIDENT, and Gentlemen of His Majesty's Council,

Mr. SPEAKER, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

Having given my assent to all the Bills which you have passed and presented for my concurrence, in the course of the Session, I now give you pleasure in releasing you from your Legislative Duties.

I thank you in His Majesty's name, for the liberal supplies which you have granted for the Public service. My warmest thanks are also due to you for the ready attention which you have been pleased to pay to my recommendations, and for the confidence which you have reposed in me, by placing considerable sums at my disposal for various important purposes.

It will be, you may believe, my earnest endeavour to see that all monies so placed, are managed with care and economy; and faithfully applied to the objects they are intended to promote.

In making these acknowledgments I perform a very pleasing duty; but I cannot refrain at the same time from expressing my regret, that the Session should close without any appropriation for the encouragement of the Fisheries, (the great Staple of the Province) and also without the adoption of some measures to render more generally beneficial, than it has hitherto been, the School Act passed in the last Session of the Legislature

The President of His Majesty's Council then, by his Excellency's command, declared the Assembly prorogued until Thursday, the fifth day of July next.

The last census of this Province was so far below the real amount of the population, that we feel much pleasure at finding that a new one is about to take place. It may not be overrating the number of inhabitants in Nova Scotia proper and Cape Breton to estimate them at 135 or 140,000. Cape Breton alone is supposed to contain above 25,000. The district of Pictou about 15 or 20,000—Halifax proper perhaps about the same amount.

The weather has been much milder since the middle of last month, than has been known in this country. Indeed the appearance of every thing would induce one almost to suppose that May had come this year without waiting for April.

Lieutenant Colonel Cockburn, with his secretary Lord Valentia, left town on Tuesday last, for St. John, N. B.—From that city, we are informed, they intend to proceed to Fredericton, Miramichi, Pictou, Prince Edward Island and Cape Breton—and after having completed this tour will return to Halifax.—Nova Scotian.

Upwards 27,000 barrels of Flour have been entered at the Custom House, since January last.—ib.

Captain R. Loring 76th Regiment, having brevet rank superior to his regimental commission, has accepted promotion upon half-pay.

The subjoined letters have been laid on the table of the Quebec Exchange and Reading Room, for the information of its Trade :—

" The Committe of Trade have much satisfaction in announcing that by recent accounts from Mr. Felton, the Commercial Agent of Lower Canada, it appears that his mission will be attended with the most beneficial results.

" Confident hopes were entertained that the new Corn Bill, placing our trade in Grain and Flour on the advantageous footing contemplated by the original resolutions of the House of Commons, would, without any essential variation, pass the House.

" Montreal, and Kingston in Upper Canada, are to be declared Free Warehousing Ports; and to extend the benefit of the bonding system to the utmost limits, permission will be given to enter all commodities admissible under 6th Geo. 4th, cap. 114, at the Provincial Custom House, on giving security for their deposit in the King's warehouse, in any of the free warehousing ports in the Province, and to Halifax. And to enable us to supply the West Indies at the lowest rates, fresh pork and fresh beef will be admitted, duty free ; as will also fresh fish, saw logs, fire-wood, &c.

" In respect to the lumber trade with the United Kingdom, the Committee regret that there is no reason to hope that it will be placed on a more favorable footing than the present ; an application from the Committee of ship-owners for a reduction of duty on colonial lumber, having met with a positive refusal from the Board of Trade, and a suggestion made to the President of the Board, by Mr. Felton, being likely to meet the same fate.

" The importation of East India goods, and of French silks, by inland navigation, will be repressed, by the duties being raised to 30 per cent ; and the import of cotton and woollen goods, by a duty equal to that levied on similar articles of British manufacture in the United States.

" In conclusion, Mr. Felton expresses his satisfaction in stating, that His Majesty's Ministers evince the utmost solicitude for the prosperity of the North American Colonies.

" By order of the Committee of Trade,

(Signed) W. WALKER, Sec'y."

Committee of Trade Room, 4th May 1827.

" THURSDAY, May 3d."

" DEAR SIR.—In returning you Mr. Felton's letter which you put into my hands this morning, I have the satisfaction to acquaint you, for the information of the Trade, that His Excellency the Governor in Chief, with the advice of the Council, has determined to give orders to the Collectors at Coteau du Lac and St. John, to admit to entry such goods, &c. as may lawfully be brought from the United States to those ports, on the importers therefore entering into bond, in the form prescribed by law, that the same shall be brought to Quebec and lodged in the King's warehouse, to be subject to such conditions as are provided by the 6th Geo IV. cap. 114. I remain, Dear Sir, your faithful servant,

(Signed)
A. W. COCHRAN, Sec'y.

W. FINLAY, Esq.

QUEBEC, MAY 8.

The Honble the CHIEF JUSTICE it is understood, was to leave England for this port, early in May,

Col. COCKBURN is expected here by the river at the beginning of the ensuing month.

The number of Emigrants who have already arrived at this port is about 1500, and preparations both from Ireland and Scotland were making at the commencement of April, for the embarkation of thousands at the expense of the emigrant himself. Indeed from what we have heard, we might almost say that the larger number of poor Manufacturers in Glasgow and Paisley are only prevented from coming out by the want of means. From Ireland thousands are coming out on their own account. Government have given information that 16,000 will be immediately sent out at its expense. We suppose that 25,000 emigrants will arrive this season.

The number of vessels arrived in port is now 74. Many of them have had passages of between 11 and 22 days, which we believe almost without example. Some of them had not an hour's contrary wind from leaving the British port to their anchoring here The passages were generally pleasant. In the river, however, the wind was extremely violent on Tuesday. It was impossible at one time to carry sail. Some of the vessels which arrived here that evening, were off Gaspe on monday morning, and passed Bic at 6 o'clock A. M. on Tuesday. Some fields of ice were seen on the Banks of Newfoundland, and a little field ice on the Cape Breton shore, but it was not considerable enough to offer any obstruction.

Counterfeit Bank Notes !—There are in circulation at present Ten Dollar Bills of the Montreal Bank, of a late issue, which have been altered from the one dollar bills: in doing this, the counterfeiter has not altered the device of the one dollar bill, which is Britannia with a spear, but has altered the head after the signature of the Cashier, but only the body of the bill and the checks in which the figures ten occur, In the good bills, the device is a Ship, the words Bank of Montreal are in the first line and not as in the forged bill in the fourth. The check of the forged bill is also crossed with a common pen. Otherwise it is difficult to detect the counterfeit bill. The public ought carefully to examine the bills of the above denomination which they may receive.

with 70 of her passengers; the remainder had proceeded for Quebec by land. The total number of settlers embarked in the Rob Roy at Belfast, amounted to 150, out of which 3 men two women, and 19 children perished on board at L'islet, where the vessel stranded. The bodies were all taken on shore and buried on Thursday morning. The accounts from the brig are very distressing. One passenger, (Frank Chrasty,) lost his wife and three children: another, (David McGarrow,) out of four children lost three, the one saved is deaf and dumb, aged about four years. Thomas Millar, who had come out to settle with his friends in York U. C. lost two children, his sister-in-law, (Mrs. Lamb,) with seven children, lost her husband and one child. The latter family had property on board worth near five hundred pounds, the whole of which is lost, and not a farthing insured. The vessel is a total wreck. Many of the settlers which have come up from the wreck, have been in respectable circumstances, several having embarked with considerable property. The Emigrant Society, we understand, will forward the most deserving objects to their several destinations:—They met with every assistance from the Canadian Inhabitants near the spot where the disaster occurred.

GENERAL ORDER.

The Commander of the Forces having completed his half-yearly inspection of the 71st Light Infantry, preparatory to their change of Quarters to Montreal, has great satisfaction in assuring Lt.-Col. Jones, and the Battalion generally, that he has never seen on such occasion any regiment in more perfect order, or where the appearance in the field was more steady and correct, altogether reflecting infinite credit on the Officer in command, and on those who so zealously support him.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1827.

We were enabled by the politeness of a friend who furnished us with the Supplement to the Albion, to give our Town Subscribers an extra Sheet, on Wednesday last, containing the late important news received from England by the Dalhousie Castle For the information of our more distant readers, it is inserted in this days paper. No Official intelligence is yet received as to the successors of those who have resigned their seats in the Ministry.

Misrepresentations in Public Journals corrected—The last Colonial Advocate, with its usual disregard of fact, when making such statements, contains the following paragraph:—

"We are credibly informed that Mr. Warren the Post-master of Whitby has been struck off the commission of the peace for having, in consequence of the request of some of his neighbours, attended a meeting upon the Alien question in that Township, and consented to remit their subscriptions to York, although he neither spoke nor voted on the occasion.—It is useless to talk of an independant unpaid magistracy in a country where such examples are placed before those in the commission of the peace. One turn out will serve for a District in silencing the bench from speaking what they think."

The fact is that, Mr. Warrens name is not, and never was in the Commission of the Peace. We would remind the Advocate of a motto, not long since used by himself,—' How beautiful is truth!'

The Shipping have had short passages to Quebec this Spring, as will be seen by a reference to the list of arrivals. The loss of the Rob Roy, some particulars of which are copied from the Quebec papers is a melancholy case of Shipwreck

Settlers, are arriving in great numbers, and it is supposed that twenty-five thousand may be expected during the season.

The Steam Boat Queenston met with an accident while lying at the Wharf here on Saturday last. In raising the steam, before proceeding to Niagara, the Boiler was partially burst. The accident was not attended with any serious consequences. The Queenston was delayed until the following Thursday in making the necessary repairs, before she proceeded on her voyage.

Melancholy Accident.—This morning between 9 and 10 o'clock, Michael Donelly, one of the labourers employed in building the new Episcopal Church in this place, was precipitated, by some accident, from the top of the steeple, and killed on the spot. The deceased was a native of Ireland, and about forty years of age. He has left a wife and two children.—Kingston Chronicle.

We observe by the Edinburgh Weekly Journal of the 14th March, which we received last Monday, via New-York, that the Earl of Dalhousie has been unanimously elected Governor of the Royal Bank of Scotland for the ensuing year.—Montreal Herald.

The passages this Spring have been of uncommon celerity. The Ottawa was only 18 days from Falmouth—the Bolivar 19 from Belfast; and we have just seen Mr. H. Perrerton, who was of the Cove of Cork yesterday fortnight! He brings a London paper of the 11th April. There is also at the Exchange a Liverpool paper of the 12th.—Quebec Gazette.

Private letters from a respectable source mention that the grand Emigration system will not be carried into effect until next spring, after the return of Col. Cockburn to England. That Gentleman is said to be intended for a new situation in the Colonial Office; and that he will have for his department the business of Emigration.—Ib.

He was formerly of Staten Island, New York, where he owned a very valuable property but from which he was driven by his firm and inflexible loyalty; his intrepid zeal and indefatigable exertion in the Royal Cause during the American Rebellion, brought upon him the vengeance of the Revolutionary Government, placed him and his possessions in the proscribed list. Since then he has resided in this Province, and was an active and useful Representative in the first House of Assembly—and during a long life he has ever been distinguished for the strictest honor, and an undeviating independence of mind.

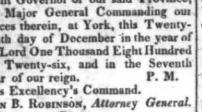
GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.



AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PERE-GRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieu-

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A Valuation will be furnished made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing hrough the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

THE HOMES OF ENGLAND.
BY MRS. HEMANS.

The stately Homes of England,
How beautiful they stand!
Amidst their tall ancestral trees,
O'er all the pleasant land!
The deer across their green-sward bound,
Through shade and sunny gleam;
And the swan glides past them with the sound
Of some rejoicing stream.

The merry Homes of England!
Around their hearths by night
What gladsome looks of household love
Meet in the ruddy light!
There woman's voice flows forth in song,
Or childhood's tale is told;
Or lips move tunefully along

The blessed Homes of England!
How softly on their bowers
Is laid the holy quietness
That breathes from Sabbath-hours!
Solemn, yet sweet, the church-bell's chime
Floats through their woods at morn;
All other sounds, in that still time,
Of breeze and leaf are born.

The Cottage Homes of England!
By thousands, on her plains,
They are smiling o'er the silvery brooks,
And round the hamlet-fanes.
Through glowing orchards forth they peep,
Each from its nook of leaves,
And fearless there they lowly sleep,
As the bird beneath their eaves.

The free, fair Homes of England!
Long, Long, in hut and hall,
May hearts of native proof be rear'd,
To guard each hallow'd wall!
And green for ever be the groves,
And bright the flowery sod,
Where first the child's glad spirit loves
Its Country and its God!

Miscellaneous.

MACVIC IAN.*

A TRADITION OF THE WESTERN HIGHLANDS.

The Mac-Ians, or Johnsons, of Ardnamurchan, were descended from John, a younger son of Æneas or Angus More, King of the Isles, the fourth in descent and succession from Somerled. The ancient Lords of the district of Ardnamurchan, were surnamed Connals, and were thus distinguished in the days of St. Colomba, as appears from his life by Adamnanus.

The Connals having failed in the male line, a confidential person in their service, perceiving that much contention was likely to arise about the marriage of the heiress, wisely resolved on securing his own interest by negociating a treaty of marriage between its young nurslings and John, the son of the great and powerful chief of the Macdonalds, though he was aware that her own inclination led to a very different person. This politic Caledonian was named Ernin Clerich, or Edmund the Clerk; and though his offspring assumed the name of Macdonald, they are still distinguished for prudence and address, after the lapse of more than five hundred years.

John erected a Castle of very considerable dimensions, the walls of which are perfectly entire at this day; it stands at the western extremity of the Island of Mull, and is well known to travellers under the appellation of Mingary Castle.

To this tribe of Mac-Ians of Ardnamurchan, so termed to distinguish them from those of Glenco, who bore the same patronymic, became numerous and powerful, and in process of time, were considered among the most warlike and turbulent septs in the western Highlands. The heads of the elder branches of the Macdonalds being dead, and several of their heirs being under age, this family at one time made an attempt to usurp the crown of the Isles, to which they had very near forced their way, by various artifices not reputed very laudable. The contest came at last to an issue in the field, and a bloody battle was fought between the parties at Craigmaraigid, in Glendrein, by ancient chroniclers called the conflict of the Silver-rock. It is said that four-and-twenty chiefs in coats of mail fought on this occasion, at the heads of their various clans, and the slaughter was very considerable, as the cairns seem still to attest. The Mac-Ians were defeated after a very hard struggle; and the loss which they suffered was so severe, that they never again recovered their influence. This happened in the very beginning of the fifteenth century.

A considerable time afterwards, the young chieftain of Ardnamurchan eloped with a daughter of Maclean, and conveyed her to his castle in safety, though warmly pursued. Like many modern marriages concluded in Gretna Green, this turned out by no means a happy one. The lady was very anxious to have a proper dowry settled upon her, and Mac-Ian told her that he would give her all the land which she could see from a very high piece of ground which he mentioned, if that would satisfy her. The lady cheerfully embraced his offer, and he conducted her to the specified spot, accompanied by witnesses; but, to her great mortification, she found that her view did not in any direction extend a bow-shot. The stone on which she stood is still pointed out, and the valley is distinguished by the appellation of "The Lady's Dowry," at this day.

The lady was determined to be revenged; and what will not disappointed ambition do! She taught a tame raven, which she kept as a pet, to express some words not the most pleasant to the Laird of Ardnamurchan. He was a keen sportsman, though sometimes very unsuccessful. His mother's name was Eva; and one day when he came home empty handed, the raven met him in the court of the castle, and to his no little surprize called out—"Eva's son has had no sport! Eva's son has had no sport!" "A blessing on thee; but a curse on thy mate!" said the angry chieftain. His wife met him sneering, and he unfortunately insulted her—he putted her nose; a treatment which she appears to have deserved. These circumstances, trifling as they may seem, were productive of very unhappy consequences. Long and bloody feuds between the Mac-Ians and Macleans took their origin from these events; and many a widow and orphan lamented the chattering of the raven.

* The son of John's son. The chief is called the son, and the cadets the son's sons, to this day, in the Highlands.

NEWTON.

March 20, 1726.—Sir Isaac Newton died at the advanced age of 84 years and 3 months. He was born on the 25th December, 1642, at Woolsthorpe in Lincolnshire. His father was Lord of the manor, and cultivated his own moderate paternal property. His mother was Hannah Ascough, of an ancient and respectable family. She lost her husband some months before the birth of her son. The infant was so puny and diminutive, that serious apprehensions were entertained for his life; the mighty genius, which was destined to enlighten the world, appeared to struggle for a mere existence. After receiving the rudiments of education from his mother, he was sent, at the age of 12, to the grammar school at Grantham. The bias of his early genius, by a skill in mechanical contrivances, excited great admiration; whilst other boys were at play, his leisure was employed in forming models of mills and machinery. He erected a water clock from an old box, which had an index moved by a piece of wood sinking as the drops fell from the bottom, and a regular dial plate to indicate the hours. His scientific paper kites, sent up in the dark, with Chinese paper lanterns attached to them, passed for meteors, and astonished the rustic gazers, at a time when such sights are rare and new:—the yard of the house in which he lived he turned into a useful sun-dial by marking, from numerous observations, the hours upon the walls and roof. In his studies at school, his own report states him to have been negligent, till he was stimulated to exertion by the tyranny of a boy above him, on whom he determined to revenge himself, by passing him in the class; and he never rested till he became the first scholar.

His early attainments were not confined to mechanics; he showed a taste for the fine arts when he was a mere boy, and made very considerable proficiency in drawing, without having received any instruction; he copied prints, and even sketched portraits from life, with tolerable fidelity and success. The walls of his room were decorated with these productions of his leisure hours, and perhaps, at some public sale, the competition of great collectors may be excited by the offer of a drawing, warranted genuine, by the hand of Sir Isaac Newton:—such a rarity would undoubtedly command a high price. He lived, when at Grantham, with Mr. Clark, an apothecary, who was brother to an under master of the school. Miss Story, the young and blooming niece of Mr. Clark, was the only female who is supposed to have made an impression on the heart of Newton. Instead of playing with other boys, he was in the habit of making for her convenience and amusement, little tables and carriages, which moved mechanically like Merlin's chair: his attachment to her is said to have continued even after he was sent to college; but as he could not marry without forfeiting his chance of a fellowship, as he had no means of supporting a wife and family, he subdued his predilection in silence, and found consolation in the severest labour of study. He retained his feelings of kindness for her whilst she lived, visited her occasionally after she became Mrs. Vincent, and when she sunk into poverty, he liberally supplied her wants. It has had been by nature a calculator—if, like thousands of his fellow-creatures he had listened to the dictates of passion, rather than the counsels of prudence—if he had married and turned farmer as he probably must have done, for a subsistence, he might have lived and died a happy, obscure, substantial yeoman: the world would have wanted the Treatise on Optics, and its records would have been deprived of one of their greatest ornaments.

Ice Islands.—It was mentioned in the ship news, published in this paper on Monday evening, that the Pacific, in her passage from Liverpool, saw immense bodies of ice near the Grand Bank. Navigators who are about to sail for Europe may feel an interest in seeing the particulars somewhat more minutely stated. The floating islands lay along the eastern edge of the bank, in the latitude of about 43 degrees, and between the 40th and 52d degree of longitude. Several of them appeared to be aground, and in others, the motion upon the waves was perceptible. The officers of the ship took the altitude of one, which rose to the hight of 244 feet above the sea, in a castellated form, resembling a colossal ruin. Others were in the shape of churches, houses and insulated towers, with the billows dashing furiously round their bases. In many instances, fragments of moderate size, apparently severed from the larger masses, were seen close to the ship, fortunately the atmosphere was clear, and a vigilant watch was kept upon the bow of the ship by night and day. For two or three days, the thermometer was below the freezing point, and the shrouds were coated with ice. Capt. Croker, the veteran master of the Pacific, who has crossed the Atlantic one hundred and thirty eight times, remarked that he had never seen so many icebergs during a single voyage. The passengers were equally gratified with the grandeur of a spectacle which none of them had before witnessed.—N. Y. Statesman.

Dreadful Explosion.—The following account has reached us from Lancaster: "About ten minutes before 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon, the inhabitants of this town were dreadfully alarmed by a violent tremor of the earth, which extended from the south western direction of the northward. The first indication of this shock was a slight motion of the earth, which increased for about ten seconds, and terminated by a tremendous concussion, which was felt every where, but without the least perceptable sound. As the shock passed onward it increased and every window, door, chimney, picture, or other suspended or projecting ornament, were effected by its surprising power; and as if by one accord, a number of persons rushed in the direction of the open plains, to the northward of the town. In this flight a peculiar incident occurred, showing the force of animal instinct. The fore horses of one of the northern coaches, then about to proceed to its destination, stood fast and trembled excessively, and one of the leaders fell down, with every appearance of terror. Here and there cats were seen jumping and springing away with that extraordinary activity, which, at any other time than this, would have caused merriment. The shock was felt, it appears by the accounts from the north, at Carlisle, where the same opinion as to its course was expressed. Near the sheep fells (a range of hilly moorland) in Westmoreland, 28 miles from this town, the shock was very violently experienced, and the windows of Brougham Hall, the residence of Mr. Brougham, were shattered. The Ulverstone carriers describe the shock as dreadful. The sands were hurled into the air in heavy showers, and men and horses were overthrown in several places of that dangerous tract of sand which these poor people cross daily with peat, turf, &c. As we have stated, every person for about ten miles considered this a shock of an earthquake, until by the arrival of the Ulverstone over Sand coach, on Saturday night, the cause of this alarming sensation was correctly stated: and we are now enabled to lay before our readers the circumstances. A dogger vessel, trading from Lancaster to Liverpool, the Commerce, took in about ten tons of gunpowder, in bags and barrels, at Beebo-rough Hill. The vessel sat deeply in the water, and made but indifferent way, when, shortly after two o'clock in the day, one of the crew observed a smoke ascending from the main hatchway. The Captain ordered the tiers in the hold to be divided, but in a few minutes the horrible fact of the cotton being on fire close to the gunpowder was discovered, and the crew found that the opposition of the two elements would be useless, because the fire had obtained such powerful ascendancy: therefore, the boat was severed instantly, and the ship being scuttled, and the water admitted through the lower tier, the crew departed, being then about six miles from the shore: and a very strong easterly breeze prevailing, the ship steered for land, and being the direction of the helm, sailed before the wind for about two minutes, when a sudden thickness of smoke arising from her announced that the blowing up was at hand. The men say that in a few seconds after the ship seemed lifted by her knees out of the water, and blew up momentarily afterwards, with a most terrific explosion; the shock they describe as dreadful; their boat was lifted out of the water, and but for the circumstance of their ship being to windward, they must all have perished. They made for the shore, which was lined by hundreds who had witnessed the accident from the land, and many of whom were seriously bruised from being dashed to the ground by Woodhouse's concussion produced by the explosion. The ship was blown almost to atoms, scarcely a vestige of her timbers or cargo being recovered, and it appears from the circumstance of their being but one explosion, that the powder must have ignited in several places at once. The damage done to the house at Peel Castle, Backborough, and along the immediate vicinity of the coast, is very great; several being blown down, and the mischief is generally experienced. By the arrivals from the south the shock, it is said, was felt forcibly at Liverpool and other places adjacent. It was there also attributed to the partial shock of an earthquake.

Valuable invention.—We yesterday afternoon witnessed the operation of Capt. Thomas Brownell's pump, put in operation by wind power, and feel confident of its success. With a good breeze each pump makes 8290 strokes in a minute, and discharges a gallon at each stroke. The machinery is very cheap, takes up but little room, and is so constructed as to be worked by hand, with trifling labor compared with the usual mode of pumping. The calculation is, that one man, by this machine, can discharge us much water as eight with the common pump. The old saying, that "necessity is the mother of invention," applies particularly to Captain Brownell; for it was on board a leaky ship that he hit upon this contrivance, and by it he saved his vessel and crew, after suffering every thing but death. He deserves support, and we hope he will receive it.—N. Y. Gaz.

Summary.

The Oriental and European weapons, firearms, trinkets and jewellery, &c. belonging to the late Duke of York, commenced selling at Christie's rooms on Tuesday, attended by an immense assemblage of Nobility and Gentry. Some of the articles were of the most unique and costly description, and fetched very high prices, far exceeding their original cost.

The whole of the silver and silver-gilt plate sold at the late auction belonging to the Duke of York, amounted, as at present ascertained, to 45,429 ounces, and made £22,540.

It is at length determined that the first floor of the New Palace, built by the Duke of York, shall be appropriated to a National Gallery. The ground-floor of the Palace is to be divided between the Royal Society and the Society of Antiquaries.

The 'Ways and Means' of Government will be increased this year by the sum of £30,000 —the stamp and legacy duties payable under the wills of two individuals, the late Mr. Rundell and the late Mr. Stavens.

Several Members of the House of Commons were ordered to be taken into custody on Wednesday by the Serjeant at Arms, for being absent without leave from the ballot on Tuesday. Among them was Mr. Wilks, jun., whose excuse for non-attendance, being engaged in important business on the Assizes, was deemed insufficient.

The Northern Expedition.—On Saturday evening at about 10 o'clock the Hecla discovery ship took her departure from the Dockyard, Deptford, on her voyage to the Northern regions. She was towed out of the dock by the steam-boat Lightning, amidst the cheers of a vast number of persons who had arrived to witness her departure. The crew appeared in high spirits, who, with their gallant and enterprising commander, returned the compliment paid them.

A convention has been concluded between this country and Portugal for the maintenance of the British troops in that Kingdom. The only expense incurred by England will consist of charges necessary for the sending out and bringing back troops now there, or those which may hereafter be embarked.

Dutch papers state, that accounts from Batavia, of a favourable nature, had been received. The insurgents continued to resist; but the Netherlands troops, strengthened by some newly-arrived reinforcements, were successful, and were preparing for more decisive operations.

The new building at the British Museum, in which is intended to be deposited the valuable library presented to the public by his present Majesty, will, when, complete, be one of the first rooms in Europe. It is between three and four hundred feet in extent, and is superior to the splendid saloon of the Royal Library in Paris.

A patent has recently been obtained for an easy chair; the seat, the arms, and the back of which are formed entirely of iron.

Official Documents have been published at St. Petersburgh, from which it results that, in the Russian Empire, there is a population of 59,584,000 souls upon a superficies of 375, 174 square miles.

The receipts of the Portugues goverment in 1827, were about ten millions, and the expenditures upwards of twelve millions. A loan will be required to make up the deficiency.

In the event of Mr. Robinson being called to the Upper House, it is reported that his title is to be Baron Harold.

Mr. Huskisson, we are happy to state, is much better. The Right Honorable Gentleman attends daily to his official duties at the Board of Trade, of which he is President.

Nothing has yet been resolved on respecting the appointment of a Governor-General for India. The impediments arising from the state of the Ministry, combined with other causes, have, in fact, rendered the period when the determination may take place so extremely uncertain, that a request has, we understand, been sent out to Lord Amherst, to delay his relinquishment of office beyond the time which his Lordship originally fixed (we believe the end of the present year), in order that the necessary arrangements for the appointment of his successor may be completed without inconvenience.

Mr. Lushington, one of the Secretaries of the Treasury, who was nominated some time since to the Government of Madras, was sworn in on Wednesday at the India House, to that important office. It is understood that he is to be succeeded at the Treasury by Mr. Planta, of the Foreign Office.

It is at present understood, that the House of Commons will adjourn, for the Easter recess, on the 12th of April to the 30th.

We understand that the Rev. John James, Rector of Fitton, Bedfordshire, is to be the new Bishop of Calcutta.

The foundation stone for the London University in Gower-street is to be laid on the 27th of April, by the Dukes of Sussex, Norfolk, and other leading friends of the University.

The wife of the confidential clerk of a Poole Bank, is in custody, for robbing the strong box. She purloined the key from her husband, who resides on the premises, and after she had concealed the plunder, gave an alarm of robbery, but her contrivance was too clumsy to pass. The property has been recovered. Not the least suspicion attaches to the husband.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has communicated to the Trustees of the British Museum, that in consequence of the depressed state of the finances of the Country, only twelve thousand pounds per annum can, in future, be appropriated to the new buildings, instead of forty thousand pounds, the sum given during the last two or three years.

On Tuesday last, Sir James M'Gregor, M.D. Director-General of the Army Medical Department, was re-elected Lord Rector of the Marischal College and University of Aberdeen.

An account of the last illness and decease of His late Royal Highness the Duke of York; being a Journal of occurrences which took place between the 9th of June, 1826, and 5th of January, 1827, by Lieutenant-General Sir Herbert Taylor, G. C. H. &c. &c. is just published, in 8vo.

An application has been made in England to obtain a patent for an invention to clear London from the dense cloud of smoak in which it is generally involved. The plan is to convey the exhalations in subterraneous flues to a distance from the city.

Steam Boat.—A late Limerick (Ireland) paper mentions that a beautiful steam vessel had arrived at the canal harbour in Limerick, from Dublin, attended by two of her fly boats from Killaloe, being the first instance of the application of steam to the navigation of the interior waters of that country, and will, we have no doubt, remarks the Limerick editor, remedy that great defect in the inland navigation between Dublin and Limerick, arising from the difficulty and uncertainty of crossing with the craft hitherto in use, the broad waters of the Shannon, above the town of Killaloe.

A most surprising and dreadful occurrence lately took place in one of the provinces of France. A quack-doctor, who had been condemned to be hung, made his escape on the way to the gallows, and took refuge in an hospital. After some search he was found, as was thought, disguised. He was carried off, uttering not a syllable, but gesticulating vehemently, and exclaiming, "I was shortly afterwards discovered that the officer who had the deaf and dumb brother of the convict, who had resided long in the hospital. The real criminal was recommended to the royal clemency.

It is mentioned, in proof of the great value of the newly acquired English possessions on the Jenasserian coast, that samples of cotton have been already produced, superior in quality to the Bandu, which has been considered the finest grown in Hindoston. They are flattering themselves with the hope that this cotton would become a competitor in the English market with the American Sea Islands.

Two steam boats are now ready to be launched at Calcutta, for the Indian Government, called the Lawadi and the other Ganges. Two forty-horse power engines for each boat, had been already received from England. The boats are to carry eight guns each, and are designed to maintain a constant intercourse with the ports on each side of the way.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, April 11.

POST-OFFICE REGULATIONS.

The Report of the Committee on the Postage Duties Bill having been presented,

Mr. Herries observed, that one object of the Bill was to facilitate communication with the Colonies, Regulations were to be introduced in accordance with the resolutions of a former evening, which resolutions were to the following effect :—

1. That there shall be payable on the conveyance of printed votes and proceedings in Parliament, to any of His Majesty's Colonies and Possessions, a packet postage, after the rate of one penny halfpenny for every ounce weight thereof.

2. That there shall be payable on the conveyance of Colonial Legislative proceedings, from any of His Majesty's Colonies to the United Kingdom, a packet postage, after the rate of one penny halfpenny for every ounce weight thereof.

3. That there shall be payable a duty of three pence on every newspaper printed and published in any of His Majesty's Colonies brought into the United Kingdom, in His Majesty's packets, or by ships other than packets, and sent to the Post Office of the port or place at which the letters brought by such ships are landed.

4. That there shall be payable a packet postage of one shilling for every pamphlet, magazine or periodical publication not exceeding six ounces in weight, sent from the port of Falmouth to any of His Majesty's Colonies, and a further sum of three pence per ounce for any weight thereof exceeding six ounces.

To carry these various alterations into effect, he said communications with the heads of the requisite departments, and had ascertained the practicability of them. There was one amendment of considerable importance, or rather convenience, to which, apprehensive of delay, he had paid little attention—that respecting the time for putting papers into the post after the day of publication, so as to have the benefit of these regulations. The time (we understood the Right Honorable Gentleman) for putting papers into the post was to be extended to seven days after the day of publication. Another amendment regarded invoices. Heretofore, except the invoice formed part of the sheet of paper on which the letter was written, there was a charge of double postage. This was found to be a serious burden on merchants. It was now proposed that advices accompanied by invoices, should not be charged extra postage—(Hear.)

This was of importance to merchants; but it was obtained by a sacrifice of revenue, it was calculated, of between £90,000 and £100,000 a year. Another object of the proposed regulations would be, an equalization of the postage-rates of Ireland to those of England—an object exceedingly to be desired: but which would be attended with loss to the revenue of about £30,000. The sacrifice was considerable but the regulation was deemed of advantageous tendency. But another regulation respecting Irish letters, there would be some advantage resulting to the revenue; the inland postage rates would be continued the same in the English currency that they had been in the Irish currency. The loss which would be sustained would not exceed perhaps £10,000. However, before the regulations to which he had adverted, (that respecting invoices, and the equalization of English and Irish rates of postage), the revenue, it was calculated, would lose at least sixty or seventy thousand pounds a year. The rate of transmitting Legislative or Colonial proceedings was mentioned in the resolutions; the papers were to be distributed from the Vote-office. This would put a stop to collusive communications. Sometimes the legislative or newspapers packages from the Colonies were charged as merchandize, and at other times as postage Now, if brought in as postage, they were to be two penny postage, & the Post-office the other penny rate for delivery. The newspapers to the Colonies might be forwarded by private ships—the Post-office would have no objection to such shipping, for, though there was no objection to their being forwarded by means of the packet, they could not be passed by the mail. Sometimes there were no packets for months, and then examined in an evening; sometimes the number was even 90,000, averaging about 60,000 every day, taken together. These should be transmitted rapidly, the examination took place every day, and it was found that about eight in every 100 newspapers were missing the medium of a correspondence which should be carried on by letter, and which was a great fraud on the Post-office. He was assured that in one town a regular system of correspondence was daily carried on with London. This showed the necessity of examining the newspapers to prevent this fraud. By the present measure, all letters and parcels above six ounces should be sent with a bill to her destination, and it would be no longer necessary to put the letters into the office at the next post town to the ship. It was also under contemplation to put the postage of letters to Ireland on the same footing with the postage of letters from the same distance in England.

The report was ordered to be received to-morrow, April 11.

LIVERPOOL MARKET, Saturday, April 14.

Several public sales of Ashes have been brought forward this week—prices have again given way, and quotations generally must be reduced 6d. to 1s. per cwt.; the total sales, including what have been sold by public auction, for the week, are 1,200 barrels, viz: 850 Montreal Pot at 22s 6d to 23s for old, and 23s to 24s for new, principally at 23s to 23s 6d per cwt; 250 Montreal Pearl at 23s 9d to 24s for old, and 24s to 24s 3d for new; and 100 New-York Pearl, of the brand 1826, for export, at 27s per cwt.

LIVERPOOL CORN MARKET, April 14.

The grain market has remained dull all week, and having had a fortnight's supply from the British ports. This we imagine, was meant as a boon to the shipping interest.

MAS. FRY.—The visit of this amiable lady to our country prison at Carrickfergus, on the 13th instant, is likely to be productive of the best effects. A society composed of the most respectable ladies at Carrickfergus, and its vicinity, has been formed under Mrs. Fry's direction, who, in rotation, visit the gaol, and there co-operate with Mrs. Orr, the respectable matron, in the laudable endeavours of improvement in the morals, industry, and behaviour of the unfortunate inmates, is quite apparent. Mr. Gurney, the brother of Mrs. Fry, made some very excellent observations upon this occasion; he lamented the confined state of the prison, and expressed his astonishment that a county so respectable and populous as Antrim, should not have a much more extensive gaol—one which might afford a strict and proper classification, so desirable and necessary in all such establishments, but which, from the limited accommodation, and the present crowded state of the prison (containing 267 persons within its walls), is quite impracticable. These philanthropic strangers complimented the Chaplains, Inspectors, Governor, and Matron, upon the efficient manner they discharged their various duties, and seemed particularly to feel, that so far as to cleanliness, order, and regularity, every attention which could be afforded in a small and crowded prison was bestowed by Mr. Erskine, the present and vigilant Governor. Mr. Garney spoke in flattering terms of the schoolmaster, than whom there is not a more zealous friend to religion and instruction any where to be met with; and he concluded his judicious remarks by a strong recommendation to the gentlemen of the country to erect a proper building commensurate with so respectable and extensive a population. Mrs. Fry made a donation for the purpose of granting small sums as premiums, to the deserving of the female prisoners.—Belfast Chronicle.

Foreign Intelligence.

We learn from Moscow that commercial letters have been received there from Tiflis, according to which military operations against the Persians have not been very active since the beginning of January. Nothing can be mentioned except the expedition of Prince Mazaloff to the Araxes, where he delivered several Nomade families, and then resumed his former positions on the Araxes.

Private letter, from Constantinople of the 1st of March, announce that the French Ambassador had expressed his concurrence in the project of uniting Greece to Turkey, as a fief.

Sir John Copely to be Lord Chancellor.
Lord Granville, Foreign Secretary.
Mr. Robinson, (with a Peerage,) Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Huskinson, Home Secretary, (this not certain.)

Lords Dudley and Ward, Privy Seal.
Lord Carlisle, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.
Duke of Devonshire, Lord Chamberlain, (not certain.

Marquis of Anglesea, Master of the Ordnance.

Lord Bexley is allowed to come back to the Cabinet.

The new title of Mr. Robinson, is 'Lord Strathearn.'

The Marquis of Londonderry resigned his Embassy to Vienna on hearing of Mr. Canning's appointment.

One paper says it is believed the Duke of Cambridge will be appointed Commander-in-Chief. Another paper says the Marquis of Anglesea has been offered that post.

Corn Bill.—It is provided that the warehousing of corn is to be permitted under the new Act, and that the duty is to be levied according to the price in the home market, not at the date of the importation, but at the time when the corn is taken out for consumption. This arrangement was strongly objected to by the agriculturalists; but it was justly observed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that if a different rule were adopted, the effect would be, to transfer the freight and warehousing to the Dutch, in whose hands the corn would still be within a day or two days sail of our own market. A clause was proposed by Mr. Grant and agreed to, giving the Privy Council the privilege of prohibiting the importation of grain from foreign countries, which impose heavier duties on our shipping than the ships of the countries in question impose on British ports. This we imagine, was meant as a boon to the shipping interest.

FASHIONS FOR APRIL.

Carriage Costume.—Pelisse of primrose Gros de Naples, of lutestring, lined with white sarsnet; the Corsage long, fastened behind, and ornamented with two rows of crescents interlaced, the points projecting outwards. The same kind of trimming is continued down the front of the skirt, and nearly round the waist, but wideus and enlarges as it descends; it turns off circularly, and forms the border of the dress: a roulcau, raised in front and formed into an extended bow fills the intermediate space, and unites with the crescent trimming; the ends of the bow continued all round, bounds the border, and wadded rouleau here terminates the dress. The sleeves, of the same material, are long and easy, the wr portions of the Empire. We contemplate the most favourable results to the interests of this Province from having an active and intelligent commercial agent in London at this eventful period, and rejoicing the fullest confidence in the wisdom and liberal character of His Majesty's Government and the importance which appear now to be attached to the valuable Colonies, we are persuaded that the only requisite sound and correct information dictated by enlarged and comprehensive views embracing general and not merely local and individual interests. Such information we have the justest reason to believe Mr. Felton has been furnished with by the combined instructions of the enlightened members of the Committee of Trade at Montreal and Quebec. —Montreal Gazette.

Extract of a Letter in the Glasgow Courier, March 29, received from a Mercantile House at Quebec.

QUEBEC, 13th Feb. 1827.

"If the intercourse between the United States and our West India Colonies be permanently stopped, we shall be well prepared to meet a large demand from that quarter for for flour, provisions and staves. In this case, some of the British West Indiamen might with advantage call here in their way out for supplies for the estates, or cargoes for the markets. If this trade were confirmed to us, such encouragement would be given to agriculture, and such exertion made to keep our market supplied with staves and lumber, that with some assistance from Great Britain, our Colonies would in three or 4 years be made independent of the United States for supplies. When the Welland Canal is completed—which will establish sloop navigation from the upper Lakes downwards, it will open the resources of the most fertile country in the world to us. A Canal for sloop navigation is going on from Kingston to Ontario, by the River Rideau, which will be completed at the same time with the Welland, and that will open to us inexhaustible resources for the finest oak timber, and establish a most fertile country.

Emigration.—We have been favoured with the following extract of a letter, dated London 3d March, addressed to an Officer of rank in this Garrison:—

"There has been for some time past a plan in agitation by Government for relieving Ireland, by emigration to Canada, and a Committee of the House was appointed to consider the expediency of the measure, but they rather damped the project by reporting that they did not think it advisable that the public money should be employed in originating the scheme, and that if any funds were to be applied, they ought to be so, only in aid of any private, or voluntary, contributions that might be made in furtherance of emigration."

The following is a comparative statement of the arrivals last year with those of this on the 14th May. viz:—1826: 16 vessels, 56 settlers.——1827: 126 vessels, 3,122 settlers.—Quebec Mercury.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—On Saturday last William M'Gillis, a native of Scotland, was drowned on the River Trent. We find the following particulars of the occurrence stated in a letter from Mr. William Robertson, in whose service the deceased was at the time of the Accident.

"After running a drum of timber down the Trent on Saturday evening, we returned home in the dusk—when at the landing opposite my place, we were too many in number to cross at once, so five of us went into the skiff and landed safe on the other side. M'Gillis and I returned for the rest, and after getting some distance on the main current, from some unfortunate motion, the skiff rolled so that he fell on one side, in consequence of which both of us were plunged into the river. By exertion we got again into the skiff, but it filled with water, sunk under us, and immediately overset. We scrambled again to the skiff, but seeing the danger of being carried into the rapids, we abandoned it, and made the best of our way to the shore. The current was so rapid that we made but little progress. He appeared at first to make better way than myself. I got so much exhausted that I thought ever getting ashore was beyond possibility. Thinking that I might relieve myself, I turned on my back, and swam some distance in that way. I then turned on my face, and I was so overdone that I sunk; M'Gillis was making good way all this time) but I made a spring and got to the surface again. I than heard the bubbling which my lamented friend made going to the bottom, never to appear again. All this time I called aloud, so as to heard on both sides of the river, but unfortunately no craft was to be had to render us any assistance. I made the shore—but I may thank Providence and not my own exertions. I alarmed the neighbourhood, but to no effect: his remains were found next morning."—Kingston Chronicle.

Communication.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

Mr. Editor,

I was born in the United States of America and emigrated to Canada when I was fourteen years of age. I have resided in the District of Johnstown twent-seven years. At the particular request of many of my neighbours I beg leave to state to the public that many persons, who like myself were natives of the United States, and have resided a number of years in this Province, have lately been seriously alarmed by the representations of some artful and designing men, who, under the cloak of friendship, have caused the aged parent, the widow and orphan to mourn and shudder at the sad fate which they were informed awaited them; for it has been most industriously reported that the government have some secret design to injure all such as have emigrated to this Province from the United States; and that for this purpose they have caused a bill to be passed in the two Houses of the Legislature at the last session, which, if passed into a law, will put the property, the lives, and the liberty of the people in jeopardy. Yes Sir, so strong has the alien cry been kept up by a set of factious persons, that many an ignorant, but well disposed person, would tremble at the idea of being shortly, with his family and dependants, turned from his property on the wide world, without food to satisfy the keen demands of hunger. For it was again and again told that all who had emigrated from the United States must take the most dreadful oaths, and register themselves perjured persons for having voted at an election, or quit the Province within twelve months, without having leave to dispose of their property; and that the children of aliens, although born in Canada, could not hold any real estate on account of their parents being aliens. Under these circumstances they viewed their case as truly deplorable; and I know not how long they would have remained ignorant of the benevolent intentions of the British Government towards them (in recommending a speedy relief to to many of their subjects who stood in need of it), had not the real friends to the people, and to the Government, taken great pains to expose the wickedness and treachery of these deceivers of the people. Great exertions were made by the opposers of the Naturalization Bill, to prevent the Inhabitants from having any conversation with one who was known to be in favor of either the Bill or the Members who supported it in the House, and particularly to turn their minds against the Jones'. It was at a numerous Meeting called by a Mr. Tidd, at the Inn of Mr. N. F. Soper in Beverly, on the 17th March last, (for the purpose of getting signatures to a Petition against the Bill), that I first heard it read and explained by J. K. Hartwell, who addressed the Meeting with so much apparent anxiety for the welfare of those who were placed in the same situation with himself, (he being a native of the United States), that I can bear witness, that almost every man present was soon convinced that (as Mr. H. justly observed) "thousands in the Province had been deceived by the blackest of lies." Yes, Mr. Editor, it was at a factious Meeting, called to poison the minds of the people against a just Government, and honest and faithful Representatives, that many with myself saw the danger which we had formately escaped, and became fully acquainted with the merits of the once hated, but now much beloved Naturalization Bill. The scene was changed; many who attended the Meeting, with almost bleeding hearts, returned to their families with the joyful news, that the Naturalization Bill, so far from proving an annoyance to their feelings, would be a consumation of the almost numberless blessings which they had enjoyed since resident under the British Government. I have now in my possession the Bill, accompanied by a fair and candid explanation by J. & C. Jones, Esquires, who, instead of deserving censure for the part they have taken in this Bill, are, with other honorable Members who warmly supported it, justly entitled to the thanks of their Constituents; and I trust that the time is not far distant when their laudable exertions in favor of the people will be duly appreciated. I have taken some pains to find out the minds of the inhabitants of this District, and although, I dare say there are beings among us of human shape, who will yet say that the people are dissatisfied with the Government and the Members for this County, yet, allow me to state, that the great mass of the people are only dissatisfied with those demagogues who have endeavored to spread discontent through our happy land; and should Mr. Charles Jones again offer himself as a Candidate, he will see how highly the voters in this neighborhood apprize his services in the House of Assembly; and if I am not greatly mistaken, he will meet with equal support in other parts of the County.

FELLOW ALIENS, throughout the Province, let me entreat you, as you value your best interests, no longer to suffer yourselves to be gulled and misled by those who would fain persuade you that they are your friends, while they insidiously seek your ruin for the purpose of gaining a most unwarrantable point. Place implicit confidence in the Government Officers of this Province—keep in the House of Assembly honest and intelligent Members, and your days will be days of happiness, and all your paths will be peace.

I cannot close this Communication without observing that Mr. Hartwell has the sincere thanks of myself, as well as of a great many others, for his unremitting assiduity in exposing the treachery of wicked men, and for relieving the minds of the public from the anxiety under which they laboured, by shewing in a proper light, the good intentions of His Majesty's Government towards all who repose a proper confidence in their protection.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come

GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for promoting the cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. Provided always, nevertheless, That in consideration of the authority and permission hereby given, the several Rates and duties herein-after specified, shall be paid to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, (that is to say,) Upon every Thousand Feet of Oak Timber, the Sum of Six Pounds and Five Shillings, being at the rate of One Penny Half-penny per Foot. Upon Saw Logs of the proper length to be cut into Deals, Two Pence upon each Log—and upon every Thousand of Standard Staves, Four Pounds One Shilling and Eight Pence—which Duties are to be paid in lawful money of Our said Province of Upper Canada, and to be levied and received by such Person as We shall for that purpose Appoint by Commission under the Great Seal of Our said Province; and at such place or places upon the said River Ottawa as We shall declare through Our Officer to be appointed as aforesaid, to be most fitting and convenient.

Provided always, That for the better preventing the said Timber being Cut before it has attained a suitable growth, double the amount of Duty herein specified shall be charged upon all such Timber as shall not Square more than Eight Inches. And it is our further Will and Pleasure, that all such Timber or Wood which shall have been Cut as aforesaid upon Our Unconceded Lands in Upper Canada, upon which the Duties shall not be paid, when exacted by Our Officer so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall be seized and detained to Our Use as forfeited.

Provided always nevertheless, That all Persons, properly authorized by or under Our Licence granted in manner heretofore, used to Cut Timber in Our said Province shall be permitted to carry away and export the same, to such extent as their Licences may specify, without the exaction of any rate hereby imposed, and that all such Timber as may have been heretofore Cut upon Our Unconceded Lands as aforesaid, without Our express Licence, may upon payment of the Duties hereby specified, be suffered to pass through Our said Province of Upper Canada.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.—Witness, Our trusty and well beloved, SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. 38-6m JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

Miscellaneous.

FLORENCE WILLESDEN.

A TALE OF REAL LIFE.

'Tis a common tale.
An ordinary sorrow of man's life;
A tale of silent sufferings, hardly clothed
In bodily form. WORD—SWORTH.

A Village in the south of England is one of the loveliest sights in nature; and it is what it seems, the very nestling-place of poetry, love, and happiness. It glitters, with its white-washed cottages and garden walls, among the green trees 'mid which it is embowered, like the golden fruits of Spain, peeping from beneath the rich foliage that does but partially conceal them. Its meadows, its stream, its tapering church-spire; its hedge-rows, its lanes of sweetbriar and wild-roses; its latticed, with their clustering jessamine and honey-suckle; its gardens, with their bee-hives; its orchards, with their odoriferous blossoms; and above all, its simple, yet cheerful inhabitants, ignorant of the great world, and unwilling to have that ignorance enlightened; all combine to render a village in the south of England the most delightful spot in the universe. How sweet to retire from the world to such a haven of repose; and there to cultivate only the purer affections of one's nature, and keep the soul divided, by a rainbow zone, from the grosser atmosphere of common existence. There are many little paradises of the kind I speak of, and I should be contented with one of them; although, if I had my choice, I should perhaps fix upon Woodburn, in preference to all the rest. My predilection is the more singular, as all my associations connected with the recollection of that village are of a peculiarly melancholy cast. Even there the spoiler, sorrow, had found an entrance; and his victims were not unknown to me. I will endeavour to reveal their story: it is a simple one; but it suits well the mournful temper of my mind, and I shall therefore avail myself of this opportunity to narrate it.

Let me paint her as I first saw her.—It was in her cottage garden, on a bright summer morning, when the dew was still sparkling on the flowers. She had a book in her hand, but she was not reading. She stood wrapped in a delightful reverie, with her eyes fixed on two young roses before her, and then the one she was my old friend's only child, yet I stopped involuntarily to gaze upon her. I had never before seen aught so beautiful; and that, too, without the shadow of pretence. I cannot describe her features, but there combined effects irresistible. There was a word of expression—an unfathomable depth of feeling, in her dark blue eye. I saw a tear start into it; but the thought that called it up was merely transient, for a smile gathered upon her lips immediately afterwards, and dimpled away with its light the little harbinger of sorrow. At that moment, the gate was thrown open, and a youth entered. He was her lover; I knew it at a glance. A deeper crimson spread itself over her cheek, and her smile kindled into one of more than delight. They stood together; England could not have produced a nobler pair. They seated themselves in the sunshine; the youth took the book and read aloud. It was a poetic page over which they hung. She leant her white arm on her lover's shoulder, and gazed upon him with delighted and breathless attention. Who is it that has said there is no happiness on earth? Had he seen Edmund and Florence on the calm, blue morning, he would have confessed the absurdity of his creed.

Edmund was the eldest son of the village rector:—a man "to all the country dear." Florence was the daughter of an old, respected soldier, who had served in many a campaign, and who now lived in retirement, upon the small pension which was given him by government, as the reward of his long and valuable services She had lost her mother almost before she knew her, and all her filial affection was centered in her only surviving parent; her heart she had bestowed upon Edmund, and he was by no means insensible of the value of the gift. They had been companions from their infancy. All their recollections of times past were the same, for all their amusements and studies had been similar. But Edmund had made considerably more progress than Florence. Nature had heaped upon him all those mental endowments that constitute genius. She had given him a mind capable of the profoundest aspirations; a heart that could feel more deeply, a fancy that could wing a bolder flight, than those of most other youths of his age. He, as yet, knew nothing of the state of society beyond the limits of Woodburd. He had never been more than twenty miles from home during his whole life. But he was now eighteen, and Florence was only a year younger. They had ceased to be boy and girl. She, indeed, would have been contented to have continued as she was for ever, blest with her father's and her lover's affection; more than happy in the discharge of her domestic duties; in her summer evening rambles, in her books, her bees, her fruits, and her flowers. But Edmund, although he loved her with all the enthusiasm of a first love, had more ambition in his nature. He wished to mingle in the crowd, in the pursuit of glory; and he had hopes that he might outstrip at least some of his competitors. Beside, he was not possessed of an independent fortune; and exertion, therefore, became a duty. His resolution was at once formed; he determined to fix his residence in London, for at least a couple of years, and ascertain whether, in truth, ability was there its own reward. It was sad news to Florence; but on reflecting on the advantages which Edmund might derive from the execution of the scheme, she looked upon the grief as selfish, and endeavoured to restrain it. The evening before he left Woodburn, they took a farewell walk together, in her father's garden. Florence had succeeded in keeping up a show of cheerfulness during the day; but as the yellow beams of the setting sun came streaming in through the poplars and elms that lined the wall, and as she thought how often they had seen the sun set before, and how long it would be ere they should see it set again, a chord was touched which vibrated through her heart, and she could no longer restrain her tears. Edmund besought her, with the utmost tenderness of manner, not to give way to emotions so violent; but she only locked his hand more firmly in her own, and, amid convulsive sobs, repeated again and again—"Edmund! we shall never meet more! I am not superstitious, but I know that I am right;—we shall never meet more!" Her lover had recourse to every soothing argument he could think of; but though she at length became calm, a gloomy presentiment of future ill seemed to have taken possession of her mind.

A year elapsed, and Edmund's early dream had been more than realized. He had risen into fame at once: his reputation as a man of genius was acknowledged throughout his native land. His fortune was secured, and his name had already become illustrious. Every where was his society courted, and his opinions listened to with deference and admiration. There seemed to be no honours to which he might not aspire; no rank in society which he might not hope to attain. His ardent spirit, and his growing ambition, became only the more insatiable. Every difficulty had yielded before him; he had flown on upon the wings of success; his life had hitherto been a brilliant dream—a dream from which he saw no prospect of immediate awaking.

It was an evening, and he was alone in her splendid drawing-room, with the loveliest woman in London—the daughter of a viscount. A hundred lamps, reflected by a hundred mirrors, shone around them. There was to be a magnificent entertainment at the company had not yet arrived. Edmund, and the lady Matilda, would not have cared had they never arrived at all. They sat near each other, and talked in low, soft tones of all that youth and beauty love best to talk about. Edmund had never felt so vain in his life before; for here were hundreds in the metropolis, blest with all the advantages of rank and birth, who would have given both their titles and their fortunes to have secured one of those smiles which the proud maiden now lavished upon him. And she—she had read his works, she thought of his fame, she looked upon his elegant form and handsome features, and forgot the hundred scions of nobility who had offered up their incense at her shrine. A carriage was heard to stop, and they were soon to be interrupted. "I have taken a fancy to that emerald ring of yours," said the lady Matilda, "will you exchange it for one of mine?"—She took a glittering diamond from her finger, and put it on Edmond's; and at the same time his emerald became one of the ornaments of the prettiest hand in the world. It was a ring which Florence had given him, the very morning he left Woodburn.

The two years he was to be away had expired.—"Florence," said her father to her one morning, "I never saw you looking so well, your cheeks are all roses, my sweet girl; have you been watching the sun rise?" Florence turned away her head for a moment, to brush a burning tear from her eye, and then answered cheerfully to her unsuspecting father, that she had seen the sun rise. There was not a person in Woodburn, except her father, who had not observed how dreadfully Florence was altered—not in her manners, nor habits, nor conversation; but in her looks. Her cheek, it is true, was red, but it was the hot flush of fever; her eye was bright, but it was the watery clearness of an insidious malady. She had heard of Edmund's success, and there was not a heart in the world that beat so proudly at the intelligence but she soon heard of more than his success, and his letters became fewer, shorter and colder. When her father was from home, she would sit for hours in her garden, by herself, listening, as she said, to the chirping of the birds, but weeping bitterly all the while.

"I have not heard you speak of Edmund lately," said her father to her one day, about the beginning of June. "I do not think of him the less," answered Florence, with a faint smile. The old man knew nothing of his apostacy. "I have good news for you," said he; "I saw the rector to-day, and Edmund is to be in Woodburn by the end of a week." Florence grew pale; she tried to speak, but could not; a mist swam before her eyes; she held out her hand, and threw herself into her father's arms.

It was Sunday evening, and she knew that Edmund had arrived early on the previous day, but she had not yet seen him. She was sitting in the summer-house of her father's garden, when she heard a step on the gravel walk; she looked through the willows and honeysuckle;—it was he! he himself—in all the bloom and beauty of dawning manhood! A strange shivering passed over her whole frame; and her colour went and came with fearful rapidity. Yet she retained her self-possession, her appearance, however, struck him immediately;—"Good God! you have been ill! you are altered, sadly altered, since I saw you last." "Does it?" "Yes, not as so very beautiful, Edmund?" said Florence, gravely; "are you not altered too?" "Oh, Florence! I have behaved to you like a villain! I see it now—cruelly, fatally do I see it! I wished to believe that you did not care about me, but I was deluding myself—was madness—it was guilt! and now it is too late!" "Edmund, that I did love you, you sitting sun, which shone upon us when last we parted, can still attest, for it was the witness of my grief. It has been the witness, too, of the tears I have shed in my solitude,—tears which have been revealed to no earthly eye;—and it shall be the witness, even yet," she continued, an almost heavenly smile illuminating her pale countenance, "of our reconciliation, for the wanderer has returned, and his errors are forgiven." She held out her hand to him as she spoke, but he shrunk back:—"I dare not—I dare not take it! It is too late! Florence! I am married!"——There was not a sound escaped her lips, but her cheeks grew deadly pale; her eyes became as fixed as stone; and she fell on the ground like a marble statue.

Her grave is in the church-yard of Woodburn; she lies beside her father. There is no urn nor monumental tablet to mark the spot, but I should know it among a thousand. Edmund's fame has travelled into other countries, and men have looked up to him as to a demi-god.—Florence Willesden was never heard of beyond the limits of Woodburn till now.

Burning of Hindoo Widows.—At a quarterly court of the proprietors of the East India House, held in London on the 23d March, the subject of human sacrifices in India was discussed, and measures taken to check the horrid practice. From a statement made on the occasion it appears that the number of widows sacrificed on the funeral piles of their husbands, in the presidency of Bengal, from 1815 to 1825 inclusive, was 5425, and taking the number immolated in the presidencies of Fort Saint-George and Bombay, the number would amount to about 6000.

Melancholy Shipwreck.—In the brig Leander, which arrived last evening, from Malaga, came passenger, Cpt. William Thomas, master of the brig Williams, of Portland, and the only survivor of the persons on board when the vessel was wrecked. He was taken off after being on the deck twenty-nine days, by the schr John George, from Charleston for Corunna.

The William sailed from Portland on the 29th December, bound to Havana, and on the 3d day out, lat. 34, long. 71, experienced a gale which lasted several days, during which the vessel sprung sleak, was dismasted, thrown on her beam ends, and filled with water. After clearing away the rigging, the vessel righted, and lay at the mercy of the winds and waves, the gale continuing for a number of days and the sea breaking over her. In this dilemma, a half barrel of flour and some rum was saved from the cabin and lashed to the windlass, being the only place which it was possible to remain, the vessel having settled considerably in the stern. In this awful situation, the crew remained several days, suffering the most excruciating distress, with hunger and thirst. On the 13th day, Hiram Waldron, seaman, died; on the 14th day, Charles Wolf, and Stephen Bartlett, seamen, died; on the 17th, Mr. Rackliffe, the mate, and on the 20th day, the cook, a coloured man, died—leaving Captain Thomas the only survivor. He continued on the bow of the wreck for eleven days longer, with nothing to support existence but a little flour, which was mixed with salt water, a little rum, and occasionally a little water, procured by hanging out his handkerchief, and some clothing when it rained.

Since the above was in type, from the morning papers, we have the following additional particulars from Cpt. Thomas himself:—

"We had succeded in saving a topmast studdensail and some pieces of canvass, with which we made a shelter from the wind, but were continually wet by the salt water and spray which came over us. During our stay on the wreck saw two sail, neither of which discovered us; in this extremity I remained 11 days alone in a tempestuous ocean solely dependent on the mercy of Divine providence; my little stock of flour nearly exhausted; life nearly extinct and but a remnant of hope remaining, when I discovered a vessel bearing down for us, which proved to be the schooner John-&-George, of Marblehead, Francis Fruto, master, from Charleston, bound to Corunna, by whom I was taken off, having been 29 days on the wreck, and treated with every kindness and attention my weak debilitated state required. It may not be important here to remark, that the death of the crew was probably accelerated by using salt water which many of them not only drank freely, but made use of it to mix with flour in the heel of an old shoe, which they ate greedily, as they were all siezed with violent derangement before dying. I would also embrace this opportunity of expressing my sincere sense of the obligations I am under to Capt. Conklin, of the brig Pacific, of Baltimore, (who I met at Corunna, and with whom I took passage to Gibraltar to find a vessel homeward bound,) for the favor and kindness shown to me.

Summary.

At Christie's rooms, on Thursday, (the third day's sale of the Duke of York's trinkets,) a powerful contention was excited between the agent of his Majesty and the Marquis of Hertford, for the purchase of a magnificent seal, the handle composed of a block of lapis lazuli, with the Royal Arms engraved upon a Brazil pink topaz, of unparalleled size and beauty, the mounting of exquisite chasings, in variously-coloured gold, set with one large turquoise. It was at last bought by the King for one hundred and one guineas.

The celebrated Beethoven died at Vienna on the 31st March, about six o'clock in the evening.

Two boys, on their return from school, strayed the other day into the kitchen of a country inn, where a showman had also put up with a little female dwarf, whom he was showing about the country. On entering the kitchen, the boys found no one there; but, in a corner, a box was standing, in which, from an inscription on the lid, they had every reason to believe the little fairy lay concealed. The lads were desirous of seeing the sight, and had no copper to bribe the keeper; they therefore hit on the following stratagem. They shoved the box so very near to a large fire that was blazing in the chimney, that the dwarf, from the increased heat of the climate, was obliged to open the door, and favour them, gratis, with her wished for presence.

At an Anniversary Meeting of one of the Religious Societies, held a few days ago in the neighbourhood of Pentonville, it was stated, there were upwards 50,000 children attending Sunday Schools, in the metropolis, and no fewer than 9,000 teachers employed in them; among the latter of whom is one of the Directors of the Bank of England.

The Marquis of Cholmondeley died suddenly on Tuesday morning, at his residence in Piccadilly. His Lordship was in the enjoyment of his usual health, on Monday night, and went to bed at 12 o'clock; about an hour afterwards his Lordship was taken very ill. Sir H. Halford was sent for, and came directly to attend his Lordship. The Noble Marquis, however, we regret to state, expired at nine o'clock on Tuesday morning.

A petition has been presented to the British Parliament by a number of Operatives, praying that Govt. would fix the minimum price of labor, as they were about to do of grain.

A formidable conspiracy has been discovered at the very gates of Madrid—Several persons have been taken and shot. The conspiracy consisted of 500, at least. It was in favour of Don Carlos, the brother of the present King of Spain.

Gen. Ashley in his late expedition over the Rocky Mountains, fell in with a Lake 100 miles long, and 60 or 80 wide. Its water is salter than that of the ocean—and rock salt near it.

All ideas of a dissolution of Parliament, arising out of the change in the administration, were considered premature, till an actual trial of strength between the conflicting parties had taken place.

A Carlisle paper says, that a number of operatives have set out to embark for America, or are preparing to do so. The price of weaving the low qualities of gingham is now so much reduced as to render it perfectly impossible for a weaver to provide for a large family, even with oatmeal or potatoes, though he toil fourteen hours a day.

Thomas Campbell, Esq. was installed Lord Rector of the University of Glasgow, on the 13th April.

Spain.—All the reports in circulation were of a warlike character. At Madrid many laborers were employed in making cartouches, which were despatched to Chudad Rodrigo. The Marquis of Chaves was about to make a new inroad into Portugal.

Statistics.—By the last population returns, it appears that London contains 1,225,694 resident inhabitants, besides 50,000 visitors and seamen. The females exceed the males by 65,000. The inhabited houses were 164,881; and the number of families, 187,101. Houses building, 3,899. Houses unoccupied, 8,240.

Within a radius of three miles of St. Paul's Cathedral, whose surface over which the population is taken) the numbers double those of Paris, and amounted to 1,484'500.

In eight-births of the population of Great Britain, there are 84,964 males, and 48,094 females, between 90 and 100; and 191 females above 100.

In Great Britain there are 2,429,630 houses inhabited; 54,484 houses unoccupied, and 21,679 building.

From a Liverpool Paper of the 16th April brought by the Margaret.

LONDON, 16th April.—Evening.

The Stock Exchange has been closed on account of the Holidays, but the assemblage of brokers and jobbers on the Royal Exchange, has been greater than usual. Nothing definitive on the subject of the new administration has transpired in the city, except that it is generally understood that Sir George Clerk will not form a part of the new Admiralty, and that his place will be filled by Lord Beaning. It is understood that some office under the Ministry is to be given to the Marquis of Huntly, in consequence of a despatch having been sent to him at Genoa. Other city rumours are, that the Duke of Cambridge will be offered the post of Commander in Chief of the Army, and that the Duke of Sussex will take the government of Hanover. All these rumours, however, have failed in producing any effect on the funds; and the interest of the question, indeed, which turned entirely on Mr. Canning's ability to form an administration, subsides in proportion as he is considered to be secure in the maintenance of his high station. In the few private bargains effected in consols in the market has shown a tendency to raise rather than otherwise, and the extreme variation has been between 84¾ and 85¼ for May account.

The Marquis of Hertford, it is said, is to be raise to a Dukedom, and will except an appointment in the Household. The Earl of Carlisle goes to Ireland as Lord Lieutenant. The Marquis Wellesley, who is on his way, probably, to this country, will take the office of President of the council. The Duke of Cambridge is naturally pointed to as the new Commander in Chief.

It is reported in the political circles that in the new arrangements of Ambassadors, Lord Mountcharles will succeed Lord Burghes at the Court of Tuscany, with a higher diplomatic character.

COURT CIRCULAR, April 17.

Mr. Canning had an audience of the King yesterday, at his Palace of St. James's.

Sir John Copley, Earl Harrowby, the Right Honorable F. Robinson, W. Huskisson, Mr. Wynn, Sir N. Tindal, the Solicitor General, Viscount Granville, Earl Morley, Earl Gower, the Earl of Carlisle, and Lord Seaford, visited Mr. Canning yesterday, at his residence in Downing-street.

The Duke of Wellington attended at the Office of the Commander-in-Chief yesterday afternoon, and was engaged in transacting official busine ss with Sir Herbert Taylor. Sir Herbert Taylor subsequently conducted bolding his Levees as Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, in consequence of the resignation of the Duke of Wellington.

From the N. Y. Spectator.

The ship Milton, Capt. Webb, arrived yesterday from Liverpool, bringing dates to the 21st ult. four days later than the 1st advices. They contain nothing of importance. The resignations in consequence of Mr. Canning's appointment continued to be sent in. Sir John Copely has been appointed Lord Chancellor. Lord Carlisle goes to Ireland and the Marquis of Hertford declines the office of Lord Chamberlain.

London, April 18.—The corn market continued dull; a few sales at old prices.

Thomas Campbell has been installed Lord Rector of the University of Glasgow.

The Marquis of Anglesea has accepted the Master Generalship of the Ordnance, and despatches have been sent to the Duke of Cambridge renewing the offer to His Royal Highness of the office of Commander in Chief.

Sir N. C. Findal, the Solicitor General has given in his adhesion to Mr. Cannings administration.

Sir Chas. Wetherell, Attorney General, Hon. J. Becket, Judge Advocate General Earl of Straftsbury, Chairman of the Committees of the House of Lords, Hon. Chas. Arbuthnot, Commissioner of Woods and Forests, &c. have resigned. The following arrangements are under consideration, or have taken place, says the Mercury of the 29th.—Duke of Clarence, Lord High Admiral; Hon. G. Canning, First Lord of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer; Earl of Harrowby, President of the Council; Lord Granville, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; Mr. Huskisson, Secretary of State for the Home Department; Mr. Robinson (with a Peerage) Secretary of State for the Colonies; Mr. Wynn, President of the Board of Control; Lord Bexley, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

LATE EUROPEAN ADVICES.

The ship United States, Cpt. Wilson, arrived this morning from Liverpool, binging our advices to the 21st of April, inclusive. The following summary embraces all we find of any moment.

In reply to some charges that Mr. Canning had not proceeded with sufficent promptness in the formation of the new Ministry, the Courier of April 19. says—

"Their accusation is unfounded. It is just one week since Mr. Canning found himself in the unprecedented situation in which he was suddenly placed, and already the two great services of the country, the navy and army, have been attended to, as well as the important civil-office of Lord Chancellor. Does this look like either delay or indecision? We may challenge, on the contrary, those who complain, to produce a case, where so much promptitude, under singular circumstances, has been displayed. There is such a thing as mischievous haste, which leaves more to undo, than is apparently done. We have the satisfaction of knowing that every thing is proceeding in a way entirely egreeable to the wishes of his Majesty, and calculated to convince the country that the new Government, when completed in all its details, will deserve its confidence and support. More than this cannot justly be required."

The same paper contains the following paragraph—

In ordinary times, a Ministerial dinner classes only with the ordinary hospitalities of the day;—but, a moment like the present, it becomes a sort of index of what is, and what may be. We, therefore, announce, in a way that we would not otherwise announce it, that, yesterday, Mr. Canning had the honor to receive His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence at dinner, in Downingstreet, to meet the Members of his Majesty's government.—The Marquis of Anglesea, the Earl of Harrowby, Lord Bexley, the Master of the Rolls, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Huskisson, Lord Granville, Mr. Wynn, and Lord Palmerston, dined with Mr. Canning; and there were also present, Lord Howard de Walden, Lord Mount Charles, Lord Clanricarde, Sir E. Cockburn, Mr. Herries, Mr. Planta, and Mr. Croker.

The substance of the correspondence between Mr. Canning and the Duke of Wellington, previous to the resignation of the latter, is given in the Globe of the 17th. The first note was Mr. Canning announcing that he had received the King's commands to re-model the administration, and requesting to know whether his Grace would continue in the King's councils. The Duke replied and required to know on what principels the new Ministry was to be formed, and who was to be placed at its head. Mr. C answered, and expressed his surprise at the question, as it was the understood effect of the King's commands to form an administration, that the individual to whom those commands were directed was placed at the head of it; but as this question was raised, he had laid his (the Duke's) note before the King, and had received his commands to state that he (Mr. Canning,) was to be placed at the head of the government. The Duke replied, that under this he would no longer take part in the King's Councils.

No successor for Mr. Peel was spoken of with any confidence. There was some expectation that he would be induced to resume his situation.

The Globe of the 20th, says, no ministerial arrangements can yet be positively announced. The communications between Mr. Canning and the Marquis of Lansdown continue.—Though some difficulties naturally may be expected to occur in the discussion, there is nothing to lead to the apprehension that they will not be overcome.

It is reported that Mr. Plunkett is to be appointed Master of the Rolls, in the room of Sir John Copley, with a peerage.

The news from Straus is to the 1st of April. The sitting of the Chambers had terminated. The accusation brought against the Ministers, of being the authors of the ills which desolate Portugal, by their system of moderatism, was rejected. Consequently the Ministry will undergo no change for the present.

The English army remains stationary, and the Quarter-Master-General constantly resides at Coimbra.

The fear of a new invasion seems to have ceased, for the greater part of the officers were at Lisbon for a holiday.

By extracts from the French papers, which are to the 13th, it appears that the Circe frigate had been despatched from Toulon with sealed orders, which were not to be opened till she passed the Straits of Gibraltar.

It is asserted again, that there is no doubt of the determination of the Russian Cabinet to come to a decisive arrangement with the Porte, relative to the affairs of Greece. Orders have been sent to the commanding General, it is said, to concentrate the troops, amounting to 100,000, on the Pruth.

LONDON, April 19.

A singularly beautiful fall of snow took place at Dalquise on the 29th inst. The flakes were of a very unusual size, measuring about two and a half inches by two; they continued thus only about seven minutes, and gradually diminished to their usual size. They fell at a foot or eighteen inches distant from each other; the flakes were seen singly at a great altitude.

A letter from Odessa of a recent date, says, that the Russian army of Bessarabia, which, since the ratification of the treaty of Akermann, had withdrawn its advanced posts from the Pruth, has just placed them there again.

It is said that Austria will have on foot two Armies of Observation, of 60,000 men each, one of which will be placed in Italy, the other in Transylvania. Several regiments have already sent out from Bohemia for Italy, where the army will be commanded by Generals Rousseau, Trap, and Leopart, who have just been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Generals. It is thought, that the army in Transylvania is to support Russia, in case the Porte refuses the pacification of Greece.

The Greeks had obtained considerable advantages in different parts of Western Greece, Karaiskaki was in the vicinity of Lepanto, after having raised the whole country between Missolonghi and Salona.

LONDON, (City) Friday Evening, April 20.

In the absence of any definitive arrangements in the Cabinet the rumours of yesterday, at this end of the town, have continued. It has been confidently asserted that the Marquis of Landsdown has been taken into the Cabinet; this assertion, however, was negatived by the Courier of this evening.

The Funds have been steady throughout the day. Consols opened at 83 1-8, and at the close of the market were reported at 83 1 3 to 1-4, with a limited business.

Foreign Intelligence.

GREECE.

Greece.—The intelligence from Greece is of a vague, though generally favourable character. One report says, that Lord Cochrane had arrived with his steamers at the Morea, and that Athens was free; another says, that the latter place was besieged by 5000 Turks, that the Greeks were well supplied with provisions and would not surrender.

Paris papers recently received at New-York state that the Greeks have had a signal victory over Reschid Pacha.—The Constitutionnal, in giving the account, says, that the Greeks, having seized the Pirœus, and landed 3000 men, the Serakier, who was attempting to reduce the Citadel by famine, fearing that his plans would fail by this manœuvre of the Greeks, marched with all his troops (except 1000 which were left in the city) to dislodge them. He was driven back by the Greeks with loss, and in the mean time the garrison of the Citadel sallied out, dispersed the guard left in the city, and destroyed the camp, Nicetas, Carniscaki, Londos and Botzaris, who were on the neighbouring heights, on a signal given from the Citadel, poured down upon the Turks and completed the rout. The steamboat Perseverance was of great service during the engagement. The number lost on the part of the Turks was not known. A bulletin, published at Prevose, a place occupied by the Turks, states that 2000 of the Serakier's troops were missing. The Turks fled towards Thebes. This is a decisive and brilliant affair, and will urge the allied powers to interfere in behalf of the Greeks.

Mystery Unravelled.—Some time in the latter part of 1824, or beginning of 1825, (we believe) a horse was found dead in the woods in the vicinity of Cayuga lake, and a pair of saddle bags near him, cut open and rifled. It was then supposed that the owner of the horse, whose name was Jesse Strang, had been robbed and murdered, and his body thrown in the lake, and much time and pains were taken by hundreds of people in dragging the lake in search of the body. From that time until last Friday, there had been no intelligence of the lost man. On that day, a gentleman from that country, went to the jail in this city, and the moment he saw Strang, the supposed murderer of Mr. Whipple, he knew him to be the person before mentioned, and on charging him with the fact, Strang acknowledged it, and laughed hartily at the idea of dragging the lake in search of him. The reason for his practising this description. is said to be, that he had forged several drafts, (one of which was cashed in this city) and he wished to be thought dead, to avoid being discovered. Since that time he passed by the name of Joseph Ortom.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1827.

The latest accounts from England are to 21st April. Various rumors were in circulation with respect to the new Ministry, but no intelligence has been received that can be depended upon.

We this day present our readers with the first number of a second volume. The year that has past, since we commenced our Editorial labours, has produced events of the utmost importance to the Province. The attention of the Mother Country, is now more particularly directed to this Colony, and it has been to us a pleasing task, to note the interest which she takes, in whatever concerns its welfare. She has commenced public works at her own expense, which will eventually count the most lasting benefits upon us—to others, undertaken by private enterprize, she has rendered the most valuable assistance. The tide of emigration flows in upon us rapidly—our woods are fast making way, before the efforts of industry, for the habitations of men, and fertile fields—Improvement makes a steady advance—the Commerce of the Country is rapidly increasing, and the prospect generally before us, is of a most cheering description.

The satisfaction which has been afforded us, in noticing, from time to time, the advancing prosperity of the Country, has driven far from our minds, any thing like uneasiness, at the attacks which have been made upon us, by some of our cotemporaries. We can sincerely say, that we have at heart the real interests of the Country—it is our Home; and in that one word, how many pleasing associations are combined. Our motives and intentions may be misrepresented, but feeling conscious as we do, that our only wish, is for the general happiness and prosperity of "the Land we live in," we shall continue to offer with freedom, such remarks as may, from time to time, appear necessary, to correct the misguided endeavors of those, who would, with a ruthless hand, prostrate the happiness of the people, to serve their own purposes. Let such persons rail, and apply their opprobrious epithets as they please—these shall always—

"Pass by us as the idle wind,
Which we regard not—"

The vilest can make use of intemperate language, and utter disgraceful expressions. There is a redeeming spirit in the good sense of the people, which will point out to them, that he whose pen is ever dipped in gall, cannot have much of the milk of human kindness about him. Birds of the same ill omen have before, at intervals, made a chance migration to this Land, and for a time have uttered their discordant cries—And what has been the result of the labors of those Pseudo Patriots, who would fain have persuaded the people of Upper Canada, that the Land was sunk in political corruption—and that the strength of their arm, could alone redeem it? Let the people answer the question. If the Country has been benefitted, and its prosperity increased, has it not been by the active exertions of a Government ever anxious for its welfare?

In conclusion, we beg leave to offer our sincere thanks for the patronage which has been bestowed upon us—happy that we have it in our power, when paying our respects on this occasion, to address ourselves in language different from that, which we have lately seen used by one, who, if his own word were to be taken for it, is the only Freeman in Upper Canada—with this understanding, that the word is to be taken in its most unworthy sense—the freedom of bespattering those around him, with language that is meant to be offensive.

Our patrons may rest assured that, regardless of the repeated attempts which are made, to drag us into discussions, which would only tend to lessen us in their estimation, we shall continue to pursue that line of conduct, which we are assured will recommend us to their attention, by fulfilling the promise made in our Prospectus, of "conducting this Publication on principles of Loyalty, and by endeavoring to strengthen the bonds of attachment to that Country, among whose subjects we consider it as a proud distinction, to have the right of being numbered."

The Gore Gazette gives the following description of the new Town of Guelph, in which Lots are offered for sale by the Canada Company:—

"The proposed Town—or Village—of GUELPH, is situated on the river Speed, about 12 miles from its confluence with the Grand River; 6 from Waterloo; 14 from the Village of GALT; about 30, by the present circuitous route, from ANCASTER, and in a straight line, but 25 from BURLINGTON BAY, the head of Ship Navigation on Lake Ontario.—A road, 8 rods wide, is to be opened immediatly, to connect the Town of GUELPH with the Bay—and, from the energy with which the officers of the Company conduct their operations, we confidently expect that this object will be effected during the present season."

The Parliament of Lower Canada, is prorogued by Proclamation to 10th July next. The Canadian Spectator, turns out to be a false Prophet, for he had foretold a dissolution. His statements of such matters, appear to be made on the same kind of authority, as those of the Colonial Advocate in this Province, who, with the coolest impudence possible, asserts, in the face of the world, that a certain persons name has been struck out of the Commission of the Peace, whose name was never in it.

The Ann, the first Tea Ship for the Season, has arrived at Quebec from Canton, after a passage of 124 days The second is expected in a few days. having nearly completed her cargo, when the Ann sailed.

Wiggins, the man who was wounded some time ago in the head, by a Squaw, with an axe, died on Tuesday last. A Coroner's Jury sat on the body, and their verdict, "That he died in consequence of the wound," will put the Squaw on her trial—she is now in Gaol.

From the Gore Gazette.

We are imformed that 15 families of Emigrants arrived yesterday at Dundas, and proceed immediately to GUELPH.

Seven vessels were lying in the Burlington Canal.—The Schr, LADY MAITLAND, which was driven on shore, at that place, in a late gale, has been got off; she is undergoing a thorough repair, and will be ready for sea in a few days.—The Schr. MOHAWK CHIEF, passed through the Canal last week with a full cargo, under full sail, without the least obstruction.—Others have also passed through with full cargoes, without touching bottom.—The Schr. LADY SHERBROOKE, arrived on Friday from Sheldon's Wharf, to Prescott, and back, in the unprecedented short period of 5 1-2 days.—Ib.

Canada Company.—We have much pleasure in giving place to the following communication, which announces the foundation of a new city, on the Company's lands, to be called GUELPH.

We congratulate the Canadas that the operations of the Company have commenced; and it is further satisfactory that the first step was an act of gratitude and compliment to His Majesty.

Upon St. George's day, kept also in honour of the King's Birth-day, Mr. Galt having made suitable preparations for laying the Foundation of a Great City, proceeded from Waterloo, attended by a number of surveyors, axe-men, and new settlers, and having marked a commanding situation, deemed the centre of the intended city, Mr. Galt took an axe and gave the first stroke to a great oak tree, which was soon felled, and in its fall gave notice to the sounding forest of their speedy extermination. Mr. Galt, standing on the trunk, proclaimed, "God save our beloved King, and prosperity to the city of Guelph"—after which, refreshments with libations of wine, were partaken of by the multitude, while the air rang with "God save the King."

This, we believe, is the first city so named in honour of the Royal family. From the scite selected, the liberal encouragement the Company hold out, so ably carried into effect by their servants under the personal superintendence of Mr. Galt, we look forward with confidence to an increase of the city, equal to any in modern times. We further learn, that the agent of the Company in New York has already received application from the following description of persons for lots in the new city.

4 Farmers, 11 Weavers, 5 Tailors, 8 Bakers, 6 Carpenters, 3 Shoe-makers, 2 Engineers, 15 Labourers, 1 Butcher, 1 Mason.

English, 17 men, 10 women, 27 children; Irish, 24 men, 11 women, 30 children; Scotch, 15 men, 8 women, 12 children. Total, 154.—Albion.

LACHINE CANAL.—Since the Lachine Canal opened for the season on the 16th ultimo, till the 16th instant, 220 Boats of different descriptions, have passed through it.—This is independant of Rafts of Timber and Firewood. A number of boats, owing to the highness of the waters, have, notwithstanding the low rate of the Canal tolls, passed the Lachine Rapids. Last year two Durham boats were lost in that passage and we have been credibly informed, that the Dundas struck three times a few days ago on the rocks, and the Commerce nearly the whole way. Ten new Durham Boats have arrived from Prescott and its neighbourhood since the opening of the Canal. This intelligence is truly gratifying to the friends of Provincial improvement and is a precursor of the benefits yet to arise to this Province and this City in particular, for when the Rideau, Welland, and Grenville Canals are finished, the whole produce of the country bordering on those water communications will descend to Montreal through the Lachine Canal.—Montreal Gazette.

From the Quebec Official Gazette.

DOWNING STREET, 21st March, 1827.

My Lord,

I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship, the copy of a letter from Mr. LACK, dated the 16th instant, by which your Lordship will perceive that it is the intention of the Lords of the Committe of Privy Council, for trade to propose some measure to enable the Merchants to avail themselves of the benefits which it was intended to confer on their Trade by the Acts of 6th Geo. IV, cap. 114, and 7th Geo. IV, cap. 48, more particularly with respect to the importing and warehousing American Flour for exportation to the West Indies, as it is represented that the time should be paid on goods brought into the Province by inland navigation, on the arrival at the Frontier Ports, through which they must of necessity pass, before they call arrive at a warehousing port.

The Lords of the Committe have therefore requested the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, to direct the Commissioners of customs, to acquaint their officers in both the Canadas, that all goods which may be lawfully imported by land or inland navigation, should be permitted to enter at the ports of entry, upon security to the satisfaction of the Collector of the Customs, for the due delivery thereof, at some free warehousing port in one of the Provinces.

I have the honour to be,
My Lord,
Your Lordship's most obedient
Humble servant,

Office of Committee of Privy Council for Trade,
WHITEHALL, 16th March, 1827.

SIR,—It having been represented to the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, that the Merchants of Canada have not been able to avail themselves of the benefits which it was intended to confer on their Trade by the Acts of 6th Geo. IV, cap. 114, and 7th Geo. IV, cap. 48, more particularly with respect to the importation and warehousing American Flour for exportation to the West-Indies, as it is required that the duties should be paid on goods brought into the Province by inland navigation, on their arrival at the Frontier Ports, through which they must of necessity pass, before they can arrive at a warehousing Port; and it being their Lordship's intention to propose some measure, with a view to the removal of this impediment, I am directed to request you will move the Lords of His Majesty's Treasury, to direct the Commissioners of His Majesty's Customs, to acquaint their Officers in both the Canadas, that all goods which may lawfully be imported by land or inland navigation, should be permitted to entry at the ports of entry, upon security to the satisfaction of the Collector of the Customs for the due delivery thereof, at some free warehousing port in one of the Provinces.

I am &c. (Signed) THOMAS LACK.

From the Old Quebec Gazette.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE!—On Sunday morning, about half an hour before one, a fire broke out at Mr. Jacques Leblond's, advocate, near the Court House, and the Castle of St. Lewis, and in about two hours completely consumed five houses, with a number of outhouses.

It is with great concern that we have to state that Mr. WALKER, advocate, formerly of Montreal, now practicing here, whilst zealously assisting at the house occupied by Mr. Hart, was thrown into the fire by the fall of a part of the buildings. The ruins concealed him for some time from the view of persons near him, and his moaning could only be heard. By degrees, however, he was enabled to force his arm between some of the timbers, and it was seen from behind a part of the ruins. At this moment, when all hopes to save him were nearly given up by those around him, some person unknown made a noble effort and succeeded in reaching Mr. Walker, others followed, and with the greatest exertions he was pulled with difficulty through the closed ruins. Mr. Walker was perfectly collected, and had resigned himself to his fate. He was taken to the late Bishop's house, and altho' shockingly burned from the middle downwards, and suffering torture, he has gone so far rather improving; but should he survive, will probably, we have heard, suffer the loss of his limbs.

The fire originated at Mr. Leblonds; it is not known how. It commenced in the lower story, and so dense was the smoke before the inmates were awakended, that MRS. Leblond, who was in the second story, had already lost all hope of escaping by the passage, and had thrown out a feather bed to break her fall on leaping from the windows. Fortunately, Mr. Drolet, who slept in the upper story, came down and prevailed upon her two daughters and herself to try the passage, and they got to the street door compleley exhausted; an exposure of a few moments longer must have destroyed their lives. They were in their bedcloaths. An Irish servant woman was soon forced to throw herself from the window, and lies at the hospital in a dangerous state. For some time Mr. Leblond was supposed to have been burnt in the house, and his family, after suffering the greatest distress of mind, learned that he had been met in St. Lewis-street, having left the house before the accident.

The following is a list of property destroyed, &c. It was insured at the Quebec Fire Assurance Company—

Mr. Leblond, advocate—house insured for £700, totally burnt, not an article of the furniture saved; Mr. L.'s furniture valued at 7 or £800—Mr. Drolet's, £300, not insured.

Mr. A. B. Gray, advocate—house and stable destroyed, insured for £575; furniture insured for £700, partly saved.

Mr. Amable Berthelot's house (occupied by Mr. Desbarats, jr. advocate,) and stable, totally destroyed, insured for £200. Mr. Desbarat's furniture valued at £300 or £400, nearly all destroyed.

Mr. Amable Berthelot's house at the corner, facing the old Chateau, not burnt, but gutted. Mrs. Gray's furniture, and that of Mr. Walker, where he had an office, and Mr. Drolet, advocate, much injured. The house damaged by tearing down sashes, &c. The house and stable were insured for £695, Mrs. Gray's furniture for £200.

Mr. Amable Berthelot's house, adjoining the last, (occupied by Col. Foster, Deputy Adjutant General of Forces), totally burnt, with the stables, insured for £350. Col. Foster's furniture not insured, and almost entirely lost.

Mr. Amable Berthelot's house adjoining the last, (occupied by Mr. E. Hart, advocate,) totally destroyed. Insured for £200—Mr. Hart lost most of his furniture, only £100 of which was insured.

Mr. Amable Berthelot's house adjoining the last, (occupied by Dr. Grasset). with the stables, insured for £325. The stables entirely burnt, the house damaged by tearing down chimney pieces, &c. Dr. Grasset's furniture was much injured and not insured.

Mr. Perrault's house adjoining (occupied by Mr. E. Bedard, advocate), was emptied, but the furniture received very litle damage.

Insured by the Quebec Fire Office, and entirely destroyed, ... £2,505
Do. do. and partially injured, £250

Total, £4,725
Other losses valued at about £2,000

THE LATE FIRE.—It appearing that during the fire on Sunday morning last, some silver plate, and many other articles, were stolen, some of which have been since offered for sale, and others have been recovered by the Police; those to whom any article may be so offered, under suspicious circumstances, will render a service to the sufferers, and further the ends of justice, by taking such steps as may ensure the restoration of the property and the detection of the offenders.

We understand that the person who rescued Mr. Walker from the burning ruins of Mr. Hart's house, was a young man named Thomas Elsworth, residing in St. Rock.

A mutilated Meridian Stone, in the S. W. angle of Wolfe's Redoubt, (Quebec) is thus inscribed—

"1735.
Var: 18° 25." W.
Holland,
Williams R. A."

A land surveyor of much experience, states, that at the same place in 1804, the variation was 18° 80" W. being a difference of 5 minutes in 19 years, or about 1 minute in four years, or 15 seconds in one year.

Extraordinary Escape.—On Thursday afternoon, about seven o'clock, whilst the "CANADA FLOATING DOCK," was about to be launched from the Ship-yard of Mr. Farrington, at the foot of the Current St. Marie, a person named T[illegible]s Dow, a ship carpenter, employed in assisting at the launch, and who was on the ways between the vessel and the water, in the act of leaving the way, the vessel coming too close to permit him to escape in the usual manner, as the only alternative left to save himself he ran with all possible speed to the river, and dived into the water before he was overtaken. When the vessel was safely launched and it was believed that the man must have been crushed beneath her, he made his appearance on the top of the water, 50 yards from the shore, which distance he had been driven by the force with which the vessel moved the water. When taken up he exhibited no marks of injury further than the wetting he had received and having the top of his head thoroughly greased by the vessel's bottom pressing against it while in the water. In reply to some questions as to how he felt when in his late perilous situation, he jocularly remarked that he was so little discomposed by it, that for a trifling remuneration he would "try another race with her."

The "Canada Floating Dock" we understand is to be taken forthwith to Quebec, where she will be used as a dry dock wherein to repair vessels, and it is thought by persons who are supposed to be judges, that she will answer the purpose desired.—Canadian Courant.

The Steam-boat La Prairie, on her passage up from Quebec, got aground near Batiscan, and has not yet been got off. It is said that she will require to be launched before she can be extricated. She had a number of passengers on board when she grounded, most of whom have reached this city in the other Steam-boats.—ib.

Rise of the Great Lakes.—The Detroit Gazett states, that owing to the immense quantities of snow that have fallen during the last winter at the north-west, and the rain that has fallen during the present spring in that quarter, the great lakes and the Detroit river are higher than they have been known to rise for the last twenty years. Some people still suppose that the rise of the lakes is periodical, and that the cause has never been discovered; but a little attention to the various opions that are entertained respecting the periods of this rise, would convince them of the error of the opinion.

Army.

GENERAL WILLIAM CARTWRIGHT.

The late General Cartwright entered the service on the 22d February, 1769, as a Cornet in the 10th Dragoons; obtained, on the 24th March, 1775, a Lieutenantcy in the same Corps; was promoted, on the 25th December, 1776, to a Company in the 3d Dragoons; was transferred, on the 29th June, 1779, to the 10th Dragoons, obtained, on the 10th May, 1786, a Majority; and, on the 4th December, 1793, a Lieutenant-Colonelcy in the same corps. He was appointed, on th 15th September, 1796, Aid-de-Camp to the King, and Colonel in the Army; was raised on the 29th April, 1802, to the rank of Major General: on the 25th April, 1808, to the rank of Lieutenant General; and on the 12th of August, 1819, to that of General. He was appointed, on 18th September, 1804, Colonel of the 23d Dragoons; was transferred, on the 18th November, 1807, to the Colonelcy of the 3d Dragoons; and, on the 25th January, 1821, to that of the 1st Dragoon Guards.

LIEUT. COLONEL RADCLIFFE.

The late Lieutenant-Colonel Radcliffe was Major of Brigade to the Cavalry in Great Britain. This distinguished officer served in all the campaigns in the late war, commencing with the Duke of York's in Flanders, in 1793, and ending with the sanguinary battle of Waterloo. There he received a severe wound from a musket ball, which lodged in his knee; the constant pain and irritation of which, as it could not be extracted, has thus prematurely destroyed his valuable life. His Lieutenant Colonelcy took its date from that fatal day. He was present at the battles of Salamanca, Vittoria, Busaco, Fuentes d'Onor, the blockade of Pamplona, and the attack of Bayonne, besides numerous engagements of minor note. He was Major of Brigade during the campaigns in Spain, to the battle of Toulouse, inclusive; after which he was appointed Assistant Adjutant-General to the Cavalry, and accompanied it as such through France to England. He was a most dexterous and scientific swordsman, a skilful officer, and an able tactician. So entirely was his mind devoted to his profession, that almost the last words he spoke, in answer to a question from his physician, were—"I am retreating, retreating, retreating—I cannot advance."

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offered for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. Aquit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

THE BLACK WATCH.

AIR—"The Forty-second's March."

This is our own, our native shore—
It ne'er shall be the Stranger's!
May Heaven preserve it evermore,
In Discord's hour and Danger's!
These hills have seen our banner spread,
And o'er the dead and dying—
O'er gallant hearts and broadswords red,
Our Unicorn still flying!

We on the thistle pour our love,
In our free soil we strike it;
On plains below, or rocks above,
There blooms no emblem like it,
To every sterling Scottish heart
It tells a kindling story;
It bids us spurn at modish art,
And think of ancient glory.

Old Scotland's spears shall never turn,
When Faith and Honour lead 'em;
At Roslin and at Bannockburn,
Our Fathers drew for freedom;
And that their sons are valiant too,
Let History on her pages
Write Egypt, Spain, and Waterloo,
In blood, to coming ages,
Land of our love—our native land!
Dear is each stream that dashes,
In whirling tides, thy Rocky strand,
Dear ocean's wave that washes,
Dear are thy forests, dear thy plains,
Dear are thy hills of heather;
Dear are thy daughters and their swains,
Dear art thou altogether!

And beats from Thule to the Tweed
One heart that dares to slight thee—
One craven heart that would not bleed
Rejoicingly to fight thee!
No; thou art Freedom's choicest seat,
Religion's chosen centre;
And life in us must cease to beat
Ere foreign foot shall enter!

HASLAN GHERAY.

THE HERO OF CIRCASSIA.

A notice of this interesting personage, who appears to have possessed all the best and noblest feelings of that spirit of chivalry, the loss of which it is so common now to deplore, is to be found in the "Journey of the Count de La Garde from Moscow to Vienna." The Count de La Garde is already known as one of the best lyrical poets of France, by means of those delightful songs and romances to which the late Queen of Holland composed the music.—The letters in which he gives an account of his journey are scarcely less agreeable productions. They are written in a spirited, light style, and have all the tone and polish which belong to good society, without any of the affectation that commonly encumbers it. The observations of the author, respecting the countries of the North of Europe through which his journey lay, are new and interesting in an extraordinary degree: and are not less valuable for the information which they impart, than they are charming for the manner in which that information is given. His opportunities for acquiring knowledge seem to have been such as are not commonly enjoyed by travellers, and he appears to have fully availed himself of them. Among many delightful anecdotes and episodes with which his volume abounds, that relating to the hero of Circassia, a translation of which follows, is perhaps the most interesting. It appears admirably well adapted for a poem, and we should be delighted to see it treated in that shape by the author whose prose version of it has been so happy.

"In the delightful regions of Circassia, on which nature has so prodigally bestowed her gifts, Mouradin Bey inhabited a deep valley, situated to the north of Caucasus, bounded and fertilized by the waters of the Kuban.—Chief of a warlike race, this prince, who was perfectly absolute, and who dispensed no laws but such as were dictated by his will, had acquired immense treasures, by means of unjust extortions, which had made him the terror of his vassals, and the scourge of his neighbours.

"Notwithstanding so many reasons for his being detested, almost all the surrounding chiefs and princes were attracted to him by an irresistable feeling. Mouradian was a father, and the numberless perfections of his daughter Alkazia gave sufficient proof that virtues and vices are not hereditary. Possessing an affectionate disposition, and good sense, Alkazia united to a slender elegant figure delicate and expressive features, enhanced by all the attractions which modesty gives to beauty. The qualities of her mind surpassed the loveliness of those features, as much as she excelled in charms all the females of her father's court.—Such was the child of Mouradin; in whose bosom numberless adorers had not been able to excite one responsive sigh.

"The Bey, proud of his daughter's charms, and anxious to display his magnificence, often assembled at public festivals the princes and warriors who aspired to the hand of the beauteous Alkazia. The women of Circassia are less enslaved than elsewhere in the East, and unpermitted may appear unveiled in the temples, and at public fetes. The daughter of Mouradin always presided at those games, where the address, strength, and courage, of the persons engaged in them were displayed, in throwing the dart, handling the lance, drawing the bow, wrestling, racing, and still more in the dangerous task of breaking in a wild horse. Among all the rivals for glory, the young Haslan Gheray distinguished himself, as much by the dignity of his deportment as by his address, in all gymnastic exercises. He was descended from the old sovereigns of the Crimea; and his whole appearance revealed his illustrious birth. He had just attained his twenty-fifth year; but his reputation for impetuosity in battle, and his modesty after his victories, caused his friendship to be sought by all the chieftains. Such was the interesting hero whom Alkazia had often crowned, and to whom she sometimes ordered the combat.

This scion of an illustrious race, who lived only for glory, might have viewed the charms of Alkazia without emotion; but that when, as conqueror at the wrestling match, he received, kneeling, from Alkazia a sash, embroidered by her own hands, in rising his eyes met her's—a tear hung upon the long jetty eye-lashes; that first tear of affection acted as a spell upon Haslan—and that one glance decided the hero's destiny. From this moment he never quitted her. After some time spent in assiduous attention, he ventured to solicit her to return his passion. 'Say that you love me, or I die!' said Haslan, falling on his knees before the timid virgin. 'Oh! my father!' exclaimed Alkazia, while unbidden tears rushed into her eyes, and she sunk into the arms of him with whom she felt her destiny was for ever united.

But many obstacles yet existed to oppose their felicity! Haslan Gheray was poor, Mouradin haughty, and so avaricious that he would sacrifice to his love of riches the happiness of his child! However, Haslan solicited and obtained an interview with the father of his beloved, and towards evening he repaired to the palace of the King of the Valley. Timid for the first time, this hero, a thunder-bolt in battle, entered with trembling steps the hall of council, the walls of which were hung round with glittering arms. Mouradin, stretched on a divan, surrounded by his bravest companions, was conversing on an expedition which promised an immense booty. 'What is your wish, Haslan?' said the prince, with a kindly smile; 'do you come to proffer me your aid in the war that I purpose undertaking?' 'I come,' answered Haslan, with a submissive air, 'to ask of her father the hand of her I love: our affection is mutual; to make her happy will be the desire of my life. I am descended from warlike princes, and my fate as well as my inclination compel me to walk in their footsteps. By unjust treaties we have been despoiled of our possessions: conquest may give them to me again, and this hope, and my legitimate rights, encourage me to address myself to the powerful prince, father of the lovely Alkazia.'

'My astonishment equals my anger!' said the old chief of the valley, throwing on Haslan a look of the greatest rage. 'Do you not know how many princes of Circassia would give half their treasures for such an alliance? and you dare make me such a request! you, —you, who, without country or connection, can only give my daughter a tent for shelter, and your pay for portion! Renounce such pretensions, which are at once audacious and vain; for this time I forgive your temerity; but remember well, if I learn that Alkazia, rebellious to my commands, even sees you again, I will sell her instantly to whoever shall bring me intelligence of her disobedience. This is my answer; depart, Haslan, and by your services endeavour to efface the remembrance of your offence.'

The father of his beloved was sacred in the eyes of Haslan; he brooked the affront, and, preferring to die rather than to take vengeance, he left the palace, overcome with grief.

At the house of Alkazia's nurse, the confident of their mutual affection, the lovers once more met. Resolved to leave a country where every thing reminded him of his misery, Haslan had saddled his horse, and, fully equipped, repaired thither to take a last adieu. As soon as Mouradin's daughter preceived him, drying the tears that bathed her face, she asked, 'Is it true, Haslan, dear Haslan, that you leave me?'

'Alas!' he replied, 'can I continue here, since you can never be mine? and can I ever again look on your father, who is the author of my shame and misery?'

'You abandon me then, Haslan?'

'I will die in a desert, since I cannot live with her I love.'

'But what will become of me without you?'

'Tell me, Alkazia,' he said, solemnly, 'dare you follow me? We will be united, Alkazia, my best beloved: let our's be one love—one tomb.'

'But my father, Haslan!'

'He has threatened to sell you! can he be your father? Let us fly, my Alkazia; we may cross the Kuban by the path across the mountains: I am either implores the clemency of the barbarian, or throw ourselves on the generosity of our enemies, the Russians; they cannot be less merciful than your father!'

This conversation was suddenly interrupted by a loud noise—the palace gates flew open —lights were seen scattered in every direction over the garden—and Mouradin's voice was heard, furiously calling down a malediction from heaven on his daughter's head.

'Alkazia, your liberty is at stake!' cried Haslan.

'Yes,' replied the maiden; 'and, dearest Haslan, thy life also. I am thine, let us fly to the desert!'

With a vigorous arm, the young prince placed her on his horse, leaped lightly behind her, pressed her to his heart; and the noble beast, as if conscious of the treasure he sustained, bore swiftly from the palace the hope and happiness of his master. But, rapid as was their course, the darkness of the night bewildered them, and they wandered from the road. It was not till break of day that they reached the banks of the Kuban; and, at the same moment, they heard the tramp of horses, and the cry of their pursuers. In this extremity Haslan hesitated not a moment; he hastily concealed Alkazia amongst the tall reeds which bordered the stream, and flew to face the satellites of Mouradin. His courage and address [illegible] astounded them; he fought for his life and love: at every stroke an enemy fell, and the few who escaped his fury fled, terrified, to rejoin the detatchment they had preceded. Haslan then hastened to his Alkazia. 'Unbuckle my cord of maid, my best beloved,' said he; 'place it before you on the saddle, and may love be propitious to us!'

Instantly he plunged into the river, holding his courser by the bridle, and, contending with the rapid current, endeavoured to reach the opposite bank. The sun, which was now risen, had enabled the Cossacks of the Black Sea, who guarded the Kuban, to see the fight, and the event of this bold enterprise. Some of them sprung eagerly into the boats, and hastened to the relief of the lovers just at the moment when the whole guard of Mouradin arrived at the river side. 'Soldiers,' said Haslan, when they had taken him on board, 'you, who, even with us, have gained the reputation of bravery, receive the thanks of two beings who are indebted to you for more than life, and finish this benefit by presenting us to your chief.' They instantly conducted them to the Duc de Richelieu, who then commanded this division of the Russian army. Hardly had Haslan entered his presence, when, addressing him with all the energy and nobility of his character—'In the name of honour,' said he, 'do not deliver us into the hands of the assassins, our pursuers, grant your protection to the two unfortunate beings who are before you. I will adopt Russia for my country, and my blood shall be shed for her; but if you refuse my request, and think that your duty compels you to give me up, let it not be in chains—at least let me have vengeance ere I die!'

The duke immediately assured the noble fugitive that he was perfectly free; and, as his valour was well known, gave him the commission of an officer in the Russian army.

'Devote yourself to the emperor,' he said, 'who knows how to appreciate services, ability, and worth, such as your's, and delights in rewarding them.'

'May the God whom I adore protect the country I adopt, and which I swear to defend!' cried Haslan Gheray.

The duke instantly gave orders that every attention should be paid to the lovers, which their situation required, and felt the interest for them that they so well deserved.

An occasion soon offered itself to the young prince, to prove the sincerity of his protestations. The Russians received orders to attack Amassa: he presented himself to the Duc de Richelieu, completely armed, and solicited permission to guide the troops among the mountains, of which he was acquainted with the most intricate passes. After the conquest of Amassa, the Russian army pursued the Circassians over the Caucasian mountains. Here they met with such obstinate resistance, that they were often obliged to march in square battalions fourteen hours together.

Haslan was always at the head of these columns, and distinguished himself so as to merit the praises of the general, and the esteem of the whole army. His services were so highly appreciated by the emperor in this campaign, that he conferred on him the order of St. George, and presented him with an honorary medal.

In the month of December, 1810, another expedition was sent against the Fortress of Sudjuk Kale, in the country of the Abazes. Haslan again distinguished himself by such impetuous bravery, that the sight of him alone was sufficent to throw the enemy's ranks into confusion; the Circassians fled before him crying 'Haslan Gheray! Haslan Gheray!' After the reduction of this place, he received from his beloved Majesty a sabre, the hilt of which, enriched with diamonds, bore this inscription:—'the reward of valour.'

His first steps in Russia had been attended by glory—a hero's death was reserved for him. He had only enjoyed a few months of happiness with his Alkazia, when he was again called upon to give fresh proofs of his devotion to his adopted country. In November 1811, the Chassiques, one of the most warlike nations of Circassia, had made incursions on the frontier of Russia. Troops were sent to repulse them; Haslan commanded a detachment in the Valley d'Aphippe, near a small river of the same name, which rises in the Caucassian mountains. Hurried away by his usual intrepidity, he advanced before his soldiers, and received a shot which pierced his cuirass, and forced some of the links of his coat of mail into his body. The Sultan, Selim Gheray, his relation, flew to the assistance of his friend. 'Selim, Selim!' cried the dying Haslan, 'support me in your arms; do not allow the Circassians to see Haslan Gheray fall!' He was conveyed with the greatest difficulty to the tent of General Roudzewitz, who was the second in command under the Duc de Richelieu.—Haslan, convinced that his wound was mortal, commended his wife and child to the greatest favor to this general; 'Be a protector to my Alkazia,' said he, 'and I die content.' They were his last words: a few moments after the young hero expired, at the age of twenty-five years. All that was tried to alleviate the affliction of Alkazia was useless: her grief, as calm as it was deeply rooted, did not allow of tears; they never left her heart, but froze there. Immediately after the funeral, retiring to Bevastopol, in the Crimea, by her direction a mausoleum, sufficiently large for her to live in, was erected; and there, near the body of her lover, she waits till the angel of death summons her to rejoin him whom she will regret while she exists.

DISCOVERY SHIP.

On the 30th March the Hecla manœuvred from her former anchorage, a little below the Kings Yard, at Deptford, ahead of the Monmouth, 64, sheer hulk, and warped out more into the middle of the river. She had her ice-boats on board; one of which was on her quarter gallery, with her head upwards—every thing being prepared for starting the following morning at ten. Copper life buoys were hanging over her stern, in case of any person falling overboard, ready to be thrown out to them to catch hold of, and support themselves until boats can be sent to afford assistance. At six in the evening she hauled her colours down.

Next day morning (Sunday), there was no blue Peter hoisted, no fore-top-sail loosened, or gun fired—the usual signals for departure of ships of war, requiring every person belonging to such ships to repair forthwith on board. An old Union Jack at the fore-top-gallant mast-head, was the only indication of the intended movement.—Capt. Parry, with Mrs. P., went on board early in the morning, and precisely as the clock in the Dock Yard struck ten, the Hecla was under weigh and moved downwards, having been taken in tow by the Lightning steamer. The men on board the Lightning steamer were mustered upon deck, with their marines drawn up, and gave three hearty cheers, and making other demonstrations of joy, as a mark of success on her voyage out and home again. The crew of the Hecla returned three cheers. The other ships of war, store-ships, merchantmen, and steamers, as well as well the spectators in boats and on shore, were equally vociferous, and evinced, by loud and tumultuous acclamations, the deep interest they took in the prosperous issue of this singular and daring enterprize. The wind was favourable, and the tide contrary. The Lightning steamer moved on rapidly, though not near so quickly as her name would seem to import, proceeding at a rate of six or seven knots an hour. All eyes continued fixed on the two vessels until they had passed Greenwich and the point of Land below it, formed by the curvature of the river Thames. Long after they were out of sight, shouts of Londoners continued to arrive, anxious to witness the departure of the fat famed North Pole Expedition, and felt sorely disappointed at being too late. The Tunnel, with the eagerness to catch a glimpse of this nautical raree show, were determined to follow her to Northfleet, near Gravesend, where it is expected she would anchor by seven o'clock yesterday afternoon, and remain four or five days.

In his person, Captain Parry is tall and slender; his complexion is sallow; his eye, quick, keen, and penetrating; his forehead is, as phrenologists would say, well developed. His reflective organs of comparison and capacity are prominent, and still more so are the organs of space and locality, which form so great an elevation over the frontal bone, that the organ of individuality, or memory of facts, between and below the two former, appears depressed, like an indentation or furrow in the hardness of the brows. Great travellers, geographers, and astronomers, are remarkable for this formation of the skull, as any one may convince himself by looking at the portrait of Sir Isaac Newton, or that of Cook, or by inspecting the heads of migratory birds.

Mrs. Parry has very fine features, but grief and anxiety, on account of the multifarious dangers awaiting her husband, seem, for the present, to have nipped the roses on her cheek.

The burden of the Hecla is about 400 tons, and though a fine ship, she carries only 375 tun dead weight, and a complement of 64 men namely

Three Lieutenants; first Lieutenant, Mr. Ross; second ditto. Mr. Foster, who acts likewise as Astronomer and Surveying officer; third ditto. Mr. Crozier; Master, Mr. Crawford—a gentleman well acquainted with the Greenland navigation and trade, who has made four voyages in the Hecla before; Purser's Mate, Mr. Wood, lately returned from Africa; Surgeon, Mr. Beaver-y; Assistant Surgeon, Mr. M'Cormick; three Midshipmen. In all 20 officers and warrant officers; seven marines and the rest a fine crew of seamen.

The ship is about twelve years old—the expedition to Algiers, in 1816, having been her very first trip. She carries 19 months' provisions, 45 chaldrons of coals and her water in bulk, in or more properly speaking, in tanks, instead of water casks, which constitutes a great saving in the stowage; an object of great importance in a ship of her size.

The greatest attention has been paid to the victualling department of the ship. Preserved meat, beef, Pork, veal, and mutton, besides vegetables, are carried out in canisters, and the former into thousand pounds weight of pemmican, a concentrated essence of meat dried by a fire of oak and elm wood six pounds of the best beef being reduced to one pound, at the entrance of a Mr. Holmes, a gentleman and late resident at Hudson's Bay. Samples of this quintessence of animal food are shown on board having the appearance, and somewhat the flavor of German sausages, with this difference, however, that the expense of it is said to be 17s per pound. This is intended to be used in the boats after leaving the ship at Spitsbergen, as well as the biscuit powder

The strength of rum is rectified to 55 per cent. above proof.

The ship herself is secured by strong iron knees, both fore and aft. She is lined all over with a coating of cork, in layers of three inches thick, to protect the men against cold and damp. Iron flues, of a semi-cylindrical shape, convey heated air to all parts of the ship, from a stove below the lower deck, as well as from the caboose between decks, subject to the regulation of a thermometer. From 60 to 70 dead lights, in various parts of the deck, convey light to not only all the officers' and warrant officers' cabins, but likewise to the crew; they are so arranged that they may be taken out, and ventilators screwed in their places to air the ship. The boards of the upper deck are not laid longitudinally, as usual, but diagonally, for the sake of the greater strength. A patent capstan, by Phillips, is a purpendicular position, with a three inch purplying wheels, is placed betwixt the main and mizen mast, besides a horizontal one aft of the forecastle, the former being of a new construction. In comforts for the crew, the Hecla far exceeds any ship of her size, the sleeping-places, tables, &c. being arranged with great judiciousness. Every two men have a large box like an arm-chest assigned to them, duly numbered, which serves for a seat. The tables are covered with green baize. Light, airiness, elegance, and salubrity, characterise every part between decks. Two stanchels, four pumps, three compasses, one of them on an elevated stand, and five boats, are upon deck, and three ice-boats have arrived from Woolwich, but are for the present deposited in the King's Yard; they were especially built with wheels and sledges, and transported by means of their own wheels, from Woolwich Dockyard to Deptford. Each boat is provided with a mast, sail, and rudder in the centre, while the third, under the fore part, similar to that of a Bath chair, serves as a rudder, or conductor. Round the mainmast is an assemblage of boarding pikes, to keep the beasts off, or any such instrusive visitors.

Captain-Parry's great cabin contains a library of a considerable number of miscellaneous works; and besides the usual conveniences, a large assortment of clothing, furs, and other equipments, calculated for the climate he purposes to revisit. For jackets, coats, or rather tunics, of Esquimaux manufacture, you may purchase at the value of seven or eight shillings each; some lined with seals skins, others with wolf racoony or bear skins; some for wear in the day time, others to sleep in at night. All eyes continued fixed on the two vessels until they had passed Greenwich and the point of Land below it, formed by the curvature of the river Thames. Previous to her leaving the place, a young man who had to transact some business, or rather inquiries, entered the place, and hearing that the lady had made application for a dead body in the workhouse, his mind was instantly struck with suspicion, as he indentified her as the person whom he had seen a short time before conversing at the corner of Bridge-street, Long-acre, with as notorious a resurrection man as any in London; and he intimated his suspicions to the parish officers, who determined upon being on the aerit. Bartlett, the beadle, and the young man in question, made the discovery, repaired to No. 24, Blackfriars-road, and, on making inquiry, they found that it was kept by an honest blacksmith, who knew nothing at all of Mr. Williams, or the death of any of his relations. They, however, traced the applicant to a brothel in Somers-street, Kent-road, and ascertained that she was a complete adept in such practices, and was connected with a gang of resurrection men, and that her husband had been transported. This information some hesitation, but on being sufficiently strong to warrant the detention of the woman, and she is now in St. Giles's workhouse, until the matter be thoroughly investigated, as it is anticipated that she can be traced so as to link her with an organized gang of "body snatchers," who have indulged in similar practices with impunity, through the medium of her assistance.—In the course of yesterday several well-known resurrection-men were observed waiting about the neighbourhood, no doubt waiting to ascertain the result of their fair colleague's application, and on being spoken to upon the subject by one of the beadles, they attacked him with the most violent abuse.

Summary.

The estimated consumption of wheat in the kingdom, yearly, is about 12,000,000 quarters. The importations of Foreign Corn in the last year, amount to about 582,000 quarters of Wheat, and about 1,666,000 quarters of other descriptions of Corn. Thus, it would appear, that when the importations have been considerably beyond the average of many years past, they have not exceeded one twenty-second part of the total quantity consumed.

BRITISH SHIPPING.——A final return has been given by the Board of Trade to the applications of the ship owners, &c. offer, in their memorials, several plans by which the shipping interests, in their opinion, might be relieved.—Among the suggestions, it is understood, where the reduction of the duty on timber from British North America, and a provision, that all supplies for his Majesty's dock yards should be brought by British ships; a reduction on sea policies, stamps, &c. The answer from the Board is quite clear and decisive; the suggestions are peremptorily rejected.

It appears, by official returns, that the quantity of foreign Wheat now in bond in the warehouses of Great Britain and ireland, amounts to 628,654 qrs. 3 bushels; and of wheatmeal and flour, to 61,288 Cwt.

From Batavia which have been just laid before Parliament, an immense increase of the total quantity of Spirits distilled in Great-Britain and Ireland appears to have taken place within the last three years. The quantity distilled in 1824 was, in round numbers, fifteen millions, and in 1826, twenty millions of gallons. Of this increase, about half a million belongs to England, about two millions to Ireland, and two and a half to Scotland.

The number of officers in the Royal Navy, on the 1st of January 1827, was as follows:—Admirals of the Fleet, 2; employed, 2: Admirals, 68, six of them employed: Rear Admirals, 67, four employed; Captains, 808, 73 employed; Commanders, 847, 75 employed; Lieutenants 3,712, 682 of whom were employed.

Emigration.....Mr. Barker brought up on the 5th. instant the Report of the Select Committee appointed to inquire into the subject of Emigration, which was ordered to be printed.

Forty seven of the principal manufacturers in Bolton have signed a petition, praying to be heard at the bar of the House of Commons, on a plan for relieving the poor.

BRITISH SHIPPING FOR THE YEAR 1826.

The returns ordered by the House of Commons show that the number of ships built and registered in the British empire and plantations for the years ending the 5th January, for the last six years, were, for Years.	Ships.	Tons.

1821	872	74,847
1822	780	67,144
1823	1,017	86,028
1824	1179	149,741
1825	1539	204,024
1826	1522	179,23

Of these, for the last year, 601 were above 100 tons, and their total tonnage was 134,488 and a similar proportion as to the vessels above and below 100 tons prevails for the other years. It appears also, that 178 vessels of above 300 tons, and measuring 49,040 tons, and 205 below 100 tons, and measuring 9,446 tons, were built in the British plantations.

The number of steam vessels in the United Kingdom was last year 72, measuring 8,638 tons, or about three times the number and tonnage built in any preceding year. The total number built since the year 1814, inclusive, is 228, measuring 28,106 tons.

The total number of British ships that entered the ports of Great Britain, for the year 1826, was 11,623, measuring 1,796,050 tons, navigated by 105,109 men; and the number of foreign ships that entered during the same period was 5,439, measuring 643,922 tons, and navigated by 37,137 men.

From the London Gazette.

Whitehall, April 17.—The King has been pleased to direct letters patent, to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, constituting and appointing his Royal Highness William Henry Duke of Clarence, Admiral of His Majesty's Fleet, to be High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Dominions, Islands and Territories, thereunto belonging.

It is said that the country branches of the Bank of England are beginning to make profitable returns to the parent establishment, and that the Directors consequently meditate an extension of the system to Norwich, and Bristol.

FROM CALCUTTA.

An Earthquake took place at Calcutta, on the 19th of January, but it is not stated that any damage was done.

It has been proposed to establish a new paper at Malacca, in the Chinese language, in which the latest news from China will be inserted.

PERSIA.

"We understand, says the editor of the Bombay Gazette, by a letter from the Gulf of a recent date, that a Persian Chief named Moostopha Khan, brother-in-law to the King of Persia, at the head of six thousand troops was marching towards Trifsees (in Ganjah) and, meeting an encampment by the way, approached it, in order to ascertain its strength and pillage it, if deserted: no sooner had he entered it, however, than suddenly a troop of Russians sallied forth from different directions and put to the sword the whole of the army, with the exception of the leader and a few followers who narrowly escaped and took refuge at the head quarters of Abbas Meerza, at which the same time was engaged in battle with the inhabitants of Shoosh, (a city in Arminir.) The Russian troops closely pursuing the enemy, met the grand army of Abbas Meerza, and fought them with great slaughter, in such a manner that Abbas Meerza was obliged to ask an immediate succor of the troops that were stationed at Ganjah, who immediately came to the assistance of the Prince Royal. The Persians at last giving way to the conqueror, dispersed, and Abbas Meerza, after leaving the enemy sole master of his Garrison and twenty pieces of cannon, made his escape. The Russians finding the city of Ganjah wholly deserted, entered it without the least bloodshed."

Later, accounts from Bombay, given in the India Gazette, offer the following confirmation of this account:—

"A despatch from our resident came in this morning, announcing the total defeat of the grand Persian army by the Russian Gens. Paskewitch, with a force of 10,000 men, and that he had employed his artillery alone, making his adversaries scamper off with great loss and slaughter. He is expected soon to be at Tobriz, and General Yermaloff has got as far as Tehran. No doubt some difficulty on the part the Russians would overrun Persia: the consequences it is not easy to foretell, but the correctness of the above may be depended upon."

St. Helena.—From the St. Helena Calender for which we are indebted to General Walker, the Governor of that Island, we gather some facts concerning this "half way house" of the ocean, which are new to us, and probably so to many of our readers. The Island contains six schools, a post office, a printing office, and eleven societies and institutions, for humane and other purposes, exclusive of the civil and military establishments. The schools are under the superintendance of an officer appointed by the "Hon. Company." The Post Office is an important department, being the great centre of transit for letters to and from the East Indies, the Cape of Good Hope, the Pacific Ocean, and Great Britain. Among the societies are the St. Helena Missionary Society—the Savings Bank—the Benefit Society—the St. H. Library, &c. &c. The Island was discovered by the Portuguese, and named after St. Helena, the mother of Constantine the Great, in 1502, but they abadoned it to the Dutch who colonized it in 1645, and in turn deserted it when the English East India Company took possession of it in 1651.

From the list of arrivals and departures of vessels for 1826, there appears to have been of English men of war, 2: Indiamen, 37: Transports, 3; English merchant ships, 125; Whalers, 10: Dutch men of war 4; do. Merchant ships, 16; Americans, 19; French men of war, 1; do. Merchant ships 13: Portuguese 3; Danish, 1; Russian men of war, 1; Norwegian, 1; total 236. The highest eminence of St. Helena is Diana's Peak; 2697 feet above the level of the sea.—Superficies of the Island, 30 miles 10,000, of which 2237 are freehold, and the remainder on the lease from the East India Company.

When one contemplates this solitary rock nearly equidistant from the two hemispheres—the place of refreshment and refitting of vessels of sensible receiving tidings from long separated friends—a sort of Caravansera for the nations passing from the remotest quarters of the globe—the poetry of feeling arises unbidden and invests it with a character of sublime importance. It was from this point of interest of its having been the prison and the grave of Bonaparte.—New York paper May 16.

Frontiers of Catalonia, April 6.—A general movement was about to take place in a part of Catalonia; its execution was even begun. Public opinion had been abundantly manifested against the Infant, who abuses the name of Heir Presumtive of the Crown of Spain. It appears that every town of Lampourdan was to furnish a certain number of men, who were to form a junction with the detachments that came down from the highlands. At Rippol the Royalist volunteers conducted themselves well. They opposed the movement of the people, but as they were the minority they were disarmed. The assembla of armed men which set out from Rippol arrived too late, before Cardona, and was beaten by the insurgens, which had come from another quarter, not being sufficiently strong, missed their aim at this place, which being fortified, would have been an important rallying point for them. They were vigorously driven back by a great number of the inhabitants and royalist volunteers. This check re-established tranquility at Manreza and Solzona. There can be no doubt that this rising had extensive ramifications throughout Spain. Many of these assemblages, which may at present be regarded as merely put down, have levied contributions on the villages.

Scotland,

It is calculated that there are at present about 4000 uninhabited houses in Glasgow and the neighbourhood.

Emigration is rapidly proceeding from this district. Four vessels about to sail from the Clyde for British America and the United States are already supplied with passengers. Several of the persons about to abandon their native home have long been in Glasgow, and were considered the most efficient in their respective trades.

We have often had occasion to notice the perfection to which steam navigation has been brought on the River Clyde, but have not before known any performance equal to the Maid of Islay No. 1, she having, without the assistance of sails, made the passage from Greenock to Glasgow, a distance by water of 25 miles, in one hour and 52 minutes, including four stoppages by the way to land passengers; and on Wednesday she came from East Tarbaloff, with a force of 10,000 men, and that she had employed his artillery alone, making his adversaries scamper off with great loss and slaughter. He is expected soon to be at Tobriz, and General Yermaloff has got as far as Tehran. No doubt some difficulty on the part the Russians would overrun Persia: the consequences it is not easy to foretell, but the correctness of the above may be depended upon."

Colonial.

There has never been a period since the close of the last American war in which our harbour was so full of shipping. During the last ten days we have had five or six arrivals daily—from England, the West Indies and America—and in going upon any of our central wharves there now meets the eye on either direction a thick grove of masts.

In one week last month, 41 vessels arrived at St. Johns, N. B. from the ice, bringing sixty nine thousand eight hundred and fourteen seals. Since that time many others have returned with equally good fortune. One schooner left the port on a certain day, fell in with the ice on the next, and on the evening of the 3d had taken upwards of 800 seals. On the 6th day she was completely filled and returned with more than 3,000. Another in about the same time, was still more successful, having brought in 3,500.

We have heard that Lieut. M'Laughlan, of Fredericton, has been appointed Agent under Col. Cockburn, for the settlement of Emigrants in this Province.—New Brunswick Courier.

Domestic.

"The works on the Ottawa have commenced this spring with more spirit and on an earlier period, than in any preceding year."

Last Tuesday evening, about seven o'clock, Mr. Molson's new steamboat was launched from the ship-yard of the Canada Ship Company, and glided majestically into her destined element, amid the acclamations of the comparatively few spectators whom the wetness of the weather permitted to be present; shortly after which she was towed by the steam-boat Swiftsure to the mouth of the Canal, where she now lies to take her engine aboard. Her length of keel is 165 feet, breadth 24, depth of hold 8, present draught of water 5, expected draught, when loaded, 7; and her engine, (partly composed of the materials of the Lady Sherbrook's, and the remainder supplied by Mr. Ward,) is of 120 horse power.

One day last week a serious accident happened in the neighbourhood of this city. Mr. Raby from Quebec, was out shooting near the mountain. He had fired off his piece and was putting another charge in it, when some fire remaining in the barrel ignited the powder which communicating with that in the horn, caused it also to explode, severely burning Mr. B's. face. He is still confined to the house from the effects of the explosion.—Montreal Herald.

It is with great regret we mention the death of Mr. Walker, Advocate, late of Montreal, who died this morning of the injuries he received at the fire.—Quebec Gazette.

MASONIC FUNERAL.

On Friday last the 26th inst. the mortal remains of Mr. John Walker, a member of Lodge No. 77, and Freemason in Quebec, were conveyed to their last resting place, and deposited in a vault belonging to the Right Worshipful Claude Denechaud, Esq. Provincial Grand Master for the district of Quebec and Three Rivers, in that part of the new English burying ground allotted for private families. On this occasion, actuated by feelings of the most affectionate regard for the memory of a worthy and respected Brother, (who had generously fallen a sacrifice in the cause of humanity whilst attempting to save the property of his friends,) and to arrest the progress of the fire which broke out with such alarming fury in this City on the 19th inst.) not only all the Lodges in Quebec, including the Provincial Grand Lodge but a great number of old and highly respected transient Brethren, eager to testify their regard on this solemn occasion, proceeded to the Albion Hotel, where being clothed in deep mourning and the Lodges duly formed, the procession, preceded by the band of the 79th Cameron or Highlanders, moved to Holgate's Hotel, where the body laid; from whence it proceeded to the English Cathedral, the service there being concluded, the procession then moved on to the English burying ground, St. John's suburbs. The body being deposited in the vault, and the burial service concluded, the usual Masonick ceremonies were performed by the Worshipful Master of Lodge No. 77, and the procession returned in the same regular and uniform manner to the Albion Hotel. An immense concourse of spectators were assembled on the above solemn occasion, attracted not less by the awful manner in which the deceased had met his death, than by the remembrance of his many excellent and entertaining qualities. The Lord Bishop, and his Chaplain, the Judges, Members of the Bar, and the principal inhabitants of Quebec followed the body as mourners.—Quebec Mercury.

A young man, by the name of Marteau was accidentally shot yesterday, near the Tannery, by one of his companions in a shooting excursion. The unfortunate youth after receiving the contents of the gun in his side almost immediately expired.—Montreal Gaz.

A good deal of rain fell on Tuesday night, and the country has assumed some of its vivid green.—The leaves are nearly out, and several kinds of the wild fruit trees are in blossom. Damp and cold easterly winds have blown for about six weeks almost without a day's intermission, and have kept back vegetation. We have had, however, one or two pretty warm days.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, June 9, 1827.

The papers by the last mail, bring us no further intelligence from Europe.

After a long period of service in Canada, Lt. Colonel McGrigor, left York during the last week for Scotland. It is probable that Colonel McGrigor will not again visit this Province, and we feel assured that, we are expressing the sentiments of the inhabitants of the several Towns in which he was stationed with his Regiment, when we say that he carries with him to his native country, their good wishes, and that his name will always be remembered by them, with feelings of kindness and respect.

Our remarks last week, on commencing a second volume, have stirred up the wrath of the Pseudo Patriot, whom we alluded to, as considering the rights of a Freeman, to consist in the privilege of despatching those around him, with language, most to be offensive. The cause of all this wrath, (which vents itself as usual, in railing, and calling hard names), is, that we are not ashamed to avow, that, in conducting our Journal, we are actuated by loyal principles, and a desire to strengthen the bonds of attachment to the Mother Country. This being the very opposite of that conduct, which is pursued by this Freeman, he works himself into a phrensy, and says, that we deserve no credit for our profession. The assertion is easily made; and when passion usurps the place of judgment, men are apt to make hasty assertions—which few will be inclined to believe.

It was our intention to have abstained from any further remarks respecting the Naturalization Bill; but as we are accused of not saying a word of the sales of property which have been made, in consequence of that odious Bill, as its calumniators call it, we will just state that, owing to the misrepresentations of this Freeman, and some others of his stamp, in the country, sales have been induced, and we believe at a sacrifice, to part with their Farms, but who now regret their inconsiderate haste, and are convinced that, they have been led astray by designing men In many instances where such sales have taken place, offers have been made for the repurchase of the properties, and there can be little doubt, that the period is not very distant, when imprecations will be heaped on the heads of the authors of those misrepresentations, which have induced some persons, inconsiderately, to make conveyances of their properties, at under value. Can it be thought surprising that this should be the case, when it is remembered what unceasing pains were taken, to impose upon the credulity of the people, by telling them that the Bill was intended to strip them of their very Farms? than which nothing could be more utterly false. We would ask whether any of the members of the celebrated York Committee, ever entered with a foot of their lands at less than its real worth—or whether indeed, they have been so much alarmed by the odious Bill, as to think of disposing of any part of their ample possessions? Can the propagators of such calumnies hope to escape the indignation of the people, when the truth comes to be known? And known it will be, to the utter confusion of those who have used the most unjustifiable means, to prejudice the minds of the people against a measure, intended solely for their security.

Errors and misrepresentations in Public Journals corrected.—The Colonial Advocate complains, that we come out full cry, as he calls it, against any "little trifling typographical error," of which he may be guilty. This is an awful misrepresentation The Advocate has amused himself by hunting out some imperfection of the kind in our paper.—When dealing with him, we look to what is of more consequence. We like a fair proof, but we like truth better, and when we find the Advocate departing from it, we put him right again. This we shall continue to do; and if the Advocate continues to pursue his old path, there is every prospect that the occasions will be frequent.

Bank of Upper Canada.—The affairs of this Institution appear to be in the most flourishing condition.—From a notice in our paper it will be seen that a half yearly dividend of Four per Cent is declared, and further, that a Bonus of Six per Cent is payable to the Stockholders. In the face of such facts as these, it is absurd enough, to hear the Editor of the Colonial Advocate, say that, any part of the system pursued by such an Institution "cannot be too severely reprobated," and when in his own paper, a monied man offers a "liberal premium," for shares in the Stock of the Bank.—The Advocate is constantly running his head against the wall.

We copy the following important intelligence from the Statesman:—

The Arctic Land Expedition.—The editor of the Detroit Gazette has received a letter from Fort de St. Marie, dated April 29th, informing him that despatches had been received there from the expedition under the direction of Captain Franklin. "When the bearer left Fort Franklin, in October, the members of the party were in fine health, and greatly exhilirated by the success with which their enterprise had been crowned during the preceding summer. They have established the fact of the continuity of water communication from the mouth of the Coppermine to M'Kenzie river, and from thence have pushed their examinations so far as one hundred and forty-nine degrees and thirty minutes of west longitude. At this point, they were compelled by the density of the fog, to relinquish the design of proceeding to the Pacific Ocean by Icy Cape. The botanist, during the absence of the exploring party from the Fort, has been engaged in investigating the vegetable productions of the Tashatchewin country.

It is further stated that the party will return hither in July next.

This intelligence is extremely important, and yet mortifying. Having reached to long 150 W. Capt. F. must have been almost certain of success, being so near to Icy Cape; from which latter point he could with ease have effected his escape into the South Sea, and joined the Blossom.—Albion.

On the 12th April, a conversation occurred in the House of Commons on the subject of emigration to Canada. Mr. Labouchere objected to the sending out of the country its skill and talent, adding, that whatever may be the advantage to Canada, it would only accelerate its separation from the Mother Country. Mr. Horton begged the House to suspend its opinion on the emigration to Canada, until the evidence was before it. He deprecated any thing which went to show that emigration was carried on with any other view than the welfare of the people most interested. Mr. Leveszter then recommended the cultivation of the waste lands in the three Kingdoms, in preference to emigration to Canada; and advised that portions of these lands should be assigned to persons desirous of emigrating, and be exempt from rent and tax for a certain number of years. Mr. Horton replied that persons disposed to emigrate would not accept the alternative of the waste lands in Great Britain, offered them by the Hon. Member. Most of them had friends and relations in Canada, who induced them to go to that country, by representing in letters, their prospects and present condition. The conversation dropped on the petition being received, which was from the Secretary of the Emigration Society.—Quebec Gazette.

From the Canadian Courant.

West Indies Trade.—The advantages which it was expected this country would reap from the recent changes in the system of commercial intercourse between the British Colonies and the United States, we are happy to say has every appearance of being completely realized; and we believe it to be made a free port of entry, we may congratulate ourselves on being thus enabled more fully to enjoy the advantages which the wise measures of the mother government have thrown in our way. The west Indies are naturally dependent on the United States and the British American Colonies for the articles of Flour and salted provisions; and truly in the present infant state of the Canadas, but little of their own growth can be exported; but the United States require a market for their surplus of those commodities, and 'tis in the West Indies they will seek it—thus the consumption by the one country of the surplus of the other is equally required by both, and is equally advantages to both in the end. The prohibition of a direct intercourse between the United S. and the West Indies, and the permission given to the produce of the former to enter, or pass through the Canadas on such favourable terms, will of course draw it through these provinces, and will give an impetus to commerce here which we have not before witnessed. The following paragraph copied from a paper published in Rochester, State of New York, will tend to shew that our expectations have not been too sanguine:—

"It will be seen by letters in this paper, that facilities for sending our produce to the West Indies, through Canada, have been provided. This is vastly important to our section of the country, and arrangements are making by our millers to give that direction to large quantities of flour."

PUBLIC MEETING AT PORT HOPE.

At a Meeting held on Saturday the 2d June at the Mansion House Hotel, in the Village of Port Hope, pursuant to Public Notice, for the purpose of taking into consideration the necessity and practicability of constructing a Harbour and building a Wharf at Port Hope, and to consider of the best means of carrying the same into effect—John T. Williams, Esq. was called to the Chair, and Mr. Erasmus Fowke appointed Secretary.

The Chairman having briefly stated the object of the Meeting, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

1st. That the absolute necessity of a Wharf and Harbour, having been experienced for many years, and the greatly increased population of the County of Durham having rendered that necessity still more imperative, it is the opinion of this Meeting that an application should be forthwith made to the Legislature for the purpose of carrying that desirable object into effect—(Proposed by John D. Smith, Esq. and seconded by John Brown, Esq.)

2d. That a Notification, according to Law, be immediately forwarded for insertion in the U. C. Gazette, stating, that an application to the Legislature will be made at the next ensuing Session of Parliament, for the privilege of constructing the said work as a County measure—(Moved by C. Fothergill, and seconded by David Smart, Esquires.)

3d. That in furtherance of this object, and this alone, and to raise an additional fund in aid of the work, an application should also be made to the Legislature, at the expiration of the present Assessment Law, for the purpose of Assessing all Town Lots in Port Hope, according to the rate now levied in the Town of Brockville—(Moved by John T. Williams, and seconded by John D. Smith, Esquires.)

4th. That to make up the requisite sum for the completion of the work, an additional assessment be levied throughout the County of Durham, to be continued until the principal and interest of the money borrowed be fully liquidated, and no longer—(Moved by John Brown, and seconded by J. Hutchinson, Esq.)

5th. That C. Fothergill, J. T. Williams, and D. Smart, Esquires, be a Committee to draft a Petition to the Legislature, and to obtain signatures thereto—(Moved by Mr. D. Bedford, and seconded by Mr. E. Wilson.)

6th. That as it is possible the object of this Meeting may not be carried through the Legislature as a Private Bill, and that it may be possible to obtain it as a Public Measure, the introducer of the Bill in the House of Assembly be instructed to accept it as such, rather than lose it altogether—(Moved by Mr. James Robertson, and seconded by Mr. William Brogden.)

7th. That Charles Fothergill, Esq. our present Representative, be instructed to introduce and advocate the measure in the House of Assembly—(Proposed by Mr. Horace Grant, and seconded by Mr. Calvin Hamlin.)

8th. That the thanks of this Meeting be given to John T. Williams, for his able conduct in the Chair—(Moved by Mr. Job Fowke, and seconded by John Hutchinson, Esq.)

(Communicated.)

A Supplement to the Albion of the 5th instant is just received, containing London dates to 30th April, by the Packet Ship Canada, from which we copy the following:

NEW MINISTRY.

From the London Courier, April 28.

We are, at length, enabled to lay before our readers an official list of the Ministerial arrangements, which have been so long an object of anxious expectation on the part of the public.

LIST OF THE ADMINISTRATION.

THE CABINET.

PEERS.

Lord Chancellor,	Lord Lyndhurst,
Lord President,	Earl of Harrowby,
Lord Privy Seal,	Duke of Portland.
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster,	Lord Bexley.
Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs,	Viscount Dudley.
Secretary of State for the Colonies,	Viscount Goderich, (late Mr. Robinson.)

COMMONERS.

Secretary of State in the Home Department,	Rt Hon W. Sturges Bourne
President of the Board of Trade,	Right Hon. W. Huskisson.
President of the Board of Control,	Right Hon. C. W. Wynn.
Secretary at War,	Viscount Palmerston.
First Lord of the Treasury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer,	Right Hon. G. Canning.

NOT IN THE CABINET.

Lord High Admiral,	His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence.
Master General of the Ordnance,	Marquis of Anglesey.
Lord Chamberlain of the Household,	Duke of Devonshire.
Master of the Horse,	Duke of Leeds.
Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland,	Hon. W. Lambe.

LAW APPOINTMENTS.

Master of the Rolls,	Sir John Leach.
Vice-Chancellor,	Mr. Hart.
Attorney-General,	Mr. Scarlett.
Solicitor-General,	Sir N. Tindal.

It will be seen, by comparing the above with the lists which were given in several of the morning papers, that none of them were entirely correct. It will be seen, also, that the offices of Judge Advocate General, Chief Commissioner of Woods and Forests, and Master of the Mint, which, in the lists referred to, are given to Sir J. Mackintosh, Mr. Calcraft, and Mr. Tierney, together with several other comparatively subordinate appointments, remain yet to be filled up.

The name of the Marquis of Lansdowne does not appear in the above list; but we have the satisfaction of being able to state, that the Noble Marquis has consented to give the support of himself and that of his political friends to the Government of Mr. Canning, though, for the present, at least, he declines taking office. The acceptance, indeed, of the post of Lord Chamberlain by his Grace the Duke of Devonshire is the best proof of the intended concurrence of the Noble Marquis, and that of those moderate friends, (to whom we yesterday alluded) who usually act with him.

In laying before our readers the name of the distinguished individuals who will henceforth constitute His Majesty's Government, we cannot omit the opportunity of expressing our great satisfaction at the appointment of the Hon. W. Lambe, to the office of Chief Secretary for Ireland. The manly, and every way high and estimable qualities which distinguish that gentleman, must render his accession to any Government a topic for congratulation.

His Majesty will hold a Council on Monday at two o'clock to receive these Noblemen and Gentlemen, when the Ministers who have retired will deliver to the King the Seals of their respective Offices, who will immediately transfer them to the hands of their several successors. Some Members of the new Cabinet will afterwards be sworn in of His Majesty's Privy Council, and take their seats accordingly.

We feel assured that the arrangements, now finally made, will give general satisfaction. It combines those qualities which are well calculated to inspire public confidence; and abstaining, as we are anxious to do, from any one expression that may revive the recollection of what has passed, we feel warranted in anticipating that the new Cabinet will possess an energy and efficiency capable of promoting the best interests of the Empire.

In the early part of the morning Consols were done at 83 1-4 buyers; they then fell to 82 7-8, afterwards recovered a little, but finally closed at 82 7 8 to 83.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

For the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Governor through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improvethe same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

Poetry.

GLOOM is upon thy lonely heart,
O silent House! once fill'd with mirth.
Sorrow is in the breezy sound
Of thy tall poplars whispering round.

The shadow of departed hours
Hangs dim upon thine early flowers;
Even in thy sunshine seems to broad
Something more deep than solitude.

Fair art thou, fair to stranger's gaze,
My own sweet Home of other days!
My children's birth-place!—yet for me
It is too much to look on thee!

Too much! for all about thee spread
I feel the memory of the dead,
And almost linger for the feet
That never more my path shall greet.

The looks, the smiles,—all vanish'd now,
Follow me where thy roses blow;
The echoes of kind household words
Are with me midst thy singing-birds.

Till my heart dies, it dies away
In yearnings for what might not stay;
For love which ne'er deceived my trust,
Ere all which went with "dust to dust!"

What now is left me, but to raise
From thee, lorn spot! my spirit's gaze,
To lift through tears my streaming eye
Up to my Father's House on high?

Oh! many are the mansions there,"
But not in one hath grief a share!
No sighing shades from things gone by
May enter o'erweep th' unchanging sky.

And they are there, whose longloved mien,
In earthly home may ne'er be seen;
Whose place, where they smiling state,
Are left unto us desolate.

We miss them when the board is spread,
We miss them when the prayer is said;
Upon our dreams their dying eyes
In still and mournful Gadeses rise,

But they are where these longings vain
Trouble no more the heart and brain;
The sadness of this aching love
Dims not our Father's House above.

Ye are at rest, and I in tears,!
Ye dwellers of immortal spheres!
Under the poplar boughs I stand,
And mourn the broken household band.

But by your life of lowly faith,
And by your joyful hope in death,
Guide me, till on some brighter shore,
The sever'd wreath is bound once more.

Holy ye were, and good, and true!
No change can cloud my thoughts of you.
Guide me like you to live and die,
And reach my Father's House on high!

*"In my Father's house are many mansions."—St. John's chap xiv.

Miscellaneous.

DISAPPOINTED MEN.

Vandyke Sonne was the eldest hope of a respectable family. His education had been liberal, though far from costly. A sense of dependence of his own exertions had, from the first beaming of reason, been present to him; and an ambition to distinguish himself among men was his first rational desire. His appearance, when but a boy, bespoke the feelings which possessed him; his fame, like that of the Sybil, owned the presence of the divinity —the mortal was shaken by the immortal. The deep flushings which, on the slightest excitement, overspread his face, with the trembling of his lip and eyelid, arose from the fire and the music of the soul within. Even men of the bluntest perceptions would, in a manner, be confounded at his demeanour. The clowns of the neighbourhood have stared and gaped to hear him link together a chain of fancies; like savages in the desert, at the musical snuff-box of the voyager, they have been astounded that so small a frame could yield sounds so mysterious and exquisite. We know there are many sceptical of physiognomical expression—they think that men, like candles, are all taken from the same vat of clay, and are incapable, by outward means, of displaying in the least their internal resources. To such men, the god-like head of the Great Poet presents nothing more than chin, lips, nose, cheeks and forehead—and to such the front of a baboon exhibits the like adornments. To such we will not attempt to describe our second luckless hero; but to those who feel assured they have seen streaming through the eyes, from the heart and brain, the immortal light of mind—who have seen thought pluck at the lip, and sweep over the brow like the wind over water—who, startled at such development of soul, have almost believed it to rustle in the hair, and to make a halo round the head of the elect: to such we shall not appear a visionary, when we affirm that Vandyke Sonne, in his early days, exercited such imaginings in the bosom of the acute observer. His figure was small, and even fragile: his face pale and rather elongated; his eyes somewhat deeply seated; his eyebrows slightly overhanging; and which would have imparted a degree of austerity to his countenance, had it not been for the exquisite beneficence of his mouth, and the delicate oval of his chin. The general expression of his face was that of intense inquiry and perpetual self-communing. His look was of one who would watch nature as a spider, in her mystic web, follow her through the darkest outlets, trace affinities in the slenderest ties, and almost bring himself into an unconsciousness of his mortality in the keen, constant, and soul-absorbing study of creation. It was these feelings which grew up with him, which, like parasitical plants, clung around him, destroying the free current of the sap of life—and whilst they were green, and nearly bursting into flower, the prop around which they sprang was all unheeded by him. With the strong habit of thought, Vandyke Sonne had, at intervals, the glee, the ringing sprightliness of a child. When Hope—pity that he was one of her most plucked and ill-used suitors—or Humour directed, he could smile with the cheerfulness and laugh with the loudest. He could throw a way the mantle of philosophy, and exhibit the motley jerkin of the fool—shut up the volume, and shake the rattle—put aside the thoughts of laurel-leaves at the academy, for the hissing chesnuts at a winter fire.

Perhaps, ere this, our readers should have been advised that Vandyke Sonne had devoted himself to that art towards which the bosoms of Raphael and Corregio had burned. His first wish of reason was to become a painter. Almost every subsequent desire of his life was that of excellence in that art which had captivated his infant mind—which had weaned him from every other hope and aim. His first striking development of this preference was occasioned by the following circumstance. A distant and wealthy relation of Mr. Sonne's, by name Lord Noword, the eldest son of a little Vandyke, invited him to spend a season at his house. It was during his stay that the boy, one evening, retiring alone to bed, observed, on the way to his chamber, a door, till then unnoticed by him, without beholding, he opened it, and entered a large and apparently deserted room. He was about to return, when an object in the corner of the apartment made his young heart beat again, and held him, for a time, immovable. It was a painting by Salvator—an armed bandit, bearing forward against an angle of a precipice, in the act of awaiting his victim. After the intensity of the boy's surprise had, in some manner, abated, he approached nearer the cause of his astonishment and admiration; and, placing down the light, sat himself upon the floor, directly under the picture, and with his head uprised, his eyes searchingly fixed, his lips unclosed, and his little hands and feet in such perfect quiescence, that if the spirit of Salvator could, for a moment, have flitumed the pictured core of the robber, it would have seen more perfect, the unfeigned and intense veneration in the lineaments of a child, than it ever could witness in adult beholders. Poor child! he was then gazing on the basilisk which destroyed him—he was then inhaling an atmosphere which was to blight and mildew every blossom of existence.

In the morning the greatest consternation reigned throughout the house: Vandyke's bed had never been touched—none of the servants had seen the child leave the house, and a messenger was about to be despatched to the boy's friends, when, whilst two or three of the domesties were once more searching through the rooms, a spaniel that had accompanied them sprang playfully away, and in a minute returned, and again gamboling forward, led the servants to the object of their search, who had fallen asleep, even where he had at first placed himself. There hung the picture, and there lay the boy—at once presenting the altar and the worshipper of art.

From this moment the course of Vandyke was taken; and when other children his age were busied in infant sports, our little hero was seated on a bench, sketching "the milky mother of the herd;" or, perched like a young sparrow-hawk on a cliff, sending forth his spirit to pounce at "misty mountain tops" and sweeping clouds. Thus placed, the young enthusiast would feel as if all creation were sitting to him, and the vast thought would engender within him glorious dreams of professional supremacy—the applause of the great and high-minded, the homage of society. The thought of dying in obscurity, of passing away with the nameless hundreds that are every day consigned to dust was, even in infancy, a painful reflection to our hero, and time seemed to add a pang to the fear of so ignoble a fate. He would say, "I never to autumn pass beneath a tree, and tread upon its withered foliage, but as I hear the crushing of the leaves, I think of the foot of Time pounding the bones and the marrow of men into dust, and never a word written in the book of human deeds, to say that such once breathed."

The time arrived when Vandyke Sonne was compelled to seek the metropolis. Death had deprived him of his parents, and his only inheritance was that which he held from nature —high feelings, and an uncorrupted heart. The love of his profession, and the brilliant fame he had promised himself in the exercise of his powers, bore him up against the shock with which providence had visited him. He was, indeed, full of hope; and his appearance bespoke a man conscious of a superiority, and doubting not of its speedy recognition by the world. There was, in truth, but little vanity in this—his bearing arose rather from a buoyancy of spirits than an overweening and impertinent valuation of his abilities; he was confident, but not obstrusive. Shortly after his arrival in London, he sprized us of his having left with a friend of his father's, a few letters of recommendation from his worthy relatives—all their generosity could afford the young adventurer,—and the epistles had insured unusual patronage for their youthful bearer. "Lord Noword," said Vandyke, his eyes flashing, and his whole countenance lighted up with a deep glow of satisfaction, "my Lord Noword has bespoken a landscape; he has also promised to recommend me for some subject of imagination to his particular friend, from whom, he says, I may depend on the warmest encouragement, as he knows the Duke of ——; and when once recognized by him, the fault must be in the artist if either fame or profit be wanted. And yet," he would add, "in the midst of all these successes, I cannot but feel a sadness that the gratification of those to whom this good fortune would have been most sweet."

Day passed after day, and Sonne received no definite answer from his Lordship. The nobleman wished to give some splendid opportunity for the development of the young artist's powers; "and this," said Vandyke, "I take to be most considerate and kind in his Lordship: he must also have many serious affairs to call him from the contemplation of those arts which the excellence and ingenuousness of his own mind must render most gratefully to him. Indeed, I began to feel that I have more charity and consideration for men in high life, and, I may say, for the world at large, than I could a short time since have reckoned on." Still, however, there was no summons from the nobleman. The resources of Sonne gradually declined—the freshness of his apparel had some time since been on the decay, and the easy and benevolent confidence which had outlived the most chilling procrastinations, at length began to give way to a fitful restlessness, sometimes dispelled by returning hope. Indeed, the stand poor Sonne made against despair, and that misanthropy which was a hour to pervert one of the highest of earth's spirits, was noble and heroic. He battled off the thronging doubts and fears, the terrors of abject want, and—to his finely directed mind, the worse than all—the horror of oblivion, with a strength, a valor, with even a joconeness of spirit, which few can either compass or appreciate. We wonder at the firmness of the man who holds forth, without a wince, a limb to the amputating weapon of the surgeon; we laud him as a heart of oak, a hero; but, alas! we think little of those whose wounds bleed inwardly, and who, whilst the darts of scorn and undeserved obloquy are festering in their souls, still lift an unblenched brow to heaven, and a look of kindness to their fellow-men. These are, indeed, conquerors; albeit, they be superficially esteemed "fellows of no mark nor liveliehood." Poor Vandyke still strove to cheat himself into a confidence of future success. "If," he said, "his Lordship, and I cannot think he will, deceive me, I have yet another resource. There are many who might foolishly have been content to live on the promise of a Lord, but I, with unemployed hands, awaited his bidding. I have acted more thoughtfully—I have still been at work." He had so; and a more admirable sketch rarely came from so young a pencil than that which in his hours of misery and solitude, in a wretched three-pair back room, admitting scarcely a sufficiency of light to read by, had employed the mind of Sonne, and weaned it for a time from the evils which beset it. The work partook of the temper of the artist. It represented a young and wearied pilgrim eashing at the garb of Hope to steady his steps towards a spire of glass, on the top of which sat Fame, dispensing her wreaths to all who approached her. Several hapless wretches were depicted examinate at the base—several slipping when in sight of the object of their idol. It was this work which had, in a great degree, absorbed the feelings of the artist, and rendered him less susceptible of the neglect cast on him by his specious patron, Sonne, as usual, hoped largely from this work of his retirement. One morning, ere he quitted his lodgings to call at his Lordship's mansion, he gave the last touches to the picture. Fired with the triumph which the happy completion of a work of mind awards to the artist, Vandyke, as he left his room, treated his dunning landlord with more than his wonted share of scorn—and surely the young artist was to be forgiven. He had just left his work—his bosom beating with that indefinable ecstacy known only to those whose tasks are of the intellect—his fancy flushed—his feelings highly heightened, and all the dull, coarse, heart-crushing realities of life forgotten in the delightful dream of fame, when he was stayed by the hand, and his very heartstrings jarred by the rough queries and upbraidings of a stubborn creditor. However, escaping from his landlord, Vandyke once more struggled for the mastery of his feelings, and attended at the residence of his lordship, when, unbeliever as he had been, he could no longer doubt the hollowness of the Peer. Penniyless and wanting food, there was no other asylum than that Hecate's cave, an unpaid-for lodging. Sonne returned home; but on entering his room, discovered that the picture was gone. He made instant inquiry, and found that the work which had beguiled him of so much wretchedness, over which he had glowed with all the exquisite fondness of a father over the opening beauties of a child—the effort which was to have raised him to fame, and to have administered to his most pressing necessities, had that morning been sold to a sworn broker for sum exactly the worth of the canvass. It was at this moment that the spirit of hope and charity winged its flight from the breast of Sonne, giving it up as the eyrie to a harpy—it was at this moment he fell from the hand of men, and declared himself an alien to the sorrows or affections of all human kind. Some days passed after this fatal accident ere we met the crushed and disappointed artist; and then how changed! Time seemed to have put the works of years into one short week. Sonne looked an spectate from benevolence; he also looked but a tym misanthrope. His brow was seared—his eyes shone, but with a glassy brightness—his lips was livid and tremulous—even his hair seemed to have lost its wonted gloss and freshness, and hung lank and thread-like. His beard was long, and its blackness yielded a terrible relief to the ghastly yellow of his attenuated cheek. We started back as he approached: and, without uttering a syllable, he strided past us, leering with such a glance of mingled malice, thirstiness and scorn, that for the moment we thought the enemy of mankind had loosed his infernal spirit in the semblance of our friend. Never again did we behold Vandyke Sonne.

Some months after, when passing through an obscure street, we observed a child sell a few paces before us. On raising the infant from the earth, we remarked in its lap, among other toys, the sketch of a babe, which we instantly recognised as the work of Sonne. Never shall we forget his remarks on the circumstances which gave rise to that picture. "There is not," he said, "to me a more touching sight than that of a mere infant seated on the grass. I am involuntarily reminded of the origin of man, and see in the crawling babe a little Adam in its early paradise. It was a lovely summer's evening when I saw the child—the original of this sketch—playing on the sward; the pure blood glowing in its cheek, its eye glistening, and its red lip pursed up at the satisfaction with which it was plunging its little hand into the soil. As I stood wrapt in meditation, the infant raising its hand, I observed an earthworm had ringed itself around one of the child's fingers, who looked at the turning reptile with an eye of wonderment and half-smiling, half-pouting curiosity. Whether it was altogether owing to the state of my mind I know not; but at this spectacle of the infant and the worm—at this early union of ordained companions—at this contrast of childish joyousness and the grave's corruption, I could no longer refrain from tears. The features of the child were impressed on my mind; and, on returning home, I took the sketch."

All this passed rapidly through our brain, as, asking of the child the place of its abode, the mother of the babe came up. On inquiring as to her possession of the picture, she informed us that it was once the property of a lodger of her's; "and a strange gentleman he was, Sir," she continued: "for although he would never speak, he would at all nights and groan as though his heart was breaking. At last, Sir, the poor gentleman died; and this picture, and a few ragged clothes, were all he left behind." "And his funeral—" "He was buried by the parish."

After some further inquiries, the good woman accompanied us to the church-yard, where we found the sexton turning up the earth from the grave of Sonne to make room for another of the dead. "For whom, sexton, is this grave?" "Why, for a man hanged last Tuesday, for burglary!"

In life an outcast, and even in death the companion of a felon! Was not Vandyke Sonne a disappointed man!

We are indebted to the politeness of a friend for the following letter from Genoa the contents of which will be found amusing.—Balt. Chron.

THE "NEW MENECHMI."

One of these men is Genius to the other;
And which the spirit?—Comedy of Errors.

There is at present at Genoa a Corsican, a Major in the Sardinian Guards who bears so striking a resemblance to the Emperor Napoleon, as to have produced a considerable excitement among the military and others, who enjoyed the advantage of beholding his late Imperial Majesty. When the ex-Empress, Maria Louisa was here, she saw this "Dromio" at the theatre, and she was so much struck with the likeness, that she ordered the opera box, after exhibiting the powerful effect it had on her feelings. To render the similitude more remarkable, he usually dresses in the costume of Napoleon, and imitates his peculiar gait and demeanour. So great has been the excitement produced, that his Sardinian Majesty, with that sensitiveness so peculiar to petty despots, has lately ordered him away to take command of a regiment at Savana. The first time I saw him, was at the Café de Carisi; I was in company with a French officer who had served under Napoleon in his campaigns, and who beheld him for the last time at the battle of Leipsick. "I perfectly remember the Emperor's appearance during that fatal day, (said my companion after pointing the Corsican officer out to me,) when I solemnly assure you that were not Napoleon dead, my feelings are now such as to be tempted to exclaim, 'vive l' Empereur.'

The Prussian Soldiers.—The Prussian soldiers are certainly magnificent young men; if they have a fault, as soldiers, it is, that, as a body, they are far too young; but they are handsome, very erect, and clean limbed, their clothing (blue) is admirably made, and most becoming. They are clean and smart under arms, and steady as a wall. Still, it is my opinion, and I attentively watched their system of drill in many places, that we in England have just struck upon the happy medium. The laxness of bad discipline in France makes the French soldier unsteady on parade, and placing no habitual check upon the eager restlessness of his character, causes him often to be dangerously self-willed and insubordinate in the field of battle. The severity, on the contrary, of the German discipline, makes the soldier a mere machine, to advance or retreat, charge, fire, stand, or even fly, unhesitatingly, when ordered, and only when ordered. I saw not such a thing on the continent of Europe as what we call, and my military readers will understand me, a saucy English light company, or any thing resembling those true old English grenadiers who could sing the good old song, with its nasty tow-row-row, so harsh and happy chorus. These be the men, and this was the free spirit and feeling which, controlled and guided by a firm, judicious hand, that knew when to check the rein, and when to give the head, won for England her renown. Often I saw on the continent troops of the most warlike and martial appearance—but I always felt the truth of our ambassador's reply to Frederick: "Do you think an equal number of English soldiers could be found to beat those?" "I said the King, pointing to the elite of his famous guard, an elite composed of men of all nations, remarkable for their fine size, their discipline, and their prowess. "Sir I cannot tell; but I know that half the number would try." This was, and, I hope will ever be, the character of British soldiers in the field. "Dare greatly, do greatly," is a glorious motto.—Rambles in Germany.

Summary.

An arrival at Bordeaux, from Calcutta, brought a report that the crew of the celebrated La Perouse, had been discovered at an Island near New Zealand, by the E. I. Company had sent a party to ascertain the truth of the report.

The King of Great Britain has given 100 pounds, to be sent to Beethoven, who was suffering from dropsy and poverty at Vienna. The Philharmonic Society of London have given a like sum. Beethoven is since deceased.

The King of Prussia by a late edict calls upon all his subjects, under penalties, to send their children to school, between the ages of six and the King of Sardinia, by an edict of nearly the same date, forbids all persons, who do not possess a certain annual income, from attending the literary institutions of his kingdom.

Paris, April 14.—The Journal de Paris announces without answering for the authenticity of the news, that Lord Cochrane has arrived on the coast of Morea, and that Athens is free.

The advance made by the Spanish troops, towards the frontiers of Portugal, is ascribed to the knowledge which the Commander in Chief of that army had of the march of the English troops to draw nearer to the Spanish frontiers.

The armies of the two nations are, as it ware, opposite each other, but without shewing any signs of hostility.

PORTUGAL.—The latest Lisbon dates are of April 9. The Romney, man of war, arrived on the 8th from England, having on board 250 troops.

The great and important work of a grand ship canal from London to Portsmouth, it is understood, is certainly to take place.

The Egina Gazette, of Feb. 15th, says the Turkish garrison of Salona, have abandoned that fortress, which has fallen into the hands of the Greeks; "so that all western Greece is now free." Omar Pacha was routed at Distomo. Sesini, Dragon, Sestre, St. Elie, and Acarnania have been cleared of the Turks.

From Gibraltar.—The Dingle, or the ship Addison, in 35 days from Gibraltar, at Philadelphia, states, that accounts had been received there and were confirmed by letters from the intermediate ports, that the inhabitants of the principal towns of Catalonia had risen simultaneously and declared in favour of the Infanta Don Carlos.

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.

The interior troubles of Spain increase. In Catalonia armed bands are running through the country crying Vive Charles V—Death to Ferdinand VII—Vives Charles V and the Inquisition. Gerronne although occupied by the troops of Ferdinand, supports the conspiracy in this province. Rebels have threatened also to enter Figueras and have even appeared at the gates. Bands multiply and threaten Puycerda. The authorities are greatly alarmed and have sent to Perpignan for assistance. The exportation of powder from France has been prohibited; but women have attempted to purchase it at Perpignan. The greatest excesses are committed by the rebels towards constitutionalists. The Marquis of Tamarites is at the head of the conspiracy at Tortoso together with some monks. Troops to the number of 500 have refused to obey the intendant general of Zamora, and set his authority at defiance.

The Princess Regent of Portugal, has suspended the act of amnesty granted to the soldiers who had taken part with the rebels.

Facts speak louder than words or arguments.—We are indebted to the politeness of a friend, for the following table of importations for one year, at Jamaica. It shews how much our agricultural interest was concerned in the colonial trade we have lost, and proves very clearly that we had nearly monopolized that commerce to the exclusion of the British &c&c. Under our present wise administration, however, the tables will be completely turned upon us. We are not surprised that the Canadians should rejoice at the strange policy of our government; nor that the Editor of a Quebec paper, should, with an exulting irony, propose to present to Mr. Adams, for his friendship to Canada, "a service of plate."

We are happy to be able, from undoubted authority, to lay before the public, rather interesting particulars respecting the artic land expedition. It appears by letters from Captain Franklin, dated at Fort Franklin, the 12th of June last, that this enterprising traveller was then in boat starting from his winter quarters. Another letter, written on the river of June, was dated at Fort Norman, when he was on his way down Mackenzie's river towards the Pacific Ocean. Having reached the mouth of this river, the Expedition proceeded to survey the coast of the Pacific, which they did from 113o to 149o, 38 west longitude. They suppose that in five days further progress, they would have reached Icy Cape, but for the circumstance of their having, for fifteen days, been involved in dense fogs which put a stop to their operations in that direction. The expedition met with some annoyance from the Esquimaux, who attempted to pillage, but these people were easily dispersed by the simple and humane process of firing a few blank shots over their heads. On the 17th of August, Captain Franklin began to retrace his steps eastwards, and, as will be seen by the following circular, reached Fort Franklin on the 21st of September.

To the Chief Factors, Chief Traders, and Officers in charge of the H. B. Co's Posts.

FORT FRANKLIN, GREAT BEAR LAKE,
21st September, 1825.

GENTLEMEN,

I have to request that you will have the goodness to forward the accompanying despatch * to Montreal, with the least possible delay:

I am happy to inform you of the safe return of every member of the Expedition to this establishment, after having surveyed the ice Coast from the Longitude of 113, to 149, 38 west.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your most obedient Servant,
(Signed,) JOHN FRANKLIN,
Captain & commander of the Expedition.

* The despatch above alluded to, which was for government, not having passed through the Post-Office here, must have been transmitted from Sault St. Mary's (where it arrived the 12th of April last) by York and the United States' for England.

We are happy to add, that Captain Franklin and Doctor Richardson may be expected in this city, in August next, on their way to Britain. Captain Back and Mr. Kendall it is supposed will go home by Hudsons' Bay.

The Hudson Bay Company's posts in the interior, by last accounts, were tranquil, with the exception of petty disturbances with the numerous tribes of the Sashatchewan river, which is considered nothing unusual. Their prospects in regard to trade are favourable. A regulation prohibiting the introduction of spirituous liquors into a certain portion of the Company's territory, (viz, from lat. 54o to the Frozen Ocean,) and that was tried merely as an experiment, which, if successful, would be extended to the rest of their possessions, has succeeded beyond the most sanguine expectation. Since the passing of the regulation, not one drop of any description, has been imported for either the natives or the officers and servants of the Company, and the good effects of the regulation are beginning to appear on the morals, comfort, and happiness of all parties. From a private letter dated Red River Settlement, of the 30th of January last, we are enabled to give the following extract. "The settlers seem very comfortable and happy, and are much better housed than before the great inundation which happened last spring. Nothing, I believe, less than a calamity such as this, could have induced them to live upon their former miserable hovels. Such of them as had not a sufficient quantity of food from the produce of their farms, have taken to the neighbouring lakes and plains for subsistence; but those are principally Canadian Voyageurs, and half breeds, who, as yet, prefer that precarious life to the more certain, but laborious one of a farmer. The high order of settlers are in the midst of abundance, and in the utmost harmony and good will with each other."

Colonial.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE LORDS OF HIS MAJESTY'S HONORABLE PRIVY COUNCIL FOR TRADE,

The Petition of the Chamber of Commerce of the City of Saint John, in New-Brunswick,

MOST HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That they entertain serious apprehensions with regard to the contemplated Trade to His Majesty's Colonies in the West Indies, from the United States, may now take, through the Foreign Possessions in the West Indies.

It appears to be the expectation of the Citizens of the American Republic, as well as the opinion of many in the British Colonies, that American Produce exported to those Foreign Possessions, may from thence, be re-shipped to any of His Majesty's West India Colonies: that this anticipation will be realized, the intention of the late Order in Council, interdicting the Trade by American Vessels, with His Majesty's Colonies in the West Indies, would in a great measure be defeated; as the Ships of the Republic would then enjoy a very large proportion of the Carrying Trade to supply these Colonies, and in conveying the Produce thereof, received in return for such supplies, back to the United States.

Your Petitioners beg leave respectfully to state, that such a course of Trade would also be extremely prejudicial to His Majesty's Colonies in North America, as they never have been enabled to enter into successful competition with the Citizens of the American Republic in those Markets to which the produce of that Republic could find access, even in supplying the article of Fish, which abounds on all the Coasts of His Majesty's North American Colonies; the Americans by reason of Treaties, possess rights equal to those of British Subjects in prosecuting the Fisheries on most of those Coasts—rights far greater than have ever been conceded to any other nation.

The Chamber of Commerce, while they acknowledge that the particular interests of the Province of New-Brunswick have led them to the consideration of the above subject, yet they beg leave to assure your Lordships, that other considerations far more interesting and important, and which are of a National character, have also had due weight. If His Majesty's Colonies in the West Indies are permitted to be supplied with American Produce, through Foreign Possessions, the carrying Trade of all Articles of such Produce, as before observed, would in the proportion of more than four to one, be thrown into the hands of the American Ship Owner; and therefore, the intercourse with His Majesty's Subjects in the West Indies, and the Citizens of the American Republic, could not, to any National purpose, advance the interests of Great Britain; on the contrary, it would add much to the Maritime strength of the Republic, and in equal proportion, diminishthat of the British Empire.

The Chamber of Commerce beg leave to suggest to your Lordships, that the only remedy which can be applied to counteract the disadvantages which the British Ship Owner has so long laboured under, with respect to the United States of America and which will also give full effect to the Order in Council before referred to, will be, to prohibit (except in extreme cases) the entry of any Produce of the United States, into any British Port or Place in the West Indies, from any Port or Place, whether British or Foreign, south of the Port of Halifax in Nova Scotia; from which Port and the other Free Ports in His Majesty's Colonies in North America, ample supplies could be conveyed to the West Indies, and at as cheap rates as the same are now conveyed through other channels; thus no sacrifice would be required from the West India Planter, and the benefits of the long voyage would be restored to the British Ship Owner, except perhaps a very small proportion of Benefit, which might fall to those Nations (if any who had not (like the American Republic) denied to British Subjects, a Commercial intercourse upon terms of reciprocity.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray, that your Lordships will be pleased to take the premises into your favourable consideration.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

THOMAS MILLIDGE, Chairman.

CANALS.

From the New-Brunswick City Gazette.

By the insertion of various extracts from Canada Papers, and by occasional editorial allusions, we have for some time past endeavoured to turn the attention of our readers towards the great and important public works, which are in progress in that country; We allude to the Welland and Rideau Canals. The Welland Canal which is now considerably advanced, and which will be completed in the course of this season, will connect Lake Erie, and of course all the country above it, with Lake Ontario. By means of this connexion, all the surplus produce of Upper Canada above Niagara, and much of the productions of the vast territory bordering on the Lake Michigan, may be conveyed to the New-York market find their way to Montreal and Quebec. The Rideau Canal is stated to be a most stupendous work, and will present equal advantages in the interior, and by means of these two a safe and easy communication, will be established from the extremity of that vast and fruitful country to the other.

The Government of Great Britain upon consideration of enjoying certain privileges has given £16,000 in aid of Welland Canal. And as the Rideau Canal is a work of a magnitude so far beyond the means of any private individual or company, the Government has undertaken that altogether. Our reasons for bringing these things before our readers, are to make them acquainted with what is going on for the welfare of those with the Canadas that they may see the zeal with which works of Public usefulness are carried on in that quarter, and that they may mark the fostering care of His Majesty's Ministers, and their liberality in promoting and supporting works of this and national importance to the Colonies; and also, and chiefly, that after having made a suitable impression upon the minds of our readers,—we might when a proper time arrived, direct their attention to a work of great national utility and importance in this Province, which will be equally practicable to be completed in order to give full effect to those great undertakings in the Canadas, which we have just mentioned.

We conceive that the proper time to introduce this subject is now come, and the great work on which it treats, will certainly request the attention of our readers is the Canal which was much spoken of, some two or three years ago, by which the waters of the Bay of Fundy, may be connected with the Gulf of St. Lawrence. By means of the Canals Canals, Montreal and Quebec will become the Emporiums of all the surplus produce of the almost boundless Countries bordering upon the great western Lakes. But those Ports being shut up from the ocean by ice, nearly one half of the year, in order to give them all the benefit which they ought to derive from their commanding situations, on the great St. Lawrence, they should be connected with a Port open to the sea, and accessible at all seasons of the year—And that Port is St. John, New-Brunswick. If therefore the long talked of Canal, from the Bay of Fundy to the Gulf of St. Lawrence were opened and in full operation, St. John would then be to the Canadas a depot, for a great part of their marketable commodities, and what the Canadas could not sell or ship to the West Indies during the summer months, could be warehoused here, as a place of transit, and at a trifling expence, and be ready for exportation all the year round. Prince Edward Island, and the Islands and settlements along the shores of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, would also derive immense benefit from this communication. And though possibly Nova Scotia, might not derive equal benefit with the places already mentioned, yet she could not hardly fail to derive important advantages in this arrangement.

June 2—Exchange at New-York on London 10 3-4 to 11 per cent.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1827.

For the latest news from England, we refer our readers to our EXTRA Sheet of Monday last, in which the list of the new Ministry is given. The appointments are spoken of, as generally affording satisfaction. We may expect important intelligence, as Parliament will resume its sittings, now that the Cabinet is formed.

The Talbot Anniversary was held at the Town of St. Thomas in the London District, on the 21st May, the day of the Honorable Colonel TALBOT's first arrival, and the commencement of the Settlement which bears his name. A large and highly respectable number of the inhabitants belonging to the Settlement, attended on the occasion, as well as several gentlemen from adjoining parts of the Country. At 5 o'clock, the Company, to the number of eighty, sat down to an excellent dinner, in a room fitted up for the purpose, by Mr. Spades.—After the Cloth was removed, the following Toasts were given:—

THE KING—God bless him. May his life be as long and happy, as his Reign has been great and glorious—4 times 4. God save the King.

The memory of His late Royal Highness the DUKE of YORK.—His grateful Country will long remember the Soldier's Friend.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND—May the inhabitants of the Talbot Settlement ever do justice to His mild and equitable administration —3 times 3. Duke of York's Troops.

THE HONORABLE COLONEL TALBOT—May his exertions for the good of this Settlement ever be remembered with gratitude and affection.—3 times 3 Rural felicity.

This toast was received with peculiar enthusiasm. Col. Talbot rose, and in an appropriate Speech, returned thanks for the very gratifying manner in which his name had been mentioned, expressing his heartfelt satisfaction on witnessing the improvements which had taken place in the settlement since its commencement, and his high sense of the honor paid to himself, and the Talbot Settlement, by the presence of those gentlemen who had come from a distance to join in the celebration of the day.

LADY SARAH MAITLAND, and the Fair of Upper Canada—3 times 3. Bruce's Reel.

Several volunteer toasts were drank, and the utmost good feeling prevailed, until a summons called them from the festive board, to join in the sprighly dance. A large party of Ladies was assembled in the Ball room, and it was not till after "the dawn gave note of days approach," that any disposition was shewn, to depart from the place, from whence "dull care" was banished, and where the spirit of harmony presided over the festivities of this annual celebration of the Talbot Settlement.

[Communicated.]

We have much pleasure in stating, that the LORD BISHOP, with his accustomed liberality, has given the Sum of One Hundred Pounds, towards the erection of a Protestant Episcopal Church, on a Lot reserved by the Canada Company for that purpose, in the new City of Guelph.

We are happy to hear that the Steam Boat Niagara has been got off the rocks near Log Point, and that she is now lying in the harbour at Kingston, undergoing repairs. She is stated to have received but little damage; and it was expected, that in the course of a month, she would commence her regular trips across the Lake.

We are indebted to the politeness of a friend for a copy of the Report, together with the minutes of evidence before the Committee, on Emigration from the United Kingdom. It is extremely voluminous, and contains a variety of the most useful information, resulting from the evidence of several persons examined by the Committee, from all the Provinces in British North America. Some of the facts stated in the evidence are new to us, and may be interesting to our readers.

Mr. Felton, a Gentleman who may be supposed to possess correct information, and who is employed in London by the Board of Trade in Lower Canada, on matters connected with the Commercial interests of the Province, is one of the persons examined. The answer he gives to one question, has rather surprised us, as we were not before aware, that the average produce of the Lands in the Seigneuries, was so very small. He is asked—Can you state the average produce per acre of that Land which is held under the Seigneurs? The average produce is too trifling to be mentioned—I do not believe it exceeds seven bushels an acre. The Farms, he says, are imperfectly and inconveniently cultivated, but partially manured, and do not return more than one half of the produce which they are capable of affording. The average crop in Upper Canada, may, we think, be fairly estimated at from 16 to 20 bushels the acre. The Lands at the disposal of the Crown in Lower Canada, are, however, considered of superior quality; and under a different system of tillage, would, it is thought, be more productive.

The sub-divisions of Estates, so strongly contended for by some members in our Assembly, Mr. Felton speaks of as an imperfection in the French Law, and says, that the practice in Lower Canada, has frittered them away into portions, in many cases too small, to support the proprietors. With such an example so near to us, it may be worthy the serious consideration of those, who so warmly advocate the theory of sub-division of property, to look more closely into its practical effects. Mr. Felton states, that Flax is already extensively cultivated in Lower Canada, sufficiently so, to clothe the majority of the inhabitants. This confirms us in the opinion we have always entertained, that a greater quantity of imported Goods is consumed in the Upper Province, in proportion to its numbers, than in Lower Canada. The proportion of duties payable to Upper Canada, is, however, regulated by a reference to the population of both Provinces.

From the evidence of Mr. Uniacke, with respect to the Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, it appears that Coal is found in those Provinces, in the greatest abundance. The Coal of Cape Breton alone, he thinks, would supply the consumption of half Europe, and from the superior advantages of communication, he is of opinion, that the United States must become tributary to us for that article —he says, that the Coal discovered in Pittsburgh County, upon the upper part of the Potomac, and upon the Missouri, are all so situated, that they can never draw any great resources from them, while our mines at Cape Breton are working, and can never reach New York with the same facility and expedition.

With respect to the subject of Emigration generally, we shall conclude our extracts at present, with the opinion expressed by Mr. Uniacke; an opinion in which, we think, most persons will concur. He says—

"Every man in any part of British America, will at least, consume three pounds worth of something that he does not possess himself; and, therefore, every man that is added to that Country, will increase the market for the productions of England. Should the commercial system, which established there of humanity, such as this Committee have in view, will transmit to his posterity to the latest day, a degree of affection for his mother Country, that will never be obliterated. I have the gratitude that is felt by a poor man, who is brought from Ireland, and settled down in a Country, where he is in every respect comfortably provided for; it is a gratitude that will never be forgotten in his latest day; and I consider that this operation of emigration, carried on under a British Grant, would be highly beneficial, by its establishing regular places as the beginnings of Settlements, which would be rallying points, to which the voluntary emigration of the whole Country would resort. The first settlers will say, 'we were established here by the bounty of Great Britain;' and they will impress upon the new comers, as well as upon their posterity, an attachment to this Country that it will not be in the power of the world to shake. Independently of that, those people, settling in the way that I have described, would imperceptibly draw to their Settlements many of their friends and relations from the old country, and so would relieve it of a portion of its redundant population."

Mr. Turquand, Commissary General of His Majesty's forces in British America, arrived in town last week from Canada, and will depart again on Tuesday.—Albion.

Passengers in the Columbia, Admiral Sir Isaac Coffin, of the British Navy, and servt. Major Loring, of the British Army, two children and servt.—N. Y. Spectator.

Moril McGoon, Francois Gayette, John Chief Alexander Bourgain, and Francios Lambert, alias D'aigle, who have been condemned to transportation, arrived yesterday from Montreal in the Steam-Boat Quebec. With several others in the Quebec Jail; they will embark about the 10th instant, we understand, on board the Colonial Brig for Halifax.—Quebec Mercury.

THE RIDEAU CANAL.—We yesterday visited the foot of "Tuttle's Hill" the place at which, a few days since, ground was broken for the first time on the Kingston section of this splendid work. A Mr. Macdermott has contracted for the first two miles and a half of the Canal, and has cleared away the greater part of wood from the scite. He commences digging on Monday. There is already a village laid out at the foot of "Tuttle's Hill," where the Canal intersects the road leading to Montreal—and is termed the Evergreen Village.—Kidgston Chronicle.

The 15th company of Sappers and Miners, under the command of Captain Victor, arrived here a few days ago on their way to the Rideau.—Canadian Courant.

Officers and detachments arrived at Quebec in the Southwold Transport, Lieutenant Saunders, R. Navy Agent:—

Major Durnford, Royal Staff Corps, Captain Bayley, Lieutenants Tylden and Wingfield, 2 Serjeants and 71 Rank and File, Royal Artillery; Capt. Victor and Lieutenant, Frome, Royal Engineers, 2 Serjeants and 57 Rank and File, Royal Sappers and Miners. Assistant Surgeon Tuthill, Ordnance Medical Department. Ensigns Hon. R. Boyle and A. Flint, with 90 Rank and File, for the 68th Light Infantry.

38-6*m* JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

For the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.*

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2*s.* 6*d.*

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

Miscellaneous.

In the absence of any later news from Europe, we feel much satisfaction in being enabled to lay before our readers the following most interesting "EXTRACT of a private letter "from a Gentleman connected with the Expe"DITION under Capt. FRANKLIN, R. N.; dated

"GREAT SLAVE LAKE, Nov. 12, 1826.

"The principal object of the expedition was to discover a navigable passage, westward from the mouth of the Mackenzie, to Behrings Straits, and His Majesty's ship, Blossom was despatched round Cape Horn for the purpose of meeting it, at Icy Cape, or in Kotzebue's sound. If Capt. Franklin's means permitted, he was directed also to send a detachment to the eastward, to survey the coast between Mackenzie and Copper-mine Rivers, and to return over land from the mouth of the latter to the establishment on Bear Lake.

"From the skill with which Capt. Franklin's arrangements were made, he was enabled to descend the Mackenzie and visit the Arctic Sea, last year, within six months of his departure from England, and to return again up the river, to our destined winter quarters at Fort Franklin, in Bear Lake, by open water. In the mean time I had sailed round Bear Lake, and ascertained the distance between its eastern extremity and the Copper-mine River. The knowledge of the country gained by these excursions, tended much to perfect the plans of operation for this year, and the liberal supplies of provision furnished by the Hudson's Bay Company this spring, enabled Capt. Franklin to equip both parties. Three boats were built for the service in England, of mahogany, as wood considered to be well adapted for the purpose. They were necessarily small and of a light construction, that they might be more easily carried over the numerous portages which occur on the route from York Factory, Hudson's Bay, to Bear Lake, but from the care bestowed in building them they reached that place without material injury, and eventually answered even better than they were expected to do. A fourth, of a similar size and form, was built at Bear Lake of fir, and proved as good as the others. The main part of the provisions which were to proceed to the westward, under Captain Franklin's immediate command, in two of the boats, which were named the Lion and Reliance, consisted of Lieut. Back, eleven British seamen, marines and landsmen, two Canadian voyagers and an Esquimaux Interpreter. The Eastern detachment comprising Mr. Kendall, assistant Surveyor, one seaman, two marines, six landsmen, and an Esquimaux embarked in the Dolphin and Union, and were put under the charge of Dr. Richardson.

"We left our winter quarters on the 21st of June, descended the Mackenzie till the 2d of July, and as far as latitude 67° 8m. N. long. 135° 58m. W. At this place, named Parting Point by Captain Franklin, the river divides into a number of widely diverging branches, separated from each other by low and partially flooded lands. It was determined that the two divisions of the expedition should separate here, and that each party should follow the channel which accorded best with their respective routes. Captain Franklin, in the pinnace and yawl, had ascended a middle channel, and reached the sea at Garry's Island, in latitude 69½° N. long. 135½ W. He now entered the most westerly arm which winds round the base of the Rocky mountains, and reached its mouth on the 7th of July. Its outlet is so barred by sand banks, that the crews were compelled to pledges himself to use his zealous exertions drag the boats for miles, even at the top of high water. In this unpleasant situation they were visited by a large party of Esquimaux, who at first behaved quietly and carried on a barter in a amicable manner, but at length prompted by the desire of plunder, and confiding in the superiority of numbers, on a preconcerted signal, upwards of 250 stout fellows, armed with long knives, rushed into the water at once, and seizing on the boats, dragged them on shore. The judicious measures pursued by Captain Franklin, well seconded by the prompt obedience and determined conduct of Lieut. Back and the crews of the boats, rescued the provisions and all the property of consequence from the hands of these freebooters, and the boats were ultimately got afloat without a shot having been fired, or any personal injury received on either side. The same party came twice that night and next day with hostile intentions, when the expedition had put a shore to repair the rigging of the boats which had been cut in the affray, but the posture of defence in which Captain Franklin drew up his small force, deterred them from renewing the attack. The smaller party of Esquimaux, that were subsequently met with, on the sea coast, behaved in a friendly manner.

"On the 9th of July Captain Franklin was stopped by ice, unbroken from the shore, and from that date up to the 4th of August, he could only advance as the separation took place, and seldom more than a mile or two a day. In this tedious way, he reached the 141st degree of longitude, by which time the ice had given way so as to give a passage to the boats, but other obstacles of a most serious nature now opposed themselves to his progress. The coast was so low and difficult of approach from the shallowness of the water, that a landing on the main shore was effected only once after passing the 150th degree of longitude, though it was frequently attempted, by dragging the boats for miles through the mud. On all other occasions, he had to land on the naked reefs, that skirt the coast, where, after the departure of ice, the party suffered severely from the want of fresh water, and once passed two entire days without that necessary article. Thick fogs and heavy gales of wind prevented the expedition from quitting this inhospitable part of the coast, and it was detained on one point of land by a fog so dense that all objects were obscured at the distance of a few yards, storm and weather prevailing all the time. Notwithstanding these almost insurmountable obstacles, the resolution and perseverance of Captain Franklin and his party enabled them to reach nearly the 150th degree of longitude by the 18th of August. They had then perceived more than half of the distance, along the coast, to Icy Cape, had plenty of provisions, boats in good order, and an open sea before them, and although, from the fatigues they had undergone, the strength of the crews was somewhat impaired, yet their spirit was unbroken, but the period had now arrived when it was Captain Franklin's duty, in pursuance of his instructions, to consider the probability of his being able to reach Kotzebue's sound, before the severe weather set in; and if he did not expect to attain that object, he was prohibited from hazarding the safety of the party, by a longer continuance on the coast. It would have been the extremity of rashness to have attempted to get to Kotzebue's Sound, by traversing an unknown coast at that advanced season, even had it been certain that the Blossom had reached that place, but the uncertainty attending all voyages in high latitudes, made it extremely doubtful whether that vessel was actually at the rendezvous or not. It was therefore in conformity with Capt. Franklin's usual judgment, and the almost paternal anxiety he has always evinced, for the safety of those who have had the happiness to serve under his command, that he decided upon commencing his return to Bear Lake, at that period.

"It was a matter of the deepest regret to himself and his whole party that they turned their backs upon an unsurveyed part of the coast. The only feeling that will be excited in the minds of others, will be surprise that he was able to surmount the obstacles opposed to his progress, to the extent that he did. The propriety of Capt. Franklin's determination was evinced by the setting in of stormy weather, which speedily set in, and by intelligence he received from some friendly Esquimaux lads, that their countrymen were collecting in numbers about the mouth of the Mackenzie, and that a large party of the mountain Indians were on the march to intercept him, on account of his having come as they supposed to interfere with their trade with the Esquimaux. Had he been only a few days later it is more than probable that he could not have escaped the numerous enemies, without a contest. He arrived with his party in perfect health, at Bear Lake, on the 21st of September, and despatched an express the following morning, with an account of his proceedings to Government. As it was necessary that the express should set out without delay, to enable it to ascend the Mackenzie whilst the navigation continued open, Captain Franklin had merely time to write me a short account of his proceedings; the preceeding sketch is therefore very imperfect. I have omitted to mention that the trending of the coast carried the expedition into 70½ degrees of North latitude.

"With regard to the eastern detachment of the expedition, on parting from Capt. Franklin they pursued the easternmost channel of the river, which is that by which Mackenzie returned from the sea, and is accurately and ably described by him. They reached the sea on the 7th of July, in lat. 69 deg. 29 min. N. long. 133 deg. 24 min. W. having, on that day, fallen in with a horde of Esquimaux, who whilst the boats were, in a similar situation to Capt. Franklin's, aground on the flats at the mouth of the river, endeavoured to seize upon Mr. Kendall's boat, no doubt for the purpose of plundering it. The attempt, however, which was perhaps merely the impulse of the moment, was not participated in by the whole horde, and was instantly frustrated by the cool courage of Mr. Kendall and the determined attitude assumed by the party, without the necessity of having recourse to violence. They gave no farther trouble, and the party left them with the shew at least of friendship. The parties of that nation which were met afterwards, being inferior in numbers to the expediti , were very civil. They displayed, however, much courage in opening an intercourse.

"After reaching the sea, considerable difficulty was experienced in coasting along shore of a very peculiar nature, to latitude 70 deg. 37 min. N. longitude 148 deg. 52 min. W. The low, flat coast, thus far, consists of islands of alluvial (or perhaps in the present language of Geologists, of delluvial) origin, skirted by sandy banks running far to seaward, and intersected by creeks of brackish water, and separated in part by wide estuaries, pouring out at that season large bodies of fresh water. These alluvial lands are inundated by the spring floods, and covered with drift timber, except a number of insulated mounds of frozen earth, which rise considerably above the highest water mark, and are analogous to the ice hillocks described as bounding Kotzebue's Sound. Betwixt them and the main shore there is a very extensive lake of brackish water, which perhaps communicates with the eastern branch of the Mackenzie, and receives, at least, one other large river.

"This party subsequently traced a rocky and bold shore, and rounded Cape Parry in latitude 70 deg. 12 min. N. long. 114 deg. 45 min. W. and entered George the 4th's Coronation Gulf, by the Dolphin and Union Straits, which brought them nearly to the 114 degree of West longitude. They then steered for the Copper-mine river, and entered it on the 8th of August.

"They suffered some detention, on this voyage, from bad weather, and bad, on several occasions, to cut a passage through toogues of ice with the hatchet, and a way for the boats with much labour and some hazard. The ice retains a great thickness in that sea, some of the floes being aground in nine fathoms water, but under the powerful radiation of a sun constantly above the horizon, in the summer months, it decays with an almost incredible rapidity. As the boats drew only twenty inches of water, they were on several occasions enabled to sail through shallow canals, worn on the surface of these floes by the action of the waves, when from the ice being closely packed on the shore, they could find no passage betwixt the masses of which it was composed. They unfortunately clear weather for these attempts. Had they experienced the fogs that Captain Franklin met with to the westward, they must of necessity have remained on shore. Notwithstanding the quantity of ice they encountered this early in the season, they were convinced that towards the end of August there is a free passage for a ship, along the northern coast of America, from the 109th to the 150th degree of west longitude; and to the eastward of the Mackenzie there are some commodious harbours, although there are none on the part of the coast surveyed by Capt Franklin to the westward. The whole difficulty in performing the North-west passage in a ship seems to be in attaining the coast of the continent through the intricate straits which lead from Baffin's or Hudson's Bays. The flood tide was found setting every where along the coast from the eastward.

"The rapids, which obstruct the navigation of the Copper-mine, prevented them from bringing their boats above eight miles from the sea, and they therefore abandoned them there with the remainder of their stores, tents, &c. a present to the Esquimaux, and set out overland to Fort Franklin, carrying (exclusive of instruments, arms and ammunition, and a few specimens of plants and minerals) merely a blanket and ten days provision for each person. They arrived on the eastern arm of Bear Lake on the 18th of August, and at the Fort on the 1st of September, after an absence of 71 days, in excellent health and condition.

"The two branches of the expedition have thus surveyed the coast through upwards of thirty-six degrees of longitude, which, together with Capt. Franklin's former discoveries and those of Captain Parry, render the arctic sea pretty well known, as far as the 150th degree of west longitude. There remain only eleven degrees of unknown coast betwixt that and Icy Cape, and Captain Beachy has perhaps by this time traced a considerable portion even of that in the Blossom, so that a complete discovery of the North-west Passage, so long an object for which Britain has contended, is now brought within very narrow limits.

"The expedition returns to England next year by the Hudson's Bay Company's ship, with the exception of Captain Franklin and Dr. Richardson, who propose to go home by Canada and New-York. As Captain Franklin is to spend this winter on the ice, he hopes to reach Montreal towards the end of August, 1827."

Summary.

Letters from Tripoli state that Major Laing and Capt. Clapperton met at Timbuctoo and were making their way to Tripoli.

Monday being St. George's Day, and the day appointed for the celebration of His Majesty's birth-day, the Tower and Park guns were fired, flags floated on the different churches, and at night the illuminations of the King's tradesmen and the public places were more brilliant than we ever recollect them to have been on similar occasions.

On Monday the Duke of Wellington came to London from visiting the Marchioness of Wellesley at Lemington, and proceeded to the Ordnance Office, where his Grace delivered over the official papers to the Marquis of Anglesea, and on Wednesday his Grace held a Levee at the Horse Guards, which was very numerously attended by General and other officers.

On Wednesday Lord Melville delivered over to His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral the official papers of his Department, and subsequently His Royal Highness transacted public business.

Mr. Croker left London last Saturday for Dublin, where he offers himself for the representation of the University in the room of Mr. Plunket, who retires.

Sir Harry Burrard Neale has arrived in London from the Mediterranean, where he has been succeeded by Sir Edward Codrington.

The Lord Mayor of London has lost his eldest son at the age of 22; in consequence of this melancholy occurrence, the Mansion House was closed, and public business transferred to the Guildhall.

That meritorious officer, Sir Edward Owen, K. C. B. is appointed Surveyor-General of the Ordnance.

The most important work of a grand Ship Canal from London to Portsmouth, it is understood is certainly to take place; supported by several Government Offices, the East India Company, the Bank of England, several other Public Establishments, and the Commercial and Shipping Interests. Two surveys have been made for that purpose; one by Mr. Cundy, and another by Messrs. Rennie and Giles—the survey of the former begins at Deptford, opposite the London Docks, through Kensington, Wandsworth, by Morden Church to Epsom Common, Leatherhead, Dorking, Ockley Church, Arundel, and from thence to Spithead; making a distance of about 75 miles of which 46 miles are tide level, raising 120 feet, with only four locks up to the summit level of 29 miles. The principal difference between Messrs. Rennie and Giles's survey and that of Mr. Cundy, is that the former protieneen would take the Canal from Leatherhead Common, through Guildford, instead of Dorking, the objection to which is that it is five miles further; but both surveys are equally practicable. This Canal is to be 150 feet in width and 30 feet in depth; the expense is estimated at £4,000,000, and it will employ 5,000 workmen for four years.

Important Decision.—In the Common Pleas a few days ago an action was brought to recover £175 from two shareholders of the London United Mining Company, for goods furnished to the Company. For one defendant it was urged that he was liable only for his portion of the debt, and, for the other, that, having disposed of his interest, his liability had ceased. The Chief Justice decided both to be liable. Verdict accordingly.

We have been informed that the woolen manufacturers intend to petition Parliament during the present session against the further exportation of sheep and wool, as they conceive the languishing state of their trade calls for the prompt interference of Government. It is a well known fact, that long-wooled sheep are actually bought up in this country, and exported to France, yearly, principally for their fleece.—Leicester Journal.

The East of Liverpool has greatly improved in every respect, lately, so much so, that his Lordship has been able to see his private secretary, Mr. Wilmott on business several times.

The powers delegated by the Sovereign to the Lord High Admiral are extraordinarily great and extensive. In him is solely vested the appointment of all naval officers.

Sir Humphrey Davy has written home from Italy, signifying his resignation of the office of President of the Royal society. It has not, as yet, been formally accepted; but Mr. Davies Gilbert and Lord Colchester have been already named as his successor.

St. Giles' Church, in London, has now an illuminated dial; the clock, by its own revolution, lights itself as soon as the sun sets, and extinguishes the same when the sun rises.

Scotland,

The Glasgow Chronicle of April 6th, mentions a fall of snow which took place on the 1st and continued till the 3d, in the afternoon All out-door work was on Monday at mid-day suspended. The snow was not accompanied with such a high wind as in the beginning of March, and in general the roads were not so much blocked up. However, during Monday night and Tuesday morning it drifted to such an extent that the principal roads to the east and south were rendered, for some time, impassable.

A melancholy instance of the dreadful effects of terror on the mind of a child, occurred a short time ago in the neighbourhood of Glasgow. A young girl, about seven years of age, whose imagination had been filled with those fright ful nursery tales that are imposed on by ignorant servants and others, to frighten children into their obedience, was thurst into a dark closet for some tale she had carried to her parents. The poor thing continued to scream with the most violent apprehensions, and when the door was opened to her from her abode of terror, she was lying on the ground in strong convulsions. The conflict was too powerful for her tender reason, and she now exists one of the most miserable objects of human sympathy. Her parents and family are therefore blasted. Their little favourite is now an idiot! Edinburgh Journal, April 25.

Foreign Intelligence.

GREECE.

Lord Cochrane arrived at Paros on the 15th of March, and was received by the Greeks with inexpressible enthusiasm. The Members of the Government received him in the most solemn manner.—Some days after he resolved to sail with the Brig Tombasi and three vessels on a secret expedition. All this is known in Constantinople, and has caused a great sensation among the Turks.

Trieste, April 12.—The last victory obtained over the Turks was celebrating at Nauplius, when salvoes of artillery from the Fort of Palamedes, announced the arrival of Lord Cochrane; that brave sailor entered the port of Napulius on the 18th of March.

East Indies.—The E. Indies will in a few years enter into a very serious competition in the English market with the southern states in the staple article of cotton. Formerly South Carolina and other contiguous states were extensively engaged in the raising of indigo. This article of value is scarcely thought of in that quarter at the present day. The great Indigo country is the East Indies. There British Capital and industry have performed wonders, and with the aid of many concurrent causes, have succeeded in making the production of indigo in the South of no value whatever. The cotton trade of the British East Indies is at the present day rapidly increasing. It will be the interest of England to give every encouragement to that species of culture, & it is not unreasonable to expect that in a few years it will materially interfere with the staples of the South? With such a prospect before us should not every encouragement, consistent with the other interests of the country be given to the manufacture of cotton in the United States? In a few years the eastern and middle states will from the principal market for the production of the South.—American paper.

Seizure of a British vessel.—The Elizabeth City ' of the 9th inst. says, " A British schooner has put in at Hampton Bar on Thursday, 31st ult. in distress, said to be the same ordered off from Baltimore lately. She has, with her cargo, been seized by the Custom House Officer at Ocracock, in consequence of putting several bags of coffee on board a small craft belonging to this port, which craft was also seized, and both ordered to Washington, N. C."

COLONIAL.

From the New Brunswick Courier.

We are pleased to observe that on the 21st March a petition was presented in the House of Commons, by Mr. Baring, from the Shipowners of the City of London, respecting the new Navigation Laws. Mr. B. was at one time one of the warmest supporters of Mr. Huskisson's Free Trade system. Experience and observation, however, have led him to alter his views, and he now comes forward like an honest Statesman and says, that his views are altered, and that the subject is one of deep importance, and requires at least the appointment of a committee of inquiry to report upon it. A good deal of discussion took place at the time, on the subject; but it appeared to be the wish of the majority that the consideration of the matter should be postponed till Mr. Huskisson (at that time unable to attend through indisposition) should be able to resume his seat in the House.

General Gascoyne (member for Liverpool) had previously given notice that he would bring the subject before the House on Friday; but was induced from Mr. Huskisson's illness, and other causes, to defer the consideration of the matter till the 3d of May.

The Committee appointed to take into consideration the proposed system of Emigration have given in their report. The report recommends to the Government the granting of £50,000 for the purpose of relieving the suffered of Emigrants in Nova Scotia, &c. which sum, together with £25,000, voted by the Committee for the relief of the distressed Manufacturers, may be supposed to relieve England of about 8 or 7000 distressed operatives of different descriptions. It is doubtful, however, whether Parliament will comply with the wishes of the Committee, and it is matter of doubt also, if it did, whether the measure would be attended with any visible good effect.

On Monday last the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce waited upon His Excellency the Lieutenanat Governor, for the purpose, principally of being made acquainted with His Excellency's views in regard to the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Bay of Fundy Canal. We are happy to state that he declared himself decidedly in favor of the measure, and that in representing the same to His Majesty's Government, it should have his most cordial support. His Excellency also gave the Committee assurances that their representations to him, not only on this subject, but also on all subjects connected with the commercial interests of the Province, would receive his early attention.

QUEBEC, June 5.

Robbery of the Church funds of Cape Sante. On the morning of the 1st inst., at about one o'clock, four robbers, or perhaps more, after having forced open the door with a log of wood, got into the house of Francois Piche; a habitant of Cap Sante, residing at the top of l'ancienne cote, on this side of the river Jacques Cartier, Mr. Piche was not then at home; having gone to sit up with his neighbour at the time dangerously ill. The villains had probably taken exact information of the premises, as the moment that the door was forced open one of them immediately went to the bed of the mistress of the house; seized her by the throat, threatening her life if she did not deliver immediately the key of the place where the money which they knew, they said., was in the house.—That money formed the funds of the fabrique of Cap Sante, collected during last year, by Mr. Piche, then one of the church wardens of the parish. While the woman was defending herself, refusing to deliver the key, the villian who held her by the throat, and was choaking her, repeated his usances, encouraged by a nother, who was posted in the next room, to observe if any assistance came; and who cried out not to spare her but to despatch her at once. She at last was overcome by her sufferings and by fear, and delivered the key required; they immediately took from a chest of drawers £70. or £75. The vagabonds took the flight instantly. Early in the morning several persons with warrants of arrest, started in pursuit of them.

Benjamin Agur, Charles St. Germain, Jean Marie Desjardins, and George Aubbs Ouellet; we believe all of whom have been committed to the jail of this city on Saturday night for the burglary at M. Piche, Cap Sante.

The apprehension of the above offenders, was principally owing to the activity of George Linton, Constable.

The Steam boats which have arrived for several days past are loaded with American flour and salted provisions intended for exportations, which are immediately warehoused under bond.

QUEBEC, June 2.

A person from the south side of the river reports that considerable damage has been done in the new lands in St. Gervais and the adjoining parishes, by the fires which have spread from the woods, and destroyed the fences and in some cases the crops. He also reports that the labours of the season are generally backward, and many farmers still engaged in ploughing.—Mercury.

His Excellency the Baron de Marcell, with his family and suite, arrived here on Saturday evening. A guard of honor, with the band, attended His Excellency at the Chateau, where rooms had been prepared for his reception. On Sunday morning he attended mass at the French Cathedral, and visited the promenade near St. Louis Gate, in the evening, where the troops paraded.

Yesterday His Excellency and party visited the Falls of Montmorenci, and this day at 3 o'clock embarked on board the Steam Boat Quebec. A salute was fired from the Citadel on his departure. Quebec Mercury.

Wheat, Flour, and Pease, exported to Great Britain from Quebec, up to the 8th June:—

Wheat, 114,167 minots. Flour, 2,893 bbls: Pease, 8,343 minots.

Exports of Flour, Beef, and Pork, from Quebec to the Southern states and West Indies to 8th June inclusive:—

Flour, 8,823½ barrels: Pork, 1,945½ barrels: Beef, 1,308½ barrels.

The inhabitants of Ste Marie Nouvelle Beauce, Ste. Clair and Frampton, have already suffered from the drought and fires. In these and several adjoining parishes, the inhabitants are at this moment, sowing over their oats and barley, which had been destroyed.

Last night the weather was so cold, that there was a hoar frost; it did, however, we hear, no damage.

The Brig Carrington, has gone into the new floating dock, and it answers its purposes very well.

The Rideau Canal.—and the falls of the Chaudiere, we should imagine will soon become as much frequented, and engross as much of the public attention and conversation as the falls of Niagara. The variety of the astonishing productions of nature with which this country so richly abounds. The rapidity of the progress of the Rideau Canal is most astonishing. Colonel By (the superintendant) and his officers went through the whole line in bark canoes and returned in 12 days, at a time when the days were short. He experienced no difficulty in settling the contracts, as the greatest eagerness was manifested by the people to engage in the undertaking. Some of these had only then seen the place for the first time, some had minutely examined the whole of the intended scence of excavations, while others sent in tenders without having seen the ground at all, and this at a time when the rivers were above 15 feet above their natural level. They are now advancing with the utmost vigour in this laborious undertaking, excavating, buildings locks, damming rivers, and clearing rapids are the every days work of these enterprizing individuals.

The manner of travelling to this section of the country, has been wonderfully improved by the commencement of this undertaking. A few years ago it was the journey of a month to proceed from Quebec to the falls of the Chaudiere with a few tons of baggage. The same route was lately passed over by a Gentleman encumbered with five tons of merchandize in four days, and still further advantages may be expected, and the means of transportation and conveyance wonderfully facilitated.

The distance from Point Fortune to Hawkesbury (12 miles) is at present over a stretched road and presents considerable impediment to the passengers, from the baggage having to be landed from one boat, transported in carts and embarked on board of another; but this delay will be obviated when the Grenville Canal is completed. Every one knows the comfortable accommodation afforded in the steamboats, from Quebec to Montreal, it is nearly equally good on the other boats in the remainder of this route. The steam-boat St. Andrews, from Lachine to Pointe Fortune is comfortably fitted up and every attention paid to the wishes of the passengers. The Union boat from Hawkesbury to Hull, has been fitted up this season in a superior style and under equally good management in her internal arrangements. The Columbian Hotel on Hull under the direction of Mr. Gentle has been completely new modelled and adapts to the wishes of excellent accommodation and to the curious a highly gratifying treat being obtained in such a position as to present an interesting view of the Chaudiere Falls—and sufficiently adjacent to the public works to admit of their being visited without the traveller's being inundated with the noise and bustle attendant on such undertakings.

We have received the second report of the Committee of the House of Commons on the subject of Emigration, which we expect to be able to insert in our next. It is dated the fifth April, and the present year. After the confident expectations which have been entertained of an extensive emigration, considerable disappointment will be felt, on perceiving that for England and Scotland, the numbers to be disposed of, have dwindled down to 1,500 families. These are to be selected from among the weavers of Lancashire, Cheshire, the West Riding of Yorkshire and Cumberland, in England; and from Lanarkshire and Renfrewshire, in Scotland. It appears that the Manufacturing Relief Committee offered to advance £25,000 to assist Englishmen to emigrate, on condition that double that sum could be raised otherwise. The deficiency, the Emigration Committee recommend should be raised by Government. This sum of £75,000, they think, will remove and locate the families above mentioned in Canada.

The Committee at the close of the report say they were about to turn their attention to Ireland, 'whose population,' they remark, 'unless some other outlet be found for them, must speedily fill up every vacuum created in England and Scotland."—Montreal Herald.

On Saturday night last the Steam-boats St. Lawrence and St. Andrew were returning from the Cascades, they experienced a severe gale on Lake St. Louis—in which the latter lost the chimney pipe otherboard, and was towed into Lachine by the former on the following morning.—Soon after the arrival of the St. Andrew at the wharf, a melancholy accident occurred: a son of Joseph Laflamme, aged about six years, while attempting to go on board, was unfortunately drowned. The body has not yet been found.—Ib.

Melancholy Occurrence.

On Sunday last, while two children were playing under a covered way leading to a cellar in the village of Waterloo, the roof suddenly gave way and crushed them to death. One of the little sufferers was named Henderson—the other belonged to the family of Mr. Ferris. Their remains are to be interred this day.—U. C Herald.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, June 23, 1827.

We have no further intelligence from Europe.

Lieut. Colonel Evans, Lady and Family, arrived here in the Queenston on Tuesday last. Col. Evans assumes the command of the 70th Regiment; and in noticing his arrival, it is with regret we learn that the period of his remaining in the Province will be of short duration, as the Regiment, we understand, are in the daily expectation of receiving orders to proceed to Quebec, there to embark for England. Col. Evans and the 70th are old friends in Canada, and we have no doubt, their departure from the Country, will be very generally regretted. They have now been stationed in this Command, for nearly fourteen years.

Commissary General Turquand, from New York, arrived here in the Canada, on Monday, and proceeded to Kingston on Thursday. After visiting several parts of the Province, he leaves Quebec for England, in the course of the Summer, having lately been relieved in the charge of the Commissariat Department in Canada, by Commissary General Routh. Mr. Turquand was stationed in Upper Canada during the war, after which he was ordered to the West Indies, and subsequently received Commissary General Wood at Quebec, when his return to the Country, was highly gratifying to a very numerous circle of acquaintance, whose esteem he had acquired by his frank and kind manner, and whose kindest wishes he will take with him, on this his second removal from among them.

We observe that the following Letter of a Correspondent to the Gore Gazette, has been inserted in most of the Lower Canada papers. The subject is one which materially concerns the Commercial character of the Town of York, and merits the serious attention of all those whose interests are liable to be affected by it, in the Spring Market.

Such a practice, if it really exists, on the part of any individual, must have the effect of depreciating both the character and price of Flour, coming from this part of the Country; and we now give a place to the Letter, with the hope that the Merchants of York may be induced to take some steps, which will effectually put a stop, to conduct so highly reprehensible, as that complained of.

With the prospect before us of an increasing commerce in this particular article, which forms so important an item in the list of our exportations, it is of the utmost consequence to the Commercial interests of the Country, that its character in the market should be raised as high as possible:—

To the Editor of the Gore Gazette.

May 16th, 1827.

Mr. Editor—When in York, last week, a circumstance came to my knowledge, deeply affecting the character of the Flour made in this part of the Country, which if allowed to pass unnoticed, might have a tendency seriously to injure it; and, instead of the Brands on the Head-of-the-Lake Flour barrels, standing the highest of any made in Canada, the practice to which I am about to allude, if not made public, might depress them to the lowest: I therefore hope that you will not only yourself give this communication an insertion in your highly respectable paper, but that you will also endeavour to prevail upon your brother Editors, in Lower Canada, to do the same in theirs—it being in that market where the Flour of this Country is chiefly sold.

Having business with the owner of one of the Store Houses on the Bay side, I found him in it, repairing Flour barrels, preparatory to shipping for Lower Canada; and, being desirous of knowing what kind of Flour was sent from that part of the Country, I took a small quantity out of the lot which I supposed had been made for the purpose of inspection. On examining it, I found it of the quality of Middlings; and, moreover, from its dark colour, I judged it to have been made from Smutty Wheat. I next examined the Brand, and you may easily guess my astonishment, when I found it to be "A. Ellis," and made at the "Darnley Mill." The name of "A. T. Kirby, Inspector," was also branded upon it. A circumstance, so extraordinary, naturally induced me to make inquiries of the Store-keeper when it appeared, that a person at the Lake Head, had furnished the York Garrison with 800 bbls of Flour last year, and, as soon as emptied, the Barrels were filled with the stuff as above mentioned; no doubt, intending to pass it off as Flour of the best quality—otherwise, they certainly would have obliterated the original Brands. I am aware, that the Act, Geo. III, Cap. 5, Sect. VI, imposes a fine of Twenty Shillings for every barrel, upon the persons guilty of this practice, to be recovered in a summary way, before our Magistrates. But, as the injury will be done in Lower Canada, I am anxious that the Merchants there should be aware of the circumstance: as otherwise, the characters of our Millers and Inspectors might be ruined.

I am, Mr. Editor, your very obd. servt.

A MERCHANT.

The New York Spectator of 12th inst. contains an article on, "The Corn Laws of England," in which we regret to find that, the Editor, who in the course of his remarks, is led to the consideration of the Colonial Intercourse, has not observed that moderation, for which on other questions, we are disposed to give him credit. We are aware that the subject is a sore one, and the Spectator in alluding to it, has been thrown off his guard. He thinks that Canada cannot supply the West India Islands with Flour; (we remember, he some time ago hazarded the opinion that, it was inadequate to supply its own consumption)—and says that the making Quebec and Montreal Free Warehousing Ports, is intended only to decoy—he appears to be very angry with some of his fellow citizens, whom he calls disaffected towards the Government of the United States, because they have expressed an opinion, in which very many sensible and well informed men, throughout the Union concur, that the refusal on the part of the United States to accede to the terms proposed by Great Britain, for regulating the Intercourse between the two Countries, and which other Nations have thought proper to accept, may have the effect of "diverting the Commerce of the North; and that the West Indies will henceforth obtain their provisions, by way of the St. Lawrence, thereby diminishing the transportation upon the American Canals, and reducing the Revenue of the State."—The policy of the United States in refusing the terms proposed, has drawn forth the expression of sentiments such as these, not only from Canadian merchants, who are preparing themselves for more active business, but also from well informed mercantile men, in the State of New York; and we are not a little surprised, that their free expressions, in the Land of free opinions, should draw down upon them the epithet, of dissaffected towards the Government. We should be inclined to think, (to use the Spectators' own words on a later occasion) that the use of such epithets would, "rather, would, "make the blood of the republican brethren to boil a little"—as much at least, as he tells us his "Republican blood boiled," at the mention of the precept—"Honor the King."

Among other reasons why we cannot supply the West Indies, even if the Spectator should kindly condescend to be decoyed as he calls it, by lodging his provisions in our warehouses—he pompously puts a string of interrogations, which we hope, his cooler moments will convince him, "savor of any thing, but practical knowledge or reflection." "Are English Ships" says he "as well calculated for such a trade as American?—Have they Seamen as good? Can they sail as cheaply?"—Instead of speaking of a Nation,

"Whose Flag has braved, a thousand years, it might be supposed he was alluding to a people with whom the art of Ship building was yet in its infancy, and who were without men or money.—And after all this gasconade, he very gravely exclaims "Mr. Bull!" as he very politely calls Great Britain, of our fairness, in refusing a free, liberal and reciprocal trade between his Islands and the United States—till he becomes as it were completely inflated with pride. He says "American pride forbids our crouching, while we are in possession of "the vantage ground."—right or wrong we suppose. But we are at a loss to conjecture, what this "vantage ground" is, of which his "American pride" leads him to speak in such pompous terms. The Americans it is well known, have heretofore enjoyed a very lucrative Commerce with the West Indies, the direct intercourse of which, with no small share of the profits, is now lost to them, and which there is now every reason to hope, will in future be confined, through its more legitimate channel, the Canadas.—If this be the "vantage ground" he means, we have not the least idea that, his "pride," will be offended, by any attempt to disturb him, in the enjoyment of its possession.
The Battle, and the Breeze."

Great Britain is accused of "unfairness" by the Spectator—but the facts of the case, are comprised within so narrow a compass as to be intelligible to the understanding of every man, and such as must at once shew, that the accusation is altogether groundless. Great Britain says to the United States,—take off your Tonnage and discriminating duties—admit my Ships into your Ports, on the same terms that yours are admitted into mine, and come and share freely with me, in a reciprocal trade.—The terms are considered by other nations as free and liberal, and as such, they do not hesitate at once, to accede to them. The United States after two years of consideration, refuses them—the period is past, when Great Britain will avail herself in any thing—a consequence, she owes it to her people, and who has she to blame for all this, but herself.

But the sting of this ill-natured article, (for we really consider it as such), is to be found in its concluding paragraph. "If needed," says the Spectator, "we can put in requisition some of those fifty thousand fishermen, whom, it will be recollected, Mr. Atkinson, in his zeal for the cause of his country, cautioned his countrymen to look after, whose arms he represented to be as strong as iron, with skins as hard as leather—with such means united in a just cause, surely we have nothing to fear." This is absolute bullying; and, we repeat, that we are sorry to observe, in such language, such strong marks of a want of that moderation, which is usually observed, in the columns of the Spectator; and we can only say, that when threatening with his iron and leather, the Spectator should satisfy himself, that his cause is really just, before he endeavors, by impassioned and angry language, such as he has been led to make use of on this occasion, to stir up the bad feelings of his readers, towards a Country, with whom, it is acknowledged by the best and wisest of men, it is their interest, to cultivate a spirit of friendship.

It appears from the following article, that the American Merchants, on the Frontier of the State of New York, are preparing to avail themselves of the benefit of the Warehousing system, established in Canada:—

From the Rochester Telegraph of June 7.

" Corn Meal for the West Indies.—Mr. A. Plumb, of this village, has purchased the whole of the wastage offered by the opening of the Canadian ports to American produce. He has already shipped 100 hogsheads kiln-dried Corn Meal to Montreal, and has now in store 1000 barrels more, to go on in a few days, all designed for the West India Market.

Communication.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

Mr. Editor,

The Communication which appeared in your paper Signed Clericus, has made an unfavorable impression upon the minds of some of your readers, both as it respects a benevolent Society and its Agent; justice requires that Lord Bexley's remarks at the formation of the Society with some other papers be inserted.—

AMICUS.

Lord Bexley said—["In Canada, there are Episcopalians, Catholics, and Dissenters of all classes; therefore any Schools which may be for their benefit, must be founded on general principles, independent of particular tenets or forms of church discipline." His Lordship, in speaking of the Indians, for whom this Institution is more particularly designed, said—"Our intercourse with them has been of the most degrading and demoralizing character, we have initiated them into the use of fire-arms, and spirituous liquors, at once giving them instruments of mischief, and stimulating their worst passions to the use of them. We must now endeavour to civilize the rude tribes, instead of hunters and warriors, convert them into peaceable and industrious members of Society, making them happier in this life, and fitting them for a better hereafter. They must be taught how to handle the axe, and to build themselves houses; therefore in country, must be combined with mental cultivation; and the best mode of inculcating such habits will be found in the Bible, which must form the basis of any system of instruction, carrying to all men the comforts of time and the cheering hopes of eternity." Lord Bexley closed by moving, "That a Society be now formed in London for training Masters, and Promoting Education and Industry among the Indians and Settlers in such parts of Canada as are not supplied with the means of instruction."]

The following testimonial from Chief Justice Reid and Justice Pyke, will enable the public to judge of its practicability and utility.

" We, the undersigned, having been long acquainted with the Rev. T. Osgood, and having a knowledge of his indefatigable and useful exertions, in diffusing religious instruction throughout the remote and infant settlements of this widely extended country, feel it a duty not only to give him this testimonial, but to solicit for him the support, aid and countenance of every denomination of Christians, in his meritorious efforts to spread the knowledge of the Gospel; nor can we but add our voice in approbation of his proposed plan for the instruction and relief of the now almost destitute Indian tribes of North America, nor refrain to express our wish, that so benevolent a design may meet that support and success it so truly deserves, and which we consider Mr. Osgood so well and peculiarly qualified to carry into faithful execution."

(Signed) "JAMES REID,
Chief Justice King's Bench, Montreal.
"GEORGE PYKE,
Justice, King's Bench.

" Montreal, 23d February, 1826."

38-6m JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

For the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.*

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, therefor to the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2*s.* 6*d.*

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, un ess the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land.—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time withi hat period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

House of Commons, Tuesday, May 1.

The Member's Lobby, and the steps leading to it, were much crowded throughout the day, by persons axious to get a glimpse of the political characters regarding whom there is so much public interest at present. Considerable doubts were entertained as to the possibility of Mr. Canning's taking his seat to-day at all, from an impression which prevailed that he could not take the oaths after the clock struck four; and it was thought that the ballot would not admit of attention to any other business till some time after that hour. All misapprehension was, however, terminated by the appearance of the Right Hon. Gentleman, followed by an attendant bearing his "qualifications" for a seat. His entrance into the lobby was marked by a demonstration of eager curiosity on the part of the strangers in waiting, who by this time formed a body so dense as to make it a work of extreme difficulty for the High Constable, with his numerous posse of subordinates, to keep a clear passage for the Members. "There's Mr. Canning!" burst from many lips as the Right. Hon. Gentleman appeared upon the scene, and began to make his way through the crowd, not without considerable impediment from the curious, to the office appointed for the examination of the qualification of Members newly elected. Similar although less in degree, was the feeling of interest excited towards Mr. Peel

The Gallery was not opened till near five o'clock. At more full attendance, could not be conceived—nor did it seem possible to find room for one additional Member in any part of the building. The side galleries were crowded to excess.

Mr. Peel had taken his place on what is understood to be the neutral ground on the Ministerial side of the House, and the identical seat which Mr. Canning used to occupy during his temporary retirement from office in 1822. Mr. Goulburn sat beside him.

A new writ for the return of a Member to serve in Parliament for the borough of Ashburton, in the room of the Right Hon. William Sturges Bourne, who had accepted the office of one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, having been moved for,

Mr. PEEL rose and said—Sir, as the motion now put to the House, regards the succession to an office which I had recently the honour to hold, I hope the House will not consider me as preferring an unreasonable request, if I entreat permission to take advantage of the opportunity of explaining the grounds why I have retired from that office, and resigned into his Majesty's hands the authority he had been pleased to confer on me. (Hear, hear.) I am aware, how much of personal matter must be involved in any explanation of this kind, yet, so frequently have I, under other circumstances, obtained the indulgence of the House, that I should feel disappointed indeed, if I found I had been deceived by a vain expectation that such indulgence would be continued whenever I rose to avail myself of an opportunity to declare the motives and the reasons which induced me to take the part I have recently taken. (Hear, hear.) Three weeks have now elapsed, since I virtually resigned the office of Secretary of State for the Home Department—an office which I have had the honour to hold for a period not inconsiderable; and, as during that interval the silence which I have thought proper to observe, may have given rise to many doubts, and to much misconception, I feel doubly bound to address myself to the House to support the course which I have pursued, as one by which I ought to have acted upon public grounds—a course which was necessary to the maintenance of my consistency, and to the preservation of my own character, as of the class of public men. I have been supported by the hope that this day would afford me the opportunity I so much desired, and, that I should be enabled before the House of Commons to repose confidence I am deeply anxious to merit and preserve—to justify the course I have adopted, and to vindicate myself from those doubts, and from that misconception, to which my continued silence has rendered me liable. I say, to vindicate myself, to justify the course I have adopted, because, I do not see that a public man, having embarked in a public cause, and engaged to discharge the duties of a public office, can be warranted, upon light or trivial grounds, to withdraw from such office, and from the confidence of those with whom he had been associated. Sir, if I had acted inconsiderately, indifferently, or with levity—if I had been influenced by any private pique, or by any personal feeling—I should have felt, that although I could not be considered as morally responsible, I should have proved myself unworthy to have held the high office with which it was His Majesty's gracious pleasure to honour me. But, Sir, my motives and feelings have been of a nature far otherwise; they are shortly these—and I will, without further preface, declare them to the House. Sir, the house and the country are well aware that there is a great constitutional question, to one particular side of which I profess myself fervently attached. For 18 years I have pursued an endeavuring course of opposition—have always offered the most uncompromising hostility—against any measure for granting further concessions to the Roman Catholics. During 14 of those 18 years I have held office under the Crown, and during 11 of those 14 years, that office has been closely and intimately connected with the affairs and interests of Ireland. I still retain, and without the slightest variation, the opinions I have so long advocated; and, having so done—above all, having acted the part I have considered my duty, when, in the Lower House of Parliament I was a single Minister of the Crown, opposing the views and desires of the others associated with me—I felt that it would not be consistent with the maintenance of my character as a public man, to acquiesce in any arrangement, which, while it conferred benefit on me and enabled me to retain office, was calculated materially to promote the success of the question, to which under other circumstances, considering the nature of my opposition, that its strength and permanency were well known, I was left but one course to pursue. These, then, being the grounds—the broad, distinct, and intelligible grounds—upon which I acted—my long and well known opposition to any measure for granting further concessions to Roman Catholics—I will be judged by the country, and I appeal to the House, whether I could have given any satisfactory reason for acquiescing in an arrangement which was so plainly and decidedly calculated to promote the object I had invariably opposed, by giving political power to the Roman Catholics—a measure which I had always contemplated, and still contemplate, as tending to dangerous consequences, and, among others, to prevent the upholding of our church establishment, more especially in Ireland. As I know I must be judged by my country, according to the sentiments I had avowed from the earliest periods of my political life, according to the reasoning by which those sentiments had been supported, and according to the strength and permanency with which I had persevered in urging my views and arguments upon the House of Commons, both in office and out of office, I could not for a moment hesitate as to what course it was my duty to adopt. But I confess, even if I had changed my opinions, I should have hesitated to have acted upon that change now that the Duke of York is no more, and that the political voice of Lord Liverpool is silenced. Such, then, Sir, having been the course, the uniform course, which I have pursued during the whole of my public life, and such having been the sentiments which I held when I was appointed to office, I could not, consistently with my own feelings and my own character, continue to retain that office, after the great change to which I refer had taken place.

And now, Sir, I proceed to the next question—whether the appointment of my Right Honourable Friend to be the head of the Administration, and to occupy the place which was recently occupied by Lord Liverpool, would, if I acquiesced in the arrangement, promote the final success of the Roman Catholic Question. Sir, I think it would. I give my Right Hon. Friend the fullest credit for honesty, for sincerity, and for firmness of purpose. I judge him according as I judge myself—I judge him by the whole course of his public life—by the zeal and earnestness he has manifested in the cause to which I refer—and, feeling as I have done, satisfied with the sincerity of his intentions, I felt, that were he placed at the head of the Administration, he would promote ultimately, if not immediately, the measure he had so long desired. Feeling therefore, as I did feel, I could do no less than retire from that Administration. Sir, it is not merely that my Right Hon. Friend differs in opinion from me (that he has long done) and that it would be but just and equitable that he should continue to do so but the change that had taken place, was one which transferred into his hands, all the influence and power belonging, and properly belonging, to the office of Prime Minister. It was not a mere transfer of this influence, and this power, from one man to another, but it was a transfer from the most powerful opponent of the Roman Catholics to their most able and most powerful advocate. Under, these circumstances, then, and with reference to that question, after such a transfer, it was quite impossible that the Government could continue to be carried on under principles similar to those acted upon under Lord Liverpool, and I was, therefore, at once prepared to take the part which I have since found it necessary to take. Now, Sir, I had frequent opportunities of marking the opinions of my Right Hon. Friend, did course pursued by my Right Hon. Friend, with reference to this one and most important question, and I can only say, that each hour contributed to confirm me in the opinion, that his most strenuous exertions would always be called into action, to produce the object he has had in view from the earliest periods of his life, and of which he has been the great and able advocate. I found from the first period, when the restrictions were removed from his present Majesty—then Prince Regent—up to March last, when the Honourable Baronet who represents the city of Westminster, brought forward a resolution, the effect of which was, to grant the demands of the Roman Catholics—I found my Right Hon. Friend, persevering with the same activity and determination in the same career, for the promotion of the Roman Catholic question, which I so determinately opposed. I found in 1812 my Right Hon. Friend, after Mr. Grattan had brought forward a motion for conceding to the Roman Catholics their claims, which motion was rejected by the House—I found, I say, my Right Hon. Friend not satisfied with this decision, but that very Session bringing forward a motion, which pledged the House that, during the next Session of Parliament it would reconsider the matter, with a view to ascertain if the claims of the Roman Catholics might be granted. Now I ask, what was there to prevent my Right Hon. Friend from pursuing, in 1827, the very course which he did pursue in 1812? In 1812 the motion was rejected, but my Right Hon. Friend was not satisfied with this decision, and so brought it forward again during that Session, to be discussed in another shape during the Session that followed. I do not know that my Right Hon. Friend intended, nor do I know that he did not intend, to bring this Question of Catholic Concessions before Parliament during the present Session, or during any other. Of course I asked him for no pledge as to his intentions, and, if I had asked him, I could not expect, that on such a subject he would have given me any; but if I had accepted office under him, it would, perhaps, have been impossible for me to continue in that office, even to the end of the present Session, for, with my sentiments and avowed opinions, I could not have agreed to the consideration of a question during the next Session, which had fallen in the Hon. Baronet's hands during this. Sir, from the year 1812, to the year 1827, on every occasion when this question has been brought forward, my Right Hon. Friend has, in consistency with his professions and continued declarations, given to it his decided, his powerful, and his effectual support. But my Right Hon. Friend has not only supported it when brought forward directly, for I have found him, himself, bringing the subject before the House in such a manner as to induce concessions by parts, (but which involved (and he did not conceal the fact) the whole question. In 1822, my Right Hon. Friend originated a motion in this House for the admission of certain Roman Catholic Peers into the House of Lords. This motion I then opposed, and can I now imagine, that my Right Hon. Friend, invested with an high office, and the power and influence consequent upon it, will take a different view of this matter to that which he then took? How, then, could I stand up before the country, and offer an excuse for giving my sanction to that which I had previously opposed? No word that I say is intended as a complaint against my Right Hon. Friend—far from it—but what I have urged is necessary to vindicate my character, and to exhibit the grounds on which I have considered it necessary to decline taking office under him. What security then, I ask, have I, that my Right Hon. Friend will not do in 1827, that which he did in 1812? I will quote the very language used by my Right Hon. Friend on the 30th April; 1822, on the occasion to which I have referred; "I solemnly declare to this House, that I would not have brought this question forward, had I not felt assured, that the reparation which I ask on the behalf of the Catholic Peers, is, in the name of policy as expedient, as, in the name of humanity it is charitable, and, in the name of God, just." Now, if this measure be, "in the name of policy, as expedient, as, in the name of humanity, it is charitable, and, in the name of God, just," my confidence in the sincerity of my Right Hon. Friend does not permit me to doubt that he will press forward a measure which he so describes, whenever an opportunity occur; and I have reason to conclude that he will not rest here, because, according to his own words on that occasion, he "could not conclude without anticipating that the present partial success would lead to the attainment of the greater concession." Then I say it was not in my power to have taken office, by which I should have been party to a direct attack on those measures which I advocated. It was not in my power to have acquiesced in any partial concessions, which were intended to lead to greater; neither was it in my power to have acquiesced in any motion, whether general or partial, which had for its object the removal of those restrictions which I consider necessary for protecting the Protestant Church and the British Constitution. If I had taken office under such circumstances, I should, in fact, have held that office only upon sufferance, and should have been liable to receive the notice of a week that I must retire, when, perhaps, to do so, would have been more inconvenient than, under present circumstances, it is. Sir, could I have entertained a doubt, after the example that had been set me by my Right Hon. Friend himself, that it was my duty both as a man and a minister, to retire immediately, that my Right Hon. Friend was placed at the head of the Administration? I was, in fact, placed under circumstances nearly similar to those under which my Right Hon. Friend was himself placed in 1807, when he was invited to form part of an Administration in which the Catholic Question was not to be considered as a Cabinet Question, but one on which every individual was to be permitted his own opinions, and to make his own observations. My Right Hon. Friend then stated the grounds on which he retired from office, and he used words which I could never have borne to hear applied to me, had I retained my office as Secretary of State for the Home Department.

On a motion made by Mr. Stuart Wortley, now Lord Wharncliffe, in the House of Commons, on the 21, May, 1818, my Right Hon. Friend took an opportunity of publicly stating the reasons which had induced him to decline connecting himself with those among whom the Roman Catholic Question was to be considered an open question. Nearly do those sentiments correspond with mine. So nearly do the motives which induced him to refuse office, compel me to retire from the public service, that I will quote his own eloquent words, to express what I think and what I feel;—"I have been asked whether, supposing I had accepted the offer that was made to me, I should not have felt myself at perfect liberty to act as my own opinions should dictate upon the great question which constitutes the main bar of separation? I reply, that, as a Minister, I know I should have been at liberty. I do not mean to assert, that if I had joined the present administration, to fight against my own principles under the banners of the Noble Lord, I should not still have had the power of making my solitary speech, and of giving my solitary vote in support of opinions I had previously maintained. I will not even say, that there may not be honorable minds who would be satisfied with such a distinction, and it may be my misfortune, or my fault, that mine is not a mind of that construction. If when out of office, I have lent to any cause that I deemed just, my influence and my authority, I never can consent to accept office under the condition that I shall instantly divest myself of that influence and that authority which ought still to be my companions, and to leave them on one great and vital question, in open and wilful obsyance. Personal objections to the Noble Lord, I declare I have none; I am actuated by no feeling of rivalry, and with this particular question excepted, I could have no earthly hesitation either in acting with or under him; but I cannot allow that the predominance of his opinion shall stifle mine. I cannot enter the Cabinet pretending not to know that the influence of the Noble Lord will be such as to paralyze all my efforts there." [Cheers.]—In these sentiments of my Right Hon. Friend I fully concur. I have, I repeat, no objection of a personal nature to act with or under him, but I could not retain the place I had hitherto held in the Administration of the country, knowing that the predominance of my Right Hon. Friend would completely countervail mine on those important subjects, on which I had, after the utmost deliberation, made up my mind, and expressed my opinions [cheers]: and I felt, above all, that, in thus acting, I must be right, following, as I did, the example of my Right Hon. Friend himself. [Cheers.] My Right Hon. Friend adds something, with respect of his views of what the duties of a Prime Minister are, and added, "if I had joined this portus siccus of dissent, as Mr. Burke called it, we should have formed as beautiful a variety as was ever assembled in so small a collection." (Hear, hear, and laughter.) "But," continued my Hon. Friend. "in such unprecedented differences, on which side is the influence and authority of Government enlisted? That is the main question. This man may hold a blue opinion—another, a white—a third, a green—a fourth, a yellow—and a fifth, a red; but with which of these shades does the sentiment of Government most nearly accord? Undoubtedly, this point will be decided by the individual, who, holding the principal office, pre-eminently enjoys the confidence of the occupant of the Throne—and the additional weight he adds to the scale must overbalance the remainder. I could not, therefore, feel that I entered the Cabinet with honour, if I consented to give there a mere solitary vote. I trust, also' not very fairly put upon my trial, that my conduct is completely justified in the eyes of the House, and of the country." The Right Hon Gentleman proceeded :—I fairly own, that, whatever the situation of rank I should hold in his Majesty's Government, after the line of conduct I adopted this session, and the whole of my connexion with the Administration of the country, I had always felt that a difficulty would have lain in the way of my continuance in office: but not merely in consequence of my expressed opinions upon the Catholic question, and upon other subjects connected with Irish affairs. I have for the last twelve months, felt that difficulty in the two situations in which I was placed respecting those questions and with which my office of Secretary of State for the Home Department intermixed me. I confess the relation in which I stood with respecting these, and in which I should have been placed, with respect to the office of Prime Minister, constituted a new difficulty in the (For continuation see Supplement.)

FROM LONDON PAPERS.

House of Lords—May 2.

THE MINISTRY.

Earl GROSVENOR, in presenting some petitions from the Catholics of Ireland, made a few remarks friendly to the cause in general —believed that it would be strengthened by the recent changes in the administration—but, however advisable, he thought, to be again discussed this session—and concluded in saying, that if the just claims of the Catholics were not granted, the peace and prosperity of the nation must be destroyed.

Earl ELLENBOROGH said, that the noble Earl might, if he thought proper, make volunteer speeches on the Catholic question whenever he presented petitions, though he (L'd E.) did not think that the regular course: but of this he was sure, that since the time the present administration was constituted as it now was, there never would be any opportunity of discussing the question of Catholic Emancipation with advantage. It appeared that several noble Lords had resigned their offices they recently held, and for having done so they were most grossly assailed, it being imputed to them that they had acted in a spirit of unconstitutional dictation to the Sovereign as to the choice of his Minister. It was only due to the unblemished characters of those noble Lords that they should take this the first opportunity that presented itself, of stating to the House the circumstances attending their resignation. [Cheers.]

The Earl of ELDON then rose—As to his resignation, with him the thought of resigning was not a new one. He had for years back felt it his duty to consider whether he ought not to have quitted office long before, and if he had still retained it in opposition to his own individual feelings, only because he had been urged and importuned to do so.—[Hear, hear.] Upon this question he had no personal feelings as to the person who might happen to be placed at the head of the Government.—He might be right or he might be wrong, but supposing him to be wrong as to the view he took of the great importance of the Catholic question, he would now say, that it ought not to be postponed any longer, but that some decision ought to be come to upon it. He must also observe that he had intended to resign, even if this question had not created any difference of opinion in his Majesty's Councils. He would not say that the Right Hon. Gentleman who was now understood to be the Prime Minister, did not as zealously and anxiously entertain an opinion in favour of the Catholic Claims, as he (the Earl of Eldon) entertained against them. He again and again considered with himself, whether he ought not to alter that opinion, but he found it impossible to do so. He was decidedly of opinion, that if the question of the Catholic Claims were ever carried, there would be an end to the religious liberties of the country, and with the destruction of our religious liberties our civil liberties must necessarily cease. (Cheers. To his dying day he would support those principles, in whatever situation he might be placed. Therefore he could not conscientiously enter into the views which must be entertained by the Prime Minister of the country, whether those views were intended to be carried into immediate execution, or whether the execution of them was only suspended for the present, in order that it might take place at a future period. He had resigned without any concert or pre-arrangement with his colleagues." No censure could be too harsh for the man who presumed to dictate to his Sovereign the choice of his ministers. If his Majesty should ask advice, no censure could be too harsh for the man who should presume not to give him honest advice. If their Lordships gave him (Earl of Eldon) credit for sincerity, they would believe him, when he assured them nothing should ever prevent him from using his utmost efforts for the preservation of the Constitution as settled at the Revolution. His Lordship sat down amidst loud cheers from the opposition benches.

The Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND next addressed their Lordships.—He did not mean to offer an opinion as to the time when it might be expedient to bring forward the Catholic question, but called upon as he was, in common with his colleagues by a Noble Baron (Ellenborough), he rose for the purpose of explaining the reasons why he was no longer a member of the Cabinet. He felt, as strongly as any man could do, the impropriety of discussions of his nature—he felt as strongly as any man could, the impropriety of revealing what had passed between his Sovereign and himself—he felt as strongly as any man could the impropriety of making the course which the King should adopt, a subject of inquiry in that House. But he felt also that he, as an individual, had been most unjustly and calumniously treated.—[Cheers.] A gross charge had been brought against him by the Noble Earl, that he would not say under the influence of the Government. He should be guilty of injustice to himself if he did not eagerly seize this opportunity to vindicate his character from such foul imputation.

[His Grace here proceeded to detail the history of the correspondence between himself and Mr. Canning, the substance of which was, that unless assurances were given that Lord Liverpool's policy was not to be departed from, he should be compelled to resign; which, in the absence of such assurance, he ultimately did.]—It had been said even, that he went so far as to threaten his Majesty. But would those who knew any thing of his Majesty presume to say that any man could venture to threaten him? It was not necessary there was none, to say so was a gross falsehood. He then proceeded to observe, that when he had so expresse' his desire to withdraw from his Majesty's Councils, he could not remain at the head of the army. The office of Commander-in-Chief could not be a confidential relation with the Minister of the Crown. It was, in fact, necessary that he should be in daily communication with him. He felt pursuaded, from the correspondence that had taken place between him and the Right Honorable Gentleman, that it was impossible for him, from the relation in which he stood towards him, to consider that it would either be advantageous to his Majesty's service, or honorable to himself, to continue in the command of the army. He had now, in conclusion, only to express his wishes, hope that he had satisfied their Lordships that his intentions were pure, and his motives honorable.

Lord BEXLEY lamented the loss of those colleagues with whom he had lately acted, and assured their Lordships that, in retiring from office, there was nothing on his part like concert or conspiracy.

The Marquis of CAMDEN said that unless impossible to see the changes which had taken place in the Government, and not see that it must be conducted with infinitely less ability than that of Lord Liverpool. In him the country had lost a man of the greatest prudence and judgment—the most extensive knowledge of business which any man ever possessed before—a degree of candour which no public man ever exhibited before, rarely recognised in private life.—With respect to the explanations given by those noble Lords who composed the late Government, they appeared to him to be distinct and satisfactory, and he trusted they would acquit him of any unkind feeling in putting the question to them. He assured them that he did not concur in the base calumnies which had been circulated respecting them.

The Marquis of ANGLESEA, in a very low tone of voice, addressed the House. He stated that, upon coming into office, he bound himself to no conditions—he was free as air. It was his principle to uphold the Throne upon all occasions—not that he meant to say that it was attacked now. If any arrangements better than the present could be devised, he would be content to retire with the most perfect good-humour.

The Earl of WINCHELSEA said, that in this most preposterous coalition, some party or other must have compromised their previous political opinions.

HOUSE OF LORDS—May 4th.

The Earl of WINCHELSEA rose and said, that seeing the Noble Lords in their places on the opposite side, he would take the opportunity of asking them whether it was their intention to introduce any motion upon the great constitutional questions which had been so ably and zealously supported by some of them. The questions he alluded to were, Parliamentary Reform, the Abolition of Sinecure Places, and the Repeal of the Corporation and Test Acts. If not, he would give notice, that, upon the 11th of June, he would move, that their Lordships resolve themselves into a Committee of the whole House, for the purpose of taking into consideration the state of the nation.

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY said, that when the Noble Baron brought forward his motion, it would be expedient to ascertain how the Government really stood. It was confidently reported, that several Noble Lords had been only provisionally placed in office.

The Earl of HARROWBY rose to state, that the Noble Marquis was quite irregular in making such observations, as there was no motion before their Lordships; the Noble Earl having only risen to give a notice.

The Marq. of LONDONDERRY resumed. If, my Lords, I am out of order, I have not the slightest objection to be set right; but if the noble Earl thinks I am to be put down, or prevented from broadly or distinctly stating my opinions upon any subject, I must tell the Noble Earl, that when he does make such an attempt, he must address himself to a man of a different character, and of a different spirit. [Hear, hear, from the opposite benches.]—The extreme haste of the Noble Earl in rising to interrupt me, proves that he anticipated that what I was going to say, would not be very agreeable to him. I have right to state this, my opinion; for it has been said, over and over again, and said publicly, that the Noble Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and the Right Hon. Gentleman at the head of the Home Department, were not permanently placed in office. I would, therefore, advise the Noble Earl (Winchelsea) to wait, and not bring his motion forward, until we really and truly know who are to be in Office. This question, my Lords, is really most important, and it is most decidedly one upon which we ought to come to a right and proper understanding. For, my Lords, when I look upon the benches opposite, however, I may admire the dexterity of the artificer who composed the edifice of a sort of rubbish, after divesting it of its main pillars, its ornaments, and its strength, I cannot bring myself to think much of its durability. I doubt, my Lords, whether the Right Hon. Gentleman, the great artificer, will be able to stretch forth his hand and call up the mass of strength from any other quarters, or whether he will be obliged to content himself with the mere endeavour to keep his Administration floating as it is at present. There is another point on which I would fain say a few words, although the subject is most personally painful to me. I cannot, my Lords, without a deep feeling of regret, look back upon years gone by, and remember how, in the early part of my life, a Noble Friend of mine and I, hand in hand, under the auspices of those who carried the glory of England to its highest pitch—I cannot, when I reflect upon his seduous attention to official duties, his unblemished honesty and integrity—I cannot, without feelings of the greatest pain, see him a stranger to the situation opposite—I cannot but express my pain and my surprise, that he is to be found amongst those individuals who have ever been opposed to us—that he should be able to reconcile himself to such a state of things—that he could bring himself to sit down to such a template such a position of this House and of the Country—[Here the Noble Lord's voice completely sunk under the influence of his feelings.]—He then proceeded to speak to the following effect :—I dare say I shall be told that I have been intemperate upon this subject, and that I had no right to say what I have said; but it is only what has been already said in public. My feelings, I confess, are strong; and I consider the state of the Country so peculiar, that I could not, and ought not, to suppress them. I got up with the single purpose of advising the Noble Earl (Winchelsea,) to postpone the bringing forward of his motion, for the reasons which I have already stated; and I certainly did not expect to see so much petulence exhibited on the part of the Noble Minister (Harrowby), nor did I anticipate, that any man would have attempted to put down me. But, my Lords, so long as I have a seat in your Lordships House, so long will I stand up in my place, and fearlessly and distinctly express my opinions. [Hear, Hear.]

Lord GODERICH then rose and spoke to the following effect :—My Lords I feel that I should be wanting in respect to myself, and in respect to your Lordships, to whom I have been so recently introduced, were I to abstain altogether from replying to the observations of the Noble Marquis, whom I will still call my Noble Friend, although I presume he includes me in the rubbish of which he says the Administration is composed. But, my Lords, if the Administration be composed of rubbish, I will not consent to hesten in detail by questions put, that, upon the 11th of June, he would move, when I know, that upon the 11th of June, the Noble Earl [Winchelsea] intends to open a battery upon us—to take us by storm—and scatter our rubbish to the winds. [Hear, hear, hear, and a laugh.] For myself, my Lords, I will say, that I care not one straw for consequences, and that the only circumstance which placed me here was an anxious desire to prevent that very dissolution of the Government, which I am reproached with having carried into effect. If, my Lords, I had not consulted the strongest representations—if I had not yielded to the most earnest entreaties—to abstain from pressing my anxiety to remove from office, lest it should endanger the stability of the Administration—I, for one, would have taken leave of the public before now. This, at least, I am fully entitled to say, and now, to conclude, my Lords, I shall declare that all I ask is, a fair field and no favour; and I will fearlessly abide by the result.

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY explained. He did not mean to apply the term rubbish to the Noble Lord who had just sat down.

HOUSE OF LORDS—May 9.

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY postponed the motion of which he had given notice, relative to the new Administration, to a future day.

May 10.—The Duke of NEWCASTLE, presented a petition against alteration in the corn laws.

May 11.—Earl GROSVENOR inquired whether it was the intention of a noble Earl (Winchelsea) to submit the motion of which he had given notice. The Earl of ELDON said, that, notwithstanding that the present Administration was only provisional, he should only postpone his motion for the present; but unless something satisfactorily occurred within a short period, he should certainly bring it forward.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—May 11.

Lord J. RUSSEL stated, in answer to a question on the subject, that it was his intention, on the 7th of June, to call the attention of the House to the state of the test and corporation acts, unless, in the meantime, he received an intimation from the dissenters, that it was their wish to postpone it.

He wished to ask the Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Canning) two questions; the first was, whether the Noble Viscount who then held the office of Secretary for Foreign Affairs was permanently appointed, or to be considered merely as the locum tenens of another Noble Lord? The other question which he should ask was, whether any negociation or communication had taken place between the Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Canning) and the Hon. Member for Winchester, and his friends, with a view to the accession of that Gentleman and his party to office, previous to the dissolution of the late Ministry?

Mr. Canning rose and said, the first question I cannot answer, and I will tell the Hon. Baronet why. The same question, in substance, has been put to one of my Right Hon. Friends, and his answer having proved satisfactory to the querist, the latter has been pleased to give notice of his intention to make a formal motion on the subject Now, I declare, this formal discussion not being far off, I will not, even in answer to a question, take the motion be brought forward, be moved, by either courtesy or taunts, to utter one word that will bear upon the subject. The second question, and the answer which I have to give to it, is, whether there was, I understood, whether any negociation existed between myself and those Honourable Members with whose support I am at the present moment honoured? I will tell the Hon. Baronet all I know about the time of the dissolution of the late Cabinet.

The Hon. Baronet had, on a former evening, objected to my using the monosyllable—Yes. I hope this evening I will not be obliged to answer to his question, to my saying—No. It would be unjust to others did I not say it. But I will tell the Hon' Baronet, that it was intimated to me, that, in the event of my being at the head of his Majesty's Council, I should receive, not an accession of strength, by certain individuals being willing to take office under me, but by the disinterested support of certain individuals who had usually sat on the benches opposite to me.—(Loud cheers.) This is directly contrary to that bargaining for office, which the mind of the Hon. Baronet seems to have conceived must of necessity have existed.

The Marquis of TAVISTOCK deprecated the spirit of premature hostility displayed against the Government and said, that without professing any strong predilection in favor of the Right Hon. Gentleman at the head of the Treasury, he thought the attempt to throw him from his seat was extremely unfair. He had sufficient confidence in the Administrations to give his support to the motion now before the House.

Mr. PEEL spoke as follows:—If I rightly understand the noble Lord who has just sat down, there were some passages in his speech which alluded to me personally. I understood him to say, that two Right Hon. Gentlemen who had retired from the Government had joined to oppose the new administration with much rancour and personality against one who had been so long my colleague and friend. I utterly disclaim any such opposition —cheers—and, once for all, I beg that I may be judged by my own conduct and by my own declarations, and not by the conduct or declarations of others. (Cheers.) In the course I may chalk out for myself, I act in concert with no one. The noble Lord was about to charge me with factious and rancorous opposition; but I appeal to my own conduct to disprove it. When I first entered this House, after the change of the administration, I came prepared to support the Right Hon. Member for Liverpool in the same manner as I would have done had I been in the Ministry; but when I saw those who usually occupied the opposition benches not only behind the treasury seats, I confess that I thought I must suspend giving my confidence to the new administration till I knew who were to compose it, and what were the principles upon which the coalition, if there was one, between the opposition and the administration, was to be made. I shortly saw that the principles I had unfairly supported were about to receive a signal triumph, by the accession of nearly the whole of the noble Lord's friends.—The Right Hon. Gentleman distinctly stated, that he should oppose Parliamentary reform, the repeal of the test, and corporation acts. These are my principles, and I say, that they receive a signal triumph by the accession of the Hon. Gentleme n now on the treasury benches.—(Cheers.) With respect to the Catholic Question, the Right Honourable Gentleman has distinctly said, that it is not to be a Cabinet Question. What reason, then, have I for using rancour and personality, when the principles I have so long maintained are to be so ably supported? Therefore, Sir, I repeat, that it is my principles that have gained the triumph by the accession in question.—(Loud cheers.) When I say my principles, I do not mean to say that they belong to me peculiarly, or to one side of the House exclusively, but I mean to say, that myself to any party, but shall act, in respect to the Right Hon. Gentleman, in exactly the same manner as when in office. I do not mean to relinquish the right of inquiring into the conduct of the country, for the purpose of improving them. If nothing shall I change my course. In so acting, it is not with a view to obtain the support or confidence either of those in office or those who support the Government. What may be the principles upon which those who intend to oppose the Government mean to act, I do not know, and will not inquire; but mine I will not alter to agree with either party. Neither do I mean, if the present administration is to retain its present form; I am satisfied with the declaration that the same conduct is pursued now as when I formed a part of it. If, however, there be a change in consequence of parties, I cannot help saying that I think it ought to be immediate and intelligible, in order that all may know the principle by which the coalition is to be guided. I shall not enter into any explanation of the negociation with which I have been so recently connected, and which still, so far, follows the principles I have always advocated.

From the N. Y. Spectator.

TWO DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

The Packet Ship Birmingham, Capt. Cobb, arrived last evening, bringing the Editors of the Commercial Advertiser London papers to the 8th, Shipping Lists to the 7th, and Liverpool papers to the 5th of May, all inclusive.

The King held a Court on the 30th of April, at which the Duke of Portland, the Duke of Devonshire, the Marquis of Anglesea, Lord Dudley and Ward, Admiral Sir George Cockburn, Sir Anthony Hart, and the Hon. William Lamb, were sworn in Privy Councillors. The following were sworn into office:—The Lord Chancellor (Lyndhurst), the Right Hon. Sturges Bourne, Lord Dudley and Ward, the Marquis of Anglesea, who was also sworn in Lord Lieutenant of the Tower Hamlet.

In the House of Commons on the 7th, on a motion for a financial committee, Mr. Canning stated, that he intended to bring forward the state of the revenue early the next Session. But for the recent and extraordinary events, the subject would have been immediately brought on. He hoped the Government would not be considered as abandoning a duty by not doing this Session as much as possible, the agitation of all questions that might disturb the public mind.

General Gascoyne brought forward his motion for an inquiry into the state of the British Shipping, and spoke against the Free Trade System introduced by Mr. Huskisson.

The subject of Catholic claims was brought forward in the House of Commons on the same day; and that, with General Gascoyne's motion, excited much warmth, and brought forth the talents of both sides of the House.

In the House of Lords on the 7th of May, the Earl of Mansfield intimated his intention of submitting a motion on the subject of Catholic emancipation on the 8th of June, for which day he moved their Lordships be summoned.

There has been a rumor rather strongly circulated, that Lord Melville has been offered by His Majesty the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland.

The Globe says, "there appears great haste in sending off the military to Canada. The Romney, 50 gun Ship, is ordered off with the transports; three of the latter were ordered off from Portsmouth to Ireland, in an hour's notice, to take in troops at the Irish Ports."

Major Laing, the intrepid traveller, with his companions, have been killed in the interior of Africa. They had reached Timbuctoo, where they were received in a friendly manner, and on their way from that city with an escort, were attacked by an unfriendly tribe, and the whole party strangled. It is said there is no hope of recovering Major Laing's papers.

Accounts from Portugal, state that every thing was going on well.

Letters from the frontiers of Spain, state, that all hostilities on the part of the Silveiras was at an end, and that the Marquis of Chaves was on his way to France. Spanish refugees were forbidden all entrance into Portugal, unless provided with passports.

The French Government has formally recognized the independence of Mexico.

The excitement produced in Paris by the disbanding of the National Guards was rapidly diminishing, and the fonds were recovering their former level.

Lord Cochrane had declared the fortresses occupied by the Turks, to be in a state of blockade.

Mr. Spencer Perceval has been appointed an Under-Secretary of State in the Home Department, in the room of Mr. Dawson.

Disbanding of the National Guards.—The French papers bring intelligence of the Disbanding of the National Guards of Paris, in consequence of the disgust expressed by them, (accompanied by departures from the strict rules of military discipline,) at the ministers who attempted to invade the liberty of the press.

The Hampshire Telegraph says—"We have received a letter from Lisbon, dated May 8d, which states, that it is probable the British troops and squadron will be withdrawn from Lisbon, before the end of July."

From India.—Calcutta papers to the 5th of January, had reached London. Sir Archibald Campbell, with the troops employed in the Burmese war, had returned from Rangoon. A report was current that Rangoon had been attacked and taken by the Peguers. The Talicin were said to have advanced immediately after the departure of the British, and, after the loss of four days fighting, gained possession of the town. The Burmans had entrenched themselves in the great Pagoda. There was great reason to credit the truth of the report. The force with the Viceroy, about four thousand strong, was a mere rabble, and the chief man of Syriam, at the head of this insurrection, is known to be a man of energy and courage. It was also reported, that a Carian chief, with a considerable force, had marched against Danabey. Sir Archibald Campbell had despatched the Tornade cruizer to Rangoon on the 12th, to ascertain the state of affairs there.

Domestic.

Providential Escape.—On Friday last, one of the King's Batteaux, on its route from Kingston to this place, in passing through the La Chine rapids, with a crew consisting of the Pilot, got into the Chiauli Ecarte or Lost Passage. The boat in going over a pitch of about ten feet, strained itself considerably, and nearly filled with water. The passengers with great exertions bailed out the water, and got with much difficulty to shore. Among the passengers were Capt. McKenzie of the Frontenac, Lieut. Evan McPherson of the 66th Regt. and Walter McCuniffe, Esq. of Kingston.

The 15th and 66th Regiments of foot are under orders to embark from Ireland to Canada to relieve the 70th and 76th Regiments which have been now nearly fourteen years in this command, it is said that the transports were to sail from Cork on the 30th ult.

By the April Mail from England the following appointments in the Civil Branch of Ordnance in this command was notified:

Mr. R. Penn, Store-keeper at Kingston, to be Store-keeper at Quebec, vice Lt. Col. Gore deceased.

Mr. John B. Smith, Depy. Store-keeper at Quebec, to be Store-keeper at Kingston and Manly Gore 2d Clerk of Ordnance to be Depy. Store-keeper General at Quebec.—Quebec Mercury.

The number of Emigrants who arrived on Friday, Saturday, and yesterday morning was 1,200. The total number arrived this spring is now 3559.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, June 30, 1827.

From the Albion, we give the Speeches of Mr. Peel, and Mr. Canning, on the meeting of Parliament on 1st May. That of the former Gentleman, will, we are convinced, be read with interest, as containing the honest expressions, of an honest man, on retiring from a situation in public life, which he has filled with so much honor to himself, and usefulness to his country. The Speech of Mr. Canning, is as usual, brilliant and forcible. The courteous language he makes use of towards his late colleague, shews how highly his talents and worth, are estimated by the Premier, and the sincerity of the regret he expresses, that circumstances have caused their separation, as well as the ardency of the hope, that, that separation, may not be of long continuance. That Mr. Peel, however, will not return to office under the present administration, may be considered at certain, from later occurrences which have taken place, in the House of Commons. Mr. Peel, while he vindicates his own conduct, on conscientious grounds, considers that of his late colleagues, who have retired from office, as having been governed by motives, equally honorable with his own, and not in any degree, actuated by a desire, to controul the will of their Sovereign, an imputation which had been raised against them, as it appears, without the slightest foundation. The exception made with respect to himself, he candidly disavows, and gives the same credit to the conduct of others, which the public are willing to give to his own.

The New York Spectator of 22, gives us dates from London to 14 May, filled with Parliamentary matter of much interest. With a Supplement to this number, we are not able to give more than a brief sketch of these at present, which will be found under the proper head. Among other things we observe that, Mr. Stanley, has postponed his motion, respecting the Protestant Churches of Canada, until next session.

We have seen a Second Report of the Committee on Emigration; but it does not appear to embrace any new matter. The purport of it, is to recommend an appropriation of £50,000, from the public funds, in addition to £25,000, which the "Manufacturers' Relief Committee," offer to advance, for the removal of 1200 families, from some of the manufacturing towns, in England and Scotland, to the peculiar situation of which, the attention of the Committee, appears to have been more particularly directed, in consequence of the advance proposed by the Association. The Committee state that, they are proceeding in their inquiries with respect to the subject, as applicable to a more general system of emigration, and especially as it regards Ireland—The attention of the public in Great Britain, is very generally drawn to the question, and numerous applications are made, for assistance to remove to the Colonies.

Upwards of 8000 Emigrants have arrived at Quebec, since the opening of the Navigation, and it is probable, that the estimated number of 20,000, will be completed during the season. The papers mention that families in great numbers were embarking, from British Ports, for Canada. It is proposed to send the 1,200 families above mentioned to Nova Scotia—We should hope, that it would not in any case, be made a condition with the persons emigrating, that they should be sent to any particular Province. It has always been avowed, that the principle of Emigration, should rest on the voluntary act of the individual—the choice of settlement, also, should, we think, be voluntary.

On Friday 22d instant, we experienced a sudden change of weather, accompanied with a severe gale of wind from the North West—heavy rain, and an unusual degree of cold for the Season—fires were necessary to make it comfortable in our houses.

We have not heard of any damage having been done by the gale, in the immediate neighborhood of this place; but we regret to learn, that its effects were attended with disastrous consequences, in other parts of the Province. At Prescott the waters rose to a great height, and injured the wharves a good deal, damaging quantities of Flour, deposited upon them, for shipment to Montreal. On Lake St. Francis, we are informed, that several Durham Boats which were out during the gale, had to throw part of their cargoes overboard, and that those of others, received much damage, and the Boats nearly swamped. The Steam Boat, between La Chine and the Cascades, was detained the greater part of the day, in consequence of the violence of the gale; and the Queenston, from Prescott to this place, did not arrive on Tuesday last, until several hours after her usual time, having been detained, waiting the arrival of the Passengers by the Mail Coach.—The weather, during the present Season, has been changeable; and we have not yet had any very warm days—we are told, however, that the appearances of the crops is promising.

Among the Passengers in the Birmingham, arrived at New York from Liverpool, on the 15th inst. is the Hon. Col. Ramsay, with Despatches for Lord Dalhousie, with which he proceeded immediately to Quebec.

On Tuesday last, the body of a man, apparently drowned about three weeks, was cast on shore near Cooper's Wharf. His name we understand is John Brown. Verdict of the Jury—accidental death.

Mr. Richardson takes this opportunity of acknowledging the receipt of a Key Bugle, from the Young Gentlemen of York, accompanied by a Letter expressive of their esteem and approbation of his conduct in the management of the Canada.

In returning his sincere thanks, for the above mark of their valued esteem, and the high compliment paid him, in the accompanying Letter, he must look upon the warm and friendly colouring, which they have been pleased to give to his conduct, as a picture drawn by the free and generous hand of Youth, rather to emulate, than having semblance to the original. Nevertheless his aim, has ever been, and ever will be, to do credit to those, who placed him where he is, and to support the character of a British Seaman.

Montreal, May 11th 1827. 52-3

way of my retaining office. (Hear, hear.)—Being now returned into the ranks of private life, and in no way connected, either actually or prospectively, with office, I may be allowed to state, that I have, for some time, painfully felt the strange situation in which I stood in this House—in which I was the only one of his Majesty's Ministers, who took the view that I did of the Catholic Question. I felt that my situation here was one of delicacy—of difficulty—one of a most embarrassing nature—and that it was not one in which a Minister of the Crown ought to be placed. (Hear hear.) I entered, in the year 1822, upon the office which I had lately the honor to hold, with a full notion of the line of conduct which I should and ought to pursue. In the year 1825, I said, upon the occasion of the debate on the Catholic Question that if I retained office it would not be for the sake of office. On the three Bills introduced in that year—that for what is termed the Catholic Question—that for regulating the Elective Franchise in Ireland—and that for the payment of the Catholic Clergy, which I thought would be something like establishing the Catholic religion in Ireland—I did, in communication with my Noble Friend, then at the head of the Government, represent to him that it would be extremely painful to be separated from my friends; but I also stated the difficulty of my situation, and my most anxious wish to be relieved from it, by being allowed to retire.—at the request of my Noble Friend, however, I consented to remain—he deeming, as I did and do, that the person holding the situation of Secretary of State for the Home Department should be of the same opinion upon all important political subjects with the person at the head of the Government. But I consented to retain office, only on condition that new Parliament should be called. When I addressed the House lately on the Catholic question—I mean when it was brought forward by the Hon. Baronet (Sir Francis Burdett)—I did so with a feeling that I should be in a minority—and I was determined, should that expectation be verified, to retire immediately from office. [Hear, hear.] Although not treated by my Rt. Hon. Friends by any other than good faith, still being the single Member of Government in this House who resisted that motion, I found my situation painful and difficult—particularly when I saw all the other Members of the Administration here, not only advocating the measure, but acting in concord with their political opponents. [Loud cheering] I make no complaint of the conduct of any of my Right Hon. Friends—I only state it as a reason why my position in this House appeared to me one of difficulty. These reasons have, I repeat, for some time past influenced my mind—but if, in acting under him with whom I entered public life, and between whose opinions and my own, on public questions, there was not a shade of difference—and if in his room I found my Right Hon Friend, with whom, on some important points, I differed—I felt it would be impossible to hold the situation which I filled in the Home Department [Hear, hear,]—and if I could not retain that, it is impossible that I could be guilty of the paltry subterfuge of removing to another—[Cheers] no alternative, therefore, remained to me.—The relation of the office of Secretary of State for the Home Department, with that of the Prime Minister, is most intimate. Not only does all the Irish business come under the administration of the Home Secretary, but in every instance of civil preferment—in every promotion of the Church—in short, in every instance of official appointment made by the Prime Minister, the signature of the Secretary for the Home Department is indispensable. I must, therefore say, that the office of the Home Department should not be filled by a person differing in opinion from the person holding the situation of Prime Minister. [Hear.]—No other alternative presented itself to me, therefore, than that of coming into the most painful collisions, or of that of retiring from office, and a pretext for which might be found in some single isolated point, without acquainting the country with the real cause. Thus feeling, it was my duty to prevent the occurrence of the most painful of the alternatives, by retiring from office, rather than run the risk of embarrassing the Administration, and of interfering with the public service, by that collision. [Hear, hear.] These are my views, with reference to the Catholic Question, and with reference also to the duties of the Secretary of State for the Home Department; and mixed up as those duties are with the affairs of Ireland, they furnish, in my mind, imperative reasons why I should not retain office under my Right Hon. Friend. And, acting on these grounds, I did, with regret certainly, but without hesitation, signify to his Majesty, that it was impossible for me to continue to hold office. The first individual to whom I communicated that I should not be able to take any part in the new Ministry, was my Right Hon. Friend himself. At that moment, I not only did not make my intention known to, but was totally ignorant of the determination of any other person on the same point. I am sure that my Right Hon. Friend will do me the justice to say, that, on the very first occasion, the 29th March, on which I mentioned to him my determination, I also told him the nature of my feelings for some time previously, and that they dictated to me my retirement from office. That intimation was conveyed by him to the highest quarter, where no reserve could be preserved. It cannot, therfore, be imputed to me, that I acted with precipitancy, for at the moment when I first mentioned my intention, I stated also the difficulties that presented themselves to my remaining in office. I stated that I would have felt pleasure in remaining connected with the late Administration—that if any arangement could be made, by which an individual of sufficient weight might be placed at the head of Government, with the same principles as those which had governed my Noble Friend, I was willing to retain the office I had previously held. [Hear.] I must also state, that I declared to my Right Hon. Friend, that the Catholic Question, and the connection of the situation of Home Secretary with that of Prime Minister, formed the only difficulties that interfered with my retention of office, and that if these could be obviated, I was ready and willing to remain; but that, finding myself in the situation I had described, I had felt from first to last, I could not possibly acquiesce in my Right Hon. Friends' proposition for becoming a Member of the new Administration. Those were the grounds for my conduct, and I trust, that carrying my determination into effect, it will be seen that I acted in the most candid manner. I adopted this course without consulting or communing with any other member of the late Administration—[Here.]—but although I so acted without concert with any one else, let me repel the shameful and scandalous imputation, that they ought to be looked upon as having acted in a spirit of cabal and with an intention to dictate to their Sovereign. [Cheers.] Let me also repel the idea, that I wish my case, or my situation, shall be distinguished or made different from theirs. [Cheers.] I am ready now to meet the charges of combination brought against my Noble Friends, and am prepared to vindicate them, and to show, that in the course pursued by them, they were not only perfectly justifiable, but that their views, and their conduct, were precisely those that ought to be held up as examples to others.—[Cheers.] Their conduct, instead of being censurable, was worthy the imitation of all other public men. [Continued cheering.] The assertion, that their resignations have been the result of cabal, is not only not the truth but is directly the reverse of it. If there was any appearance of concert in their conduct, it was purely accidental—for if they could have been base enough to cabal against their Sovereign, they would have had the cunning to conceal it. [Hear.] I admit, that if such had been the conduct of my Noble Friends and Colleagues, it would have been inexcusable. Acting in conformity with the principles which always influenced me, I declared that if the Government could be re-constituted with my former Colleagues, I might be induced again to accept office; and that, even were I not to participate in the Administration, I would give them my support. Until the 9th of April, the very day before that on which his Majesty laid his commands on my Right Hon. Friend, to form an Administration, I never spoke to my Noble Friend, the Lord Chancellor, on the subject; the charge of concert in that instance, therefore, is untrue; and, upon my honour, I believe the same with respect to every other of my Noble Friends and Colleagues. [Cheers.] I do not believe that one man of them knew or was influenced by the intention of the other. [Hear.] The charge of dictating to his Majesty is untrue as the charge of Cabal; there was no such intention on the part of any Member of the late Administration. [Hear.] I am convinced, therefore, that, not only with respect to myself, but with respect to the Lord Chancellor, and with respect also to the illustrious individual whose name will be stamped forever on the Annals of his country—that individual who has not been more remarkable for the brilliancy of his career than for the simplicity and singleness of his character and conduct, which are only comparable in extent with the repect which he bears to the kingly office, and above all, the sincerity of his devotion and attachment to the sacred person of his Majesty—I am thus convinced, I say, that with respect to them and myself, I have proved that this charge is as unfounded as it is base. When I see that illustrious man attacked, I see something so extraordinary in the ingratitude, as well as in the falsehood, of such a charge, that I can scarcely trust myself to speak of it. [Cheers.] I abstain from going further into detail, because an other opportunity of doing so will be afforded me. I trust that the House will feel, that I was called upon to offer myself to their attention, and I feel deeply the indulgence with which I have been treated. I hope I shall be allowed, on a matter involving considerations of great public importance, with those of strong, private, and personal, feeling to add a few observations more. [Cheers.] My separation from my Right Hon. Friend, with whom I acted with so much cordiality, has been to me a source of great regret—a regret, however, which is much mitigated by the recollection, that I have done every thing in my power to prevent it.

[The Right Hon. Gentleman concluded by expressing his regret that his retirement from office would prevent him from carrying into full effect his reformation of the Criminal Laws—an object that has been the main hope and solace of his life. He stated, moreover, with exultation, Tory as he was, that there was not a single law in the Statute Book connected with his name that had not for its object the amelioration of the Criminal Code, and a more humane and impartial administration of the laws. During the severe commercial distress of the last two winters he had not been under the necessity of resorting for any greater security in the application of power than the laws already afforded him. He had ever sought to maintain the civil rights of the subject while he supported the just prerogatives of the Crown and maintained inviolate the ancient institutions of the Country. He concluded amidst the loudest applause.

Mr. CANNING then rose and said—The speech of my Right Hon. Friend I shall confirm in nearly all its parts. I can bear testimony that, throughout the whole of the discussions that have taken place since Parliament adjourned, I have kept up with my Right Hon. Friend the most constant intercourse; and throughout I have found in him the same candor and sincerity, and the expression of the same just feelings, and a uniform exhibition of the same high principle, to which he has laid claim in the discourse which he has this night delivered. I assure the House that they much mistake the position in which I have the honor to stand, who believe that position to be one of gratified ambition, or as conveying the feeling of unalloyed satisfaction. [Hear, hear.] From the beginning of these discussions, I foresaw—both of us foresaw—that they must terminate in our mutual separation, which I hope to God may be only for a time. Had the question been merely between my Right Hon. Friend and myself, and had it been to be decided by his retirement or by mine, I do most solemnly declare it should have been decided by the latter. [Hear, hear.] Sir, my Right Hon. Friend had the courtesy to state to me yesterday, his intention of making some observations to the House on the present occasion. I had, therefore, the opportunity of doing that without which I should never have been able to address the House with satisfaction to myself—of asking his Majesty's gracious permission to state such passages concerning him in the late discussions, as might be necessary to explain my conduct. I knew not whether the House will be surprised to hear—my Right Hon. Friend will not, for I have already stated it to him—that when I was first called upon by his Majesty for advice, in the critical situation in which the Government was placed, aware—for why should I disguise the fact?—of his Majesty's individual opinions, I counselled him to make the Government conformable to those opinions. That council necessarily involved my own retirement, and that retirement would have been made with a much more cheerful heart, and a more confident assurance, from the position in which it had placed me, than I had at any subsequent stage of these transactions. Sir, in offering my advice to His Majesty to constitute a Government opposed to my opinions, I begged leave to withdraw myself, as I could not form a part of such a Government. Now, Sir, why did I do this? I, as the House may do me the honor to remember, have always defended, and as I still do defend, the existence of an Administration divided in opinion upon the Catholic question: I will tell the House my reason for so doing. Not many months ago, from quarters which I will not name, strenuous advice was addressed to His Majesty to place his Government on a footing of unanimity with respect to the Catholic question, and that unanimity to be one of uniform opposition to that question. Lord Liverpool, to whom this advice was communicated, at the same time that it was addressed to His Majesty, in a letter to His Majesty, stated first, that having been one of the original authors of a Government divided in opinion on that question, he, for one, never could concur in an Administration excluding one party. Lord Liverpool added also his advice, or rather his opinion, of the great difficulty that would attend the forming of such a Government. Such was Lord Liverpool's opinion; and when I advised His Majesty to form such a divided Government, it was not for me to estimate the difficulties that would impede it. It was, had His Majesty thought fit to adopt the advice, for those of His Counsellors, who were to form part of an Administration so constituted, to counsel such a course as they might have thought would attain their end. I did not disguise either from my Sovereign or myself, that it would be work of difficulty, but I was far from thinking that it would be a work of impracticability. What became of that advice is manifest by the result. It was not acted upon; but for what reason it was not acted upon, I am not aware; and more than I know, I will not state. This I can say, that from the time I saw His Majesty, down to the period at which he came to town, so far from seeking to obtain the situation in which I now stand, my first act was to advise, that the experiment so loudly called for in debate in this House, and which I understand was intended to be brought forward in the abortive motion of the Hon. Member for Somersetshire—[A laugh]—should be tried. I earnestly desired that it might have met with a fair trial, and I declare to God, that there was nothing I more wished, or was nearer to my heart, than to step out of the way, in order that the experiment might be made. But when I was told that such a Government could not be formed, and when I said I could not be a Member of an exclusive Administration, or, indeed, of any which was not constituted upon the same principle as that of Lord Liverpool, with respect to the Catholic Question, viz. a division of opinion on that question, and as a necessary consequence, its not being made a Cabinet measure, a totally new question then arose. It was not, whether I should or should not remain in the Government to be formed, but whether I should remain in a Government discredited in my own and the country's opinion. God knows whether I cast myself in the way of the embarrassing situation in which I afterwards found myself. It was proposed to me, that an Administration should be reconstructed upon the same principle as that of Lord Liverpool's, placing at the head of it, in the same situation as was held by that Noble Lord, some Peer, holding his Anti-Catholic opinions. What principle was I then, in my own person, desired to sanction?—I was desired to give my assent to this principle:—that holding the opinions I do hold upon the Catholic question, was a disqualification for holding the highest office the King had to bestow. [Hear.] I care not for office; I will quit any office; I will go to the extremity of the earth, rather than submit to a condition that I should not hold office on account of holding those opinions. That principle of exclusion would be next in degree only to the exclusion of the Catholics themselves. Now, Sir, that was a condition to which I would not, and never will, submit. I would have quitted office a thousand times, and have consented to be proscribed from it for ever, rather than that any future statesman should have had to execrate my memory for having affixed such a blot upon the character of a question, my strenuous support of which I had ever, up to this time, thought myself free to proclaim. I hope, Sir, I have now vindicated myself from the charge of overweening ambition. [Cheers.] My first object was to quit office altogether. I was willing to retire from office with the other members of the former Government; but I was willing to remain in with them, had I not held the opinions that I did hold on the Catholic Question. I have only to repeat, Sir, here, in reply to another charge which some have preferred against me—"that the new Government which has been formed, consists chiefly of Catholics," (that is, of members friendly to the question of emancipation)—a charge which has been made, and not unintentionally, I think, in a speech which has been delivered this evening—as if there had been a breach of faith on my part, in dealing with the late Cabinet, for not having proposed to my Sovereign a plan for a new Cabinet, that should have embraced an equal portion of the supporters of both sides of that question. I have to make only this reply:—The Hon. Secretary who makes the charge, is himself, well informed that I did suggest, and did endeavor and intend to exequite, such a plan of new administration.—[Hear, hear.] But, Sir, that Hon. Secretary is equally well in formed, moreover, that when, upon the 12th of April last, I went to the chamber of my Sovereign, intending to propose a plan and arrangement which should comprise all the Members of Lord Liverpool's Government, and embrace, therefore, an equality of Protestant and Catholic votes—he is well informed, that a circumstance occurred which prevented that intention from taking effect. And was it my fault, Sir, that, by any sort of concert I certainly will not venture to say, but by a singular coincidence, undoubtedly—at that very time, on that very day, and in that very chamber, six Protestant resignations were put into my hands?—[Hear, hear.]—Observe, Sir, the charge against me is, that I have organized a Government all Catholic, as to its views upon that question, having promised to form one that should be half and half; and my Hon. accuser sinks the indisputable fact, that the protestant half of the Administration contemplated withdrawing themselves. [Cheers.] I think, that it is rather too hard to charge that resignation upon their parts, as a breach of faith upon mine.

[Here one or two Members communicated with Mr. Canning for a few moments.]

I beg pardon, Sir; I have unwillingly included in the number of these resignations my Lord Melville, and am well reminded that we have been told, on the present occasion, that his resignation, also, was upon the ground of the Catholic question, of which he has always been a supporter.—(Hear, hear.) Lord Melville's resignation I did not mean to include in this enumeration: so that, instead of six, I should have said five, Protestant resignations. However, five Protestant resignations, at all events, came into the King's hands, within twenty-four hours; and thus, five of the members on whom I had reckoned for the new Cabinet, were at once withdrawn. I said, upon this statement, I do again ask, whether it is fair to impute to me a wilful non-execution of the orders of my Sovereign, in the formation of that Cabinet. (Hear, hear.) But did the matter rest here, Sir? I received these resignations about the middle of Thursday, and within some two hours of the meeting of this House. I had already given directions for the moving of the new writ—(I e. for the borough of Newport, we presume)—when I received these resignations. Upon receiving them, I said to my Sovereign, "Here, Sire, is that which disables me from executing the orders I have received from you, respecting the formation of a new Administration. It is now open to your Majesty to adopt a new course, for no step has yet been taken in the execution of those orders that is irrecoverable; but I must fairly state to your Majesty, that if I am to go on in the position where you have been pleased to place me, my writ must be moved for to-day, for if we wait until the holidays, without adopting any definite steps, I see that it is quite hopeless for me to attempt to persevere in the objects I have undertaken." I need not repeat to the House, the words in which my Sovereign graciously replied to this representation, but I may state that he gave me his hand to kiss, and confirmed me in the office to which I had been named. (Loud and repeated cheers.) These, then, Sir, are the steps which I really have taken; these are the means by which I have been placed in the station which I at present fill. I have meddled not with the conduct or opinion of any other man. I have already expressed my unequivocal, unqualified approbation of the course pursued by my Right Hon. Friend, Mr. Peel, and of the candor with which he has declared himself on that point. What have been the principles and conduct of others among my late colleagues, for the best of reasons and the wisest, I do not pretend to say; for really I do not know them. (Hear.) That conduct I can only view by its results; results which have been assuredly most painful; and I may truly say, to me, as painful, as in almost every instance—(every instance I do not say, for I assiduously except my Right Hon. Friend)—they were unexpected. Sir, I really know not in what way I had sinned in the eyes of my colleagues—those other of my colleagues I should rather say—that they should refuse acting with me. I had never offended them intentionally, nor did I know that I had ever excited among them unwittingly any feeling so hostile or personal to me, as to be at all likely to lead to this result. (Hear, hear.) Between my Right Hon. Friend and myself, it is almost unnecessary for me to observe, that upon every subject, in every discussion I can call to mind, upon all great questions of foreign or domestic policy or legislation—this one unhappy question of Catholic Emancipation excepted—there has been that sort of general agreement, that I do not believe there exists the individual with whom my opinions are in more complete accordance—(Loud cheers)—and I do not think any greater calamity could have befallen the Country than my Right Hon. Friend's secession from office.

[The Right Hon. Gentleman, speaking of the other seceders from the Cabinet, said, that on all occasions, his administration of the Government, and the Country, had received their decided approbation. Their secession then, he could not account for upon any grounds.]

There were two topics growing out of the speech of my Right Hon. Friend, upon which he will allow me to make one or two observations, that I may set myself right upon points, touching which he has laboured, I think, under some degree of misunderstanding. My Right Hon. Friend says, how should it be possible that when I have been advanced to the high situation in which I now stand, my moral existence, even in that situation, and other contingent results, arising out of it, but for which I am not responsible, should not be in itself a great moral advancement and promotion of the Catholic question and cause. Sir, I cannot deny the truth of the propositions that insinuated, and in that proposition any Hon. Gentleman who will take the trouble to put the question and the answer to the question together, will see that they supply the answer to be given to the taunts of the Hon. Baronet opposite, when he asks, "How do Gentlemen, who have hitherto differed from the Government on the question of Catholic Emancipation, consent to support it now, when that question has acquired an accession of votes in the new Administration?" I answer, Sir, because they see the Protestant votes in the late Cabinet retiring from the new one, they see, that the very reason which leaves me here, in my present situation is the reason that has determined the late Members of that Government to take their places by the side of the Hon. Baronet.—[Cheers.] That state of opinions, or the state of thinks which was thus likely to be produced, might have been a very good reason for advising my Sovereign not to place me here; and I have already shewn the House, that I was prepared, not only to accede to such a determination, but even to anticipate it. But it were a little too much, I think, to say, that the reason shall be good for my Right Hon. Friend to justify his secession from Administration, and not good for me to account for the position in which the new Government I have had to form is necessarily placed. [Cheers.] If my Right Hon. Friend thinks that he ought to take the step which he has taken, and that his late colleagues are justified, also, in declining to act with me, why, surely, others are justified, upon their retirement, in saying that they will support me, because my Right Hon. Friend and his colleagues will not. But I am asked —"is the Roman Catholic Question, in point of fact, with the new Government, a Cabinet Question?" No. [Loud cheering.] It stands exactly, Sir, as it did in the year 1812, which my Right Hon. Friend has not exactly distinguished from another part of that year to which his speech referred. It is very true some to refer to books in discussions of this kind, and not being prepared to anticipate the necessity of consulting them on this occasion, I did not bring them down with me; but in consequence of my Right Hon. Friend's speech, I have sent for them, and I can now regar to them. My Right Hon. Friend says, that in a debate which took place on the 25th of May, 1812, in assigning my reason for not joining Lord Liverpool's Government at that time, I stated, that I should be coming into a Cabinet that would smother my own opinions, or that I used expressions to that effect, and yet, that on the 22d of June of the same year, I brought the Catholic Question into this House, and carried it by a great and extraordinary majority.

But did nothing, Sir, intervene between the 25th of May, and the 22d of June, to cause the change, to which my Right Hon. Friend alludes? Was there no alteration in the condition of the Government, and the feeling of Parliament, upon that subject, during this interval. Yes: for on the 25th of May, which was shortly after the death of Mr. Perceval, Lord Liverpool came to me, to propose to me to become a member of the Administration.—What passed on this subject, Gentlemen will be pleased to remember, was published, together with all the negociations entered into on that occasion; and having been so recorded, cannot have since been altered, they will perceive, to answer a temporary purpose. It appears here, (Mr. Canning was now reading from printed papers) that the first question I asked Lord Liverpool was, whether the opinions and policy of the Government were to be considered altogether unchanged and unalterable, touching the Laws affecting the Roman Catholics? Lord Liverpool answered, that his own opinions upon those matters undoubtedly remained unaltered, and he was not aware that those of his colleagues had experienced any change. Now, here, Sir, I pause to ask what was the condition in which the Catholic question stood then? At the period of the unreserved communication of Lord Liverpool invited into his Government, Lord Sidmouth and Lord Castlereagh; and in the very first debate upon this question which took place in this House, after that junction, Mr. Perceval and Lord Castlereagh both declared themselves, in the course of the discussion, inimical to the agitation of the question at that opportunity. Lord Castlereagh said—(the House will observe, that it was upon Mr. Grattan's motion, in April, 1812)—"With respect to the vote I shall give to-night, my Right Hon. Friend has clearly stated, that the Cabinet intimates an opinion, that the propriety of further concessions to the Catholics could not now be agitated, nor any inquiry be gone into at present on the subject of the disabilities affecting His Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects in Ireland, with advantage to the empire, or a due regard to the welfare of the community at large." Why, then, Sir, the footing upon which the Cabinet then stood, in respect to the Catholic Question, was one of general resistance to it, and in the Government itself, there was a joint determination to act upon that authority. It was in that state of things, that on the 25th of May, 1812, I refused to join in Lord Liverpool's arrangements, and I gave him my reasons for not doing so, which were involved in that determination on the part of the Administration and the Cabinet. But what happened in the mean time, between May the 25th, and June the 22d? Why, that in June, Lord Castlereagh came down to this House, and being questioned by the Hon. Mr. Spencer Stanhope, whom many Gentlemen round me will remember, I believe—as to the footing on which the Catholic question was then to stand, (this was after the death of Mr. Perceval,) Lord Castlereagh said, "it was so far changed, that, whereas, up to that period, the Cabinet, though comprising members who were actuated by different opinions on the subject, had yet all concurred in hostile resistance to it; they were now not only to think, but to vote if they thought proper, in pursuance of those respective opinions." Then, I contend, Sir, that between those two periods of which the Right Hon. Gentleman has spoken, the Cabinet itself was changed in its character, as regarded this question. It was changed, by being put upon that independent footing on which my Right Hon. Friend and myself have voted in it together, for so many years. Did this altered condition of circumstances effect no change in the condition of the Catholic question? Assuredly, it did; and I well recollect its being hailed by Mr. Grattan, and many others, who voted with him, as a most important accession to that cause, the proof of the fact is, that my motion was carried by a triumphant majority. Now I think I have sufficiently explained the difference which had arisen between the two periods in question as to this important subject, and as to my views upon it. I have not the vanity to believe that the speech to which my Right Hon Friend refers procured that result of which I have spoken; but three days afterwards, I find that Mr. Spencer Stanhope rose to put a question to the Noble Lord:—"He wished to know if it was intended, on the part of the present Ministers, that the same policy, in every respect, should be observed by them, in reference to the Catholic question, which had been observed by the Administration, under a late Right Hon. Friend?" Lord Castlereagh said, that he felt some difficulty in answering the question of the Right Hon. Gent. literally, the arrangements for the new Ministry not having been yet fully completed. But as to the spirit of the question, he though he could be more satisfactory. He could say this, from his knowledge of those employed in forming that Administration, that, generally, these sentiments remained the same. Upon a former occasion, they had thought, inclusive of those who were favourable to the measure, that the present was not the time for discussing that question, and in still thinking so, that recent decisions of Parliament formed a leading consideration in influencing the adoption of that opinion. The sense of Parliament having been, at least for the present, definitively pronounced, they thought that any immediate revived discussion would only create irritation without being productive of any thing useful. He was aware, however, of the growing change in favour of those claims; and, in submission to that change, and the real sentiments of certain Members of the Government, it had been resolved on, as a principle, that the discussion of this question should be left free from all interference, on the part of the Government, and that every Member of that Government should be left to the free and unbiassed suggestions of his own conscientious discretion." Here, then, it is evident that a complete change was, at that time, considered to have occurred between the 25th May and the 10th of June, 1812, in the opinions of the Government. At the former period, the Cabinet were all united in resistance to the Catholic Question; at the latter, it was to be left open and free to the unbiassed discussion of all or any of the Members of that Cabinet. (Hear.)

But, to come to the present condition of that question, I say again, it remains in this Government, in the state in was truly described to be in by Lord Castlereagh in 1812; and precisely as it has been since repeatedly described by myself, in short, as it was described to be in 1825, in a debate which took place in the month of March upon the state of Ireland and in the very last debate in the last Session of Parliament, in the same year, upon Catholic Emancipation. On this head, I will only add, that I hold myself as perfectly at liberty to propound in the Cabinet, the Roman Catholic Question, as I feel myself free to propound any other question affecting the national interests, assuming to myself only the liberty of bringing it forward at such times as my own judgment, and the exercise of my own discretion, and present circumstances, shall direct me. (Cheers.) Such was the footing upon which this question stood when I was the colleague of my Right Honourable Friend; and on that same footing it stands now. Let it be observed, therefore, by those with whom I have formerly acted, and from whose objections on this occasion I do not shrink, however, the acknowledgment I have made may be attempted to be converted into matter of opposition to us, that, with those who form the present Cabinet, and some of whom formed part of the last, the Catholic Question now stands on the same ground as it stood on under Lord Liverpool's Government. That is a question which each Member of the Government is at liberty, if he pleases, to bring forward in the Cabinet, or to propound to Parliament; but if any Member of the Government shall so bring it forward in either House of Parliament, he is distinctly to state that he does so in his individual capacity only, and not as pledging his Colleagues to his own opinion on the subject. (Hear, hear.) This, Sir, is the position of the Catholic Question now: it is the same in which it was placed in the year 1812; it is the same in which it has now stood for fifteen years successively. (Hear hear.) That it should remain in this state is a fact which I know has been much objected to by many: but if I consider the state of the country at large—the inclination of men's minds upon this matter in England as well as in Ireland—and the infinitive difficulties which surround the attempt at present to alter that state—it is, in my judgment, and in my conscience I believe it to be, the only footing upon which it can be at present left, unless there be the views of partisans to be consulted, the accomplishment of whose wishes on the one hand, or whose attempt to stifle the and growing opinions on the other, would, in the result, lead to a convulsion in one part or other of the United Kingdom. (Hear, hear, hear.) Now, Sir, I am not prepared for convulsions in either. (Hear, hear.) I would not raise hopes which I do not see any immediate means of realizing. In making this observation, I cannot speaking of the moral accomplishment of those hopes, but of exciting expectations without having good grounds to anticipate their immediate or speedy fulfilment. I remember too well, and but a short memory indeed is required for that purpose, how much has been uttered in the way of complaint in debates of this House upon the Catholic Question, about things being said and done in Ireland that had raised expectations, which ought not, it has been observed, to have been excited, unless the authorities from whose acts and declarations emanated, were prepared to follow them up. Now, Sir, it is precisely because of my not being at present prepared to follow them up, that I will not raise such expectations. Much and cordially as I agree with those who view the measure itself of Emancipation, as calculated to tranquillize Ireland; I yet estimate very highly the degree of passive resistance to it which exists in this country. (Hear, hear.) I would not run against the feelings any more than I would against the interests of England. But if looking to the character and extent of that resistance, I am asked whether I despair of the ultimate success of the question, I answer, that I do not despair that the good sense of the English people, from candid discussion, and repeated consideration of it, notwithstanding more factious resistance to the claims themselves, will ultimately concede those claims. I say, I think, Sir, the time will come when will meaning and conscientious, and even intelligent people, now among the most strenuous and most honest opponents of this great measure, will look back with a degree of surprise, and almost incredulity, at the opposition which they have, up to that time, manifested to it. But, though I think this, I am not prepared to run counter, in the mean time, to English feeling. A single week of peace in England, is worth a much larger portion of time devoted to the accomplishment of a great, but, as yet, a theoretical, good in another portion of the empire. Though I thus confidently expect the dawn, I am by no means prepared to hasten it—though I know the present darkness upon this subject, for darkness I must consider it, will be succeeded by a great illumination in the minds of men. I am disposed to watch patiently the progress of that enlightenment This result I heartily hope for, but I will not endeavour to anticipate it by any attempt to force the judgments of any community. (Hear.) I hope I have now, Sir, given the Hon. Gentleman every satisfactory explanation upon the topics which have been this night referred to. (Loud Cheers.) So far as I am aware, I have kept nothing back; but when I am taunted by questions such as that which an Hon Gentleman has put to me, whether I do not know that in the very penetralia of the Royal breast there exist feelings repugnant to the Catholic Claims, I reply, that I would venerate in that most illustrious Individual, as I did in his Royal Father, the repugnant feelings which actuate him on this question. (Hear, hear.) I would hurt no feelings as I have already said, of that nature. But if I am asked by that Hon. Gentleman, whether I think the Coronation Oath is any obstacle in the way of concession on the part of the Crown, I answer, No. (Hear, hear.) No more did Lord Liverpool—no more did my Right. Hon. Friend himself; and if the time shall ever come when it may be necessary to argue that question, I shall derive my best argument, for the view I take of that point from the opinions which have already been addressed to Parliament upon the subject by those great men. (Hear, hear.) Let not, then, the people of England be run away with the notion, that by the carrying of the Catholic Question, the peace of their country would be endangered. The time has passed when those pernicious influences, which have been so much adverted to, could be any longer exercised by the Catholic Church with any effect, upon its security or its welfare. But does the Hon. Gentleman, who so much deprecates all discussion of this question, imagine that it can be avoided? Does he imagine that this is an object of political necessity, the accomplishment of which can be overlooked? Does he suppose that if we will not consider it, it is a question which will sleep? Or does he believe, that if it should sleep, it will be awakened by any other than a dreadful and deplorable emergency. (Hear, hear, hear.) No, Sir, we must look it in the face. We must not turn from it. But, though I believe that it is a question which has gained strength from the change which has taken place in the Government—(a change, God knows! not of my seeking)—though I concur with those who imagine that it is a cause which has acquired additional power—I would not force it by pressing it upon Parliament now any more than I did when I sided with my Right Hon. Friend near me, and the Government of Lord Liverpool.

Mr. Canning concluded a brilliant speech, by alluding to the sacrafice he made in 1822, when he was induced to relinquish his appointment to the Government of India, for that of Minister of Foreign Affairs, and said, that if at that time the latter situation had been offered him with the stipulation that he should not succeed to an higher office, merely on account of his sentiments on the Catholic Question, he would have indignantly spurned the offer. "In short," said he, "to agree to serve under such men, on such a condition, I should regard as the badge of my Helotism, and as the indelible disgrace of my political existence. [Loud and vehement cheering.]

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OFFICE
York 7th February, 1827.

NOTICE is hereby given, by order of His EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR in Council, that unless John Bowman, late a private Soldier in the Glengary Light Infantry Regiment, the Original Locatee of Lot number seven, Concession C. Township of Murray, in the District of New Castle, do shew cause within six Months from this date, why the Location should not be rescinded, the Lot will be Granted to William M. Bullock, of Murray, aforesaid, Gentleman.

38-6m JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2. All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement.—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, un ess the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improvethe same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land.—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

DOMESTIC LOVE.

I've mingled in the wild delights,
The revels of the festive throng,
Indulged in fancy's fondest flights,
And chased the phantom, Pleasure, long;
Even from a gay and giddy boy,
I strove to drown each care with glee,
But never, never, tasted joy,
Till found, Domestic Love, in thee.

The bright romance of fervid youth,
The glory of those golden days,
When love's sweet image passed like truth,
Herself before my rapturous gaze;
The luxury of each day dream,
By warm anticipation wove,
In all their fragrant freshness teem
Concentrate in Domestic Love.

This peaceful home; these fervent friends,
These budding blossoms of my line,
With whom my very being blends,
Whose destiny and hopes are mine;
If there's a Paradise on earth,
It glows around the social hearth
Of home and dear Domestic Love.

England.

STATE OF TRADE.

Bolton, May 12.—An increased demand for cotton goods has been visible for several weeks past.

At Chorley we are informed a slight improvement in wages has taken place. At Preston, business is extremely brisk, and an advance of wages is shortly expected. At Ashton-under-Line, a general advance of 10 per cent. in weavers wages has taken place, and in some particular instances as much as 25 per cent.—Bolton Chron.

We are gratified to find that the accounts from Manchester, Nottingham, and other great manufacturing towns, fully confirm the decided improvement in the trade of the country. The weavers have constant employment at increased wages.

We are told that the low prices at which the British goods have been sold have beat down and nearly destroyed the foreign manufacturers. From an increased trade we shall no doubt derive an increasing revenue. Extracts of a letter from Manchester, dated the 10th inst.—"The business doing here is immense; the demand is both for export and home use. The wages in the neighbourhood are generally so advanced as to enable the labourers to live without parochial assistance: every person willing to work is employed."

An eminent cambric manufacturer has this week informed us, that, at the advanced prices he is now paying, his weavers will earn from ten to sixteen shillings per week. For fine fancy goods there is a very good demand, and the wages of the weavers have been considerably raised. Fustians of some sorts are also selling briskly, at a small advance in price. Printing cloths are in good demand, and at something higher rates.—Indeed, we believe the calico printers have seldom been fuller of work than at present.

SHAKESPEARE JUBILEE AT STRATFORD-ON-AVON.—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last, the anniversary of the Birth-day of Shakespeare was celebrated at his native place, Stratford-on-Avon, with a good deal of splendor.—Various processions, as well as balls, and a masquerade, were among the entertainments on this occasion, and much interest appears to have been excited in Warwick, and the neighbouring counties. It is intended to celebrate, in future, the Birth-day of the great national poet every three years, in a similar manner.

The King, as a mark of his respect and kind feeling towards Lord Liverpool, has given the Deanery of Durham to Doctor Jenkinson, the noble Earl's cousin, unsolicited.

From the Courier.

The King held a Court, yesterday at St. James's Palace, when the Members of the late Cabinet attended, to deliver up their seals of office, and their successors to receive them. All the other individuals who have joined Mr. Canning's Government, were all presented; the Attorney-General (Mr. Scarlett) and the Vice-Chancellor (Mr. Hart,) received the honour of Knighthood on the occasion. A morning paper remarks that His Grace the Duke of Wellington was "the only individual of the late Ministry who failed to attend upon his Sovereign, to receive a regular dismissal." The fact is, His Grace was at Court, but as he reached the Palace in plain clothes, and dressed in one of the attendant's rooms, his arrival did not attract the usual notice. His Grace, after the interview with His Majesty, proceeded to the Horse Guards, where he wrote the following General Order to the Army:—

Horse Guards, 30 April, 1827.

"Notwithstanding the Field Marshal, the Duke of Wellington has found it necessary to lay at His Majesty's feet his resignation of the Command of the Army, with which His Majesty had been most graciously pleased to entrust him, he begs to assure the General Officers, Officers and Troops, of his constant solicitude for their honour and welfare."

(By His Grace's command),
"HENRY TORRENS, Adjutant General."

Mr. Canning was loudly cheered by the assembled crowd outside the Palace. Similar demonstrations of popular esteem were also bestowed on Mr. Peel

LATE EUROPEAN INTELLIGENCE.

The packet Ship "Silas Richards," Capt. Holdredge, arrived last evening from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 25th ultimo. By this arrival the Editors of the Commercial Advertiser have received their regular supply of English papers, Prices Current, Shipping Lists, &c., to the latest dates—including London dates to the 25th of May.

These papers enable us to announce the final arrangements of the new Ministry, as it will be henceforth constituted. They are as follows:—

The Marquis of Lansdowne has a seat in the Cabinet, but takes no office.

The Earl of Carlisle accepts the situation of First Commissioner of His Majesty's Woods and Forests, with a seat in the Cabinet.

Mr. Tierney is appointed Master of the Mint, also with a seat in the Cabinet.

Mr. Abercromby, takes the office of Judge Advocate General; and Sir J. Macdonald, that of one of His Majesty's Commissioners for the affairs of India.

Mr. Calcraft is talked of for some situation but the Courier says, "we have not heard any particular one named, at present, as likely to be offered to the Hon. Gentleman."

In the House of Commons, on the 15th, Mr. Huskisson advocated the spirit of a resolution offered, (and afterwards withdrawn,) to enquire into the East India Trade, with a view to make it more open; but said the subject could better come up, when the charter of the East India Company should be brought before them. He protected the West India interests and the protection they enjoy. He made a favourable report of the improving condition of the cotton manufacturers; and added, that "the country was now likely to see this meritorious class of persons placed in a condition which would prevent them from being thrown into so unfortunate a condition, as that under which they had so long been labouring. He afterwards remarked, that "the productive industry of the country was beginning to resume its wanted energy, and trade was every where reviving." And Mr. Canning, in another place, corroborated the statement.

The New Attorney General, Sir N. C. Tindal, has introduced a Bill in the House of Commons, abolishing arrest for debt for all sums under £20.

A serious accident happened to the tunnel making under the Thames. An aperture was made by which the tunnel and shaft were both filled with water. Great exertions were making to stop the leak by throwing bags of sand into the river, and Mr. Brunel, the projector, is of opinion that he will be able to overcome the accident.

The New Times of the 25th mentions, that Mr. Brunel had stopped the leak, and was pumping the water from the tunnel. The brick work proves to be uninjured.

The revenue of the customs at Liverpool was greater the last quarter than ever before known.

An arrival at London from India, brings intelligence of an unimportant insurrection having broken out in one of the Burman Provinces.

Expresses had arrived from Lisbon, bringing intelligence that the Princess Regent was in a very alarming state, and not expected to survive many hours. Much anarchy is dreaded in the event of her death.

The Paris papers of the 23d, mention that the French Capital remains tranquil, but that the spirit of disaffection is spreading rapidly among the citizens, and also over the other departments.

In a late Weekly Register Cobbett, says that nothing can be done unless the King makes him 'Prime Minister.' In his last number he tells a story of hiding himself behind the Wellington statue of Achilles from Mr. Canning, who was surveying it, for fear the Premier should see him and compel him, nolens volens, to join the Ministry.

On the King receiving the intimation of Lord Eldon's intention of resigning the Great Seal, his Majesty determined on presenting his Lordship with a splendid token of his regard, for his past services, previously to his actual resignation of his high office. His Lordship was sent for by the King on Sunday last, and after remaining with his Majesty an hour, was most graciously presented with a magnificent silver gilt cup and cover.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

House of Commons, May 7.

SHIPPING INTEREST.

General GASCOYNE rose to bring forward his motion for a Committee of Inquiry into the state of the British Shipping. So extensively was the distress felt, that there was hardly a port in the Kingdom that had not petitioned the House for redress. The Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Huskisson) was identified with the new principles—but still he thought the question ought to be inquired into. Laws should be able to show that a depreciation of 25 per cent had taken place, or about £7,000,000. These calculations were derived from the most accurate and authentic documents.

The arrivals of foreign ships, as compared to British ships, were increasing every month. Th result of the experiment had been ruinous, and would continue to be such, if persevered in; and he felt persuaded that inquiry could not be justly resisted. The merchants might in some instances have profited from the alteration— but the downright ship-owner had been a great loser.

He concluded with moving for the Committee of Inquiry.

Mr. HUSKISSON had always considered himself as liable to that moral responsibility to which every other Member of Parliament is liable, be his rank or station in the country what it may. He made this declaration as to his feeling and as to his readiness to meet the charges which had been brought against him, without the slightest reserve.

He had taken the trouble to read all the petitions on the part of the Ship-owners, and he could state that there was not one which did not proceed upon the principle that the foreign ship was employed, and British shipping had decreased; and some were bold enough to say that we should soon reach such a condition that foreign shipping would supercede the British in the foreign trade of the country.

He would advert briefly to one or two. The first he should refer to was a petition from Scarborough, presented on the 16th of Feb., which stated that the value of British shipping had decreased from 20 to 25 per cent. since the year 1825; and expressed regret and alarm at "the great increase in the entry of foreign, particularly Baltic vessels, at all the British ports." He would just read the official return of the entry of British and foreign vessels in this very port of Scarborough. In 1825, the number of British vessels which entered inwards was 19, their tonnage amounted to 2421; the number of foreign vessels was 17, their tonnage 978. In 1826, the number of British vessels was 17, their tonnage 2,349: the number of foreign vessels that year, instead of 17 was 2, and their tonnage 149. [Cheers.] So much for the petition from Scarborough! [Hear.] The next petition was from the port of Greenock, which contained the same allegations, with references particularly to the British Provinces in North America: it is stated that "by the benefit bestowed upon foreign shipping, so decided a preference is given to foreigners in the timber trade, that the petitioners can no longer compete successfully with them." How the facts really stood he should not proceed to show. In 1825 the number of British vessels which entered inwards in this port was 201: their tonnage was 51,000. The number of foreign vessels was 21; their tonnage was 6,300. In 1826 the British tonnage was 54,000; the foreign 2,900.

He now came to his head as account of shipping since the restoration of peace. The result was, that excepting that extravagant year, 1825, (and the year 1826 was necessarily influenced by that year of speculation,) there had been a comparative increase of British shipping. Even 1826 exhibited a greater number of British ships entering inwards and outwards than any year (except 1825) since 1814. [Hear.] The tonnage of British vessels entering inwards in 1826 was 2,478,000; in 1414 it was 1,946,000.

He would now proceed to that part of the subject which related to the trade with all parts of the world strictly foreign out of Europe. In 1814, the amount of British tonnage employed in this trade was 535,000 tons. In 1826, it was 878,000 tons, being an increase of $\frac{1}{3}$. With the single exception of the United States of America, the foreign shipping in that trade was greater than in one of the six years preceding 1814 than it was last year. He now came to the trade with the Colonies. The British shipping engaged with the West India Colonies last year was greater in amount than in any year since the peace, always excluding 1814 and 1815, because in those years we possessed Colonies which had since been restored to foreign Powers. The trade with our North American Colonies had increased in a most gigantic degree. Instead of amounting to only 151,000 tons, as it did at the peace, it now amounted to 597,000 tons, and the trade of last year exceeded that of any former year, always excepting 1825. With the East Indies our trade had increased from 50,000 tons to 72,000 tons. With the coast of Africa it had increased from 9,000 tons to 28,000 tons. If any evidence could be found more satisfactory than another of the increasing wealth, prosperity, and means of enjoyment of this country, it was supplied by a comparison of the state of the timber trade in 1784, and at the present period. In 1784 we imported from British North America, instead of 700 loads, 407,000 loads, and from the Baltic, instead of 108,000 loads, 272,000 loads. There was an increase not in the proportion of tens and fifties, but of thousands. It should be recollected that the British North American trade was carried on exclusively in British vessels, and that trade was now greater than we had ever enjoyed with the Baltic.

Lord MILTON, in expressing his intention to vote against the motion, animadverted on the animus with which it was brought forward—as if to overthrow at once that liberal and enlightened system of commercial legislation, for which the Right Hon. Gentleman was so fortunately entitled to the best thanks of his country.

Mr. PEEL, after declaring that had he still remained in office, his mind would have been equally made up to vote against this proposition—explained the course which had been taken by his Right Hon. Friend.

Gen. GASCOYNE shortly replied, and withdrew his motion.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, 14 May.

On the motion for granting £16,128 to defray the expenses of the Society for propagating the Gospel in certain of his Majesty's Colonies for 1827.

Mr. Hume objected to this charge. This was throwing money away. The Colonies did not want our money for this purpose; we were forcing it on them. He observed a large portion of this sum to be applied to the Canadas, and yet the Clergy reserves were to be kept for the Church.

Mr. Wilmot Horton was surprised to hear the Hon. Member talk of applying the Clergy reserved land in Canada to this purpose—tracts of barren land not applicable to any profitable purpose at present, as they were quite unproductive. If an establishment in connection with the Church of England were to be kept up at all, it could not be done at a cheaper time than at present.

Mr. Alderman Waithman complained that these reserved lands were offered at £36 per share which he considered to be more than they were worth.

Mr. Wilmot Horton said the Clergy reserves were lands of the first class of fertility, but as yet uncultivated. They had not, as yet, produced any revenue, and the object of the grant was to promote their improvement. The lands were unproductive until a population was induced to settle on them.

Mr. Alderman Waithman wished to know, if the lands were worth nothing without population, of what use was a Clergy without population? (Hear, hear.) The lands were sold to the Company, and, being found unproductive, were now offered at a price beyond their value. The Company wanted to get out, and to let in the public. As the Company was in England, and agents were able to conduct its affairs in the settlement, why could not the Government do without their interference and aid? Government agents would have acted as well as the agents of the Company, and the country would have the advantage of having persons in the House responsible for their acts. The subject was important, and he had many things to state upon it, which would open the eyes of the Hon. Secretary, and of the House.

Mr. Wilmot Horton said the proceedings of the Company were most simple, and could be laid open to the House at any moment. He was a loss to know what injury would arise from the proposed undertaking.

Mr. Ald. Waithman said the public ought to see what was done with these lands. When the shares came into the market, they were offered at £36. Then there were some advantages proposed, and subsequently there was another alteration. If people had been induced to deal in these shares they would have been deceived.

Mr. Hume said the grant of £16,000 was to support a Clergy who had no congregation. In the Colonial Assembly of Upper Canada, there were only two persons of the Established religion. Thirty-seven thousand pounds had been given to the church in the province, though it was well understood that the great proportion of the people were not of the Protestant faith. The system of the United States was worthy of imitation. In the whole of that great community the Government did not pay £100 for the use of the Church, yet there was as much religion to be found there as in the Canadas.

After a few words from Mr. Home Drummond and Sir C. Forbes, which did not reach the gallery,

Lord Binning was of opinion that the establishment of the Clergy should be supported in Canada, if it were only to keep alive the interests for this country. There were persons every day coming over from the United States, professedly for the purpose of instructing the people in religion, but who, however well calculated they might be on that point, were not likely to inculcate much affection for Great Britain.

Mr. W. Horton regretted that he had not his papers with him, but he could undertake to show that the statement with regard to the religion of the colony was inaccurate.

A conversation then arose, relative to the meaning of a clause in the original Act, in which it was doubted whether the word clergy included the Presbyterian Ministers as well as those of the Established religion. Lord Sandon, Mr. Hume, Mr. Warburton, Mr. Estcourt, Sir Scrope Morland, participated in the conversation, after which the vote was agreed to.

The next resolution was for £56,000, for the water communication between Montreal and the Lakes.

Mr. Hume objected to this resolution, as the people of England had no more to do with these canals than they had with building the wall of Japan.—Hear, hear.—He would certainly divide the House upon it.

Mr. W. Horton asserted, that the vote had no reference to the Niagara Canal, to which evidently the Hon. Member alluded. It was a vote for a military, not a commercial Canal. The Niagara canal was one made for mercantile purposes, but which government was disposed to contribute to, and make broader, with a view of advantage to the service in case of war. The present vote was, however, a distinct affair altogether, and only referred to the military navigation.

Mr. Hume—The vote was nothing better than throwing away money.

Mr. Whitmore said the money might be well applied, that the works might be judicious, but that he questioned whether any advantage from it would ever accrue to England.

Mr. Huskisson observed that an important fact was lost sight of in discussing this question; that we had recently been engaged in a war on account of this very province, which the Hon. Member for Montrose (Mr. Hume) was prepared, so unceremoniously, to abandon. If we were not again to place ourselves in a situation to have our arms wrested from us, to have our defensive efforts circumvented; and if the feeling of the House, as to the retention or abandonment of the Canadas, were, as he trusted it was, different from that Hon. Member's (Mr. Hume); and if, we were not prepared to cast off the commercial advantages derivable from our connection with the Canadas, it was the opinion of able and competent men, that this work was absolutely requisite to the security of the Canadas. The want of such a work during the last war, occasioned great difficulties for the communication of troops, stores, &c. The work was required to keep up the communication with the lakes; without which communication, defence against the United States was impossible. The reports of able engineers had been considered by the Duke of Wellington and others; and all had agreed that the work was excellent to secure adequate means of defence. If the works were begun, he would fairly tell the Committe that they must be prepared for still further expenditure; what was asked by this grant would complete only part of the works. But if they were prepared to say that there should be the means of defence against the United States there was no Canadian more competent to judge, deemed absolutely requisite. He was not prepared, nor able, to give the fullest explanation of all the reasons justifying such works; but he considered them warranted by all the representations that had been made. He understood that, as soon as hostilities might commence between the two countries, it was in the power of the United States to shut the River St. Lawrence against us, and thus close all our communications with both the Canadas. That made these works requisite, and he understood, that with them it would be almost impossible for any enemy to dislodge us. Such being the reasons for the works, he considered the proposition irresistible, except they were prepared, with the Hon. Member of Montrose (Mr. Hume), to abandon the Canadas. He begged to add that, judging from the experience and the expenses of the last war, without such work, the extra expense of one campaign would cost more than the outlay for these works.

Mr. Hume said he certainly was, in the present situation of the country, against any of its money being thrown away. In the army and navy estimates there had been grants on account of the Canadas, and now £56,000 was asked. He wanted some extracts from the reports, that they might know what they were really about, and to see that no money was wanted. The late Duke of Portland had caused to be expended at Dover, from seven to nine millions, and he understood that such works were not now worth one farthing. Was it too much then, to call on the house to pause previously to commencing a work of such extent and consequent expense, after learning that the parliament of Canada had refused to grant one farthing, being so dissatisfied with this country, and on account of which conduct the speaker was obliged to dissolve the parliament?

Mr. W. Horton lamented the absence of the Clerk of the Ordnance; he could have given some satisfactory explanations. The request for extracts from the Reports arising out of the Surveys could not be complied with, as the reasons for confidence were thereby be promulgated. If there were not confidence in authorities who had advised such work, that would be a reason for withholding the sum asked. The expense of the canal was estimated at £160,000. If it was asked, were they prepared to throw away that amount? Why the Hon. Member's (Mr. Hume) views of the subject, it certainly would be throwing away the amount; but he did not expect that the house would concur in opinion with the Hon. Member; and his Right Hon. Friend (Mr. Huskisson) had truly told them that the work was one of paramount necessity—if there were to be a defence against the United States in case of war, and if we were to secure the advantages of commercial intercourse with the Canadas.

Mr. Alderman Waithman said he could see no reason for the commencement of the works previously to the production of estimates of the expense.

Sir R. Wilson said that if the works were to be entered upon, they undoubtedly ought to repose confidence in the officers of the first station, to whom the Reports had been referred. They had unanimously declared the necessity of such a work—for our due protection to the Canadas, especially after the great stride which the population of America had made. The works might cost more than was set forth in the estimates, yet, as to given extracts from the Reports, that was a request with which they could not comply, without giving the other party an insight into the reasons and motives for the works. If the works were to be done at all, they must have confidence, to a certain extent, in those who advised them.

Mr. Hume remarked that he had been assumed to say what he had not said—that he desired we should abandon the Canadas. He would repeat what he had heretofore declared —that we should tell the Canadas that ten years hence they should have an independent Government, and that they should then prepare the means of defending themselves. As to all the plans, and the motives for the works, he required nothing of the kind—all he required was, an estimate of the probable expenditure.

Mr. Huskisson observed that there would be no difficulty in providing such estimates.

Sir C. Forbes declared that the works now projected and urged had been recommended by every officer who had served in the Canadas. He knew nothing that would be more calculated to give the Colony so much confidence as would be created by these works.

Mr. Hume thought it would be right to agree, in the event of the grant being allowed, not to act on it till the Estimates were produced.

The grant was then put and agreed to.

PRUSSIA.

It is whispered in private conversation, that some dark clouds are gathering in the political horizon, as to the friendly relations between the Netherlands and Prussia, on account of the free navigation of the Rhine; the former Hanaker persisting in granting concessions, which are regarded as delusive, and which do not in the least correspond with the expectations of commerce in Rhenish Prussia, and of the other German States, on the banks of that river.

Extract of a letter to a house in St. Jago de Cuba.

KINGSTON, 26th May, 2 o'clock, P. M.

The Duke of Manchester has just issued his order to the Collector of the Customs to lay the double duties on all articles imported after the 1st of June.

[The house in St. Jago de Cuba, to which the above letter was addressed, is the branch of a commercial firm in this city. We understand that the 'double duties' refer to American produce coming from the 'neutral islands, as they continue to be called in common parlance. A measure of this kind was to be expected; and perhaps the introduction of America produce into the British Islands will be totally prohibited, except by the way of the Canadas and Liverpool.]—N. York Paper.

Extract of a letter, dated 7th April, from H. M. Consul General at Tripoli:—"I have received sad news from, or, more properly speaking, of, my son in-law, (Major Laing,) in the Interior; but as it is merely verbal report conveyed from Bambara to Timbuctoo, to Tuat, to Godamsh, to Tripoli, I trust in God it may prove erroneous."

Major Laing—The L'Etoile French Paper of the 2d inst. gives an account of the death of this persevering and intrepid traveller. By a letter from Sukhara Ley tripoli of the 5th April, appears that Major Laing has really fallen victim to his perseverance after having reached Timbuctoo. The Pacha of Tripoli communicates this news from a letter of the Governor of Ghadames. The English traveller escaped the brigands of the territory of Touat by the hospitable care of a Marabout, by whose assistance he was enabled to reach Timbuctoo. Shortly after his arrival the Fellahs, to the number of 30,000, came to demand him, in order to put him to death, and destroy the information which had had acquired, "and to prevent thetehy," they said, "Christain nations from profiting by his information to penetrate some day into the distant countries for the purpose of enslaving them." These are the expressions of the Sheik of Ghadames, in his letter to the Pasha.—The Prince who commanded at Timbuctoo refused to give him up, and sent him out privately under an escort of fifteen of his own guard. The Fellahs, however, having discovered this, pursued him, and murdered Major Laing and those who were guarding him. Such is the tragic end of this intrepid traveller, the first who has entered within this mysterious town. The Fellahs, under the pretext of the protection afforded to Major Laing, have imposed an annual tribute upon the inhabitants of Timbuctoo. This information is communicated by a Scheikh of Tripoli, who has long resided at Timbuctoo. He declares that there exists a very interesting history of this town, which traces the foundation of it to 510 of the Hegira (1116 of J. C.), written by Sidi Ahmed Baba, a native of Oawara, a small town of the country of the Kentes, a considerable people of Soudah. We hope to procure this history, in order to present it to the King's library, with the Voyages of the celebrated Ibn Bathouta, hitherto so little known in Europe.

The Army

The extraordinary expenses of the Army for 1826 appear from a Parliamentary statement to have been about a million.

Major General Lennox is appointed Brigade-Major in the South-West District, vice Lieut. Colonel Barkley, promoted.

Office of Ordnance 1st May, 1827.—Field Marshal the Duke of Wellington having laid at His Majesty's feet his resignation of the Office of Master-General of the Ordnance, avails himself of this opportunity of assuring his Grace of the Lieutenant General and Board of Ordnance; to the General Officers, Officers, and Troops employed under the Ordnance, and generally to all the Gentlemen employed in the Civil Department, for their uniform support, good conduct, and obedience, during the period that he has presided over the Ordnance. The Field Marshal took charge of this Department at the close of the operations of an extended and eventful war, when it became the duty of the Master-General and Board to reduce all the Establishments to the lowest scale consistently with the public service, and to make many alterations and reforms, which time, experience, and altered circumstances had suggested, and economy had rendered necessary. The Field Marshal must do all classes and descriptions of the Officers acting under the Ordnance, Military as well a Civil, the justice to declare, that they have submitted to the privations consequent on these alterations and reforms, with the greatest cheerfulness, and have aided him and the Board of Ordnance in carrying them into execution with equal zeal and ability. Although circumstances have rendered it necessary for the Field Marshal to resign the situation he held in the Ordnance department, he begs to assure all those employed therein that he will always feel most anxious for their honour and welfare.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1827.

The latest English dates do not afford us any particular Parliamentary intelligence, further than what has already been communicated to our readers. Some additional appointments have been made to Offices, which had not yet been filled up—these will be found in this days paper. The greater part of the supplies have been granted without much debate, and among other items a sum has been appropriated for the annual service of the Rideau Canal, to which as a matter of course Mr. Hume objected, on the ground that it was throwing money away. If Mr. Hume should ever find his way to Canada, we think he would be convinced, that the attachment to the Mother Country is too strong on the part of her Canadian family, to desire any change in their political condition Sensible of the many advantages they possess, from their connection with a country possessing both the means and inclination to serve them, they are not desirous of change We say it without meaning to arrogate any thing on account of our national, or as it may perhaps be more properly termed, our Provincial feelings, but we hope and believe, that in no part of her extensive dominions can a more warmly attached people be found, than Britain possesses in her North American Colonies.—Long may they continue so.

It was not our intention to have said another word respecting the Naturalization Bill, but when we see in Public Journals, the most unfounded inhinuations, we feel it necessary to contradict the misstatements which are put in circulation, as early as possible.

We find the following remarks made on the subject:—

"Alien Bill.—It has been sagely remarked, that the haste in which the military are sent to Canada at present is in consequence of the Alien Bill!—Colonial Advocate.

"It would appear, however, that the last batch of calumnies which reached England alarmed ministers in no trifling degree, as several regiments are said to have been ordered to Canada."—Canadian Freeman.

That these insinuations are totally unjustifiable will be apparent, when it is known, that the two Regiments ordered to Canada, 15th and 66th, are to replace other two, 70th and 76th, which after a long period of service in this Country, are to return to England.

We are informed that the Lord-Bishop of Quebec, may be expected, on his tour of visitation through this Province, about the end of the present month.

The 15th Regiment lately arrived at Quebec are now on their way to this Province, and will relieve the 66th at Kingston. The first division of the 68th are expected here by the Queenston, on Tuesday next, and will proceed we understand to take the outposts of the 70th Regt. at Drummond Island &c.

On the Head Quarter division being relieved at this post, the 70th will proceed to Quebec for embarkation to England.

When we call to mind the studied attempts which were made, to influence the public opinion with a belief, that excitement had arrived at the highest pitch—that the language of the loyal was not loyal—but seditious, which was made use of, by certain public journals in the Province—and when we remember the misstatements which made their appearance at the time, in a Newspaper on the American Frontier—that those misstatements were copied by the very same Journals in this Province, who had furnished the materials with which they were fabricated, and who had thus given currency to a libel on the character of the people of Upper Canada. When we call these things to remembrance, we cannot be surprised, that in some of the English papers, we should find, language such as we now extract, from a file lately received.

"Canada papers to the 1st ult. have been received. They explain the late movements and the discontent of the Upper Province, which have arisen from the Provincial Alien Law, prohibiting all foreigners from holding lands. The act has had either an unexpected or retrospective effect.—Many of the settlers, in consequence, have been deprived of their lands, and had their prospects of settling completely overthrown The discontent is extended among the natives of the United States settled in Canada, at the meetings which have taken place on this subject have been all illegal, except one at Hamilton, where Judge Taylor, and all the principal inhabitants, assembled to explain this law of investing aliens with land. We are sorry to state this is not the case in the neighbouring parishes; they have hoisted the standard of liberty and independence in several places; but, from the thinness of the inhabitants, no serious consequences are anticipated."—Plymouth Journal.

COLONIES.

The Canada papers state, that very serious disturbances have taken place in Upper Canada. The Buffalo paper of the 12th says, the cause of the disturbances in the adjacent Provinces is the Alien Act, to which a great proportion of the settlers are liable, and they will not submit to it. In several places the American flag has been hoisted, as a rallying point for assembling to resist the local authorities, and this affair appears to have now assumed a very serious aspect."—Tyne Mercury.

We say, we are not surprised, that such misstatements should find their way into papers, at so great a distance from us. They contain it is true, the grossest libels on the character of the people of the Province, and their origin can only be traced, to those among ourselves, who under the specious pretext of vindicating the rights of the people, have been guilty of causing their reputation for loyalty, and attachment to their Government, to be brought into disrepute. A few extracts will suffice to explain our meaning.

"Perhaps the most important number we ever published is now laid before our readers.—It treats of matters which deeply concerns, not only this colony, but this continent.—Colonial Advocate.

What these matters of "deep concern," are, may be gathered from what follows:—

Many thousands of Anglo-Americans in Lower Canada, New-Brunswick, Prince Edward's Island, Newfoundland &c. are considered subjects of His Majesty and hold a very large proportion of the lands originally granted in free and common soccage in these Colonies. If the Bill passed by our Assembly is necessary for us, it follows as a matter of course that their turn to go under the wheel will follow in due time. Agents will be appointed to warn them of their danger, so as that they may take common measures to avert the blow meditated against them.—More hereafter.—Colonial Advocate.

Again.—They are appointing meetings at Thorold, Stamford, and all over the country, and a belief is engendered which is not describe, and which would be more eradicated were there hereafter.

If the British Parliament should pass a declaratory act now, it would be received thankfully;—big and lipe—it might avail but little.—Colonial Advocate.

"Naturalization Bill.—It is a measure we think, can never be introduced into this Colony, unless at the point of the bayonet, nor acted upon without the shedding of blood."—Canadian Freeman.

When the Buffalo Journal from such paragraphs as these, had found materials for manufacturing its "troubles in Canada," these journals of ours, instead of feeling any thing like honest indignation at the imputations thus cast upon us—instead of boldly repelling the infamous assertions which were, made, without the least regard to truth, told us with the coolest indifference imaginable that "the eyes of our neighbours were upon us." Shame to those who would lower in the estimation of their neighbours and of the world, the people whom they pretend to serve!

Are these the real friends of the people!—shall such persons be believed, when they arrogate to themselves the characters of Patriots!—Will the people of Upper Canada, bear to be told with patience, that the men who hold themselves up, as the only bulwarks of public liberty, should dare to exhibit them to the world, as disaffected towards their Government, and ripe for Rebellion. We know they will not—We have before to day, seen the demagogue attempting to mislead them.—We have seen the demagogue foiled in his attempts.—It will be seen again. The people of this Province, are the scions of a loyal stock—they have been tried in the hour of danger, and are ready to meet it again, come when, and from where it may—Theirs is an uncompromising loyalty, which has been proved enough in the time of peril, and they will not suffer its lustre to be obscured by the attacks of an open foe, or the more covert designs of a secret enemy.

In the Debate which took place in the House of Commons, on the subject of the Church Establishment in this Province, we observe that it is again asserted, that there are only two members in the House of Assembly, who are Episcopalians. On a former occasion, we mentioned that this was incorrect.—On looking over the names of the Members of the House of Assembly, we are convinced that we recognise among them, nearly one half of the whole number, who are Members of the Church of England. Certain it is, we think, that there is a greater number of that denomination in the House, than of any other. The assertion is no doubt made, on the information of others, in the fullest assurance of its correctness. When the notice given by Mr. Stanley for inquiry into the subject, comes before Parliament next session, Honorable Gentlemen who make these assertions, will be convinced that, their information, has been incorrect.

We understand that the Hon. Col. Ramsay who has arrived at Sorel, from England by the way of New York, is appointed to act as A. D. C. to His Lordship the Commander of the Forces.—Quebec Mercury.

Comparative statement of arrivals, &c. at the port of Quebec up to the 19th of June, and the same date last year.

	Ships.	Tonnage.	Settlers.
1827	242	63,181	8550.

It will be seen by the above statement, that the total arrivals up to the present date, is not so many below last season as was expected. It is probable that the deficiency will not be so great by the first of July. Settlers this season have already approached to within 2000 of the total number arrived last year, and none of them have come out under Government patronage.

WATERLOO BALL.

Monday last, being the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, the Non-commissioned Officers of His Majesty's 79th Highlanders, with permission of their gallant and distinguished commander, Col. Douglas, celebrated the event by a Ball and supper in the Regimental School Room. The apartment, which is spacious, divided by a partition of boughs of oak and evergreen, forming a Ball and Supper-room—Both were decorated with Stars of swords and Crosses, Lines latter having the word "Waterloo" in the centre, a neat representation of the storming of Badajos, and other devices emblematic of the occasion. The whole was tastefully arranged, and when contrasted with the presence of many of the company who had shared the fatigues and dangers and returned so gloriously, from the most momentous struggle in which the British Empire had been engaged rendered the scene truly pleasing and interesting. During the evening, several Officers of the Regiment visited the party, joined in the Waltz, and expressed themselves highly pleased with the arrangements as well as the convivality and good feeling evinced by all present. Among the toasts given and drunk with marked respect, were the health of His Majesty—The Commander of the Forces—The Commandant—The Countess of Dalhousie, and Mrs. Douglas. Many excellent and loyal songs were also sung. The party broke up at a late hour the following morning, well-pleased with the evening's festivity, and the attentive quarters, (it need scarcely be added) with that order and regularity which so eminently distinguish the 79th.—COMMUNICATED.

Yesterday in the Cathedral Church of this city, Mr. Arthur Norman and Mr. Geo. Grout, were ordained Deacons by the Lo ♱ bishop of the Diocese. The first gentleman, who is an infant, was the first person who received the rite of baptism in that Church, soon after its completion in the year 1804. Mr. N. is appointed as assistant to the Rector of Quebec, and with the charge of other duties as belonged to the Rev. Geo. Archbold, lately appointed Visiting Missionary of the Diocese.—Mr. Grout proceeds for the present to Grimsby, District of Niagara, U. C. to officiate as Missionary of that place, being about to remove to Cobourg in the Newcastle District, vacated by the Rev.——Macaulay, who has gone to England, and expects to be appointed to a new Mission at Hallowell in the Bay of Quinté on his return.

Canandaigua, (N. Y.) May 30th.—In consequence of circulars from Canada, by which the price of Pork has been raised much higher than in the New York market, our merchants have already directed their produce down the St Lawrence.

GALE.—One of the most disastrous gales which have visited this river within our recollection, was experienced on the night of Friday the 22d ult. by which the loss in both lives and property is truly lamentable. In this vicinity it was felt with considerable violence; but the losses occasionnd by it hereabouts are nothing when compared with those which were sustained on Lake St. Peter.—The accounts of disaster on the Lake are very distressing, and it is impossible to say what extent of damage has been done. Fourteen rafts, it is believed have been shattered, and by some accounts the number of lives lost is estimated to be nearer Forty. We have spoken with a person who was one of those saved from a raft that was wrecked opposite Points de Lac, on which there was 52 hands altogether, 11 of whom were drowned; he describes the sufferings of the survivors as painful in the extreme. Eleven persons were crowded on the jolly-boat of the Waterloo; but the crew of the boat were unable to gain the Waterloo, after they had taken up the sufferers, and it was feared they were lost; but happily when the Waterloo next morning stopped at Three Rivers, they found that the jolly-boat had reached that place, and that all was safe. The Waterloo, we understand, sustained some injury, in nearing the sufferers, by the floating piece of rafts; she also, when near Quebec, struck on a rock, by which she was damaged in the bottom, but not so as to prevent her running for any length of time. Batteaux loaded with flour, &c. were also wrecked during the gale; and we have been told that on the following morning the Lake was literally covered with pieces of rafts, flour barrels, wreck of batteaux, &c. and presented but one vast scene of desolation. In course of the night some of the wrecks passed Three Rivers, upon which several persons were clinging, crying for assistance in the most appalling manner; but from the extreme darkness of the night, and the violence with which the tempest raged, it would have been impossible for the inhabitants of Three Rivers to render them any assistance—the attempt would have been attended with almost certain destruction. The Steam-boat Lauzon, which plies between Point Levi and Quebec, in attempting to cross on Saturday morning with a number of passengers, was carried by the gale below the falls of Montmorency—she reached Quebec late in the evening in safety. A good deal of injury has been sustained by vessels lying at Quebec: the Quebec Mercury of Saturday says:—

Last night and this morning, it has blown a severe gale from the westward, which has done some damage amongst the shipping. The Southwold Transport, (No. 22,) which was to have sailed this morning, was run foul of by the Ann and Amelia, China ship, and sustained some damage in her rigging, which will prevent her getting to sea for a day or two. The Ottawa Douglas, also ready for sea, was ran foul of by the Peronica, lost her jib boom and received some injury in her rigging, but nothing to delay her. She will sail as soon as she can get up her anchors. The schooner Tryall, owned and sailed by Capt. Toupin, was dismasted, various other damage was done, the particulars of which we have not been able to learn."

Above this city some damage has also been done by this storm—the Steam-boat has been completely ashore at the upper end of Nun's Island, and will have to be taken to pieces, in order to be again floated. At Prescott, we learn the violence of the gale was such as to drive the water into the stores adjoining the wharf, and materially damaged the property of them—it is presumed that some property will be lost or damaged by the inundation.—Canadian Courant.

Rideau Canal.—We have during the week, conversed with several persons who have been on the line of Rideau Canal, from whom we learn that the Contractors are getting into active operation. At the junction of the Canal with the Ottawa, a great number hands are employed in excavating, blasting, stone cutting, quarrying, and in burning coal and lime, &c. At Mr. Merrick's, Mr. Merrick's, the Contractor, is getting together his stores, provisions and labourers, &c. At Jones' Rapids the site for the Locks is already cleared, and the Contractor Mr. R. Sherwood, has a house up. There are to be several Locks at this place—the breath of the canal is 40 feet, and calculated for craft drawing 5 feet water. A Town has been laid out adjoining the Locks by Mr. C. Jones, proprietor of the land, and we understand that the lots are fast taking up.

Coroner's Inquest.—Coroner's Inquest was taken before D. BURWELL, Esq. Coroner for this District, upon the body of Stephen Tuttle, Yeoman, of Brantford,—It appeared upon evidence that, as the deceased was returning from Guelph, where he had been with a load of Beer, on Tuesday evening last, he was killed, while sitting in the wagon, by the falling of a tree. The horses were uninjured.

MR. EDITOR,

ginning to find you out, and I can assure you, that if your veneration for "Republican simplicity," which this week, seems to have got the better of your late pretences for the "dignity of true British Nobility," should lead you to the land whose "manners" you so much admire, you would not be missed. You might there, to your hearts content, write essays to prove "how different the manners of the Americans are from ours," and introduce your whole establishment, from yourself down to the Printer's Devil, to take tea with every Governor in the Union, without being noticed by me; but you shall not make such comparisons while you remain where you are, without hearing from ETIQUETTE.

Miscellaneous.

POWER OF STEAM ENGINES.

All the world is more or less acquainted with those immense masses, the pyramids of EGYPT, which were considered among the wonders of antiquity. The materials of which the largest of them is constructed, were dug out of the earth at a considerable distance from their present situation. They cover more than eleven English acres; and are piled up to the height of about 600 feet. According to M. Dupin's calculation, their volume is equal about 4,000,000 of cubic metres, their weight is 10,400,000 tons; which raised to the height of eleven metres from the bottom of the quarries to the surface of the earth, and of forty nine more as their mean elevation above the basis; in all sixty metres above their original level; give 624,000,000 tons raised to the height of one metre. Now the steam-engines employed in England are equal to the force of 320,000 horses, (1826) and can raise 200,800,000 tons to the height of one metre in twenty-four hours. But 624,000,000 being less than three-fourths of this quantity, it follows that the steam engines of England could have raised the materials of which the greatest pyramid is constructed out of the quarries, and heaped them up in their present form in less than three-fourths of one day, that is to say, in less than eighteen hours. According to Diodorus Siculus, 13, 14, and 15 in the 2d Concession, and the South West quarter of 17 in the 3d Concession of the said Township. For further particulars apply to the Subscriber at Cobourg, in Upper Canada, or to James Cuthbert Junr. Esq. Berthier, Lower Canada. 360,000 men, and Herodotus, 100,000 workmen, according to twenty years. Whichever of these estimates be nearest the truth, it is certain that one of the most powerful monarchies of ancient antiquity applied its whole disposable resources in the construction. Therefore, the mechanical power of British steam-engines, was, in 1820—and it has much increased since that time—that the Egyptian monarch, Cheops, inversely as the times necessary to each to perform the same task; that is to say, as twenty years to eighteen hours, or about 10,000 times as great. Neither would it be unfair to deduce from this single fact, that the general power of the two monarchies, including that which is the source of power, knowledge, was, if not exactly in this ratio, at least in a proportion which could not widely differ from it—let us, with great moderation say, one-fourth as great; that is, more than probable that the power of England is, at this moment, 2500 times as great as was that of Egypt, at the period when the pyramid was constructed, when we consider the reach of intellect which was necessary, to devise the steam-engine, in its present state; together with its general influence upon civilization, and the part it acts in national prosperity, it would be impossible for a nation which it has made many times as powerful as another by its direct effect, to be less than one fourth as great in every branch where its action is only indirect.

By the power of steam every machine to which it is applied receives, not an addition, but a manifestation of force. The power thus produced in 1830, was computed to be equal to 32,000 horses, or about 2,240,000 men. At this moment, steam, on account of its many new applications, and the improvements made in the manner of employing it, may perform the work of nearly three millions of men in the United Kingdom.—*Lon. IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.
HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE ADMINISTRATION.

The Duke of WELLINGTON was loudly cheered on rising, and spoke to the following effect:—My Lords, I do not rise for the purpose of offering any observations upon the petitions that have been presented to your Lordships but with the intention of explaining, in answer to the question from the Noble Baron (Ellenborough) on my right, the grounds upon which I thought proper to retire from His Majesty's Government. I feel, my Lords, as strongly as any man can feel, the impropriety of entering into any explanation here. I feel that I cannot reveal anything that has occurred in confidence between His Majesty and myself, or any thing that has occurred at His Majesty's Councils. I feel that it is not competent to this House to inquire into the causes of the recent change in the administration—but I likewise feel, that I have been most unjustly and calumniously treated. (Loud cheers.) I have been charged with crimes of the gravest nature, a prima facie, which I believe to be under the influence of Government. I repeat, my Lords, that I have been most grossly calumniated. And shall I not then, as a man, be anxious to vindicate myself? The more especially, as I shall be able to do so without violating private confidence. On the 10th of April I received a letter—and here I shall trouble your Lordships with some details, which I think I am fully at liberty to do. There are two points on which I am anxious to vindicate myself, the one is my retiring from His Majesty's Councils, the other for vacating my situation as Commander of His Majesty's Forces. (His Grace here read the letter, which was to the following effect:)—

"My Dear Duke of Wellington—His Majesty, in an audience from which I have just returned, has been graciously pleased to direct that I should lay before him, with as little delay as possible, a plan for the remodelling of the Administration. It is His Majesty's wish,

A SOLDIER'S HONOUR.

There was last Tuesday a show of a very solemn character, sufficiently attractive to fill St. Mathew's church-yard with a dense crowd of spectators, it was a Soldier's Funeral, but under very extraordinary circumstances: a Soldier of the regiment with that funeral is as melancholy a one as ever was told. The deceased was Serjeant-Major in the 10th Hussars, a detachment of which regiment, is now in Ipswich barracks. Twenty-five years ago he enlisted into the regiment, he was then quite a youth, and had been living in the service of a nobleman, who unfortunately had a quantity of plate stolen from him. This lad was accused of the robbery, and taken up on suspicion; he protested his innocence, but appearances were so strongly against him, that every one believed him guilty, and so did his master; but as the crime would have affected his life, and the Nobleman felt a regard for the youth, and great feeling towards his parents who were worthy and respectable in their humble life, he would not prosecute, but told the lad he could not of course retain him in his service or recommend him to any other but that he must either go to sea, or enlist for a soldier in some regiment going abroad: that he (the gentleman) would not lose sight of him, so that if he conducted himself with steadiness and integrity, he would still be a friend to him. About a year or two after he became a soldier, a female servant in the Nobleman's family died, and on her death bed confessed that she had stolen the plate, and that the lad who had been accused of the theft was not only perfectly innocent of it, but unconscious of any circumstances relating to this transaction. The nobleman then immediately wrote to the Col. of the Regiment stating all these facts, and particularly entreating every favour for the soldier; who was immediately promoted, as quickly as possible run up to the rank of serjeant-major, which is as high as a non-commissioned officer can be: and when his old master died, he left him an annuity of fifty pounds a year. The man was respected by his officers, and generally liked, but who in this world is free from scandal!—who is there that the cruel shafts of envy, hatred and malice, will not sometimes pierce! About a fortight ago, this man was accused of unfair dealing with the corn for the horses, which came under his charge, and he was threatened with a court-martial. He would have been acquitted upon investigation for he was innocent; but the consciousness of this was not sufficient to support him; his conduct had been irreprehensible, and with the sensitive feelings of honour of a soldier, he shuddered at the thought of being publicly tried on a charge of dishonesty: it revived in his mind all that he had suffered in his youth; he felt as if doomed to be the victim of false accusation.—This preyed upon his spirits so as to drive him at last to distraction: and in that state the poor fellow on Sunday morning went into the barrack store where the corn is and blew his brains out! On Tuesday he was buried in St. Mathew's church yard, where the soldiers always are buried and the officers of the regiment being determined that the last sad act should not cancel the good conduct of a whole life, and deprive him of a soldier's last honours (though unconscious of them), ordered his funeral to be as pompous as possible, consistent with his rank. The whole corps and full band attended, and his horse was led to the side of the grave; the poor animal bore his accoutrements all covered with black crape, and was itself completely draperied with sable decorations: after the service was read, and the body lowered into the grave, and the ceremony of firing over it concluded, the pistol with which he destroyed himself was thrown in and buried with him; he has left a widow and two children.—Bath Paper.

During the late snow storm an affecting little incident was noticed at Falkirk. A pair of blackbirds had built their nest in a thick holly bush, and five eggs—"Black Attire," soon commanded the ceaseless attention of the female, which, while passing the patient long hours in the task of incubation, was cheered by the mellow song of the male from a neighbouring bough. The eggs were ripened into young birds at the usual time came on, and the genial weather which preceded it, promised fair for the bare gorbles; but the deep snow that whitened all the fields, and loaded every tree, blasted the hopes of the farmer and the feathered tree—and our two blackbirds, with their tender charge, had to prove the bitter drift. After stealing the crumbs from the girns of many a school boy, or picking up a scanty morsel upon the highway to keep the spark of life in their young, the old ones were, after several days, rendered too weak for the unequal task, verifying the beautiful words of Burns:—

Ilk happing bird, wee helpless thing!
That in the merry months o' spring,
Delighted me to hear thee sing,
What comes o' thee!
Whare wilt thou cow'r thy chittering wing,
An' close thy e'e!

The male was found lying cold, beneath his accustomed bough, and the female stretched dead upon the nest, which, however, contained all the young ones alive, the parent birds having starved themselves to save their defenceless progeny.

Summary.

Mr. Huskisson stated, in answer to a question from Sir Edward Knatchbull, that it was not in the contemplation of Government to impose any tax on the importation of foreign wool.

The Earl of Liverpool, we are happy to say, continues to advance gradually towards recovery.

Plymouth, May 11.—Our New Port Admiral, Lord Northesk, hoisted his flag on Friday last on board the Britannia, 120. Several ships are ordered to be built, among them a first rate, to be called the Nile. The port is consequently in some bustle, and great satisfaction is felt here at the revival of Lord High Admiral.

Jamaica papers of 23d March state that Sir John Keane was to be sworn in Lieutenant-Governor of that island immediately on the departure of the Duke of Manchester.

It is reported that His Majesty intends visiting Plymouth this summer, accompanied by the Lord High Admiral.

The packet-ship New York, Captain Bennett, which arrived here on Thursday from New York, was struck with lightning on the 19th ult., three days after sailing from the port, but fortunately no material injury was sustained by the vessel, though some of her rigging was partially on fire.—Liverpool Courier, April 16.

Some idea of the increase of the population round the capital may be formed from the fact of the inhabitants of the parish of Chelsea having increased, within the last 28 years, from about 13,700 residents to now upwards of 29,000.

We learn from Mr. Huskison's speech on General Gascoyne's motion, respecting the British shipping, the extraordinary fact, that last summer sixty-five millions of eggs were imported to Southampton and other places on the south coast from France, the duty on which amounted to £22,000.

The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society, took place in Freemasons' Hall, on Monday week. Ladies were excluded. The Rev. Mr. Irving caused a good deal of confusion, by vehemently insisting on the committee's acknowledging their misconduct respecting the Apocrypha; but the motion was negatived. The revenue for the last year was stated at £90,000.

An extraordinary sensation was excited in the neighbourhood of Regent's Park, towards dusk on Tuesday evening, by the sudden appearance of Gurney's newly invented steam carriage, or self-moving machine, which coursed through the streets at the back of the Diorama, round part of the New-Road, and up the ascent of the Albany Road, at the rate of 8 or 10 miles an hour, carrying several persons inside and behind. It seemed to move with the greatest of ease, and without any perceptible noise, steam, machinery, or any appearance of smoke or steam whatever. The person who sat in front, as conducteur, evidently held the carriage under complete command, guiding it with great exactness, and whenever the crowd which gathered about it became troublesome, shooting away from them with speed equal to that of a mail coach.

Law of Privileges.—The Globe of May 22d states, that on the preceding week, the coachman of the American Ambassador resident in London, was arrested on a warrant by Bellard, the officer, for a violent assault on another officer named Craggs. At the examination before the Magistrates, the Ambassador's Secretary protested against the arrest as a violation of the privileges awarded to persons in the service of foreign Ambassadors. This case was referred to the Attorney-General, who has expressed his opinion that the defendant was not protected by the law of nations from being arrested for a criminal offence. The defendant who had been discharged from custody upon a pledge that he would appear again when called upon, has received a summons from the magistrate, but refuses to attend to it.

The affairs of Greece are represented as cheering. Lord Cochrane had gone on a secret expedition.

London, May 24, two P.M.—The Funds have still a tendency to advance, without news or any rumours in circulation.

The arch erecting at Hyde-park-corner, which is to form the grand entrance into the Park, will be adorned with a statue of his late Majesty.

Whenever the carriage of Mr. Canning is recognised, the Right Hon. Gentleman is always saluted with the hearty and long continued acclamations of the populace.

It is calculated that Mr. Canning will loose one hundred and six votes by the secession of the Old Tories. What number he will gain by the accession of his new friends, has not been mentioned.

Library of the late Duke of York.—His late Royal Highness' Library will shortly be brought to the hammer by Sotheby. It contains a series of the London Gazette, from the year 1684 to 1825 (wanting only a few years); some curious Missals; a complete series of the Napoleon Medals, in bronze; a number of very important public records, including those printed by command of the late King; and a variety of newspapers.

Lieutenant Hood, of Plymouth, has received a large silver medal from the Society of Arts, for inventing an ice-saw, calculated to assist vessels in the polar regions. One of these instruments was taken out by Captain Parry.

Despatches, dated the 12th instant, were received on the 22d May, at the Colonial Department, from Lieutenant General Sir Wm. CLINTON, G.C.B. commanding the British troops in Portugal. The whole of the British troops were marching on Lisbon.

Expresses had arrived from Lisbon, bringing intelligence that the Princess Regent was in a very alarming state, and not expected to survive many hours. Much anarchy is dreaded in the event of her death.

A declaration was yesterday made by the Duke of CLARENCE, who presided at the anniversary dinner of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge. "Whether," said his Royal Highness, "the declaration I am about to make be popular or unpopular, I think it right, in reference to the peculiar character of this meeting, to declare, at this time, that to the sound and rigid principles of the Church of England, I am unalterably attached—and that it will be, at all times, and under all circumstances, my first desire and duty to maintain those principles."

Mr. Dehl, the supercargo of the New Jersey, informs us, that the rebellion which had for some months been raging in parts of the Chinese Emperor's dominions, had assumed a very serious aspect, and was spreading at the date of the last advices. The Emperor had recently made considerable drafts on the Salt and Hong Merchants, for the means of carrying on the war. It was doubtful what effect the insurrection would have on the coming Tea Crop.—Philad. Gaz.

and it would be as much my own. that we should adhere to the principles upon which the Administration of Lord Liverpool was founded; and I, therefore, hope that your Grace will have no objectio to form part of an Administration.

"I am," &c. &c.

This letter (continued His Grace) did not contain one word respecting the person who was to be placed at the head of this Government. I was not desired by the Right Hon. Gentleman to come, nor was I referred to any body for explanation. To me the Rt. Hon. Gentleman neither came nor sent; but I have since heard, that explanations were given to others of our colleagues. The Right Hon. Gentleman invited either all to call upon him, or else he waited upon them, or sent a friend. (Hear, hear, hear.) But. with respect to me alone, no explanation was given, nor was I referred to any other person. Having been for a length of time upon friendly terms with the Right Hon. Gentleman, it was something astonished, at his departing, in this instance, from the observance of those forms of intimacy which had hitherto regulated our intercourse. I was, however, determined not to be deterred from communicating with the Right Hon. Gentleman in a fair and friendly manner, and, therefore I wrote to him, on the 14th of April, this letter which I shall now read. [His Grace here read the copy of his letter; but, from the pressure and confusion, we are enabled to give merely an outline of its contents. The letter commenced by an acknowledgment of Mr. Canning's letter, with a repetition of Mr. C.'s desire to adhere to Lord Liverpool's principles in the re-modelling of the Administration, and expressed His Grace's anxious wish to serve in His Majesty's Councils with the same colleagues; but, before he gave a final answer, he was anxious to know who had been selected to act as the head of the new Government." In answer to which he received one from Mr. Canning, which ran as follows: [His Grace here read the letter, from which it appeared that Mr. Canning apologised to his Grace for not having answered his letter at an earlier period, and attributed the delay to his having left his duties to Submit his Grace's letter with his answer to it, to the consideration of His Majesty. Mr. Canning then added, that it was a well understood arrangement that, whenever His Majesty intrusted to any individual the formation of a new Administration that individual was to be at the head of the Government. The Right Hon. Gentleman concluded by stating, that he had no reason to believe that His Majesty intended in this case to depart from the usual arrangements, and that he (Mr. Canning) was appointed the head of the new Administration.] The letter certainly does not express a very earnest wish that I should continue in His Majesty's Government, and I on the same day, wrote a letter to Mr. Canning, in which I stated, that I had previously understood that an arrangement of a different nature was contemplated. It did not occur to me, that the practice which Mr. Canning had alluded to, was so invariable, that I should at once be led to the conclusion from his communication, that the Right Hon. Gentleman himself was to be placed at the head of the Government. Having then, my Lords, concluded, that there was little probability of the new Administration being conducted practically on the principle of Lord Liverpool's, or to the satisfaction of the country in general; and feeling that I could do no good, and that I should be at last obliged to separate myself from the Administration, I thought it better at once to send my resignation; and before I proceed to speak about the command of the Army, I shall say a few words with respect to the charges which have been brought against me, of having abandoned His Majesty's Government. I consider it the privilege of naming those Ministers on whom the King can rely for advice, and for conducting the policy of the country, one of the most important with which he is entrusted by the constitution, and while under this conviction, I beg the House to judge of my conduct. I will suppose that a Minister might unfortunately happen to differ with His Majesty on some important subject, and it must then be evident that that Minister cannot give the same cordial assistance as if holding the same opinion with his Sovereign. Let us now, my Lords, apply this principle to the case before us. I feel that I differ from His Majesty's Prime Minister on a question most vitally important; and I feel that I could not, when called upon, give that proper and cordial support which a Prime Minister is entitled to ask and to expect. Then, my Lords, with what face could I give my support to a Government founded upon principles diametrically opposite to my own? It cannot be an answer to say, that the present Administration was to be founded on the same principles with that of Lord Liverpool. The Administrations are materially different.—There was formed part of Lord Liverpool's Cabinet knew well what it was to which they pledged themselves; for they knew that his Lordship was conscientiously opposed to all changes in the existing form of Government. But those who coalesced with the Right Hon. Gentleman, had no idea how far their coalition was to carry them; for the Right Hon. Gentleman is the most able, and active, and zealous, partisan, of those changes with which the country is at present threatened. (Hear, hear.) The principles of the Noble Earl were principles by which any man might safely abide: the principles of the Right Hon. Gentleman fluctuate every day, and depend upon transitory reasons of temporary expediency. I am not surprised that the Right Hon. Gentleman's Friends should desire that no petitions should be presented on the subject of Emancipation, and they have come to a resolution to be silent, if they were. The reason is clear—they Know That his Government, constituted as it is, cannot stand, if it entered into a discussion of that subject. It is also evident, that the Government cannot remain neutral upon the question, and in proof of this, I refer your Lordships to Mr. Canning's speeches, in which he states, that the influence of the head of the Government must be paramount. I have been accused of ingratitude towards his Majesty, and of aspiring to the situation of Prime Minister, and that, in consequence of my disappointment, I threw up the command of the Army. These charges are absurd.—Every one who knows me is aware, that my being Prime Minister was out of the question, and no man ever spoke to me to whom I did not express the same opinion. As to the other, is it likely that I should have resigned to that high situation which I have held, should, on light grounds resign my late office?—I say raised myself; not because I forget the assistance I have received from the Noble Lords at my side—not that I forget the support I derived from the gallant officers and soldiers who fought under me—not that I forgot, most of all, the gracious favours of his Majesty—still, I say, I raised myself, because, whatever favors may have been lavished on me, or whatever support I had received, I felt conscious that I had raised to that situation if I had not done my King some service. Bearing in my mind these circumstances, it is little to be supposed, that when brought into the situation which I recently held—when called to the command of my old military companions—when I had again an opportunity of recommending to the favor of the Sovereign, those friends and companions, for the rewards which they undoubtedly deserved—it was, I say, little to be supposed that I should be so weak or so insufficient cause, resign an employment so congenial to my habits and my wishes. I need not, I trust, assure your Lordships, that I am most sincerly anxious to set myself right in your minds, on a subject that so much affects my feelings and my character, at the same time that I am fully conscious of my inability to address this house in a manner that I ought to do, and with the effect that I earnestly desire. I had no wish, no thought, of being Prime Minister—I knew myself. I knew, that for that office; and knowing, also, my fitness for the one which I had the honor to fill, I must have been worse than mad could I have formed the insane project of placing myself at the head of the Government. I am confident of receiving for my actions a fair and impartial interpretation; and I the more readily indulge this hope, when I recollect that not one of my colleagues with whom I communicated—not one man to whom I spoke on the subject—entertained a doubt, that I was right in the course that I ought to pursue; they felt to a man that I was placed under the necessity of tendering my resignation. We have been accused of forming a conspiracy for the purpose of annihilating the command of the army. My Noble Friend, the Chancellor for the Duchy of Lancaster, was amongst the number of those who, at the same time with myself, sent in our resignations—though he has since been induced to return to the service of his Majesty. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) The Noble Lord, if there was a conspiracy, is as open to accusation as I am—nor could grounds for such a charge have existed without his privity. Now, I call upon that Noble Lord to come forth, and state, whether or not there were any such proceeding on our part, or any intention of the nature implied, with reference to the formation of a new Government. My Lords, I have no fear of contradiction on that point from him. It has been asserted elsewhere, but, whatever quarter it comes from, I hesitate not to pronounce it a foul falsehood. [His Grace then read the letter which he had addressed to His Majesty, tendering his resignation. It expressed his Grace's most grateful acknowledgment of the favor which his Majesty had bestowed upon him, in advancing him to the command of the army, and his pain and grief in finding himself obliged to seek his Majesty's permission to return that commission into His Majesty's hands.] When I retired, I did so under the full persuasion that it would be impossible for me to remain in office consistently with a sense of public duty—in fact, that, filling the office of Commander-in-Chief, I must be in constant communication with the Ministers of the Crown, and even with his Majesty himself—that no change could be made in the constitution of the army, in the nature or objects of its service, without that mutual understanding and cordial co-operation, which, in circumstances such as my relation to the present Government would necessarily place me, it would be visionary to hope for. The House knows, that the supreme direction of the army is essentially vested in the Cabinet, that the army at present in Portugual could be removed from, or withdrawn, at the pleasure of His Majesty's advisers—that in England—in Ireland, and in every other place where our troops are stationed, no order could be issued in allegiance to them contrary to the opinions and views of the responsible advisers of the Crown. Could I, then, in such an Administration as it was proposed to form, continue so to act as would become a responsible minister? Could I, in communion with such colleagues, follow in the footsteps of that illustrious and lamented predecessor, whose example it was my pride to follow; and, satisfied am I now, that if that Royal Personage had survived to hold the situation of Commander-in-Chief, and to fill that at which I retired from it, he would have done precisely as I did. Again, I would repeat my conviction—and one very consolatory to my feelings it is—that, in offering my resignation of the offices in question, I had acted in full conformity with what I think was right in assuming would have been the conduct of that illustrious Personage, if placed in similar circumstances. My Lords, when I did submit to his Majesty my resignation of those two offices, I felt so in consequence of the arrangement which I had with the Right Hon. Gentleman himself, and I with the letter which I wrote to him on that occasion, to be fairly examined, and this I do in the fullest confidence, that no ground of offence can be derived from it, for the object of it was nothing more than to learn who were to constitute his Majesty's Government, and who was to be placed at its head. Here I may take occasion to observe, that I had a conversation with the Right Hon. Gentleman, in which he stated, to be supposed that the new Government was act as Collectors. The amount of the Collection was £40.

The Hon. W. Smith and family arrived this morning from London in the Ship Lord Sidmouth.

H. M. S. Alligator, Capt. Canning, arrived on Thursday from Halifax, with Colonel Cockburn, and Lord Valentia on board. Col. Cockburn proceeds we learn to Upper Canada, on the business of his Mission, and will return to embark for England in about a fortnight.

Launch.—On Tuesday last a beautiful barge, called the Hylas, capable of carrying 2,000 barrels of flour was launched at Mr. Johnson's ship yard. She belongs to the proprietors of the Steam-tow-boat Hercules, and built expressly to carry freight and to be towed by that boat. We understand that in consequence of the season of towing vessels being nearly over, the Hercules will in future be principally employed in carrying freight and passengers, for both of which she is so well adapted. Her cabin is fitted up (all state rooms) in a very superior manner.—Gazette.

Annapolis Iron Foundry.—The Iron Foundry at Annapolis has for some time past been in full operation. A quantity of pig iron has been manufactured, and part of it has been brought to Halifax. We have not heard whether any has yet been sold, but from the goodness of the quality, it is likely to command a fair price, and we doubt not will amply remunerate the spirited individuals who have ventured their capital upon this important speculation. Acadian Recorder.

POSTSCRIPT.

The Albion just received, contains London dates to 30th May, brought by the Hercules from Liverpool—there is however no news of importance—we make a few brief extracts.

By the Hercules from Liverpool.

The proceedings in Parliament on the 27th were of no particular interest, and we find nothing of importance new in England. The Courier states explicitly that no measures have been taken to withdraw the troops from Portugal.

The last accounts from Portugal represented the Princess Regent to be quite out of danger, and the country in a state of quistude, if we except the conjectures and surmises caused among some of the inhabitants of the capital, by the sudden death of Senhor Aguair. He was the only representative of the Emperor of Brazil at the Court of Lisbon, and a strong friend to the Constitution. The circumstances of his decease was so singular, as to excite reports of his having been poisoned. The English brigade at Lisbon performs the duty of Belem Castle; and another is on the march to that city, where Gen. Clinton is also to go.

Greece.—It is stated, in a very brief manner, that the first enterprize of Lord Cochrane has been successful, and that he has captured four Turkish vessels at Navarino, and another from Alexandria, laden with provisions for Ibrahim Pacha.

Consols opened at 83¼, but a very large purchase, supposed to be made by a house in whose opinion great confidence was placed, advanced the price to 83¾; closed at that price, with every appearance of firmness. The approach of the financial expose, to take place on Friday next, produces many conjectures. English Bank Stock, 205¾; India bonds, 94 prem.

It is said that branches of the Bank of England are to be established at Exeter, Hull, Newcastle upon Tyne, and Norwich, after which there will be no further extension of the system for a considerable time.

We are the honorable enterprizing men of Business!
Trust not to the busy tongue—examine for yourselves.

THE following valuable property, situated on the main road leading from York and Dundas, to Waterloo, Dumfries, Beverly, Woolwich, & the City of Guelph; and within one mile of the head of Desjardin's Canal, being the north half of the south halves of lots No. 10 and 11 in the 1st concession of West Flambro,' containing 130 acres, a great part of which is cleared. The present is a very favorable time to judge of its quality, the crop of grass being nearly ready for mowing, notwithstanding the late unfavorable season. There is a large stone house, near the front of the lot, under which there was a distillery, at the time it was purchased by the present owner, which was about eight years ago. From an eminence in front of said house, there is a constant fall of good water, calculated for supplying all the purposes of a distillery, brewery and tannery. A store might be erected on said land, close to the main road, and in a commanding situation for business, and there is plenty of wood, stone and lime at hand, for building purposes.

Also, the south part of said lots, containing 130 acres, and fronting on Dundas street, or the Governor's road. This is timbered land of a soil equal to the other lot and is extremely well watered even in the most parched seasons.

These lands will be sold on the most reasonable terms, either together, or divided to suit the convenience of purchasers. Part of the purchase money may be paid, if required, by yearly instalments, security being given.—Title indisputable.—Or the owner who is 68 years of age will make the whole or a part over for a yearly payment for the remainder of his life, or for 5, 7 or 9 years certain. This will give agreat chance to any person who may have a young family to provide for, as the owner is very certain this property will double its value in seven years.
