EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OFFICE
York 7th February, 1827.

NOTICE is hereby given, by order of HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR in Council, that unless John Bowman, late a private Soldier in the Glengarry Light Infantry Regiment, the Original Location of Lot number seven, Concession C. Township of Murray, in the District of New Castle, do shew cause within six Months from this date, why the Location should not be rescinded, the Lot will be Granted to William M. Bullock, of Murray, aforesaid, Gentleman.

38-6m JOHN SMALL, C. E. C.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR. JOHN SMALL,

Poetry.

DEATH AND THE WARRIOR.

Arm, warrior, arm! and wear thy plume
On a proud and fearless brow!
I am the grand and lonely tomb,
And a mightier one than thou!

Bid thy soul's love farwell, young chief!
Bid her a long farwell!
Like the morning's dew shall pass that grief—
Thou comest with me to dwell!

Thy bark may rush through the foaming deep,
Thy steed o'er the breezy hill;
But they bear thee on to a place of sleep,—
Sorrow, and cold, and still!

Was the voice I heard thy voice, O Death!
And is thy day so near?
Then on the field shall my life's last breath
Mingle with Victory's cheer!

Banners shall float, with the trumpet's note,
Above me as I die;
And the palm-tree wave o'er my noble grave,
Under the Syrian sky.

High hearts shall burn in the royal hall,
When the minstrel names that spot;
And the eyes I love shall weep my fall—
Death! Death! I fear thee not.

Warrior, thou bearest a haughty heart,
But I can bend its pride!
How shouldst thou know that thy soul will part
In the hour of Victory's tide?

It may be far from thy steel-clad hands,
That I shall make thee mine;
It may be lone on the desert-sands,
Where men for fountains pine!

It may be deep amidst heavy chains,
In some strong Tyrant's hold—
Where the captive's spirit and lingering pains,
Wherewith to tame the bold!

Death! Death! I go to a doom unblest
If this indeed must be!
But the Cross is bound upon my breast,
And I may not shrink for thee!

Sound, clarion, sound!—for my vows are given
To the cause of the holy shrine;
I bow my soul to the will of Heaven,
O Death! and not to thine!

Miscellaneous.

THE BORDERER'S LEAP.

Esselstone-heath, on the Northern side of the borders, is the entrance to one of those jumbles of rocks and mountains which seem to have been destined by nature for the haunt of such wild and desperate characters as held in these districts their reign of blood and terror, before the union of the two kingdoms, and for some time after. It was there once that the Raven of Hornscliff, as he was called, one of the last of the "border theives," terminated his career in a manner well worthy of his life. The crime which led to this catastrophe, although not unparalleled in the annals of the period of which we write, would seem, to the refinement of modern taste, too gross for historical detail: it may suffice therefore to say, that at the marriage of one of his enemies, which was celebrated that morning, the Raven made his appearance—a guest as unlooked-for as unwelcome—with a numerous train of followers, massacred a great part of the company, violated the bride before the bridegroom's face, and set fire to the house. Unexpected succours, however, arrived—although not before the work of revenge had been but too well accomplished; the assailants were assailed in their turn, when least prepared for defence—the bridegroom liberated, whom they had intended to carry off as a prisoner—and their chief obliged to betake himself to flight, alone and unattended.

It was the afternoon when the out-law arrived at the borders of the heath, and his breath came freer as he felt the cool air from his own mountains, and saw the declining sun, which hung over the cliffs to which his fugitive steps were directed, pointing as it were to the place of their mutual repose. He slackened his pace for an instant, to look around on the well-known scene; his heart dilated with a kind of pride as he felt his foot once more on his native heath, which it pressed with an elasticity hardly diminished by the weight of fifty years; and his eyes sparkled with a fierce joy as he saw the approaching termination of his flight. But he was alone and unarmed—for his sword had been broken off to the hilt; a host of enemies was behind, and his place of refuge yet distant. He looked back as he gained the summit of an eminence; and although, to a less experienced traveller, no sound would have been heard to break the stillness of the hour, and no living form appeared to give animation to the desolate heath, save that of the wild bird, now and then startled by his sudden step from its resting-place; yet, when he had beat for a moment his keen eyes on the distance, and then turned his ear in the same direction, as if to catch some note of confirmation, the out-law snuffed up the wind like a fox pursued to his covert, and, bending his body forward to the mountains, darted on with renewed velocity. He did not rest again till he had reached the base of the ridge of mountains which form the termination of the heath; but his exertions during the latter part of the journey, although not less steady than before, were less violent. Perhaps his long and rapid flight—or, it may be, the pressure of approaching age had contributed to stiffen his wearied limbs, and to depress his stout heart; or, perhaps, it was only some consideration of policy that induced him to reserve his strength for the greater hazard and fatigue of ascending the rocks! But so it was, that, towards the conclusion of the race, although the foremost of his enemies was then distinctly in sight, the pace of the outlaw became gradually slower; and at length he threw himself down by a small stream of water that gushed out of the cliff and turned his eyes deliberately upon the rocks. As his pursuer approached nearer and nearer, it could be seen that he was a young man of a strong athletic make: in his right hand was a sword covered with blood, which the mid-day sun had baked into a brown crust on the blade; and in his left he held a costly handkerchief, such as was at that time worn on holiday occasions by females of wealth or rank. He was dressed more like a chambering gallant than a rough warrior, who seeks the brown heath with the naked brand; but the disorder of his apparel, which was torn and daubed with the marks of mortal strife—his long hair, hanging in clotted beaps on his half-naked shoulders—and his wild and ghastly aspect, where fury, horror, and despair were written in mingled characters —seemed yet fitter for the lonely heath than the festive hall. When he saw his enemy fall down by the side of the stream, a low but deep cry broke from his lips, resembling half the shout of the tired forester, when the game he has held him to long sinks powerless at his feet, and half the greedy and savage howl of the wolf-dog over the quivering carcass of his quarry. The Raven of Hornscliff smiled scornfully as the sound broke on his ear through the distance; but when his pursuer came within a pace when further delay might have been dangerous, he plunged his head into the cold stream, tore open his dress, and splashed the invigorating element over his bosom; then springing upon his feet, threw back his hair over his forehead, shook his limbs, and returning the premature cry of triumph by a shrill yell of defiance, began to ascend the sides of the mountain, and speedily disappeared among the rocks. The bridegroom, with his black lips and burning forehead, rushed to the same stream without waiting even a look on its remassacred a great part of the company, violated the bride before the bridegroom's face, and set fire to the house. Unexpected succours, however, arrived—although not before the work of revenge had been but too well accomplished; the assailants were assailed in their turn, when least prepared for defence—the bridegroom liberated, whom they had intended to carry off as a prisoner—and their chief obliged to betake himself to flight, alone and unattended.

The bridegroom, with his black lips and burning forehead, rushed to the same stream without waiting even a look on its receiving waters. Guided either by a previous knowledge of the outlaw's haunts, or by an instinct similar to that which leads the blood-hound to his unseen prey, he pursued his way through the bewildering accuracy; till the sound of his enemies feet—the crashing of the branches that were laid hold of to assist his ascent—and, finally the rushing of stones and fragments of earth, dislodged by his feet down the steep path, convinced him that he gained upon the object of his pursuit, and that a few more efforts of his strong and youthful limbs would place the fell destroyer before his eyes. In the mean time the outlaw, avoiding the steep breast of the mountain, where ed short into a rocky pass which cuts through the ridge, and which, although dry at that time, in winter forms the bed of a torrent. In a few minutes, more, he found himself within sight of a place that, on former occasions of as great need, had stood him in lieu of friends and fortress; and, with renewed energy, he rushed down the deep declivity, which forms the east side of the mountain he had ascended by the west, and leads directly to a singularly situated rock, even at that time known by the name of the Raven's Tower. On this side the mountain sweeps down for more than half way in a tolerable smooth declivity—but then stops suddenly short, and with frightful abruptness descends, in an almost perpendicular manner, for the remaining space of nearly a hundred and fifty feet. Its rugged and projecting points overhang the turbulent river below in a manner which precludes the possibility of a man's descending alive; and, although a fordable part of the stream lies immmediately under, the traveller is thus obliged to make a circuit of some miles before reaching it. The rock we have mentioned, although seeming at a little distance to form a part of the steep—only projecting in a bolder manner than the rest, and surmounted by a capitol resembling slightly the battlements of a fortress—yet, on nearer approach, is discovered to be, in reality, quite distinct and separate from the mass of mountain. It raises its gigantic form from the bosom of the dark waters below at a distance of a good many feet from the main land; but, in the corresponding shape of its landward side, and the strata of its substance, a geologist might infer the traces of a more intimate connexion subsisting at some remote period, and look upon it as a further token of the great natural convulsion believed to have once visited the elements of our globe—

"For neither rain, nor wind, nor hail, nor thunder
Could quite destroy or wear away, I ween,
The marks of that which once had been."

The outlaw whose flight we are relating had good title to bestow his name on the Raven's Tower; for he alone, of all the desperate adventurers who infest that part of the country, had strength of limb, and stoutness of heart, and boldness of brain, to leap across the chasm which separates it from the mountain. This feat he had performed on several occasions of imminent danger, and always successfully; for, when once he had gained the rock, a natural path from the farther side—although only filled with danger even to him, and only made available by the heath, brushwood, and projecting stones, which afforded points of precarious support—led the fearless ruffian in safety to the ford below. On this occasion, however, there was more danger to be apprehended in the leap than on any former one. The length of his flight—which had lasted from the forenoon till the shades of evening were beginning to fall—had deprived his limbs of their wonted strength and elasticity; and, perhaps, even the few years of toil, intemperance, and crime that had elapsed since his last visit to the tower, had cast a weight upon his head, to which, during the progressive infliction of the burthen, he had been insensible. It may be, too, that the dreadful deeds of the morning, so different in their character from the usual feats of arms—which, however bloody in their consequences, appeared to these lawless men as something honourable and praiseworthy—may have sate with more than common weight upon his mind. But, however this may be, it was with an unsteady step he approached the brink of the precipice; and when a wild bird, which had built in the cliff, scared from her nest by his intrusion, burst away with a sudden scream, the bold outlaw started and grew pale: perhaps it was the cry of the devoted bride which it brought to his haunted recollection. Controlling his feelings however, he went close to the edge of the cliff, and looked down for a moment into the abyss. Objects of a similar nature, occurring in the scenery of mountainous countries, do not usually impress the traveller with ideas of unmingled terror:—the trees bending across the chasm, and concealing with their foliage its depth and danger—the heath and brushwood clinging to the sides, like natural tapestry—and the projecting points of the rocks, raising their grey head at intervals through the curtain, give a romantic variety to the picture, and gild our fear with admiration. But these points of pictorial beauty and relief were here wanted: the naked sides of the rock were only variegated by the colours of the different strata, and by its own sharp and bare projections, stretching forth from either side like threatening knives, to deter or to mangle, while the river rushing through the comparatively narrow channel below—although its voice was scarcely heard through the distance—seemed to light the dismal passage with its white foam. A sound of hasty footsteps behind did not permit the outlaw to indulge long in the contemplation of this object; and, suddenly mustering up his resolution as well as he might, he stepped backwards a few paces, rushed to the edge of the cliff, and took the terrible leap. He did not, as heretofore, clear the chasm at a single effort; for it was his breast that first met the rock—his legs and the greater part of his body hanging over into the abyss. He was as brave a man, in the vulgar acceptation of the word, as ever faced a foe; but, at this moment, the cold drops of mortal terror burst over his forehead; he dug his hands into the hard and scanty earth that covered the surface of the landing-place, and clung convulsively with his feet to a slight projection on the side, that must have instantaneously given way to a less pressure had it not been of the hardest granite. It seemed for some time as if further effort was impossible—as if his heart's sole aim and desire was to remain fixed forever in this frightful position; but, as he found his strength gradually giving way, his hands relaxing in their grasp, and his feet slipping from their hold, and the conviction broke on his mind that, in a few minutes more, he must give himself up to a death the imagination shuddered at—desperation came to the aid of courage; and, staking every thing on the event of a single movement—which, if unsuccessful, must plunge him into the gulf—he caught with his hands still closer to the rock, and pressing his feet with all his might against their slender hold, succeeded, by a violent muscular effort, in heaving himself upon the cliff. "Ere oral curses on my nerveless limbs!" cried the bridegroom, arriving at the instant; "the Raven has reached his tower—and who may follow him?—Turn back," continued he, raising his voice into a furious shout, "ravisher! murderer! monster! all things had but coward!—Turn back! and I swear by every thing binding on man's soul, to divide in twain my sword with thee; and although thou deservest to die like a dog, to fight a fair fight with thee on this hill side, without friend to aid or foe to hinder setting sun, and Him who made it!" But the Raven was deaf even to so courteous an offer: he lay on his back upon the cliff, apparently without sense or motion, his legs hanging over the side—seeming, like the poet's personification of Danger,

"on the ridgy steep
Of some loose, hanging rock to sleep."

"Take this, then, to rouse thee!" said the bridegroom, tearing up, by main force, a fragment of the rock, and hurling it across the chasm: it fell with a heavy sound on the outlaw's breast; and he raised himself up, like a chained mastiff, at the pain and insult. Who art thou!" he cried, hardly seeming to recollect his situation; "what dost thou seek?"—"What do I seek!—O God!—Look here!" replied the bridegroom, stretching his arms and his body far over the cliff towards the destroyer, while his voice was choked with the opposite and yet combining emotions of grief and rage.—"What do I seek? See'st thou this handkerchief? A few hours ago it covered the fairest and the chastest bosom in broad Scotland: the red blots of murder, and the wrinkles of ruffian violence, are on it now; and the covering of the bosom is reproach, and foulness, and dishonour! What do I seek? I seek," continued he, speaking through his clenched teeth,—"I seek to fulfil the oath I made to heaven and her—to stoop this handkerchief, ravisher, in thy heart's blood!"—"Tempt me not!" said the outlaw; "hast thou not tasted enough of my vengeance already? I am slockened on thee. Get thee gone; but cross no more the path of one who has neither fear nor mercy." The avenger paused for a moment, and then paced to and fro by the edge of the rock, with the restless and impatient step of a beast of prey along the bars of his cage; but soon his brow grew blacker, and his lips met with a firmer resolution. "He is spent with fatigue," he said aloud, attempting communing only with himself; "he is weary with murder, or he would by this time have sought the ford. What holds me from leaping into his den? I am younger than he; my limbs are more supple than his. What care I for the craven-ly which threatens death for the attempt?—my vengeance shall not be stayed by a song. It shall be so: the weight of despair is surely not greater than the weight of guilt." And so saying, he stepped backward to the proper distance, and began to prepare himself for the advantage. He did, in the first place, by striking his blade into the ground, clasping his hands, raising his face towards heaven, and repeating a short prayer for success; but, although he stood thus in an attitude of Christian devotion, he might have deemed to resemble more one of the ancient Alani, whose only object of worship, as Ammianus Marcellinus informs us, was a naked sword stuck in the earth. He then drew forth his good steel again, and, planting his feet firmly in their proper posture, was about to spring forward to the perilous undertaking. The outlaw, who had apparently watched his movements, and even heard his words, raised himself gradually from his reclining posture—first on his knees, and then, as his enemy's preparations seemed to be nearly completed, upon his feet. "Stop!" he cried: "witness that I have, at least, not sought this. The event be on your own head! I confess that I am worn out—I am alone and unarmed; but the visitor who thrusts himself unbidden on me here, shall never live to tell what welcome he met with at the Raven's Tower." The reply of the avenger was to wave the bloody handkerchief in the air, which he then placed in his bosom; and clearing the intervening space at three rapid bounds, he darted from the side of the mountain. The desperation that had prompted him to the adventure lent an energy to his limbs which it was believed only one man of that day possessed, and he alighted on the brink of the rock; yet so barely was the feat performed, that the outlaw seized hold of the outlaw's arm, who struck a furious blow at him as he touched the ground, he could not have preserved his footing even for a single moment. They were both men of more than ordinary strength, and their mutual hate was of more than ordinary fierceness; and, had that meeting taken place on the mountain's side, or had the assailant ever gained a firm footing upon the rock, it is more than probable that the evening's sun would have gone down upon the struggle. But there was no contest of warriors in the field—no flushing of the sword—no spilling of blood—no cries of triumph or of vengeance! On the one part, it was an instinctive, silent clinging for the only object of support within reach—and, on the other, a desperate but hopeless resistance a power which seemed, with supernatural force to be gradually dragging him to perdition. They stood thus for some moments upon the smooth and sloping edge of the precipice, their frames convulsed, and their sinews cracking with the intensity of the struggle, and yet their motion towards the brink scarcely perceptible. They looked in each other's faces, and saw in the damp and ghastly features the image of death. "I warned thee!" at last broke, in choked accents, from the white lips of the outlaw, as their fate became certain, and a glare of rage and terror illumined for an instant his despair. The bridegroom replied by bending down his head, with a fiend-like effort, and tearing with his teeth from his throat the bloody signal of vengeance, which he held up in the destroyer's face. The next moment he fell backward into the abyss, still clinging with a death-clasp to his enemy, and they commenced their headlong descent; and so firmly did the hands hold, that, although the projecting points of the rock mangled their bodies out of the form of men, yet they arrived, still hand in hand, in one mass of blood at the bottom—whence the pollution of human guilt and misery was instantaneously swept out by the indignant stream.

ANIMAL SAGACITY.—When the 5th dragoon guards charged the French on the plain of Salamanca it is stated, one of the men was thrown off his horse in the second dashed into the enemy's lines, and after the regiment to which he belonged had retired from the charge, he was seen scampering about amongst the French infantry, kicking and frolicking. The 5th was ordered to renew the charge, which they did; and as they were approaching the enemy, the horse in question galloped over to them, regularly fell into the ranks, as if a dragoon had been upon his back; he continued in rank during the operation of the charge, and returned in line with his troop, to the astonishment of his rider, and the admiration of all who saw him.

The Borough of PERTH, Canada, is likely to be disfranchised for bribery and corruption. It is supposed that MANCHESTER will obtain the privilege.

In the House of Commons on Monday last, petitions took place on the subject of Reform. Mr. CANNING said, that the accuracy of the distress among the petitioners, from RENFREWSHIRE in SCOTLAND, having abated, it was not the intention of Government to propose a grant of public money, formerly stated at £50,000, for their relief. But the general subject of emigration remained before the Committee.

The new Postage Duties Bill passed the Commons May 9th.

It has been stated in the House of Commons, by Members of the Administration, that nothing would be voted for Emigration; the improving condition of the manufacturing classes not requiring it.

Besides the large and numerous cargoes of corn already imported into Bristol, we are credibly informed there are not less than 25 foreign vessels from the Mediterranean and elsewhere, bound to Bristol, now under quarantine, containing every description of grain that can be purchased and sent to this country.—Bristol Journal.

The Earl and Countess of Breadalbane have contributed one thousand pounds to the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge in Scotland.

The goods which the commerce has brought to Manchester, are chiefly cloths for printing. The rise on Bradford superfine and power-loom cloth is from 3d. to 6d. per piece. Price of a Bradford, weighing 4 lbs. 6z. 6d.; 7-8 power loom, weighing 5¾ lbs., 9s. 9d. The advance on the price of goods appears to be exactly equal to the rise in the wages of the hand weaving.

ONE DAY LATER.

From the N. Y. Spectator.

The Glasgow Saturday Evening Post, of June 2, received by the Nimrod, contains London dates to the 31st May. The funds were were advancing, which was principally attributed to the general improvement of the business of the country.

In the House of Lords on the 31st, a petition was laid on the table, praying that measures may be adopted to put an end to the practice of burning widows, and offering up other human sacrafices in British India.

The House of Com mons on the 31st was left sitting in debate on a bill to repeal one of the newspaper stamp acts.

Messrs. Brougham, Treslove, Ross and Bickersteth, are, it is said, to have silk gowns immediately.

The Dublin Evening Post states, on what it considers good authority, that Parliament would be prorogued on the 14th of June.

The Times reports that Lord William Bentinck is about to be despatched to Portugal, in the joint capacity of Ambassador and Commander-in-Chief.

Mr. James, author of the Naval History, died in London, May 28th, leaving his widow "entirely destitute of funds, friends, and connexions, she being a native of the West Indies."

Extensive speculations have been entered into in Glasgow, in the expectation that the shilling of duty on the lb. of Tobacco, which has been dropped during the last two years, will be proposed and carried among the new items in the forthcoming budget. It is said, that on the faith of this, one house has purchased tobacco to the amount of £250,000, by which, should the shilling be put on, he will gain a great deal.

Much distress continues to prevail among the poor Irish.

The demand for goods at Manchester had met with a slight, but not unexpected decrease; as things there generally decline a little about Whitsuntide. In prints there was still much doing, both to the United States and the continent. Indeed, if what is reported be correct, says the Manchester paper, it is probable that America may have to draw her supply of prints from England for a considerable time; it being understood that several individuals, in attempting to establish printworks in the States, have failed.

London Stocks, May 31.—Consols have experienced a further advance on the price of yesterday. There was some languor about the market. Soon after the commencement of business, some considerable sales for the account took place at 84¼ but from that point a steady price ensued, and the closing price was 84¼, with every appearance of firmness. The 3½ and 4 per cents have not advanced as much as Consols.

Domestic.

From the Kingston Chronicle, of July 15.

Yesterday being the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne, some apprehension was excited in town at an early hour, by seeing from 60 to 100 of the men who were working at the Canal, march in with badges, which bespoke a determination to oppose any meeting of the Orange party. The Magistrates, on the first intimation, went to the place where the lodge was held, and warned the Orangemen not to walk in procession, as was intended. They, notwithstanding persevered in their determination, and previous to their setting out, the High Constable, with a well intended but illtimed zeal, had not only collected many other Constables in front of the Lodge, but also three soldiers of the 68th Regt. whom the Sergeant of the guard had sent under an impression that their aid was requested by the Magistrates. When the Orange party, wearing badges, moved on in procession, the Constables and Soldiers accompanied them, and they had not proceeded far before they were met in front by the adverse party, and assailed with stones and such other weapons as had been hastily collected—among these were pistols, which were used on both sides—and we regret to say that one man was shot in the leg. Ross the Constable had his scull fractured, and is despaired of, one of the soldiers was so bruised in the head as to be taken to the hospital, Mr. Cassady of this town severely cut in the scull, and various other injuries were received. The Orange party again formed and proceeded to Walker's for the purpose of dining there, but here the Magistrates personally interfered and took their entrance; they then went to the Lodge, and were, with some difficulty, prevailed upon to return separately to their respective homes. In the mean time, by the prompt attention of the Commandant and Major Winniett, the troops were turned out and drawn up in the Market Square, where they remained under arms for three hours about; when the tumult being abated, they marched back to the Barracks, with the exception of an officer's guard. Some time was occupied by the Magistrates, who were exceedingly active, in apprehending the principal rioters, fourteen of whom were committed to jail; the Magistrates then ordered all the public houses to be closed, and tranquility was completely restored. It is to be regretted that many of the Magistrates were absent at the Adolphustown Sessions, from which cause, those remaining in town had a more than ordinary share of arduous duty to perform, which, however, they were most forward in meeting, and used their early and best endeavours to prevent and quell the tumult. It was also injudicious in the High Constable to accompany the procession, as it gave it the appearance of being patronised by both the civil and military authorities, which was not at all the case, as the former had forbidden it, and the latter were of course not consulted. The whole affair created great excitement, and has done much mischief, by rousing passions which should be dormant for ever and which we hope soon to see wholly allayed.

A CARD.

The Magistrates of the Town of Kingston beg leave to signify their high sense of the prompt and effectual assistance afforded by the Commandant of the Garrison, and the officers and men of the 68th Regt. in checking the progress of the riot on the 12th instant, and in quieting the apprehensions of the inhabitants by the further security they furnished.—With most sincere wishes for the advancement of this distinguished corps, they also beg leave for themselves and their fellow townsmen, to express their sincere regret at its approaching departure, which can only be estimated by those who have enjoyed the valuable society of its officers, and witnessed the correct and orderly conduct of its men.

WELLAND CANAL.

St. Catharines, July 11, 1827.

The Board of Directors of the Welland Canal Company held their regular monthly Meeting, in this village, on Friday last, after having previously spent two or three days in examining the operations of the several contractors on the line of the canal.

Sections Nos. 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 18, 25, 27, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, and 35, are all completed; or so near it, that they will, we understand, be accepted by the Board, at their meeting in August next. The remainder, from the Deep Cut to Lake Ontario, is nearly all in Progress, most of which is in a very forward state; the lock-pits are mostly dug; several of the locks and waste-weirs are in a forward state of building, and are with all reasonable despatch and, in fact, only six chains of the whole line that is under contract, remain unbroken.

The Canal has doubled the force formerly employed at the Deep Cut, and is making astonishing progress, considering the casualties inseparable from the circumstance of introducing a new system of operations to such an extensive work, and the great difficulty of immediately obtaining a sufficiency of the necessary implements, particularly carts and waggons.

If there are yet any unintelligent persons who doubt the final and triumphant success of this great and important undertaking, who have formed their opinions from the representations or rather misrepresentations of others, we earnestly recommend to them to come and view the work—examine and judge for themselves. "Truth is powerful, and will ultimately prevail." No person need remain long in error respecting this matter, who has a single desire personally to make a candid investigation.

We are satisfied that no work in America, considering the violence and industry of its enemies, the prejudices of some, and the jealousy of others, has ever been conducted with more energy and economy, than the Welland Canal.

Among the numerous persons of distinction who have lately visited the Welland Canal, it gives us pleasure to announce the arrival of the scientific traveller, Captain Basil Hall, of the British Navy; who last week accompanied the Directors, together with Mr. Barrett, the Company's resident engineer, in their regular monthly tour of inspection, and made a close examination of every part of the canal. We hope the public may, ere long, be favoured with his opinion on the merits of the undertaking, and of the system pursued by those entrusted with the execution of this important work.

Mr. Maunsell, the British Consul for Boston, U. S. also spent several days last week, in viewing the various operations on the Canal; and we are informed expressed himself much pleased with what he saw, and with the progress making in the work going on so much more prosperously, and with less difficulty, than the various reports in circulation prejudicial to the prospects of the company.—Farmers' Journal.

Quebec, July 7, 1827.

His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief, the Countess Dalhousie, and suite, arrived here from Sorel on Thursday under a salute from the Citadel, and were received by the Grenadier Company of the 76th Regt. as a Guard of Honour.

On Thursday His Lordship inspected 79th Cameron Highlanders on the Plains of Abraham. This distinguished Corps made a most imposing appearance, and went through the various evolutions usually performed at a Review in a manner highly creditable to themselves and which, we learn, obtained the fullest approbation of the Commander of the Forces.

On Wednesday His Excellency inspected the 76th Regt. under Major Stevenson; and was pleased to excite his entire approbation of that neat and soldier-like corps.

We have Fredericton papers to the 20th ulto. and those of New Brunswick to the 19th. The vessel belonging to the lessees of the Crown Mines in Nova Scotia, has arrived at Pictou, 300 Tons of machinery, 150 men and 20 skilful Miners. Their first attention will be directed to the raising of vast bodies of coal.

The 15th Regt., first Division, has proceeded to the Upper Province. The remaining Division arrived on Wednesday Evening.—Mercury.

The Second Division of the 15th Regiment under the command of Major Eden, arrived here this morning on board the steamboat New Swiftsure, on its way to the Upper Province.—Montreal Gaz.

Colonial.

Provincial Secretary's Office, Halifax, June 11, 1827.

His Majesty, having thought proper to make a Grant to his late Royal Highness the Duke of York, of all Mines and Minerals, reserved by his Majesty in the Province of Nova Scotia, and his Royal Highness having subleased thesaid Mines and Minerals to Messrs. Rundell, Bridge & Rundell, of Ludgate Hill, in the City of London; his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has directed it to be announced, that Richard Smith, Esq. is duly appointed Superintendant for the said subleasees, and has arrived in this Province, with a number of Miners, Collyers, Engineers and Mechanics, and a large quantity of machinery, tools and implements, for the purpose of opening and working such Mines, agreeably to the terms and conditions of the lease.

As the Province will necessarily derive many important advantages from the carrying on of these operations on the extensive scale contemplated, his Excellency is particularly desirous that the Agent of the sub-leasees should experience a disposition to promote, as far as possible, the undertaking in which he is engaged.

His Excellency therefore calls upon all Officers of Government, Magistrates and Proprietors of Lands, to afford every reasonable facility to the said Richard Smith, and those employed under him, in the prosecution of his design.

By his Excellency's Command,

RUPERT D. GEORGE.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, July 21, 1827.

There is not any news of importance by the late arrivals from England. The latest dates are to the 6th June.

The Lord Bishop of the Diocese, accompanied by his Chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Morgell, arrived in the Queenston on Tuesday.

Detachments of the 68th Regt. for Amherstburgh, under the command of Capt. North—Fort George, Capt. Melville—and Penetanguishene, Ensign Medley, were on board the Queenston, and proceeded on Tuesday last, to their several destinations. On Thursday the Queenston returned to York from Niagara, when the first division of 70th Regt. embarked, to proceed to Lower Canada.

His Lordship, the Governor-General, has issued His Proclamation, dissolving the Parliament of Lower Canada. Writs are issued for calling a new Parliament, returnable on 25th August next.

The serious affray which took place at Kingston on 12th instant, an account of which we take from the Chronicle, is the more to be regretted, because in this country, where the Religious privileges of all denominations are secured and respected, such occurrences, besides engendering angry feelings, are in a certain degree disreputable to the country.

We should hope, that while on the one hand, a scrupulous abstinence, from any thing that might be interpreted as intended to give offence to the feelings of others was observed, so on the other, every thing like force or violence would be as studiously avoided. Happily in this country, from the nature of our institutions, party distinctions of this nature, have not hitherto existed, and we should hope, that with those who make this the Land of their adoption, and whom we so heartily welcome among us, they would be for ever forgotten

The Canadian Freeman, who last week was so "blocked-up," that the truth could not reach him, has in his last number been absolutely goaded to give place to the Letter of Colonel Ramsay, which contains the most complete contradiction of his unfounded assertion, that several Regiments were ordered to the Country, in consequence of the alarm, which, he said, had been excited in the minds of Ministers, with respect to the Colony.—The Freeman rather unwittingly condemns himself, by saying, that he is happy to find notwithstanding the repeated calumnies which have reached England, that Ministers have the fullest confidence in the integrity and loyalty of the people.—Now, we would only ask, what it was, that during the last winter, more particularly, labored so industriously, to calumniate the people of Canada, by representing them as discontented, and in a state of the most violent excitement.—Who it was that furnished the materials for the Buffalo Journal, to trump up its "troubles in Canada!"—Let any person look over the file of the Canadian Freeman for some months past, and there he will find ample testimony to satisfy him, that the calumnies, against the people of Canada, which with the additional exaggeration of foreign papers, have found their way into some of the English Journals, had their origin with the Canadian Freeman, and others of the same stamp with himself.—After having done this, an attempt is made to create something like alarm, by unfounded insinuations, that Ministers had taken precautions, and that several Regiments were coming out to the Country—the effect intended to be produced by these insinuations, cannot be misunderstood—As far as the means of doing mischief, and misleading the people by such reports, is in his power, these insinuations are circulated, and when a contradiction the most positive is given, from an undoubted source, the Freeman is "blocked up," and but, that he is in a manner compelled, to give the whole truth, his readers might remain in the belief, that his assertions were well grounded.—The people we think will be able to appreciate according to its true merits, the desire which the Freeman affects, for the dissemination of the whole truth.

Ministers have the fullest confidence in the integrity and loyalty of the people of Canada; but for this good opinion of them, the people of Canada, are certainly in no degree indebted to the representations of the Canadian Freeman.

Selected Articles for Newspapers.—It may be easily imagined by the readers of Newspapers that, Editors in the time of a dearth of news, are often puzzled to make selections, to fill their columns with such articles, as they think will be acceptable to the tastes of those for whom they provide the literary banquet.

"From grave to gay—from lively to severe," they have to search for materials, wherewith to complete their weekly bill of fare; but we never could have supposed, that in a British Newspaper, published among British subjects it would be considered as acceptable, to serve up such a Dish, as "The Declaration of Independence of the United States." Yet so it is—there is no accounting for the tastes of some people—and the last Colonial Advocate, has placed it before his readers, by way of trying we suppose, whether their stomachs will bear this bonne bouche of Democracy—Strong food we confess to place before them, and such, if we are not mistaken, as will disgust them with their Caterer.

The inconsistencies of the Advocate, are apparent in almost every paragraph he writes, and in this instance he has a strange jumble, of the project of a Union, between Great Britain, and those very United States, whose declaration of Independence, he thrusts at such a time upon his readers.—This has been called the "age of coincidences"—"Another coincidence" meets our eye every now and then, in the papers—and some are truly very strange ones. The Advocate has taken it into his head that "it is remarkable," (another coincidence) that he and Mr. Gourlay, should have thought alike, on this "Union with the States of America." The project is a mad one enough to be sure. The idea says the Advocate "is almost of even date with our Letter to Lord Dalhousie"—almost, that is, as much as to say, the project although an extremely clever one, was first thought of by the Advocate—prodigious—when the project is realised, the Advocate shall have the first honors awarded to him.—Mr. Gourlay the second only.

Referring our readers to this days "Gazette" it will be seen, that the advantages which may be expected to be derived from the arrangements under the late Order in Council with respect to the Colonial Trade, are extended as far as circumstances permit, to the whole Province, and that produce for exportation may now be brought into any port of entry, on bond being given to the satisfaction of the collector, for its being lodged in some Port where a Free Warehouse is established. The subject is an important one to our Merchants, who will doubtless avail themselves of the advantages which it presents. Letters have been addressed to the several collectors of the Customs, for carrying the object into effect.

From the resolutions passed by the Grand Jury in the New Castle District, and so fully concurred in by the Bench of Magistrates, it will be seen that, we were not incorrect in supposing that, a feeling of indignation would be found to exist in the minds of the people, when they were informed that from the misrepresentations contained in some of the Public Journals in this country; their character for loyalty, and attachment to the Mother Country had been brought in question. The calumny was too gross to deceive—and we have no doubt that the people generally will be convinced that, they are not their best friends, who endeavour to represent them as being disaffected towards the Government, or whose attempts to mislead them, cause them to be represented.

Communications.

RESOLVED, by the Grand Jury of the Newcastle District, in General Quarter Sessions assembled:—

1st. That certain Extracts copied from English papers, and papers of the United States, having appeared in the U. E. Loyalist, published at York, July 7, 1827, to the effect that "disaffection was general amongst the people of Upper Canada, and that the American Flag had been hoisted as a rallying point for assembling to resist the local authorities."

2d. Knowing the above mentioned extracts to be a libel on the well disposed and loyal inhabitants of this Province, we consider it the duty of this grand jury assembled, and of a Grand Jury now assembled, as representing the body of the inhabitants of the said District of Newcastle, to express their abhorrence of the above libel, and unequivocally to express their sentiments, and wishes it to be altogether false.

3d. That the Grand Jury consider it unnecessary to enter into the merits or demerits of the late Naturalization Bill; but a calumny so foul and disgraceful being connected with the subject, they deem it their duty immediately and effectually to resist so infamous an insinuation as that contained in the extracts alluded to.

4th. That the undersigned Grand Jurors have never, until now, heard of any disorderly meeting in the Province—that they have never heard of any disaffection towards the Government, nor resistance to the local authorities, whatever—that they are indignant at the impudent falsehood of raising the "Standard of Liberty and Independence,"—and that no Country could, possibly enjoy a more quiet, orderly, industrious, and loyal set of people than this Province does at this moment, and they defy any person to prove one instance to the contrary.

5th. That these Resolutions be inserted in the U. E. Loyalist, of York, and the Upper Canada Herald, of Kingston.

RESOLVED, by the Magistrates of the Newcastle District, in General Quarter Sessions assembled:—

That they fully approve of the manner in which the Grand Jury have noticed the extracts above alluded to; and that they further are of opinion, that the only source in the Province, from which such ideas could be drawn in England, is that of the columns of the "Colonial Advocate" & "Canadian Freeman," both published in York.

Dated at the Court House in Hamilton, District of Newcastle, July 11, 1827.

H. RUTTAN,
Chairman.

To the Editor of the U. E. Loyalist.

SIR,

According to your request, and to prevent misrepresentation, I herewith furnish you the particulars of the little accident that occurred to a Ferry Boat in Niagara River in attempting to board the Canada.

On Saturday last as the Canada passed the lower ferry, coming out of Niagara River, a Boat put off with a passenger; and contrary to the rule laid down to admit of no delays after the hour of departure, I ordered the Engine to be stopped, to take the passenger on board. The Ferryman instead of rowing to the gangway of the Canada, pulled the boat stern on to her bow before the waterwheel.

The vessel going through the water, all possibility of retreat from that position was precluded, and the inevitable swamping of the boat ensued. Fortunately the engine was entirely stopped, the Ferryman had the good luck to get hold of the wheel and ascend by it. The passenger after passing under it, clung to the floating skiff; no time was lost in going to his relief with the Boats of the Canada, and both escaped uninjured—any comment upon the impropriety of boarding a steam vessel before the waterwheel would be absurd, but I may be allowed to advise this general rule to all persons going alongside of a steam vessel, viz.: always to board to leeward, never to attempt to cross her bawse; but to bring the boats head round in the same direction with the vessel underway, row up on her lee quarter at double oars length distance, until abreast of the gangway, then gradually steer alongside, keeping as much as possible in parallel line with the direction of the vessel you are boarding.

I am,
Sir,
Your very obt. Servant,
HUGH RICHARDSON,
Master of the Canada.

We are the honorable enterprising men of Business?
Trust not to the busy tongue—examine for yourselves.

THE following valuable property, situated on the main road leading from York and Dundas, to Waterloo, Dunfries, Beverly, Woolwich, & the City of GUELPH; and within one mile of the head of Desjardin's Canal, being the north half of the south halves of lots No. 10 and 11 in the 1st concession of West Flambro,' containing 130 acres, a great part of which is cleared. The present is a very favorable time to judge of its quality, the crop of grass being nearly ready for mowing, notwithstanding the late unfavorable season. There is a large stone house, near the front of the lot, under which there was a distillery, at the time it was purchased by the present owner, which was about eight years ago. From an eminence in front of said house, there is a constant fall of good water, calculated for supplying all the purposes of a distillery, brewery and tannery. A store might be erected on said land, close to the main road, and in a commanding situation for business, and there is plenty of wood, stone and lime at hand, for building purposes.

Also, the south part of said lots, containing 130 acres, and fronting on Dundas street, or the Governor's road. This is timbered land of a soil equal to the other lot and is extremely well watered even in the most parched seasons.

These lands will be sold on the most reasonable terms, either together, or divided to suit the convenience of purchasers. Part of the purchase money may be paid, if required, by yearly instalments, security being given.—Title indisputable.—Or the owner who is 68 years of age will make the whole or a part over for a yearly payment for the remainder of his life, or for 5, 7 or 9 years certain. This will give agreat chance to any person who may have a young family to provide for, as the owner is very certain this property will double its value in seven years.

For further particulars enquire of the proprietor on the premises, or, at the office of the GORE GAZETTE.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor,
GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:
To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupant's should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

Miscellaneous.

THE SMUGGLERS.

I had been a soldier even from my childhood—I had been in many a battle—upon my breast, upon my brow, deep scars were visible. I lost a limb, and I bethought me of my mountain-home—the stream—the dark woods—the cottage on the green hill side. I returned to that pleasant home—I took to my bosom a fair young wife—she made me the father of a beauteous boy: on her white breast she nursed that boy, and she fondly cradled him in her arms. I forgot that I had been a man of blood, and was happy in my peaceful cottage. Our neighbours were peasants; their limbs were brawny and muscular. Many of them were smugglers; nor did they regard their calling as criminal. Their fathers had lived and had died in its practice: they regarded the wretched trade of smuggling as a birthright; and they loved it better for its dangers. In the sides of the hills, near to the clear streams, they dug themselves huts, where in the darkness of the night, amidst the storm, in the wild wind, they met to prosecute their lawless calling.

It was winter: snow was upon the hill—upon the woods—upon the icebound river. In every village arose smoke from distilleries licensed by the law; but no smoke arose from the fireless hearth of the wretched smuggler; and even had there been fuel, there was no food for the smuggler's board: a draught of water from the half-frozen spring—a cake of onion bread—such was his children's fare. Yet would the young mother raise her meek eyes to Heaven; and, ere she broke the bread, would bless it with a mother's blessing. The arm of the law was more stretched forth to desolate the smuggler's huts. From the arms of the fond wife, from the breast of the pale bride, those miserable, those wild uneducated men, were dragged, to become things of shame. With tears did the wife water her lone couch—with tears did the babe call upon its father's name: he was in prison—ay, in prison; and when those mourners assembled at their sad meal, their hearts were broken. Yet, the smugglers, those dwellers of the hills, were peaceful men; and from their thatched roofs I have oft times heard arise the sounds of heart-ejaculated prayer.

Sarah Beaton was a maiden of rare loveliness: meekness and purity beamed forth from her face of beauty—from her dark loving eyes: her long black hair fell in braided tresses. To the old pair with whom she lived, Sarah was somewhat between a child and a domestic. They loved her much—who would not have loved her, that gentle girl! and dearly they did love her, as they beheld her in the light—the loveliness of her young charms!—Sarah was the daughter of a smuggler; dear to her were those law-forgetting people; and she wept in purity and in maiden pity over their proscribed and desolate state. I had heard that a party of soldiers were about to be sent into our quiet glen. I felt for those devoted men; for I had seen dark unquiet looks among them; and I feared that they would rise up in wrath, and that blood would be shed. One of the peasants—I knew him well—wandered from house to house, begging for alms. He seemed to be lame and maimed; but, under the distinguished beard, the matted hair, I recognised the fiery eye, the wide nostril, like that of the war-horse—the high manly forehead of Alan Grahame. He was a youth of much promise: gentle to the guiding hand, when in kindness it was extending; but, were insult offered to his young blood, his bold spirit, like that of the wood-lion, would rise up within him. I saw him wandering from hut to hut, in secrecy and disguise. I spoke mildly to him: with a dark look he turned away. On the morning the soldiers were expected in our glen; there was a spirit of mystery stirring abroad; and as I stood in the door of my cottage, groupes of men passed by. They seemed restless and troubled; they spake in low whispering; their eyes glared, and they looked as though they thirsted for blood. They were armed in something of a warlike fashion; a rusty sword—a broken musket—an oaken staff: the weapon mattered not. They passed onward, firmly, steadily; bounding, with active strength, across the brook—over the hanging cliff—on—on to the dark wood. Before the hour of noon six-ty men were concealed beneath its branches. Then came upon the ear strains of martial music—the hoarse thunders of the drum—the shrill whistle of the fife; and then, over the high hill, was seen a file of soldiers, marching with the firm step of British veterans, their muskets glittering in the sun, the scarlet of their dress gleaming up richly from the white snow.—They have crossed the ford—they are beyond the mill—they are in the dark wood; and now the smugglers, those wild despairing men, fiercer than beasts of prey, rush from their lurking places, to close in the mortal struggle with their fellow—with men who like themselves, have homes, and loving partners, and children.—Now, the fireing has ceased—the soldiers are fleeing down the hill—the smugglers, with mad glee, are returning to their huts to clasp their wives in their blood-stained arms. From their frantic joy, I turned away in silence. I went up to the dark wood: blood, blood, was all around me: the earth was crimsoned with that life-stream: I heard low heart-rending moans; they were uttered by a wounded soldier. I took him to my home, I laid him upon my bed—I dressed his wounds—and I prayed to the giver of life that he might live.

Ere that night fell, I saw Alan pass my door. Irons were on his wrists; he was guarded by soldiers; his head sunk down low on his broad chest; he walked feebly, supported by a soldier's arm. Whither had his young strength fled! After some time, the judge came to the trial of his wretched prisoner. He was a mild, melancholy man—his forehead was pale and calm—his large and downcast eyes told that he was occupied with inward musings—his stooping figure indicated by-gone sorrow—it might be sin.—Many witnesses were examined; but on the evidence of Sarah Beaton hung Alan's life. It matters not to my story how this happened. She was there, that sad maiden—pale motionless as marble. Had it not been for the convulsive movements about her mouth, she would not have looked like a thing of life. The counsel and the judge questioned her; and there was a working in her breast, and in her throat, as though she felt the death-struggle within her heart; but she had to speak the truth before her God, and her words were fatal to the unhappy man. She spoke in low broken sounds: once even her large lustrous eyes turned towards Alan. His head was bent upon his folded hands; from his forehead started the sweat-drops till they ran down his cheeks like rain. Upon his face Sarah once looked—the soul of a sorrowing loving woman was in her gaze—then she bent low her head, and folded her arms upon her breast, and left the court with a sad step.

Alan's brother was a fierce unhappy lad: his passions were wild as the course of the mountain stream; and, as Sarah passed him, his dark brow was bent frowningly upon her, and his wide chest heaved like a sea, and he uttered curses and threats of vengeance. She bears him not! Sarah Beaton had nothing now to do with life. On the following morning she went forth—in her beauty she went: as in our father's days went the damsel, Rachael, to the well of Haran, so went Sarah Beaton to draw water from the spring.—In summer it was a place of wild loveliness; those clear waters bubbling up from the rock in the depth of the lone glade, the birch trees bending in their leafy fragrance over the cool stream: now, the trees were leafeless, like ghosts of their former selves, and the clouds lowered, and the wind blew. Sarah moved slowly on in her pale sweetness; her black hair waved in the blast: ere she stooped the pitcher into the well, she threw back her arms to bind up those long tresses; from the wood came a flash—a sound—a bullet—another—and the maiden fell back upon the earth, and the blood gushed from her breast, and its crimson tide mingled with the snow!

Summary.

Emigration.—We understand that a petition to the House of Commons, signed by 2300 heads of families in Manchester, and praying to be sent to the British Colonies, was last week forwarded to Mr. Wilmot Horton, who has undertaken to present the same and to support the prayer of the petition.

Mr. Stringer has paid £400 and 20 marks, to be excused as Sheriff of London and Middlesex.

The accounts from Constantinople of the 16th of April bring nothing new. The situation of the Greeks had not become worse, since it was positively announced that the Acropolis of Athens still held out.

Statue of His Majesty by Chantry.—The great artist has just completed a statue of our Most Gracious Sovereign. It is intended to be erected at His Majesty's favourite watering place, Brighton.

A vessel from St. Petersburgh says, under the date of the 12th inst. that orders have been received for the equipment of 18 vessels at Cronstadt, 7 or eight of them line ships, so that several merchant vessels were deprived of hands for loading. The former are intended for the Mediterranean; and we shall of course feel interested to know what is their object.

In the House of Lords, on the 27th. Lord Malmesbury inquired whether the government had paid sufficient attention to the wool trade, and whether any relief was to be afforded to those concerned in it. No answer however was returned to this inquiry by the ministry.

In the House of Commons, in speaking on a petition to raise the duty on foreign wool, Mr. Huskisson stated that the French and the Netherlanders were underselling them in woollens in Mexico, &c. and that new duties would increase the evil.

Almost every ship, this spring bound for the North American ports, from this port, has been crowded with passengers, and our quays are still in a constant bustle with the emigrants proceeding to their respective ships. It is with some degree of regret we thus see our better kind of peasantry voluntarily expatriating themselves in such numbers; and we observe that greater emigration than usual is also taking place in almost every sea-port.—Most of the families going out are composed of active young people, or rather a decent description, who had, by industry, acquired a little money for their venture into another hemisphere and who would be an acquisition to any country. It is a curious fact, and we leave others to account for it, that among the emigrants few comparatively are Roman Catholics, though in one ship a remarkable exception may be noticed, where, of 180 passengers, 150 were Roman Catholics. Already upwards of 4,000 passengers have proceeded to North America, and more than 1,000 to the United States.—Belfast Chronicle.

Glasgow June 2.—We are happy to notice, that, within the last ten days, trade in this city has generally assumed a still more brisk and lively aspect.

The Commons on the 22th were engaged in the discussion of a petition from the wool growers, complaining of the low duty on foreign wool. In the course of the debate Mr. Huskisson mentioned the fact that France and the Netherlands were running them hard in the article of fine woollens.

The sum required to defray the Extraordinary Expenditure of the Army, in the year 1827 is £250,000.

At the last York Assize, sentence of death was recorded against seventy-one prisoners. There was 145 on the calendar.

The Liverpool Courier of the 30th mentions that numerous icebergs had been fallen in with by vessels from the United States, and that one packet ship had fallen in with one hundred of them.

England.

The difficulties between the shipwrights and their employers still continue; but it was hoped they might be accommodated through the association of the ship owners.

It is now placed beyond any doubt that all the great interests of the country are in a steady course of improvement, with every appearance of its continuing. The accounts from the manufacturing districts are really cheering; and the agriculturalists, contrary to their own expectations, have not been in a more thriving situation for a long time than they are at present. The accounts from the outports are fully as gratifying; and the shipping interests are recovering from their late depression. In the port of London, the arrivals this year exhibit an increase of 144 vessels, English and foreign, as compared to the number that was entered last year up to the same period. There has been of course a corresponding augmentation of duties paid into the Custom House, and we understand that the improvement of this branch of the Revenue, for the last three weeks in particular, has been very considerable.—Bell's Weekly Mess. 3d June.

In the Lords on the 8th, the Message of the King respecting Portugal, was taken up and discussed, but the proceedings were not brought to a close when the Sun went to press. Lord Dudley, who moved an Address to the King, among other observations, remarked thus:—"Negociations were now going on between Spain and Portugal, under the sanction of England and France, which were likely to end in an arrangement that would relieve us from the necessity of keeping our troops there."

The English ports were open until the 15th of August for foreign oats, at 4d. per quarter.

ONE DAY LATER FROM EUROPE.—The ship Chariot, Pratt at Boston, from London, has brought a paper of the 9th of June. It appears that Lord Cochran was in the vicinity of Poros, and had purchased forty vessels, which would be ready about the middle of May; with which he intended to attack the Turkish fleet at Tenedos. Capt. Hastings had taken six Turish vessels laden with provisions, &c. Every thing tends to assure us, that the Greek cause is in a favorable train.

Weavers' Wages.—We are extremely happy to state, that, on Tuesday se'nnight, Messrs. Thomas and Michael Harbottle advanced the wages of their hand cambrick Weavers. On their new looms, the best hands will now earn from 12s. to 15s. per week, clear of all deductions.

The Shipwrights.—On wednesday morning about eleven o'clock, the journeymen shipwrights, amounting to between 500 and 600 proceeded to the different graving docks where men were at work repairing several vessels, and, by threats of violence, compelled them to leave their work. The numbers increased so rapidly that it was deemed advisable to give information to the police, when a strong body of constables, with from 70 to 80 special constables, proceeded to the docks to protect the workmen. One man, who was supposed to be a ring-leader in the disturbance, was taken into custody; but the constables were speedily overpowered by his numerous companions, who after a severe struggle, succeeded in liberating him. They then marched in a body to Moulsha-fields, whence, after some consultation, they dispersed. They afterwards assembled in small bodies, but nothing further was attempted during the day. The Mayor, together with Sir John Tobin and Thomas Case, Esq. were about the dock during a great part of the afternoon, and we understand that a part of the Eight Hussars were under arms during the afternoon.—Liverpool paper.

The tax on sugar, last year, netted £4,500,000.—The tax on rum and other foreign spirits last year, netted £3,500,000.

The tax on shopmen, warehousemen, and porters, last year amounted to £55,000.

A demand for British goods has sprung up in India, to an extent which was not expected—while the American and Continental markets have been glutted. The exportation of yarns last year, to India, has been very brisk, and handsome profits have been realized, and this spring a large exportation has taken place. Considering the immense number of inhabitants, it would be difficult to fix a limit to the probale amount of the future demand.

The King has conferred the Deanery of Durham on Dr. John Banks, Bishop of St. David's.

Mr. Brougham has been appointed a King's Counsel. All attempts to stop the leak in the Tunnel under the Thames has proved ineffectual.

The funds had suffered a little depression, owing to the Duke of Wellington's amendment to the Corn Bill.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—JUNE 1.

THE BUDGET.

Mr. CANNING addressed the House to the following effect:—The task which it is this day my duty to perform, difficult as it must be at any time to a person called for the first time to perform it is certainly not less so by the consideration that the picture of the financial state of the country which I have to bring forward is not one of unqualified prosperity. Undoubtedly a complexion is thrown over the whole of it by the dark spots of particular parts, which has made a deeper impression than is perhaps warranted in this House and the country; and it is a consolation, that the nearer one approaches, and the more accurately one looks into it, there is the more reason to hope that that complexion has been, in the opinion of the public, exaggerated; and, if it has, as it is impossible to suppose it has not, there are and will be, nevertheless, the means and determination to repair it. Sir, the financial situation of the country is unwith a steady and scrutinizing eye, but in proportion as that scrutiny is accurate and steady, I am happy to say that it will be the justification of hopes that the reparation is neither difficult nor remote. (Cheers.) Sir, without further preface, as a proof of the sincerity with which I mean to deal with this subject, I shall proceed to state, in the first instance, what was our precise financial situation at the end of the past year; secondly, to combine and compare, as has been the habit of the Noble Friend, my predecessor in this place, that one year with several years preceding; and lastly, to suggest the provision for the present year, and to state the grounds on which I think myself authorized to look forward with encouragement to the future. As to the first head, and second of these heads, namely, our situation at the end of the last financial year, and our situation at the end of that year, combined with the year preceding, I shall produce papers, which I am sure every gentleman who may look at them will be able to verify and compare. With respect to the third head, the present, and the future, I can only again appeal to the manifestation I have given, of the sincerity with which I mean to treat this subject, in abstaining from further comment, merely stating that it is not my intention either to keep back any thing that ought to be brought forward, or to state any thing unnecessarily; and I can assure the House at least, that I shall press no opinion upon them which I do not honestly and sincerely entertain myself. [Hear.] Sir, to begin with the first head to which I have called the attention of the House—the state of our finances, at the end of the year 1826. At the end of that year, after balancing the income and expenditure of the year, there remained a surplus towards defraying the Sinking Fund of nearly a million. The amount applicable to the Sinking Fund of that year, was five millions five hundred thousand pounds: there was, therefore, an apparent deficit of four millions five hundred thousand pounds. I state this as a amount, because from that deficit are to be deducted items which considerably reduce it. The first of these sums, is the aggregate of the advances made from the Exchequer, under several Acts of Parliament, either for public works in Great Britain and Ireland, or for the purchase of beneficial interests in land, but not only likely but certain to make a more than adequate return. It is quite obvious, that money laid out in this manner, and for which the claims are available and outstanding, is not to be fairly placed to the expenditure of any particular year. [Hear.] Other expenses occurred upon a balance which took place in the preceding year, to the amount of twelve hundred thousand pounds. The particulars of those advances, I think I may spare the time of the House, by not detailing the papers, which would be unnecessary, every Gentleman has access to them, and by a reference to which he may immediately satisfy himself, if he doubts my word. To this was to be added the circumstance, that in the course of the year 1826, over-payments, or payments for expenses not incurred in either years, but defrayed in that year, occurred to the amount of twelve hundred thousand pounds; that also is to be found in a specific paper. Those two sums of twelve hundred thousand pounds each deducted from the £4,500,000, which I have stated as the deficiency of the year, has left a clear deficiency of £2,100,000, including the payment to be made by law on account of the sinking Fund. Such, Sir, was the state of our finances at the end of the year; but before we take that as the measure of the financial ability—still more as a proof of the financial ability of the country —it will be most fit and proper to refer to that process which I have said my Noble Friend referred to, that of combining the particular year with the preceding year, and drawing an average upon the whole, and an inference from the aggregate amount. Sir, it is just four years since the Sinking Fund was placed in its present more simple form; those four years, therefore, naturally formed the period which it is proper to combine, in order to arrive at a general result. Taking those 4 years combined, the total income of the country in those 4 years at two hundred and twenty-nine millions and a fraction—say, in round numbers £230,000,000 the expenditure of those four years taken together, exclusive of the Sinking Fund, and the expenses for the purpose of dealing with it was,—say for the purpose of dealing with it more easily, £10,000,000, the surplus which remained towards defraying the Sinking Fund for those four years, we will say was twenty millions. The total aggregate income of the four years something under two hundred and thirty millions, the total expenditure something under two hundred and ten millions, and the surplus remaining towards the Sinking Fund, a trifle under twenty millions.—The claim of the sinking fund for these four years was 21 millions and a quarter, leaving an apparent deficit for the four years in the whole expenditure of the country of £1,285,000, from the £2,400,000, there remains a real surplus of £1,100,000, for the year, after defraying all the expenditure of the country. —[Hear, hear.] I now proceed to the income of the present year. The estimated receipts of 1827, founded on the actual Receipts of 1826, amount to £54,800,000.—The estimated Expenditure of 1827, exclusive of Sink Fund, £51,700,000. Add Sink Fund to Expenditure, and the account will stand thus:—

Sinking Fund	5,700,000
Total	£ 57,464,000

Leaving thus, I am sorry to say, a deficiency to be provided for in 1827, somewhat above £2,100,000. Before I come to the statement of the present year, I wish to state the result of the revenue of the last four years, supposing the data on which I proceed to be as accurate as those to which I have already referred. Income of the last four years, viz: 1823, '24, '25 and '26, exclusive of advances and repayments 225,000,000l.

Estimated income of 1827	54,800,000
Total	£ 282,600,000

In adding the income of the present year, I have omitted (as has been admitted), in the calculation of the preceding years, the amount arising from advances and repayments, and also so much of it as arose from grants and loans. The estimated income of 1827 being thus £54,800,000, and the estimated amount of that of the last four years giving a sum total of £282,600,000, it remains next to consider the expenditure of these four years, as compared with the estimated expenditure of the present year. Expenditure of 1823, '24, '25, and '26

Estimated expenditure of 1827	51,810,000
Sum Total	£ 257,477,000

Leaving thereby a surplus in the aggregate amount of the income and expenditure of the last five years of £26,000,000, and something more.

Surplus sinking fund, by law, in 1823, '24, '25, and '26 21,227,765l.
Ditto of 1827 5,700,000

Deficiency of income, in the 5 years, to meet the sinking fund required by law 1,594,765l.

This is the deficiency, as it were, by law, laid on the Sinking Fund for a space spread over five years, for which we were left to provide out of our present resources. Now, Sir, from their retrospective consideration from the commencement of 1823 up to the end of the present year, it appears that the deficiency is something under £2,000,000, which on a revenue of nearly £300,000,000, spread over five years, is not a deficiency to which I will not even say the House of Commons should be reconciled, but which is much smaller than my apprehensions led me to anticipate, and much less than the House and the country generally conceived it to be. [Hear, hear.] I am aware it may be said that there is a fallacy which pervades the whole of this statement, arising out of that circumstance, which is familiarly designated, and generally named, the Dead Weight, but I think that it is an entire mistake to consider that the operation of the dead weight can have the effect of falsifying the account. I am willing to accede that the system has its faults—that it has the effect of complicating and obscuring our financial statements—[hear, hear,]—but I believe that on this account more blame has been attached to it than really belongs to it, and in respect to this particular account I contend, that it is an advantage and benefit to the country.—The contribution from the Commissioners of Naval and Military Pensions within the last four years, amounted to £7,600,000. Big Gentlemen must not forget, that when that contribution, was established, no less than two millions of taxes were annually repealed; and before it is supposed that the dead weight produces an exaggerated account of the National income, Hon. Gentlemen must consider what amount of taxes was repealed only because this contribution was imposed. As I said before, nearly two millions of taxes per annum were repealed, and in the same period in which the dead weight principle the contribution of £7,600,000, those taxes, if unrepealed, would have produced no less than £8,200,000.—So far from the amount of the income, the dead weight is unfelt on one side, the fact is, that that side loses £600,000 by dead weight.—I do not main to contest that the dead weight does not produce obscurity, but as to the charges of swelling and inflaming the income of the country, it is perfectly guiltless. In fact as I said before, the income of the country would appear to be £600,000 greater than it is now, if it were not for the Dead Weight. The continuance of those taxes if not repealed too, would leave a balance against the country of from £500,000, to £600,000. I repeat that this is not the opportunity to enter into the merits or demerits of the dead weight; I admit its faults, and I frankly own that I was ignorant of its merits until I had occasion to examine into it. I believe too, that many other Hon. Gentlemen have been in ignorance which I had, and of which impression will be removed by examination. I contend that the country has received substantial benefits, and when we come to consider the question with the bank, whilst we calculate how much we shall gain, by simplifying our financial accounts, and being enabled as it were, fairly to look our difficulties in the face, we must not forget that the price which must be paid for those advantages, is our taking up again a part of that burden we had laid down, and from which we have been relieved during a period of four years. No benefit will be derived from waiting for that time, than from prematurely adopting any sweeping measure now. I forbear from giving any pledge upon this subject, further than this, and it is all that the House can expect, or that the Committee will not fail to perceive, that in all I have assumed the fact of the existence of a Sinking Fund, or of some fund by whatever name it is called, which will have the effect of preserving our national fame, and prove a national benefit. I assume the existence of a fund which will enable us to meet any sudden financial difficulty or any unforeseen public exigency. The present year affords an illustration of all that I mean. During the present year we had a sudden falling off in the Revenue, and a foreign exigency coming upon us unawares; and I would ask, what would become of us if we were that country which should square its income and expenditure so exactly as not to be able to meet the call which must necessarily be made in the event of those emergencies to which I have alluded. I do not now inquire what amount of surplus revenue would meet such casualties. But if I might be allowed to give an opinion on such a subject, judging from experience, I should say, that it would require a proportion of five millions out of fifty. In this particular I am only stating my impression to the House, and not by any means my decided conviction. But, for the present year, the question which arises, and which the Committee have to decide is whether the deficiency which I have stated in round numbers at three millions, and which there appears every prospect of being less at the end of the year, is to be made provision for by extraordinary means by imposing new taxes, or whether we should take credit on the Consolidated Fund, and not decide fully upon making up the deficiency, and meeting our difficulties until the year 1827 is ended. The question is, therefore, whether the amount of Exchequer Bills now out, is such as that it would be dangerous to admit the attempt. This may be known by considering their present price. Exchequer Bills, are now at a premium of 50s. on the £100, and it is well known that they bear a small interest. From the price, therefore, we cannot conclude that there is an overstocked market. The whole amount of Exchequer Bills outstanding is £25,800,000, supposing us even to go on at the rate we have for the four months past, supposing all the accounts we have received, I will not say of the reviving prosperity, but I may say of the reviving activity in manufactures and commerce, prove fallacious, taking things at the worst, the Committee will agree with me that the utmost to which the amount of outstanding Exchequer Bills can extend at the expiration of the present year will be twenty-six millions, seven hundred thousand pounds. Without taking any thing of the prophet on myself, however, and only considering the accounts which come from all parts of the country, I do not think I can be considered too sanguine when I suppose that there will be an accelerated ratio of revenue during the rest of the year. But supposing that we were to rely solely upon those resources, calculating at the same rate for the remainder of the year, as for the portion already passed, even then there would be a lesser quantity of Exchequer Bills outstanding than had ever been outstanding before within the last twenty years,—not as to the quantity actually in circulation, but as to that quantity if added to the deficiency of the present year. I also beg to call the attention of the Committee to the 26,000,000 of Exchequer Bills now outstanding; one-fifth is of a different nature from the remaining four-fifths, and from Exchequer Bills in general. The aggregate of these were advances made by the Government, and now due to them to the amount of five millions. These were represented by the different public works, which might be considered as available, and convertible securities. This would reduce the amount of Exchequer Bills, even taking the most unfavourable view, so that including the deficiency of the present year, they would amount to but 21 millions, which is certainly not more than had ever been outstanding during the last 20 years. Under these circumstances I put it to the Committee, whether it will be better to run the serious risk of defraying the expenditure to be provided for by an addition to the present Exchequer Bills, and I will not pause to compare the results of such a proceeding with the effect which might be presumed to follow any other mode. For my own part, I am strongly inclined to that method to which I first alluded. The state of the country is now hopeful; its prosperity cannot be considered as completely confirmed, but I trust that it is proceeding to return gradually to its former power and security. That it will attain it I have no doubt, provided nothing extraordinary occurs, and provided also, that it is not hampered by any thing which can divert the course on which it is now entered.—I state, Sir that we have an improving revenue; but I am not so sanguine as to imagine that we can overtake the deficiency which has occurred; but it will be wise, nevertheless, to wait its realization or disappointment before we decide what other course is to be adopted. Sir, if I had to decide whether I should take a course like this without having the advantage of previously stating it to Parliament, I should have felt the responsibility too great; but, having that opportunity, and because I have nothing to keep secret or concealed—nothing to keep back I have the courage to say to wait and to expect is better than to be premature and precipitate. I have thus far stated the general principles on which I think it expedient and wise to proceed, rather than enter into any complicated accounts, or multiplied details, which may only add to the complication, and which belong to a department in which, I am free to admit, my experience is not very great.—[Hear, hear.]—My object has been to put forward the principles upon which I promise to proceed, in as conspicuous a way, as I have been able to do, and I submit to be clear and satisfactory. It only remains for me to state the supplies for this year.—

Navy	6,125,000
Ordnance	1,949,000
Miscellaneous	2,275,000
Interest on Exchequer Bills	650,000
	18,293,000

The vote of £500,000, was rendered requisite on account of our troops in Portugal. The Right Hon. Gentleman then proceeded to state, that, besides the vote of credit, the accounts on the Table state an excess in the Ways and Means of last year over the supply of £800,000.

Vote of credit	500,000

	5,700,000
Total Expenditure	57,464,000
Deficiency to be provided for in 1827	2,864,000l.
Military and Naval Pensions	455,000
Debt from the East India Company and Military Expenses	100,000
Duties on Sugar	30,000

Having proposed to provide for these charges on the Consolidated Fund, the Right Hon. Gentleman then proceeded:—From what I have stated, it is for the Committee to decide, under the circumstances of the country, whether we shall go on through the present year, not in ignorance, but with full knowledge of our situation, and abstain from a change until we await the growing effects of our present prospects of prosperity, rather than hastily press forward to that question of financial consideration which stands for next year, with a risk before us of deranging our present accounts, without knowing the possible effects of that derangement. In the supplies of last year there is an increase, beyond the estimated charge, of £300,000. This increase arose from certain charges on account of Army Extraordinaries, and on account of the Vote of Credit for Portugal. I know it will be urged that it is desirable to bring us back to a fixed and certain expenditure. As to this, or any precise limit, or any future measure, I forbear from making any promises; and for this reason, that I have always observed that promises of this kind are always exaggerated by those to whom they are made, and because, as more is expected than is held out, they generally end in disappointment. All I can say on account of Government is, that Ministers are disposed and determined to apply their best efforts; and that they have resolved to take the House into Council on the subject. This is all that, in the circumstances of the country, the House can expect, or the Government can do.—(Cheers.)—In its present state we should not even aid the country, but leave it to its natural course, and before the adoption of any new measure, wait until the prosperity of the nation was more equivocal.—(Hear, hear.)—I have a confident hope that the prosperity which has commenced will continue to increase—that hope I found on a knowledge of the country, its intrinsic energies—of its ascertained, though not now put forth power, rather than on any particular circumstances which might in the statement, lead into minute and detailed explanation.—(Cheers.)—Before I sit down I will, with the permission of the House, read an extract from an eminent authority, in support of the propriety and efficacy of the principles on which I have professed and avowed my reliance.

"But there is still another cause, even more satisfactory than these, because it is of a still more extensive and permanent nature—that constant accumulation of capital, that continual tendency to increase the operation is universally seen in a greater or less proportion, whenever it is not obstructed by some public calamity, or by some mistaken and mischievous policy, but which must be conspicuous and rapid indeed in any country which has at once arrived at an advanced state of commercial prosperity. Simple and obvious as this principle is, and felt and observed as it must have been, in a greater or less degree, even from the earliest periods, I doubt whether it has ever been fully developed and sufficiently explained, but in the writings of an author of our times, now unfortunately no more (I mean the Author of a celebrated Treatise on the Wealth of Nations), whose extensive knowledge of detail, and depth of philosophical research, will, I believe, furnish the best solution to every question connected with the history of commerce, or with the system of political economy. This accumulation of capital arises from the continual application of a part at least, of the profit obtained in each year, to increase the capital amount of capital to be employed in a similar manner, and with continued profit, in the year following. The great mass of the property of the nation is thus constantly increasing at compound interest, the progress of which in any considerable period, is what at first view would appear incredible. Great as have been the effects of this cause already, they must be greater in future; for its powers are augmented in proportion as they are exerted. It acts with a velocity continually accelerated, with a force continually increased. It may indeed, as we have ourselves experienced, be checked or retarded by particular circumstances—it may for a time be interrupted, or even overpowered; but where there is a fund of productive labor and active industry, it can never be totally extinguished. In the season of the severest calamity and distress, its operations will still counteract and diminish their effects; in the first returning interval of prosperity, it will be active to repair them.—If we look to a period, like the present, of continued tranquility, the difficulty will be to imagine limits to its operation. None can be found while there exists at home any one object of skill or industry short of the utmost possible degree of perfection—none of land in the country capable of higher cultivation and improvement; or while there remains abroad any new market that can be explored or any existing market that can be extended. From the intercourse of commerce, it will in some measure participate in the growth of other nations —in all the possible varieties of their situations. The rude wants of countries emerging from barbarism, and the artificial and increasing demands of luxury and refinement, will equally open new sources of treasure and new fields of exertion, in every state of society, and in the remotest quarter of the globe.—It is this principle which, I believe, according to the uniform result of history and experience, maintains, on the whole—in spite of the vicissitudes of fortune and the disasters of empires—a continued course of successive improvement in the general order of the world." These are the words of Mr. Pitt. Adam Smith is the authority cited. Let those who regard the application of philosophy to politics as innovation, go back with me to the principles avowed in this House by Mr. Pitt in 1792. (Cheers.)—I now speak them from my mouth —I adopt them as my principles—I proclaim them to Parliament as the guide and polar star of my political course."—(The Right Hon. Gentleman sat down amid loud and continued cheers.)

Foreign Intelligence.

Odessa, May 8.—Letters from Constantinople, of May 2, announce that the Sultan has dismissed from his office the Seraskier, Redschid Pacha, and appointed for his successor Aga Pacha, who commanded the Troops in the Straits of Bosphorus. He has been succeeded in his command by Chosrou Pacha, whom the Greeks called Topal Pacha. It is inferred, from the disgrace of the Seraskier, either that the Acropolis of Athens has been delivered, or that the siege was going on very badly. A report is current in the Russian camp, that the Reis Effendi not to receive any note from an European minister relative to the Greeks.

GREAT NEWS FROM GREECE!

The news from Greece is glorious if true. The London Courier of the evening of June 5, contains the following:—

"The Allgemine Zeitung of the 2d of June states that the British Ambassador at Constantinople had sent off a despatch, announcing the entire defeat of the Turks before Athens, on the 29th of April, loss said to be 10,000 men. Rateslon letters of the 29th of May, confirm the above, and states that the Turks were successively driven from all their entrenchments, and forced to abandon all their artillery and baggage. The Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands, on the 5th of May, despatched a Courier from Corfue to London, with another confirmation of the above."

If it likewise stated under the date of Augsburg, May 31, that the British Ambassador at Constantinople had sent off a despatch announcing the same grateful intelligence.

Royal Exchange, London, Tuesday night.—The intelligence from Paris, by express of Sunday, received to-day, is of considerable importance, confirming as it does the reports previously circulated, of the recognition of Greece by all powers, including Great Britain, being actually engaged in obtaining by negotiation a recognition of the dependence of Greece by the Ottoman Government. The private communications from the French capital state positively that an arrangement has been entered into between the Porte and Greece, and that in the event of a denial by the Grand Segnior, the point is to be carried by force of arms.

GENERAL ELECTION.

The following questions are submitted to the Electors of the Province, at the present period, when the Members, forming the majority of the late House of Assembly, claim re-election on the ground of their past services:—

1. When the late House of Assembly declared that they were willing, on the part of the People, to grant an aid similar to that accepted by Sir Francis Burton, were they not aware that to receive it would violate the positive instructions transmitted by His Majesty's express command, for the regulation of the Executive, and therefore, that their Bill to that effect could not become a Law?

2. Did not His Majesty, in right of his Crown, possess in this province a certain patrimony, with Revenues, Duties, and Customs, which he would freely dispose of in support of his Government in this Province?

3. Was not the Revenue under the 14th of Geo. III, granted to His Majesty in lieu of this casual revenue, strictly limited, and permanently appropriated by Parliament to the Civil List, and His Majesty, to certain specific purposes, long before the existence of the House of Assembly?

4. Was the above mentioned Act affected by the Act of 18th Geo. III? On the contrary, was not the last to operate only prospectively?

5. Have not the Law Officers of the Crown in Great Britain given their deliberate opinion on this matter, namely, that the Act of the 18th Geo. III. in no wise interfered with the Act of the 14th Geo. III. which remains in full force and effect?

6. Has not the House of Assembly lately assumed an unqualified right to appropriate ALL monies raised in the Province in their own manner, including therein the above revenue already granted to the King?

7. Has not the House of Assembly lately assumed the right of holding the Executive responsible for ALL payments, not made, as they say, by authority of Law, meaning thereby, their own authority?

8. Does not this assumption impede the just operations of the Executive, and of the Courts of Justice?

9. Has not the late House of Assembly assumed the right of fixing Salaries, and of granting them as their gifts alone?

10. Do not the votes of the late House of Assembly tend to render EVERY Civil Officer of Government, including the Judges of the land, utterly dependent on that House only, for their annual salaries?

11. Have not the Leaders of the late House of Assembly, who now seek re-election, avowed their determination to wrest this Permanent Fund from the Crown?

12. Have not the Majority of the late House of Assembly thus put themselves in opposition, not, simply, to the Colonial Administration, but to the King's Imperial Parliament?

13. Are not these assumptions particularly that with respect to the Act, 14th Geo. III, unconstitutional; and, if submitted to, would they not annihilate the King's Prerogative, and the supremacy of the British Parliament and the Mother Country?

14. Was not the Report of the Committee on the matter of Sir Francis Burton, adopted by the majority of the House of Assembly, a flagrant insult to His Majesty's Representative?

15. Are then, the honest, loyal, and independent Electors of the Province prepared to support these unconstitutional assumptions of the late House of Assembly, in opposition to the Constitutional rights of the THREE co-ordinate Estates—the Prerogative of the Crown—and the supreme validity of an Act of the Imperial Parliament?

16. Lastly—Ought those Members to be re-elected, who, under the specious pretext of maintaining popular rights, never yet invaded, are pledged to persevere in their attempts to deprive the Crown of its property in the permanent fund—of its constitutional power over its own Officers—and to embarrass the Local Government, acting under the positive instructions of His Majesty?—Quebec Gazette.

General Election.—The approaching election it is believed will be warmly contested throughout the Province.—Most of the Members of the late House of Assembly are to be put in nomination at the ensuing election. The following are the list of the Candidates already announced—County of Montreal, Charles James Grant "—County of Kent, D. B. Viger, F. A. Quesnel.—Montreal, West Ward, L. T. Hart."—St. Maurice, John Fraser, Three Rivers, C. R. Ogden, P. B. Dumoulin."—Sorel, James Stuart —Hampshire, J. Canon."—Huntingdon, A. Cuvillier. —Hertford, F. Blanchet, N. Boissonault.—Richelieu, Roch de St. Ours.—Can. Courant.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1827.

The latest English dates are to 10th June.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, brought forward the Budget on 1st. Extracts from his speech on the occasion will be found in this days paper. The Corn Bill had not yet passed—a call of the House of Lords had been ordered for taking it into further consideration.

The first division of the 68th Regt. for this Garrison, arrived by the Queenston on Tuesday, and on her return a second detachment of the 70th proceeded to Lower Canada. The Exchanges are now, we believe, nearly completed.

The Lord Bishop, proceeded on his tour, by the Canada, on Friday last, and will visit all the stations in the Western part of the Province. His Lordship may be expected on his return about the beginning of September.

The Lower Canada papers are chiefly engrossed with the subject of the Elections, which are soon to take place in that Province. Several new Candidates have offered, and warm contests are expected in many places—Montreal is one of them, where Mr. McGill and Mr. Molson, offer, against Mr. Papineau and Mr. Cuvillier.

The Canadian Freeman, in his usual style, when pushed for argument, has recourse in his last number to his never failing vein of abuse. When he cannot argue, he calls names—let him call on—he may write as much as he pleases under the influence, but we are satisfied that every reflecting man in the Province, is of opinion with ourselves, that the Freeman is one of the sources from which other journals manufactured their "troubles in Canada?"

—in his columns, they found materials suited to their purpose—the libel was quickly fabricated, and the Canadian Freeman held it up to public view, with something like exultation, when he told us in one of his late numbers, that "the eyes of our neighbours were upon us." The Canadian Freeman did this—and when the libels found their way into the English papers—who was it that took any pains to contradict them?—Not the Canadian Freeman—he rather followed them up, by announcing to his readers, that "from the alarm excited in the mind of Ministers, several Regiments were ordered to the Country." This is the man who now, that he is fairly exposed—tells us that "he always had a good opinion of the Loyalty of the people."—This reminds us of another piece of his conduct when similarly situated.—After insulting the House of Assembly and daring them to bring Him to their Bar—when brought to their Bar, made most ample apology—he meant no offence, and hoped none would be taken.—So here—he is the means of misrepresenting the character of the people, and when brought to their bar, offers his apology—he had a different opinion of them—it is for the people to say, whether they believe in the sincerity of the apologist—for our own part, we have very little confidence in it.

By the last Lower Canada Mail, we received from "the Author," for which we return him our thanks, a Pamphlet, containing a Letter from "Delta," to "Senex," on the subject of the differences, which have long existed in that Province, with respect to the mode of granting the supplies. We have been prevented this week, by indisposition, from attending to our Editorial duties, as fully as we could wish, and have not been able to give the Pamphlet more than a cursory reading; but even this has satisfied us, that the Author, whom we recognize with pleasure as a Constitutional writer, has an intimate knowledge of the subject he has taken in hand. We hope to be able to give it more attention next week.

THE EDITOR has been desired by several respectable inhabitants of the Town, to request that a public meeting may take place at the Mansion House, on Thursday next, at three o'clock, P. M. in order to consider the propriety of setting on foot in this Province a subscription in aid of that established in London, for erecting a monument to the memory of His late Royal Highness the Duke of York.

Died,

At New-Market, on Sunday morning last, 22 inst. after a protracted and distressing illness, MRS. ESTHER BEMAN, in the 65th year of her age. She has left a numerous circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss; to all of whom she was most justly endeared, by her exemplary conduct, and the practice of those domestic virtues, which distinguished her long life.

At Moy, near Sandwich, Upper Canada, on the night of the 10th instant, in the sixty-second year of her age, Mrs. ARCHANGE MACKINTOSH, late spouse of the Honorable Angus Mackintosh, after a lingering illness of more than three months endurance; during which period, she evinced the greatest equanimity of temper, and resignation of mind, to the will of the Great Omnipotent power, who controls all earthly Existence.

In recording the demise of Mrs. Mackintosh, we announce the death of a lady, amiable in her manners, and charitable in her disposition, to the greatest degree.

She was always proud to alleviate the sufferings of her fellow creatures, without distinction to their standing in society, or hue of complexion; and was at all times foremost in her family to watch over the sick.

Her maternal hand was ever kind, affectionate, and sincere, to sooth the pains of the afflicted. No hour, no distance, prevented her repairing to the bed of the sick.

As a wife, she was warmly attached to her afflicted husband; whose companion she had been, for forty-four years and one month.

As a mother, she was sincerely affectionate, and desirous of bringing up her children in the most exemplary Christian manner.

As a neighbor, she was the solace of those who required the aid of a comforter. Her hand was always extended to the needy or distressed; and never was it withdrawn until the balm of consolation was administered.

To the last moment she spoke, it was in the most kind and soothing manner to those who assiduously attended over her sick bed.

Never was a parent more zealous and pious in her devotional exercises, or more strongly attached to the forms of the Church Service, of which she was a member; And it is seldom that we have heard from the Altar, a Person so handsomely eulogized by the Pastor of this Parish, the Rev. Joseph Crevier, as she was on the day of interment.—Communicated.

In Council 21*st November*, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.*

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2*s.* 6*d.*

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant with ut purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

THE U. E. LOYALIST.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1827. NO. 10.

Miscellaneous.

OTHO, OF GERMANY.

And the Pirate of the Mediterranean.

A heavy rain ushered in a bleak autumnal night, which closed over the field of Busenrelle; concealing, in almost impenetrable darkness, the flight of the fugitive, and somewhat abating, by its gloomy influence, the fierce ardour of the pursuer.

The uproar and tumult of the day had subsided. The shouts of onset, the neighing of Steeds, and the shrill call of the Trumpets, had given place to the solitary voice of nature. No sound met the ear but that of the wind rushing through the half leafeless forests; as two Knights, armed cap-apie, forced their way through the tangled mazes of a thick wood, bordering on the shores of the Mediterranean.

"The game is up!" exclaimed the foremost rider, suddenly springing from his steed, as the heavily-caparisoned war-charger sank under him; "my life and diadem are not worth an hour's purchase!"

"Courage, royal Otho!" said his companion, likewise dismounting; and speaking in a hollow and suppressed voice, as though the action gave him great pain; "the hope that has carried you thus far, in the hot pursuit of your enemies must yet bear you on."

"Now by Saint Peter, Noble Count! Your advice is physic to a dying man. My good steed has breathed his last, and these weary limbs will poorly aid me in eluding the scent of the blood-hounds who track my steps."

"Danger besets you on every side," returned the wounded Knight, impatiently; "but delay is certain death. Mount my horse, and speed for life through the forest."

"I value existence too little to prolong mine on such disgraceful terms, brave Hermon. Never shall my enemies say, that Otho of Germany fled like a coward, leaving his friend to the treacherous friends who have brought his life and honour into such fearful jeopardy."

"My liege, this is not a time to indulge in chivalric sentiments. The fate of an empire depends upon your life. Mine is already sped. Number me with the brave men you have left to the crow and the vulture on yonder ill-starred field. Hark!" he continued, sinking from the tree which had hitherto supported him, to the earth, "the foe is on us! I hear the trampling of steeds, and the deep baying of the dogs, which rises on the blast like the knell of death."

The Emperor started, and listened, while the scarcely-living steed snorted, pricking up his ears, and shook impatiently his slackened rein.

"You are right, Hermon; they are near—arise, and fly! Darkness will no longer conceal us. See—the moon bursts forth."

He paused, in breathless suspense, but received no answer. He touched the hand of the Knight, which lay extended on the ground —the icy coldness chilled him! He loosened the clasp of his visor, and lifted the heavy steel casque from his head. Through a misty atmosphere, the moon shed a sickly light on the pale brow and blood stained hair of the knight. Otho gazed for a moment on the lifeless form of his friend, sprang to his steed, and fled through the forest with desperate speed. The night was far advanced; the wind had died away, and the some hours, dispelled the haze which had enveloped the moon, and she now shone in cloudless glory on the ocean.

No sail was visible—no indication of the haunts of men met the anxious glance of Otho, as he slowly paced the beach, leading his tired horse, and bitterly ruminating on the past. Where should he gain a lodging for the night? To effect this object would risque discovery. While he was meditating on the course to be pursued, the sound of revelry met his ear—the laugh, the song, the wild huzza, rose on the wind, and mingled with the hollow wailing of the billows, which rolled in living brightness at his feet. Otho looked cautiously round, as a boisterous peal of merriment awoke the lonely echo of the place; but, though the sound seemed near, no object met his eye, but the broad expanse of moving water, and the deep shadow of the bold craggy rock beneath which he stood. He began to think something of magical illusion prevailed. At length the following ditty was chanted in full chorus, by manly voices in his native tongue:—

Where the sun warms, or the tempest lours,
The treasures of ocean and earth are ours;
Freedom and conquest attend our sail,
And the prize shall be ours ere the moon turn pale.

The wind that ruffles the breast of the deep,
And howls round our cavern shall lull us to sleep;
We sail by the glory of moonbeam and star,
And shout to the billow that bears us afar.

Bear a hand! bear a hand! unmoor the boat,
With the wind and the tide to our vessel float:
When the black flag is hoisted rude warfare is nigh—
Where its dark shadow quivers the boldest will fly.

Then, courage, my mates, the wind sings loud;
The moon has burst from her swarthy cloud;
Again must we dash through the angry roar
Of the foaming surge, ere the night is o'er!

This wild burst freed the Emperor from doubt as to the profession of the revellers; and he rightly concluded that he was near the rendezvous of one of the notorious hordes of pirates which, in that dark age, infested every Island and shore of the Mediterranean. Finding he was likely to escape from Scylla only to fall into Charybdis, he about to bend his course in a different direction, when his horse, with the natural sagacity of the species, finding himself near the haunts of men, neighed long and loudly. The sound had scarcely gone forth, before all was silent in the cavern; and Otho had time only to disengage his plumed helm, and commit it to the deep, ere a huge stone was rolled from the mouth of a cave, artfully concealed by a projecting angle of the rock. A flood of light instantaneously burst forth, revealing a group of men, variously attired, feasting round a table, hewn from the solid rock, which blazed with goblets of precious metal, filled with the sparkling juice of the grape. In another moment the Emperor was surrounded by armed men, whose fierce and menacing gestures indicated that little mercy or forbearance was to be expected at their hands.

The Prince, accustomed to command a turbulent and warlike people, bent not from his native dignity in addressing the lawless band before him. Courage could not rescue him from his perilous situation; but a bold and resolute carriage was more likely to succeed with such men than cowardly supplication or mean submission. Turning, therefore, to the foremost in the group, whom, by his proud bearing and fierce demeanour, he concluded to be their leader, he said—"Chance and my evil destiny have thrown me into your power: my rank is noble; aid me in my present need, and I will so amply reward your services, that you may abandon the lawless life you pursue."

The pirate tauntingly answered—"Methinks, the fortunes of an unhelmed knight would pay us poorly for exercising the rites of hospitality! What should you offer, of sufficient magnitude to tempt the rover to forsake his traffic on the deep? The wealth of nations is ours—we have bought our freedom on the waves with our blood, and derive our treasures from the most remote regions of the earth."

"Peace, Theodoric!" exclaimed a voice from behind, which made Otho start, as a tall martial figure emerged from the cavern. "Is it thus," he continued, addressing his comrade, "that you prove your boasted freedom, by playing the tyrant to a stranger, whose misfortune it is to have fallen into our hands? Now, by St. Nicholas! the patron of the mariner, I find man is the same arbitrary being on the throne, in the cottage, or on the deep. Give him power, and he abuses the prerogative with which he is invested." During this speech Otho examined, with an air of troubled interest, the dark, but intelligent countenance of the outlaw. His figure was lofty, well and strongly formed. Though plainly attired in the coarse garb of a seaman, he possessed a firmness of step, a grandeur of deportment, indicating high lineage and early acquaintance with arms. His complexion had suffered from the scorching influence of a hotter climate and constant exposure to weather; but the fire of genius pervaded his features, and flashed through the dark and piercing eye, which spoke of deeds, boldly resolved and fearlessly executed. His brow was marked with an impression of deep and settled melancholy, whose gloomy power had stolen the glow of health from his cheek, and shed its blight on the rich masses of raven hair, which, in the full meridian of manhood, were already mingled with silver. His countenance, once seen, could not be easily forgotten: and the remembrance of its lineaments recurred to the mind of the Emperor like a troubled dream, recalling the calm sports of boyhood, the rash and impetuous career of youth, the fierce tyranny that had marked his entrance on manhood.—"It is only fancy, or he, too, would recognize me," he exclaimed to himself, as the pirate, turned to him, said, in a courteous tone—"Sir Knight, you are welcome to our rugged cheer—follow me."

The cavern was strongly illuminated with torches, which gleamed on arms and trophies won from remote and barborous nations. The Captain, however, motioned Otho to a seat at the lower end of the board, and having seen him well supplied with refreshments, turned to a beautiful youth who was seated at his right hand, his head resting on a small lute. With that youth he entered into earnest conversation, from time to time casting significant glances on Otho. Once, the Emperor encountered the full inquishing blue eye of the stripling, whose colour mounted even to the snowy temples, which glittered with marble whiteness from among the flaxen locks by which they were shaded. He turned away his head to conceal his confusion, and his hand unconsciously fell over the instrument: it emitted a tremulous strain of melody, and the minstrel as if gathering courage from the sound, sang a simple air which served more forcibly to enchain the attention of the Emperor. As if under the influence of magic, he turned with intense interest on the dark-browed chief, and on the fair-haired youth beside him,

My native land! my native land!
How many tender ties,
Connected with thy distant strand,
Call forth my heavy sighs.

The rugged rock—the mountain stream—
The hoary pine-trees shade:
Where, often, in the noon-tide beam,
A happy child I strayed!

I think of thee, when early light
Is trembling on the hill;
I think of thee at dead midnight,
When all is dark and still!

I think of those whom I shall see
On this fair earth no more;
And while I think, my wishes flee
Back to thy much-loved shore.

The pirate cast a look of tender and melancholy regard on the minstrel, and Otho was on the point of expressing the pleasure his enchanted voice had afforded him, when the outlaw to whom he had first spoken, suddenly asked, in an imperious tone, "Sir Knight, whence came you?"

A dark frown rested on the brow of Otho, as he replied, in a tone equally haughty—"From the field of Busentelle."—"How went the battle?"—"It was not the sword of the mighty, or the force of the strong, that won the field," returned the Emperor—"treachery prevailed."—"How!" exclaimed the Captain, starting to his feet, "did his Italian friends forsake Otho in his hour of need! This repays the tyrant well for exiling from him true hearts and brave hands!" "You are a German," said the Emperor, fixing his eagle eyes on the pirate; "what can you know of Otho's private councils?"—A fierce light blazed in the dark eyes of the robber, as he replied—"What do I not know of them, you should have said. Hear me, Sir Knight, and then judge between this accursed tyrant and me!"—He paused, covered his face with his hands, and appeared for some time struggling with bitter reflections; then continued, in a calmer tone: "Stranger, you see before you one of the noblest-descended Princes of the German Empire, the unfortunate Philip of Cologne." The Emperor started—a deadly paleness stole over his countenance—his lip quivered, and his eye involuntarily sought the ground, as the pirate proceeded in his narrative.—"I served my first apprenticeship in arms under the banner of Otho, and we reaped together immortal glory in many a field. In the war with Sarmatia, the regiments under my command surprised, one night, the camp of the enemy, we took much spoil, and made many prisoners. Among the captives was a young and lovely female, the only daughter of a man of rank, who, dying of his wounds, committed her, with a father's blessing to his victorious foe. Had I followed the first generous impulse of my breast I should have restored the weeping damsel to her friends and country; but my heart soon owned for the unprotected stranger a tenderer passion. Our affection was unusual, and she promised to become my bride, when the days appointed for the mourning for her father was expired. In the interval, returning to Vienna, I was received with the most flattering demonstrations of regard by the treacherous Otho. But woe to him who puts any trust in the faith of princes! He accidentally saw, and became deeply enamoured of my beautiful Sarmatian. His passion knew no bounds, and cruelty suggested the most speedy method of satisfying his wishes. Finding me determined never to surrender my promised bride, he accused me of treason, and suborned witnesses. I was tried by the circle of princes; they dreaded the indignation of the Emperor, and I was sentenced to a heavy fine and perpetual banishment. Rage, despair, and love, was struggling in my breast. I gave myself up to the fury that possessed me; and, in the bitterness of the moment, denounced dreadful imprecations on the head of the man who was the author of my sufferings. But the measure of his crimes was not yet full—Eudocia resisted his passion, and treated the bribes he offered her with the contempt they merited. Accusing her of magic, the enraged and vindictive Emperor sent her, under a strong escort, a prisoner to a distant castle. Permitted to bid adieu to my aged parents before I quitted for ever my native land, I had not been many hours beneath the roof of my paternal castle before a friend communicated to me the tidings of Eudocia's sentence and approaching imprisonment. My first idea was to surprise the escort, and win back my bride at the point of the sword.—This resolve I instantly carried into execution. I assembled my friends and vassals—I pointed out my injuries—I roused them as men, and as comrades in arms, to assist me in rescuing from destruction a lovely and unfortunate woman. Aided by the darkness of the night, we succeeded in our enterprise, leaving but one man of the whole number alive to tell the tale. For that adventure the ban of the empire was pronounced against me; my name was erased from the list of princes; my banner was trampled under foot; and a high reward was offered for my head. Pursued in every realm to realm—destitute of a home or an abiding place—my name became a bye-word, a proverb in the mouth of my enemies. The sea was before me: I had no other resource: I joined myself to a band of brave, but desperate men, and became a pirate—the terror of the hands of Otho!" The outlaw ceased, and again passed his trembling hand over his brow.

"And what, think you, the wretch deserves, who could heap such aggravated miseries on the head of a brave and innocent man!" asked the Emperor, in a low and hollow tone.

"The fate he has doubtless met in the field—disgrace, overthrow, and death!" returned the pirate.

"He lives to fulfil the latter part of your sentence," replied the emperor, rising and approaching the outlaw. "Philip of Cologne! do you remember this face! Can you recognize, in a nameless fugitive, your ungenerous persecutor, Otho of Germany! Breathe in this breast your revenge, and sate your indignation on the author of your wrongs."—He threw his sword at the pirates feet, and stood before the astonished assembly with folded arms and down-cast eyes. A hollow murmur passed from man to man, and, "down with the tyrant!" resounded on every lip, but no sound was audible.

The pirate sprang to his feet—a dark red flush was on his face—his lip quivered—a fierce warfare of passion shook his frame. "Tyrant!" he explained, "the hour of retributive justice is at length mine! But for thee, I had been the pride and ornament of the land that gave me birth; and had reaped, in honourable warfare, immortal glory. Your unrelenting cruelty drove me to the rocks and fastnesses of these islands, and made me the companion of outlawed men, a pirate on the deep. Die! and let my crimes, my lost honour be visited on thee!" His sword flashing over his head.—"Hold!" exclaimed the minstrel boy, casting himself at the feet of the pirate, and staying the uplifted weapon; "raise not your hands against the Lord's anointed! He is your Prince—once was your friend! Will his blood atone for your past sufferings? Will his condemnation ensure your eternal welfare?" The warrior paused.—" By you, Phillip of Cologne, my voice was never before unheard," resumed the lovely woman, whose disguise could no longer conceal from the Emperor the wife of the pirate—" ever generous and noble even to your enemies, prove to this unhappy prince how far virtue can triumph over the mean spirit of revenge."—" Angel!" exclaimed the Emperor, " cease to plead; your supplications are to my wounded spirit worse than the pangs of death. May the just God forgive me for the ills I have wrought!"—He covered his face with his hands to conceal the agitation which was visible in every feature; but, in despite of all his efforts to repel them, the bright drops forced their way through his clenched fingers.—The pirate gazed on the conscience-stricken prince, till the wrath of his countenance passed away, and the tears trembled in his own fierce eyes. " Live!" he said. " Restore these brave men to their former rank and fortune, and this degraded arm shall reinstate you on the throne of your ancestors!"

" No," returned the Emperor, mournfully, " I will not accept life at your hands. A self-condemned and guilty man, I will not excuse crimes, committed in the fust of power, in the heat of youthful passion!"

" Has futurity then no terrors?" said Phillip.

" None to him who has made his peace with heaven," returned Otho, " who has offered at the throne of mercy the humble sacrafice of a broken heart."

" Has your repentance been deep enough to rob the grave of its victory?"

" Your noble brother, who lies a corpse in yonder wood, could best have resolved you that question. On that hand, which vainly defended his pillow; that the hand, which vainly defended him against a host of foes, were cold and stiff like his!" The outlaw turned away, deeply affected, while the Emperor continued:—" To atone in some measure for the wrongs I have, of late, heaped upon your head, I passed an edict, recalling you to your country, and restoring you to the honours of which my cruel tyranny had deprived you. I ordered diligent search to be made, in every realm, for the exiled prince of Cologne, but, all in vain, since my return under the place of your retreat proving fruitless, I bestowed on your lamented brother the favours I had in store for you. At your feet I ask forgiveness of the past, and demand the fulfilment of the just sentence your lips pronounced against me."

He would have thrown himself at the pirate's feet; but the chief received him in his arms ere his knee could touch the earth. Deep silence for some minutes pervaded the Assembly; till Phillip, springing to his feet, waved his sword aloft, flashing aloft their weapons, made the cavern ring with " Long live Otho of Germany! Long live Phillip of Cologne!"

The pirate, true to his promise, safely transported the Emperor to the nearest German port; and the world soon forgot, in the Commander-in-Chief of her armies, and the bulwark of her throne, the once-dreaded lion of the Mediterranean!

Summary.

On the 7th of June, messages were received in both Houses of Parliament from the King to the following effect:—" That it having been deemed expedient; towards the additional expenses of maintaining the British forces in Portugal, His Majesty, relying on the affection of their Lordships, and the zeal and affection of his faithful Commons, trusts that they will make provision accordingly."

Mr Canning observed, that it was for this purpose he had asked for the vote of credit for £500,000.

Penryn.—A bill to disfranchise this borough has passed the House of Commons by a large majority. Great exertions are making in Manchester, to obtain for that town the privilege of sending two members to Parliament, should this bill eventually become a law.

The Queen of Wurtemberg, sister to His Majesty, after an absence of 30 years, arrived at Greenwich on the 4th of June. Her Majesty was received, on landing, by the Duke and Duchess of Clarence, Princesses Sophia and Augusta, and a numerous assemblage of Nobility. The Queen was escorted to London by a Guard of Honor, and was hailed with enthusiasm, both during her journey, and on her arrival.

At the sale of the effets of the late Mr. Rudd, lately, a table made out of a plank of Shakespeare's mulberry tree cut down about 1760, some years before Garrick's jubilee, and which was then given to Dr. Miles, the antiquarian, was sold for 12½ guineas.

The exports last year from Great Britain to Ireland amounted to 6¼ millions, and the imports to 6¼ millions.—Balance against Ireland ¼ million.

The imports of Great Britain, exclusive of Ireland, last year, amounted to 42 millions, and the exports to 35 millions.

Limerick, 8 June.—The Pacific, Brown of this port, bound to Quebec, arrived in the River Shannon on Sunday evening. She sailed from Cork 23d ult. with 180 men, women and children on board, and when in lat. 53, long. — 14 of the passengers, supposing that the Supercargo had a considerable quantity of sovereigns in his possession, formed a plan to destroy him, the master and mate, and carry the vessel to South America; and had actually tied them up for two days, with the intention of throwing them overboard, but they were prevented by the crew and the rest of the passengers.

Marlborgh Street.—Yesterday, Robert Vickery, the coachman, it will be remembered, last week to avoid a charge of assault, pleaded his privilege, as the servant of the American Ambassador, was backed up in default of bail, the opinion of the Attorney General having been first taken by the Magistrates.

England.

The debate on the corn laws bill was continued in the house of lords on the 7th with some animation. Lord Goderich, (late Mr. Robinson,) moved that the House go into Committee upon the said bill.

" The Marquis of Londonderry wished to put a question to the Noble Viscount. He wished to know if it was true, that after the decisions of their Lordships on a former night, upon an amendment moved by the Noble Duke, an intimation had been conveyed from His Majesty's Government, to certain of their Lordships who had voted with the Noble Duke that if they persisted in that course, and did not retract the vote, they should be dismissed from their employments belonging to His Majesty's Household? This was the question which he wished to put, and thought that it was highly important that they should be made acquainted with these measures, which were had recourse to, intimidate the House."

" Lord Goderich said he thought his Noble Friend had exhibited the first instance in which a call had been made on Ministers to state what advice they would give to His Majesty as to what course should be pursued with respect to the votes of their Lordships under the Crown. He (Lord G.) for one, would not compromise what he considered as due to the dignity of the Crown, by giving any explanation on the subject, for undoubtedly it was competent to His Majesty to appoint to those offices the individuals whom he thought proper and also to remove them from those offices in case he wished to do so. He (Lord G.) did not conceive it to be any part of the duty of His Majesty's Government to state the reasons why His Majesty thought fit to exercise his discretion in these respects. He thought he could refer the Noble Marquis to a case in which a similar explanation had been denied.

" The Marquis of Londonderry—I only inquired if an intimation, such as I have stated, was given to any Noble Lord.

" Lord Goderich arose, but seeing Lord Delaware on his legs, he yielded to that Noble Lord.

" Lord Delaware said that he was bound to state, that without any intimation from His Majesty's Ministers, or even any consultation with them, he had felt it his duty, after the vote which he gave on a former evening, on the amendment of the Noble Duke, (Wellington,) to follow up that vote by a resignation of the situation which he had held in His Majesty's Household. He would repeat that he had done so without receiving any intimation from Ministers for the purpose."

The House then resolved itself into a Committee.

" The Earl of Malmesbury wished to know in what situation the Islands of Guernsey and Jersey were placed with reference to the operation of the Bill?

" Lord Goderich said that the consideration suggested by the Noble Earl was not unattended with difficulty. The fact was, that the agricultural interests of Islands secured to them the continuance of the importation of their produce into this country, and they were entitled, therefore, to object to the imposition, by this Government, of any duties on the importation of their produce. It was perfectly true that the inhabitants of the Islands might, under this state of things send over the whole of their produce to Great Britain, whilst they could import foreign grain for their own consumption. But he could easily satisfy their Lordships that there could be very little ground of apprehension, either from the disposition or the ability of the inhabitants to send corn into this country. They had a very rigid Corn Law of their own.

The Earl of Malmesbury said it was obvious that an enterprot might be formed in Guernsey and Jersey, by means of which it would be easy to carry on a very lucrative trade in foreign grain. At present there was no limitation to the quantity which they were at liberty to send into this country. He thought it absolutely necessary that they should be placed in one relation or the other to Great Britain, for the present time at least, either as part of this country, or altogether as a foreign territory. The fact was, that he had been induced to put the question which he had addressed to his Noble Friend by the knowledge he had derived from a return moved for by a friend of his in another place, from which it appeared that a very considerable importation of foreign wheat, very much exceeding the wants of the home consumption had taken place recently into the Islands of Jersey and Guernsey. He was not disposed to meddle with the sacredness of chartered rights, but it was the duty of their Lordships to secure the country against the abuse of the facilities which were connected with those rights.

" Lord Goderich said he would undertake to see that ample security would be provided against the apprehended abuse, if indeed adequate regulations were not already in existence."

Many attemps were made to amend the bill. The Earl of Westmoreland moved " that till the 10th of August 1827, it should be lawful for the holders of warehoused wheat and other corn to enter warehoused corn for home consumption. under the provisions of this act; and that the provisions of this act should not take full effect with respect to all sorts of corn and grain, before the first day of June 1828." But the motion was rejected. Upon the clause relating to the reciprocity of duties with regard to corn,

" Lord Ellenborough objected to any reciprocity of duties with any of the northern states. He asserted that the navigation of the country had not benefited from any such treaties of reciprocity. He did not object to any treaty of reciprocity with Portugal and Prussia, for they had no ships to contend with us, nor did he object to the same course being adopted towards the United States of America; but the effects of such treaties with the Northern European Powers, it would be found they had been considerably to our disadvantage. It appeared that during the last three years, the increase of the tonnage of Russia, Sweden, and Denmark, had been 160,000; but the increase of British tonnage only 20 tons. The number of British Seamen had increased five hundred and forty five; the number of foreign seamen eight thousand, a number sufficient to man ten ships of the line. This clause was opposed to the principle of the bill, and its adoption would be attended with great inconvenience. He was most desirous that it should not form part of the bill, to which it was not reconcilable in principle.

The clause was defended by Lord Goderich and the Duke of Wellington, and adopted.

" Earl Stanhope next proposed an amendment, to prohibit altogether the importation of American flour. It has been said that the quantity of flour imported is considerable; but it appeared by the returns that 5,100 barrels had been imported at Liverpool in one week, and in one year 545,000 barrels. Flour, too, kept for a longer time than corn, and the freight of it was not so expensive. He, therefore, could not understand the motives of Portugese, and they accept all the peasants who come. A number of these country people were in the Mountain duty upon the return abandoned characters like those nocturnal assassins that have lately been prowling like wolves through the country, plundering the treasures of your temples, and polluting, by their sacrilegious hands, the very host on your altars! By a process of law, both metropolitan and provincial, which it will be unnecessary for me to describe to you in this place, the sums of money requisite for this important purpose, exist already, and are deposited in the hands of the Provincial Treasurer. They are not taken directly out of your pockets, nor levied on your property, moveable or immoveable. You never saw the grim haughty visage of the Tax-gatherer at your door, nor heard his stern imperious voice demanding with impatience that which you owe to the King and Government. On the contrary, your taxes, if they may be called such, have already been exacted and paid without so humiliating a process. They have been levied on the produce and manufactures of foreign countries which you demand every year for the comfort and embellishment of your existence, and you pay for them, not in money, but what is much more easy and convenient for you—the value of your labor and the spontaneous produce of your soil. All, then, that is necessary for you to do, in consequence of the supplies demanded by government for maintaining your peace and happiness, having been already collected and deposited, is to renounce all right that the law gives you over it, and transfer it by a legal deed to government, in order to be laid out on YOUR ACCOUNT AND FOR YOUR BENEFIT as the Constitution, you, with so much good reason boast of, directs."

It is certainly lamentable to observe, that while this untoward state of affairs, continues to exist in Lower Canada, public improvement is utterly disregarded. The energies of the people are kept in a state of depression—no public works of any consequence are undertaken, and the spirit of enterprise which is seen to actuate every neighbouring Province, is retarded. Moderation seems to have forsaken the Assembly—bent on carrying party views into effect, the best interests of the Country are lost sight of. Such a state of things, it is to be hoped, will soon come to an end, and the people of Lower Canada will do well to reflect, before giving their votes at the ensuing Election, whether the conduct of those, who, by pertinaciously persisting in their opposition to the positive injunctions of the Constitution, have brought the country into its present difficulties, are worthy of their suffrages.

The truth of the proverb "that a drowning man will catch at a straw," was never more perfectly exemplified, than in the conduct which has lately been exhibited by the Canadian Freeman. The eye of the country are upon him—the toils are of his own weaving, and now that he is fairly caught in his own net, rage and disappointment are visible enough, in the desperate struggles he makes to effect his escape. The Durham Address, he will find will not answer his purpose. We shall never pretend to dictate to the people what language they shall make use of, when expressing their opinions of public men, and public measures; and of this the Freeman may be assured, we shall never represent them as disloyal, or furnish others with the means of doing so, as he has done—nor shall we endeavour to excite alarm among them, by false rumours and ungrounded insinuations.

The Freeman denies, that he dared the House of Assembly, to "call him up"—his own words stand recorded to condemn him. See the Canadian Freeman of 8th Feb. last where after speaking contemptuously of "our little House of Assembly, in little York"—he says—"let those who think he ought to be called up, for expressing his sentiments, call him up, if they dare.—This is the man who now plays the part of Champion, to those who so lately were the objects of his daring abuse.

With these remarks we take our leave of the subject, and of the Freeman, perfectly satisfied that the people will attribute his intemperance, to its proper cause.

The Editor of the Upper Canada Gazette, having been desired, by several respectable Inhabitants of the Town of York, in the Home District, to request; that a Public Meeting might take place at the Mansion House, on Tuesday the 22d of August, 1827, at three o'clock P. M. the afternoon, in order to consider the propriety of setting on foot in this Province, a subscription in aid of that Establishment in London for Erecting a Monument to the Memory of His late ROYAL HIGHNESS the DUKE OF YORK, and the Meeting having taken place at the hour appointed, The Honourable William Campbell, Chief Justice, was unanimously requested to take the Chair, and John Beikie, Esquire. to perform the duties of Secretary.

The sincere regard for the Memory of His late ROYAL HIGHNESS, the DUKE OF YORK, manifested by all His Majesty's Subjects calling for a lasting testimony of such regard, and which is the cause of the present Meeting, having been happily set forth by the Chief Justice the following resolutions were put and carried nem. con.

Resolved.—That we do most sincerely lament as a National misfortune, the Demise of his late ROYAL HIGHNESS, the DUKE OF YORK.

Resolved.—That in common with our fellow Subjects in all parts of the British Empire, we do highly appreciate the many and very eminent public services of that illustrious Prince, as well in his capacity of Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Forces, as in all other situations in which he had occasion to evince his attachment to His Majesty, and his firm, and steady adherence to the British Constitution in Church and State.

Resolved.—That in testimony of our humble respect, and approbation of the public, and private virtues of His Royal Highness, and in order to commemorate our sense of the same, we do most cordially approve of the design lately adopted by our fellow Subjects in the Mother Country, of erecting a National Monument to the memory of His Royal Highness, at the seat of the Imperial Government, and with that view, we respectfully desire to contribute by subscription in aid of the funds intended to carry that design into effect.

Resolved.—That copies of these Resolutions be immediately transmitted to the Sheriff's or other influential Persons in the several Districts of the Province, in order that all our fellow Subjects who may be disposed to testify their loyalty and sense of public duty in this respect may have an opportunity of doing so.

Resolved.—That the Hon. Joseph Wells, the Hon. John Henry Dunn, and James Fitzgibbon, Esquire, be respectfully requested to superintend the carrying into effect the object of this Meeting, by adopting such measures as they shall deem expedient, and most effectual, to promote a general subscription throughout the Province aforesaid, and to remit the amount of the Money subscribed, to such persons in London, as are appointed and authorised to receive the same.

Resolved.—That the Thanks of this Meeting be given to the Chief Justice for his able services in the Chair, and also to John Beikie, Esq. for having so kindly acted as Secretary.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improvethe same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proven, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

Poetry.

IMITATIONS OF SERVIAN POETRY.

BY MISS L. E. LANDON.

The maiden turned her head away—
"You'll have no kiss from me to-day."
"And why to-day, love, must I see
The roses bloom, and not for me?"
Tears filled the maiden's raven eyes—
"The lightly won, you lightly prize;
To make you prize the kiss you gain,
It must be won with toil and pain,
And seldom too: so still I say,

SONG.

She took a flower, and plucked the leaves,
Then threw them in the wine;
And ever thus, she said, at first
The hopes of young love shine.
The cup is drained: amid the dregs
The leaves, pale, scentless, lie;
And ever thus, she said, at last
Hopes of young love die.

THE FALCON-MESSENGER.

The warrior loosed the silken string
That was around his falcon's wing.
"Go forth, till thou that thing shall see
More than thy life-blood dear to me.
The bird went forth—the red gold zone—
The white steed neighed—the bird swept on;
He passed above a tower—and then
Sought out his warrior-lord again.
"I saw a lady and a child,
The infant in its slumber smiled;
Methinks the lady would have wept,
But twas such soothing watch she kept."
His look grew soft, his voice sank low:
"My own brave bird, well dost thou know
What thou in thy wild flight couldst see,
More dear than life-blood dear to me."

SONG.

The desert hath a dreary waste
Of burning sand and sky;
But even there the fount and palm
Beside the pathway lie:
There may the tired pilgrim rest
Upon his wearied face.
I would the wilderness of Love
Could boast such resting place:
But misery sky and endless sands,
These, O Love! are for thee—
Thy constant destiny: alas,
That such should be for me!

Miscellaneous.

THE GRUMBLING TRAVELLER.

Comfort is a word peculiar to the English; but the English people are the most uncomfortable beings on the face of the globe. They are most fastidious critics of enjoyment, and have the unenviable art of finding something to complain of in every place, and at all times.

I once had the happiness to take a journey with one who had this faculty quite to perfection. We made our arrangements to leave London in the Liverpool mail. It was the latter end of September, when the season had been one of the most beautiful I have remembered for many years. Before we started, we determined to dine at a coffee-house in the city; this was something new and I rather expected to gratify my curiosity than enjoy much comfort. As we entered the room, and took our seats on a vacant box, I was just going to express my surprise at the neatness of the room, when my companion burst out in exclamations against the heat, and smell, and confined air; and asked the waiter if he had not a clean table cloth in the house. With the utmost civility, and most uncomplaining obsequiousness, the windows were opened, a clean cloth was spread upon the table: but the noise of the street was now intolerable, we could not hear ourselves speak. The next object of animadversion was the spoons. "What can't you trust your company with silver spoons?" "They are silver, sir." "Oh, I thought they were pewter."

A long bill of fare was produced, as long as an Apotheceries bill—"Is this all you have?" Then my friend's ingenuity was exerted to recollect a dozen more dishes; some of which, unfortunately for his sagacity, to be out of season. After a great many hesitations and counterorders, the dinner was settled; and my appetite was pleasantly fading away by its influence, while my companion, who ate quite as hearty as myself, was indulging himself, at the same time, in every possible variety of grumbling—the bread was dry—the salt was wet—the vinegar was thick—the mustard was thin.

"Now, waiter, let us have a bottle of your execrable port." Here was a fine opportunity of growling: all the common-place complaints and criticisms of wine, were uttered with the volubility, that indicates, they have been learned by heart. The wine was changed—I could not tell the difference—it was still called wretched stuff—but the bottle was finished, and my friend would have had a second, had not I declared against it.

At half-past seven we walked to Ladlane, and took our seats in the mail, after seeing our luggage safely stowed. But my fellow-traveller insisted upon having his portmanteau in the coach with him; and was even so polite, as to hope it would not be in any body's way—"Oh, by no means." Delay, with these vehicles, is out of the question. Off we set—not a word was spoken by any one. Grumbling first broke silence.—"What disagreeable things are these mail coaches—there is no room to breathe in them." The window was let down. "Who would have expected such sultry hot weather, at the latter end of September?"

As we slowly ascended Highgate Hill (this was before the arch-way was made) the air began to grow somewhat cooler, and the wind blowing, or rather breathing, from the south-west, came full upon my companion's face; who sat, as all knowing travellers do, with his back to the horses. This fanned his indignation into another flame—he was sure of catching his death in cold. Then followed a long declamation on the climate of Great Britain.

"It was a wonder how people could live in such a fickle atmosphere." "I have lived in it seventy years," said an old gentleman on the opposite side, "and have enjoyed a tolerable share of health."

The travelling cap was now substituted for the hat, which was suspended by two strings across the roof; and the company seemed disposed to sleep. The guard of a mail coach is a terrible enemy to sleep. We were now approaching the end of our first stage. The poor complainant was awakened by the long blast of the horn. More grumbling.—"What a bore it is to be annoyed by that booby's trumpeting." "It would be a much greater inconvenience," said the old gentleman, "to spend a quarter of an hour for fresh horses." "But the fellow need not make so much noise." "Perhaps he thinks otherwise, and it is not always easy to teach persons in office, to make the most discreet use of authority."

The next interruption was from the coachman—he came to take leave of the company. "What a scandalous imposition is this tax upon the passengers." The fee was given quite as liberally by my friend as by the rest of us, but he could not let slip an opportunity of complaining—he thought it a great shame that it was not put a stop to—they had better pay more for their fare, and be rid of this nuisance. "If that were done," said the old gentleman, "it would make the matter no better; passengers would soon undo the arrangement by their own liberality; and in the end, we should pay the proprietors more, and the coachman no less."

It was really very impertinent thus to rob my friend of the comfort of grumbling.—"What is the matter now—what is the coach stopping for?" "We are not stopping, we are only going over Woburn sands." "But why don't they mend the road?"—"It is very difficult to mend a road good over such a soil." "Then why don't they turn the road?" "Really I can't tell; but we shall soon be over it, and after all, the inconvenience is much greater to the horses than it is to us."

At Northampton we stopped to breakfast; and there the old gentleman left us. He very politely wished us a good morning, and a comfortable journey. My companion was quite irritated at the word "comfortable;" he thought it looked like a sneer. "What a disagreeable old fool that is," said he; "I dare say he thinks himself very wise." "Perhaps," thought I, "he thinks you very foolish"—but I did not say so. Breakfast was soon dispatched.—No other fault was found, than that the eggs were not brought soon enough, nor quite boiled enough, that the butter was very bad, and the bill very unreasonable, and the coachman very impatient.

Here we took in another passenger, who joined in concert with my agreeable fellow-traveller.

At Lichfield we dined. Here was no hesitation over a bill of fare, and scarcely time to find fault with the wine; but as the post was not quite made up, the guard informed us that we might sit another quarter of an hour. This was very refreshing to us all, but to the poor unfortunate, who said it was a conspiracy to entrap us into taking another bottle—which he protested he would not do—but changed his mind when the waiter brought it, at the beck of his friend.

Thus it seems to be in the journey of life. They who have real evils and troubles, make it their business to smooth and alleviate them, and those who have none, as if to make the balance even, and prevent a spirit of envy in others, at their happy lot, do all in their power to magnify troubles, and make themselves most ingeniously wretched.

Summary.

The amount of Bank-notes in circulation on the 31st May, 1827, was about Twenty Millions.

Gratifying accounts have been received in LONDON from every part of the Kingdom, relative to the revival of Trade.

The Duke of CLARENCE is extremely active, and deservedly popular in his official character of Lord High Admiral. On the 28th May he inspected the Woolwich division of Royal Marines; and afterwards the Ships of War in the River.

In the House of Commons, May 30th, Mr. WILMOT HORTON declared, that in the matter of Emigration, no step whatever would be taken by Government until the Committee appointed to inquire into the subject had terminated its labours.

The FIVE CLUBS throughout the Kingdom have been numerously attended on the occasion of the anniversary dinner: particularly at LEEDS, MANCHESTER, HALIFAX and READING.

Mr. HUME's motion to repeal one of the Acts called the Six Acts, was lost, 120 to 10, on the 31st May.

The hole in the Thames Tunnel is now completely stopped.

The Queen of WURTEMBERG seems to be very popular with all descriptions of people. She has been visited by all the Nobility in and near LONDON.

It is reported that His Majesty intends visiting Plymouth this summer, accompanied by the Lord High Admiral.

Mr. J. T. Morrison, surgeon, at Chelsea, recently deceased, left to his wife a shilling, and to Carlile £50 per annum for life (to descend to his wife and children) in testimony of his approbation of his correct morals upon his late trials. Mr. Brougham was nominated executor, but refuses to act.

M'Adamizing Regent-street, Whitehall, and Palace-yard, cost £12,842 15s. 8d.; the repairing, scraping, watering, &c., last year amounted to £4000.

The number of volumes in the University Library at Cambridge has never been ascertained; but Dr. Farmer, when Librarian, counted the number of authors, and they amounted at that time, which is 50 years ago, to upwards of 100,000.

Such is the abundance of money in the city, that a recent circumstance has come to our knowledge of a Gentleman having obtained a mortgage of £16,000 at 4 per cent. for six years certain. Bankers also for periods of shorter duration receive money, on good securities at three per cent.

A new prodigy in music is much spoken of in Rome: it is the Senora Aspri, who, although only eighteen years of age, has composed an opera, which was played in that city on the 15th of last month. The Senora herself presided over the orchestra.

Leipzig, May 13.—The fair is now over, and may be reckoned among the tolerable good ones. A vast quantity of goods were sold, but the prices of MANY things were low. The number of strangers from all quarters was great; and we had a numerous concourse of buyers and sellers from the East, as well as from the West. The most extensive sales were made in English Manufactures, which this time

ARRIVAL OF THE QUEEN OF WIRTEMBERG.

Greenwich, June 5.

The influx of visitors at the fair, yesterday morning, was considerably increased, in consequence of the arrival of the Queen of Wirtemberg. The preparations made for her reception were on a scale commensurate with her high rank, and that of her illustrious brother. Immediately opposite the statue of Charles II., in the centre of the large square, in the College, a commodious platform was erected, enclosed with a canopy of canvass, projecting over the balustrades in the river, and forming a sort of colonade. It being understood that her Majesty was in that ill state of health as not to be able to walk, a trapdoor was made in the flooring of this erection, in order that she might be swayed up (in a chair constructed for the purpose) and a small sledge or truck was also constructed, upon which the chair was to be placed, and by that means to convey her Majesty to the carriage.

At nine o'clock, The Guard of honour, composed of the Grenadier Guards, under the command of Lord James Hay, took their station in the square, followed by a party of the Second Regiment of Life Guards, who were placed near the Painted Chamber. The Royal Standard was then hoisted, and the bells commenced a merry peal.

Precisely at ten o'clock the Duke and Duchess of Clarence, the Duchess of Gloucester, the Princesses Sophia and Augusta, Colonel Fitzclarence, and a numerous assemblage of the Nobility, arrived.

Sir Richard Keats, the Governor, and Lieutenant Governor Brownell, received the Lord High Admiral and his party at the grand western entrance of the hospital. The Royal Party were then conducted to the Governor's house, where they partook of refreshment, when they again returned to the water side. The Duke appeared in excellent health and spirits, and seemed very anxious about the arrival of his Royal Sister. He was particularly affable, and conversed with those around him, and every now and then applied the glass to his eye down the river.

During the whole of the morning the weather was very unpropitious; and the wind being directly ahead, doubts were entertained of the arrival of the yacht, although it was ascertained, beyond a doubt, that she was lying off Gravesend; but it was feared, as the tide was running down, and the yacht drawing twenty feet water, that she would not get over Barking Shelf. Matters remained in this uncertain and anxious state till the hour of six, when it was announced, by telegraph, that the royal yacht was off Woolwich. The intelligence was immediately communicated to the Lord High Admiral, and joy seemed to pervade all ranks. From this moment the Duke scarcely left the parade, but employed himself in inspecting the necessary preparations for her Majesty's reception.

The children of the Naval Asylum, consisting of five hundred boys and two hundred girls, were now arranged on the steps leading to the upper square, between the Chapel and the Painted Chamber, which presented a very interesting appearance.

At twenty-minutes past six, the royal yacht hove in sight round Blackwall Point, towed by the Lightning steamer, and decked with all her colours. As she approached her destination, the most lively interests pervaded the multitude, and every boat that could be procured was in motion. The Admiralty boat was prepared for the reception of the Duke of Clarence and his party. A numerous party of Nobility embarked in other boats, to meet the royal bark, which had now arrived off the Hospital. The anchor was cast, and the crew manned the yards, to salute her Majesty, on leaving the vessel.

The chair was conveyed on board, and her Majesty, having been seated in it, she was hoisted from the state cabin, and then lowered into the yacht's boat, and was rowed ashore. Sir William Hosse, the Commander, and Captain Freemantle, standing uncovered on each side of the royal chair, As the boat approached the shore, her Majesty gazed about her, and, although a smile was visible in her countenance, she was evidently much affected at the hurry welcome with which she was received, after so long an absence from her native land.

On gaining the platform, the chair was placed on a sledge, and her Majesty was drawn to the royal carriage in waiting, which was His Majesty's open barouche, drawn by four of the King's blood horses, the postilions in the royal livery. Her Majesty entered the carriage, accompanied by her royal sisters, the Princesses Augusta and Sophia, the band playing "God Save the King." The carriage was escorted by the Life Guards. Her Majesty's suit followed in four of the royal carriages, and proceeded towards town at a rapid pace.

Her Majesty was dressed in black silk, and wore a white satin bonnet, and ostrich feathers.

By seven o'clock the numerous streets leading from Charing-cross to Westminster Bridge, were thronged by every description of spectators, who had selected convenient situations, in order to have a view of the procession, as it was intended to pass that way; and the roads all along to Greenwich were also lined, with groups of anxious individuals, awaiting the arrival of her Majesty; and every joyful preparation was made by the inhabitants to welcome the approach of the Royal visitor to her native shore. In a short time it was with considerable difficulty that the passengers could cross Westminster Bridge, so strongly did the public curiosity manifest itself. Life-Guardsmen were stationed on the Bridge, and paraded backwards and forwards, in order to clear the way on the arrival of the carvalcade; and this arrangement was also observed on the various roads leading to Deptford and Greenwich.

About half-past eight eight o'clock one of the horse guards proceeded over Westminster bridge, full gallop, which indicated that Her Majesty was not far distant, and shortly afterwards one of the royal outriders was seen proceeding on a swift steed in the same direction towards St. James's Palace, where his Majesty, &c. were in waiting for his august relative. Their appearance elicited the shouts of the public, who began to make active preparations to obtain a view of Her Majesty's person, and in a few minutes, every window, ledge, and railing, were filled and covered to excess, and the bridge had the appearance of an erection of human bodies. At a quarter before nine o'clock the acclamations of the distant crowds rent the air, which was heard like an echo on the bridge and announced the approach of the party, and they soon made their appearance at Westminster Bridge, on the centre arch of which the cavalcade presented a most imposing spectacle. Her Majesty was seated in one of the Royal carriages (open,) by the side of her two sisters, and surrounded by an immense body guard. Her Majesty's reception seemed to be particularly attracted on her arrival opposite the New Treasury Buildings, Whitehall. A long train of Noblemen and Gentlemen's carriages followed, which were filled with ladies of distinction. Her Majesty's travelling carriage was in the rear, which, being of leather, make excited much notice; it contained two of her domestics. They proceeded through St. James's Park, where a double royal salute commenced firing on their entrance, amid the plaudits of the public.

It gives us pleasure to add, that, notwithstanding the vast concourse of persons that had assembled the whole of the day, we did not hear of any accident.

His Majesty arrived at his Palace in St. James's, at half-past two o'clock where the King was soon after joined by the Dutchess of Gloucester and the Princess Sophia. The King received several communications in the course of the afternoon from the Duke of Clarence. Soon after 7 o'clock, an Admiralty Messenger arrived at the Palace with the news, that at twenty minutes before seven o'clock, the Royal yacht arrived off Greenwich. The The Duke and Dutchess of Clarence, the Princess Augusta, &c. went on board the Royal yacht to receive Her Majesty.

An orderly man belonging to the Life Guards was stationed on Westminster Bridge, who, on the Royal Procession coming in sight galloped to the Horse Guards. The Guard were instantly ordered out, mounted, and received the Queen with Military honours.

The Foot Guards on duty at the Tilt Yard, were also drawn out, and presented arms.

Soon after the cavalcade had entered the Park, a double Royal salute was fired from the guns, which had been placed since 9 o'clock in the morning.

At twenty minutes before 9 o'clock, the landau, containing the Queen and the Princess Augusta, passed through the garden gate to the Palace.

As the Queen entered the garden Her Majesty was enthusiastically cheered.

The King, with the Duchess of Gloucester and the Princess Sophia attended by the Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Steward, the master of the Horse, and the Principal Equerry, received the Queen on her alighting from the carriage. His Majesty received his Royal Sister in the most affectionate and interesting manner.

About an hour after, His Majesty, the Duke of Clarence, the Queen of Würtemberg, the Princess Augusta, the principal attendants of the Queen, Lady Waldegrave, &c. sat down to dinner.

Her Majesty's suite proceeded to the apartments of the Duke of Cumberland, in the Palace, which were prepared for their reception.

The King left town at a quarter past 11 o'clock, in his travelling chariot and four, for his Royal Chapel, Windsor Park.

The entrance opposite to the German Chapel, is that which has been allotted for the Nobility to make their inquiries after the health of the Queen, between the hours of two and five.

MARKETS.

London Corn Exchange, June 11.

There was but a weak a small supply of most kinds of English grain, with a large arrival of flour, and a good quantity of Foreign Oats. The fresh supplies of this morning's market are inconsiderable.

The flour trade is so extremely heavy, that most of the factors consider the top price as fallen to 50s. per sack.

LIVERPOOL, June 12.

Ashes are looking better, and should the make in Canada and the United States, prove less than last year they must advance.

The Austrian Observer of 29th May, contains an extract from the new journal, published, weekly, at Hydra, in the French language under the title of Abeille Grecque. No. 2, of the 19th of April, contains the following Proclamation, of Lord Cochrane to the Greeks:

"To the Committee of Government of Greece.

"A battle, glorious to the Greek cause, has been fought to-day. It was commenced by the Marines, who were landed on the several points of the coast of the Peninsula, (Munichya,) and drove before them the enemies who were posted there. The land troops, not willing to be surpassed in courage by the Marines, also rushed on the enemy.

"While the Hydriots and Spirriots were making themselves masters of the enemy's position in the peninsula, the troops advanced on the other side of the Piræus, whence, at this unexpected attack of Greeks the Turks fled like a flock thrown into confusion.

"From this day begins a new era in the military system of modern Greece. If every one behaves to-morrow as all, without exception, have behaved to-day, the siege of the Acropolis will be raised, and the liberty of Greece insured.

My wishes and desires are, that the Greeks may obtain liberty for a period longer than than that in which they have endured slavery, and that their glory may equal that of their ancestors.

Discovery.—Workmen have been for some time engaged in lowering the level of Wallstreet; and this morning, while digging on the square on the intersection of William-street, they alighted upon the upper appertures or door of a large vault, walled and sustained by regular masonry. The opening is about three feet square, and as far as we could discern, while jostled by a crowd which has been encircling the spot ever since the discovery, the vault is deeper and more spacious than those generally in use for family convenience. The circumstance has given rise to much conjecture. The majority appear to take it for granted that the long concealed deposit of Capt. Kidd's money bags is now broken open —others offer different and of course more rational speculations. We shall probably be able to give further particulars at more leisure.

The vault, we understand, is directly under the site of the pedestal on which was erected, about the year 1773, the statue of the Earl of Chatham, which was taken down in the revolution, and is now in the public yard of the Colleget. The workmen are clearing and exploring the cave, and may possibly discover some deposit or inscription to indicate the history and use of this so long unoccupied subterranean apartment.—*N. Y. Albany, July 28.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.

The trial of Jesse Strange, charged with the murder of John Whipple, was finished yesterday. On Thursday, after all the circumstantial evidence had been adduced to fix the crime upon the prisoner, the counsel for the prosecutors offered to prove his confession. To this his counsel objected, alledging that whatever confessions he might have made, were drawn from him in an improper manner, and ought not, therefore, to go to the jury. This of course led to an examination into the fact whether improper inducements had been held out to the prisoner, and several witnesses were examined to ascertain that fact. The arguments of counsel, pro and con, lasted till past eleven o'clock, when the court took a recess till nine o'clock yesterday morning, intimating that then an opinion on the controverted point would be given. In the mean time constables were sworn to keep the jury together till the court reassembled.

When the court met yesterday morning, Judge Duer delivered a lucid opinion, in which the circumstances under which the confessions of a prisoner might be offered to a jury in testimony against him were ably discussed, and concluded by declaring that those made by the prisoner at the bar did not come under the rule laid down by his counsel, and must therefore go to the jury.

These confessions were thereupon testified to by several witnesses, and the district attorney here rested the cause. The counsel for the prisoner were then called upon for the defence of the prisoner, when Mr. Pepper rose and addressed the court, saying that he and his associate counsel had done all that they felt it in their duty to do in behalf of the prisoner, and were willing that the case should be submitted to the jury without further delay.

The judge then delivered the charge to the jury, who retired and in a few minutes brought in a verdict of GUILTY.

The prisoner, throughout the trial, appeared like one who had made up his mind to meet an inevitable, horrid fate, and when his doom was pronounced by a jury of his country, scarcely a muscle moved, or a change of countenance told the workings of a mind that had led him on to ruin.

The Sheriff, and the officers under him, deserve great credit for the prompt and efficient manner in which they discharged their arduous duty of preserving order in such a crowded assemblage as attended the trial.

The trial of Mrs. Whipple, as an accomplice in the murder of her husband, will commence on Monday morning next, at 10 o'clock; and till that shall have been finished, we shall studiously avoid giving any of the testimony in the case of Strang, pursuant to an order of the court.

Pauperism in Philadelphia.—The citizens of Philadelphia have had a meeting to take into consideration their poor laws, which seem to have been rather tumultuous. Mr. Wm. M. Meredith addressed the meeting, and offered a resolution to appoint a committee to inquire into the state of the poor laws system. The gentleman made a report in the Legislature of Pennsylvania, on this subject, three years ago, which was a production of great ability. It appears that it has cost the city of Philadelphia, the sum of 2,206,000 dollars, for the support of paupers, during the last twenty years.

Mammoth Hog.—A sloop arrived at Burlington, Vt. a few days since, with a cargo of 115 live hogs, from Whitehall, for the Montreal market. The two largest weighed 2168 lbs. The largest is of the grass fed breed, 5 years old, weighed 1148 lbs. measures 8 1-2 feet in length and girths 6 feet 10 inches. The other is of the Byfield breed, 2 1-2 years old, weighs 1040 lbs. measures 6 1-2 feet in length and girths 6 feet 7 inches. The last mentioned hog has gained for about three months past, 3 lbs. per day.

The new steam-boat, North America, returned to the city last evening from her first trip to Albany. In ascending the river on Sunday last the piston rod was broken a few miles beyond Newburgh, and the boat was propelled by only one wheel during the remainder of the passage, which prevented her from reaching Albany early. She returned yesterday in eleven hours and fifty-five minutes, with a large number of passengers, stopping at seven different places. She is the largest steamboat on the river.

A Steam-boat has been built at Philadelphia, under the direction of Mr. Costell, intended to ply between that city and Reading, of a novel construction. In passing through the water she leaves little or no ripple behind her; and the Philadelphia papers say that what has been a desideratum in canal navigation may be considered as supplied, as a boat built on the same principle would do no more injury to the banks than one drawn by horses.

Green Mountains.—At Dorset, in Bennington County, what is termed a Land-slip descended on the 27th June, the effects of which have excited great curiosity, and attracted crowds of visitors. The base of the mountain at that place is two thousand feet, and the ascent steep. The falling of the earth, stones, &c. was occasioned by overwhelming torrents of rain. The Boston Traveller says: "From present appearances it would seem that the very windows of Dorset Head are open; that the clouds were literally broken, and that a solid column of water, of gigantic size, had descended, in two places, about half a mile distant from each other, and with resistless fury swept away every thing within its reach. The whole distance in which its ravages are seen is about one mile and a quarter, and the area would measure probably twenty acres.—Immense masses of earth and rocks, which are judged to weigh from 50 to 100 tons, having been carried one third, and one half of a mile. Several blocks of stone, of four and five tons weight, are left upon large piles of timber fifteen or twenty feet from the ground. Trees of the largest size have been swept from the place where they stood for ages, and are now congregated in rude but lofty piles at the base of the elevation. The whole ground, thus cleared as it were in a few moments, presents a wild and barren waste. Not a stump, not a shrub or plant remains to tell the vegetation was ever there, save two lonely trees near the centre of the track, whose trunks twisted and bent, seem weeping for lost companions and sighing over the wide spread desolation. Fortunately no house was standing near the spot, and no human life was lost."

From the National Intelligencer.

Extract of a Letter from a member of the Greek Committee in London, to Dr. Wm. Thornton, of the City of Washington.

"The Porte will not listen to any overtures for the pacification of Greece, though strenously urged by the English and Russian Ambassadors at Constantinople. In the mean time, the Turks are reinforcing their armies in Greece, which are disciplined after the European manner. There will be some desperate fighting; but, as stated in the proclamation of Lord Cochrane, the siege of Athens is raised, and Attica is free from the presence of the enemy. The energy of Lord Cochrane, if he be provided with money and provisions, will accomplish much; already he has effected a union of the two Greek Assemblies. General Church, an excellent and experienced officer, will command all the land forces, and the brave, active, and persevering Col. Fabvier commands in the Acropolis of Athens. The hopes of Greece are revived; her ultimate success, however distant, is certain; and it may be a prophecy verified by events that the Turks will, within twenty years, be driven from Constantinople, and compelled to retire to their Asiatic Territories."

At the commencement of the Election for Three Rivers, a disturbance took place, in consequence of some disrespectful language to-wards Mr. Sheriff Chief, made use of by Mr. Charles Mondelet, Advocate of that place, and Editor of the Argus. The cries of down with him, and the intimation that he would be liable for the consequences, cooled the ardour of the Speaker, who, unfortunately, for the Burgesses of Three Rivers, thought proper to cut short his harangue, by which they were for ever deprived of its luminous, and truly philosophical details. Mr. Mondelet in order to be allowed to speak, proposed himself as a Candidate, but he only got one vote, the Sheriff!!! and that on the plumper.—On Friday, a procession through the streets, with music, flags, &c. &c. took place More of this anon.

Fredericton, (N. B.) 3d. July. 1827.

Mr. Maclauchin arrived here by the Steam Boat on Saturday week from Colonel Cockburn with Communications from His Excellency, whose Warrant has, we hear, been issued to the Surveyor General for the surveying and laying out of land into Townships between the Bend of the Petticdiac and the Richibucto Rivers, in a direct line from Chatham, and also for opening Roads to and through them. The central point of disembarkation, will, we understand, be Shediac, owing to the depth of water in its Harbour.

[From the Halifax News Scotian of June 23d.]

It will be seen by the following remark taken from the Fredericton Gazette, that the humane attention of the Governor has been extended to that neighbouring Province, as in this to the condition of the native Indians:—

"Among the Official notices in the Gazette of this day, is one warning, the public not to interfere with, or trespass upon the Lands and clearances of the Indians; either on lands reserved for their use generally, or on lands lately granted and leased to individuals among them by the Crown.

"His Excellency Sir Howard Douglass has, it is well known, ever since his arrival amongst us, turned a sympathising and benevolent eye towards these declining and scattered branches of the Children of the forest; and if we may judge by the success of his attempts, we may entertain the most pleasing hopes of the ultimate effect of the paternal endeavours which have been made with the kindest motives for their amelioration and improvement.

From Halifax.—The editor of the Boston Traveller has dates to the 15th inst. which represent the distress of the emigrants who have landed there from Great Britain, to be melancholy in the extreme. Five hundred of these have arrived there on charity, and death is daily thinning their numbers. Many are already tenants of the Poor House

FROM THE St. Catharines Farmers Journal.

Wathin Miller's opinion of the Canadian Freeman, and the Colonial Advocate.

"At one time, if you believed them, you would believe the whole country on the very point of rising in arms against the government, when not a man in it beyond their own weak and contemptible party, either wishes for, or would join, in any act of such a thing. At another, you hear of whole parishes sacrificing their property, and flying the country to avoid oppression and ruin; when the very triumph with which the Tories receive their proxes, that if they occurred at all, it was to a few people who were idiots enough to listen to their false and unprincipled calumnies. Now here the authorities and institutions of the land slandered as corrupt and merciless, and are told that not a man in the Province, however, unoffending, is secure from the horrors of the Inquisition, if they are believed these false and foul representations of the Province, choose it as a place of residence where rebellion on one hand, and tyranny on the other, are perpetually held up by these mischievous incendiaries, as if on purpose to discourage those who would emigrate to, and enrich our country!"

CANADA COMPANY.

The proposed road between Guelph and York will reduce the distance to about 47 miles—it will pass directly through the township of Nassagaweya, Esquesing, and Toronto, striking the point where the two latter townships and those of Chinguacousy and Trafalgar, "corner on" each other.—This road would be of incalculable advantage to the townships through which it must pass & the inhabitants could not more effectually ensure to themselves future prosperity and wealth, than by using all their energies in promoting the undertaking. Such a road must ever remain the principle one, not only to Guelph and the adjoining townships, but to the million of acres about to be settled to the west of Guelph, and to the settlements on Lake Huron, the River St. Clair, &c.

The Corner Stone of the Public School will be laid on Monday, the 13th instant; upon which occasion a handsome Entertainment will be provided, and a large company of persons is expected. We are informed that an Ox will be roasted upon the occasion.—Gore Gazette.

We are happy to learn that the crops have seldom been more plentiful throughout this district than they are this season. The Wheat crops is stated as remarkably abundant.—Kingston Chronical.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, August 11, 1827.

The America, arrived at New York, brings London dates to 12th June—there is, however, no news of importance.

By a Commercial Circular from a House at Montreal, under date 21st July, it is stated, that 60,000 barrels of Flour, and about 75,000 bushels of Wheat, together with 6,000 barrels of Pork, have arrived there from Upper Canada, during the present Season. Wheat, for Shipment to England, sells readily in Montreal, at from 5s. to 5s. 6d. per 60 lbs.

By our advertisement in this days paper, it will be seen, that we have published an Almanac, for the ensuing year. Our object has been, to prepare such an article, as appeared to us better adapted to the use of the Country, than the American Almanacs, which have heretofore been in circulation; and when we state, that the paper is the manufacture of the Province, we trust that all who feel inclined to encourage home productions, will give their support to the present undertaking.

The Almanac, with the Provincial Calendar, is in press, and will in a short time, be ready for publication.

We take this opportunity of requesting that the Clerks of the Peace, would favor us with the name of the Chairman of the Sessions, and the days on which the settings of the District Court, and Quarter Sessions are held, throughout the Year, in their several Districts, for the purpose of being inserted in the Calendar.

Since putting our Paper to press, we have received New York papers, containing London dates to 15, being a fortnight later to 10th June. We collect the following Summary:—

The Duke of Wellington's amendment to the Corn Bill has been carried in the House of Lords, by a Majority of 11. On 13th June, Lord Goderich stated that as their Lordships had for the second time concurred in the amendment, he should not again submit the Bill to the House. Thus the question is at an end for this year.

The determination as it regards the Corn Bill has produced a considerable demand for free Wheat, which is held for higher prices.

There is a prospect of an abundant harvest in England. The Crops on the Continent are if possible more promising than in England.

It was reported that the Greeks and Turks had agreed to a suspension of hostilities for three months, as a preliminary to negotiations for their independence.

"London, June 15.—The ministerial Bench was almost wholly deserted during the whole evening; frequently Mr. Huskisson was the only one of the Ministry on it. At midnight Mr. C. W. Wynn appeared there, and he and his brother, Sir W. W. Wynn, were afterwards in very close and earnest conversation for some time. Neither Mr Canning nor Mr. Brougham appeared in the House during any part of the evening, Sir F. Burdett made a long speech from his old seat on the second opposition bench, and which station he retained in the most marked manner during the whole night. Previously and since the late change, he had in as marked a manner constantly taken his seat on the bench directly behind Mr. Canning."

LIVERPOOL, June 16.—Not any news from Spain and Portugal.

"Constantinople, May 25.—The Acropolis is about to fall. Intelligence has been received here of the total failure of the attempt of Lord Cochrane and General Church, and Karaiskaki, to relieve this bulwark of Greece. JOHN HENRY DUNN,
H. M. Receiver General.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanation of their views and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improvethe same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land.—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit-rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grants by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

A TALE OF THE SIMPLON.

Neither pen nor pencil can describe the wondrous depth of those valleys, nor the awe-inspiring majesty of those rocks, amid which the thunder cloud and the storm wander as pilgrims that have mistaken their way. But there are thousands of our countrymen who have travelled over the Simplon, and to them description were useless. Such scenes, once beheld, are engraven too deeply on the memory to be effaced by aught save the great destroyer, Death.

It was ten years ago, last September, that an English traveller, whom curiosity had led from the Simplon village to explore new scenery, was sitting under the shade of a beetling mass of rocks, from which the struggling rhododendron of the Alps thrust forth its tough sinewy branches, blooming in purple beauty. His companions were, an Alpine hunter—beside whom lay a beautiful chamois, which had fallen a victim that morning to the fatal precision of his rifle—and a young peasant, named Basile, from the little village of Dessonai. They had walked far that day, though it was but "the grim and surlity hour of noon;" but when their light and exhilarating repast was ended, their youthful spirits suffered them not to rest idly till the climb should have past away which covered the distant summit of Mount Rose. The Englishman amused himself by setting stones in motion and watching their progress down the mountain side, and Basile entered warmly into the sport, exclaiming ever and anon, as he saw the stranger's emotion, that there was no country like his native land. The hunter, who had at first looked on with contempt, joined in the sport when he found that some small bets offered by Basile had been goodhumouredly taken by the Englishman—and the many laughable incidents which the former played at so foolish and mischievous a game. There emulation was at length excited by vain endeavours to reach a certain point with their ponderous missiles, which all failed, although on inspecting table of the mountain, considerably short of the mark, though many hundred feet below them. "Hear, Basile!" cried the hunter, "help me to win this scene." Basile, eager in the sport, ran to his assistance; and with their poles as levers, and by cutting away the clasping vegetation with their knives, they soon unbedded the wished-for prize, which lay on the upper side of the rock under the shadow of which they had rested. This rock was an irregular mass of granite, about twenty feet in height where it hung over towards the valley, and was more than a thousand fathoms in weight. "Now, my brave mountaineers by the name of Le Pavillon, or the Tent—on account of the shelter it afforded from the sun and the storm—for ages and centuries than it is permitted to man to trace back the operations of nature, it had lain there, gradually sinking deeper on the lower side. "Mon Dieu!" cried the huntsman, "what noise is that?" and Basile looked aghast, and with pale, trembling lips, muttered, "it moves!" "What moves!" asked the hunter. "Le Pavillon," replied the other, "and the Englishman is beneath it" "Impossible!" but there was a tone of doubt in the hunter's voice that betrayed the emotion which he would have concealed—then, with renewed fury, it sprang forward. The hunter had been looking on hitherto with a feeling of pride; it was his native mountain—his native valley—the grandeur of the whole scene around was all his own—and he smiled in triumph. But his eye was from habit quicker than those of his companions; and now he snatched the Englishman's telescope—levelled it in an instant to the valley, and exclaimed, "Oh, mis-ericorde!" "What can you see?" cried his companions. "Oh! mercy! mercy! Santa Maria!" ejaculated the hunter, falling on his knees. "Speak!" shouted Basile, "what is it?" "Save her, save her! Oh, God!" cried the huntsman; "it is a woman with a child." The Englishman had taken the glass, and saw the poor creature in the valley far below: "She looks round," he exclaimed; "she sees her daughter—now—now—Oh, heaven! I cannot breathe!"—the glass dropped from his hand, and he threw himself on the ground. When they looked again, there was no human being in that direction. The Pavilion rock stood a lone in the midst of an impetuous mountain torrent, foaming its angry waters. "What sort of woman?" asked Basile; "could you guess who?" And a child, said you?" The hunter replied only by a look too expressive of friendly communication to be misunderstood by poor Basile, who, exclaiming, "Oh! Louise!" with that wild power of voice which indicates intense mental agony, rushed like a madman, headlong down the steep. "Follow him for Heaven's sake!" cried the traveller. "No man nor beast may reach the valley in safety at the rate he goes," replied the hunter; and the next moment he was in pursuit of Basile, far below the Englishman, who, unused to such descents, vainly endeavoured to follow.

Louise was the daughter of an honest Savoyard, who had been induced by alluring promises to add himself to the thousands of able artificers employed to complete the well-known military road over the Simplon, which forms a communication between France and Italy. He was among the first of the beastombs sacrificed to that Herculean labour; but there was some mystery about his end—no one had seen him since he was carried off by fellows in blowing up the rock near the g—and gallery. It was supposed his body must have been engulfed in the dark abyss of the "Chandron," that "hell of waters," in which the thundering cascade and "arrow" Divedro rush together in darkness. It became a question, whether he had perished on the French or the Italian side: there were no witnesses; and thus his widow and children were unable to substantiate their claim upon the fund provided for casualties. They had no friends to urge their suit, and the kindness of those who had been comrades and fellow-workmen was little. The hunter, who had at first looked on with contempt, joined in the sport when he found that some small bets offered by Basile had been goodhumouredly taken by the Englishman—and the many laughable incidents which the former played at so foolish and mischievous a game. There emulation was at length excited by vain endeavours to reach a certain point with their ponderous missiles, which all failed, although on inspecting table of the mountain, considerably short of the mark, though many hundred feet below them. "Hear, Basile!" cried the hunter, "help me to win this scene." IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

CANADA.

House of Commons, June 12th.

Mr. WILMOT HORTON moved the further consideration of the postponed resolutions respecting water communications in Canada.

The Resolution that £56,000, be granted for improving the water communications between Montreal and Trois Rivieres, was then read by the Clerk; and on the question of its second reading,

Mr. WARBURTON expressed his objection to such a Resolution, not on account of any doubt as to the utility of such improvements to Canada—not on account of any insensibility on his part to the value of facilitating the communications between the more remote lakes of that Province and the St. Lawrence—but on account of the state of our treasury. [Hear.] The question was, whether we had sufficient capital to spare for such purposes? Or had we not objects at home (if capital were not defective) which strongly called for our aid; such as the improvement of the communications between Ireland and England, by Milford Haven, for example. Upon these principles, he hoped the House would not enter this year into that great expense.

Mr. W. HORTON said, that some Honorable Members argued against the expediency and propriety of the grant, upon the principle that it was for a commercial speculation, upon which it was not advisable to spend money, inasmuch as that sum might be employed in many other ways, by which thousands per cent. might be returned. But the Honourable Members were perfectly mistaken in supposing the grant was called for merely for a commercial speculation. No, it was called for to establish a water communication for the defence of Canada; and he had the highest confidence for declaring, that, from the local circumstances of that colony, a better mode of defence could not be adopted. The expenditure upon it would, he allowed, be great; but, while the work might be carried on, it would be contended, it was justified in the first place by the benefits which would be derived from it by the Colony, and, in the second, by the circumstance that the undertaking could not be carried into effect in any except times of peace. Besides, it would be extremely inconvenient if the grant were refused this year, that the subject would be, upon a future occasion, brought before them in detail—that if, hereafter, the expense were found to be inconvenient, it might be diminished annually; and, finally, that it might be (if the House should think proper) discontinued altogether. Mr. HUME contended, that the making of these canals were a commercial speculation. Not one of them were intended to reach the frontier. He agreed with the Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Warburton,) in the opinion he had expressed.

Mr. STANLEY supported the motion.

Lord RANCLIFFE hoped Ministers would pause before they urged on so heavy a grant this Session.

Mr. WHITMORE could not concur in the justice or policy of the vote, because he considered that it was founded upon some theory of improvement which would never lead to the beneficial results which some expected, and because he believed that if they once embarked in the proposed undertaking as a national measure, they must continue it, and there would be no limit to the expense.

Mr. PEEL believed, that his Honourable Friend had not brought the motion forward, in consequence of any theory of improvement whatever he had formed; but in consequence of a moral conviction, that it would be for the interests of the Colony and of this country. With respect to the expenses, he was not prepared to say, that unles they were to abandon Canada—it was not a wise one. It might be a question for the future, whether some portion of that expense might not be hereafter borne by the colony. But, be for one, was not prepared to say, that it was consistent either with the honour, glory, or interests of England, to abandon Canada, and he would, therefore, support the vote for enabling it to establish that line of defence, which the highest Military Authorities had declared to be under all circumstances the best.

Mr. DAWSON differed from the Honourable Gentleman in his view of the subject. He did not think, the question was, whether England should abandon Canada; but, whether England could or could not, circumstanced as she was, afford a grant. He thought canals the worst species of military defences that could be devised, because an enemy could render them useless, by destroying a single lock. (Great laughter.)

Mr. M. FITZGERALD supported the vote.

Lord HOWICK thought, at all events, that they ought to postpone this vote for twelve months.

Mr. R GRANT contended, that Canada was deserving of every assistance from this country, as well as on account of her loyal attachment, as in anticipation of the future wealth, riches and advantage she was destined to bring to the mother country.

The House then divided—

CORN LAWS.

House of Lords, June 13.

Viscount GODERICH has been asked last night what course it was the intention of his Majesty's Government to pursue with respect to the Corn Bill—whether he should propose, on any future stage, to rescind the amendment which had been carried, and what day he should fix for its third reading. Under the circumstances of the case, he did not feel at liberty to answer either question, but it was not fit that he should do so, in order that their Lordships should be aware of the sentiments of his Majesty's Government on that subject. After the decision to which the House had come, for the second time, yesterday, it would be quite out of the question for him to make any further attempt to change its determination. He considered that the Bill had been finally sanctioned by their Lordships with the amendment, as a part of it. He had felt it his duty to state the grounds, conceiving that he had a strong case, on which he thought the amendment not only objectionable, but inconsistent with the principle of the Bill, and inconsistent with its being carried into effect. He could not depart from that conviction, and, consequently, it was not possible for him to undertake to propose the third reading of the Bill. He, therefore, did not intend to proceed on the Order of the Day for the third reading on Friday.

The Earl of MALMESBURY should be at all times ready to meet his Noble Friend and His Majesty's Government with humility. He was anxious that any measure in conformity with the Landed Interest should be adopted. There was one which it might yet not be too late to adopt. It was to put the Act of 1822 into operation. He knew that this could be originated with their Lordships: but he should like to see the clause which prevented the Bill of 1822 from coming into play removed, and effect of the provisions of that Bill fully tried.

Viscount GODERICH considered the Bill of 1822 so opposed to the principle of the present measure, that he did not think His Majesty's Government could act on the advice of the Noble Lord.

Duke of WELLINGTON asked, whether the Order of the Day for the Third reading, on Friday, would be discharged; or whether it would not stand, and might not be moved by any Noble Lord.

Earl GREY had voted for the amendment with the view of improving the Bill, as he conceived it would improve it without injuring its general effect. He admitted that he was no friend to the manner in which it had been introduced. He disapproved of the clamour which had been raised against the Corn Laws, and blamed His Majesty's Government for having encouraged it. He thought that there had been no cause for immediate interference; for no one had been able to say, that at least inconvenience had been felt for the last six years, either through high prices or great fluctuations, to justify these new measures. But though he objected to the manner and time at which the Bill had been introduced to the House; when once introduced, he had become a question with him whether he could not, without sacrificing the interests of the agriculturists, give his assent to the measure. He had given it, and had voted for going into the committee but not with the intention of passing a Bill on which all powers of deliberation should be suspended. He felt that it would be his duty, if any alterations were proposed, which appeared to him to be improvements. to vote for them. This was the ground on which he had supported the amendment of the Noble Duke, as he conceived that it tended to remove the danger of a great accumulation of corn, and of its sudden release. The amendment only went to this. It deferred the bringing bonded corn into the market from the time at which the price should be 68s. to that when it should reach 66s.; all the rest of the measure remained as it originally was. He stood there one of a body, who, while protecting the interests of the public, were to oppose themselves without fear and hesitation to those which they conceived improper. If they were told, that by altering the Bill they ran the risk of having one still worse forced upon them, they were not to suffer themselves to be intimidated by that threat. If the new Bill came, let them with the same resolution and firmness meet it with the same opposition, and insure its final rejection. [Cheers.] If there was to be a contest between that House and a great portion of the population, his part was taken, He was one of an order to which he must stand or fall, and to the last hour of his life he would maintain the privileges and independence of Parliament.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, said, he rose merely for the purpose of answering the question of the Noble Duke opposite, who had asked, whether the order for the third reading of the Corn Bill was to be discharged. It was merely his intention to state, in answer to this question, that his Noble Friend (Lord Goderich) had made no motion on the subject of that order, and he did not intend to make any. The order stood for the third reading on Friday next; but after the alteration which had been effected in the measure, his Noble Friend did not feel that he would be acting with propriety or consistency, if he were to urge it through any other stage. At the same time, the order would remain for any Noble Lord who might think otherwise, to adopt the measure, and bring it forward. He would not then answer the observations of his Noble Friend at a later period, as he might have an opportunity of vindicating that course of conduct which he felt required no vindication. But nothing could be more simple than the explanation of his Noble Friend (Lord Goderich), that the Bill, as it now stood, was materially altered from that form in which it came from the Commons, and in which it met with his approval, he could not recommend it to be sent back again to that House.—[Hear.]

His Majesty it is said, will prorogue Parliament in person, on the 12th inst. (June.)

As soon as the division took place in the House of Lords on the Corn Bill, expresses were immediately sent off to Hamburgh and Holland.

LONDON, June 13.

The clause in the new Corn Bill, introduced by the Duke of Wellington, being carried in the Lords, has caused an alarming sensation in the market this morning, as it will prevent the liberation of bonded wheat, and thereby deprive the country of the auxiliary supply, which may be required before next Harvest. An advance of from four to five shillings per quarter was asked for to-day.

LIVERPOOL, June 16.

The Corn Law Bill is now considered as lost by the amendment of the Duke of Wellington, and it is doubted what course will be pursued relative to bonded grain, &c. &c. The belief is, that all in bond will be wanted and will be let out by an Order of Council, at a very moderate duty. 1000 barrels of American Flour have been sold this week at 25s. 6d. and 30s at 28s. for export.

Scotland,

We have had nothing half so wonderful to record, for many a day, as the arrival of a whaler which had been locked up all last winter in the arctic ice. Under the head "Miraculous Preservation," will be found the statement of this astonishing fact, taken from the Aberdeen Journal of Wednesday.—We look anxiously for further particulars respecting this happily saved vessel, the Dundee of London, and also to hear the fate of her colleague, a Dutch whaler, who was left in the same hopeless situation.

Miraculous Preservation.

We feel sincere pleasure in being the first to communicate to the friends and relatives of the crew of the Whale Fishing Ship Dundee, of London, Capt. Duncan, the happy intelligence of her safe arrival at the port of Lerwick, after having long been given up for lost. This vessel sailed for Davis' Straits at the usual period last year, and of course has been about 15 months absent. She got fast in the ice at the end of the season, along with a Dutch vessel, where no assistance could possibly be rendered to them; and when the other whalers left the fishing ground, she was in a situation of such peril, that it was considered barely possible that the crew might save their lives by deserting the ship and endeavouring to reach some of the islands on that inhospitable shore. It appears, however, that they had been induced to remain with the ship; and have been most providentially preserved during the long and dreary winter that has since elapsed. How they passed their dismal hours, under the privations to which they must have been subjected, we shall be most anxious to learn; but in the mean time must content ourselves by stating the fact of their unexpected return to their native country, as communicated to us by our correspondent at Fraserburgh:

Fraserburgh, 11th June, 1827.

Gentlemen.—Captain David Herd, of the sloop Friends of Wemyss, on arriving at this port from Lerwick, Shetland, on Friday evening last, reported that the Whale fishing Ship Dundee, of London, supposed to have been lost last season, at Davis' Straits, with all hands, arrived at Lerwick on Wednesday last, with two fish on board. He had learned, the crew were all alive and well, but had suffered much hardships from want of provisions. Capt Herd requests that I make this communication to you, his being the first vessel likely to report the good tidings to those who have mourned the supposed loss of their relatives.

I am, &c. JOHN OFFICER.

HALIFAX, July 13.

The present season has been highly favourable to agriculture generally; there is, at present, every prospect of most abundant crops of all kinds of grain, hay and potatoes, throughout the Province; and we learn, with pleasure, that the prospect of the Farmer are not less promising in New-Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island.

Letters from Sydney state, that 8000 chaldrons of Coal have been sent to Halifax this spring, and that 5000 more are on the surface.

MIRAMICHI, July 10.

More Emigrants.—The influx of Emigrants from Ireland, has, at this port, far exceeded, up to the present date, all former seasons, and under the circumstances of diminished, and still diminishing employment, and a redundant population of older settlers; is calculated to awaken no trifling degree of sympathy as well as alarm for the fate of such a multitude of paupers and friendless creatures, as have lately been cast upon our shores.

PRINCE EAWARD'S ISLAND, July 10.

Sickness.—The Fury, from Newfoundland, arrived here yesterday from St. John's on the 27th June. Much alarm was felt there at the prevalence of the measles and typhus fever, which were making frightful havoc. A private letter says dozens were dying every day, both young and old. The weather being excessively hot, and the strength to the contagion. A public meeting of the inhabitants was to take place on the 27th, for the purpose of relieving the necessities of the poor, and affording them medical assistance.

Another letter describes the mortality as truly appalling. The contagion was brought to the country by several vessels with Irish passengers, on board of which it was engendered by the filth, and pestilential exhalations arising from the crowded state of their holds. The restrictions for regulating the number of passengers to be taken by each ship being now removed, they seemed to have been crowded on board literally as thick as they could stow, men, women, and, children, promiscuously. Since their arrival, not a day has passed without witnessing the death of numbers of these wretched beings, of diseases contracted on the passage. One morning thirty were lying dead at once.

Arrvd. brig Chebuto, St. John's. The sickness which prevailed there was much relieved.

Lower Canada.

On Monday afternoon His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief arrived in Town from Sherbrooke, on a tour of inspection in the Eastern Canada. Throughout the journey His Excellency was greeted with enthusiasm, more particularly at Vercheres where he was entertained by Mr. Martigne. His Lordship was met below the limits of the Town, by a number of the Magistrates of Montreal, and most respectable citizens, and we were happy to see the Honble. L. Gugy welcome him to "the good City of Montreal," in the style of an English Sheriff. The Montreal Cavalry with full ranks and gay appearance accompanied His Lordship from the place of landing to the Masonic Hall, in front of which was a party of the 71st with their band and regimental colours. On his Lordship's descending from his carriage, the band struck up God save the King, the troops presented arms, and the numerous spectators shouted a cordial welcome to His Excellency. On entering the Hall His Lordship was received in excellent style by the Rifle Corps of this City. His Lordship was highly pleased with Mr. O'Donnel's arrangement for his entertainment, and expressed his admiration of the elegance and accommodation of this superb mansion. On Tuesday His Lordship entertained a party of his private and personal friends, and departed for his destination yesterday morning on board the

A deputation of most respectable citizens waited on His Excellency on Tuesday morning, with a request that he would honour the Inhabitants of Montreal with his presence at a public dinner. His Excellency was pleased to thank the deputation for their address, but stated that particular circumstances had rendered such a step impossible at the present juncture. His Excellency was present on the Parade on Tuesday morning, and afterwards went on board the Steam Boat "John Molson," where an elegant collation was prepared by Mr. O'Rourke—His Lordship was highly gratified at the appearance of this noble vessel.

It was malignantly stated that his Excellency intended to influence the election at St. Eustache by his presence there—His Lordship travelled by a different route.—Montreal Gazette.

MONTREAL, 1st August.

The Earl of Dalhousie our worthy Governor-in-Chief, arrived here on Monday, on his way to visit the Rideau Canal. His landed at the foot of the current amid the cheers of a large number of the loyal inhabitants of St. Mary's, who saluted His Lordship with 19 rounds from a six pounder, which they had moved to the ferry for the occasion. Several Gentlemen in Carriages were also in waiting to form part of the cavalcade. Major Gregory with his well mounted and appointed Corps of Cavalry met His Lordship, and forming on either side of his Carriage escorted him into town as a guard of honour. The Carriages of the Gentlemen who went down to meet His Excellency followed. On reaching the Masonic Hall Hotel, His Lordship was received by a party of the 71st Highland Light Infantry, the colours flowing, arms, and the band playing "God save the King." A great number of people were assembled round the door, who greeted His Excellency with loud cheers. Captain, Bethune's Company of Riflemen lined the Hall of the Hotel, and presented arms as His Lordship passed through. Never did meet with a more cordial reception. A large number of the citizens of Montreal were anxious to give His Lordship a Public dinner. Yesterday several of them waited upon him to request him to honour them by dining with them on any day that might be most convenient for him. His Lordship was pleased to say that he would be happy to receive the attentions of the citizens of Montreal; but he must decline for the present what upon a future occasion it would afford him much pleasure to receive. He felt much obliged to the good citizens of Montreal for their hospitable intentions.—Montreal Herald.

It is reported upon the authority of Letters recently received from London, that Colonel Sir T. Noel Hill, K. C. B. brother of Lord Hill, succeeds Col. Sir John Harvey as Deputy Adjt.-General in this Command.

COMMON GAOL.—This day, John Winterscale, now under confinement as a disturber of the public peace, made a violent assault on a fellow prisoner, Louis Masse, and gave him two very severe wounds with a clasp knife—one of which is on the hip, and the other on the abdomen. Dr. Selby is now attending the sufferer, of whose recovery there are some doubts. Last night the Gaoler discovered a mounted saw under the bed of Masse in cell No. 1, which Masse had mounted for a fellow prisoner, Jean Verdon.

GENERAL ELECTION.—A correspondent at Three Rivers, informs us that the friends of Mr. Papineau, intend to put him in nomination for the County of St. Maurice, and that they are now canvassing very hard for him. This shows that all is not going well in Montreal, but it is to be hoped that the Gentlemen of St. Maurice will not trouble themselves about the matter, as Mr. Papineau, in the paper published by his authority, has declared that he will stand or fall by the election for the West ward of this city.

By the accounts copied from the different papers, and those which we derive from other sources, it will be seen that the elections are carrying on with great acrimony in the various parts of the Province, that for the county of Quebec, which closed yesterday by the retirement of Mr. Ryland, however, forms an exception, and the greatest good humour prevailed between the Candidates. At Sorel, the contest appears to have been conducted in the most vindictive manner, by the friends of Dr. Nelson, who considered a majority the one thing needful, and to no purpose to have regulated their efforts to gain this temporary triumph by any very rigid scale of moral conduct, no less than seven of the Doctor's voters having been accused of perjury, who we learn will be proceeded against for that offence. It is a matter of doubt, that this will be the case, if the conviction of any these persons, Mr. Nelson will be liable to a process for subornation of perjury. The candidate who can urge an ignorant individual to commit such a crime is, we conceive, the more guilty of the two, and consequently the most deserving of punishment.

COUNTY OF KENT ELECTION.—On Friday last, (at one day's notice) a meeting was convened at the Court House in Chambly, attended by a most respectable body of Electors, for the purpose of nominating an Independent Member to represent that County in the House of Assembly.—At 10 o'clock the chair was taken by NOEL BEDAUX, Esq. ——— VIGNEAU, Esq. acting as Secretary. When after a very complimentary expression of public feeling, towards the Gentleman, displayed by loud and long cheering on his name being announced—SAMUEL HATT, Esq. was proposed, and solicited to offer himself as a Candidate.

Mr. Hatt returned thanks for the honour in a neat and appropriate speech. He assured the meeting, that till that moment he never had entertained the slightest Idea of canvassing the County of Kent, but, being called upon in this public, and, to his feelings, flattering manner, he would not disappoint the kind intentions of the meeting, but would stand the Poll. Should he be elected, he trusted his honourable discharge of the responsible and arduous duties, the situation would eventually impose upon him, would be such as should prove him deserving of the generous confidence they reposed in him.

Mr. HATT shortly after withdrew from the Court House amidst universal cheering.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1827.

We are indebted to the Albion for our latest news. The debate in the House of Commons, on the grant for the Rideau Canal, is given in this days paper, and from its tenor, we do not discover any thing that, would lead to the supposition, that any alteration had been made in the proposed dimensions of the Canal. It has, however, been most positively asserted, that such is the case, and that Col. By, had received orders, for constructing it on a smaller scale than was originally intended. We cannot from any information we possess, take upon ourselves to contradict this statement, but we may express our surprise, that the circumstance, important as it is, should not have been mentioned in the course of the debate, which took place so late as 12th June.

The grant of £36,000, appears to have been made with reference, to the larger scale, and we still venture to hope that, it will be completed for Steam Boat and Schooner navigation, the difference between which, and a Boat navigation only, would as far as expense is concerned, be comparatively of trifling consideration. The condition annexed to the aid afforded to the Welland Canal by the Government, that the Locks should be of certain dimensions, very reasonably led to the belief, that those on the Rideau Canal, would be of the same size, and that the intention was to secure, to vessels of a certain tonnage, a continued route throughout the whole course of the Navigation.

The following is taken from the Kingston Chronicle:—

The Naturalization Law.—The following notices on this subject we find in our London papers.

UPPER CANADA.—On the 12th of June, the petition from the inhabitants of Upper Canada in relation to the Alien Bill, was presented in the House of Commons by Mr. Hume; it was read and ordered to be printed.

Mr. W. Horton brought in a bill to Naturalise certain persons resident in the Province of Upper Canada.

Mr. Kennedy wished to know whether on Friday night an opportunity would be afforded of bringing a full and fair consideration of the Crown and Clergy revenues of Canada before the House. He wished to have an opportunity of contradicting the statements of Dr. Strachan.

Mr. W. Horton said that the bill was very much misunderstood, particularly in Scotland. It had been objected against, and a full opportunity of explanation would be given on Friday night

We consider it unnecessary to offer any comment on these brief notices, at the present moment. When the opportunity shall have been afforded for explanation, we feel assured, that whatever statement may have been made by Dr. Strachan, they will be found to be such, as are authorised by existing facts, and that the impatience of Mr. Kennedy to contradict them, will result in a conclusion, as lended by a most respectable body of Electors, for the purpose of nominating an Independent Member to represent that County in the House of Assembly.—At 10 o'clock the chair was taken by NOEL BEDAUX, Esq. ——— VIGNEAU, Esq. acting as Secretary. When after a very complimentary expression of public feeling, towards the Gentleman, displayed by loud and long cheering on his name being announced—SAMUEL HATT, Esq. was proposed, and solicited to offer himself as a Candidate.

Mr. Hatt returned thanks for the honour in a neat and appropriate speech. He assured the meeting, that till that moment he never had entertained the slightest Idea of canvassing the County of Kent, but, being called upon in this public, and, to his feelings, flattering manner, he would not disappoint the kind intentions of the meeting, but would stand the Poll. Should he be elected, he trusted his honourable discharge of the responsible and arduous duties, the situation would eventually impose upon him, would be such as should prove him deserving of the generous confidence they reposed in him.

Mr. HATT shortly after withdrew from the Court House amidst universal cheering.

(The Gore Gazette, August 7. 1827.)

THE Court of Assize for the Western District, commenced at Sandwich, on Tuesday, the 31st ult. upon which occasion, we are informed by a Gentleman of the Bar, who was present, that Mr. Justice MACAULAY delivered one of the most eloquent, impressive, and appropriate Addresses to the Grand Inquest, that he ever heard from the Bench in this Country.—A copy of the Address, at their request, was subsequently handed to the Grand Jury, who intend, we are informed, to give it publicity.

On the following day, a colored man, named Qualls, was tried for the wilful murder of his wife. The parties, it appeared, had been out together on a "Frolic" or "Bee," and on their return toward home in the evening, in a state of intoxication, the Prisoner beat his Wife first with a Rail, and afterwards with a Switch; in consequence of which she died a few days thereafter.—The Prisoner was found Guilty, and the Judge, in a very impressive manner, pronounced on him the sentence of Death, which was carried into execution on the following Friday.

Coroner's Inquest.—An Inquest was held yesterday morning on the body of George Kimball, the child who was run over by the York Stage, and who has since died of the injury it received.—A Jury of fourteen persons, were first empannelled, eleven of whom were sworn on the part of Accidental Death, while three, including the Foreman, contended for that of Manslaughter. The Coroner—Mr. Burwell—finding that there was no probability of obtaining any verdict in which, all parties could concur, dismissed the Jury, and empannelled a new one of Twenty-three, by whom a verdict of Manslaughter was returned against JAMES COLQUHOUN—the Stage Driver—there being sixteen in favour of this verdict, and seven against it.—Colquhoun has been apprehended upon the Coroner's Warrant, and held to bail, to take his trial at the ensuing Assizes for the Gore District.

GUELPH.—Eight families of British Emigrants consisting of 57 persons, arrived at Dundas to-day, from South America, via New York; and proceeded immediately to Guelph.

On Wednesday the 6-t inst. a child six years old, belonging to Mr. Coates, of Trafalgar, swallowed a large dose of Arsenic, which had been prepared by Mrs. C. for the purpose of killing flies. By the timely assistance of Dr. Bell, who was sent for immediately after the accident was discovered, the child was saved from the otherwise inevitable fatal consequence of the accident—and, is now out of danger.—The prompt and assiduous attention of Dr. B. in this, and every other case, in which his professional services are required, is highly creditable to him.

On the same day, a child about four years of age, belonging to Mr. John A. Chambers, of Nelson, fell into a Well about 20 feet deep. The mother and sister of the child, in their alarm upon hearing of the circumstance, went to the neighbour's house, to call for assistance, to enable them to get the child, whom they supposed to be dead, out of the well—but, on their return, they found it standing upright in the water, which was shallow, crying to get it out. The child, after getting it out of the well, it was discovered that, though considerably bruised, no serious injury had been received.

From the St. Catharines Former's Journal.

In consequence of the circulation, by mischevious persons in different parts of this Country and the United States, of unfounded reports respecting the health of the workmen employed at the Deep Cut, the contractors for the Welland Canal, have found it proper and proper, in order, to counteract, as far as possible, the evil likely to attend the spreading of such malicious insinuations, to procure the following certificate of the attending Physician, for publication—assuring us at the same time, that so far from there being any unusual fatality among the labourers, they are, in general uncommonly and remarkable healthy and active for the season of the year. We shall resume this subject in our next, and notice as it deserves, some very erroneous and ungenerous observations contained in a late Montreal Courier.

REPORT OF DEATHS.

AT THE DEEP CUT—WELLAND CANAL,
From the commencement of operations to the 1st instant, inclusive.

One man from Paralysis.
One man from Dysentery.
One man from Hydrocephalus, or Dropsy of the Brain.
One woman from Bilious Diarrhœa.
One Child from do.

It has been a general time of health, comparing the number of people and their situations, with that of the country, with the exception of a few cases of Bilious Diarrhœa, and Intermittent Fever; and in no one instance has a Typhus, or any contagious disease, made its appearance, as has been so ungenerously represented by a person who pretended to have some knowledge of the practice of medicine.

N. B.—Only one of the men above mentioned was employed as a labourer.

DAVID J. BOWMAN,
Attending Physician.

To the Editor of the Welland Canal Intelligencer.

SIR—I received your paper of the 11th from St. Catharines, in due course; and should certainly have attended sooner to the paragraph in which my name is introduced, as well as to your reques: respecting the Welland Canal, had I not been too much occupied during my journey to consider the subject in the manner it deserves.

I can have no objection to your publishing my opinion upon this great Provincial and National work, if you conceive it calculated to be of the smallest utility. I have not supposed, that a single mile line of the Canal from Lake Ontario to its junction with the Welland River, and have since made an excursion to the mouth of the Grand River, to examine the Harbour at Dunnville, to form the southern entrance, or its conjunction with Lake Erie.

In passing along that part of the Canal which is now in progress, I had an opportunity of examining at leisure, and under circumstances peculiarly advantageous, all the different parts of the work. Some of the works which I saw, were nearly completed, and others but just begun, or rather finished; some were merely commenced, and at several places only the excavations were commenced. Similar means were afforded me of forming a general opinion of the progress of undertaking in their different stages. I was fortunate also in making acquaintance with the Engineer, Mr. Barett, and with the principle contractor, Mr. Phelps, who has engaged the Deep Cut—a part of the work which, from its magnitude and the activity with which it is carried on, excites great interest at this moment.

In no part of the world have I seen any undertaking conducted in a more business like style than the Welland Canal. All parties seem to know what they are about; there is no bustle or noise; no idle pass; no remissness in any department of the work. There is the most minute, seems to receive exactly its proportionate degree of attention. On the occasion alluded to, I was sometimes alone, and sometimes in company with the Engineer; so that I had ample means of learning what were the opinions of all the different persons employed.

Frequent references were made, in my presence, to the formation of the Engineer, as well as to the contractor; and the prompt manner in which the information required was given and acted upon, was equally creditable to both parties. The same spirit of liberality and candour appeared to prevail throughout; but I was particularly struck with the effect of the regulations which Mr. Phelps had established amongst the labourers in consequence of the accident—and, is now out of danger.—The prompt and assiduous attention of Dr. B. in this, and every other case, in which his professional services are required, is highly creditable to him.

As there are several points respecting the Welland Canal which have been occasionally misunderstood, it may be useful, perhaps, to say a few words upon each of them. It has been stated, if I am not mistaken, that the size of the Locks is not such as to admit of the passage of the ordinary vessels employed on the Canadian Lakes. Now, there is no doubt, on the whole line, the dimensions of which are less than one hundred feet long—twenty-two feet wide, and eight feet deep—proportions capable of admitting vessels of from 100 to 125 tons burthen. I understand the largest Schooners at present navigating these inland seas, are from 60 to 90 tons, the dimensions of which are not beyond the feet long by 19 or 20 feet broad.

By far the greater part of this Canal is three or four-fold wide, as the line adopted passes generally through natural cuts, or ravines, where no further labour is necessary, than the only addition being a towing path. At other places, one artificial embankment is found to be sufficient to confine a wide sheet of water, while at the very narrowest places, where the Canal runs between two raised banks, the width at the surface is 58 feet—at bottom 26, and the depth never less than 8 feet. No two locks are found any where in closer connection than 90 yards, such being the fortunate nature of the line selected, and the gentle slope of the ground, that it is never necessary to adopt this inconvenient arrangement

Numerous large reservoirs, which in other countries would be called Lakes, form integral parts of the Canal, and give, by reason of the great body of water which they contain, the most important uniformity to the supply required by the Locks. As these sheets of water are fed from inexhaustible sources, they can be subject to no diminution during the driest season; nor can any undiminished supply of hydraulick works along the banks of the Canal, interfere with what of course must ever be the primary object—the depth and copious supply of water from the Canal.

Another important feature in this work, is the facility of hereafter adding two feet to the present depth of water along the whole of the Canal. On the embankment of the one from the Grand River to the Welland, which I am rejoiced to hear is to be commenced immediately, the supply will come direct from Lake Erie, with a fall of eight feet.—Then, by making a waste weir across the Welland at its lower or southern junction with the Canal, and raising the upper Lock two feet, 10 feet water will be given to the summit level, and so on by raising in like manner, the head of each Lock throughout to Lake Ontario, this important additional depth may be obtained whenever it shall be required.

It appears to me that the persons who have had the management of this great work, have shown much sagacity in deciding upon wooden, rather than upon stone Locks. The expense in not cases being, as I can learn, only about a ninth part of what it would have been in the other. I have examined these Locks attentively, and I feel no doubt of their being sufficiently strong for all purposes required. The interest of the money saved by the difference in the cost between wood and stone, will, from all the inquiries I have made, be more than sufficient to keep in repair those parts of the wooden Locks which are subject to decay from exposure. Should it be considered necessary at any future time to enlarge the Canal, in order to admit Steam Boats, or others of a great dimension, this could be done at infinitely less cost than if the Locks were of stone. Should it eventually be deemed expedient to build stone Locks, the Canal will have afforded a durable an easy and economical means of transporting the materials.

At the lower end of the Canal, four Locks have been already constructed of dimensions sufficient to admit Steam Boats, being 32 feet broad by 105 long. The same practical good sense, which distinguishes every thing about this Canal, has dictated this moderate experiment, and I understand this moderate results of the point in question; and in the mean time is given to the rising town of St. Catharines, all the advantages of a Sea Port—a circumstance which cannot fail to prove highly beneficial to the flourishing country in the neighbourhood.

The great basin at the end of the Canal, close to Lake Ontario, will be one of much utility, especially in bad weather, and when the wind hangs to the eastward for any length of time. A great number of vessels, or any quantity of lumber, staves, ratts, &c. may be collected here at one time.

The Harbour, formed by the two projecting piers, will answer the purpose intended, better, I think, without than with a break water. The latter pier, however, will require to be carried a good deal further out, and then turned, so as to overlap the western pier. The waste weir seems to me well situated, as it will take away the drift which would be likely to be carried out to the Lake between the piers; and thus the evils of a bar will, as far as possible be avoided.

When speaking of a bar, it may not perhaps be unnecessary to say decided opinion, that a good southern termination of the Canal can hardly be hoped for at the mouth of the Grand River. No combination of piers, nor any extensive system of dredging, will form a complete exemption from the persevering annoyance of a bar, which has its source in a river. Besides which, that part of the coast of Lake Erie is exposed to the prevalent north-westerly gales. My ideas quite coincide with those which I have been told are held by an eminent military engineer in this country, namely—That the Canal ought to terminate in Mohawk Bay, into which it may be led by a cut across the neck of land which separates it from the River, or by carrying the Canal round the point. This, by completing the communication already partly formed by the cut between the main land and a small island in the Bay, a sheltered and capacious harbour may be formed worthy of this great enterprise, which I have the most confident expectation will not only abundant by remunerate the spirited projectors and support ers, but prove of the highest utility in advancing the prosperity of the Canadas in particular, and the general interests of all those countries forming the shores of the mighty Lakes, which by means of this splendid Canal are to be thrown into one.

I remain your ob't servant,
(Signed) BASIL HALL.

It will be seen that, during the late gale on Friday night, the Steam-boat Dalhousie, Capt. M'Donell, narrowly escaped being wrecked between Dunnel, and Grimsby.—We learn that one of the Durham Boats referred to by the passengers is safe —the other, it is feared, will not be recovered, as there were no Sailors on board to guide her through the waves. The Steam-boat Martha Ogden was driven on shore, near Morristown, the same evening.—U. C. Herald.

THE STEAM-BOAT TONORO, whose Engine frame was injured about two weeks ago, will be ready to resume her trips in the course of a few days. The necessity of sending to Montreal for Castings has occasioned great inconvenience to the public and a serious loss to the proprietors.—Ib.

Severe Gale.—On the night between Friday and Saturday last, a severe gale was experienced in this neighbourhood, accompanied with considerable thunder and torrents of rain. The Steam Boat Dalhousie, which had left Prescott about 11 o'clock in the evening, was near being driven on the American shore, having lost an anchor, and been compelled to cast off two Durham Boats loaded with shot, one of which made the land on this side; the fate of the other we have not yet learned. The Dalhousie made this port about 6 o'clock, having been 7 hours between this and Prescott, a distance of 14 miles. The Martha Ogden Steam Boat, which was on her way from Ogdensburgh, grounded near Morristown, but was got off the next day, without having sustained sufficient injury to prevent her proceeding.—Brockville Recorder.

Melancholy.—We regret to learn that, on Wednesday the 1st inst., a boy about nine years of age and only son of Capt. Bates of the Schooner Telegraph, was accidentally drowned, by falling off the bank of the River, about two miles above this Town at a place where the water is very deep.—Ib.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of 2½ per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

VOL. 3. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1827. NO. 16.

MY ROBIN REDBREAST.

More than thirteen years ago, as I was weeding among my flowers, a young robin, whose breast was speckled, not yet red, hopped nearer and nearer to me by degrees, and looked, with a longing eye, at the worms, which my removal of the earth exposed to view. Impelled by hunger, and scarcely of an age to to supply its own wants, at length it ventured to come near my hand, and seized a worm. I hope I may be pardoned if I, afterwards, at different times, laid a worm in its way. On the principle of its being the intention of Providence that red-breasts should eat worms, I unquestionably may; but whether it were the intention of Providence that I should sacrifice the one for the benefit of the other, may perhaps admit of a doubt.

My bird was now my constant attendant in the place where first we met, and I pretended to weed when weeds no longer grew there. At first I fed it with the aliment nature designed for it; but I soon substituted crumbs of bread. This was in autumn. Winter approached; I had two sticks fixed upright, and a third laid across for a perch. Here my robin awaited my coming into the garden.—Crumbs were always in my hand; they were laid near the perch; then more and more distant from it, then at my feet; still my bird fed without fear. I then held out my crumbs hand with the crumbs upon it; this was making rather too free; my bird flew up for each crumb it took, but would not remain on my hand. By this time its plumage was perfect, its back and wings were of the shining brown, and its breast of the orange red of its species.

I shall ever have greater faith in St. Valentine than I have in some othe saints, since it is under his auspices that birds are said to pair; for, on entering my garden on St. Valentine's day, I saw two robins sitting on the perch. I now perceived, for the first time, that my bird was a female; her breast not being of quite so deep a colour as that of her companion, and her aspect not being so fierce.

Our acquaintance continued on the accustomed footing till the beginning of August, when I was absent for a month. On my return I found my poor bird reduced to skin and feathers; the season had been dry, and worms scarce. She fled instantly to my hand, and, having eaten a few crumbs, without the ceremony of retreating, she filled her beak, and flew into a neighbouring hedge, where her young brood, escaped from the nest, but unable to procure their own subsistence, were crying for food. Aware of the necessities of the cause, I remained while she made as many trips as satisfied her offspring, and she continued to supply them from my hand till they were no longer under the care of their parent.

In the ensuing winter my robin had to suffer a persecution which would either have destroyed her, or driven her from the spot, if I had not come forward as her champion. I frequently laid her crumbs on the outside of a window, which bad weather obliged me to shut immediately. Here she was always pursued, with great ferocity, by a bird of her own species. Both birds recognised in me the protector of my feathered friend; if I remained at the window she ate in security, and the aggressor took to its wings; if I retired she fled away in terror, and her enemy took possession of the field. This affords some illustration of the vulgar notion that the red-breast of two years old kill those of one. Now are the readbreasts the only enemies which the redbreasts have to fear; for, if they are murderers, sparrows are daring robbers.—These would not have injured her person; but I was equally obliged to stand guard over her provisions, which they would have devoured very quietly, while they were obliging her to stand at a distance.

Years have rolled away; my robin's perch has fallen, and a more domestic intercourse has been established between myself and her. The room through which I pass to my drawing-room has a window to the ground, and near to this grows a magnificent variegated holly, of sixty years standing. This holly has been the perch of my bird. Here she has sat, watching for me as I might pass through the room; from this she has flown in at the window, to feast on crumbs placed in a small tray on the carpet; and to this she has retreated, when satisfied, to warble a sweet song of thanks for my bounty. Never has she been absent, summer or winter, except while she was sitting on her eggs.

When hunger was pressing, and I did not immediately attend to its calls, she would fly to one of the windows of my drawing-room, and stretch up her little neck to ask for bread. If this did not attract my eye, she applied to my ear, by hitting her beak against the glass; and when she knew she had succeeded, by my rising from my seat, she flew back to the window of the holly tree, by which alone she was admitted. The window opened, she flew through the room, turned the angle of the doorway which led to the drawing-room, and perched on the table, at which I sat, within a few inches of my hand. On this table stood her tray. She fed while I sat close to her; then hopped round the room, inspected the crevices of the wainscot, and flew out by the way she came.

My bird became—as all redbreasts are, and as some animals which are not redbreasts are —a persecutor in her turn. She was extremely tenacious of the inviolability of her own territories. No other robin dared to approach her window, except once, when the ground was covered with snow, the window open, and the owner not on guard, a poor starved fellow-creature ventured into her drawroom. She pursued it with the same ferocity with which she had formerly been pursued; the frightened stranger, not aware of the opposition it would meet with from the glass, which my bird was well acquainted with, beat itself against the windows, and would probably have been the victim of its instrusion, if I had not rescued it by taking it in my hand.

The mate of my robin was the exception to this general enmity. I have frequently seen her, before she had finished her meal, take the largest crumb on the tray, and put it into his mouth, as he stood waiting for it, at a little distance from the window; and I have heard her call them, and seen him come to help himself, if the crumbs were on the outside. To her offspring she was not so indulgent. She fed them from her table while her care was necessary, and she has brought them to the holly tree to shorten her journey's; but when a fine morning my bird would have remained in its vicinity, she has chased it away.

Such has been my acquaintance with my bird, during upwards of thirteen years; and, at the end of this time, her eye and her plumage were not less bright, nor her wings and her feet less active. I have dreaded the season of her moulting, when the feathers of her neck and breast were reduced to rags, and those of her tail dropped off, one by one, till no tail was left; and I have watched over her through nights, that she should not be able to survive the cold; but still my bird always appeared in the morning.

During the frost of the last week of the last month, my bird was my torment, by being continually at my window, beseeching me to let her in, and when admitted, I had great difficulty in driving her out. She wanted shelter, and endeavoured to elude all my attempts to force her to the open window. This was exceedingly painful to me; for I considered that nature had formed her for the open air, and I had formerly found robins dead in the morning, after having been permitted to shelter in the house for the night.

Sunday, the 29th of January, came, and with it a thaw. My bird came and fed as usual, and I saw her no more.

I never pass through the outer room without looking at her window. I never hear a leaf fall against my window, without raising my eyes towards it, I open that by which she was accustomed to enter, which opening was the signal for her to fly to it, if she was not already posted in her watch tower, the holly. It is in vain—my bird is gone for ever.

London Fashions for June, 1827.—Summer Promenade Dress.—A gown of pistachio green taffety, made partially high; with a broad border composed of foliage ornaments round the skirt; the leaves which extend upwards and downwards, are confined in the middle by a ring strap, which seems to separate one leaf from the other: every leaf is edged round by a narrow roulean; and the points of the upper leaves are each finished by a rosette of ribbon, the colour of the dress; the hem next the shoes is concealed by a wadded roulean. Plain body, a l' Espagnole, with Castillian points round the waist: each side of the bust so ornamented as to form a stomacher in front, composed of six zig zag diamonds in rich silk cordon.—The sleeves are in gigot shape, but not very capacious, with antique points at the wrists, and next the hand a broad gold bracelet, fastened with a cameo.—A collar, a la Chevalier, of fine lace, falls from the throat and is fastened in front, with a red cornelian, set in wrought gold. Over a small cap of lace is worn a Leghorn hat, lined with pink, and trimmed with bows of broad ribbon, of straw-color and pistachio-green; very long strings of the same ribbon floating over the shoulders.

Evening Costume.—Dress of tulle or of gossamer gauze over white satin, the border richly ornamented in slight white satin: next the feet the ornament is of an antique Grecian figure, forming a sort of fringe: above this, a roulean, which is surmounted by a regular row of scrolls of crape, edged with white satin: these scrolls stiffened, and though light, have a very rich appearance. The body is of white satin, fitting close to the shape, with a double falling tucker of broad blond, divided by a narrow roulean of satin; the sleeves very short, plain, and full. On the right side of the bust is worn a small bouquet of full blown roses, with a sash of rich white ribbon has three ends depending in front which do not come quite so low as the trimming at the bottom: each of these ends is terminated by a bow of ribbon. A diadem-beret-toque consisting of red-dyed lace, and is of pink spotted gauze, the diadem-toque part very much elevated: next to the hair a regal coronet bandeau, a la Cleopatra: a pink plume, resembling that of the bird-of-paradise, falls over the left side. The earrings are of fine pearl, as is the necklace, which is fastened in front with cameo set in gold; beneath this necklace is tied a pink barege sautior, drawn through a ring, with an antique head in cameo.—La Belle Assemblee.

STEAM VESSELS.—The Steam Vessel the George the Fourth, Capt. Black, left Portsmouth on the 1st of March, arrived at Lisbon on the 11th, and arrived at Cadiz the 16th, stayed 36 hours, and arrived at Gibraltar on the 19th. On the 21st she took on board 175 persons on an excursion to Tangiers, in Africa; sailed on the 21st, and returned on the 22d. Left Cadiz and Lisbon on the 24th, staying at each place as on the outward bound voyage, and arrived in London on the 9th, left the River Thames, on the 23d, for Elsineur, Copenhagen, and St. Petersburgh. The effect of this vessel's appearance at Tangiers, has never been justly described. The whole population turned out to see her enter the Bay. Their astonishment at the manner she was navigated against wind and tide, no sail set, and the ease with which she was brought up, made the Governor or Dey almost doubt his situation. The foregoing facts prove that steam navigation extends now from London to the eastern coasts and South of Europe, and furnish an interesting illustration of the gigantic progress of modern science, and its adaptation to the power, utility, convenience, and pleasures of man, for steam boats are the most efficient transports for the rapid and certain conveyance of troops in war, as it appears by the late expedition to Portugal, and afford the most expeditious means for carrying goods and passengers to their place of destination. The Duke of York, a Steam Vessel of the George IV., belonging to the same proprietors, Messrs. Joliffe and Banks is now on her voyage to Gibraltar, where upwards of 200 persons have put down their names for an excursion on a party of pleasure to Malaga, which amply shows the esteem this mode of travelling is held in.

LIVERPOOL, 23d June, 1827.

The demand for cotton in our market this week has been languid, and the extent of the business but moderate.

It is understood that the defeat of the Corn Bill in the House of Lords has tended to check the demand for goods and yarns in the Manchester market; and to effect sales, lower prices are submitted to. This, with the weighty import has had a corresponding effect on the cotton market.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

CLERGY RESERVES IN CANADA.

Mr. Wilmot Horton said, that as some misunderstanding had prevailed with respect to the objects of this Bill, he had thought it his duty to move for its recommitment, in order to have an opportunity of explaining it. This Bill was, in fact, but a practical application of the Provisions of the Act 31 Geo. III. called the Canada Constitution Act. By that Act 800,000 Acres of land were reserved for the support of the Protestant Clergy of the townCanadas, (to be sold to the Canada Company) but the land being at the same time, most unwisely made unalienable, the grant had been wholly rendered unproductive, ever since, as these hundreds of thousands of acres produced only £400 per annum, The consequence was, that the grant was inadequate to this purpose, and there was a necessity for supporting the Clergy out of other funds. By the present Bill it was proposed to sell 100, 000 acres every year, until the whole was made available to profitable purpose, in fact, to take these lands out of mortmain. The question of the appropriation of the proceeds of these lands, the Committee (of the House) would see was left wholly untouched by this Bill. But he wished it to be understood, that Government intended to make the Scottish Presbyterian Clergyman objects of the grant, as well as those of the English Established Church. (Hear! hear!) The principle was committed by this Bill, and the question of appropriation was still open, he hoped there would be no objection to pass the Bill, which was for the sale of 10,000 acres of the Reserves for the present year.

Mr. Warburton would not oppose the bill, but he strongly hoped that the proceeds would not be interfered with, until Government had some better evidence as to the proportion which the sectarian clergymen have towards each other, and towards those of the established church in Canada. He was sorry to see that the words of the Original act were "Protestant" clergymen in Canada, but was it to be understood, that while Government was warmly encouraging the Protestant population to emigrate to that country, they would overlook all provision for the clergy of that persuasion. (Hear! hear!) He hoped the Right Honourable Gentleman would pledge himself to move for a committee to consider the question of appropriation next session.

Lord Binning concurred in the recommendation of delaying the appropriation of these funds until next session. He was rejoiced to hear that the Scottish clergy were to be included in the grant.

Mr. Stanley (the heir of the Earl of Derby) felt that the state of the church lands of Canada was such, that although he had abandoned his motion on that subject at present, he would, certainly, early in the ensuing session, move for a committee to enquire into the state of the clergy lands, and into the whole system of Education, and the support of the clergy connected with it.

Mr. Estcourt concurred in the observations which had fallen from those honourable Members, who thought it would be advisable to postpone the discussion of the main question until the following Session of Parliament. He thought the Bill now before the Committee a very wise one and he would give it his cordial support.

Mr. Wilmot Horton, contended in reply, that the sale of the lands would confer a benefit on the country; and, in answer to a question which had been put to him, whether the church lands were intended to be applied to the Presbyterian, as well as the Protestant clergy, he begged to state distinctly that they were.

Parliamentary Reform.—The House of Commons, on Monday night, passed a resolution (on the motion of Mr. Tennyson) "that the corrupt state of the borough of East Retford deserved the serious consideration of Parliament." After which Mr. T. obtained leave to bring in a Bill to disfranchise the Borough of East Retford, and to return two members from the Town of Birmingham, in lieu thereof.—The motion was agreed to without a division. The motion was supported by Mr. C. W. Wynn and Lord Palmerston.

The late Calcutta Papers mention the recent, at that Presidency, of the new Act of Parliament, allowing the natives of India, to sit as Petty Jurors. The measure had not been received, by a portion of the Hindoos, with that degree of satisfaction which might have been anticipated. Numerous petitions had also been pointed out, by the Calcutta Press, to its immediate introduction. A new set of rules and regulations had, however, been framed in January by the Supreme Court, for carrying into effect the above Act.

Explosion of the Graham Steam Packet.—As the Admiralty Sessions, on Wednesday, Jacob Herdman, Engineer to the Graham, Hull Steam Packet, was indicted for the manslaughter of William Mellings, on the 7th of November last, in consequence of his negligence, whereby a boiler of the said Steam Boat was burst. The Jury conferred together for about 5 minutes, and then delivered their opinion to the effect that the prisoner had been guilty of negligence in leaving the valve, and going on board the United Kingdom, tho' he thought the valve was open, and the works going on right; at the same time, by a verdict of Manslaughter was then recorded. Lord Stowell said, the offence was a serious one; but as this was a new case, and as the prisoner had already suffered considerable imprisonment, he would only be required to enter into his own recognizance to appear when called upon.

The good effects resulting from the revival of trade are becoming more and more manifest, and extending farther among the working population in the suburbs. In Dalton and Bridgeton, all the cotton mills and power weaving mills, and in general public works of every kind are fully employed;—and as the weavers are also fully employed, very few idle persons are to be seen going about the streets—indeed, it is remarked, in that neighbourhood, that generally speaking the great body of the population have not been so well employed for the last two years.

Canada Land.—The Corn Averages' Bill went through a Committee last night. It was proposed by Lord Farnham, that the prices of corn in certain Towns of Scotland and Ireland, should be included in making up the averages. He therefore moved that the words "England and Wales" should be omitted, for the purpose of introducing "Great Britain and Ireland," in lieu of them. The question being then put in the usual way—that the words "England and Wales do stand part of the clause," their Lordships divided, when the numbers were,—Content 44, Not Content 44; upon which the Noble Chairman of the Committee gave, according to the established Parliamentary usage in such cases, his casting vote against the words, which originally stood in this Resolution. The amendment was thus substantially carried, but it being necessary to put the question distinctly to the House, on a new division, the numbers were—Content 37, Not Content 45: thus the Amendment was negatived, as well as the original motion, and the clause remains defective, as no part of the Empire is named in it, to which the measure will apply.

From the Liverpool Commercial Chronicle, of June 23.—In our last paper we communicated the intelligence of the abandonment of the Corn Bill, in consequence of the additional clause proposed as an amendment by the Duke of Wellington and passed by a majority of 11 votes in the House of Peers. Since the Ministry was thus defeated, Mr Canning has again introduced a Bill into the House of Commons, founded on the principle of the rejected Bill, but more liberal in its extent and application. By the new Bill, it is proposed to admit, at a rate of duty to be fixed according to the scale in the former Bill, all the foreign Corn now in England, or which may be imported previous to the 1st of July; and to a certain extent to admit Canadian Wheat. The permission to admit the foreign grain, extends only to the 1st of May, 1828.

This Bill defines that "such privileges be granted to ships only of which the colonial possessions, shall grant the like privileges to British ships, or which not having possessions, shall place the commerce and navigation of this country, and of its possessions abroad, upon the footing of the most favoured nation."

This applies to the United States, the French, and Dutch. The Bill, nevertheless, gives His Majesty the power, by Order in Council, to grant such privileges to the ships of any foreign country which may not, in all respects, have fulfilled such conditions." The Bill also provides that no Foreign Country shall be considered as having complied with the said conditions, until an Order in Council is issued certifying the fact; nor shall this Bill "extend or be construed as extending to annul any Order in Council heretofore issued in pursuance of the Act 6 Geo. 4. Cap. 114, entitled an Act to regulate the Trade of the British possessions abroad."

Important alterations of the Act 6 Geo. 4. Cap. 114, regulating the Trade of the British Possessions abroad. The following are the only new duties leviable on goods imported in to the British Possessions in America, viz:—silk manufactures are to pay 30, and cotton manufactures 20 per cent. we believe they are now imported as non-enumerated articles at 15 per cent. ad valorem—salted Beef and salted Pork, at present prohibited, are to be imported as follows:—"salted Beef and salted Pork, except into Newfoundland, and all salted Beef and salted Pork, imported from Newfoundland, whether of Foreign produce or not, at a duty of 12s. per cwt."

East India Goods.—In all trade with the British possessions in America, the Cape of Good Hope and its dependencies shall be considered as within the limits of the East India Co.'s Charter, and after 5th of July next goods, the produce of those limits, shall not have the privilege of British goods when imported into British Possessions in America, unless imported direct from said limits, or from some place in the British dominions;

Goods from the United States into Canada, and thence into Great Britain. After the 5th July next, masts, timber, staves, wood hoops, shingles, lathwood cordwood for fuel, ashes, raw hides, tallow, fresh meat, fresh fish, and horses, carriages, and equipages of travellers, being brought by land or inland navigation into the British possessions of America shall be to brought duty free." And by this Bill, the seven first named articles imported from Canada into any British possessions at home or America, shall be deemed produce of Canada. The 8th article.—U. States Ashes,—is already [Act 7 Geo. 4, Cap. 48] admitted through Canada into the United Kingdom as Canada Ashes. It is not clear that such raw hides will be admitted into the United Kingdom at 1s. 2d. per cwt. or half the foreign duty. Tallow pays 2s. 2d. whereso ever it is produced. Wood of all sorts warehoused in British ports in North America, shall, after the 5th July next, be imported thence into any other British possessions in America, be subject to only one-fourth the duty which would otherwise be charged thereon.

Warehousing Ports.—After 5th July next, Kingston and Montreal in Canada, shall enjoy the privileges of warehousing ports, given in Act 8 Geo. 4. Cap. 114.

State of Trade.—The fine cloth manufacturies in Gloucestershire are now in full work, and the trade is more brisk there than it has been for some years. Large orders for exportation are the cause of this movement. We are glad to state, that the recent improvement in trade has extended to Wigan, where, previously, a very great depression existed. The manufacturers in the course of last week advanced the price of weaving sixpence per piece. A further advance (but we believe, the third) of threepence per piece also took place at Blackburn, Burnley, and Colne; and as the weavers there are now all in full work, there has been a great improvement in their circumstances.—Wolverhampton Advertiser.

Manchester, June 17.—The trade of this town is improving, goods of all kinds in great demand, and very small stocks in the manufacturers' hands, indeed only such as are made up week to week. The woollen trade in Yorkshire, is improved. The merchants at Rochdale are said to have received large orders from abroad. The woollen weavers have turned out for an advance of wages, which, we are told, the masters have agreed to give. That weaver that only got 15s. for weaving a piece of calico three months ago, now gets 2s.

GREECE.

Trieste, June 8.

The Austrian packet-boat, which arrived here the day before yesterday, from Corfu, after a passage of four days, brought, among other passengers, the son of the brave Bozzaris, who fell at Missolonghi, a child of nine years of age, attended by another Greek. From these Greeks as well as by letters from Zante of 30th May, and from Corfu of 4th June, we have further particulars of the decisive battle which Seraskier gained before Athens, which we have already mentioned in our last. The Albanian chief, Gouras, who had come from St. Petersburgh to the assistance of his Countrymen. The Corps of Albanians which was the flower of the Army, and amounted to 4000 men, is almost entirely destroyed; of the other 9000 Greeks, 3000 threw themselves into the Piræus, where they entrenched themselves, the remaining 6000 fled or dispersed in different directions. Fabvier is said to have informed the Greek Senate that the Acropolis has still a stock of provision sufficient for two months. The battle took place on Thursday.

Some letters affirm, that the Greeks had at first resolved to renew the attack on Sunday, on which day they expected a reinforcement of 6,000 men, which were on the way to join them. But the advanced posts first challenging each other with words and then coming to blows, the battle was begun at the wrong time, and Karaiskaki was unhappily killed, at the onset, by the musketry of the Turks, who took advantage of the disorder which ensued.

Lower Canada.

It is reported that His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief intends, during the ensuing month of September to visit the eastern Townships. It is said that his route will be through St. Armand, Durham, Broome and Bolton to Stanstead, whence he will proceed through Hatley, &c. to Sherbrooke on the River St. Francis, and thence through the Townships along the course of that River to Drummondville.

If this report be not fallacious, His Excellency will be the first Governor who will have visited this hitherto neglected though promising portion of Lower Canada: and we feel no doubt that his appearance in that part of the Province will be hailed by its inhabitants as an auspicious event, and the precursor of future good; more especially when they recollect that through him the establishment of the Register Offices they so much want has been recommended to the Legislature, and that during his administration the Legislative Council passed a Bill to establish such offices in the Township and to confirm English Laws (long promised to them) to the English tenures of lands, a Bill which unhappily failed in the House of Assembly.

Note.—The Imperial Parliament in the sense of what it owed to its own dignity and its former promises, has since happily passed the Act confirming English Laws to the lands held under English tenures. For the repeal of this Act the Canadian House of Assembly has recently petitioned the English Government. We make no comments on their motives.—Canadian Courant.

To the Electors of the Borough of William Henry.

Gentlemen,

However exceptionable may have been the conduct of some of the Electors of the Borough, I owe my best thanks to the majority for their zealous support during the late Election, and shall always retain a grateful sense of their disinterested exertions on the occasion. Of the means by which an apparent majority was obtained by the adverse Candidate, you were eye-witnesses:—they were such as could not fail to excite surprise and indignation in the minds of people most familiar with Election contests. The obligation of an Oath, as you must have observed, was treated with the most criminal levity, and persons who, if less notorious, were without the requisite legal qualifications to enable them to vote, did not hesitate to swear they possessed it, under the incitement practised on them, and under assurances even of personal indemnity. This fact is sufficient also was used and these assurances given, in the very presence of the Returning Officer, by individuals from whom such conduct was not to have been expected, and who must be presumed to have been aware of its criminality. Among the illegal votes, which constituted the majority of four on the face of the Poll, are those of Fathers of Families, who, having alienated by deeds of gift to their children, absolutely and without any reservation, the property in virtue of which they claim the right of voting, and for which their sons during the same Election had already voted, were incited to swear to a subsisting qualification in themselves: and in the same majority is even included a vote, received certainly for the first time in any County in which the Elective Franchise has obtained—that of a married woman, and which, you will recollect, although it was previously objected to, was admitted by the Returning Officer as a very good vote. With the aid of such means, and considering the nature of the prejudices excited, with unceasing activity, in the minds of that portion of the Electors who can neither read nor write, and who with the best dispositions, are peculiarly liable to imposition, you cannot have been surprised at the majority's success which has been obtained. You have, however, the best grounds for anticipating that those means cannot be permanently successful, and you will naturally direct your attention hereafter to the legal and Constitutional recourse which is provided for setting aside the return of a Representative thus corruptly and illegally obtained. With much esteem and consideration, I have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your most obliged and

Faithful Servant,

J. STUART.

Regatta.—On Friday the Regatta took place pursuant to advertisement; the day was uncommonly fine, and there was sufficient wind to make the amusement interesting. Shortly after 12 o'clock sixteen or seventeen Pilot Boats started from a boat moored at the mouth of St. Charles to sail round a boat stationed, in the North Channel, off the Isle of Orleans, and return to Quebec; in going down before the wind 10 or 12 of the boats were close together, but in beating to windward a boat belonging to one of the ferrymen at Point Levy, named Barras shot to windward and showing great superiority over her competitors arrived at the goal; it was then, however, that the Boat which arrived second, the property of Honora Chasse', and conducted by a young Pilot of the name of William Amiot, who started her after the line had left, was the most obliging and certainly the most likely have come in first had Barras' Boat rounded the station, instead of which she tacked inside, which gave her more time in streching to windward. This point will probably be contested.

There were afterwards two rowing matches, the first between the Honble. Col. Gore's six oared gig, and Mr. J. S. Campbell's whaleboat, which was won by the latter. The other between Mr. Caldwell's four cared gig, and a gig of the same force belonging to Lieut. Hasdon, of the Transport, Princess Royal, which was closely contested and won in gallant style by Mr. Caldwell's boat. This species of amusement is a novelty here, but from the interest which was yesterday manifested, we are convinced it will bear repetition, and produce a useful emulation amongst the pilots to improve both the construction and rigging of their boats, so as to render them not only safe sea boats, but prime sailors. A number of spectators were on the works which commanded a view of the harbour, and on the wharves of the Lower Town.—Mercury.

The U. E. Loyalist.

York, U. C. Saturday, August 25, 1827.

By the Packet Ship York, advices are received from London to 23d and Liverpool to 25th June. We have given the most interesting extracts from the New-York papers.

The new Corn Bill, was introduced in the House of Commons, by Mr. Canning, with the following remarks which explain the object of the Bill:—

"A great quantity of foreign Corn (500,000 quarters,) had been introduced on an expectation that the importation would be sanctioned by law, and was now on hand. This he proposed should be let out, not by an act of the Government, but by the provisions of the Bill before the House. To that part of the Bill there was no objection in the other House. He therefore proposed that the quantity of corn now in warehouses, or which might be brought in before the 1st of July, should be let out under such restrictions as would have existed, had the recently last Bill become a law. He also proposed to let in, under the same restrictions, the Corn of Canada, which had been shipped on the faith of the Bill. He only proposed that this provision should last until the 1st of next May."

By a Bill before Parliament some important alterations are to be made in the Commercial regulations of the Country. Some of its provisions are applicable to Canada, and Montreal and Kingston, are to be made free Warehousing Ports.

On 12th June Mr. Horne, proposed to give notice that evening of his intention to bring in a Bill, respecting the Naturalization of certain persons in Upper Canada. As no allusion is made to the subject, in the later dates we have received, we have yet to learn what the provisions of the Bill are.

It was previously objected to, was admitted by the Returning Officer as a very good vote. With the aid of such means, and considering the nature of the prejudices excited, with unceasing activity, in the minds of that portion of the Electors who can neither read nor write, and who with the best dispositions, are peculiarly liable to imposition, you cannot have been surprised at the majority's success which has been obtained. You have, however, the best grounds for anticipating that those means cannot be permanently successful, and you will naturally direct your attention hereafter to the legal and Constitutional recourse which is provided for setting aside the return of a Representative thus corruptly and illegally obtained. With much esteem and consideration, I have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your most obliged and

Faithful Servant,

J. STUART.

Quebec, August 9.

Regatta.—On Friday the Regatta took place pursuant to advertisement; the day was uncommonly fine, and there was sufficient wind to make the amusement interesting. Shortly after 12 o'clock sixteen or seventeen Pilot Boats started from a boat moored at the mouth of St. Charles to sail round a boat stationed, in the North Channel, off the Isle of Orleans, and return to Quebec; in going down before the wind 10 or 12 of the boats were close together, but in beating to windward a boat belonging to one of the ferrymen at Point Levy, named Barras shot to windward and showing great superiority over her competitors arrived at the goal; it was then, however, that the Boat which arrived second, the property of Honora Chasse', and conducted by a young Pilot of the name of William Amiot, who started her after the line had left, was the most likely have come in first had Barras' Boat rounded the station, instead of which she tacked inside, which gave her more time in streching to windward. This point will probably be contested.

There were afterwards two rowing matches, the first between the Honble. Col. Gore's six oared gig, and Mr. J. S. Campbell's whaleboat, which was won by the latter. The other between Mr. Caldwell's four cared gig, and a gig of the same force belonging to Lieut. Hasdon, of the Transport, Princess Royal, which was closely contested and won in gallant style by Mr. Caldwell's boat. This species of amusement is a novelty here, but from the interest which was yesterday manifested, we are convinced it will bear repetition, and produce a useful emulation amongst the pilots to improve both the construction and rigging of their boats, so as to render them not only safe sea boats, but prime sailors. A number of spectators were on the works which commanded a view of the harbour, and on the wharves of the Lower Town.—Mercury.

The news from Greece is unfavorable.

It is with much pleasure that we notice the arrival of the Steam Boat Niagara.—She entered the harbour on Monday last, and is fitted up in very superior style. An opportunity will now be afforded to travellers of taking passage to Kingston and Prescott, twice in the week. The days of arrival and departure of the Niagara, are not yet announced.

The Hon. Col. Ramsay, Aide-de-Camp to His Excellency Lord Dalhousie, arrived in the Queenston on Tuesday last, and proceeded immediately to Niagara.

We are requested by a friend in the Post Office of this Province, who has accidentally met with a late number of the Colonial Advocate to contradict an assertion made in that paper, that "the New York Albion is now circulated by mail throughout the British Provinces free of Postage by order of the Department at Quebec." This is not the fact. By an arrangement between the General Post Office, and the Proprietor of the Albion, the postage on all the papers sent into Canada, is accounted for periodically to the Post Master General at Quebec, and first Postage is the same in amount, as that paid by other Newspapers.—None but men possessing similar obliquity of mind with the Editor of the Advocate, would imagine that the Deputy Post Master Gen'l. would show partiality to any Journal, or that the Editor of the Albion would be inclined to ask it.

The accounts we have received from the West ward of the City of Montreal, are such as give no very favorable idea of the Freedom of Election in that place. It appears that the zeal of the partizans of Mr. Papineau and Mr. Nelson, has carried them so far, as to oppose force, and violence, to the friends of Mr. M'Gill and Mr. Delisle. Several persons have been assaulted and most shamefully beaten, who intended to vote, or had voted, for those Gentlemen. The Returning Officer himself was collared on the Hustings by one of the bullies of the party, and Mr. Mackenzie, a Magistrate, who was called upon to interpose his authority, for the preservation of the peace, was assailed in the most violent manner. On the examination before the Magistrates, he recognises four of the assailants. The following is collected from the depositions of other parties:—

Mr. F. Griffin, was severely beaten and kicked on the head and face.

Mr. Napier, a Cabinet Maker, in attempting to raise John Meek who had been beaten, was assailed by four or five men, who struck him several blows on the head, which filled him—he was then kicked on the head, face, and body.

William Mackie, packer—was held by one person while another, struck him several blows on the eyes and nose, causing severe bruises, and much loss of blood.

Andrew Watt, Grocer—was thrown into the crowd and beaten by various individuals, unknown to him.

Robert Stephenson, Cabinet maker—saw John Napier, lying on the ground, to all appearance lifeless, and three men kicking him in the face, and different parts of the body—he rescued Napier from their cruelty, and carried him to a neighbouring public House.

Antoine Lafrenderer—Constable—on a Warrant arrested one of the rioters—a rescue was attempted by his prisoner and five other persons—he was severely beaten, and ill treated by different individuals, who tore the Coat off his back, and scattered it about in places.

This is truly a pretty specimen of the manner resorted to, by the party, to ensure the return of Mr. Papineau and Mr. Nelson.

Brockville, August 13, 1827.

The Court of King's Bench commenced its sitting in this Town on Tuesday last. An interesting charge was delivered to the Grand Jury by the Hon. L. P. Sherwood, presiding Judge. He expressed the satisfaction he felt in addressing a Jury of such respectability as the one before him; and adverted to the important duties which devolved on them as Jurors, the nature of which he laid before them in a brief and conspicuous manner.—Brockville Recorder.

Several cases of private interest have been decided during the week, and some convictions have been made of offences against the Laws of the Country; but we are particularly gratified to learn that after a patient investigation by the Grand Jury, no sufficient reason was discovered for finding a bill against the man charged with murder.—Ib.

At the head of the Rideau Lake there is a narrow stripe of land which separates the waters which flow towards Lake Ontario and the Ottawa, the extent of which is about a mile and a half. After having crossed it, another lake is met with, and after this a succession of others of various magnitude towards the North West. At intervals between the land a view is obtained into other waters reaching beyond the human sight—but the information obtained concerning them was that they were the sources of Rivers and lakes in that direction, and that the land on their banks and shores was of the best quality.

The whole of the Route from the Rideau to Kingston is admirably adapted for Steamboat navigation, the locks ought to be made of a size to admit the passage of vessels of that kind of the largest description. If the locks are made of the small size of those on the Lachine Canal, the greater portion of the advantage to be derived from the works here will be lost, and when the difference of expence is only 2 per Cent, it would be economizing in trifles to stop mid way in the career of improvement for so mean a consideration.—Paradoxical as it may appear at first sight, yet, it may be asserted, that there are many situations where a Lock fifty feet wide will not cost so much as one of the width of twenty feet only, as the situation is between two rocks, the extra expence in extending the width of the walls and the backing will exceed the difference in breast and gates to the 50 feet lock. A steam-boat might leave Grenville, and go through this line to Kingston, leaving its various lading, at different depots, and scattering the necessaries and luxuries of life for thousands of miles, and collecting the surplus productions of the industrious inhabitants and return in a week or ten days—when the boat navigation would probably be more expensive than a voyage to Europe and back, and thereby destroy the anticipated returns of the British Government in commencing these extensive improvements. Let those who are opposed to the Locks of the Rideau Canal being sufficient width to admit Steam-Boats only take a trip through the line and view the immense Rivers, Lakes and Country, the hundredth part of which is only just beginning to be known, and they will return of the same opinion.—Montreal Gazette.

From the St. Catharines Former's Journal.

On the Deep Cut, where the greatest number of men are employed, an Hospital has been erected, and a Medical Man employed to attend daily, where the necessary assistance afforded to the afflicted labourer, gratis, at the expense of their employer, Mr. Phelps. But little use, however, has hitherto been made of it; there not having been above six or eight occupants, and only one of them has died, out of 600 men employed on the work.

The progress of the work during the last month has much exceeded any preceding one since its commencement. Nearly 80,000 yards have been excavated from the Deep Cut alone; and there is good reason to anticipate an increase of labour the present month.

The Harbour is now ready to receive any vessels which navigate the Lake, that do not require more than eight feet water. The Steam Boat Canada, Capt. Richardson, was in there last week; and the Schr. Caledonia, took in the first cargo of Wheat at Port Dalhousie, for Montreal.

On Sunday the 11th inst. at 4 o'clock P. M. Divine Service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Hudson, Chaplain to the Forces, in the new building prepared for that purpose at the Deep Cut, by Mr. Oliver Phelps.—Mr. H. is the first Episcopalian Clergyman who has officiated at that place; and we understand he delivered a most eloquent and impressive sermon, to an attentive audience of 4 or 500 people. His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, the President of the Welland Canal Co. Col. Wells, and several other Gentlemen of distinction from a distance, were present on this interesting occasion, and appeared highly gratified with the general good conduct of all concerned. There cannot be a doubt but that much good, particularly among the labouring classes, will result from their regular attendance at the place of Divine Worship, on the Sabbath, and the salutary example of those whom they look to for encouragement in fulfilling all the social and religious duties of life.

Rules and Regulations for the Deep Cut.

1st. As profane language is highly offensive to God, and dishonourable to rational men, it will be wholly discountenanced; and those who cannot bring themselves to dispense with it, cannot be long employed on this work.

2d. As Sabbath-breaking is a great evil, and has an unhappy influence upon society generally, it is to be hoped that all persons engaged on the Deep Cut will feel disposed to reverence the Holy Sabbath; and, as far as circumstances will admit, give their attendance at the House of Worship; and in no case indulge themselves in drinking or tippling at the Groceries or Taverns, on that day especially. Every person in the employ of the Subscriber, let his religious tenets be as they may, shall be entitled to equal privileges, and equal protection.

3d. No quarrelling or wrangling will be admitted on any occasion whatever; and every such offence will lessen the persons engaged in it, in the estimation of their employer—and however the first offence may be disposed of, the second will meet with a final discharge.

4th. It is the particular request of your employer, that every person, as soon as he quits work at night, will put on suitable clothes to preserve health, and at an early hour retire to rest. No GAMBLING will be countenanced; and those who cannot dispense with it must not expect the approbation of their employer, or to stay long on the work.

5th. A comfortable house will soon be erected for the worship of God, and some good ministers of the Gospel will be engaged to preach every Sabbath. A large and suitable house is already provided for the sick, where medical aid, with other necessary attendance, will be administered gratis to the labourers, and at the expense of their employer. All those who comply with the four first articles will be entitled to the privileges of the fifth.

As a further encouragement to the hands employed in completing the Deep Cut, the following advantages are offered as Premiums, to those who may wish to make money themselves, and see this great work speedily completed:—

1st. The Deep Cut will be divided into as many sections as there are machines—probably about fifty; each section will require from twelve to fifteen shovellers, one overseer, and five or six teams.

2d. Shoveller's wages will be $12 per month: but should they average eleven yards per day, (after the earth is well ploughed up,) their wages shall be increased to $13; and an additional dollar per month will be paid for every extra yard of earth they may average per day.

3d. It will be equally to the advantage of each Teamster to render every assistance, by his industry and activity, and by placing his wagon or cart in the best position for the reception of the earth, and by every other assistance he may render: and every one complying with this article, and is faithful in taking care of his team, shall have his wages increased in exact proportion to that of the shovellers who load his wagon or cart.

4th. Every Overseer who shall prove himself deserving the station he holds, by endeavouring to preserve peace and good order, and a uniformity of operation, so as to enable his men to be benefited by his good management, shall have his wages increased in exact proportion to the shovellers.

5th. As very much depends upon the skill and activity of the Overseers of each company, the following PREMIUMS will be paid at the close of the work, among the Overseers.

The Overseer that produces the greatest number of yards, according to the number of days shovelling during the whole job, shall be entitled to and receive a Premium of 100 Dollars.

Second best, $90:—Third do. $80:—Fourth do. $70:—Fifth do. $60:—Sixth do. 50:—Seventh do. $40:—Eighth do. 30:—Ninth do. $20:—Tenth do. $10.

To all to whom these Presents shall come

GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenan Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules. The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

THE ADDRESS TO THE RHONE.

'Rush on, rush on, heaven-tinted Rhone!
Ye deep-blue waves, rush on, rush on!
O'er many a weary league I've past
To gaze upon thy face at last;
And many a league must traverse still,
By spreading main and soaring hill,
Ere aught th' enrapture'd eye shall see
So bright so blue, save Heav'n and thee!

'Child of the Alps! loveliest of all
The streams that down their steep sides fall,
The Heav'n so near thy morning place
Has left its brightness on thy face,
And earth, exulting in her guest,
Gath'ring her noblest and her best
Of Lake, mead, mountain, wood, has thrown
All o'er thy path, majestic Rhone!

'Sweet stream! born amidst th' eternal hills,
The Brightest of a thousand rills:
Heav'n still reflected in thy face,
What course soe'er thy swift waves trace;
And still to th' unfathom'd sea
Speeding, methinks, I read in thee,
And thy blue waters as they roll,
An emblem of the human soul.

'Like thee, a thing whose source is found
Far, far above terrestrial ground;
Like thee, it ne'er should, while on earth,
Lose all the splendour of its birth;
But ever bear upon his breast
Celestial lineaments impress'd
Till mingled with the illimitable sea,
The swelling ocean of Eternity!'

Miscellaneous.

INTERESTING NARRATIVE.

Passing over the Guadarama mountains, seven leagues North of Madrid, on the 13th of October, 1809, accompanied by so we British Officers of the Guards, about 80 British Soldiers, and several Spaniards, the whole convoyed by a strong escort of French Troops, Cavalry and Infantry, I perceived in the centre of the escort a very interesting looking child, apparently seven years old, sitting with a Spanish female in a kind of cart. The appearance of the boy indicated that he was not a native of a southern climate; this, together with a naiveté and playfullness in his manner, induced me to address him. I accordingly spoke to him in Spanish, to which he made a suitable reply; and to my no small surprise, immediately after, he addressed me in English. Having inquired of the female (who appeared to have the boy under her care) where he had learnt to speak the English language, she replied that the boy was born in Scotland, that his father, who had been a sergeant in the 42d Regiment, had served the year before in the British Army, under Sir John Moore, and was killed at the battle in front of Corunna: previous to which, on the retreat of the British Troops from Lugo, the mother, together with the boy, were left behind, sick, in the hospital at Lugo; that she fell a victim to disease, and her child was found in the hospital, in an abandoned, wretched condition, by the French Officer of Cavalry, who at that moment commanded the escort that conveyed us on our way to France. When an opportunity offered, I introduced the subject to the French Commandant, who corroborated the story related to the Spanish Lady, who it turned out was his chere amie. I then mentioned the circumstance to the British Officer, who, as well as myself, conjointly endeavoured to prevail on the French Officer to give up the child to his natural protectors, but all our arguments and entreaties were in vain, for he was so much attached to the boy, that he would not part with him on any account.

At this period, independent of his history, the manners of the child were extremely interesting, and he could speak four different Languages with no small degree of fluency. French he acquired from the French Officer, German, from the Officer's Servant, who happened to be of the Saxon contingent; Spanish, from the Female who could not speak a word of French; and he still retained a knowledge of his native tongue. We journeyed together three weeks longer towards the French frontier, and on our arrival at Tolosa, 30 miles south of Bayonne, the French Commandant received orders to conduct the Spanish prisoners of war to the Fortress of Pampeluna, while the British wounded, who fell into the hands of the enemy in the hospital after the battle of Talavera, were ordered to prosecute their march to France; but (as I was subsequently informed) the road to Pampehna being intercepted by the Spanish Guerillas, it was necessary that the French Officer should restore the communication at the head of a large force. In the mean time he left his establishment at Tolosa, until it would be prudent to order it to rejoin him; but the Spanish Lady (on account of living with a French Officer) dreaded the resentment of her Countrymen so much, that in a few days after the departure of the French Officer, she fled, and deserted the child in her charge.

About a month after this period, Captain, now Major H——, of the 23d Dragoons, whose wounds did not permit him to accompany us from Madrid, in passing through Tolosa on his way to Verdun, accidentally heard that there was an English Boy in an abandoned, forlorn condition in the Town. He immedtately took the child under his protection, and having heard at Orleans that I had received a passport to return to England, and being anxious that I should convey some letters to his family, ventured to prodeed to Paris; here I recognized my little travelling companion, who recollected me immediately. In a few days I prevailed on Captain H—— to allow me to take the Boy to England; and having procured every little protect at the Bureau de Guerre, his manners and history soon obtained permission for him to return home.

Previous to leaving the French metropolis Captain H—— gave me a letter, addressed to His Royal Highness the Duke of York, the founder of the Military Asylum, and another to the Marquis of Huntley, Col. of the Regiment in which the Boy's father had served. On my arrival in London I lost no time in delivering these letters, and soon after was, together with the child, honoured by an interview with His Royal Highness, who was very much pleased with the Boy, took him in his arms, and spoke to him in French and German, to which the little fellow made suitable answers. His Royal Highness was pleased to make every necessary arrangement for the Boy's admission into the Royal Military Asylum, Chelsea, with as little delay as possible. Lord Huntley, on receipt of Captain H.'s letter, immediately wrote to the Colonel of the 1st Battalion, 42d Regt. then quartered at Canterbury, to make inquiry if the child had any friends in Scotland.

In a few days after, it being necessary to procure the Marquis of Huntley's signature to some papers, previous to the Boy's admission into the Asylum, I, together with my little protegé, was proceeding to Richmond House for that purpose, when, on our arrival in Charing Cross, I perceived a soldier, in the Highland uniform, walking leisurely about 100 yards before me; I soon overtook this man, who happened to serve in the 42d Regiment, and having inquired of him if he had been acquainted with Sergeant M'Cullum of his Regt. who was killed the year before at Corunna, he answered, "Sir, I did not know any man of that name who was killed, but will you be so good as to tell me why you have asked me that question." Because, said I, pointing out to him the Boy, that is his child, whom I first found in Spain.—"Oh! sir," said he, rushing over to the Boy, "he is my child; James, don't you know me?" The scene that took place cannot be described. Alternation of joy and grief, exultation and despondency, depicted in the countenance, and evinced in the manner of this soldier, on the sudden discovery of his long-lost child, and on his being simultaneously made acquainted with the death of his wife. I must confess it affected me so much, that, as well to repress my feelings as to avoid the crowd that collected round us in the street, I was obliged to retire into the next shop that presented itself. In a short time we proceeded together to Richmond House, where after presenting my protege to Lord Huntley, I related to his Lordship the discovery I had just made, and the extraordinary circumstance attending it. On the soldier being brought forward, he delivered a letter to Lord Huntley from Col. Sterling, then commanding the 1st battalion, 42 Regiment at Canterbury, which stated, that he was happy to inform his Lordship, that the man alluded to in his Lordship's letter, relative to an orphan boy of the Regiment, was severely wounded at Corunna, but not killed, and was the bearer of his letter, and he had sent the man to town without making him acquainted with the object of his journey.

It then appeared that this soldier was in the act of proceeding to Richmond House with this letter to Lord Huntley, when I accidentally fell in with him. A few days after the boy was admitted into the Royal Military Asylum, where he now is. We parted from each other with mutual regret; he wept so bitterly that his tears were nearly contagious.

In justice to Lord Huntley, I must add, that his Lordship, in a very handsome manner, offered to remunerate me for the expenses I had incurred in clothing and bringing the boy to England, which I begged leave to decline, stating, that whatever little merit might be ascribed to me for taking care of the boy, would in my opinion be done away with by accepting any pecuniary recompense; I therefore hoped his Lordship would excuse my receiving any. Lord Huntley was then pleased to say, it was evident, from the appearance of the boy that I had taken every possible care of him, and added, that he would be happy at any time to do any thing in his power to forward my promotion.

A paper printed at Macon, Georgia says a spot of earth, about an acre in extent, near the Court House in Lowndes County, suddenly gave way not long since and sunk to the depth of a hundred feet! The place is now covered with water, the trees standing as they grew—the tallest pine being 20 or 30 feet below the level of the surrounding country. Small ponds like this, are frequently met with in the lower parts of the state, and are there called Live Sinks—produced probably, by the action of the subterraneous streams.

Summary.

On Friday, His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex gave a splendid dejune at Kensington Palace to Her Majesty, the Queen of Wirtemberg and a numerous assemblage of distinguished personages.

A very extraordinary feat of horsemanship was accomplished by a Gentleman last week. At six o'clock, on the morning of Thursday, he left Dublin, mounted on a small gelding, accompanied with the day coach for Limerick, and arrived at Nenagh at six o'clock the same evening, having kept the vehicle in view all the time, entered the Town with it, and riding only the one horse. There was a wager of one hundred guineas that he would not bring the horse alive in Nenagh. The animal is now apparently quite as well as ever, after a ride of 94 to 95 English miles.

It is in contemplation to add the house at present occupied by Sir John Beckett, the late Judge-Avocate-General, to the Colonial Office, considerable inconvenience having arisen in consequence of the inadequacy of the size of the Colonial Office. When the contemplated arrangement is completed, the Ecclesiastical and Law Offices attached to the Colonial Department, which have now separate Offices in different parts of the Town, will have rooms appropriated for them in the Colonial Office.

Address to the Dowager Queen of Wirtemberg.—A Court of Common Council was convened on Wednesday, by the Lord Mayor, for the purpose of preparing an Address to Her Majesty the Dowager Queen of Wirtemberg, on the happy occasion of her revisiting her native land. As soon as the requisition had been read, Alderman Birch rose to move the address. It was, he said, somewhat singular that he should have been the mover of an Address, 30 years back, congratulating Her Majesty on her marriage with the Prince, afterwards King of Wirtemberg. He concluded by moving the appointment of a Committee to prepare an Address of Congratulation.—Mr. S. Dixon seconded the motion. Alderman Birch had informed the Court that he was the mover of the Address he alluded to, and stated it as a singularity, that after a lapse of thirty years he had to perform the same pleasing duty. But it was somewhat more singular, that the address should have the same person to second it: for he (Mr. Dixon) had on the former occasion seconded the motion for the worthy Alderman's Address.

The Rose, Captain Marquis, arrived in the River from Bengal, has brought an extraordinary fine piece of ordnance taken at Bhurtpore weighing 17 tons, and measuring 17 feet long. This Trophy, we understand, is to be placed in St. James's Park.

This morning was married, at St. George's Church, by the Dean of Carlisle, Lady Emma Lascelles, third daughter of the Earl and Countess of Harewood, to Edward Berkely Portman, Esq. Member for Dorsetshire.

According to the Courier, Parliament would not be prorogued till the 2d of July, when the ceremony would be performed by the King in person.

A trial of great importance to the West India Colonies had just taken place in London. A female slave was brought to England in 1823, from Antigua, with her mistress, and afterwards returned to that Island. She was, two years afterwards, claimed on the part of the Crown, as a manumitted slave, it being contended that the fact of her having once been in England, made her forever free, and that her return to Antigua did not imply her return to slavery. Lord Stowell would shortly give judgment in the case.

A man had been drowned in the works of the Thames Tunnel by the upsetting of a boat in which were several persons who were going down to inspect them. The incident had created considerable sensation in London.

A fire broke out in the Opera House on the 26th, which destroyed the property room with its contents and the flooring of the Concert room. The fire was occasioned by a patent lamp being placed under a shelf.

Liverpool Corn Market.—The import of wheat coastwise and from Ireland has not been great. We have had an arrival from Canada of 1950 quarters, which swells our last week's arrivals of that article for consumption. Flour is also abundant; but of other free articles it is trivial. The introduction of the corn bill, with a trifling modification, has occasioned the trade, since this day week, to be excessively dull, and the high prices obtained for wheat and oats last Tuesday have been daily receding; and at this day's market, which was tolerably well attended, no sales of wheat could be effected, unless at a reduction of about 6d to 9d per bushel under our last currency; nor of oats, but at 1 to 2d. American Flour in bond, 23s. to 27s. per bbl. of 196 lbs. net.

Corn Exchange, London, June 27.—We have not the least demand for any description of Grain, although lower prices would have been accepted.—From the lightness of the market, the quotations of Monday must be continued.

Sheffield.—In most of the hardware branches considerable activity is observable, and an extraordinary demand in the pen and pocket line, but little improvement in prices. As long as ever the system of manufacturing spurious articles continues, so long will prices continue low. The system, however, cannot long hold; the workmen of Sheffield possess as much ingenuity and information as any body of mechanics in the United Kingdom, and they will, it is to be hoped, defeat those unprincipled monopolists, who have thrust their cobweb articles into the market.

The new novel of Sir Walter Scott, entitled the Chronicles of the Canongate, is in the press and will appear in London early in October. About the same time, another work will be issued from the same hands, which is to be called Tales of a Grandfather, being a series of stories from history of Scotland, designed for the author's grandson.

The above Enactments commence and take effect from and after the 5th July 1827.

The following come into immediate operation :—

Newspapers for His Majesty's Colonies and Places beyond Seas.—Every such Newspaper, or other printed Paper liable to the Stamp Duty, and for the conveyance of which any duty of Postage is chargeable, to be put into the Post Office of the Town or Place in Great Britain or Ireland, in or at which such Newspaper shall be published on any day, within seven days, next after the day on which the same shall be published, the day of publication to be ascertained by the date of such Paper, and, in case any such Paper be put into any Post Office, after the expiration of such seven days, such Paper to be charged as a single Letter.

N. B. This Clause alters the regulation according to which Newspapers to the Colonies, &c. are required to be put into the Post on the day of publication.

Merchants Accounts, &c.—All Merchants Accounts, Bills of Exchange, Stamped Receipts, Invoices, Bills of Lading, and Proceedings at Law, written on one and the same piece of paper with a Letter, to be charged as a single Letter only ; and any sheet of Paper on which Letters to several and distinct persons be written, shall not be charged with a higher rate of Postage, in Great Britain or Ireland, than if one Letter only were written upon such sheet of Paper.

Letters Addressed to Officers of the Army, Navy, &c.—Letters Addressed to any Commissioned Officer of His Army, Navy, or Ordnance, at any place where such Officer shall have been employed on actual Service, and who, before the delivery thereof, shall have removed from such place, in the execution of his duty, not to be charged with any additional Postage over and above the rate of Postage that would be payable, if delivered at the place to which they were originally directed.

By Command.

F. FREELING,
Secretary.

The Ship Euphrates arrived last evening from Liverpool, bringing dates from London, to 28th, and Liverpool to 29th June, inclusive.

London, June, 26.

In the House of Lords last evening, the Corn Average bill was read a third time and passed, an amendment having been introduced by the motion of Lord Goderich, which we think will put the averages on an unexceptionable footing. The places where the averages are to be taken are to be named by the King in Council, so that not only may those markets be chosen where the greatest sales are effected, but a facility will be afforded for preventing Speculators from creating false averages by nominal bargains.

The bonded Corn Importation Bill will apparently pass the Lords—it has been read a second time without a division, and with the support of the Duke of Wellington and Earl Grey, though it was opposed by the Agriculturists, the Earls Malmesbury and Stanhope.

The Speeches of the Duke of Wellington and Earl Grey, were principally taken up with the course they were pursuing.

The Session of Parliament is virtually concluded, the House of Commons having last night adjourned to Friday, by which day it is calculated that the Lords will have got through the remainder of their business, and on Saturday the two Houses will be prorogued, it is supposed by Commission.

From the Supplement to the Albion, New York, 20th August.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

WAREHOUSED CORN BILL.

On the motion that this Bill be read a third time,

Earl MALMESBURY expressed his dissent both to its principle and details, satisfied, as he was, that the measure would be attended with ruinous consequences.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE had a firm conviction that ruinous consequences would follow its rejection, in case the harvest, which undoubtedly promised well at present, should not prove as abundant as we had reason to expect. In that case, the Country would be thrown into a state of suffering and alarm, in which the consumer and importer would equally participate. The Noble Marquis concluded, by declaring his conviction, that if the ensuing harvest proved to be as productive as it promised, there would not be the Smallest portion of this grain introduced into the Market.

The Marquis of SALISBURY renewed his objections to the Bill. Instead of 600,000 quarters of grain being introduced, a million of quarters, he had no doubt would be imported. The real motive of Ministers was to increase the revenue.

Earl STANHOPE characterised the Bill as an Act of public plunder; and, entertaining this opinion, he should enter his protest on the Journals of the House.

Lord REDESDALE said, the Bill was an iniquitous and unjust measure; and he declared his intention of recording that opinion on the Journals of the House, in order that it might be seen hereafter that the advocates of the measure had been warned against the consequences of it.

After a few words from Lord Carberry and Lord Lansdowne, the Bill was read a third time and passed.—Adjourned.

Friday, June 29.

The Customs Bill was read a third time and passed.—Adjourned.

Saturday, June 30.

A message from the Commons brought up the Corn Bill, the averages' Bill, and some private Bills, and the amendments were agreed to. Their Lordships then adjourned to Monday next, when Parliament will be prorogued by commission, at two o'clock.

House of Commons, June 29.

ROBERT GOURLAY.

Mr. HUME presented a petition from Robt. Gourlay, complaining of his continued confinement, for three years and a half, without even knowing who was his accuser.

Mr. BROUGHAM said the Police was the accuser; it was utterly false, if declared in print or otherwise, that he made a charge against the poor unfortunate man. As to the behaviour towards the petitioner, he had only been treated as the other fourteen millions of His Majesty's subjects would have been treated, if they had acted in a similar way. He might get out, if he gave the requisite sureties; but there were threats, dreadful threats, not against him or the Secretary of State, but against the Judge. That he was in an extraordinary state of mind medical men declared. When attempting to make the attack on him, this unfortunate man was declaring in the lobby, "let the dead bury the dead;" and "is not a living man better than a dead Missionary?" Was this a sane man? He wrote a letter to the Speaker, declaring he could prove that a loyal man might take the King by the Nose—for if the King tumbled into a well, he would be justified in pulling the said King out by the nose, or any other part of the body he could catch hold of—(loud laughter.) The Honble. Member complained that certain filthy publications had accused him of cowardice on account of this affair; and in vile and popular poetry he also understood that like charges were made, and, he was sorry to add, by respectable scribblers; but he hoped such "miscreants" would be disappointed in their objects, and get no preferment from this Government —(hear.)—As to Mr. Gourlay, if the Honble. Member were convinced of his sanity, why did he not become surety—(a laugh.)

Mr. H. GURNEY thought Mr. Gourlay entitled to the consideration of the House.

Mr. PERCIVAL thought the Honourable Member for Montrose would be acting more in mercy to Mr. Gourlay if he refrained from presenting similar petitions.

Mr. HUME said, that the facts of the petitioner's case, had been entirely lost sight of. They were not to look at what had been his state three years ago, but at the state in which he now was. He would only add, that he would give his security for the petitioner, but that the petitioner had refused to accept it, until it was decided why he was detained in confinement.

Mr. BROUGHAM said, that he wished it to be distinctly understood that it was his wish that the petitioner should be set at liberty.

The petition was then ordered to be printed.

The Lords amendments to the warehoused Corn Bill, and to the corn averages' Bill, were agreed to.—Adjourned at half-past eleven o'clock till Monday.

It will be seen from our Parliamentary report that the bonded Corn Bill, and also the Average Bill, have passed the House of Lords. The latter, in its last reading, had the good fortune to have its efficacy restored to it. The averages are to be taken every six weeks.

LATEST NEWS.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

The Lord Chancellor prorogued both Houses of Parliament on the 2d of July, with the following speech :—

"My Lords and Gentlemen—We are commanded by His Majesty to express to you the satisfaction which His Majesty feels in being enabled, by the state of the public business, to release you from further attendance in Parliament.

"His Majesty directs us to inform you, that he continues to receive from all foreign powers, assurances of their earnest desire to cultivate relations of friendship with His Majesty; and that His Majesty has every reason to believe that the disposition of His Majesty's communications with his allies, are unceasingly directed to the termination of existing hostilities, and to the maintenance of general peace.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons—His Majesty commands us to thank you for the supplies which you have granted for the services of the present year, and to assure you, that His Majesty has given directions for a careful revision of the financial state of the country, with a view to such reduction in the expenditure which may be found consistent with the necessary commands of the public service, and with the permanent interests, good faith and honor of the nation.

"My Lords and Gentlemen—His Majesty is confident that you participate with His Majesty in the pleasure which His Majesty derives from the indications of a gradual revival of employment in the manufacturing districts.

"His Majesty trusts, that although your deliberations upon the Corn Laws have not led, during the present Session, to a permanent settlement of that important question, the consideration of it will be resumed by you early in the ensuing Session—and that such an arrangement of it may finally be adopted as shall satisfy the reasonable wishes, and reconcile the substantial interests of all classes of His Majesty's Subjects."

Lord Wm. Bentinck is to go out to India. The Marquis of Anglesea is appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and was to assume the Vice Royal Government in three months.

The Duke of Wellington arrived in Dublin on the 8th, on a visit to his brother, the Marquis of Wellesley.

Lord Liverpool has had a dangerous attack of cramp in both hands, attended with general convulsions.

The Corn Bills have received the Royal Assent.

Count Ofalia was introduced to the King of England on the 30th of June, as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary on a special mission from the King of Spain.

Official returns of the Revenue for the year ending the 5th of July, say that there was a surplus on the last quarter, over the corresponding quarter of the last year, amounting to £175,172. The decrease on the entire year is £1,170,856, but there was a slow and gradual improvement. The falling off has taken place in the excise, stamps and Post Office. The customs experienced an increase of £209,593, and the assessed taxes were more productive.

After much discussion and a warm contest, the Directors of the Bank of England, decided on the 5th July, to discount, in future, approved bills not having more than ninety-five days to run at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum. The change was so unexpected to the Bankers and monied men generally, that many actually repaired to the Discount Office to get ocular demonstration of its truth. The immediate effect of the measure was to advance consols from 86 ¾ to 88.

It is expected that the whole of the Ministerial arrangements, in the completion of which some delay occurred during the late parliamentary conflict, will now be made in the course of a few days. Mr. Canning, it is reported, will return to the Foreign Office, retaining, however, the dignity and privileges of Premier. The Duke of Portland is thought likely to succeed Mr. Canning's present situation; and the Marquis of Lansdown takes the Home Department. It is not improbable, also, that Lord Holland may take some Office. No change will be made in the Government of Ireland before Christmas.—Times.

Instructions have been given by Mr. Canning to his Secretary, Mr. Planta, and by that Gentleman repeated to all the Secretaries and Clerks of the Treasury, that they shall immediately prepare returns of every branch of the expenditure of the country, and lay them, with all possible speed, before the Lords of His Majesty's Treasury, in order that they may determine upon the reforms and retrenchments of which the public service may be susceptible. It is understood, that, when these shall be completed, orders will be given for the preparation of certain papers, with a view to affording increased facilities to the manufacturing interest.—

The act of Parliament limiting the number of passengers that a vessel was to carry to places a broad, was repealed on the 28th of last month. [June.]—There is now no limitation or restriction of any kind, neither is a surgeon now required to be in such vessels in any circumstances.

MARKETS.

LIVERPOOL, July 9.

The imports during the week have been very small; but as the holders of the Foreign Corn anticipate being enabled to pay the duties early in the ensuing week, the market has been abundantly supplied with samples of all descriptions.

Liverpool, Tuesday evening, 10th July.—There was a good attendance of both town and country, dealers at this day's market, who bought pretty freely of the foreign Wheat, and also of the better qualities of Irish at a reduction of 2d per bushel. Oats were again exceedingly dull of sale, and we reduce our quotations 1d per bushel. Barly has declined 6d per bushel.

Liverpool, 18th July, 1827.

In ashes there has been a large business, the sales being estimated at upwards of 2000 bbls. of all kinds, and prices have greatly advanced 27s. to 27s. 6d. for U. S. and Canada, both Pot and Pearl—and for New 27s 6d a 28s per cwt—at the same time considerable confidence is exhibited.

London Markets, July 10.

Corn Exchange, Mark Lane—Two o'clock.—Since this day week the supply from the coast of Flour and Wheat has been tolerable for the time of year, but short of other grain. In Flour there is no variation in price.

Belfast, Wednesday, July 11.

Grain.—There is a fair supply of Wheat, considering the advanced period of the season, and prices have reduced 6d on our last quotations, being at 18s to 19s 6d for White; and Red at 12s 9d to 12s 9d per cwt. Flour remains steady.

Ashes.—An advance of about 1s has taken place, and there is an appearance of a further improvement.

Advantage to Canada by means of the United States.—In last week's Chronicle was noticed the Bill now before the House, and admitting United States goods, passing through Canada, into Great Britain at the low plantation duty; we will instance Barrel Staves, not above 36 inches long, nor above 1¼ inch thick; at present, if from the Baltic, they pay £11 10s. if from the United States, one third, or £8 14s. 8d. but if the produce of and direct from Canada, only 6s. 8d. per M. Now, this Bill says that, after 5th July, all Staves from foreign countries in America or from the Islands of the Baltic, shall pay the high foreign duty; but the same Bill provides that all Staves, &c. "imported inland or by inland navigation, into British possessions in America," and thence imported into Great Britain, shall be subject only to the B. P. duties; consequently after the 5th July next, few Staves will be imported from the United States into England; but as they will pay only (barrel) 6s. 8d. after 5th July if through Canada, instead of 8s. 8d. if direct from the United States, they will all be brought of course by way of Canada. It seem to be the policy of Govt. to encourage the trade of Canada. If not a benefit to Canada, the measure will have a tendency at least to encourage British Shipping.—Liverpool Chronicle, 30 June.

Restoration of Seizures.—After the 5th of July next, the Lords of the Treasury will be empowered to restore even after condemnation, any seizures made in Great Britain or the British possessions abroad.

Foreign Intelligence.

The French squadron were about leaving Toulon for Algiers.

GREEKS AND TURKS.—The Globe of the 30th says, An express has reached the city from Paris, confirming the report of the French papers relative to the armament of European Powers against Turkey; it is said to be on the most extensive scale. [Doubtful.]

A letter from Vienna, under the date of June 18th, announces the rumor of a naval victory obtained by Lord Cochrane, (which reached the city the other day via Eastpost) in follows:

"In haste I communicate the news just received from Trieste, that Lord Cochrane had obtained great advantage over the Turkish fleet. The news was brought by the last packet from Corfu in four days to Trieste."

But a paragraph from Trieste, also dated on the 18th, more than private, states from Corfu to the 2d of June, do not say a word of the reported victory of Lord Cochrane, whose arrival upon the west coast of the Morea, is, however, again asserted. The accounts from Corfu make no mention of any recent events before Athens.

General Church, at the head of the Moreotes, and other Greeks who have followed his standard, defends Attica on the east, and his Semeliotes alone occupy the wood of Olives.

Under the Paris head of June 24, it is said, accounts have reached Trieste from Syra, dated May 23d, announcing that General Church had been enabled to collect four thousand men in the Piræus and entrench himself; he had also sent five thousand men to the defiles, to intercept the supplies of provisions which came to the Turks from Negropont. Lord Cochrane was ready at Poros, for a prize, with the Hellas frigate, and other vessels. The above boat had captured five Turkish vessels, laden with provisions and ammunition, and sunk a corvette.

AFFAIRS OF THE GREEKS.

According to the London Globe of the 9th, the Treaty of the Great European Powers for the protection of the Greeks has been signed in England. Three British ships of the line from the Tagus had probably sailed for the Dardanelles, under Admiral Beauclerc.

The Sun of the 10th says, "It is understood that a Treaty between this country, France, and Russia, having for its object the pacification of Greece, has been signed. The stipulations of the Treaty will not be made known till the ratifications have been exchanged.

In the Courier of the same date we find it asserted on the authority of the Paris papers that the Porte has refused the intervention of the European powers, and summoned all the Mussulmen to arms. The Greek National Assembly having terminated its labours, dissolved itself at Trezene on the 17th of May; and the seat of government was transferred to Napoli di Romania.

The Reis Effendi, in refusing to submit to the propositions of the European powers, referred them to the Resolutions of the Congress of Verona, in which it was declared that they would not interfere in the affairs of Greece.

Accounts from Cape Coast Castle have been received to the end of March. A very interesting piece of intelligence had reached that settlement, and which had created some sensation.—Several white slaves, it is ascertained, are at Coomassie, the capital of the Ashantees. His Excellency the Governor, Sir N. Campbell, immediately on hearing of the fact, had determined on sending a deputation to the capital, to negociate their release; but at the date of these letters, none of the Fantees would undertake the mission, and no white man are allowed to enter the territory of his majesty of Ashantee.

Foreign Grain.—The merchants connected with the north of Europe express satisfaction rather than otherwise at the failure of the Corn Bill, because they seem to have adopted the belief that the stock of grain in the country is not enough to last over the harvest, and that the rise in price will be so considerable, that they will obtain the admission of foreign grain on better terms than those proposed by the Bill.

PORTUGAL.

The affairs of this country still remain in an unsettled condition. The shameful and undisguised perfidy of the Spanish government in encouraging military desertion from the Constitutional army, allowing the Apostulicals to organize petty incursions, and in propagating alarming reports, still continue to agitate the frontiers of Spain and Portugal. Why Ferdinand is permitted to violate all his promises with impunity, and to set the law of nations at defiance, we do not profess to understand. It is not generally admitted that, were in not for the French troops, the King of Spain would have enough to do at home, without meddling with the affairs of his neighbors.

Lower Canada.

GENERAL ELECTION.

The Election for the UPPER TOWN of QUEBEC closed yesterday in the return of Messrs. VALLIERES and ANDREW STUART. The state of the Poll, at the final close was :

Vallieres,	Stuart,	Bertholot.
738	702	563

Yesterday at three o'clock the successful Candidates were chaired through the Upper and Lower Town with the customary honors. The crowd was immense, and the cheering hearty and unanimous. Flags were displayed at intervals through every street; and in the Lower Town, small pieces of ordnance and musquetry were discharged with great good will. The most respectable portion of gentlemen on horseback accompanied the carriage in which were seated the MEMBERS; nor was there wanting a large co-ps of citizens on foot wearing the colors of the successful Candidates. Every thing passed off without tumult, and on the whole the Upper Town has reason to be proud of the result in every sense.

Yesterday morning, about half past nine o'clock the election for the West Ward of this city terminated in favour of Messrs. Papineau and Nelson, by the withdrawal of Messrs. M'Gill and Delisle.

NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY OF MONTREAL.

It is announced to the public, that there has been established in this city, a Society to promote the study of NATURAL HISTORY in general, and that of these Provinces in particular. The advantages that would arise from a perfect acquaintance with the natural productions of the country being sufficiently obvious, it may suffice to mention, that on the 15th of May last, a number of gentlemen, impressed with the importance of the object, and after mature consideration of the means by which it might be attained, resolved to form themselves in a Society. The purpose to which the Society was to direct its views were, to investigate the great variety of productions which our country exhibits in every department of Natural History; to collect them as far as practicable into one point; and finally to afford a centre, to which might be directed those observations and enquiries that would otherwise (become isolated) be of little utility, and where might be deposited those objects that from the want of such accommodations have been heretofore disregarded and useless.—Canadian Courant.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1827.

We have dates from England to 12th July.—A Summary of the most important articles brought by the papers will be found in our columns this day. We are as yet without any further information respecting the manner in which certain Colonial matters have been disposed of. It will be seen that Parliament was prorouged on 2d of July by Commission.

On Tuesday last the Coroner, Mr. Hamilton, was called upon to view the body of Oliver Turlington, in the Township of Whitby, who came to his death, by blows inflicted upon him by Hiram Loree, in a scuffle which took place between the parties, while at work in a f[illegible]d, on the Farm of Mr. Lyndes. They were both young Lads, Turlington only 16, and Loree 17 years of age. The scuffle it appears commenced on the part of the latter, at first in sport, unfortunately however it led to a serious issue. A Verdict of "wilful murder" was returned by the Coroners Jury, and Loree is now in Gaol, to await his trial at the ensuing Assizes for this District.

A singular phenomenon was observed by the inhabitants of York on Tuesday night last. About nine o'clock, a thin mist or vapour, was seen taking its rise from the Lake to the East of the Town, extending itself from horizon to horizon, observing a mean apparent breadth of about fifteen feet, forming a belt of pale white color, across the expanse of the Heavens. The night air was cool and bracing, with a clear atmosphere, and the new moon setting in the South of a blood red color, together with the deep blue of the sky, studded with stars, produced a most sublime and beautiful appearance. This evening was equally cool and favourable for a considerable length of time, the vapor gradually dispersing, and dosting off, into the surrounding atmosphere, into thin fleecy clouds.

The Lord Bishop, arrived on Thursday morning, after visiting the several stations in his Diocese, in the Western part of the Province. His Lordship, we understand, holds an Ordination in the Church to-morrow.

We last week complied with the request of a friend in the Post Office of this Province, by contradicting the assertion of the Colonial Advocate, that the Albion was circulated by order of the Department at Quebec, throughout these Provinces, free of postage. The following letter from the Gentleman in charge of the Department, during the absence of the D'y Post Master General Mr. Sutherland, will be sufficient to show that the Advocate in this instance, as well as in some others which we have pointed out on former occasions, has overstepped the bounds of truth.

GENERAL POST OFFICE,
Quebec, 15th August 1827.

"SIR —I observe in your paper of the 13th instant, an article extracted from the York (U. C.) Colonial Advocate, stating that the New-York Albion is now circulated by Mail throughout the British Provinces, free of postage, by order of the Department at Quebec.

What the object of the Colonial Advocate Editor could be in inducing to the public a declaration so improbable in itself, and for which he could have had no authority worthy of credit, I shall not enquire ; any time is inquiring ; but I consider it my duty in the absence of the Deputy Post Master General, distinctly to say that there is no foundation whatever for the assertion, the postage does upon the Albion being still secured to this department by the proprietor of that paper."

I have the honor to be Sir,
Your very obedient servant,
T. A. STAYNER,
Acting D. P. M. G.

To Mr. Nelson.

And yet the Advocate, has the hardihood in face of such a Letter as this, to say, in his last number, that he "would disdain to prop any cause, by asserting arrant falsehood in its defence."

The Elections in Lower Canada, with the exception of Gaspe, have all terminated. By Proclamation of His Excellency the Governor General Parliament is prorogued to 5th of October next.

We last week published the Rules and Regulations, adopted by Mr. Phelps the Contractor, at the Deep Cut, and in this number will be found a communication from Mr. Phelps intended to do away the erroneous impression which has been made with respect to the sickness which has been stated to exist among the labourers employed on the work. Whatever advantages were presented to laborers and others to seek employment on the Welland Canal, the statements made by the Colonial Advocate were enough to deter any man from embracing them. The statements which represented an "alarming mortality at the Deep Cut"—so alarming indeed that 30 men were said to have died in one day, turns out like many other statements of the Advocate to have no foundation whatever in truth. It appears that only three men, out of 800 have died since commencing operations this spring. Attempts such as those made by the Advocate, to prejudice a great public work, and throw obstacles and difficulties in the way of the Contractor, will meet with the reprobation of every honest man, who feels an interest in the improvement of the Country, and the welfare of the individual who is employed in carrying any such improvement into execution. The Advocate has indeed given a scrap of a Letter addressed to him, confirming these statements of his, but at the same time tells his readers significantly enough, that before they believe what the Letter says, they must wait, till he pays a "visit to the line during next week, when we shall be able to judge for ourselves." The Season is now far advanced, and however favorable the result of this important visit may be to the Contractor, there can be no doubt that, the progress of the work under his management must have been in some degree retarded, in consequence of the statements of that great friend in public improvement—the Colonial Advocate.

Communication.

For the U.-E.-Loyalist.

An old maxim is, buy the truth and sell it not, but I, had rather Editors would occasionally sell a little truth, than to be too fond of publishing falsehoods for altho' truth may not be so costly it is of more value.

It has been the endeavour of many to send forth a general clamour that the work at the Deep Cut, was unskilfully managed, and that it never went on so tardily, this should be overlooked as it might have been a sin of ignorance. But to proclaim from Dan to Barsheba that we were dying off by scores both men and cattle, needs a little truth to remove that unfavorable impression that has gone abroad, the truth is, it was never more healthy in any place—and those reports are the last resort of the disappointed enemies of the Welland Canal, who never will rest satisfied, with any improvement except their names are enroll'd at its head. The wage number of Labourers on the Deep Cut is about Eight Hundred, out of which only three persons have died since the first of May last, as can be substantiated from the time books of the Deep Cut, in which every persons name is enrolled that has done a days work—and altho' a large house has been provided for an hospital where all medical aid, together with other necessary attendance, that the nature of the case might require gratis, still there has not been a solitary instance of a person being brought to it.

Editors who will favor me with the above insertion and one of their papers containing a bill of publishing, shall shortly receive the amount of the same.

OLIVER PHELPS,
Contractor for the Deep Cut.

From the St. Catharines Farmer's Journal.

FALSEHOOD EXPOSED.

Mackenzie, of the York Advocate, with his usual regard for truth and decency, comes out in his last, with a small paragraph headed "Dreadful Mortality at the Deep Cut," containing information, which he pretends he received from a gentleman on his side of the lake, to this effect—that "sickness prevailed on the canal to that extent, that 30 persons had died in a day, and the panick was so great among the labourers on that account, that more than 200 had suddenly quit the work and gone off."

We take upon us unhesitatingly to assert, that this statement is a gross misrepresentation, a sheer fabrication, utterly destitute of the least foundation in truth; and, further, we have no doubt, it has been shot blazoned forth to the world with no other view than to injure the credit of those engaged, and retard the operations on the canal.

The plain truth is—there has been only one death among the labourers at the Deep Cut, this season, and but very few instances of serious illness have occurred on any part of the canal. So far from their being, or having lately been, any alarming or prevailing epidemic, it has been, on the contrary, an unusual time of health here; and, in fact, no part of Upper Canada is more healthy than the country bordering the greater part of this section of the Welland Canal, at the present time. The workmen now engaged receive liberal wages and prompt pay; are generally in good health and spirits, and appear to be satisfied and contented with their situations. More are still wanted, to whom good encouragement will be given; and we heartily desire that every man disposed to engage on the work, will not listen to the idle tales or malicious insinuations of the enemies of this splendid undertaking, but will come and examine impartially for themselves.

The Frontenac.—Yesterday the old Frontenac, under the care of R. Hamilton, Esq. left Kingston for Niagara, where, we understand, she is to be broken up. Mr. Hamilton is preparing materials for a new boat of about 800 tons.

John Gleeson, one of the persons who was concerned in the late riot, was found dead in the woods, near the Canal on Saturday last.

We are informed that a Soldier of the 15th Regt. was accidentally drowned last week.

Drowned, at Maryburgh, in Mr. Philip Clapp's mill-pond, on Tuesday the 10th July, Miss Mary Simmerman, aged 19 years 9 months, and 16 days, eldest daughter of John and Elizabeth Simmerman.—U. C. Herald.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2*s*. 6*d*.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form. Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2*s*. 6*d*.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

Poetry.

THE HOUR OF BLISS.

'Tis sweet to sit in the twilight hour
With the friend beloved—and gaze on high
At the countless stars—the bright, bright worlds
That tell us of Immortality!

'Tis sweet to wander at deep midnight
'Neath the summer moon, on some lone shore;—
To look on the silver-crested wave,
And talk of days that return no more

'Tis sweet to roam through the woodland glen
With those who gladden our earthly lot—
To gather wild flowers—and breathe the words,
"Forget me not,—O, forget me not!"

But sweeter and dearer—dearer far,
To kneel in the hour of prayer
With the chosen One, when each thought is hushed
That reminds us of a world of care!

To whisper together words of praise—
The tears of a contrite heart to shed—
To call down with true and tender zeal
Heaven's blessings on each other's head.

'Tis then that the soul may comprehend
The joys of a purer world than this—
'Tis then that we love as Spirits love—
—O that is the one,—one hour of bliss!

Miscellaneous.

THE PILGRIM.

The fire in Madame St. Orval's parlour threw a red light on her youthful children, who were seated around it, enjoying the sports of Christmas eve, so congenial to the youthful breast, when a few raps at the street door as if with a good stout stick, silenced and not a little alarmed the cheerful group. The maid servant presently appeared, and announced, that a "man desired to know if he could be accommodated with a bed, for charity's sake, that night." Now the night was bleak and stormy, and certainly appeared more so, contrasted with the fire and the snug warm room. "Show him in," said madame, and in two minutes, a tall handsome youth in pilgrim's attire, made one at the pleasant fireside; he apologized in pure and elegant French, for the intrusion, but said that he was on a pilgrimage to our Lady of Loretta, and could not proceed on such a night. Madame St. Orval requested him to refrain from apologies, and said she was very happy to have it in her power to offer him shelter, and then quitted the room to give a few necessary orders. Upon her return she found the stranger in high favour with all her family; the little ones requested him to sing, but he politely declined this request, and they were content with hearing him recount such a set of droll stories, that Madame St. Orval and her eldest daughter, Emilie, had nearly expired with laughter.

After the departure of the children, the conversation took a literary turn, and the Ladies were astonished at the learning, pure taste, elegant discrimination, and amiable sentiments of the Pilgrim. He was a man of youthful romance, and knightly gallantry, were observable in his discourse, while the melody and beautiful inflexions of his voice, like a stream of pure and subtle music, ravished the heart. Reader! didst thou ever feel the fascinations of a voice? Then hast thou been unable to the enchantment of that? If so, thou wilt agree with me, that the converse of one who has a voice so fraught with music, is above all personal beauty. The pilgrim, in the course of the evening, mentioned, as his acquaintances, the names of many Parisian Nobles, with most of whom he found Madame St. Orval had once been acquainted, which finally obliged her to declare to him her present circumstances; briefly, she had moved in the first metropolitan circles, her husband dying greatly involved, had obliged her to retire from Paris, to the seclusion and comparative poverty in which her guest beheld her. The youth was too humane to press the subject, and changing it as soon as possible, the happy coterie sat conversing till the tolling of a distant convent bell, for the midnight service, warned them that Christmas Eve was no more.

There is in this world a description of persons whom we may know for years, and yet never become acquainted with; and there is a species of angel beings with whom the converse of half an hour is sufficient to make us allies forever! and thus it was with the pilgrim, his hostess and her fair daughter. Which of the trio experienced the greatest regret in parting for the night, it is impossible to determine; yet it may suffice to declare that poor Emilie could not close her eyes, from the confusion that her ideas were in; the face, the figure, the garb, the conversation, and above all, the delicious voice of the pilgrim, glanced constantly and confusedly on her mind, like so many bright and fluctuant colours; her room joined that which was appropriated to the pilgrim, and she heard him pace up and down with hasty steps, apparently as little inclined to rest as herself. After a while he began to sing in a low tone, a plaintive but well known romance, and then suddenly changing to a new and exquisite air, chanted in a higher voice, the following stanzas:—

Breaking! breaking! Day, thou'rt breaking,
And I have not slumbered yet;
But the blessed hours of waking,
Never will my soul forget.
Now the pilgrim's staff I hold,
Tongue be silent breast be cold!

Breaking! breaking! heart, thou'rt breaking
For a home, too, divine;
I my weary steps am taking
From her! can she e'er be mine?
Oh! the pilgrim's staff I hold,
Tongue be silent, breast be cold!

Breaking! breaking! spears are breaking
In the field, where I should be;
Soon the pilgrim's staff forsaking
Sweet! my lance shall ring for thee!
Yet until that time I hold
Tongue be silent, breast be cold!

Emilie listened for more, but no more came, she sighed, she knew not wherefore; and felt disappointed, she did not know why, and when she slept it was only to dream of the sweetest song she ever heard, sung by youths more lovely than she had ever before beheld.

In the morning, the maid servant entered the room: "Mademoiselle, betore the gentleman went, he desired me to give this to you;" presenting a small packet.

"And is he gone?" exclaimed Emelie.

"Dear me, yes! nearly two hours ago."

"Indeed! but Jeanette, you need not wait."

With slow steps Jeanette retired, and the Demoiselle, on opening the packet, was charmed to behold a beautiful ring; it was of pure gold, studded with precious stones, and a ruby rose of exquisite workmanship glowed in the middle; but oh! more precious than all, these words were written on the paper that enclosed it, "If your lady tongue cannot, this ring declare." Emilie was in a perfect ecstacy, for this sentence so exactly agreed with the romance of the preceding night, that, (with a conceit quite excusable) she now doubted not as to who was the pilgrim's lady-love. This certainty, and this joy however, was a little damped by her mother's sober remark, "that she considered the little present as a very delicate mode of expressing a gratitude; which the stranger had neither time nor opportunity to tender vice voce."

Many months elapsed, during which the ladies never saw or heard of the pilgrim, and Emilie's golden dreams vanished, though she by no means forgot the circumstances of his visit. At this time the affairs of Madame St. Orval, were a yet more sombre aspect; debts which she had never been liable to, and had contracted, were claimed; to aid in their payment her little pittance was lessened, and herself and family nearly reduced to starvation; her friend the Abbess of Les Soeurs de Misericorde, who possessed interest at a pretty village near Paris, offered at this juncture, to support Emilie, free of expense, till she professed, if, after that period she would assist in the education of those children and young persons who were sent to the house for instruction. The filial affection of Mademoiselle St. Orval overcame these feelings of repugnance to a monastic life, so natural to her years, and she entered the convent with far less sorrow than she apprehended. A short residence therein, convinced her that the Abbess was kind, the nuns kinder, and Henrietta Douvile, a young boarder of distinction, kindest of all; this Lady sought her regard most assiduously, and obtained it; she was sprightly, seemed sincere, and somehow at times reminded Emilie so strongly of the pilgrim, that, in short, she was irresistible, and the whole story of the stranger, the song, the ring, and the motto, was related to, and indeed after a while, the two latter shewn her; for this Henrietta bantered Emilie so amazingly, and so long, that she heartily blamed herself for imprudently making the disclosure, and more heartily still, when Mademoiselle Douvile, on quitting the convent about three weeks prior to Emilie's taking the veil, fairly carried off the pilgrim's precious gift; sorry as the poor novice was for the loss of the trinket, she was more grieved at considering that she could never again regard Henrietta as a friend. About two days previous to the awful ceremony which was to exclude her from the world forever, a nun entered her cell with a note; it was from Mademoiselle Douvile, expressed in the most affectionate terms, and requested to see her immediately in the visitor's parlour! Emilie pleased with Henrietta's repentance, for she doubted not but that she was come to restore the ring, granted her desire, and on entering the room was astonished to see three strangers, two knights and a lady, besides her friend, but they had their backs to her. Mademoiselle expressed great delight at the meeting, and at length begged permission to introduce her father; one of the knights stepped forward and greeted her in the most endearing manner; then the Lady turned, and Emilie rushed into her mother's arms. "Do I need an introduction?" said the other knight, advancing, and raising his beaver. Oh! the voice was sufficient, that exquisite voice which had come to one fond girl's spirit, in the stillness of noon, in the stir of midday, and in the deep silence of the dead dull night! One glance was sufficient also, and the astonished Emilie beheld before her the pilgrim, in all his proud beauty, and with his eyes glittering for joy. "Will you vouchsafe," said he, "a favourable reception to an old friend?" at the same time presenting the valued ring, within which the polished motto, was now engraved. "Oh! that ring," cried Henrietta, "when I have told you all, I trust you will pardon me for the theft of it; at present you will make preparations to quit this convent immediately; as for you, Charles—but I can't talk to you now; come Emilie we've no time to lose;" and she pulled the bewildered girl out of the room, while Madame St. Orval followed. Emilie's heart was full, she felt as if her senses would leave her, till, in her little cell, a burst of tears relieved a bosom over-wrought with amazement and joy. "My dearest child," said the kind mother, "thanks to the father of all, our difficulties are removed; your father's executor, Mr. Triquet, is a villian." "Who discovered that?" cried Emilie. "The young Chevalier Douvile," replied Madame, "the story is intricate, but let it suffice, that through the unabated exertions of that amiable young man, his forgeries have been detected, and instead of a weighty debt to him, he owes us a very considerable sum." "And did the pilgrim discover this; and how; and why?" "Because," replied Henrietta, "my brother thought proper to discover this to your friend Henrietta, your brother?—Oh! if you had but told me so; why did you not?" "Why, between your communications and his letters, I had found out your pilgrim, incognito, he gave me strict orders to keep the secret; and to steal the ring; how! how I've been bursting to speak, but as poor Charles has turned pilgrim on my account, (after my recovery from a dangerous illness) I thought I must humour him in a trifle; you must know, my dear, that he deemed it a mighty feat, becoming a wife-seeking chevalier, to set upon that hydra M. Triquet well he has conquered him, and will no doubt demand his reward of you, presently in due form." Poor Emilie was greatly agitated, but at length with the assistance of her mother and friend, completed her preparations, and again entered into the parlour. Shall we proceed? No! for the enthusiasm of youth glowing with the most beautiful and noble of all fervors, is to be felt, not described: nor can those who have never felt, by those whose own feelings have taught them what it is. Therefore we will but observe, that the pilgrim for his reward, sued not in vain, that the ring was worn by his lady till the day of her death, and is now preserved, with the original MS. of the Chevalier Pilgrim's Song, by a branch of the family residing at Abbeville.

LONDON FASHIONS FOR JULY.

Carriage Dress.—A dress of straw colored muslin, spotted with bright geranium. Two flounces surround the border, scalloped at the edge, and bound with geranium-colored satin. The body made plain, with a cleft collar round the bust.—Long sleeves of white India muslin, finished at the wrists with scallops, and a broad gold bracelet of rich workmanship next the hand. The dress is made partially low, and under it is worn a fichu of tulle, with a pointed collar a la Vandyke, the points trimmed round with narrow lace. A hat of white chip, with two rosettes of white gauze ribbon placed over each temple near the brim. The hair arranged in long and large curls, confined across the forhead by a bandeau of twisted ribbon. The hat is crowned with two beautiful white ostrich feathers, the ends bending back towards the crown. Very broad strings of white figured gauze ribbon, with a rich pearl edge, depend over the bust.

Afternoon Dress.—A dress of fine India muslin, trimmed round with narrow lace.—Each row of this novel kind of trimming is surmounted by elegant embroidery in satin-stitch, worked on the dress; the row that is above the upper range of ornaments is remarkably rich and beautiful. The body is a la Circassienne, the upper drapery of which discovers a chemisette tucker of fine muslin laid in small plaits, and trimmed with narrow lace. The sleeves are en gigot, with manchettes a la. The edge round with of midday, and in the deep silence of the dead dull night! One glance was sufficient also, lace, as are the long antique points at the wrists. Next the hand are broad gold bracelets, fastened with a cameo head. A white chip hat is worn with this dress, with an elegant plumage of white marabouts and aigrettes a la Militaire, formed of the green and yellow feathers of the parrot.—La Belle Assemblee.

A LONDON BREWERY.

An idea of the immense extent to which the brewing of porter is carried on in London, may be formed from the following description of Barclay's brewery. If any private concern in England, or in the world, is entitled to the epithet of vastness, this is one. It covers about eight acres of ground, and manufactured last year 851,474 barrels, of 36 gallons each. The buildings which contains the vats themselves, are enormous. The largest of the latter contains each 4,000 barrels. The average number of vats is nearly 100. A steam-engine of 22 horse power is employed in driving the machinery, and about two hundred men are engaged in the various works of the establishment. It is supposed that the number of persons dependent upon it without doors, in the sale and transportation of the beer, is three or four thousand. The three coppers in which the beer is boiled, hold each 150 barrels.

Twenty-five gentlemen once dined in one of these coppers, after which, fifty of the workmen got in and regaled themselves. One hundred and ninety pounds of beef-steaks, were then roasted in one day, in this novel kind of dining room. The tuns in which the beer ferments, hold 1,400 barrels each. The carbonic acid in one of them stood about three and a half feet above the liquor, and poured over the side in a continued stream. A candle is presently extinguished on being placed near the outer edge of this receptacle, and on holding one's face near it, a sharp pungent sensation is felt in the mouth and face, not unlike that produced by ardent spirits. A full immersion of a few moments would be fatal.

One hundred and sixty horses are kept on the premises, for the purpose chiefly of transporting the materials to and from different parts of the city. A finer collection of animals employed in one concern, perhaps is no where to be seen.—English paper.

Port of London. The trade of London, employs about 3500 ships, the cargoes entering the port being annually, not less than 13,500. On an average 1100 ships are in the river at one time, together with 5400 barges and other small craft employed in lading and unlading them; 2,698 barges and other craft engaged in the inland trade, and 3000 wherries or small boats for passengers. To this active scene which the port of London Exhibits, are to be added about 4000 watermen, actually employed in navigating the wherries and craft, 4000 laborers lading and unlading ships, and 120 revenue officers constantly doing duty on the river, besides the crews of the several vessels. This scene occupies a space of six miles on the Thames, from two miles above to four miles below London Bridge.

An extraordinary circumstance lately occrred to a young lady of this town, says the Stockport Advertiser, which we think deserves a remark. She had suffered for a long time, under a lingering and dangerous illness, and though from age her hair had changed from black to grey, yet incredible as the circumstance may appear upon her restoration to health, it was discovered that her hair had undergone a second change of colour and again become black.—English pa.

The French Government have declared an effective blockade of Algiers

The German papers state that at the late Leipsic fair the English manufactures were preferred to the French and German, and that the sales were uncommonly great. Among the names given by Germans to the various kinds of cotton stripes, one pattern was called "the Walter Scott." It is said, that in consequence of the rapidity of communication by steam, goods were brought to Leipsic from London at the close of the fair, the orders for which had been sent off after its commencement.

The Plymouth Journal of yesterday contains a detailed account of the reception given to the Lord High Admiral on his arrival at Plymouth. Immense crowds assembled to greet His Royal Highness on his arrival. He landed on Monday evening, and has been employed every day since in inspecting the Naval and Marine establishments. This day he visits the Hospital and Gun-wharf. The Duchess is expected to arrive to-morrow.—July 12th.

Whitehall, July 9, 1827.—The King has been pleased to appoint Vice-Admiral Sir Wm. Johnstone Hope, G. C. B.; Vice-Admiral the Right Honourable Sir George Cockburn, G. C. B.; William Robert Keith Douglas, and John Evelyn Denison, Esqrs. to be Members of the Council of His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom.—London Gaz. July 10.

His Grace the Duke of Gordon, aged 84, died on the 17th of June. He is succeeded by his son the Marquess of Huntley. The Marchioness of Abercorn, sister of the Earl of Aran, died lately in Italy. The present Marquiss is a minor.

Lord De Tablet, late Sir John Fleming Leicester, a munificent patron of the Arts, has also paid the debt of nature on the 18th June.

In the House of Commons, June 21st upon the question for the third reading of the Mutiny Act Amendment Bill, Mr. Hume inquired, "who was at present the public officer constitutionally responsible for the promotion of military officers?" Lord Palmerston replied, that "in the absence of such an officer as the Commander in Chief, he, as Secretary at War, was the person responsible for military promotions. The official adviser of the Crown." The Bill was passed.

The Manchester Guardian, gives an account of a dreadful accident which happened at Tilcesley Banks. An explosion of a steam boiler took place in the new factory which was in an unfinished state, and in which eighteen people were employed, of whom 17 (all females) were reelers, and were employed in the fifth and highest story of the building. Of these seven were taken up dead or expired shortly afterwards, six were so dreadfully wounded as to occasion doubts of their recovery, but the other four were comparatively little injured. The engineer who attended the fires was killed. The accident was discovered to have originated from the neglect of the engineer, to open the valve communicating between the boiler and the ships, so that the steam having no vent, when it acquired sufficient pressure exploded.

The project for constructing a canal, which shall render Paris a Sea Port, and open a communication between Havre and Strasburg, is still undergoing considerable discussion in France. M. Dupin lately read to the Academie des Sciences a paper in which he endeavored to prove that the execution of this gigantic scheme is not beyond the power of modern inventions and resources.

THE MINISTRY.

It is known that the arrangements of the Ministry, consequent upon the illness of the Earl of Liverpool, which were made previously to the re-assembling of Parliament after the Easter recess, were, in many respects, only of a temporary character—temporary as to some of the offices which were held by certain individuals, but not as to their permanent connexion with Mr. Canning's Government. We now find, by the following article in the New Times of this morning, that every thing is now completed, and in the way which was originally agreed upon when the Marquis of Lansdowne and his friends agreed to join the Cabinet. It will be seen that these changes do not at all coorrespond with some statements which were very confidently made by the Times a few days since:—

His Grace the Duke of Portland resigns the office of Privy Seal, but retains his seat in the Cabinet. There are several precedents for this proceeding. It will be sufficient to name a recent one; that of Lord Sidmouth.

Lord Carlisle leaves the Woods and Forests, and succeeds the Duke of Portland as Lord Privy Seal.

Mr. Sturges Bourne succeeds Lord Carlisle as First Commissioner of Woods and Forests, keeping his seat in the Cabinet.

The Marquis of Lansdowne succeeds Mr. Sturges Bourne as Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Viscount Dudly and Ward remains at the Foreign Office; and, consequently,

Mr. Canning continues First Lord of the Treasury and Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Spring Rice, it is said, will replace Mr. Spencer Perceval as one of the Under Secretaries of State at the Home Office.

There will be no immediate change in the Vice Regal Government of Ireland. The Marquis of Wellesly, it is understood, remains and does not take office, though it has been confidently stated he would.

His Majesty will hold a Council next week, for the purpose of giving formal effect to these arrangements.—Courier.

The manufacturers of Yorkshire had good employment, and the factories in the district, of woollen and worsted stuff, were in full work. The price of the raw material continued very steady.

Sir Astley Cooper attended Lord Liverpool professionally, on the 9th ult., and coincided with the opinion formerly expressed by his attending physicians, that his attack was altogether of a spasmodic character. His Lordship had not been removed from the library, where he was first seized with illness. A bulletin of the 10th, stated that he was "slowly recovering from the effects of the spasmodic seizure."

The report of Lord Liverpool's health, on the evening of the 14th ult. the latest date, was favorable.

The operation of the new Corn Laws Bill had been to render the amount of duties, daily paid at the custom house, very great.

The woolen manufacturers seem to be gradually finding employment, though there is yet much distress in several towns.

Despatches of the 23rd June, received at the Foreign Office from Sir Frederick Adam, by the Ionian Messenger, announced that an insurrection had broken out in Albania.

A clergyman named Waterhouse, had been murdered by a ruffian named Slade, under circumstances of peculiar atrocity. The object of the murderer was plunder.

The Directors of the Bank of England have resolved to discount bills, approved in the usual manner and drawn within 95 days, at four per cent. The branch banks will of course do the same. The bankers in Manchester have declared their intention of discounting at three per cent. A considerable rise in the funds is expected to follow the resolution of the bank, and it is feared that the low rate of interests will again give rise to that mania of speculation which a short time ago was productive of such serious results.

By the new corn average bill the averages are to be taken from 150 principle markets in England and Wales. In each place an inspector is to be appointed, and a comptroller in London, to receive the returns and make up the general average. The returns are to be made by the dealers alone; with this difference between the town and country, that in London the sellers make the returns, and in the country the buyers.

The Algerines have taken several French merchant ships. Several English officers at Gibraltar gave it as their opinion, that if the French squadron should attempt to take the Mole they would fail, inasmuch as it had been rendered almost impregnable since Lord Exmouth's attack.

And whereas by the said Act for regulating the Trade of the British Possessions abroad it is amongst other things recited, that by the Law of Navigation Foreign Ships are permitted to import into any of the British Possessions Abroad, from the Countries to which they belong, goods the Produce of those Countries, and to export Goods from such Possessions, to be carried to any Foreign Country whatever, and that it is expedient that such Permission should be continued to Foreign Countries; and it is therefore by the said Act enacted, that the Privileges thereby granted to Foreign Ships shall be limited to the Ships of those Countries which, having Colonial Possessions, shall grant the like Privileges of trading with those Possessions to British Ships, or which, not having Colonial Possessions, shall place the Commerce and Navigation of this Country, and its Possessions Abroad, upon the Footing of the most favoured Nation, unless His Majesty by His Order in Council shall in any case deem it expedient to grant the whole or any of such Privileges to the Ships of any Foreign Country, although the Conditions above recited shall not in all respects be fulfilled by such Foreign Country: And whereas, unless some period be limited for the fulfilment by Foreign Countries of the conditions mentioned and referred to, in the said recited Act, the Trade and Navigation of the United Kingdom and of the British Possessions abroad cannot be regulated by fixed and certain Rules, but will continue subject to changes dependent upon the laws from time to time made in such Foreign Countries; Be it therefore enacted, that no Foreign Country shall hereafter be deemed to have fulfilled the conditions so deemed entitled to the privileges of British Ships.

Sect. XLII. And for the better ascertaining what particular Foreign Countries are permitted by law to exercise and enjoy the said privileges, be it further enacted, That no Foreign Country shall hereafter be deemed to have fulfilled the beforementioned conditions, or to be entitled to the privileges aforesaid, unless, and until His Majesty shall, by some Order or Orders to be by him made by the advice of his Privy Council, have declared that such Foreign Country hath so fulfilled the said conditions and is entitled to the said privileges.

RUSSIA.

We find in our papers a decree of the Emperor of Russia, regulating the steam boats of Mr. Jolliffe, which are to run, under the patronage of the government, between London and St. Petersburgh. It will be seen that the government are disposed to facilitate a sure and rapid communication between the two countries.

The steam boats are not to be stopped at the guard ship, but the passengers will take out clothes enough for a few days, and the hatches are to be sealed at Cronstadt without delay. The captain may go directly to St. Petersburgh, where the seal will be taken off, and the passengers' baggage delivered them after being examined at the custom house. Prohibited articles among the baggage will be placed in store, and may be exported from thence; but merchandise is subject to the existing laws. The passes of passengers will not be examined till they reach St. Petersburgh, when an officer will be immediately sent down to the boats. Carriages will pay no duty if they are taken out of the country subsequently. Letters must all pass through the post-office.

TREATY for the SETTLEMENT of GREECE.

(From the Times of Thursday, July 12.)

PARIS, July 9, Monday Afternoon.

I have this moment received the following treaty and have just time to translate and forward it. The King of France has been extremely anxious for the signature of this important document: he has repeatedly expressed impatience at delay. It is, however with him a religious, not a political feeling:—In the name of, &c.

"Art. I. The contracting Powers will offer to the Ottoman Porte their mediation with the view of bringing about a reconciliation between it and the Greeks.

"This offer of mediation shall be made to this Power immediately after the ratification of the treaty by means of a collective declaration signed by the Plenipotentiaries of the Allied Courts at Constantinople, and there shall be sent at the same time, to the two contending parties, a demand of an immediate armistice between them, as a preliminary condition indispensible to the opening of any negociation.

"Art. II. The arrangement to be proposed to the Ottoman Porte shall rest upon the following basis:—The Greeks shall hold of the Sultan as of a "superior Lord; and in consequence of this superiority, they shall pay to the Ottoman Empire an annual tribute (relief) the amount of which shall be fixed, once for all, by a common agreement. They shall be governed by Chiefs chosen by them from among themselves, whose appointment, however, shall be submitted to the examination of whom the Porte shall have a determinate voice.

"To bring about a complete separation between the individuals of the two nations, and to prevent the collisions which are the inevitable consequence of so long a struggle, the Greeks shall enter upon the possession of the landed property situated either on the Continent or in the Isles of Greece, on the condition of indemnifying the former proprietors, either by the payment of an annual sum, to be added to the tribute which is to be paid to the Porte, or by some other transactions of the same nature.

"Art. III. The details of this arrangement, as well as the limits of the territory on the continent, and the designation of the islands of the archipelago to which it shall be applicable, shall be settled in a subsequent negociation between the High Powers and the two contending parties.

"Art. IV. The contracting Powers engage to follow up the salutary work of the pacification of Greece on the basis laid down in the preceding articles, and to furnish without the least delay their Representatives at Constantinople with all the instructions which are necessary for the execution of the treaty now signed.

"Art. V. The contracting Powers will not seek in these arrangements any augmentation of territory, any exclusive influence, any commercial advantages for their subjects, which the subjects of any other nation may not equally obtain.

"Art. VI. The arrangements of reconciliation and peace, which shall be definitively agreed upon between the contending parties, shall be guaranteed by such of the signing Powers as shall judge it useful or possible to contract the obligation; the mode of the effects of this guarantee shall become the object of subsequent stipulations between the High Powers.

"Art. VII. The present treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in two months or sooner if possible.

"In faith whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed, and sealed it with their arms.

"Done at London, July 6, 1827.

ADDITIONAL AND SECRET ARTICLE.

"In case the Ottoman Porte does not accept, within the space of one month, the mediation which shall be proposed, the High Contracting Parties agree upon the following measures:—

"1. It shall be declared to their representatives at Constantinople, to the Porte, that the inconveniences and evils pointed out in the public treaty as inseparable from the state of things subsisting in the East for the last 6 years, and the termination of which, through the means at the disposal of the Sublime Porte, appears still remote, impose upon the High Contracting Parties the necessity of taking immediate measures for an approximation with the Greeks.

"It is to be understood that this approximation shall be brought about by establishing commercial relations with the two countries, by the Consuls for that purpose, and receiving from them Consular Agents, so long as there shall exist among them authorities capable of maintaining such relations.

"2. If within the said term of one month, the Porte do not accept the armistice proposed in the first article of the public treaty, or if the Greeks refuse to execute it, the High Contracting Powers shall declare at once to the one and to the other, that they shall wish to continue hostilities, or to both if such become necessary, that the said High Contracting Powers intend to exert all the means which circumstance may suggest to their prudence to obtain the immediate effect of the armistice, the execution of which they desire, by preventing, in as far as may be in their power, all collision between the contending parties, and, in fact. Immediately after the aforesaid declaration, the High Contracting Powers will conjointly employ all their means in the accomplishment of the object thereof, without, however, taking any part in the hostilities between the two contending parties.

"In consequence, the High Contracting Powers will immediately after the Signature of the present additional and secret article, transmit eventual instructions conformable to the principles above set forth, to the Admiral commanding their Squadron in the seas of the Levant.

"3. Finally, if contrary to all expectation, these measures do not yet suffice to induce the adoption by the Ottoman Porte of the propositions made by the High Contracting Parties, or if, on the other hand, the Greeks renounce the conditions stipulated in their favor in the treaty of this day, the High Contracting Powers will nevertheless, continue to prosecute the work of pacification on the basis agreed upon between them; and in consequence they authorize from this moment their representatives in London to discuss and determine the ulterior measures to which it may become necessary to resort,

"The present additional and secret articles shall have the same force and value as if it had been inserted, word for word, in the treaty of this day. It shall be ratified, and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged, at the same time as those of the said treaty.

"In faith whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed it, and have thereto affixed the seals of their arms.

"Done at London, this 6th of July, in the year of Grace, 1827.

THE EXECUTION.

Jesse Strang, who, for the last three months, has filled so large a space in the public eye, has expiated his crimes on the gallows.

Yesterday, at about one o'clock Strang was brought out of the Gaol, and surrounded by a military guard, and accompanied by the Sheriff and Constables, was conducted to the place of execution, in the hollow, west of Beaver street, about eighty rods from the Gaol. He immediately ascended the gallows, and the rope, which had been previously put around his neck, was on the hook. He addressed the crowd, exhorting them in the usual manner, to take warning by his fate, and then, holding his confession in his hand, as published by Mr. Pepper, his counsel declared it was the truth. The Rev. Mr. Lacy, of the Episcopal Church, then read prayers, and immediately after, the drop fell, and the unfortunate man was launched into eternity. After being suspended about half an hour, his body was taken down, and delivered to his friends, who have taken it to Dutchess County, for interment among his relations.

The Steam Boat Independence, Capt. W. I. Wiswall, arrived here, yesterday afternoon, in eleven hours and a half, from New-York. This is the shortest passage ever made from New-York to Albany.—Albany Gazette.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, September 8, 1827.

We are not in possession of any later news from England.

The extracts we have given from the new Customs Law, and for which we are indebted to a Supplement to the New York Comparative Price Current, will be interesting to our mercantile friends. Under the provisions of this Law we may anticipate, a great increase in the trade of the Country, which it appears to settle upon more fixed principles. The facilities it affords for the introduction of many staple articles from the United States, will no doubt have the effect of insuring to us the advantage of a great proportion of the forwarding business, and of causing an increased demand for Shipping at the Port of Quebec.

The following Bills received the Royal Assent, at the Prorogation of the Imperial Parliament:—

The Exchequer Bills Bill, the Admiralty Bill, the Excise duties Bill, the Corn Warehousing Bill, the Corn averages, the Brazil Treaty, the Stamps Consolidation, the Mesne Process Bill, the South Wales Municipal regulations, the Canada Reserves, the Taxation of Costs, the Irish Land Revenue, the Irish Tithes, Irish Manor Courts, Petty Sessions, Butter Bill, Leeds Police Bill, and several private Bills.

We have much pleasure in announcing the safe arrival of The Hon Archdeacon, Dr. Strachan. He reached home on Wednesday last, in excellent health, after an absence of nearly eighteen months, in England. His return was most cordially welcomed, by numerous friends, who received him on landing from the Canada.

The Lord Bishop, on Sunday last, held an Ordination in the Episcopal Church, when the following Reverend Gentlemen, were admitted to the Order of Priest:—

The Rev. Rosington Elms—of the United Missions of Beverly and Yonge

The Rev. T. Creen—Assistant Missionary at Niagara.

The Rev. S. Armour—Missionary at Peterboro.

His Lordship was assisted in the performance of the service, by the Venerable Archdeacon Stuart, of Kingston, the Rev. Dr. Phillips, of York, and His Lordships Chaplain, The Rev. C. Morgill. The Ordination Sermon was delivered by Dr. Phillips.

It has been erroneously stated in several of the American Papers, that Mr. Robinson, the Attorney General die'l some time since at York. We are happy to state that Mr. Robinsou is now attending to his Official duties, on the Eastern Circuit. The circumstance which occasioned this error, we can easily account for, as having originated, from a domestic calamity which has lately taken place in Mr. Robinsons family, and attribute it to any thing but design on the part of the American Editor. With this impression on our minds, we should not have noticed the subject at all, but that we have seen it treated among ourselves, in the Colonial Advocate, in the most unfeeling manner. Does the Editor of the Advocate suppose, that the public mind is so far lost to all sense of decency and proper feeling, as to tolerate his alluding in a light and trifling manner, to a subject of the most awful and serious import? Does he imagine, that any reflecting man, will sanction with approval, the horrible comparison he draws of the reported death of one, who has never injured him, and who has never replied to his continued and unfounded slanders—when he speaks of his death, as of his having "slipped through his fingers?" We seldom see a number of the Colonial Advocate in which an attempt is not made to injure the character of Mr. Robinson—this we are not surprised at, when we remember that calumny appears to be the only food, at all palatable to the vitiated taste of the Editor—but when through error, his death is announced, to hear the Advocate speaking of it in the manner he has done, and saying he should be sorry, to have him "slip through his fingers so easily," we cannot but pause and reflect on the consequences which must result if, the men who can bring himself to make use of such language, on such an occasion, is to be considered, as one of those whose duty it is, to his calling, to give a direction to public feeling and public morals.—Putting the case, that the Attorney General's death had taken place, and that his family and friends, were called upon to mourn a second bereavement—would the Editor of the Advocate, have ventured so far to outface public feeling, and decency, as to have announced in his paper, his sorrow, that he should "slip through his fingers so easily."

We could comment on the subject at greater length—but we refrain.—The public and the readers of the Advocate, will be able to judge, from what is said, in what degree of estimation that man ought to be held who can thus unfeelingly allude, even to the erroneous report of the death of a fellow being.

"Alien Question."—The Alien Committee have received a communication from Major Randal, with the copy of a very satisfactory correspondence between himself and Earl Goderich, the new Colonial Secretary, upon this subject, which we will publish next week. Mr. Horton's Bill has been abandoned for the present, and the question still remains open —but has the appearance of being finally settled to the satisfaction of the people."—Canadian Freeman.

A Weeks cogitation over this "very satisfactory correspondence" will no doubt enable the Freeman to make some very learned remarks on the subject We thought at first, we should have been kept in the dark for that space of time, but the Colonial Advocate, has given to the world the "despatches from Robert Randal, Esq. M. P.", telling us that "as far as he is able to understand them," he thinks they will "afford the Country satisfaction." Mr. Randal himself, however, seems to think differently, for in one pithy paragraph of his letter to Mr. Horton, he "respectfully submits," that if his views, and wishes are not attended to, "the justice and beneficent views of His Majesty's Government, will be rendered nugatory, and of no effect." Mr Randal's letter resolves itself to this—he wishes a declaratory Law passed—something in the shape of that proposed by Mr. Bidwell, which in one sweeping clause, would make the whole population of the United States, British Subjects, without any qualification or restraint. That such a Bill will never be passed, is pretty evident, as Mr. Horton in his Letter states, that, "it will of course be convenient to define more clearly, the particular individuals, in favor of whom this concession should be made."

Mr. Randals letter, betrays a vast deal of impatience on the subject. Mr. Horton on 20th June, writes him a Letter, with an accompanying enclosure, which appears to be of no ordinary length, as we get as high as follo 15 of it, stating the views and intentions, with respect to the "particular individuals, in favor of whom the concession is to be made;" and on the 29th June, the following day only, Mr. Randal, in his letter which he writes in reply to Mr. Horton, has digested the 15 folios, and "implores, the reconsideration of his request." After having addressed him a long Letter, with an accompanying document of 15 folios, and just at the close of the Session of Parliament when business was pressing, the Secretary we think, must have been not a little astonished, at the modest request of Mr. Randal, to "reconsider" the whole affair. It does not appear from the Despatches, that this "reconsideration" took place, as Mr Randal informs the "Select Committee men" that they "may shortly expect his return to Canada" The result of his mission has preceded him. The "question," we are told "still remains open," and so it will remain, if the efforts of a party can prevent its being closed.

Domestic.

The Assizes for the Gore District terminated this evening. The business which has come before the Court, during its very protracted sitting, has been unusually interesting. But we feel much pleasure in stating that, on the Crown side there were few cases of a highly criminal character brought before the Court.

Fire.—The dwelling House of Mr. Samuel Cromwell, situated a few miles from this Town, was consumed by fire on Thursday last. The accident originated in an addition to the house which had been recently put up and partly finished, and in which some stuff was seasoning by means of a stove in which a fire was kept. There being no person near at the time, except Mrs. Cromwell, a small portion only of the property contained in the house was saved. Brockville Recorder.

Lower Canada.

On Saturday last arrived in this city, Capt. John Franklin, R. N. and Dr. Richardson, the celebrated and enterprising travellers to the Polar Basin. We have heard they were enabled to penetrate within 220 miles east of Icy Cape. They were on Thursday last elected Honorary Members of the Natural History Society, lately established in this City. Captain Franklin proceeded yesterday morning to pay a visit to His Excellency the Governor in Chief at Sorel.—Mont. Gazette.

A letter we have just received from a correspondent at the Rideau Canal, and dated 16th August 1827, says—"I have this evening to communicate to you one of the most important events that ever occurred in the Canadas—an event which will doubtless form an era in the history of this country for ages to come. It was no less than the depositing of the first stone of the Locks of the Rideau Canal. Yesterday evening at a late hour, Captain Franklin, the celebrated Traveller, arrived at the Head Quarters of the detatchment of the 71st Regt, now doing duty here, when Colonel By decided upon welcoming this enterprising traveller to the regions of hospitality and civilization in a way that would indentify his return with a grand undertaking so highly beneficial for the Continent he had spent so long time and labour in exploring—namely, the laying the first stone of the Locks of the Rideau Canal. The high stage of popularity in which the Colonel so deservedly stands, places his desires and their accomplishment almost co-eval. This morning all was bustle to get ready—at 4 o'clock P. M. the stone weighing above 3-4 of a ton weight, was brought to its bed, Colonel By assisted by Captain Franklin on the spot when the Captain gave the final knock to the stone in due form. I understand there is to be an inscription on the stone detailing the circumstances under which and by whom it was laid. Notwithstanding the briefness of the notice (a cause of disappointment to many) there was congregated on the occasion as large and respectable a concourse of spectators as had ever been witnessed in this place."—Montreal Herald.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Montreal Gazette.

Sir.—I arrived here yesterday morning in time to witness a scene to me the most interesting and novel which I had ever contemplated: the workmen had just finished the second Arch of the Union Bridge, across the Ottawa at this place, and were proceeding to strike the centers from under it; this was completed in such fine stile as to excite the admiration of every person present. The master workman, who I understand has never served any regular time as a mason or engineer, has done great credit to himself as a workman—much praise is also due to the Contractors' Messrs. P. Wright and Sons, for the precision observed Col. By, and all the officers of the Engineer department. The utmost anxiety seemed to prevail among the spectators for the fate of the arch, as 'twas feared by some that it would meet the fate of the first arch erected here. But when the central pieces were all out, the air immediately resounded with acclamations.—When this was all over I went on as far as the Bridges extended and took a view of the falls; and I must say that the sublimity of the scenery surpassed all that I had ever beheld.—The water of the Ottawa, a short distance above the falls is perfectly calm, and rolls along majestically until all at once it rushes over a fall of about ten feet among innumerable Islands and rocks; causing a spray to rise in the air to a great height—so that rainbows may be seen almost any time in the day when the sun shines. But to do this place justice 'twould require a far more able pen than mine to describe it—I will therefore leave the rest to the Historian or Novelist, and proceed on my journey.

I am
Sir,
In the mean time
Your obedient Servant,
A TRAVELLER.

Chaudiere falls, Hull, 18th August, 1827.

We understand that Captain Franklin travelled from Mackenzie's river to the Icy Cape, where he remained nine days in consequence of a dense fog; he was within 250 miles of the spot at which the Blossom was to have touched, and at that time so far as he could see the navigation was entirely free from ice.

An attempt was last Saturday made to ascend the La'Chine Rapids in the wide part of the Channel near the opposite shore, with the horse-boat which has plied between River St. Pierre and La Tortue during the fore part of this summer. They were enabled to ascend as far up as Dunn's Mill, (a greater height we believe than any boat has yet made up the rapids,) but were from the strength of the current at that place, obliged to desist in the undertaking, after having torn a batteaux in the attempt. We understand that the wings will have to be taken off previous to her passing up the Canal to La'Chine, whether they were endeavouring to bring her, as in her present state she is too wide to pass through the locks. She is intended to run between Mr. Dalton's, Chateauguay, during the remainder of the season, as she was not sufficiently patronized between St. Pierre and La Tortue.

Fire.—About 8 o'clock last night a new house in the St. Lawrence suburbs, near the Bishop's church, lately built by Mr. P. Devins, and, we understand, leased by Judge Pike, took fire, and was soon totally consumed.

The proprietor had expended about £400 in building it—which will be lost, as it was uninsured.

Phenomenon.—For some nights past an uncommon brightness has been visible in the heavens, extending in the form of an arch from East to West, and touching the horizon at either extremity. About 10 o'clock it is most visible, and is sometimes seen, as it were, to emit clear particles of light, which take a direction towards the earth, and are nearly similar to very vivid lightning.—Canadian Courant.

By the death of Mr. Belanger, which took place on the 21st inst, a vacancy is occasioned in the representation for the Lower Town of Quebec. Report already names the indefatigable-and-never-to-be-daunted Monsr. Berthelot as a candidate.—Mercury.

PROPOSED TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF WOLFE AND MONTCALM.

It has been a matter of surprise and regret that there is not any Public Monument in Quebec to record the glorious fall of Wolfe and Montcalm.

These feelings have prompted the Governor in Chief to propose for the consideration of the public, and of the Officers now serving under his command in the Canadas, a design for a Column to be erected on the Place d'Armes in front of the Chateau St. Louis. This design may be seen at the Garrison Library, where the Librarian has instructions to admit any gentleman who may wish to inspect it.

The Governor in Chief forbears to say more on the subject, than to call the public attention to suggestions that may be sent to him, and will give all the assistance and encouragement in his power to this interesting Public Work.

We have examined in the Garrison Library two designs, intended for a proposed Monument to the memory of Wolfe and Montcalm, who both fell in the battle which decided the Sovereignty of these Provinces, fighting with equal devotion for their respective Kings. It is proposed to erect a Column, or Obelisk, fifty feet high, in front of the English Cathedral, about the centre of the Place D'Armes. The inscriptions will be of course appropriate; and one, at least, should, we think, be in Latin, as a common language. Quebec has long suffered in the estimation of strangers for not having a monument of this description; and as there are reasons why it could not be conviently placed on the Plains, there cannot be a more appropriate spot than the one selected. Subscription lists will be sent to the Libraries, and Reading Room, in the course of a day or two.—Quebec Gazette.

His Majesty's Ship Romney, Captain Lockyer, R. N. sailed yesterday at four o'clock P. M. with a fine breeze having on board the Head Quarter Division of the 70th Regiment, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Evans C. B. Lieutenant Crombie, 79th Highlanders, and Doctor Winterscale, Assistant Surgeon 71st Light Infantry, were also passengers.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A Location will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offered for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanation of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improvethe same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

(From the York Observer.)

(No. 1.)

Mr. Randal to the Committee at York.

London, No. 37, Wood Street, corner of Mill Bank St. Westminster, July 3d, 1827.

Gentlemen,

Doctor Strachan offers me the opportunity of having before you my correspondence with His Majesty's Government, on the subject of the Mission with which you have honoured me.

If His Majesty's Government amends the letter of instruction to be forwarded to the Executive Government in Upper Canada conformable to expectation given, when I presented my answer to the official in that case the enclosures herewith to you, will be made unofficial. Lord Goderich replied as much on the 29th ulto. in my interview with him.

He has a strong repugnance to the abjuration. I have not had any communication with the Colonial Office since.

As the prorogation of Parliament took place on yesterday, the 2d inst. you may shortly expect my return to Canada

I enclose to you the Morning Herald of the 13th ult. wherein you will see my presentment of the petition to the House of Commons, and the mode in which the proceedings were held on the same.

"I have the honour,
Gentlemen, to be,
Your obedient humble Servant,
ROBERT RANDAL.

To the select Committee mean on the Naturalization Bill in Upper Canada.

(No. 2.)

THE RIGHT HON. R. WILMOT HORTON, TO ROBERT RANDAL, Esq

(Copy) Downing-Street, June 28, 1827.

Sir—Lord Goderich has had under his consideration the Copy which you transmitted to this department, of the petition addressed to Parliament, by certain land-holders and others, inhabitants of the Province of Upper Canada. His Lordship directs me to express his regret that the measures adopted by His Majesty's Government in the last year, on the subject of Aliens in Upper Canada, have not proved satisfactory to all the parties, for whose relief they were intended.

Whatever objections may have arisen to the details of those measures, they were recommended by Lord Bathurst, exclusively in the spirit of conciliation, and in the belief that no further concession was desired, Lord Bathurst had adopted every means in his power, to ascertain whether the alterations which he projected in the Law, would satisfy the inhabitants of His Majesty's Canadas, and his Lordship had the strongest grounds for anticipating the cordial concurrence of all classes of Society in the Province, although it now appears that some misconception was entertained, as to the real object of the parties interested in this question, yet the Lieut. Governor and Legislative Council of Upper Canada, cannot be considered responsible for those parts of the present Bill, which have excited the most earnest opposition Lord Bathurst's instructions to the Lieutenant Governor, founded as they were, upon His Lordship's impression, that the measures proposed would be satisfactory, were peremptory and left the Local Governor no discretion on the subject, with regard to the measures now to be adopted by His Majesty's Government, for setting this question at rest I am instructed by Lord Goderich to make you the following communication, with respect to the best mode of following up His Majesty's benevolent intentions as expressed by the late Secretary of State.

The decision of His Majesty in Council upon the Bills respecting Aliens transmitted at the close of the late Provincial Parliament, will be suspended until the final decision of the questions which have been brought into discussion.

Lord Goderich is ready to admit that all the rights and privileges of British Subjects should be imparted to the whole of that class of persons who have settled in Upper Canada in reliance upon any assurance from His Majesty's Government that they should be received in that character.

It will of course be convenient to define more clearly the particular individuals in favour of whom this concession should be made. They may therefore be arranged under the following heads—

First—All persons who have received Grants of land from the provincial Government.

Secondly—All persons who have held any Public Offices in the Province.

Thirdly—All persons who have at any time been admitted by the Provincial Government, or its Officers, to take the oath of Allegiance.

Fourthly—All persons resident in Upper Canada who had their settled place of abode in the Province previously to the year 1820. To each of these four classes of persons, the privileges of English Birth would be granted without any condition or qualification

The children or more remote descendants of any such persons who may be dead would be admitted to the same privilege which their parents or ancestors of now living could claim.

It will however, be understood that any person claiming to exercise any privilege of a British subject who has not yet taken the oath of Allegiance, must first take that oath or make the corresponding affirmation, if he be one of those persons whom the Law of the Province has relieved from the obligation of taking oaths.

The second case to be considered is that of persons not falling within any of the preceding descriptions but who have at present their domicile in Upper Canada, having resorted to the Province subsequently to the year 1820. I am directed by Lord Goderich to communicate to you his opinion that all persons of this class who desire to be naturalized as British Subjects should also be admitted to that privilege. But with respect to them, the three following conditions would be required, First, that they should have completed a residence of seven years before they are permitted to acquire the privileges in question. Secondly, that they should take the oath of Allegiance or make the corresponding affirmation, and thirdly, that their names should should be registered in some public office by some time to be fixed for that purpose in order that it may be known what particular persons have availed themselves of the proposed indulgence.

It will be understood that all these rules are to be retrospective only. The terms upon which it may be proper to naturalize persons hereafter resorting to Upper Canada or to any other of His Majesty's foreign possessions may probably at an early period engage the distinct attention of His Majesty's Government.

Folio 15. It will be necessary to observe that the proposed enactments are not to have the effect of repealing any existing statute of the Province or any Act of Parliament.

There are many questions of property connected with this subject upon which it would be very difficult to form any definitive opinion in this country and on however distant a day there would be no objection to an enactment, which should in substance provide that the title of the Crown should not be set up to defeat any title to lands acquired by any person or by the parents or ancestors of any person, naturalized under the proposed Act. The more material difficulty would arise in cases where the acknowledgement of the British character of any individual might defeat the legal right of any other private person. Upon this subject Lord Goderich can of course state only the general principles which it appears to him just and reasonable to establish. The necessity of introducing any particular exceptions must be referred to the wisdom of the Provincial Parliament.

The General principles to which I advert are the following Property which is now held by titles which in strictness of Law might be invalid on account of the foreign birth of the present holder or of any of his predecessors in title, would be confirmed if the present holder is naturalized under the intended act.

But if any person is in possession of property, which he has enjoyed on the ground of the foreign birth of any other individual, that possession ought not now to be disturbed, or in shorter terms the legal disability of any naturalized Alien, or of his predecessors, should not be allowed to impeach any title except those who were actually impeached before the promulgation of the Law.

It should be provided that those rules respecting property are to be their operation from the 26th day of May, 1826, the day on which the Act was passed for enabling the Legislature of Upper Canada to impart all the privileges of English birth to Aliens.

As you have been deputed to represent the interests of the parties more immediately affected by the recent measures, and as you have presented a petition to Parliament on their behalf, Lord Goderich has deemed it expedient that you should be apprized of the view which His Lordship has taken of the subject.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient,
Humble Servant
(Signed) R. W. HORTON.

(No. 3.)

Mr. RANDAL TO Mr. HORTON.

[Reply to No. 2.]

London, June 29th, 1827.

No. 27 Wood Street, Mill Bank, Westminster.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication dated the 28th inst. and the pleasure I feel that Lord Goderich has given his consideration to the copy which I transmitted to the Colonial Department of His Majesty's Government, of the petition addressed to the British Parliament, by certain land-holders and others, inhabitants of the Province of Upper Canada

I beg also to acknowledge my great satisfaction at the several interviews, with which you have honored me, that there is a sincere and anxious disposition on the part of His Majesty's Government to grant the prayers and representations made by a large portion of His Majesty's Subjects in Upper Canada.

I beg to state what I have so earnestly endeavored to impress upon you, that it is of the utmost importance to the peace and happiness of that Province, that the fears and doubts, respecting their situation, (the petitioners of Upper Canada,) as to their Civil Rights and the tenure of their property consequent on them, should be settled as expeditiously as possible, and that no grounds of variation from the wishes and intentions of His Majesty's Government should be risked with the authorities in that Province.

I have therefore most respectfully to submit to you that after the proceedings which have been taken by the Government in Upper Canada, purporting to be in obedience to the direction signified to that Government in Lord Bathurst's Dispatch of 31st August, 1826, it is extremely desirable that His Majesty's Government in England should adopt measures here to carry into effect their intentions.

It may not in England appear of much consequence that this subject should be delayed another year, and perhaps when I foresee, that after the lapse of much time of uncertainty and dissatisfaction, the petitioners may again have to appear at the bar of the British Parliament, to claim their protection: I can assure you that the immediate settlement of these two subjects is of the most vital importance to the peace, happiness, and welfare of Upper Canada, and I must therefore venture to urge the reconsideration and request and of the request of all the petitioners; that you will bring into Parliament the bill of which you gave notice, which would answer every object we have in view, and secure advantages to the Province, of which, I cannot give you an adequate idea.

The prayer of the petition from Upper Canada states that it has been the boast to bring to the bar of the Hon. House of Commons, and the Justice of which you were pleased in your place to approve, is that the Imperial Parliament would redress their grievances and not leave them to be at war with by the Provincial Government, divided and differing as their late proceedings have proved them to be.

I do therefore, most anxiously and most respectfully as regards the peace, happiness, and welfare of thousands who have devoted themselves to support His Majesty's Government for near half a century, and who have been proud in the name and title of British Subjects during that time, request you will submit to Lord Goderich my humble solicitation, that the Bill of which you have given notice in the Imperial Parliament should be proceeded in. That was the object of my mission, and in my humble but sincere opinion, founded on an intimate knowledge of the feelings and wishes of the Province of Upper Canada, the only means will answer the object in view—than giving satisfaction, and security to those who relying on the faith of Acts of the British Parliament and on the Proclamations of His Majesty's Government in that Province and of the honour of the British name.

I humbly beg to state, that I have consulted those Gentlemen in whose judgment I have full reliance and their opinions agree entirely with those I have now stated, and I do implore your reconsideration of my request as of the most vital importance to the welfare of the Province of Upper Canada, and of the loyalty of English Subjects therein.

I also consider it my duty to lay before you a circumstance that may become of very considerable importance to the peace of Upper Canada, and which I most anxiously entreat His Majesty's Government will keep in view, in giving instructions to the Government of Upper Canada, for the settlement of the Civil Rights of the settlers in that Province.

By the constitution of Upper Canada, the Legislative Assembly must be changed every four years. Three years have passed, and the next election will take place in June, 1828, and it appears absolutely necessary that the question of naturalization should be settled before that time, to prevent the disputes which will most inevitably arise at the votes of those who have voted for thirty years, may, in the present understanding of the Law, be challenged and refused.

I need not point out to you, the consequences that may follow such a state of things, if all doubts are not before then put at rest.

I feel however, after the kind and friendly spirit you have manifested to the people of Upper Canada, in all the communications I have had with you, that it is only necessary for me to bring this subject to your notice, to ensure due attention to it.

With the first 14 pages in your communication of the 28th instant now before me I must humbly submit that the object of His Majesty's Government and of the Petitioners, would be obtained by a short bill passing the Imperial Parliament reciting the 4 clauses to be affected. (Pages 8 and 9) and secondly enacting, that each of those classes of persons in Upper Canada, shall enjoy, all the privileges of English birth, without any condition or qualification, and that they shall be and be held to have been entitled to all the rights privileges and immunities of British born subjects notwithstanding any act or law decision to the contrary thereof

And that the children or more remote descendants and heirs of all such persons who may be dead or shall die before the passing of this act, shall be admitted to the same privileges and rights as their parents, ancesters or relations if now living could claim under this proposed bill. I am of opinion that the above short and simple enactments which could not be misunderstood would afford all the relief that I solicit, all which the Province can desire.

With respect to the 8ed case of persons not falling under the 4 classes, already noticed (P. 11-12. 13. & 14.) I think that the 7 years residence after 1820, the taking the oath of allegiance and the registering that allegiance as hereinafter, will meet the approbation of all classes in the Province. But, I must object to the mode prescribed in the bill lately passed in Upper Canada for Naturalization, where the age, parent's name, his place of birth and adjuration of all other Governments &c. are required.

I must respectfully submit that if (as stated in P. 15.) the proposed "enactments, are not to have the effect of repealing any existing statute of the province or any act of the British parliament," they will effectually render the Justice and benevolent intentions of His Majesty's Government suggestory, and of no effect.

And I humbly conceive, that as the doubts respecting civil rights and the claims to titles to property, arose from constructions given by the law officers of the crown, and thro' their explanation of the existing British laws, it does not appear possible to put those doubts satisfactorily at rest by any other means, or in any other way, than by a bill of the Imperial Parliament, either respecting such acts, declaratory—that these acts never were enacted, or did not apply, to prevent the 4 classes in Upper Canada from enjoying all the rights of British born Subjects.

As the calming of doubts and fears respecting titles to property in Upper Canada, is of the most vital importance to its prosperity and peace, I venture to solicit the particular attention of His Majesty's Government to that subject, and I would suggest, that instead of the instructions proposed (in page 15 to 21, to the government in Upper Canada,) that a short clause should be inserted in the bill respecting naturalization in the following purport.

Clause A.—That from and after the passing of this act, no person or the representative of any person declared to be entitled by this act to the rights privileges and immunities of British birth shall be disturbed in the possession, or precluded from the recovery of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in the Province of Upper Canada, on the ground, that such persons or their representatives, through whom he or they may claim was an alien. But every title, right, and claim shall remain and be as valid and as good, as they were considered to be and to have been previous to the year 1820, as if no opinions, of either the law officers of the crown, or decision of the courts of justice had been given in respect to the rights and claims of foreign born persons.

Having a most responsible trust to execute from many of my fellow subjects in Upper Canada, and anxiously of the great importance by my due solicitude in such example; I most humbly, but most earnestly and respectfully, solicit your cordial attention to the prayer of their petition.

I have the honor to be
Sir,
Your obedient
Humble servant
ROBERT RANDAL.

To the Right Honourable
R. W. Horton, M. P. &c. &c. &c.

Summary.

On the 20th July the Duke of Wellington had a long audience with the King. His Lordship is about paying a visit to Ireland.

The Right Hon. Sir William Cavendish Bentick, G. C. B. has been appointed Governor-General of Bengal.

Thames Tunnel.—A Board of Committee of Works was held on the 20th ult. at which the Engineer reported the present appearances of the Tunnel, which continue to be extremely favorable. Fresh borings have been made on the bed of the river.

Mr. Canning has been indisposed, but was recovering. Mr. Huskisson has gone to the continent for the recovery of his health, intending to be absent from England about three months.

The Marquis of Lansdown had entered on his official duties, as Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department.

The crops in England will probably be better this year than usual; accounts from four counties state that the grass will yield plentifully and be gathered quite early. The same accounts are given from different parts of Scotland. The grain market consequently offered no inducement to the speculators, and prices were a little reduced. In other articles there had been some alterations, for which see the markets.

Prince Leopold has arrived in England from the Continent.

Lord Liverpool is much improved in his health, and was doing well.

The adventurous Capt Franklin, and Dr. Richardson, one of his associates, has arrived in town and taken lodgings at Mrs. Wilkinson's, in Vesey-street. Both gentlemen look in remarkably fine health. They will embark for England in the James Cropper, which sails on Saturday.—Com. Adv.

Great complaint: are made by the French Editors, that they are obliged to send two of their Gazettes every morning to the Censors, before they can be published.

An action has been brought at London against the brig Betsey, for running down a smack. The Betsey is the same vessel which, 187 years ago, brought King William the Third from Holland to England.

The Fever is said to have broken out in the Spanish army of observation on the frontiers of Portugal.

Lord Cochrane having captured a Turkish vessel laden with provisions, &c. he sent the passengers and crew to Ibrahim Pacha, informing him that the rules of civilized warfare, which he hoped the Pacha would be governed by for the future, prohibited his detaining them as prisoners.

A very judicious system of training boys for the navy, has been introduced into Devonport. These lads, who are not to exceed thirteen years of age, when entered, are to be divided into classes, under experienced men, by whom they will be taught the rudiments of the service, and exercised in gymnastics. The regulations provide for their present comfort, their moral instruction, and future provision. After eight months trial they are to be sent into active employment, or if unfit for service, they will be returned to their homes. It is evident that under judicious management, this system is calculated to advance the interests and character of the British navy, and, if carried to any great extent, it would, in a great measure supercede the necessity of impressment.

A fact worthy of occupying the attention of meteorologists this year, is the co-existence of a drought which threatens the crops in the Northern countries of Europe, and inundations that lay waste the central and Southern countries. It is apprehended that, in many provinces on the Baltic, the extreme heat, joined to the want of rain, will dry the corn before it has attained its growth, and that it will happen that the same year will be ravaged by the overflowing of the rivers, which are swollen at their sources by the height of the Elbe, in particular, gives rise to serious alarm.

The ruins of the Roman villa have been discovered on the estate of Samuel Hassell, Esq. of Littleton, near Somerton. On removing the earth and rubbish, the walls were found in their places to the standing above the floors; a correct ground plan was therefore obtained of the buildings, which conveys some idea of the domestic habits of the occupiers. The edifice was 300 feet in length, and consisted of a gallery, extending along the whole front of the building, which seemed to have been for the purpose of communication between the different parts of the house; and behind these, each about 16 to 18 feet wide, by 20 deep, in three of which the tesselated floors remained entire. The rooms were warmed from four hypocausts, made in different parts of the house. Coins found among the excavated rubbish were those of Constantine, and of the Emperors intermediate between him and Gratian; from these may be inferred the period in which the building had its rise and decay.—Globe.

Some wretch has attempted to poison one of the Shaker families (consisting of 61 persons) at Enfield, Conn. by throwing a large quantity of arsenic into their well. One person drank of the water and suffered severely before he obtained relief.—There was enough put into the pump to have destroyed a thousand persons!

MANUFACTURES.—It was stated that an additional increase of 5 per cent, had taken place on the manufactures in Lancashire and Scotland; that orders for goods continued to increase, as well as employment for handicraftsmen.

BRITISH FUNDS, July 20.—Three per cents. 87¼. Exchequer bills, 57s. premium.—Of the latter a large additional sum had been thrown into circulation; and the premium they bore is evidence of the avidity of the Capitalists to purchase them.

THE THAMES TUNNEL.—The London papers give numerous details of spirited and scientific measures to stop the leaks in the Tunnel, and to prevent the occurrence of a similar disaster; and the best hopes were entertained of their success.

PORTUGAL.—The internal affairs of this Kingdom were reported to remain unsettled.

Algiers was closely blockaded by a French squadron.

England.

It is stated in the Morning Herald of 23d July, that Government have at length yielded to the solicitations of the merchants in Canada and Nova Scotia, and will henceforward send a mail packet direct to Halifax.

London July 17.—Mr. Canning was better yesterday. The Right Hon. Gentleman, however, remained in his apartment during the whole of the day.

The Earl of Liverpool.—The account received yesterday evening at Fife House was, "His Lordship continues to go on favorably."

Mr. Huskisson.—We are happy to find, on inquiry this morning, that Mr. Huskisson is considerably better.

The ship COWPER arrived at Boston on Tuesday last from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 22d July. By this arrival we have London dates to the 20th July. No political events of much interest had occurred since former advices. Trade appeared to be improving in England, France, &c. and there were no indications that the late Treaty on the subject of Greek affairs would interrupt the General Peace of Europe.

The London Gazette of July 17th, contains the official annunciation of the appointment of the Marquis of LANSDOWNE, Lord CARLISLE, &c. to their new situations in the Ministry.

Lord WILLIAM BENTINCK was to be sworn in as Chief Governor of India on the 28th July, vice Lord Amherst.

Several vessels of war had been despatched from England for the Mediterranean station.

Most of the maritime powers were increasing their squadrons in the Mediterranean; and some complaints were made by the friends of Greece, that they would tend to cripple the naval operations of Lord COCHRANE.

The new Bishop of Calcutta, Dr. James and lady, have sailed for India.

From the London Gazette, July 17.

At the Court at Windsor, the 16th day of July, 1827, present the King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

His Majesty having been pleased to appoint the Most Noble the Marquiss of Lansdowne to be one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries, his Lordship was this day, by his Majesty's command, sworn one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State accordingly.

His Majesty having been pleased to deliver the custody of the Privy Seal to the Right Hon. the Earl of Carlisle, the oath of the Keeper of the Privy Seal was this day administered to him, and his Lordship took his place at the Board accordingly.

Whitehall July 14, 1827.—The King has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, constituting and appointing the Right Hon. George Canning, Francis Leveson Conyngham, Esq. (commonly called Earl of Mount Charles,) Francis Leveson Gower, Esq. (commonly called Lord Francis Leveson Gower,) Edward Granville Eliot, Esq. (commonly called Lord Eliot,) and the Right Hon. Maurice Fitzgerald; and also Edmund Alexander M'Naghten, Esq. to be Commissioners for executing the Offices of Treasurer of the Exchequer of Great Britain and Lord High Treasurer of Ireland.

The King has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, constituting and appointing the Right Hon. Wm. Sturges Bourne to be warden and Keeper of the New Forest, in the county of Southampton, in the room of his Royal Highness the Duke of York, deceased.

The King has been pleased to present the Hon. and Rev. Henry Watson, M. A. to the Rectory of Kittering, in the country of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough.

The King has also been pleased to present the Rev. Joseph Brocklebank to the Rectory of Delamere, in the county and diocese of Chester.

Foreign Intelligence.

FRANCE.

The accounts from France are not particularly interesting, being principally in relation to local matters.

A Cameleopard, which stands twelve feet high from the top of its head, has arrived in Paris, a present from the Pacha of Egypt to the King of France. Since the conquest of the Roman empire, no cameleopard, it is stated, has been brought to Europe till the present one.

A French physician recommends as a cure for the croup, to blow alum powder into the throat of the patient by means of a suitable instrument. The application to be repeated three or four times.

It is said that the Spanish Ministry were throwing obstacles in the way of the departure of the French troops, and for that purpose had fomented the insurrection in Catalonia, which had burst forth with more violence than ever.

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.

There was a report at Madrid, July 5, that the French and English diplomatists had communicated to the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, a treaty entered into by France and England, and subscribed by the Portuguese, by which the two former guarantee the maintenance of the constitutional system in Portugal; that the English troops should withdraw from Portugal, except a small body at Lisbon, and the French from the fortresses of Cadiz and Barcelona, but should keep a garrison at Pampeluna and Figuera. The liquidation of the debt from France to Spain was to be settled between those two nations by mutual agreement.

ITALY.

A dreadful hurricane has lately visited almost all Calabria, and done considerable damage. The district of Colona is converted into a lake, which is in many places thirty-five feet deep. Two thirds of Gallico are destroyed, and one third of the inhabitants perished in the waves.

From the town of Giovanni to Reggio the whole country is a sea; in the neighborhood of the latter, a water volcano, (as the papers call it,) has been formed which continues to extend and lay waste the country.

GREECE.

Mr. Eynard, the indefatigable friend of the Greeks, had made a new appeal to the European Christian public, for supplies to be sent to Lord Cochrane and General Church. He had published extracts of late letters received from them. In one from Lord C. dated off Navarino, 28th May, he says, "I am watching the Turkish fleet in Navarino, consisting of 14 frigates, from 36 to 40 corvettes, and smaller vessels.—With a single frigate I cannot destroy them, and our Greek sailors are not sufficiently disciplined to attempt any decisive blow. I have ordered a small flotilla to be fitted out, but have not the means to pay it. I have not changed my opinion as to the means of destroying the Turkish fleet, and if I receive the steamboats which I have long looked for, I shall keep my promise with you."

Gen. CHURCH, in his letter, says, "The affairs of Athens has been disastrous; but there is no reason to despair if we have resources for paying the troops. The dispersed soldiers will return as soon as we can subsist them. The Turkish army is in a disastrous state, and cannot follow the Greeks, who are in motion. If we had funds the mischief could be repaired. Greece still possesses the Napolias and Corinth, with all the islands."

United States.

Miraculous Escape.—On Saturday, as the workmen were blowing rocks at the quarries of Schuylkill Falls, by a severe charge, two stones weighing at least from 1500 to 2000 lbs. each, were thrown into a stone dwelling on the banks of Schuylkill on the opposite side of the road; the stones entered the front door, taking the door with both jams of the wall along with them. The larger stone went through the partition of the next dwelling, destroying tables, chairs, furniture and crockery. Remarkable to relate, two women and a girl who were in the front room all escaped without severely. The cause of her so sudden death is unknown.—U. S. Gazette.

A Singular Phenomenon.—The water of the New Spring, on the Platt, about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, last forth with a rapidity before unknown, discharging a column of water six inches in diameter, which rose to the height of from twelve to sixteen feet above the tube—and so continued for the space of half an hour. At this time the water was quite muddy, but before 4 o'clock, it became perfectly clear and pure as ever—and is now again resorted to by the Visitants as formerly.

It was amusing to behold the phizzes of the groupe who surrounded the Spring, while in its perturbed state. Many countenances were changed—some gathered blackness—and others again paleness.—Some viewed it as a precursor of an earthquake, or some other great concussion of the earth. Such was the great contrast among the Spectators who witnessed this scene.—Ballston Spa Gazette.

From Greece.—The ship Chancellor, despatched by the Albany and New York Committees, with supplies of provisions for the suffering Greeks, has returned to New York.

Colonial.

The Fredericton Gazette mentions, that it is in contemplation to erect a new church at that place, on a superior scale. The following paragraph was abstract from the same paper:—

"We are informed His Excellency, during one of his late visits to the upper part of the country, met with a very aged and destitute Indian, in whose welfare His Excellency has taken a lively interest. The Indian whose name is Pierce Toma, lives at Meductic, and is, according to his own statement ninety three years old. His Excellency, deeming him to be a very proper object of charity, caused him to come down to Fredericton, and immediately directed the Commissioners for superintending Indian affairs, to have him decently clothed and relieve his present wants, and also to adopt measures for his future relief and sustenance. It is worthy of remark that while putting on his new apparel he seemed to manifest the most sincere joy and gratitude. It was also discovered, from the aged Indian's statements, that he was a soldier, in the battle on the Heights of Abraham, (in 59 we think) where he lost an arm and an eye; and this circumstance, we believe, His Excellency intends to enquire into, and if found to be correct, Pierce Toma will no doubt meet with a cordial Benefactor in His Excellency, and be provided for in a sure and comfortable manner during the remainder of his days."

The Editor of the Courier expresses a hope that Government may be induced, by the representations which have been transmitted by His Excellency, the Lt. Governor, to consider the Bay Verte Canal as an enterprise worthy of their favour; and give as has been done to the Welland & Rideau Canals' a sum to assist its completion.

Lower Canada.

In consequense of the increase of 2s. 6d. in the price of Ashes, we should suppose the holders of this article will seize the favourable opportunity of disposing of their stock on hand, the present price 29s. 6d. to 30s. being much higher than the most sanguine could have calculated upon, only a few months ago.—Mont. Gazette.

The Southampton, which arrived yesterday on her return voyage from Grenada, has confirmed the accounts received, via. the United States, that the crops in the West-India islands were generally very deficient, and that the produce of the islands would be scarce and high. The Havannah had arrived in the Downs in consequence changed bands in this merket, and it is quoted at 8d per gallon advance.—ib

Sudden death.—It has from time immemorial been a practice amongst the old inhabitants of this country, that on the birth day of any person, a party of his or her friends would assemble at the house and present a bouquet to the individual whose birth-day they were commemorating—if a man, the bouquet is usually a pipe decorated with flowers should it be in the season when they are in bloom, if not, artificial ones; and if a female, a pound cake is usually presented, similarly decorated. On Tuesday last, a woman named La-Rose, residing in the Recollet Suburb, accompanied by some others, repaired to the house of a friend, to present a bouquet, in observance of the custom; she was in perfect good health on entering the house, but, dreadful to relate, had scarcely time to be seated, when she expired in the midst of their revelry. The cause of her so sudden death is unknown.

In our paper of last Saturday we mentioned that an inquest was held on the body of a man found dead in the water near Mr. Froste's ship-yard, the verdict of which was, that he had come to his death by accident. Upon a more minute examination it was ascertained that the man was murdered and thrown into the place where he was found; and on the positive testimony of two witnesses we understand that George Henderson and John Shields have been committed to wait trial for the crime, Henderson as principal and Shields as accessary after the fact; the former is the person who gave testimony in favour of Cameron, who is shortly to take his trial for the murder of the late lamented Mr. Watson, and it is hoped that something may from this transaction transpire to bring to justice the perpetrator of the death which brought that respected man to an untimely end.—Canadian Courant.

The homeward-bound spring vessels have generally arrived in Great Britain after short passages. The Lady Gordon appears to have had a passage of 19 or 20 days to Liverpool.—Quebec Mercury.

The SURVEYOR GENERAL is now absent on a tour through the Province, in pursuance of instructions from the Government in Council, for the purpose of collecting materials to fill up certain statistical and Topographical returns required at the Colonial Office for the information of His MAJESTY'S Ministers, as also of acquiring a knowledge of the general state of the new settlements in the Townships, in furtherance of the objects of his Tour in 1824. The SURVEYOR GENERAL will traverse, in the first instance, the old settlements of the Country, and will afterwards visit those sections of it more recently settled by the Emigrant population.—*Off. DEATH OF MR. DESJARDINS.—It is with sincere sorrow that we announce to the public, the sudden death of this very excellent and public spirited individual. Mr. D., it appears, while on a collecting tour on account of the Desjardins Canal, called at the house of Mr. Andrew Pettit, of Grimsby, last evening—remained there during the night, and took breakfast this morning apparently in his usual good health; after which he walked out into the fields, in Company with Mr. Pettit, to look at some oxen, which the former was desirous of purchasing. Having transacted his business with Mr. Pettit, Mr. Desjardins proceeded to another field to catch his horse—which had been turned out during the night, and proceed on his journey—while Mr. Pettit went to another direction, to attend to his farming business. On the return of the latter towards his house, about noon, he was surprised to see Mr. D's. horse sill in the field; and in advancing a few steps more towards his house, he discovered the body of Mr. Desjardins, lying on the ground, with his hat, and the bridle, which he had taken with him to catch the horse, lying a few yards in advance of the body. A Coroner has been sent for, on whose arrival a Jury will be impannelled, to inquire into the cause of his decease—which is, as yet, unknown.

Saturday Evening.—An inquest has been taken—Verdict, died by the visitation of God.

Post Office.—Within the last few months, a number of Packages and Money Letters addressed to, or mailed by persons residing in this neighbourhood, have been entrusted to, and mislaid between this place and the Lower Province. An English packet addressed to the Editor of this paper, to the care of the Lord Bishop of Quebec, and delivered by His Lordship to the Deputy Post Master General, was franked by the latter Gentleman, and mailed at Quebec in May last, but has never come to hand; and although every exertion has been made to recover the packet, no traces of it can be found.

A short time since Mr. Sheldon of Hamilton, mailed £75 for Montreal, which has also been lost. Mr. Chep of Ancaster, sent £25 on the 14th August last, in a letter to Montreal; and in a few days afterwards, Mr. Campbell of Dundas, mailed £40 in a Letter for the same place, both of which have been abstracted from the mail, and no traces of either can be discovered.

A vigilant investigation into these circumstances, ought to be immediately instituted by the Post-Office Department, in order that the perpetrator of these repeated robberies may be discovered and punished; for the frequency of occurrence of these delinquencies, has already created so much distrust of the Post-Office department in this neighborhood, that unless something is immediately done to restore public confidence, no Merchant will venture to entrust his property to the care of that department.

SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 8

NIAGARA FALLS EXHIBITION.

The day fixed on for the passage of the Schr. Michigan, with a cargo of "ferocious" quadrupeds and feathered bipeds, over the NIAGARIAN CATARACT, has passed away, and the scene has, we dare say, gratified many thousands, and disappointed perhaps, as many more in proportion as the "splendor" of the exhibition exceeded, or fell below, their respective anticipations.—The day was as favourable as could have been expected, or desired; and, during the whole of the early part of it, the roads, in every direction, by land and by water, leading to the great centre of attraction, were covered—with vehicles and vessels laden with living lumber—with equestrians and with pedestrians of every "kindred and tongue," until the "the congregated multitude" on both sides of the way, amounted perhaps, to "ten thousand souls."

Among the vessels which made their appearance during the morning in the Niagara River, were the Steam-Boats Canada, Niagara and Queenston, the Ontario and Martha-Ogden—all from Lake Ontario—and the Chippewa, William Penn, Niagara, Pioneer, and Henry Clay from Lake Erie. The three former laden with Subjects of the "Sea Girt Isle" and the seven latter with a far more numerous deputation from the family of "Brother Jonathan."—It was about three o'clock when the Michigan, having a crew of four or five persons—with 1 or 2 Bears, a Buffalo, and other Quadrupeds, an EAGLE and a Goose—the former made fast to the vessel—and some other of the 'feathered tribe'—made her appearance, in company with the Chippewa, who escorted her below the Island, nearly opposite to Chippewa Village; when the crew put off in their boat, and after towing her to within about half a mile of the rapids, made for—and soon arrived safe on—the Canada shore.

The Michigan approached the rapids in very good style, with her head inclined to the Canada shore, and reached the first ledge in about twenty minutes after the Steam Boat left her—this was a moment of the most intense interest, and attracted the undivided attention of the multitude, who had seperated into groups, and taken their stations on the banks of the river, and on the Islands—on the house tops and on the balconies—on the table rock above—&c on the rocky banks below—the Cataract. Every eye which could command a view of it, was rivetted on the Michigan atthis moment—& when she made the first plunge into the rapids, there was a simultaneous shout of applause—the shock was evidently a severe one, and a great deal of water upon her heterogeneous ship's crew, who now began to bestir themselves—his Buffaloship was evidently in uneasy quarters—the Eagle vainly essayed to soar from the "troubled waters," around him, to a more congenial element—and even Brunswick imitated signs of uneasiness, and began to look out for more comfortable quarters. Before arriving at the second ledge—pitched on her starboard side, and before righting, both her masts were carried away, the Buffalo and several other animals were thrown overboard, while Bruin, after taking an observation from the bowsprit head, committed himself to the waters, in search of his less gallant partners. After this shock the vessel became waterlogged, & floating down the rapids, without further obstruction, to the brink of the precipice, plunged into the 'roaring abyss,' and, in an instant, was shattered to atoms. A Goose—the only animal which went over the Falls and remained alive—was picked up, in a state of exhaustion, and is now in possession of a gentleman at York (Mr. Duggan)—the Buffalo—apparently quite dead—floated in the wake of the ship, and went over the Falls in a few moments after.

The Bears [we believe there were two of them] after making every exertion, and stemming the violence of the current, for several minutes, reached a small Island near the Canada shore, and one of them was afterwards purchased—and is now the property of an Ontario House—by Capt. Monier.

A vigilant investigation into these circumstances, ought to be immediately instituted by the Post-Office Department, in order that the perpetrator of these repeated robberies may be discovered and punished; for the frequency of occurrence of these delinquencies, has already created so much distrust of the Post-Office department in this neighborhood, that unless something is immediately done to restore public confidence, no Merchant will venture to entrust his property to the care of that department.

The 12th of July Riot.—The Grand Jury have this morning returned true bills against several of the individuals who were concerned in this unpleasant affair.

We regret to learn, that yesterday about 12 o'clock, a Barn belonging to Mr. Thomas J. Dorland, of Adolphustown, was burnt by lightning. The building was filled with grain at the time of the accident.—K. Chronicle.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1827.

The late papers bring us no further intelligence from Europe. Judge Willis and family, have arrived at New-York.

The LORD BISHOP proceeded to Kingston on Wednesday last. We are informed that the new Episcopal Church erected in that place, will be ready for the performance of Divine Service, on His Lordships arrival.

EXECUTION.—On Monday last, at Niagara, the sentence of the Law was carried into execution on Leslie McCall, late a Soldier in the 70th Regt for the murder of his Wife. The principal evidence against this unfortunate man, was a daughter of the late Mrs. McCall, whose testimony we are informed; was given in such a clear and distinct manner, as to prepossess every person in Court in her favour. She is only ten years of age, and deprived as she now is of those, to whom she naturally looked for support and protection, we are happy to hear that through the humane interposition of certain individuals who feel an interest for this innocent child, an adequate provision is about to be made for her future support, and respectability in life.

We are indebted to the Gore Gazette for an account of the descent of the Vessel over the Rapids, and Falls of Niagara. It was not in our power to be present on the occasion, but from several friends who witnessed the scene, we learn that its sublimity, exceeded their most sanguine expectations.

A correspondent in the Montreal Herald states, that the representation of the people in Parliament has hitherto been confined to the French Seigniories, or lands held under the feudal tenure; while the Townships granted under the English tenure of free and common socage, exceeding the Seigniories in extent, and containing 40,000 inhabitants of British origin have not a single voice in the Provincial House of Assembly.

It will be gratifying to the inhabitants of the Province to learn, that the object of Dr. Strachans visit to England has been most fully accomplished, and that the establishment of a University in Upper Canada, is an event, no longer to be desired, but one which will be carried into immediate execution. The attention of His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, has long been most anxiously directed to this important object, and it is to His Excellency's favorable representations, and the exertions of Dr. Strachan, whose time has been devoted during his absence, to its promotion, that the Province is indebted for its successful accomplishment.

We have inserted in this days paper, Mr. Hortons Letter addressed to Mr. Randal, by direction of Lord Goderich, on the subject of the petition against the Naturalization Bill. From this Letter it appears that the decision of His Majesty in Council, on the subject, will be suspended until the final decision of the questions, which have been brought into discussion. The "short Bill," which Mr. Randal says, it was the object of his Mission to get passed, has not been brought forward; and the matter remains undetermined. The only difference we can observe in the mode now proposed in Mr. Hortons Letter, for "following up His Majesty's conciliatory intentions as expressed by the late Secretary of State," is in its details—the principles of the measure remain unaltered, and to our minds it appears very doubtful whether those, who, when the question was first agitated, so violently contended that nothing more was required, to remove all doubts, than a declaratory Law will under any modification that may be proposed, be induced to assent to the principle that "the Subjects of the United States, whether born before or after the Treaty of 1783, are Aliens, and must in point of Law, be regarded in that character."

In its present unsettled state, it may not be amiss to look back, and inquire, whether the question which, "still remains open," might not have been disposed of long since, if opposition, had not suffered itself, to lose sight of moderation.

It will be remembered that, when the subject was first brought before the Legislature, the Legislative Council, passed a Bill, which would effectually have set the question at rest. A most violent clamour however, was raised against it—it was contended, that the persons who had come from the United S. and were included in the provisions of the Bill, did not require Naturalization, but, that with respect to them, nothing more was necessary, than to declare the Law on the subject, that they were, and should be, to all intents and purposes, British Subjects.

These amendments, so extraordinary in their nature, and so completely at variance with the intentions of His Majesty's Government, the Legislative Council could not assent to, and as every endeavor on their part to bring the matter to an amicable adjustment was frustrated, by the most unyielding opposition, the Session ended without any Bill having been passed—Subsequently the details of the measure were varied, and the same opposition manifested itself—It is again proposed to vary those details, but from the recollection of past events, we do not anticipate a more favorable result. As the matter now stands, we only ask those who are interested, to refer to the Bill passed in 1825 by the Legislative Council, and to put the question to themselves—whether, if that Bill had been received, as it ought to have been, their rights and privileges, would not have been secured to them? It may perhaps be asked—Why cannot we now have a bill of the same kind—short and comprehensive? The question must be put to those, whose unreasonable opposition in the first instance, prevented its being passed. They then refused, what they now, ask for—let them answer to the country for their conduct!

With respect to Mr. Randals Letter we shall only say a few words.—It is an extraordinary document, and we are not surprised, that with it, the correspondence should terminate.

From previous accounts, we had every reason to hope that, the late indisposition of Mr. Canning, was not of such a nature, as to create any serious apprehensions for his safety. The late intelligence from England, however, conveys to us the melancholy tidings of the death of the Right. Hon. Gentleman, which took place at Chiswick, on 9, August. The following particulars are taken from a Supplement to the Albany Argus:—

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

By the Steam-Boat North America, capt. Cochrane, which arrived here at 6 minutes past 5 this afternoon, making the passage from New-York in 10 hours and 59 min. we received New-York papers of this morning announcing the arrival of the Ship United States, from Liverpool, bringing London papers of the 19th ult and Liverpool of the 13th.

The most important intelligence contained in them is the DEATH OF MR. CANNING.

Mr. Canning died at Chiswick on the 9th of August. His disorder was inflamation of the intestines and gangrene, attributed principally to intense attention to his official duties. Towards the evening of the last day of his illness, says the Courier, he grew more and more feeble, and unconscious of all that was passing around him. In this state he continued until ten minutes before 4 o'clock, on the next morning, when, without a struggle, for nature was exhausted, and almost without a sigh, he resigned his being. His previous sufferings were excruciating.

Mr. Canning's funeral was to take place on the 16th August, and was to be strictly private. He was to be interred in Westminster Abbey.

Intense interest was excited by the illness of Mr. Canning. The London correspondent of the Liverpool Courier under date of the 6th Aug. says—"No event within our recollection has excited a more intense interest in the city than the illness of Mr. Canning. The anxiety to learn the latest intelligence from Chiswick was unabated throughout the day, and the inquiries were so numerous and incessant that it seemed as if the merchants had abandoned their usual occupations for the purpose of making them. The Exchange was nearly as much thronged during the day as it is during the hours of transacting business. A very marked effect was produced on the public securities.

The London Courier of August 10, says of ministerial arrangements—"It would not only be premature, but idle, to talk of what may be the ultimate ministerial arrangements. Lord Goderich having received His Majesty's commands to form a new cabinet, or to speak with more precision, to supply the vacancies occasioned by the lamented death of Mr. Canning; the noble Viscount is of course to be regarded as the individual who will be at the head of His Majesty's Government. Beyond this no step has yet been taken, but one thing we believe is certain, there will be no change in the principles upon which Mr. Canning's government was established.—A Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign office last night, which sat from 9 o'clock till half past 11, at which, we may presume, those general considerations only were discussed which would necessarily precede any specific measures. A messenger was despatched this morning by Lord Goderich to the King communicating the result."

The Sun of the 11th. states that the appointment of Lord Goderich as First Minister, had given great and general satisfaction.

Mr. Huskisson is spoken of for the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer.

By the aid of telegraphic communication, Mr. Canning's death was known in Paris 10 hours after it had taken place and produced a great sensation.

THE GUERILLA BROTHERS.

The spirit of Chivalry which at one time shed a lustre over the name of the unhappy Spaniard, seemed to rekindle for a moment in the day of their degradation—when the giant tread of Napoleon echoed along the track in which the Roman, the Goth, and the Moor had successively proceeded him; and the ancient heroic valour which seem to belong rather to the history of former times than to the dark and blotted page of the present.

Among the desperate adventurers of Merida's band were two brothers noted for their daring courage, if courage it may be termed, which sets every calculation of danger at defiance.

They had volunteered into the band at the same time; following the same fortunes, sharing the same dangers, and reaping the same glory, it may be supposed that unknown and unfriended as they were, the children of the same cradle would have clung to each other with a warm and confiding regard: but in its place a strange mysterious reserve seemed to govern their mutual intercourse. A superficial observer might sometimes have believed them to be enemies; but there was nothing of the bitterness or the hypocrisy of hatred either in their silence or their looks; and on one or two occasions, a burst of natural feeling was seen to break through the cold and gloomy austerity they had assumed.

These singularities of disposition were ascribed by their comrades to different causes; some attributed it to blighted love, others to the conflict of religious zeal with patriotic enthusiasm. By degrees, as they pursued the dangers of war, their confidence appeared to forsake them, their ardour became different from that instinctive impulse which prompts on young and fearless hearts to court danger for the honour of opposing it; mistrust and suspicion usurped the place of fraternal affection; a cold reserve locked up in their bosoms every kindred sympathy; their noble emulation degenerated into a desperate and unnatural rivalship; even in the mad career of victory their enthusiasm seemed to bear some reference to the implacable thought which governed their destiny, and at length the fact became certain, from repeated observation, that the one only rushed into danger that the other might be forced into some secret conquest, to follow.

In one of the wildest solitudes of the Sierra Morena had the followers of Merida stationed themselves to harass the march of the French General. A desperate and bloody struggle was the result, and among those who perished, tinguished themselves in the fearful contest, were the Guerilla Brothers. One of them appeared to be the directing genius of the slaughter; wherever the fight was thickest, there was he foremost; at every cessation of actual struggle, his eyes were turned towards his brother, who, although severely wounded in the beginning of the engagement, was still seen sometimes by his side, but more frequently toiling after him in his furious career, struggling to gain the place which the fierce and haughty glances on the other seemed to assure him to be his. The signal for retreat had now sounded, and the Guerillas were suddenly beginning to separate, each taking a different route to their common rendezvous, thus melted away at once before the eyes of the baffled enemy, and eluding his grasp, just at the moment when fresh reinforcements from the glen assured him of being able to annihilate their slender force at one blow.

The foremost Guerrilla, still unwounded, relinquished his prey at the sound, and, dashing into the trees, began to re-ascend the mountain, when the clash of arms induced him to turn out of his path—and the next moment he beheld his brother, pale, bleeding, and almost exhausted, sinking under the bayonet of a French Soldier. Who can paint the contending feelings which at this moment burst upon his mind—the mingled feelings of love, friendship, hatred, hope, fear, pity—all things that can warm, or chill, or melt, or madden the human heart, were there present. A single blow could yet save him—but one bound, and his interposing arm would preserve the life of the son of his own mother—a single shout from his lips would scar away the slayer from his purpose.

It was but a moment—but one moment—the next the living statue started from his trance of horror—the blade quivered in his grasp—the blood rushed into his guilty face—and he sprung with a shout to the rescue. It was too late; the blow had descended; the dying Spaniard turned his face towards his brother, and they exchanged one look—the last.

The Guerilla's eyes were still fixed on the lifeless body of his brother, when their comrades came to bury the dead, and it was by main force that the living was separated from the history of former times than to the dark and the corpse, to mark the spot signalized by the guilt of man, or the vengeance of Heaven.

The two brothers had loved her with the most violent and impetuous passion; and she, though secretly preferring him who had just stood before her, in a romantic spirit of patriotism, had vowed that he only should obtain her love, who went forth to the battles of her insulted country, and returned with the brightest laurels: if either should fall, the survivor was to bring as a token, the portrait, which, with her own hand, she bound round his neck.

The news of the fight we have alluded to, had been accompanied with intelligence of the death of both brothers, probably owing to neither having been again seen in the band; and on this night, with the tears scarcely dry on her cheek, she had yielded an indifferent hand to the solicitations and menaces of her relations.

With regard to the Guerilla, nothing more was known with certainty of his fate; but the form of a man answering his description, was found long after on the ridge of a distant hill, which overlooks the scene he had quitted. Some earth was thrown over the remains, and a rude cross raised, according to the custom of the country, to mark the spot signalized by Letters have been received from Captain Beechey, of the Blossom, dated at the Sandwich Islands, up to the latter end of February last. The ship's company were at that time all well.

The King continues in excellent health at the Royal Lodge, taking his usual drives, and dining, when the weather permits, at the Virginia Water—July 29.

The business at the customs continue in the same satisfactory state as during the last quarter. In the port of London only, there are near seven hundred British and Foreign ships entered more than during the corresponding periods (from Jan. to the 23d July, 1826, and from Jan. to July 23, 1827.) The duties paid on sugar alone in London, lately, amounted to £20,000 in the course of one week.—Besides good arrivals already of West India produce, near three hundred sale of West India ships are expected in the course of a few months. The increasing productiveness of the revenue is accompanied by the material diminution of Government expenses in various branches of the service.

A new system has been adopted at the Horse Guards, respecting Officers who may have business to transact with Sir Herbert Taylor. Instead of the application being made in the first instance at ten o'clock on the morning of the Levee, when the names were inserted in rotation, up to fifty, which was the number he generally saw on each occasion, the direction is now made to apply in the first instance by letter to Sir Herbert, stating in a corner of the cover—"Tuesdays and Fridays Levees"—when a return will immediately be given to such application, stating the day on which the person so applying will be seen by Sir Herbert Taylor at the Horse Guards.

VAN DIEMAN'S LAND.—A vessel sailed from Hull, for this colony with 60 mechanics, shepherds, and agricultural labourers, to cultivate 16,000 acres of land belonging to an English Company. They are to be carried out free to the settlement, and are engaged for three years, to receive board and £10 a year, when, if they are not re-engaged, they must find their way home at their own expense. Those engaged receive £20 in advance to purchase clothes, and receive 2s. 6d. a day till the vessel sails from Hull.

From the Court Circular of Aug. 9.

Sir Matthew Tierney and Dr. Holland were present with Mr. Canning, when the right hon. gentleman breathed his last. Immediately upon Mr. Canning's decease, Mr. Stapleton, his private secretary, issued the following:

"Chiswick, Aug. 8, 4 o'clock, A. M.

"Mr. Canning expired this morning, without pain, at ten minutes before four o'clock."

A copy of the above was immediately forwarded to the Marquis of Lansdown, as Principal Secretary of State to the Home Department.

Messengers, with despatches, containing the account of the dangerous state of Mr. Canning, were sent off on Monday night to Viscount Granville, our Ambassador at Paris, and to the Marquis Wellesley, to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

The Marquis of Lansdown left town at half past ten o'clock yesterday morning, to communicate the melancholy intelligence to his Majesty, at the Royal Lodge in Windsor Park.

Viscount Dudley and Ward ordered summonses to be issued for the assembling of a Cabinet Council.

Viscount Goderich left town about half past two o'clock, in his carriage and four, for the Royal Lodge in Windsor Park, to attend the King, having received his Majesty's commands for that purpose. The Right Sturges Bourne left town at the same time, having also received a communication from his Majesty to proceed to Windsor to attend his Majesty.

The Marquis of Lansdown returned to town about four o'clock from the Royal Lodge.

At four o'clock the Cabinet Ministers assembled at the late residence of Mr. Canning, in Downing street; those present were the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Lansdown, the Marquis of Anglesea, Ward Viscount Palmerston, Mr. Wynn, Mr. Tierney, and Lord Bexley.

The Lord Chancellor arrived at the Council, at five o'clock. The Ministers continued a deliberation till half past six.

Viscount Goderich, after having a long audience with the King returned to town yesterday evening.

A messenger was despatched to the Royal Lodge, in Windsor Park, immediately after the separating of the ministers, carrying despatches which, it was understood, contained the result of the delibration of the Cabinet Council.

At nine o'clock last night another Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign-office, which was attended by the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Lansdown, the Marquis of Anglesea, the Earl of Harrowby, the Earl of Carlisle, Viscount Goderich, Viscount Dudley and Ward, Mr. Wynn, Mr. Tierney, and Lord Bexley.

The Council did not break up till half past eleven o'clock last night.

The symptoms of Mr. Canning's illness, towards 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, (Wednesday, the 8th,) assumed a more decided crisis than hitherto, and it was ascertained that mortification had taken place in the region of the left side, which appeared greatly to extend. Notwithstanding some intervals of sleep which the right honorable gentleman had, his medical attendants perceived that he was gradually making under the effects of the malady, and towards the evening, the lassitude and weakness produced by the mortification, became more manifest, and Mr. Canning wandered occasionally in mind; but his powers altogether were gradually departing, and the extremities were weakening more and more, and losing all perceivable life and motion. About twelve o'clock last night his approaching dissolution became so apparent that an express was sent to the King, at Windsor. Mr. Canning, during the early part of the night, had interviews with Mrs. Canning, his son and daughter; he had nearly lost the power of speech, but was in full possession of his faculties. The interview was extremely affecting. Between one and two o'clock the mortification had advanced over the trunk, and was extending to the vitals. About the latter hour he extremities became cold, and a group of death tokens appeared rapidly collecting upon the unfortunate gentleman. In the anti-chamber several official persons had assembled to prepare the final report of the right honorable gentleman's physicians, who were in attendance, and an express departed every half hour to Downing-street. About 3 o'clock the state of the right Hon. gentleman became more critical, and his death was momentarily expected. It may be, perhaps, necessary here to remark, that during the last hour Mr. Canning had been altogether free from pain, and had been in a state of excessive drowsiness or stupor, from which he could not be roused; this is a necessary consequence to the mortification. This state of languor continued until ten minutes and a half before four o'clock, when Mr. Canning expired, without any apprent pain or struggle. The melancholy occurrence was known almost immediately to Mrs. Canning and the family. The despatches transmitted by King's messengers were closed by half past four o'clock; they were sent to the King, at Windsor, to the Duke of Sussex, to all the Ministers, to the Foreign Ambassadors, to Kensington Palace, to the Duke of Portland, Duke of Devonshire, &c. The courier to Windsor travelled post and four.—Evening paper.

From the first moment of the attack, Mrs. Canning invariably stated her full conviction that it would prove fatal: and no symptom that occurred induced her, for one moment, to change her gloomy anticipation. Upon Sir M. Tierney, who it was resolved should undertake the painful commission, entering Mrs. C.'s apartment, the lady implored him, in wild accents, to tell her the worst; but, exclaimed she, "He is dead,—I know he is dead; your looks are more than enough;" and then relaxed into a paroxysm of grief. Sir Michael threw immediately saw that the communication could not, with even remote safety be made; and instead of doing so, tried to soothe the distracted feelings of the lady, by holding out hopes he too well knew could not be realized.

The Duke of Portland communicated to Mrs. Canning, on Wednesday evening, the fact of her husband's death. The intelligence, though conveyed with all possible delicacy, gave Mrs. Canning a severe shock. She was on Thursday rather more composed.

Something remarkably was observed in the appearance of the body. For several hours the features were so changed that they could not have been recognized; but in the course of the 9th, they resumed their original placid aspect. During his delirium, his mind was wandering on great political subjects.

The King wrote with his own hand an order to bestow the vacant appointment of Commissioner of Customs on Mr. Ellis, late Secretary, as a mark of respect for Mr. Canning's memory.

Mr. C's. situation, it is stated, was too delicate, and his disposition too restless to bear up against his constant "siege of troubles." He had been afflicted for several years with maladies showing a diseased state of the alimentary canal, and his habits of living were not calculated to counteract them. He caught a violent cold at the funeral of the Duke of York, which increased them; and his constitution was "breaking up" when he was made Premier. He suffered most from the lumbago, and took another cold in returning from attending the King at Windsor on the 30th, which brought on a fit of this disorder. Since he entered the Premiership, all his ailments have gone on increasing, until he was carried off by a confirmed, though lingering inflammation of the intestines. During the last stages of that extremely painful disease, he is only occasionally, and for a short time, delirious; or did he at any time entirely lose his sanity, as has been reported. At long intervals he was perfectly sensible and composed, he had but little apprehension of his immediate danger.

Liverpool, Aug. 18.—We are happy to learn that Mr. Huskisson's health has considerably improved since he left England.

On Friday last all the vessels in the port, both English and Foreign, hoisted their flags half-mast high, in consequence of the death of Mr. Canning. The flags on the Town-hall, the Parish Churches and the Theatre, were also hoisted half-staff high, and have continued flying ever since, out of respect for the memory of that distinguished and lamented statesman.

LONDON, August 13.

The money market has not been very active to-day, the prices have not varied much. Consols for the account have been 83¼ 3-8 and 83 5-8; the nearest quotation at present is 83 1-2.

An extraordinary degree of fever had prevailed in London, during the months of June and July.—

Mr. Constable, the bookseller, died on the 21st July, at his house, in Park Place, Edinburgh. He had been afflicted for some time with a dropsical complaint, which, with the anxiety of mind produced by his misfortunes, had hastened his death.

Money was so abundant that it could be obtained at only two per cent. on good bills, and every thing wore a cheerful aspect.

The wheat crop in Wales has seldom been better than this season. In Scotland it will be scanty: but oats and barley are abundant. In Ireland the crops generally look well and plentiful. Potatoes will be truly abundant.

Despatches have reached London from Lieut. General Sir H. W. Clinton to the 7th of July. The army remained at Leria, Thomer. Torres, Novas, Torres Vedras, and Lisbon and were in excellent health.

LIVERPOOL, July 31st, 1827.

Montreal, new, 27s 6d a 28s—old, 24s 6d a 26s 6d: Pearl, first sort, Boston and New-York. 27s 6d a 28s; Montreal, 28s 6d a 29s.

NEW CHANGE. LAW.—We are happy to find that Mr. Peel has succeeded in his arduous undertaking, to confer a great benefit upon the public, "consolidating and amending the Laws in England relative to Larceny and other offences specified therewith," comprised in the Act 7 and 8 Geo. 4, Chap. 29, passed 21st June, 1827, which came into operation yesterday.

The public will in some degree appreciate the labor of the undertaking, when we state that the Act consolidates the provisions contained in 120 Acts, beginning with the statute of Henry the 3d, commonly called the Charta de Foresta, against stealing the King's venison, in the year 1225, and ending with the Act 7, Geo. 4, Chap. 69, in 1320, comprising a period of 600 years.

CANADA COMPANY.—On the 25th June the half-yearly meeting was held at London Tavern, Bishopgate street. Charles Bosanquet, Esq. took the chair and read the report. It stated, that Mr. Galt, the Company's superintendant in Upper Canada, had judiciously made an arrangement for the disposal of the Crown reserves, and other lands in Upper Canada, which the Company had purchased of His Majesty's Government.—About seven hundred offers had been made up to the 30th of April last, but he had only accepted fifty, which were for ten thousand acres of land, at an average rate of 10s 9d an acre. The Company has made great efforts to diffuse authentic information upon the subject of emigration to the Canadas, in order that through the ignorance which had prevailed upon the subject amongst emigrants themselves, and the false information which had been circulated by interested persons, whole ship loads of miserable creatures had been landed at Quebec, entirely destitute of the means of subsistence; and that, after loitering for some time in Quebec or Montreal, the poor wretches were obliged either to advance up the country in quest of occupation and support, or to remain a burden upon the Canadas, had inhabitants of Lower-Canada. The number and distress of pauper emigrants had been so much increased of late years, that emigration societies had been formed with a view to the alleviation of their miseries. The emigration to the River St. Lawrence was greater in 1826 than it had ever been at any preceding period. The report then alluded to the system on which the affairs of the Company had been conducted,—the services of the Directors had been, hitherto, for a period of three years, given for nothing; but this was not to continue, and they would continue to attend gratituously to the affairs of the Company. With a view of securing a punctual attendance and efficient management of the Company's concerns, the Directors proposed that £500 a year should be placed at their disposal, as attendance money, and that a salary of £1000 per annum, for two years, be allowed to Mr. M'Gillivray, the chairman of the committee of management. Some opposition was made to this proposition, but the report was adopted by a great majority.

Scotland,

On the 24th June, a sermon was preached in St. George's Church by the Rev. Robert Burns of Paisley, for the Society for Promoting the Moral and Religious Interests of Scottish Settlers in the British provinces of North America, when a liberal collection of forty guineas was made.

The late Duke of Gordon.—At ten o'clock on Thursday morning, the remains of his Grace were removed from Holyrood House, for Gordon Castle, previously to their interment in the family vault at Elgin. The procession moved along Waterloo Bridge and Prince's Street. The concourse of people on the streets, from Holyroodhouse to the west end of Prince's Street, was very great. One of the most affecting features in the procession was the attendance of the detachment of the gallant regiment which had so long and so honorable born his Grace's patronymic in various quarters of the globe, and which had barely returned in time from a distant land, to honor the manes of their local chief, in their progress to the tomb of his ancestors.

GRASGOW, August 1st.—We still continue to have a good demand for wheat, and prices are fully supported. Canada Wheat per 240 lbs. 30s. to 31s. 6d.—Greenock Advertiser.

The arrival of the Strantworth, Transport, at Portsmouth, from Quebec, is noticed in the Greenock Advertiser of the 30th August. The date of arrival is not given. Lieut. Col. Mc-Grigor 79th Regt. and Captain Dallons Company Royal Artillery sailed in the above Vessel.

Emigration from the Highlands.—A vessel sailed from Leith about three weeks ago, with provisions, &c. for Tobermory, destined (along with two other ships which were proceeding from Newcastle) to take about 700 emigrants from this district of the Highlands to the island of Cape Breton. Last year three vessels left Tobermory, with above 900 passengers for the same destination; and we understand that one thousand more individuals have determined to follow their friends and relations to their transatlantic settlement next year.

We understand that the venerable Bishop Jolly, of Fraserburgh, has announced his intention to furnish Beneath the whole of his valuable and extensive library for the use of theological students intended for the Episcopal Church in Scotland, and the British Colonies—the bequest to be hereafter placed under the charge of the Scotch Episcopal Professor of Divinity at Edinburgh.

Lower Canada.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—It is with painful regret, we have to notice the sudden death of Mr. ANDREW LAING, a respectable Hardware merchant of this city, and proprietor of Mills at Petit St. Esprit. While attending at the latter place and endeavouring to fix some little articles connected with the machinery (while in motion) he lost his hold and became entangled among the wheels, and was instantaneously killed.—This most distressing event occurred about 12 o'clock on the 6th instant.—Courant.

A similar circumstance has lately occurred which is an additional proof that though the course of justice is slow, it is not therefore the less certain, and though a criminal may remove far from the scene of his iniquities, the eye of an all-seeing Being is upon him, and that sooner or later he will be called upon even in this world to account for his outrages against the laws of religion and social order.

The atrocious robbery of the Reverend Mr. Masse, of Point Levi, which took place last winter, must be fresh in the recollection of our readers; it will also be remembered that much astonishment was expressed at the time as to where the bulk of the plundered property had been secreted, as the money found upon the prisoners, who were secured, formed but a small portion of the quantity stolen. It was also ascertained that other individuals besides those who were captured, were concerned in the nefarious transaction, although for the present they had eluded the hands of justice.

In the course of the last week, Mr. Delisle, the active and intelligent High Constable of this District, received a communication from the gentlemen connected with the Banking Establishment at St. Alban's, in the County of Franklin, in the neighbouring State of Vermont, stating that an individual calling himself Anthony Beaulieu, a Canadian, was in confinement there, charged with a robbery on that establishment, and that from several circumstances which had transpired it was supposed that he had been engaged in divers robberies and burglaries in Lower Canada. Mr. Delisle paid immediate attention to this notification, and on his arrival found the person suspected in gaol under a charge of felony for the robbery of the Bank. He recognized the man as one Antonie Vaudry, a name of some celebrity in the criminal records of the King's Bench. After his apprehension the premises were searched, and $1200 were discovered, which had been concealed in an outhouse, six gold and silver watches, and a quantity of gold coin also came to light in various parts of his dwelling. The man offered 1000 dollars to any one who would become bail for him, and stated that he had 500 dollars in gold, which were concealed in such a manner as to render their discovery impracticable.

It appears that this Vaudry established himself at St. Alban's about two years ago, in company with a female who passed for his wife—that his plausibility of manners, and apparently good deportment, had gained him the respect of his neighbours who were ignorant that he made use of their neighborhood as a place of refuge to which he might retreat with the spoils of his predatory incursions, and where new depredations might be planned in convenience and security. On his arrival there he purchased a lot of ground close to the churches, built a house, and set up his brother as a blacksmith. He himself lived on his means, stating that he had a Cooperage at Quebec, that he was in the habit of shipping goods to London, and that he had acquired a considerable sum with his wife. He was generally looked upon as an honest man, and moved with his wife in respectable society. This woman's name is Marie Verdun, and she is by no means unknown in Montreal and Quebec. Vaudry had lately purchased a mare, for which he gave 150 dollars, and kept her at livery at a considerable expense. His wife was possessed of a splendid wardrobe, a quantity of jewellery, gold watch and chain, &c. and every thing indicated comparative opulence.

Mr. Vaudry's evil genius (unfortunately for his own security) prompted him to do what more wary villains carefully abstain from, robbing in his own immediate vicinity—and for his depredations on the St. Alban's bank, he was confined on Mr. Delisle's arrival. Mr. Delisle was informed, that in the course of the spring Vaudry had circulated a considerable quantity of doubloons, and other gold coins of the same description with those which belonged to Messrs. Masse.

We understand that it is the intention of the Government to claim this criminal from the United States, in order that he may undergo his trial for the felonies in which he is strongly suspected to have been implicated.—Montreal Old Gazette

It is a source of gratification to us, and must be so to every friend of the Welland Canal, to learn the result of the last month's estimate of the labour performed on the Deep Cut; as it affords to the public a fair opportunity of judging of the utility of the system adopted by that ingenious and indefatigable contractor, Mr. Oliver Phelps, for carrying on this great work; and to the engineers, of calculating with tolerable certainty, the time the waters of the Welland may be brought through the canal, to lake Ontario.

The whole quantity of earth removed from the Deep Cut during the last month, amounted to 101,523 yards—leaving above the tow path only 370009 yet to excavate. Judging from this, we may with confidence look for the completion of this stupendous gulph, by June next; and it is hoped the first vessel may pass on the 4th of that month. This will be finishing the work some 3 or 10 years sooner than its opponents predicted, and many of them desired.—Farmers' Journal.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1827.

The papers by the last mail, do not bring us any later news from England. They are principally occupied with particulars of the lamented death of Mr. Canning, from which we have given such extracts as our limits permit.

We have heard that some evil disposed persons, set fire to the old Steam Boat Frontenac, at Niagara, on Saturday last, and that before the flames could be extinguished she was burnt to the waters edge. The proprietors were about breaking her up, with the intention of placing the machinery in a new Boat—we hope it has escaped uninjured.

The Honorable JOHN WALPOLE WILLIS and family arrived here, in the Steam Boat Canada, on Thursday last.

The Alien Question.—The various discussions which have taken place, since this question was first agitated, may have caused many persons, who have not an opportunity of referring to public documents, to place some reliance on the assertions which are now made, that, it was "a snare," laid by the administration of "this Colony" to "distract the Laws of the Country." Such is the language used by the Canadian Freeman, whose object it seems, is to induce the people to believe, that the doubts with respect to the rights and privileges of the persons interested in this question, were first raised by the Government. To shew that this is not the case, it will only be necessary to refer to the proceedings of the House of Assembly in 1823, when the subject was first brought before the public. Here then we find the House of Assembly, expressing its opinion in the following Resolutions:—

Resolutions of the House of Assembly, 1823.

Resolved,—That by the laws now in force in this province, all foreign protestants are admissable to become settlers therein, on conforming to the provisions contained in the said laws: and that on taking done so, may hold lands and enjoy all the privileges and immunities of natural born subjects within the province.

Resolved,—That from ignorance of the law and unavoidable difficulties, many inhabitants of the province, otherwise qualified have neglected or been unable to qualify themselves according to law, by which means they cannot legally exercise and enjoy the rights of subjects, within the same.

Resolved,—That some legislative provision is absolutely necessary for quieting the minds of all such persons and securing to them the enjoyment of their rights and properties, as His Majesty's subjects.

Resolved,—That this Provision can only be made by the Imperial Parliament.

With these Resolutions before him, we would ask any man of candor or common sense to say, whether the Administration, can be charged, with having laid "a snare to disturb the Laws of the Country."

These Resolutions no doubt, directed the attention of the Government, to the situation of those individuals, whom the House of Assembly had thus declared, could not "legally exercise and enjoy the rights of Subjects," and from that moment, it has been its most anxious desire, to relieve all doubts and to secure to them, "the enjoyment of their rights and properties, as His Majesty's Subjects."

With a view to this desirable end, the matter was submitted to the Imperial Government, and on instructions being received, at the ensuing Session of the Provincial Legislature, a Bill was passed by the Legislative Council, of which the following is a Copy:—

"An act to confirm and quiet in the possession of their Estates, and to admit to the Civil Rights of subjects, certain classes of persons therein mentioned.

"Whereas many persons have become resident in this province, who having been formerly citizens of the United States of America, and being subjects of the Government of those States, have never been naturalized as British subjects by any Act of Parliament; And Whereas there are also in this province many persons who came from other foreign countries, and many reduced Officers and discharged soldiers of foreign corps late in His Majesty's service, but not being subjects of His Majesty by birth or naturalization; And Whereas it is expedient that all such persons should be confirmed and quieted in the possession of their Estates, and should be admitted to the Civil Rights of subjects, with such exceptions as have been from time to time, provided by acts of the Legislature of this province, with respect to persons having been resident in the United States of America, or having taken the oath of Allegiance to their government; And Whereas His Excellency the Right Honorable Frederick, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, has been pleased to signify by Message to both Houses of the Legislature, that he has received His Majesty's express sanction, to consent to the passing of such enactment as may afford relief to such persons, being not in this province; Be it therefore enacted, by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of and under the authority of An Act passed in the parliament of Great Britain entitled, An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the government of the said province," and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act all persons who at the time of the passing thereof are resident inhabitants of this province, shall be deemed, adjudge, and taken within this province, to be His Majesty's natural born subjects, to all intents, constructions and purposes whatsoever, as if they, each of them, had been or were born within this province, so that no Estates of what nature or kind soever, heretofore purchased by them, or any of them within this province, or to which they or any of them shall have become, or may become, in any manner entitled, shall be liable to seizure into the hands of His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, or their titles thereto otherwise impeached, by reason of their having been Aliens, at the time of their making the said purchases, or becoming otherwise entitled, any statute, Law or thing whatsoever to the contrary notwithstanding.

II. "And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that all persons who have been at any time heretofore resident inhabitants of this province, and become resident therein, at any time after the passing of this act, shall be deemed natural born subjects of His Majesty, so that neither their title to any real estate within this province, nor the title of any person claiming under them, shall be in any manner impeached, by any proceeding on the part of His Majesty, His Heirs, or Successors, or otherwise howsoever by reason of their having been Aliens.

III. "Provided always nevertheless, And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that nothing in this Act contained shall extend or be construed to extend, to repeal or make void, or in any manner interfere with any Law of this province respecting the qualification of persons entitled to vote in the election of members to be returned to the House of Assembly, or to be returned as members of the said Assembly."

This Bill was objected to by the House of Assembly, who in its place proposed the famous declaratory Law, which conferred on all persons whose "Fathers or paternal Grand Fathers were born in the United States, previous to the year 1783," the rights and privileges of British Subjects—a principle, which if assented to, would in effect, have naturalized the whole population, of a foreign Country.

We have placed this Bill before our readers, in order that they may have an opportunity of judging, whether it would not have conferred, all this is now asked for.—The natural inquiry which suggests itself, is, why was it refused!" This question, as we before stated, must be answered by those, whose opposition at the time, prevented the matter being finally disposed of, in a manner which would have been satisfactory to the Country.—It must be answered by those, who expressed the most marked contempt for the instructions on which that Bill was founded, and who attempted to pass an Act in direct opposition to them. Against subsequent instructions the same feeling was exhibited—it was said that, there was no necessity for them—that they "embarrassed the constitutional discretion of the House," and that the House was "trammelled by these instructions."

From Mr. Randals Letters, given in the Colonial Advocate, it appears however, that instructions are again to be given—not only instructions—but the very draft of a Bill. Will the persons who advocated the propriety of disobeying such instructions on a former occasion, yield their assent to those now spoken of, accompanied by the copy of a Bill!—What the result will be, we of course cannot anticipate, but from the spirit in which past endeavours to settle the question, have been met, we are not without our apprehensions that however far concession may be induced to carry itself, something more will still be required.

The repeal of some Provincial Statutes, and British Enactments, is more than hinted at in Mr. Randals Letters, and it is ever asked why "instructions," are not sent, on the same subject to "other Colonies" intimating that, there is no necessity for those here.

It is our sincere desire to see this question, satisfactorily disposed of, and we have every reason to believe, that if the Bill of the Legislative Council had been fairly met, we should not at this day have to regret, that, "it still remains open."

Bridges.—The Don Bridge near this Town, is again in an impassable state—part of it gave way during the last week, and Horses and Carriages are now passed over, on a temporary floating bridge, on a toll being paid to the person who has erected that convenience.—This circumstance has afforded the Canadian Freeman, an opportunity, of venting a little alone against the Magistrates.—We have had occasion more than once, to state that, in such cases the Magistrates cannot act in any other way, than the Law directs.—If this system is bad, the fault lies in the Law, and should be amended. As it now stands the following is the course to be adopted, for making any necessary repairs—By 50 Geo. 3 Ch. 1. clause 13. the Road Surveyors must certify to the Quarter Sessions, that a particular work requires to be done—accompanied by an estimate of its probable cost. On this certificate and Estimate, the Magistrates in General Quarter Sessions, may declare the work to be necessary, and that they will take the matter into consideration at their next setting in General Quarter Sessions, and if then considered advisable by a majority, the former resolution may be confirmed, and the work ordered to be done, to paid for, from the District Treasury, provided the expence shall not exceed Fifty pounds.

From this it will be seen that, the Magistrates are bound in their authority, and cannot order the performance of any repairs, that may exceed Fifty pounds, & that even the expenditure of this sum must be made the subject matter of consideration, at two distinct sittings of the General Quarter sessions.

In the case before us, it is the general opinion that a new Bridge is required, and if Fifty pounds will not build it, the only remedy is by application to the Legislature.—We are willing to admit that, the Law requires to be amended, but while it remains as it is, it is unjust to accuse any public functionaries, with a neglect of duty.

POSTSCRIPT.

ONE DAY LATER FROM ENGLAND.

The Ship Robert Wilson, arrived at New-York, brings London dates to 16th August.

London, Aug. 14, (evening.)—The Courier states that Mr. Huskisson will be offered the leadership of the House of Commons, with the Office of Colonial Secretary—Mr. Herries, Chancellor of the Exchequer—The Duke of Portland, President of the Council, in the room of the Earl of Harrowby, who retires in consequence of a recent affliction—the death of his Daughter, the Viscountess Ebrinston. None of the new appointments have been finally arranged, nor perhaps will any thing be concluded until after the Funeral of Mr. Canning has taken place. Mr. Huskisson it is said has expressed his desire not to be removed from the Board of Trade, and positively declines becoming the leader in the House of Commons, on the ground that his health will not permit him to take so active and laborious a part in the debates. Consols 84¼.

Under the Vienna head, August 2, it is stated that the surrender of the Acropolis, has greatly discouraged the Greeks. The confusion is greater than ever.

A proposal is made in France for striking a medal in honor of Mr. Canning.

PORTUGAL.—Up to the latest dates, large bodies of Troops were under arms in Lisbon, and the excited feelings of the people seemed to be only restrained by their presence. The whole of the British Troops were ordered to retire to a distance, five Leagues from Lisbon. To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for ——— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. Government House, 14th July, 1827.

IN consequence of a Despatch which has been received by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Inspector General has, by direction of the Government, instructed the several Collectors of the Customs, that all Goods which may be lawfully imported into this Province, by Land or Inland Navigation, may be admitted to Entry at the several Ports of Entry, upon security being given, to the satisfaction of the Collectors of the Customs, for the due delivery thereof, at some free Warehousing Port, appointed, or to be appointed in either of the Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improvethe same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

THE GENIUS OF NIAGARA.

BY A VISITER AT THE FALLS.

Proud Demon of the waters! Thou
Around whose stern and stormy brow
Circles the Rainbow's varied gem,
The Vapour Spirits diadem;
While rushing headlong at thy feet,
The everlasting Thunders meet!

Throw'd on the mists, around thy form
Is dashing an eternal storm—
Countless and changeless—and whose shock
The Tempest of old Ocean mock:
And the dark Sea-King yields to thee
The mood of might and Majesty!

Depth, Sound, Immensity, have lent
Their terrors to the element.
Thy congregated waters yell
Down caverns fathomless as Hell;
While Heaven's glorious lines are set
About thy gorgeous Coronet.

Emblem of Power! the mighty Sun,
Hath left and found thee roaring on.—
The Giant, Time, hath never yet
His footsteps on thy waters set;
For thou remainest still the same—
Unchanged and unchangable.

A NEW FIRE.

Capt. Parry, in preparing for the singular expedition in which he is now engaged, found great difficulty, we believe, in providing for the necessary process of cooking during the period he and his companions would be likely to be absent from the ship. At length he fixed on the lamp with incombustible wick, which is fed with spirits of wine. This sort of fire is not only very weak but very expensive, and is of course, inapplicable to being applied upon a large scale. We have very recently seen another description of fire, which is procured from a very cheap and common liquid, without the interposition of wicks of any kind. The heat which it produces is so intense, that it boils a kettle of water in a few minutes, and causes a much greater ebullition than coal fire. It is applicable to all the purposes of cookery, to any extent that may be required. It would, therefore, be peculiarly convenient to the naval and merchant service. In the summer season, it would be the most agreeable and economical fire which families could wish for, as it may be kindled in a moment, and extinguished merely by closing a valve. It is free from all danger, as the liquid will ignite only in the cauldron in which it is used. Experiments are about to be undertaken for applying it to the boilers of steam engines, and if they be favorable, as there is no reason to doubt that they will be, steam boats may soon traverse all the seas on the face of the globe, as the liquid that supplies the fire may be contained within a very moderate compass.—This important discovery has, as yet been exhibited only to 2 or 3 persons—we were of the number, and received permission to describe it to this extent. We have only to add that we have repeatedly seen it in operation, and that we have no doubt whatever, that it will fully answer the expectations entertained of it. Like all extraordinary things of the kind, this discovery was the result of accident, and it is so simple, that when it is made public, every body will be surprised that it has not been in use since the beginning of the world.

PASSAGE OF THE BRIDGE OF LODI.

Though the bridge was left standing, it was swept by twenty or thirty Austrian pieces of artillery, whose thunders mowed death to any who should attempt that pass of peril. The French, with great alertness, got as many guns in position on the left bank, and answered this tremendous fire with equal spirit. During this cannonade, Buonaparte threw himself personally amongst the fire, in order to station two guns loaded with grape shot, a such a position as rendered it impossible for any one to approach for the purpose of undermining or destroying the bridge; and then calmly proceeded to make arrangements for a desperate attempt. His cavalry was directed to cross, if possible, at a place where the Adda was said to be fordable—a task which they accomplished with difficulty. Meantime Napoleon observed that the Austrian line of infantry was thrown considerably behind the batteries of artillery which they supported, in order that they might have the advantage of a bending slope of ground, which afforded them shelter from the French fire. He therefore, drew up a close column of 8000 grenadiers, protected from the artillery of the Austrians by the walls and houses of the town, and yet considerably nearer to the enemy's line of guns on the opposite side of the Adda than were their own infantry, which ought to have protected them. The column of grenadiers, thus secured, waited in comparative safety, until the appearance of the French cavalry, who had crossed the ford, began to disquiet the flank of the Austrians. This was the critical moment which Buonaparte expected. A single word of command wheeled the head of the column of grenadiers to the left and placed it on the perilous bridge. The word was given at the same moment, and on they went, loud shouts of Vive la Republique! But their appearance upon the bridge was the signal for a redoubled shower of grape-shot, while from the windows of the houses of the left side of the river, the soldiers who occupied them poured volley after volley of musketry on the thick column, as it endeavoured to force its way over the long bridge. At one time the French grenadiers unable to sustain this dreadful storm, appeared for an instant to hesitate. But Berthier, the Chief of Buonaparte's staff, cartel would have extended, from the residence of carriage would have extended, from the residence of the deceased Minister, to Temple-bar. Notwithstanding the anxious wish of the friends and relatives to have the obsequies performed in the most private and unostentatious manner, it was found impossible to limit the number of mourners to 30, so numerous the applications, and so fervent and sincere the demands of private friendship to pay the last earthly homage to the remains of the illustrious departed.

Every arrangement was made to obviate any impediment that could lead to confusion, from the crowding of the anxious multitude in the brief space, which the procession had to travel. All persons admitted into the interior of the Abbey were set down in Dean's-yard, and conducted through the cloisters to their places. Dean's-yard was completely filled with carriages, mostly of individuals of distinguished rank.

Not one was permitted to draw up at the grand entrance, which was reserved for the admission of the coffin and the funeral train exclusively.

From Downing-street to Tothill-street, including Parliament-street, the whole range of Bridge-street, and the entire space surrounding the Abbey, and the burial ground, every window and door was filled, and the parapets of all the houses within view exhibited lines of persons closely packed with evening interest upon the scene below. To those who witnessed the scene it will be recognised as the unexaggerated truth that an air of sincere grief and affection was impressed upon every countenance, and gave a deep character to the whole group.

In Downing-street, many lingered about the door from which were to issue the remains of him whose loss they seemed to feel as an all hours the day, long after the mandate of the Police to retire; and indeed, such was the obstinate grief of some few, that it was found impossible to remove them by any efforts of persuasion, short of force. One aged female was particularly remarked, from the pertinacity with which she resisted every attempt by persuasion, or otherwise, to remove her from the spot. She remained by the garlande for kissing them by the late Premier to her son, as the motive of her conduct, and she was permitted to retain her station unmolested. Shortly after 12 o'clock, Lord Goderich arrived over to the house from the residence opposite. He was attired in deep mourning, and appeared anxious to conceal the emotions under which he was evidently suffering.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, and His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, arrived between twelve and one.

At ten minutes before one, the hearse, followed by six mourning coaches, entered Dowing-street, and drew up at the door

"And the long funeral blacken'd all the way."

Amongst the mourners were all the Cabinet Ministers, the Dukes of Clarence and Sussex followed the hearse, in a carriage and pair. Then came a mourning coach with Lord Chancellor, and Master Charles Canning.

In one coach were—viz Lord Chancellor, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Lord Goderich, and Lord Carlisle; Mr. Wynne and Mr. Tierney were together, as were Lords Anglesea, Dudley and Ward, and Bexley.

At a quarter to two the procession left for the Abbey,

FUNERAL OF THE LATE RIGHT HONOURABLE GEORGE CANNING

As early as nine o'clock this morning, groups of individuals, belonging to every class in society visited Downing-street, to witness the preparations. With the exception of the two mutes at the door, and the closed shutters, there was, however, no outward sign of the mournful business of the day. The people, notwithstanding, continued to flock in the spot in front of the lamented Premier's late residence. The greatest silence prevailed, the multitude, seeming to satisfy the deep interest by which they were moved by merely gazing upon the house of mourning. At twelve o'clock the crowd had become so dense, as to extend nearly to the end of the street, and it became necessary to make a clearing. This was effected in the most orderly manner by a party of Constables, under the directions of Mr. Lee, the High Constable of Westminster, who was on horse-back at the head of a large body. It was remarked, that scarcely one of the many Constables and Officers in attendance, was out of uniform. The crowd, however, were not allowed to occupy the open space below Downing-street, a clear passage being kept open for the approach of the hearse and mourning coaches, and such carriages as were admitted to come up the street to the house.—Shortly after 12 o'clock, the hearse, drawn by six horses; and followed by nine mourning coaches with four, drove up under the gateway opposite the Treasury. The funeral line reached to Whitehall-place. No carriages were allowed to follow in the procession except those of the Noblemen and Gentlemen who were invited to assume seats in the mourning coaches; and of such carriages as were allowed two only, viz. those of the Duke of Sussex as Chief mourner, and of Lord Chancellor, as nearest relative, were allowed to come to the door where the corpse lay. The other carriages set down at the first entrance in St. James's Park, and then went round and took their stations in the street, beginning from the end of Downing-street, along beyond the Horse Guards to the Admiralty. All carriages excepting those of the mourners, were rejected; and it is stated that had the number of mourners been doubled, the mourning

THE ABBEY.

In the interior a number of Gentlemen, and some few Ladies had assembled, but the greater number of those individuals to whom tickets had been issued, awaited in the Jerusalem Chamber the arrival of the melancholy procession. The greater attention had been paid to the outward tokens of that mourning, which evidently dwelt within the bosoms of those who met together to pay the last tribute of respect to the distinguished and highly-gifted Statesman, whose death is scarcely a greater grief to his own country than to every nation of the civilized globe.—About two o'clock, the Gentlemen who had remained in the Jerusalem Chamber, entered and arranged themselves along the North aisle, the opposite aisle having been set apart for those who had previously occupied the nave of the Cathedral.

Among the former we noticed, the Earl of Clarendon, the Earl of Fife, Mr. C. Grant, Sir Robert Wilmot, the Attorney General, the Solicitor General, Mr. Calcraft, Mr. Hume, Mr. Wm. Smith, Sir J. Mackintosh, the Knight of Kerry Mr. W. Huskisson, Mr. Lambton, Lord Granthom, Mr. Spring Rice, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Sir H. Parnell, Mr. Philips, Mr. V. Fitzgerald, Lord Kensington, and some other Members of both Houses of Parliament. Soon afterwards the Foreign Ambassadors, and their retinue, with a party of Horse Guards, preceded and passed through the gate which led to the place of sepulture.

Among those distinguished foreigners were, Prince Esterhazy, Count Munster, Count Lieven, and the Marquis Palmella.

At twenty minutes past one o'clock, the Funeral Procession arrived at the great entrance to the Abbey, and after a pause of a few minutes, proceeded slowly onwards, the Venerable Dean of Westminster reading the beautiful Service for the burial of the Dead.

At the moment that the coffin arrived in the centre of the nave, a ray of light came through the long windows and shone directly upon it, and the melancholy group that followed it. It was a singular, and most interesting circumstance, for the morning having been somewhat cloudy, this was the first sunbeam that had guided the walls of the interior of this venerable building.

The Procession moved in the following order:—One of the Westminster Almsmen, habited in black, with a blue cloth tunic, and holding a funeral staff

Two mutes holding staves,

A mute, bearing a large black plume.

Six mutes with staves, two and two.

THE BODY.

Borne on shoulders, without pall-bearers or supporters.

Immediately following the coffin, as chief mourners, came the Dukes of Clarence and Sussex, and between them, their Highnesses, was the youngest son of Mr. Canning.

On the right of the Duke of Sussex, was the Duke of Portland. The other mourners were the Duke of Leeds, the Marquis of Chandos, then the Lord Chancellor, Lord Goderich, the Duke of Devonshire, the Marquis of Anglesea, the Viscount Dudley and Ward, Lord Bexley, Sir Robert Wilmot, Mr. Vallers, Mr. Bendl, the Marquis of Conyngham, the Earl Morley, Mr. Tierney, the Earl Spencer, Lord Bexley, Lord Palmerston, Mr. R. Bathurst, Mr. Pitman, Mr. Backhouse, and Mr. Stapleton.

There were few among the melancholy group whose eyes were not filled with tears. The Duke of Devonshire and Lord Goderich sobbed audibly.

Immediately after the ceremony, the two Royal Dukes shook hands with the son of the deceased, and also with the Marquis of Chandos.

The Coffin was covered with crimson velvet, and bore the following inscription:—

DEPOSITUM.

THE MINISTRY.

A Cabinet Council was held on the 17th of Aug. at 4 o'clock, at the Foreign Office, Downing-street, and was attended by the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Portland, and the Marquis of Londonderry, the Marquis of Anglesea, Viscount Goderich, Viscount Dudley and Ward, Viscount Palmerston, the Earl of Carlisle, Mr. S. Bourne, Mr. Wynn, Mr. Tierney, and Lord Bexley. The Ministers sat in deliberation till six o'clock.

After the breaking up of the Cabinet Council, despatches were sent off to the Right Honorable W. Huskisson, the President of the Board of Trade, who is at present on the Continent.

Mr. Herries, and several of the Cabinet Ministers had interviews with Viscount Goderich, previous to the assembling of the Cabinet Council.

The appointment of Mr. Herries to the Office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, affords considerable satisfaction amongst the men of business in the city, as he is generally esteemed fully adequate to what is required from a Chancellor.

His Majesty proceeded yesterday afternoon to the state apartments of Carlton House, to hold his Court. Viscount Goderich was presented to the King, and kissed hands upon being appointed first Lord of the Treasury; Mr. J. C. Herries was presented to His Majesty by Viscount Goderich, first Lord of the Treasury, and received the seals of office as Chancellor of the Exchequer: Lord Wm. Bentinck was presented by the Right Hon. Charles W. Wynn, the President of the Board of Control, and kissed hands on being appointed Governor-General of India, in the room of Lord Amherst; Captain Cooper, Secretary of the Duchess of Kent, was presented by the Marquis of Lansdowne, principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, and was Knighted. Mr. Herries and Lord Wm. Bentinck were sworn in as Privy Councillors. It was understood that the Duke of Portland was declared to be the Lord President of the Council.—Ber. 16th.

Mrs. Canning bears her affliction with as much fortitude and resignation as can be expected, under such a sudden and trying visitation. His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, it is said, has generously made the offer to Mrs. Canning, of remaining at Chiswick House, and to consider the Mansion as entirely at her disposal, for twelve months, or any period she might wish. The afflicted Lady, however, has removed to town, and is now at Harcourt House, in Cavendish-square, the residence of her Brother-in-law, the Duke of Portland.—Courier.

LIVERPOOL, July 22.

Hitherto, our North American possessions have been most shamefully neglected; but the government now appear to be aware of their immense importance, and it is devoutly to be wished that no ministers will lose no opportunity consistent with the general interests of the country, to cherish and encourage them.

These colonies, according to the evidence given before the Emigration Committee, are capable of supporting a population of 35 millions! Really a government must be very timid to be afraid of a country that neglects a country of such vast capabilities, particularly when it has for its immediate neighborhood a nation that is attempting to rival the patent state itself; with regard to the unjust and onerous regulation between the West Indies and the U. States, there can be no doubt that the government of Washington established upon our yielding to their terms; but hitherto their calculations have proved erroneous, and it is to be hoped that if, as is expected, the United States should be disposed to acquiesce with our conditions, that no such event shall be.—"It is too late." We are aware that the Americans have got it into their heads that the merchants of our North American colonies will not be able to supply the West Indies with corn until even the St. Lawrence being closed by the frost for four or five months of the year. But they should have recollected that we have the harbour of Halifax, one of the finest and most capacious in the world, and which is always open. If, indeed, the Americans were a people that would abide by their own commercial laws, there might be a difficulty in supplying the West Indies with produce. Such, however, is not the case, for whenever business is to be done, Brother Jonathan will do it—to use a homely phrase—either by hook or by crook. Under these circumstances, there is no fear but plenty of produce would be smuggled through Canada, whatever laws may be enacted to prevent such intercourse.

From the London Courier, Aug. 8.

At this moment when every thing connected with the life of the extraordinary man, whose loss the nation has to deplore, is doubly interesting, the following biographical sketch of the late Prime Minister cannot be other than acceptable to our readers:—

The family of Mr. Canning was original seated at Foxcote, in Warwickshire, from whence a branch of the Cannings of Foxcote, still reside in that county. Queen Elizabeth conferred the manor of Garvagh, in the county of Londonderry, on George Canning, a younger son of the Warwickshire family who thereupon moved into Ireland, and from him the late Premier is descended. Stratford Canning, Esq. of Garvagh, the grandfather of the subject of our remarks, was the father of George and Paul. George, the elder son, displeased his parents, by marrying a dowerless beauty, and in consequence was turned upon the world, to push his fortune as he could with a scanty allowance of £150 per annum. This pittance, which he was informed he would not find increased at his father's death, was rather a stimulant than a source of provision for a family; but Mr. Canning, notwithstanding the smallness of his income, and although he entered himself a student of the Middle Temple, and was subsequently called to the bar, never appears have been fonder of the muses than the law, and gave himself up to literature rather than to his professional studies.

He came with his lady to London, and determined to study the law, entered himself of the Middle Temple. He died poor; on the 11th of April, 1771, a few days after the birth of his son George, and was interred in the new burying ground of St. Mary-le-bone, where his tomb, with the following inscription, was placed by his widow:

Thy virtue and my woe are worth a tear tell,
Therefore a little while, my George farewell!
For faith and love like our's Heaven has in store
In, last best gift—to meet and part no more.

His infant son, the subject of this memoir, was placed with a maternal uncle, a respectable wine merchant in the city, who discovering strong marks of genius, at a very early age, sent him to Eton, where he speedily distinguished himself, and in 1787 became one of the foundation scholars.

In 1792, on the death of Mr. Ford Acton, Mr. Canning was entered of Christ Church, Oxford, where he completed his academy residence, and graduated. At the University he acquired considerable celebrity for the correctness of his taste, and for the beauty and brilliancy of his declamation. Whilst there, he also formed an acquaintance with several young men of rank, amongst whom was Mr. Jenkinson, now Lord Liverpool, who was studying at Oxford at the time. Having obtained his Bachelor's degree, Mr. Canning left the University, and entered himself as a student of the Middle Temple, of which his father had formerly been a member, with intent to study the law. After the same time also he obtained admission to a debating society which used to meet in Broad-street, and by his practice there acquired an ease and facility in public speaking to which much of his subsequent success is owing. His legal studies were not, we believe, pursued with any great assiduity—his manners formed him for society, and much of his time was spent amongst his school and college companions. It is also said that he, at that time was very intimate with Sheridan and Fox, his acquaintance with whom was formed at the table of his uncle, who was a strenuous opposer of Walpole, and a determined friend to liberty. These latter circumstances Canning was always opposed to his uncle: the political bias which he had early formed in favor of Pitt was cherished by his acquaintance with Mr. Jenkinson, and more particularly by an introduction to the Minister himself. Pitt was so struck with the talents which the youthful statesman displayed, that he determined to bring him into Parliament in order to enable him to enter the arena of politics, and selected a borough, his own property, for that purpose. The borough of Newport, in the Isle of Wight, by which means Mr Canning, in the year 1793, and, at the age of twenty-two, made his debut in the House of Commons. The great expectations which Pitt entertained from the eloquence of his juvenile friend, were increased by his talents, and more particularly by what neglects a country of such vast capabilities, particularly when it has for its immediate neighborhood a nation that is attempting to rival the patent state itself; with regard to the unjust and onerous regulation between the West Indies and the U. The great expectations which Pitt entertained from the eloquence of his juvenile friend, were increased by his talents, and more particularly by what was very intimate with Sheridan and Fox, his acquaintance with whom was formed at the table of his uncle, who was a strenuous opposer of Walpole, and a determined friend to liberty. These latter circumstances Canning was always opposed to his uncle: the political bias which he had early formed in favor of Pitt was cherished by his acquaintance with Mr. Jenkinson, and more particularly by an introduction to the Minister himself. Pitt was so struck with the talents which the youthful statesman displayed, that he determined to bring him into Parliament in order to enable him to enter the arena of politics, and selected a borough, his own property, for that purpose. The borough of Newport, in the Isle of Wight, by which means Mr Canning, in the year 1793, and, at the age of twenty-two, made his debut in the House of Commons. The great expectations which Pitt entertained from the eloquence of his juvenile friend, were increased by his talents, and more particularly by what TRADE OF BELFAST.—There has been an evident improvement in the Trade of Belfast during the last few years. It is perceptible in the number of new buildings which have lately been erected. In the course of the last three years, several new streets have been commenced, and are daily extending. There are now upwards of ten cotton factories in Belfast and its neighbourhood; and this branch of our trade has been brought to such perfection, that we can compete with the English and Scotch manufactories, both in the quality and price of our plain and printed cottons. A considerable stock of manufactured goods is annually exported from Belfast, which, from the quality of the cloth, and the perfection of their finish, are well calculated for a foreign Market, and generally meet with a ready sale. The linen manufactures still maintains its ground in the North of Ireland, where for many years it has been carried on most extensively. The Foreign commerce of Belfast is at present in a very promising state. We have a good trade to the West Indies and America; a great many cargoes are annually received from Spain and Sicily, Russia, Holland, &c. and though we have not a direct communication to South America and the Brazils, yet a fair share of business with these countries is transacted through the medium of Liverpool and London. The provision and grain trades are likewise daily increasing; and, indeed, almost every branch of our commerce and manufactures appears to have been visited by that spirit of renovation which is now abolishing its influence over our late depressed and miserable country.

Summary.

The Liverpool Mercury of the 17th, says—"Yesterday being the day fixed for the burial of the late Premier, the windows of all the shops in town were closed; the flags of the ships in port, and on the public buildings, and on the churches were hoisted half mast, the bells tolled, and every possible mark of respect was paid to the memory of the deceased."

The Russian fleet makes a formidable appearance at Spithead. It consists of eight sail of the line, nine frigates, and two corvettes, &c. all in very fine condition. Out of this force there are now in the Channel four ships and four frigates allowed to go out to the Mediterranean; all the rest are to return to Cronstadt.

Lisbon intelligence to the 1st Aug. announces that tranquility had been restored in that capital. Energetic measures were taken to disperse the mobs. The Regent had requested a squadron of English lancers for her personal guard.

Russia and Persia.—Petersburgh letters of the 21st July contradict the rumors of an early peace between Persia and Russia. Extensive preparations are making by the latter power to carry on the war vigorously.

The accounts from Constantinople are down to the commencement of the present month. They confirm former statements of the extraordinary efforts made by the Sultan, to speedily raise a powerful army. Being determined to bear of no further proposal in favour of the Greeks, and knowing to what danger that resolution exposed him, he exerted himself with spirit to meet and to surmount them.

In one District of Southern India, a thousand families renounced idolatry last year, and placed themselves under the religious instruction of the Church Missionaries.

By one of the late arrivals from India, letters have been received in Glasgow, dated 8th February, from Jubbulpore, mentioning that the news of the Duke of York's death, had reached that place by an overland despatch. It will be recollected that the Duke of York died the 5th January; the dispatch must therefore have gone out in a month, which is believed to be the shortest period on record in which this journey has been performed.—Greenock Advertiser, 11th August.

The Subscription list to Wolf's Column, in this city, receives daily additions of names; and there can be little doubt but that it will soon be sufficiently full to authorize an early commencement of this laudable undertaking.

We have been given to understand, but know not what credit is to be attached to our information, that it has been discovered that four individuals have been working at a silver mine in Upper Canada for the last two years with considerable profit and advantage. The cause of this circumstance having come to light, is said to be a quarrel between the parties—three of whom were Americans, and one an Englishman—that the former wished to exclude the latter from any further participation in their operations, and that in consequence he divulged that affair. Our informant adds, that a notification of the circumstance has been transmitted to the Government at Quebec.—Montreal Gazette.

The wonderful improvement of Steam Navigation on the St. Lawrence is a favourite topic of conversation, and its progress is certainly most creditable to the public spirit and enterprise of the commercial city. We have one or two particulars to communicate respecting the subject which we believe to be unperceived. By the arrival of the John Molson here on Friday evening last, many Merchants of this city received answers to letters which they had written only 44 hours previous! Our small supplement which we issued on Wednesday evening last, was transmitted by the Waterloo, which left Montreal the same evening at 9. On Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, we read our paper to the amount at full length in the columns of the QUEBEC OFFICIAL GAZETTE. Is not this the incredibly short space of forty-four hours the vessel arrived at Quebec, a new edition of the OFFICIAL GAZETTE was published, and transmitted to Montreal, a distance of 360 miles, with the usual delay on both trips at Sorel and Three Rivers.—Ib.

We are happy to have it in our power to inform the public that His Majesty by a Mandamus has been pleased to appoint JOHN FORSTER, Esq. a Legislative Councillor of this Province, an appointment which has been long expected by every friend of Government, and which is so deservedly merited, whether in relation to the Honourable Gentleman's excellencies as a man, or his worth as a citizen.—Ib.

We are informed that it is the intention of the Government to proceed forthwith in the execution of the measures contemplated, and which received a partial commencement last Fall, respecting the fortification of the Mountain in the rear of this city, and the erection of such military works as may be judged expedient for its security and protection.

The estimates for these works having been sanctioned by the British Government, and no obstacle existing to prevent an immediate beginning, Thomas PORTER, Esq. of Montreal, Edmund Henry, Esq. of Laprairie, with several other officers of the Engineers appointed for that purpose, were engaged on Tuesday in the neighbourhood and scite of the intended operations) in valuing such private property as it will be necessary for the Government to take into its possession.

Another means of occupation and employment thus afforded to the industrious mechanics and labourers, and Canada is to be enriched and secured at the same time and object. It shews the value the British Government attaches to the occupation of these Provinces, and we indulge a hope that the wealth and resources of Great Britain are to be employed for nobler purposes and more exalted views than to give perpetuity in the New World to the dark, illiberal anti-British, and anti-social Institutions of the feudal ages from which the old world has long shaken itself free.—Ib.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH.

MONTREAL SEPTEMBER TERM, 1827.

THURSDAY, Septr. 6th.

Mr. GRANT presented a petition from Ezeen Cameron, praying that his trial may come on. The Court ordered the petition to be filed in order that the prisoner might have the benefit of it, but he could not answer its prayer, inasmuch as no indictment had as yet been before the Court, and the Attorney General had not yet brought up by Certiorari the indictment found by the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

Mr. GRANT then presented a petition from Edmund Burke, stating that he had been confined in gaol since 12th September 1825, complaining that no proceedings had been had against him by the Attorney General, and subsequently praying that he might be discharged. The Attorney General in reply stated that proceedings had been had against Burke, for on the 7th September 1826, he had moved for execution against the prisoner on a sentence of death pronounced against him on the 16th September 1816. The prisoner alleged he was in possession of the King's pardon, and an indulgence was granted him to produce that pardon but he had neglected to do so; As long as a sentence of death hangs over the prisoner's head, he could not be brought to trial for subsequent offences, unless he shews his pardon. The Attorney General then moved that the rule nisi, which he had obtained in September 1826, be now declared absolute, and that cause be now shewn why sentence of death should not be awarded against him, in the terms of the original sentence. Mr. Grant obtained delay till Saturday.

SATURDAY September, 8th.

The Court then proceeded to the rule of Edmund Burke, to shew cause why the original sentence of death pronounced against him on the 10th September 1816, should not be put in force. Mr. GRANT as his attorney put in a plea in writing and filed His Majesty's pardon. The Attorney General on looking at the pardon stated that the conditional pardon, which conditions had not been attended to, and the pardon was consequently nullified. He would take communication of the plea and the pardon, and would be enabled to prove on Monday, that the Prisoner had absconded from this Province to the great injury and pecuniary loss of His Majesty's subjects, in direct violation of the conditions of the Pardon. The case stands over till Monday.

The prevailing easterly wind has brought up several vessels and regular traders on their second voyage from Europe. In the Hayden, have arrived Colonel Sir THOMAS NOEL HILL, K. C. B. Depy. Adjt. We have to announce also the arrival of the Honble. Mr. FELTON from ENGLAND, of Mrs. DAVIDSON and Miss CALDWELL, daughter of the Honble. JOHN CALDWELL.—Quebec Mercury.

Advices from the Lower Provinces represent the crops which were at one time very promising, as having entirely failed from smut and wet weather. In this Province, the crop of wheat is certainly much below an average, particularly on the South side of the St. Lawrence, where in many instances, owing to the grub, smut, and wet weather early in the season, the return will hardly equal the quantity sowed.—*Old Q. On Saturday last, the Rev. John Machar, who has recently been ordained by the Presbytery of Edinburgh to the Scotch Church, in this place, arrived in Town—and on Sunday preached two beautiful ser mons in Saint Andrew's Church. We most sincerely congratulate the community of Kingston, especially our Presbyterian brethren, on the arrival of this Gentleman amongst us. We anticipate much good will result from his labours, and while his decided talents as a preacher of the Gospel must command the respect of all classes and denominations, in the true spirit of his eloquence, his piety, and his earnestness in the cause of truth, will not be lost upon his own congregation.—Kingston Chronicle.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1827.

The latest dates received from England, are to 17th Aug. Mr. Canning's funeral had taken place, an account of which is given in this days paper. Some appointments had been made in the Ministry, but the arrangements do not appear to have been completed—the next arrivals we may expect, will give us further information on the Subject.

The Messrs Hamilton's, proprietors of the Steam Boat Frontenac, have offered a reward of £100, for the discovery of the persons who set fire to that Vessel some time ago. The Frontenac after being fired, was loosed from her Moorings, and had drifted some distance into the Lake, when she was met by the Niagara, Capt. Mosier, who took her in tow, and succeeded in bringing her to the Wharf at Niagara, where after some exertions the flames were extinguished.

On Thursday morning, at about One o'clock, the Town was alarmed by the cry of Fire, and on hastening to the spot, the Methodist Meeting House was in the envelope in flames. Before any considerable out of people had collected, the fire had made so great progress, that it was found impracticable to arrest it, and the adjoining Houses were soon in a blaze. The only remedy which presented itself to save the remainder of the block, was to pull down some of the intermediate buildings, which was speedily effected by the exertions of some active individuals; and the conflagration which at one time had a most alarming appearance, after extending its ravages so far as the house on the corner of the Street, to the East, and the adjoining house, to the West, was fortunately stayed. The Town Engine which proves on trial to be a powerful one, was ably worked by the Fire Company; whose members are entitled to the highest praise. Their exertions were, however, in some measure rendered less effectual that they otherwise would have been, from the want of a constant and regular supply of water. This may be attributed to the confusion attendant on such occasions, and we take this opportunity of remarking, that those who are disposed at such a time to render effective service, in preserving the property of their neighbors from the destructive element, will find that they will best promote the object, by immediately falling into the line for the passing of buckets to the engines. A few resolute and active men about the building, are sufficient, and in ordinary cases, these, with well supplied Engines scarcely ever fail, of extinguishing the most alarming fires.

Six houses in all are destroyed, and among the sufferers, we notice that public sympathy is particularly expressed for Mr. Patrick, who had lately built, from the fruits of his industry, and had occupied his house only a few months.

The Mansion House was outpaunted, and the inmates of the others, we believe, have generally succeeded in saving most of their property. The Mansion House was insured to the amount of £800, but we have not heard, that any of the others were insured.

It is proper to observe, that Major Winniett and the 68th Regt. rendered the most immediate assistance in their power, and brought with them the Garrison Fire Engine. A Guard was also furnished by Major Winniett, for the protection of property exposed in the Streets. We are requested by the Magistrates, to convey their thanks to Major Winniett, and 68th Regt., for their prompt assistance on this distressing occasion.

Houses burnt and destroyed.—Mansion House Hotel, untenanted—two belonging to Mr. Boulton the Solicitor General, occupied by Mr. Moore, and Mr. Nichol—Mr. Legges, occupied by Mr. Hunter, and Mrs. Berry—Mr. Patrick's, occupied by himself—Mr. Hutchinson's Smiths Shop.

Liberty of the Press.—The last number of the Canadian Freeman, must we think, afford a pretty fair specimen to strangers, of the extent to which the liberty of the Press is carried in this Province. Who has escaped its abuse! Even its quondam friends, the Alien Committee, have come in for their share, and are indirectly charged, with having acted towards the Editor, in a "base and unprincipled" manner. Among the goodly Company, against whom the grossest calumnies are vented, we have not been forgotten. In our last number we stated a few stubborn facts, which have caused the Freeman no small degree of uneasiness. He cannot bear to hear the truth, that if the Bill of the Legislative Council, on the Alien Question, had been received in a proper spirit, all the discussion which has since been occasioned, might have been avoided. The question "is still open," and the prospect of its being at last settled contrary to his wishes, is a disappointment he cannot submit to in patience. Mr. Randal, he says "ought to have protested to the last moment."—Similarly, whatever we may think of Mr. Randals Mission in other respects, we cannot but admit, that he has "protested to the last moment," although his protestations appear to have had but little effect. It is curious enough to hear the Freeman, expressing his doubts, whether the Letters in the Colonial Advocate purporting* to be from Mr. Randal, are "authentic." This is a species of attack, we were not at all prepared for, from such a quarter. The people we hope, will keep an eye on the movements of those, who are now publicly accused by the Freeman, of having "violated a public pledge, to the shame of the cause."

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be registered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

Government House,

IN consequence of a Despatch which has been received by His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Inspector General has, by direction of the Government, instructed the several Collectors of the Customs, that all Goods which may be lawfully imported into this Province, by Land or Inland Navigation, may be admitted to Entry at the several Ports of Entry, upon security being given, to the satisfaction of the Collectors of the Customs, for the due delivery thereof, at some free Warehousing Port, appointed, or to be appointed in either of the Provinces of Upper or Lower Canada.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit-rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

The London Courier of Aug. 23d, says—"Where is he stated on Monday that it was likely Mr. P. Courtney would be the new Secretary of the Treasury, in the room of Mr. Herries, we did not mean to convey, what appears to have been supposed, that the appointment had actually taken place.—The fact is, that the noble Lord at the head of the Treasury has not yet signified his intentions as to any definite arrangement on the subject. In all probability no farther steps will be taken towards the completion of what remains to be done, till the arrival of Mr. Huskisson, or till the opinion of that Right Honorable Gentleman shall be known."

The same paper says—"That an idle rumour prevailed in the city, this morning, that a fresh armament was about to sail for Lisbon, and that 5, nay 10,000 additional troops were to be dispatched thither. The latter is a pure fiction; and the former resolves itself into the simple fact, that two ships are under orders for the Tagus, to replace the two which were lately removed."

The Algerine Corsairs, notwithstanding the blockade of Algiers by the French, are doing much injury.

LONDON, (Sunday Evg.) August 19.—It is with the greatest satisfaction we announce that the Duke of Wellington has accepted His Majesty's gracious offer of the Commander of the Army. The communication was made to His Grace, who is now in the country, by the Marquis of Lansdowne.

A hundred and fifty of the Nobility and Gentry assembled on Friday at Paris Place, Sussex, the seat of Viscount Gage, to participate in a grand tournament, or exhibition of some of the noble games of olden times. Prizes were distributed to the successful competitors, and at 5 o'clock the party partook of a grand banquet, and concluded the day's amusement by a dance.

Foreign Intelligence.

PORTUGAL.

Intelligence from Lisbon is to the 4th Aug. The papers are filled with details of the popular commotions occasioned by the dismissal of Saldanha, the minister and Secretary of State for the War Department. About 60 persons had been arrested, and it is stated that orders had been issued to arrest 200 more.

A letter from an English Officer, dated Lisbon, August 4th, states that tranquility had been restored.

SPAIN.

Letters from Andalusia, state that very serious disturbances have taken place in that Province, and particularly in Seville, in consequence of some proceedings against the persons who were accused of having occasioned the fire in that Town. It is said that blood has been spilt.

Accounts direct from Barcelona, concerning the disturbances in Catalonia, say, "a fresh Civil War has broken out in this quarter: it is assuming the most frightful appearance, and is rapidly spreading through the Province."

FRANCE.

The Paris papers announce the death of M. Manuel, the celebrated opposition member, whose expulsion from the Chamber of Deputies some years ago, led to the accession of his whole party, and to the ultimate destruction of its influence in the state.

ALGIERS.

Accounts from the Barbary coast, state that great preparations continued to be made at Algiers to receive the French. The number of troops summoned from the interior is estimated from 30,000 to 50,000 men. One of the French vessels carried into Oran, turns out to be of great value; she was bound to Martinique. His Majesty's ship Dartmouth had arrived at Gibraltar from England.

THE GALE IN THE WEST-INDIES.

The St. Christopher papers are filled with accounts of the ravages of the storm A public Meeting of the Inhabitants has been called to relieve the distresses of the Inhabitants.

The accounts from St. Croix of the effects of the 17th, are truly distressing. All the estates have suffered more or less, and in many the entire negro houses and other buildings, entirely destroyed, besides several negroes killed, and a great number of stock. A private letter states that on one estate alone, Mount Pleasant, there were one hundred sheep we killed. In the harbour of Christiansted only three vessels rode out the gale, while in Frederickstead all were driven on shore, some of which with valuable cargoes entirely lost. At Point Petre, Guadaloupe, ten vessels were stranded. The damage at Porto Rico is confined to the destruction of a few plantation trees.

Several Letters are published, all giving deplorable accounts of the destructive tempest. A letter of August 19, says:—

"It is not in my power to describe the scene the country presents throughout: the North side of course worse than the South. On Friday noon the Island looked like a garden in the highest state of cultivation; the next day, like a house, and promising a crop equal to our greatest wishes; on Saturday morning, nothing but devastation, our canes prostrate, shewing nothing but stalks and a color as if a light fire had passed over the fields and singed every plant, and putting the appearance of winter upon the few remaining, all by a furious gale from 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon, until 8 at night. I am told that at Estate Friendship there is not a single building standing, of which many were made new after the gale of 1825, even to the Still-house burts and worms are lost. Negroes in several places killed; at Sion Farm 22 Mules killed; at Betty's Hope every negro-house lost by fire which took in the midst of the gale."

Another Letter, written on the day following, but describing the ravages of the same storm, says:—

At day-light the eye was presented with the melancholy catastrophy of the evening previous, every vessel with the exception of the Jupiter, Vigilant, and one small craft was seen in various directions driven by the force of the wind on shore; not an inclosure was seen standing, fragments of lumber, both from large and small houses, were seen blown in every direction, which had become a prey to the violence of the wind.

Among the vessels driven ashore, for which no hope can be entertained for her safety, is the Phœnix, Capt. C. Barkes; every exertion has been made, and are yet making, to get off the remaining vessels, which we hope may meet with success.

From the St. Thomas Times, Aug. 27.

The gale of the 17th inst. has proved very destructive in the country of the Provision Grounds, and on many estates the high-standing canes are materially injured.

Lower Canada.

On Saturday last about 4 P. M. His Excellency the Governor in Chief and Countess of Dalhousie, attended by his Lordship's two Aids du Camp, the Hon. Col. Ramsay and Col. Heriot, with the Hon. Mr. Cochran, Civil Secretary, arrived in this city from Sorel in the Waterloo Steam boat, under a salute from St. Helen's Island. The noble personages were received at the landing place by the Rifle company of this city, and at the Masonic Hall Hotel by a guard of honour from the 71st Regt. His Lordship and the Countess attended divine worship at the Protestant Episcopal Church both morning and afternoon of yesterday, and during the day received the visits of many of the citizens. The noble pair and suit left town this afternoon for the Rideau Canal, escorted by the Montreal Cavalry—their return here is expected about the 4th of October, to be present at the public testimonial of respect and attachment which it is the intention of the inhabitants of Montreal to give them.

On Saturday, the September Tea Sale took place at the Warehouses of the Agents of the Honorable East India Company. The quantity exposed for sale, was 3271 Chests and Boxes, consisting principally of Twankay and Hyson skin, young and old Hyson, with some smaller lots of Souchong, Congou, Bohea, and Gunpowder.

For the Twankay, there was a very brisk demand, and it generally went at an advance of 2d. to 3d. per lb., on the upset prices. The Hyson skin went rather languidly at 2s. 9d., and part of it was withdrawn. Young Hyson brought 4s. 6d. to 4s. 9d. Old Hyson, 5s. 8d. Best Souchong, 2s 2d. Inferior do., 2s. 7d. Congou, 2s. 9d. Bohea, 1s. 8d. to 1s. 9d. Pekoe, 4s. 5d. Gunpowder, 6s. and 1d.

Yesterday afternoon, a sermon was preached by the Revd. Crosbie Morgell, in the Protestant Episcopal Church, after a Collection made in aid of the funds of the Orphan Asylum of this city. We understand that £55 was the amount collected.

We understand that the Royal Mercy has been exercised in favour of Alexr. Fraser now under sentenced of death for forgery, in the jail of this city.—Montreal Gazette.

MELANCHOLY CIRCUMSTANCE.—Mr. Durocher, who resides near the Mountain, after having been absent for the last nine months in France, arrived a short time ago at New-York, on his way hither. A letter from him, dated New York, reached Madame Durocher, on Wednesday evening last, informing her that he would be home in two days. This happy intelligence had such an effect upon her spirits that she was thrown into violent fits, from which she never recovered. On Thursday, a friend of the family, on coming to town, met Mr. Dourcher going home to surprise his family by his unexpected appearance. The gentleman informed him that his wife was dangerously ill, and when he arrived at his home he found her speechless—shortly after she died.—Herald.

AN Express for His Excellency the Governor in Chief reached here from Quebec on Monday evening, (yesterday) in 28 hours. His Excellency, having left here on his tour to the Rideau, was followed and overtaken by the express at St. Anus, (end of the Island,) where the Despatches were given him at about ten o'clock. Rumour has already told the contents of these despatches, but we have not been able to learn any thing positive respecting them.—Canadian Courant.

At a public meeting called this day, by the Sheriff, for the purpose of raising subscription for the fund collecting in the Mother Country, for the erection of a new church in London, to the memory of his late Royal Highness the Duke of York—Lieutenant Bell, R. N. explained the object of the meeting, and in a clear and forcible manner, pointed out the numerous advantages which the army enjoys in consequence of the watchful attention and exertions of the late Commander in Chief. It was then agreed that subscription papers should be sent to different parts of the District, and that the officers should subscribe a day's pay each, according to the rule adopted in England.—Mr. Morris then proposed a subscription list for the monument about to be erected in Edinburgh, and said he hoped all Scotsmen would give it the preference, at the same time he wished it distinctly to be understood that by no means did so in opposition to the success of the other object; on the contrary, he should do every thing in his power to promote it; but finding as he did, to advance the interest of the one and neglect those of the other, was entirely out of the question, under that view of the subject, a sense of duty compelled him to bring forward a subscription paper in favour of the monument for the ancient metropolis of his native country. The persons present had subscribed liberally to both papers, when Lieut. Bell had suggested that in a Military settlement, where so many individuals had enjoyed the protecting care of his late Royal Highness's measures, it would be much more congenial to his inclination were a monument built in Perth, where the old veteran could point out to his children a lasting testimonial of the regard which every British soldier must feel to the memory of him who was so justly styled the soldier's friend. The idea took in a moment, and in less than half an hour upwards of eighty pounds was subscribed, and a Committee appointed to carry the object of those present into effect.

Execution of Henderson and Shields.—Yesterday morning a few minutes past ten o'clock, the dreadful sentence of the law was carried into effect by the execution of these two unfortunate men. The new Steam-boat Neptune, built by Mr Alexander Young, & owned by Messrs. H. It is believed that she will surpass in speed any boats on the St. Lawrence, and not fall far behind the new Boat on the North River, between New-York and Albany.

He proceeds to the MONTREAL District on a similar tour.—Ib.

We yesterday saw a number of Irish Emigrants in a state of the greatest distress, their story is, that they had arrived in a vessel which to obtain passengers advertised that those who embarked in her, should be forwarded to Upper Canada free of expense, the master now neglects to fulfill his engagement, and these poor creatures, many of whom have expended their last penny to procure the passage of themselves and families across the Atlantic, are left on our wharves in a state of destitution, unable to move forward, whilst the delay attendant on seeking redress at law, is equally ruinous to them, even if they succeed in establishing their claim against the Ship.—It has been suggested that a Legislative enactment imposing a tonnage duty on vessels arriving in this Port with Emigrants, would be a desirable measure, and furnish a fund to be applied to the relief of indigent or sick settlers who are now left a serious charge upon private charity.

On Friday last, a little girl, about six years of age, daughter of Mr. Dignard, Hatter, in St. John Street, met with her death in the following melancholy manner—The child was warming herself with her back to the fire, when her clothes caught the flame; an elder girl who was in the room, caught her up, but in her fright, instead of endeavouring to smother the flames, ran out of doors; the consequence was the little sufferer was dreadfully burnt, that she endured the greatest torment for upwards of twenty-four hours, when she was released from her'sufferings.

BURGLARY AT POINT LEVI CHURCH.—On Saturday night, or Sunday morning last, some villians entered the Point Levi Church by one of the windows in its North wall, which they opened by breaking a pane of glass; penetrating into a cellar, they broke a large padlock which shut a double door, and having got to a cell, where the money chest of the Church was, broke open the iron door of the cell. Not having been able, however, to get the chest out, they retreated without carrying any thing away.—An iron shovel, which had been broken to force open the doors, was found in the cell. A good deal of money having been laid out during the summer in repairs of the Church, there was but a small sum of money in the chest.—This affair has created a new alarm in the Parish, every body are on their guard, and well prepared to meet any future attempt of this kind.—*Q. ATTEMPT OF AN EAGLE TO DEVOUR A BOY. A very singular occurrence happened the week before last, in the Parish of St. Ambroise, about nine miles from this City. Two Boys, the one seven, and the other five years old, amused themselves in an adjoining field, trying to reap while their parents were at dinner. A large Eagle soon came sailing over them, and with a swoop attempted to seize the eldest, but luckily missed him. The bird not at all dismayed, sat on the ground at a short distance, and in a few moments repeated the attempt. The bold little fellow defended himself against his fierce antagonist with the sickle he had very fortunately in his hand, and when the bird rushed upon him he struck at it. The sickle entered under the left wing, and the blow having been given strongly, went through the ribs, and passing through the heart, proved instantly fatal. This Eagle was afterwards sold to Mr. Chasseur, who has stuffed it and placed it in his museum, where it may now be seen. It is the Ring tailed or Russian Eagle. The wings expand upwards of 6 feet. Its stomach was opened and found entirely empty. The poor little boy did not receive a scratch; he was probably not aware of the danger to which he was exposed. Had the Eagle seized him, its talons which are of uncommon strength, and about an inch and a half long, must have lacerated him dreadfully. The boy is little doubt, without the bird was much weakened by hunger, that a blow or two from its beak, would have torn out his eyes, and with the instinct peculiar to birds of prey, broken in a moment the thin parts of the skull about the eye, and almost instantly destroyed his life.

Several Eagles of this species breed in the high Capes about Cape Tourmente, below St. Joachim. In the fall they feed chiefly upon sea fowl and the carcases of fish. In the summer months they are very destructive to poultry, often carrying off a large Turkey or goose in their claws, from the barn doors.

The present is the first well authenticated instance of their attacking children in this country, which has come to our knowledge.—Ib.

At a Meeting of the Inhabitants of the County of Middlesex, held at Saint Thomas, on the 15th September, 1827, James Deifelds, Esquire, was called to the Chair, and a Secretary appointed, when the following resolutions were proposed, and unanimously adopted.

1st. RESOLVED.—That the site of the Gaol and Court House at the Town of London, in the Township of London, as established by Law, for the administration of Public Justice throughout the District of London, is within Twelve Miles of unsurveyed Territory, to the Northward of the said site.

2d. That to the Eastward of the said site, the oldest and very considerable settlements, extend to the distance of more than seventy miles.

3d, That while the principle is recognised, that Public Justice ought to be equally administered, and brought as near the doors of all classes of the King's Subjects, as circumstances can allow, such disproportionate distances, to travel in attendance of Trials and Inquests, are unreasonable, and in the present instance, without any feasible excuse.

4th, That the said site was selected and fixed upon, contrary to the interest and expressed wishes of the great mass of the population of the said District.

5th, That to suppose that the said site will be found most suitable and convenient for the administration of Justice, when the Country becomes more extensively settled, and is acting upon additional Establishments, as well against the most substantial interests of the present generation, for whose benefit alone, the site ought to have been selected, because that the public buildings are to be paid for, by direct taxation, upon the real and personal property of the present generation, and because also, that when that extensive, and valuable portion of the Province which lies between the settlements in this District, and Lake Huron, becomes settled, conflicting interests will arise which will lead to sub-divisions of the District, that will leave the present site as far from the centre of population, as it now is.

6th, That considering the weight of population, the junction, and easy communication of the public Roads throughout the District, and consulting at the same time, the general interest and convenience of the District at large, as far as it is practicable, in a measure which has for its object, the general benefit of the whole, but which from the nature of things, cannot accommodate the wishes of the Magistrates, that he was suspected of having set it on fire, an inquiry was immediately instituted, which resulted in his being committed for trial. We have not heard his name.

The Canadian Freeman says, that the "late Fire in this Town is universally believed to have been the act of an Incendiary," and charges the Police with neglect, in not bringing the affair to light.

Suspicions of this general nature cannot be noticed by the Police—if any person has reasonable ground of suspicion against any individual, he should go before a Magistrate, and make Affidavit to that effect, and of the grounds upon which such suspicion rests.—Then, and not before, can the Police act.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6th, 1827.

By late arrivals at New-York, we have received English dates to 24th August, from which we have made such extracts as appeared most interesting. In obedience to the Commands of His Majesty, it will be seen, that, His Grace the Duke of Wellington, resumes the command of the Army. The Ministerial arrangements, it is said, would not be completed until after Mr. Huskisson's return from France.

Our friends in the London District will see that we have complied with their wishes by inserting in this number, the Resolutions of a Public Meeting, with respect to the removal of the County Town from London to St. Thomas. We are not prepared to offer any positive opinion on the subject ourselves, not having an intimate knowledge of that part of the Country. From the returns however it certainly appears that, the population in London and the adjoining Townships is at present small, when compared with other parts of the District; but as the subject has been so fully discussed on a late occasion in the House of Assembly, and a Law having been passed establishing the County Town in London, which has been acted upon, by entering into the necessary arrangements for the erection of Public Buildings, for the administration of Justice, it may be considered doubtful, whether any change would be considered expedient.

A passenger on board the Queenston informs us that on Saturday night last, a House was burnt in Kingston, near the Market Square. The person inhabiting it, had insured only a few days before, and on a representation being made to the Magistrates, that he was suspected of having set it on fire, an inquiry was immediately instituted, which resulted in his being committed for trial. We have not heard his name.

The Canadian Freeman says, that the "late Fire in this Town is universally believed to have been the act of an Incendiary," and charges the Police with neglect, in not bringing the affair to light.

Suspicions of this general nature cannot be noticed by the Police—if any person has reasonable ground of suspicion against any individual, he should go before a Magistrate, and make Affidavit to that effect, and of the grounds upon which such suspicion rests.—Then, and not before, can the Police act.

His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR left Niagara on Thursday last for Kingston, where His Excellency we understand will inspect the 15th Regiment now stationed in that Garrison.

The papers are filled with the most distressing accounts of the effects of the late Gales, which have visited the American Coast, and some of the West India Islands. Several lives have been lost, and damage to a very great amount has been sustained by the Shipping. The equinox in this part of the Country has passed over without any severe Gales, and although the appearance of our Forests, reminds us that Winter is making its approaches, yet we have for many days past enjoyed that most delightful temperature, peculiar to the season in Upper Canada. The Harvest is now completed, and we learn with satisfaction, from all parts of the Country, that it is abundant.

DROWNED.—In the Niagara River last week, of the upsetting of a Boat, Mr. Henry Moody, Master of the Wood Dock, and Mr. Monroe, formerly an inhabitant of Whitby.

TO OUR CANADIAN FRIENDS.

New York, 130 Broadway.

24th September, 1827.

WE send you herewith the Scheme of a Grand Lottery, to be drawn in this City, on Wednesday, the 7th of November, to which we beg leave to call your particular attention.

There is another lottery, previous to the above, to be drawn on the 17th of October, Tickets for which are now ready for sale, and of which you have also a Scheme on the other side.

You will observe that Class, No. 9, contains only 14,190 Tickets, and that they are only $30; Halves $15; Quarters $8; Tenths, $3.

The amount of this Class is very considerable, although the number of Tickets is small, and we have drawn only to the amount of them. Should you may have an opportunity of disposing in season the quantity you may require, and oblige us by sending your orders early, as no doubt the demand in this Class will be very great.

We will not promise much, but to convince all speculators we are as fortunate as others, we beg to state, that we sold at our Philadelphia Office, the Capital Prize of $25,000 a Whole Ticket in the Lottery which drew on Wednesday, the 19th inst.; many others could be named, but it being the latest, will answer all purposes. We never deceive Prizes, unless sold by us, and for the truth of the above we can refer to the Managers.

Hitherto we have been, and we shall continue to be, particularly fortunate in selling Prizes.

Waiting your kind reply, which we hope will be as early as convenient

We remain,
most respectfully,
N. & S. SYLVESTER.

begun and holden at York, on the seventh day of November in the sixth year of our Reign, and prorogued on the 30th day of January, in the seventh year of our Reign, an Act was passed entitled "An Act to prevent the operation in this Province of an Act of Parliament made in England in the twenty first year of the reign of His late Majesty King James the first, entitled 'An Act to prevent the destroying or murthering of Bastard Children, and to make other provision in lieu thereof.'" And Whereas, according to the Provisions of a certain Act of the Parliament of Great Britain, passed in the thirty first year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the third entitled "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled 'an Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province.'" PROCLAMATION.

UPPER CANADA.

P. MAITLAND,
Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Registor of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K.C.B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. HYMN

By the late Reginald Heber, D. D. Lord Bishop of Calcutta.

I prais'd the Earth, in beauty seen
With garlands gay of various green;
I prais'd the Sea, whose ample field
Shone glorious as a silver shield;
And Earth and Ocean seem'd to say,
"Our beauties are but for a day!"

I prais'd the Sun, whose chariot roll'd
On wheels of amber and of gold;
I prais'd the Moon, whose softer eye
Gleam'd sweetly through the summer sky;
And Moon and Sun in accents clear
"Our days of light are numbered!"

O God! O Good beyond compare!
If thus thy meaner works are fair!
If thus thy bounties gild the span
Of man's brief mortal state,
What must the Mansion be
Where thy redeem'd shall dwell with thee

Miscellaneous.

ELEPHANT HUNTING.

FROM SCENES AND OCCURRENCES IN CAFFER LAND.

All the party went into the bush, the Hottentots first with their large guns, then their wives, and the gentlemen following. The first Hottentot frequently spoke to his companions in a low voice, and was heard to say, "look, look;" on inquiring the cause, he pointed out to them the fresh track of an Elephant. The bush became thicker, and the sun had no power to shine through the thick foliage; they passed the spot which the Hottentot marked out as the place where he had wounded the first Elephant, and soon afterwards they saw the dead Buffalo. The party went on resolving to see the dead Elephant, and winding along through the bush till they came to a sand hill; the Hottentots pointed out one of the carcases at some distance, lying on another sand hill, but on looking at it for a second, it appeared to move, and the Hottentot discovered, that it was a young calf by the side of the cow. The whole party immediately went on, and when within musket shot, they found that they were two calves lying by their dead mother; a piteous and interesting sight. The young calves rose, and some dogs that the Hottentots had incautiously taken into the bush, barked violently. At this moment the bushes moved, and the stupendious father stalked in; he looked around him quietly, and ever so slowly, and after viewing the party for a second, he walked on, and was soon hid behind some trees. The situation they had placed themselves in, had now become extremely critical; the bush was continuous for miles in extent, and where to fly in case of an attack was very difficult to determine. They were all warned not to run against the wind; and the direction of the house was pointed out, as well as circumstances would allow; but while they were debating the matter, the dogs ran in among the young elephants; they set up a deafening yell, and made directly towards the party, some of whom lay down by the path, with the hope of seizing the smallest calf, but they were very glad to make their escape, as they discovered it to be larger than they expected. The bull elephant called back by the cry of his young, again appeared, but totally different in aspect, and eyes in form. His walk was quicker, his eye fierce, his trunk elevated, and his head appeared three times as large as the cow. The party consulted from a distant quarter, and the enraged father took the shortest cut towards them, crushing the branches as he stalked along; and the party thus most providentially escaped. It was ascertained that the elephant had made off towards the sea.

They went up to the dead elephant merely to examine it; for the Hottentots leave the tusks till the flesh become softened, as it would take up too much time to separate them. One of these men took out his knife, and cut a circular piece off the head, about an inch deep; he then pointed out a dark spot, similar to what is called the kernal in beef; this he probed with his knife, and brought out a small part of a bullet; but it was broken. He distributed a little piece as a great favour, then carefully wrapt the remainder up, as they have an idea, that whoever wears it, can never be killed by an elephant; and this valuable charm was transferred by my friend to me. It is remarkable that no naturalist has ever noticed this circumstance. There is no outward appearance, and it is impossible to imagine how it becomes enclosed, or of what use it is to the animal.

They set off a party of fourteen in number, and found upwards of three score elephants encamped on the banks of the Kounap River. It was late when the party arrived, therefore an attempt would have been useless and dangerous. Large fires were lighted to keep off the Lions as well as elephants, and the party being much fatigued, they lay down and slept.

The elephants awoke them early with breaking and pulling up trees by the roots, and rolling themselves in the water, &c. The party immediately pressed for the attack, and now commenced the sport. The elephants, upon receiving the first shot, as if by mutual consent, gave chace, though not for above six or seven hundred yards. This answered the desired effect. One of the party galloped between the elephants and the bush, which they had just left, commencing, at the same time, a very heavy fire, which harrassed them to such a degree, that they fled to the plains, leaving behind them a thick cover, in which they might have been perfectly secure from the shots. On these plains great numbers of small bushes are found at no great distance from each other, so that if one party consents to drive the elephant out of one bush, the other will conceal themselves, and by this means may get some good shots.

One large bull elephant stationed himself in the middle of one of these small bushes; and at least two hundred rounds were fired without being able to bring him down, or make him move from the place in which he had stationed himself. At every shot he received he was observed to blow a quantity of water into the wound, and then tear up a large lump of earth to endeavour to stop the blood. The Caffers do the same thing when they have been shot—that is, tear up a handfull of grass and thrust it into the wounded place; and it is thought they have learnt this from seeing the elephants do it. At length the great bull dropped. The party then entered the bush, and to their great surprise, found that the reason he would not leave this spot, was, that he had there found a pool of water, with which he had been washing his wounds. His tusks measured seventeen feet and three quarters, and his teeth weighed one hundred and ninety pounds. Before the day's sport was over, they had killed thirteen.

Statistics of Greece. The population of 37 Eparchies of the Morea, is 700,000. The states owns one-twelfth of the territory, consisting of forests, plantations of vines and olives, fisheries, salt works, public baths, and villas. The revenue of the Morea, not including government property, was in 1815, about $1,000,000. Northern Greece is divided into 26 Eparchies with a population of 800,000; the war has pressed so heavily on this district, as to reduce its revenue below $700,000. The Archipelago islands comprise about 300,000 persons; and pay the government nearly $200,000 in taxes. They own about 250 vessels of all sizes. The public debt in 1825, was $6,000,000. It is now a great deal more. What might not this highly favored region become under a free government, which encouraged commerce, agriculture and manufactures.—Paris paper.

VOLCANO OF KILAUEA.

Mr. Stewart, the American Missionary of the Sandwich Islands, visited the volcano of Kilauea, in company with the present Lord Byron, of the frigate Blond, during his stay at these islands.

"There are scenes," says Mr. Stewart, "to which description, and even painting, can do justice, and in conveying any adequate impression of which, they must ever fail. Of such, an elegant traveller rightly says, 'the height, the depth, the length, the breadth, the combined aspect may all be correctly given, but the mind of the reader will remain untouched by the emotions of admiration and sublimity which the eyes-witness experiences.' That which here bursts on our sight, was emphatically, of this kind, and to behold it without astonishment and deep emotion, demands a familiarity with the more terrible phenomena of nature, which few have the opportunity of acquiring. Standing at an elevation of 1500 ft. we look into a horrid gulf not less than eight miles in circumference, so directly beneath us, that in appearance we might by a single leap, have plunged into its lowest depth. The hideous immensity itself, independent of the many frightful images embraced in it, almost caused an involuntary closing of the eyes against it. But when by the light, is added the appalling effect of various unnatural and fearful noises, the muttering sighing, the groaning and blowing, the every agonized struggling of the mighty action within—as a whole, it is too horrible! and for the first moment, I felt like one of old Saxon, who, on reaching the brink, recoiled and covered his face, 'exclaiming, 'call it weakness, or what you please, but I cannot look again."—London Paper.

Destructive Fire at Shubenezer.—A most destructive fire broke out on Tuesday night, in Blue Town, Shoerness, which consumed sixty-two houses before it could be got under. Caution to Stage Coachmen.—At the Salisbury Assizes, on Thursday last, John Maude was indicted, upon the Coroner's Verdict, for Manslaughter, for killing, on the 3rd July, Thomas Strange, by violently upsetting the coach on which the deceased sat. The prisoner was acquitted in consequence of an unimportant, but fatal objection to the indictment. After the trial was over, Lord Chief Justice Best said, "I now give this public notice, that in every future case in which a conviction shall follow a charge of furious driving, I will, without doubt, transport the offender for life."

The first edition of Sir Walter Scott's Life of Napoleon was, as "the trade" express it, out of print the day after it was published. The George the Fourth Steam-Boat had arrived at St. Petersburg in 9 days from London, having stopped two days at Copenhagen and Christiana, to land and take in passengers.

As a proof of His late lamented Royal Highness the Duke of York's attention to the offspring of old Officers, there is now an Officer quartered at Gosham, who friendless, and without any influence whatever, laid before His Royal Highness the Commissions of his ancestors, signed by King Charles I. and II., King William III., Queen Anne, King George I. and II., and one given to his great-grandfather on the field, at the Battle of Aughrim, signed by General de Ginkle, dated 1691. His Royal Highness the Duke of York immediately appointed him to an Ensigncy in the 60th Regiment, and accompanied the appointment with a donation of £30 to enable him to outfit himself. This Officer was severely wounded at the battles of the Pyrenees and Toulouse.

Among the Farmers of Norway, who very much resemble what English Farmers once were, the family plate of butter seems to be the state dish of the house; in any one of which if the utmost quantity to be wanted, a mess is brought forth weighing six or eight pounds, and so highly ornamented, being turned out of moulds, with the shape of Cathedrals set off with gothic Spires and other devices, that a passenger is unwilling to destroy so novel though perishable an edifice.

It is confidently reported that the Lord High Admiral is about to issue orders to suspend the use of Malt Liquors in the Navy, and that he has directed an additional quantity of rum and wine to be served instead.

In the second week of last month a Naval Dinner was given at Portsmouth, England, to the Duke of Clarence, as Lord High Admiral. The following extract is part of the Speech which he delivered on the occasion:—

"In any situation, I should not be insensible to the merits and to the importance of the Navy. It is the life, the soul, the very cause of our existence, as an independent Nation. What would Britain be without her commerce, her maritime superiority? Gentlemen, look upon the Globe, and compare this little Isle of Great Britain, a mere speck in the Ocean, with the great Nations of the world, and then consider in how many parts of that world our flag is, for various purposes, unfurled, by how many myriads of its inhabitants our language is spoken, and then let any one ask, how those great ends, and that vast importance have been obtained:—I will answer—by the Navy. Look only to Europe—if the nations thereof possess their own laws, their own governments, their own institutions, with prosperity and peace, or any good which, as independent nations, they may enjoy, after the gigantic strides, taken by usurpation and despotism—to whom are they indebted but to England: and how did England achieve such things? I will answer, by her Navy! I have seen other countries, but all I have seen, all I can learn, serves only to make me more proud of being an Englishman. And what had raised England to be the arbitress of nations, the empress, to her past and present proud pre-eminence; I answer it was her Navy! Over that Navy, over that commerce, without which Britain could not rank so high on the scale of Nations, it becomes my duty to watch with a belief that to damp the spirit of commerce would be to check that industry of which it is the soul, and of which, again, the protecting arm is the Navy.

All the Provincial papers speak of a continued advance of the amount of wages, in the manufacturing districts. This is an auspicious sign of returning Trade.

The Duke of Cumberland is expected shortly in England. He has already passed through Ghent on his way.

MR. CANNING'S WILL.

The Will of the Right Honourable George Canning, First Lord Commissioner of His Majesty's Treasury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"This is the last will and testament of me, the Right Hon. George Canning of Gloster-place, Brompton, in the county of Middlesex. I give and bequeath unto my dear wife, Joan Canning, all and singular my personal estate and effects, whatsoever and wheresoever, and of what nature and kind soever (subject to the payment of my just debts, and funeral and testamentary expenses,) to and for her own absolute use and benefit; and I do hereby nominate, constitute and appoint my dear said wife, and the Most Hon. William Henry Cavendish Bentinck Scott, Marquis of Titchfield, executrix and executor of this will, and guardian of my children during their minorities; and I do hereby revoke all former and other wills by me at any time heretofore made. In witness whereof, I, the said George Canning, have hereunto set my hand and seal, this 28th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1819.

"GEORGE CANNING, (L. S.)

"Signed, sealed, published, and declared, &c. in the presence of—Henry Wellesley, Charles Ellis.

"I earnestly desire that Joan will either pay to my mother £2000, or (what I should prefer, if it can be secured,) an annuity of £300 during her life."

The will was (called) has been sworn to at Doctor's Commons, by the oath of the Most Noble William Henry Cavendish Bentick Scott, Duke of Portland (heretofore Titchfield,) one of the executors, a power being reserved to Joan Canning, widow, the relict, the other executor.

The effects are sworn to be under £30,000.

The British squadron, in the Mediterranean, is composed of three ships of the line, five large frigates, two smaller, five large and eleven small brigs.—Total 26 sail. Their names are as follows:—Asia, Albion, and Genoa, 74's; Cambrian, Glasgow, Scringapatam, Dryad, Dartmouth, Ariadne, and Talbot frigates; Raleigh, Rifleman, Rose, Zebra, Gannet, Minstrel, Brisk, Cancleon, Chanticleer, Jasper, Mastiff, Parthian, Pelican, Pelorus, Philanel, and Musquito.

Capt. Augustus Clifford, C. B. is appointed to the Undaunted frigate, at Chatham, which is ordered to be fitted to take out Lord William Bentinck, Governor General of India, to Calcutta.

NEWSPAPERS TO THE COLONIES AND POSSESSIONS BEYOND SEAS.—It is now finally settled by authority of Government, that Newspapers may be sent by Post-Office Packets, on payment of three half-pence on each, provided they be delivered to any Post-office, within seven days from the day of publication, with reference to "the Town in which, such Newspapers shall be published."

His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral has been sworn in as Steward of the Borough of Windsor, in the room of his late Royal Highness the Duke of York. It is said, that he has appointed as his private Secretary, Captain Spencer, son of Lord Spencer, in the place of Mr. Hamilton, who retires from ill health.

As a sign of the times, it may be noted, that Blackwood's Magazine appears this month without one single word of politics, or political allusion in it. This is in fact, the state of parties and of affairs, that no one is willing to commit himself by an avowal of opinion.

Mr. Barry O'Meara controverts, in a letter in a London morning paper, a vast number of the facts and statements of Sir Walter Scott's life of Napoleon.

It is currently reported, both in Paris and London, that General Gourgaud is about to put himself in communication with Sir Walter Scott, as to the mention made of him in the Life of Napoleon. Indeed, it was said in Paris, that he had set out for England for that purpose. We hope the said General will be prevented from carrying his views to extremities.

SPAIN.—It is no more than the simple truth to assert that Spain appears to be in a state of absolute anarchy. The capital has been the scene of turbulence such as would almost demonstrate the want of a government altogether. The Courier of Thursday evening, alluding to the somewhile assertion of certain of its contemporaries, that the Pachs of Egypt had thrown off his allegiance to the Ottoman Porte —refers to the fact, that as yet the English government has received no intelligence of any such event, and that it is to be considered as a fact; though, the Courier adds, it is highly probable this will occur at no distant period.—Ib. Sept. 1st.

We have very little to say on the subject of the ministry, the high deliberating parties have not yet come to any decision. We have infinite talk indeed in the newspapers—most ingenious dissertations on what is fitting as well as on what is probable, with respect to this great interest; but of what will be done they are as ignorant as ourselves.

It is denied, and apparently with authority, that Mr. Herries is peculiarly the King's nominee for the vacant office of Chancellor of the Exchequer. It is affirmed that he was recommended by Lord Goderich, and only approved by the King.

It is said, too, in the same authoritative style, that Mr. Herries expressed his own great disinclination to accept the office.

Postscript.—The latest account (in the papers) report nothing yet settled.

The speeches of Mr. Canning are about to be published in five volumes—the three first corrected by himself.

The discovery ship Hecla, Capt. Parry, was seen May 10, in lat. 78. near Spitzbergen, by Capt. Hoste, of the whaleship Bremen, which has arrived in England.—Ib.

Foreign Intelligence.

The Emperor of Russia has written to the Pope an autographic letter in which he informs His Holiness of the approaching arrival of a Russian Squadron in the Mediterranean. His Imperial Majesty requests protection and assistance for the Russian Sailors, in the event of their being constrained to land within the territory of the Church, at the same time declaring his peaceful intentions.

The news of Lord Cochrane's appearance off Alexandria, which we gave from the German papers, is confirmed by letters from Marseilles, which repeat the same facts. They explain the retreat of Lord C. as follows:—"Not having been able to succeed in surprising the Egyptian fleet, and setting it on fire, the Greek Admiral would not run the hazard of a Naval engagement within sight of the batteries; Raleigh, Rifleman, Rose, Zebra, Gannet, Minstrel, Brisk, Cancleon, Chanticleer, Jasper, Mastiff, Parthian, Pelican, Pelorus, Philanel, and Musquito.

FRANCE.

The Moniteur of Aug 26, says:—The latest accounts received from Algiers announce that the large ships of war of the Regency are still kept in port, and that hitherto no one has endeavoured to get out. Only some felucca, by favor of the night, and by their small draught of water, have been able to sail along the coast, without being observed by the French squadron, at a time when its number was small; but the squadron has now been reinforced by several vessels, and is able to extend its line of observation from Bona in the east, to Oran in the west.

It is evident that the Algerine felucca as to small to extend their cruise to a great distance, but they may prove dangerous to vessels sailing singly between Sicily and the Balearic Islands. It is to remedy this inconvenience as much as possible, that regular convoys have been established between Marseilles and Cadiz, and that from time to time some of the King's ships are sent to cruise between Algiers and Carthagena.

PORTUGAL.

The London Courier of the 28th Aug. says —"We have received, this morning, by express, the Gazette de France, of yesterday's date, and the Paris papers of Monday. The only intelligence they contain relates to Portugal, and it will be seen that this intelligence is of more than ordinary importance. The two parties in that country are now so nearly balanced, that both, in the consciousness of their mutual strength, abstain from active measures. The inflammatory proclamation which has recently affixed on the walls of that city by the constitutionalists, calling upon their partizans to unite in opposition to the return of Don Miguel, is of the most violent character, and abuses, with edifying impartiality, Austria, Spain, England, and France. It may be recollected, however, that though grave and insuperable objections may exist to the unconditional assumption of power by Don Miguel, such an arrangement might be made, and is within the competency of the Allied Powers, as would not only quiet all present fears, but become a guarantee for the future tranquility of Portugal. Nor shall we be surprised, before long, to find his Royal Highness on his way to Lisbon, there to take upon himself the office of Regent, accompanied with conditions to which it is not now necessary to make a more specific allusion, which, while they would extinguish the extravagant projects of the Apostolical party, would, at the same time, tend to unite the more moderate individuals of that party with the constitutionalists in support of the existing system. The affairs of this kingdom, indeed, are drawing to a crisis, and we may rest satisfied, that neither our own government, nor those of France and Austria, are inattentive to the pressing claims which the affairs of Portugal have upon their mature deliberations.

The London papers of the 31st Aug. say—We have received the following information from a source on which our readers can perfectly rely. It confirms the fact, and explains the reason, of the appointment of Don Miguel as Regent of Portugal, under the pledge of his honour, as well as of the oath which he has freely taken, to maintain the Constitutional System. The appointment is beyond all doubt.

The Marquis de Palmella and Count de Villa Real, the two Portuguese ministers here, had an interview with Viscount Dudley, yesterday, at the Foreign office—no doubt on this important affair.

There is not the slightest doubt among the best informed people at Rio, that the Emperor is earnest in his determination to support the Constitution. He acts, no doubt, in the persuasion of the good faith of his brother, and in the hope that the Great Powers of Europe will not support the Constitutional System.

A Portuguese official person, of some distinction, who is in England, on his way to Vienna, bears with him the appointment of Don Miguel.

GREECE.

The Austrian Observer of the 16th of August, contains accounts from Constantinople, by which it appears the Turks were continuing their warlike efforts with unabating activity. Gen. Church was endeavoring to introduce military discipline among the Greeks. He had caused three Suliots to be shot, which had produced some disturbances; but they had been quelled by the appearance of some British men-of-war in the Roads.

The Courier of the 30th says, that no confirmation has been received of the rumour that the Pacha of Egypt had declared himself independent of the Porte, and that the fact, which has been so positively announced, is not true. It is probable that the Pacha is waiting to observe the effect of the steps taking by the European powers in behalf of Greece, and is, as yet, in favour of non-committals.

A letter from Zante, of August 2d, contains an account of the capture of a Turkish frigate of 36 guns, and a galliot, by Admiral Cochrane. The frigate was much cut up, and surrendered in ten minutes. The cannonade was heard at Zante at noon, and the next morning the Hellas with her prizes passed near the island, and proceeded towards Clarenza to anchor and fit out the prizes.

The Greeks have gained a victory in the Peloponnesus. Ibrahim Pacha assembled all his forces to attack the Citadel of Corinth, and put himself at the head of the Arabs. The Greeks drew him near Vostitza, and compelled him to retrate with loss.

Count Capo d'Istra was visited at Berlin by the most distinguished Philhellenes of that capital, who were desirous of paying their respects to the future President of the government of Greece.

The Report that Turkish troops, organised in the European fashion, were to come to Moldavia, had reached St. Petersburgh. It is said that orders have been sent to the General commanding the army in Bessarabia, to draw his posts closer together, and to watch all the movements that may take place in Moldavia; and in case the Turks should increase their forces to a principality, to send immediate notice to the minister of war at St. Petersburgh.

Lower Canada.

The Fair, under the Patronage of the Montreal Agricultural Society, held on Thursday last on the plains of St. Ann, was numerously attended, considering the muddy state of the roads; Cattle offered were generally of a good quality, which assures us that the praiseworthy exertions of the Society to improve the breed of Cattle in this country, will be not been without success.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—As a Corporal and four men, of the Detachment 71st Regt. stationed at St. John's, were conveying two of their comrades by boat from that place to Isle-aux-Noix on Wednesday last, after having landed them at the Ferry-house, opposite to the Island and taking a parting glass, they had not proceeded far on their return home or got themselves properly adjusted for the voyage, when some of them were observed standing up in the boat which immediately upset, and unfortunately for them, although within about thirty yards of the shore, only one of the party was saved.—The Corporal and three of the men thus falling victims to a want of a sense of their danger in undertaking the guidance of a boat of which they had not truly shewed their inadequate.—Montreal Gazette.

We are sorry to state, that a fine child, about 3 years of age, fell on Monday morning from on board the Steam-Boat, John Molson, when a little distance above Long Point. The child was playing by its mother's side when it fell through one of the port-holes, the door of which had not been fastened. The Engine was instantly stopped, and though the child was seen floating a good distance down, it had sunk before the boat could reach it. Captain Armstrong made every exertion in his power. The parents belong to Three Rivers.—Mont. Herald.

Domestic.

The various operations on the Welland canal, continue in successful progress; and the workmen enjoy as good health, generally, as the same number of labouring men, in any part of the province. We shall, next week, give the most perfect particular statements of the amount of labour performed during the last month. At the present moment, all is bustle and activity in our village, on account of the letting of the Cranberry Marsh, which takes place tomorrow; a great number of competitors having already arrived.—Farmers' Journal.

Meeting at the Credit.

Pursuant to notice, the Inhabitants between the Humber and 16 Mile Creek, on the Lake Road, met this day at Mr. Polley's Inn, mouth of the River Credit, for the purpose of considering the present state of said Road, and adopting measures in conjunction with the inhabitants of Nelson and Trafalgar, for its speedy improvement—when W. Thompson, Esquire, was called to the Chair, and Mr. P. Vanevary nominated as Secretary: the following Resolutions were then put from the Chair and adopted, viz.

1st, Resolved.—That the Lake Road from York to the Burlington Bay Canal, would, if improved, be a pleasant and convenient public Road—the same being in that route I. or 2 Miles nearer than Dundas Street, and all the high and dangerous hills on that Road avoided.

2d, Resolved.—That the Country along the line of said Road being free from hills and generally favourable for Roads—our united labours aided by such funds as we may reasonably expect from Government and other sources, properly applied, would, in the ensuing next season, render the same a comfortable and easy Carriage Road.

3d, Resolved.—That the very extensive Indian Reserves on the River Credit, 16 and 19 Mile Creeks, together with many other Reserves, in an unimproved state, are the greatest obstacles we have to contend with in the desired improvement.—And in order therefore, to obtain assistance therein, we deem it proper to address His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, praying he will be pleased to afford us such means, as to him may seem meet, in aid of our views—and also to Petition the Legislature at the next Session, for the same purpose.

4th, Resolved.—That feeling as we do, the necessity and utility of this work, we cannot more enhance the value of our farms, or promote our comfort, than by contributing according to the means we possess, either money, labour, or produce, for the speedy accomplishment of said work.

5th, Resolved.—That in order to carry these our Resolutions into effect, and to facilitate the contemplated improvement, it is necessary and expedient to nominate and appoint three persons to act in concert with those appointed at the Trafalgar Meeting which will form the Lake Road Committee, whose province it shall be to superintend and direct in the performance of said work.

6th, Resolved.—That W. Thompson, Esq. John Gamble, Esq. and Mr. Bennett Griggs, be appointed for the above purpose.

7th, Resolved.—That a paper be prepared for receiving signatures, and a subscription immediately commenced.

8th, Resolved.—That the proceedings of this Meeting be Published in the York Gazette.

Communication.

To the Editor of the U. E. Loyalist.

Sir,

Should you be of opinion that the information contained in this communication will be of any advantage to the public, be pleased to give it publicity. It tends to attach guilt to one of the Post-Offices between Kingston and Sandwich, but it may at the same time tend to the discovery of the guilty person, or at least give rise to an inquiry that may terminate in removing from so respectable and useful a department, any improper person who may have found his way into it.

I have lately seen in the public papers notices of the loss of several letters containing money, but for my part I can safely say that for upwards of twenty years past, I have received and remitted, through the medium of the Post-Office, many thousand pounds in Bank Notes and Bills of Exchange, and except in the present instance, have never to my recollection sustained any loss whatever. There is therefore every reason to believe that such offences in this Department within the Province are of a recent date.

On the 25th inst I received by Mail a Letter from John Macaulay Esq. post master at Kingston dated the 12th inst., in which he informed me that he had, enclosed £22 7 6 in 8 bills of $10 each, 1 bill of $5, and of $4, and half a dollar in change. Upon opening the Letter I found the half dollar in it wrapped in a piece of paper, but the bills or bank notes were gone. It appeared to myself and others that the Letter had been opened, and on application at the post-office in Sandwich it was found that the packet containing the money had been extracted in the centre, but the ends were merely folded and unsealed, and as there were but four letters in the Packet, the half dollar could be felt, and the weight no doubt led to an examination of its contents and to the subsequent Larceny.

I remain, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
J. WOODS.

Sandwich, 26th September, 1827.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13th, 1827.

By the Packet Ship Canada, arrived at New York, London dates to the 31st August, and Liverpool to 1st September are received. There is not any important news.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor arrived in the Gananoque, on Wednesday last, and was received on landing by a salute from the Garrison.

The Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada meets for the actual despatch of public business, on 20th November next.

From the complaints which have lately been made, of losses sustained in money to a considerable amount, on transmission through the Post Office, there can be no doubt that, the confidence which has hitherto been felt, in that mode of conveyance, must be very seriously affected. The Letter which we have inserted in this days paper from Mr. Woods, is of such a nature, as we hope, will claim the immediate attention of the proper authority in the Post-Office Department, and lead to such an inquiry, as will have the effect of preventing the recurrence of similar transactions.

From what is said in Mr. Woods Letter, it may be thought by some, that the person who made up the mail at the Kingston Office, should have sealed both the ends, as well as the middle of the Amherstburgh packet. It would perhaps be as well, that this should be done in all cases; but at the same time it must be evident that, even this precaution would avail but little against a person, who would not hesitate to break through a Mail envelope, and therefore disregard the sanctity of a Letter under the usual seal. Supposing such envelopes not to contain money Letters, the private and familiar correspondence of friends would not be safe, from the search of such daring offenders; whose conduct, tending as it does, to destroy that confidence which has for so many years existed on the part of the public, towards the Post Office Department, requires to be seasonably checked.

The last Canadian Freeman, has a long article on the "York Police."—He would have the people believe that, the Police is highly culpable in not having the Town paved, lighted, and watched—that theirs is the fault that, fountains of water—groves of trees—public walks and pleasure grounds, for health and amusement, do not adorn the Town. That all these things, are in themselves extremely desirable, we will not deny, but until we have the means of procuring them, we must only be content to do without them. We have before had occasion to remark, that with all its natural capabilities, this is no fairy land, where all these things will make their appearance at the command of the enchanter—labour and industry alone will produce them—and these must be paid for.

The article in the Freeman, is intended as a reply to what we said last week, with respect to the charge he made against the Police, on the subject of the late fire in this Town, which he said was generally suspected, to have been "the act of an incendiary."—Now we believe, notwithstanding the opinion which the Freeman is pleased to express of us, and notwithstanding the coarse and abusive language he is in the habit of using when alluding to us, that no one can possibly suppose that we can have a desire to screen an "incendiary," or that the Police could by any possibility be guilty (to a great a dereliction of duty, even if we were governed by such unworthy conduct, as to listen to our representations. But the Freeman, by way of magnifying the charge he has made against the Police says, "it is a notorious fact, that within a short period of time," nine cases of Fire he mentions "were all the work of incendiaries."—This is truly a notorious assertion, and if fact, the Town of York must be considered as a nest of incendiaries. But if the Freeman knew this fact, why has he kept it so long to himself—notorious as he says it is, it is the first time we ever heard of it.—Surely as a good Citizen of the Town, it would have been his duty to have gone before the proper authorities, (the Police for Example) and acquainted them of the fact. He perhaps dislikes the part of an informer, knowing full well that, he could not before those authorities communicate general suspicion, with any prospect of bringing the guilty to Justice, unless he fixed his suspicion upon some particular individual. But, says the Freeman "are there no rewards to be offered?"—we would reply to this question, by asking him, whether, if he has a suspicion against any particular individual, (for a general suspicion we repeat would be of no avail) and a reward was offered, would he then come forward and name the man. Is it not equally his duty, as it is the duty of all others, who may have such suspicions, to come forward and make them known, without any reward being offered?

To persist in accusation on this subject, is perfectly absurd, and enough has been said to show that, there is no ground for it. We shall only add that the Freeman is mistaken in one respect,—we have not the honor to belong to the York Police—if we had we should perhaps feel inclined to notice him in a very different manner.

The Assizes for the Home District, commenced on Monday last, in the new Court House, which is fitted up in a very commodious manner. The Hon. Chief Justice Campbell delivered the charge to the Grand Jury, and since the opening of the Court, Bills have been found against the following persons:—

Hiram Louee—Murder. Betsey (an Indian Woman)—Manslaughter. William Jones—Malicious killing a Cow. Jason Bryant—Larceny (two indictments.) William Noble—Perjury.

Betsey the Indian Woman who inflicted the blow on John Wiggins last spring, of which he afterwards died, has been tried and found guilty.

The trial of Hiram Louee came on Yesterday, when after a patient investigation the Jury returned a Verdict of Manslaughter.

Died,

On Sunday last, 7th inst., Mrs. Boulton, Wife of Mr. Justice Boulton, aged 61 years.

Married,

At Quebec, on the 1st inst., at the Episcopal Church in this City, Robert Baldwin, Esq., Attorney, Niagara, to Jane, eldest Daughter of John Jones, Esq., of this city.

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he has removed his establishment to the new Brick Building, one door West of the Steam-Boat Hotel, where all orders in his line of business will be thankfully received and punctually attended to.

24th September, 1827.

WE send you herewith the Scheme of a Grand Lottery, to be drawn in this City, on Wednesday, the 7th of November, to which we beg leave to call your particular attention.

There is another Lottery, previous to the above, to be drawn on the 17th of October, Tickets in which are now ready for sale, and of which you have also a Scheme on the other side.

You will observe that Class, No. 9, contains only 14,190 Tickets, and that they are only $30; Halves $10; Quarters $5; Tenths, $3.

The amount of this Class is very considerable, although the number of Tickets is small, and we have thus early sent you our circular, in order that you may have an opportunity of determining in season the quantity you may require, and oblige us by sending your orders early, as no doubt the demand in this Scheme will be very great.

We will not promise much, but to convince all speculators we are as fortunate as others, we beg to state, that we sold at our Philosophia Office, the Capital Prize of $25,000, in a Whole Ticket, in the Lottery which drew on Wednesday, the 19th inst.; many others could be named, but it being the latest, will answer all purposes. We never claim Prizes, unless sold by us, and for the truth of the above we can refer to the Managers.

Hitherto we have been, and we trust we shall continue to be, particularly fortunate in selling Prizes.

Waiting your kind reply, which we hope will be as early as convenient

We remain,

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OFFICE, }

WHEREAS several Persons have received Orders in Council, for Town Lots in Kingston, which still remain unlocated:—

NOTICE is hereby given, to all such Persons, that unless they do make their respective Locations within six months from this date, the said Orders in Council will be cancelled.

By command of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council,

JOHN SMALL,
3-2aw. Clerk of the Executive Council.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FROM the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All corre pondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form. Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of 2s per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land.—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

There is another Lottery, previous to the above, to be drawn on the 17th of October, Tickets in which are now ready for sale, and of which you have also a Scheme on the other side.

You will observe that Class, No. 9, contains only 14,190 Tickets, and that they are only $20; Halves $10; Quarters $5; Tenths, $2.

The amount of this Class is very considerable, although the number of Tickets is small, and we have thus early sent you our circular, in order that you may have an opportunity of determining in season the quantity you may require, and oblige us by sending your orders early, as no doubt the demand in this Scheme will be very great.

We will not promise much, but to convince all speculators we are as fortunate as others, we beg to state, that we sold at our Philadelphia Office, the Capital Prize of $25,000, in a Whole Ticket, in the Lottery which drew on Wednesday, the 19th inst.; many others could be named, but it being the latest, will answer all purposes. We never claim Prizes, unless sold by us, and for the truth of the above we can refer to the $. SYLVESTER,

Hitherto we have been, and we trust we shall continue to be, particularly fortunate in selling Prizes.

Wishing your kind reply, which we hope will be as early as convenient.

MUMMIES.

In a discourse recently pronounced at Paris, by M. Julia Fontenelle, on the Egyptian practice of embalming, the professor maintained, that a physical necessity had rendered that practice indispensable. The inundations of the Nile annually covered for four months almost the whole of the cultivated parts of Egypt. It is evident, therefore, that it was necessary to place the Towns and Villages on elevated spots. It appears, according to Danvers, that at the time of its greatest prosperity, under the reign of Sesostris, Egypt contained, upon a territory of 2,250 square leagues, about 6,222 persons on each; which, supposing that in the year one death takes place among forty persons, gives 350,000 deaths annually. These corpses must be disposed of, either by interment or by burning. Yet both these modes were almost impracticable. If buried, either around the inhabited places, or in those spots which were overflowed by the Nile, it is evident that, by the decomposition of the bodies, the purity of the air would be so affected, as to render it the germ of destruction to the people. As for the second mode of destroying corpses, the want of fuel presented an insurmountable obstacle to it. A more easy process was open to the Egyptians. That fine country was sprinkled with small lakes of natron (sub-carbonate of soda), and as that salt possesses the property of preserving animal substances from putrefaction, it was naturally used as the means of embalming dead bodies.

ARTIFICIAL STONE.

Mr Joseph Aspdin, of Leeds, has taken out a patent for a new mode of producing an artificial stone, or cement, for the covering of buildings. He calls it Portland cement, from its resemblance to Portland Stone. Its component parts are as follow:—a given quantity of lime-stone, of the kind usually employed for mending roads, is to be pulverized by beating or grinding, or it may be taken from the road in a pulverized state, or in a state of puddle: this, when dried, is to be calcined in a furnace in the usual way. A similar quantity of argillaceous earth, or clay, is then to be mixed in water with the calcined lime-stone, and the whole perfectly incorporated, by manual labour or by machinery, into a plastic state. This mixture is then to be placed in shallow vessels for the purpose of evaporation, and then to be submitted to the action of the air, the sun, or the heat of fire, or steam conducted by pipes or flues under the pans of evaporating vessels. This composition, when in a dry state, is to be broken into lumps of suitable sizes, and is then to be calcined again, in a furnace similar to a lime-kiln, till the carbonic acid has been entirely expelled. The mixture so prepared is then to be pulverized by grinding or beating, and when reduced to a fine powder is in a fit state for use; and, with the addition of so much water as will form a proper consistency of mortar, will, when applied to its purpose, make a compact and durable artificial stone, equal to the Portland stone itself.

Neorama.—A novel exhibition will shortly be opened in Paris, under the name of Neorama. It is designed by M. Alaux, who, by means of long and extensive study, has discovered certain combinations in the art of drawing, the extraordinary effect of which is, to represent on a cylindrical surface, every part, whether quadrangular or curved, of the interior of a building. The first picture, for example, to be exhibited, is the interior of St. Peter's at Rome, which is so managed that the spectator standing in the centre of the Neorama may, by merely turning himself round, survey successively the entrance, the nave, the side chapels, the dome, and the gallery, and form a correct estimate of the extensive area of the Cathedral.—Paris Paper.

A new material, called ulva marina, and possessing some very useful and uncommon properties, has lately been bro't into use for stuffing cushions and matrasses. It is said to be capable of resisting humidity altogether, and that it will not harbour any infection of contiguous matter. No vermin will live in it. Some of the prisons and public establishments have already adopted it. This material is found in the north of Germany, and has been first applied to this use by Mr. Warburgh, a merchant of that country. If it answers the description, the discovery will be a most valuable one.

A correspondent of the London Courier gives "hints as to the feasibility of establishing a commercial company in England, and elsewhere, to increase and carry forward the Fisheries in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, through the medium of steam vessels." He suggests that the steam vessels should be from 300 to 400 tons burthen, and adds—

"To embrace these objects, it is submitted that steam-vessels of 300 to 400 tons burthen, would prove a desirable medium. The great accommodation such vessels would afford on deck, for catching, cleaning, and splitting the fish, and saving the oil, their capacious stowage below—their easy draft of water—the facility with which they can be moved from one fishing station to another—are the ease with which they ride at sea, and also with which they can approach their destined harbour when loaded, and again leave it even against adverse winds, by all which great dispatch would be ensured, are objects of serious magnitude opposed to the difficulties suffered by sailing vessels. They would also offer great advantages in the herring and mackerel fisheries—as their cargoes might be properly prepared (at these seasons of the year,) cured, and stowed in bulk in their holds, by their crews, which would receive them from the small boats, and then carried to Halifax in a few hours, there barrelled, and shipped for the West India and other markets. Fuel is cheap. Coals at Picto Minesu 12s. to 15s. per chap."

THE DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT JASSY.

Vienna, August 10.

A Letter from Jassy, of the 1st of August, brings the following melancholy account of a destructive fire, which reduced to ashes above a third part of that city:—

"About half past two in the morning of yesterday, a fire broke out in a house near the Russian Consulate. A most violent North wind immediately carried the burning shingles of the roof to the quarters of the City situated in that direction, and in less than a quarter of an hour more than ten houses in parts at some distance from each other were in flames. The fury of the storm continued to increase, and the flames rolling onwards like the waves of the sea, seized with incredible rapidity every thing in their course. All human assistance was impossible, and every one was glad to escape with his life. From the house of M. Scarlat Ilie Ennuco, where it commenced nearly to the French Consulate, in breadth, and sideways, on one hand to the stream of Bachieri, and on the other to the monastery Formosa, every thing is reduced to ashes. More than one third of the City, and that the handsomest part, is burned. Nearly eight hundred houses, including the palaces of the Hospodar, with all the records and archives. The palaces of the Bojands, Boznowan, Ghika, Palladi, Kallinacki, &c. almost all the warehouses, fifteen Churches, including the Metropolitan Church, and the Catholic Convent, have fallen a prey to the raging element. The damage is beyond calculation. The flames spread with the rapidity of lightning, particularly to the principal street, leading to the Hospodars palace: and as the streets of this city are not paved with stones, but covered with planks, which immediately caught fire, many, who had lingered to save their property, were cut off from all means of flight. Up to the present moment, upwards of fifty dead bodies have been dug out of the ruins. The Prince himself had but just time to escape with his family by a back door. The Catholic Missionaries escaped by climbing up a high wall, and are now in a building containing the offices of the Austrian Agent, but deprived of all their effects. Above 10,000 persons have no roof to shelter them, and wander about in despair. It was only by extraordinary exertions that the residence of the Austrian Agent and that of the Cancellière, which is near at hand, were saved for they were in imminent danger, a sudden gust of wind having caused large pieces of burning timber to fall on the roofs of both houses. Dreadful beyond description, especially when night set in, was the appearance of an extent of two miles all in flames. To these horrors was added the circumstance that it was necessary to release all the malefactors that were in prison, as the dungeon Tzenniza, in which they were confined, also caught fire. These wretches, united with other evil minded persons, threatened to pillage the remaining part of the city; only the most active exertions of the Magistrates & the inhabitants, among whom the Austrian subjects distinguished themselves, could keep them in check, and prevent additional misfortunes. What a frightful prospect presented itself the following morning, when the sun, appearing as red as blood, rose on the ruins of this unhappy city, and in places which were yesterday the abode of wealth and luxury, we saw only unfortunate wretches crying in despair, amid this scene of desolation, or endeavouring to extricate from the rubbish the burnt bodies of their relations. At the moment when I close this letter, a part of the city is again in flames. The storm still rages with unabated fury. Constantinople alone can save us from utter destruction."

[A letter of three days later date adds the following particulars:—]

"On the first towards the evening, the wind abated, and thus, thank Heaven, the remaining part of the city was saved from the flames. What I stated in my letter of the 1st, proves, on further inquiry, to be but too true, and the number, both of the buildings consumed, and of the persons who perished in the flames, is still greater. Every hour, more dead bodies are found in the ruins. The damage is far more considerable than that which this unfortunate city sustained by the fire in 1821. At that time the greater part of the inhabitants were absent in consequence of the disturbances in the principalities, and the houses and shops were nearly empty; and, besides, the handsomest and most populous part of the city escaped, which has now been destroyed. Almost all the well stocked warehouses, the principal palace, and the finest Churches, are consumed. It is a sight appalling beyond description—a tract of half a league in extent is covered with immense still smoking heaps of ruins, and the streets and squares are filled with the corpses of the many persons who have perished, and of the burnt domestic animals, which, in this very hot season, infect the air.—These horrors are enchanced by bands of prowling wretches who have already attempted to set fire to the Town in several places, and the safety of the remaining part of the city is owing only to the patrols that have been organised during the last three days, in which the subjects of Austria have particularly distinguished themselves. The Prince has removed, with his family, to the house of Dimetraki Ghyka, which has escaped the general destruction."

Foreign Intelligence.

An overland despatch had arrived from India, with information of the death of the celebrated Chief Ranjeet Sing. The messenger passed through Constantinople on the 3d of August, and brought Letters, fully confirming the previous accounts of the arming of the Turks and the defeat of the Russians near Erivan. The Russ an Cavalry had been particularly unsuccessful. In two engagements with Turkish troops they were defeated and cut down in great numbers.

The Greek pirates are getting exceedingly bold. They had captured three vessels under the guns of the Dardanelles. Two privateers, disguised as Merchant Vessels, had attempted to pass into the Black Sea. The crews were recognized as pirates. The vessels were immediately seized and the crews imprisoned.

Late accounts from Sierra Leone state that the Ashantees had evinced a great desire to conclude a treaty of peace with the English.

Another great fraud had been discovered at the London Custom-house. A large quantity of opium had just been exported, on which the whole import duty of 9s. a pound was returned. On searching a large parcel entered for export, it was discovered that the whole was pipe-clay and saw-dust.—London Courier.

TWO DAYS LATER.

The ship Antioch, Capt. Rich, arrived yesterday afternoon, from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 4th ult. She brings a Liverpool paper of the 4th, and the London Morning Chronicle of the 3d ult. The arrangements for the new Ministry were in a fair way of soon being brought to a close. Mr. Herries had an audience with the King on the 1st, and was offered the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, which it is understood, he consented to accept. Lord Lansdowne also waited on the King on the 1st; and the result of his audience was very satisfactory. A Council was to be held at Windsor on the 3d, to be attended by Mr. Huskisson, Mr. Herries, and Mr. C. Grant, for the purpose of receiving respectively the appointments of Colonial Secretary, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and President of the Board of Trade and Treasurer of the Navy.

SPAIN & PORTUGAL.

The disturbances in Catalonia were increasing, and according to the Marquis Campo Sagrado, it would require 6000 men to prevent the insurrection from spreading.

A private Letter from Madrid published in the Paris Constitutionel, mentions that all the Counsellors of State and Ministers had been summoned to St. Ildefonso, in consequence of Mr. Lamb having demanded some explanation as to the importance of the disturbances in Catalonia and the measures taken by the Government to prevent them, and from a determination to send the whole army into Portugal. The object of the Council was to concoct an answer for Mr. Lamb, and regulate the number of Troops to be sent against Portugal.

English Funds, Sept. 1.—Consols 87¼.

GREECE.

An arrival at Baltimore direct from Smyrna, furnishes the positive rejection, by the Grand Seignior, of the propositions made to him by the European powers, on behalf of Greece, for forming the decapitation of his Secretary for receiving them. But it was generally believed at Smyrna that he had afterwards adopted a different course, and was now willing to lend a favorable ear. It was also rumored that he had ordered a suspension of hostilities—but these appeared to be no foundation for the report. He had, however, consented to treat with the Greeks.

The Greeks were fighting among themselves. And in one of the battles between the Turks and Greeks, Lieutenant Washington formerly of West Point was killed by a random shot whilst walking on the beach.

COMMERCIAL.

Oporto.—The wine-stores, lodges, or magazines of wine-merchants, as well as of the Company, are situated on the South side of the River, which may be incontestable Town of themselves. In their Stores at present the Company possess upwards of 25,000 Pipes of Wine, and from 6,000 to 10,000 Pipes of Brandy. I have not seen a return of the exports of last year, but in 1825 the quantity of vinho superiodo (or Wine intended for every other Market except that of England,) which was entered for exportation at the Custom-House, amounted to 10,934 Pipes: and the quantity of vinho de embarque, or Wine destined for the English Market, to 47,054 Pipes; in all, 57,988 Pipes. Of the vinho de embarque, 30,377 Pipes were shipped for Great Britain alone, and only 547 to all the rest of the world. The Wine Company alone, whose primary institution is opposed to their engaging in the Trade of export to Great Britain, exported 6,000 in the order of their Agents in London, 8,048 Pipes. With the advantages which this body of monopolists possess in the Market, by their wine-taster—their privilege of pre-emption—their exclusive right to distil Brandy, and their unlimited power over the Farmers and proprietors of Vine-yards, no private Merchant can compete with them if their affairs were honestly conducted, and their premises to trade was unrestricted. The largest export of any English house did not amount to 2,000 Pipes.—London Paper.

The trade in corn between England and France is very trifling considering their proximity. The population of the latter country is, generally speaking, almost equal to consume the produce, and when the average prices of grain, as taken by her, exceed a certain rate, the export is forbidden. These, however, are not the only causes that prevent an extensive trade in the article; the ignorance of the French merchants renders the charges excessive; and they will stipulate for payment often before they ship the corn. Foreign vessels are subject to high duties in their ports; orders are very tardily executed, and the business altogether is not transacted in that systematic manner as in Holland and the North of Europe. The intervention of the numerous "Jours de Fetes" is often felt as an impediment in mercantile affairs. Some few years ago there was an export from this country of inferior British wheat to Vienna. The corn trade then labours under considerable odium, which, probably, may have prevented the adoption of such changes engaging in it.

Portugal usually imports corn largely in the course of every year of her peace and flourishing prosperity, but the trade is very precarious to the merchants who engage in it, from the parts being usually exposed to admit a certain quantity of corn, and not for any definite time.

Colonial.

NEW BRUNSWICK.—In the list of Prizes for the Cattle Show, at Fredricton, published under the authority of the Agricultural Society, we perceive a number of them offered for the encouragement of domestic manufactures—homespun, white flannel, coloured do. plaid or striped homespun, mat's half lose not less than 18 yards, Diaper cloths Linen, Linen Shirting, Ticklen Cloth, &c. This is a highly laudable direction of the public funds.

£300 has been received at Miramichi from Liverpool, England, for the support of a charity school. There are a part of the funds raised for the relief of the sufferers in the tremendous fire in 1825.

Shubenacadie Canal.—The first section of this enterprize, which is intended to connect the Dartmouth Lake with the Basin of Minas, is now in a very advanced stage, and any person who inspects it may have a complete conception of the magnitude of its enterprize. The whole line is nearly completed, and the Messrs. Wiswell, who bid lowest from Scotland, are busily engaged in preparing the stone for the first Lock, which will be nearly completed during the present fall. A commencement has been made upon section No. 3. One hundred and sixty labourers, exclusive of forty Masons are at present in the employment of the Contractors.

New Customs Act.—Our attention has been directed to the following paragraph from a late Gazette from Jamaica:

"The Bill to amend the Customs," has passed the House of Commons, notwithstanding the opposition of Mr. Wilberforce and a number of other Northern folks. The amended copy which we have received is laying it lighter on Jonathan, and better for the Colonial Possessions. This is right. Protect our natives and secure to ourselves our own markets, and prosperity will quickly revive our country. Silks and cottons from the United States will no longer drive our own out of the market, nor will our shops, instead of lying all about the quays in the Clyde will be engaged in running out to New Brunswick and Halifax and Newfoundland, and carrying thence to our W. I. Colonies lumber, and carrying thence to our W. I. Colonies lumber, and starve—oh, no. In the Clyde List of Saturday, we are delighted to see as a beginning, "the Hamilla, for New Brunswick and Jamaica." This is the kind of Trade that we call free trade. This is the trade that will bring wealth and prosperity to Great Britain, and to this part thereof in particular.

Lower Canada.

We are given to understand that His Excellency, accompanied by the Countess of the Dalhousie, and suite consisting of the Honble. Col. Fanshawe, Aid-de-Camp, Capt. Jackson, and Col. Herió, Col. Gov. Sec. A. W. Cochran, and Col. Herió, reached Hull on Thursday last, on their tour of inspection to the Rideau and surrounding Country, and on that and the following day visited the works of the Canal for the purpose of progress under the charge of Col. By, with all of which His Excellency was highly pleased. His Lordship rode up the line of the Canal for 6 or 7 miles, and also to the Locks and Rock Rapids on the Rideau River to examine the Great Dams in progress there, and on Saturday, according to previous arrangements, honored with the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the lowest Lock at the mouth of the Canal amidst the enthusiastic acclamations of the whole of the people engaged in that stupendous work, which is to be the means of opening the access to an immense district of most valuable country which is but partially known and explored, and the advantages in be derived from which are beyond calculation. On His Excellency leaving Col. By's in the evening, a number of bonfires of great magnitude were lighted on both sides of the Ottawa on the summits of several of the surrounding hills and romantic rocks in that vicinity, which with some hundred torches of cedar carried by the labourers who lined the Road leading to His Excellency's lodging, had a most beautiful and imposing appearance. Several loyal addresses were on Monday presented to His Excellency at the house of Philemon Wright, Esq. to which His Excellency returned suitable answers and condescending acknowledgements. We have reason to believe that His Excellency was highly pleased with every part of the operations which came under his notice, and that both His Lordship and Countess received much gratification from the whole of the excursion.

Yesterday evening the noble party arrived at the Masonic Hall in a private manner on their return from the Rideau, and appear to be in excellent health and spirits. His Lordship will be present this evening at the Banquet to be given him by the Citizens of Montreal. The preparations for which, under the superintendance of Mr. O.Rourke, are upon a scale never we believe witnessed in this City. His Lordship, we believe, will remain in Montreal for several days to inspect the Troops, & public works, &c.

We perceive by an advertisement that the Countess of Dalhousie will hold a drawing room on Monday evening the 8th instant.

We understand that a Monument to commemorate the many virtues of our late venerated Diocesan, Bishop Mountain, has arrived at Quebec, and has been erected in the Cathedral of that city. The Monument is of white marble, and the workmanship does credit to the talents of the artist by whom it was executed, and to the liberality of the great men on the other side of the water. It speaks, we understand, for itself.—Montreal Gazette.

His Excellency, with the Countess of Dalhousie and suite, is expected in a day or two to take up his residence in the Chateau of St. Lewis, on the 10th instant, for the winter.—Quebec Mercury.

(From the Old Quebec Gazette.)

The Cattle Show, Exhibition, and Ploughing Match, under the direction of the Quebec agricultural Society, took place on Mr. Ardenne's Farm near Dorchester Bridge, on Monday last.

The quality of Horses and horned Cattle at the Show was less than usual, and offered nothing worthy of particular remark. There was a number of Sheep from Valcartier of imported breeds, of finer form and wool than those common in the country. A cross of a South Down and a Canadian ewe belonging to John Jurie, in the opinion of experienced Judges, produced wool little inferior to the best Merino.

The show of Garden Stuffs and fruit was rather remarkable for the quality than quantity. A sample of Pisms, called sugarcon beans, from a tree, brought from England, in Mr. Race's garden at Beauport, was considered as much superior to any ever shown in Canada. There were some good samples of summer and winter pears from the same garden.

Tolerable good bunches of white and black grapes, were produced, all raised without forcing, at Mr. A. Anderson's, Hendly Lodge, and at Mr. Vallier's, and Mr. Willunt's, St. Foy.

Only twelve ploughs entered, seven Canadian and five European The work shewed evident improvement

The advertisements not being issued at the Church doors, occasioned a thinner attendance than usual from the country. A greater number of persons from the Town, of the wealthier classes however attended.

Before distributing the Premiums, the Ayrshire cattle imported by Lord Dalhousie, were sold by Auction as follows—

Lot 1. A Cow 5 years old, £9 10, Langley, for U. Canada.

Lot 2. 1 do. 5 years old, 10 0. Wm. Torrance, for do.

HOME DISTRICT ASSIZES.

Charge of the Honorable the Chief Justice, to the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury beg leave to express their thanks to the Honorable the Chief Justice, for the Charge delivered to them at the opening of the present Assizes, containing much valuable information that would be useful in the several Districts of the Province, particularly as it relates to the selection of Juries by the Sheriffs, respecting which many Letters have appeared in the Grand and Canadian, with a copy, with permission to have it published

WILLIAM THOMPSON,
Foreman.

Grand Jury Room,
York, 17th October, 1827.

CHARGE.

Mr. Foreman, and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury,

Having for the last 14 years had the honor of addressing you so frequently on the subject of your duty as Grand Jurors,—and observing that the same Individuals (with few exceptions,) have almost invariably been called upon to discharge that duty, I can have little to add on the present occasion to what I have so repeatedly, and sometimes so fully endeavoured to impress upon your minds, in regard to the general nature and importance of the trust confided to you by the Constitution, and more especially as you have had many opportunities of being much more ably instructed by my Predecessors and by Counsel who have frequently presided in the Courts of Assize. That those instructions, powerfully aided by your own experience and general information, have had a due effect, is best evidenced by the manner in which both Grand and Petit Juries in this District have generally performed the duties intrusted to them by our admirable Constitution.

The framers of that Constitution wisely considering the importance of the trust, have confin'd upon those only who hold the high situation of Sheriffs, the power of selecting such persons as they may consider most proper to serve on Grand Juries, and for the guidance of their discretion in this respect have merely pointed out in rather general terms, the description of persons who ought to be selected, but without fixing any precise and specific qualification in point of property, as in the case of Petit Jurors,—it is clear however, they ought to be Freeholders of the greatest respectability, and best information in the County, and not chosen from any one place or part of the County, but some from every hundred or subdivision thereof, —this appears to me indeed necessary in a large Community, it is doubly so in a small one, as all Colonial Communities are in comparison with those of the mother country. The same principle however has not been strictly adopted in this Province, but it easily can in principle and by analogy—our Police divisions are somewhat different from those of Englandand even so with Assistants, Sessions of country as Tithings and Hundreds, as established in England by the great Alfred,—nor as yet have we Parishes expressly and properly as such,—but we have Townships, which for all practical arrangements may answer the same purpose,—and although we have Counties, yet that ancient and truly English description is, as respects our present subject entirely lost and obsolete, and more extended division called District, and which, although it comprehend several Counties, constitute but one sheriffdom, Bailiwick, or Bailiage, for the purposes of local jurisdiction, and particularly for the summoning of Jurors, both Grand and Petit. These few remarks I presume are sufficient to shew not only the expediency but the necessity, and indeed the legal obligation on Sheriff's to summon both Grand and Petit Jurors on all occasions, from all parts of their respective Districts, when persons duly qualified can be found—Justice to Jurors, to the public, and to this grant Parties, requires I think a more strict attention to this particular, than I fear has heretofore been observed,—to Jurors, inasmuch as it is extremely unfair to call upon the same individuals so frequently, not to say perpetually, to perform this public duty at the sacrifice of the time and attention due to their private affairs—to the Public, inasmuch as the Grand Jury is the right to the services of all its members indiscriminately,—and to litigant Parties, for reasons incident to small societies, as which I have already alluded, but which it would be unpleasant and unnecessary for me to advise. In making these remarks I beg to be distinctly understood as not intending to impute intentional blame or improper motives to the Sheriffs of the Province, and far less to the Gentlemen who holds that high office in this District, and who indeed (as appears by the Lists before me) seems to have of his own accord given more attention to this part of his duty, than could have been expected from the short time he has been in Office. Neither can I take upon me to say, that what I have now stated rather as an apprehended, than an established fact, has as yet amounted to the grievance, since if it had, no doubt the Legislature would have applied a remedy, or the Court of King's Bench would have interposed that superintending power with which it is invested by the Constitution, not only over its own immediate officers, but also over all inferior Jurisdictions, and whatever relates to the general administration of justice, unless restrained by superior power—should there be any blame attributable to the Court in this respect, I am willing to take my full share of it. Indeed that power would have interposed, that supervising the course of the evidence, the charge of the Chief Justice to the Jury, on summing up, was such as befitted a Judge dispensing Justice under the mild and humane administration of British Laws, which direct that every circumstance, however feeble may be the hope, that an impression will be made in favour of the accused, is to be stated as fully and forcibly, as the nature of the case, and Justice tempered with mercy, will admit. The prisoner had the full benefit of these nice distinctions, and as it appeared in evidence, that although he was the aggressor, on the occasion which resulted in the death of the unfortunate youth, Oliver Turkington, (as well indeed as on former occasions, when he had sought cause of quarrel against him,) yet that as the blow, which was stated to have been the more immediate cause of his death, was given at a moment, when Lecce was undermost in the scuffle, an intelligent Jury, leaning to the side of mercy, on evidence, which though it would as stated by the Chief Justice have justified them, in finding a Verdict of guilty, on the Indictment for Murder under which he was tried, found him guilty of manslaughter only.

His life is thus saved, and we sincerely hope, that in the solitude of his Prison, he will be led to reflect seriously on the enormity of the offence he has committed, and that while in that solitude, he is making reparation to the insulted Majesty of Human Laws, he will not be unmindful of those more important duties which it becomes him to discharge, in seeking to make reparation for the crime he has committed against the Laws of Heaven, and to which his attention, was so feelingly directed in the address made to him from the Bench, when passing sentence upon him.

We have had an opportunity during the Assizes of meeting with several persons from the Country, to whom we have intimated our wish that, some effectual measures could be devised for establishing an Agricultural Society in this District. They generally concur in opinion, that such a Society would be highly beneficial, as it would afford the best means of giving more extensive circulation to useful agricultural information, and lead to many improvements in our system of farming, and raising of Stock. We hope that Farmers who are principally interested in the promotion of such objects, will give the matter consideration, and that some of their leading members will take an opportunity of calling a public meeting, for the purpose of organising such a Society. If it is in our power in any manner to promote the object, we shall feel much pleasure in doing it, and would suggest that the approaching Quarter Sessions, when a number of persons from different parts of the Country will necessarily be in attendance at Court, would afford the most favorable opportunity of holding a meeting for the purpose.

The Turf.—The Officers of the 69th Regt. have prepared a Race Course, on the grounds attached to the York Garrison. We understand that a match Races takes place on Monday next at noon, and that several Horses will be entered for Races which are to be run, on the Monday following. There will be no objection we believe to allow any individuals the benefit of the Course for training Horses, or for amusement, except upon the day regularly appointed for Racing.

WHEREAS several Persons have received Orders in Council, for Town Lots in Kingston, which still remain unlocated:—

NOTICE is hereby given, to all such Persons, that unless they do make their respective Locations within six months from this date, the said Orders in Council will be cancelled.

By command of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

JOHN SMALL,
3-28w. Clerk of the Executive Council.

In Council 21*st November,* 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres; and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such lots, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form. Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land.—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

Miscellaneous.

THE NUMIDIANS.*

We like the plan of this work much: variety of writers must, we think, please variety of tastes: and here we have England's Olden Time, one of the best sketches of its author; two well-told Scottish legends; a very clever and pure true tale, the Heir Presumptive; and divers others: so that discontented must the reader be, who throws the bill of fare by wholly unsatisfied. For ourselves, we are content to take the Numidians.

Lara, a celebrated Spanish chief, is on a night-watch; and hears the sound of a horse passing at speed. "The horse was milk white—his long mane floated upon the night wind, which was roused, almost created, by the velocity of his motion;—his make, though somewhat slight, was muscular, as well as beautiful—unchecked by curb, unfettered by harness or by housing, he bounded forward with the freedom of the desert, but without its wildness—for his master's voice was at once bit, and spur, and bridle-rein—at urged him to speed it checked him short in a moment. Of the first of these the Spanish commander had proof almost at the moment he met his eye—of the second he was convinced very soon afterwards, for upon ordering twelve of his men forward to take the rider prisoner, extending, at the same time, the rest of his troops into a circle to surround him—the stranger with one word stopped his horse, and calmly waited the approach of his assailants. Lara had already recognized him as one of the famous Numidians who had come from the desert of Africa to the aid of Boabdil. On his head he wore a black turban—on his body a short white tunic, crossed by a shining chain of silver, which bore his large and massive cimeter. His legs and arms were completely naked, with the exception of the golden bracelets with which they were adorned. In his left hand he held his buckler—in his right three javelins. He stopped short, as we have said, and firmly awaited the attack of the twelve men who were detached against him. As they drew within reach, he threw his three darts. Each unseated a horseman, and rolled him in the dust. One word to his horse, and he was off with the speed of lightened at full speed to the spot of the conflict—stooped without checking that speed, as he passed one of his victims—drew the javelin from his breast—and with it overthrew another of his pursuers, who now had again approached him. Meanwhile Lara had beheld the conduct of the Numidian with extreme admiration. His bravery, his extreme skill in the management both of his weapons and his horse, had been displayed before one equally capable of estimating the excellence of all warlike exercises, and candid and generous in acknowledging it, although in the person of an enemy. Lara advanced towards the stranger; and, ordering his men to keep their ranks,—who, stung with the loss of their comrades, were on the point of charging,—he thus addressed him: 'Brave African, it is enough. Do not prolong a fruitless resistance. Yield your arms to me. I can scarce restrain my soldiers—leave me the gratification of preserving so brave a life.' 'Life,' answered the Numidian, 'life is a boon only to the happy—to the wretched it is a burden. Rather than become a captive, I will lose it by thy hand!' So saying, he drew his cimeter, and urged his horse upon the Spaniard. Lara threw down his lance, drew his sword, and met him midway. In courage and in skill it would be difficult to find two men more nearly matched; but the Castilian was sheathed in steel, while the Numidian had no defensive arms except a light buckler, which he wore upon his left arm. His javelins, in the use of which he had shown such fatal skill—and which, at ordinary tings, served as a counterbalance to the long lances and coats of mail of the Christians—his javelins had all been cast. Had they been sent from the quiver of Azreal, the aim could not have been surer or more deadly. Each had borne death upon its wing; and one might boast of a double victim. But now the African had only his cimeter and shield; his bare arms and legs—his light tunic—his linen turban—would seem to be unequally matched against the casque, and cuirass, and gauntlets, and cuisses of the steel-clad Spaniard. But in activity, both of horse and rider, the Numidian and his barb had vastly the advantage. There seemed, too, an unanimity, a community almost, of spirit between them, which was equally surprising and extraordinary. The horse seconded his master in every manœuvre both of attack and defence. He leaped into the air to give his descending blow more force—he sprang to one side to avoid that of his antagonist. The fable of the Centaur might almost be said to have been realized in them. Nor was the skill of the African inferior to the intelligence and activity of his gallant steed. His long cimeter swept through the air with a force, and descended in quick repeated blows with a weight, which rendered the armour of the Spaniard the safe-guard of his life. In defensive, too, he was equally expert. His solitary buckler was always under Lara's blow, wherever it may fall. It served at once for helmet and cuirass—for gauntlet and for greave; but its strength was unequal to its master's skill. Two more javelins were thrown, doubted Lara, deliver'd with his whole strength, at last cut into two, the buckler which received its force; clove the shoulder of the Numidian, and threw him to the earth. His gallant horse, on seeming his master fall, uttered that piercing cry which, from its rare occurrence, as well as its thrilling and unearthly tone, is perhaps the most appalling of all the sounds with which nature has gifted the animal creation. But this noble beast, not contented with showing sympathy for his master, stood still to defend him. He covered his fallen body—and, standing upon his hind feet, reared in the air, and opposed, with his fore, the approach of Lara. As he turned, so did the horse; his threatening feet formed a rampart over his rider's body. At length, seeing the whole Castilian troops drawn in, the horse (which almost seemed to share his master's hatred of captivity) fled with speed of the wind across the plain, and disappeared in the distance. Lara, in the meantime, approached his prisoner; raised him from the earth—examined his wound, which he found had only penetrated the flesh,—and used towards him all those courtesies and attentions which were so familiar and so becoming to a brave and accomplished knight like this celebrated Spaniard."

The Numidian gives a spirited sketch of his life and love, and tells him how bitter his captivity; for his wife has been trusted to the care of Osman, who "had dared to take advantage of the trust of hospitality to offend the ear of Zora with vows of love!"—Lara, (he continues,) if the love of an African is fierce, his jealousy is furious. In his bosom it is the concentration of every passion—it sweeps away everything before the violence of its course. The whirlwind of his desert is not more utterly devastating. Everything is easy to us under its sway—everything is permitted. We are open, we are attached to friends and to strangers; we are fond and faithful to our wives. But if the glance of an eye, the expression of a smile, appears to us to be directed towards them—blood, blood only, can wash the offence away. And blood should have washed away the offence of this insolent Moor; blood should have atoned for his having thus forgotten all that was due to the defenders of his country—to the guest beneath his roof. I was on my way to Carthame when your soldiers surrounded me. Perhaps I might have avoided them; but from you, sir, there was no escaping. The success of your arms has more than deprived me of life—it has deprived me of my best hope. Zora is in Osman's power, and I am the Spaniard's captive. Do you then wonder that I grieve?' 'Cease to grieve, brave African,' Lara answered; 'cease to grieve—day has broken—our camp is at hand—I will go straightway to the king, and urge your release. To your captor he will not deny it. Meanwhile, rest and refresh yourself; in a few hours you will be able to proceed!' As he spoke thus, they arrived at the Spanish camp; and, after a short time Lara proceeded to the quarters of Ferdinaad, to give the report of his nocturnal adventure. He found, however, the king just seated in his council, on affairs of great weight and moment. Lara, therefore, took his place and awaited till opportunity served to introduce his more immediate business.—But the capture of the Numidian chief was, in the meanwhile, productive of other consequences. Zora had been anxiously awaiting the approach of Ishmael; and, from the successes with which the reader is acquainted, had awaited it in vain. Hour after hour, she thought every sound must be his footstep, till, as day dawned upon her, hope had almost sickened into despair. She imaged to herself every misadventure which might have happened to him on his way from Granada; and, at last, with that impatience of inactivity which suspense always brings with it, she determined to go forth to seek him; she hoped to meet him on his way. She procured the war-dress of an Abencerrage; and, active and courageous, as her husband had represented her to be, she mounted on a courser, and, affecting to be charged with a commission from the governor, she passed out from the city without suspicion. She took the road towards Granada, and had not advanced far before she met an object which seemed to verify all her worst forebodings. It was the well-known horse of her husband; which, with his mane blood-bedabbled, and his sir wild and terror-stricken, was rapidly approaching those towers to which his master was often guided him. Zora recognized him at once; her heart sank within her at the sight; but she determined to know the extent of her misfortune. Placing herself, therefore, immediately across the path of the horse, he drew near to her, she called to him by his name, in the tone in which she had so often caressed him. In despite of her dress, the faithful animal recognized her voice at once. He stopped short, and approaching her, rubbed his head gently against her knees. She patted his neck, and called upon the name of her husband aloud—'Ishmael!—Ishmael!' The horse seemed to understand her meaning, for he neighed and tossed his head into the air, as though in grief and lamentation. Zora took her resolution in an instant. She leaped upon his back, and throwing the rein loose upon his neck, the unwearied animal struck, at a rapid space, into the direction from which he came. A moderate time brought her to the spot where the fight had taken place the night before, and where her husband had sunk under the blows of Lara. The bodies of the four Spaniards whom Ishmael had overthrown lay upon the ground. Perceived by the javelins that the blows had been dealt by him. But not far from them, she recognized his buckler, clove in two, and, as well as the sand on which it lay, stained with his blood. She flung herself upon the ground, impregnated with that blood, and gave vent to the most passionate grief. Suddenly a groan struck upon her ear; and, turning around, she perceived that it proceeded from one of the Spaniards, in whom some life was still remaining. He ran towards him; raised him; assisted him; questioned him. The wounded soldier, grateful for her care, collected the few Arabic words of which he was master, to inform her that it was a single Numidian, who had attacked a party of five, and pierced him and his companions, but that Lara had avenged them. The buckler was cloven, the blood was shed, by the hand of Lara. Zora gathered from this, that Ishmael had been slain by the Spanish leader. She asked from the wounded soldier the direction of the camp; he pointed it out, and she set off at speed to reach it, promising to send the wounded man his comrades help. Even in her own distress, woman observes and remembers the distress of others; even when, as in this case, she dares face the dangers of war, she does all that in her lies to mitigate its horrors. Having reached the Spanish outposts, she desired to speak to the Officer of the Guard. He appeared:—'Tell your commander,' she exclaimed, 'tell Lara, that the Governor of Carthame awaits him here, with a sword in his hand—that he will fight with him, hand to hand, within his own lines. If he is not the most dastardly of men, he will not shrink from my challenge.' The Officer was struck with extreme surprise; but such was the respect of the Castilians for all who retained the rights of the lists, that he complied with the stranger's request, and sent one of his men to Lara's quarters with the message. Meanwhile the supposed Governor of Carthame refused even to dismount. She remained motionless, awaiting Lara's coming. After some delay, during which she fulfilled her promise to the wounded man, she saw her antagonist approach. He was seated upon a noble horse, clad in casque and coat of mail, and was armed only with a sword. The day had now considerably advanced; it was twilight when the warriors met. They seemed animated by mutual enmity; without uttering one word they urged their coursers on each other, and struck a desperate blow, respectively, as they passed. Both were wounded. On the return of their charge, the same thing again occurred; both struck, both were wounded. But such dilatory conflict seemed unsuited to their impatience. They sprang from their horses, and attacked each other sword in hand. The struggle was fierce and desperate. The inferior strength of Zora was compensated for by the loss of blood of her opponent, who would seem to have suffered more severely in his encounter which had been exchanged on horseback. He seemed to grow weaker and weaker, till at last she observed an opening in the fastenings of his armour, near the left shoulder, and hitting the spot with perfect accuracy, she, her second time, sped him to the hilt. She drew it forth instantly, and again perforated him as he fell. 'Die, wretch!' she exclaimed, 'die, barbarian! and know that thou fallest by a woman's hand!' It is Zora, the wife of Ishmael, who thus avenges Ishmael's death!' As she spoke these words, the dying man, in a voice which thrilled to the very marrow in her bones, exclaimed—'Zora!'—and it is by your hand I die!—and is it against your life that my blood have been mixed!' She shuddered at the sound, threw herself upon him, freed him from his casque, and the last light of the evening fell upon the face of Ishmael, already clammy with the dews of death! Yes, it was her Ishmael whom she had slain: it was that husband whose death she came to avenge—whose death she had inflicted with her own hand! The soldier who had gone in from the outpost to Lara's tent had found he was still at the council. In awaiting his return, he conversed with the Numidian chief, and mentioned the purport of his errand. The name of the Governor of Carthame struck like a trumpet-sound upon the ear of Ishmael. 'Great Allah, I thank thee!' he exclaimed, delivered him into my hands!' he exclaimed. He entreated—he implored the soldier to let him go into Lara's place. He promised to answer for everything to him; he loaded the man with his golden ornaments; the soldier yielded to the united influence of his entreaties and gifts. Ishmael clothed himself in Lara's arms. They were new to him. He was stiff and weak from his former wound, which the corslet also galled. But he heeded nothing save to be revenged on Osman. The result we know. Zora was stupified at this sight. 'Alas!' said her husband, 'this is a sad farewell for me and thee, Zora!—but rather would I die than live by the hand with the blood of my all-sacrificing love, than live sultan of the whole world without thee! Live, Zora, live. You would have died for my sake; live for it. Comfort my father—no one can, like you. Bless you, Zora!' Nothing save the ever growing faintness of his utter; it ceased; he was no more! As he ceased speaking, Zora bent herself upon him—she strained him to her heart in a close embrace—she pressed her lips to his in a long-drawn kiss—her last breath was drawn with it."

Written by a circle of friends, this is the volume for a winter's evening around the hearth, and many a solitary reader will, no doubt not, pass a pleasant hour over the Tales of all Nations.

Tales of all Nations. 18mo. pp. 311. London, 1827.

British and American Navies.—A late number of the "London Magazine" draws a comparison between our own Navy and that of Great Britain. It is stated that the whole number of American vessels now built and building, is 46, (exclusive of those on the lakes which are said to be in a state of decay)—viz: 12 Ships of the line, 19 Frigates, and 15 Sloops of War. Of the 46 vessels which the Royal Navy of England consisted of 440 vessels built or building; but as the number includes mere hulks and ships much less advanced than those which are said to be "building" in America, the force may be stated with safety to be ten times superior to that of the U. S. The number of Officers in Great Britain, is much greater in ratio. The Americans have no Admirals, (unless some were appointed under the Act of the last Congress.) Great Britain has 217.

Summary.

Consols closed in London on the 8th Sept. at 87 ⅞ rather higher. The business was extremely limited. There was a rumour that the Duke of Gordon had been appointed master general of the Ordnance.

The intelligence from Greece is rather of a gratifying nature. Reshid Pacha had gone to Acrocania, where he had effected nothing. The Greeks having placed their wives and children within the natural fatnesses of the country, followed his movements, and intercepted his supplies, so as to prevent him from venturing to any distance from the coast. Ibrahim Pacha, through a similar reason, had been obliged to retire to Modon and Coron, from whence he had despatched two European officers to Ænte, to buy provisions, with several Egyptian vessels of war to guard the convoy. This was the flotilla which Lord Cochrane attacked and defeated, as we stated some time since—an exploit which had increased the terrors of his name throughout the East, and imparted proportionate courage and ardour to the Greeks.

Instead of the Russians having been defeated at Erivan, it appears that on the 17th of July, they achieved a conquest over a body of Persians, composed of 15,000 cavalry.—Abbas Mirza narrowly escaped.

LONDON, Sept. 8.

Lounge, Sept. 8.—Mr. Huskisson transacted business at the Colonial Office Yesterday, for the first time, as Secretary of State for the Colonial Department. Mr. Wilmot Horton and Mr. Hay, the under Secretaries of the Department, had interviews with the Right Hon. Gentleman.

The Duke of Wellington came to Town yesterday morning, from his seat at Strathfieldsay. His Grace held a Levee at his Office in the Horse Guards, which was the first held by the Duke since his acceptance of the command of His Majesty's Forces.

The Levee was attended by upwards of fifty Military Officers. His Grace left Town in the afternoon, on his return to Strathfieldsay.

LONDON MARKETS—Sept. 6

Corn.—There was a steady demand for new English Wheat, likewise for the best descriptions of refined Foreign; and the prices of yesterday and Tuesday were fully obtained for such: inferior parcels met with little demand, yet these sorts held firmly at our last quotations.

LIVERPOOL CORN EXCHANGE, Sept. 8.

There was a fair attendance at Tuesday's Market; but the business done was limited. Wheats were sought after, and in some instances brought rather more money, while other descriptions were almost neglected, and might have been had rather cheaper. For the best new red Irish Wheat, not more than 7s. 9d. could have been had, and 3s. 4d. to 3s. 6d. for fine Oats. There was a heavy sale for such Flour, Barley, and Oatmeal, at somewhat reduced prices. Some fine Foreign Barley brought 4s. 6d. to 4s. 8d. but even good samples were offered at much lower prices. Indian Corn, Beans and Peas supported last week's quotations, but for which there was little inquiry. There was no demand for sweet Flour or Wheat in Bond.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.—Sept. 8

The sales consist of 40 brls. Boston Pot Ashes, at 28s; do. New-York do. of 1826, at 28s; 200 do. Montreal Pots, of 1826 and 1827, at 28s; 28s, and 30s brls. Montreal Pearls, 1825 and 1826, at 28s. 6d. 29s. 6d.

FINAL COMPLETION OF THE NEW MINISTRY.

From the London Courier of Sept. 1.

We are at length enabled to announce the completion of the new Ministerial arrangements.

We mentioned yesterday, that Viscount Goderich, the Lord Chancellor, Mr. Sturges Bourne, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Herries, proceeded to Windsor to attend the king.

It appears that his Majesty, after giving an audience to the Cabinet Ministers who were in attendance, communicated, through Lord Goderich, to Mr. Herries, his desire that the Right Hon. Gentleman should accept the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Herries was accordingly summoned, and the necessary formalities were gone through, after which the Ministers returned to London.

We congratulate our readers upon the arrangement thus definitively made; for it involves, as a matter of course, the appointments of Mr. Huskisson to the Colonial Office, and of Mr. Charles Grant as the successor of the former at the Board of Trade.

The Marquis of Lansdowne left town this morning at an early hour, to wait on his Majesty at Windsor.

Many rumours are current, in the highest political circles, of a nature which it would be premature to mention, or discuss at the present moment.

From the Courier of Sept. 2.

Since our publication of Saturday, we have ascertained that we were incorrect in stating that Mr. Herries was appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer, at Windsor, on Friday last.

No such appointment then took place, nor could any final settlement of the Ministerial arrangements be made until after the interview with which his Majesty was pleased to honour the Marquis of Lansdowne on Saturday.

That interview having, as we have now good reason to know, terminated most satisfactorily, a Council has been summoned at Windsor this day, at which the appointment of Mr. Huskisson, Mr. Herries, and Mr. Charles Grant, to the Offices to which we have already alluded, will be carried into effect.

From the Courier of Sept. 4.

The Lords Commissioners of the Treasury held a Board to-day, at the Treasury Chambers, at which Lord Goderich, as First Lord, presided. Mr. Herries took his seat at the Board, as Chancellor of the Exchequer; and Mr. Frankland Lewis was introduced to the Board, and appointed one of the Joint-Secretaries, in the room of Mr. Herries.

It is not yet decided who will succeed Mr. C. Grant, as Vice President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Huskisson, as Secretary of State for War and the Colonies, transacted business this morning, for the first time since his appointment to the office, at the Colonial Department.

After a month, nearly, of anxious doubts and fears, public confidence is restored, by that satisfactory arrangement of the Ministry, which we yesterday announced. The Cabinet is now composed of the following individuals:—

First Lord of the Treasury,	Lord Goderich.
Chancellor of Exchequer,	Mr. Herries.
Secretary of State for } Foreign Affairs, }	Lord Dudley, and Ward.
Secretary of State for War & Colonial Department,	Mr. Huskisson.
Secretary of State for the Home Department,	Marquis of Lansdown.
Master-General of the Ordnance,	Marquis of Anglesey.
Lord Chancellor,	Lord Lyndhurst.
President of the Council,	Duke of Portland.
Lord Privy Seal,	Earl of Carlisle.
President of the Board of Trade and Treasurer of the Navy,	Mr. C Grant.
President of the Board of Control,	Mr. C. W. Wynn.
Secretary at War,	Lord Palmerston.
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster,	Lord Bexley.
Master of the Mint,	Mr. Tierney.
Surveyor of the Woods and Forests,	Mr. S. Bourne.

[To the above may be added the following:]

Secretaries to the Treasury—Mr. Planta and Mr. Courtenay.

Junior Lords of the Treasury—Earl Mount Charles, Lord F. L. Gower, Lord Elliot, Mr. H. Fitzgerald, Mr. Macnaughten.

Admiralty Council Board—Sir G. Cockburn, Mr. Denison, Sir W. Hope, Mr. Keith Douglas.

From the Gazette of 4th Sept.

At the Court at Windsor, the 3d day of September, 1827, present, the King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

His Majesty having been pleased to appoint the Right Hon. William Huskisson to be one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, he was this day, by his Majesty's command, sworn one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State accordingly.

His Majesty in Council was this day pleased to appoint the Right Hon. Charles Grant, President of the Committee of Council appointed for the consideration of all matters relating to Trade and Foreign Plantations.

The subscriptions in Liverpool for erecting a monument to Mr. Canning in that place, amounted on the 5th of September, to £2500. The committee have undertaken the cost of £500 in aid of the undertaking.

DREADFUL THUNDER STORM.

(From the Limerick Evening Post.)

On Sunday last, the morning with a serenity, which induced families and joint parties to enjoy the delights of the country, we had to witness a change, as alarming as it was sudden, and as awful in its consequences, as any witnessed in this neighbourhood, for many years. From two o'clock on towards evening, the horizon betrayed a lowering, occasional showers, however, calming some severe gusts from S. S. W. the atmosphere all through charged with heat extremely oppressive. About seven, the sky assumed a dark and angry appearance, which within half an hour, was followed by several vivid flashes of lightning, the consequent concussion of which was somewhat distant —the rolling thunder in a short time seemed to approach us, and the lightning by this time, because so continuous, as to illuminate the entire city. Until after eight o'clock, the warring elements kept a numerous population in a state of increasing alarm, the rain at intervals falling in torrents; but, shortly after, the dreadful explosion of the hour before, sunk into the rumbling retreat towards the east, followed towards morning by a violent storm. Although we cannot ascertain the full extent of injury the neighbourhood must have sustained from this awful visitation, we feel a regret in saying that enough has reached us to prove that it has been sufficiently destructive. Mr. Hamblin, Lough Gur Lodge, of the name of Fitzgerald, living near Ballysheeda, only a mile from town in the south liberties, were preparing to go to bed when the storm raged. The woman was raking the fire, and the husband was bolting the door, when the lightning descended down the chimney, and passing the wife, its effects so stunned the husband as to bring him to the ground—the poor woman in her affright ran over to take him up; when in the act of rising him up she received this awful visitation herself. Her exertions Fitzgerald recovered in a few minutes, and the house being then dark he groped about, and the first object he touched was a pig, which, from the condition of our country, is too generally the inmate of the peasant's house; this pig he found was dead. He then crawled round, and the partner of his toil he discovered equally lifeless. On examination she seemed to be reduced to one half her natural size, her shoes were burned to a cinder, but she had no visible injury to her person, visibly injured, but a slight scratch near the right eye. In addition to this, involving the loss of human life, we have to regret that a worthy and valuable member of society, Mr. Dondon of Ardsbeulty, in the neighbourhood of Castle Connell, has been seriously injured; some friends who spent the day beneath his hospitable roof, were scarcely returned when their scene of enjoyment ceased to be a home. On the first appearance of the lightning Mrs. Dondon, who is a Lady of great sensibility, implored Mr. Dondon to retire with her to an under story, where they continued for some time, but the flashes being equally vivid to the eye, even in the cellerage, Mr. Dondon suggested the being equally safe for them to return to the parlour, to which she consented; but as they were ascending, a strong sulphorous smell, followed by a cloud of smoke down the stair-case, so alarmed Mr. Dondon, as on rushing out of the hall door, he discovered the roof of the house to be on fire. Looking round him, he also observed some of his maid servants, who were returning from milking the cows, struck to the ground, the milk spilled, and the cans dashed several yards away. The house is now brought under control of his neighbours to the spot, who made every exertion to extinguish the flames, but without effect; they, however, were fortunate enough to save nearly the entire of the furniture. Thus have a worthy and respected family been within an hour, deprived of a home, the doors of which were ever open to friendship and charity. We cannot close this report without stating that Mrs. Dondon had an infant in her arms that received such a shock from the concussion as to appear lifeless for a considerable time, but was after wards providentially restored: not, however, without the greatest exertion.

A few days since, a pensioner from the Army was arrested in Tipperary, for the murder of a woman, nearly 17 years since, shortly before the period of his discharge—executed for another murder in Clonmel. The female who prosecuted the first brother to conviction, fell a victim to the revenge of the other, and it is for this crime he is now in custody, after a long absence from his native country.

The Irish papers teem with accounts of Orange processions on the 18th July. Party-spirit seems to have on that day more strongly evinced itself in Ireland, than for many years previous. It does not appear, however, that any serious affair took place in consequence, excepting in the Town of Tipperary. The excitement occasioned by these proceedings will, we trust, speedily subside, and give way to the spirit of concord and satisfaction that a most abundant harvest is calculated to produce.

The population of Ireland is now said, by Mr. O'Connell, to be about nine millions.

We learn from a correspondent at Courtmashery, that a vessel has been lying there from a more Western port of the country, during the last three weeks, wind-bound, with a cargo of 220 beggars, destined for Wales, whither they are going to beg.—Cork Paper.

SPAIN.

The accounts from Spain, in the French Journals, continue to assume every day a more threatening aspect. The whole of Catalonia is in open insurrection, and the rebels, under a self-styled Captain-General, enter almost every Town, and carry off the arms of the Militia, and the Royal Treasure. The Government has at length assembled Troops to contend against the difficulties and danger which every hour assume a more serious character. Although they cannot ascertain the full extent of injury the neighbourhood must have sustained from this awful visitation, we feel a regret in saying that enough has reached us to prove that it has been sufficiently destructive. FREDRICKTON, Sept. 13.—The hostile attitude and declarations of some persons in the Madawaska settlement (calling themselves American Citizens) seem to be the general subject of conversation; and various reports with regard to their conduct are in circulation. We have good reason to believe they have active spirits who require employment to animate them, who think they will find ere long with great indiscretion too. Although the question as to the boundary line in that quarter is yet unsettled, the possession of the Madawaska District is admitted on all hands to be in the British Government; and we are well persuaded no attempt will be made either by stratagem or open violence on the part of the United States, or the neighbouring State, to change that possession. If these insolent individuals choose to behave disorderly, we trust they will sooner or later be taught proper respect for the Laws, by such institutions as will make lasting impressions on their minds.—Gazette.

Madawaska.—We mentioned cursorily last week, that the American Flag had actually been hoisted at the Madawaska; and we copy in the present number a short remark, relative to the subject, from the Fredrickton Gazette. In consequence of the natural anxiety which has been felt, regarding this singular and unexpected occurrence, we have been induced to communicate such particulars as have reached us, for the purpose of disburdening the public mind, and showing that the affair is neither of a very serious nor alarming character. At the American settlement on the River St. Francis, which is a tributary of the St. John, and flows into it some 12 or 15 miles above the Madawaska territory, there resides a person by the name of Baker, who is the principal proprietor, the owner of a set of Mills, and a red-hot republican to boot. This fellow, some short time since, while passing down the River past Madawaska in his canoe, met the Courier in charge of the Canada Mail. He instantly made an attempt to stop him, but the sturdy Frenchman "right zealous in the discharge of his trust," showed Mr. Baker that he was not inclined to yield obedience to his impertinence; Baker defeated in this attempt, then had recourse to a threat,—"that he should not carry another mail by that route." On this being reported, a Magistrate in the neighbourhood proceeded to the River St. Francis, and was received by Mr. Baker and about 40 others with the American Flag dying [on a bean pole?]; and when with a "flourish of trumpets" and him that ne'r had taken possession of the territory; adding something about the authority of his Government, and of having hoisted the flag on the 4th July, to celebrate the Anniversary of American Independence. To this latter Mr. Baker had first announced the Loyal Inhabitants of the Madawaska, but "Yankee doodle," had little charm for their ears, that only one or two had accepted the invitation. Such is the whole "head and front of the offending." We make light of it, and have no doubt that the instant this impertinent outrage is communicated to the Government of Maine, a process will be issued against the parties. Baker will doubtless be seized and deposited in some secure spot, where he may have time to cool at once his head and heels, and be taught that sacred and neutral ground is not to be violated with impunity.—Nova-Scotian.

Canada.—An official notice is contained in the Gazette of yesterday, stating that His Excellency has issued orders to the several High Sheriff's to collect information relative to the population &c. of their respective Counties, and all persons are directed to afford every facility. "As the inaccuracy of the returns taken last year has given a great measure occasion for persons withholding information from a groundless supposition that it would be followed by the imposition of taxes upon them, His Excellency thinks it proper to assure the public, that the sole object of the present inquiry is to obtain information; and as this, if correct, cannot fail to be interesting to every inhabitant of the Province, to His Excellency confidently hopes that a similar misapprehension will not now interfere with its accuracy."

The first point to be the points of inquiry—"The name of the Master or head of the Family, and the number of which it consists. The religious persuasions of the Family—the births, marriages, and deaths in it, during the last year—the number of land in cultivation, and by the family, and its produce during the same period—and the number of horses, horned cattle, and sheep, owned by the family."

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS IN CANADA.—The Canadian papers present a remarkably different aspect since the system of public improvements have been commenced in that country by the British Government. We can hardly open them without meeting the interesting result of some new survey, accounts of the progress of some extensive work, or of some new project for settling lands, or opening lines of artificial navigation. The Rideau Canal, the new fortifications at the Isle aux Noix, St. Helen's Island, and Quebec, were the only great objects that received the attention of the mother Country, and the conclusion of amity necessary to carry them on, were sometimes made slowly and unwillingly. Intelligent men in the colonies were then sometimes heard to say, that a country so situated as to seek a permanent and such a frontier, could never be rendered secure; and, as it was an expence, was not worth the trouble of protecting. Indeed, the Government seemed to oscillate between abandoning and retaining it. But recently they have adopted totally different sentiments, and are holding a great encouragement to the settlement, and the agricultural and commercial and improvement of Canada, and appropriating considerable sums for its defence.

A liberal grant has been made for the building and endowment of a College at York. U. Canada, amounting to no less than one hundred thousand acres of land.

The governor, we observe, continues active in visiting and promoting the great public works. He has now gone to the Rideau Canal, whither a Company of Sappers and Miners, sent out from England have also proceeded.

The Royal Assent has been lately given to the appropriations granted by Parliament, in 1826, among which we observe £500 additional for the road to St. John's, £2000 for the improvement of the Richelieu River in addition to £1000 un-expended, £500 for exploring the north shore of the Saguenay and £1000 for the Agricultural Societies. The road to Lake St. Lawrence will be commenced, by two officers of the navy, which is expected to occupy at least three years; and Colonel Bouchette, the Surveyor General, is actively employed in surveying the country in the Quebec district. He reports an extensive bed of iron ore of excellent quality, at St Paul's Bay, about 20 leagues from the city. At the present time, taken in view with the numerous other projects already in operation, appear as parts of a great and powerful system, that cannot fail to produce mighty effects upon the country.

Some of the last Canada papers give us information of a new plan, of which we have before seen no intimation. It appears to have been but recently presented to the British government but to have met with their approbation, so much as that it is said they have surveyors already employed on the route. The object is to connect the links of water communications between Lake Huron and the Bay of Quinte. This would from an unbroken chain of navigation from Penetanguishene Fort on Lake Huroqy to the outlet of the River Trent in the Bay of Quinte, through Lake Simcoe, Cameron's Lake, Pigeon Lake, Trent Lake, touching at the Marmora Iron Works and passing through the new settlements over Rice Lake and the River Trent. The whole inclusive transport of about 180 miles, runs through a fertile country, and may perhaps be found to be not by the intended canal from York to Lake Simcoe. The advantages of this line of navigation in time of war, being so far in the interior, are evident from a glance on the map.—N. Y. Daily Advertiser.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27th, 1827.

The arrival of the Birmingham at New York, furnishes us with dates from England to 8th September. From extracts which we have made it will be seen that, the Ministerial arrangements are at length completed.

On Monday last, we were visited by one of those violent Gales of Easterly wind, accompanied with torrents of rain, not unusual at this season of the year. The Steam Boat Canada, at 10 o'clock in the morning, when there was an appearance of the storm moderating, left the Niagara River for York. She had not proceeded far on her voyage however, when the Gale increased with greater violence than before, and in a short time both Masts were carried away, and some damage done to her chimney. Fortunately the Engine remained uninjured, and enabled her at about five in the afternoon, to reach the Wharf in safety. The Canada has made some of her trips in the most boisterous weather, and deservedly bears the name of an excellent Sea Boat. She suffered no delay from the damage she had sustained, and left the harbor the following morning for Niagara. The weather since Monday, continues boisterous and cold.

The beneficial effects of the late Commercial regulations, are beginning to develope themselves, in a manner which cannot fail of being highly satisfactory to the Country. To the farmer in particular, the subject is one, of a most interesting and cheering nature. His produce now, commands a fair price, and is purchased with avidity in the Lower Canada Markets. The depression which was formerly felt, is passing away, and the prospect before us is animating. It is true, that the Act which admits our grain into England on more advantageous terms, than that of our rivals, is limited in its duration to 1st May next; but it must at the same time be remembered, that the question of the "Corn Trade," generally, has again to undergo discussion in the Imperial Parliament, and that in any general arrangement which may be determined upon, we have the most perfect assurance that, our interests will not be forgotten, and that it is more than probable, these advantages will be continued to us, on a more permanent footing. Indeed, in every thing which relates to the Trade of Canada, the most favorable disposition has been evinced, and it is only required on our parts, that we should shew an ability, to supply the Markets thrown open to us. This applies particularly to the West Indies; and although it has been objected that, we are not adequate to supply the demands of that Market, the objection we think, has been made by those, who have but a very incorrect idea, of the quantities of Wheat and Flour, which Canada, with her rapidly increasing population, is capable of furnishing, if a Market is insured for her, where they can be disposed of. Much however must necessarily depend on the quality of the articles she exports, and in this respect, the Millers of the Country, and others concerned in the manufacture of Flour, should feel an interest, by taking every means in their power, to raise the character of this staple article, as high as possible.

We are happy to observe that, in the article of Pork, more has been done this summer, than for many seasons past, and we have no doubt that this important article of exportation, as well as Salted Beef, of which, some years ago, large quantities were sent from the Province, will meet the attention of our Farmers, from the prices which we may reasonably expect they will bear in the ensuing Spring.

On the whole, it is satisfactory to observe the favorable change which has taken place in the Commerce of the Country, and the consequent activity which pervades the whole of the business community.

It is with regret we learn that the Telegraph, one of the largest Schooners navigating the Lake, and owned by Mr. William Fitzhugh, was wrecked during the Gale on Monday last, at the head of the Lake. She had on board a valuable Cargo consisting of Flour and Pot Ash, most of which will be lost. The works at Burlington Canal, have sustained some injury during the storm, but we hope that the damage done, is not of any serious consequence.

The Editor of the Colonial Advocate, seems inclined to forget the lessons he has so often received.—Finding nothing else to excite his wrath in our Paper, he has assumed himself for some time past, in penning over our advertising Columns, which appear to give him a vast deal of uneasiness, and has made an attempt to amuse others with something about the words "Public Sale," and "Public are informed," which we are at a loss to understand, unless it be that those Columns are to his annoyance too "Public," and too well filled to suit his humour. If so we can only attribute his conduct, to an envious feeling against his neighbours, and if he derives any gratification from such a practice, we shall not intermeddle with his pleasures—they are "how and lose born pleasures," which he may pursue with as much avidity as he pleases, without any further interruption from us.

The latter part of the paragraph we allude to when he "calls upon the Editor to answer personally an article which appeared in our last Editorial, on the trial of Losee, is too contemptible to be worthy of serious notice. Does the Advocate suppose that any body will believe such absurd assertions, although uttered with the coolest audacity, and protended gravity!

We formerly adverted to the losses recently sustained in the transmission of Money through the Post Office, and felt convinced that, the subject would engage the readiest attention of the Department. We can now venture to state that, diligent exertions have all along been making, in this important and delicate investigation, and that they will be persevered in as long as there is the least prospect of a satisfactory result. We hear that testimony has already been obtained, but how far it may be considered circumstantiated to implicate any individuals, we are unable to say, and it would be unjust to anticipate. We do not however despair, of the ultimate detection of the offenders.

The Editor of the Colonial Advocate (with impertinent inquisition of Mr. Allan, very common place in that paper, however little complimentary to the taste or humor of its readers) asserts that, a Post Master on the Western route has written to him to say, that one of the Mail Bags, if not two, are "so "badly chained, that any person could open them "easily, without removing the Locks, and that "complaints had been made without effect to York." Now although the Editor in the article alluded to is pleased to style Mr. Allan the head Post Master, we can hardly believe him ignorant of the well known fact, that the head Post Masters head Quarters, are at Quebec, and not York; and that neither Mr. Allan or any other Post Master in Upper Canada, is head of the whole, or any part of the Province, however some of the oldest and most respectable may, and doubtless do attend, to the occasional instructions of their principal, whether relating to the establishment of new Offices, or the correction of unexpected abuses. And we have no doubt that, Mr. Allan, although unquestionably possessing no general authority, does when required, with a becoming zeal for the public service in which he is engaged, cheerfully bestow his time and attention, upon many general concerns of the department, not incident to his Office, or incumbent upon him as part of his duty. We do not see why the concerned in the manufacture of Flour, should feel an interest, by taking every means in their power, to raise the character of this staple article, as high as possible.

We are happy to observe that, in the article of Pork, more has been done this summer, than for many seasons past, and we have no doubt that this important article of exportation, as well as Salted Beef, of which, some years ago, large quantities were sent from the Province, will meet the attention of our Farmers, from the prices which we may reasonably expect they will bear in the ensuing Spring.

On the whole, it is satisfactory to observe the favorable change which has taken place in the Commerce of the Country, and the consequent activity which pervades the whole of the business community.

We think it was hardly fair in the Editor of the Advocate to attribute the drenching of his Newspapers, by the Eastern Mail, on such a day as Saturday last, either to the defective cleaning or spewing of the bags—more especially as through the fault of Mr. Allan, who did not forward them, but merely received them. Our own papers reached us in the same state, but we should have considered it perfectly absurd, to lay it to the charge of Mr. Allan. As to the papers being "stranded in mud," he might as well have said, that the "Canada" came in dismasted as usual—the storm (an Easterly one too) was almost unprecedented.

PATENT LOCK SAWS.

Capt. Marshall Lewis, well known in many parts of this country as a most able and ingenious mechanick, has lately invented, or rather made some very important improvements in the common lock paddle gate, which bids fair to answer a much better purpose than any heretofore in use.—One of these gates has been constructed in one of the Locks on the Welland Canal, by way of trial; and we understand it meets the unqualified approbation of all who have examined and witnessed its utility. The gate is intended ultimately to be constructed wholly of cast iron, and to turn, or rather to be raised on two pivots, which are connected to the gate with arms, and raised by a link attached to a rod which is carried to a rack and pinion, that to a balance beam. When shut, the gate is kept in its place by resting the entire space through which the water must pass, and sits closely in a cast iron frame.—On being raised, it forms a semicircle, the water pressing downwards as it passes, and prevents that tremendous agitation of the water inseparable from a Lock with the ordinary gates, which are generally turned vertically, and admit the water at right angles. The present form is, also, much cheaper, less liable to leakage, and opens with much more facility and dispatch. Sometime last spring, a lock gate of a similar new model, was constructed in one of the Locks near this village, called by the inventors, Messrs. Seymour & Landon, a "tenion gate," which appeared to those experienced in such matters, to be, also, an improvement on the common method.—Farmers' Journal.

MONTREAL, October 4.

DINNER TO THE EARL OF DALHOUSIE.

On Thursday about 180 of the most respectable Gentlemen of this city gave his Excellency a dinner. The Hon. John Forsyth in the Chair. After the cloth was removed, the Chairman gave the following toast to the

The King.—Long may he live.—God save the King.

Duke of Clarence and the Royal Family.—Brunswick March.

The Chairman then said—the toast, Gentlemen, which it will have the honor to propose, must, I am sure, be received with pleasure by every individual of this numerous and highly respectable company. Upon the present occasion we are met, Gentlemen, to pay that tribute of respect to His Excellency the Earl of Dalhousie which he so justly merits. Our object is to shew to our noble guest that deference and regard which it is, and ever ought to be our pride to offer to so worthy a representative of our Sovereign. In my mind we ought to conceive ourselves happy and fortunate, in having to preside over us a Nobleman of such elevated rank, worth and talent:—

The Earl of Dalhousie, our illustrious guest. Earl of Dalhousie—Unexpected.

This toast having been received and drunk with the most rapturous applause, Lord Dalhousie leaving his seat and addressing the company, with much feeling and energy broke forth in expressions similar to the following. He said that he felt deeply impressed by the marked attention and regard with which this large and respectable company then present had received the last toast, and that the impression left upon his mind by this compliment would never be obliterated—he would only say that ever since his Majesty had been graciously pleased to confide to him the Government of this Province, he could truly boast that all his measures had been directed to the good of the Country. He flattered himself that he had in some measures been successful in promoting the improvement of Lower Canada; and so long as His Majesty should be graciously pleased to continue him in this Government, he would unhesitatingly pursue a similar and consistent course. He would assure them that such as they had hitherto found him in his conduct, such should he continue to be. He would again assure them of the high esteem with which he would ever cherish the remembrance of the honor which they had done him; and with the permission of the President, he would propose a bumper toast, with three times three, "the prosperity of the Canadas."

His Lordship was frequently interrupted with the most enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Richardson then rose and stated, that, from his long residence in the country, he hoped he might be permitted to say a few words. The toast which had been drank had been received from the greatest promoter of the prosperity of the Canadas; and he considered this a fit opportunity to declare that all those great public works which were already conferring such benefit on the country were principally owing to the suggestions of His Lordship to His Majesty's Government.

Mr. O'Sullivan, in the absence of Mr. Roux, begged leave to return thanks for the honour conferred. Letters of the 2d September have been received from Belfast by a gentleman of the Lower-Town. The prices of Ashes and Timber were improving in that market.

Outrages.—The increase of crime in the neighbourhood has become truly alarming; scarcely a night passes but some burglary or other robbery is attempted. On Thursday night some villains went to the house of an old couple named Paradis, living near Cap Rouge, where they demanded admittance, which the old man refused, and desired his wife to light a candle, with this she complied, and the depredators for a moment retired;—they were however, shortly heard, as the old man supposed in the garrett, but it was on the roof of the house, and one of the gang dropped down the chimney thus effecting an entrance; whilst he was yet on the hearth Paradis attached the robber with an axe and wounded him severely, but in the end was overcome, and with his wife severely beaten by the whole party who now found means to get into the house. The old people defended themselves with such resolution that the fellows were glad to escape, but they took away a cart and horse belonging to the old man, a variety of circumstances lead us to hope that this gang will not long remain undiscovered; but we are sorry to add that this respectable couple are suffering severely from the injuries they received.

Several robberies have been reported to us from the neighbourhood of La Montlee aux Dames, on the road to Indian Lorette; a horse has been stolen from one inhabitant, a cart from another, and poultry and several minor articles from others of the neighbours, which the horse and cart were employed in transporting; the latter have since been recovered.

H. M. S. Barrosa, 46 guns, Capt. the Honble. Wm. Gordon, arrived this day from Portsmouth, having on board Commr. Barrie, and a number of officers for the service on the Lakes. The Frigate touched at Newfoundland on the passage out.

Extract of a letter from Belfast, dated 1st. Sept. "The demand for lumber continues to increase. The Veronica's cargo from Quebec sold—Yellow Pine 17½ per foot.—Deals, £30 per M.—Ashes 28s. for old, 30s. new. Wheat dull. Crops nearly all secured and of good quality.

QUEBEC, Oct. 9.

The Ploughing Match of the Practical Farmers' Agricultural Society, took place at Mrs. Bellet's Farm, near Scott's bridge on Friday the 5th inst.

Thirteen Ploughs were engaged in the competition, and generally performed excellent work. The Silver Medal was adjudged to Robt. McKie, of St. Foy, and the other prize to Andrew Baird, of the same Parish.

A number of Agriculturists were present at this Meeting, which was conducted by the Officers of the Society with order and propriety. A few cattle and samples of root crops were exhibited. This Society can hardly fail to be useful in forwarding a spirit of agricultural improvement in this vicinity.

The Haydon Transport which was to have sailed this morning went ashore at Point Levy a little to the eastward of the Hotel, she has since been got off. The following officers are passengers on board the Haydon, Capt. Kirwan and Ens. Gibson 66th Regt. Ens. Stach, 71st do. Asst. Surgeon Goldsworthy, R. A. and Staff Asst. LUCY OF THE FOLD.

Many a tame tradition, embalmed in a few pathetic verses, lives for ages, while the memory of the most affecting incidents, to which genius has allied no general emotion, fades like the mist, and leaves heart-rending griefs undeplored. Elegies and dirges might indeed have well been sung amidst the green ruins of yonder Cottage, that looks now almost like a fallen wall—at best, the remnants of a cattle-shed shaken down by the storms. Twenty years ago—how short a time in national history—how long in that of private sorrows! all tongues were speaking of the death that there befel, and to have seen the weeping, you would have thought that the funeral could not have been forgotten. But stop now the shepherd on the hill, and ask him who lived of old in that nook, and chance is he knows not even their name, nearly less the story of their afflictions. The farm-house was inhabited by Allan Flemming, his wife, and an only child, known familiarly in her own small world, by the name of Lucy of the Fold. In almost every vale among the mountains, there is its peculiar pride—some one creature to whom nature has been especially kind, and whose personal beauty, sweetness of disposition, and superiority of mind and manner, ought to be unconsciously, as an object of attraction and praise, making her the May-day Queen of the unending year. Such a darling was Lucy Flemming ere she had blushed her thirteenth year; strangers, who had but heard tell of her loveliness, often dropt in as if by accident, to see the Beauty of Hallowell. Her parents rejoiced in their child; nor was there any person by whom they should have felt a sensation of delight and wonder with which so many regarded her. Shy was she as a woodland bird, but as fond of her nest too! and when there was nothing near to fear, and her life was in perpetual hymn. From joy to sadness, and from sadness to joy; from silence to song, and from song to silence; from stillness like that of the butterfly on the flower, to motion like that of the same creature wavering in the sunshine over the wood-top, was to Lucy as welcome a change as the change of lights and shadows, breezes and calms, in the mountain-country of her birth.

One summer day, a youthful stranger appeared at the door of the house, and after an hour's stay, during which Lucy was from home, asked if they would let him have lodging with them for a few months—a single room for bed and books, and that he would take his meals with the family. Enthusiastic boy! to him Poetry had been the light of life, nor did ever hers of poesy belong more entirely than to the rarest of imagination! He had come into the free mountain-region from the confinement of college walls, and his spirit was expanded within him like a rainbow. No eyes had he for reality—all nature was seen in the light of fancy—not a single object at sunrise and sunset the same. All was beautiful within the circle of the green hills-top, whether shrouded in the soft mists, or clearly outlined in the cloudless sky. Home, friends, colleges, cities,—all sunk away into oblivion, and Harry Howard felt as if wafted off on the wings of a spirit, and set down in a Land beyond the sea, foreign to all he had before experienced, yet in its perfect and endless beauty appealing every hour more tenderly and strongly to a spirit awakening to new power, and revelling in the new existence. In that cottage he took up his abode. In a few weeks came a library of books in all languages; and there was much wondering talk over all the country-side about the mysterious young stranger who now lived at the Fold.

Every day, and, when he chose to absent himself from his haunts among the hills, every hour was Lucy before the young poet's eyes—and every hour did she become a more beautiful in his imagination. Who Mr. Howard was, or even if that were his real name, no one knew; but none whom he knew, and he knew all, doubted that he was of gentle birth, and with whom he had ever conversed in his elegant amenity, could have sworn that a youth so bland and free, and with such a voice, and such eyes, would not have injured the humblest of God's creatures, much less such a creature as Lucy of the Fold. It was indeed even so—for, before the long summer days were gone, he who had never had a sister, loved her even as if she had slept on the same nurse-breast. Father nor mother he now had none—indeed, scarcely one near relation—although he was rich in this world's riches, but in them poor in comparison with the noble endowments that nature had lavished on his mind. His guardians took little heed of the splendid but wayward youth—and knew not now whether his faculties had carried him, were it even to some savage land. Then, the Fold became to him the one dearest roof under the wide heaven. All the simple on-goings of that humble home, love and immagination beautified into poetry; and all the rough or coarser edges of lowly life, were softened away in the light of fascination that transmuted everything on which it fell; while at the silent intimations which nature gave there of her primal sympathies, in the hut as fine and forceful as in the hall, showed to his excited spirit pre-eminently beautiful, and chained it to the hearth around which was read the morning and the evening prayer.

What wild schemes does not love imagine, and in the face of very impossibility achieve! "I will take Lucy to myself, if I should be in place of all the world. I will myself breathe light over her being, till in a new spring it shall be adorned with living flowers that fade not away, perennial and self-renewed. In a few years the bright, docile creature shall have the soul of a very angel—and then, before God, and at his holy altar, mine shall she become for ever—here and hereafter—in the paradise of earth, and if more celestial be, in the paradise of heaven."

Thus two summers and two winters wheeled away into the past; and in the evening, unperceptible from day to day, but glorious at last, wrought on Lucy's nature by communication with one so prodigally endowed, scarcely could her parents believe it was their same child, except that she was dutiful as before, as affectionate, and as fond of all the familiar objects, dead or living, round and about her birth-place. She had now grown to woman's stature—tall, though she scarcely exceeded except when among her playmates; and in her maturing loveliness, fulfilling, and far more than fulfilling, the fair promise of her childhood. Never once had the young stranger—stranger so more—spoken to daughter, father, or mother, of his love. Indeed, for all that he had felt towards Lucy, there must have been some other word than love. Tenderness, which was almost pity—and affection that was often sad—wonder at her surpassing beauty, nor less at her unconsciousness of its power—admiration of her spiritual qualities, that ever rose up to meet instinctive ones as if responded—and that heart-throbbing that stirs the blood of youth when the innocent eyes it loves are beaming in the twilight through smiles or through tears, these and a thousand mixed other feelings, and over all, the creative faculty of a poet's soul, now constituted his very being when Lucy was in presence, nor forsook him when he was alone among the mountains.

At last it was known to the country that Mr. Howard—the stranger, the scholar, the poet, the elegant gentleman, of whom nobody knew much, but whom everybody loved, and whose fame must at the least have been a noble, was going —in a year or less—to marry the daughter of Allan Fleming—Lucy of the Fold. Oh grief and shame to the parents—still living—of the noble Boy! O sorrow for himself when his passion dies —when the dream is dissolved—and when, in place of the angel of light who now moves before him, he sees only a child of earth, lowly-born, and long ruder bred, as she must only fair as many others are fair, sister in her simplicity to maidens no less pleasing than she, and partaking of many weaknesses, frailties, and faults now unknown to herself in her happiness, and to him in his love! Was there no one to rescue them from such a fate—from a few months of imaginary bliss, and from many years of real bale! Was there no such a one as Allan Fleming be so infatuated as sell his child to fickle youth, who would soon desert her broken-hearted! Yet kind thoughts, wishes, hopes, and beliefs prevailed, nor were there wanting stories of the olden time, of low-born maidens married to youths of high estate, and raised from but to ball, becoming mothers of a lordly line of sons, that were councellors to Kings and Princes.

In Spring Mr. Howard went away for a few months—it was said to the great city of London—and on his return at midsummer, Lucy was to be his bride. They parted with a few peaceful words, and though absent were still together. And now a letter came to the Fold, saying that before another Sabbath he would be at the Fold. A few beautiful fields in Eastdale, long mantled in the bloom of the simple by the hard-working statesman from whom they reluctantly were passing away, had meanwhile been purchased by Mr. Howard, and in that cottage they would live for a few months—it was to themselves a house a little farther up the side of the sylvan hill, below the shadow of Helm Crag. Lucy saw the Sabbath of his return and its golden sun, but it was to be the last. Before next day it had descended behind the hills, she was not to be among the number of living things.

Up Forest-Ullwater the youth had come by the light of the setting sun; and as he crossed the mountains to Grassmere by the Majestic pass of the Solitary Hawse, still as every new star arose in heaven, with it arose as lustrous a new emotion from the bosom of his betrothed. Pre-midnight hour had been fixed for his return to the Fold, and as he reached the cliffs above Whitemoss, lo! accordding to agreement, a light was burning in the low window, the very light of love. It seemed to shed a bright serenity over all the vale, and the moon-glistening waters of Rydalmere were as an image of life, pure, lonely, undisturbed, and the roof of heaven. All the simple on-goings of that humble home, love and immagination beautified into poetry; and all the rough or coarser edges of lowly life, were softened away in the light of fascination that transmuted everything on which it fell; while at the silent intimations which nature gave there of her primal sympathies, in the hut as fine and forceful as in the hall, showed to his excited spirit pre-eminently beautiful, and chained it to the hearth around which was read the morning and the evening prayer.

It seemed to shed a bright serenity over all the vale, and the moon-glistening waters of Rydalmere were as an image of life, pure, lonely, undisturbed, and the peasive hour how profound! "Blessing and praise be to the gracious God! who framed my spirit so to delight in his beautiful and glorious creation—blessing and praise to the Holy One for ever and ever aye, and her sixteen years smiling life was all extinguished in the dust!

Weeks and months passed on, and still there was a vacant wildness in his eyes, and a mortal gladliness all over his face, inexpressive of a reasonable soul. It scarcely seemed that he knew where he was, or in what part of the earth, yet, when left by himself, he never sought to move he found the boundaries of the Fold. During the first faint glimmerings of returning reason, he would utter her name, over and over many hours together with a mournful voice, but still he knew not that she was dead—then he began to caution them all to trade softly, for that sleep had fallen upon her, and her fever in its blessed balm might abate—then with grasses and two stalks of heather he would twine into fits of laughter, till the hideous fainting fits returned, and after long convulsions left him lying as stone dead! As for his bodily frame, when Lucy's father lifted it up in his arms, little heavier was it than a bundle of withered fern.—Nobody supposed that one so miserably attenuated and ghost-like could for many days be alive—yet not till the earth has resolved seven times round the sun, did that body die, and then it was buried far far away from the Fold, the happy valley of his love, in the lowest mountains of Westmoreland; for after passing like a shadow through many foreign lands, he crossed his pilgrimage in Palestine, even beneath the shade of Mount Sion, and was buried with a lock of beautiful hair, which, from the place it held, strangers knew to have belonged to one dearly beloved—close to his heart, on which it had lain so long, and was to be mouldered away in Christain hand and in a Christain sepulchre!

Summary.

It is the intention of the Lord High Admiral to build sixteen steam ships of the largest size, capable of carrying 100 carronade guns of unusual bore, and to be propelled by two engines of 100 horse power each.

NEW GUN CARRIAGE.—We understand that a very favourable report has been made respecting a new gun carriage, lately invented by Captain Marshall, of the Royal Navy. It has been tried repeatedly on board his Majesty's ship Galatea, under the inspection of that distinguished officer Sir Thomas Hardy, and has been found greatly superior to the common gun carriages, in facility and rapidity of training and firing, as well as in allowing a greater traversing of about a point each way. A 18-pounder, mounted on this carriage, it is said, may be worked more quickly, and with greater effect than, if mounted on the usual plan, it could be by ten men. We are glad to be enabled to notice an invention of this kind, which, from its importance to his Majesty's naval service, cannot be too highly appreciated.—Hampshire Telegraph.

According to the Liverpool Albion, upwards of a quarter of a million of money, had been transmitted to London from Liverpool during the previous week, being the principal part of which had been received for duties on foreign corn.

Further particulars have transpired respecting the late fraud at the Customhouse—the shipping of spirits for the opium, and receiving back, per lb. of the import-duty. The Customhouse officers have now ascertained that the revenue has been defrauded to the amount of fifteen thousand pounds. An officer has been despatched to the steam-boat to Hamburgh, to wait the arrival of some merchant vessels, with the fraudulent goods on board; which, on inspection, turned out to be a spurious mixture of opium, gum, arabic, flat, &c.—Atlas.

VALUE OF LAND.—The Commissioners for the enclosure of Charnwood Forest put up for sale this week, at the Bull's Head, Loughborough, the unenclosed allotments. Some portions, that have little to recommend them, except that they form part of the globe, sold at the rate of £100 per acre. This is one proof, among others, that railroad is becoming the order of the day, that railroad is becoming the order of the day, that the impulse thereby given to commerce is not likely speedily to be withdrawn.—Nottingham Review.

THE THAMES TUNNEL.—This work, it seems, is to be persevered in, the directors having still about £20,000 in hand; which, as the hole in the river bed is stopped, and the excavation cleared of water, will carry them forward considerably. They let, with the Smart government aid, or a further subscription, to enable them to complete the design; which, we trust, they will accomplish, as the undertaking is both great and interesting.

Lord Archibald Hamilton, brother of the Duke of Hamilton, expired on Tuesday last, at his house, Upper Mall, Hammersmith. His Lordship represented the county of Lanark in Parliament for many years, and was an active and intelligent Member in the House of Commons.

Silver coin is so abundant in Edinburgh just now, that the banks will not give their notes in exchange for large quantities of it; and one establishment here was so encumbered with it, that it lately remitted silver to the value of forty thousand pounds to London.

There is much business doing at present in Leith. On Saturday last no less than £11,000 was received at the Customhouse, chiefly as duty on foreign wheat.—Scotsman.

The Duke of Reichstadt (the son of Napoleon,) has been indisposed, and he was, at the date of the last advices from Vienna, attended daily by his physicians. There are some very speculative politicians, who would consider the death of this individual as an additional guarantee for the tranquility of France.

According to accounts from Bavaria, the digging of a canal to form a communication between the Danube and the Rhine will commence next year, and it is affirmed that the Bavarian army will be employed in the work in the same manner as the Roman legions were employed in time of peace.

His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral has been pleased to present a sword to the Right Hon. the Earl of Northesk, G. C. B., Rear Admiral of Great Britain, and our present worthy and distinguished Lord Admiral, as a mark of his perfect approbation of the regulations adopted for the reception of his Royal Highness, at his recent official visit to this port.—Devonport Telegraph.

New Line of Road.—The formation of a new line of road in the progress of formation between this City and Cork, which will shorten the distance to the unprecented extent of 27 miles.—Dublin Correspondent.

The great fair at Golden, in this country, was held on Monday, and was well attended. There were about two thousand sheep on the green—price in general from 24s. to 30s. per head, and several very prime lots from the neighbourhood of Tipperary brought 34s. each. Fat cows in abundant supply, and good demand at from £6. 10s. to £10. per head.—Tipperary Free Press.

On Saturday last, the beautiful steam ship Queen of Scotland, lately launched here, went out of the harbour on trial, in presence of a great concourse of spectators, who were crowded on the pier to witness the gratifying sight. When she started from her moorings, it was the first time her paddles had gone round; and although her engine will be appear to us to be at half their speed, she went out in magnificent style.—Aberdeen Chronicle.

A woman named Ballinamallard, in this county, not forty years of age, and not twenty married, was put to bed last week of her twenty-fifth child.—Enniskillen Reporter.

Colonial,

HALIFAX, Oct. 3d

We were this morning shewn, by Richard Smith, Esq., the Agent of Messrs. Forwell & Co., a piece of Leaden Ore, part of an extensive and valuable Vein, recently found in the County of Sidney.

This circumstance, so gratifying in itself, will naturally tend to excite still further research, and we anxiously hope that the enterprising Gentlemen who have embarked Capital to a large amount in Mining speculations in this Province, will realize returns fully equal to their expectations.—Gazette.

NEWFOUNDLAND.—ST. JOHN'S, Aug. 27.—"The recent improvements here would astonish you. The new Government House, with a fine Terrace walk around it, on the Parade ground is not the least of them. At Virginia Water (formerly Dowling's Pond) the Governor has built a Cottage, & improved the grounds around it very extensively, with a serpentine walk on the border of the Lake. We have also a fine carriage road to St. Mary's &c. &c."—Novascotian.

ENGLISH PACKETS.—We are enabled to state from the best authority that the English Packets will in future come direct to Halifax. —That there is a probability of the Steamboat one taking that route, and that the October one certainly will. This change will be an important advantage to our Mercantile classes, and to the community generally. We believe that strong representations have been made to Government of the necessity of a much respected Lieutenant Governor. This is an additional instance of His Excellency's watchful regard for the interests of the Country, and of the beneficial effects of his influence with those who are at the head of affairs at home.

Lower Canada.

On Wednesday at two o'clock, the 79th Highlanders, commanded by Colonel Douglas, C. B. were inspected on the plains of Abraham. His Lordship the Commander of the Forces, who was attended by a numerous staff. The day was cold, but the attendance of the spectators was very respectable. We noticed the carriages of the Countess of Dalhousie and Lady Noel Hill on the ground. Several ladies were induced by the gaiety of the scene to brave the inclemency of a North West wind.—The splendid appearance, steadiness and admirable firing of the 79th, gave the highest satisfaction to every spectator, and were the themes of every tongue.—O. Q. C.

Yesterday His Lordship the Commander of the Forces, inspected the 66th Regiment, under Col. Nichol, on the Plains of Abraham. The day was uncommonly fine and a large concourse assembled to witness the parade. The Corps performed a number of evolutions in a manner which reflected the highest credit upon it; more especially when it is recollected that it has recently arrived in this Garrison from a tedious voyage, and that previous to its leaving Ireland, the detached state of the Regiment was highly inconvenient for, if it did not altogether preclude, the practice of field exercise. On the authority of competent judges, we may find no evidence of these disadvantages could be traced in the appearance and movement of the 66th Regt. at this, their first review in North America.—Quebec Mercury,

(From the Official Gazette of Thursday.)

IMPORTANT.

Commissioner Barry and the Officers and men who accompanied him from England, proceeded on Monday night to Montreal on their way to Kingston. We are happy to hear that by the exertions and representations of this active and experienced Officer, joined to the interest which His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral feels in the welfare of there Colonies, with which many of his early recollections are associated, His Royal Highness has determined to make the Naval Establishment in the Canadas a part of the Royal and illustrious personages at the head of the Naval and Military services of the Empire, to carry into complete execution the great works for the defence of the Canadas from Penetanguishine to Quebec, which have been already commenced on the Ottawa River. We most sincerely congratulate the Province on the above gratifying information, which may be relied upon.—Ib.

QUEBEC, Oct 18.

The wind blew strong from the Northward on Tuesday after the rain of Monday, and several times in the day snow fell, which however disappeared on touching the ground At night it froze pretty hard, and in some places ice of about a quarter of an inch, was found. Early the next morning the hills to the North of the city was covered with snow. These were the first signs of winter we have had this season.

Yesterday afternoon the sky became cloudy and snow fell in the evening and night sufficient to cover most of the country around. It disappeared, however, before the first rays of the sun.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3d, 1827.

The papers received by the last Mail, do nothing us any news. There have been no late arrivals at New-York from England.

On Sunday night last, we had a violent squall accompanied with a Storm of Hail, which continued however, for a few minutes only—some of the Hail was remarkably large: pieces of it were picked up, nearly the size of a Musket-ball. On Monday night it commenced Snowing and on Tuesday it had fallen to the depth of two inches—the ground however not being prepared to receive it, a few hours of Sunshine caused it to disappear. This is the earliest fall of Snow, we remember for many years in Upper Canada. To the North of York, in the Townships, it is reported to have fallen to the depth of six inches.

The Kingston Chronicle, informs us of the arrival of Capt. Barrie R. N., at that place. A number of Officers for the Lake Service in Canada, have come out from England with Capt. Barrie, and since his arrival, the Montreal has been launched, on board while he hoists his broad pennant, as Commodore. It is stated that a vessel will be put in Commission on each of the Lakes.

The Marmora Iron Works, are to be sold at Public Auction, on Monday next. We hope that the large amount of Capital which has been expended on this establishment will not be suffered to run to waste, but that some enterprising individuals will become the purchasers, and receive that support, which an undertaking of the kind so justly merits from the people of the Province, but which we are sorry to say, does not appear to have been given to the present proprietors, whose exertions have deserved a better reward.

We have received from some unknown hand, a Pamphlet, containing an address to Mr. Horton on the Bill for Alienating the Clergy Lands in Upper Canada. We have not had time to give it more than a hasty perusal, but that has satisfied us, that it contains but little worthy of remark. It appears to have made no impression upon Mr. Horton, and must we think be classed among those ephemeral productions, which are read and then thrown aside. Twenty-four pages are devoted to what the Author would have pass for argument—the rest is made up of extracts from 31 Geo. 3. which are most convincing that the Author labors under a delusion.

The Colonial Advocate, as usual, when checked in his career, instead of replying in a proper manner to our remarks of last week, has made use of some vulgarisms, which can only merit our contempt. His refusal to name the person from whom he said his information was obtained, with respect to the Mail Bags on the Western route, is all subterfuge, and it may now be very fairly suspected that the "Letter from a Western Post Master," was altogether an invention of the Advocate, to give weight and appearance, to the charge he made. We do say most unhesitatingly, that any Post Master who could so far forget his duty, at a time when an investigation of the most important nature was making by his Department, as to give any information connected with the subject, to any other person, than the Head of that Department, would be unworthy of further confidence. We do not mean in this remark to apply to the present case only—it applies to all—and to every individual in a public situation, under similar circumstances.

To Correspondents.—"Vulpes" is informed that for the present, we decline saying any thing on the subject to which his communication refers. The information he gives us may however be useful at a future period.

Domestic.

We are happy to announce the Arrival of Commodore Barrie, C. B. with Some Officers for the Lake service.

On Monday was launched from His Majesty's Dock Yard at this Post, the beautiful Schooner Cockburn. She is fitted for the reception of the Broad Pendant of Commodore Barrie, as Commodore of the Fleet, having been ordered out on active charge and controul of the Navy and Navy establishments to the Canadas—to Quebec inclusive. Lieut. Douglas, in command of the Naval Depot at Penetanguishine, Lake Huron, is promoted to the rank of Commander. He is to be superseded by Lieutenant Woodin.—Kingston Chronicle.

From the Gore Gazette.

We have been favored, by one of our Correspondents, with the following account of the late Storm on Lake Ontario:—

Communicated.—The Storm from the N. E. which commenced on Friday night (the 19th inst.) was one of the most tremendous ever remembered in this country. Luckily, however, as regards the Shipping on the Lake, few were at this end of it, and exposed to its fury. The Mohawk lay in the Canal, between Burlington Bay and Lake Ontario, and received no injury. The Telegraph had proceeded through the day before, deeply laden with the productions of the country, and came to anchor off the Scotch settlement, waiting a favorable wind to proceed on her voyage to Prescott. When the Gale came on, Captain Bates shifted her birth behind the breakwater, and secured her with three turns of a very large chain Cable: with which she rode it out till Monday evening; from noon till which time, the gale was at the worst, and two Cribs of the breakwater, near the South end, giving way, such columns of water rushing through the opening against her, that she parted all her fastenings, cutting the foremast, to which they were fastened, nearly through, the stern ones held on for a moment, and brought her head to shore, which, as she was forced on, brought it in contact with the head of the South Pier, and carried away her stern and cutwater. The violence with which she struck, shoved her off from the pier, and she did not touch it again, but brought her head to sea, and drove on the sand stern foremost—where she now lies. Her cargo was yesterday a few days after taken out, and every effort made to free her from the sand in the hold; but all was unavailing. Indeed, after several hours of hard work, with a number of hands, no impression was made upon her, which proves that she has received injury in her bottom; but as she is a new staunch Vessel, it is hoped that it will not prove to be great. Some time before the Cable parted, Capt. B. with three men, left the Vessel, to procure additional fastenings; but, such was the dreadful sea running, that they found it impracticable to return; so, that a man and a boy, were all the persons on board at the South end, it was with much difficulty that their lives were saved The force of the sea may be judged of, from the consideration, that a considerable part of the deck load was thrown entirely over the Vessel pier, into the Canal, without so much as touching it, although the height is 6 feet above the surface of the Lake. It is to be regretted, that a considerable part of the deck load, it is found, will be lost. The Ashes—a considerable quantity of which were on board—are so much injured, that they must be manufactured over again: fortunately, however, the loss will not fall heavily on any one, as the property—it is understood—belonged to many owners.

When the two Cribs of the breakwater gave way the force of the sea pressed so hard upon the extremity of the South pier, that two Cribs of it also went away, and a third one is much damaged. The permanency of the work is not, however, to be judged of from this mishap, as there is no doubt but every part of it may be secured against all damages, by the use of piles, for driving on which, the bottom of the Lake—being a layer of sand upon clay—is very favorable.

It is said that the sea broke fairly across the Beach, opposite to where the Government House formerly stood; which has not occurred before in twenty years.

Some fears are entertained that an American vessel, which had gone to the 16 Mile Creek, to load Staves, a day or two previous to the gale, has suffered in it; as a vessel, answering her description, was seen off that place in the midst of it, apparently injured in her Masts, and no tidings have since been heard of her.

IMPROVEMENTS IN STEAM BOILERS.

To the Editor of the Morning Chronicle.

SIR,—As I have no doubt the public will be interested in the following detail of an experiment made yesterday on the efficacy of Mr. Gurney's safety boiler in a vessel of 22 Tons, called the Duchess of Clarence, I address this Letter to you, as the best means of giving publicity to it. The latter may remove the doubts and fears of those who are going to propose one part of the Kingdom to the other, on this expeditious and comfortable mode of travelling:—

It is, I believe, already before the public, that this method of generating steam consists of a combination of small tubes connected by a common receiver, every part of which is capable of bearing a pressure of about two tons to the square inch, which is much greater than is ever necessary; the usual rate of working requiring only from 7 cwt to 10 cwt to the inch, and no accident therefore can possibly arise. Its advantages to weight, size, &c. &c. being already fully decided, it only remains to try its comparative power, which will be best seen by the following: I examined from 2 Engines of only four-horse power each, with cylinders of seven and a half inches diameter. and a twenty-inch stroke:—We left the Tower-stairs at one minute before eight o'clock at two thirds-ebb; met the flood about Erith, and made our passage to gravesend in four hours. Afterwards, with the tide in favour, we returned to the Tower-stairs in three hours and twenty-four minutes, proving, that even with this small power, the vessel could be propelled at a rate very little inferior to steam vessels of the first class, and that if the power had been increased by another boiler of the same kind, which might have been done without inconvenience, she would then have been, in point of power, on an equality with other vessels, and there could be no doubt but she would have equalled them in speed. If Mr. Gurney's safety boiler be adopted, the public will be assured that no explosion can possibly take place, to endanger either the vessel or the lives of the passengers and crew: whilst the proprietors of Steam-vessels will obtain the incalculable advantage of a diminution of expense of every description, together with the considerable saving of room and tonnage, occupied by the ponderous machinery now in use. In its application to Naval warfare it will have decided Advantages, which, for obvious reasons, I shall not dwell upon, my object being solely to make those interested acquainted with this valuable invention.

I am, Sir,

Your most obedient Serv't.

On the breaking up of several Public Companies, and the bad effects of the City Monopolies.

The last year was distinguished by the breaking up of many companies; American, Atlantic, Foreign and Domestic. The mining companies are now a wreck; and Mexico and Peru can now excite no new adventures.—This was to be expected, as the spirit of speculation had exceeded all resonable bounds. The spirit took its origin in the circumstance of immense sums of money having been discharged from their former employment during the war, and having to seek some new mode of profitable investment. Persons who had hitherto been getting eight, ten, or twelve per cent, by dealing in loans, contracts, privateering, the transport trade, and the clothing and victualing services, were unwilling to leave their money in the stocks, or private banks, at three or four per cent, and, therefore, eagerly listened to every scheme that promised them the larger return of commercial adventure. Hence every day produced some new scheme, and every scheme was filled up almost as soon as prepared. It was easy, therefore, to be foreseen, that the greater portion of these speculations had not the possibility of succeeding. Such was the character of the speculations of the Year 1825 and 1826; years of enterprising madness, dreaming folly, and speculating knavery.

It was one of the amusing theories of the late Dr. Price, as the basis of an effectual method of enriching a nation, that if a hundred pounds had been put out to interest at five per cent, in the first year of the Christian era, and had been left to accumulate at compound interest, the result, at the present day, would have been such a sum of money as, if paid in gold coin, would have filled a space equal to Hyde Park with guineas, packed upwards of five miles high. "And why not something of the kind now?" concluded the Doctor. This question was very simply answered by an intelligent writer of those days:—"Where is all the money to come from, Doctor?" Most of the joint stock companies seem to have proceeded upon the same principle, and to be equally absurd in their conclusion.

In the sweeping dissolution of many of these companies, we cannot but lament the failure of some few; and particularly of those which were directed to break up certain established and legalized monopolies, which are, and we fear will long continue to be, a disgrace to the good sense of the country. On the otherhand, we heartily rejoice at the disfranchisement of such establishments as to occasion great present ruin to small shopkeepers and retailers, and to produce no corresponding good to the public.

Air Engine.—A patent has been just enrolled by Mr. Cayley of Glasgow, for the invention of an engine to be propelled by the elasticity of heated atmospheric air, in lieu of steam. Whether the expansion of air will admit of sufficient motive power for the general purposes of the machinery we engage to find, with the following engine we engage:—A two-inch bore and ten-inch stroke:—We left the Tower-stairs at one minute before eight o'clock at two thirds-ebb; met the flood about Erith, and made our passage to gravesend in four hours. Afterwards, with the tide in favour, we returned to the Tower-stairs in three hours and twenty-four minutes, proving, that even with this small power, the vessel could be propelled at a rate very little inferior to steam vessels of the first class, and that if the power had been increased by another boiler of the same kind, which might have been done without inconvenience, she would then have been, in point of power, on an equality with other vessels, and there could be no doubt but she would have equalled them in speed. GIBRALTAR.

Though so much has been said about the strength of Gibraltar, hardly any description (which is rarely the case) comes up to the reality. There are bastions behind bastions, there are guns on a level with the sea, and others 500 feet above it; there is only one narrow road that leads to it, and on this point alone 300 guns bear at once. Thirty-six of these are placed in excavations made in the perpendicular mountain, which overlooks the Spanish lines, and are so secured by the surrounding rocks, that the men could work constantly at the guns without the smallest annoyance or risk of injury from the enemy. There are others on the top of the rock at that point, 1,400 feet high, and about half a mile of the range is a signal-house, where there is constantly a detachment of soldiers, which, after being served ten times out down, has as often started into fresh luxuriance, in Lord Seaforth's garden on the beautiful domain of St. Mary's Isle.—This remarkable plant, which has excited the admiration of all florists, is at present in full bloom, and measures round the extremities, as near as may be, 34 feet. It displays this year no fewer than five hundred and twenty-five flowers; and, what is, perhaps, equally surprising, several of these measure not less than two feet in circumference. The tulip tree spreading its arms aloft, and flaunting in all the pride of summer, is undoubtedly a highly interesting object; but height is one thing, and surpassing riches and beauty another; and when we come to compare the splendid foliage of the plant in question, with the number, size, and variety of its flowers, we very much doubt whether its equal is to be found in Britain.—Dumfries Courier.

Effective industry of France and Great Britain.—M. Dupin in a work entitled Productive and Commercial power of France, makes an estimate of the amount of labour and effective power applied to the production of national wealth, under the classes of individual power, the power of domestic animals, and that of the elements, exerted by means of mechanical inventions. In this estimate he considers a unit, the power of each male, from 17 to 54 years of age, and as a half of each male, from 12 to 17, and from 71 to 60. The labour of children under 12 and of persons over 60 he considers of nothing, and that of females as half than males of the same age. On this basis he estimates the personal labour of the inhabitants of France as equivalent to that of 12,609,057 males in the vigour of life.

The power of a horse he considers equivalent to seven times that of a man, and that of an Ox four times, or that of cattle, male and female, from 2 to 60 years each used, at an average of two and a half, and that of an Ass as equal to that of a Man. Taking the number of horses in France at 1,900,000, they give an effective force equal to that of 13,300,000 men; the number of cattle at 6,977,000, they have a power of 17,442,500 and adding to this the force of 240,000, an aggregate power, from the labor of domestic animals, is obtained equal to 30,942,500.

The estimate of mechanical power is from Water Mills 253,353, wind applied to Navigation 8,000,000, and Steam Engines 480,000, equal in all to the power of 5,253,353 men. The aggregate of the whole is 48,824,890.

Of this force, an amount of personal labour equal to that of 12,606,057 men, and the labour of animals equal to that of 28,872,500 is estimated to be employed in agriculture, and the rest in manufacturing and commercial pursuits.

He makes a similar estimate of the effective industry of Great Britain. Taking the population at 15,000,000, he considers the personal labour as equal to that of 6,307,389 men, that of animals is equal to 43,500,000, and that of the elements to 12,850,000, making a total of 50,457,389. From the force of the power employed in the several branches of national industry is equal to that of four men to each man employed, and in England it is equal to eight for each man.—Boston Advertiser.

Poetry.

THE WIND.

I am the heeless, I am the viewless,
No station to me is assigned;
I wander at will, companionless or still,
I am called by earth's children—the Wind!

Sometimes I rest on a high Alpine crest,
And slumber amid its snow;
And when I arise I travel the skies,
And no one knows whither I go.

In a soft-breathing breeze I range me through trees,
And wave the eared corn on the plain;
I cool the parched ground where the sun-beams abound,
And I bring on my pinions the rain.

I play with the hair of some human fair,
And wantonly waft o'er her face;
I bid the blood rush to the cheek in a flush,
And endearingly heighten its grace.

In my moments of mirth I sweep o'er the earth,
And laugh at the fears of mankind;
When my passion-fit rages I can talked of for ages,
And they quail at the name of the Wind!

Miscellaneous.

THE WITCH OF THE EAST CLIFF.

Who now believes in ghosts, or shudders at the recital of a tale from the land of spirits? The apparitions that haunted the dark ages have vanished before the light of reason and revelation—the fairies have forsaken their green rings in the forest—the merry hobgoblin has dwindled into a farthing taper, and quenched his wondering light in the marsh—and the country church-yard is no longer guarded by the flitting shadows of the beings whose years are with those beyond the flood." The mouldering remains of the fathers of the village are left in undisturbed and lone serenity; the wayfaring man rests his weary limbs on the once haunted stile, and carelessly views the moonbeams glancing on the tomb-stones. A citizen would shrug up his shoulders, and ridicule the absurdity of ghosts in the nineteenth century; and even in the country, only a faint shadow of the old superstition remains.

The recital of such tales round a winter fire-side, when the wind roared without, and bent the old elms over our antiquated mansion, was ever hailed by me with interest and pleasure. They constituted an indefinite charm, giving rise to ideas which bordered on the wild and wonderful. Yet I was ever a fearless believer in supernatural occurrences. They amused and called forth the powers of a wayward imagination, but made no deeper impression. It is not of the spectre that haunts W——Hall I mean to speak; that ancient edifice, with its round towers, and Gothic gateways, whose venerable front has seen ages pass away, and succeeding generations tread its oaken floors. What would such a building be in the country, where the old superstition still fondly lingers without its attendant spirit? I remember listening, when a child, with intense interest, to the old house-keeper's details respecting the lady in white, who, as the hall clock strikes twelve, glides down the great staircase, crosses with hurried steps the stone court, and, amidst piteous sobs and groans, vainly essays, at the garden gate in the centre of the quadrangle, to obliterate from her hands and garments the stains of blood. Time has swallowed up some fearful legend connected with this spectre. We may conjecture that this unwedded Lady Macbeth met a conspicuous part in some tragedy, for which the superstitious peasantry snatched this punishment to her restless ghost.

Mine is a more marvellous, and, strange to say, a more improbable tale, although I had it from the mouth of the principal actor in the drama, who as religiously believes the wonders he relates, as a good Catholic does the miracles performed by Prince Hohenlohe. I was staying with a widowed aunt, in the summer of 1822, at a small seaport town on the eastern coast of England, and by mere accident became acquainted with the narrator—Joel Skelton. His wife was renowned through out the adjacent country for her superior skill in laying out a corpse, and was a sort of female undertaker, performing the last offices to all who died in her vicinity. When difficult cases occurred, she was assisted in these melancholy duties by her husband, a short, stout, hale old man, who, to judge by his appearance, might have bidden defiance to the powers of darkness. Few who contemplated Joel Skelton's comical red face and merry grey eyes, would have thought him a fitting subject for witches and hobgoblins to play their pranks on. Returning from the beach, one fine moonlight night, I happened to pass by Joel's attic cabin. The jovial proprietor was seated on the bench, by his ivy-covered porch, which commanded a fine view of the German Ocean, talking with great energy to an old weather-beaten seaman, leaning against the door-way. This grey-haired auditor held the can of beer untasted in his hand, and had suffered the ashes to expire in his pipe, while listening, with open mouth and expanded eyes, to Skelton's marvellous relations. Curiosity tempted me to draw nearer; and I soon had the tale, with the improvements and additions which a hundred relations had furnished.

"You have heard, neighbour Sampson, of old Rachel?" said Joel, twisting his Welch wig a little on his head, which was always the prelude of a story—"old Rachel Logon, who lived forty years ago just under the brow of the East Cliff?"

"Aye! aye! Master Joel!" responded the seaman, "to my cost—If I cast my eyes on the hag before we set sail, our vessel was sure to be crossed by contrary winds; and she threw such a mist before us, that you would have thought Old Nick himself stood at the helm. Let us steer our course which way we would, we always found ourselves off the Baron, or near the accursed Goodwin Sands. Many's the good ship she has sunk with her spells, which left the port with a fair wind, and never again entered the harbour."

"She was old Rachel when I was a boy, and that's many years ago," resumed Joel; "and her name was up for a witch through the country. I was a wild reckless dog; and as to ghosts—at that time I had still to learn the meaning of the word. My father died when I was young, and left me to bring up two sisters; which I did, to the best of my poor abilities In the course of time, the girls went to a distance—each in respectable servitude. God bless them both! they are dead and gone; but at that period they were my owndy care, and I loved them dearly. It was a sore privation to me that we could only once a year, which was generally at Christmas. Do you remember my uncle, old Nat. Howe, who kept the Jolly Fisherman?"

"Do I, Joel? aye, marry, do I, for that I have wished for a draught of his home-brewed when my throat has been as dry as a salt herring, and the wind has been piping through the shrouds. But what of old Nat? He has cast his anchor in the church yard, and his name is nearly forgotten."

"His house was due place of meeting," said Joel; "and he gave us a hearty welcome and plenty of good cheer. It was one of these occasions that my first acquaintance with old Rachel commenced. The fiddle had been going for several days; and we kept it up with dancing and drinking from night to night. The song and the jest were most amusing; and many a younger heart was merry then which is long since cold in the grave. The hour of parting came at length, and a bitter hour it was to me. My wife was a smart rosy girl at that time of day, and was one of the company. She lived with my sister Deborah, at D—Hall (which you know is a long way up the London road.) Now, I had to pass by Rachel's cot, on a desolate track of moorland, which is now converted into sheep walks. And a terrible lonesome place it was. I always saw the girls over the heath; and as they were parting on their way home, I halted over, began bragging of my courage. My swaggering speeches attracted the attention of an old sailor, who had been quietly smoking his pipe in the chimney corner. Willing to put my boasted courage to the test, he dared me to stop at old Rachel's cottage, and have my fortune told. The frolic pleased me—I swore to make acquaintance with the old witch before the moon was an hour older. Off we set, the moon being bright, the wind high, and the frost being hard upon the ground. Our path, for a mile lay along the beach. The sea was fearfully rough, and there was one fine vessel struggling with the breakers. As we approached Rachel's hut, we heard the old beldame singing, and muttering spells to herself. Her song I shall never forget—it was a wild and harrowing mourning over the wind rolls back the advancing billow, and strews the beach with foam. It was as near as I can recollect, to the following effect:—

'Hark! to the rave
Of wind and wave!
Hark to the seamew's cry!
The moon is bright,
She casts her light
From a wild and stormy sky!

'Like a wild steed,
Round yon vessel's prow,
The flashing waters fly!
The sounding surge
Shall ring it's dirge,
Tossing the foam on high.

'No prayers shall save
Her crew from the grave,
That darkly yawns below,
They cling to it's shrouds,
And watch the clouds,
As the rack drives to and fro.

'They shall hope and pray,
For the dawning day,
As the angry waters rise;
The morn shall beam
On the ocean stream,
But ne'er meet their eyes.'

"Oh that you could have heard the hag sing it, as she stood upon a jag ess of the broken cliff, tossing her withered bony arms to and fro, with her grey hair streaming on the breeze. At the sight of her, my spirits sank, and my boasted courage was all gone. For my oath's sake, however, I determined to address her; and, putting a bold face on the matter, I stepped up to her, told her my errand, and requested her to tell our fortunes!"

"'Fortunes!' screamed the witch, 'God give you fortune! I cannot tell your fortunes!'

"'How now, dame,' said I (carefully omitting the old for fear of offending her) 'every body knows that you deal in such contraband articles, therefore what's the use of denying it? I came here to have my fortune told, and will not depart till I have learned from you my fate!'

"'You are a merry reckless fellow,' returned the witch; 'and your fate is to be poor, and to work hard all the days of your life. That pretty girl who besets on your arm, and trembles like an aspen leaf, will share your poverty, and fill your house with children.' Neighbour Sampson, would not this alone prove her to be a witch! What she then told me, I am not cause of my pain!"

"'Wonderful! wonderful! Master Joel,' again muttered the old tar; 'who appeared deeply interested in the narrative.

"Well, continued old Joel, "I was so overjoyed at the prospect of having Hetty, that all my fears vanished; and I accepted the hag's invitation to step into her hut, and taste her beer. The girls screamed and pulled me back; but all in vain. Had Old Nick himself stood in the doorway, in the humour I was in I could have braved the devil. The girls dared not leave me, and in a few seconds we were all seated round the woman's fire. You have heard the old saying—' Woe betide him who eats with a witch'—Yet, in spite of every forewarning, I partook largely of her cheer, and drank copious draughts of the best ale that ever came out of a cask; and this it was that gave her power over me. When my head was warm with drinking the health—but no sight was visible—I met my ears, but the angry voice of the troubled ocean. I remember nothing more. My senses failed me; and, when the morning dawned, my eyelids first opened to it, by finding me fast asleep, wakened on the identical heap of old nets in the corner of Rachel Logon's shed. On returning to the Jolly Fisherman, I found the girls, and my uncle, wondering what had become of me. I related the adventures of the night, and how I had accompanied them to the tollgate, and returned on that horse of the devil's own training over the heath. But verily I believe old Rachel had possessed them! They swore that they left me with the witch; and, being fearful of prosecuting their journey alone, they returned to the Jolly Fisherman without me.

"'Could you not account, Joel,' said I, 'for the adventures of the night, without the help of magic?'

"What other power," replied the old man, rising and wiping his brow, "could effect it? As I stand here a living man, these things really happened to me!"

"In sleep," continued I "you left old Rachel's hut in a state of intoxication; overpowered by liquor, you sank down into the shed, and imagination did the rest. Your adventures my good friend, were nothing more nor less than the night mare. Therefore cease, I beseech you, to attribute to a poor, insane, deluded old woman the powers of witchcraft."

SCOTCH HARVEST.

We are happy in having it still in our power to give favourable accounts of the harvest from all quarters in the North. From a mass of intelligence before us, we cannot select one single well-founded complaint with regard to the crops or the season.

Mr. Irving has finished the first part of his adventure with her, were almost forgotten, in the anguish I felt at parting with my sweetheart for another long year; and I was thinking to myself, if we should ever meet again, when the sound of horse's hoofs rapidly advancing over the frosty ground met my ear. Surprised at a horseman's crossing the heath at that late hour, I turned round to ascertain who it might be; but no language can express my terror on beholding a jet black steed, with a flowing mane, and tail of fire streaming in the blast, advancing at that furious pace towards me. The earth trembled beneath his hoofs, and his course was marked by a blue track of light from the pine forest. Oh, how I wished, in that extremity of fear, that the ground beneath my feet would yawn and cover me—that I could hide myself in the bowels of the earth! There was no time for reflection—my memory had forsaken me.—The name of God trembled on my lips, but had not the power to give it utterance. The appalling steed came thundering towards me—flames encompassed me—and I was caught up as by a whirlwind on to his back. My senses rushed into another world—from the parish of W——. This little rivulet had been swolica by the autumnal rains into a broad stream, and now presented a glittering sheet of ice to the eye. To this spot the spectre steed urged his frantic course The ice shivered to splinters beneath his hoofs, and I was dashed with violence into the water. With the greatest difficulty I succeeded in extricating myself from the yielding masses of ice, and once more found myself safe on terra firma. But the horse was gone! Shivering with cold and terror, I cast my eyes around the heath—but no sight was visible—no sound met my ears, but the angry voice of the troubled ocean. I remember nothing more. My senses failed me; and, when the morning dawned, my eyelids first opened to it, by finding me fast asleep, wakened on the identical heap of old nets in the corner of Rachel Logon's shed. Count Capo d'Istria has been encouraged by the Courts of England, France, and Russia, to accept the Government of the Greek Republic.

An amazing number of persons of rank and fashion have crossed to the Continent from England, for the purpose of being present at the grand review, which takes place at St. Omer's, before the King of France.

Sir W. Scott's new work, "The Chronicles of the Canongate," in two volumes, consists of three tales,—the Highland Widow, The Two Drovers, and The Surgeon's Daughter. The first two will occupy one volume, and the last the second. They will appear about the end of this month, and will be followed by "The Tales of a Grandfather," from the same pen, in November.

Arrangements have been made at the London Opera House with Madame Pasta and Mademoiselle Sontag, for the ensuing season.

England.

London, Sept. 12.—Letters patent have been made out to pass the Great Seal, creating the Earl of Darlington Marquis of Cleaveland. Mr. Stanley, the member for Preston, succeeds the Right Hon. H. Wilmot Horton as Under Secretary for the Colonies.

The Augsburgh Gazette contains the following important intelligence, of the 22d ult. from Constantinople:—"On the 16th inst. the Ambassadors of England, France, and Russia, delivered to the Reis-Effendi, through the medium of their Drogmans, the Treaty of London of June 6, as an ultimatum. The Reis-Effendi inquired of the Drogmans what were the contents of the notes which accompanied their treaty: their answer having replied that they knew nothing about them, the Turkish Minister put them aside, without acknowledging the reception of them. The delay for the acceptance of the Treaty, which was at first fixed at 30 days, is reduced to 15, so that now there remain only 8 days. It is said that Mr. Stratford Canning having requested the Austrian Internuncio to counsel the Divan to accede to the propositions of three Courts, his Excellency refused. Yesterday the Prussian Minister having made some representations to the Reis-Effendi, the latter replied that the ultimatum was a letter of charge, which would never be paid. The 31st of August is looked forward to with the greatest anxiety. It is rumoured that on the 1st of August the Egyptian fleet of 100 sail, with 4000 men on board, sailed from Alexandria for Navarino.

Stock Exchange, London, Sept. 12th, 2'-o'clock.—An improvement may be quoted in the price of Consols, without any increase in business. The Money-Market is extremely good: the prices are 87 3-4, for money, and 87 3-4 7-8 for October.

London, Sept. 13.—The exchange was quite active to-day, and Consols advanced 1-4 per cent. but settled at 87 3-4 buyers. The sale of £25,000 Exchequer bills in the morning produce no alteration, and they continued at 58 to 59 premium.

SCOTLAND.—Northern Light-houses.

The Commissioners of the Northren Light-Houses, are proceeding rapidly to increase the number of sea-lights on the coasts. Last year a new light-house was exhibited on the Rhins of Islay, which has proved eminently useful to the trade of the Clyde, and of the northern ports of St. George's Channel. Another new light-house is nearly finished on Bodam Head, Buchaness, and three more are to be forthwith erected, viz: Tarbaness in the Moray Frith, on Cape Wrath, and the Mull of Galloway, all of which we understand will be accomplished without imposing any additional duties on shipping.

Mull of Galloway.—A light-house to be built on this promontary, one of the most conspicious on the coast of Scotland, has been contracted for, and will be finished by August, 1828. The height of the tower is taken at 200 feet and that of the lantern at 22 more above the medium level of the sea. Corswall light-house is considerably higher, but the natural elevation of the giant Mull will save a great deal of substantial masonary, and still serve every nautical purpose. The expense is estimated at £9,837, including apartments for the keepers and their families.

Cape Wrath.—The contractors, despatched a vessel on Tuesday with utensils, stores and workmen, for the purpose of erecting a light-house at Cape Wrath, under the direction of Mr. Stevenson, engineer for the Northern Light-houses. The forming of an establishment, on such a desolate coast, will afford protection to those who may have the misfortune to be forced on their shores.—Aberdeen Chron.

The Daily contains a list of all the shipping in the Harbor of New-York, on the 1st of October. They amounted to 98 Ships, 124 Brigs, 137 Schooners, 187 Sloops, 24 Tow-Boats, 45 Steam-Boats—Total 595.

HARVESTS IN FRANCE.

The Charleston Mercury from its French papers by the Panurge collects the following accounts:

A violent storm occured at Lyons on the 26th August. In the evirons and particularly in the Canton of Abresle the river which flows through the commune of St. Bell was so swoln that it rose to the height of four feet in the village. Several persons were drowned.—The fields sustained great damage, and the harvests were entirely destroyed. Hail covered the earth to the depth of half a foot.

The storm which did so much damage at Lyons and in the environs of that city, was also very destructive in the communes of Arnans, and Corveissiat, in the department of Ain. This disaster has reduced many individuals to misery, having totally destroyed their crops. The Wheat crop has also been totally destroyed in a number of communes in the departments of the Lower Pyreness, Landes, Gers, and Gironde.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 8.

We have this week the pleasure to mention another gratifying proof of the improvement of trade in the West Riding of Yorkshire. The weavers of Bradford having solicited the manufacturers, in a very proper and respectful way, for an increase in the rate of wages, all the masters, we believe, without one exception, have complied with the request, and a general advance of 6d. per piece, averaging about 10 per cent., will take place this day.—Leeds Mercury.

ST. JOHN, N. B. Oct. 6th, 1827.

The demand for West India goods is great, and the scarcity has caused a rise in value since my last. Sales of timber have been considerable, and our markets in general are looking up. The crops of grain have fallen far short of expectation, and also of potatoes. Hay is in abundance, and the Flax crop is good.

SPAIN & PORTUGAL.

There is much sickness among the British Troops in Portugal, in consequence of their drinking so much Wine, which is sold at 2d per Pint. The vintage is so abundant, that it is supposed the price will still be lower.

Accounts from Madrid to the 23d Aug. were communicated to the King at his Levee on the 28th, announcing that the Rebels were in arms to the number of 14,000 men, and were daily increasing, while their situation among the mountains rendered it extremely difficult to attack them with success. Gen. Monet had been summoned from Zareona, & had gone to Catalonia, where he was to take command of 10,000 men, who were to act against the insurgents, and whose musters were nearly complete.

A Cadiz paper of Aug. 22, states that 8 Spanish Cruizers arrived on the 25th, with an English Brig of 6 Guns, called the Lord Rawson, captured between Gibraltar and Algesiras, after an action in which several men were killed on both sides. The Fort of Gibraltar fired on the cruizers.

Extract of a private Letter of the 11th ult., from Constantinople.—"The Russian Ambassador has sent a circular to all the commanders of Russian Vessels, forbidding them to take on board provisions or ammunition for either of the belligerant parties, upon pain or confiscation. This measure is regarded as the first step of the plan determined upon by the three Great Powers for the pacification of Greece."

United States.

Treaty of Ghent.—The Commissioners for settling the boundary under the seventh Article of the above treaty, have, after much labor and patient investigation, this day closed their labors and made their final reports to their respective governments. It is gratifying to state, that the aforesaid Commissions have amicably determined by far the largest portion of the line: two points only have been referred to the Governments, viz. one affecting St George's Island, below the Sault de Marie, in the water communication between Lakes Huron and Superior; and the other, the water communication, Lake Superior (north-west of that lake,) and Luc La Pluie. The Commissioners, it will be recollected, are, Anthony Barclay, Esq. and General Porter.—Albion.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1827.

The latest English dates we have received are to 15th September, and from these we learn that Mr. Stanley, a Member of the House of Commons, who some time since made a tour through this Province and the United States, has received the appointment of under Secretary in the Colonial Department, in the room of Mr. Horton, who it is said is removed to another Department. What new appointment Mr. Horton has received, we have not yet learned. There is no further news in the papers.

In the account given by the Canadian Freeman of the meeting held in this Town on Monday last, on the subject of the Election, there is evidently a studied attempt, to induce the public to believe, that we attended for the purpose of creating riot and confusion. This we pronounce without hesitation, to be utterly untrue, and can with safety appeal to every person who was present, to say, whether we at any time, during the continuance of the Meeting, offered any interruption whatever to the business in which it was engaged. We exercised the right which belongs to every Elector, of expressing our opinion, and shall continue to do so, notwithstanding the attempts of the Freeman, who although he professes to be friendly to the free expression of opinion, would stifle it, if he could, when it comes from any person differing from himself. The truth is, the Meeting disappointed the expectations of the Freeman, who has long been attempting to drill the public, to suit his own personal purposes against those, who have treated his continued attacks, with the contempt they so justly merit. Why has the Freeman concealed what was done at the Meeting? If the Resolutions which were all prepared by himhimself, had met with its approbation, we should not have been allowed to remain in darkness—they would then have illumined his columns, and instead of being informed that, "some Resolutions were put and carried" and that, "the Meeting adjourned till Monday next," we should have been served with an elaborate treatise, on the obligations which the public owe to the Freeman, for all the concerned exertions in their behalf. The rancorous feeling of personal hostility, by which he is actuated, soon exhibited itself, and as this was the first public Meeting of the kind, we ever attended in York, it was matter of gratification to us to observe, that the good sense of those present, enabled them immediately to see through his designs When we first entered the room, (not at the head of a party as falsely asserted by the Freeman, but in company with two Gentlemen, neither of whom hold any official situation) there were not more than Thirty persons present. The first Resolution, had been put, and was in the act of being carried—its general purport was "that the freedom of Election was an invaluable privilege." The second was "that any person holding an official situation, was not fit to be a representative of the people." Some discussion took place on this Resolution, which however on being put, was carried. Thus far the Freeman had paved his way to his liking, and no doubt thought, that now would be the time, when he had got the Majority of the Meeting pledged to the principle, to get them pledged also, to the personality. His next Resolution therefore went to say, "that John B. Robinson, Esq., holding an official situation, was an unfit person to represent the Town of York"—but the Freeman had reckoned without his host. The personality was too gross, and the resolution was on that ground objected to, by several persons, who stated their intention to vote against it, in the most decided manner. The Freeman would now have withdrawn it, but this was refused, and on its being put, it was lost—and mark what followed.—The Freeman who stood at the Chairman's elbow took it from his hand, and was about conveying it to his own person, that it might never again see the light, when it was objected that a resolution, once put in a public Meeting, whatever might be its fate, should be considered as forming part of the proceedings, and that the mover of it, had no right to conceal it from the public, and particularly in such a case as this The Resolution was then handed to the Secretary, and marked lost; but in the account which the Freeman gives of the business, we are told that, "some of the Resolutions were put and carried"—he forgets—wilfully forgets to tell us than any of them were lost The next Resolution proposed to the Meeting by the Freemen, was "that a Committee of 25 be appointed, 9 of whom to be a quorum, to nominate a fit person to receive the support of the Electors," and being called upon to give an explanation, he said, that he would willingly repose his confidence in such a nomination, and support the person whom the Committe should recommend, let him be who he would. To this, the natural reply was made, that the Meeting was convened, for the purpose of ensuring the freedom of Election, but that this resolution if adopted, would pledge the Meeting, to surrender their freedom of choice into the hands of 25 nay of 9 persons, and that besides, no limited time was appointed for the Committee to report their nomination. The mover of the Resolution then proposed to amend it by saying, that the Committee should report "at any period before the expiration of the ensuing Session of Parliament." This was considered an unnecessary and unreasonable delay—others proposed, that three persons, or more should be nominated by he Committee, and that their report should be made on the first Monday in December, or earlier, giving notice to convene a Meeting. About this time the room was filled with people—the Resolution with the proposed amendments, caused a good deal of discussion, when the Freeman, who evidently began to grow impatient at the delay, and the probability which he began to be pretty apparent, that this resolution too might eventually be lost, or modified in such a manner, as to defeat his purposes, proposed an adjournment which he had before objected to, when some of the Resolutions were carried, and when only a few persons were present On this motion for adjournment being put, tellers were appointed; carried, and lost, were heard from different parts of the room, and without any decision on the question, the Chairman left the Chair, and thus ended the Meeting, which the Freeman announces as adjourned to Monday next, at 12 o'clock.

"We hope" says the Freeman "that the meeting on Monday next, will be numerous and respectable"—We hope so too, and that every person who has a right to be there will attend, notwithstanding, the attempt of the Freeman, to exclude every person, who will not suffer himself to be under his control.

"Having said so much about the meeting," says the Freeman, "we will drop a word or two, respecting our present representative." Now this, "word or two" turns out to be nearly a column and a half of close matter, intended to prepare the next meeting, for passing his personal resolution. We shall only add a word or two to the Colonial Advocate—he says "the room was a scene of uproar"—really if we were asked who appeared to be in the greatest "uproar," we should say, it was the Advocate himself.

A Caucus.—This may appear a novel term among us, but the Meeting of Tuesday night, last, very properly deserves the name. The Freeman and Advocate, have both announced to the Public, that the Election Meeting, is adjourned to Monday next. They have however neglected to inform their readers, that on Tuesday night, such is their anxiety for the public weal, a private Meeting was held, by a chosen few, where every thing was quietly settled, without any confusion, or uproar. Not some, but all of the Resolutions proposed in this secret conclave, were carried we suppose.—What they may be, the Caucus will perhaps condescend to make known, when it suits their convenience. If we, or the persons who voted with us, at the Public Meeting, where every person had an opportunity of knowing what was done, had held such a private Meeting, as this, we should have been forthwith accused of having contrived a secret plot, to destroy the freedom of Election, and to rob the people of their rights and privileges.

From information which may be relied upon as correct, we are enabled to state, that the investigation, on the subject of the late Mail Robberies, is in such a train, as affords the most reasonable expectations, that the guilty person will be discovered, and brought to justice.

Accident.—On Thursday last, a passenger on board the Canada, while in the act of stepping from the Boat to the wharf, fell into the water, in a fit, as it is supposed, and was unfortunately drowned. In about ten minutes the body was found, and taken into the Cabin of the Steam-Boat, where the humane exertions of Drs. Widmer, and McCague were employed for a length of time, in endeavoring to produce reanimation, but without effect. The man is said that, the name of the unfortunate man is William Butler, from the State of New-York, and that he has left a Wife and two Children in Tompkins County, near Ithica.

EXTRAORDINARY HOG.—A Hog belonging to E. Leslie & Sons, Dundas, U. C., was lately killed, and its carcase, with the skin, was found to weigh 650lbs. and its skin alone weighed 105 lbs. and measured seven feet in width, and eight in length. He was about 3½ years old.—Communicated.

Communicated.—UNFORTUNATE SHIPWRECK ON LAKE ERIE.—The Schooner Ann, CAPT. ALLEN of Sandusky, left Buffalo on the 20th ultimo, for Detroit, with nine Passengers, and a Crew of five Men—cargo Salt and Baggage.—Owing to the severity of the gale, she was driven on to Long Point, about ten o'clock the same night, where she bilged instantly, scarcely leaving time for the passengers to get upon deck; all, however, reached the deck, except an old Lady. After reaching the Deck, the sea broke over the Vessel with such violence, that three men, 3 women and a child were dashed over. The crew and one passenger clung to the wreck until morning, when they were taken off.

The names of the passengers lost, are, Rowland and Mila Pettis, and their wives & child, Charles Pittin, and an elderly Lady, name unknown—yesterday the weather was more fair. The roads in the country and about Town are in the worst possible state, and travelling very difficult.—Can. Courant.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Last Friday afternoon, as the Steam Boat Laprairie was ascending the current below this City, the man at the helm gave the alarm of some one having fallen overboard, when Capt. Morin instantly lowered his Boat to the assistance of the unfortunate individual; but from the force of the current, his exertions were unavailing. On assembling the passengers, the absent one was found to be Mr. Francois Beaudry, a respectable citizen of this place, and for many years of the Seminary.—Montreal Gazette.

HIS MAJESTY'S Ship Briton, Hon. Captain GORDON, sailed on Thursday for Portsmouth. Doctor Forbes and Capt. Stott were passengers.

On Tuesday HIS EXCELLENCY the Governor-in-Chief was entertained at Dinner by Captain Gordon, on board H. M. S. Briton.

Pickpockets.—On Friday last Mr. Michel Borne, Merchant, while in the Lower Town market talking to some friends, got his pocket picked very adroitly of a silver Snuff Box, worth £4, and of a silk handkerchief. He had been using both articles a few minutes before, and they were probably observed by the thief, whom Mr. Borne recollects, he thinks, to have seen near him.—Neilson's Gazette.

LAWS IN FAVOUR OF THE NORTH AMERICAN COLONIES.

The alterations which were made in the course of the last Session, in the regulations of our North American Colonies, are daily attracting more attention in the mercantile world, and have, probably, did measures unostentatiously proposed, proulse to produce more important effects. The utmost facility has been given for passing through Canada, to the Ports of export of that Colony, the produce of the North West Provinces of the United States, and from those Ports these bulky articles may be shipped either to this country or the West India Colonies, on the same terms as Canadian Produce. While the direct intercourse between the United States and the West India Colonies, is prohibited, the inducements to cultivate this transit Trade through the Canadas are still further increased. In addition to this trade, American produce is allowed to be carried coast-wise from the ports of the U. States to Halifax, and other ports of our Colonies, where it may be Ware-housed, and re-exported in British Ships.

When the Welland Canal and other improvements of the water communication from the Lakes to the Canadas are completed, the consequences of these measures must be still more important than at present. They will be attended with some advantages to the Northern and North-western Provinces of the United States—advantages which we should be the last to envy them; but the greatest part of the cost of the bulky produce of those regions, in this country, is made up by the expense of carriage, and this carriage will take place through the British Provinces, and employ British labourers and British Seamen. We may thus hope to see, in the course of years, Quebec and Montreal rivalling New-York in the quantity, if not the value of their traffic.

Both those who think the effect of the Navigation Laws is on the whole pernicious, and those who regard them, as the safeguard of the country, must agree, that when the employment of British shipping can be increased, not by the addition, but by the removal, of restrictions of commerce, an unmixed benefit is conferred. The measures effected by the regulations of our Colonial Trade; (for the restriction on the intercourse between the United States and our sugar Colonies is an entirely separate question,) have, though it may have pointed attention to the advantages of transit and depot trade of Canada.) While the employment of British shipping is increased, no one article of consumption will be rendered dearer to the English consumer; nor on the contrary may be rendered cheaper.—Globe.

INCREASE OF TERRITORY.—A writer in one of the recent English Reviews, on the subject of the enlargement of the British Empire, thus beautifully refers to the formation of another continent, out of the coral islands in the Pacific:

"A sixth continent is in the very act of growth before our eyes! The Pacific is spotted with Islands, through the immense space of nearly fifty degrees of latitude and as many of longitude. Every one of these Islands seems to be merely a central spot, for the formation of coral banks, which by perpetual progress are rising from the unfathomable depth there to the surface. A few of those masses of rock shapes itself into an Island, the seeds of plants are carried to it, by birds or by the waves, and from the moment that it overtops the waters, it is covered with vegetation. Still the coral insect, the diminutive builder of all these mighty piles, is at work; the ocean is intersected with myriads of those lines of foundation; and when the rocky superstructure shall have reached the sea, then will come the dominion of man."

NOTICE.—The Co-partnership heretofore existing between the Subscribers, in the Steam Boats Frontenac and Queenston, has by mutual consent this day ended.—All claims against said Boats to be settled by Jno. Hamilton, who is authorised so to do, as also to collect all debts due the same.

Executive Council Office,
York, 23*rd March*, 1826

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENAT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.
No. 9 1. f. C. E. C.

In Council 21*st November*, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepard in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.*

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2*s.* 6*d.*

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

THE VOICE OF WINTER.

I come—my breath is on the blast!
A wreath of clouds is o'er me cast—
And the loveliest flowers of earth, as I past,
Have withered and shrunk before me.
I have found the earth in its richest bloom,
I come to gather its pride to the tomb;
I have found it all with joy elate,
I come to make it desolate.

The leaves of the trees are rustling and gay,
The sheen of the river is bright as the spring;
I will blow those rustling leaves away,
I will stop the streamlet's murmuring;
I will strip of its robe the towering oak,
Its root shall be torn, and its limbs be broke;
I will howl through the waste, and the wild beasts there
At the sound of my voice shall shrink to their lair.

The eagle shall close her soaring wing,
And seek her nest on the eyrie high;
And every songster cease to sing,
At the sound of my ominous rushing by!
I will bow to the dust the gayest flowers,
And strip of their pride the fairest bowers;
I will clothe the earth in white as I come—
The winding sheet of her wintery tomb!

RECOLLECTIONS OF A TOURIST.

There is not, perhaps, in the entire range of modern poetry, a finer passage than that in which Lord Byron describes the awful interruption given to the festivities at Brussels, by the booming of the Waterloo cannon. The scene—to compare small things with great—must have borne some faint resemblance to that terrifically sublime one, which occurred in the palace of Bordeaux when the handwriting appeared on the wall. The sudden suspension of every sound and of every breath, as the death-notes fell on the ear; the dismay depicted on every fair face; the self-collecting gravity banishing the expression of mirth, even from the countenance of the bravest, while a transient paleness might be supposed to blanch it with a hue as fugitive as "the hectic of a moment" on the cheek of Sterne's monk; the transition from this "stunning stillness," to the electric reaction of military ardour,—the blast of trumpets,—the roll of drums—the rushing forth of steeds, and chariots, and armed men to battle—the hurried embrace of lovers—and the tumult of every stirring passion and thrilling emotion, producing in each bosom a riot of feeling, in unison with the "burly" of external objects;—all these elements of the sublime and terrible are moulded by the poet's genius into verses which must warm the cold imagination of the veriest craven who can read.

To seek, however, the actual experience of impressions such as these, we of this well-governed island—where, happily, the sound of hostile cannon has not been heard within the memory of man—must visit regions where the political mercury has been beyond "temperate," like the artist who wished to paint a raging storm, abandon the placid lake for the tempestuous, ocean. I am a wave, indeed, that the heroic passions are sometimes pretty highly roused at our prize fights and elections, and that, in the absence of more energetic excitement, we may indulge a certain measure of enthusiasm at "the ring" and on the hustings. I myself have seen a dinner-party kept waiting two hours for the closing of the poll; and at the last Liverpool contest, the announcement of Houlston's procession had such an effect on certain individuals in a certain house in Rodney-street, that they simultaneously rose from a table groaning under the weight of that intercalary repast yclept a lunch, and, with a desperate fidelity to public principle, postponed the claims of a venison pasty, and iced champaign, to the duty of waving scarlet ribbons and kissing white hands to their favourite candidate.

With all my experience, however, of such scenes as these, I felt, I must confess, altogether a new sensation of overawing interest, when in the midst of a grand ball given by the inhabitants of Bordeaux to the Duke and Duchess of Angouleme, and amid a scene of splendour and enjoyment similar to that exhibited at Brussels on the memorable eve of the battle, an officer covered with dust and sweat, and evidently worn out with hard riding, galloped up to the entrance of the exchange, where the fatal rites were celebrating, bearing the intelligence of Napoleon's escape from Elba, and landing at Frejus!

"A change came o'er the spirit of my dream," as these strange tidings were buzzed about the room, and a vague anticipation of subsequent events flitted before my mind like the visions of an imperfect second-sight.—The Duke immediately withdrew, and set off that night on that foolish and ill-concerted expedition which ended in his capture. The Duchess soon followed, and the brilliant crowd dispersed. It was curious to note the embarrassed looks of Clausel, and De Caen, and the other Generals in waiting, a sheir countenances belied the faint assurances of loyalty which flowed from their lips. The recollections of Marengo and Austerlitz seemed with ill-suppressed delight to animate their features, and the spirit of the Imperial Eagle which was then pursuing its flight, as Napoleon expressed it, from "steeple to steeple," towards Paris, was evidently at that moment exercising on their minds the spell which was to revolutionize France. The next advices were that the Emperor had reached Grenoble.—Still the general conviction among the royalists was that he must be taken; but the defection of Ney and Labedoyere was a death blow to their hopes.

It was in these trying circumstances that the conduct of the Dutchess obtained for her from Napoleon the appellation of "the only man of her family." The profound ignorance in which the public was kept of the progress of affairs, held every mind in a state of the most restless anxiety, but all doubts as to the issue of events vanished, when a few days after, the tri-coloured flag was seen waiving from the church tower of La Bastide, a village at the opposite side of the Garonne.

At an early hour in the morning I was awakened by the roll of drums, and the shouts of assembling multitudes. The town had been summoned to surrender. This was in fact but a form of politeness to her R. H.—but deceived by the "mouth honour" of the Governor and General, she thought otherwise, and seriously prepared for defence. The National Guards lined the quay in order of battle, and their ranks were every moment thickened by half-armed volunteers of every rank and age. Some pieces of cannon were planted.—Cries of Vive le Roi! Vive Madame! sounded in all quarters, and every thing bore the appearance of an impending battle; but it was time to terminate this farce. In reply to the solemn appeal of the Duchess, De Caen, who composed the garrison, could never be brought to fire on their companions in arms, and that all idea of resistance was vain. Unimproyed by this declaration, she immediately ordered her carriage to the Chateau Trompette where the garrison was quietly enjoying the mock heroics of expiring Royalism. Her guard of honour was refused admission into the fortress, and she entered the Bracket square unattended. The troops on parade she addressed in a pathetic appeal, and with tears in her eyes besought their protection. They replied that they would defend her person with their lives, and that she should have ample time to withdraw from the town but that to pull a trigger against those with whom they had so often fought and bled, was utterly impossible.

I shall never forget the countenance of this unfortunate woman as she drove, immediately after this scene, along the line where her adherents were anxiously awaiting the signal of attack. In an agony of grief, she announced the defection of the garrison, and besought her friends to follow her example in submitting to inevitable destiny. Just at that moment, a shot—whence fired has never been ascertained—was discharged, which killed a Captain in the national guard. It gave rise to the cry of "Treachery!" and was the signal for a general dispersion.

The Duchess, with a few followers, embarked that evening on board an English frigate, which had been for some days hovering in the mouth of the river; and before the sun had set, the Imperial standard waived from every town in the city, and proclaimed the commencement of "The hundred days."

From Knox's Essays.

AN IDEA OF A PATRIOT.

True patriotism, which is a species of heroic virtue and indeed the best species of it, does not often occur. The name is daily assumed, and in our country has lost its dignity by prostitution. It has been wantonly lavished on those who, from the worst motives, have fomented faction and kindled the flames of rebellion. It has been denied to the preservers of their country, and given to the destroyers of it; to those who have spent their lives, and exercised the abilities they professed, in producing all those evils which the institution of civil society was intended to extirpate. They evidently have had little else in view, but to render themselves of consequence to be bought by a corrupt administration. Selfishness and spite, pride and a levelling principle are qualities very unfavourable to the existence of civil liberty. Yet these qualities have appeared very clearly in those who have laboured to be foremost into power by the cry of a factious and false clamour.

For the sake of those orders among us whose heart are good and truly English, but who, from the want of education or leisure, are not apt to think coolly when they read the inflammatory harangues of their wanton leader, and who are often cruelly and villanously deluded to their own destruction, and to the detriment of that liberty which they love, I will endeavour to describe those characters which appear to me truly patriotic.

In the first place I would lay it down as an axiom, that a bad man cannot be a patriot. Even the badness of his heart may lead him to assume all the decent appearance of patriotism. His envy, and his disappointed avarice and ambition will indeed bim to revile those who are in possession of lucrative and powerful employments, and this will appear like a noble opposition to the strides of power. To serve his purposes, he will declaim on liberty, and this will soon collect a party. Fools and wicked men abound. Those soon herd together, and even render themselves of some consequence by their numbers. Honest men are drawn in by the violence of the writer, and the wicked leader at last gains his selfish views, or at least obtains the satisfaction of mortifying those whom he envies.—At all events he is sure of one pleasure which is congenial to his heart, the spreading mischief and confusion. I repeat therefore that it will be necessary to convince ourselves, that a bad, husband, a bad father, a profligate and an unprincipled man, cannot deserve the name of a patriot, unless it is given him, as it may indeed in the present age, by way of derision. A man of no private virtue must want principle; and a man who wants principle cannot be trusted from proper motives. He cannot entertain so liberal and exalted an affection as a rational and disinterested love of his country. He may accidentally be right in his opposition to a bad measure, but he is not safe to trust to him. He may be the wicked instrument of gratifying my spleen or his own; but yet I will think before I lift up my hand to vote for him, lest I should be assisting with the power which I may assist in delegating to him may involve my country in war, riot, and rebellion. I will remember what is past, and be cautious.

And what are those writers to be called, who, perverting the perfection of reason and the fruits of learning, endeavour to unsettle all our principles under the pretence of asserting our liberty! Patriots they would call them! Alas! when I see them obviously actuated by pride and vanity, and, for the sake of being distinguished, endeavouring to overturn good order and tranquility, I call them the nuisance of the human race; and if I did not pity their delusion I might execrate their names. It is certain, that writers who have caused little more than to raise a literary reputation, have excited the most dreadful contentions in the commonwealth.

London, September 29.

(From our Correspondent.—Half-past seven.)

Captain Parry, accompanied by Mr. Beverly, Surgeon of the expedition, arrived at the Admiralty this morning. They proceeded as far as 82° 45′, having suffered the greatest privations from the cold, and the laborious exertions of dragging the boats over large patches of ice; and in other places, where the ice was so thin as not to admit of the weight of the boats, but not sufficiently clear of the water, as to cause Rowing most Laborious. The cold was most intense, and frequently attended with rain. Upon one occasion it fell incessantly for thirty-six hours. The reindeer were soon killed, as being entirely useless, from the state of the ice, &c., they could not be fastened to the boats. Two Bears were shot, and afforded a supply of fresh meat to the crew. While the party were on the ice, Lieutenant Foster was employed in surveying the coasts in the vicinity of Spitzbergen. Although the Officers and men of the expedition suffered the greatest privations, we are happy to say no lives have been lost, and they have all recovered their former good health. Captain Franklin, accompanied by Dr. Richardson, arrived at the Admiralty. All the intrepid travellers had long audiences with His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral.

(From the Inverness Courier.)

Return of Captain Parry.—On Wednesday morning, Captain Parry, and his surgeon, Dr. Beverly, arrived at the Caledonian Hotel here, after another arduous but unsuccessful attempt to accomplish the Polar voyage. Captain Parry came to Inverness in the Cliedden Revenue Cutter, commanded by Captain John Stewart, having fortunately fallen in with Capt. S. in the Orkneys, on being driven in there on the 22d ult. The history of the present enterprise is brief; and, while we have to communicate the agreeable news of the safe return of Captain Parry to his Country and friends, we are able at the same time to vouch for the accuracy of the following particulars:—Captain Parry, on leaving the Discovery Ship at the appointed place, off the Spitzbergen coast, left himself to the sledge boats prepared for his conveyance over the ice, in pursuance of his original intentions and instructions, and was out for the space of sixty-one days; one of the boats being under his own charge, and the other under that of Lieutenant Ross. These two boats were hauled over the ice by the crew of the Ship, 12 men to each; and after undergoing incredible fatigue, they felt, that for a great part of the time, they were on floating ice-bergs which carried them Southward, while they were stretching every nerve to proceed Northward; and thus, of necessity, they were compelled to abandon the enterprize. To establish this important fact in the clearest point of view, we have to mention that during the last three days of the expedition, and on taking his observations by the chronometer, Captain Parry found that his boats had gained two miles only. The expedition arrived at latitude 82 45.; and had it proceeded but fifteen miles farther, Captain Parry and his men would have obtained the pecuniary remuneration to which they were entitled on reaching 83.; but even this short distance was found to be unattainable by any physical effort. Nearly in the same line proceeded, to the Hecla. Immediately on reaching the ship Captain Parry was preceded homeward. We are happy to add, that Capt. Parry, his Officers and men, are all in good health.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 1st.

Launch of the George the Fourth.—On Saturday week the George the Forth, a ship of one hundred and twenty guns, was launched at Chatham, in the presence of the Duke and Duchess of Clarence. About half an hour before the launch, the Duchess, accompanied by many highly distinguished personages, proceeded to the head of the ship, for the purpose of naming her; a bottle of choice wine was produced, on it was written, "Part of the stock of Lord Nelson's wine, which he had on board his ship at the memorable battle of Trafalgar," which the Duchess broke against the ship's bows, wishing success to the George the Fourth.—The ship is of the following dimensions:

	Feet.	Inches.
Length, extreme,	242	2
Do. of the gun-deck,	205	5½
Do. of the keel, for } tonnage, }	170	11
Breadth, extreme,	53	6
Moulded,	52	9
Depth in hold,	23	2
Do. from the keel to the } top of the figure head, }	57	0
Do. of the stern,	64	0

Burden in tons. 2,602 14-94ths.

Number of guns on the Lower deck,	32, 32 pounders.
Middle do.	34, 32 do.
Upper do.	34, 24 do.
Quarter deck,	10, 32 carronades.
Ditto,	6, 12 guns.
Forecastle,	2, 32 carronades.
Ditto,	2, 12 guns.
Total,	120

The George the Fourth is by the same model as the Prince Regent, and is built with a round stern; and it may be safely affirmed, that the George the Fourth looks as well on the water as any ship built on the old plan, with this gigantic advantage—that she is twice as strong. Was there ever a better plan invented for strength than that of making a cask, which is so firmly united, without nails or any other fastening but the hoops, that it is almost impossible to break it to pieces? Thus, it is, to a great degree, with ships built on the present plan; the planks passing from side to side, round the bow and stern, render the ship literally speaking a cask. This arrangement, united with the diagonal riders, makes the whole fabric one substantially connected body, a greater proof of which cannot be needed than that, when a ship of the above dimensions was formerly launched, it was usual for her to break her sheer, or in other words, for each end to drop several inches in the course of a short time, while now, ships built on the present plan preserve their sheer for many years.

Liverpool, September 12th.—(Private letters.)—The stocks of ashes and lumber are decreasing, and the prices are expected to rise. There is no improvement in the grain market.

Liverpool Corn Market, Oct. 1st.—At the market, on Tuesday last, there was an improved demand for all Foreign Wheat, which, of good quality, supported the prices of the previous week; while inferior description were heavy of sale, though offered on rather lower terms. Irish and English Wheat remain the same as last quoted. New Oats were in good demand, and the few samples shown were taken off at a small advance in price. Barley met at a dull sale at former prices. Indian Corn was not much inquired for, and to have effected sales lower prices must have been submitted to. Other articles remain without alteration. The market of Saturday was extremely heavy for every description of grain, accompanied by symptoms of a further decline in prices. At Manchester, on the same day, there was a similar dullness, and very little business transacted.

THAMES TUNNEL. It is observed that it will hardly be credited that so large a leak as there was in this work could have been so promptly remedied. It was at one time fifty feet wide. There are several trifling leaks in the sides, but these are not expected to cause trouble. Weekly consumption of articles upon the work. Bricks, 70,000. Cement, 350 casks. Candles, 300 pounds. Porcelain, 500 feet. 750 tons of soil were carted in to stop the leak. Before the accident, 6 or 700 dollars a day were taken from visitors.

The largest order ever given in this country for the silk trade, has been given by his Majesty within the last few weeks to complete the furniture for the new apartments at Windsor. There are to be several suits of hangings of the most magnificent description, and the estimated expense which will attend the order will be nearly £20,000. The order, is not, we believe, confined to one house in the trade, but given to three or four of the most extensive, in order both to have it completed in time, and to afford employment to an increased number of workmen.—English Pap.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE &c.

It may be important to traders and others into whose hands Bills of Exchange and Promissory notes pass, to know that by a recent decision of the Court of King's Bench, where a Bill or Note is made payable at a particular place, the words "payable at——," &c. must follow immediately after the word "accepted," and precede the signature of the acceptor; otherwise the holder may upon the holder or party suing on the Bill to prove that the words "payable at——," &c. were actually written by the acceptor, or with his assent.

Foreign Intelligence.

From the London Sun of Sept. 22.

GREECE.

The intelligence which reached London yesterday afternoon leaves no doubt that the Sultan has rejected the Ultimatum of the three Allied Powers, and that it now remains for them to take the ulterior step agreed upon as necessary to be adopted in the event of the refusal of the Turkish Government to submit to the terms which they had dictated with respect to Greece.

It appears that on the 16th of August the Ambassadors of Great Britain, France, and Russia, presented to the Reis Effendi a note, jointly signed by them, containing a declaration of the substance of the Treaty.

No reply having been received to this note on the 30th August, the day on which the time fixed for the determination of the Porte expired, the Ambassadors sent their three Dragomans to the Reis Effendi to receive his answer. The reply was verbal, and expressed in the most decided terms the refusal of the Porte to admit the interference of Foreign Powers in the affairs of Greece; referring, at the same time, to the recent declaration made by the Turkish Government as their unalterable determination.

On the following day, the 31st, the Ambassadors had a conference, and in the afternoon the Dragomans were sent to Reis Effendi. They delivered another note, the contents of which had not transpired, but it was understood that it was yet more forcible than the preceding one; and that it distinctly announced to the Turkish Minister, that the object of the Treaty must be obtained, whether with the concurrence of the Porte or without it, and that the measures determined on for that end would be carried into execution. The Reis Effendi is said to have replied very pointedly, and expressed more firmly than before the determination of the Porte to abide by its first decision. The Dragomans, it is added, were even desired to take back their note, but that they declined doing, and left it in the apartment of the Reis Effendi. This second note did not contain any intimation for a further period for consideration of the subject.

Such, it is said, was the state of the negociation at the date of the Official Despatches to the French Government; but private intelligence, since received, via Paris, from Constantinople, states that the Divan had declared, finding that no further notice was taken of their application, had met on the morning of the 4th, and had come to the determination of demanding their passports, and quitting Constantinople on the following day.

If this event should actually take place, of which there seems to be no reasonable doubt, the consequences cannot fail to be of the highest importance to the whole of Europe. The flame of war once lighted, no human being can divine where its ravages will not extend and when it will be extinguished. The cause which the Allied Power have espoused is undoubtedly a holy one; but the motives which may have induced the Autocrat of Russia to unite with Great Britain and France, for the independence of Greece, will in case of hostilities, in all human probability, call into action so many suppressed feelings, and renew so many long cherished hopes and views, that we cannot conceal our apprehensions that the deliverance of Greece will not be the sole result of the operations which will now commence. We shall therefore, return to press this consideration of the subject until it is once fully confirmed that the scabbard has been thrown away, and that Turkey actually sets at defiance the mighty powers who have attempted, by negociation and persuasion, to induce her to accede in the objects of a treaty which has for the prevention of further bloodshed, and the restoration of civil rights and liberties to the most interesting nation on the face of the Earth.

VERY LATE FROM ENGLAND.

The Packet Ship New-York, Capt. Bennett, arrived this morning from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 2d inst., to which dates we have received copious files, Price Currents, &c.

A despatch from the British envoy at the Court of Persia, to Mr. Stratford Canning, transmitted the news of a great victory gained by the Russians, on the right bank of the Araxes. The Augsburg Gazette, says, that 30,000 or 40,000 men by the Persians, and 11,000 by the victors, is probably, an exaggeration.

The Russian Squadron entered the Mediterranean on the 5th September.

The three Ministers had resolved to send their wives and children out of the reach of danger. In consequence of this the former had embarked on the 31st August.

SPAIN.

The accounts from Spain show that the rebellion is raging more violently, and the insurgents seem to be gaining strength. From Noyecerda, the advices of the 19th September state that the number of Rebels was increasing daily; and their excesses had the inhabitants to become plunderers in their own defence. The revolution draws to it both Royalists Volunteers, and Constitution Stats.—The Citadel of Cordova was held by the King's Troops, but the Town was in the hands of the Rebels. The directing junta of Catalonia, established at Manress, published a journal called the Catalonian Royalist. The third number is translated in the Constitutional, dated Sept. 7. It is a proclamation setting forth that the insurgents have taken up arms to deliver the beloved Ferdinand from the Masons who keep or usurp the power of Government.

Don Augustine Saperes, Commandant of the advanced Guard of the Royalist Army of Observations, entered Igualada on the 4th of September, where he was received with acclamations, and the Battalion of Royalists placed themselves under his command. Private correspondence from Barcelona, of the 14th Sept. says that the force sent out against the Rebels is insufficient.

Despatches received in England on the 27th September, from Paris, rendered it certain that Ferdinand had gone to Catalonia, to endeavour to quell the insurrection by his presence He was to set out on the 27th for Tarragona, by way of Valencia, accompanied by M. Calanarde, the Captain of the Guards, and some Subalterns. His departure was officially announced at Madrid, on the 20th. The Queen is appointed Regent during his absence. The Infant Don Carlos had preceded him.

The King has also been pleased to direct Letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignities of Viscount and Earl of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Lord Cawdor, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the names, styles, and titles of Viscount Emlyn of Emlyn, in the County of Camarthen, and Earl Cawdor, of Castlemartin, in the county of Pembroke.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1827.

Our latest English dates are to 3d October—these confirm the appointment of Mr. Stanley to the Office of under Secretary in the Colonial Office, and inform us that Mr. Horton, fills the situation of Vice President of the Board of Trade From the present state of affairs, with respect to Greece, we may daily expect the most important intelligence. We have given such extracts from the last papers, as appeared most interesting.

In another part of our paper, will be found a more particular account, of the very melancholy case of Shipwreck, which occurred on Lake Huron, off the Isle, which we have copied from the Blackrock paper.

The arrangement making by the Canada Company to receive produce in payment for their Lands, is a measure which will no doubt when carried into effect, be extremely advantageous to persons purchasing from them.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, and family arrived from Stamford, on Thursday last, and have taken up their winter residence in the Government House. His Excellency was received on Landing from the Canada, by a Salute from the Garrison.

Election Meeting.—The Resolution, which we stated to have been lost, at the Election Meeting on 5th, was again put at a second Meeting held on Monday last, and decided by the Chairman to be carried by a Majority of two. A third Meeting may by some be considered necessary to determine on this tie. The Caucus, it appears from the account given by one of their own body have indefatigable in devising stratagems, one of which, "speaking against time," was fully acted upon.—The Editor of the Advocate occupied the floor for an hour and a half, and although called to order more than fifty times in the course of his harangue, persisted in making use of this opportunity, to revile the character of almost every public man, and to insult the feelings of others, by allusions to matters of a sacred nature, which we think unworthy of notice, considering the quarter from whence such conduct emanated. A very liberal correspondent of the Advocate, proposes to increase the Majority of two, by starving the Town into the measures of the Caucus, and the Advocate thinks, that this would be "fair retaliation." The mode proposed is, that the friends of the Caucus shall "trade with no Merchant, frequent no Tavern, employ no Mechanic, and buy of no Baker or Butcher," who may happen to differ in opinion with them. When such means are thought necessary to be resorted to for party purposes, we think it would be well for the people to reflect, whether the freedom of Election, would be promoted, if such dictation should be submitted to. It is no better than a system of proscription, which would cut asunder the cords which bind Society together. When we see such means recommended with the most unblushing effrontery, we think it unnecessary to say any thing further on the subject—the good sense of every man in the Community, must point out to him the consequences that would inevitably result, if such recommendations should be acted upon, and be sufficient to put him on his guard, against the machinations of a party, who could not scruple to resort to such means to effect their purpose.

SIR,

I notice in your editorial Remarks of the 27th ultimo, that you quote from the Colonial Advocate the following paragraph:—"That a Post-master on the Western route has written to the Editor of "that paper to say, that one of the Mail Bags, if "not two, are so badly chained, that any person "could open them easily, without removing the "Locks, and that complaints have been made without effect to York."

When the Honorable William Allan, and John Macaulay, Commissioners in matters of land disputes, and to exist &c., were at Ancaster on the 9th instant, prosecuting their investigation, Mr. Macaulay informed me that among other things, it had been stated to him that I was the "Western Post-master" who wrote to that effect, but how his informant learnt it he could not say.

As such a Letter casts a gross reflection upon its author, I am desirous to be cleared of such an imputation, and now call upon the Editor of the "Colonial Advocate" to state who is the Post-master, that has written him the letter in question, or at least to state that I am not the person.

I am,
Sir,
your most obedient Servant,

Domestic.

We understand that the Canada Company have resolved to receive payment for their Lands in produce. The manner in which it is proposed to carry into effect this measure so important to the province in many respects and so beneficial to the purchasers will of course be made public as soon as the arrangements are completed. In the meantime it has been stated that the principle of the arrangement is to give the settlers under the Company the full proceeds of the sales in London or Montreal, deducting only the charge, making in fact the Court of Directors at home the Agent for the Canadian farmers.—Freeman.

Melancholy Accident.—The Dwelling House of Mr. Josiah Legg, about two miles below Gananoque, was on Tuesday night last, consumed by fire; and a brother of Mr. Legg's, a fine boy of seven years of age, perished in the flames. The inmates situation of the house, being half a mile from any other, and the flames having gained such an ascendancy before the fire was discovered, rendered any effectual means to save the property entirely fruitless.—Kingston Chronicle.

WELLAND CANAL.

It has become so generally the practice of editors to puff off every new invention, before its utility is fully established, that we have refrained from noticing several improvements on the line of this canal, which may be considered worthy the attention of the public. A short time since we mentioned an improvement in the ordinary method of constructing gates and sluice-ways for filling and emptying canal locks, termed "lattice gates," by Messrs. Seymour and Langdon, of Ontario, Co. N. Y. and another by Capt. Marshal Lewis.

This Mr. Lewis is the same mechanic, as most of our readers will recollect, who obtained the premium from the W. C. Co. about two years since, for the best model of a wooden lock, to be adopted on this canal; which is admitted by those capable of judging, to be much better than any other now in use within their knowledge. The manner of grooving the timbers and putting in tongues, similar to match boards, or ceiling, for the sides of the lock, is an improvement deserving of particular mention.

Nor does the ingenuity of this useful member of society stop here. He has constructed a swing or turning Bridge across the lock at the Harbour, on a new plan, by order of the Directors, as an experiment; and, notwithstanding it has a sweep of about 32 feet, it is swung either by boy or man with ease, and is said to exceed every thing of the kind heretofore generally known in this country. Such is the satisfaction it has given, that it is said the Company will be adopted there upon the whole line of the canal.

On the whole, we confidently recommend all persons desirous of acquiring useful knowledge on the subject of Canals, to call at the locks, sluice-ways, wooden locks, paddle gates, or canal draw-bridges, to examine those in use or operation on the Welland Canal.—Farmers' Journal.

Drop Locks.—The outline of a plan for improving the Highways," is given by a correspondent in the last Canadian Freeman. The principle of the measure, from which the fund is to be derived for this purpose, is by levying "a small Tax on Horses." We were at first surprised to hear the Freeman, who on other occasions is so much opposed to "additional taxation," call this "an able communication." The fact is that, the suggestion is not an original one with the correspondent of the Freeman. It has been before suggested, although the details of the measure, were not entered into at the time.

Wreck of the Ann.—We published, last week, a report of the loss of this vessel, such as then prevailed; and have since ascertained that it was, with the exception that the vessel was lost, entirely incorrect. The Ann, Levi Cole, Master, left Cleveland, about noon, on the 20th ult. for Sandusky, and had a fair but heavy wind on leaving port. About 11 o'clock they heard the roar of breakers, as it afterwards proved, but as they supposed by the passing they were near the American shore, they conjectured that it must be a squall, and made immediate preparations to meet it. In a few minutes, they were convinced of their error, by the vessel striking on Long Point, which runs out from the main land, on the Canada side, to the distance of 30 or 40 miles. The Ann struck between half and three quarters of a mile from the shore, and owing to the violence of the sea, she soon filled, but continued driving towards land. There were 13 persons on board, 7 of whom were passengers; and their situation was peculiarly distressing, as no one entertained the least idea of reaching the shore, but expected to perish every minute. One woman, of the name of Pelton, a child, and Mrs. Judson, mother of Mr. C. P. Judson, Esq. were drowned in the companion way; the latter resided at Vermillion, Ohio, and was returning from a visit to her friends here. A young woman, also of the name of Pelton, was held by the water until his strength was exhausted, and he was obliged to abandon her to her fate. A sailor of the name of William M'Kenzie, and the cook, named Solomon Williamson, a colored man, who belonged to Detroit, were drowned in the morning. The rest remained on the foremast until 7 o'clock on Sunday morning, when it fell, and they were obliged to swim for the shore, which six finally succeeded in reaching; one man, however, of the name of Hammond, who resided near Sandusky, was drowned in the attempt. After remaining on the wreck, which had drifted within 60 rods of the shore, for a short time, they set out for the purpose of finding some habitation; and we have reason to believe, before they effected this, they must have endured the greatest sufferings. For the purpose of being enabled to reach the shore with safety, the great part of them had taken off their shoes and stockings, and almost all their clothes, and in this wretched state, they were obliged to travel, at the shortest rate, the distance of 30 miles; but as they did not know what course to take, they must have travelled between 40 & 50; through woods and swamps, some of which they were forced to wade, and in others, the water was so deep, that in required swimming to pass them They were likewise exposed to a severe storm of snow and rain, without any food, except a few berries, the want of which, together with sleeping on the ground with wet clothes, had so exhausted them, that previous to reaching a house, which they did on Monday night, they must have passed more than a hundred yards without resting. The next day, they returned to the place where the vessel was lost, but she was entirely broken up. The remnants of some boxes and trunks, were found strewed along the shore, but all of them had been crushed by the violence of the waves, and the contents washed out; and we believe that every thing will be lost.

We are likewise informed that the schooner Farmer, Capt. Atwell, went ashore near the Ann; but that it is probable she vessel, and nearly all the cargo will be saved. The Schr. America, Capt. Brown, with a cargo of salt, went ashore near the same place, and was entirely lost.

A queer Fish.—On Thursday last a hideous looking animal, supposed by some to be a sea-dog, by others a seal, was caught by a young man, at the cross, just as the monster was retreating into the water. The animal is to be sent to S. Geraldi's, in the New-Market.—Montreal Herald.
