late work we find the following description of this natural wonder; and as we believe its singular and picturesque features are not so familiar to the minds of our readers as the other objects to which we have alluded, we imagine the notice of it will be read with delight:

"In comparison with the Natural Bridge in Virginia, this arch may in many respects have the advantage. The Natural Bridge presents few appearances of convulsions or ruins. It seems to have been formed by a silent and gradual process of elemental dissolution, and, standing fixed in its tranquility, strikes the curious observer as some rude achievement of art. But the Arched Rock at Mackina, strides over the slope of massy fragments, that spread down the bank in such wild disorder, as to refer its origin at once to some uncommon disturbance of nature; while the apparently slight adhesion of the different parts of the arch excites a wonder that it should so long have balanced itself in the upper air. Mr. Schoolcraft, in his Narrative Journal, says, 'Its abutments are the calcareous rock common to the island, and have been created by the falling down of enormous masses of rock, leaving a chasm of eighty feet in height, and crowned with an arch of fifty or sixty feet strength, having the usual curve of factitious arches."

A Russian Regiment.—The Colonel of a Regiment in Russia is bound, both morally and in honour, to keep open table for all his Officers, pay the visic of the Regiment, whether of Infantry of Cavalry, defray all the expenses of the hospital of the company, and of the Band of Music, and furnish every article for the complete equipment of his Regiment; so that the Emperor, or in other words the Crown, furnishes each Regiment with only the pay, arms, clothing, ammunition, and provisions, and is bound for the remount of the Cavalry. Thus it is calculated, in Russia, and especially in Georgia, that an infantry soldier completely equipped for war, his share of the expenses of the Government 35 rubles, (Assignats) which are equivalent to one pound sterling With respect to the Colonel's table, whether he be absent or not, it is always provided at his quarters, with soup or whole, according to the pleasure of him who presides, who is the Officer highest in rank. If a stranger arrive, he is always hospitably received, and placed beside the president, provided only that he be introduced by one of the Officers. On the other hand, the Colonel, to be able to meet the great expences which he incurs in thus supporting the Regiment, has the right of employing, in the time of peace, the third part of his troops, for his own benefit, during certain months in the year, when the military instructions are suspended. The soldiers then become Masons, Carpenters, Smiths, &c., or engage in whatever occupation they may be hired for; so that, as they are furnished by the Colonel with suitable dresses, that their uniforms are not suffer during the time they are thus employed, they cannot be recognised as soldiers except by their mustachios. Besides, there are always a certain number of them employed in the workshops belonging to the Regiment, every description of trade; consequently every thing that can possibly be wanted by the corps is made by the soldiers. It is by this kind of administration that Russia is enabled to maintain that numerous army it keeps at present on foot, and which, according to the statement circulated among the various divisions of the Army at the time of my serving in it, is composed of 800,000 Infantry, 100,000 Cavalry, 38 Regiments of Artillery, 38 Squadrons of the same, and 13 Squadrons of Sappers, exclusive of the passive Regiments, or in Garrison, the Cossacks, and a multitude of irregular Corps of the Empire.—Jean Van Halen's Narrative.

Natural Curiosity.—It appears now to be generally admitted that the New, can boast of a greater variety of the curiosities of nature than even the Old World. It is true the latter possesses an acknowledged and unquestioned superiority in the works of Art. We have nothing to match the Grand Pyramid of Egypt—we have nothing to emulate the Parthenon of the Acropolis, nothing to place in humble comparison with the gigantic pile of St. Peter's at Rome, the huge masses of stonehenge, or the holy antique grandeur of St. Paul's or Westminister. But in the creations of nature our pre-eminence is equally indisputable. We have loftier ranges of mountains, broader and more magnificent Rivers—richer and more expansive savannahs—forests of more illimitable extent.—Even in the eccentric labours of the Divine Architect, we can claim a superiority from their sublime or beautiful workmanship.—What can match in Europe the stupendous majesty of the Falls of Niagara—what so airy and elegant as the Natural Bridge in Virginia, which is so charmingly described by Jefferson in his Notes, and by Francis Hall in his lively volume of travels; and what can be conceived more charming and impressive to the lover of Nature than the ARCHED ROCK OR GRANTS' ARCH, which stands in the Island of Michillimackinac, situated in the strait connecting Lakes Huron and Michigan. To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, We Have agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—Witness our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign. FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offered for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 Of the payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor or Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Governor is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that at any time within that period the conditions of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprised in the second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the ordinary regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR. JOHN SMALL

THE LAST LEAF OF THE FOREST.

'Twas Autumn's morn, and the rising sun
Had shed his bright good light
On each forest tree, and the yellow leaves
Once more seemed fair and bright.
The wind rang through the forest track
With a hollow deep-toned knell,
And the echo seemed to whisper back
The summer's last farewell!

The forest had one leaf! but, ah!
'Twas still as green and fair,
And bright as when the summer beam
Was wont to linger there;
As fluttering on its parent bough,
In the hollow wintery blast,
I looked again, that leaf was fallen—
The loveliest and the last!

But hark! what mournful sounds are those Borne on the Autumn gale,
As in long and deep funeral tones
They swell from yonder vale!
There are noble beasts bowed down with grief,
Sad weeping and despair—
They are bearing to her long last home
The lovely and the fair!

Sweet Ellen, once you castle's pride!
The first in dance and song,
The fairest in the festive hall,
Now sadly numbered among
The silent dead, and passed, and gone,
Even as a summer flower,
The forest's leaf—the castle's pride—
Both fade in one sad hour!

Miscellaneous.

LIFE.

The following beautiful illustration of Life is from the celebrated Bishop Heber's fifteenth Sermon, delivered upon the eve of his departure for India, to his parishioners at Hodnet, in England:—

"Life bears us on like the stream of a mighty River. Our boat, at first, glides gently down the narrow channel through the playful windings of the little brook and the windings of its grassy border. The trees shed their blossoms over our young heads; the flowers on the brink seem to offer themselves to our young hands: we are happy in hope and we grasp eagerly at the beauties around us; but the stream hurries us on and still our hands are empty.

"Our course in youth and manhood is a long, wider and a deeper flood, amid objects more stately and magnificent. We are animated by the moving picture of enjoyment and industry which passed before us, we are excited by some short-lived success, or depressed and rendered miserable by some equally short-lived disappointment. But our energy and our dependence are both in vain. The stream bears us on, our joys and our griefs alike are left behind us; we may be ship-wrecked but we cannot anchor; our voyage may be hastened but it cannot be delayed; whether rough or smooth, the River hastens towards its home, till the roaring of the ocean is in our ears, and tossing of the waves is beneath our keel, and the lands lessen from our eyes, and the floods are lifted up around us and the earth loses sight of us, and we take our last leave of earth and its inhabitants, and of our further voyage there is no witness but the Infinite and Eternal!

"And do we take so much thought for the future days, when the days which are gone by have so strangely and so uniformly deceived us? Can we still so set our hearts on the creatures of God, when we find by sad experience, that the Creator only is permanent? Or shall we not rather lay aside every weight and every sin which does most easily beset us, and think of ourselves henceforth as wayfaring persons only, who have no abiding inheritance but in hope of a better world, and to whom even that world would be worse than hopeless, if it were not for our Lord Jesus Christ, and the interest which we have obtained in his mercies!"

Hydrophobia.—The following are the particulars of a late distressing death from Hydrophobia:—On Wednesday, the 15th Aug. before breakfast, Mr. Thomas Fenby, of No. 64, Gloucester-street, was walking in Edgelane, near Rake-lane, when he was suddenly attacked by a dog, and in attempting to repel him, he lost his footing and fell: the animal then bit him slightly on three fingers of the left hand. To prevent fatal consequences, he immediately repaired to Mr. Park's Surgery, Edge-hill, where, at his request, he had caustic applied to the parts, which seemed to do well until Monday, the 3d of September, when he was affected by shooting pains up the arm, accompanied with slight inflamation. On the following day, considering that the nerves were affected by the caustic, he applied some lotion, but without finding relief.—Early on Thursday morning the pain of the arm had left him, and on rising, about 5 o'clock, for a drink of water, he then, for the first time, felt a strange and indescribable repugnance to the drinking of it. This aversion was perceptibly increased on taking a little milk and water an hour afterwards, and proceeded gradually after this period, till it was with the greatest difficulty and pain he could swallow the liquid given by his medical adviser. He described his feelings, on seeing any liquid, or even hearing it named, similar to those of a person suddenly plunged up to the chin in a "puddle heap." These sensations being violently increased, produced those strong paroxysms and ejaculations, or heavings or gaspings for breath, which have been erroneously described as similar to the barking of a dog, but which the same paroxysms, from whatever cause arising, would naturally have produced. During all this period of painful suffering, which continued till nature exhausted itself, his mind was as clear and strong as at any former period; his disposition was mild and affectionate, displaying the utmost patience and gratitude towards those around him, whom he repeatedly exhorted to be under no alarm or fear for his doing them any injury. So anxious, indeed, was he for the welfare of his friends, lest they should be touched by his saliva, which, in considerable quantity, he violently and involuntarily ejected, that he deeply commiserated the situation of those who were obliged to be near him, and gave them every caution. In this state he continued till near 12 o'clock on Friday noon, growing weaker after every paroxysm, when, covering his face with a napkin which was in his hand, he faintly exclaimed, "You shall not see me die, but I die happy. "I die like a lamb;" and thus, at twelve o'clock, he breathed his last.—Liverpool paper, of September 17.

Summary.

Improvement in Ireland.—The formation of a Ship Canal of great breadth and depth to connect Galway and Dublin, and to facilitate the intercourse between the West Indies and England has been suggested as an object of much importance—desirable in itself by shortening the voyage and diminishing the danger of the passage to vessels in the American or West India Trade, and peculiarly useful by draining the interior of Ireland, and thus reclaiming immense tracts of bogs, the cultivation of which, it is thought, would afford ample occupation to the surplus population of this country.—Dublin Patriot.

Sir Astley Cooper.—We hear that Sir Astley Cooper, though entirely recovered from the effects of his late indisposition, has been induced to make an entire sacrafice of his private practice as a surgeon, and has actually given up his house in Spring-gardens. His public appointments he intends to hold.—London Paper.

Mr. Peel is living at Maresfield, in a style of hospitality worthy an English Gentleman. Several persons of distinction have been entertained to dinner in the fine towers of Maresfield Park, and among the number the Duke of Wellington.—Brighton Gazette.

Mr. Owen of Lanark, went over from Brighton to Maresfield, the last week for the purpose of having an interview with Mr. Peel. —Ib.

From announcements in German Papers, we perceive the publication of a complete edition in German of the works of Sir W. Scott, in pocket volumes of about 150 pages each, at the price of two groshen, or three pence English money, per volume. They appear at the rate of two volumes per month; and the publishers state that they have sold nearly 30,000 copies of such of the work as they have thus far printed —These are—"Tales of the Crusaders," in 9 vols.; "Woodstock," five; "Red Gauntlet," five; "Quentin Durward," five. Thus the cost of these four works is exactly 6s. of our money.—Freeman's Journal.

Despatch from the Acropolis.—The following strange story is told in the Paris Constitutionel:—

An affair which a singular concurrence of circumstances renders very interesting, is much talked of at Marseilles. A young man shooting in a field belonging to the field of Borely d'Isoard, brought down a bird of the vegetal species; but what was his surprise on picking it up to find under its wing a small piece of paper, on which was written the following affecting qustrain:—

"Deja s'etaint pour nous la dernier esperance;
"Bisogne va succomber l'etendard de la foi;
"Oiseau, sois plus heureux que moi,
"Et puisses-tu revoir la France!

Acropolis, le 2 Avril, 1827."

[Our last hope is extinct. The standard of the faith is doomed soon to fall. Bird, be more happy than I, and again behold France.]

On the reverse were the following words, in Greek:—"Fly, freely! Fly and seek liberty, for whose sake we will soon die of hunger."

This billet, on being brought home by the young sportsman, was immediately conveyed to Mr. Borely, President of the Greek Committee, which was delivered according to its proper address. The worthy Gentleman, on examining the letters of this note, which were, on account of their minuteness, almost imperceptible, thought he recognized the hand-writing of a young Philhellene, named Moliere, who had been recommended by an illustrious General to the Marseilles Committee.

PUBLIC ENTRY OF HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON IN YORK.

York, Sept. 25.

The morning of yesterday was remarkably fine, and at a very early hour the streets of our ancient city began to manifest the bustle usually attendant upon a public occasion. At ten o'clock the Hussars went forward to Hobmoorlane, where they waited the arrival of His Grace the Duke of Wellington, who drove up about half-past ten in an open carriage, and his Grace the Duke of Wellington moved forward to the Mount, where the civic procession was drawn up. After passing along the line of constables, the populace took the horses from His Grace's carriage, and he was drawn into the city. Immediately in front of His Grace's carriage was displayed a large and handsome white silk flag, trimmed with pink, and inscribed in gold letters,

"The Hero of Waterloo."

Gentlemen's coaches closed this elegant procession, the whole of which had a very fine appearance. When His Grace arrived on the Mount, a loud cheer burst from the immense multitude, and the firing of the second West York bell of the procession in the quick step of the "Grenadiers' March." On passing over Ouse Bridge, several salutes were fired from the craft lying in the river. The windows were filled throughout the whole line of the procession. At about twenty minutes to 11, the Corporation proceeded from the Guildhall to the Assembly-rooms, escorted by a detachment of the Hussars, and their band playing principal entrance to the Concert-rooms was through the Assembly-room, which was elegantly ornamented.—At the upper end of the orchestre, placed on a small elevation, with a lesser chair on each side of it, and a table in front The Galleries were principally filled with Ladies, who were admitted by tickets only. About half-past eleven o'clock the arrival of the Duke was announced at the entrance of the Assembly-rooms, by the bands playing "God save the King." The West York band had taken its station in the orchestra, and struck up "See the conquering hero comes." All was now intense interest, and the eyes of every one were directed to the folding-doors, when His Grace, attended by his guard of honour, and by the Committee of the Citizens, entered the room, and was welcomed by the Lord Mayor. The elevated Chair was offered to the Duke, but His Grace declined it in favour of the Lord Mayor.

R. Sinclair, Esq., Recorder of the City, then addressed the Duke as follows:—

May it please your Grace!—I am directed by the Lord Mayor and Commonalty of this ancient Corporation, to offer to your Grace their sincere and grateful thanks for the honour of this visit. They have long been accustomed to trace your Grace's progress through your illustrious Military life and achievements in various parts of the world, and to mark with admiration and astonishment the speed, judgement and exquisite skill by which you were enabled to make and intervening incidents, occasions, and trials, terminate in success. We may consider it as a special destination of Providence, that your Grace happened to be contemporary with a man of extraordinary talents and character, whose arrogant and frantic ambition suggested to him the wild idea of overthrowing all the Established Governments, States, and Laws of the Earth. Your Grace was the happy instrument chosen by Providence to put a final stop to his mad but alarming career, and thus to lay a foundation for the re-establishment of peace and the tranquility of Europe. We all most cordially coincide with our Gracious Sovereign, and the rest of our fellow subjects, and, indeed, with the rational inhabitants of all the civilized States in the world, in this general, just and glorious eulogium."—The Duke of Wellington has deserved well of his country."—(Cheers.)

The Lord Mayor then presented to His Grace the freedom of the City, in a Gold box, value fifty guineas, on the inside of the lid of which was inscribed—

"Presented by the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of York to the most Noble Arthur Duke of Wellington with the freedom of the City, Sept. 24, 1827, William Hutchinson Heron, Esq., Lord Mayor."

Along with the above, His Lordship presented to His Grace a roll of parchment, containing copies of the oaths usually taken by parties admitted to the freedom of the City, in a Gold box, resembling those marks of esteem, bowed respectfully to the Lord Mayor, and returned thanks in a very handsome speech.

An address from the Citizens at large was then presented to His Grace, to which, also, the noble Duke made acknowledgments.

His Grace then retired and proceeded to the Cathedral, where he was received by the Archbishop, the very Rev. Dean, and the Rev. W. V. Vernon, &c. Having proceeded to the altar, the choir sang "Now these shows are the Creation," "The Heavens are telling!" after which the Duke, with a view of the Chapter House and other curiosities in that magnificent structure; and having taken leave of the Archbishop, the Dean and other dignitaries, proceeded to his carriage, and immediately left the city, accompanied by Lord Howden, on his way to Stockton-on-Tees, where he was engaged to arrive in the course of the afternoon. The procession now retired and the whole pageant was concluded at a quarter before one o'clock.—York Courant.

Ireland.

We regret to state that His Excellency, the Lord Lieutenant, has been for some days unwell, and so indisposed was he on Sunday, that he was unable to be present at the dinner party, given at the Vice-Regal Lodge to Lord Anglesea, the Duke of Wellington, and a number of distinguished guests, who were honoured by an invitation from His Excellency on that day.—Dublin Evening Post, Sept. 27.

Tuesday morning, three companies of the 58th Regt. which had been quartered in Kilkenny for the last six weeks, marched for Clonmel, on route to Cork, previous to embarkation for Portsmouth, under the command of Lieutenat-Col. Rowen. The remainder of this fine corps are not to leave until Thursday week. The conduct of the Regiment during its short stay in Kilkenny, has been such as to merit the esteem and approbation of the Citizens. The 76th Regt. are, it is said, to replace the 58th in Kilkenny.

The 76th and the 78th, Regiments are added to the Irish Establishment, and the 64th from Gibraltar, are daily expected at Cork.

The 2d division of the 76th Regt. of Infantry, arrived on the 6th inst. at Cork, from Gibraltar.

The last division of the 76th Regt. landed at Cove on Sunday, from Quebec, by the Stentor Transport.—Dublin Evening Post, Sept. 18.

We have to announce the almost sudden demise of Lord Emsimore, M. P. for the County of Cork. This event took place on Sunday morning, at his residence, Convamore. On Saturday morning he rose in excellent health and spirits, and after breakfast proceeded to walk about the demesne; but in a short time he felt himself indisposed, and hastened towards his mansion, where he was seized with an attack of appoplexy, and became insensible. An express was immediately despatched to Fermoy, a distance of four miles, for medical assistance; Doctor Campbell soon arrived, and his Lordship was bleeded and blistered, but was little relieved by either operation. He continued in this state for some time when it was discovered, that he became worse, and that little or no expectations could be reasonably entertained of his recovery, and at eight o'clock yesterday morning he breathed his last. His Lordship was about 55 years of age, is the eldest son of the Earl and Countess of Listowell—he was married to the sister of Lord Glenbrook and has left a lady with four sons and two daughters one of the latter is married—to whom their sudden bereavement.

Dublin, Sept. 12.—Bills of indictment at the prosecution of Mr. H. Doane Grady, the father of the boy who was recently married to a Miss Richards at Gretna Green, under peculiar circumstances, were sent up to the County Grand Jury on Monday last. The indictments were for a conspiracy, against Mrs. Richards, alias Grady, Mrs. Richards the mother of the lady, and four other persons, for conspiring to seduce the boy from school at which he was placed, and for procuring a marriage between him and Miss R. The Grand Jury found true bills against all the parties for a conspiracy.

A correspondent who last week travelled through several of the midland counties of Ireland, gives a very favourable report of the state of the harvest in that country:—With the exception of a few places where the ground is unfavour able, the whole crop of oats are ripe, and the greater portion already safely lodged in the barn yard. Wheat in general has been rather a light crop, but the oats have been very productive. The potatoe crop has every where a most favourable appearance, and the produce, as considered, will be more than usually abundant. The Irish farmers appear to make more of the prospect of a few days dry weather, than is usual in Scotland. Instead of tying the grain up in sheaves, immediately on the corn being cut, as our farmers do, they lay it down in handfuls, and in the course of two or three days, it is sufficiently dried to be put into sheaves, and is immediately carried to the farm yard, or put into stacks on the ground. This is the usual method adopted, but with a difference—that instead of building the stacks in the middle of the ridges, they build them across the furrows, so that the water is more easily carried away, and they are more open to the wind. Should the present dry weather continue for another week, the whole of their harvest work will be completed.

The Mines of Ireland.—We perceive with pleasure, that the Hibernian Mining Company have made their first shipment, consisting of eight tons of rich Copper Ore, from Killarney Mines. But we note with increased satisfaction, the more extensive operations of the Mining Company of Ireland, whose shipments in the past month amount to 240 tons of Copper Ore, averaging fifteen per cent. of the Ore contained from the Mines of Cornwall, and 250 tons of Lead Ore, producing 75 per cent. of Lead.—The latter shipment, with 600 pigs of Lead to London, may be considered as surplus, after supplying the Dublin and other Irish markets with pig and sheet Lead. When, therefore, it is recollected that these form only a small portion of the Company's transactions, for they are working three Collieries and five Slate Quarries, exclusive of three Lead and two Copper Mines. The immense advantage of the Company as a source of employment for the poor, must appear evident; hence, the interest which we take in their success, and we own that we are sincerely gratified to find, that a Company which has afforded food and relief at the rate of several hundred per nearly three years, and, whose work have progressed steadily throughout the late panic and its consequences, should at length arrive at that stage, which, by affording a profitable return to the adventurers, secures the permanence and further extension of their honourable operations.—Dublin Evening Post.

Tipperary, Clonmel, Sept. 12.—Horrible Circumstance.—A female child, residing in the Cross Botheens, west suburbs of this town, complained a few days since of illness, and the inmates of the house considering that she had got a contagious fever, became alarmed for their own safety, and removed her into an adjoining house, where she was put to bed on the floor, and left alone for the night. On some of the child's friends going to the place early on the following morning, to learn how she had passed the night, the most horrible sight presented itself—the little girl was dead, and her face, neck and breast entirely eaten away by the rats, with which the deserted house was swarmed. It is impossible now to say, whether the poor child was dead before she was attacked by the rats.

A new and most difficult operation was lately performed at Jervis-street Hospital. The subject was Patrick Garey, a watchman on Tom de-street station, whose ribs, at the left side, were forced, by a fall down an area, into his lungs, which being perforated, the air escaped and gradually filled his body. When brought to the hospital he had more the appearance of a stuffed sack than a human being, and could not possibly survive many minutes. There was no time to be lost. His chest was immediately opened, when a quantity of air rushed out with an explosive force that excited great surprise. The ribs were then replaced, and their pressure against the lungs being removed, the patient began to breathe with considerable free dom. Besides what he lost in the operation it was found necessary to take a quart of blood out of the chest. At present he is going on as well as can be expected. The air still comes through the opening in the chest, sufficiently strong to blow out a candle at three feet distance; but this will cease when the lacerations in the lungs heal. His complete recovery is anticipated with confidence, and should that be realized, it will furnish a most interesting case in the annals of Surgery. This bold and decisive operation was performed by that able and indefatigable surgeon, Mr. Wallace.—Dublin Correspondent.

Caledonian Canal.—Two hundred and 12 vessels have passed through the Canal, from sea to sea, between the 1st of August, 1826, and the 1st of August in the present year. Two hundred and ninety-five vessels have made partial passages through one end of the Canal to and from various parts; seventy-four boats, not above 15 tons burden each, have been employed in the conveyance of cattle to the fishery stations; and 91 Steam-boats have passed through the Canal; all within the period before-mentioned.

Foreign Intelligence.

SPAIN.

Advices from Gibraltar to the 8d ult. have been received at Baltimore.

It was rumored that the King's visit to Catalonia was brought about by French intrigues and that he was not likely soon to return to the Capital. A stop was again put in Spain to the license system. Business at Gibraltar was dull.

GIBRALTAR.

By the fast sailing Brig Lady Adams, at this port, from Marseilles, and Gibraltar advices from the latter place to the 3d Oct. are received. The Editors of the American have been politely favoured with an extract of a letter of the latest date, which says:—"A stop appears to have been again put in Spain to the License system. Indeed affairs in that country are becoming daily more serious. On the 22d ult. the King set out from Madrid for Catalonia, it is said for the purpose of putting down the Revolution: but others say that the French are at the bottom of the intrigue, and that the King is not likely to return to Madrid. Business keeps very dull.

The intelligence heretofore published has informed our readers, that the King of Spain had left Madrid on the 22d of September, to quell, in person, the political disturbances prevailing in the province of Catalonia. By the Madrid paper has been received,—for the use of which we are indebted to a friend,—containing the following official notification of His Majesty's departure.

OFFICIAL.

The Secretary for the Despatch of Justice has communicated to the first Secretary of State, the following Royal order:—

Most Excellent Sir. The King, our master, has directed to the President of the Royal Council the following decree:—

"Desiring to examine, in person, the causes which have produced the disturbances in Catalonia, and being persuaded that my Royal presence will contribute powerfully to the re-establishment of tranquility in that Province, I have resolved to set off, Post-haste, on the 22d of the present month for Taragona, accompanied by a return and by my Minister of Justice, to whom the despatches of the other Minister may be remitted, in order that the, usual routine of affairs may not be broken. I leave in this place the Queen my beloved spouse, and my infantas, my dear brothers; and going where the necessities of a part of my beloved subjects call me, from which no consideration would detain me, because no sacrafice would be painful to me when their happiness is involved, I hope that all the authorities will fulfil the duties which their respective charges impose upon them, for the maintenance of the peace of the people and the submission to the laws.—This communication will be immediately made known to the Council and published.

Signed by the Royal Hand.

I transmit this to your Excellency for your guidance in your ministerial duty, and that you may cause it to be published, inasmuch as His Majesty prohibits expressly the people from making any rejoicings when his Royal person passes among them. Satisfied with the reception they profess for him, he does not desire them to be taken from their occupations, nor to incur expense.

God preserve your Excellency many years.

GREAT FIRE AT MOBILE.

A letter to the Editors of the Philadelphia Gazette gives the following particulars of a destructive conflagration at Mobile.

MOBILE, Oct. 21st, 1827.

I have only a moment to tell the sad news of our calamity. A fire broke out this morning in the Mobile Hotel, occupied by Mr. Austin, in Royal Street. At this time, 11 o'. Austin, in Royal Street. At this time, 11 o'clock, nearly all Water and Commerce Streets are in ruins. Dauphin Street from the wharf to St. Joseph Street, on both sides; Conti, both sides, between the water and Royal Streets; Royal Street both sides, between Francis and Conti Streets, except the Alabama Hotel corner of St. Francis, and a small house adjoining it. It is impossible to estimate the loss, probably a million. Nearly the whole of the business part of the city is destroyed—a very considerable amount of goods were consumed with the stores, the flames spread so rapidly that it was impossible to save them. The fire is still raging and it is uncertain when it will stop.

Editor of the Mobile Commercial Register..

P. S. The building of the Office of the Commercial Register is burnt—a great part, however, of the materials are preserved, and the publication will be resumed in a few days.

We have this morning conversed with a gentleman who resides at Mobile. From the description of the property destroyed, nearly the whole of the business part of this important Town has been laid in ruins. On Commerce-street, not less than 20 buildings are presumed to have been burnt. On Water-St. there were six compact blocks of stores, &c. Dauphin-street to St. Joseph, 4 blocks. Conti-street, from Water to Royal, 1 block. It is supposed that upwards of one hundred and fifty buildings have been destroyed. A very large proportion of the property in Mobile was insured. Our informant thinks that on the buildings &c. burnt, there was an insurance of upwards of $500,000—a part of which was in this city.—Com. Ad.

The British Packets.—We observed in our last, that the present packet arrangement, which had been found so inconvenient, was about to be broken up, and a new one instituted. We also stated, that the precise nature of the new plan was not exactly ascertained. We have since learned that the Falmouth Packets will proceed to Halifax, from whence the Mail for Canada will be sent over land to Quebec, while the Mail for the United States will be sent to Boston by a small vessel to be chartered for that purpose. We cannot pledge ourselves that this arrangement is positive; but, we are enabled to state, that His Majesty's Agent for Packets has received instructions to repair to Boston in order to receive the October Mail.—Albion.

The failure of Jeremiah Thompson has created a great sensation at New-York. His operations in Cotton are very extensive, and he is said to have shipped half the export of that article from New-York for the last three years. He is also the largest ship owner in the United States, since the death of Mr. Gray of Boston, and is one of the owners of the Old Line of Liverpool Packets. An immense amount of Mr. Thompson's bills have been noted for none acceptance at Liverpool. His engagements are said to exceed £300,000, sterling.

Two houses of minor importance have also gone—others are expected.

Colonial,

We have been informed that a fresh supply of workmen for the mines have lately arrived in Pictou. We are happy to observe that an undertaking of such utility as the workmen of these mines, must eventually prove to the country generally and Pictou in particular, is prosecuting with so much vigor.

The Venerable Archdeacon Willis, returned a few days since from a visit to Prince Edward Island, and the Eastern parts of this Province, and gives a very satisfactory report of the Church Establishments in the District over which he has travelled.—Acadian Recorder.

Lower Canada.

Extraordinary.—A few days ago a Canadian woman at Chambly, while making an Omelette for some persons who were to breakfast with her, opened an egg for the purpose, and as her surprise found it, to contain a live egg, about two inches in length, and resembling in almost every particular the common grass snake, with the exception of the head's being unusually large and flat. When liberated it crawled about on the frying pan with much avidity. Several of the neighbours were witnesses of the fact.—The hen that laid the egg was immediately killed, and a number of soft eggs were taken out of her, each of which on being broken was found to contain a snake, of perfection proportioned to those of the egg containing it. We have often heard of iron, bones, and other hard substances being found in eggs; but the fact of the snake's being alive, and the other eggs having similar contents, is certainly very extraordinary, and will puzzle naturalists to explain the cause.—Canadian Courant.

On Wednesday last a Mrs. Scott, on her passage from Grenville to this place, entered the stage at St. Andrews, and found an infant in the arms of a man, which, in order to guard against the inclemency of the weather, she wrapped up so closely that its respiration was obstructed. On alighting at Grand Brule, she found her infant lifeless, occasioned by suffocation on the way.—Ib.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER AND GENERAL GAOL DELIVERY.

Monday, November 12, 1827.

Present—The Honourable Mr Justice PYKE.

and L. C. FOUCHER

John McDonald was put to the bar, charged with having on the 30th day of August last past, falsely and feloniously forged, a Promissory Note in his favour, for the sum of £225, signed by Robert Watson, with intent to defraud him, the said Robert Watson.—Guilty, fabricating a promissory note with circulation, knowing it to be false.—Billy, for having got said no e made, and assisting to make it—Ashly, with intent to defraud Robert and Frances Watson—Ashly, with intent to defraud Robert Watson, Junior, and Frances Watson.—And Ashly, with intent to defraud Robert Watson, Junior, only. The words of the note were as follows, to wit:—

ROBERT WATSON.

£225 Sterling.

Witness present, JOHN LAWLESS

Montreal, November 20, 1826.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL, after explaining the law in the case to the Jury, and reciting the circumstances as he would produce them in evidence, proceeded to call the following witnesses, viz:—

G. S. Jones, Esqr.—Can say—Says the prisoner came to him in the month of May last.—[Here the prisoner's Counsel, Mr. Rossiter, objected to this evidence, as Mr. Jones was engaged in the same prisoner in his professional duty, in which case the law exempts such evidence. The Court required time for consultation, and Mr. De Bleury was requested not to leave the Court.]

Henry Davenport—Knew the late Robert Watson, Esquire, about 20 years—knows his hand writing from commercial business that took place between them—does not believe any part of the note to be written by Mr. Watson—neither the body of it nor the signature.—Mr. Watson wrote a very fair business-like hand—the writing on the note does not appear to be written with ease or freedom—the signature on the note has no resemblance to Mr. Watson's.

Cross-examined.—He never saw Mr. Watson write such a hand as that in the note—is writing from Mr Watson's signature very—it is common for notes to be written for merchants by their clerks, for their signatures—thinks Mr. Watson had a perfect knowledge of business—Mr Watson had a perfect knowledge of business—he has doubts respecting signatures—sickness, &c. may alter people's hand-writing—does not think it possible that Mr. Watson could make such a mistake in spelling, as that in the note—paid Mr. Watson a note for want of money in November last, for he lent witness £250 that time.

Several other witnesses were called respecting Mr. Watson's hand-writing, and the impossibility of either the note or signature being written by Mr. Watson, as to the spelling of the word to thereon.

JOHN LAWLESS.—Prisoner came to his house in November last, (witness is a turner by trade,) and asked respecting the price of bedsteads; witness told him a price; he, the prisoner, told witness he thought that too much, but to put on his cart, and come out, and before they would return he would make some bargain with him. The prisoner then took witness towards the New Market, and stopped at a shed opposite Mr. J. Murphy's tavern, and the prisoner told witness that he had lent his landlord (Mr Robt. Watson) some money, and that he was going to receive his note for it that afternoon. He then took witness into Mr. Murphy's tavern, and after waiting there a considerable time, a man came in whom prisoner represented to be his landlord (Mr. R. Watson); that he took out a pocket-book, in which were some papers; that prisoner handed him a note; does not know whether it was the stranger or prisoner that produced the note first; after witness read the note, he stated to prisoner that the accuracy of the money was not mentioned, and, with the consent of prisoner, wrote Stg. to the £225, then read the note to the stranger; asked him if it was right, to which the stranger said yes; he the witness, then signed it, and came away; when the note was read the amount was not mentioned in the body of it.

C. S. De Blaquiere recalled.—Said that prisoner came to him in the month of May last, and produced the note in question, for the purpose of collection. Mr. Blurry immediately wrote to Mr. Watson, stating that he had in his hands a note against the estate for collection, for the amount of £225, upon which Wm. Watson came, and immediately recognised it to be a forgery; that he kept said note in his possession until he delivered it up to Sami. Gale, Esq. at the Police Office. The prisoner, in his defence, produced a few witnesses, who stated respectively nothing but a character for him, which was good and means, which were but small.

The learned Judge then charged the Jury, who returned, in about ten minutes, returned a verdict of Guilty.

QUEBEC, Nov. 3, 1827.

The following copy of the Report of the Committee of Trade will be read with much interest by all classes. A number of Merchants attended the general meeting on Tuesday last, held at the Quebec Exchange Room, when C. P. Aylwin, Esquire, was unanimously called to the Chair. The proceedings of the late Committee were unanimously approved of, and thanks were voted to them, and to Mr. Aylwin, for his conduct in the Chair.—Mercury.

REPORT.

The Committee of Trade of Quebec, about to lay down the charge with which they were intrusted by their fellow Citizens, take leave to state a few of the principal objects which have engaged their attention.

It may be recollected that an opinion was entertained by the Committee of the preceding year, and by the Counsel with whom they advised, that the duties imposed by the Canada Trade Act (3 Geo. 4 Cap. 119) had been repealed by the 7 Geo. 4 Cap. 48, and that through Mr. Woodhouse an arrangement had been effected with the Attorney General, that three actions only should be instituted for duties claimed under the former act. The cases were argued in the April Term of the Court of King's Bench, and judgment was given in favor of the Crown.—The Committee may add that their opinion was concurred in by Sir James Scarlett, the present Attorney General of England, who was also consulted on the case.

The present Committee have followed up the views of the late in endeavouring to obtain a grant of money for the improvement of the navigation of the Richelieu: and during the last Session, an Act was passed by the House of Assembly for the Legislative Council, appropriating a certain sum to that purpose—this act having been reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, has only lately become a Law, and this Committee now entertain hopes that the desired improvement will be soon effected.

The Committee state with regret that no benefit has yet resulted from an act passed in the last year of His present Majesty, for cutting a navigable Canal from St. John's to Chambly; nor does it appear that any funds have been specially appropriated by the Legislature to enable the Executive to carry the act into effect.

The hardships and distress experienced by the Shipping trading to this Port, in consequence of the Ordinance of Quarantine Regulations, have not been lost sight of by this committee, the measures which originated with the former Committee, have been followed up but without success, a Bill was introduced into the Legislature last Session for the appropriation of the said Ordinance, but a prorogation took place before it was passed.

It was the general expectation last Autumn, that the then next Session of the Imperial Parliament would be pregnant with important changes in the Colonial Policy of the Empire, and that it would be attended with much advantage to this Country to have an Agent in London to watch over our more immediate interests—under this impression, and to defray the expenses of such agent, a sum was therefore subscribed here and at Montreal, and the Committee consider themselves particularly fortunate in having been able to secure the services of a Gentleman in that capacity, equally well informed of the state and wants of the Country, as zealous to promote its advancement. The Committee have also much satisfaction in stating that the Honourable expressed himself most favourably towards the object of the mission, and was pleased to promise to the Agent his cordial support. The Agent on leaving this country was furnished with ample instructions for his government, and acquitted himself much to the satisfaction of this Committee.

Although in consequence of the many recent changes which had taken place in the English Ministry, and the consequent dislike to legislate on subjects which might involve the most powerful interests of the country, all the advantages expected from this mission have not been realized, yet much has been effected, and the Committee have much pleasure in stating, on the report of their Agent, that His Majesty's Ministers appear to be more favourably disposed towards this country, and will be ready to do every thing in their power to promote its interests, whenever it can be done without compromising others equally important.

The Committee conceive it unnecessary to state particularly what has been effected among others, are the admission of our Grain and Flour into Great Britain for a limited time, on low duties, and secondly, and above all, most likely to be immediately accomplished—these designs, however, are now submitted to you.

"I did hope that I might have been able to state to the General Meeting to day, a report of the amount placed upon the Subscription List, which would be completed, but several of them have not yet been returned—and considerable additions may yet, therefore, be expected.

"On this subject I beg further to say, that I believe some misunderstanding, or want of arrangement has been felt—I am happy to think of no consequence—as it is not intended to close the subscription at present, a better arrangement may be adopted hereafter.—I ought, perhaps, further to state, that a most liberal offer had been made in New-York, to contribute to the subscription list, and although it had not been intended to go beyond the limits of Canada on the subject, yet I have accepted the offer as the expression of these liberal feelings.

"There remains only one point more for me to remark upon, but it is one which I feel as peculiarly calling for an explanation. It is the idea, that it may, by some, be thought good presumption in any individual to step and act upon a matter of such high public interest as this is, without having previously shown that the public, (I mean the Legislature of the Province) has not chosen to undertake the work; to this, Gentlemen, I have only to say, that if it appears proper to submit the subject, and also our progress in it, to the consideration of the Legislature; but I would also prepare the means of working upon the smaller funds, should my public recommendation be of the greatest weight.

"I shall, by and by, beg leave to propose a small committee of management in all minor details, but always with the idea of renewing my calls for General Meetings, as our progress shall advance.

"I now leave the subject, Gentlemen, to yourselves."

His Excellency then named the following Committee:

The Honorable the Chief Justice,—Chairman.

Mr. Henry Tatheresau,

Major General Darling,

Lieut. Colonel Cockburn, R. A.

Captain Young, 79th Highlanders,

Captain Mellmish, R. E.

Mr. George Pemberton.

The Chief Justice then moved the thanks of the meeting to his Excellency the Governor General for the pains he had taken in bringing this interesting subject before them, which was carried unanimously,—when the meeting was adjourned.

The original site of the now proposed Monument, or Pillar, was fixed at a spot near the centre of the Place d'Armes. It was found, however, on examination, that its height and prominency would be lost amid the spires and buildings of the city; and in case of a future intention to that part of the vicinity of the Chateau, it might, some time or other, be found improperly or inconveniently placed. An improved site has therefore been chosen, inside the Gate way of the Lower Garden; where the Pillar will always be a conspicuous object, both to Vessels arriving from sea, and to Steam Boats from Montreal.

We understand that the arrangements for disrobing infinitely better qualified than I am; and it is therefore my principal object in calling this meeting to day, to hear the opinions and suggestions of all who may be disposed to express them.

"As the first place, however, I beg permission to present to you the two drawings or designs, which are the performance and composition of Capt. Young of the 79th Regt. I think, I may take the liberty with him to say, that these are produced from repeated conversations he and I had on this subject, during our daily walks last winter: they are subject to revisal, to alteration, and even to a total abandonment of them for others, if other suggestions shall be made; or larger means than we have calculated upon shall be found. But on this point, I would particularly impress upon your consideration, that I do not propose any splendid trophy equal to the great names, the subject of it. A monument worthy of General Wolfe, and worthy of England, has been placed in Westminster Abbey. My only object is to remove a subject of general regret, "that in Quebec nothing is found to honor the memory of Wolfe, nothing more than if his great achievements had been effected in the centre of the desarts of unknown to us."—Thus limiting our views, I think a plain Column, simple and unpretending in its architecture, the most fit, and the least obnoxious to public criticism; I think it the most becoming, on economical grounds, and above all, most likely to be immediately accomplished—these designs, however, are now submitted to you.

"I did hope that I might have been able to state to the General Meeting to day, a report of the amount placed upon the Subscription List, which would be completed, but several of them have not yet been returned—and considerable additions may yet, therefore, be expected.

"On this subject I beg further to say, that I believe some misunderstanding, or want of arrangement has been felt—I am happy to think of no consequence—as it is not intended to close the subscription at present, a better arrangement may be adopted hereafter.—I ought, perhaps, further to state, that a most liberal offer had been made in New-York, to contribute to the subscription list, and although it had not been intended to go beyond the limits of Canada on the subject, yet I have accepted the offer as the expression of these liberal feelings.

MONUMENT OF WOLFE AND MONTCALM

At a general meeting of the Subscribers for erecting a Monument to the Memory of Wolfe and Montcalm, held at the Castle of St. Lewis, on the first instant, His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief in the Chair.

His Excellency addressed the meeting in a speech of which the following is an extract:—

"Gentlemen, I feel it peculiarly my duty to address this meeting to day, as having taken the lead in proposing to public consideration a subject chiefly interesting to the public in and near Quebec.

"When I first notified the proposal of raising a monument to the memory of Generals Wolfe and Montcalm, I did not presume to offer any advice, nor did I urge feelings, that had prompted to my own mind the undertaking of such a work—these I was sure would come forward unbidden by me—but I did suggest a meeting for the purpose of considering the most proper mode of carrying into effect the object in view, and I did hope that I might have been able to state to the General Meeting to day, a report of the amount placed upon the Subscription List, which would be completed, but several of them have not yet been returned—and considerable additions may yet, therefore, be expected.

"On this subject I beg further to say, that I believe some misunderstanding, or want of arrangement has been felt—I am happy to think of no consequence—as it is not intended to close the subscription at present, a better arrangement may be adopted hereafter.—I ought, perhaps, further to state, that a most liberal offer had been made in New-York, to contribute to the subscription list, and although it had not been intended to go beyond the limits of Canada on the subject, yet I have accepted the offer as the expression of these liberal feelings.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1827.

It is mentioned in the Montreal Gazette, that a Gentleman from New York, brings information of the arrival of the Packet Ship of 16th Oct., from Liverpool. Our late papers however have dates to 3d Oct. only, and do not contain any further news than what has been already communicated. We may shortly expect to have later intelligence; and from appearances, that, which will be of an important nature.

Unavoidable absence from the Office this week has prevented us, giving that attention to our Editorial duties, we could have wished. Our feelings hardly ever for papers, we see that the Canadian Freemen, is in a monstrous bad humor—more so if possible than usual—things do not appear to be going on exactly to suit his fancy. The Canuck, is not altogether to tractable a body, as he last promised himself—and he has abused them just as much as he dare—for it would not do, to go too far with them—from the account he gives of them however, there is not a spark of Patriotism about them—and all because they will think for themselves, and not submit altogether to be governed by him. The Caucus has not, and adjourned to the third Tuesday in December—no progress reported however—it will give time says the Advocate "to ascertain public opinion." We think they had better at once, offer for tenders, to any respectable person who will come forward and assist them in their dilemma, by offering himself as a Candidate for their support. The Freemen says he is disgusted with "the U. E. Loyalist"—this is nothing new to us—he has told us the same thing over and over again—we will give him credit for wishing the paper, out of existence, but he must take the file, it will survive his utmost rage. As a private and personal subject of the Freemen, are becoming more and more evident, and even the Caucus themselves, must we think begin to be convinced, that to meet his praises, they must make up their minds, to smother their own opinions, and place themselves completely under his control—then will he blazon them, to the world, as Patriots of the first order.

The Editor of the Advocate hopes, that the people will give him a chance, "within the Walls of Parliament." It is in this manner that he announces his intention of offering himself as a Candidate for the County of York. If the Advocate should get "within the walls of Parliament," and make such dis-orderly speeches, as he did at the Election meeting some time ago, the very walls we should think, would cry out against him, and call for his being placed without their bounds. As the Canuck appear to be so much at a loss for a man for the Town, perhaps the Advocate himself might answer the purpose, Justice well as any other body—and in event, it would be advisable perhaps for the Advocate to mention the matter to some of his Canuck friends—they might do something for him. We would recommend him not to lose so "good a chance," when according to his own account, there would not be "a shadow of doubt," against him.

The Horrors of Starvation.

Letter from James Nogle, to his Brother Thomas in the Country.

York, 23d Nov. 1827.

My dear Tom,

will lose no time in coming to Town, with a load of Provisions. Bring any thing and every thing with you, that you may consider eatable. Its a horrible device, but we are determined to lay in regular supplies for the seige. In the way of drinkables, I am pretty well off; together with the Barrel of Cider you sent me, I have been fortunate enough to procure a Cask of Hollowells best, and these with the Bay full of water at hand will be enough, unless they should plant a line of Cancus men along the Bank and prevent us getting water —our dependance must then be, on the Snow and Icicles, about our houses. The Advocate man Mr. M'Kenzie, says the U. E. Loyalist, shall be starved *containing*ly—how this means I don't know, but I think it matters little how a man is to be starved, so that he is starved at last. He of the U. E. has been making preparations I am told, for the occasion, by practising the last week, under the direction of the fomily, putting himself on low diet—but I promise you I have no ides whatever of following such a system, and shall depend upon you, to keep me well supplied. Rumour says that, it is in contemplation to divide Parliament, not as usual into Yea & Nays, but into "to be starved" and "not to be starved"—provisions of every kind—board and lodging are to be withheld from those who think differently from the Caucus, and when they are starved out of their opinions, then they say there will be an end to all Executive influence, and they then promise themselves, that things will go on smoothly enough. The Freeman, pledges himself, to be ready when necessary, to lend his aid, towards carrying on "active operations," in this great work. I shall write to you occasionally to let you know how things are going on—there is nothing else new just now, except, a discovery lately made, that the Lawyers, Rolph, Bidwell, and Beardsley, are just as great men, as Marcus, Tullius, Cicero, and John Philpot Curran.—Hurry down with the Provisions, and believe me

The Army.

Horse Guards, August 24, 1827.

His Majesty being desirous of holding out further encouragement to officers on half-pay, to become settlers in New South Wales and Van Dieman's land, has been pleased, in reference to the General Orders of the 8th of June, and 16th May, 1827, to command that the following inducements shall be promulgated to the army, for the information of those officers who may be disposed to avail themselves of the benefit of this arrangement.

All officers on half-pay who purchased and were reduced, whatever may be the period of their service, on half-pay, or who did not purchase, but who after having served 20 years, half of which on full-pay, have been reduced, or have retired on half-pay, on account of wounds or imparied health, shall be exempted from that part of the regulation contained in the General Order of the 8th of June, 1826, which requires of the officer to relinquish one-third of the value of his commission to the Crown, and shall be allowed to receive the full value of such commission, in the same manner as officers on full-pay, who having purchased their commissions, or having served twenty years are desirous of selling out for the same object.

His Majesty has further been pleased to command that this advantage shall be extended to officers of all ranks, whether on full-pay retired pay, or half-pay; but that in the two latter classes, all sales shall be subjected to the condition and restrictions established by the General Order of the 2d May, 1825, notwithstanding that a large portion of the officers on half-pay would be excluded thereby from sale; and in order that the government may have full security for the appropriation of the sums produced by the sales of the commissions to the intended purpose, it is his Majesty's command that the Agent to whom the purchase money be paid shall be instructed to retain in his hand one third of the amount in each case, to be paid to the officer who proposes to emigrate, and who shall have obtained permission to dispose of his commission or half-pay, with that view, upon his producing to the agent a certificate, signed by the master of the vessel for the time of proceeding direct to the colony.—By his Majesty's command,

HENRY TORRENS, Adjutant-Gen.

From the St. John City Gazette, Oct. 24.

We have learned, with much surprise and pleasure, that a rich and deep vein of Iron ORE, has been discovered, existing in this City. A knowledge of its locality was communicated, last week, to his Excellency the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, who, being favorably impressed from the information, had from a specimed of the Ore, then exhibited, expressed a wish to examine personally, the formation and extent of the vein; and we have the best authority for stating, that his visit resulted in a strong opinion of its importance.—Some farther specimens were selected on the spot, by his Excellency, in order to their being submitted to an analysis, and the public will, doubtless, soon be put in possession of more particular information.

For this discovery, we are indebted to Mr. SEARS, whose successful exploration in King's and Westmoreland Counties, was noticed a few days since.

The bed of Ore is situated nearly on a line with Union-street, on the declivity of the high lands about the Government Building at the head of King-street. The inclination of the vein, is similar to that which characterises those found in Nova-Scotia.

Lower Canada.

Bills of Indictment have been found by the Grand Inquest of this District against the Printers and Publishers of the CANADIAN SPECTATOR and the SPECTATEUR CANADIEN—Montreal Gazette.

The season of navigation is almost at a close. The MONTREAL we understand has gone to her Winter quarters at La Tortue; and the greater part of the other boats are now making their last trip for the season to Quebec.

The Ground has been covered with snow since Wednesday morning three or 4 inches deep and carrioles, trains, &c. are common as in the middle of the winter. This unusually early fall of snow, should it remain, will put an end to agricultural pursuits for the season. It will also be productive of serious loss to many, as all the root crops were not housed. One person who furnishes our markets with a great quantity of vegetables, informs us that upwards of £75 worth of his crop is out yet, which will be lost to him unless the earth is again softened by a thaw and the snow dissolved, ere the real winter sets in.—Canadian Courant.

The weather which during the last week has been unusually severe, and threatened an early winter, grew more mild in the course of yesterday, and during the night a heavy rain fell; appearances are now in favor of open weather, for a short period at least, which will, no doubt, be actively improved by those who still have vessels to despatch.

The ceremony of laying the first stone of the intended Monument to WOLFE and MONTCALM will take place on Thursday morning next, at 11 o'clock, with Masonic honours.—The Troops in Garrison will also parade on the occasion.—Quebec Mercury.

One day lately a scuffle took place between two soldiers and a number of carters in this city, which it is feared will be fatal in its consequence to one of the parties. The circumstances as we have been informed are as follows:—A carter was driving his horse through the street in a furious manner near the Newmarket, and in his hurry nearly run over a child but which was saved by one of the soldiers snatching it out of the way of the horse. When the child was taken out of danger the soldier remonstrated with the carter on his improper conduct—the latter replied in a surly manner, which led to a challange to fight.—The whole repaired to Chamber-Pot-Meadow to settle the dispute, a number of other carters following—but instead of the two disputants being allowed fair play, about eight or nine carters commenced beating the soldiers, who from the superior numbers of their foes were easily overcome, and beaten.—One of the carters was taken to the hospital, very much disfigured and bruised.—The carters were committed to prison, and are to take their trial for the cowardly outrage.—Canadian Courant.

CIVIL SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
QUEBEC, 24th Nov. 1827.

His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief having been requested through His Majesty's Minister for the Colonies, to procure such information as can be obtained respecting a man of the name of JOHN GEORGE PROSSY, a native of Billingshack, in Wurtemberg, a Cooper, by Trade, who is stated lived in the year 1794. (the last time his friends in Wurtemberg heard from him) at Montreal, in the St. Lawrence Suburbs, and had two children, one a boy then 6 years, and a girl 11 years of age.

All persons who can give any information respecting this individual or his children, are requested to address the same to the undersigned, in order that it may be forwarded to their relatives.

A. W. COCHRAN,
Civil Secretary.

On Thursday, at half-past eleven o'clock, we had the pleasure of witnessing the very imposing and interesting ceremony of laying the first stone of the Column to be erected, by private subscription, to the memory of WOLFE and MONTCALM, on the site chosen is inside the Garden Gate in Cartiers Square, but although the spot at present forms part of the private Garden of the CHATEAU, the public may rely that the platform on which the Monument will be built, will be as open to them as the street itself. A square space, level with the street, will be inclosed, in which the pillar will stand, protected by an iron railing. This platform will be open on the side adjoining the street, and the public will have a walk round it, four or five feet in breadth. Steps will be made leading down into the garden, as is the case at present. We are more particular in this description, as we understand, some misconception has existed on the subject.—Official Gazette.

His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief laid the first stone.

We shall give a particular account of this ceremony on Tuesday next, when we shall be enabled to publish the address of His Excellency, with the admirable prayers offered by Dr. Mills and Harkness, and the inscription on the brass plate, let into the stone.

We understand that the Surveyor General has returned to Quebec, having minutely examined the whole of the Ottawa District, and all the Seigniories on the North of the St. Lawrence, in the District of Montreal. The result is, a mass of valuable statistical information, of which the public will, in due time, receive the benefit. The progress of the settlements both on the Ottawa, and in the Seigniories, is reported to be very great. But considerable inconveniences are still found in the want of direct communication by roads, from place to place, and thence to the nearest principal Town. We are happy to state that the Seigniors and Curés and the Gentlemen of the Seminary of Montreal, have afforded general assistance and co-operation in the objects of the Tour.—Official Gazette.

Statute Labor.—Some idea may be formed of the amount of Statute Labor annually performed, or at least which ought to be performed, on the Roads throughout the Province, by a reference to the Assessed value of property, and the proportion of labor required by law on that Assessment. This assessed value as near as can be collected from actual returns, on which the several District rates are collected, amounts to about Two Millions and a quarter, and taking the average individual assessments at £200, for which sum, seven days Statute Labor are required, it yields in round numbers, 74,000 days labor, annually expended on the Roads. The wages of a day laborer in this Country may be reckoned at 3*s.* 9*d.*—supposing therefore that a composition was made at the reduced rate of 2*s.* per day, it would produce the sum of £7,400 per annum. The labor of those who are not rated on any Assessment list, but who are nevertheless called upon by law to perform two days each, is not included in this calculation—the amount is no doubt very considerable. With the above sum, we believe it will not be denied that, double the quantity of work could be performed, and in a more substantial manner, by giving out the roads in sections, under Contract, subject to the inspection and approval of Overseers, than what is effected by the present system of Statute Labor. It may be objected that in many cases, individuals would find it difficult to pay in money. This objection is certainly entitled to consideration, but it might in a great measure be removed, by fixing a certain standard, at which the composition in money should commence. It might for example be declared that all persons whose Assessments did not amount to £200, should have the option of giving their labor, or commuting at the rate of 2*s.* per day; and that all whose Assessments amounted to, or exceeded that sum, should pay in money at the same rate.—This we think, could scarcely in any instance operate as a hardship, as the individual in the one case could consult his own convenience, and in the other, it cannot be supposed that, a person whose property exceeded the assessed value of £200, at the very moderate rate which the law fixes, could find any serious difficulty in paying 15*s.* 10*d.* or 18*s.* per annum as the ease might be, independent of the consideration that the number of days he would otherwise have to labor on the Roads, might be employed in other and perhaps more useful occupations, making in the end a saving to himself; besides the prospect of having the Highway on which he has to travel all the year round, put in a much better state of improvement, than can be expected from the present system. An available fund might also be provided by this means, for the construction and repair of Bridges, an object of the utmost importance to many parts of the Country, which is not attainable by Statute Labor, and cannot at all times be provided for, from the ordinary District rates. As a proof of the advantage of such a system, we have only to mention the great improvements which have taken place in this Town and in Kingston, where the labor is commuted for in money, which is expended under the direction of overseers; and as a further proof of what may be done by pursuing such a plan, we may notice the successful operations of a Society in the Midland District, in the Townships of Kingston and Ernestown, whose voluntary subscriptions expended in Contracts judiciously allotted, have made a good road, where for many years before, the Statute Labor in those populous Townships, had been expended to very little purpose. The tract through which this road passes was almost impracticable, but from the well directed exertions of the Society, it will now bear a comparison with any other part of the Country, enjoying superior advantages for the formation of Roads. The fact, that the people in many other parts of the Country are entering into subscriptions for improving the Roads, is additional evidence, that the present system is not so judicious as it might be. Year after year, increased quantities of Statute labor have been expended, and yet our Roads are in a miserable state. The subject we hope will meet with attention from our Legislature.

The Colonial Advocate of 22d ult., speaking of the prorogation of our Parliament, says "from the manner of the prorogation, it is probable it will not meet even then." From language such as this, many might be led to suppose, that the "manner" of proroguing the Parliament in this instance, was different from what is usually observed. This is not the case—we know of none other, than one "manner" of proroguing the Parliament, and the present Proclamation differs not from the usual "manner." We are at a loss to conceive what the Advocate could mean by such expressions.

The Montreal Gazette informs us, that the Grand Jury for that District, has found Bills of Indictment, in our last number, have drawn down upon us another discharge of the Freeman's ire. He must be an ill tempered being, or be never would fly into such monstrous passions, at a time when he tells us that, he has us in his power—when we are as he says, "prostrate" at his feet. There is a great want of magnanimity in such conduct. Our object he says is, "to divide" the Election Committee, and thus "weaken and destroy the independent Interest." The Committee we suppose will follow their own inclinations, and others no doubt will do the same. Our object has always been, to leave every person free to act for himself. The Freeman however from a personal object, has got a Caucus appointed to dictate to the Town;—to this Caucus he would in turn dictate, if he could, and thus "destroy" the freedom of Election altogether, which would become centered in the immaculate Freeman.—Then indeed the thing would be sung enough, and just to his liking. The people may act as they please under these circumstances, and so may the Committee; but it equals any Yankee Caucusing we ever heard of, and the Freeman, from the "prominent part" which he says himself, he has taken, may be considered as entitled to the distinguished appellation of King Caucus. He would have his subjects pay implicit obedience to his mandates, but much to his annoyance they seem inclined to exercise the freedom of opinion, for which he has previously been so strenuous an advocate. His "promising Candidate" must be the man, "without regard to family, profession, or creed"—and he might have added, without respect to the opinions, feelings, or inclinations, of any other person, except his own. If the Committee "lose sight" of the "main object" of the Freeman, he tells them in terms not to be misunderstood that, they must expect his opposition—terrible consequence!—their names will not then be recorded in the columns of the Freeman as Patriots; on the contrary they must then expect to be re in that abuse, which he so lavishly bestows, on those who dare to differ in opinion with him. The Committee will no doubt beware how they offer offence to this doughty Patriot, who although he makes so much noise about independence, would circumscribe the term to whatever it might please him to dictate. The fact appears to be that, the Freeman is determined to have the naming of the Candidate, and every person who shall refuse to support his nomination, by voting for any other than his "promising Candidate," is threatened with the weight of his displeasure. We only ask those who are interested, to read the lucubrations, which have appeared in the two or three last numbers of his paper, and then say whether the object of the Freeman, is not evident enough.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

James Nogle, to his Brother Thomas in the Country.

York, 27 Nov. 1827.

My Dear Tom,

Thanks to your kind exertions, I am now so well supplied, that I think I can set the Courier at defiance, even if they should persist in the determination of attempting to starve us out—But to tell you the truth altho' their proceedings are kept as quiet as those of the Inquisition, yet from some scraps of information which leak out now and then, I am inclined to think, that they will not carry on the war, as vigorously as they at first proposed. Rumor says that they are divided in opinion, and that a reconciliation can be brought to yield, it might become necessary to introduce the starving system among themselves; this may cause them to shew a little tender mercy to others. After all, this starving people out of their opinions, is a queer way of convincing them that they are in error—methinks it is a mode more suitable to the dark ages, than the present enlightened period. The Freeman paper will have it, that Ralph, Bidwell, and Beardsley are Patriots—now this is his opinion—he has a right to enjoy it, and much good may it do him; but I should never think of starving them out of it. If Marcus Tullius Cicero, was permitted to revisit this Earth, how much pleasure would he have in meeting these his equals, and shaking the worthies by the hand. The Freeman too, although too modest to speak vauntingly of himself, would no doubt be warmly greeted, and honored with a squeeze—the Advocate man too, would be another of the "equals" of a friendly grip. His Patriotism he expects will get him dubbed M. P. P., and he is going among you in the Country, in order that you may give him "a chance," but I am sadly afraid he will be out of Parliament. The Caucus, among whom he is well known, will not hear to his offering for the Town, and the Freeman is quite too modest, to think of such a thing. Lawyer Boulton will be in opposition with them now, and they have taken time to think about it. The Freeman is determined to make them "do their duty"—if he can—that is, to do as he desires them—but I guess, Lawyer is more than a match, but I believe there are some headstrong chaps, who will have an opinion of their own in spite of him, and will express it too—As soon as I hear, who is their man I will write and let you know.

Yours, &c.
JAMES NOGLE.

Mr. Thomas Nogle,
Adjala.

The Editor of the U. E. Loyalist, is requested by "a Hater of Hypocrites," to insert in his paper, a Communication which appears in the last Kingston Chronicle, relating more particularly to the University about to be established at York.

Kingston, 24th Nov. 1827.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CHRONICLE.

It was my intention, when I first addressed you, to have noticed the misstatements of the different writers who have disputed the accuracy of Doctor Strachan's letter to Mr. Wilmot Horton, but as those contests have now to a great extent concluded their angry assaults, I deem it most convenient and advantageous to delay my remarks until I have full knowledge of every ground of complaint upon which they work their elaborate productions. In the mean time I shall offer a few remarks to a portion of the public, with a view of dispelling the prejudice which ignorance and Malice are endeavouring to excite against the University which, through the patriotic zeal, and perseverance of Dr Strachan, has been established in this favored Province.

Before entering into the subject, however, I would premise, that every objection which is made by those persons who retain or have acquired British feelings, and a love of British Laws and Government, and not to that class of persons who assail the University because it is not of their party religious denomination, Roman Catholics as well as others, may reside in or near the University, and train up the youth of their persuasion, even to become Clergymen of which there are many instances in the latter respect, and that does not arise from any fault in the charter of the University. By a regulation of the College, no youth, no person can be admitted to Holy Orders in the Church of England, who has not been educated in a Scotch University.

One other remark, with reference to this clause of the charter, it has been erroneously imagined, that there can be no Professors belonging to the University but such as are members of the Church of England—this is a mistake. "The Council," which, as I have already stated is to be composed of the Chancellor, President, and seven Professors, must be of that religion, but all others may be of any other faith, as the charter gives no power or conferring every degree usually conferred at Oxford and Cambridge. it is probable that more than twice seven Professors will be required in the course of a short time.

Having now made all the remarks which occur to me as necessary with reference to the first objection, I shall proceed to the consideration of the second, viz—that the Upper Canada—and the people of Britain—with the exception of the very few, to whom actual observation had taught the fallacy of such an idea—were thence induced to believe that a new Metropolis was growing up on the banks of the Upper Canadian Thames. It will, therefore, be a matter of surprise to many, when they are informed, that, until within the last eighteen months, this Town was not even in contemplation, and that the spot upon which it was marked was in the centre of an uncultivated forest.—Within the period above mentioned, however, the public attention, has been fixed upon this favorite situation, as the seite for the District Town, and in consequence where, latter, not a tree was felled, all has now become bustle and activity. A considerable tract of country has been cleared—roads laid out—bridges built—and, between 20 and 30 buildings, about half of Frame, have been erected—including a temporary Jail and Court House—a very respectable Tavern—a Blacksmith's Shop—a Brewery (erecting)—one or two small Merchant's Shops and some very good Dwelling Houses.—The site is a very handsome one, at the forks of the Thames, but, to depart from the principles which have, I believe, invariably governed them in all similar cases, viz. that Universities within the British dominions, out of Scotland, should be governed by members of the Church of England: witness Oxford, Cambridge, Trinity College, the establishments in the East Indies, Nova-Scotia, &c Not even all the power which immense wealth and political influence given to the Governors of the London University, has as yet induced a departure from this rule; how then, could it be expected in the instance of King's College? In this state of the question I may again ask, will the members of the Church of Scotland, and others to whom I particularly address myself, say that they would rather see the Province without an University wherein, according to the language of the Charter, "Youth are to be educated in the principles of the Christian Religion, and instructed in the various branches of Science and Literature," than that its Council should be composed of persons who are members of the Church of England? The reply to this question cannot be doubted; but I will proceed a step further, and I will put it to the intelligent and dispassionate to answer, whether, upon mature consideration, they think it desirable that there should be a difference of opinion in Religious matters among the members of the Council? Let men capable of calm reflection contemplate the evils which might, and in all probability would result to the University from a division of sentiment upon the most important point connected with its establishment; and I think that the objection, if not entirely removed, will be in their minds at least materially weakened. A house divided against itself cannot stand; and for myself, I without hesitation affirm, that rather than see the Council composed of persons some Episcopalians and some Presbyterians; I should prefer its being composed exclusively of the latter. There are, I am aware, men there who are well known for all the Professors of those establishments take the oath of allegiance, the profession of faith; and that they have the power, although not always exercised, of administering the same to Students before receiving any degree.—Indeed, I believe it to be an undeniable, that the Presbytery has complete power over all Colleges, Seminaries, and Schools, within its bounds, and may thereby, if it pleases, cause them to be the profession of faith, but even require every teacher of a common school to do the same; nay, every person, young or old, may be compelled to comply with these tests, before the laws in force by which they are enforced are not obsolete, but have from time to time been acted upon. These facts, I would observe, are not mentioned with any design to censure, but merely for the purpose of showing that when the liberality of the British Universities is called in question, especially that of Upper Canada, in the matter of tests, it is with little reason—at least, so far as our Presbyterian neighbours are concerned. I have extended this Communication far beyond the limits I had assigned myself when I first put pen to paper, but trust I have omitted to urge many points on the consideration of those I have taken the liberty to address, that might be important to notice; still, I hope that what I have written, may have the effect of inducing a number of my readers to a calm, dispassionate, unprejudiced consideration of their true interests, and that of their children, and the country of their birth or adoption, that they may be induced to withdraw their and the base efforts of the malignant and disaffected, to have the effect of inducing them to withhold their support from an establishment, the progress of which has hitherto been connected with the rising greatness of Upper Canada.

A HATER OF HYPOCRITES.

Kingston, Nov. 20, 1827.

P. S.—Since writing the above, I have seen in the Montreal Herald of the 17th Inst. a communication signed PHILALETHES, the reasoning in which in some respects corresponds with that I have stated above, and I am happy to find myself agreeing in opinion with so spirited a writer. Apropos of the Montreal Herald.—This paper for many years occupied a place among the first rank of respectable journals in these Provinces; it then descended its station; lately, however, whether from a change of Editor, or other cause, it has fallen, greatly fallen, from its former character. Silliness of invention, weakness of argument, and vulgar personal slander, are now its distinguishing features.

Domestic.

NEW TOWN OF LONDON.—Almost as long ago as we can remember, a Town of the above name was projected, which was to be the Upper Canada—and the people of Britain—with the exception of the very few, to whom actual observation had taught the fallacy of such an idea—were thence induced to believe that a new Metropolis was growing up on the banks of the Upper Canadian Thames. It will, therefore, be a matter of surprise to many, when they are informed, that, until within the last eighteen months, this Town was not even in contemplation, and that the spot upon which it was marked was in the centre of an uncultivated forest.—Within the period above mentioned, however, the public attention, has been fixed upon this favorite situation, as the seite for the District Town, and in consequence where, latter, not a tree was felled, all has now become bustle and activity. A considerable tract of country has been cleared—roads laid out—bridges built—and, between 20 and 30 buildings, about half of Frame, have been erected—including a temporary Jail and Court House—a very respectable Tavern—a Blacksmith's Shop—a Brewery (erecting)—one or two small Merchant's Shops and some very good Dwelling Houses.—The site is a very handsome one, at the forks of the Thames,

Varieties.

QUIBBLE AGAINST QUIBBLE.

Some years ago, Fredrick Reynolds, the dramatist, took it into his head to publish his own memoirs, and himself (as he thought) to paint the inside once during the seven years' lease: but in a subsequent avowment, which, if Reynolds read, he did not understand, there was too much technicality and ground for quibbling as to the exact period for commencing the aforesaid coloured operation, that at the end of the first year, the landlord (a most litigious and vexatious character) brought an action for breach of contract, but which the eccentric dramatist defeated by immediately pulating the whole of the inside of the house—black!

Zeal against Government seems suicidal and unaccountable; but zeal in favour of Government is natural; for every man of property, whose value would be annihilated by Anarchy—every man of business down his employment would cease—every one who hopes for property knows his chance of acquisition would end—every laborer knows there would be no more regular work—every lover of order, and peace, and quiet knows that would be substituted by the reverse. He might be the happiest who was the first martyr.—N. E. Palladium.

WORSHIP-STREET.—LEGAL DISTINCTIONS.—On Tuesday two youths, named Lexley and Browne, were charged with stealing a parrot from the premises of Mr. Cundale, Park-road, Dalston, at noon on Saturday last. It appeared that Mr. Cundale, seeing itself outside the cage when the prisoner, Lexley, fled off with her; she gave a scream which alarmed one of the servants, who called out "stop thief," in which the bird lustily joined, and so facilitated its recapture.

The bird was placed on the office-table, but its evidence was not required; and the prisoners were committed for the robbery, the prosecutor being advised to go at once before the Grand Jury, who were then sitting. In about half an hour Mr. G. Cundale returned, and said that the clerk of the indictments would not prefer a bill under the 7th and 8th Geo. IV. c. 29. s. 31., which states, "to steal any dog, beast, or bird, ordinarily kept in a state of confinement," and so the parrot was outside of the cage, and not ordinarily confined, the prisoners did not come within the meaning of the Act. The Magistrate then referred to the 74th section, and found he could fine the prisoners in the value of the property. He then fined both in the sum of £5 each, in addition to the value proved. (20s.) The money not being forthcoming, they were, under the said Act, committed to the House of Correction for four months.

THE SOLDIER'S FUNERAL.
By G. F. Richardson.

Hark! hark! mid the busy stir of life,
And the crowded city's hum,
I hear the thrilling tone of the fife,
And the roll of the distant drum!

But their alter'd tones chime sad and slow
To the mourner's silent tread;
For they breathe the hallowed dirge of wo,
The solemn march of the dead!

And looks of maudlest grief are there,
And stern eyes drop a tear;
And soldiers falter as they bear
The youthful warrior's bier!

And see as that bier comes nigh—it brings
Bright arms—a useless show!
For he hath no need of those gaudy things
Who sleeps in the coffin below!

For the voice that gave the stern command
Hath sighed its latest breath;
And an infant now may snatch the brand
From his dull cold grasp of Death!

And the breast so true, and the brow so proud,
Are cold and senseless all;
He has changed for the coat of gail—the shroud,
For the warrior's cloak—the pall.

He would have hailed the dart that sped
His soul to a warrior's dom;
But a short and sickly path was spread,
To wash him to the tomb!

They have borne him to the sacred porch—
They have borne him to the grave;
And the last sad rites of the Holy Church
Are paid to the fallen brave!

They have breathed the funeral prayer and hymn—
They have fired the soldier's knell;
But it reached not, alas! the ear of him
Who sleeps in the narrow cell!

They have lowered the coffin dark and deep,
In the lonely hollow womb;
And the lady he loved may come to weep
This eve o'er her soldier's tomb.

POLICE.—BOW-STREET.

An Elephant Chase in the strand.

A little fat journeyman plumber, whose name did not appear, was brought up, charged in the watchhouse book with having committed an assault upon Mr. Cross, the proprietor of the Menagerie at Exeter Change.

Mr. Cross did not appear himself, but it was stated by one of the keepers that, having let one of the establishment out on hire to a showman, and the time being expired, Mr. C. and several of his assistants, went on Thursday night to fetch the animal home to his regular quarters. The Elephant was making his way peaceably along the Strand, under the guidance of his keepers, when the defendant came behind him, seized hold of his tail, and began twisting it about, laughing heartily, at the same time, at his own exploit. Mr. Cross remonstrated with him upon his folly, and told him he was not, perhaps, aware of the mischief which he might occasion by enraging the animal. He, however continued his "lark," as he called it, and Mr. Cross attempted to remove him, upon which being pot-valiant the little melter of lead put his fist in the face of the elephant's master, and taking another twist at the animal's tail, he ran away laughing.—The elephant took umbrage at this last attack, and turning round, he pursued the fugitive plumber with all his speed, in spite of the efforts of the keepers to restrain him. Away ran the plumber as fast as his short legs and his fat would permit, and close behind him strode the huge native of the East roaring and throwing about his trunk in a manner quite terrific to race, or rather chase, that lasted from near Newcastle street to St. Clements Church, where the plumber's legs, or his wind failed him so much, that the elephant got him within the reach of his trunk, and gave him a "wipe" (to use the phrase of the keeper) across the back, which assisted him to an elevation of several feet above his mother earth, and despatched him in a horizontal direction, a distance of several yards, when he came in contact with the railings of the church yard, and found his natural level. "I expected" said the keeper, "to find half the bones in his skin broken, but fortunately I was disappointed. I think it must be his fat that saved him." When they found that he was not materially hurt, they gave him in charge to the watch, as a punishment for his folly. They had considerable difficulty in appeasing the wrath of the elephant, and conducting him safely home—The keeper added, that Mr. Cross had no wish to press the case, as he thought the defendant's fright and imprisonment would deter him from meddling with an animal so much above his own caliber in future.

The defendant looked very silly, and said nothing.

Sir R. Birnie said, the defendant was fortunate in meeting with so humane a man as Mr. Cross, for if he appeared against him, he (Sir R. B.) should certainly have made the give bail. His folly might have occasioned the death of half a dozen people. He should discharge him, with a caution never again to catch hold of an elephant's tail.

Defendant—that you may depend upon it, Sir Richard, I never shall, said the defendant, bowing very low. He was then discharged upon paying the fee.

THE CONJUGATING DUTCHMAN.

We know not where the following story came from; but, as it gives a droll picture of a methodical and persevering Dutchman, it may not prove unentertaining.—Two English gentlemen once stepped into a coffe house in Paris, where they observed a tall, odd looking man, who appeared not to be a native, sitting at one of the tables, and looking around with the most stone-like gravity of countenance upon every object. Soon after the two Englishmen entered, one of them told the other that a celebrated dwarf had arrived at Paris. At this the grave looking personage above mentioned opened his mouth and spake; 'I arrive,' said he, 'thou arrivest, he arrives, we arrive, you arrive, they arrive' The Englishman whose remark seemed to have suggested this mysterious speech, stepped up to the stranger and asked, 'Did you speak to me, Sir?' 'I speak,' replied the stranger, 'thou speakest, he speaks, we speak, you speak.' 'How is this?' said the Englishman, 'do you mean to insult me?' The other replied, 'I insult, thou insultest, he insults, we insult, you insult, they insult.' 'This is too much,' said the Englishman: 'I will have satisfaction—if you have any spirit with your rudeness come along with me.' To this defiance the imperturbable stranger replied, 'I come, thou comest, he comes, we come, you come, they come;' and then resumed his former gravity of coolness, and followed his challenger. In those days, when every gentleman wore a sword, duels were speedily dispatched. They went into a neighbouring alley, and the Englishman unsheathing his weapon, said to his antagonist, Now, Sir, you must fight me.' 'I fight,' replied the other, drawing his sword, 'thou fightest, he fights, we fight—here he made a thrust—you fight, they fight;' and here he disarmed his adversary. 'Well,' said the Englishman, 'you have the best of it, and I hope you are satisfied.' 'I am satisfied,' said the original, shedding his sword, 'thou art satisfied, I am glad every body is satisfied,' said the Englishman; 'but pray leave off quizzing me in this strange manner, and tell me what is your object, if you have any, in doing so.' The grave gentleman now, for the first time, became intelligible. 'I am a Dutchman,' said he, and am learning your language. I find it very difficult to remember the peculiarities of the verbs, and my tutor has advised me, in order to fix them in my mind, to conjugate every English verb that I hear spoken. This I have made it a rule to do, and I don't like to have my plans broken in upon while they are in operation, or I would have told you of this before." The Englishman laughed heartily at this explanation, and invited the conjugating Dutchman to dine with them, 'I will dine,' replied he. 'thou wilt dine, he will dine, we will dine' you will dine, they will dine, we will all dine together.' This they accordingly did, and it was difficult to say whether the Dutchman ate or conjugated with most perseverance."

RAMSDEN THE OPTICIAN.

It was his custom to retire in the evening to what he considered the most comfortable corner in the house, and take his seat close to the kitchen fireside, in order to devise some plan for forming a new instrument, or scheme for the improvement of one already made. There, with his drawing implements on the table before him, a cat sitting on the one side, and a certain quantity of barnal, butter, and a small mug of porter placed on the other side, while four or five appreticers commonly made up the circle, he amused himself with either whistling his favourite air, or sometimes singing the old ballad of

"If she is not so true to me,
What care I to whom she be?
What care I, what care I, to whom she be!"

and appeared, in this domestic group, contentedly happy. When he occasionally sent for a workman, to give him necessary directions concerning what he wished to have done he first showed the recent finished plan, then explained the different parts of it, and generally concluded by saying, 'this is the greatest good humour, "Now sar, man, let us try to find fault with it;" and thus, by putting two heads together, to scrutinize his own performance, some alteration was probably made for the better. But, whatever expense an instrument had cost in forming, if it did not fully answer the intended design, he would immediately say, after a little examination of the work, "Boise, man! this will not do, we must have at it again;" and then the whole of that was put aside, and a new instrument begun. By means of such perseverance, he succeeded in bringing various mathematical, pill-osphical, and astronomical instruments to perfection. The large theodolite for terrestrial measurements, and the equal altitude instrument for astronomy, will always be monuments of his fertile, penetrating, arduous, superior genius! There cannot be a lover (especially of this more difficult part) of philosophy, in any quarter of the globe, but must admire the abilities, and respect the memory, of Jesse Ramsden.

"The advantages of inoculation were formerly calculated thus:—Of one in seven die of the small-pox in the natural way, and one in three hundred and twelve by inoculation, then, as one million divided by 7 gives 142,857—one million divided by 312 gives 3,205. The lives saved by inoculation upon one million must be 139,653. A most surprising difference! but what would these calculators have said to any one who should have suggested that the period would arrive, when the chance of having the smallpox should be only equal to the chance of dying under the improvement of inoculation. Five hundred and three deaths from smallpox being the total within the bills of mortality for the year 1826, which on the average was formerly never less than four thousand."

Trade and Commerce.—The expectations of an improvement in the manufactures of the country, are happily becoming realized. In the course of the present year, between four and five thousand vessels have entered for the West India Docks, London Docks, and the quays at the port of London. On Monday last, twenty-two ships cleared, twenty-two of them being West Indiamen, with valuable cargoes. There is an increase already of more than 800 ships over the corresponding periods of the last year. The Stamp department, as well as the Excise and Customs, is in a very satisfactory state.—The great sums of money lately paid to the Government, for the different duties, by the mercantile men in the city, are a great proof of the revival of confidence. County Herald.

The silk-weaving is extending very rapidly round Leith; upwards of 200 looms are already employed, and several manufacturers are expected to commence there.

Bank of England.—On Thursday a general Court of Proprietors was held at the Bank, to consider of a dividend. The Chairman stated that the amount of bank notes at present in circulation varied very little in comparison with the amount in circulation at the Court in March last. The difference was scarcely £500,000. The amount of the circulation then was about £22,000,000. Mr. Young inquired, whether that amount included the issue of the Branch Banks? The Chairman replied in the affirmative. Mr. Young demanded what was the seperate amount of the issue of the Branch Bank? The Chairman said, that he could not answer that question. He should only reply now, as he had done to the same question in March last, that the issue by the Branch Banks was not a large proportion of the whole issue. A discussion ensued on the subject of the proposed dividend of four per cent; and finally the question was put in the affirmative, and carried.

Silk Trade in Coventry.—The trade here was perhaps never better than it has been during the past season. In consequence of so many hands being employed in the technically called lutestrings, being used for trimming bonnets, an extra quantity of Brutia silk was consumed, and that article has therefore very materially increased in price. Italian thrown silks are also said to be looking up. The buyers, we are informed, nearly cleared the warehouses last week of manufactured goods; and we have great pleasure in being able to congratulate our readers on the generally prosperous state of the trade.—Leeds Mercury.

A monthly line of packets has been established between New-York and Gibraltar.—The brig Bogota, a first rate vessel of her class, will sail on the 20th inst.

The London papers mention that within the short period of three years, nearly six hundred thousand pounds sterling worth of machinery has been exported from England for the use of foreign industry.

Madrid Sept. 23.—Gen. Monet, on the 11. instant, at Coaca del Tren, a large valley about a league from Tarragona, fought an action with the rebels, in which he had two horses killed under him, and was completely beaten. The rebels then drove him into Tarragona, where he has shut himself up with two regiments of Royal troops, they are now besieging him in that place.—His said to be the news of this fight, joined to that of the desertion to the insurgents of more than a third of the Royal troops, which has determined his Majesty to set out post.

The King has sent the Governor of Tarragona an order to go to Barcelona on the morning of the 27th, when his Majesty will arrive, and has invited the Central Junta of government established by the insurgents at Manresa to repair to Tarragona on the 29th, to confer with him, promising that there shall be none of the superior military or civil authorities at Tarragona now established there, and that he will enter alone with his suit and weak escort. It is doubted whether the Junta of the insurgents would obey this invitation.

Two regiments of royal troops, in going through a pass called the Colde Balaguer, were surprised and cut in pieces by 6000 insurgents, commanded by a stranger, whose name, and even country, is yet unknown here. The insurgents have lately circulated throughout Catalonia, even in Barcelona, a proclamation in the King's name, in which a full and perfect amnesty is granted for all political opinions and crimes, to all Spaniards, from 1808 to the present day. It is no longer bands which from the insurrection, but a levy en masse.

The last letters from Gallicia announce general discontent to be prevailing in that province; a general rising is apprehended there, in opposition to that in Catalonia. In Gallicia the cry would be,—Viva la Constitution.

Madrid, Sept. 25.—The King left the Escurial this morning.—Almost the whole of the Army of Observation has set out for Arragon, and a body of 8000 men are to assemble in the neighbourhood of Daroca, about fifteen leagues from Saragossa. Although the decree announced to the Council of Castile that the King will repair to Tarragona, his Majesty seems as if going to Barcelona, for the orders given here to the post-office are, for all despatches to be sent to the latter town.

The last report of M. Campo Alegrado announces that the insurgents have 6000 augmented men, the greater part of them old soldiers. His Excellency adds, that 20,000 may be estimated as the number who have arms in their hands, and in a greater or less state of organization.

Paris, Sept. 30.—A report is spread, that the affairs of the Greeks have taken a more favourable turn; that a Russian Consul to the Greek Government has been appointed, and that Count Capo d'Istria was going to be officially recognized as President of Greece by the three Allied Powers.

From the Gazette de Franes of Oct. 2.—Letters from Sarragosa say, that a conspiracy in favour of the rebels of Catalonia has been discovered in this city, and that twenty persons of distinction had been arrested, among whom are Major General Arran Frigillo, a Guerilla Chief during the time of the constitution; Col. Leon, a Brigadier, and the brothers of Generals Capape and Freyre.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.

From the New York Spectator, Nov. 14.

Yesterday about two o'clock, Mr. Emmet, the distinguished Counsellor, was seized with an alarming attack of apoplexy, whilst engaged in the Circuit Court of the United States, as one of the Counsel in the cause of the Sailors Snug Harbour. The best medical assistance was immediately procured, and he was conveyed to his house about half past 3, at which time there were but faint hopes that he would survive the shock.

This melancholy occurrence has excited a general sympathy, and there is perhaps no man in our Community whose loss would be more deeply felt and regretted. It is supposed that the arduous and incessant duties in which he has been engaged the last fortnight, have tended to enfeeble and overcome his strength.

At the moment it was discovered he was ill, the Court adjourned to 10 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Emmet expired this morning.

No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending on the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

Poetry.

I REMEMBER, I REMEMBER.

BY THOMAS HOOD.

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little windows where the sun
Came peeping in at morn;
He never came a wink too soon,
Nor brought too long a day,
But now, I often wish the night
Had borne my breath away!

I remember, I remember
The roses, red and white,
The violets and the lily-cups,
Those flowers made of the light!
The lilacks where the robin built,
And where my brother set
The laburnum on his birth-day,—
The tree is living yet!

I remember, I remember
Where I was used to swing,
And thought the air must rush as fresh
To swallows on the wing;
My spirit flew in feathers then,
That is so heavy now,
And summer pools could hardly cool
The fever on my brow!

I remember, I remember
The fir tree's dark and high:
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky:
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from Heaven
Than when I was a boy.

Lower Canada.

OPENING OF THE PROVINCIAL PARLIAMEMT.

FROM THE QUEBEC OFFICIAL GAZETTE.

THURSDAY, 22d November, 1827.

On Tuesday last the 20th inst. pursuant to Royal Proclamation, His EXCELLENCY the GOVERNOR-IN-CHIEF, with customary State, proceeded to the Legislative Council Chamber, and was there received with the honors usual on this occasion, in order to open the first Session of the Thirteenth Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada. Several circumstances having lately occurred to add considerably to the interest generally felt on this occasion, we shall endeavour to give our readers as succint an account of the proceedings as we could readily obtain. In another place will be found the address of the Honorable the Speaker of the Legislative Council of Assembly, on Tuesday, desiring them to retire to their usual place of sitting, in order to choose their Speaker." We understand, that on the return of the House of Assembly to their own chamber, Mr. Papineau, the late Speaker, was nominated by Mr. Bourdages, and Mr. Vallieres, who had also previously been Speaker, was put in nomination by Mr. Solicitor General. It would appear that the friends of Mr. Papineau intended that the election should be carried unanimously, and by acclamation in his favour; and, notwithstanding the nomination of Mr. Vallieres, seemed to look down any division in the body. A division, however, was called for, and the two persons named having previously retired, 39 were for Mr. Papineau, and 5 for Mr. Vallieres. Those for the latter were as follows:—Messrs. Ogden, Stuart, Young, Boissonnault, and Christie.

We understand on this occasion there was no debate; and neither Mr. Vallieres nor his friends had the least expectation he would be called to the Chair. That Gentleman, we are informed, was himself decidedly averse from being put in nomination; but having, heretofore, filled the Chair, he was thought by those Members who voted for him, a fair Candidate for that honor.

Yesterday, Wednesday, Nov. 21st. HIS EXCELLENCY having again proceeded to the Legislative Council Chamber, and having seated on the Throne, the Assembly was sent for, by means of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, and having taken their place below the Bar; the Speaker elect addressed His EXCELLENCY in the usual words, acquainting the GOVERNOR-IN-CHIEF that the choice of the Assembly had fallen on him, and pleading his own unworthiness, in the terms which prescription had established.

Shortly after the return of the Members to the usual place of sitting, the doors were thrown open and the public were allowed to witness the discussion.—This was said to be unusual, but after some observations on either side, it was said that there could be no impropriety in admitting the public, & the doors were accordingly by universal consent thrown open. Mr. Blanchet maintained "the House was now competent to proceed to the despatch of business—that it had its Speaker—that the concurrence of the person administering the Government was unnecessary." They were competent to all intents and purposes—Common sense said so —they were so, until the contrary could be proved —what was to prevent it? it was good sense—good sense said it." Mr. Bourdages expressed his opinion that the House was competent to proceed to the despatch of public business, as it had elected its Speaker, and that the disallowance of the Executive was of no consequence.—Mr. Papineau, in the mean time, placed himself in the Chair.—Mr. Neilson and Mr Bourdages said the Mace ought to be laid on the table. The Solicitor General and Mr. Stuart said, that to do this until another Speaker was elected, would be highly improper. Mr. Cuvillier rose to offer certain resolutions to the Speaker, the main purport of which was, that the Assembly might and of right could, and "ought to elect their own Speaker "or independently of, and without reference to the "person administering the Government of the Province."—To this it was objected that Mr. Papineau, not being Speaker, could not receive any such motion, and that the sole matter that could, at the present stage, be mooted, was the election of a Speaker, and that this motion could only be received by the Clerk of the Assembly.—Mr. Quesnel was of opinion, that Mr. Papineau being Speaker elect of yesterday, was not less so to-day, and therefore that the Mace ought to be laid upon the table.—To this, it was contended that the Mace yesterday, after the election, lay upon the table under the presumption that the choice of the Assembly would be confirmed; but this presumption having now ceased, it could not be said a new choice had taken place.—Mr. Cuvillier said that he knew of no instance in the "Colonies of the refusal of a Speaker "on the part of the Representative of the Government, that there were instances of it in England, but long ago, in the time CHARLES the II, "and before, but none since the Revolution.—That "history reprobated the conduct of the Commons— "it was held in detestation by all Englishmen, and "only recorded in history as a thing hateful to "them."—Mr. Stuart called upon Mr Cuvillier to have the goodness to put his question upon that portion of history which so spoke of it—Mr. Cuvillier said it was so—Mr. Stuart was of a different conviction —After desultory debate, and conversation of this kind, Mr. Papineau stepped from the Speakers Chair, that he had for the present only assumed it, to report to the Assembly, his address to HIS EXCELLENCY the GOVERNOR-IN-CHIEF, when (Mr. P.) had, with the unanimity, gone up to the Legislative Council as the Speaker elect, and His Excellency's answer. This he now accordingly did. After this, Mr. P. sat some time in the Chair, listening to the debate relative to the proposed Resolutions of Mr. Cuvillier, and the proposition that the mace should be laid on the table.—He then rose to say that having made his report, the constitutional question of the seat in which he had been placed yesterday by a majority of the Assembly, he thought it his duty now to leave it, and fall into the ranks of other Members. He then resume his right of expressing his opinion on the matter as he might be advised—that he did not, therefore, think it proper that the Mace should for the present be placed on the table.—Mr. Papineau then this left the Speakers Chair and retired, we believe, from the room in which the Assembly sits, as we did not afterwards observe him there.—The resolutions of Mr. Cuvillier were then offered to the Clerk of the Assembly, and the debates continued. The Solicitor General, observed, from the Journals of the Assembly of Nova Scotia, that in 1806 a case in point had occurred there, and that a Speaker had been refused by the Lieutenant Governor of that Province, and that another was then elected instead.—Mr. Vallieres declared that it was important to ascertain the King's prerogative in the matter, and that he would rather forfeit his life than interfere with it.—That it was also equally important to ascertain their own privileges and that he would also then, as soon lose his life as forego them.—That he believed the Assembly had the sole and exclusive right of naming its own Speaker, and that the person administering the Government, could not accept of those Members who voted for him, a fair Candidate for that honor.

And I am further directed by His Excellency to inform you, that as soon as a Speaker of the House of Assembly has been chosen, with the approbation of His Excellency, His Excellency will lay before the Provincial Parliament certain communications upon the present state of this Province, which, by His Majesty's command, he has been directed to make known to them.

Quebec, November 24, 1827.

The Provincial Parliament was yesterday prorogued, by Royal Proclamation, till the 3rd January next.—Mercury.

We understand that the Colonial Brig of War Kingfisher, Captain RATSIDE, is detained at QUEBEC, for the purpose of carrying despatches to ENGLAND, relative to the most extraordinary conduct of the HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

On Saturday week (the 17th Instant,) while a party of the Royal Sappers and Miners, at the RIDEAU CANAL, were engaged in the operation of blasting some rocks, one of them approached a train of powder, which he imagined had not ignited, when it suddenly exploded, and wounded him so dreadfully in the head, that the unfortunate soldier expired in less than an hour after he was removed to the hospital.—Montreal Gazette.

CEREMONY OF LAYING THE FIRST STONE OF THE MONUMENT TO WOLFE AND MONTCALM.

Having been favoured with copies of the Address of the Earl of Dalhousie, and of the prayers offered up on Thursday last, on the occasion of laying the first stone of the Monument to be erected to the memory of Wolfe and Montcalm, we are enabled to give further particular ...t very interesting ceremony.

Shortly before 11 o'clock, in the morning, the Troops, in Garrison, marched from their respective Barracks and formed a line on the street which separates the square from the lower garden of the Chateau, their right resting on the foot of the Citadel Glacis, and their left nearly opposite to the Chateau, they then opened their ranks and faring inwards formed a line.

The Grand Lodge of Masons, with the Right Worshipful Grand Master (Chasde Denochau, Esq.) at their head, the Merchants and Freres du Commerce, the Sachems of the St. Andrews Lodge, the Officers composing the Grand Lodge and the Brethren being in full Masonic Costume, walked in procession to the Chateau, proceeded by the Band of the 66th Regiment, playing a Masonic March, and passing through the Court entered the garden, and lined the avenues to the spot where preparations had been made for the purpose which called their attendance.

The Countess of Dalhousie shortly after made her appearance in the Garden with the Honble. Lady Hill, the Hon. Mrs. Gore, Mrs. Sewell, and a large party of fashionables, and passed through the lines of Masons to the platform of the Battery; almost at the same moment His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief, accompanied by the Lord Bishop of Quebec and the Chief Justice, the Committee of superintendance and many other Gentlemen, and attended by the Officers of the General a-la personal staff, having passed through the lane formed by the Troops, entered the garden by the gate facing the spot selected for the Scite of the Monument, and descending the steps, joined the Countess of Dalhousie, whom he conducted, accompanied by Her Ladyship's friends, to a situation commanding a view of the ceremonies to take place.

Every thing being now in readiness, His Excellency placed himself in front of the Stone and spoke as follows:—

Gentlemen of the Committee, we are assembled upon an occasion of deep interest to this country—it possible more so to this city—We are met to lay the Foundation of a Column in honor of two illustrious men, whose deeds and whose fall have immortalized their own names and placed Quebec in the rank of cities famous in the history of the world.

Before, however, we touch the first stone, let us implore the blessing of Almighty God upon our intended work.

The Rev Dr. Mills, Chaplain to the Forces, then offered up the following prayer:—

PRAYER.

O Almighty Lord of Heaven and Earth! without whose blessing we can do nothing of our own power, look down, we beseech Thee, with an eye of favour upon this our undertaking. We know, O Lord! that, unless Thou build the fabric, their labour is but lost that build it! and therefore we humbly pray, that this Column which we are about to erect in honour of those two distinguished Warriors, whose names it is destined to bear, may transmit their Fame to distant ages uninjured by blood and by flame, unassailed by the Thunder's rending bolt, or the mining shock of the Earthquake. May no assault of foreign or domestic division within our walls, loosen one stone from the structure; but may it long—long rear its head in simple majesty, the brightest gem and ornament of our city.

It hath pleased Thee, O Lord! by the good Providence, in a great degree to tranquillize the world: there is a great calm in the Universe: Thou hast said to the desolating tide of human Warfare—"Peace, be still! hitherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed!" We pray, O Lord!—most humbly and heartily do we pray,—that this happy state of things may continue and abound more and more, till—every source of discord dried up—every jaring interest harmonized—the Heavenly influence of the glorious Gospel—that Charter of Love and Mercy to the whole human race—be universally felt and acknowledged; till the glad strain of "Peace on earth, good will toward men," which ushered in the Nativity of the Saviour; find a ready echo in every bosom; and the blessed time at length arrive, when the sword shall be turned into the plow-share, and the spear into the pruning-hook—when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But of this hour—now seen afar off only in indistinct vision—unseen by man: in the mean time, O Lord! the wrath of man shall praise Thee, while the remainder of wrath it is—and will be—thy province to restrain.

Meanwhile also, O Lord! we humbly hope and trust, that we are not forbidden to pray, even amidst all the pomp and glitter of Military parade, by which we are surrounded in behalf of those our Brethren—with an anxious concern for their honour as Soldiers, while we feel for their salvation as Men —that the great Examples of the illustrious dead, whom we this day hold out as patterns for our imitation, were now and ever to be recorded by them with an ardent desire to imitate their worth. Yes! Soldiers, Friends and Brethren! we implore the God of Armies, that should the battle once more be set in array against you, you may—each of you—buckle on your harness, in humble—yet well-grounded confidence in the Divine protection, with no terrors of an evil conscience to appal you in the hour of peril—no breeding sin to unnerve your arm, and render it powerless in the conflict. Thus prepared —thus strengthened with might by the spirit in the Inner man—should you fall, my Brethren! you will fall in glory; you will look forward with the eye of faith, beyond the grave, to a brighter crown—a fairer wreath, than Monarchs can bestow; and this thought, rising fast over death and all its agonies, will enable you, more than any thing else, to enjoy even amidst the severest struggles of expiring Nature, the same heroic Resignation, the same loyal devotion to your King, and to your Country, and glory to your Country, which blazed forth—like the Sun's last flash before his setting—with such unextinguishable lustre, in the breasts of these departing Warriors.

Grant, O Lord! of Thine infinite Mercy Grant, that such, wherever duty calls them may be the genuine feelings of British Soldiers—such their Patriotism, their Loyalty and their Valour, may be founded upon Religion as the best and surest basis: and, with these feelings deeply rooted in our own breasts, let us pray for our Countrymen—for our Sovereign as he is—assured that they that love her shall prosper. Peace be within her walls, and plenteousness within her palaces. For our brethren and companions' sakes, we will say, Peace be within thy land secking—and not seeking only, but striving to do her good and to advance her glory by every means in our power, do Thou, O God! prosper the work of our hands upon us. O prosper Thou our handy-work! Amen and Amen.

His emphatic prayer concluded—His Lordship thus addressed the Masonic Brethren:—

Right Worshipful Grand Master and Worshipful Brethren of the Grand Lodge, I crave your assistance in performing Masonic Ceremonies and honors on this occasion.

The R. W. Grand Master supported by the R. W. Dp. G. Mr. Oliva on his right, and P. Dy. G. Mr. Thompson on his left, with two G. Deacons took his station on the East side of the foundation. The R. W. the G. Master, and the R. W. the G. Chaplain placed themselves on the opposite sides, then the Corner Stone was lowered and laid with the usual Masonic ceremony—the G. Master supported as above described, advanced towards His Lordship to give the three Mystic Strokes, on the Stone. During this part of the ceremony—the G Master repeated the following short Prayer: "May this undertaking prosper with the Blessing of Almighty God."

The part of the ceremony which now followed derived peculiar interest from the presence of Mr. James Thomson, one of the first Masons (supposed to be the only man in Canada) of that gallant Army which served under Wolfe on the memorable 13th Sept., 1759. This venerable Mason in the 95th year of his age walked with the aid of his staff accompanied the Earl, and stood near his Lordship, leaning on the arm of Captain Young of the 79th Highlanders, the officer whose pencil produced the chaste appropriate design which has been adopted for the Monument. His Lordship called upon the patriarch to assist in the ceremony in these words.

Mr. Thompson—we honour you here as the only person in arms, and a venerable living witness of the fall of Wolfe, do us also the favour to bear witness on this occasion by the mallet in your hand.—Mr. Thompson then, with a firm hand, gave the three Mystic strokes with the Mallet on the stone —The following appropriate prayer was then pronounced by Dr. Harkness, the Provincial Grand Chaplain.

Most Gracious God! We adore Thee as the Great Architect of Nature. In the beginning Thou laidest the foundations of the Earth—The Arches of Heaven are the workmanship of Thy hand,—and the Spirit of Man formed within him.—Thou makest the Clouds thy Chariot—Thou walkest upon the Wings of the Wind—Thou waterest the Hills from Thy Chambers,—and the Earth is satisfied with the fruit of Thy works. Thou causest the Grass to grow for the use of Cattle,—and Herb for the service of Man. Thou hast appointed the Moon for seasons, and the Sun knoweth his going down. O Lord how manifold and wondrous are Thy works! In Wisdom hast Thou made them all. The Earth is full of Thy riches. Though Thou dwellest on high in light inaccessible and full of glory,—yet we rejoice to think, that Thou humblest Thyself to behold every thing that is done in this lower world. And we fervently and earnestly pray that Thou wouldst now look down with a propitious and approving eye on the present undertaking of Thy humble Servants. May the Public Monument, the foundation-stone of which has now been laid, go on and prosper, and when finished, may it completely answer the double designs of those by whom it is undertaken and promoted—We entreat Thee, O Lord, to give each of us grace, that we may be enabled in our respective spheres, to emulate the Virtues of those Great, and Brave and Good Men, the Memory of whose Heroic Deeds this Column is intended to perpetuate. Enable us unitedly and unitedly to cherish and cultivate the genuine Spirit of Christian Benevolence, which is ever ready to pity the Objects of Misery and relieve Objects of Distress which ever fills the heart with the tenderest sympathy and the warmest compassion,—It which ever disposes us to regard our fellow-creatures with the purest sentiments of affection and the sincerest disposition to promote their welfare and happiness—Whatever diversity of Religious sentiment may be found to exist among us, may we all be united in this grand essential of the Religion of Jesus. "Charity towards all Men." And may all our hopes of future happiness be built upon "the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the Chief Corner Stone."

Grant, O Most Merciful Father! these the sincere desires of our hearts, for the sake of Jesus Christ, our Lord, and Redeemer. Amen.

Then Capt. Methuish, of the Royal Engineers having deposited Gold, Silver, and Copper Coins of the present Reign, in a cavity prepared on the upper face of the stone for their reception, the pieces were covered by a brass plate bearing a suitable inscription, and the stone was then passed He Lordship in review order on the Place d'Armes.

The change which has been made in the situation chosen for the Monument, as is now generally admitted, is for the better. In the Place d'Armes it would have been, in a great measure, lost; but on the spot where it is now to be erected it will be a prominent object, visible from the opposite shore, from the Bay, and from almost every River, whilst the terrace on which it is to stand, and which, as has been already stated, will be as open to the public as the street itself, overlooks the basin and its surrounding scenery, presenting particularly in summer time when the Port is full of Shipping, a view which for animation and beauty is hardly to be surpassed.

The following is Smollett's character of General Wolfe: at the present moment its re-persual may be interesting to our Readers. Quebec Gazette.

"The death of General Wolfe was a national loss, universally lamented. He inherited from nature an undaunted spirit of resentment, an intuitive perception, an extensive capacity, and a passion for glory, which stimulated him to acquire every species of military knowledge that study could comprehend, that actual service could illustrate and confirm. This noble ardour of mind inspired him seldom fails to call forth and unfold the liberal virtues of the soul. Brave, above all estimation of danger, he was also generous, gentle, complacent, and humane; the pattern of the officer, the darling of the soldier: there was a sublimity in the manner of his being raised above the pitch of ordinary minds; and had his faculties been exercised to their full extent by opportunity and action, had his judgment been fully matured by age and experience, he would without doubt have rivalled in reputation the most celebrated captains of antiquity."

Summary.

Early Winter.—The Catskill paper of the 9th inst says:—It commenced snowing here on Saturday night last, and continued north-east, and continued without intermission until Wednesday evening.—The quantity which fell was about 10 inches on a level.

Opening of the Port of St. Kitts.—In consequence of the injury sustained by the late dreadful storms in the West-Indies, the Governor of the Island of St. Kitts has issued a Proclamation admitting vessels of all nations for the term of three months, from the date thereof—loaded with lumber, provisions, &c.

Greenwich Hospital.—The number of veteran and disabled Seaman, Pensioners in Greenwich Hospital, amounts to about 2,700, of which 1,500 sit down to dinner daily at one o'clock, in the long Hall. The meat is cut into mouthfuls by the carver's swain, who takes his station at the head of the Hall, says Grose. Then a clatter of knives and forks, not unlike a chorus of narrow-bones and cleavers, begins. They bury on an average one a day; and on a calculation, the Hospital is cleared of the whole of this race of heroes every seven years

Steam Mail-Packet to India.—It is stated in a Madras paper, that Mr. Thomas Waghorn, of the Bengal Pilot Establishment, had proceeded to England in the ship Reaper, in the expectation of establishing between the Continent and India a steam mail packet. The vessel is to be built after the model of the Leith smacks, of 200 or 220 tons, with two 25 horse power engines, her mast is to be constructed so as to lower down on the deck in case of head winds, and the tunnel is also to be lowered at pleasure. Every thing is to be sacrificed to expedition. She will carry no passengers or live stock. The captain, and a crew of nineteen to mess together, and potted meats to be laid in. By these means the utmost room possible for the stowage of coals is to be afforded and it is expected the vessel will carry 50 day's consumption. The passage is to be made in 20 days.

The English cruizers on the coast of Africa, between the 10th of April, 1824 and the 1st of June 1827, captured 59 vessels, containing no less than 9,733 slaves! The vessels were chiefly Brazilians; and the rest Spanish and Dutch.

Important Invention.—We understand that there is now in this City, a person who has invented a Printing Press which is calculated to print both sides of a sheet at one operation, with as much expedition as by any other method hitherto discovered of printing one side. An experiment is now making, and if it succeeds, as it promises to do in the judgment of some experienced printers who have examined the principle, it will supersede all other presses.—N. Y. Spectator.

England.

The Power Loom was invented by the Rev. Mr. Cartwright, (a brother to the celebrated reforming Major.) This is described as one of the most ingenious, efficient and pre-eminently useful machines, that has ever been constructed. Parliament voted the Rev. Gentleman £10,000 as a reward for his discovery. The progress of power loom weaving was not at first so rapid as might have been expected—during the last ten years however, it has increased with astonishing rapidity —" According to Mr. Baines, there were in 1813, in Manchester, Stockport, and the immediate vicinity, about 2,000 power looms; in 1821 they had increased to 5,733; and in July, 1825, in the parish of Manchester alone, they amounted to upwards of 20,000! There are now probably, about 45,000 power looms in Britain. Within

COUNSELS.

BY BERNARD BARTON, ESQ.

Though bright thy morn of life may seem,
Remember clouds may rise;
And trust not to the transient gleam
Of calm and smiling skies.
So tread life's path in sunshine drest,
With lowly cautious fear:
That when grief's shadows o'er it rest,
Its memory may be dear.

If dark life's main hour's may be,
Despond not: their gloom;
Joy's cloudless sun may rise for thee.
And Hope's bright flow'rets bloom.
So trace thy pathway thorn-bestrew'd,
That thou, in happier hours,
With pure and pangless gratitude
May'st bless its fragrant flowers.

Through cloud and sunshine, flower and thorn,
Pursue thy even way;
Nor let thy better hopes be born
Of things that must decay.
Rejoice with trembling, mourn with hope,
Take life as life was given;
Its rough ascent, its flowery slope,
May lead alike to Heaven!

Extracts from a Charge delivered at his Triennial and Metropolitan Visitation, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, on Tuesday the 10th of October 1826: by WILLIAM MAGEE, D. D. F. S. S. M. R. I. A. &c. Arch Bishop of Dublin.

A CHARGE, &c. &c.

At this day, when, from causes which cannot be mistaken and are indeed no longer concealed, clamours have been raised and reiterated against our national Clergy; when false notions respecting the nature of our Establishment are industriously and dishonestly circulated; when not only its efficiency, but its legitimacy, has been denied, so that even the very principle, which unites us with the State, has been brought in question; it may appear no inappropriate use of the present opportunity, to review the first principles of our Church Establishment, and to ascertain the grounds, on which, as a portion of the Church of Christ, of the true Catholic Church, we stand connected with the State; as well as the conditions which regulate, and the limits which define, that connexion. We shall thus be the better able to expose the fallacies, which fraud would impose on ignorance to our detriment; and to deprive fanaticism, cupidity, and irreligion, of those false colours, under which they wage their unhallowed warfare against the Established Religion of the country.

Indeed, independently of such considerations, it cannot but be at all times important, that the principles of a Union, whose consequences to the community must be vitally influential, should be thoroughly understood, and steadily kept in view, both by the Clergy and the Public. By the clear understanding of these principles, it is, that the one will be enabled to see and preserve their true position in the State, and the other will be taught to value and defend that order of men, whose binding principle is the cement of the social policy, and whose civil existence is essentially interwoven, even for temporal purposes, with the best interest of the Nation.

The ground of the Union, of which we speak, is, happily for these lands in which our Church is established, the same with that on which rests the stability of our civil fabric:—and it is that, by which alone, in every state and country, unity and permanency can be secured to the system of Government: namely, a Sovereign Supremacy within the Realm, not to be interfered with by any extrinsic power, not to be resisted by any domestic impediment.

Nothing is more common with unreflecting minds, than to suppose a religious establishment, in its temporal character, as possessing an interest distinct from the state: a sort of incorporated craft, seeking its own ends, and working its own gains, through the power of its temporal associate.

This may indeed be the case, where the Established Religion is not embodied with the State; where it has a separate Head from the State: or where (as sometimes happens) it acknowledges no human head, and claims an independent existence. But where it rests upon the same supreme sovereignty with the State itself; where it and the State are but two different aspects of the same Christian community; where it is harmoniously associated with the State for the accomplishment of its highest purpose, the greatest hapiness of the people; where it acts in such a manner as that it may be said to constitute the conscience of the state; there it is impossible, with any justness, to view its ministers as a body pursuing their own ends, and to be considered merely in their individual relations.

But, in the very outset of the subject, and before we are permitted to enter upon the character and consequences of an Establishment, we are met with the position, that Religion is a matter which belongs not to the Civil Magistrate: that it is a concern between the Individual and his God, which comes not within the range of human Institution: that consequently, the very principle of a Religious Establishment is unsound; and that the Civil Magistrate has no right to exercise the powers of the state either for its formation or support.

Yet surely it seems a strange thing to say, that there are any matters connected with the well being of a state, over which the Sovereign power of that state shall have no control. It seems a STRANGER thing to assert, that is that which above all connects itself most materially with the well being of the community, he whose first duty it is to promote the welfare of that community, shall have no concern.

Man is a compound Being, and were impelled to seek his temporal advantage, than bound to pursue his eternal interests. Must not the state look to him in both conditions: and so far as possible assist its individual members in the attainment of both? Is not the Sovereign to rule for the greatest good of the whole? And can he leave out any part of that which constitutes their greatest good?

Is he not, again, bound by the duty which he owes to God, so to govern his people, as to enable them best to obey the will of the great common Sovereign of all? Must he not, then, secure for his subjects the best aids of Religion? And does not the establishment of a national religion become a necessary branch of the duty of the Sovereign, and an essential constituent of the well being of the people? Is not then, the rejection of it by a state, or a professed indifference as to its truth or falsehood, an open declaration that human affairs may be conducted without any regard to Divine superintendence or authority, and that man may live without God in the World?

In truth, every separation of divine and human things is a rejection of Providence: it is an enslavement of all to human policy: it has been, and is from day to day, the cause of those wholesale perversions of the principle of right, which go under the name of "reasons of state;" and which tend, by their pernicious example, to demoralise man, and to disorganise society.

No state ought to exist, that sets Providence aside, and openly disregards divine things, or acts so as to subvert divine truths. Man cannot war against God, and God must rule over the kingdoms of men. Those that will not be the subjects of his sway, must be the objects of his vengeance. And such nations are prone themselves not the fit instruments for promoting his moral Government of the world, must expect to be broken up, so soon as they have effected those temporal objects, for which Providence may have suffered them for a time to continue: which, amongst others, may possibly have been, the infliction of punishment on other guilty nations, which may demand for them a momentary display of power; or against the open manifestation of their own profligacy, to the clearer justification of the ways of God in his dealings with men.

I should not have dwelt so long upon so plain a proposition, as that, which affirms it to be the duty of the Sovereign to provide a true religion for his people, but that, strange as it may appear, it is a maxim, which hangs but loosely upon the minds of many at the present day: nay, even the contrary position is openly maintained by some, not only those who are avowed enemies to a religious Establishment altogether, but by some who maintain its lawfulness and its necessity, upon grounds both of public duty and of religious obligations.

But with respect to the latter class, those who admit the lawfulness and necessity of an Establishment, the matter becomes a subject of weighty consideration indeed. Error among these, on so essential a point as that with which we are concerned, is an enemy within the camp. This is, in the Psalmist's language, my own familiar friend, whose precious balms must not be allowed to break my head.

It is urged, that if Religion be the proper concern of the Civil Ruler, there is nothing to prevent it in that case from devolving upon him entirely, so that the care of souls should come within his immediate province. And, in the next place, it is contended, that there can be nothing to prevent him from feeling himself authorised to impose upon his people whatever Religion he might think proper to prescribe. And thus, it is said, the Civil Ruler may consider himself empowered, not to assume the spiritual functions, but, for the propagation of that religion which he deems to be true, to exercise a spiritual dominion over the consciences of his subjects.

But, the very Religion, which the Ruler is bound to support,—I speak here of the Christian Ruler of course, with no other have we any concern,—that very Religion debars him from the assumption of such powers. His religion is at the same time his restraint. The Christian Governor has no right to prescribe against the known law of God, contained in his written word. And that very law, which has proclaimed, that "Kings shall be the nursing fathers and Queens the nursing mothers" of his Church; that they are to protect and cherish it with the supreme powers with which they are invested:—has pronounced, that it is His Church, to which they are to afford their fostering aid; that it is to His supreme temporal Rulers, they are to minister support; and that it is to the Religion, which God's word prescribes that support is to be supplied.

The Sovereign, then, is, in the first instance, withheld from the exercise of functions purely spiritual; because these are, by the divine authority, conferred upon an order of men, set apart, by a special commission from our Lord himself, to preach his Religion, and to administer his Sacraments; a commission, which not only conferred those powers on his first chosen followers, but secured their transmission to an authorised Ministry, by a legitimate succession, throughout all the ages of his Church. From the exercise of these functions, then, or the bestowing the capacity to exercise them, the Sovereign is withheld. This is matter of Divine Institution. The Civil Magistrate can neither confer, nor exercise, the sacred function. To him belongs not the power of Order. He can neither execute, nor qualify any to execute the Ministration of the word and the Sacraments. He cannot change any thing, which God's law has clearly determined and prescribed. All those spiritual functions, in a word, which were possessed by the Apostles, and by those whom they ordained, are withheld by the divine appointment from the jurisdiction of the Sovereign, and confined to that class of men whom God ordained to succeed them in his Church. These are from a Commission higher than human. And such nations are prone themselves not the fit instruments for promoting his moral Government of the world, must expect to be broken up, so soon as they have effected those temporal objects, for which Providence may have suffered them for a time to continue: which, amongst others, may possibly have been, the infliction of punishment on other guilty nations, which may demand for them a momentary display of power; or against the open manifestation of their own profligacy, to the clearer justification of the ways of God in his dealings with men.

I should not have dwelt so long upon so plain a proposition, as that, which affirms it to be the duty of the Sovereign to provide a true religion for his people, but that, strange as it may appear, it is a maxim, which hangs but loosely upon the minds of many at the present day: nay, even the contrary position is openly maintained by some, not only those who are avowed enemies to a religious Establishment altogether, but by some who maintain its lawfulness and its necessity, upon religious liberty, he must indeed grant, even to this intolerant system, toleration. But that toleration must never grow into power; for then toleration to one becomes intolerence to all. The principles, it is manifest, that are most directly subversive of religious freedom, are those by which a Church claims for itself the possession of infallible authority, and exclusive salvation. And in degree as any Church approaches to these unscriptural and arrogant assumptions, it becomes proportionally intolerant and persecuting.

The King cannot therefore, as we have seen, take to himself the right to exercise or to confer spiritual functions: nor can he adopt for his people a religious system, which labors under any of the disqualifications which have been enumerated. He cannot adopt a system, which presents no defined and settled form of doctrine and belief: nor can he adopt a system, which asserts a Supremacy over Scripture, over Conscience, or over the Sovereign himself. Much less can he adopt a system, which asserts a Supremacy over all; and still more a Supremacy founded in DIVINE RIGHT, which no human authority is entitled to question.

The Church of England and Ireland presents herself under characters the opposite of those that have been named. She presents herself as Scriptural, as Catholic, as Tolerant, as Social, as Loyal, and as Protestant. She presents in her Articles, her Creeds and her Liturgy, a settled and defined scheme of doctrine and belief, for the Spiritual guidance and authority of which she refers and invites her followers to the free examination of the Sacred word. And for her discipline, she refers to her Canons, which are few and plain.

Again the Church of England and Ireland calls herself Catholic. She pretends not to be exclusively the Church of Christ, out of whose pale there can be no salvation. Whatever community of professing Christians holds the essentials of the Christian Religion, she considers as a branch of the Church of Christ. To all such she is ready to give the right hand of fellowship; and for such she continually offers up her petitions to the Throne of Grace; praying daily "for the good estate of the Catholick Church" or universal Christian "Church;" however the parts of that Church may differ from her as to that external form of Government which she deems to be Apostolical.

The Church of England and Ireland also presents herself as Tolerant. Built up on the sound fundamental principles of Protestantism; respecting the rights of conscience; assuming to herself no power to control the judgment of those who differ from her doctrines, no divine right to compel obedience to her dogmas; that Church would act with great inconsistency, indeed, if she refused toleration to those who cannot conscientiously conform to her discipline and worship. Not holding the exclusive doctrine, that none are to be saved who are not members of her communion, intolerance in her would want even the appearance of excuse. It would be a wanton violation of her own principles, a direct contradiction of her whole character.

Again, the Church of England and Ireland presents herself as Social; that is, as adopted to the rational and legitimate intercourses and objects of the Social System. Her ministers employ no artificial contrivances to gain an ascendant power over the minds of the multitude, which might be turned at their pleasure against the peace of the Community. The Bible contains our secrets. We put into the hands of all, the very Book, from which we derive the Religion which we teach; and we enable, and indeed require all to judge for themselves, whether what we teach be the doctrine of the revealed word of God. Whether then the principles, which regulate the social intercourses of our ecclesiastical system, be such as to promote or to disturb the harmony of social order, it is in the power of all men to decide.

Again, the Church of England and Ireland presents herself as Loyal. Her allegiance is undivided. No nice distinctions in the submission due to the Sovereign, as to spirituals and temporals. No difficulty in discovering the fine and shifting line, that is to mark the boundary between the obedience to be given to the Prince, and that which is to be reserved for some other Power. Our Church is explicit in declaring, that the Christian Religion allows the Prince to "rule all estates and degrees committed to his charge by God, whether they be ecclesiastical or temporal, and to restrain with the civil sword the stubborn and evil doers" of all descriptions, whether they be of a spiritual, or of a merely temporal character. Desirous to lay the foundation deep of cheerful submission to the Sovereign, the Magistrates, and the Laws, she is studious to imprint on early childhood the valuable lesson "to honourand obey the King, and all that are put in authority under him; to submit themselves to all their Governors, to order themselves lowly and reverently to all their betters, and to do their duty in that state of life unto which it shall please God to call them." This lesson, which is early taught and late inculcated, is also without reserve or qualification; the spirit of obedience to the King, and to the Laws, universally enforced, without reference to any ecclesiastical authority, to learn in what cases that obedience may be conscientiously withheld.

Again, in the daily service of our Church, prayers are offered up for the welfare of the Sovereign, both temporal and eternal, while "on each of his subjects" are reminded of our obligation "faithfully to serve, honour, and humbly obey him;" and the Monarch at the same time kept in recollection, that his authority is derived from the King of Kings, and is given to him for the great ends of promoting the glory of God, and the happiness of his people: and, that he may employ his authority for these ends, is made the subject of a special petition from his people.

Established as she is on the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; providing, as far as human prudence can, for a succession of faithful men to inculcate the great mystery of Godliness and the true value of the Christian Sacrifice upon the altars of duly administering the Sacraments of Christ's institution: propounding scriptural articles of faith, and supplying devotional formularies of public worship: exhibiting a Catholic spirit towards all other Christian Churches, and a charitable feeling for her own members: setting the example of toleration, of adaptation to the wants and circumstances of society, of eminent loyalty and sound Protestantism, what can the State require for the purpose of utility, what can Religion demand for the propagation of its influence, if the members of a Church, so circumstanced, will but do their duty, faithfully, in the important station, to which it has pleased Providence to place them?

And may Almighty God, who has appointed the divers Orders of his Church, so replenish those who fill the same with the truth of his doctrine, and so endue them with innocency of life, that they may serve before him in their sacred ministry, to the glory of his great name, and to the salvation of the Souls entrusted to their charge, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Trade.—A remarkable activity prevails at Greenock, in the trade to India. Three vessels sailed in one week thence, two for Bombay and one for Calcutta, the last of which carried out goods to the amount of 700,000 yards of manufactured cotton goods, and upwards of 50,000 lbs. of cotton yarns; and three other vessels are now fitting out in the Clyde for these ports.

THE REVENUE.

From the London Courier of Oct. 11.

The financial papers, which we insert today, will be found to bear out the statement we yesterday made. On the present quarter, accompared with the corresponding quarter in 1826, there appears an increase of £909,787. It is under the head of Customs that we find the improvement has taken place, which leads to a result so highly gratifying. From the evidence which it gives, of the reviving state of our commerce, such a change must necessarily be contemplated with pleasure; inasmuch as it is a proof that it is no sudden spur which has caused the increase and which, from the suddenness, we might justly fear would not continue. The Returns shew a gradual progress through the year, in that important branch of the Revenue.

In the quarter ending Jan. 5, 1826, the produce of the Customs was £3,702,943.

Last January it amounted to £4,088,578.

In April last year it was 3,444,716.

In April 1827, £3,542,252.

In July last, year, £3,708,828.

In last July, £3,811,594.

In October, 1826, they were 4,579,649.

In the Quarter just concluded their produce amounts to £4,915,618.

Total amount of the Revenue for the year 1827, ending Oct. 10. £46,892,621

Ditto for the preceding year, £46,507,677

Increase on the present year, £385,005

We have thus shewn that the charge, we have the satisfaction to remark upon, is one gradually produced by the working of that system which has been so loudly arraigned, and not the mere offspring of some fortunate accident.

In the Excise, it will be seen, there is some falling off: but this may be partly accounted for by the partial failure of the Barley harvest. In the Stamps, and in the Post-office Duties, there is an improvement. We have no right to expect that there shall be a simultaneous augmentation under every head; but where an important branch has so greatly increased, and that on the Customs, we may confidently hope that, in the natural course of things, the Excise cannot long be depressed.

From the Liverpool Mercury of the 15th Oct.

There has been a steady demand for Wheat of all descriptions during the past week, and several cargoes of the middling qualities of foreign Wheat have been sold for shipments to Glasgow, till the import has exceeded the sales, and prices may be quoted 1d. a 2d. cheaper. Flour and Oatmeal have receded 6d. a 1s. per sack.

The market for Ashes is flat—the sales last week consisted of 10 brls. Boston Pots at 29s.; 20 Boston Pearls, at 30s.; and 100 Montreal Firsts, at 28s. 6d. a 28s. 9d. and 43 Montreal Pearls, 1826, at 28s. 9d.

Latest from Engl —By the packet ship York, from Liverpool, we have advices to the 23d October inclusive. The accounts from Paris are not so late as those received direct.

The British parliament had been prorogued till the end of December, which will put off their actual session till February, as they meet in December and adjourn for the holidays.

Foreign Intelligence.

We find nothing of much interest to add to the political intelligence received by the last arrivals. It will be seen by an extract from the Liverpool papers of 24th October, that the British Admiral had informed Ibrahim Pacha, that his orders were to prevent the Egyptian fleet from commencing hostilities, and that accordingly Ibrahim had promised not to leave Navarion.

From the Liverpool Courier 24th October

TURKEY.—Although no official intelligence has arrived from our Ambassador at Constantinople, yet, if any reliance may be placed upon the accounts furnished by the French papers, there appears little reason to expect that the Sultan will accede to the propositions of the three powers, until he has ascertained what means they may possess for enforcing his compliance

By despatches received at the Admiralty on Friday, from Admiral Sir E. Codrington, it appears that on the 25th ult. the French Admiral and Sir Edward had had an interview with Ibrahim Pacha, at which interview, after having stated to the Turkish commander, that the Porte had refused to accept the proffered mediation of the courts of England, France and Russia, the admirals added that they had orders to bring about an armistice by force, and to act against all who might oppose it. Ibrahim replied that he had been directed to push the war in the Morea, and to finish it by a decisive attack on Hydra. Finally he promised to send couriers to Constantinople and to Egypt, and gave his word that in five days should not quit Navarino till their return, hard as he considered it to be stopped in his career, when the strength of his expedition was such as to overwhelm the Greeks.

Mr. Gallatin has arrived in Paris. The American remarks, that he has succeeded in affecting some of the most important objects committed to his charge, but, says the editor "The West India trade is yet an unsettled question, and we trust rather than that this nation shall depart one little from the ground it has assumed, will long remain so."

RUSSIA AND PERSIA.

The Journal of St. Petersbuogh of Sept. 26, contains more news of the army in Georgia. It appears that a desperate battle took place between a division of the Russian army, which advanced to the relief of the convent of Etchmiadzine which was besieged by the Persian army of 25,000 men, 10,000 infantry, with a battery of 24 pieces of artillery, and 16,000 cavalry—commanded by Abbas Mirza. The Russians claim the victory, saying that the enemy lost 3000 men, while their own loss was very severe. The enemy attacked the Russians on all sides, and their cannon battery did much damage to the equipages; considerable bodies of infantry and cavalry charged them with impetuosity, but were always repulsed at the point of the bayonet, and the Russian artillery, ably directed, did them considerable injury. The ravage which the Russian artillery made in the ranks of Abbas Mirza was enormous: in many places the ground was covered with their dead, up to the mouths of the Russian cannon. The battle lasted from 7 o'clock in the morning till 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Army.

Brev. Lieut. Col. John Maule, on half-pay as an Unattached Major, has been allowed to dispose of his half-pay.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1827.

Since our last, there have been arrivals at Newyork bringing English dates to 23d Oct., but there is not any news of particular importance. The accounts from Lower Canada, state that much damage has been sustained by the outward bound shipping. Some of the Vessels have been totally lost in the drift ice, but notwithstanding the danger to which they were exposed, it is satisfactory to observe that no lives have been lost. The passengers had generally returned to Quebec, and the Captain of the Ottawa intended to take the advantage of a favorable change in the weather, to make a second attempt to proceed to Sea.

The Third Report of the Emigration Committee (1826,) is brought to a close in the last Albion. The inquiries of the Committee appear to have been principally directed to the ability which the Emigrant would possess, from the improved value of his Land, for repaying the amount advanced to him, on his taking possession of it. The amount which each Emigrant has received, with the interest for Seven years, chargeable at the expiration of that period with an annual interest of £4: that is of £60 improved to the value of £80, in consequence of the seven years deferred interest, the Emigrant having it in his power at any time, if he chooses, to redeem the principal debt of £80, diminishing at the same time the annual Interest, by paying instalments of £1 on every £20. The witnesses examined on this point before the Committee, concur in the opinion that the Emigrant would possess the ability of paying, if not in money at least in produce, the sum advanced upon the system above laid down. In promoting such a system of Emigration, the co-operation, to be afforded by the Colonies is alluded to in the following paragraph:—

Your Committee beg most distinctly to be understood that they rest their case entirely upon the promised co-operation and assistance of the Colonial Legislatures. Unless this can be obtained they feel that no experiment would be instituted; for they entertained they entertain confident hopes that it may be reduced to a regular and effective system; and though they could not go so far as to require a guarantee upon part of the Colonial Legislatures, they should expect them to make such provisions as should tend to enforce and secure the validity of the engagements made. Nor, upon a full examination of the subject, can your Committee be induced to conceive that the local Legislatures can have any disinclination to enter into such arrangements. The intelligent inhabitants of those Colonies cannot fail to be aware that when those Emigrants repay the loan, which is proposed to be lent to each head of a Family, they will only repay a very small part of the wealth which they possess, and which has been created by their Emigration. They will be aware also that the projected Emigration will consist exclusively of able-bodied healthy persons, selected upon system in the Mother Country, and introduced upon system into the Colony, and that it is not to be a casual, desultory, and unprovided Emigration.—Under such circumstances, your Committee cannot doubt the disposition o. the local Legislatures of the Colonies to encourage the measure, and to facilitate the process of re-payment, an opinion which is expressed unanimously by the Colonial witnesses examined before your Committee.

Your Committee thinks that it is only necessary to have these views fully and clearly understood, and the evidence examined, which has been taken in order to induce the Colonies to accept with gratitude an arrangement of this nature. Nor do your Committee found their opinion upon mere speculative data. They would specially refer to the letter addressed to the Earl Bathurst, by the magistrates and others resident in the district of Newcastle, in the province of Upper Canada, which is to be found in the Appendix to the Report, questions 3,701 and 3,702, in which they explain their view of the advantages to be derived from a regulated system of colonization. In the same place will also be found the expression of gratitude on the part of the Irish emigrants of 1825, for the change effected in their situation.

From Official documents forming part of the appendix to the Report of 1825, relating to the Emigration under the superintendence of the Hon. P. Robinson in 1823, the Committee, draw the following Conclusions.

"A person in the south of Ireland, for whose labour no demand existed, and consequently whose presence in Ireland added nothing to the general wealth of the country, but, on the contrary, whose subsistence was a deduction from that wealth, was removed to a district in Upper Canada; he received from the Government, for himself, his wife, and three children, the sum of £100 sterling in land and not in money. This £100 has enabled him to cultivate a proportion of 100 acres of land; and at the end of seven years he will be in possession of a surplus income of £10 per annum.

Your Committee cannot conclude their observations on this point of inquiry, without expressing their sense of the zeal, ability, and discretion, with which Mr. Peter Robinson effected the location of the two bodies of Emigrants in 1823 and 1825, under circumstances (however inevitable) of want of previous preparation, which would be avoided in future instances, where emigration formed part of a national measure."

During the last Session of Parliament, an application was made by the Inhabitants of the Town of Cobourg, for the purpose of constructing a Harbor at that place, but owing to the press of business, it was not brought forward. It will be renewed, we understand, this Session, and the most strenuous efforts are making, to ensure the success of this contemplated and very necessary improvement in that part of the Country. A scientific person has been employed during the Summer to examine the ground, and prepare estimates of the probable cost of the undertaking. His suggestion is to excavate a Harbour inland in the centre of the Town, and to secure the approach to it by Piers carried out to twelve feet water. The expense of such a work is estimated at £5,000, to defray which, a toll on imports and exports is proposed, the amount of which, from the present actual state of the trade of the country, it is supposed would yield from 2500 to 3000 per annum, In aid of the work and for the purpose of making up any deficiency in the repayment of the principal loaned for carrying the undertaking into effect, a subscription has been opened and £250 is already subscribed in sums of from £10 to £1, annually, for the period of Ten Years, at the expiration of which time allowing something for the increased trade which may be expected to take place, from the facility which will be afforded, for the entrance of Vessels, it is thought the Port dues, together with the subscription would pay off the loan. The want of a Harbour on that part of the Coast, has long been complained of, by the owners of Shipping on the Lake, and from the liberal spirit evinced by the Petitioners, we hope the present application will be successful. The Newcastle District is rapidly rising into importance, and with the new Settlements which have lately been made in it, there can be no doubt that the period is not distant, when its Commerce must be very considerable.

Complimentary language.—"We never knew a member who attended the York official dinner parties during the session, that did not sell the interests of his constituents, in some way or other, before the session was over. We could a merely-mouthed ignoramus, who never, before he was a member, sat at a gentleman's table—who was born without patriotism, and never had the fear of his ancestry before his eyes, refuse any thing to an official gentleman of 15 or £1600 a year, that has been so kind to him as to place him on his right hand, once or twice a week during the season, at a dinner-table, the very sight of which, bewilders his senses? Impossible—the debt of gratitude to his official patron, for such pure disinterested kindness—besides the pride of writing home to his country cronies, that he "had the honor to dine with the Hon.——in company with——" is too much for a mock patriot, with weak and corrupt heart, to bear."

Such is the language of the "Canadian Freeman," when speaking of our Members of Parliament—he is certainly not very "mealymouthed" in the choice of his expressions—and we think the Commons House of Assembly of Upper Canada will feel highly indebted to him for the compliments he bestows upon them. We remember having heard a certain member, on whom the Canadian Freeman just now, lavishes the highest strains of encomium, assert in his place, that, the present House of Assembly was the most independent that Upper Canada ever had—yet strange to say, even Patriots will differ in opinion, and the Canadian Freeman compares them to "a set of hungry sycophants" who would "sell their own birth rights, and the interests of the country, for a Mess of Pottage." What a picture does the Canadian Freeman draw of our House of Assembly. Members—"reeling with recent debauch—with enervated nerves—and faultering tongues—rising on the floor of the House"—paying the price of the evenings corruption, by the mornings surrender of the "general interests of the Province at large"—and to whom—" into the hands of a new corrupt tools of power"—a few!—how transcendent the compliment paid to the many, or the majority. If the Canadian Freeman is to believed, what opinion must the world have of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada—we say if he is to believed—but the subject is too disgusting to be pursued any further.

United States.

North Eastern Boundary.—Upon this subject the National Intelligencer says, "negociations were commenced in London before Mr. Rush's return to the United States, and have been continued by Mr. Gallatin, which are understood to have resulted in the formation of a Convention settling the preliminaries of the question according to the Treaty of Ghent."

"As to the matter of fact, each party has been in possession of some portion of the disputed ground; that is to say, the Governments of Massachusetts and Maine, on our part, and of the Province of New Brunwick on the part of Great Britain, have exercised jurisdiction over it; and each party has been disposed to strengthen its claim by further acts of possession. In the mean time, between the Foreign Ministers of the United States and Great Britain there has been a constant correspondence, at considerable length, however, but always in the most friendly tone, having for its object the inculcation of mutual forbearance, of the expediency of the preservation of the same state of things in the disputed territory, as existed at the date of the Treaty of Ghent, and of avoiding all disputes which might grow out of the agitation of it.

"With respect to the two Governments, there is a perfectly good understanding, upon the obvious propriety, and indeed necessity, of forbearance and moderation on both sides, as to this question.—Any Acts of a contrary character are acts of individual citizens, without the authority or sanction of either Government, and, of course, are to be avoided and rebuked."

Lower Canada.

Mr. R Torrance, one of the passengers in the Ottawa, came up to Quebec this morning. That ship is ashore on the Ice off Point Levi, but four anchors, but we hear is in a safe situation. The Kingfisher and some others were opposite Crane Island on Sunday; drifting on the ice with the tide, in a most perilous situation. We fear that the accounts from below the Traverse will not be of a more cheering nature; different statements concurring that the river is full of ice from Green Island upwards.

Extract of a letter from Captain Douglas, of the ship Ottawa, to Messrs. Gillespy, Finlay & Co.

"QUEBEC, Monday, 26th Nov. Noon.

"GENTLEMEN.—I have to request that you will send down 90 fathoms 1¼ inch chain cable to secure the ship before the next spring tides, and a person to accompany it down, as I cannot get officers of the ship and myself being exhausted with excessive fatigue.

The Earl of Dalhousie and one other brig, are ashore at Crane Island. The Caroline is ashore three miles below L'Islet, full of water and abandoned. The Kingfisher is still drifting in the ice, but must be lost. I fear greatly for the lives of those on board her.

"Three vessels have driven from their anchorage through the Traverse."

A letter from Quebec, dated the 27th November, says:—"We have very bad accounts from below. The Ottawa is on shore at L'Islet; the Kingfisher, riding up and down with the ice; the Earl of Dalhousie, the Caroline, and another brig, on shore at Crane Island. Mr. Tulloch's vessel, the Caroline, has been abandoned, and is floating about in the ice. I have this moment learnt that in addition to the vessels mentioned above, two square rigged vessels and six schooners, have been lost in the River and Gulph."

A subsequent letter of the same date, after noticing those mentioned above, says:—" Apprehensions are entertained for the lives of the people on board the Kingfisher. One schooner has grounded, was crushed, and every soul in her perished. Two of the crew were saved. Three vessels were seen drifting, through the Traverse, among the ice; one of them, supposed to be the Canadian, was firing guns as a signal of distress. Her crew is supposed to be saved. A schooner from Halifax is lost below the Traverse, & one outward bound is on shore at Green Island. Some of these smaller vessels are not ensured, and the loss will fall on the owners."

This year there have been shipped 28,000 barrels of ashes—a quantity much below the annual average. Of these 4000 are on board those vessels which are in the ice at and below the river.

A lad of the name of Monaghan, an adopted son of Mr. John Donnellan, (the Gardener,) died suddenly in St. Paul Street on Tuesday evening. He was taken into Mr. Cartier's store, and though every assistance was rendered by Dr. Tracey, no favourable symptom followed his efforts. An Inquest has been held on the body, verdict "accidental death."—Montreal Gazette.

From the Quebec Mercury.

The severe frost which closed the Navigation of the St. Lawrence, somewhat prematurely, was succeeded during the whole of yesterday by a rapid thaw with rain, which gave hopes that some of the vessels ashore would be enabled to avail themselves of the spring tides, to get to sea; but during the night it has frozen hard, and we fear these expectations will not be realized, some of the Ottawa's passengers who had come up to town, nevertheless, proceeded this morning to rejoin her, under the impression that they will be enabled to prosecute their voyage to Europe on board that ship.

We noticed lately the Mysterious death of Joseph Bergeron, at St. Antoine; in consequence of suspicions entertained as to the manner by which the deceased came to his death, B. A. Panet Esqr., Coroner for the District, repaired to the place to investigate the circumstance, the body was disinterred, and the examination of the Jury, the inquest returned a verdict of wilful Murder against J. Bte. Sevigny the younger. who was accordingly taken into custody on the 24th instant, and is now a prisoner in the Gaol of this city, to await his trial at the next Criminal term.

Loss of Vessels by Ice in the St. Lawrence.—We do not recollect such serious damages in shipping as those which have occurred in the end of last and the commencement of the present week at the distance of about fifty miles from the ports The greater part of the vessels mentioned below left the port on Friday and Saturday last. The doubling ice opposite the town, was then considerable, but had not the weather increased in severity the vessels would in all probability have got safe through the Traverse. After they had got down about 30 miles the drift ice formed on the long reach became so as to be considerable, that most of the vessels, after getting entangled in the ice, struck upon the ground, with great difficulty could get secured ashore, Two schooners, the Barbadoes and Dolphin, were abandoned at sea, the crew after saving themselves in the boats among the ice, after the greatest efforts. The property, including the ships, thus destroyed or forced in lay idle during eight months, is estimated at £20,000.

The passengers in the Ottawa, Esther, and Kingfisher came up Thursday morning.

The following vessels are ascertained to be ashore above the Traverse, some of them in a bad condition: Ottawa, and Caroline, at L'Islet; Esther, Kingfisher, Earl of Dalhousie and St. Anne, on Crane Island; the Barbadoes, bence for Barbadoes, and Dolphin for Halifax, have been abandoned in a sinking condition, crews saved with difficulty. The former was floating in the Traverse with two others on Tuesday last.

The Kingfisher, has thrown over part of her cargo, and is said to be, much iceged.

No certain information has been received respecting the Amethyst, but it is feared there is some little doubt that the former has got safe down, and it is hoped the latter also.

Alexander Carrington and Wm. M'Gillevray, Esquires, were elected on Tuesday last. No ice of consequence then below the Traverse.

The Esther was three days drifting in the ice, and lost an anchor and chain, but has not received much damage. Captain Douglas still intends to proceed to sea with her next spring tides (Sunday) should the navigation become sufficiently open.

The hull of the Barbadoes came up last evening —that vessel had her bows stove in by ice, while lying at anchor above the Traverse. She filled in seven minutes, and was carried down the River. Captain and crew saved.

Brig Robert, hence, 16th Oct. for London, was wrecked on Anticost 24th do. Captain and crew were taken on board the Wm. Hunter, bound up from Halifax to Quebec, and landed 15th Nov. on Barnaby Island. No lives lost. The Robert was built last winter for R. Dallin, Jun. She is a total wreck.

Capt. Corrigle of Hawara has come up to Quebec —his vessel is a total wreck at Matane.

St. Amand, the pilot of the William Gilliaery, came up last night. He reports having seen two brigs off Kamouraska, which he took to be the Antigua and Stephen Wright, on Friday last. These vessels would have an open passage through the North Channel, and the wind being strong W. S. W. Saw two brigs below the Traverse on Monday; one of them under sail Channel still open on the North side.

Married,

On Saturday evening, the 8th inst. at Ancaster, by the Rev. G. SUSSD; Alexander Chewett Esq. Barrister at Law, of Hamilton; to Miss Janet Findlay, sister of John Findlay, Esq. of this Village.

Died,

At Kingston, on Wednesday the 29th ult. Mrs. Jane Augustus Lewis, wife of Mr. J. W. Armstrong, merchant, of Kingston.

Departed this life, on Tuesday Evening, the 27th of November last, at Markham, U. C. at the residence of her Husband (Mr. John Pierhetler jr.) Mary Ann Pierhetler, eldest Daughter of the Reverend John D. Peterson, of that place—aged twenty-three Years, three Months and three Days—leaving behind her a deeply afflicted Husband, and infant Son, and a long train of mourning Relatives and Friends, to weep the tears of grief & sorrow, at her early departure—Yet, they go not "sorrowing as those who have no hope" beyond this present life.—The deceased was beloved by all those who knew her—her excellent and exemplary character as a Daughter, Sister, Wife, Mother, Christian, and Neighbour, will be long cherished.

It is admitted, that the habit of eulogizing, indiscriminately, departed friends, for real or supposed virtues, is too common at the present day; but the present brief notice is deemed a just tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased, by one who knew her well, and who also knows that this small tribute is not exaggerated.—Com Gazette.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First —The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture, than those got elsewhere.

Secondly—They are offered for sale at a price, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, they will not have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Yorton, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered a great object, (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated,) of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in bringing the Establishment to what it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

some other Power. Our Church is explicit in declaring, that the Christian Religion allows the Prince to "rule all estates and degrees committed to his charge by God, whether they be ecclesiastical or temporal, and to restrain with the civil sword the stubborn and evil doers" of all descriptions, whether they be of a spiritual, or of a merely temporal character. Desirous to lay the foundation deep of cheerful submission to the Sovereign, the Magistrates, and the Laws, she is studious to imprint on early childhood the valuable lesson "to honourand obey the King, and all that are put in authority under him; to submit themselves to all their Governors, to order themselves lowly and reverently to all their betters, and to do their duty in that state of life unto which it shall please God to call them." This lesson, which is early taught and late inculcated, is also without reserve or qualification; the spirit of obedience to the King, and to the Laws, universally enforced, without reference to any ecclesiastical authority, to learn in what cases that obedience may be conscientiously withheld.

Again, in the daily service of our Church, prayers are offered up for the welfare of the Sovereign, both temporal and eternal, while "on each of his subjects" are reminded of our obligation "faithfully to serve, honour, and humbly obey him;" and the Monarch at the same time kept in recollection, that his authority is derived from the King of Kings, and is given to him for the great ends of promoting the glory of God, and the happiness of his people: and, that he may employ his authority for these ends, is made the subject of a special petition from his people.

Established as she is on the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; providing, as far as human prudence can, for a succession of faithful men to inculcate the great mystery of Godliness and the true value of the Christian Sacrifice upon the altars of duly administering the Sacraments of Christ's institution: propounding scriptural articles of faith, and supplying devotional formularies of public worship: exhibiting a Catholic spirit towards all other Christian Churches, and a charitable feeling for her own members: setting the example of toleration, of adaptation to the wants and circumstances of society, of eminent loyalty and sound Protestantism, what can the State require for the purpose of utility, what can Religion demand for the propagation of its influence, if the members of a Church, so circumstanced, will but do their duty, faithfully, in the important station, to which it has pleased Providence to place them?

And may Almighty God, who has appointed the divers Orders of his Church, so replenish those who fill the same with the truth of his doctrine, and so endue them with innocency of life, that they may serve before him in their sacred ministry, to the glory of his great name, and to the salvation of the Souls entrusted to their charge, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Trade.—A remarkable activity prevails at Greenock, in the trade to India. Three vessels sailed in one week thence, two for Bombay and one for Calcutta, the last of which carried out goods to the amount of 700,000 yards of manufactured cotton goods, and upwards of 50,000 lbs. of cotton yarns; and three other vessels are now fitting out in the Clyde for these ports.

THE REVENUE.

From the London Courier of Oct. 11.

The financial papers, which we insert today, will be found to bear out the statement we yesterday made. On the present quarter, accompared with the corresponding quarter in 1826, there appears an increase of £909,787. It is under the head of Customs that we find the improvement has taken place, which leads to a result so highly gratifying. From the evidence which it gives, of the reviving state of our commerce, such a change must necessarily be contemplated with pleasure; inasmuch as it is a proof that it is no sudden spur which has caused the increase and which, from the suddenness, we might justly fear would not continue. The Returns shew a gradual progress through the year, in that important branch of the Revenue.

In the quarter ending Jan. 5, 1826, the produce of the Customs was £3,702,943.

Last January it amounted to £4,088,578.

In April last year it was 3,444,716.

In April 1827, £3,542,252.

In July last, year, £3,708,828.

In last July, £3,811,594.

In October, 1826, they were 4,579,649.

In the Quarter just concluded their produce amounts to £4,915,618.

Total amount of the Revenue for the year 1827, ending Oct. 10. £46,892,621

Ditto for the preceding year, £46,507,677

Increase on the present year, £385,005

We have thus shewn that the charge, we have the satisfaction to remark upon, is one gradually produced by the working of that system which has been so loudly arraigned, and not the mere offspring of some fortunate accident.

In the Excise, it will be seen, there is some falling off: but this may be partly accounted for by the partial failure of the Barley harvest. In the Stamps, and in the Post-office Duties, there is an improvement. We have no right to expect that there shall be a simultaneous augmentation under every head; but where an important branch has so greatly increased, and that on the Customs, we may confidently hope that, in the natural course of things, the Excise cannot long be depressed.

From the Liverpool Mercury of the 15th Oct.

There has been a steady demand for Wheat of all descriptions during the past week, and several cargoes of the middling qualities of foreign Wheat have been sold for shipments to Glasgow, till the import has exceeded the sales, and prices may be quoted 1d. a 2d. cheaper. Flour and Oatmeal have receded 6d. a 1s. per sack.

The market for Ashes is flat—the sales last week consisted of 10 brls. Boston Pots at 29s.; 20 Boston Pearls, at 30s.; and 100 Montreal Firsts, at 28s. 6d. a 28s. 9d. and 43 Montreal Pearls, 1826, at 28s. 9d.

Latest from Engl —By the packet ship York, from Liverpool, we have advices to the 23d October inclusive. The accounts from Paris are not so late as those received direct.

The British parliament had been prorogued till the end of December, which will put off their actual session till February, as they meet in December and adjourn for the holidays.

Foreign Intelligence.

We find nothing of much interest to add to the political intelligence received by the last arrivals. It will be seen by an extract from the Liverpool papers of 24th October, that the British Admiral had informed Ibrahim Pacha, that his orders were to prevent the Egyptian fleet from commencing hostilities, and that accordingly Ibrahim had promised not to leave Navarion.

From the Liverpool Courier 24th October

TURKEY.—Although no official intelligence has arrived from our Ambassador at Constantinople, yet, if any reliance may be placed upon the accounts furnished by the French papers, there appears little reason to expect that the Sultan will accede to the propositions of the three powers, until he has ascertained what means they may possess for enforcing his compliance

By despatches received at the Admiralty on Friday, from Admiral Sir E. Codrington, it appears that on the 25th ult. the French Admiral and Sir Edward had had an interview with Ibrahim Pacha, at which interview, after having stated to the Turkish commander, that the Porte had refused to accept the proffered mediation of the courts of England, France and Russia, the admirals added that they had orders to bring about an armistice by force, and to act against all who might oppose it. Ibrahim replied that he had been directed to push the war in the Morea, and to finish it by a decisive attack on Hydra. Finally he promised to send couriers to Constantinople and to Egypt, and gave his word that in five days should not quit Navarino till their return, hard as he considered it to be stopped in his career, when the strength of his expedition was such as to overwhelm the Greeks.

Mr. Gallatin has arrived in Paris. The American remarks, that he has succeeded in affecting some of the most important objects committed to his charge, but, says the editor "The West India trade is yet an unsettled question, and we trust rather than that this nation shall depart one little from the ground it has assumed, will long remain so."

RUSSIA AND PERSIA.

The Journal of St. Petersbuogh of Sept. 26, contains more news of the army in Georgia. It appears that a desperate battle took place between a division of the Russian army, which advanced to the relief of the convent of Etchmiadzine which was besieged by the Persian army of 25,000 men, 10,000 infantry, with a battery of 24 pieces of artillery, and 16,000 cavalry—commanded by Abbas Mirza. The Russians claim the victory, saying that the enemy lost 3000 men, while their own loss was very severe. The enemy attacked the Russians on all sides, and their cannon battery did much damage to the equipages; considerable bodies of infantry and cavalry charged them with impetuosity, but were always repulsed at the point of the bayonet, and the Russian artillery, ably directed, did them considerable injury. The ravage which the Russian artillery made in the ranks of Abbas Mirza was enormous: in many places the ground was covered with their dead, up to the mouths of the Russian cannon. The battle lasted from 7 o'clock in the morning till 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1827.

Since our last, there have been arrivals at Newyork bringing English dates to 23d Oct., but there is not any news of particular importance. The accounts from Lower Canada, state that much damage has been sustained by the outward bound shipping. Some of the Vessels have been totally lost in the drift ice, but notwithstanding the danger to which they were exposed, it is satisfactory to observe that no lives have been lost. The passengers had generally returned to Quebec, and the Captain of the Ottawa intended to take the advantage of a favorable change in the weather, to make a second attempt to proceed to Sea.

The Third Report of the Emigration Committee (1826,) is brought to a close in the last Albion. The inquiries of the Committee appear to have been principally directed to the ability which the Emigrant would possess, from the improved value of his Land, for repaying the amount advanced to him, on his taking possession of it. The amount which each Emigrant has received, with the interest for Seven years, chargeable at the expiration of that period with an annual interest of £4: that is of £60 improved to the value of £80, in consequence of the seven years deferred interest, the Emigrant having it in his power at any time, if he chooses, to redeem the principal debt of £80, diminishing at the same time the annual Interest, by paying instalments of £1 on every £20. The witnesses examined on this point before the Committee, concur in the opinion that the Emigrant would possess the ability of paying, if not in money at least in produce, the sum advanced upon the system above laid down. In promoting such a system of Emigration, the co-operation, to be afforded by the Colonies is alluded to in the following paragraph:—

Your Committee beg most distinctly to be understood that they rest their case entirely upon the promised co-operation and assistance of the Colonial Legislatures. Unless this can be obtained they feel that no experiment would be instituted; for they entertained they entertain confident hopes that it may be reduced to a regular and effective system; and though they could not go so far as to require a guarantee upon part of the Colonial Legislatures, they should expect them to make such provisions as should tend to enforce and secure the validity of the engagements made. Nor, upon a full examination of the subject, can your Committee be induced to conceive that the local Legislatures can have any disinclination to enter into such arrangements. The intelligent inhabitants of those Colonies cannot fail to be aware that when those Emigrants repay the loan, which is proposed to be lent to each head of a Family, they will only repay a very small part of the wealth which they possess, and which has been created by their Emigration. They will be aware also that the projected Emigration will consist exclusively of able-bodied healthy persons, selected upon system in the Mother Country, and introduced upon system into the Colony, and that it is not to be a casual, desultory, and unprovided Emigration.—Under such circumstances, your Committee cannot doubt the disposition o. the local Legislatures of the Colonies to encourage the measure, and to facilitate the process of re-payment, an opinion which is expressed unanimously by the Colonial witnesses examined before your Committee.

Your Committee thinks that it is only necessary to have these views fully and clearly understood, and the evidence examined, which has been taken in order to induce the Colonies to accept with gratitude an arrangement of this nature. Nor do your Committee found their opinion upon mere speculative data. They would specially refer to the letter addressed to the Earl Bathurst, by the magistrates and others resident in the district of Newcastle, in the province of Upper Canada, which is to be found in the Appendix to the Report, questions 3,701 and 3,702, in which they explain their view of the advantages to be derived from a regulated system of colonization. In the same place will also be found the expression of gratitude on the part of the Irish emigrants of 1825, for the change effected in their situation.

From Official documents forming part of the appendix to the Report of 1825, relating to the Emigration under the superintendence of the Hon. P. Robinson in 1823, the Committee, draw the following Conclusions.

"A person in the south of Ireland, for whose labour no demand existed, and consequently whose presence in Ireland added nothing to the general wealth of the country, but, on the contrary, whose subsistence was a deduction from that wealth, was removed to a district in Upper Canada; he received from the Government, for himself, his wife, and three children, the sum of £100 sterling in land and not in money. This £100 has enabled him to cultivate a proportion of 100 acres of land; and at the end of seven years he will be in possession of a surplus income of £10 per annum.

Your Committee cannot conclude their observations on this point of inquiry, without expressing their sense of the zeal, ability, and discretion, with which Mr. Peter Robinson effected the location of the two bodies of Emigrants in 1823 and 1825, under circumstances (however inevitable) of want of previous preparation, which would be avoided in future instances, where emigration formed part of a national measure."

During the last Session of Parliament, an application was made by the Inhabitants of the Town of Cobourg, for the purpose of constructing a Harbor at that place, but owing to the press of business, it was not brought forward. It will be renewed, we understand, this Session, and the most strenuous efforts are making, to ensure the success of this contemplated and very necessary improvement in that part of the Country. A scientific person has been employed during the Summer to examine the ground, and prepare estimates of the probable cost of the undertaking. His suggestion is to excavate a Harbour inland in the centre of the Town, and to secure the approach to it by Piers carried out to twelve feet water. The expense of such a work is estimated at £5,000, to defray which, a toll on imports and exports is proposed, the amount of which, from the present actual state of the trade of the country, it is supposed would yield from 2500 to 3000 per annum, In aid of the work and for the purpose of making up any deficiency in the repayment of the principal loaned for carrying the undertaking into effect, a subscription has been opened and £250 is already subscribed in sums of from £10 to £1, annually, for the period of Ten Years, at the expiration of which time allowing something for the increased trade which may be expected to take place, from the facility which will be afforded, for the entrance of Vessels, it is thought the Port dues, together with the subscription would pay off the loan. The want of a Harbour on that part of the Coast, has long been complained of, by the owners of Shipping on the Lake, and from the liberal spirit evinced by the Petitioners, we hope the present application will be successful. The Newcastle District is rapidly rising into importance, and with the new Settlements which have lately been made in it, there can be no doubt that the period is not distant, when its Commerce must be very considerable.

Complimentary language.—"We never knew a member who attended the York official dinner parties during the session, that did not sell the interests of his constituents, in some way or other, before the session was over. We could a merely-mouthed ignoramus, who never, before he was a member, sat at a gentleman's table—who was born without patriotism, and never had the fear of his ancestry before his eyes, refuse any thing to an official gentleman of 15 or £1600 a year, that has been so kind to him as to place him on his right hand, once or twice a week during the season, at a dinner-table, the very sight of which, bewilders his senses? Impossible—the debt of gratitude to his official patron, for such pure disinterested kindness—besides the pride of writing home to his country cronies, that he "had the honor to dine with the Hon.——in company with——" is too much for a mock patriot, with weak and corrupt heart, to bear."

Such is the language of the "Canadian Freeman," when speaking of our Members of Parliament—he is certainly not very "mealymouthed" in the choice of his expressions—and we think the Commons House of Assembly of Upper Canada will feel highly indebted to him for the compliments he bestows upon them. We remember having heard a certain member, on whom the Canadian Freeman just now, lavishes the highest strains of encomium, assert in his place, that, the present House of Assembly was the most independent that Upper Canada ever had—yet strange to say, even Patriots will differ in opinion, and the Canadian Freeman compares them to "a set of hungry sycophants" who would "sell their own birth rights, and the interests of the country, for a Mess of Pottage." What a picture does the Canadian Freeman draw of our House of Assembly. Members—"reeling with recent debauch—with enervated nerves—and faultering tongues—rising on the floor of the House"—paying the price of the evenings corruption, by the mornings surrender of the "general interests of the Province at large"—and to whom—" into the hands of a new corrupt tools of power"—a few!—how transcendent the compliment paid to the many, or the majority. If the Canadian Freeman is to believed, what opinion must the world have of the House of Assembly of Upper Canada—we say if he is to believed—but the subject is too disgusting to be pursued any further.

United States.

North Eastern Boundary.—Upon this subject the National Intelligencer says, "negociations were commenced in London before Mr. Rush's return to the United States, and have been continued by Mr. Gallatin, which are understood to have resulted in the formation of a Convention settling the preliminaries of the question according to the Treaty of Ghent."

"As to the matter of fact, each party has been in possession of some portion of the disputed ground; that is to say, the Governments of Massachusetts and Maine, on our part, and of the Province of New Brunwick on the part of Great Britain, have exercised jurisdiction over it; and each party has been disposed to strengthen its claim by further acts of possession. In the mean time, between the Foreign Ministers of the United States and Great Britain there has been a constant correspondence, at considerable length, however, but always in the most friendly tone, having for its object the inculcation of mutual forbearance, of the expediency of the preservation of the same state of things in the disputed territory, as existed at the date of the Treaty of Ghent, and of avoiding all disputes which might grow out of the agitation of it.

"With respect to the two Governments, there is a perfectly good understanding, upon the obvious propriety, and indeed necessity, of forbearance and moderation on both sides, as to this question.—Any Acts of a contrary character are acts of individual citizens, without the authority or sanction of either Government, and, of course, are to be avoided and rebuked."

Lower Canada.

Mr. R Torrance, one of the passengers in the Ottawa, came up to Quebec this morning. That ship is ashore on the Ice off Point Levi, but four anchors, but we hear is in a safe situation. The Kingfisher and some others were opposite Crane Island on Sunday; drifting on the ice with the tide, in a most perilous situation. We fear that the accounts from below the Traverse will not be of a more cheering nature; different statements concurring that the river is full of ice from Green Island upwards.

Extract of a letter from Captain Douglas, of the ship Ottawa, to Messrs. Gillespy, Finlay & Co.

"QUEBEC, Monday, 26th Nov. Noon.

"GENTLEMEN.—I have to request that you will send down 90 fathoms 1¼ inch chain cable to secure the ship before the next spring tides, and a person to accompany it down, as I cannot get officers of the ship and myself being exhausted with excessive fatigue.

The Earl of Dalhousie and one other brig, are ashore at Crane Island. The Caroline is ashore three miles below L'Islet, full of water and abandoned. The Kingfisher is still drifting in the ice, but must be lost. I fear greatly for the lives of those on board her.

"Three vessels have driven from their anchorage through the Traverse."

A letter from Quebec, dated the 27th November, says:—"We have very bad accounts from below. The Ottawa is on shore at L'Islet; the Kingfisher, riding up and down with the ice; the Earl of Dalhousie, the Caroline, and another brig, on shore at Crane Island. Mr. Tulloch's vessel, the Caroline, has been abandoned, and is floating about in the ice. I have this moment learnt that in addition to the vessels mentioned above, two square rigged vessels and six schooners, have been lost in the River and Gulph."

A subsequent letter of the same date, after noticing those mentioned above, says:—" Apprehensions are entertained for the lives of the people on board the Kingfisher. One schooner has grounded, was crushed, and every soul in her perished. Two of the crew were saved. Three vessels were seen drifting, through the Traverse, among the ice; one of them, supposed to be the Canadian, was firing guns as a signal of distress. Her crew is supposed to be saved. A schooner from Halifax is lost below the Traverse, & one outward bound is on shore at Green Island. Some of these smaller vessels are not ensured, and the loss will fall on the owners."

This year there have been shipped 28,000 barrels of ashes—a quantity much below the annual average. Of these 4000 are on board those vessels which are in the ice at and below the river.

A lad of the name of Monaghan, an adopted son of Mr. John Donnellan, (the Gardener,) died suddenly in St. Paul Street on Tuesday evening. He was taken into Mr. Cartier's store, and though every assistance was rendered by Dr. Tracey, no favourable symptom followed his efforts. An Inquest has been held on the body, verdict "accidental death."—Montreal Gazette.

From the Quebec Mercury.

The severe frost which closed the Navigation of the St. Lawrence, somewhat prematurely, was succeeded during the whole of yesterday by a rapid thaw with rain, which gave hopes that some of the vessels ashore would be enabled to avail themselves of the spring tides, to get to sea; but during the night it has frozen hard, and we fear these expectations will not be realized, some of the Ottawa's passengers who had come up to town, nevertheless, proceeded this morning to rejoin her, under the impression that they will be enabled to prosecute their voyage to Europe on board that ship.

We noticed lately the Mysterious death of Joseph Bergeron, at St. Antoine; in consequence of suspicions entertained as to the manner by which the deceased came to his death, B. A. Panet Esqr., Coroner for the District, repaired to the place to investigate the circumstance, the body was disinterred, and the examination of the Jury, the inquest returned a verdict of wilful Murder against J. Bte. Sevigny the younger. who was accordingly taken into custody on the 24th instant, and is now a prisoner in the Gaol of this city, to await his trial at the next Criminal term.

Loss of Vessels by Ice in the St. Lawrence.—We do not recollect such serious damages in shipping as those which have occurred in the end of last and the commencement of the present week at the distance of about fifty miles from the ports The greater part of the vessels mentioned below left the port on Friday and Saturday last. The doubling ice opposite the town, was then considerable, but had not the weather increased in severity the vessels would in all probability have got safe through the Traverse. After they had got down about 30 miles the drift ice formed on the long reach became so as to be considerable, that most of the vessels, after getting entangled in the ice, struck upon the ground, with great difficulty could get secured ashore, Two schooners, the Barbadoes and Dolphin, were abandoned at sea, the crew after saving themselves in the boats among the ice, after the greatest efforts. The property, including the ships, thus destroyed or forced in lay idle during eight months, is estimated at £20,000.

The passengers in the Ottawa, Esther, and Kingfisher came up Thursday morning.

The following vessels are ascertained to be ashore above the Traverse, some of them in a bad condition: Ottawa, and Caroline, at L'Islet; Esther, Kingfisher, Earl of Dalhousie and St. Anne, on Crane Island; the Barbadoes, bence for Barbadoes, and Dolphin for Halifax, have been abandoned in a sinking condition, crews saved with difficulty. The former was floating in the Traverse with two others on Tuesday last.

The Kingfisher, has thrown over part of her cargo, and is said to be, much iceged.

No certain information has been received respecting the Amethyst, but it is feared there is some little doubt that the former has got safe down, and it is hoped the latter also.

Alexander Carrington and Wm. M'Gillevray, Esquires, were elected on Tuesday last. No ice of consequence then below the Traverse.

The Esther was three days drifting in the ice, and lost an anchor and chain, but has not received much damage. Captain Douglas still intends to proceed to sea with her next spring tides (Sunday) should the navigation become sufficiently open.

The hull of the Barbadoes came up last evening —that vessel had her bows stove in by ice, while lying at anchor above the Traverse. She filled in seven minutes, and was carried down the River. Captain and crew saved.

Brig Robert, hence, 16th Oct. for London, was wrecked on Anticost 24th do. Captain and crew were taken on board the Wm. Hunter, bound up from Halifax to Quebec, and landed 15th Nov. on Barnaby Island. No lives lost. The Robert was built last winter for R. Dallin, Jun. She is a total wreck.

Capt. Corrigle of Hawara has come up to Quebec —his vessel is a total wreck at Matane.

St. Amand, the pilot of the William Gilliaery, came up last night. He reports having seen two brigs off Kamouraska, which he took to be the Antigua and Stephen Wright, on Friday last. These vessels would have an open passage through the North Channel, and the wind being strong W. S. W. Saw two brigs below the Traverse on Monday; one of them under sail Channel still open on the North side.

Married,

On Saturday evening, the 8th inst. at Ancaster, by the Rev. G. SUSSD; Alexander Chewett Esq. Barrister at Law, of Hamilton; to Miss Janet Findlay, sister of John Findlay, Esq. of this Village.

Died,

At Kingston, on Wednesday the 29th ult. Mrs. Jane Augustus Lewis, wife of Mr. J. W. Armstrong, merchant, of Kingston.

Departed this life, on Tuesday Evening, the 27th of November last, at Markham, U. C. at the residence of her Husband (Mr. John Pierhetler jr.) Mary Ann Pierhetler, eldest Daughter of the Reverend John D. Peterson, of that place—aged twenty-three Years, three Months and three Days—leaving behind her a deeply afflicted Husband, and infant Son, and a long train of mourning Relatives and Friends, to weep the tears of grief & sorrow, at her early departure—Yet, they go not "sorrowing as those who have no hope" beyond this present life.—The deceased was beloved by all those who knew her—her excellent and exemplary character as a Daughter, Sister, Wife, Mother, Christian, and Neighbour, will be long cherished.

It is admitted, that the habit of eulogizing, indiscriminately, departed friends, for real or supposed virtues, is too common at the present day; but the present brief notice is deemed a just tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased, by one who knew her well, and who also knows that this small tribute is not exaggerated.—Com Gazette.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First —The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture, than those got elsewhere.

Secondly—They are offered for sale at a price, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, they will not have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Yorton, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered a great object, (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated,) of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in bringing the Establishment to what it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

CONSTANTINOPLE.

"By three great evils Constantinople is often disquieted;—the plague, the fire, and the Sword.—There had been several instances of the plague just before my arrival, and five or six days after my departure, I was informed by letters, that two hundred a day were carried off by it. The fear of it was manifested while I was there, from the continual care that was taken by the Franks to avoid touching those who passed them in the streets.—The sword was making its ravages, and a stillness reigned in the streets of Byzantium as if half its inhabitants were slain. And since my departure several thousand houses have been destroyed by the flames. Thus the Almighty visits with his judgments the fair city, which, like Rome, is said to stand on seven hills.

I viewed it from the tower of Peru, but could not trace with my eye the seven hills mentioned. The prospect from the tower is enchanting. Hills and valleys covered with the habitations of 600,000 souls; the mighty domes and lofty minarets of mosques; the Palace of the Sultan, encircled with gardens, beautiful as Eden; the waters of the Bosphorus, and the sea of Marmora, dividing the continents of Europe and Asia, and whitened with sails; and lofty mountains, among which is Olympus, with everlasting snows upon his hoary head;—all combine to present a view perhaps unequalled for beauty and grandeur in any part of the World.

According to the information of the most intelligent Greek, at Constantinople, it contains about the number of inhabitants above mentioned. Of these 60,000 are Greeks, 100,000 Armenians, and 30,000 Jews. The Greeks have 48 churches. There may be 300 or 400 Turkish Mosques.

During my stay in the city, I visited the Patriarch of Constantinople, and the Patriarch of Jerusalem who resided there, conversed with several of the Priests, and visited in several Greek Families, among whom I met with the same kind reception, as among the Greeks in Egypt, Palestine, Syria, and Asia Minor.

Ten or twelve days before my arrival, the Patriarch of Constantinople received, as I was told, an order from the Porte to command the people under his care not to have any intercourse with the Franks.

As the order of Janizaries was abolished, I could not avail myself of the guard which strangers had before been accustomed to have, in walking about the city. With a native Christian for a guide, I visited the principal bazars of Byzantium, the Hippodrome, and the Burnt-Pillar, passed the Mosque of St. Sophia, the Exhibition Porte and the Divan, without receiving the slightest insult. Great stillness reigned throughout the city, though armed men and soldiers were marching in every direction. Before the Palace, or Seignor's Palace I saw several bodies of Janizaries, who had just been beheaded. At the present time no stranger is permitted to enter the mosque of St. Saphia, which I was very desirous of visiting.

After visiting Byzantium, I took a boat and rowed up the Bosphorus, till I came in sight of the Black Sea. On each side of the Bosphorus, are numerous villages, inhabited by the Turks and Christians.—Those on the European side most attracted my attention. Booyookdereh, which is two hours and a half's journey from Constantinople, is one of the most beautiful. Here reside most of the Foreign Ambassadors. At Therapia, where the French Ambassador resides, were pointed out to me the Imperial seats of the celebrated Ipsilanti and Mavrocordati.

The fine pure air which filled the sails of Merchant Ships passing up and down the Bosphorus, the lofty mountains in all directions; flocks of birds resting on the waters, or skimming along the surface; hills interspersed with villages and gardens; country seats of the rich, with the more splendid Palaces of Sultanes and Sultanas; formed a scene truly beautiful. The pleasure of contemplating it was, however, now and then interrupted by seeing the dead body of a Janizary floating along, which reminded me of the infatuated capital, where I arrived by the help of the oar and the strong current, in one hour and a half from Booyookdereh.

RETURN TO SMYRNA.—From Constantinople I took passage on board an English Merchant Ship for Smyrna. I left the city of confusion, plague, & sickness, without a single regret. It was half past 5, P. M. when we put under weigh, and a fair strong breeze, together with the current, hurried us swiftly down the sea of Marmora. Thus happily, said I, when death comes, may I be wafted from this world, which seems so beautiful, but which is the residence of sin and sorrow After passing the Seven Towers, I sat down on the stern of the Ship, reflecting on the changes of fifteen hundred years; and watching the city of Constantine the Great, till darkness began to hover over it, and I could only discern faintly some of the loftiest domes and minarets, like a few of the deeds of ancient times which remain in history, while multitudes of less note are lost in oblivion."

HINDOO WIDOWS.

A fresh Parliamentary report has just been issued on this interesting subject, from which is extracted the following most distressing and horrible case:—A girl of about 14 years of age, whose Husband, a Bramin, died when absent from his family, and a fortnight after this event, her father being absent and unacquainted with what was passing, she proceeded to burn herself on a fu eral pile prepared by other near relations, and which was fired by her uncle. She soon leaped from the flames, and was seized, taken up by the hands and feet, & again thrown upon it much burnt; she again sprung from the pile and running to a well hard by, laid herself down in the water-course, weeping bitterly. A sheet was then offered, and she was desired by her uncle to place herself upon it; she refused, saying he would carry her to the Ganges, and she would rather quit the family and live by beggary or any thing, if they would have mercy upon her. At length, her uncle swearing by the Ganges, that, if she would seat herself upon the cloth, he would carry her home, she did so, was bound up in it, carried to the pile, now fiercely burning, and again thrown into the flames The wretched victim once more made an effort to save herself, when, at the instigation of the rest, a Musulman approached near enough to reach her with his sword, and cutting her through the head, she fell back, and was rescued from further suffering by death

Summary.

Wonderful Recovery of Vision.—Mrs. Pollock, a respectable widow, who resides with her daughter in Hanover-Square, in the south liberties of this city, became blind twenty-two years ago, from inflamation in the eyes, induced by one of them being injured by a stalk of flax.—During this long period, the back of Mrs. Pollock was a complete blank to her, so completely had "dim suffusion veiled" those tender organs Thus she continued, without the remotest hope of ever discerning an object, when, about seven weeks since, she told her daughter, Mrs. Stephenson, "I think, my dear, I perceive the window—has it bars across it?" "That were a happy circumstance indeed" replied the daughter; "but I fear it only imagination." "The window has no bars." The mother was silent for a minute, and then exclaimed, "I think daughter I can see my arm." It was no phantasm; a kind Providence was restoring what he had taken away; and from that moment, the object of his goodness has been daily improving, insomuch, that she can now clearly distinguish the members of the family, and walk abroad, without needing, as formerly, one to lead her by the hand.—Londonderry Journal.

The London Globe, of the 8th of October, contains the following paragraph:—

"We understand that although the Duke of Wellington does not think it right to recommend to the Government a reduction of the Army, he has introduced a kind of reform, of great importance to the Army and the Country. He has declared, and he acts rigidly up to the declaration, that no claims for promotion, on the ground of seniority, shall be set aside, however powerful may be the influence and patronage used for that purpose."

His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence has requested that the Lord Provost of Edinburgh would be called the Grand Imperial Ship Canal. His Grace has become the Patron of this great national undertaking.

The Duke of Wellington arrived at one time invested visiting Scotland this season; but the Lord Provost of Edinburgh received a letter from His Grace last week, regretting that it would not be in his power to do so. Mr. Scott is now in charge of the Land Artice Expedition, who landed here yesterday morning from the ship Prince of Wales, last from Woolwich Factory. Hudson's Bay, which also left on the 15th of September. These intrepid officers as well as their chief, are arrived home in the most perfect health, as are 16 of the 18 men who accompanied them in their arduous discoveries; one of their number was lost in a rapid' and one died from natural causes. Captain Back accompanied Capt Franklin in his endeavours to reach Cape Turnagain in boats, instead of Mackenzie's River; and Lieut. Kendall went with Dr. Richardson, in an eastern direction, to examine the intermediate coast between the Mackenzie and the Coppermine Rivers. Though neither party of the expedition has actually traced the navigation of a north-west passage, yet they are perfectly satisfied, from the success which has attended their discoveries, that a passage is open from Davis's Straits to Behring's Straits, or from the North Atlantic to the North Pacific Ocean; find 'that the geographical position is such—that the great continent of America is an Island only: but, from insurmountable obstructions of ice, the passage a round it can never, or but very seldom, be navigated.

The Iron Trade.—The late advance in iron has been the effect solely of an increasing demand. It is gratifying to state, that orders have been received for wrought and cast goods, which cannot be completed for some time. The trade are anxiously awaiting the result of the meeting of the iron masters, which will take place at Birmingham, in a few days. It is fully expected that a considerable advance in price will be determined upon. English iron in bars is from, at from £9 10s to £11 per ton. The last Russia has been sold as high as £12 per ton, being an advance of about £3 per ton, within the last month or five weeks. The demand is occasioned by large orders from the Continent for machinery.—Sheffield Mercury.

From the Courier.

LONDON, Oct. 13,

In discussing the question of Emigration, there are some persons who seem to think that the laboring pauper may be employed to equal advantage at home, in draining of bogs, or other public works that might be undertaken, with no greater outlay of capital than is proposed by the report of the Emigration Committee. But let any person who is capable of judging, reflect for a moment on the difference to the paupers' themselves. So long as public works are going on, and money is expended at home, the laborer employed will find work and food; but, at the expiration of seven years, will you find him or his wretched family raised in the scale of civilisation and comfort? No. On the contrary, he would, in all probability, be just as much off before, inhabiting the same miserable hovel, and with his physical strength naturally impaired, by seven years' hard toil, merely for a scanty support. But, if he passes as an emigrant and, removed to our North American Colonies, with the assistance of the loan proposed, visit him in his new abode after seven years, and how will you find him? He will not only have made considerable advances towards paying the outlay of his settlement, but you will find him the proprietor of one hundred Acres of good land, twenty or five and twenty of which he will be clearing and under culture, with a good log house, barn, cows, oxen, ect, and the certain prospects of independence in view for his family. Is not this a cheering prospect for the poor half starved laborer? No person, unless he has visited the Colonies, can imagine the change that generally takes place, even as to the industrious habits of those who have settled at home.—Emigration from the North of Ireland to America has been going on for the last Fifty years, to the extent of from ten thousand to fifteen thousand annually, and to that fact alone may be attributed a great deal of the peasantry of the Northern Counties over other parts of Ireland. If we encourage the removal of 100,000 in three years, by means of public Emigration, there is surely a doubt but that an equal number would voluntarily follow them, free of any expense to the public; and we may fairly assume, that in ten years 500,000 persons would be removed.—London Courier.

LONDON, Oct 4.

The following was posted at Lloyd's this morning:

Extract of a letter from Captain Hunt, of the Atlas, from Madras, dated off Plymouth, Oct. 1.

"We experienced a continuance of storms for eighteen days, whilst rounding the Cape of Good Hope. In one of them, when opposite the coast of Algoa Bay on the 27th of June, about 5, A. M. by a sudden explosion the ship was covered with several balls of fire part of which entered the mainmast at the lower deck, close to the middle, where it burst out, carrying with it two thirds of the mast, hoops and fishes. A great part passed through one of the pumps, which it split into seven decks and filled those of the cabin with fire and flame the shock subsided than another explosion happened, all the sails on the mainmast were cut to pieces though furled, all the gaff and boom and sky light broken to atoms; many of our watches materially injured, and our companies greatly affected, one of which is at this time acting in the reverse order. During the last night I suffered with pain and half-stones of peculiar shape and size felt.

Portsmouth, Oct. 13.—We have much gratification in announcing the arrival of Capt Back and Lieut. Kendall, of the Royal Navy, in charge of the Land Artice Expedition, who landed here yesterday morning from the ship Prince of Wales, last from Woolwich Factory, Hudson's Bay, which also left on the 15th of September. These intrepid officers as well as their chief, are arrived home in the most perfect health, as are 16 of the 18 men who accompanied them in their arduous discoveries; one of their number was lost in a rapid' and one died from natural causes. Captain Back accompanied Capt Franklin in his endeavours to reach Cape, that is Turnagain in boats, instead of Mackenzie's River; and Lieut. Kendall went with Dr. Richardson, in an eastern direction, to examine the intermediate coast between the Mackenzie and the Coppermine Rivers. Though neither party of the expedition has actually traced the navigation of a north-west passage, yet they are perfectly satisfied, from the success which has attended their discoveries, that a passage is open from Davis's Straits to Behring's Straits, or from the North Atlantic to the North Pacific Ocean; find 'that the geographical position is such—that the great continent of America is an Island only: but, from insurmountable obstructions of ice, the passage around it can never, or but very seldom, be navigated.

The Iron Trade.—The late advance in iron has been the effect solely of an increasing demand. It is gratifying to state, that orders have been received for wrought and cast goods, which cannot be completed for some time. The trade are anxiously awaiting the result of the meeting of the London, Nov. 2d. City 2 o'clock.—The absence of all political intelligence, occasioned a dull morning at the Stock Exchange; but the vacancy of news was not of long duration; it is amply filled up with rumours. We have heard to-day of a serious misunderstanding among the Ministers, and of great Sales of Stock from the many other reports no doubt equally true, and equally alarming. Consols for account which opened at 87¼, fell to 87; the quotation is now, buyers 87.—Courier.

By advices from Leghorn, dated Oct 16, which have reached us this morning, we learn that accounts had been received there, by two ships which had sailed from Modon with extraordinary speed, (one of which was only nine days on the voyage) to the following effect:—"On the 27th of September, the frigate Cambrian arrived at Navarino, from Smyrna, charged with despatches from the Porte to Ibrahim Pacha, containing the resolution of the Sultan, not to accept of any mediation of the Allied Powers in regard to Greece, as well as a declaration, that in case of extremities, the Sultan would put himself at the head of his forces, for the purpose of terminating the war. It is said, that the armistice concluded with Ibrahim, contains conditions that hostilities shall re-commence against the Greeks, if it is not approved of by the Sultan, or the Viceroy of Egypt.—British Traveller, Nov. 1.

The New Dock-yard at Sheerness.—The extensive works which have been in progress at this important naval station are rapidly advancing to completion. There are three new docks, of the most approved construction, preparing for vessels of the first class, into one of which the Prince Regent was lately admitted! It is contemplated to form a three decker, and perhaps the largest ship in the universe; and although encumbered with all her masts, yards, guns, and stores, her examination was completed without an hour's delay. The new building slip, which is in progress, is on a scale of great magnitude, and, in the opinion of the best informed judges, is admirably designed for the purpose. Annexed to this, there are three basins, capable of floating, with security, 24 vessels of the largest dimensions; and two other basins for the smaller sized ships, such as frigates, sloops, and corvettes; one of the largest basins is fitted with a cassoon, for detaining the water at ebb tide, so as to keep the vessels afloat, but in the others the tide is permitted to flow in and out, from which, however, no possible injury can accrue, as there is always the bed of the reservoir is a soft mud.—In the garrison likewise some considerable improvements are going forward. The greater part of the old dilapidated houses which flanked the main road in extenso extremity have been pulled down, and others are still destined to share the same fate; and the space thus created will be occupied by works of defence, of such strength that Sheerness will become an almost impregnable fortress. There are now lying in the line of the Medway, between Chatham and Sheerness, 25 sail of the line, 25 frigates, and 15 sloops of war, to which have been added, the splendid vessel lately launched, the George the Fourth, of 120 guns, which is unquestionably the finest ship in the British navy. It is reported that the works in the Dock-yard, together with the fortifications of the town, will be completed in the latter end of the next year, or the beginning of the following year at the farthest.

The hair is dressed in large curls, with plaited bands, arranged across in a garland of blue dahlias. Close to the throat is a delicate gold chain, entwined three or four times, and beneath it a row of small pearl-stones and embossed set in gold with pearl-shaped pendants. Short white kid gloves. Slippers of the same colour as the dress.

The excavations which re-commenced a few days ago at the Thames Tunnel, proceed in the most favorable manner. From the nature of the soil, and the great caution used, not more than one foot per day has as yet been tunnelled. But the fact of the removal of the shield, to the extent just stated, is of itself a most important one, as the operations of the waters has been effectually guarded against. It is now considered certain by the Engineers, that the work may be terminated successfully, and the only circumstance which can now delay it, is the want of capital. The directors are now in correspondence with Government on the subject of a loan of money. The opinion is, from what has transpired, that a loan will be granted.

An important decision was given in the Court of Common Pleas in an action to recover the amount of a debt contracted in 1819. In order to take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations, evidence was given of a conditional acknowledgment made by the defendant within six years, nearly in these words:—"Sam said she was not obliged to, and not pay the debt, as she had but two sovereigns. She regretted that she could not discharge the plaintiff's demand, as it might bring all her other creditors about her as well." It was contended after this this acknowledgment of the debt did not take the case out of the operations of the Statute of Limitation. There had been several judgments on this subject; still each of the cases turned upon the question with respect to the law. He would, therefore, once for all, declare, that no acknowledgment could avail, unless it amounted to a promise to pay. In the present instance, the defendant had said that she minding to pay, had, in fact, declared her inability to pay, accompanying that declaration with the expression of regret. The plaintiff's claim must therefore stand as if the acknowledgment had never adverted to the existen e of the debt since 1819. The plaintiff was accordingly nonsuited.

SINGULAR TRIAL.

Breach of Promise of Marriage.—At the Galway Assizes lately, an action was brought by Miss Doyle, the daughter of an apothecary, deceased, against Mr. Hugh Clarke, a partner in an extensive Mercantile house, for a breach of promise of marriage, the pendalty of £5000. The plaintiff became acquainted with Mr. C. in 1819. In 1822 he proposed marriage, and was accepted. Various reasons were assigned by the defendant as causes of delay until 1824, when her brother thought fit to remonstrate with him. Mr. Clarke replied civil reply, he stated, that he could not conveniently marry immediately, and wished to have it delayed a little longer. The family refused to listen to any further postponement, and declared their willingness to have the match broken off and for ever put an end to. After some delay, Mr. C. renewed his assurances, the bridal dresses were prepared, and the marriage was to have taken place in November, 1826, but just when the time came Mr. C. was said to be very ill. It was then appointed for Christmas, but Mr. C. was again too bad to attend the wedding. Arrangements were made for the marriage a short time afterwards; but when the time approached, he wrote a letter as if from his bed, expressing extreme anxiety that he could not come as he had promised, and spoke of his state of health as so desperate, that he believed he would never be able to leave his bed. The plaintiff and her brother, on receipt of this letter, set off instantly for Loughrea, and found him at a dinner party!—(Laughter.) The brother was as you may suppose, considerably agitated, and it is not to be wondered at if he remonstrated against such conduct in a harsh and personal manner. The defendant expressed his sincere regret at the delay, and fixed positively on the 15th January as the day when he would be married, and, during the intervening time, he wrote several letters of affection to the Lady. He arrived in Galway on the 14th, and on the 15th was again taken suddenly ill. (Laughter.) Mr. D. advised him to call in a Physician and have some advice; but no, he had an utter contempt for medicine; yet, so ill was he, that he declared to his God, that he could not cross the streets, and at that very moment he had bespoken a chaise, and at the hour of nine o'clock at night he fled from Galway. Evidence was then called, who proved the plaintiff's case. Dr. O'Malley described the defendant as labouring under a peculiar complaint which was indescribable. The Jury retired, and in about half an hour returned with a verdict of damages—£1,000, and sixpence costs.

The mother of Burns' Highland Mary, who has resided in Greenock for a long time, died here on the 27th September at the advanced age of 85 years.—This venerable looking woman remembered to almost the last moment of her existence, with an affectionate regard, the one who inspired Burns' finest effusions, and was the object of his purest attachment; and it was impossible to hear her enter minutely into the particulars of his life and the amiable qualities of her heart, without feeling convinced that Mary Campbell had something more than ordinary attractions to fascinate the mind of the poet. We are to judge from the appearance of the mother, whose fine black eye and regular features, at her advanced age, gave indications of early beauty, we would say that "Highland Mary" probably had also personal charms, which would have influenced a less sensitive mind than that of Robert Burns. Amongst the little stores of the deceased, there was nothing to be found as memento of a debt contracted in 1789. In order to take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations, evidence was given of a conditional acknowledgment made by the defendant within six years, nearly in these words:—"Sam said she was not obliged to, and not pay the debt, as she had but two sovereigns. She regretted that she could not discharge the plaintiff's demand, as it might bring all her other creditors about her as well." It was contended after this this acknowledgment of the debt did not take the case out of the operations of the Statute of Limitation. YORK, U. C. Saturday, December 22, 1827.

The latest arrival at New York, the Manchester, brings London dates to 3d November. We have copied in this days paper, the few extracts which are given in the Albion.

Highways.—Some allusion was made in one of our last Numbers, to the Statute labor performed by law on the Roads throughout the Province.—From a calculation made at the time, it appeared that, 74,000 days labor were exacted for properties rated on the Assessment Lists, which if commuted for at the reduced rate of 3s. per day, would yield the sum of £7,400. During the last Session of Parliament, a Committee on Highways was appointed, and sat for some time, but their report with other matters remained undetermined, when the House was prorogued—indeed if our recollection serves us, a second report which was intended to have been made, was not submitted, but we believe it was proposed by the Committee, to raise a sum for the improvement of the Highways, by an additional levy of one Shilling on every Horse in the Province.—This plan was lately suggested by a writer in some of the papers, but we stated at the time, that the suppose, considerably agitated, and it is not to be wondered at if he remonstrated against such conduct in a harsh and personal manner. The defendant expressed his sincere regret at the delay, and fixed positively on the 15th January as the day when he would be married, and, during the intervening time, he wrote several letters of affection to the Lady. "To the Editor of the U. E. Loyalist.

Sir,

In your last number you have, at the request of "a Hater of Hypocrites," inserted in his communication which appeared in the Kingston Chronicle of 23d November last, "relating more particularly to the university about to be established at York." I trust that you will act the part of an impartial Editor and give place in your columns to a paper that appeared in the last Upper Canada Herald under the noble signature of "Genuine British Feeling" so that your numerous subscribers may have both sides of the university exhibited in your useful paper for the admiration of the world."

I am, &c.

One of your

NO HYPOCRITE.

Kingston, 6th December, 1827.

The above letter is addressed to us in the Kingston Chronicle, and when the writer, who we strongly suspect is the same person who wrote the article in the Herald signed "Genuine British Feeling," takes the same steps as the "Hater of Hypocrites" did, to procure an admission in our columns, we will then give him an answer, whether, it shall have a place or not. This must be done by placing an unreserved confidence in us, in giving us his name—We have observed this as a rule with respect to all communications of this sort, and we do not see any reason for breaking through it, on the present occasion. The writer of the above letter calls himself "a Subscriber"—it is matter of very little consequence whether he is or not; but we doubt it very much, for notwithstanding the disguise he has assumed, we think we can recognise a former correspondent, whose production, was read, and then honored with a place among our "rejected addresses."

On Sunday last, a young lad, Son to Mr. Howard, in Mr. McDougall's employ, while Skating on the Bay, fell through the Ice, and after clinging to it, for a considerable time, was relieved from his perilous situation, by the intrepedity of a Boy by the name of Folls, whose courageous exertions in behalf of his youthful companion, entitle him to much praise Howard was brought to a house in an insensible state, being nearly perished with the cold.—Medical aid however restored him.

We understand that the Officers and men of the 15th Regiment, now stationed in this garrison, have contributed Sixty Pounds to the monument erecting at Quebec in honor of the Generals Wolfe and Montcalm.

This old and distinguished corps held a conspicuous place in Wolfe's gallant army; and it is believed that the remains of that hero were borne off the field by a party of its Grenadiers, on his receiving his mortal wounds.

Sir Jeffrey Amherst was then Colonel of the 15th, and it is owing to his regard in long past terms of approbation in the despatches of the day, and is so designated in most of the plans of the battle. K. Chronicle.

Who does not recollect the dexterity with with which the Canadian Freeman managed, what he termed the "Gore outrage," some three or four months ago?—How satisfactorily and conclusively he demonstrated, not only that the "outrage" was perpetrated by a "banditti of the reigning administration;" one of the most talentless and degraded official factions that ever disgraced a British Colony!" but that His Excellency was himself at the bottom of it!! And nothing, we are assured, but the delicacy and forbearance of this Gentleman, and his known reverence for the Church, prevented him from convicting the Lord Bishop of Quebec and His Grace of Canterbury, against whom, we are told, the proofs were equally conclusive and demonstrable.

Having, for the time being, disposed of the "outrage" in question, (for he intimated his intention of returning to the subject hereafter,) we find him ever since employed like a skilful mariner, in hunting up new "outrages;" and accordingly from his last week's bulletin we find that he has succeeded in getting a Bill of one of an "enormous character" in which "Jacob Hagle, Esquire, a Magistrate of the Gore District for the last twenty years, who has sustained a character which has uniformly commanded general respect and esteem from all about him, has been made the second victim upon whom the lawless banditti of the reigning administration have expended their malice!" And we are further told that "this worthy and estimable man" was dragged through the mire and the mire of his life—and that in justification of the act, "the lawless banditti of the reigning administration" called upon the "Solicitor General" as their "Champion," &c. &c. So much for the bulletin of this "outrage, but,—Now we have inquired into the circumstances of the affair in question and have ascertained that four of five months ago Mr. Henry Hagle, took it into his head to get married, and ,that a parcel of Boys most unjustifiably, and for which they deserved to be severely horse-whipped, took it into their heads to charivari him. And this is the whole foundation of the enormous "outrage" in question. The story of the dragging in the pond; the "Solicitor General," &c. being mere creatures of the writer's brain. The boys concerned in the "outrage," we apprehend knew as little of the existence or a "Solicitor General" as they did of the King of Tongatatoo; and as for a "pond" every one knows there is not one in the neighbourhood.

This story, however, is a further proof of the peculiar tact of this "man of war" in the management of an "outrage." And it must be admitted, that he, who, from such scanty materials, can manufacture so excellent an "official outrage," and who can so adroitly convert half a dozen noisy Schoolboys into a "lawless Banditti of the reigning administration," with "the Solicitor General" at their head! possesses a dexterity in this kind of business, which must elevate him above the reach of all competitors—and that, however, wide of the mark he may be upon all other occasions, he is at least perfectly at home in an "outrage."—Gore Gazette.

GRAND RIVER CANAL.

A survey and level of the Grand River from its mouth at Lake Erie, as far up as the Village of Brantford, a distance of 80 miles, was taken during the last month by competent Engineers, with the view of rendering it navigable for vessels capable of sailing the Lakes; and to the great surprise and gratification of every friend to the prosperity of the country, the rise was found to be only 45 feet in the whole distance, and the situation of the River uncommonly favorable for improvement.—Farmer's Journal.

BY TOWN.

We are indebted to a correspondent for the following description of this thriving City, which is not yet a year old:—

This Town is situated on the South bank of the River Ottawa, Upper Canada, latitude 45° 30' North—longitude 77° 20' West,—about 150 miles from Kingston, and about 180 from Montreal; about 250 miles from Lake Simcoe, and 315 from Lake Huron. It is bounded at present, on the East by the River Rideau, which there falls into the Ottawa by a Fall of 37 feet perpendicular. This fall is extremely beautiful, similar to a gorgeous cur-tain, hence the French name to the River. To the South, the Town is bounded by a Mountainous ridge, through which nature has formed a notch for the Rideau Canal to pass. On the West, the Town will be bounded by the branch Canal, from the Lake of the Chaudiere, Ottawa River, which will form a junction with the Rideau Canal in Dow's Great Swamp, where a natural reservoir will be of 250 Acres, to be used as a timber pond. On the North rolls the Grand River or Ottawa, with its splendid Falls of Chaudiere 82 feet high. Above the Falls, the River is about a mile broad, shallow, and studded with Islands; beneath, it is about three-quarters of a mile, and so deep that in many places it is quite unfathomable.

The Rideau Canal, when finished, will pass through the centre of the Town, on a level, at that place, a beautiful stone Bridge is building.

The banks of the Ottawa River, on the Bytown side, are extremely bold and steep, but cleft by a beautiful ravine called Entrance Valley. Up this valley the Canal from becomes the Rideau Canal, lifted by eight stone Locks, of 10 feet lift each, connected together. This work, when finished, will form a beautiful piece of heavy Masonry. At the head of the Locks which is about the same level of the River, is an extensive Beaver Meadow, which will answer as a large dock to the Town. On the East side of the above valley, the Town is rapidly extending—the site of which is about 40 feet above the River. The West, or, as it is called, Upper Bytown, is about 150 feet above the River, commanding a most extensive prospect. The cape, on which the Military Barracks and Hospital are built, is about 200 feet above the River. This may easily be made one of the most important fortresses in the world. The scenery has many astonishing progress in the course of one year —before then, a complete wilderness, now in can boast of 2,000 inhabitants, many excellent stone and timber built houses, a market-place, School, Catholic and Methodist Meeting-houses, &c. while an English and Scotch Church are in progress.

Over the Falls of Chaudiere a chain of bridging has been thrown, connecting Upper and Lower Canada, at the same time Bytown and Hull. Hull is a Township newly improved by Philemon Wright, Esq., and Wright's Town on the Falls is an improvement to the scene. Looking, therefore, at Bytown in its present crude state, who can think otherwise but that it is some day or other to form a most important station in Canada. Situated as it is in the bosom of a fertile Country, in the focus of Rivers and Canals, at the same time fortified and embellished by nature, to it may the Trade of Canada centre, even its extensive Fur Trade, and even there trade, of extensive nature may arise of itself: for the mines of Iron, Tin, Marble, Lead, &c., quite beside it, may furnish plenty of raw material for manufacturers, while the great trade of red Pine and Oak Staves on the Ottawa will doubtless add bustle and business to the whole, never speaking of what the extensive Canals will do.

Its enterprizing founder, from whom it does and ought to derive its name, may feel indeed pleased with this child of his genius and liberality.—Montreal Gazette.

Lower Canada.

We have derived the highest satisfaction from a hasty perusal of the Addresses now lying in the News Room for signature, and whose unanimous have been already sanctioned by above six hundred citizens of Montreal—individuals acquainted with their rights as British subjects, and resolutely determined to maintain them, but at the same time ready and willing to lend their support to the measures of a just and paternal Government. The manly and nervous tone of the address, its bold and open character accords well with those whose names are appended to it, and the unprecedentaly rapid encouragement it has already received augurs well for the wishes of those who are interested in the preservation of good order and government, and who are resolved to adhere to the noble principles of the British Constitution.—Montreal Gazette.

Among the patriotic commemorations of those national festivals, which in a foreign country bring home to the natives of the land left in all the ardour of convivial fellowship, and waken those honourable associations and tender feelings connected with the recollection of the home of their fathers, here but since we left it, we are occasioned so fully productive of such an end as the magnificent military fete given at Quebec on the 3rd ult. the anniversary of St. Andrew the patron Saint of Scotland.

On the evening of that day the 79th Highlanders gave a Ball to the Earl and Countess of Dalhousie, at which the company assembled, and passed from the street of the Mess House of that Regiment by a covered way, tastefully decorated with boughs and coloured lamps. National Flags, emblematic devices, and mottos were kept up with the utmost hilarity, and the gay and splendid costumes of the 79th, 66th, Engineers and Artillery, together with the simple beauty of the uniform of our gallant Highlanders gave an effect to the scene which is vainly looked for in the more quiet assemblies of Civilians. Many of the ladies appeared in Highland bonnets and dresses correspondent with the costume of the day. About 1 o'clock supper was announced—but only 130 could be accommodated at the first table, which was laid out in the Mess Room of the 66th, the ornaments and arrangements of which were under the direction of Captain Young, were in the highest degree flattering to the well known taste of that officer. A covered passage, ornamented with boughs, lamps and flags long in dimension, connected with various emblematic transparencies led from the Mess room of the 66th to that of the 79, in which the rest of the company sat down to supper, where they were welcomed by the pipers of the 79th playing a Pibroch. At one end of the room was a magnificent transparent picture, on which was delineated a palace constructed with the assets of the sages and warriors most celebrated in Scotish history, while a St. Andrew's Cross incircled with a blaze of light surmounted the pillar, at the front of which was a Highlander in full dress, holding in one hand a shield on which was emblazoned the armorial bearings of Dalhousie, and another whose emblem was the arms of Scotland. In the front groupe sat Lord and Lady Dalhousie, and the paternal seat of our noble Governor. Above the seat of the Countess, hung a portrait of our beloved Sovereign. The room was ornamented with the colors of different British Flags, among which the colours of the Regiment bore a commanding station. The healths of the noble visitors and their suite were drank amid the most enthusiastic applause, and an impromptu song was almost instantly produced by the folding doors flying open and discovering Captain Young and a band of singers of the different Regiments striking up the national song of "God save the King," in which the whole party joined. The company then adjourned to the Ball-room and recommenced dancing, while another party succeeded them at the supper table with the same honours. There were about 300 present —and the festival was got up in a style of grandeur never before witnessed in the Capital of Canada. We regret to learn that his Lordship the Governor was under the necessity of retiring from indisposition before supper.—Ib.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Ket les, &c.—and at 27s. 6d per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First.—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or any other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, and others who have a large amount of property in the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices.

SONNET.

STERN Winter knocks at dying Autumn's gate
With all his stormy troop and dreary array,
And Autumn bids his yielding doors give way,
And drops his sceptre, and resigns his state.
But rosy fingered Spring comes forth elate,
And scares the hoary tyrant from his prey,
Then yields in turn, and feels her feeble sway
Before the sultry Summer sun abate.
As wave to wave succeeds, Time's mighty tide
Glides on and on. The horned Moon in Heaven
Succeeds the Sun's bright chariot in her turn,
The Seasons with the Sun come forth in pride,
To Man alone no second spring is given,
And years roll on, oh! never to return!

THE EXILE OF SCIO.

The sun was slowly sinking behind the range of Hymettus and the hills of Attica, as we weighed anchor from Cape Colonna, and steered for the narrow strait between Zea and Cythnos. The morning we had passed in wandering through the groves of laurel and caustic, which cover the promontory of Sunium, and in lingering among the fast-decaying ruins of the temple of Minerva.

The succeeding day was calm, and we lay almost immediately in the narrow strait which separates the Islands of Zea and Cythnos. The day following a strong head wind detained us till evening, beating through the straits of Scio. The view on either side is splendidly beautiful; but on both, the associations of memory cast a feeling of disgust over every object; we could not look on the verdant hills without shuddering recollection of the slaughter that had so lately spread over them, whilst the opposite and equally beautiful coast was alike detestable as the home of its perpetrators.—But whilst to us the scene was any thing but a pleasing one, there was one individual on board our vessel to whom the sight of this devoted Island served to summon up the most heart-rending reflections. This was a young Greek Lady of about two or twenty-three years of age, a native of the Island, a witness of its massacre, and a destitute exile in consequence of the murder of her family. She was now on her way with us to Smyrna, in order to place herself under the protection of a distant relative, whom she hoped, though faintly, to find still surviving. She sat all day upon the deck, watching with wistful eyes the shores of her native land; at every approach which our vessel made towards it, she seemed straining to recognise some scene that had once been familiar, or perhaps some now-deserted home that had once been the shelter of her friends; and when, on the opposite tack, we again neared the Turkish coast, she turned her back upon its hated hills to watch the retreating shores of her desolated home. I had not been aware of her being on board, as her national retiring habits had prevented her appearing upon deck during the early part of the voyage; but as she drew near Scio, feeling seemed to overcome education and prejudice, and she sat all day beneath the awning to satiate herself with gazing and with recollection.

Towards evening we drew near the ruined town, built on the sea shore, at the foot of a wooded hill, which had been the site of the ancient city of Scio. Its houses seemed all rooffess and deserted, whilst the numerous groves of lofty and graceful cypresses which rose amidst them, contrasted sadly with the surrounding desolation; all was solitude and silence; we could not descry a single living creature on the beach, from the shattered fortress on the shore the blood red flag of Mahommet flaunted in crimson pride above the scene of its late barbarous triumph. At sunset the wind changed; we passed the Asiatic coast and Ipsara, and rounding the promontory of Erythræ entered the bay of Smyrna. As we caught the last glimpse of the ruins of Scio, the unfortunate Lady pointed out the remains of a house to the North of the Town, which had been her father's; it was now in ruins, and as clearly as we could discern, appeared to be of large dimensions, and situated upon one of the most picturesque points of Scio. Her name she said was Kalerdji, and her father had been one of the Commissioners for collecting the revenue of the Sultan, from the gum-mastic of the Island. On the breaking out of the revolution in the Morea, among apprehensions of a similar revolt in Scio were ascertained in the Divan, and a number of the most distinguished Greeks of the Island were selected to be sent to Constantinople as Hostages for the loyalty of the remainder; amongst these were her father and her only brother; herself, her mother, and two elder sisters being left alone at Scio, Tranquility continued undisturbed in the Island for more than a year; though the accounts of the reiterated successes of the Moreots were daily stirring up the energies of the inhabitants, whose turbulence was only suppressed by the immediate dread of the Turkish Garrison in the Genoese fortress on the beach, the only strong hold in Scio.

One evening, however, a squadron of three vessels, manned by Samians, entered the harbor, attacked the unsuspecting Garrison, and, aided by the lowest rabble of the Town, succeeded in despatching the guard, and taking possession of the fortress. But the deed was done without calculation, and could be productive of no beneficial result; the Fort was untenable, and on the almost immediate arrival of the Ottoman fleet, a capitulation without a blow ensued. The news brought by the hostile armament was of the instant execution of the ill-fated hostages the moment the accounts of the revolt had reached the Porte. Overwhelmed with grief for the loss of their only and dearly beloved protectors, the family of Kalerdji spent the few intervening days in vain but poignant regret, and, in the seclusion of their beseft mansion, knew nothing of what was passing at the Town where, whilst the Greeks were occupied in supplications and submission to the Captain Pacha, and the Turks in false protestations of forgiveness and amnesty, the Troops of the Sultan disembarked at the fortress. At length the preparations for slaughter were completed, and the work of death commenced.

It was on the evening of the 31 day from the arrival of the Turkish Admiral that the family of the wretched being who lived to tell the tale, descried the flames that rose from the burning Mansions of the Greeks, and heard, in the calm silence of twilight, the distant death-screams of their butchered townsmen; whilst a few flying wretches, closely pursued by their infuriate murderers, told them but too truly of their impending fate. As one of the most important in the family, their family was also most the first marked out for murder, and, ere they had a moment to think of precaution, a party of Turkish Soldiers burst the house, which afforded but few resources for refuge or concealment. From a place of imperfect security, the distracted Phrosine was an involuntary witness to the murder of her sisters, and, actuated by every impulse of filial indignity suggested by brutality and crime, while the frantic mother was stabbed upon the lifeless corpses of her violated offspring. Satiated with plunder, the murderers left the house in search of further victims whilst she crept from her hiding place to take a last farewell of her butchered parent, and fly for refuge to the mountain. She had scarcely dropped a tear over the inanimated remains of all that was dear to her, and made a step towards the door, when she perceived a fresh party of demons already at the threshold. Too late to regain her place of refuge, death, with all its aggravated horrors, seemed now inevitable, till on the moment she adopted an expedient. She flew towards the heap of slaughter, smeared herself with the still oozing blood of her mother, and falling on her face beside her, she lay motionless as death. The Turks entered the apartment, but finding their errand anticipated, were again departing, when one of them observed a brilliant sparkling on the finger of Phrosine, returned to secure it. He lifted the apparently lifeless hand, and attempted to draw it off; it was however been too long, too dearly worn; it was the gift of her betrothed husband, and could not be ed till it was withdrawn from her finger by an effort. The Turk, however, made but quick work, after in vain twisting her delicate hand in every direction to accomplish his purpose, he drew a knife from his girdle, and commenced slicing off the flesh from the finger. This was the last scene she could remember. It was midnight when she awoke from the swoon into which the agony and fear of effort to conceal it had thrown her; and she lay cold and benumbed, surrounded by the now clotted streams of her butchered friends. Necessity now armed her with energy; no time was left for consideration, and day would soon be breaking. She rose, and still faint with terror and the loss of blood, flew to a spot where the valuables of the house had been secured; disposing of the most portable about her person she took her way to the Mountains.—She pointed the cliff where she had long lay concealed, and by evening of the next day had gained it, through a path at every step impeded by the dead or dying remains of her countrymen. By the time she imagined the tide of terror had flowed past, when no longer concealment was left for consideration, and day would soon be breaking. She rose, and still faint with terror and the loss of blood, flew to a spot where the valuables of the house had been secured; disposing of the most portable about her person she took her way to the Mountains.—She pointed the cliff where she had long lay concealed, and by evening of the next day had gained it, through a path at every step impeded by the dead or dying remains of her countrymen. By the time she imagined the tide of terror had flowed past, when no longer concealment was left for refuge the daily pursuits and murder of the immolated Sciots, and when she saw the Ottoman fleet sail from the harbor beneath its crimson pennon, now doubly dyed in blood, she descended from her fugitive companions, to the opposite shore of the Island. Here, after waiting for many a tedious day, she succeeded in getting on board an Austrian vessel, the master of which engaged to land her at Hydra, in return for the quantity of jewels and gold she had been able to reserve. She reached the Island in safety, where she now remained for nearly two years; but finding or fancying her various benefactors to be weary of their charge, she was now going to seek, even in the land of her enemies, a relative who had been living at Smyrna, but whom she knew not if she should still find surviving or fallen by the sabre of their common enemy.

Her tale was told with a calm composure of oft-repeated and long contemplated grief; she shed no tear in its relation: she scarcely heaved a sigh over her sorrows; she seemed, young as she was, to have already made her alliance with misery. She had one, she said, but one hope left; and, if that should fail, she had only death to look to.

Summary.

A London paper of the 19th of October, states that the Lord High Admiral has resolved upon fitting our another expedition to the North Pole.

The Marquis of Anglesea will be a popular Viceroy in Ireland. His court will be upheld by a great number of English nobility, and by magnificence and hospitality. The latter is an Irish virtue, and Irishmen both practice and honor it. Among the appointments of the court, are these—

The Marquis of Douro, Lord Edward Paget, Colonel Fitzclarence, senior, Colonel Thornhill, of the 7th Hussars, and Captain Hampton, late of the 5th Dragoon Guards, to be Aides-de-Camp to the Marquis Anglesea.

Lord Forbes to be Master of the Household, and Lord Graves, brother-in-law of the Marquis, (and whose lady, it is already known, will act as Vice Queen,) to be State Steward.

Lord Brunenel, son of the Earl of Cardigan, will also form one of the suite of the Marquis.

We hear that the Carlisle gingham trade is rapidly recovering from depression, and wages have in many instances advanced from 20 to 40, and even 50 per cent. Weavers are in full employ, and the same is the case in several parts of Lancashire, the large number who quitted Carlisle at a less fortunate period are not likely to return.

Under the domination of Buonaparte, France consumed only about 14 millions of pounds of sugar annually. The present annual consumption exceeds 80 millions of pounds.

During the last spring, the north and east coast of Iceland were visited by an extraordinary number of icebergs, which produced so much cold and drought, accompanied by various gusts of wind, that vegetation was at a stand. By way of amends, the fishery, especially in the southern part of the island, was exceedingly productive. On the 13th of February a new volcano burst forth from one of the glaciers.

An Earthquake was felt at Jassy, on the 15th October. There were several violent shocks, but no damage was done.

Letters from St. Petersburgh are to the 20th of October. They contain a further account of the proceedings of the Russian force in Georgia. It appears that the Russians have not yet begun the seige of Erivan, it being intended now to reduce a smaller fortress, Sardar Abad, before this is attempted. It is not believed, however, from the activity of the Persians that the seige will proceed without interruption.

By an Order of the Day of the 14th Oct., the Emperor has been pleased to appoint his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Alexander (his Majesty's eldest son) to be Ataman of all the Cossack troops.

A letter from Riga, of Oct. 14, states that the Emperor Nicholas was on his way to Odessa, and was to proceed to the head-quarters of the army assembled on the Turkish frontiers, in case the mediation for the independence of Greece was not agreed to at Constantinople.

Death of the Earl of Guildford.—We are sorry to announce the death of this Noblemen, which took place on Sunday last [Oct. 14.] His Lordship having died without issue, is succeeded in his title by the Rev. Francis North, son of the Hon. Brownlow North, late Bishop of Winchester.

A comparison between the Years 1727 and 1827.—In the year 1727, hackney Coaches were plain, awkward, clumsy things, with no springs, and their number did not exceed 85 in the whole of London; at present their number is increased to 1,200. Fashions at that period did not reach any place 50 miles distant from London, until they were nearly out; now they travel down in Coaches, diligences, &c. in a few hours.—Coaches were then two days and two nights going down to Dover; they now perform the same journey in nearly a quarter of the time. In 1727 meat was only 3d per lb.; now it is 10d. or 1s. Servants' wages varied from £4 to £4; now from £10 to £30.

The Queen Dowager of Wirtemburgh arrived at Frankfort on the 20th of Oct. after a boisterous voyage, where Her Majesty was agreeably surprised at meeting the King and Queen of Wirtemburgh and the Duke of Cambridge.

Hospital of Surgery.—A new Surgical Hospital is to be erected in the neighbourhood of Charing-Cross, were the King with his usual and characteristic munificence, has given a spot on which it is to be erected. A benevolent individual has given within these few days, £1,500 towards a fund for the building.—Mirror.

England.

From the Third report of the Committee of the House of Commons on Emigration.

Taking every circumstance into consideration, the Committee are prepared distinctly to recommend a pecuniary advance, in the nature of a loan, for the purpose of facilitating emigration. In order to show practically how such a loan might operate, the Committee state a hypothetical case, in which a sum of £540,000 advanced in the years 1828-29; of £360,000 in the years 1829-30; and of £540,000 in the years 1830-31; in the aggregate £1,140,000. The Committee suggest that this sum might be applied to the purpose of emigration, in the following manner:—In the first period, 1828-29, four thousand families (allowing five persons to each,) to be located, which, at an expence of £80 each family, would amount to £240,000; in the second period, six thousand families to be sent, which would extend the second sum raised; and nine thousand to be sent with the third sum raised, by which the whole, £1,140,000 would be expended, and nineteen thousand families would be located. "The principle of increase in this hypothetical proposition is, that each succeeding year should carry out emigrants in the ratio of four, six and nine; in other words, increasing in the proportion of one half, as compared with the number of the preceding year; and it appears to the Committee from the numbers of food preceeding population, that whatever number may be selected for the experiment of the first year, the successive emigrations must be regulated by some principle of this kind. With respect to the numbers that might be sent in the first year, provided adequate means be taken for preparing for their reception, and provided that the expense of food, in consequence of their numbers, be not increased beyond the rate of the estimate, no necessary limitation would be prescribed.—The loan suggested by the Committee has reference to numbers which it would be clearly practicable to locate. The proposal, as involved in this hypothetical case, stands thus:—The first period 4000 families; the second 6000; the third 9000; making in the whole 19,000. If, after that period, Parliament were disposed to carry on emigration in the same ratio, the number of families to be removed in progressive years, would amount as follows:—the fourth 13,500; the fifth 20,250; the six year 30,375; the seventh year 45,562; the eight 68,343; and if these sums be added together, they will form an aggregate of 137,030 families, which multiplied by 5, will give 985,150 persons.

The interest at five per cent (that is four per cent with a sinking fund of one per cent,) upon £1,140,000 amounted to £57,000. Let the consolidated fund be supposed to be charged with an out lay of £57,000 for that period, which will enable a sinking fund of one per cent to liquidate a loan of £1,140,000. On the other hand, "if the scale of progressive annuity and repayment, calculated in the case of a single head of a family and spreading itself over a period of only 30 years, be realized, the £1,140,000 will have been actually repaid: and the receipts of this thirty years, annuity will restore the capital advanced, together with four per cent accruing interest upon that capital."

According to this scale, no repayment from the emigrant is expected for the first two years; after that time a sum of 10s. in money or produce, from each family, is calculated on; this is to be raised in the increasing ratio of 10s. a year up to £5; the debt is then to be discharged by annual payments of £5 in money, until a period of thirty years is completed, when the whole outlay would be discharged. The emigrant, however, to have the option of redeeming larger portions of his debt, at stated periods.

William Atkinson, veterinary-surgeon, or Horse-Farrier, met with the cause of his death in a manner as singular as the event was awful. On Saturday evening, the 20th ult., he was sitting in a Public House in Kendal, quietly smoking his pipe, when two persons, one of them having a Yorkshireman's bundle on his back, began pushing each other about the room in a rude and vulgar manner, called sport; he who had the pack received a push from the other, and, in swinging round, the weight of the pack came in full contact with Atkinson's pipe, and forced it, with great violence, into his mouth. It entered along the side of the tongue, or, perhaps, partly under it, penetrated upwards of three inches, and broke, causing great pain, copious bleeding, swelling the throat, &c., so that the patient had to endure the most excruciating agony. Medical aid was of little avail, the portion of the broken pipe could not be extracted, and he grew worse and worse till the following Saturday terminated his earthly miseries, and sent him prematurely to his great account, leaving a wife and small family almost destitute.—English paper.

TOTAL DESTRUCTION OF THE TURKISH FLEET AT NAVARINO.

The William Thompson arrived yesterday from Liverpool with the above highly important intelligence. The official documents which follow are taken entire from the London Gazette Extraordinary, issued on the occasion:—

From the London Gazette Extraordinary, of Nov. 10.

Admiralty Office, Nov. 10, 1827.—Despatches, of which the following are copies or extracts, have been this day received at this Office, addressed to John Wilson Crocker, Esq. by Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Codrington, K. C. B., Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Ships in the Mediterranean:—

His Majesty's Ship Asia, in the Port of Navarino, Oct. 21, 1827.

Sir—I have the honor of informing His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral, that my colleagues, Count Heyden and Chevalier de Rigny, having agreed with me that we should come into this Port, in order to induce Ibrahim Pacha to discontinue the brutal war of extermination, which he has been carrying on since his return here from his failure in the Gulf of Patras, the combined squadron passed the batteries, in order to take up their anchorage, at about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Turkish Ships were moored in the form of a crescent, with springs on their cables, the larger ones presenting their broadsides towards the centre, the smaller ones in succession within them, filling up the intervals.

The combined fleet was formed in the order of sailing in two columns, the British and French forming the weather or starboard line, and the Russian the lee line.

The Asia led in, followed by the Genoa and Albion, and anchored close alongside a Ship of the line, bearing the flag of the Capitana Bey, another Ship of the line, and a large double banked Frigate, each thus having their proper opponent in the front of the British, the French fleet. The four Ships to windward part of the Egyptian Squadron, were allotted to the Squadron of Rear-Admiral de Rigny, and those to leeward, in the bight of the crescent, were to mark the sections of the whole Russian Squadron: The Ships of their line opposed to those of the English line, and being followed up by their own Frigates. The French Frigate Armide was directed to place herself alongside the outermost Frigate, on the left hand entering the harbour; and the Cambrian, Glasgow, and Talbot next to her, and above all the Asia, Genoa and Albion; the Dartmouth and the Musquito, the Rose, the Brisk, and the Philomel were to look after the six fire vessels at the entrance of the harbour. I gave orders that no guns should be fired, unless guns were first fired by the Turks; and those orders were strictly observed. The three English Ships were accordingly permitted to pass the batteries to moor, as they did with great rapidity, without any act of open hostility, although there was evident preparation for it on board all the Turkish Ships; but upon the Dartmouth sending a boat to one of the fire vessels, Lieutenant G. W. H. Fitzroy and several of her crew were shot with musketry. This produced a defensive fire of musketry from the Dartmouth and La Syrene, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral de Rigny. That was succeeded by a cannon shot at the Rear Admiral from one of the Turkish Ships, which, of course, brought on a return, and thus, very shortly afterwards the battle became general. The Asia, although placed alongside of the Ship of the Capitana Bey, and even nearer to that of Mahotem Bey, the Commander of the Egyptian Ships; and, since his Ships did not fire at the Asia, although the action was begun to windward, neither did the Asia fire at her. The latter indeed sent a message "that he would not fire at all," and therefore no hostility took place between our two Ships, for some time after the Asia had returned the fire of the Capitana Bey.

In the mean time, however, our excellent Pilot, Mr. Peter Mitchell, who went to interpret to Mahomet my desire to avoid bloodshed, was killed by his people in our boat alongside. Whether with or without his order I know not; but his Ship soon afterwards fired into the Asia and was consequently effectually destroyed by the Asia's fire, sharing the same fate as that brother Admiral's Ship she started for sale, and falling to leeward a mere wreck. These Ships being out of the way, the Asia became exposed to a raking fire from vessels in the second and third line, which carried away her mizen mast by the board, disabled some of her guns, and killed and wounded several of the crew. This narration of the proceedings of the Asia would probably be equally applicable to most of the other Ships of the other fleet. The manner in which the Genoa and Albion took their stations was beautiful: and the conduct of my brother Admirals, Count de Heyden, and the Chevalier de Rigney, throughout, was admirable and highly exemplary.

Captain Fellowes executed the part allotted to him perfectly, and with the able assistance of his little but brave detachment saved the Syrene from being fired by the fire vessels. And the Cambrian, Glasgow, and Talbot following the fine example of Captain Hugon of the Armide, who was opposed to the leading frigate of the line, effectually destroyed their opponents, and also silenced the batteries. This bloody and destructive battle was continued, with unabated fury for four hours, and the scene of wreck and devastation which presented itself at its termination was such as has been seldom witnessed. As each ship of our opponents became effectually disabled such of her crew as could, escape from her, endeavoured to set her fire, and it is wonderful how we avoided the effects of their successive and awful explosions.

It is impossible for me to say too much for the able and zealous assistance which I derived from Capt. Curzon throughout this long and arduous service; nor can I say enough than it deserves for the conduct of Commander Raynes and the officers and crew of the Asia, for the perfection with which the fires of their guns was directed, each vessel in turn, to which her broadside was presented became a complete wreck. His Royal Highness will be aware, that so complete a victory as a few, however perfect, against an excessive number, however individually inferior, cannot be acquired, but at a considerable sacrifice of life; accordingly I have to lament the loss of Capt. Bathurst, of the Genoa, whose example on this occasion is well worthy the imitation of his survivors. Captain Bell commanding the Royal Marines of the Asia, an excellent officer was killed early in the action, in the steady performance of his duty; and I have to mention the death of Mr. William Smith, the Master, admired for the zeal and ability with which he executed his duty, and beloved by all for his private qualities as a man. Mr. Henry S. Dyer, my Secretary, having received a severe contusion from a splinter, I am deprived temporarily of his valuable assistance in collecting and keeping up the general returns and communications of the squadrons, I shall therefore retain in my office Mr. F. J. T. White, his first Clerk, whom I have nominated to succeed the purser of the Brisk. I feel much personal obligation to the Hon. Lt. Col. Craddock, for his readiness, during the heat of the battle, in carrying my orders and messages to the different quarters after my Aides-de-Camp were disabled; but I will beg permission to refer his Royal Highness for further particulars of this sort to the details of the killed and wounded, a subject which it is painful for me to dwell upon; when I contemplate, as I do with extreme sorrow, the extent of our loss, I console myself with the reflection, that the measure which produced the battle was absolutely necessary for obtaining the results contemplated by the Treaty, and that it was brought on entirely by our opponents.

When I found that the boasted Ottoman word of honour was made a sacrifice to wanton, savage devastation, and that a base advantage was taken of our reliance upon Ibrahim, a good faith, I felt a desire to punish the offenders. But it was my duty to refrain, and refrain I did; and I can assure your Royal Highness, that I would still have avoided this disastrous extremity, if other means had been open to me. The Asia, Genoa, and Albion, have each suffered so much, that it is my intention to send them to England as soon as they shall have received the necessary repairs for their voyage. The Talbot, being closely engaged with a double banked frigate, has also suffered considerably, as well as others of the smaller vessels; but I hope their defects are not more than can be made good at Malta. The loss of men in the Turko-Egyptian Ships must have been immense, as His Royal Highness will see by the accompanying list, obtained from the Secretary of the Capitana Bey, which includes that of two out of the three Ships to which the English division was opposed. Capt. Curzon having preferred continuing to assist me in the Asia, I have given the charge of my despatches to Commander Lord Viscount Ingestre, who, besides having had a brilliant share in the action, is well competent to give His Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral any further particulars he may require.

I enclose, for his Royal Highness's further information, a letter from Captain Hamilton, descriptive of the proceedings of Ibrahim Pacha, and the misery of the country which he has devastated.—A protocol of a conference which I had with my colleagues, and the plan and order for entering the port, which I gave out in consequences.

I have the honour to be, &c.
(Signed) E. CODRINGTON, Vice Admiral.

No. 1.—(Translation.)

Extract of a letter from Captain Hamilton, of His Majesty's ship Cambrian, to Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Codrington, dated Kitries, Oct. 18. 1827:—

I have the honour of informing you, that I arrived here yesterday morning, in company with the Russian frigate Constantine, the Captain of which ship had placed himself under my orders. On entering the Gulf, we observed, by clouds of fire and smoke, that the work of devastation was still going on. The ships were off the pass of Ancyro, and a joint letter from myself and the Russian Captain was despatched to the Turkish Commander, a copy of which I enclose; the Russian and English officers, the bearers of it, were not allowed to proceed to Head-quarters, nor have we yet received any answer. In the afternoon, we, the two Captains, went on shore, to the Greek quarters, and were received with the greatest enthusiasm. The distress of the inhabitants driven from the plain is shocking! women and children dying every moment of absolute starvation, and hardly any having better food than boiled grass. Having proceeded to send a small quantity of bread to the caves in the mountains, where those unfortunate wretches have taken refuge. It is supposed that if Ibrahim remains in Greece, more than a third of its inhabitants will die of absolute starvation.

London, 21st July 1827.

Dear Sir,

As you ask my advice what should be done by the inhabitants of Upper Canada to obtain redress for the numerous abuses which you mention the destruction of the Administration of the law, the Post-office department, &c. &c. is that province, I have only to repeat that the reason of much of the evil being allowed to continue so long, and so injuriously to the interests of the colony, is, the utter ignorance in which we are in this country respecting the feeling

Lower Canada.

On Saturday evening, about 8 o'clock a Ball was fired into the House of A. HART, Esq. situate in Papineau Square. The missile passed through two windows, a chamber door, and settled in the passage door, within a few inches of Mr. H's. head.—Search was immediately made, but no person was found with arms, on whom suspicion could rest.

Our Correspondent at BYTOWN, informsus that two men were killed on the 4th instant, at the HOUR BACK, while excavating under a bank of earth, the whole of which fell in.—One was taken out dead, and the other only lived two hours after.

Yesterday, a daughter of one Edward Kelly, aged about three years, was smothered. Her parents went to Church, leaving her asleep in a settle bed, which was folded up by a servant girl, ignorant of the child's being there.—M. Gazette.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Province of manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

ANOTHER YEAR!—methinks I hear you say,
And has another, pass'd so soon away?—
Time flies apace, and by command of fate,
He heralds, Eighteen hundred Twenty-eight:
And I my Patrons, as in duty bound,
Again prepare to make my annual round;
To each, to all, th'accustom'd visit pay,
And crave attention to my humble lay—
The task I fain would shun, but still my muse,
In kindest accents, whispers you'll excuse
Her many failings, nor with critic eye,
Her wayward faults, attempt to magnify;
Assur'd of this, be mine the task to sing
Of past events, and to remembrance bring,
What on the tide of Time has pass'd away,
Borne onward, by its all resistless sway.

BRITANNIA mourns, and bitter tears are shed
For One who slumbers with the mighty dead,
A Chieftains loss, her distant realms deplore,
And sorrows voice is heard from shore to shore,
For Him who living, still her rights maintain'd,
And high the glory of her Arms sustain'd.

Peace to thy manes, ROYAL YORK—thy name,
Shall be recorded on the page of fame,
To distant ages shall thy deeds descend,
With the proud title of, "The Soldier's Friend."
Oft round thy Tomb, shall Britain's warriors stand,
And mourn for Him, who sway'd with mild command,
Thy name the widow'd Mother too, shall bless,
And lisping innocence thy worth confess,
Whose Orphan state, thy noble, gen'rous care,
When every earthly help was gone, did share.

A Nation's gratitude to Thee shall raise,
The sculptur'd Monument, of lasting praise,
Nor in thy native land alone shall rise,
The lofty column, pointing to the skies;
But in the bosom of this distant land,
The Monumental tribute too, shall stand,
Where by thy care, no more compell'd to roam,
The war-worn Vet'ran, finds a peaceful home,
On Tay's fair banks, whose waters smoothly glide,
And pay their homage to proud Ott'was tide.

But scarce has time assuag'd with lenient hand,
The dire affliction which o'erwhelm'd the land,
The founts of grief, have scarcely ceased to flow,
When forth they burst again, surcharg'd with woe:—

Why is the voice of mourning heard again—
And wherefore ev'ry heart oppress'd with pain?

That mighty Spirit, of "The master mind,"
Where wit and eloquence their pow'r's combin'd,
And threw around, their warmest, brightest ray
To fix our gaze—by Fate is snatch'd away:—
Cold is that heart—and pow'rless is the tongue,
Upon whose accents oft the Senate hung;
The brilliant flashes, bursting on the sight,
No more shall fill with wonder and delight:—
But the bright halo of a Patriots fame,
Shall shed its purest lustre on the name,
Of him, a leader in that honor'd band,
The pride and glory, of their native land:—
Illustrious CANNING—there thy deeds enroll'd,
To future times, shall History's page unfold.

But while these sad events we all deplore,
A bounteous Heav'n has still reserv'd in store,
Its choicest blessings, for the favor'd Isle,
To cheer the heart, and sorrows pangs beguile.

Firm on her Sea-beat Throne, as on a rock,
Whose strong foundation, fears no tempests shock,
BRITANNIA sits secure, and justly draws,
From Neigh'bring Nations merited applause:—
Thrice happy Land—where Justice holds her reign,
And spreads her blessings, o'er thy wide domain,
The num'rous realms, where millions, raise the pray'r,
That thou the bounties of kind Heav'n may share:
May Peace throughout thy borders still be found,
And plenteousness within thy walls abound—
A loyal people, cheerfully obey,
A GRACIOUS SOVERRIGN'S, paternal sway.

But little change, has by the hand of time,
Been wrought in any other distant clime:—
FRANCE, yet reposes in the arms of peace,
Her Arts and Commerce, feel a rich increase.
Convulsed, distracted, and with discord torn,
SPAIN of her former glories now is shorn:
RUSSIA and PERSIA, still their powers engage,
And with each other, doubtful contest wage—
Her British Allies, PORTUGAL receives,
Whose prompt assistance, ev'ry fear relieves.

With unrelenting hate, the bar'brous TURK,
Pursues with savage zeal, destructions work—
His mur'drous steps, through blood and ruin trac'd,
Through burning Cities—Villages laid waste—
Through dead and dying—o'er whole heaps of slain—
O'er mangled victims, torn and racked with pain:
Nor Man alone, his fiendlike vengeance feels,
'Gainst Beauty's charms, his cruel heart he steels
And vain to him, are Childhood's soft appeals.

Shall Christian GREECE, to fellow Christians turn,
And shall not Christian zeal, indignant burn,
Against this Infidel—this Moslem host,
To every sense of human feeling lost?
Justice forbid!—But Hark!—NAV'RINO'S shore,
Resounding to the deep-mouth'd Cannons roar,
In peals of Thunder, sounding o'er the Sea,
Wafts the glad tidings—Greece shall yet be free.

With ample pow'rs, her Allies interpose,
And threaten vengeance on her cruel foes;
But still foul havoc, marks their ev'ry deed,
And Greece, at every pore, is doom'd to bleed—
Red from the slaughter, in his haughty pride,
The Turk has dared, those Allies to deride:—
Swift retribution, at their hands he meets,
And join in deadly fight th'opposing Fleets;
Nor long, nor doubtful is the mortal strife,
Struggling, the Turkish despot yields his life:
The Crescent wanes—that Fleet is seen no more,
But strew'd in wreck and ruin on the shore:
And peals of Thunder, sounding o'er the Sea,
Echo the tidings—Greece shall yet be free.

As Noah's Dove swept o'er the billows crest,
And found no spot, her wearied wing to rest,
She sought the Ark, and gladly ceas'd to roam,
So turns my muse, to seek her much lov'd home:
And there she sees, with pure unmix'd delight,
Hopes fairest prospects open to her sight,
Sees Liberty divine, and lovely Peace,
Go hand in hand—while wealth and pow'r increase,
And goaded not by want, nor check'd by fear,
Improvement hold its undisturb'd career:—
Where late the Forest spread its gloom around,
The welcome stranger, fills the teeming ground,
No more to strive, with thankless toil and pain,
And hear his children ask for Bread in vain:—
Where late but rocks, and lonely wilds appear'd,
The laborer's stroke, and cheerful song is heard;
And while their task, the busy workmen ply,
The Merchant views them with impatient eye,
Till Welland's stream, and Rideau's willing tide
By science taught, in channels new to glide,
Shall on their waves, his treasur'd burthens bear,
And wealth reward, his enterprise and care.

Our Country's greatness, now no more the sage,
Puts off, to ornament some distant age—
No more the Patriots hope is thought a dream,
For generous ENGLAND forwards every scheme;
And bringing to our aid, her mighty pow'rs,
Her strength—her mind—her riches—all are ours.

As Orpheus, sung of old—your Newsboy sings,
Not to move Trees—but loosen purses' strings—
And sure—you'll not, while he makes you so gay,
Let the poor Devil—grumbling turn away.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1828. NO. 83.

A LETTER

From the BISHOP OF QUEBEC to the Clergy and Congregations of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND, in the Diocese of Quebec, in relation to some existing differences of opinion respecting the CLERGY-RESERVES and certain other points.

REVEREND BRETHREN AND CHRISTIAN FRIENDS,

THE providence of God having called me to preside, in this Diocese, over the Church to which you belong, I am impelled at this juncture to address you with reference to some circumstances which nearly affect the interests of our Establishment, and the expansion of which occasionally demands the exercise of much charity and moderation, as well as much firmness and prudence from her guardians and her friends.

I pray you, then, to take in good part what proceeds, as I humbly hope, from a proper sense of the duties incumbent upon me in the arduous and responsible post which I occupy; and being ready to receive in the same spirit whatever can be urged on the other side to invalidate our arguments, I bespeak all indulgence from all quarters, while I publicly set forth what I conceive to be the true state of the question, and while I venture to make some suggestions respecting the manner in which it should be treated. It is the sincere desire of my heart before God, without compromising the interests which I am bound to maintain, to allay the irritation and violence of feeling which every true Christian must grieve to see produced by a question of temporal provision and support.—Our own defenders may occasionally indentify with the Church's cause while I publicly set forth what I conceive to be the true state of the question, and while I venture to make some suggestions respecting the manner in which it should be treated. It is the sincere desire of my heart before God, without compromising the interests which I am bound to maintain, to allay the irritation and violence of feeling which every true Christian must grieve to see produced by a question of temporal provision and support.—Our own defenders may occasionally have been betrayed into some heat or intemperance; but I am not aware that we have ever attacked any party, and altho' the circumstance of our enjoying superior rights, might perhaps have led us to expect that we should not enjoy them unmolested, some of the attacks which we have sustained during the last few years are such as we could not have looked for from fellow Christians.—It has appeared to be the object of some persons unknown, to mislead the public mind as to the character and views of our Church, and, as far as they could produce any effect, to create a state of things which they would fain have it believed to be that which already exists—because it did exist, it would remove or diminish the necessity of our being supported in the decided character of an establishment.—But the manner and spirit in which these particular attacks have been conducted are reprobated, I fully persuade myself, by the respectable members of other denominations, and the mischief will be made ultimately to return upon the heads of its authors.

At the same time there appears to be a great difference of opinion between ourselves and parties who are worthy of our christian regard, with respect to the justice of some claims which, whatever may be the issue of the present discussion, will either side, it is in the mean time impossible for us to forego. My experience of twenty years in this Diocese in different capacities, and with particular and very extensive opportunities of becoming acquainted with its religious condition,—opportunities which according to my ability, I trust that I have not neglected to improve,—assures me that the cause of the Church of England is not now to be abandoned like a wreck, nor are her circumstances and prospects such as to justify on our part any voluntary surrender of her interests, or to call, in themselves, for any diversion into other channels of the means provided for her as THE ESTABLISHED RELIGION OF THE COUNTRY.

In using this expression I am very far from meaning to say that either the positive advantages of our own Church, or the relative situation of other religious bodies, are or ought to be here what they are in England or Ireland. In this Country there are no civil or political distinctions founded upon those which are religious; nor is there any contribution drawn for the support of the Church from those who profess a creed different from hers; and there are privileges not conceded at home, enjoyed here by the Branches of other Churches established in Europe, of which I should be the last person upon earth to wish them deprived.—In some instances I should be heartily glad that the benefits extended to individuals of these Churches should be greater than they have yet been made.—But ours is, and has been declared and constituted, and (according to my belief,) provided for, AS THE RELIGION OF THE STATE.

I do not propose in this address to discuss at length the several points which are under debate, but as it has always appeared to me that some wrong assumptions are apt to be made in treating the question, and some material facts and arguments very subject to be overlooked, I shall simply state the outline of our whole case according to the view which I entertain of it in the conviction of my own mind,—in which view I recommend that it should calmly and temporately be represented whenever the argument is raised. If it be not exercise of much charity and moderation, as known, or if it be indistinctly understood, upon what we rest our claims, or whether upon any thing which has a tangible shape,—we shall of course be supposed to be making unfounded and exorbitant pretentions.—It should be seen that we are not actuated by the mere avarice inspired by possession; that we are not grasping at that for which we can neither exhibit a good title, nor prove that we have any need; but that, even if we are thought mistaken, we proceed upon grounds, which, we hope, may well excuse our misconception.—It should be shewn with reference to the existence of any established and privileged Religion, that in Christian Countries, the State ought to be Christain, and, being Christian, must have a form of Religion to be maintain, to allay the irritation and violence of feeling which every true Christian must grieve to see produced by a question of temporal provision and support.—Our own defenders may occasionally have been betrayed into some heat or intemperance; but I am not aware that we have ever attacked any party, and altho' the circumstance of our enjoying superior rights, might perhaps have led us to expect that we should not enjoy them unmolested, some of the attacks which we have sustained during the last few years are such as we could not have looked for from fellow Christians.—It has appeared to be the object of some persons unknown, to mislead the public mind as to the character and views of our Church, and, as far as they could produce any effect, to create a state of things which they would fain have it believed to be that which already exists—because it did exist, it would remove or diminish the necessity of our being supported in the decided character of an establishment.—But the manner and spirit in which these particular attacks have been conducted are reprobated, I fully persuade myself, by the respectable members of other denominations, and the mischief will be made ultimately to return upon the heads of its authors.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be had down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—That the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are found to be liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, now it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference to their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are capable of daily increasing and construction—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

The following clauses, relating to the appropriation of Lands in this Province, for the maintenance and support of a Protestant Clergy, are extracted from 31, Geo. 3., commonly called the Constitutional Act.

XXXVI. And whereas, His Majesty has been graciously pleased, by Message to both Houses of Parliament, to express His Royal desire to be enabled to make a permanent appropriation of land in the said Provinces, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy within the same, in proportion to such lands as have been already granted within the same by His Majesty: And whereas, His Majesty has been graciously pleased, by his said Message, further to signify His Royal desire that such provision be made, with respect to all future grants of land within the said Provinces respectively, as may best conduce to the due and sufficient support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy within the said Provinces, in proportion to such increase as may happen in the population and cultivation thereof: Therefore, for the purpose of more effectually fulfilling His Majesty's gracious intentions, as aforesaid, and of providing for the due execution of the same in all time to come, Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, to authorize His Governor or Lieutenant Governor of each of the said Provinces respectively, or the person administering the Government therein, to make, from and out of the Waste Lands of the Crown in the said Provinces, such allotment and appropriation of lands for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy within the same, as may bear a due proportion to the amount of such lands within the same as have at any time been granted by or under the authority of His Majesty: And that whenever any grant of lands within either of the said Provinces shall hereafter be made, by or under the authority of His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, there shall at the same time be made, in respect of the same, a proportionable allotment and appropriation of lands for the above mentioned purposes within the Township or Parish to which such lands are to be granted shall appertain or be annexed, or as nearly adjacent thereto as circumstances will admit; and that no such grant shall be valid or effectual unless the same shall contain a specification of the lands so allotted and appropriated, in respect of the lands to be thereby granted; and that such lands, so allotted and appropriated, shall be, as nearly as the circumstances and nature of the case will admit, of the like quality as the lands in respect of which the same are so allotted and appropriated, and shall be, as nearly as the same can be estimated at the time of making such grant, equal in value to the seventh part of the lands so granted.

XXXVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That all and every the rents, profits, or emoluments, which may at any time arise from such lands, so allotted and appropriated, as aforesaid, shall be applicable solely to the maintenance and support of a Protestant Clergy, within the Province in which the same shall be situated, and to no other use or purpose whatever.

XXXVIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, to authorize the Governor or Lieutenant Governor of each of the said Provinces respectively, or the person administering the Government therein, from time to time, with the advice of such Executive Council as shall have been appointed by His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, within such Province, for the affairs thereof, to constitute and erect, within every Township or Parish which now is or hereafter may be formed, constituted, or erected within such Province, one or more Parsonage or Rectory, or Parsonages or Rectories, according to the establishment of the Church of England; and from time to time, by instrument under the Great Seal of such Province, to endow every such Parsonage or Rectory with so much or such a part of the lands so allotted and appropriated, as aforesaid, in respect of any lands within such Township or Parish, which shall have been granted subsequent to the commencement of this Act, or of such lands as may have been allotted and appropriated for the same purpose, by or in virtue of any instruction which may be given by His Majesty, in respect of any lands granted by His Majesty before the commencement of this Act, as such Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government, shall, with the advice of the said Executive Council, judge to be expedient under the then existing circumstances of such Township or Parish.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, Nov. 19.

Trieste, Nov. 6.—According to the intelligence from Zante and Corfu, of the 27th of October, part of the Allied Squadron go to the Dardanelles. It is supposed that this detachment has for its object the adoption of a menacing position, for the purpose of protecting the Christain residents at Constantinople. Admiral Codrington, at the date of the despatch, was actively employed in repairing his damaged vessels at Malta and Zante.

Pera, Constantinople, Oct. 27.—Confusion and dismay reign in all quarters of this city. A succession of disasters has caused a display of mingled fear and fear bordering on maniacism. It would appear by a despatch forwarded by the English admiral to our Ambassador here, that the whole of the Turco Egyptian fleet had been destroyed in the bay of Navarin, on the 20th inst. and that the batteries of that port had been rendered useless. What is more, the Egyptian troops are in a state of mutiny and starvation, wandering over the country, and being cut up in detail. The tragical news, combined with the recent destructive fires, seems to have paralysed, in toto, the efforts of the Turkish Government to avert them. All is at a stand still. Troops and shipping under orders have been countermanded, and an extraordinary Divan ordered to assemble forthwith. Connected with these events, the Reis Effendi has been disgraced, and is in confinement,—a prelude, of course, to deposition. Our suburb is as yet perfectly tranquil, and, it is to be hoped, will remain so. Communications with the Foreign Ambassadors have been extremely frequent since the receipt of the news, and messengers innumerable are passing and re-passing after the usual hours of diplomatic business. It is the opinion of the best informed English here, that all must and will be settled to the entire satisfaction of the Allied Powers and immediately. Sunday Paper.

It will be seen by the Court Circular that much activity has been displayed at the Foreign Office. A Cabinet Council was held on Saturday evening, which was numerously attended. Another was held yesterday afternoon, which was attended by still greater numbers, and sat a longer time in deliberation; and after its breaking up, despatches were made up for Sir Edward Codrington, which were sent off at 10 o'clock last night.

The Sierra Leon Gazette of Aug. 14, announces the death of Maj. Gen. Sir Neil Campbell, K. C. B. Captain General and Commander in Chief. And the same paper of Aug. 18, announces the death of Mr. John Lewis, the victualling agent of the colony. Both died of the fatal fever of the climate.

In the late victory obtained over the Turkish and Egyptian fleets at Navarino, the carnage on board the Turkish Admiral was so immense, and the destruction so unexpectedly rapid, that the officers could not keep the men at their guns. The crew were compelled by force to fully re-possess their quarters, and at the close and heavy fire of the Asia mowed them down so rapidly that the survivors became paralysed. The officers, however, instigated by the fear of the bow-string, or by their fatalism, kept their posts, and suffered severely for their resolution. The dispatches were brought to Marseilles by Lord Viscount Ingestrie, in the Gannet, where his Lordship was detained by the quarantine regulations; but the authorities permitted the despatches to be forwarded by a courier. They arrived at the Admiralty on Sunday Morning, and were immediately sent off to his Majesty at Windsor.

The harbour of Navarino lies at the south west corner of the Morea. It is of a roundish form, with an island lying across the mouth of it. The entrance is by the south end of the island, where the passage is 600 yards wide; the north entrance is too shallow for large vessels. The island is two miles long, and a quarter of a mile broad. The basin is six miles in circumference. The port of Navarino is the ancient harbour of Pylos.

United States.

From the Rochester Daily Advertiser, of Saturday.

FIRE AND MORTALITY.—The Paper-mill of Messrs. Peck, & Co. between the Aqueduct and the middle bridge, on the east side of the river, caught fire while most of the workmen were at dinner yesterday, and, notwithstanding the great exertions of the fire companies and citizens, was almost entirely destroyed. There were about 600 reams of paper and a large quantity of rags in the building, which, with a great part of the machinery, were wholly consumed. The fire originated, it is thought, in the bleaching room. Loss about $6,000—of which, one-half is covered by an Insurance with the Farmers' Fire Insurance and Loan Company of New-York.

An accident which occurred at the flames were nearly overcome, renders the catastrophe infinitely more distressing. Thomas Mifflin, Rathbun, who occupied part of O. N. Rush's building—a young man of 25, of excellent character, and the source of comfort and support to an aged mother and a widowed sister with her train of orphans, was struck down and buried into eternity by the fragments of a falling chimney!

Lower Canada.

THIS morning HORATIO GATES, SAMUEL GERRARD, ROBERT U. HARWOOD, CAMPBELL SWEENY and THOMAS PORTEOUS, Esquires, left this city for QUEBEC. They carried with them the loyal and patriotic Address of the inhabitants of the city and district of MONTREAL, favourable to the present administration. It has annexed to it about 6000 signatures; many more were due, but the Address was necessarily despatched without them.—Que.

The annual Public examination of the children of the NATIONAL SCHOOL, took place at the National-School-House, on Friday the 21st inst. The total number present were—Boys,—115—Girls,—96—211.

The Earl and Countess of Dalhousie honored the examination with their presence, and it was also attended by the Lord Bishop and Clergy, Sir Noel and Lady Hill, and several officers and Citizens of the first rank.

The annual dinner to the children was given on the day after Christmas day, and no less than 305 boys and girls—(including the children of the Military School, who attended the Sunday School)—partook of the entertainment. The dinner consisted of a profusion of good old English fare—ROAST BEEF AND PLUM PUDDING,—and there was a plentiful supply of apples, by way of dessert. The course of spectators was greater than usual, and all of them appeared to take a deep interest in the scene, and to enter fully into the feelings of the youthful guests, by whose happy, smiling faces they were surrounded. Amongst the visitors were the Countess of Dalhousie, and the Chief Justice, the Hon. Col. Ramsay, Sir Noel Hill, and the worthy Commandant of the Garrison, Col. Nicol, whose kind and benevolent attention to the children ought on no account to be passed over in silence. The feast was concluded with a Hymn sung by the whole of the children, who were assembled in one room for the purpose.

After the company were dispersed, the fragments were distributed, under the direction of the Committee of management, to a number of poor families, who had been previously furnished with tickets of recommendation by the Clergy and others.—Mercury.

Domestic.

We have just received a letter from an intelligent friend of ours, residing in Virginia, in which it is stated that a person named Robert Bell—a native of Scotland—has lately deceased, leaving behind him a very handsome property, in the City of Richmond, which property has been escheated to the State, in consequence of there being no heirs, or persons in the country to administer to the Estate—"It is understood, however," says our friend, "that Mr. Bell has two Nephews, by the name of Dalzel, residing on Yonge Street; and, there can be no doubt, if they were to proceed to Richmond, and petition the Legislature, during its present sitting, but they might obtain the property."

As it is important to these young men that they should be informed of these facts; the Editors of the several papers in York, will oblige us by giving publicity to this article.—Gore Gazette.

FATAL ACCIDENT FROM CARBONIC GAS.

We have received the following distressing information from one of the Proprietors of the Long Point Furnace :—

DIED—on the night of the 22d inst., at the Long Point Furnace, Mr. DAVIS BLOSS. He died suddenly of suffocation in his bed, occasioned by the carbonic acid, or other deleterious Gas issuing from the Furnace. He retired to bed in perfect health, at about a quarter past 7 o'clock, in a room adjoining the Furnace Stack; and the workmen retired one after the other, until the seventh, who, at a quarter before 10 o'clock, discovering him in the room in a state of insensibility, and apparently in great distress for want of breath, supposed him in a fit, and alarmed those that were up; who, upon examination, found one man was dead! (Mr. Bloss) two others insensible and helpless, and the other three in a situation equally alarming and equally unconscious of danger, though not so nearly exhausted. There can be no doubt but they would all—like their friend Mr. B.—have ceased to exist in a very few minutes, had they not been discovered and taken into the fresh air, by which they were soon restored to sensibility, and are now quite recovered.

The deceased was the Founder in the Furnace; a worthy man, of good character, and about 56 years of age—formerly from Baltimore, Connecticut. His death is much lamented by the owners as a skilful overseer and foreman in the said Furnace.

It is worthy of notice that this room has been used for a lodging room, for the workmen, from the time the Furnace was first erected (5 years ago) but has never had a door until that fatal day.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1828.

We have no later information from England of an official nature, respecting the affairs of Greece. The private Letter from Pera, which will be found in our columns to-day, if confirmed serves to shew, that the Turks, are reaping the effects of their own cruelty, and that in the savage warfare, which they seem determined to carry on both against man and nature, they must themselves bear a part in the dreadful consequences resulting from their conduct.

Agreeable to the promise which we made in our last number, we have this day extracted such clauses from 31 Geo. 3. C. 31, as relate to the appropriation, made in that Statute, of Lands, commonly known as the Clergy Reserves, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy.

The Letter of the LORD BISHOP inserted in our last, contains such heads of argument, founded on this Statute, as must we think convince every unprejudiced mind, that the appropriation which is made, as well from the ... ge of the Statute itself, as the subsequent Acts of the Imperial Government in accordance with its provisions, and the length of time she had remained in undisputed possession, and unquestioned right of these Reserves, was intended to be, and is in fact, the property of the Church of England; and also, that the Provisions of the Statute, in connection with those Acts of the Government, constitute her with all legal solemnity—the Established Church of the Country.

At one period, it is well known, that viewing the Church of England in this light, it became a question, whether she did not possess, or might not hereafter claim, the right of exacting tythes. This question however was not agitated by her authorities, but by others, and was no sooner brought up, than she disclaimed any right, or intention, to such an exaction, and to set the matter at rest, a Law was unanimously passed, by our Provincial Legislature in 1822, declaring that she did not posses such a right, the reason given in the Preamble of the Bill, being, that adequate provision had been already made for her support, by the appropriation of the Clergy Reserves. In this Act we think, is clearly involved a recognition, of her right to these Lands, and as the Established Church—for if not the Established Church, but merely one, without legal distinction from any other, she could not by possibility have any rights whatever which others did not possess, and therefore this question as to the collection of tythes would have been superfluous, and the law which was passed on the occasion, an unnecessary Act of Legislation. This Law which was reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure—subsequently received the Royal Assent, and by Proclamation bearing date 29th Feb. 1828, became the Law of the Land. In this Assent of His Majesty too, we think is implied a further recognition of the Church of England, as the Established Church.

It would seem a contradiction in Legislation to assert, first, that a Church had not a particular right, which belonged to the Native Establishment, because a provision in lieu as it may be termed, had been made by Law for her support, by an appropriation of Lands, and after this assertion had been granted as reasonable, by the enactment of another Law, which for ever deprived her of that particular right, on the ground of such appropriation, then to attempt to wrest from her that very appropriation, which had been made the previous ground of reason, for declaring her to be not entitled to the exercise of that particular right. Yet such, it appears to us, is the present state of the question with respect to the Clergy Reserves. Up to the period of passing this Act in 1822, the right of the Church of England to them had never been questioned, and it was that right as we have already seen, which afforded the reason for passing the Law, declaratory, as to the non-collecting of Tythes. The Government by its previous acts, as well as in recognising the principles of, and giving its assent to that Law, had made a recognition of the right, and subsequent to its enactment has given further proofs of that recognition, in the appointment of a corporation for the management of the Clergy Reserves, for the benefit of the Church of England, at the head of which is the Bishop of Quebec, its members being composed of the Clergy under his superintendence. To these various Acts of legal recognition, no objection has been made, until within the last few years, when the Presbyterians, in connection with the Church of Scotland, claimed to have a right in the participation of the Reserves. This claim was at first urged without reference to other denominations—the Presbyterians of the the Church of Scotland, resting their supposed right, on the fact of their being an Established Church, in Scotland, and by endeavoring to give such a construction to the term "Protestant Clergy," distinctly considered, without allusion to other parts of the Statute, as to exclude that Establishment in Scotland, within its meaning in Upper Canada Subsequently however, when it appeared, that this construction was viewed as being of a forced nature, and inapplicable to the more definite construction, which the Law itself gives,—such as "Persuasges"—"Rectories"—"Clergy of the Church of England"—"duly Ordained according to the rights of the said Church"—the right was attempted to be supported on National grounds, but arguments drawn from such a source, when brought to bear upon a question of Law, must always, be too feeble to afford any prospect of success. Under the general term "Protestant Clergy" it has also been asserted, that all religious denominations of Protestants, have an equal right to the Reserves, and that herefore an equal division among all, is the intention of the Law. To this it will be sufficient to answer, that if such had really been the intention of His Majesty, as conveyed in His Message to the Imperial Parliament, in which this appropriation was recommended, we can scarcely conceive the necessity, which seems to have been felt, of making such particular mention of any one denomination as is made of the Church of England, and omitting all mention of any other. The result of this would have been, that while it gave no other rights to the Church of England, than it did to others, it would have imposed conditions upon her, from which all others would have been exempt. This would involve another contradiction, and inconsistency in Legislation, which cannot be reconciled with the known wisdom of the Imperial Parliament, and the great talents of the illustrious Statesman, under whose particular inspection, this Bill was drawn.

During the last Session of Parliament (1826-27) these different claims seemed to have been abandoned, and a new, and general measure was introduced by Mr. Morris, who had formerly supported the claim of the Church of Scotland to a participation in the Reserves. This measure resolved itself into a Bill authorising the sale of these Lands, for the general purposes of Education, and erecting places of worship for all Christian denominations, effecting if it had passed, a total variation from the original appropriation, and dividing among all, in one way, what it was found could not be obtained in any other. This Bill however did not pass the different branches of the Legislature, and since the prorogation of Parliament, the question has been the almost constant topic of Newspaper controversy. Within a few months the claim of the Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland, has been reasserted—invitations are held out to other Presbyterians, to make common cause with them in an intended application to the Imperial Parliament, and it has been suggested that other denominations, should follow the example, each for themselves. A Committee has been appointed for the furtherance of the proposed object, and an Agent named to proceed to England. Conflicting opinions however seem to exist, and there are at this moment, Petitions in circulation for signature, differing in their requests.

It is at this period, that the Letter of the LORD BISHOP of Quebec has made its appearance, and while it supports the rights of the Church committed to his charge, it inculcates a spirit of moderation and forbearance in the discussion of a question, which so deeply involves her interests His Lordship truly says, that we have not attacked any person, but being attacked by others, it cannot excite surprise, that we should feel ourselves called upon to contend for the integrity of those rights, which we feel assured the Law has given to us.

Amidst a vast deal of abuse (we can call it by no milder name) which has been vented against the Church of England, and her Ministers, we have hitherto abstained from taking any part in the discussion which has been carried on; and in offering these remarks, our object is more particularly to request the attention of our readers and others to the Law itself—the extracts we have given, together with the aid of His Lordship's Letter, arranging as it does the several heads of argument, puts the whole case before them, and a due consideration of these, will we think lead all unprejudiced persons, to the same conclusion with His Lordship.

The rights of the Church of England, rest not for their support, on appeals to National feelings or prejudices—these rights are clearly and explicitly recognised by the Law—she depends not upon implication or forced construction of its provisions for that recognition, but on the specific and direct application, which it contains to her Establishment—her Ministers—her rites and ceremonies. For the correctness of this opinion we again appeal to the clauses of the Statute, and as long as words have meaning, and those words remain on our Statute Book unrepealed, we shall be unwilling to concede the right claimed by any other. This opinion we shall at all times be ready to support in a moderate, and temperate manner, which we trust we have not violated on this occasion—and as a contrast to this our opinion, we will only add at present, that if the same specific and direct application had been made in the Law to the Church of Scotland, without any mention whatever having been made of the Church of England—if the words of Church of Scotland," had been inserted in the Law as those of whom we know, we have in fact implicitly believed all he has asserted, for who, that has the honor of being acquainted with you, or our mutual friends, Amos Slaughwanger, or Calvin Rantee, or have ever heard a sermon of Father and Friend Hunt, or that have dropped a tear to the memories of the unfortunate Martyrs Ings and Thistlewood, or is acquainted with the works of those burning and shining lights, Gentle, Carlile, and Taylor the Devil, must doubt the bigoted Doctor's sweeping assertion? But I do begin to suspect, that some of our modern Patriots are apt to prom-se more than they have any rational hopes of fulfilling. I will not expect when I voted for you, at the last Election, that, with all your wisdom it would be in your power to make two grains of Wheat grow, where only one grew before; and that you would also whip up our Horses, and set our shoulders to the Wheels, as Hercules says in the fable.—But I did expect, and had a right to do so, that you would have employed your time when you got into the House, in settling, instead of unsettling, the affairs of the Province. I did expect also,—and from the numerous promise you so lavishly made at the time,—had an undoubted right to expect that, you would have said less and done more—that you would have exerted yourself to calm the doubts and fears, of the community, which you had helped to excite; and endeavor to strengthen that confidence between the Government, and the people which so

He informs us in his Legend of Sleepy Hollow, near Tarry Town, on the North River, that there lived a Mr. Icabod Crane, and a son of Anac, called Brombones. They both fell desperately in love with a lovely Dutch Girl called Katrina. One night Mr. Crane, returning home, from a visit to his intended, was pursued by a Headless Trooper, whose ghost infested a spot, which none dared pass after dark, and it is generally believed ab-out Tarry Town, that the Horse-man's spirit carried him away to the other world, for he never was heard of in that neighborhood afterwards.—Being a very inoffensive harmless fellow, his untimely fate was much lamented. I rejoice exceedingly, that I have it in my power to inform the worthy inhabitants of Tarry Hollow, that Icabod Crane is alive and well, and is now living at Mud Lake in Camden! I know the blooming Katrina will be delighted to hear this.—I hope she and Mr. Brombones, are in as good health and spirits, as they were when I last had the honor of spending a most agreeable evening beneath their hospitable roof. Perhaps she may still entertain some faint recollection of a spare bilious looking Gentleman, dressed in black. He was introduced by the Rev. Barnacle Shoutwell, and preached at Sleepy Hollow in November last, a year ago. But to return from this digression.

Icabod, persists in asserting, that he was pursued by the Headless Horseman himself, and that he was unhorsed,—not by a Pumpkin, thrown at him by his intended—but by a Dutch Dragoon. He is still unmarried and never sees a pretty little in the Circular," which brings up the rear—it Dutch Maid, but he heaves a deep sigh, and murmurs the beloved name of Katrina.

How far this statement of the above information, and the following letter, it is not just now convenient for me to inform the Public. Bladder Bombast, Esq., supposed at first was a fictitious personage, but my friend Mr. D. informs me that he is a native of Kennebunk State of Maine, by Trade a Bellows maker, and is entitled to the gratitude of mankind for having much improved the great State Bellows at Washington,

And obedient Servant,

ICABOD CRANE'S LETTER.

TO BLADDER BOMBAST, ESQ., M. P. P.

My Dear Bombast,

I have been anxiously expecting to see you for some time past—Your last letter—written in the usual inflated, Bombastic Furioso style, which you use so unsparingly on all occasions, has not succeeded in convincing me that, you and your friends are such spotless Patriots, as you represent yourselves, but to continue—I am the voice of the people is the voice of God, and that you are bound implicitly to obey it, I do not believe there is a particle of truth in the premises (your deduction, of course falls with it) as John Wesley's Sister said, (when a democratic acquaintance made a similar assertion in her presence,) certainly said she "for we read that they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him, Crucify him"—I feel myself at liberty to say that I have been vociferated, by people of the same stamp, against many a great and good man since. Indeed I am told that some of the greatest benefactors to mankind, have been paid for their services in that coin.—After ages, it is true sometimes discovered the mistake made by their forefathers, in shouting at the heels of their enemies, and in praising and murdering their best friends, and endeavored to make atonement by erecting a Monument to the Martyr; but notwithstanding they did so, it proves all I ask, viz: that the people are not, (as you contend) infallable.

Dr. Samuel Johnson has dared to insinuate,—nay, he declared it boldly to the world, that, "Patriotism is the last refuge of a Scoundrel.—Now for my own part I am not inclined implicitly to believe all he has asserted, for who, that has the honor of being acquainted with you, or our mutual friends, Amos Slaughwanger, or Calvin Rantee, or have ever heard a sermon of Father and Friend Hunt, or that have dropped a tear to the memories of the unfortunate Martyrs Ings and Thistlewood, or is acquainted with the works of those burning and shining lights, Gentle, Carlile, and Taylor the Devil, must doubt the bigoted Doctor's sweeping assertion? But I do begin to suspect, that some of our modern Patriots are apt to prom-se more than they have any rational hopes of fulfilling. I will not expect when I voted for you, at the last Election, that, with all your wisdom it would be in your power to make two grains of Wheat grow, where only one grew before; and that you would also whip up our Horses, and set our shoulders to the Wheels, as Hercules says in the fable.—But I did expect, and had a right to do so, that you would have employed your time when you got into the House, in settling, instead of unsettling, the affairs of the Province. I did expect also,—and from the numerous promise you so lavishly made at the time,—had an undoubted right to expect that, you would have said less and done more—that you would have exerted yourself to calm the doubts and fears, of the community, which you had helped to excite; and endeavor to strengthen that confidence between the Government, and the people which so happily existed, and without which, I begin to think we cannot expect either happiness or prosperity. You so repeatedly and roundly asserted, that we were oppressed, abused, and imposed upon, by our rulers; that I took it for granted it must be true, but I must confess that my faith is on the wane, and I should feel much obliged, if you would come forward, and state explicitly and specifically, what those oppressions, wrongs, and abuses are? There is that bone of contention, the Alien Question, I begin shrewdly to suspect has not been kept in General information, with the Attorney General introduced his celebrated resolution, the purport of which were, if my memory does not deceive me—that certain of our people labored under certain disabilities, (which you have since been obliged to acknowledge is true) and praying the Imperial Parliament to remove them,—you and your friends interfered and unquestionably prevented the final settlement of the question. I do believe had you come manfully forward and supported him, that we should all of us at this moment be enjoying the rights and privileges of British Subjects, to the extent of our utmost wishes. But what are we now? a race of non-descripts that Buffon or Linnæus would be puzzled to classify—and what is still worse, we are called upon to pay Mr. Randal £100, for assisting to reduce us to this condition! Matters and things in general, are coming to a pretty pass. Instead of making peace and union here, what you, and all your confidantes declare you would fight and die for, to wit, as epitome of the British Constitution, instead of endeavoring to infuse some portion of the energy and decision, by which the proceedings of the Imperial Parliament are so eminently distinguished, into your own House, you are fighting and battling in lieu of it, a mere Logocracy; a Government of wind and words.

It will never do to persist in such courses. I tell you Bladder Bombast, it will not answer We will not submit to it. If you are serving the State much in the same manner as some experimental Quack Doctors serve their Patients. You have tried so many experiments on the Province that, you're in danger of bursting it in consumption, and consequently of destroying the constitution—and if, like bungling Tailors, you continue to cut a new one for every one you stop up; you will exhaust the patience, and empty the pockets of the people.

In solemn, sober, sadness of soul, I do think, my dear Bombast, that you must be visited by some disagreeable nightmare, which keeps you redress on the course you have pursued. Believe me, I have gone too far, and the evil I complain of, will are long ever itself, or rather the good sense of the community will overcome and extinguish it, as a storm of wind scatters and dispenses the noxious vapors, that for a season any contaminate the atmosphere! I therefore advise you to step forward and claim the merit of doing that, which will be done, your opposition to the contrary notwithstanding.

Can it be borne as Salmagundy says,—I wish I had the Book before me that I might give you a correct quotation—but if not the burden of meaning says he, to see a few talking Jacks, wind themselves up with a glass or two of Whiskey, and then proceed to charge their political blunderbuss, with abusive words, such as Radical, Knave, Rascal, Blackguard, Scoundrel, and so forth, and after having fired it off, stalk into the street and accost the first Englishman or Scotchman they meet, with "what do they think of that, Sir? I guess I have will bet Pompey's Pillar, to a Stick of Sealing wax," the existence of such a man is not known ten miles to the rear of Camden or Mud Lake, nor the report of his blunderbuss heard further than would be the report of a "Chestnut in a Farmers fire."

I do not my dear Bladder, wish to give the least offence—political men and public measures are fair game, and I must confess I am inclined, by the Election approaches, and as friendship is plain of speech, I will not conceal the fact, that the people expect something more substantial than promises. You must retract your steps, for you have erred. Wolf! Wolf! till like the boy in the Fable, the cry ceases to alarm, and we begin to suspect too, that like the boy alarmed at the Wolf, you have often laughed in you sleeve to see us rushing forward, with bended hand, and purse, to your assistance. I wish I had my Gourlay Dollar, and Randal two and sixpence back again. I am inclined to think that you will raise but little money in that way in future, and that you are also of the same opinion, and are therefore trying to get the £500 for Mr. R. by petitioning the House, but it will not succeed

I have read most of the books you were kind enough to send me. "All Kings must be tyrants," is a very lame production. "Liberty's last squeak," equally so; but Gourlay, like Smellingus at Munchausens, evidently sees every thing with a squint eye, and instead of complaining to the world, he had better complain to his Physician, the Steam Doctor, in Earnest Town, or in his absence to his Agent. I have read lately too, a very strange book written by a Dean Swift, of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, and I most earnestly beg of you my dear Bombast, to read it for the truth of what he asserts, for reasons which shall by and by be rendered.—The said Dean asserts, and that gravely too, and bear in mind he is a Clergyman—that all disaffection in a well governed State, springs from the diseased state of the Liver, which is, or ought to be, the Lazaret of Bile, and that if the complaint is of long standing, the Heart diminishes in size—the eyes become discoloured and yellowish, in consequence of which, every object the patient looks at, is distorted—water accumulates on the brain, and he fancies himself always in a fog, and acts, and speaks accordingly. How it may be with you my dear Sir, and some of the symptoms I know not, but I am certain that of the fog, you partake largely—and knowing this, I feel anxious for you to try the prescription, which the Rev. Gentleman has kindly given to the world. Let the patient he says, take a powerful emetic, after which two or three cathartics equally so; on the following day, let him get the back part of his head shaved, and a large blister applied to the spot. If it rises well, the happiest results will follow. As the book from which I extract is made, is a very scarce one, having been long out of print, let me beg of you to keep it a profound secret, as I intend to take out a Patent Right if it succeeds; and if you will try the experiment secretly, and the result should be such as I anticipate, we will go snacks.—As to the plan of that crack-brained fellow H., of Bath, which was published in the Herald, the fool might as well try to make a cripple without legs, dance a Spanish Fandango, as to make such a man as you, (and there are others of the same kidney) speechify in verse, for it is well known to the world, (to the Canadian Public I should have said) that you cannot utter a dozen sentences in plain prose without exposing yourself. How very moderate and modest, the fellow is too, in his expectations! if he succeeds. Only the whole of the Clergy deserves indeed!! He may bandage his head as he comes, and wait patiently for the Lavender Season, both Episcopalians and Kirkites,

"that grace is founded in damnation."

He has nothing to expect nor ever to fear my dear Bombast, from that quarter. Should the prescription I have given answer, and we advertise in the Colonial Journals of Europe, "Disaffection, Religion and politics, Rebellion, and Rebellion "speedily suppressed. No cure no pay," we should have our hands full of business and unlimited, with a reward commensurate with the greatness of our services.

Herewith you will receive the Ipecac, Calomel, and Cantharides, which I hope you will use immediately, and that you may find them

Dear Bombast,
Your's truly,

Mud Lake, 1st January, 1828.

P. S.—Who is Mr. Hume? Mr. Randal I see extols him to the Skies, and I hear he is very popular with all our party, throughout the Province. Surely it cannot be the Gentleman of that cognomen, who has been so long and so severely censuring the Imperial Parliament, that the Canadas are a m- ... ment, a sea, an Excrescence which they ... duty bound to abandon! If this is the man whose Letter, Mr. M. H. has published, I see in the face into the plot he is hatching for our destruction, but not so easily into Mr. H's. motive, for publishing it to the world. I give you due notice that though I have reform on my lips, I have never had revolution in my heart. Why, even the small portion of respectability which you enjoy my dear Bladder Bombast is all owing to our connection with Great Britain! If we have not the honor of numbering our greatest enemy, we are undoue for ever! Mr. Hume must indeed think us a pack of brainless wens, warts, and excrescences if we should ever consult the Lunatic in the moon, or the man who is becoming so popular,—if his advice is to be followed, I shall leave Mud Lake, and as I hear there is a set of Schoolmasters in Nova-Zembla, remove thither, for I never wish to have any thing to do out from all connection with the civilized world. I shall watch your conduct during the ensuing Session with a jealous eye, and exercise the right, which every free man enjoys, of expressing my opinion of Public men, and Public measures, without fear, favor, or affection.

From the London Courier

"Our own impression certainly is that the battle of Navarino is the commencement, not the termination, of the business. The Sultan will hardly be a free agent in the affair. Popular resentment, when the fearful truth is known, will not suffer him and Divan to perhaps lamentable retaliation." "We cannot" says the Editor of the Courier "persuade ourselves but that we are only on the threshold of mighty events which the future will disclose."

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—Shipwreck.—Captain M'Clintock, and the surviving crew of the brig Try-Again, (18 in number,) being indebted, under Providence, to Captain S. Baldwin, of the packet ship Alexander, of Philadelphia, for the preservation of their lives, beg leave to express their gratitude, by publicly acknowledging the obligations they are under. The Try Again sailed from Quebec, 11th October, bound to Liverpool, with a cargo of timber. On the 22d, in lat. 45, long. 38, were overtaken by a severe gale. During the day she laboured much, and shipped a deal of water. At 8 P. M. on the 24th, shipped a sea which swept the decks fore and aft, leaving nothing standing but the foremast and stump of the mainmast. Two of the crew, James Robinson, and Duncan Weir, were swept over and drowned. After clearing the wreck, we found the ship half full of water, and totally unmanageable, having lost her rudder. We then prepared some provisions for the purpose of securing ourselves on the forestop, but had no sooner placed them on deck than they were swept off. We were then obliged to return to the top without food or water, and there remained for four days. On the morning of the 5th, being nearly exhausted, and the weather more moderate, we went on deck in search of provisions. Two casks of water had been stowed in the steerage, and one with difficulty was brought on deck, which had been stoved, and a quantity of salt water admitted; we however secured it to the windlass, and with 2 pounds of beef repaired again to the top, where we remained 11 days, during which time ten vessels passed us, one in particular within musket shot, but to our great surprise, she altered her course and stood from us. Our feet now being exhausted, and having nothing left but this brackish water, our sufferings became very great.—Some of the crew then suggested that lots should be cast for one to die for the sustenance of the others, but two not agreeing, we were fortunately preserved on the 20th November by the ship Alexander, Captain Baldwin, who sent two boats to our assistance. At this moment our feelings may be imagined, but not told. By the kind treatment of Capt. Baldwin, we have been saved from a watery grave, and rescued from one of the most distressing scenes that can be presented to imagination.

A vessel at Newfoundland had fallen in with the wreck of a brig, of whose name they could make out but the letters Indi—A living woman was lashed in the maintop, three living men lashed in the rigging, and a dead body lashed in the shrouds, which by they had subsisted. The vessel which fell in with the wreck could not send a boat to their relief, but urged the sufferers to throw themselves overboard, in the hope that they might pick them up; but they were too weak. Soon after, the w... her caused the vessels to separate.—Boston Palladium.

The wrecked brig fallen in with by a vessel at Newfoundland, part of the name of which was Indi, as stated in yesterday's paper, it is feared was the brig Indi'n, which sailed from Quebec for Liverpool on the 27th October with several passengers, some of whom were ladies.—New-York Gazette.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a long time—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

YORK, UPPER CANADA, TUESDAY JANUARY 15, 1828.

By Authority.

YORK, U. C. Tuesday January 15, 1828.

This day at one o'clock, His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor proceeded in the usual state, from the Government House, to the Chamber of the Honorable the Legislative Council, where being arrived and seated on the Throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was sent with a Message from His Excellency to the House of Assembly, commanding their attendance. The Members present being come up accordingly, His Excellency was pleased to open the Session of the Legislature, with the following

SPEECH:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

Under the excellent Constitution derived from the wisdom and liberality of our Parent State, you are again convened for the purpose of promoting by your counsels the prosperity of this Province. I shall have great satisfaction in witnessing your exertions for that end, as it must always be most gratifying to me, to concur with you in any measures tending to advance the general welfare.

The works in progress for improving the internal navigation, will, doubtless, be regarded by you with undiminished interest. I confidently trust, that the advantages derived from their successful accomplishment, will, at no distant period, afford the most gratifying proof, that you have been guided by good policy, in advancing them by great and extraordinary exertions.

I have much pleasure in announcing to you, that His Majesty has very graciously provided for the establishment of an University in this Province, and has bestowed means which will ensure the early accomplishment of an object, long regarded by me as among those most to be desired for the welfare of the Colony.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I have ordered the Accounts and Estimates to be laid before you: I rely with confidence upon your making the necessary provision for the Public Service.

Although the past year has not been particularly favorable to the Commerce of Canada, I have reason to believe, that no diminution of our Revenue is to be apprehended.

I have again solicited the attention of His Majesty's Government to an Address of both Houses of the Legislature presented in a former Session; convinced that some of the measures prayed for, would very materially tend to the increase of our resources.

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen.

You will, of course, direct your attention to such Provincial Acts as are about to expire.

The enactments authorising the sale of Lands for the payment of Assessments which have been suffered to fall into arrear, will, in a few months, begin to take effect. My own opinion of their expediency, and even of their necessity, remains unchanged. I believe they will be found to afford a certain, though gradual remedy for very great evils, and that their beneficial consequences will soon be too evident to admit of question.

These benefits, however, it cannot be your wish to attain by any unnecessary rigor, and still less by any degree of injustice: and if upon an attentive consideration of the details of the system, and their probable effects when reduced to practice, you find that any apprehended inconvenience can be prevented, or remedied, I shall be happy to unite with you in any measure for that purpose.

The improvement of the Highways throughout the Province, cannot but be ensured and hastened by the means which the collection of the Assessments will inevitably furnish; but I am unwilling to think that you will find it necessary to wait for the gradual application of these means.

There are other subjects affecting the happiness and welfare of the people, upon some of which I shall have occasion to communicate with you by Message; and it is with much satisfaction I reflect upon the harmony and good understanding which has prevailed between the different branches of this Legislature, as affording the best assurance that public measures will receive deliberate and effectual attention.

THE U. E. LOYALIST.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1828. NO. 64.

Lower Canada.

To His Excellency the Right Hon. GEORGE EARL OF DALHOUSIE, Baron Dalhousie of Dalhousie Castle, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Captain General and Governor in Chief in and over the Provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, &c. &c. &c.

WE, the subscribers, His Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, Inhabitants of the City and District of Montreal, in the Province of Lower Canada, beg leave most respectfully to approach your Excellency upon the occasion of the late Prorogation of the Provincial Assembly.

The course of previous measures long and systematically pursued by our Provincial House of Assembly, as well in regard to the financial as other momentous questions, had often been such as to produce in us, feelings of deep and painful solicitude. To this experience immediate inconveniences were added more gloomy forebodings of future evils

We have seen the revenue of our sister Province of Upper Canada, unjustly withheld until it became necessary to re-establish her rights, by the interposition of the Imperial Parliament. We have seen a system of temporary laws continually expiring, or requiring constant renewal, almost universally substituted in the stead of permanent legislation; as if to reduce all things to which other countries have deemed it requisite to give stability, into precarious dependence upon the will of an elective body. We have for years been attempting to usurp the powers of the Executive, and encroach upon the Prerogatives of the Crown. We have seen the right of having representatives in our Legislatures, which is at present confined to the French Seigniories, refused to the English portion of Lower Canada, namely, the Townships, unless upon terms which would have rendered its accordance a delusion, and a mockery. We have seen Offices of Registry, such as exist in all English Colonies, and are indispensable to the security of titles to property in the English portion of the Province, refused to the reiterated prayers of its inhabitants, notwithstanding the recommendation of the Government in its favor, under this pretext amongst others, that such Registries are incompatible with French and feudal Laws, and this notwithstanding the beneficence of the Imperial Parliament, which has exacted that these French Laws shall not operate upon lands under English tenures. We have even seen measures adopted by the House of Assembly to obtain the repeal of this beneficent Act of the Imperial Parliament, whereby the unrepresented English Inhabitants of the Townships would be placed in a still more calamitous situation than at present; and we cannot but perceive that the scope and tendency of the course pursued by the Assembly of Lower Canada must render this extensive Province, chiefly waste and unsettled at present, unfit for the object which the Mother Country must have most at heart, namely, that it should afford the means of advantageous settlement to British Emigrants, and constitute an asylum and a home for her surplus population.

But although we had observed with melancholy presentiments the tendency of the course adopted, which, from the defective state of our representation, derived only from the Seigniories, was unalterable, except by some interposition of the Parent Country, (such as occurred to repress the injustice attempted towards Upper Canada,) we were nevertheless not prepared for an exhibition of the violent spirit of domination, so haughty a disregard of the Prerogatives of the Crown, and so wanton a violation of the Constitution under which alone they exist, as has been manifested by the Assembly immediately before the recent Prorogation.

We feel deeply that it has been to the power and Prerogatives of the Crown that, under Providence, we must chiefly ascribe the preservation of those characteristics by which this Province can be distinguished as an English Colony. We feel that these Prerogatives and power, necessary to good Government throughout the British dominions, must be to us in this Province more essential, as constituting chief refuge in danger, our strong tower of defence against feudal ascendancy, and our sole reliance against anarchy and confusion.

For your Excellency's measures and determination to uphold these just and necessary Prerogatives in their due and legal efficiency, we beg leave gratefully to express our heartful thanks. We cannot doubt that these measures will meet the decided approbation of our beloved and most Gracious Sovereign, to whom, and to the Parent Country we can alone look, under Providence, for the future establishment of a state of things such as may render this Province a secure and desirable asylum for our fellow subjects from Britain.

While we thus gratefully acknowledge your Excellency's sense of duty in supporting the most essential Prerogatives of the Crown, and your unabated zeal for the welfare and improvement of the Country, amidst unhappy divisions, calculated to paralyze your laudable efforts, and while we also recollect the blessings experienced by the Sister province of Nova-Scotia under your Administration, we cherish the hope that the recent proceedings of the House of Assembly may induce His Majesty's Government to take our situation into their serious consideration, with the view of speedily repairing the defects and correcting the errors which passed experience, and the recent assumptions of the Assembly have tended to expose. And we also fervently cherish the hope that the firmness and energy which have marked your Lordship's conduct on this and other important occasions, will not be relaxed in the present arduous circumstances of your Administration, which we trust will be long, and distinguished by obtaining an effectual remedy to our grievances.

Amidst these hopes, derived from your character and conduct, we feel assured that your Excellency will experience the noblest of all rewards, not only in the approbation of our Gracious and beloved Sovereign, but in the consciousness of having discharged the duties of your exalted station, for the welfare and prosperity of His Majesty's faithful subjects.

GENTLEMEN,

ANSWER.

The circumstances which called for the late sudden prorogation of the Provincial Parliament were truly such as might well produce feelings of deep and painful solicitude in the minds of all the respectable classes of society. In this Address you have treated most justly the mischievous tendency of the measures pursued for years past in the Provincial House of Assembly: although the effect of these measures has been long felt in the total stop put to the progress of public improvement, I look upon that as nothing when compared with the recent more daring attempt to deny the Royal Prerogative, not a doubtful right nor a mere form of empty words, but a prerogative unquestionably established & universally known; disputed once at a remote early period in the British Parliament, frequently objected to in the Colonial Assemblies, it has been in every instance most clearly and firmly established.

I cannot believe, that this recent Act of the Assembly sprung out of ignorance; some of the leaders of the factious measures pursued in that body are well informed men, and for that reason it becomes the duty of all to stand forward who value the blessings they enjoy under the British Constitution.

In these feelings, gentlemen, I receive this Address with no ordinary satisfaction: I feel peculiarly well timed at this moment. I admire the comprehensive view it takes of the past and present circumstances of public affairs, and the moderation with which it speaks of the misfortunes now flowing from that very source from which the Executive Government should derive support and obtain the means of encouraging public improvement: but above all I admire and applaud that dutiful confidence with which so large a number of the respectable inhabitants in the District of Montreal appeal to His Majesty's Government, to correct the errors and repair the defects which past experience has now exposed.

I deeply regret, gentlemen, that I cannot personally lay your address at His Majesty's feet, so sincerely do I desire to add to it the utmost weight which my station amongst you might give to it; nothing that I can urge however shall be wanting to recommend the sentiments and opinions expressed in it to the immediate and favorable consideration of His Majesty's Secretary of State.

I thank you gentlemen for the gratifying approbation which you express of my own conduct in the recent proceedings. My duty is very plain, and I beg you to be assured, that it shall be my constant study so to act that while I firmly maintain the Prerogative of the Crown, I shall always, as faithfully, guard the Rights of the People.

Ordination.—On Thursday last, being the festival of St. John the Evangelist, the following Gentlemen were admitted to Holy Orders in the Cathedral Church of this City, by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, assisted by the Archdeacon of Quebec and the Revd. Dr. Mills:

Priests.—The Revd. E. W. Sewell, Minister of the Chapel of the Holy Trinity at Quebec, and the Revd. R. Short, heretofore stationed at Sandwich, U. C. and lately employed on a special mission to Drummond Island in Lake Huron. This Gentleman succeeds for the present to the situation of Assistant Minister at Quebec, and Preacher to Protestant Settlers in parts adjacent, held lately by the Rev. Geo. Archbold, who is now the visiting Missionary of the Diocese.

Deacon—Mr. David Robertson, who proceeds to Matilda, U. C. to be Curate to the Rev. F. Myers in that Township, (that Gentleman having become infirm,) and to serve parts adjacent.

FORGED NOTES of the Montreal Bank purporting to be of the value of Ten Dollars and Five Dollars have made their appearance in this vicinity. They are altered from the genuine Notes of one Dollar and may be detected by the following marks. The device at the top of the 10D bill is a Ship under sail, the forged Notes retain the figures of Britannia, which is impressed on the one Dollar Notes. In a true ten Dollar Bill, the figures 10 are at the foot, in the altered bills these are wanting.—The alteration, to a five Dollar note is known by the following marks, at the foot of the true note is a King's Head. In the counterfeit the King's Head is taken out and a V in a circle substituted. A note of each sort was presented at the Montreal Bank yesterday, and immediately detected by Mr. Lindsay, the first teller.

THE TURKISH ADMIRAL'S FLAG.—Tuesday afternoon, as Lord Viscount Ingestre, whom Admiral Codrington dispatched with Intelligence of his glorious victory, passed this city, on his way to the Admiralty, His Lordship had suspended from his carriage, "The Turkish Admiral's Flag." His Lordship only stopped a minute or two to change horses at the Fountain, and but few of our fellow Citizens had an opportunity of seeing this interesting trophy.—Kent Herald, Nov. 15.

A King's Ship recently built at Cherbourg has just been brought to Rouen, where it is to be fitted up with two steam engines of 80 horse power each, manufactured at Paris. This vessel is very nearly of the dimensions of a Frigate, for her keel is not less than 160 feet long. Although she has port hole, her sole arms are to consist of two chase guns of great calibre, one on her bow, and another a-stern, for throwing red hot shot. She is said to be destined for the Mediterranean.—Quotidienne.

Admiral Codrington.—This Officer was Captain of the Orion, in the memorable battle of Trafalgar. An English Paper says: "Had he waited another day, before he destroyed the Turkish Fleet, it would have been the anniversary of the glorious victory in which he had a share on the 21st of October, 1805, when the country was deprived of its lamented Naval Hero, Lord Nelson; and the Maritime force of France and Spain annihilated by the British Fleet under his command."

Admiral Sir Edward Codrington's son, a brave Officer, was wounded in the battle of Navarino.

Capt. Lord Paget, R. It is now understood, that Lord Graves will be Comptroller of the Household to the Noble Marquis.—Courier.

GREECE.

The precaution taken by Admiral Codrington to stop the sailing of all vessels till after the despatch vessels sent to the Dardanelles were well on their way, had the effect intended. It is added, that Admiral de Rigny had made an engagement with the consuls at Smyrna, that in the event of any decided rupture taking place, the vessel sent with the news should communicate it by signal before it entered the port, in order that they might adopt proper measures before the Turks received the information.

The French papers are filled with plates of the battle of Navarino, and poetry lauding the bravery of Admiral Codrington and his Allies.

The allied admirals have intimated to Lord Cochrane that he must discontinue his warlike operations, this is assumed as enforcing a cessation of the war. They have also taken measures to put down the systems of piracy carried on by the Greeks.

It is mentioned in an article from Constantinople, which appears in the Gazette de France of Thursday, that the "Austrian Internuncio had, that day, caused a note to be delivered to the Porte, supporting the proposals of the Three Powers, parties to the treaty of London. This step is said to have made much impression on the Turks, who have been used to consider Austria as adverse to the mediation. It is true that the Austrian Internuncio had been instructed to urge the Turkish government to accede to the intervention proposed by the three Allied Powers; but with what temper this advice was received, may be guessed by the reply of the Divan—namely, that if Austria were indeed the friend of Turkey, she would better prove it by aiding the sublime Porte to resist from their demands, than by advising the Sultan to comply with them. Such was the answer. What may be the conjoint effect of the persuasions of Austria, and the battle of Navarino, remains to be ascertained. It is possible that the latter may impart unexpected power to the former.—Courier.

DEATH OF SIR NEIL CAMPBELL.

From the Sierra Leone Gazette Extraordinary of Aug. 14.

FREETOWN, Aug. 14.—This morning, at five minutes past nine o'clock, departed this life, after a short, but severe illness, His Excellency Major General Sir Neil Campbell, G. B. Captain General and Governor-in-Chief. Immediately after this sad event, his Honour Lieutenant Colonel Lumley, the Lt. Governor, assembled the Members of His Majesty's Council, to communicate to them the afflicting intelligence, and to take such steps as are usual on occasions of the like melancholy nature. His Honour, in communicating to the public the severe loss the Colony has sustained by this very melancholy event, feels that he cannot adequately express his opinion on the death of a distinguished and valuable an Officer, of whom it may be truly said, that he has sacrafced his life to his never-ceasing zeal and exertions.

The following is a statement of the disease of his late Excellency, together with its alarming rapid progress, signed by the medical Gentlemen who attended him:—

"After a febrile indisposition of several days, against which he endeavoured to contend, His Excellency Major-General Sir Neil Campbell reluctantly submitted to medical treatment on Monday, the 5th instant, after which period he laboured under the usual symptoms of remitting fever. On the morning of the 9th a remission took place, when His Excellency, contrary to the repeated and urgent solicitations of his medical attendants, entered deeply into public business of rather an agitating nature. On the same evening the complaint returned, and was shortly followed by an alarming loss of mental power, which continued and was accompanied by gradual sinking of the bodily powers until the morning of the 14th, when His Excellency expired at nine o'clock. (Signed)

"WM. BARRY, Dep. Insp. Hospitals.
"JAMES BOYLE, Colonial Surgeon.
"W. FERGUSSON, Surgeon, R. A. C. C."

NOTICE.—His Honour the Lieutenant Governor affirms that the Civil Officers put on deep mourning for six weeks, as a mark of dutiful respect to the memory of their late lamented Governor-in-Chief, Major General Sir Neil Campbell, K. C. B. deceased. By his Honor's command,

WALTER W. LEWIS,
Colonial Secretary.

From the Freetown Royal Gazette of August 18.

The funeral of His Excellency the late Major General Sir Neil Campbell, our lamented Governor-in-Chief, left the Government House at a little after two on Wednesday afternoon, (the 15th) preceded by a detachment of the Royal African Colonial Corps, and the band of that Regiment. It was followed by his Honour Lieutenant Colonel Lumley, the Lieutenant Governor, the Members of the Council, the Civil and Military Officers, the Troops of the Garrison, and nearly the whole of the respectable part of the population; and although the weather was exceedingly unfavourable, there was a large concourse of spectators. During the movement of this mournful procession towards the burial ground there were fifty minute guns fired from Fort Thornton, the African, a Steam-vessel, and the Prince Regent, East Indiaman. The remains of His Excellency were deposited in a vault prepared for its reception, about half-past three, with the honours due to Officers of his rank.

United States.

PASSENGERS.

The facilities afforded of transportation by the Erie Canal to the western part of Pennsylvania and all the States bordering on the Ohio, together with the rapid improvement of these immense Districts have turned the tide of emigration to the west-ward, chiefly through that channel.

By the last Passenger Act, passed by Congress, vessels arriving in the United States are restricted from carrying more than one person to every five tons.

By the report of the last Session of the British Parliament, in relation to Emigration, the evidence, that one passenger to every two tons, for all the purposes of health, affords ample accommodation, was deemed satisfactory, and has become the law, rigidly enforcing, however, that there shall be 25 days ample provisions and water for each passenger proceeding from a British Port to N. America.

Passengers arriving in the United States without respect to age or citizenship, are subject to a tax, by the United States, of 1 dollar, under the head of Hospital money; yet, if any of these persons should become sick, they would not receive any medical aid, though thus taxed. During the quarantine regulations, however, provided they arrived having any contagious disease, they would be taken to the Quarantine Hospital.

How so manifest an injustice should have become a law, to levy on our citizens returning home, or the oppressed of other countries seeking an asylum and shelter under our institutions, we do not now inquire, but for the honor of our Republican Institutions, it should be blotted from our Statute Books. It may appear trivial; but to a poor farmer, with a family of six or eight, it becomes hard, even before he sets his foot upon the Land of liberty! a tax unknown in other countries!

But added to this tax, by the general Government, on the Emigrant, a citizen returning home, has a still more weighty tax to sustain, levied, if it is believed, contrary to the Constitution of the United States, in as much as it effects commerce, namely: a commutation tax of two and a half dollars to the Mayor and Corporation of New York for each passenger, to excuse the Master of the Vessel bringing passengers into port from giving bonds to the amount of $200 for each, that such person shall not become a charge on this city within a period of two years. It may be urged, give bonds and this is avoided—but requiring the security to be persons of respectability, to enter into such bonds for a heavy amount, proves a serious and expensive impediment to the master of any vessel, not owned in this port, thus making altogether, a tax on each citizen returning home, as well as on every individual seeking an asylum on our shores, whether young or old, of no less than $3, which tax may be avoided, by ships bound to Quebec, and passengers entering the States of Vermont, New-York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, by the St. Lawrence, and for this restrictive and absurd policy, the emigrants to our Western States, have been chiefly carried of late in British Vessels, and should our impolitic system continue, will be compelled to remain carrying on by the British Government, as to the Navigation of the St. Lawrence and the Lakes, our measure will drive the entire passenger-trade, even with our own States, into the British channel; and the more so, as while our restrictions are so numerous, require our ships to charge £5 for each passenger, the British ships can carry for £3 and make more money—for instance,

A passage from Liverpool to Quebec,	$13 00
Do. do. Quebec to Montreal,	1 00
Do. do. Montreal to St. Johns,	62 1-2
Do. do. St. Johns to White Hall,	2 00
Do. do. White Hall to Albany,	1 00
Do. do. Albany to New-York,	1 00
	$18 62 1-2

From Liverpool to New York	$24 00
Hospital, - - - -	1 00
Corporation of N. Y., - -	2 50
	$27 50

This saving to each individual of a family, is a great object. Why should we be indifferent, while we admit the British are thus taking the lead on this subject.

But we venture to assert, that the State and city of New-York, without reference to the shipping interest, sustains great loss by our system.—New-York Enquirer.

Dreadful Accident.—On Friday last, an accident occurred at Cooperstown, at the execution of Levi Kelly, for the murder of Abm. Spafard, which has no parallel in the history of accidents on such occasions.

A very great concourse of persons had assembled to witness the execution: and a platform had been erected by Mr. Griffin, keeper of the hotel, for the accommodation of spectators. The platform, which was a sort of amphitheatre, was built near the scaffold, upon upright posts placed in the ground. It was of considerable length and width, and was crowded with people. It is estimated that 2000 persons were upon it. Owing to the inclemency of the weather, nearly an equal number had assembled under it. When Kelly was taken from prison, and, surrounded by the sheriff and the guard, was approaching the scaffold, the crowd upon the platform instinctively leaned forward to see the prisoner and the ceremony; when the entire mass descended with a fall to the ground, carrying with it all its occupants, and crushing such beneath it as could not escape. Fortunately its course was horizontal; had it been direct, hundreds must inevitably have perished. The fall, it was, report states variously the death of from five to ten persons. Mr. Tracy, the engraver, was instantly killed. Mr Williams died the same evening. A woman and child were also killed. More than this, we have no knowledge of, except by report. Many were wounded; and several so severely, that it was not believed they would survive.

In the midst of the confusion caused by this disaster, Kelly was executed. He met his fate with a sullen indifference.

For these particulars, we are indebted to a gentleman, who, being present at the time, gathered the facts from credible persons.

Since the above was in type we have received the Cooperstown paper, from which we copy the following particulars.

The Execution.—The sentence of the law was carried into effect upon the person of Levi Kelly, for the murder of Abraham Spafford, on Friday last, at about 2 o'clock P. M. The weather, during the preceding day and night, had been tempestuous and on the morning of Friday the rain fell in torrents: yet our village was thronged with men, women, and children, before 12 o'clock M., at about which time the military, composed of Capt. Clark's company of cavalry, Capt. Hunter's corps of artillery, Capt. Comstock's and Capt. Dixon's companies of infantry, and two companies of militia, were formed into a hollow square, under the direction of Capt. Comstock and Sr. Master Sabin, as Marshals, and marched to the Goal, from which the Convict was taken by Sheriff Hiser, apparently in a very feeble state of health, and placed upon a sleigh drawn by his own horses. He was then seated in his usual apparel. The sleigh with two others, in which were the Rev. Mr. Smith and the Rev. Mr. Potter, entered the hollow square, and the whole mass moved to the ground fixed upon for the place of execution, situate south of the Court-House and not far from the Methodist Chapel. On arriving at the gallows a scene ensued which beggars all description. A staging of 100 feet in length and 12 in depth, the front being elevated 6 and the rear 8 feet from the ground, erected for the accommodation of spectators, and under and upon which it is computed there were at least 600 persons, suddenly gave way, and fell with a tremendous crash. Then came the lamentations of the multitude for the safety of their friends and relatives, and the rush to their relief. A scene so unexpected and so horrifying, was eminently calculated to absorb every other feeling, and an assemblage of more than 4000 persons seemed for the instant enchained in their tracks. Relief, however, was speedily given and made, and a number of bodies were drawn from under the fallen timbers in a state of total insensibility. Among them was the body of Mr. Elisha C. Tracy, engraver of this village, the upper part of whose face was actually crushed in more than an inch. Life was wholly extinct. An elderly man resident at Richfield, named Daniel Williams, had his leg and arm broken, and died about 5 o'clock P. M. Mrs. Patten, wife of Mr. David Patten, of Otsego, had a limb fractured, and a daughter of Mr. Jacob M. Planter, of this village, had her leg broke and bruised. Many of other persons, among whom is a young man from Springfield, named Stanard, were severely hurt

So soon as the high excitement of this calamitous event had in some degree subsided, by the ascertainment of the fatality attending the removal of the dead and wounded from the ground, the Convict was taken from the sleigh and assisted to ascend the gallows, and upon the rope being noosed around his neck by Mr. Griffin, he was commended to the mercy of God in a short prayer from the Rev. Mr. Smith, in which he appeared to participate, the drop fell, and after a few slight twitchings of his limbs, his body hung for thirty minutes, a monument of the vengeance of the law for the wrongful taking the life of a sensible being in the violence of passion. Upon cutting the rope and letting down the body, it was committed to the care of his relatives for christian burial.

Thus ended a scene, a similarity to which we hope and pray may never again be witnessed in this County. These public executions are ever bring with them more or less disasters; and be sides, they are so demoralising in their tendency, that there needs to be some other statutory provision on the subject. We learn that the Legislature of this State, which convenes tomorrow, will not rise until the subject is well renewed and a remedy provided.

Mr. Tracy, whose sudden death is above noticed by the disastrous falling of the stage, was 40 years of age, and has left a wife and five children, who were wholly dependant upon his mechanical labour for their support. Mr. Williams was an old and worthy man. Those that were severely wounded, lie in dangerous situations—hopes are, however, entertained of the recovery of all of them.

Tha Sch. De Witt Clinton, H. Whittaker, Master, from Dunkirk, arrived in our Harbour this morning.—The arrival of a vessel here at this season of the year, is an occurrence, perhaps, never before known, and is an evidence of the mildness of the weather: And her cargo, consisting of pig-iron and castings, from the State of Ohio—consigned to J. Mayhew & Co.—is an evidence of the native wealth, and the presage of the future prosperity of the Western Country.—Buffalo Emporium.

Desertions from the army are frequent. The number of recruits enlisted from Jan. 1, to Oct. 1, 1827, was 953.

NAVY. The Navy of the United States, built and building, consists of twelve ships of the line, fourteen 44's three 36's two corvettes, a steam frigate, about twenty sloops of war and schooners. In addition to these, live oak timber has been purchased for 5 ships of the line, 5 frigates, and 5 sloops of war. The number of vessels in commission is 19. Of these 4 or 5 are in the Mediterranean, about as many in the Pacific, and the others in the West Indies, on the coast of Brazil, &c.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1828.

We are as yet without any later dates from England. Some articles relating to the battle of Navarino, gleaned from English Papers will be found in our Columns.

The papers in the different parts of the Province all complain of the want of Snow.—Although we have at intervals experienced a good deal of cold weather, we have not yet had any thing like real winter Roads. On Monday last it commenced Snowing, but in a few hours the weather changed, and a good deal of Rain fell. During the remaining part of the week it has been freezing, but the Sleighing is bad,—the Roads are extremely rough, and our Market consequently but ill attended by people from the country.

It is our intention to follow up the same plan this year, in communicating to our readers, the proceedings of the Legislature, as we adopted last Session, by giving a Summary of the most important debates. This we apprehend will be more satisfactory, enabling us as it will do, to keep pace with the proceedings, than a continuation of Speeches, months after they have been delivered, when perhaps the columns of our paper should be devoted to the more interesting occurrences of the day.

We have received the proceedings of a Meeting held at Dundas on 12th Instant, "for the purpose of taking into consideration the decided advantages which a Canal from the Grand River to Burlington Bay would have over, the proposed route from Brantford to Lake Ontario by the Welland Canal." These proceedings occupy nearly five sheets of Letter paper, and this will account for their non-appearance this week. Indeed from their length, we fear it will be out of our power, to give them in one number, if at all. It however we can afford space for them, they shall be given in our two following numbers, which we trust will be satisfactory to those concerned. We feel an unwillingness to refuse insertion to matters of public interest, but when from the importance of the object, the report of a Public Meeting necessarily becomes of more than ordinary length, we would suggest the propriety, when sending it for insertion in a Newspaper, to condense it, into the form of a statement embracing the principal points, and pointing out the particular object in view, signed by the Secretary. This we conceive would be sufficient to draw public attention to the subject, and would we are sure be a great accommodation to Editors of papers, whose columns are perhaps necessarily devoted to other matters, at the very moment such a document with all its technical formalities is put into their hands.

"What is expedient, is right"—so says the Colonial Advocate—we expect nothing else than to hear him next asserting the doctrine, "that the end justifies the means"—which is not very far from that of, "What is expedient is right." "The usage of the British Parliament or of the other Colonies has been followed in this Province, only in such cases as our Assembly saw fit"—this is another assertion made by the Advocate. We appeal to any person who has been present at the Bar of our House of Assembly, when cases have occurred, of difference of opinion between Members, as to the mode of proceeding or on any question, touching privilege, or any other matter, whether it has not been the invariable practice of the Hon. Speaker to refer to the "usage of the British Parliament"—and to give his decision according to that usage. We can indeed easily conceive the surprise that would most certainly be expressed if that Hon. person, should take upon himself to inform the House, when appealed to for his decision, that such and such a course was the usage of the British Parliament, but that it was not "for" to be followed by the Provincial Parliament. If the doctrine of the Colonial Advocate, is to go down, Hatsell, so often consulted, is useless authority, and cumbers the shelves of the Library to no purpose—let it be burnt, and as neither the British Parliament nor any other is to be referred to for usage, to direct the proceedings of our Parliament, let there be no usage at all, but such as the present moment may dictate as "fit." This doctrine the Colonial Advocate may no doubt be able to inculcate on the "Central Committee" as being perfectly correct, and induce them to act up to his "what is expedient is right," but we are satisfied that it will not be in his power to convince the Provincial Assembly of Upper Canada, that it is fit to be acted upon by them.

With respect to the particular subject referred to by the Colonial Advocate, we extract for his information the following words from Hatsell:—"The Office of Clerk of the House of Commons, or as it is sometimes called "Clerk of the Commons," or still more properly as it is stated in the Patent, "Under Clerk of the Parliament, to attend upon the Commons"—is an office granted by the King

Yesterday, there being a quorum present, the House of Assembly proceeded to business. The Speech of HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, was read, by the Speaker, who also communicated to the House, a Letter from Major Hillier informing him, that His Excellency had been pleased by Patent under the Great Seal, to appoint James FitzGibbon, Esq., Clerk to the House. On which Captain Matthews moved the appointment of a Committee to inquire where the right of appointment of the Officers of the House lies, which after some discussion, was carried unanimously.—The House in Committee of the whole, are to take into consideration HIS EXCELLENCY'S Speech, this day. Several notices were given, and Petitions brought up by Members, and the House adjourned at about one o'clock.

Lieut. Col. By arrived in town yesterday afternoon from Montreal, and proceeded this morning along the route of the canal to the Ottawa.—Kingston Chronicle.

Domestic.

On Thursday last, at the raising of a log shed near the 20 mile creek, in the township of Clinton, a young man of the name of Abraham Acker, about 22 years of age, was assisting in the upper part of the building, when two of the logs upon which he was standing, rolled off in such a manner as to prostrate him on the ground with his head between the timbers, and caused his instantaneous death. Farmers' Journal.

FIRE!—We regret extremely to learn, that the elegant Mansion House Hotel, at Niagara, owned by Mr. John Brown, and occupied by Mr. Mauss, was entirely consumed on the evening of the 9th instant. The fire—we have from information originated accidentally, in the Pastry Man's kitchen. The house was not insured, and the loss is estimated at between one and two thousand Pounds.—Gore Gazette.

THE CHURCH IN CANADA.—We have been favored with a copy of the First Report of the Niagara District Committee in correspondence with the Quebec Diocesan Committee, of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge This Society is one of the most noble institutions of the kind ever organized in the Protestant world, and has been efficiently engaged since the year 1698, when it was first instituted. It has received the patronage and support of by benefactions of many illustrious names.—In the promotion of charity schools, the dispensation of the Scriptures and the book of Common Prayer—in advancing the cause of Missions among the Heathen, and in the wide circulation of Religious Books and Tracts the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge has shed lustre upon the Church of England, while the Christian world has reason to rejoice in the extensive circulation it has given to religious truth, and in the means it has employed for advancing the cause of practical godliness.

By the establishing of Diocesan Committees, operating as auxiliaries, the sphere of activity and usefulness has been enlarged, and we are happy to find that our brethren in Canada by the appointment of such Committees have the prospect of reaping great benefits.

The price catalogue of books attached to the Report is large, and besides Bibles, Prayer Books, and Commentaries, of various sizes, embraces many most valuable publications, and tracts large and small.

COLONIAL.

We have great pleasure in stating, that the first STEAM ENGINE ever erected in Nova Scotia, is now in full work at the ALBION MINES, in the District of Pictou, and is found to be quite equal to the purposes for which it is intended. The Mines are about thirty yards deep—nothing, but such powerful machinery, the employment of excellent experienced hands, and the long purse of an opulent English Company, would overcome the difficulties which have been encountered, and are still to be encountered, in planting an extensive Mining and Manufacturing Establishment in the wilderness part of the Province in which it is placed. The investments already made by Messrs. RUNDELL, & Co. in Nova Scotia, exceed £ 20,000—and we sincerely hope that, in the course of the ensuing year, all their anticipations of fair returns will be realized.—Royal Gazette.

Communication.

From the Kingston Chronicle.

Mr. Editor,

Sir,—As important question, particularly to the two Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward, is likely to be agitated at the next Session of the Provincial Parliament—a division of the Midland District. On entering upon the subject I would premise with a few observations relative to the policy of dividing Districts. It has always been my opinion that unless such divisions are loudly called for by inconveniences arising to the inhabitants from their extent, amounting to a serious grievance, such measures would be attended with manifest objections:—First, by the additional expence incurred in the administration of justice—creating a variety of offices, which, by their multiplicity, would become in themselves insignificant, and tend rather to lessen than increase the respectability of a District.

Secondly, an unfortunate prisoner might be immured in a loathsome dungeon from the inability of the inhabitants erecting commodious Goals, subjecting them to unnecessary and cruel hardships. It may also be contended that a District which has involved itself in debt, and paid a vast expence in furnishing suitable accommodations, anticipating such debt should be liquidated prior to any such division, appear to me the chief grounds of objection to the division contemplated. I shall endeavour, therefore, to answer these objections, by the best authority—Any unprejudiced or disinterested person who will bestow the trouble to trace upon the map of the Province the Midland District, must admit, from its vast extent with a population of at least 35,000 souls, is by far too extensive—extending a distance of from 60 to 90 miles from the District Town, frequently called upon to perform the duties as Jurors, Constables, and parties to civil actions:—In many cases the service of the Sheriff amounting to a heavy tax upon the original debt, and it is much to be lamented, that in many instances, crime escapes punishment with impunity, from the inability of constables to bear the immediate expence in conveying a prisoner so great a distance to the District Goal, and where so many chances of escape are afforded: these I think may be fairly considered inconveniences of the first magnitude, amounting to a serious grievance. Under all these circumstances a remedy is sought for, by annexing the two Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward into a District, excepting Marysburgh, which from its proximity to Kingston, would better accommodate the inhabitants to continue a part of the Midland District: it would also perhaps better suit the convenience of the inhabitants of the Front Eastern Townships of the Newcastle District, to be annexed to the one now proposed, this may be done at any future period, by a petition to that effect from them. Belleville would then become nearly the central Town, where Lots have been appropriated by Government for the seite of a Court House and Gaol, and of course contemplated as the most proper place for the District Town, whenever a division of the Midland District took place. Prince Edward has long contended to be set apart by themselves; though if I am rightly informed, not before Hastings had made the like application; such a step however I have always considered premature, whilst consenting to be annexed together would strengthen their claim and afford relief to both Counties, a preparatory step to their ultimately being set apart, as separate and distinct Districts; consenting against each other will defeat the object of both, and whilst "grasping at the shadow we loose the substance." It is far from the wish or inclination of the Members for Hastings or their constituents to throw any unnecessary impediment in the progress of Prince Edward, but where their own vital interests are at stake, they cannot consent to a measure which would deprive them for years of participating in those benefits which both might obtain by such an union of interest. Without disparagement to Prince Edward, it is a well known fact that whilst they have not more than 4 Townships of cultivatable land, circumscribed as they are, Hastings possesses 12 full Townships of the ordinary size, and the population increasing in the ratio of at least 3 to 1. Belleville on many accounts must be admitted the more desirable place for a District Town, where many of the inhabitants of Prince Edward carry their produce for manufacture and sale and obtain their necessary supplies, affording every convenience for the attendants of a Court. Equal benefits might be imparted to Prince Edward in holding alternate Courts of Quarter Session, though the Assize from circumstances known to those acquainted with criminal Courts, must be confined to the District Town. Upwards of five hundred pounds has been already subscribed in the County of Hastings, for building a commodious Court House and Gaol, to which they are fully adequate. Assisted by Prince Edward, equally willing with others, would add to the respectability of both, and do away with all possible objections to the division of the Midland District—liberally paying our proportion of their debt, and finally consummating the wishes of all parties.

York, 19th Dec., 1827. 30-12w.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First.—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Cavron, or other Wares of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the County, should be considered an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the commodities of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of their own—the consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

Upper Canada Gazette.

YORK, UPPER CANADA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1828.

BY AUTHORITY.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, Knight Commander of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency.

We His Majesty's Most dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Legislative Council of Upper Canada in Provincial Parliament Assembled, beg leave most respectfully to present to Your Excellency our warmest acknowledgements for your very gracious Speech at the opening of this Session.

It is most pleasing to us to be assured that your Excellency will have great satisfaction in witnessing our exertions, and that it will be gratifying to your Excellency to concur with us in any measures tending to advance the general welfare of the Province, under the excellent constitution we have received from the wisdom and liberality of our Parent State.

We shall regard with undiminished interest, the works in progress for improving the internal Navigation, and we confidently trust that the advantages derived from their successful accomplishment, will at no distant period afford the most gratifying proof of the good policy of advancing them by great and extraordinary exertions.

We learn with grateful feelings that His Majesty has very graciously provided for the establishment of an University in this Province, and has bestowed means which will ensure the early accomplishment of an object long regarded by your Excellency, as among those most to be desired for the welfare of the Colony.

We will not fail to pay due attention to such Provincial Acts as are about to expire.

It is believed that the enactments authorising the sale of Lands for the payment of Assessments which have been suffered to fall into arrear, and which will in a few months begin to take effect, will be found to afford a certain though gradual remedy for very great evils: and that their beneficial consequences will soon be too evident to admit of question.

It cannot be our wish however, to attain these benefits by any unnecessary rigour, and still less by any degree of injustice; and we feel grateful to learn that if, upon an attentive consideration of the details of the system, and their probable effects when reduced to practice, it be found that any apprehended inconvenience can be prevented or remedied, your Excellency will be happy to unite with us in any measure for that purpose.

We entertain the hope that the improvement of the Highways throughout the Province cannot but be ensured and hastened by the means which the collection of the Assessments will inevitably furnish; but we shall be happy to concur in any measure that may render it unnecessary to wait for their gradual application.

We shall ever receive with due attention any communication from your Excellency that will affect the happiness and welfare of the people; and it is highly gratifying to us to find that your Excellency has viewed with much satisfaction, the harmony and good understanding which has prevailed between the different branches of the Legislature, as affording the best assurance that Public measures will receive deliberate and effectual attention.

WM. CAMPBELL,
Speaker.

Legislative Council Chamber, }
Friday the 18th Jan'y. 1828. }

REPLY.

Honorable Gentlemen,

I thank you for this cordial Address, and for the assurance that you will give your ready attention to those communications which I may have occasion to submit to you by Message.

Your deliberations will, I doubt not, be distinguished by your accustomed judgment and public spirit, which have been so frequently productive of happy consequences to the Province.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY SIR P. MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, and Major General Commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Excellency,

We His Majesty's dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons of Upper Canada, in Provincial Parliament Assembled, humbly beg leave to thank your Excellency for your gracious Speech from the Throne, at the opening of the present Session.

Assembled for the purpose of promoting by our counsels, the prosperity of this Province, we shall be gratified to receive your Excellency's concurrence in any measures tending to advance the general welfare.

We cannot but regard with interest the works in progress for improving the internal Navigation; and we will be most happy to find that the great and extraordinary exertions which have been made for their advancement will, in the end, be justified by the advantages derived from their successful accomplishment.

We shall be highly gratified to find that His Majesty has very graciously provided for the establishment and endowment of an University in this Province, if the principles upon which it has been founded shall, upon inquiry, prove to be conducive to the advancement of true learning and piety, and friendly to the Civil and Religious liberty of the people.

We will take into our consideration the accounts and estimates, when laid before us, and will not fail to make such provision for the public service as our duty may require.

It is satisfactory to us to learn that, under the continuance of circumstances not particularly favorable to the Trade of Canada, our revenue, nevertheless, has not declined: and we trust that our most gracious Sovereign may find it not in compatible with the other interests of the Empire, to recommend the adoption of those measures for the benefit of our commerce and revenue which we united in praying for, in a former Session, and which your Excellency has been again graciously pleased to present to the attention of His Majesty's Government.

We will not fail to direct our attention to such Provincial Acts as are about to expire.

The measures provided by the existing law for ensuring the collection of Assessments on unoccupied Lands, will engage our attention, as the period approaches when the compulsory operation of the Assessment Acts will begin to take effect.—We fully concur in the sentiments which your Excellency has been pleased to express of the expediency and necessity of those measures; and while we confidently anticipate the most beneficial consequences from their operation, we will most willingly contribute our exertions at all times to render both convenient and effective a system by which we are convinced much good will be produced. It is evident that the effect of the Assessment Acts, in furnishing means for the improvement of the highways, will be very soon felt; but we shall consider it our duty to deliberate, whether, besides that resource, other measures cannot be resorted to for the early attainment of an object of such pressing urgency.

We shall be happy to receive from your Excellency any communications upon subjects affecting the happiness and welfare of the people; and we sincerely hope that harmony and good understanding will ever prevail between the different branches of the Legislature, and thereby secure for all public measures the most deliberate and effectual attention.

JOHN WILSON,
Speaker.

REPLY.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you for the assurances given in your Address, of your disposition to concur with the other branches of the Legislature in advancing the public welfare.

Your exertions directed to that end will receive an ample reward in the approbation of your Sovereign, and the gratitude of your fellow Subjects.

Executive Council Office, York, 23rd March, 1826.

NOTICE is hereby given, by ORDER of His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, in COUNCIL, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day.

JOHN SMALL.

No. 9. 1. f. C. E. C

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepad in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bataurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improvethe same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hundred Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessary expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

THE MUTINY.

In the summer of the year 18—, I was the only passenger on board the merchantman, Alceste, which was bound to the Brazils. One fine moonlight night, I stood on the deck, and gazed on the quiet ocean, on which the moonbeams danced. The wind was so still, that it scarcely agitated the sails, which were spread out to invite it. I looked round; it was the same on every side—a world of waters: not a single object diversified the view, or intercepted the long and steady glance which I threw over the ocean. I have heard many complain of the sameness and unvarying uniformity of the objects which oppose themselves to the eye of the voyager. I feel differently; I can gaze for hours, without weariness, on the deep, occupied with the thought it produces; I can listen to the rush of the element as the vessel cleaves it, and these things have charms for me which others cannot perceive.

I heard, on a sudden, a noise, which seemed to proceed from the captain's cabin, and I thought I could distinguish the voices of several men, speaking earnestly, though in a suppressed tone. I cautiously drew near the spot from whence the noise arose, but the alarm was given, and I could see no one. I retired to rest, or rather to lie down; for I felt that heavy and confining sense of evil overpowering me, which comes we know not how or wherefore; and I could not sleep, knowing that there had been disputes between the captain and his men, respecting some point of discipline, and I feared to think what might be the consequences. I lay a long time disturbed with these unpleasant reflections; at last, wearied with my thoughts, my eyes closed, and I dropped to sleep. But it was not to that refreshing sleep which recruits the exhausted spirits, and by awhile "steeping the senses in forgetfulness," renders them fitter for exertion on awakening. My sleep was haunted with hideous and confused dreams, and murder and blood seemed to surround me. I was awakened by convulsive starts, and in vain sought again the quiet slumber; the same images filled my mind, diversified in a thousand horrid forms. Early in the morning, I arose, and went above, and the mild sea breeze dispelled my uneasy sensation.

During the whole of the day nothing seemed to justify the fears that had tormented me, and every thing went on in its regular course. The men pursued their occupations quietly and in silence, and I thought the temporary fit of disaffection was passed over. Alas! I remembered not that the passions of men, like deep waters, do not appear to be suspended when they seem to glide along most smoothly. Night came on, and I retired to rest more composed than on the proceeding evening. I endeavoured to convince myself that the noises I had heard were but the fancies of a disturbed imagination, and I slept soundly. Ill-timed security! About midnight I was awakened by a scuffling in the vessel. I hastened to the spot; the captain and one of his officers were fighting against a multitude of the ship's crew. In a moment after I saw the officer fall. Two others advanced to me, and, clapping pistols to my breast, threatened instant death, if I stirred or spoke. I gazed on the bloody spectacle; the bodies, which lay around, swimming in gore, testified that the mutineers could not have accomplished their atrocious impunity. I was horror-struck; a swimming sensation came over my eyes, my limbs failed me, and I fell senseless.

When I recovered, I found myself lying on a bed. Every thing was still. I listened in vain for a sound, but after a considerable time; at last, I arose and walked about the ship, but could see no one. I searched every part of the vessel; I visited the place of slaughter, which I had, at first, carefully avoided; I counted nine dead bodies, and the coagulated blood formed a loathsome mass around them; I shuddered to think I was desolate—the companion of death. "Good God!" said I, "and they have left me here alone!" The word sounded like a knell to me. It now occurred to me, it was necessary the bodies should be thrown overboard. I took up one of them, dragged it to the side, and plunged it into the waves; but the dash of the heavy body into the sea, reminded me more forcibly of my loneliness. The sea was so calm, I could scarcely hear it ripple by the vessel's side. One by one I committed the bodies to their watery grave. At last my horrible task was finished. My next work was to look for the ship's boats, but they were gone, as I expected. I could not bear to remain in the ship; it seemed a vast tomb for me. I resolved to make some sort of raft, and depart in it. This occupied two or three days; at length it was completed, and I succeeded in setting it afloat.

I lowered into it all the provision I could find in the ship, which was but little, the sailors having, as I imagined, carried off the remainder. All was ready, and I prepared to depart. I trembled at the thought of the dangers I was about to encounter. I was going to commit myself to the ocean, separated from it only by a few boards, which a wave might scatter over the surface of the waters. I might never arrive at land, or meet with any vessel to rescue me from my danger, and I should be exposed, without shelter, and almost without food. I half resolved to remain in my present situation; but a moment's reflection dispelled the idea of such a measure. I descended; I stood on my frail raft; I cut the rope by which it was fastened to the ship. I was confused to think of my situation; I could hardly believe that I had dared to enter alone on the waste of waters. I endeavoured to compose myself, but in vain. As far as I could see, nothing presented itself to my view but the vessel I had left; the sea was perfectly still, but the wind was stirring. I endeavoured, with two pieces of board, which supplied the place of oars, to row myself along; but the very little progress I made alarmed me. If the calm should continue, I should perish of hunger.—How I longed to see the little sail I had made, agitated by the breeze! I watched it from morning to night; it was my only employment; but in vain.—The weather continued the same. Two days passed over; I looked at my store of provisions; it would not last. I found, last above three or four days longer, at the farthest. They were quickly passing away. I almost gave myself up for lost. I had scarcely a hope of escaping.

On the fourth day since my departure from the ship, I thought I perceived something at a distance; I looked at it intently—it was a sail. Good heavens! what were my emotions at the sight! I fastened my handkerchief on a piece of wood, and waved it, in hopes that it would be observed, and that I should be rescued from my forlorn condition. The vessel passed on its course; I shouted;—I knew they could not hear me, but despair impelled me to try so useless an expedient. It passed on—it grew dim—I stretched my eyeballs to see it—it vanished—it was gone! I will not attempt to describe the torturing feelings which possessed me, at seeing the chance of relief which had offered itself destroyed. I was stupified with grief and disappointment. My stock of provisions was now entirely exhausted, and I looked forward with horror to an excruciating death.

A little water which had remained, quenched my burning thirst. I wished that the waves would rush over me. My hunger soon became dreadful, but I had no means of relieving it. I endeavoured to sleep, that I might for a while, forget my torments; and my endeavours were crowned with impunity. I was horror-struck; a swimming sensation came over my eyes, my limbs failed me, and I fell senseless.

When I recovered, I found myself lying on a bed. Every thing was still. I listened in vain for a sound, but after a considerable time; at last, I arose and walked about the ship, but could see no one. I searched every part of the vessel; I visited the place of slaughter, which I had, at first, carefully avoided; I counted nine dead bodies, and the coagulated blood formed a loathsome mass around them; I shuddered to think I was desolate—the companion of death. "Good God!" said I, "and they have left me here alone!" The word sounded like a knell to me. It now occurred to me, it was necessary the bodies should be thrown overboard. I found that I alone, of all who were on board the vessel in which I had embarked, had escaped death. The crew, who had departed in the boats, after murdering the captain, had met their reward—the boats were shattered against a rock.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

House of Assembly, Friday, 18th Jan.

A Quorum being present, the House proceeded to business.

The Hon. the Speaker—Read the Speech of His Excellency the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR at the opening of the Session—after which, he said it was customary for some Member to give a notice, but on the present occasion, he thought it proper before that was done, to communicate to the House the contents of a Letter addressed to him by Major Hillier,

The Letter was then read by the Speaker—acquainting him by command of His Excellency that the Lieutenant Governor had been pleased, by Patent under the Great Seal, to appoint James FitzGibbon, Esq Clerk to the House—and that he had taken the usual Oaths of Office.

Capt. Matthews had some doubt as to the right or propriety of the appointments of the Servants of this House, being made by the Executive—he thought they should be made by the House—and moved the appointment of a Committee to inquire where the right lies—Messrs. Rolph, Gordon, and Attorney General were named in his motion as the Committee for that purpose.

Mr. Gordon said that having himself no doubt whatever, that the right belonged to the Executive, he should not have felt it necessary to have offered any remarks on the occasion, but as he was named one of the Committee he felt it necessary to state his opinion, and should prefer his name being omitted.

The Attorney General had no objection to being named as one of the Committee, although he concurred in opinion with the Hon. Gentleman, that there could be no question, but that the right belonged to the Executive. The practice in other Colonies, whatever it might be, was derived from the particular form of Charter or Constitution by which they were governed—in our case it was derived from a Constitutional Act, which did not point out any particular mode of proceeding in such cases, and the usage of the Imperial Parliament had been adopted, and was on all occasions referred to as our authority. In the Mother Country, he thought he could without hesitation say that the right was recognised as belonging to, and invested in the Executive Power. On former occasions when vacancies had occurred here, the appointments had been made by the Executive without any question. He thought that on such an occasion as the present, it was not proper for the Speaker to inform the House of his opinion, from the Chair—if that opinion did not prove satisfactory, then the inquiry could be made.

The Hon. Speaker, in reply said that if the question related to the conduct of the Clerk he should perhaps consider it his duty to state his opinion to the House—As this however was not the case at present, he thought he had no right to offer an opinion although he confessed his mind was made up on the subject.

The Attorney General reminded the Hon. Speaker, that a question had occurred in the British Parliament, on a similar question, where the Speaker had interposed, and set it at rest.

The Speaker said that being thus called upon, he would say a few words. The Speaker of the House of Commons had indeed on the occasion alluded to, put a stop to a question relating to the Clerk—in that case the Clerk was charged with mal-conduct in omitting certain entries in the Journal—here there was no charge, the question was as to appointment. The Speaker of the House of Commons, had said that the Clerk being a Patent Officer, he could not discharge him—but he would beg leave to differ from this opinion in the case of mal-conduct arising from wilful error, or party feeling on the part of that Officer—in such a case he thought the House could discharge the Clerk.—The present question however related to the right of appointment, and on this point Hatsell was explicit, and as far as his recollection of History went, that was explicit, as to its being the right of the Crown—the only exception he believed was in the time of Cromwell On the resumption however the House of Commons, whether from expediency, or a high sense of prerogative, had addressed the King to confirm an appointment by Patent. If the right was ever to have been asserted, then would have been the time—it however had been given up and the appointment had uniformly been by Patent from the Crown, and in all former cases in Upper Canada. it was made by the Lieutenant Governor. The question might be considered in a different way, if it related to the loss the House sustained, by the removal of an individual, who might from his long services and intimate knowledge of the Rules of the House, be considered as its Hatsell.—How the various Constitutions in other Colonies might affect this question when applied to themselves, he did not know, but in U. Canada, his opinion was that the right was with the Executive Government.

Capt. Matthews said that the House in its proceedings was not invariably regulated by the practice of the House of Commons.—There for example, the Journals were signed by the Speaker—it was not so here, and he had no doubt that other instances of variance might be pointed out. On the present occasion his only object was to inquire whether the right belonged to the Executive or not. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, it appeared the House of Assembly exercised the right—he thought it should be ours too, and would get it if he could.

The Hon. Member read extracts from the Journals of the Provinces alluded to, where after the Speech had been read the Assembly had appointed its Clerk, and other Officers.

On the question being put for the appointment of a Committee—it was carried—Nem—Con.

Capt. Matthews gave notice, that on Thursday next he should move for leave to bring in a Bill to repeal 54 Geo. 3.

The Atty. Gen. seconded by Mr. Cameron, moved—that the House will on to-morrow take into consideration His Excellency's Speech.—Carried.

Petitions presented from Inhabitants of Prince Edward to be set off as a separate District—Owen, Wessels, and others for a survey—Inhabitants of Essex, for aid on Highways—W. Wadock, to erect a Mill Dam across branch of River Thames—Inhabitants East Section Loudon District, to be set off as a separate District—from Evangelical Lutherans—German Settlers from U States, to settle on or sell Lands formerly purchased.

On motion of Mr. Perry, it was ordered that the Passage during the Session, be paid by the Clerk of the House, and charged in contingent account

Mr. Beardsly gave notice—Bill for better regulation of Juries.

Mr. Dickinson (Frontenac) gave notice—Bill for establishment of a Penetentiary.

The Atty. Gen. gave notice, that on 1st Feb. he should move for the appointment of a Committee on Highways throughout the Province.

Adjourned.

Saturday, 19th January.

Sundry Petitions presented.

House in Committee of the whole, on His Excellency's Speech. Mr. Hamilton in the Chair.

The Attorney General, moved the address, in which he said he had followed the usual mode—nothing new was introduced into it. It alluded to the topics embraced in the Speech, relating generally to the public improvements in progress, which were proceeding in a satisfactory manner. The University in contemplation for which appropriations had been made some years ago, was to be carried into immediate operation, and was to be established on comparatively more liberal terms than similar establishments in other Colonies.

The Address being read, the first resolution it contained was put and carried, when

Mr. Rolph said that he did not heartily concur in the sentiments embraced in those which followed—the resolutions he might not object to those, but he thought they contained something more than a mere echo of the Speech. With respect to the University, the House was not in possession of any thing definite on the subject. Much had been said about it in the Newspapers, but he should prefer waiting for some communication, before making any pledge—to avoid this he had prepared an address in reply to the Speech, such as he thought was respectful, while it embraced all the points alluded to by His Excellency. He then read the address he had drawn up, which he said the House would see contained no pledges, and none he thought should be given, until the necessary documents were in their possession.

The Attorney General would have been happy if the Hon. and learned Gentleman had taken the address in hand at an earlier period—he had waited yesterday until several ordinary notices had been given, and seeing no other person preparing to adopt the usual and customary course, of having the address in reply to the Speech, he had felt it his duty to do it. The address now proposed by the Hon. and learned Gentleman, did not materially differ from that he had submitted to the House, except as to the University, and on this point he was sorry to find that the Hon. Gentleman, from vague rumors contained in Newspapers had thought in necessary, to add to the many erroneous statements which had appeared, by insinuations and suspicions that it might be intended to affect the Civil and Religious liberties of the people. From former experience of the Hon. Gentleman's sincere ungenerous, and he could assure the Hon. Gentleman and the House, that no charter could be less inimical to those rights, than this. He had not pronounced any opinion on the detail of the intended establishment, but merely that it was satisfactory to hear, that such an establishment is to take place—in this he had not varied from the tenor of the Speech, but he thought that the address proposed by the Hon. Gentleman did vary from it, by the expression of such opinions—such had not been the usual course of this Assembly on any former occasion. With respect to the subject of Emigration for example, last year, which His Excellency had informed them had occupied the attention of His Majesty's Government—the House had not thought proper to say in reply that it would afford them satisfaction to see such an object carried into effect if it should be found that the persons to be sent to the Country, were not inimical to its liberties or intended to burden it with pauperism—no such suspicion existed—why then fancy it now.—The Legislature had some years since made certain provisions for an University, if it should be established on the same principles as those in England—this no doubt was so, and without any cost to the Country—and for munificence like this, should the House throw out such suspicions as those contained in the address proposed by the Hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Beardsley said that he was friendly to the establishment of an University, but not unless it was proposed on proper terms.

The several Resolutions, as should appear on Mr. Rolph were put and carried.

Mr. C. Jones then said he hoped some alteration would be adopted by the House, in that part which related to the Militia—the insinuation it contained he thought was unworthy of the House.

The Address was reported, and in Committee of the whole, Mr. Rolph said that to meet the wishes of the Honorable Leeds, he should propose an amendment with respect to that part of the Address relating to the University.—He then read his proposed amendment.

Mr. Gordon said that the amendment just read might satisfy the Hon. Member from Leeds,—it would not however meet with his (Mr. G's) approbation—it differed not in substance, from the previous one, and still conveyed the same unworthy suspicion—the same wanton insult; because no details were alluded to in the Speech on the subject, it would have been time enough, to have expressed those suspicions, when the plan were made known, if any thing should be found to warrant them.

Mr. Hamilton would rather strike out that part of the Address, altogether, than substitute any thing else in its place.

Mr. C. Jones said that if the Hon. Gentleman had been moved by complaisance towards him, in proposing the alteration, he was free to say that in his power to receive it as such—it contained an expression of the same sentiments, and must therefore meet with his opposition.

The Attorney General said that in other Colonies where Charters had been granted by the King, on terms certainly less favorable than the present one to Upper Canada, they had been received in a very different manner—instances of this would be found in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick—one of them very recently. For Upper Canada every thing had been done—the greatest solicitude had been shewn to promote the interests of our Trade—our happiness, our strength and improvement, had been on all occasions consulted, and it was ungracious when this additional act of munificence was conferred upon us, to throw it back in the face of the King with such unjust and unfounded suspicions.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Rolph, was then put and lost, and the original being carried, a Committee was appointed to wait on the Address pursuant to Resolutions—which being done it was read a second time, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time on Monday.

Mr. Beardsley moved for leave to bring in the Jury Regulation Bill—leave granted—read first time—second reading to-morrow, and 100 Copies ordered to be printed for use of Members.

The Attorney General gave notice—Bills to be brought in by him—Registry of certain Deeds in Northumberland—Relief Heirs late Quetton St. George—and Forfeited Estates.—Adjourned.

Monday, 21st January.

Address in reply to the Speech, at the opening of the Session—read third time, passed, and signed by the Speaker.

On motion of Mr. Rolph—Messrs. Randal and Hornor were appointed a Committee to wait on His Excellency, to know when His Excellency would be pleased to receive the Address. On returning they informed the House that His Excellency had been pleased to appoint to-morrow at 2 o'clock for that purpose.

Petitions—were read and referred.

Capt. Matthews brought in, Sedition Repeal Bill—read first time—second reading to-morrow.

Mr. Thomson of Frontenac, moved the appointment of a Committee, to inquire into the propriety of establishing a Penitentiary in this Province.—Carried—Messrs. Wilson, Bidwell, and Scollick are the Committee.

Petitions presented and read.

Prince Edward Division Bill, brought in by Mr. Paterson, read first time, and ordered for second reading.

House in Committee of the whole on Sedition Law repeal Bill. Reported and ordered for third Reading. Capt Matthews, informed the House that as his colleague Mr. Ralph, had given notice of his intention to bring in a Bill for the relief of Religious Societies he should wait till that measure was introduced, without at present, bringing in his own Bill relating more particularly to Quakeriaus. Intestate Bill—brought in by Mr. Bidwell, who explained that it was the same, as that introduced by him last Session, when the question had been fully discussed—he therefore considered it unnecessary to offer any remarks at present, as to its provisions. Read first time, and ordered for second reading.

Felons Convicted Bill brought in by Mr. Bidwell. He said that the same observation applied to this Bill, as the last—it was a copy of that which had undergone discussion last year. Read first time and ordered for second reading.

Thompson and Clute relief Bill—brought in by Mr. Perry, read first time and ordered for second reading.

Petition of Robt. Randal Esq. One hundred copies ordered to be printed for the use of members.

The House at 2 o'clock proceeded to present their address, in reply to the speech delivered at the opening—being returned, His Excellency's answer, was communicate by the Hon. Speaker.

(For address and answer see Gazette.)

Mr. Beardsley gave notice, that on to-morrow, he should move that an humble address be presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor praying him to communicate to the House such correspondence as may have been received, with respect to the Naturalization of certain persons within this Province.

Mr. Clark gave notice, that he should on to-morrow, move a similar address, with respect to losses sustained by the Militia during the late War.

These notices had before been given by the same Hon. Members, previous to the address, in reply to the speech being carried on; when the Hon. Speaker intimated his opinion, that before this was done, it was not usual, to give notice on such subjects—and they were then withdrawn.

On their being now given Mr. Gordon, thought the objection still remained, as there was a proper time for the communication of messages, which might very probably be conveyed to the House with the desired information.

Mr. Beardsley in reply said that the notices would lie over till to-morrow, and if messages were received before coming to that part of the order of the day, the necessity of acting upon them would be done away.—Adjourned.

Wednesday 23d January.

Sedition Law repeal Bill—read third time passed and signed by the Speaker. Messrs Matthews and Perry were appointed to wait on the House of the Legislative Council, and request their concurrence.

Fredericksburgh & Ernestown Road Bill, brought in by Mr. Perry—some disputes he said had taken place between the Magistrates, as to which division the duty belonged to keep this road in repair, which had consequently been neglected—the object of the Bill was to settle the point by appointioning the duty between the two Townships. After some remarks, from Messrs C. Jones and Gordon, who thought the Law already made sufficient provision with respect to parish roads of this sort. Mr. Hamilton said that probably the Hon. Gent., who introduced this Bill had some explanation to offer, which would come more properly when in Committee of the whole. The Bill was then read a first time, and ordered for a second reading.

Jury Regulation Bill—2d Reading—House in committee of the whole.

Mr. Beardsley said that this Bill was a transcript of that introduced last year—he considered the present law with respect to the mode of selecting Juries to be defective in this respect, that it deprived the Sheriff of the discretion which was now allowed him, and in doing this no room would be left for a possibility of corruption—he did not mean to cast any reflection on the Sheriff, but he thought the Law should be so framed, as to leave no chance for the exercise of improper conduct—the Bill would affect this object, and although he did not anticipate any opposition to its principles, he should be happy to receive any suggestions, which might be considered necessary to render it more perfect in its provisions.

Capt. Matthews thought that the Bill went only half way—it should go to Grand, as well as Petit Jurors—this he considered most important—he would take this opportunity of stating some particulars relating to himself, which would shew the necessity of this.—He had on a certain occasion attended a Court of Requests in his neighborhood, when a fight took place, where he interfered and endeavored to suppress it—he then went to the Magistrates and informed them that murder might be committed, requesting them to send Constables to quell the disturbance which was going on—he told them it was their duty to do so, and if they had come to the place at 10 in the morning instead of 4 in the afternoon, the people would not have got drunk and commenced fighting, but would have had their business settled, and he for their way home. The Magistrates replied, that the ways were bad, to which he (Capt. M.) said that they ought to mend their ways—for this he was prosecuted for a contempt of Court.

Mr. Gordon spoke to order,—the Hon. Gentleman he said was straying from the subject matter before the Committee, and if the Chairman did not call him back to it he should be under the necessity of referring the question to the Hon. Speaker.

After some opinions had been expressed by Hon. Members, as to the question of order, the Chairman of the Committee (Thomson of Frontenac) was requested to leave the Chair.

The Speaker being in his place.

Mr. Gordon said he was sorry to interrupt the proceedings of the Committee, but he felt it necessary to call an appeal to the Hon. Speaker and the sense of the House, whether the Hon Member was not out of order. The subject matter before the Committee was a Bill for the better regulation of Juries, when the Hon. Member had introduced a story in which he was a party in the London District, and in which he had alluded in a indecorous manner to the Magistrates. This he considered as he said that the subject matter before the House, and that the Chairman would have felt it his duty to put a stop to it—the privilege of Speech enjoyed by Hon. Gentlemen should not be thought be made use of to the abuse of the Public, and the Country, who were not here to reply to charges made against them. If they were guilty of any misconduct in the discharge of their duty, and the subject was brought before the House in a legal manner, he would hear all that could be said, and if such misconduct was proved, provide a remedy to punish them for it, but this he thought was not the proper time for bringing forward such charges.

Mr. Thomson said that he supposed the Honble. Gentleman, in stating his objection to the Bill, was intending to illustrate the propriety of its applying to Grand Juries as well as Petit, by stating facts, in which he was himself interested.

Mr. Beardsley was of the same opinion, and he thought the amendment to the Bill a necessary one. Any statement he should make however would be by way of illustration, and not personal to himself.

Mr. Boerdsley in reply said that the notices would lie over till to-morrow, and if messages were received before coming to that part of the order of the day, the necessity of acting upon them would be done away.—Adjourned.

Reported and ordered for third Reading. Capt Matthews, informed the House that as his colleague Mr. Ralph, had given notice of his intention to bring in a Bill for the relief of Religious Societies he should wait till that measure was introduced, without at present, bringing in his own Bill relating more particularly to Quakeriaus. Intestate Bill—brought in by Mr. Bidwell, who explained that it was the same, as that introduced by him last Session, when the question had been fully discussed—he therefore considered it unnecessary to offer any remarks at present, as to its provisions. Read first time, and ordered for second reading.

Felons Convicted Bill brought in by Mr. Bidwell. He said that the same observation applied to this Bill, as the last—it was a copy of that which had undergone discussion last year. Read first time and ordered for second reading.

Thompson and Clute relief Bill—brought in by Mr. Perry, read first time and ordered for second reading.

Petition of Robt. Randal Esq. One hundred copies ordered to be printed for the use of members.

The House at 2 o'clock proceeded to present their address, in reply to the speech delivered at the opening—being returned, His Excellency's answer, was communicate by the Hon. Speaker.

(For address and answer see Gazette.)

Mr. Beardsley gave notice, that on to-morrow, he should move that an humble address be presented to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor praying him to communicate to the House such correspondence as may have been received, with respect to the Naturalization of certain persons within this Province.

Mr. Clark gave notice, that he should on to-morrow, move a similar address, with respect to losses sustained by the Militia during the late War.

These notices had before been given by the same Hon. Members, previous to the address, in reply to the speech being carried on; when the Hon. Speaker intimated his opinion, that before this was done, it was not usual, to give notice on such subjects—and they were then withdrawn.

On their being now given Mr. Gordon, thought the objection still remained, as there was a proper time for the communication of messages, which might very probably be conveyed to the House with the desired information.

Mr. Beardsley in reply said that the notices would lie over till to-morrow, and if messages were received before coming to that part of the order of the day, the necessity of acting upon them would be done away.—Adjourned.

Wednesday 23d January.

Sedition Law repeal Bill—read third time passed and signed by the Speaker. Messrs Matthews and Perry were appointed to wait on the House of the Legislative Council, and request their concurrence.

Fredericksburgh & Ernestown Road Bill, brought in by Mr. Perry—some disputes he said had taken place between the Magistrates, as to which division the duty belonged to keep this road in repair, which had consequently been neglected—the object of the Bill was to settle the point by appointioning the duty between the two Townships. After some remarks, from Messrs C. Jones and Gordon, who thought the Law already made sufficient provision with respect to parish roads of this sort. Mr. Hamilton said that probably the Hon. Gent., who introduced this Bill had some explanation to offer, which would come more properly when in Committee of the whole. The Bill was then read a first time, and ordered for a second reading.

Jury Regulation Bill—2d Reading—House in committee of the whole.

Mr. Beardsley said that this Bill was a transcript of that introduced last year—he considered the present law with respect to the mode of selecting Juries to be defective in this respect, that it deprived the Sheriff of the discretion which was now allowed him, and in doing this no room would be left for a possibility of corruption—he did not mean to cast any reflection on the Sheriff, but he thought the Law should be so framed, as to leave no chance for the exercise of improper conduct—the Bill would affect this object, and although he did not anticipate any opposition to its principles, he should be happy to receive any suggestions, which might be considered necessary to render it more perfect in its provisions.

Capt. Matthews thought that the Bill went only half way—it should go to Grand, as well as Petit Jurors—this he considered most important—he would take this opportunity of stating some particulars relating to himself, which would shew the necessity of this.—He had on a certain occasion attended a Court of Requests in his neighborhood, when a fight took place, where he interfered and endeavored to suppress it—he then went to the Magistrates and informed them that murder might be committed, requesting them to send Constables to quell the disturbance which was going on—he told them it was their duty to do so, and if they had come to the place at 10 in the morning instead of 4 in the afternoon, the people would not have got drunk and commenced fighting, but would have had their business settled, and he for their way home. The Magistrates replied, that the ways were bad, to which he (Capt. M.) said that they ought to mend their ways—for this he was prosecuted for a contempt of Court.

Mr. Gordon spoke to order,—the Hon. Gentleman he said was straying from the subject matter before the Committee, and if the Chairman did not call him back to it he should be under the necessity of referring the question to the Hon. Speaker.

After some opinions had been expressed by Hon. Members, as to the question of order, the Chairman of the Committee (Thomson of Frontenac) was requested to leave the Chair.

The Speaker being in his place.

Mr. Gordon said he was sorry to interrupt the proceedings of the Committee, but he felt it necessary to call an appeal to the Hon. Speaker and the sense of the House, whether the Hon Member was not out of order. The subject matter before the Committee was a Bill for the better regulation of Juries, when the Hon. Member had introduced a story in which he was a party in the London District, and in which he had alluded in a indecorous manner to the Magistrates. This he considered as he said that the subject matter before the House, and that the Chairman would have felt it his duty to put a stop to it—the privilege of Speech enjoyed by Hon. Gentlemen should not be thought be made use of to the abuse of the Public, and the Country, who were not here to reply to charges made against them. If they were guilty of any misconduct in the discharge of their duty, and the subject was brought before the House in a legal manner, he would hear all that could be said, and if such misconduct was proved, provide a remedy to punish them for it, but this he thought was not the proper time for bringing forward such charges.

Mr. Thomson said that he supposed the Honble. Gentleman, in stating his objection to the Bill, was intending to illustrate the propriety of its applying to Grand Juries as well as Petit, by stating facts, in which he was himself interested.

Mr. Beardsley was of the same opinion, and he thought the amendment to the Bill a necessary one. Any statement he should make however would be by way of illustration, and not personal to himself.

Mr. Boerdsley in reply said that the notices would lie over till to-morrow, and if messages were received before coming to that part of the order of the day, the necessity of acting upon them would be done away.—Adjourned.

Thursday 24th January.

Friday, 25th January.

On motion of Mr. Rolph—Messrs. Randal and Hornor were appointed a Committee to wait on His Excellency, to know when His Excellency would be pleased to receive the Address. On returning they informed the House that His Excellency had been pleased to appoint to-morrow at 2 o'clock for that purpose.

Petitions—were read and referred.

Capt. Matthews brought in, Sedition Repeal Bill—read first time—second reading to-morrow.

Mr. Thomson of Frontenac, moved the appointment of a Committee, to inquire into the propriety of establishing a Penitentiary in this Province.—Carried—Messrs. Wilson, Bidwell, and Scollick are the Committee.

YORK, U.C. SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1828.

There is no late news of importance from England. A few extracts, by a late arrival at New-York, will be found in this days paper.

We have been enabled to bring the proceedings of the House of Assembly down to Wednesday evening, and shall endeavor to place before our readers, during the remainder of the Session, the earliest information of what is going on. On Thursday, the House was principally occupied in discussing the mode to be adopted for performing the Printing of the House during the Session. The 46th Rule, which directs that it shall be done by Contract, was rescinded—several measures were proposed to be substituted in its stead, all of which were lost; and, after a debate of nearly six hours, the 46th Rule was again restored. The former Printing Committee is dissolved, and one consisting of seven Members is appointed by ballot.

Yesterday, the subject was again brought forward, and after a long discussion, resolved itself into rescinding the 46th Rule, and instructing the Printing Committee to divide the work exclusively between the Editors of the Freeman, Advocate, and Gazette.

It will be seen, that on 1st February, the Attorney General intends moving the appointment of a Committee to take into consideration the subject of the "Highways" in this Province. We anticipate the most favorable results from the labors of such a Committee, and that some effectual measures will be devised this Session, for the improvement of the Roads throughout the Province.

The Addresses from the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, in reply to His Excellency's Speech at the opening of the Session, together with the answers of His Excellency, will be found in this days Gazette.

Our limits will not admit of our inserting the Message and Despatch on the subject of Naturalization this week. It shall, however, be laid before our readers in our next number.

The Brockville Recorder may rest assured, that he is mistaken if he supposes any thing he could say to us, should excite our wrath. With this assurance, having matters of much more consequence to attend to than answering his sugry meers we take leave of him, and recommend him for the future, when alluding to those who hold high and dignified stations, to be more moderate in his language, and not to forget the respect which is due to the "powers that be."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"The sentiments of a Lay Member of the Church of England," shall be inserted next week—our arrangements for this week prevent us having space for it. We are unwoidably compelled to omit the Canal Report.

Summary.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Gore K. C. B. was sent off yesterday morning with despatches from his Royal Highness the Lord High Admiral to Sir E. Codrington.—Sir John left the Admiralty in a post-chaise and four shorter before 12 o'clock, accompanied by Captain Codrington, (son of Sir E. Codrington,) for Dover, from whence it is expected Sir John will cross the Channel to Calais, proceed across the Continent to Italy, and thence to Malta.—Sun, Nov. 21.

What has been said of the intention of the Admiralty to cause the ships injured at Navarin to undergo repair at Malta, is confirmed; and his Majesty's ship Rattlesnake is to sail immediately from Portsmouth with the masts, spars, and stores, for that purpose.—She will also carry out a supply of supernumerary seamen for the squadron in the Mediterranean.

By letters received from Lisbon, it appears that an English man of war had brig arrived in the Tagus on the 2d inst. from Portsmouth, and in obedience to orders received by her his Majesty's ship Warspite, of 74 guns, had been completed from the other ships of the squadron, and was immediately to sail for the Mediterranean. It was rumoured amongst the officers of the squadron in the Tagus, that either the Spartiate or Wellesley, of 74 guns, would follow the Warspite immediately.

Extract of a letter from an officer on board the Dartmouth, dated Navarin, Oct. 22:—"One of our midshipmen, young Foley, (son of Lt. Col. Foley, Royal Artillery,) accompanied Lieutenant Pierpoint, with the flag of truce in the Dartmouth's pinnace. When the latter was unfortunately killed, he fell into the arms of the former, who instantly cocked his pistol, fired, and shot the aggressor; this so exasperated the Turkish crew, that one man who had witnessed the gallant act, snapped his pistol three times at Forbes, but without effect; at length he threw the pistol in his face, which cut him in the lip."

Sir Edward Codrington, Vice Admiral, in the service of his Britannic Majesty, and Count Heiden, Rear Admiral, in the service of the Emperor of Russia, have been named Grand Crosses of the Royal and Military Order of St. Louis. Captain Fellowes, commander of the English frigate the Dartmouth, has been named Commander of the Royal Order of the Legion of Honour. The Captains commanding the English and Russian ships engaged in the battle of Navarino have been named Knights of the Royal and Military Order of St. Louis.

An extract from a private letter from a young gentleman on board the British ship Albion, in the Bay of Navarino, confirms the account which we published three weeks ago, that the Turkish ships were still on fire and blowing up on the 22nd, two days after the action. Numbers of unfortunate Greek slaves were chained to the decks and guns of the Turkish vessels, and left to perish by their inhuman foes: no means of succour from the British could be resorted to, as the ships were blowing up every instant. It is added, that the Turks have still a fleet of twelve sail of the line and some frigates, up the Dardanelles, most of the frigates carrying from 48 to 68 guns.

A letter from Corfu, of Oct. 23d, after noticing the battle of Navarino, the first loose intelligence respecting which had just been received in that island, communicates some information respecting the affairs of Greece, which the writer says may be fully relied on. The army of Gen. Church is stated to amount to 13,000 men, of which advanced parties were in the environs of Patras, the fall of which was confidently expected on account of the great scarcity of provisions which prevailed there.

Russia.—Accounts from St. Petersburgh to the 3d of Nov. state, that news had just arrived that the important fortress of Erivan had surrendered to the Russian troops, and that the garrison, consisted of 3,000 men, with Hassah Khan, the commander, were prisoners of war. The Emperor having left the capital on the 19th of October, the officer hastened with the news of this victory to overtake his majesty. It was received by the Emperor at Riga, where the Emperor arrived on the 6th of Nov. His majesty attended a public thanksgiving, and caused the conquered standards to be carried through the streets.

The Emperor stayed at Riga only one complete day. The next evening he departed, but the letters do not say for what part of his empire, or of Europe.

A Deputation from the Canada Company waited on Mr Huskisson, on the 20th, at the Colonial Office, Downing-street, and had an interview with the Right Hon Gentleman.

Spain.—The intelligence from Spain is to the 10th of November, and is much the same that it has been these ten years.

"The Captain General of Catalonia had commanded all officers who had belonged to the old army, and were classed as Indefidos, to leave Taragona and its arrondissement forthwith, within the rigorous space of six hours time.—A letter from Madrid mentious that public attention is now fixed upon the Castiles, where the insurrection, which has been so long carried on in Catalonia, re-appears with incredible force. The bands of rebels swarm in every quarter of the province One of them entered the Pardo, one of the Royal residences: it disarmed the Royalist volunteers, both infantry and cavalry, and left the place, carrying off arms and horses. Their notto is, Death to the Liberals!—Turn out the Ministers! The secret hand of the Clergy is perceivable in all these commotions, which directs the blows, and rewards them profusely.—The 2d and 3d battalions of the 2d Regiment of the Line, who were surprised and taken prisoners at Mauresa, and the officers who fell into the hands of the rebels, who recovered their liberty, have been suspended from their employments, and were sent to the fort of the island of Las Medas, in the Gulf of Rozas, where they are to be tried according to the regulations of the Martial Law. The King and Queen were in Valencia, where the municipality prepare magnificent fetes of their honour."

St. Andrews, in the Province of New Brunswick, has become a free warehousing Port.

Foreign Intelligence.

FRANCE.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The King has raised Rear-Admiral de Rigny to the rank of Vice Admiral.

Baron Milins, Capitanie de Vaisseau, has been named Rear-Admiral.

The Captains Rosamel, de Labretonniere, Morice, and Hugon, officers of the Royal Order of the Legion of Honour, have been named Commanders of the same Order.

Captain Robert, Knight of the Legion of Honour, has been named an officer.

Ensign de Vaisseau Dubourdieu, has been named Commander of the Company of the Guards of the Admiral's Flag, in the room of Baron de Pigny deceased.

His Majesty has been pleased to order the distribution of a certain number of decorations, which are to be given among the staff-majors and crews of the ships commander by Admiral de Rigny, as soon as the "propositions" announced by the Admiral shall have arrived.

The King, in his benevolent anxiety, has ordered to be taken from the chest for Invalids of the Marine, special funds, to be appropriated to the immediate relief of the families of these who have found a glorious death in the battle of Navarino.

Sir Edward Codrington, Vice-Admiral, in the service of his Britannic Majesty, and Count Heiden, Rear-Admiral, in the service of the Emperor of Russia, have been named Grand Crosses of the Royal and Military Order of St. Louis.

Captain Fellowes, commander of the English frigate the Dartmouth, has been named Commander of the Royal Order of the Legion of Honour.

The Captains commanding the English and Russia ships engaged in the battle of Navarino have been named Knights of the Royal and Military Order of St. Louis.

Communication.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

Mr. Editor,

Having obtained Mr. Icabod Crane's permission to make what use I pleased of the inclosed Letter, I think it my duty to send it to you for publication. Mr. Bombast certainly defends himself in a Simpsonlike style. I lament the unchristian spirit he manifests towards me, more on his account, than my own.

I am, Sir,

Yours truly,

JEREMIAH SEEKGRACE.

Hard Scrabble, Jan'y. 17, 1828.

Bladder Bombast, Esq. M. P. P.

TO MR. ICABOD CRANE, MUD LAKE.

In evil day, Icabod, did thy letter fall into the hands of that office seeking Scyphocant, canting fellow—Jeremiah Seekgrace. He dates his letter from Hard Scrabble.—May he live there all his days! It is fortunate, Icabod, that you are out of my reach, Death and furies! what induced you to say any thing about the Fog. I could have borne it patiently to my face, but to twit upon facts, in a public Newspaper would enrage Job himself. I am accosted a dozen times a day with, rather a foggy day Mr. Bombast! when at the same time, the Sun shines clear, in an unclouded Sky. I am really as they say in Kennebunk hopping mad. Never again put a letter addressed to me in the Post-Office,—there is a damnable conspiracy in that department, against every true patriot in the Country.

I shall not trouble myself at present with answering all the false arguments contained in your confounded letter. You ask me to state explicitly and specifically what wrongs and grievances, we labor under? They are so numerous, that the only difficulty is, in knowing where to begin, and when to end.

For your information however, I extract a few from a List, which I am at this moment preparing, to be sent to Mr. Hume, that he may bring them before the House of Commons.

Grievance the 1st—Ministers have been annually sending to this Country, hundreds of thousands of Dollars, under various Patriotic pretences, but their true motive is to corrupt us, by introducing abundant wealth among us. Agents have been, and are at this moment, discharging the fair face of our picturesque Country,—cutting down our Trees—draining our Bogs—viola ing the rights of the Aborigines, to wit, the Wolves and Bears, and disturbing them in their retreats, under the specious pretence of cutting Canals, and of improving the internal Navigation of the Province.

Grie. 2d.—In different parts of North America, 8 or 4 thousand Soldiers are maintained, who devour an immense quantity of Beef, Pork, and Flour, for which they give us nothing in exchange but Gold or Silver.

Grie. 4th.—In consequence of the principal part of our expences being paid for us, it can be proved that we have the privilege of paying taxes four times as high as those in the world. And as taxes have the same effect on the Community, as the Goad has on the Ox or Ass—John Bull thereby destroys our greatest stimulus to industry and enterprize.

Grie. 5th.—Under pretence of enlightening our darkness, Mr. Bull's Agents in this Province, under the mask of protecting private character, has prosecuted and persecuted all who have attempted to earn on honest penny, by wounding the peace and reputation of their neighbours, thereby destroying the liberty of the Press.

Grie. 7th.—That the said John Bull, has recently denied the right of our Brethren of the United States, to send their produce to the West India Islands, unless the said produce is sent down the St. Lawrence, in consequence of which, he has subjected us to much trouble and labor in transporting it, and done manifest injustice to the Citizens of the said States.—Mr. Canning was all wrong on this subject.

Grie. 8th.—Thousands of Emigrants, from Great Britain are finding their way to this Province, many of them being assisted by the British Government, and a plan is now in agitation by Ministers, to organize a regular system of Emigration from the Mother Country, in such numbers as will occupy all the ungranted Lands, under the Pretence of bettering the condition of the individuals, and filling the Province up with loyal English, Irish, and Scotch, but evidently for the purpose of discouraging Settlers from the United States, in whose behalf a respectful address was presented from the Assembly of this Province, and refused.

But I must stop here, for truly the wrongs, oppressions, and abuses, which we have so long, and so patiently borne,—with only now and then a gentle murmur, or a meek and respectful remonstrance, are innumerable.

I must again refer to your confounded letter—would that you were at the bottom of the Red Sea, with it in your pocket. What the dickens have you to do with physicking, and blistering your letters. Keep your drugs for your own use, and may you never see the day, should you live for one hundred years, without requiring a dose of them. Go snacks with you indeed,—if I will consent to try such diabolical experiments on my own body in secret! O Icabod! Icabod! I may forgive, but I never can forget, this proposition of yours, and your ill-timed joking about the Fog. Who is Mr. D——? Seekgrace (may he seek but never find) says he informed him that I am by Trade a Bellows-maker—he lies! by all that's good he lies!—I was once (I tell this in confidence) Bellows-boy to Sledge and Anvil, Blacksmith's of Kennebunk, but I never made or repaired a pair of Bellows in my life.—Till I receive an ample apology from you, I shall not subscribe myself your friend but simple

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Wares of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give their support, and countenance to tage of his labors, and by copying from his paper be guilty of a sort of literary piracy—his labor should be rewarded, and as the House could control its own printing, by dividing it, he would do so, and thus afford the means of encouraging a Reporter.

Mr. Beardsley—has heard complaints of the manner in which the debates were given—they had been made the cause of complaint against himself, because his vote appeared as though he was disposed to destroy the Liberty of the Press—this he had been wrongfully charged with, from the erroneous way of reporting, when in fact he wished to uphold it, by resorting to the other way now proposed, finding that it could not otherwise be accomplished.

Mr. Randall, repeated that no complaints had been made against the mode of giving the debates last year.

Mr. Rolph, thought that the Hon. Gent's. not having heard any such complaints, might be accounted for, from the circumstance that he had been in London, most of the time, since last Session.

The Question was put, and lost.

Mr. Beardsley then moved—that the Printing be divided between Francis Collins, John Carey, and W. L. McKenzie.

Mr. Wilson, saw that it was the old game of yesterday—it was perfectly ridiculous to take up the precious time, which could not be recalled—the good sense of the House should protest against it, as it would make us ridiculous in the eyes of the whole Country—he wanted the reports to go abroad to the world, and was willing to divide the printing in the manner proposed to effect that object, but he thought it would be evaded by some politic trick—should the House spend another day in going over the same steps!—he would warn Members to be on their guard against the political tricks of some Hon. Gentlemen—the time was going on, and should not be trifled with.

The amendment was put and, lost.

Mr Perry, moved—that so much of the 46th Rule as relates to contracting for the Printing be rescinded—He was aware, he said that this motion had before been negatived by the House, but he was desirous, notwithstanding, that its sense upon the question should again be taken.

Mr. Coleman thought it quite absurd to be going over the same ground so often—Hon. Gentlemen should come forward at once, and say what they meant to do—his own wish was to have the debates reported, and to divide the printing fairly—If this was done, he had every confidence in the committee, who would no doubt do their duty in a proper manner.

Mr. Beardsley had no particular objection to the amendment, but the sense of the House had already been tried upon it, when it was lost—he had no desire to give all the printing to one.

Mr. Coleman—then why exclude any one!

Mr. Beardsley—because the Government Printer, has quite enough already to support him in a Lordly stile!

Mr. Wilson, would not support the amendment, but would give his vote (or the original motion.

Mr. Peterson, would support it—he has perfect confidence in the Committee.

Question put—lost.

The original motion, was again put—dividing the printing, exclusively, between F. Collins, Wr. L. McKinzie, and John Carey.—Carried—majority 2.—(25 Members present.)

Intestate Estate Bill, read third time, passed and signed by the Speaker—Messrs Bidwell and Peterson, a Committee to carry it up to the Hon. Legislative Council, and request their concurrence,

Bill for Abolition of Imprisonment for Debt, brought in by Mr. Rolph—read first time, and ordered for second reading. The provisions of this Bill, are similar to those contained in the Bill introduced last Session by the same Hon. and Learned Gentleman.

Bill for more easy recovery of Dower—brought in by Mr. Rolph—read first time, and ordered for second reading. The same remark applies to this Bill as the last.

Bill for Relief of Religious Societies—brought in by Mr. Rolph. The same remark applies to this Bill as the two former.

Felons Counsel Bill, 2nd. reading—House in Committee of the whole, Mr White in the Chair.

Mr. Bidwell said that this Bill was a transcript of that introduced by him last Session—after the vote of last year he considered any explanation unnecessary.

The Bill was reported, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Thomson and Clute Relief Bill, 2nd. reading—Mr. Wilson in the Chair.

After some desultory conversation—The Attorney General, proposed an amendment, which vests the Commissioners of Forfeited Estates, with power to receive testimony on behalf of the Petitioners and to secure them in the title to the Lands claimed.—Mr. Perry, by whom the Bill was introduced, felt perfectly satisfied, that the amendment was desirable, and such as he had no doubt would enable the Commissioners, who had expressed their wish to afford relief in this case, to secure the property to the Petitioners—he thanked the Hon. and Learned Member for the assistance he had afforded to him in rendering the measure as perfect as he could desire. The Bill was reported—ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time.

Midland District Division Bill—brought in by Mr. Coleman—Read first time, and ordered for second reading.

Road Surveyors Bill—brought in by Mr. Perry—The object of the Bill, he said, was to remedy an evil which was found to exist. The Law as it now stood required that Road Surveyors should be appointed annually, and take the Oaths—this had not been duly observed, but those Officers had continued in their situations from year to year without the formality of a reappointment and taking the Oaths—this had caused a question, whether Roads laid out under the Statute, and other acts performed by them could be legally recognized—the intention of the Bill was to make those acts, and the Reports of such Surveyors valid in Law. The Bill was read a first time, and ordered for a second reading.

Militia Bill—brought in by Mr. Perry.—The object of this Bill, he said, was to limit the trainings to one in each year—the present practice of calling out the Militia more frequently, under the orders of Officers commanding Battalions, and Captains of Companies, he considered as being unnecessary, besides being attended with demoralising effects—One training in the year, would be sufficient to ascertain the strength of the Country, which he thought was all that could be desired under present circumstances. The Bill was read a first time, and ordered for a second reading.

Mr. Clark, moved that an humble Address be presented to His Excellency the Lt. Governor, praying that he will be pleased to lay before the House all such Communications as may have been received, relating to losses sustained during the late war.—Carried—Messrs. Hamilton and Gordon, to draft the Address.

Belleville Police Bill—brought in by Mr. Coleman. The Bill, he said, was the same as that introduced last year, which from some unfortunate circumstances did not pass—it placed the Town of Belleville, which from its increased population and respectability, required a Police, on the same footing with other Towns in the Province—to this he conceived there could be no objection, and he felt assured that the Bill would meet the support of Hon. Gentlemen. Read first time, and ordered for second reading.

Mr Coleman—Notices of Bills to be brought in by him—Regulating Sheriff's Fees—and allowances to Constables for certain services.

Mr. Bidwell, moved—that when the House adjourns, it shall adjourn to Monday next.—Carried.

Jury Regulation Bill. House in Committee of the whole—Mr. Thomson (F.) in the Chair.

Mr. Beardsley, said he had prepared a clause to meet the wishes of some Hon. Gentlemen, who had expressed a desire when the Bill was last under discussion, that it should embrace Grand Jurors, as well as Petit—he did not know that the clause which he had drawn up in amendment would be considered as perfect—it was as well done however, as he could do it, and he should move for its adoption.

Mr. Coleman, would vote for the general principles of the Bill, as far as they related to Petit Jurors, but if this amendment was introduced, he should be under the necessity of voting against the Bill.—Hon. Gentlemen on reflection must certainly see the impropriety of introducing such an amendment, which would cause much inconvenience to the individuals to whom it related—he was satisfied that if the measure was persisted in, it would not become a Law, and the Country would lose the benefits which the Bill would otherwise certainly realize, and which were extremely desirable—if it was thought necessary to try the probable chance of passing such a measure, it would be better to make it a separate one, than to introduce it here, to risk losing the good effects contemplated by the Bill in other respects.

Mr. Perry, said that it was easy to make assertions, but he had not heard any arguments in support of such assertions to show that difficulties would arise from the introduction of this amendment—he should therefore give it his support.

Mr. Beardsley, was afraid after all, that it might clog the Bill, and create confusion, besides being the means of preventing the general measure from passing into a Law—he had drawn the clause up to meet the wishes of some Hon Gentlemen, and should vote for it, if the sense of the House was for introducing it—he had brought the Bill in, with a view to accomplish a desirable change in the mode of selecting Petit Jurors—if his own wishes were consulted, he would prefer making the subject of Grand Jurors, a separate measure, and a Bill might be brought in for that purpose—with this amendment in the present Bill, he confessed he apprehended some difficulty as to its final passing into a Law, and would rather leave it out.

Mr. Perry, could not see any impropriety in retaining the amendment—he had no fears of its clogging the Bill, or preventing its passing into a Law—a separate measure for Grand Jurors had been spoken of, but he would do the thing in an open manner, and insert in this Bill whatever, in his opinion, was desirable for the Country—it might not pass into a Law now, but public opinion would at last prevail, and ensure its enactment.

Mr. Bidwell. agreed with the Hon. Gent. that public opinion would at last have its proper weight, and secure the passing of many desirable measures—but on this occasion he could not support the clause proposed as an amendment to the Bill—because it provided for the selection of Grand Jurors, indiscriminately, without any qualification whatever—it would have been better to have adopted the suggestion of the Hon. Member, (Mr. Perry,) made on a former occasion, by giving the Town Meetings the power of selecting a sufficient number of persons to serve as Grand Jurors—as that suggestion was not adopted, the present amendment, he thought, had better be withdrawn—the benefits of the bill without it were substantial, and although he was not apprehensive as to its fate elsewhere, yet he would make it as unexceptionable as possible, in order that those substantial benefits might be realised.

The amendment was then put and—lost.

The Bill was reported—ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. Bidwell, gave notice, that he should on Monday next, move for leave to bring in a Bill to secure the Rights of certain persons in this Province.

Mr. Fothergill, moved—that Messrs Thomson (F.) and Bidwell, be appointed a Committee to inquire into the expediency of appointing a Printer to the House of Assembly, and to report by Bill or otherwise.

The House, he said, had been engaged for the last two days in a long discussion, with respect to Printing, and he was satisfied that the same thing would occur every session unless some mode was devised to obviate the difficulty—in other Colonies, he believed, the Assemblies had their own Printer—it would be extremely useful, if it were so here, and would besides be a great saving, as the House would be able to have its work done, with one third the number of Clerks now employed—it would be seen from the Resolution which he had proposed, that it was not intended the House should make any pledge on the subject, as the Committee was only required to report as to the expediency of the matter.

Mr. Perry—Notice—Line Fence Bill, to be brought in by him.

Mr. Fothergill—Notices on the subject of Resolutions of last Session—relating to—Eastern Boundary Line of the Province—and Settlement Duty.——Adjourned to Monday.

Monday, 28th January.

Felon's Counsel Bill, read third time, passed, and signed by the Speaker. Messrs Bidwell and Peterson, a Committee to carry it up to the Hon Legislative Council and request their concurrence.

Thompson and Clute relief Bill, read third time, passed, and sent to Legislative Council.

Jury Regulation Bill, read third time. On question for the Bill to pass—

Mr. C. Jones said, that it was not his intention to oppose the passing of the Bill, but he thought that before doing so, some amendments might yet be made. As the Bill now stood, it would in his opinion be found inconvenient, and attended with difficulty and hardship in many cases—the general tenor of its provisions, would throw the duty of attending as Jurors, equally on small Townships with a thin population, as those whose numbers would be better able to bear it—a Township with only 100 inhabitants, might be called upon to furnish as many Jurors, as one with 4000, which would render the duty unequal—he made these suggestions with a view to have the Bill further improved before its final passage through the House

Capt. Matthews was absent when this Bill was last in Committee—on a former occasion when it was under consideration, he had intimated his wish, that it should embrace both Grand and Petit Jurors, and he had understood that a clause to that effect would be introduced—he was not aware that this had been done, and he now asked for information on the subject.

Mr. Beardsley said, that in compliance with the wish of the Hon. Gentleman, as well as of some other Members, he had drawn up such a clause, but on submitting it to the consideration of the Committee, it had been thought, that it might have the effect of clogging the Bill, and it had not been adopted—he hoped that in its present stage the Hon. Member would not press the consideration of making any further amendments which might endanger the Bill from passing into a Law, as its provisions without them were important, and would be found beneficial.

Capt. Matthews said that he should certainly press it, and should move for the recommitment of the Bill.

Mr. Perry, instead of doing so the Hon. Gentleman had better propose his amendment, as a rider to the Bill.

Capt. Matthews would not consent to do so,—if Grand Jurors were not included in the Bill he would have it recommitted, and if this was not done he should oppose the Bill.

Mr. Beardsley suggested the propriety on the part of the Hon Gentleman, of making his proposed amendment a separate measure

Captain Matthews, seconded by Mr Wilkinson here moved the recommitment of the Bill

Mr Swillick should be sorry to see the Bill lost—it contained provisions which made it desirable that it should pass—but he was of opinion that a distinction between Grand and Petit Jurors was necessary

Mr Wilson knew that there was more corruption in Grand Juries, than in Petit—he had seen it himself, and though he had fortunately not come under their lash himself, others had suffered from that corruption—and how could it be expected that, life, property, or character could be safe, while the system of packing Juries was allowed—he was confident that some amendment with respect to Grand Jurors was necessary—the rights and liberties of the people were deeply interested in such a measure, and should be attended to

Captain Matthews—sooner than throw any impediment in the way, which might risk the passing of the Bill, would with consent of the House, withdraw his motion for recommitting it—Leave was granted and the motion withdrawn

Mr Gordon, with respect to the question now before the House as to the passing of the Bill, was happy while giving it his opposition, to be able to state that in his own District no complaints had been made with respect to choosing Juries—he regretted to hear other Hon Members complain of the practice in other places, but he yet hoped that there was but little cause for those complaints—the present Bill presented many difficulties to his mind—the persons in new settlements and thinly inhabited Townships, who were far removed from the County Towns where the Courts sat, and indigent persons, would by its operation, be called upon to bear an equal share of the duty, evidently at much inconvenience and expense The discretion of the Sheriff had been exercised as far as was within his knowledge, in a manner beneficial to the Country, and as this Bill would in his opinion be found to be attended with much difficulty and inconvenience he should vote against it

OFFICE OF THE U. E. LOYALIST,

Wednesday, 30, January, 1828.

ANXIOUS to put our readers in possession, at an early period as possible, of the proceedings of the House of Assembly, we this day issue an extra sheet, and by such means, we trust we shall have it in our power, to keep pace with them, while the subjects to which they relate, possess an interest.

The extraordinary discussion which took place on Thursday and Friday last, is one, which will no doubt meet the considerate attention of the public, and from its peculiar tenor, it may perhaps be expected by some persons, that we should offer our remarks upon it. We can only say, that the struggle which took place on that occasion, will we have no doubt, be regretted, in common with ourselves, by every person, who truly feels for the dignity of the Country. The marked exclusion, in which it resulted, we feel as a compliment of the highest kind paid to ourselves. This compliment, on the part of some persons, has, we are aware, been paid to us unintentionally. The object of a party has been gained, even at the sacrifice of this unintentional compliment, and we willingly award to those by whom it has been achieved, the full meed of triumph, which they may feel disposed to attach to it—it is enough for us, that we share not in its discredit.

Our readers may rest assured, that however unpalatable it may be to some persons, to have the proceedings of the House made public, unless it is done under a system of exclusion and dictation, and by one who it is said should be encouraged, and in the confidence of the House, we shall continue to place such information before them, as it may be in our power, by dint of labor and application, to procure, convinced that although we do so in a summary manner, it will not be the less acceptable, conveyed as it shall at all times be, with a due regard to truth and propriety.

tage of his labors, and by copying from his paper be guilty of a sort of literary piracy—his labor should be rewarded, and as the House could control its own printing, by dividing it, he would do so, and thus afford the means of encouraging a Reporter.

Mr Wilson knew that there was more corruption in Grand Juries, than in Petit—he had seen it himself, and though he had fortunately not come under their lash himself, others had suffered from that corruption—and how could it be expected that, life, property, or character could be safe, while the system of packing Juries was allowed—he was confident that some amendment with respect to Grand Jurors was necessary—the rights and liberties of the people were deeply interested in such a measure, and should be attended to

Captain Matthews—sooner than throw any impediment in the way, which might risk the passing of the Bill, would with consent of the House, withdraw his motion for recommitting it—Leave was granted and the motion withdrawn

Mr Gordon, with respect to the question now before the House as to the passing of the Bill, was happy while giving it his opposition, to be able to state that in his own District no complaints had been made with respect to choosing Juries—he regretted to hear other Hon Members complain of the practice in other places, but he yet hoped that there was but little cause for those complaints—the present Bill presented many difficulties to his mind—the persons in new settlements and thinly inhabited Townships, who were far removed from the County Towns where the Courts sat, and indigent persons, would by its operation, be called upon to bear an equal share of the duty, evidently at much inconvenience and expense The discretion of the Sheriff had been exercised as far as was within his knowledge, in a manner beneficial to the Country, and as this Bill would in his opinion be found to be attended with much difficulty and inconvenience he should vote against it

OFFICE OF THE U. E. LOYALIST,

Wednesday, 30, January, 1828.

ANXIOUS to put our readers in possession, at an early period as possible, of the proceedings of the House of Assembly, we this day issue an extra sheet, and by such means, we trust we shall have it in our power, to keep pace with them, while the subjects to which they relate, possess an interest.

The extraordinary discussion which took place on Thursday and Friday last, is one, which will no doubt meet the considerate attention of the public, and from its peculiar tenor, it may perhaps be expected by some persons, that we should offer our remarks upon it. We can only say, that the struggle which took place on that occasion, will we have no doubt, be regretted, in common with ourselves, by every person, who truly feels for the dignity of the Country. The marked exclusion, in which it resulted, we feel as a compliment of the highest kind paid to ourselves. This compliment, on the part of some persons, has, we are aware, been paid to us unintentionally. The object of a party has been gained, even at the sacrifice of this unintentional compliment, and we willingly award to those by whom it has been achieved, the full meed of triumph, which they may feel disposed to attach to it—it is enough for us, that we share not in its discredit.

Our readers may rest assured, that however unpalatable it may be to some persons, to have the proceedings of the House made public, unless it is done under a system of exclusion and dictation, and by one who it is said should be encouraged, and in the confidence of the House, we shall continue to place such information before them, as it may be in our power, by dint of labor and application, to procure, convinced that although we do so in a summary manner, it will not be the less acceptable, conveyed as it shall at all times be, with a due regard to truth and propriety.

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the condition of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor. JOHN SMALL.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Stoves, Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 20 per Cent under those at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means to liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give their aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are daily rising in quality and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

THE U. E. LOYALIST.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1828. NO. 88.

The Lieutenant Governor transmits to the House of Assembly, the copy of a despatch addressed to him by Lord Viscount Goderich, and he deems it necessary to acquaint the House of Assembly, that until the King's Instructions, transmitted by Earl Bathurst on the 31st of August 1826, were received in this colony, the nature of the provisions they recommended, and equally unknown to the Lieutenant Governor.

The Lieutenant Governor desires further to acquaint the House of Assembly, that although when these instructions were received, it appeared to him, as it did to both branches of the Legislature, that the measure which His Majesty recommended was well calculated to afford protection to those for whose relief it was intended, the Lieutenant Governor was not so unmindful of the efforts made to excite groundless alarm among the inhabitants of this less calm and peaceful colony, as ever to have conveyed an assurance to His Majesty's Government, that either that measure, or any other the most indulgent that could be devised, might not, by industrious misrepresentations, be made the occasion of exciting a partial discontent.

Government House,
23d January, 1828.

Downing Street,
10th July, 1827.

Sir,

His Majesty's Government have had under their consideration the two bills passed by the Legislative council and Assembly of Upper Canada in the month of February last, and which were reserved by you for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, intitled.

An act to provide for the Naturalization of such persons resident in this province at the period therein mentioned as may not now be entitled by Law to be regarded as natural born subjects.

An act to confirm British subjects in their titles to real estates in this province derived through aliens.

You are aware that a petition signed by a large number of persons resident in the province has been presented to the House of Commons objecting on various grounds to the confirmation of these bills by His Majesty.

The petitioners represent that the bills, which have been transmitted, do not really express the sense of the Legislative Body, The views of the House of Assembly of Lower Canada can of course however be collected only from the acts and recorded resolutions of the House itself, and His Majesty cannot attach any authority to the statement which has been made by others of the wishes and opinion of individual members of this body—The petition however sufficiently establishes the fact that a numerous class of the inhabitants of the province are dissatisfied with the measures recommended by His Majesty's government in the year 1826, and subsequently adopted by the provincial Legislature.

I cannot too distinctly acknowledge that your Excellency & the Legislative Council and Assembly are not responsible for any misconception which may have been entertained upon this subject. The bills which you have transmitted are in general framed in conformity with the instructions which you received, or deviate from those instructions only on the side of indulgence towards the parties whom it was proposed to relieve. It rests with His Majesty's Government alone to vindicate the propriety of the measures which have been already taken, and of such alterations in them as I am now about to suggest.

It is fit however to observe, that before Lord Bathurst's instructions of the thirty-first of August, 1826, were written, His Lordship had adopted every means in his power to ascertain whether the improvement which he then projected in the law would satisfy the inhabitants of Upper Canada; nor were there wanting sufficient grounds to justify the conclusion that all classes of society, in the province, would cordially acquiesce in them; if these expectations have been disappointed, the result is to be attributed to circumstances of which Lord Bathurst was unavoidably ignorant, and over which he could exercise no control.

His Majesty's decision upon the bills which you have transmitted will be suspended until it shall appear whether the Council and Assembly are disposed to pass other bills better adapted to produce general satisfaction throughout the province, and if any such bills should be received in this country, His Majesty in council will disallow those which are at present before him. I proceed to state the general principles which upon a mature consideration of the subject, it has appeared to His Majesty's Government desirable to embody in the Bill so to be passed.

All persons who have at any time received grants of land from the provincial government, or who have held any public office in the province, or who have at any time been admitted by the provincial government or its officers to take the oath of allegiance, or who had their settled place of abode in the province before the year 1820 and are still resident there, should be admitted to the privileges of English birth without any condition of qualification.

The Children or more remote decendants of any persons who may now be dead, should be admitted to the same privileges, which their parents or ancestors, if living, could claim.

Any person claiming to exercise any privilege of a British subject who has not yet taken the oath of allegiance should be required to take that oath, or if he be one of the persons whom the provincial law relieves from the obligation of taking oaths, should be required to make the corresponding affirmation.

Persons not falling within any of the preceding descriptions, but who have at present their domicile in Upper Canada, having first resorted thither in, or subsequently to the year 1820, should, if such be their wish, be also admitted to the privileges of English birth, subject to the three following conditions—First, that before they enjoy the privileges in question, they should have completed a residence of seven years. Secondly, that they should take the oath of allegiance, or make the corresponding affirmation. Thirdly, that their names should be registered in some public office, by some time to be fixed for that purpose, in order that it may be known what particular persons have availed themselves of the proposed indulgence.

It will be distinctly understood that the law should contain no provision whatever, respecting the renunciation of any allegiance or supposed allegiance to any foreign state. That question must be decided by the general law of nations, without being made the subject of any enactment, either remedial or declaratory.

The proposed bills must be entirely retrospective.—The terms upon which it may be proper to naturalize persons hereafter resorting to Upper Canada, or to any other of His Majesty's foreign possessions, will probably, at any early period, engage the distinct attention of His Majesty's Government. The Bills consequently will not interfere with the operations in future of British Acts of Parliament for the naturalization of certain foreigners in His Majesty's plantations.—Neither should they have the effect of repealing certain Provincial Statutes respecting a particular class of Aliens, which were passed in the year 1816 and 1817.

It remains to advert to certain questions respecting the property of Aliens which may be affected by the proposed enactments.

There would be no objection to a provision declaring that lands acquired by any person, or by the ancestor of any person naturalized under the act, should not hereafter be claimed by His Majesty on the ground of any such person having been an alien.

It is possible that cases may exist in which the title of private persons to land depends upon the foreign birth of some other persons.

In all such cases it would seem fit that the title in fume should depend upon, and follow the actual possession of the property in past times.

No person, naturalized under the proposed bills should hereafter be dispossessed of his lands, on the ground of his own or his ancestors' foreign birth. On the other hand no person who has been actually dispossessed on that ground should now have his title restored. It would be equitable that these rules should take effect from the—day of 1826, the date of the last act of parliament upon this subject.

It would be highly convenient, if such should be the pleasure of the Council and Assembly, to make the questions of property the subject of a distinct bill, since it is unnecessary to incumber the question, of a naturalization with discussions which might impede, if they did not prevent, the success of that measure.

The inhabitants of Upper Canada, will I trust, recognize in these instructions His Majesty's desire to promote the welfare of every class of society in the province, and the Legislative Council and Assembly will understand that His Majesty fully appreciates the industry and zeal for the public good, manifested by their compliance with the instructions which in the last year Lord Bathurst conveyed to your Excellency by His Majesty's command,

I have the honour to be
Sir,
Your most obedient humble servant,
(Signed) "GODERICH."
Lieutenant General
Sir P. Maitland, K. C. B. &c. &c. &c.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

House of Assembly, Monday, 28th January.

Mr Ralph should give the Bill his cordial support—the Hon Member from Kent, had not perhaps on good or opportunity of judging of the conduct of Sheriffs', as others—as in his District, it was in his (Mr R's) recollection, that at the last Assizes, there had not been a single issue tried—in the Niagara District there were 60, and he was sorry to say, the criminal business was nearly in the same proportion—he would not leave it in the power of the Sheriff's to say who was unfit to sit on Juries—he only wished to have stood they might summon whom they pleased, and cases had occurred in his own District, where such an exercise of power had been found inconvenient, and attended with evil consequences—if any case occurred in which he must vest a discretionary power, he would do it, for the best reason,—because he must do so On all occasions however where it was possible to avoid this, he would not sanction such a discretionary and arbitrary power, and on the present occasion a sense of duty called upon him to suppress it—human nature had not yet arrived at so high a degree of perfection, as to sanction this power on the part of Sheriffs—public opinion he thought called for the present measure, and he should therefore give it his support

Mr Lefferty should not oppose the Bill, but he thought that much inconvenience would be found to result from it—no exceptions were made as to the persons who were liable to serve on Juries,—on the principle that much inconvenience, and he was aware, that in the District of Niagara, under the provisions of this Bill, which left no discretionary power to the Sheriff, many persons would be liable to serve as Jurors, who could not speak one word of English.—It was in his opinion a measure fraught with inconvenience to individuals and to the public—he was not inclined himself to be suspicious of Sheriffs, in the exercise of the discretionary power with which they were now invested—he thought they dare not pack Juries—in his own District the Juries summoned, were generally men of intelligence and talent, and where talent existed, honesty was generally its accompaniment—the more he saw of this Bill, and the more he heard of it, the more he disliked it

Mr Perry was surprised at the contradictions in the arguments of the Hon Gentleman who spoke last—he had said that he should not oppose this Bill, and yet from what he had advanced, it appeared that he considered it was a measure full of inconvenience and difficulty, and one which he disliked.—If such were his (Mr P's) sentiments, he should without hesitation openly oppose the Bill, and give his decided vote against it. The Honble. Gentleman had also said, that talent and honesty were inseparable—this he should say it was notorious that men of the greatest talent, and the most deprived of it, because in their talents gave them opportunities, which others did not possess—if honesty was to be found any where it must be sought for in the peaceful abode of the peasantry—there it was, alone, that genuine honesty was to be found. As the law now stood, Sheriffs could take any names for Jurors, and their selecti on might be made from the very neighbourhood in which the cause was to come were residing—opinions might be expressed on the merits of the case, before coming to Court, and prejudices imbibed, which could not be got over.—The object of this Bill was to take away from the power of Sheriffs to exercise such a discretionary power, and he would at all times prefer having to contend with ignorance, rather than prejudice—he would therefore give Gentlemen such a way, as would afford the best means of procuring persons who knew nothing of the causes on which they would be called upon to decide, as the best means of having justice done.

On the Question being put—the Bill passed, and was signed by the Speaker—Messrs. Beardsley and Wilson, a Committee to carry it up to the Hon. the Legislative Council, and request that the same may be printed and referred—among these were Petition for Harbor at Coburgh—Harbor at Port Hope, and Henry Murray, on subject of late Bank at Kingston.

Mr Cartwright Harbor Petition, referred to a select Committee, also the Port-Hope Harbor Petition, with power to send for persons and papers and report by Bill or otherwise. Petition of Wm Forsyth, is referred to a select Committee with like powers—and 50 copies on motion of Capt. Matthews, ordered to be printed for use of Members.

Mr. C. Jones moved, that the Resolution of Friday last rescinding the 46 Rule of the House, so far as it respects contracting for the printing of the House, be read for every, and the last time.

Mr. Wilson, was opposed to the motion—one whole day and great part of another had already been spent on this subject—it appeared to him that some Hon Members were much opposed to printing and reporting, particularly the Hon. Gent. from Leeds and Kent—he had made up his mind & would not recant—those gentlemen who on other occasions were loud and glory, were on now—if they were not afraid of coming to the light, why suppress reporting, it reminded him of what he had read in a very good book—they would not come to the light, because their deeds were evil.

Mr. Fothergill inquired, whether it was intended to follow up this, with any other resolutions, he would inform the House that he complained with the Resolution of Friday, the Printing Committee, of which he was a Member, had already entered into contract with the three Printers named, and various things ordered to be printed had been given to those persons—and would the House now undo what had been done—the motion he hoped would be negatived.

Mr. Thomson (F) said that it would be making the committee appear ridiculous to adopt the motion—he had voted against the Resolution of Friday last, but as it had been acted upon, he thought it should remain as it was.

Mr. C. Jones said that if the Printing Committee reported, that they had acted upon the resolution, it would not perhaps on their doing so, be necessary to urge the motion The Hon Member for Prince Edward (Mr Wilson) had spoken of being afraid of coming to the light—he (Mr J) proposed this motion in the face of day Some measures, he was aware might be concocted in the dark, and this might perhaps account for the change which had taken place in the minds of some persons in the space of one night. On Thursday fully agreed with him—it had been the luck of that morning, to undo what had been done the day before, and he saw no reason, as it depended upon this, why its luck should not again be tried—but after the explanation of one of the Committee who stated that, the work had been given by contract under the resolution of Friday, he had no objection to withdraw his motion, with leave of the House.

Mr Fothergill said that Circulars had been sent to the three Printers named—their tenders had been received, and the work was given to them

The Motion was then by consent withdrawn

District Court Law Amendment Bill, brought in by Mr Rolph—(Oaths administered by Commissioners of the Court of King's Bench. to be received as by the District Court) Read first time, and ordered for second reading Fredericksburg and Ernestown Road Bill, 2d Reading, House in Committee of the whole—Mr. Peterson in the Chair.

Messrs Perry, Bidwell, Thomson (F.) spoke in favor of the Bill as being necessary to determine the dispute which excited between the magistrates of the two Districts, for which the Statute Labor of keeping the road in repair belonged—Messrs. Gordon, C. Jones and Burnham, thought the Law already made sufficient provision to determine, within what particular division, Magistrates should act, in apportioning statute labor on Roads. The Bill was reported, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time

Confiscated Estate Bill, 2d Reading—in Committee, Mr Burnham in the Chair Bill reported and ordered to be engrossed and read a third time—it limits the period for closing the Commission, for Forfeited Estates, to 1st July next, excepting for the correction of errors which may have been made

Prince Edward Division Bill, 2d Reading—in Committee—Mr Gilkey Gen in the Chair.

Mr Peterson, advocated the Bill—the distance from the Gaol and Court House at Kingston, and the difficulty of crossing the water at certain seasons of the year, together with the accumulated expences attending law suits, would be hoped incline the House to give the Bill its support—it had been proposed to make a new District, out of the county of Hastings and Prince Edward, with some part of the Newcastle District The peculiar situation of P. Edward however did not make this division desirable, it would be preferable to let it remain as it is; but as the measure was one which was loudly called for, and had received the attention of the House in two previous Sessions, when Bills had been passed, but which from some amendments, in one instance, proposed by the Legislative Council, which were considered as affecting money matters had not passed into a Law, he hoped the House would again support the Bill.

Mr. White thought that the junction of Prince Edward with Hastings, to form a new District would be better—it was so considered by many persons in the former County, who had signed a Petition to that effect. Hastings had been the first to ask for a New Division, and a Petition produced for that purpose. The distance to the Court House was greater from Hastings, than from Prince Edward, and the inhabitants, in the new settlements especially, suffered great inconvenience in consequence.

The Preamble, and 1st enacting clause of the Bill being adopted,—on motion of Mr. Peterson the Committee rose, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again, on Wednesday next.

Court of Requests Bill, brought in by Mr Jones. The object of the Bill, he said was to repeal the 3d clause of the present law, which precludes the Magistrates of the Court of Requests, from taking cognizance of debts contracted, before the sessions however could maintained in the District Courts for such debts, where greater costs would be incurred, and it was a question under these circumstances, whether the inconvenience of the effect intended of preventing tippling in Taverns—his own opinion was that it had not that effect, and as actions would be resorted to in other Courts, he submitted to the House whether it would not be proper to authorise the collection of such debts in the Courts of Requests. He offered this explanation, in order that the sense of the House might be taken at once on the question, and if it should appear against the measure, time would be saved by, regarding his motion for leave to introduce the Bill.

Mr. Gordon said, that on other occasions, as matter of courtesy towards Hon Members, he had not opposed the introduction of Bills, as explanations might be offered on a second reading, shewing a necessity for allowing them to be so introduced—but after the statement which had been made of the object of this Bill, he agreed with the Hon. mover of it that time would be saved by the sense of the House being at once expressed—his own mind was fully made up—the clause in the present law he thought had a good effect, in preventing tippling, and much consequent crime and immorality, and ought not in his opinion to be repealed.—He would indeed rather say that actions for debts of this kind, should not be encouraged even in the District Court. As far as the present operation of the law went, it had a salutary effect, and he should vote against the introduction of the Bill.

Mr. Lefferty concurred in these opinions, and should vote against the Bill.

On the question being put for leave to bring in the Bill, it was lost.

Marriage Bill, brought in by Mr. Perry—it was a transcript he said of that introduced last Session, and as it had met the support of the House on that occasion, he had no doubt it would now meet with its approbation.—Read first time and ordered for second reading.

Statute Labor Bill, brought in by Mr Perry.—He explained that the object of the Bill was to authorise the appointment by Town Meetings, of a sufficient number of Path-Masters in every Township—they were now limited to a certain number —12—which in many cases was found to be insufficient—one Path-master might have the direction of several miles of Road, and warning his division from one extremity to the other, was attended with much loss of time in travelling from one part of the road to another.—This Bill contemplated the appointment of a sufficient number, and the Town Meetings were authorised to divide their Roads according to the subject, according to their wants. From 2 to 50 path-masters were named in the Bill. Another object of the Bill was to make a more equal distribution of the Statute Labor to be performed on the Roads.—By the present law that distribution in his opinion was not a fair one, as the person with a smaller share of rateable property was compelled to work a greater number of days in proportion, than one whose assessment amounted to a considerable sum.—The effect of this was that the rich escaped at the expense of the poor, and against this he would take his voice he hoped make it equal to all, according to the value of the property they possessed.—The Bill was read a first time, and ordered for a second reading.

Highway Surveyors Bill—Read first time—House in Committee—Mr. Scallick in the Chair.—The Bill was reported, ordered to be engrossed, and read third time.

Militia Law Amendment Bill.—On motion of Mr. Perry it was ordered, that the House will on to-morrow resolve itself into a Committee of the whole on this Bill.

Mr Perry notices—Bill to be brought in by him, to amend the Assessment Law.

Mr. Gordon—notices—Bills to be brought in—Amherstburgh Market—Registry Bill, and providing Fire-proof Vaults, and for appointment of Inspectors of Tobacco.

Mr. VanKoughnett—notices—Bills to be brought in relating to Licences, Wine and Spirituous Liquors, and Receiver General's Office. Adjourned.

Tuesday, 29th January.

Petitions Presented—One against additional rate of Assessment for Port Hope Harbor.

Fredericksburgh Road Bill—Confiscated Estate Bill, and Highway Surveyors Bill—Passed, Signed, and sent to the Legislative Council.

The Attorney General, moved—That the House do on Monday next resolve itself into a Committee of the whole on Supply.—Carried.

Midland District Division Bill—2d reading—In Committee of the whole—Mr. Lefferty in the Chair.

Mr. Coleman, said that this question had been agitated before, and he regretted that any difference of opinion, between the two Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward, which this Bill proposed to set apart as a separate District, should exist. This might be the means of preventing either from enquiring the proposed benefit—he hoped, however, that the Bill would meet with proper attention—the difficulties which that part of the Country labored under were great, from the distance to the present County Town, and the consequent expenses which were incurred in the prosecution of Law Suits, and in attendance at the Courts—he had on a former occasion expressed his opinion fully, and should not trouble the House with any further remarks at present—he moved the adoption of the Preamble.

Mr. Wilson was opposed to such a separation as this Bill contemplated—Prince Edward should be set apart as a District itself; its population and peculiar situation, called for such a measure—it was subject to many inconveniencies in its present state, and at certain seasons of the year, it was, in a great measure, from its insular situation, cut off from communication with other parts of the District—he had no objection to support the prayer of Hastings distinctly considered, but embracing both counties as this Bill did, he should be obliged to vote against it.

Mr. Coleman, in bringing this measure forward, had not consulted individual interest, but the general good; and in this view of the subject, as expressed even by many of the people of Prince Edward, he thought the division he proposed was the most preferable for general convenience.

Mr. Peterson said, that some of the inhabitants of Prince Edward on the Bay shore, might feel an individual interest in the measure, as proposed by the Bill; but the general desire of the people was, that Prince Edward should be set off as a District of itself—if this was not done, in a short time it would be placed in the same situation which it now complained of—Belleville would become the County Town, and leave Prince Edward subject to the same difficulties in attending Courts, &c., which were now experienced, from its insular situation, and the danger attendant on crossing the water.

The Question being put for adopting the Preamble—it was lost.—The Committee rose and leave given to sit again this day Three Months.

Belleville Police Bill—2d reading—In Committee—Mr. Clark in the Chair.

Mr. Coleman explained, that this Bill was similar to one introduced last Session—it accorded with the prayer of the Petitioners, and he should move the adoption of the Preamble.

Mr. Thompson (F.) said, that it was last year proposed to give the people the right of choosing Police Officers—this Bill made a different provision, and he should move some amendment if the Preamble was carried.

Mr. Coleman in reply to Mr. Thompson, that the desire of the inhabitants of Belleville was to have a Police on the same terms as other Towns in the Province—such was the prayer of the Petition on which this Bill was founded; and as it was a local matter, he thought there could be no objection in complying with that request which had been made. He felt assured, that if the Bill was not passed in its present shape, there would be little chance of its becoming a Law, and the people of Belleville would be deprived of a Police, which was much wanted.

Mr. Thomson, as long as he lived, would oppose the principles of this Bill—it gave the Magistrates a power they ought not to possess; and there was no check on their proceedings.

Mr. Beardsley, would oppose the Bill too—he saw no good resulting from the establishment of a Police—in Niagara the evil effects had been felt—the markets had been injured, and not so well supplied, from the rules which were made—they had given offence, and Farmers would not attend the markets, but sold their articles, before reaching it. The population of Belleville was small and would be injured by it. The Police Magistrates were not called to account for Monies received, and he saw no clause in this Bill to make them to do so—Niagara had flourished better before it had a Police than it did now. The next thing would be, Belleville would be asking for a Representative, and so become a rotten borough as Niagara was, and he would stop them these in the beginning. The Magistrates would exercise an influence, and send who they pleased to Parliament. The very Inn-keepers in the Village would be under their control, from fear of losing their Licences—this was the truth, and he had heard Inn-keepers say so himself in Niagara. The same cause would produce the same effects in other Towns, and the only object, he believed, in this Bill to get a Police in Belleville—the population was limited—the Magistrates would have it in their power to exercise an influence over the people, who could not express their opinions—he should therefore vote against the Bill.

Mr. Perry opposed to grant a Police, but only on certain principles—the measure he thought was not local, but one in which the whole Province was concerned—the people of Belleville petitioned in this way, because they supposed it could not be obtained on any other terms, and while this House continued the practice of passing such Bills only, as were likely to be well received in another branch of the Legislature, the evil would continue. The interest of the Country, however, required that they should make a bold stand against such Bills. In Kingston the inconvenience of the Police Laws had been felt, and if this Bill was not amended to give the people the power of choosing their own Police Officers he should oppose it.

Mr. J. Jones, said that some persons opposed the Bill, because they apprehended that Belleville would send a Member to this House —this however could not be the case, as the Law made no provision for such a thing. The inhabitants of the Town had prayed in their Petition for a Police on the same terms as other Towns, and he saw no reason why their request should be refused—it was unnecessary in his opinion to urge a measure upon them contrary to their own wishes.

Mr. Peterson, said that corruption would take place under such a system, and the magistrates of Belleville would hereafter send a Member to cover their own improper acts—they would send one who would be under the influence of the Executive Government, and not one who would support the rights of the people. The Executive had already sufficient influence, and would take care to get all they could—if that influence preponderated, the result would be the annihilation of the interests of the people.

Mr Lefferty, opposed the Bill on the same grounds—he had seen enough of Rotten Boroughs, where Members were sent by Patrons and not by the people—he agreed that a bold stand should be made against such measures, and till this was done they could never expect the Country to be happy—it appeared to him that Hon. Members were afraid of every vote they gave, it was time however that they should go hand in hand to put a stop to the evils which existed—and in his opinion those were the most loyal men, who made the best laws for the Country.

On Mr. Thomson, (F.) Stating that he should be prepared in a day or two with amendments to the Bill, the Committee rose—reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again on Friday next.

Line Fence Bill, brought in by Mr. Perry—In many parts of the Country he said, that disputes had existed between neighbours as to making division fences between their possessions, and much inconvenience had resulted, and the expense in many cases fell altogether on one person. The Bill was intended to provide a remedy for this evil, by providing a summary process to compel each person to bear an equal proportion in the expense of line fences.

Mr. Wilson, was unwilling to oppose any thing coming from the Hon. Gentleman, but he thought it was legislating too fast—many persons in consequence of erroneous surveys did not know where their line fences should make, and until these were provided for, he thought the Bill was unnecessary.

Mr Perry said, that this difficulty could be obviated by saying, that where such erroneous Surveys existed, the line fence should not be put up until a Survey had been made assertaining the line in which the different parties.

The Bill was read a first time, and ordered for a second reading.

Mr. Perry moved for the Printing of 200 copies of the Bill for the use of Members—carried.

Marriage Bill—2d reading—Committee of the whole—Mr. Randal in the Chair.

Mr. Perry said it was a transcript of the Bill of last Session, and required no particular remarks.

Reported, and ordered for 3d reading.

On motion of Mr. Lefferty—200 Copies were ordered to be Printed for use of Members.

Statute Labor Bill, 2nd Reading—in Committee—Mr. Beardsley in the Chair.

Mr. Perry repeated the explanations he had offered when introducing the Bill.

Mr. Lefferty was opposed to the Bill—the Path-Masters he agreed should be increased—but the appropriation of the Statute Labor he thought was already fairly provided for—the riches of the Country consisted in wild Lands, and he believed the appropriation contemplated by this Bill was carried into effect, it would be attended with injurious consequences—the proprietors of wild lands, already were obliged by law to pay 1th of a penny in the pound per Acre on their lands, for the good of the Roads, this tax was quite sufficient—the quantity of lands granted might amount to about 17 or 18 millions Acres, and the amount due for Road Assessment on wild lands, amounted now to £150,000—where was the money to come from to pay this tax—the land must be sold—he admitted the principle of taxing according to property owned, but he contended that the law did this already, without the present Bill, according to the provisions of which a person owning wild lands to the value of £4000, would be required to work 160 days in each year, on the Roads—this he considered perfectly absurd—Orphans would suffer if it was passed into a Law, and the little property which had been left them from the hard earnings of a Father's industry, must be sacrafised.—He should vote against the Bill.

Mr. Gordon said, that with respect to an increase in the number of Road Masters, such a measure might be necessary in more populous parts of the Country, and he should not oppose that provision of the Bill—some amendments too might be necessary in the Law regulating the distribution of Statute labor which would meet with his concurrence —he thought it for example a hardship that under the existing law, a person rated on the Assessment List, for property to the amount of £25, was required to do only two days work, whereas the person who was not rated at all, and did not own any property, was compelled to perform three days labor—this he considered as being unjust, and ought to be repealed, because it fell as a burthen on the poor—he however was not prepared to vote for the general alteration proposed in the present Bill.

Mr. J. Jones proposed an amendment limiting the Bill, to the appointment of an increased number of Path-masters, and Pound-keepers in each Township, it having been explained that the other provisions of the Bill must more properly come under the consideration of the special Committee to be appointed under the Attorney General's motion, relating to Highways throughout the Province.

The Bill with the amendments was reported and ordered for a third reading.

Militia Bill—2nd reading—in Committee—Mr. Ingersoll in the Chair.

Mr. Perry said that the Bill was limited to four years, and was intended as an experiment, to ascertain, whether one general training in the year would not answer every desirable purpose. Under the present law, Officers commanding Regiments, could call them out as often as they pleased, although he confessed he had not known many instances where the power had been exercised—in one instance however he knew that a Regiment had been called out and kept from home three days together—Captains of Companies too, could call their Companies out, four times in the year. These frequent trainings he considered as being unnecessary, and attended with no good consequences. The Officers he was sorry to say were not generally qualified to instruct the men—many privates knew their duty better than the Officers, but if the people were disposed to meet for training, this Bill would not prevent them, as it was only intended to prevent the Officers from having the power of calling them out for that purpose.

The Attorney General hoped that it would be found the House had not changed its opinion on this subject since last Session, when a Bill of the same kind was rejected—and it could not be for the benefit of any of the parts of the Militia of the Province was not in an effective state, and this might be accounted for from the fact that in no other country perhaps was so little exacted from the people, as in this. In all other countries, it was considered desirable to pay the greatest attention to the effective state of the Militia, and we need not go far for examples of this. In the U. States, the trainings were frequent, much pains was taken in the displining of the Militia force of the Country, and there could be no doubt but that their general appearance was highly creditable—and why he would ask, was it considered necessary in that country, to bestow so much attention to this subject—it could not be said that this arose from any threatened danger, or from the fear of invasion—their situation, and the nature of population precluded any such apprehensions. Our case was directly the reverse; we had once been invaded, and might again be attacked—our population was comparatively small, and we were far removed from the means of support. Would it not be proper, he asked, to consider our Militia, bordering as we did on the territory of a powerful people, who bestowed so much care and attention in making that kind of force effective among themselves, and who had once invaded the country. He should hope that it would be their desire to see a person to see a very different feeling fostered in the minds of the people, who should be taught to feel a pride in meeting for the purpose of Military instruction—he had never heard the Militia Laws of this Province complained of as being oppressive, on the contrary he was happy to have it in his power to say, that wherever he had had an opportunity of being present at Militia trainings, he had always witnessed a most anxious desire on the part of the people, to make a respectable appearance, and if they were not more perfect in their duty, it was not so much their fault, but might be attributed to the want of more frequent practice.

Hon. Members who complained of the ineffective state of our Militia, proposed a most extraordinary remedy, which would render it absolutely certain, that they should never have an opportunity of becoming acquainted with their duty. In all other colonies, this subject had claimed particular attention, and had not been neglected, and it certainly ought not to be so slightly treated by us. It had been stated by one Hon. Member that an instance had occurred of a Colonel of Militia keeping out his Regiment for three days together—if such was the case he could only say that he had acted contrary to law, and such practices if they existed should be checked—but to limit the trainings to one only, in each year he did not think proper,—the Lieut. Governor, might desire to inspect the Militia, but under such a Bill if it passed, the Colonel of a Regiment would not have it in his power to comply with an order for that purpose—he would not be able to call his Regiment together previous to such an inspection to make the necessary arrangements, in appointments of Officers and non-commissioned Officers, and surely no Hon. Member could desire to see our Militia brought into such a state as this would produce. He had the honor himself to have the charge of a Regiment, and he had rather felt it matter of reproach that he had not paid more attention to it, than he had done, in calling them out more frequently, satisfied as he was of the disposition which existed among both Officers and Men, to obey such commands.—The rapid increase of our population too required frequent subdivisions of Regiments, and organising of new corps, all of which necessary measures must be lost sight of in the contemplated change, or if carried into effect, it would occupy much time before that necessary organization could be effectually made. Instead of shewing such an apathy on this subject, he would endeavor to inculcate a different spirit among the people, and to shew as men, and true lovers of their country he had no doubt would be willing to make greater sacrafices if required, than were called for by the Militia Laws of the Province, which exacted less perhaps than any other country in the world.

Mr. Peterson said, he considered the present Militia training system, a mere mockery—some of the officers were the most unworthy persons, and being themselves unacquainted with their duty, could not learn the men any thing—when called out for training it frequently happened, that the incoming man could know than calling their names over, and they received no instructions whatever, because the Officers were incompetent to do it. The Hon. and learned Attorney General, had made same allusion to the Militia of the U. States, and (Mr. P.) would inform that Hon. and Gentleman why they were in a better state of discipline than ours.—There the people felt a pride in appearing like men, and were actuated by a love of country—they took pleasure in going forth as freemen, for the purpose of training, under Officers of their own choosing, while our Militia met with reluctance, because improper Officers and unworthy persons, were placed in command without their consent, and the consequence was, that no good resulted from their being assembled.

The Attorney General said, he felt a little surprised that some Hon. Members should on this, and other occasions, feel themselves called upon to draw comparisons, between a neighboring country, and the institutions of the Government under which they lived, and expressing in many instances their admiration of the former, while they appeared forgetful of those true sentiments of respect which were due to the latter. If the sentiments expressed by the Hon. Gentleman were such as could be supposed to influence the feelings of others, it might not be unadvisable for the measure to hear it proposed as a resolution of this House, that we should at once declare ourselves as a part of those United States, and then no further care on account of our Militia would be necessary. He however that Hon. Gentleman had been in England, he would have there seen a Militia, which would have satisfied him, that in no other country in the world perhaps, could an equal degree of discipline and subordination be found, and one whose sentiments on the subject, would be found very different from those expressed by the Hon. Gentleman. A Militia possessing in its fullest sense, all that love of Country, and of freedom, which the Hon. Gentleman had been pleased to attach, and he would not say improperly, to the people of his neighbouring country. And was the Militia of England left to select its own Officers, or did it express any sentiment of reluctance on being placed under the orders of those who were appointed to take command of them.—It was totally different, and although they were not called upon even at the present moment, in a time of profound peace, to perform what might more properly be considered as the duty of regular Soldiers, by being kept together for weeks at a time, had they not submitted cheerfully to all the duties they were called upon to perform. Could it be said that this system of discipline was necessary from any apprehension of aggression or invasion.—It was not from any such apprehension, for with her immense population, and resources, England had within herself the means of raising such an efficient force, as might be said to enable her to defy the world—yet she felt it necessary to foster a martial spirit among her people, who instead of murmuring, felt it rather as the pride of freemen to second her endeavors by a willing and cheerful acquiescence. It was not necessary that Militia trainings should be so frequent, or for such a protracted time among us, but such was the spirit he desired to see kept alive in our country—such was the honorable spirit which was found to actuate our sister Colonies—Nova-Scotia and New Brunswick, had their Militia placed on a respectable and efficient footing. In Lower Canada would be found, a Regiment of Cavalry, with companies of Artillery, and Dragoons, whose services had been found most effectual in rendering assistance to the civil authorities in the preservation of the peace of the country—there these volunteer corps had been found ready, and felt it an honor, to form escorts on certain occasions, to His Majesty's representative—the spirit which actuated men who love their country, and feel an honest pride in paying those marked attentions to the representative of their Sovereign, which should at all times be shewn, were not withheld by them—and did they choose their own Officers? As to the result of the system of election of Officers, what did it produce?—he remembered not long since seeing in an American Paper, a statement, that in a Law or Militia Stable having been chosen the Colonel of a Regiment—his name he did not recollect—but one had been given him, Colonel Pluck, and the choice was so extraordinary that the man was even taken about the country, and made a show of, as one of those ridiculous objections ended in much the same manner after all, as appointments made among ourselves—the men were said to have the choice, but in most cases, a recommendation was made to them by their superiors, that a certain person would be acceptable, and his recommendation was generally attended to.—As to abuse in appointments, he would only say, that perfection was not to be expected under any system; it might happen, and no doubt did happen in some instances, that improper recommendations were made to the Adjutant General, who could not possibly know the character of every man whose name came before him, and the person at whose instance such appointments were made might afterwards discover that he had been deceived in the character of the person he had recommended, supposing him worthy of a Commission in the Militia.—The House he hoped would not consent to entertain the present Bill—it would have the effect of rendering our Militia less effective than under the present law, which in its operation could not be considered as imposing any very heavy burthen on the people.

Mr. Perry, thought that if an inquiry were made it would perhaps be found that among ourselves there were a great many Colonel Pluckes—As to the idea expressed that one training in the year was sufficient to ascertain the strength of the Country, and more could not be desired—if the Military spirit alluded to, existed among the Officers, nothing in it would prevent them from meeting for exercise as often as they pleased—in the comparison between England and this Province appeared to him ridiculous—She was liable to invasion on all hands and from all parts of the world—but what power would invade U. Canada, except the United States—the present mode of training did not render the Militia effective, and if this was to be the object, it would be better to call them out for three or four weeks at a time, as was the case in England, who paid and clothed them when so employed. The Bill he should support.

Mr. Lefferty, would rather support a Bill to render the discipline of our Militia more perfect than it was at present, than repeal the present Law—he would like to see Officers well instructed in their duty, and they would then be able to render the men perfect in the discipline of Men. It had been said that the Militia of the United States were better attended to than ours, and some Hon. Gentlemen, instead of wishing to improve and render us efficient, were for taking away all the means of our having it in our power to do so. He was surprised to hear the comparisons made by some Members respecting the choice of Officers, and he could tell those Members that the consequence of this system of election in the United States was, that the men commanded the Officers, and not the officers the men—their Militia might be said to be well organized, but it was not effective—it was all bail fellow, well met among them—Officers and men eat out of the same dish, and drank out of the same cup together—this system was ridiculous and he never wished to see it introduced here.—Our Militia, he admitted, was badly organized, and although the people did not complain of any severity in the Law he thought that some amendment might be made, by which Regiments instead of being called from one end to the other of a Township or Riding, should be called together at a central point—in many cases they were called from too great a distance, and as some of them were poor it might be considered a hardship. The Adjutant General, he was of opinion, ought to visit the different Regiments in the Province once or twice a year, for the purpose of inspection—he would be willing to make a proper allowance for the payment of this service, and if the present Officer was incapable of performing it, he would allow him to retire on a pension for past services, and employ a person who was capable of performing the duty—it was expedient that we should take the necessary means to have a good Militia force, prepared to meet the foe if necessary—there never were better men with arms in their hands than the Militia of this Province, during the late war, and they had given the enemy cause to remember it—they ought not to be neglected, and he hoped he should not again hear of the system of choosing Officers by election—the most competent persons were usually appointed, and although it might happen that sometimes an unworthy person might be given a Commission, from not knowing his character, he did not think this any reason, for adopting the system of election.

Mr. Peterson, said that he did not care for the doubts which had been expressed by the Att'y. Gen'l. with respect to his loyalty—his whole family was loyal, and his father before him had been driven from his home in Pennsylvania on account of his loyalty—he would still express his opinion that the practice of electing Militia Officers was preferable to the mode of appointments made by the Governor, which brought Officers in, who were drunken worthless fellows, and the Bill he thought a good one if not withstanding all that had been said, and he insisted that it would be better to be without trainings altogether, than continue to act under the present system.

Mr. Scallick, was in favor of the Bill—under a former Act when the fines were accounted for to the Receiver General, the Militia was called out, but no fines were exacted from absentees—under the present law which directs the fines to be paid into the hands of the Colonels of Regiments, they were rarely imposed—a remedy for this should be provided, and calling out the men once a year was, in his opinion, quite enough.

Mr. Wilson, knew that little progress had been made by the Militia for many years—in his opinion they were more efficient thirty five year ago than they were now, because at that time, when the Country was first settled, there were many disharged Soldiers capable of instructing the men—it would be time enough to call the Militia out when danger was apprehended, and as to the idea of a regular drill Sergeant would teach them more, than they would acquire in years under the present system—it had been so last war, as the enemy well remembered—In England the population was dense—here in the country it was scattered, and the people were employed in clearing their lands, and raising grain, for those who could not raise it for themselves—it would be better to leave them to these necessary pursuits, instead of calling upon them for frequent trainings. It was impossible to combine an agricultural and martial spirit—the people were required to clear our forests, make roads, and plough the soil, and if there must be Militia trainings, call out the Merchants Clerks, and those in Attorneys Offices—drill them, but call upon the Farmer only once a year, in order that the strength of the Country might be known.

On the Question being put—it was negatived—and the Bill lost.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, February 2, 1828.

There is nothing of importance in the papers received by the last Mail. It is stated, but not officially, that preparations were making for the removal of the British Troops from Portugal; and it is said, that such a measure would probably be carried into effect as soon as the Troops of France were withdrawn from Spain. The Courier, however, does not consider this as a necessary consequence, but is of opinion, that if circumstances rendered such a measure necessary, the British Forces would still be continued in Portugal, altho' France should consider it expedient to recall his Troops from Spain. There is nothing further from Greece.

By issuing a Supplement in the course of the week, we are enabled, in this days paper, to bring our summary of the proceedings in the House of Assembly to Wednesday last. The proceedings thus far, are not of more than ordinary interest, but as they are nevertheless desired by our readers, we have endeavored to give them the most prominent subjects. Those who are not in the habit of attending at the Bar of the House, can scarcely form a correct idea of the impossibility there would be of giving within the limits of a weekly paper, all that is said and done; and, indeed, much that is said, consisting in repetitions of the same arguments, would only serve to pall the tastes of our readers. Several Bills, it will be seen, have passed, and are sent to the Legislative Council—the greater part of these relate to measures which have been discussed in almost every Session of this Parliament. The Jury Bill is an exception—it contemplates a change which in its principles may be considered salutary, but we cannot avoid expressing our opinion, that it would be found, in its present shape, to be attended with many difficulties in its operation. In the course of debate, much was thrown out of a general nature, against the discretionary power now vested by Law in the Sheriffs, for the selection of Juries. The best proof that can be given that this discretionary power has not been improperly used, is the concurrent testimony given by the Country, that our Juries have discharged their duties in an upright and impartial manner.

The freedom of speech was certainly made use of in debate on this Bill, to its fullest extent, to impeach the integrity, and even the common honesty, of the Magistracy, in almost every part of the Country. If the charges so unceremoniously made are true, we are surprised, that no attempt has been made to put a stop to the corruption complained of, by having the guilty persons brought to answer for their conduct. A mandamus would accomplish this; but when it is mentioned, the ready reply is, that it is troublesome and expensive. It appears, however, to be neither troublesome nor expensive to attack the public conduct of public men, when it can be done in such a manner, that they cannot by possibility have an opportunity of replying to the charges which are brought against them—of the justice of such attacks, we need not say any thing.

The House has been employed since Tuesday in ordinary routine matter—reading Bills, Petitions, &c. Mr. Bidwell's Bill, for "Securing the rights of certain persons in this Province," was introduced and read yesterday. It relates to the Alien Question, and from hearing it hastily read, it appears to us, to Naturalise these persons, by making them Subjects in Great Britain and all her dominions.

We have no objection whatever that other Editors should copy from our paper the "Proceedings in Parliament." True it is, they cost us a good deal of labour, but we shall not accuse them of a "literary piracy," if they think proper to avail themselves of those opportunities which we possess, of communicating such intelligence to the public.—When they do so, however, all we ask is, that they will communicate that intelligence in the way we give it. It is not, therefore, our intention to complain, that the Colonial Advocate, who is encouraged, and in the confidence of the House, for the special purpose of reporting, should avail himself of our labors, by copying from us—but the debate of Thursday and Friday, in last week, which he quotes from the extra U. E. L., is not a true copy. It is given in part only, and as it relates, in a great measure, to the Editor of the Advocate himself, we consider this partial copying the more unjustifiable.

Mr. William Forsyth, the Inn-keeper at the Falls of Niagara, has a Petition before the House of Assembly, complaining of certain grievances which he states he has suffered, by a trespass having been committed on his property. Mr. Forsyth has appealed to the Laws of the Country for redress, and the subject is still pending in the Courts of Justice. Unwilling however it appears, to await the decision of those tribunals, he has thought proper, to have a Petition presented to the House, containing the most inflammatory language, and charges of the grossest injustice, against the highest authorities in the Country. This cannot be considered in any other light, than as an attempt, by an exparte statement, to create a prejudice in the public mind in his favor, and if this attempt should be successful, by causing any importance to be attached to such a Petition, under such circumstances, it must be evident, that in all future cases, even where causes are yet undetermined in our Courts of Justice, an appeal of the same kind may be made, and for the same purposes, thereby defeating in a great degree the ends of Justice. Mr. Forsyth has instituted his action at law, and is at this moment persevering in it—where then is the necessity or propriety of this appeal to the Assembly?—The Law will afford the same protection to him, as to any other person, and we have yet to learn that that protection has been refused to any one whose case called for it. The Petition however is introduced, and considered by some persons as being highly important—so much so, that 50 copies are ordered to be printed for the use of Members.—Not with a view as it is said to publication, but merely for the use of Members.—Printing it is said by a learned Gentleman, is not publishing, and as he ought to know best, we shall not quarrel with the legal distinction he makes—but common sense, and fact tell us, that printing may, and as it appears, will, in this case lead to publishing, and that too by a person who is encouraged, and in the confidence of the House. Notwithstanding the "terrible definition" of the learned Gentleman "of the English libel law"—and notwithstanding the assertions made, that the Petition when printed, should be solely for the use of Members.—the Editor of the Colonial Advocate, who is in the confidence of the House, tells them in a note appended to their proceedings, which he is encouraged to report, that he will "publish this Petition."

It was said by several, that the statements in this Petition might be untrue, and in the highest degree libellous—and that there was no intention to publish it—but published it will be, it appears, and that too by a person, encouraged by, and in the confidence of the House.—The application is easily made.

ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday last, a pair of Horses, which Dr Baldwin was driving in a Sleigh, became unmanageable, and ran away. In turning a corner of the Street, the Sleigh was upset, and by being thrown against a post on the foot path, the Doctor received a severe bruise in the head, and was otherwise hurt. He is at present confined, in consequence of the accident, but we are happy to learn, that he is convalescent.

A Ball and Supper was given at the Government House, on Thursday evening, 31st inst, in honor of the Anniversary of His MAJESTY's Proclamation. The Party was exceedingly numerous, and the rooms fitted up in a splendid and tasteful manner.

The "sentiments of a Lay Member of the Church of England", will be found in this number. We heartily join in opinion with him, that a spirit of forbearance and moderation, on the subject to which his Communication refers, is by all means to be cultivated on the part of those, who feel an interest in supporting the rights of the Established Church.

It is certainly our desire, as much as lieth in us, to "live peaceably with all men"; but we cannot consider it as evincing any thing like an unchristian spirit, or that it can be thought a departure from consistency, if, when our rights are assailed, and attempts are made to wrest them from us, by those who have directed the storm of abuse and reproach against us, we shall be found standing on our defence, in a firm and temperate manner.—When our resources are attacked, and our enemies are active in their endeavors to procure our overthrow, feeling our cause to be a just one, we should rather accuse ourselves of neglecting the performance of a duty, if we yielded to their endeavors without even an attempt at resistance.

It is stated by the Canadian Freeman, that Mr. Morrison, who has been nominated by the Caucus, as a Candidate for the representation of the Town of York, was "turned out of a minor Clerkship in the Surveyor General's Office, eight years ago, for saying, that the Attorney General, as a Government Officer, was an unfit person to represent the people." This, we suppose, is intended as a recommendation on the behalf of Mr. Morrison. If none other can be discovered by the Caucus, and none has been offered, we can only say, that it must turn out a very sorry one, and for the best reason in the world—it is not true. This Mr. Morrison knows, and as he is intended upon him, to contradict assertions, which are at variance with truth, lamented.

Communication.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

Sentiments of a Lay Member of the Church of England.—I was exceedingly sorry to find by a late paper, that a Circular Letter had been forwarded from the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Quebec to his Clergy, notifying his intention of circulating a Petition for signature, praying that the Clergy Reserves should not be withdrawn from the Church of England.

I regret that such a step should be contemplated, because I would gladly see the Ministers of the Established Church hold themselves aloof from such a contest; and, as they have hitherto done, decline taking any active part in an indecent and disreputable scramble for loaves and fishes: and, although I feel the most perfect conviction that such a Petition would be couched in language the most moderate, and that it would contain neither sentiments nor expressions unbecoming Christians or Gentlemen, yet it would be in a manner entering the lists with adversaries, who have shewn neither charity nor forbearance in their language or proceedings, and in some measure following an example, which by all true Christians cannot be too carefully avoided. To me it appears, that every argument made use of by the enemies of the Church of England, in favor of their own claims, goes greatly to shew the necessity of supporting the Establishment in Upper Canada. If the congregations of the Presbyterians amount (as they assert) to thousands, and those of the Church are scanty and scattered, does it follow that the wealthy and powerful are to be supported at the expence of those who so greatly need encouragement and assistance? or shall the scattered sheep of the Established Church be left destitute of Shepherds, because the neighboring flock is more numerous than they are? Our enemies have said, that the Ministers of the Church are ambitious and intriguing—in Canada, have those truly Christian Ministers appeared in a more amiable point of view than they do at present. They have been reviled, but have reviled not again; and have suffered the storm of abuse and reproach to exhaust itself, without an attempt at resistance or retaliation—such has been their conduct, and it has justly entitled them to the esteem and admiration of all who are capable of estimating the trial; and I should greatly regret, that our exemplary and excellent Bishop, should feel it his duty to act on the defensive, or to assert claims which cease to be desirable, so soon as they require a departure from consistency to secure them.

I trust, that at this period of reviling and persecution, when the enemies of the Church of England are active in their endeavours to prevent her overthrow in these Colonies—when her resources are attacked, and the most unremitting exertions are used to humble and impoverish her, that her friends will see the necessity of rallying round her standard, and of encouraging and supporting the endeavours of her Ministers, whose usefulness and respectability, rather by a strict attendance to her worship and ordinances, and by an examplary deportment and conversation, than by arguments in her behalf, or Petitions for her maintenance. Those who are truly friendly to the venerable Establishment, and who wish to see her still prospering and flourishing in this Country, remember how much of her respectability depends on the character of those who profess to be her members—Let them remember the example of our great founder, who bore with meekness and humility, the reproaches and insults of his enemies, and sought not to disarm them by other means, than those of patience and forbearance—Let them remember, that if earthly aid is taken from us, there is still a protecting Power, without whose aid all earthly support and countenance is worthless and vain—Let them remember, that the Church we love and venerate, cannot be destroyed, even in this remote Province, without permission from Him, who is mighty to save—and above all, let us by to heart this solemn truth, that if we neglect our duty as Christians, or set an example of worldly mindedness, avarice, or dissention, we shall deserve no support from God or man, and our fall (if fall we must) will be deserved and un-

PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom it may concern—

GREETING:

WHEREAS at a Session of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly of our Province of Upper Canada, begun and holden at York, on the seventh day of November in the sixth year of our Reign, and prorogued on the 30th day of January, in the seventh year of our Reign, an Act was passed entitled "An Act to prevent the operation in this Province of an Act of Parliament made in England in the twenty first year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the first, entitled 'An Act to prevent the destroying or murthering of Bastard Children, and to make other provision in lieu thereof.'" And Whereas, according to the Provisions of a certain Act of the Parliament of Great Britain, passed in the thirty first year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the third entitled "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled 'an Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America,' and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province.'" An authentic copy of the said Act has been transmitted to our Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the said Act having been referred to the Committee of the Lords of our Privy Council appointed for the consideration of matters relating to Trade and Foreign Plantations—We have been pleased by and with the advice of our said Privy Council, and by our Order in Council made at the Court at St. James, on the fourteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Seven, to declare our Dis-allowance thereof.

NOW THEREFORE We have thought fit to issue this our Royal Proclamation that all persons whom it may concern may take due notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, &c. &c.

Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these Presents shall come GREETING:

WHEREAS for the more effectual preventing the recurrence of such abuses as have heretofore prevailed in the prosecution of the Trade in Timber in the parts of this Province bordering upon the River Ottawa, and to the end that the Public Interest may be more certainly advanced, the Commerce in that important article of exportation the better regulated, and more equal Justice observed with regard to all Our Subjects desirous of participating in the said Trade. Executive Council Office,
York, 23rd March, 1826

NOTICE is hereby given, by Order of His Excellency the Lieutenat Governor, in Council, that in future, the First Wednesday in every Month will be a regular Council day. JOHN SMALL.
No. 9. 1. f. C. E. C

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A notation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 The correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. No grant will be made to any person without purchase, unless the Government is satisfied that the Grantee has both the power, and the intention of expending in the cultivation of Lands a Capital equal to half the estimated value, or, in case the grant do not exceed 200 Acres, that he intends to reside upon, and improve the same.

12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

14. Until the expiration of the first seven years next succeeding each grant without purchase, no quit rent will become due upon the Lands comprised in it.

15. Every Grantee without purchase, must at the expiration of the before mentioned term of seven years, prove to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, that he has expended in the Cultivation and Improvement of his Land a Capital equal to half its value, as that value was estimated at the time of his Grant, or, in case the Grant shall not exceed two hunded Acres, that he has during that time, resided on, and improved his Land—On failure of such proof, his claim to the Land shall be forfeited, and the same may be granted to another applicant. It is to be understood, however, that if at any time within that period the conditions of expenditure and cultivation shall have been complied with, the Patent may immediately issue.

16. No additional Grant of Land will be made to any person who has not proved, as last mentioned, the necessarry expenditure of Capital on the Lands already Granted to him.

17. Persons receiving a second Grant of Land, without purchase, will become liable to pay a quit rent upon the Lands comprized in such second Grant immediately from the date of it.

18. Persons desirous to receive Grants of Land without purchase, on terms different from those above stated, must lay before the Lieutenant Governor in Council, a full explanation in writing of the circumstances which they may conceive to exempt them from the fair operation of these general Rules.

19. U. E. Loyalists and other persons entitled to gratuitous Grant by the general regulation of His Majesty's Government, are not to be affected by these Rules.

The above Rules to take effect from the first of January 1826.

By Order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor. JOHN SMALL

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25*s.* per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Ket les, &c.—and at 27*s.* 6*d.* per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Pork will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly—They are offered for sale at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods could be laid down in Kingston or Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Wares of Canadian or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, in addition to the advantages above (which are combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—the good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1828. NO. 87.

Statement of Facts, relating to the trespass, on the Printing Press, in the possession of Mr. William Lyon M'Kenzie, in June 1826. Addressed to the public generally, and particularly to the subscribers and supporters of the Colonial Advocate.

PREFACE,

In presenting to the Public a statement of facts relating to the trespass committed in 1826 on the Printing Press, at that time in the possession of Mr. William Lyon M'Kenzie, and candidly declaring and avowing the motives which influenced the persons concerned in that act, I feel it necessary, as I am connected with the Government by an office, however unimportant, to offer, respectfully, to His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, an apology for the liberty I have taken in presuming to make use of His name, or the names of persons forming members of His Government without first obtaining his permission, or even making him aware of my intention.

But the Editor of the Colonial Advocate, having lately thought proper, by representing in his usual style, statements relating to the injury committed upon his property, by myself and a few others, in language which could not have proceeded from any mind not callous to truth, and devoid of every honorable and virtuous feeling, with the sole view of exciting public indignation against myself and companions, and involving the Government in a suspicion created by his own malig nant imagination, that they were the contrivers and instigators of the act he complains of; I cannot, in justice to myself, or to those implicated through my indiscretion, remain longer silent, and quietly witness this second attempt at imposition, without any effort to counteract its wicked and mischievous tendency, by what I declare on my honor, and what is known to eight or nine other persons concerned with me, to be a true, faithful, and unqualified statement of every thing that occurred relating to that hasty and inconsiderate act.

I had once before made up my mind to give to the public my sentiments on this subject, but I am almost ashamed to confess that I was deterred, or rather restrained, by the conviction that the Editor of the Advocate, and his fellow labourer the Freeman, would represent me, as they had done before, to be acting under the direction, or with the knowledge or sanction of the Executive Government, and consequently, according to their doctrine, unworthy of belief; and although I then felt, and now feel, the perfect absurdity of such charge, and strongly condemn an apprehension which may be by others pronounced very unworthy and unjust towards the public, the currency which the foulest and the most unfounded attacks upon the character and reputation of some of our oldest and most respectable inhabitants seemed to obtain throughout the province, and the avidity with which they were sought after and read, by those whose abilities and station in society might have taught them better, made me imagine that the time had not yet arrived when I could hope for a cool, dispassionate and unbiased opinion of my conduct, and the motives which governed it.

I had sufficient experience of the uncompromising baseness of Mr. M'Kenzie's disposition, and could not doubt that he would descend to the meanest and most contemptible artifices, and use the most strenuous exertions to paralize the effect which a candid and ingenuous relation of facts was calculated to produce on the minds of a generous and impartial public; but as he appeared to think that he had already succeeded in establishing a belief, that the Government had incited a party of young men to commit a trespass on his property, it was not altogether improbable or unreasonable, to suppose that a similar artifice would be practised by him on the credulity of the same persons, and with equal success.

Indeed it is more than probable that, he will now resort to this stratagem to blunt the effect which the following pages may have upon his subscribers; for I think they will find themselves not a little at fault, when they reflect and compare with the statements herein set forth, verified and strengthened as they are by a solemn affidavit of their truth, with the innumerable and extravagant falsehoods, fabricated & ushered into the world by their friend Mr. M'Kenzie, unsupported in any way but by his character and reputation for honor and integrity, which his style of conducting his paper was calculated to impress upon the public mind—for I know not what other test they have by which to judge of his character.

If his word, supported only by a character so acquired, is to be considered satisfactory, and is to stand uncontradicted even by the oaths of eight or nine persons of undisputed veracity; then I most sincerely hope and trust that his friends will at least pause, before they again condemn the conduct or motives of any one, against whom the columns of such a Journal as the Colonial Advocate may be filled, with base, scurrilous, and unfounded abuse.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Wednesday, 30, January.

Marriage Bill. Read third time and passed.

Road-master and Pound-keepers Bill, Read third time.

The Attorney General moved, that, that part of the Journals of the House relating to the Printing of the Petition of W. Forsyth, be expunged—After some discussion the motion was negatived.

Dower Bill, second reading—In Committee—Mr. Hornor in the Chair Bill reported and ordered for third reading.

Religious Societies Relief Bill—second reading—in Committee—Mr. Walsh in the Chair

Mr. Rolph, said that this measure had been introduced in a previous Session, by the Hon. Member from Lansdown, (Mr. Morris) but as that Hon. Gent. was not here at the commencement of the present Session, he had thought it his duty to bring it forward. Of all rights in which the people were interested, those of a Religious kind were the most important—in almost all countries these were respected, and although this was the case in this Province it was only so to a certain extent—some things were wanting—there is that every man should have liberty to exercise his own conscientious opinions, and adopt that form of worship which appeared most suitable to himself, but then the means to do so were not in his power—he might exercise those opinions, and adopt that form of worship, but he could not hold a spot of ground for erecting a House to carry on that worship, or for the purpose of interring the dead, who belonged to the same community of Christians as himself—he was sorry to say that this was the case of all Dissenters in this Province, and it might very properly be considered as a strange state of Society, where any denomination of Christians were precluded from holding lands for such purposes. In cases when purchases of Lands had been made, and places of worship erected, and burial grounds enclosed, the Heir at Law might hereafter claim the property, and convert these sacred places to his own use, or they might be sold under executions for debt. It could not be the desire of any one to see them converted to any other use, they should be secured in their possession—it would be inhuman to allow it to be in the power of any person to disturb the places where the bones of the dead were lying, and perhaps by ploughing up the fields which contained them, destroy "the short and simple annals of the poor" The Bill was so framed that it would not interfere with a great and important question which was agitated on another subject, its object was to provide for the security of such possessions as he had mentioned, if Dissenters might be told hereafter he acquired—Dissenters might be told that they had no right to the reserves, that they did not belong to the Established Church, but there could be no objection to their being secured in the possession he had alluded to—as it might however be found that they were intitled to share in the reserves he would be satisfied to name a small quantity of Land, say five acres for the purposes mentioned in the Bill. Another point was as to the sects to be embraced in the Bill—he had not confined it to any particular denominations, but would say that all should share in its benefits, and to meet the wishes of his Hon. Colleague, he should have no objections, however differently he might think from him on the subject, that it should include Unitarians—he would let truth work its own way, therefore he had not named any particular sects in the Bill, but had left it open for all. The best way of showing the necessity for this Bill would be, by asking the question, supposing it now actually stood on our Statute book, what would be said of that person who should propose its repeal—it would no doubt be considered as a most strange proposition, and no one would be found to make it, without evincing the greatest adversary against humanity. He moved the adoption of the Preamble

Mr. Gordon—had always been in favor of the general principles of the Bill, but it was his wish to see it passed in such a shape, as would ensure not only full and deliberate attention. He was aware however that on examination it might not be found perfect in all its provisions, and he relied on the assistance of every Hon. Gentleman to make it so. It was drawn up according to his present views, and as he thought in accordance with the liberal intentions of His Majesty's Government. He felt some diffidence in bringing it before the House, aware as he was of its importance,—every Honble. Gentleman would have an opportunity of expressing his opinion on the subject, when the Bill came more fully under consideration, and he should reserve to himself the right of altering his opinion, as to some of its provisions, if it should be found necessary.

The Bill was read a first time, and ordered for a second reading on Tuesday—and on motion of Mr. Coleman, 500 copies were ordered to be printed.

St. George Relief Bill, and Northumberland Registry Bill, brought in by the Attorney General—read first time, and ordered for 2nd reading.

Bill for abolition of Imprisonment for debt—2nd reading—Mr. Gordon in the Chair.

Bill reported, and ordered for third reading. —Adjourned.

Monday, 4th February.

Bill for abolishing Imprisonment for debt—read third time, passed, and sent to the Legislative Council.—Yeas 15—Nays 14.

Petitions read and referred.

Message, and Despatch on Alien Question—House in Committee of the whole—Mr. Wilkinson in the Chair.

Mr. Hamilton said that the Resolution he intended subnitting on this occasion, needed no apology—to use the words of an old proverb "good wine needs no bush"—the instructions were of such a nature as would give general satisfaction, and he considered it unnecessary at present to enter into the merits of them—if they had been similar to those of last year, it might be necessary to do so.—Without further observation he should therefore submit his Resolution.

"Resolved.—That the thanks of this House are due to His Majesty for so favorably regarding the interests of his people in this Province upon their civil and political rights."

Mr. C. Jones said that last year the Gentlemen who were now advocating an address of thanks for these instructions, had declared them to be a breach of the privileges of the House—no exception was now made to them, but if the communication of such instructions was a breach of privilege then, it was equally so now, and he was surprised at the change which appeared to have taken place—he however did not consider it a breach of privilege on either occasion—some parts of those now communicated, appeared to be more palatable to some persons, and this might account for the readiness shewn for voting an address of thanks. The resolution however was limited, and such as ought not to be entertained.

Mr. J. Jones thought that the resolution made an invidious distinction, as it related to this particular case, and to no one class of people—His Majesty's Government had not infringed the civil rights, or any other rights of the people,—the resolution however admitted of a different construction—he considered neither the instructions of last year, or this, as being unpalatable, although a different opinion had been expressed last year by some persons, who had felt disposed to consider them as a breach of the privileges of the House. He had the same opinion of the present instructions, as he had of those sent last year—they were communicated to the House, as matter of information, and might be received upon or not, as best accorded with the views of individual Members—they were not to be considered as binding on the House. The present course however appeared to him as being unnecessary, and such as would cast a reproach on His Majesty's Government—it deviated from the usual practice of the House, and had never before in his recollection been adopted.

Mr. Gordon said that the present was not the proper time for entering into the merits of the question—when the Bill which had been introduced on the subject of Naturalization, was before a Committee, an opportunity would be afforded him and all others, for giving their opinions, and the reasons which would influence their votes. As to the resolution, now under consideration, it was in his opinion too limited, and relating as it did to one class of people, it might admit of the construction that their rights had before been neglected by His Majesty's Government, whereas it could not be denied that every desire had been shewn to secure not only this, but every class of the people in their rights. If the resolution went to this, he should have no objection to vote for it, but limited as it was to this particular occasion, he should oppose it.

Mr. Wilson was surprised at the opposition offered to the resolution—the instructions complied with the wish of the people, and how can the House refuse its thanks—he was convinced the country would receive the measure as it was now proposed with acclamation, and that it would attach the country more strongly to the Government—the House was therefore doubly bound to give thanks to His Majesty on this particular occasion.—He should support the resolution.

Mr. Lefferty supported the resolution—the instructions of last year were complied with reluctantly. Several Members of the other branch of the Legislature had expressed their opinions to this effect, and the tie which lasted so long in this House, shewed the same feeling—it was given up at last from the necessity which was felt of something being done.—If the present instructions were not satisfactory to the country, Petitions to that effect signed by thousands, would now be lying on the table, as was the case last year.

Mr. J. Jones should propose an amendment which would make the Address of thanks more general,—this he thought was the proper course to pursue, and one which had been adopted on all other occasions. By his proposed amendment the resolution would stand thus:—

"Resolved.—That the thanks of this House are due to His Majesty, for the favorable manner, in which His Majesty's Government has invariably regarded the interests of the inhabitants of this Province, respecting their civil rights, and upon other subjects."

Mr. Hamilton had no objection to the amendment—and while on this subject, he would take the opportunity of mentioning, that the thanks of the House should be given by an Hon. Member on his left (Mr. Randal,) for his exertions in this business—he would not however offer him empty praises, but should take another opportunity, of doing something of a solid kind for him.

Mr. Ralph would not consent, by one sweeping resolution, to deviate from the particular object embraced in the instructions—a temperate and conciliatory course had been adopted by His Majesty's Government, and called for an expression of thanks,—besides he was not prepared to say that he concurred in every Act of His Majesty's Government—some had been proposed to them, not by this House, of which nothing was known—the House should therefore be cautious how it expressed more that was within its own knowledge—the instructions now before the Committee, were satisfactory to him, and he thought it would be quite enough to say "we thank you for this." The general expression of the amendment, was an overflow of gratitude—a Legislative extravagance, uncalled for on this occasion—he would therefore confine the Address to the present subject, making the thanks as cordial as possible.

Mr. Hamilton, on reflection, found that he had allowed his feelings to get the better of his judgment when he assented to the amendment—the general expression of thanks had even embrace all other subjects, and amongst others the establishment of the College, which did not meet with his concurrence—he should therefore vote against the amendment.

Capt. Matthews would vote against it too, and confine the address of thanks to the particular subject under discussion, and not have any thing to do with other matters, some of which the House was ignorant of.

Mr. J. Jones's amendment being but, the House divided.—YEAS—Messrs. Gordon, C. Jones, J. Jones, Burnham, Morris, VanKoughnett, Thorburn (Y.) Cameron, Scollick, Ingersoll, Clarke, Beasley, Coleman—13.—NAYS —Messrs. Matthews, McCall, Hornor, Fothergill, Wilkinson, Hamilton, Randall, Thomson (F.) Perry, Lefferty, White, Walsh, Baby, McBride, Wilson, Bidwell, Ralph, Peterson, Beardsley, Lyons—20.—Majority against the amendment 7.

Mr. Morris proposed that the resolution, be amended as follows:—

"That the thanks of this House are due to His Majesty's Government, for their gracious intentions, invariably evinced in promoting the interests of the inhabitants of this Province respecting their civil rights, and upon other subjects."

Mr. Morris hoped this amendment would pass, as he believed no one would doubt the intentions of His Majesty's Government, on subjects relating to the rights of the people, although the results in some cases had not been approved of.

Capt. Matthews did not doubt the intentions of His Majesty's Government, but the word "invariably," might as well be substituted with "all"—and why had it not been introduced—because the Hon. Gentleman was opposed to the Church of England—that was the reason. That Hon. Gentleman had proved that that Church ought not to dominate in this Country —why did he not say Religious as well as Civil rights—he would ask him if he approved of the intentions, respecting the Clergy Reserves and the College.

Mr. Hamilton said that the amendment would be so general, that it would have no relation to the present subject.

Mr Morris's amendment being put, the House divided—the Yeas and Nays being the same as before.

The Original Resolution, was then put, and carried.—The Committee rose, and reported the Resolution—and on motion of Mr. Wilkinson—Messrs. Ralph and Bidwell were appointed a Committee to draft an address to His Majesty, pursuant thereto.

The Committee reported the Address.

The Address being read—

Mr. Walsh thought that there was some appearance of a desire to entrap the House by the present course of proceeding.—Addresses of thanks were usually in a plain and simple stile—but this appeared to him to be out of the ordinary course.

Mr. Gordon said that on former occasions he had witnessed a departure from those ordinary rules of proceeding so necessary to be observed by the House; but he had never seen so wide a departure from them as on this occasion—he had not the most remote suspicion, he could not avoid expressing his opinion that this appeared to him as a most deliberate intention to draw from Hon. Members an expression of opinion, on a question of the greatest importance, at a time when it was uncalled for—he hoped the House would see the propriety of withholding its sanction from such a mode of proceeding—it was an unworthy attempt to get Members to contradict former opinions, taking them by surprise, without affording time for deliberate consideration—he would send back this document, so improperly brought in by the learned Gentlemen of the Committee, as it was at variance with the resolution, on which the address should have been drafted.

Capt. Matthews thought that the former consent of some Hon. Members deserved censure, and he would express it.—The address now reported by the Committee was perfectly in order, and agreed with the resolution, as it referred to the Message, and the Petition against the Bills of last year.

Mr. C. Jones would not go into the merits of the question, but if Hon. Gentlemen would reflect, they would be convinced of the impropriety of taking the House by surprise, by such a mode of proceeding—it appeared as a stratagem to procure from the House, the condemnation of its own measures of last Session. The address was no more than matter than that in the resolution, which had not been brought into discussion when in Committee—if Hon. Gentlemen who now proposed the address had made their intentions known at that time, the House would have known how to act. He should move that the address be returned to the Committee, with instructions to make it correspond with the resolution.

Mr. Bidwell was happy that the resolution after all was approved by the Hon. Gentleman—as the Committee however of which he was a Member had been accused of stratagem, and a desire to take the House by surprise, he felt called upon to vindicate himself from a charge so seriously made, and which could easily be refuted. The Hon. Member who introduced the subject, had, when giving his opinion, expressed his intention of returning thanks to His Majesty on this occasion. The Despatch relating to the Bills of last Session, had been the subject of consideration before the Committee, who had adopted a resolution. This resolution in the hands of the select Committee was only a brief, and they formed their address in accordance to the wishes of the Committee of the whole. This the address did, and as to its containing a condemnation of former opinions, he would only say that those opinions were a sacrafice made to the necessity of the case at the time—this sacrafice had been made for fear of losing any bill—such had been his own sentiments, and he had stated last year, that although the instructions were not in accordance with his views of the subject, he was satisfied to make some sacrafice, of his own opinion, for the sake of seeing an important question set at rest—now others as well as himself, might rejoice at the opportunity afforded them of expressing their opinions without any such sacrifice.—The voice of the community would go with them in doing so, and they would be thanked for their conduct. The spirit of the address was in accordance with the resolution, and echoed the sense of the people in thanking His Majesty for reserving his Assent to these Bills.

Mr. J. Jones had been several years in the House, but had never seen so incorrect a mode of proceeding sanctioned—he would refer to the experience of the Speaker, whether a special Committee would depart so widely from a resolution referred to them.—What was the resolution referred in this instance to a special Committee, pursuant to which they were instructed to draft an address? It was to thank His Majesty for so favorably regarding the interests of his people in this Province upon their civil and political rights."—Was the Committee by this instructed to introduce any other matter, relating to the Bills of last year, or had the most distant allusion been made to such a subject when in Committee of the whole?—Certainly not—and yet the special Committee had exceeded their instructions, in departing from the Resolution—he hoped the House would reflect, before admitting the propriety of such a proceeding.

Mr. Fothergill thought the Committee had not departed from the Resolutions—and here he would ask the question, supposing the Bills of last Session had received the Royal Assent, would the thanks of the House be given, for that assent.

Mr. Morris—as a question of order, thought the address was irregular, if the House intended to have expressed its thanks, for withholding the Assent, a Resolution to that effect should have been proposed, and if adopted, could have been acted upon, but without this the address he thought was not in accordance with the resolution.

Mr. Gordon agreed in this opinion—that subject however had not been mentioned or discussed at all.

Mr. Perry contended that the address was in accordance with the Resolution—it accorded with the wishes of the people. An Executive bugbear was got up to suppress the expression of public, opinion and he could prove it, but it had failed (name it—from several parts of the House)—he would name it then—the answer to the Durham Address proved it—it held out threats of exclusion against all who should sign Petitions against the Bills of last year.

Mr. Fothergill knew that the people had been told that if they signed such Petitions they would be excluded—it prevented some from signing—but in spite of all 8 out of 9 thousand signed them. This was at the Quarter Sessions—and Henry Ruttan was the person who had told the people so.

Mr. Burnham, had supposed that the Hon. Gent. in spaking of the Qr. Sessions might have alluded to him as he was present at the time. Mr. Ruttan name being mentioned removed this impression.

The motion for returning the address to the Committee, to renew it according to the Resolution was put and lost. .

The address was then read a second time, ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time this day.

[Some matter relating more immediately to the question of the Bill, now before the House, introduced by Mr. Bidwell, for Naturalizing certain' persons, was touched upon by some members, during the above discussion—we have not noted it here, as it will more properly come in place, when the Bill itself is under consideration.]

Eastern Boundary line of the Province—House in Committee, Mr. J. Jones in the Chair.

Mr. Fothergill introduced resolutions—he should not now enter at large upon the subject to which they related, which was highly important—his intention was only to have the resolutions presented to the attention of the House, and members would have an opportunity at another stage of fully expressing their opinions—he would observe that this was no party measure—the responsibility rested entirely with himself, as he had not consulted with any person on the subject—it was one which in his opinion claimed the serious consideration of the House—at the present critical moment, when three Agents from Lower Canada were to proceed to England, on the subject of the late Legislative differences in that Province. The people of Lower Canada he believed were not so much averse to an Union of the Provinces as they formerly were, and public opinion he had very reason to think, had undergone a great change on that question, in this Province, much as it had formerly been against it. The first resolution relating in general terms to the boundaries of countries, being adopted, the Committee rose, reported progress, and obtained leave to set again to-morrow.

[The Resolutions propose an address, praying that Montreal may be included in Upper Canada—or that an Union on the two Provinces may take place—or that all the British North American Colonies may be united, under the Government of a Vice Royalty.]

Bill for division of the London District—reported by the Committee to whom was referred the Petition of inhabitants, on that subject. Read first time and ordered for second reading.

Mr. Beardsley moved, that a Committee be appointed, to inquire into the constitutionality of the arrest, imprisonment, trial, and banishment of Robert Gourlay, from this Province, with power to send for persons and papers, and to report. And that the 32 Rule of the House (requiring one days previous notice of all intended motions) be dispensed with to enable him to make this motion.

It was objected by Messrs, C. Jones, Gordon and J. Jones, that the motion should not be acceded to, the Rule in cases of urgent necessity had been dispensed with, but no such necessity had been shewn on the present occasion—it was taking the House unawares. Mr. Beardsley admitted that he had not given the usual notice from motives of policy, but had thought it better to introduce his motion in this way.

The Motion was Carried.

Mr. J. Jones.—Notice of Bill—for improving the Navigation of the River St. Lawrence.

The Address to His Majesty was read a third time, passed, and signed. And a notice of Mr. Ralph. Messrs. Randal and Hornor were appointed a Committee to draft an address to His Excellency the Lt. Gov., praying that it may be transmitted to the principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, to be presented to His Majesty.

The address to His Excellency, was accordingly reported—read a first and second time, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time this day. On taking the names of Members present—the Speaker declared the House.—Adjourned for want of a Quorum.

Tuesday, 5th February.

Mr. Fothergill, of the Committee to whom was referred the Petition of Thos. T. Orton, and others, praying to hold lands for a Presbyterian Church at Port-Hope,—reported by Bill.

The Bill was read.

Mr. Perry inquired if provision was not already made for this case, in the general Bill, which passed the House a few days since, and which had been sent to the Legislative Council.

Mr. Fothergill replied, that the general provisions of that Bill, if it passed, would apply to the case of the present petitioners, but as they had expressed some doubt whether this would be the case, they had urged him to make this distinct provision for themselves, as affording a greater degree of security.

Mr. Perry should then oppose this measure, as he would never consent to the passing of such private Bills—if the general measure failed it would not be the fault of this House, but the case of the Petitioners was not properly laid for—he would have all stand or fall together.

Mr. Gordon thought that such a course was illiberal towards the Petitioners—their prayer was entitled to the consideration of the House, and in other cases of the same kind such Petitions had been favorably entertained.

Mr. Lefferty should oppose the further progress of the Bill, because if such Petitions were entertained, the table would be loaded with private Bills, and become burthensome to the House.

The Attorney Gen., although he did not consider the present mode of proceeding improper, yet he was of opinion, that before the House acted upon the resolutions they should be perfectly satisfied of the expediency of recommending any change in the present system, in a department of the public service, which was under the more immediate control of the Executive, who had no doubt adopted it on mature consideration, after having received the opinions of practical and experienced persons. Some Hon. Members objected to the slashing required by the settlement duty, but in several parts of the country he had visited, and in most of the new Townships, he was aware that its benefits were acknowledged and felt by the actual settlers, who were more easily enabled to open roads to their farms, and many persons who had before objected to this mode of Slashing, as unnecessary, had admitted their error when they came to settle on Lands themselves—they then found the convenience it afforded them in having openings made in front of adjoining Lands which were unoccupied.

As to the remedy proposed of granting Lands to actual Settlers only, it should be remembered that this was a condition which could not be enforced by the Executive, as the bounty of the Crown, to Loyalists & their children—Military claimants, Militia men and others could not be witheld—in justice to the actual settler however, a middle course was pursued, by which such persons were called upon to perform certain duties which tended to lessen the difficulties experienced by settlers in new Townships, in making Roads to their Lands, and the benefits of this system had he believed been found to be generally advantageous, and had induced the Executive to continue the system. There appeared to be a variance of opinion among Hon. Gent. on the subject—some were for altering the mode of performing the settlement duty, by requiring as he thought, more, than was now exacted, while others considered settlement duty altogether unnecessary—After mature consideration and years of experience, the Executive had continued to require the performance of these duties, finding them no doubt to be attended with beneficial results, and the House before recommending any alteration, ought to be perfectly satisfied that the present system was decidedly wrong. His own opinion from actual observation, and information derived from practical men, was, that it was generally advantageous to the new settlements, and he should therefore vote against the resolutions.

Mr Burnham, was aware of the benefits of slashing and opening the Roads, as it gave great facilities to the actual settlers—but the building a House on an unoccupied lot, he considered as being unnecessary. The two first Resolutions, being adopted, the committee rose, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again.

Mr. Perry, moved that one thousand copies of the address of thanks to His Majesty, for having witheld his assent to the Naturalization Bill, be printed, with the yeas and nays, for the use of members.

Mr. Morris, moved an amendment—That the Resolution with the proposed amendment, on which the address was founded, be also printed, which was carried—and the printing ordered.

Bill for preventing the consumption of Spirituous Liquors in Shops—brought in by Mr. VanKoughnett, read first time, and ordered for second reading.

Mr. Morris—Notice of motions to-morrow, appointment of Committee to inquire into the affairs of late Bank at Kingston—and whether Lotteries in this Province are legal. (Adjourned.)

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1828.

We are yet without any later dates from Europe.

The learned Member from Middlesex, has accused us of having made misrepresentations in our paper on his conduct last Session with respect to the Naturalization Bill. This accusation was made in a most childish and petulant manner, and unfortunately for himself, happens to be incorrect. The inconsistences of that learned Gentleman in the various stages of discussion on this question, have involved him in an inextricable labyrinth, from which he would escape, by endeavoring to palm upon the public, a belief that he has been misrepresented. The public however will best judge of the facts, when we refer them to the remarks made in the U. E. Loyalist, of 10, March 1827, on the Petition then in circulation against the Naturalization Bill. It was against that Bill, that misrepresentation, hoisted itself, and it was one of the complaints made in that Petition, that the Bill "was again placed on the order of the day, and passed without further amendments." In reply to this we stated a simple fact, that the Bill was "again placed on the order of the day," after it was lost by the Hon. Speakers casting vote, on a motion made by the learned member from Middlesex. Our remarks were as follows.

"Yet he, notwithstanding his detestation of it, looked down upon it in pity and forgiveness—and knowing that it would be effectual for the preservation of the rights and privileges of the people, which were about to be jeopardized for the sake of his consistency, extended the hand of friendship to it—raised it from its prostrate condition, and by his motion, again cherished it into life, and as the Petition says, it was "again placed on the order of the day, and finally passed without further amendment."

This we suppose is what the learned Gentleman calls misrepresentation. What says the Journals of the House of Assembly?—On the question being put on 29, Janv. 1827, for passing the Bill, there were Year 19—Nays 19,—&" the question was decided in the negative by the casting vote of the Speaker, and lost accordingly."—Then follows.—" Mr. Rolph, seconded by Mr. Boswell, moves that the Naturalization Bill be now put on the order of the day, and that the 32, Rule of this House, be dispensed with for that purpose.

The question was carried in the affirmative and ordered accordingly, Year 20—Nays 17.

We would now ask, on whose motion it was that the Naturalization Bill of last Session, was "again placed on the order of the day? We would ask whether, in saying that it was on the learned Gentlemans motion, we can be justly charged with misrepresentation! We would ask to whom the charge more properly attaches itself.

But the complaint made against us, is that misrepresentation was used in not stating, that the learned Gentleman afterwards, moved, that the Bill should be referred to a select Committee, to be composed of "Messrs. Baby, Peterson, Wilkinson and McBride."

To charge a person with misrepresenting a thing, which he never represented in any manner, is truly absurd, and adds another to the catalogue of his consistencies. It may be replied however, that it was intended as a concealment—but in now stating it, we have no objection, that all the advantage which can be derived from so flimsy a defence, should be allowed its full force—and when it is now stated, we will again ask whether we can justly be charged with misrepresentation in having said, that the Naturalization Bill was "again placed on the order of the day" on the motion of the learned Gentleman. It is an undeniable fact.

The learned gentleman adds to the complaint of misrepresentation, by saying, this his motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee, was thwarted, that he was deserted, and thrown upon his back by those who should have supported him. With this impeachment of the conduct of other persons we have nothing to do—they have answered for themselves, by saying that they did not consider themselves pledged, to give their support to the motion, because it happened to suit the views of the learned Gentleman—they voted as a conscientious discharge of duty dictated, and we have no hesitation in saying, that the reply was such as was called for. This explanation we consider sufficient to repel the charge of misrepresentation, which has been made against us.

Naturalization Bill.—This Bill, which was introduced by Mr. Bidwell, passed the House of Assembly on Thursday, and has been sent to the Legislative Council. Some amendments and alterations were made in it, during its progress through the House. Of these we shall speak hereafter.

While the subject of the trespass on the Colonial Advocate Office, was to be decided by the Laws of the land, we abstained from offering any remarks on the affair. On one occasion only, before the trial took place did we say any thing about it, and then solely for the purpose of correcting the injust and unfounded representations which were made, with a view no doubt to prejudice public opinion, by statements calculated to induce a belief, that the trespass, was countenanced, and supported by official connivance. After the Jury had returned their verdict, we were the first to communicate the amount of damages they had awarded. The complaint of an individual, having met with redress from the Laws, we supposed that here the matter would end, but the Editor of the Advocate, has thought proper from time to time, to make it the subject of renewed complaints, and his columns have lately been occupied with Statements which evidently shew that prosecution, has not satisfied him, but that persecution is also his object. That persecution is attempted to be directed more particularly against one individual, and without offering any further remark ourselves, we beg leave to direct the attention of our readers, to the "Statement of facts," which we have commenced publishing in this number, relating to the Trespass. It will be continued to its close in succeeding numbers, and the public will be able to form an opinion, how far the trespass, if it cannot be legally justified, may, nevertheless, be considered as por-sessing many circumstances of mitigation, and be enabled to draw a tolerably correct opinion of the motives by which the Editor of the Advocate is influenced, in thus following up, by a system of continued persecution, the persons concerned in that hasty and inconsiderate act.

Under the head of "things in general" the Colonial Advocate, speaks of the Alien Question, and calls it the "grand humbug", intimating that the real business of the Session is neglected. The Advocate has lately been employed, in printing Reports of the Central Committee, on the Alien Question.—The Committee have called upon the public, for £100, "balance due," over and above subscriptions already collected.—The Parliament is Petitioned to pay Mr. Randall £500 more—the Members of our Assembly are calling it an important question—but the Colonial Advocate calls it a "grand Humbug"—that is, we suppose, the Report of the "Central Committee"—the "balance due", and the "£500 to Mr. Randall"—is all "humbug." Really the Colonial Advocate, has humbugged the public almost long enough we should think—his inconsistencies are becoming more and more apparent every day, and the people if they do not see him in his proper character, it must be, because they shut their eyes against the light. He is now playing off a "grand humbug", among the free and independent Electors of the County of York, with a view to get a seat in Parliament.—We recommend them to be on their guard—he will hum, one them if he can, and then laugh at them in his sleeve. We should think however that Candidates must be scarce indeed, before they will suffer themselves to be imposed upon by the jargon of this "grand humbug."

At a Meeting of the Electors of the Town of York, friends of Mr. Robinson, the following Address was proposed and unanimously adopted :—

To JOHN BEVERLY ROBINSON, Esq.

We the undersigned Electors of the Town of York, having noticed the proceedings of a Meeting held in this place for the purpose of nominating a fit person to represent this Town at the next Election, and having anxiously hoped for some time past, that you would express to your numerous friends your determination to offer the continuance of your services to them as their Representative in the next Parliament, cannot allow a further period to elapse without assuring you of the perfect satisfaction we have felt in contemplating your political career.

Your talents and private worth, your known loyalty to our King and reverence for our happy Constitution, afford us convincing proofs of a continuance of that conduct as our Representative, which has hitherto merited our approbation.

We are satisfied that your situation as an Officer of the Executive Government, is not incompatible with the honest discharge of your duties to us in the Parliament—for we believe that the wishes of the Executive Government, under the present administration, and the welfare of the people are inseparable; but we are convinced that should a corrupt and oppressive Government ever be unfortunately placed over us, your public virtue would lead you to be the first to raise your voice, and direct your energies for the Public good.

With these feelings (which we believe to be those of a great majority of the Electors of this Town) we request that you will allow us to place you again in the situation of our Representative in the ensuing Parliament.

York, February 7th. 1828.

GENTLEMEN,

I am most grateful for the kindness which has prompted you to address me; and I beg you to believe that the sentiments which you declare yourselves to entertain towards the Government which I serve, and which it is our common duty to support and to respect, are to me gratifying to me than the language of friendship which you have applied to my character and conduct.

I shall have great pleasure, Gentlemen, in announcing immediately to the Electors of the Town, my intention to offer myself as a Candidate for the honor of representing them in the next Parliament, and allow me to add that your exertions, and the exertions of all others of my townsmen in connecting any opposition that may be offered, will ever be felt and acknowledged by me as the most gratifying proofs of confidence and kindness.

I am,
Gentlemen,
Your very faithful Servant,

COLONIAL.

SAINT JOHN, January 8.

On Friday last, as His Excellency Sir Howard Douglas was walking in his garden, at the present Government House, in Fredericton, he accidentally stepped upon some glare ice, slipped and fell, by which we are sorry to say his right wrist was dislocated, and his face much cut; he also received a severe contusion on his head. His wrist was immediately set, and we are happy to learn from the report on Saturday, that no symptoms appeared of any serious effect arising from the contusion on his head, which was to be apprehended from his present state of health, being at the time, only in a convalescent state, after his severe illness.—STAR.

SURGEON, DENTIST. DOCTOR DAVIDSON, begs leave to inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of York, that he has taken a room at Mrs. Stebbins', a few doors East of the Post-Office, where he will remain for a short time.—Any application he may have in the line of his profession he pledges himself to attend with promptitude.—His hours of attendance will be from 10 o'clock, A. COMMISSARIAT OFFICE,
Kingston, Jan. 10th, 1828. 87-5w.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY OF SIMCOE.

Gentlemen,

As you will at the next General Election have the privilege of choosing a Member to represent your County in Parliament, I have determined to offer myself as a Candidate for your suffrages.

I am personally known to most of you, and should you think proper to intrust me with so responsible an office, my constant endeavour will be, by a faithful discharge of its important duties, to merit the confidence reposed in me.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your Obd't. Servant.
W. B. ROBINSON.

Newmarket, 1st Feb. 1828.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term: but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

JOSEPH WELLS,
Bursar, King's College.

No. 9. 1. f. C. E. C

In Council 21st November, 1825.

FOR the information of persons arriving in Upper Canada as settlers, the following Summary of the Rules which His Majesty's Government has thought fit to lay down for the future Regulation of Grants of Land in the Province, in conformity to the system which has been recently adopted with respect to other Colonies of His Majesty, has been prepared in conformity to Instructions from Earl Bathurst.

1. A valuation will be forthwith made of the lands throughout the Colony, and average prices will be struck for each District.

2 All the lands in the Colony not hitherto granted, and appropriated for public purposes, will be offerd for sale at the average prices thus fixed.

3 All persons proposing to purchase lands must transmit a written application to the Government through the Office of the Surveyor General, in a certain prescribed form, which will be delivered to the party applying, by the Surveyor General, or by an officer to be appointed by him for that purpose, in the several Districts on payment of a fee of 2s. 6d.

4 All correspondence with the Government respecting Grants of Land must take place through the same Office.

5 The purchase money is to be paid by four quarterly, or five annual instalments as the party applying may desire, but in the latter case legal interest shall be charged, and shall be payable annually from the time of making the agreement—A discount of Ten per Cent will be allowed for ready money payments.

6 On payment of the money a grant will be made in fee simple to the purchaser at the expense of the Crown, with the usual reservations of Mines and Minerals, and of White Pine Timber.

7. The largest quantity of Land which will be sold to any Individual, is 10,000 Acres, and when put up to sale, it will be offered in such tracts, not less than 100 Acres, as may be directed. Persons wishing more extensive purchases must apply, in writing, through the Lieutenant Governor in Council, to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, with full explanations of their objects and means.

8. Lands may also be obtained without purchase, but upon different conditions.

9. Persons desirous to acquire Lands without purchasing will make their application to the Government, in writing through the Surveyor General's Office, in a prescribed form, Copies of which will be furnished by the Surveyor General upon payment of 2s. 6d.

10. The largest grant that will be made without purchase is 1200 Acres, the smallest 100 Acres.

11. 12. A quit rent of £5 per cent per annum upon the estimated value, will be fixed upon the Land granted without purchase.

13. The quit rent will be redeemable within the first 25 years next following the grant, on payment of a sum equal to twenty times the annual amount of it.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25p. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Ket les, &c.—and at 27s. 6d per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly—They are offered for sale at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Fourthly—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, has also expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, dealers of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in price in favor of the Marmora Iron Works, above which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

THE U. E. LOYALIST.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1828. NO. 60.

Statement of Facts, relating to the trespass, on the Printing Press, in the possession of Mr. William Lyon M'Kenzie, in June 1826. Addressed to the public generally, and particularly to the subscribers and supporters of the Colonial Advocate.

STATEMENT &c.

Within the last few weeks the columns of certain newspapers printed in this Town have been filled with statements contrived with much meanness and malignity, to inflame and abuse the Public mind with respect to a transaction in which I am stated, and not untruly, to have acted a prominent part. I have thought several times before, that an explanation to my fellow subjects of all that can be truly stated upon the subject of Mr. M'Kenzie, and his infamous press, was due, in justice to myself, and to others—and now, upon the occasion of the mean and deliberate revival of statements, formerly made, with a full knowledge of their falsehood, I will discharge, candidly, at all events, a duty which I think I owe to society—and I shall do it in as few words, and as plainly as I can.

I will appeal to such of you as have, like myself, been born and brought up in Upper Canada, to remember, that until within these few years, our society was happily undisturbed, and undisgraced, by those unfeeling and unprincipled attacks upon the characters and reputations of individuals and families, and by those gross and vulgar personalities which have, for some time past, been a blot upon the Province—I say a blot upon the Province because it must appear very evident to our fellow subjects in other Countries, that unless such calumniators found some support from others they could not continue their scandalous trade; and no one can expect but that in the eyes of all reflecting men, those who abet such a nuisance to society, must appear as culpable as those who derive their bread from it. I do not say that we had not formerly some newspapers in which, for political purposes, and perhaps also in the hope of making a profit by the slander, Public men were spoken of in their Public capacity, and the various authorities of the Province attacked with rancor and injustice. Indeed we all known this was the case, and that with respect to the Printer of one paper, he went to such unwarrantable lengths in conduct of this kind, that he was convicted and sentenced, for a seditious libel, to a very ignominious punishment, from which he was saved by the lenity of those against whom it had been his whole employment, to endeavour to raise the hatred and indignation of the Country. But then let it be remembered, that although the Editors of these former Journals transgressed the laws, and became justly liable to punishment, it was against Public Measures and Public Men that their efforts, however base and unprincipled, were directed.

A few years ago Mr. M'Kenzie came to this country a perfect stranger, and in the employment of a respectable man, who has since become a worthy and useful member of our society—and how long before or after I do not know, but probably somewhere about the same time, Mr. Francis Collings, the present Editor of the Freeman, came here from another part of the United Kingdom, equally a stranger to us all, and was of course, like other strangers, at liberty to gain among us, without hindrance, an honest livelihood by any lawful course. We saw both these persons for several years in this Town—the former apparently earning his support by attending the shop of his employer—the latter following his occupation of Journeyman Printer in the Gazette Office. Why they did not continue in these employments no one has any business to inquire—it is enough to know, that no one of all those whom they now spend their time in slandering could have had any inducement to injure them in their several callings, and that no one did. They saw us living as people do in other societies, happily and harmoniously. We had done so for a long series of years before they came among us. During that time some of our most respected inhabitants had gone to their graves in peace—and the feelings of their relations had never been harrowed by brutal and inhuman attacks, which the dead cannot repel—Many of our Townswomen—aged and respectable mothers of families, had arrived at the verge of life, without having been distressed and insulted by having their names handled about, with the coarsest abuse, in the columns of newspapers—Many of our Townsmen had here, as in all other countries, risen to independence and to respectability in character and circumstances, by their own exertions, without having drawn upon them, by their prosperity, the envy of malignant spirits—without having their wives and mothers, their daughters and sisters, and even their grand-mothers, insulted and spoken of, with coarse and unfeeling insolence, in newspapers industriously circulated through out the province; for no offence of theirs, for no provocation they had given—in short, for no other reason, and upon no other pretext, than that their relatives happened to fill those respectable stations which some persons must fill in all civilized societies—but which are always objects of envy to the mean and the vicious.

It was, I think, some time in the year 1824, that Mr. M'Kenzie set up a paper called the "Colonial Advocate," in the District of Niagara.—The principal object professed was to advocate the commercial and Agricultural interests of the Province—but it very soon became evident, that the conductor of the paper was determined to try whether there was not in this colony an appetite for calumny, which he might turn to good account, and which he might gratify with less trouble to himself, and less exertion of intellect than would be required for more honest purposes; for, indeed, it had been proved very clearly to the people of Upper Canada, that when a newspaper once brought himself to lay aside all regard to decency and truth, nothing is easier than for him to fill the columns of a newspaper, once a week, with false and slanderous stories.

Mr. M'Kenzie, accordingly, even while he kept his Press at Niagara, commenced an attack upon a few persons, most prominent, or supposed by him to be so, in public affairs, and commenced it in a style which had been almost without precedent in this Country before, and which I am sure very many people will remember excited their surprise at first, though some of them may now have become rather callous.

After a considerable time, the Editor of the Colonial Advocate removed his Press to York, and I am not sure, that he did not for a while attempt to establish it at the head of the Lake—ultimately, however, he fixed himself at York, and published here a Paper under the original title of "Colonial Advocate," at very irregular intervals.

I never subscribed to his Paper, but frequently saw it in the hands of those who did—and probably as often in the hands of those to whom he sent it without its besubscribed for, as indeed he did for some short period to myself; for it is very well known, that, in order to force himself if possible into notice, he was in the habit of sending his paper to a multitude of persons who did not subscribe, and thus, those whom he chose to select as objects of his slander had to complain of it as an additional injury, that that slander was gratuitously circulated, and most unbidden to Taverns and other places, to meet the eyes of the people of the Country in every quarter, whether they desired it or not.

For the months, or rather the years, during which the Colonial Advocate was published in this irregular manner, it was distinguished beyond all other Papers that ever had preceded it, for the rancorous and insolent language in which it attacked the Government, the Members of the Legislature, and some of the highest Officers of the Colony.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Wednesday, 6th Feb'y.

Petitions read and referred.

Civil Rights Bill—House in Committee—Mr. Hornor in the Chair.

Mr. Bidwell considered any elaborate explanation of the Bill unnecessary, after the ample discussion which the subject had undergone last year, and he hoped that a general desire would be evinced now, by every Hon. Member, to avoid every thing like offence. The principles of the Bill, were well understood, as every Member had been in possession of a printed Copy of it, and would therefore be able to judge how far its provisions were just and reasonable, and the effect they would have in tranquilizing the minds of the people.—The Bill was drawn up agreeable to the present liberal views of His Majesty's Government—the Preamble was designedly short, in order to avoid giving offence to individuals, while at the same time it did not compromise opinions which had formerly been expressed—the first clause according to the instructions admitted certain persons to the privileges of English Birth, without any restrictions—other clauses applied to those who had come into the Province since 1820, and from these the Oath and a Registry was required, to be entered with the County Registers,—the Oath was required to be administered to all persons of the age of 16 years—and such persons of the first description as thought proper might have their names entered in the Register—the restrictions of the Bill were very similar to those of last year, and required no comment.—He moved the adoption of the Preamble.

The Attorney General had on former occasions fully explained his opinion on the subject, and when it was first brought before the attention of the Legislature in a former Session, he had expressed his conviction that it was not then in the power of this Legislature, to apply a remedy—he at that time, proposed certain Resolutions, and an address, in order that the matter might be effectually disposed of by the Imperial Parliament—this course was however objected to, and it was said that any Legislative interference was unnecessary, and would be degrading the people—Hon. Members had however changed their minds, and every Hon. and Gent. present, the subject has been in discussion—of what had been done last year, it was unnecessary for him to say any thing, and on this occasion, he should only think it necessary to offer some remarks, satisfied as he was from what had already taken place, that the intentions of Hon. Members, who from the most conscientious motives, had endeavored to render the measure as perfect as possible to secure the rights of the persons interested in the most effectual manner, were liable to misrepresentation—he should not throw any obstacles in the way of the present Bill—each of he clauses as he approved of he should vote for, and from others he should withhold his approbation.

Mr. J. Jones had given his vote for the Bill of last Session from a sincere conviction of its necessity, and might be induced to vote for this in order to settle the question—at present he should vote for the Preamble, although he considered it in some respects exceptionable—but as it contained in substance a truism, he should support it, in whom the Bill was amended he might vote for it in the bulk, not because he thought it would place the people in a better, or so good a situation as that of last year, but because as he before said he desired to see the question set at rest—he was aware that much misrepresentation had been used, with respect to the Registry in the Bill of last Session—he then thought it necessary, and his opinion of its usefulness to those concerned was not changed—if any question should hereafter arise respecting property, the Bill of last year would have afforded an easy mode of proof in every possible case,—under the present Bill nine more testimony only could be allowed, which in many cases it might be difficult to procure. The people if left to their own judgment he had no doubt would generally have been in favor of the Bill, and that it would have met with their good wishes.—On a former occasion a Bill sent to this House from the Legislative Council, which with a few trifling amendments, would have conferred all the benefits required, without any other restrictions than a seven years residence, had been objected to, and after years of discussion, the measure remained unsettled—anxious as he was that it should be set at rest, he should vote for the Preamble, and with some amendments give his assent to the several clauses of the Bill.

Mr. C. Jones was equally desirous to settle as important a question, but although many clauses of this Bill were similar to those of last year, its general expressions with respect to the persons interested, were of so doubtful and uncertain a nature, that he could not give his assent to them—time would satisfy the people, which of the two Bills would best have answered the purpose for effectually securing their rights and properties, and from the responsibility of having carried such a Bill as this through, would rest on the proper persons, which he felt satisfied would be found in many respects inadequate to the end and not to answer the desired object. If the want of a Registry was admitted in the one case, why was it not equally necessary in the other, and why should those who came into the Province before 1820, be in a state of uncertainty under the general expressions of the Bill, while those who came here after that period, were placed in a comparatively better situation—with respect to the former, it might for example be urged as an objection at some future time, that they had not taken the Oath of Allegiance, before a duly qualified person, in the terms of the Bill—and other questions affecting property might arise which under such general expressions, might involve their rights in difficulty and uncertainty—this was avoided by the Bill of last year, which placed in the possession of every person undeniable proof for the confirmation of their rights.—His wish was, to secure these, not in a loose manner, but in a manner duly qualified, in the terms of the Bill—and other questions affecting property might arise which under such general expressions, might involve their rights in difficulty and uncertainty—this was avoided by the Bill of last year, which placed in the possession of every person undeniable proof for the confirmation of their rights.—His wish was, to secure these, not in a loose manner, but in a manner duly qualified, in the terms of the Bill, which he thought was wrong.

Mr. Perry, in reply to the question which had been asked why the Registry in one case, was done away with in the Bill, would inform the Hon. Gentleman, that it was very properly omitted, because it unjustly afforded violence to the consciences of the people, in swearing as they did that they were of British Subjects, which they believed themselves to be. He was fully prepared to vote for the Bill, satisfied as he was that it would settle the question for ever, and restore tranquility to the people—if no alarm would be excited, and no Petitions could be got up against it, as was the case with the Bill of last year.

Mr. Wilson said that bog bears were bold out by some Hon. Members against the Bill—this measure had originated during the last Parliament, by a Gentleman who then held a seat in the House—fully approved of by His Majesty's Government he was satisfied was always intended as just, good and proper—but as soon as the question was started here, he was suspicious that there was something intended against the freedom of the people, and the right of election—these people were invited here from the United States, and at first had received 1200 Acres of Land, while natural Subjects could get but 200—It was the fault of the Executive that this error had been allowed to go on—it was their neglect in inviting people from the United States to come here—however, he was convinced that Great Britain would protect them, and had come upon such invitations, they had British blood in them, were friends of Britain, and had become naturalized—to prevent the attempt at violation of their rights, had been like fire under ground, till lately, when it was boldly made, to disfranchise them, and leave the country to the mercy of Specpeople from their slumber, but they had at last been roused to save their liberties—their complaints were now heard, and he would say make a Bill that would render them happy—this Bill would do so—it was said that this Bill would be found defective, because the Registry was not required—no such thing—the Bill was very well drawn up, and would answer every purpose, being according to the instructions, which was merciful, kind, and just, to a good and loyal people who had converted the wilderness into fruitful fields—he would pass the Bill at once, and have it sent home, for fear of delay—there was danger of emotion—a general election was coming on, and he would forward the business as much as possible.

Mr. Coltman said he was happy of the opportunity of again expressing his sentiments upon this all important question before the house, particularly so, as some Hon. Members, with himself, who voted for the Naturalization Bill of last year, had been cruelly aspersed and misrepresented to the public—he would in few words state his reasons for voting for the Bill of last Session. It must be recollected by every Hon. Member, that the Hon. and Learned Member for Lenox and Addington, stated, when the Bill was reported by the Committee, of which he was a Member, with no other than the one presented could have been reported by the Committee, in conformity with His Majesty's intentions; and although many of the clauses were highly objectionable to him, and he would not be accountable for the effects they might produce in the Country, still he would vote for it in its present shape rather than no Bill should pass, knowing as he did, that some such Bill was necessary—to this remark, as well as on all other occasions, the Hon. Member paid due attention, and they influenced his vote. His Hon. Colleague proposed an amendment to the Bill, seconded by himself, that all those who resided here during the late war, held situations, or received Grants of Land from the Government, should be declared bona fide Subjects without Registry. Against this salutary provision he was to be extended, that it was contrary to the Royal Instructions, and it fell to the ground: he then proposed, seconded by the Hon. Member from Niagara, that such persons should have the right of Suffrage, that he would be graciously pleased to recommend to His Parliament, that a short Bill should be passed by them, declaring that those who became Subjects under the Provisions of the Bill should be entitled to all the rights and privileges of British Subjects in His Majesty's North American Colonies—satisfied such amendments in the Law would be made as would meet with the approbation of all classes of those people. This was rejected, on the ground that it would be premature. Were he (Mr. C.) asked why he did not then reject the Bill altogether, he would answer, that if so, when he voted the Committee should rise, which was carried, and the Bill then became virtually dead; but it was afterwards restored to the order of the day by the Hon. Member from Middlesex, seconded by the Hon. Member from Lenox and Addington. Had the Bill of last year been introduced by certain Members, instead of its being brought forward by the Attorney General, it would have passed and met with the general approbation of the people, who clamored so loudly against it, and those who would have opposed it would have been declared enemies and traitors to the cause of the people. He hoped that all Bills having a similar tendency to that now during the present Session, be introduced by the Member from Lenox and Addington, or the Learned Member from Middlesex, as they would then, no doubt, pass the Assembly. The Bill of last Session was reprobated by Members in this House who wished to see it pass. The illiberal remarks of a licentious Press misled the people as they had him—he came to the House full of prejudice against the people of the County he had the honor to represent—they would not be imposed upon by false misrepresentations—they had always felt, and do feel and acknowledge the good intentions of His Majesty's Government towards them. He was happy the present instructions had arrived, and were laid before the House—they would meet the views of his Constituents; but he feared the present Bill would not accomplish the desired object, as it contained provisions repugnant to the Imperial Act of 1826, 7 Geo. 4. If the Bill passed the Legislative Council, he hoped it would be accompanied with an Address for the repeal of the Act, and one similar to that proposed by him last Session would answer. He had the interest of those people at heart, some of whom were his near connexions; and would it be supposed for a moment, that he would do any thing injurious to them or their interest? No. The House acted upon the Instructions of last year, as he had already stated would answer for the Bill, grounded upon the present Instructions.

Mr. Bidwell said, it had been stated that the Bill passed in the second Session, was the same in principle as the present one, but this House had not then the power to Legislate upon the subject, it was not in their power to pass any Bill at that time. The Preamble of the present Bill could not give offence to any person. The instructions last year had created alarm in the country, that those now before the House had wisely left the question of Allegiance to be determined by the Law of nations—this was much the better course, as it ought not to be entangled with Municipal Laws which might embarrass negotiations between the two Countries, —certain questions were now pending between Great Britain and the United States in which this point was involved, and it had properly been determined that it should form no part of the present measure, because it would be awkward if the U. States should have it in their power to turn round upon Great Britain and say, you deny a principle in negotiations, which you, by admitted in Colonial Legislation yourselves—We had no doubt been foreseen, and it was very prudently left as a national question between the two Governments.

Mr. Morris had not before expressed an opinion on this question—he felt it necessary to do so now, and to state the reasons for the vote he should give —he had opposed the declaratory Law, because it declared that to be true which was not true, and applied to persons, who did not wish to be included in its provisions. The Bill of last year had met his wishes, and he had voted for it, supposing that it could not be objected to by any loyal subject.— Aliens who were warmly attached to our Government would not refuse to comply with the terms of Naturalization which it provided—he however could not separate the chaff from the wheat, and could not vote for this Bill in its present shape, because persons who had left the Province in the time of danger and trial, could return, and enjoy the same privileges as those, who had shewn themselves good and Loyal Subjects—he would bow with deference to the instructions of His Majesty's Government, but his assent would have been more heartily given if a Registry was required, to ascertain who had behaved well to the Country, when their services were required.

The inhabitants of the Province had always duly appreciated the intentions of His Majesty's Government, and if the honest peasantry had been left to their own opinions they would have received the Bill of last year with cheerfulness. In his own District (Bathurst) there were not more than two or three persons who would be affected by this measure—they were highly respectable people, and considered that Bill necessary.—He would not however put it in the power of Cowards to shelter under their aid was required, to have the benefits of the measure—he concluded by saying that if misrepresentations had not been used, he was convinced the people would have been satisfied with the Bill passed last year.

Mr. Gordon thought the Bill in some respects exceptionable, as its provisions were of that sweeping character, to include persons who were not British Subjects—the Bill of last year in his opinion, was better calculated to meet the desired object, and provide for the security of those concerned—much clamour had been raised against the Bill, and representations had been resorted to—the people if left to their own judgments, would have concurred in it—this he was perfectly satisfied of and he would not bow to any opinion, contrary to a sense of duty.

Mr. Perry denied that any misrepresentations had been made with respect to the Bill—when the Bill was under discussion last year in this House, petitions were presented from York, where the people had an opportunity of attending at the Bar of the House, and hearing all that was stated—yet they had expressed their dissatisfaction, and by Petition prayed the Bill might be rejected.

The Attorney General said that the Gentleman was mistaken in saying that there had not been misrepresentation; that misrepresentation had commenced at York, and that no person who was there at, as those who attended at the Bar had an opportunity of knowing what was done on both sides of the question.—Could it be denied that misrepresentation had been made, when it was known to every Hon. Member that two of the public presses, were even at this moment disputing, to which the credit belonged for having excited all the clamour, those very presses which were so encouraged by this House and who had misrepresented in the most unjustifiable manner the conduct of Honorable Gentlemen on this question. The petitions against the Bill had been signed by many of these persons, and circulated through the country, containing the most unfounded falsehoods —the number of signers was said to be 4000 and he would explain how it was made up—the signatures had been obtained, by representations at variance with fact. As one instance of the unfounded assertions in the Petition it stated, that after the House had risen, when it was known to every week, and the Bill was finally lost by the casting vote of the Speaker, it was notwithstanding restored to the order of the day, and finally passed without amendment, when the amendments had been drawn from this was, that after the Bill had been lost, it was again restored to the order of the day, by its former advocates, who had persisted in urging it through, in defiance of the wishes and interest of its opponents, and that by their endeavor it finally passed—now what was really the fact? on referring to the Journals, it would be seen that it was on Mr. Rolph's motion seconded by Mr. Bidwell that it was restored to the order of the day, and that the persons who had formerly supported it had opposed this motion, which however was carried against them, and yet these persons, were represented as being deceived by a misrepresentation of the people of their rights and privileges—another complaint was, that the Petitioners would be deprived of the use of the Rideau Canal with many other similar statements, which he (Mr. A. G.) could satisfactorily misrepresented, and yet the persons whose names were signed to the Petitions were no doubt deceived, by supposing that they were signing to the truth, to save them from being deprived of their rights when there was not the slightest intention to do so. He observed that in the present Bill there was a wide departure from the instructions, and it would be for the Committee to determine how far such a deviation was necessary or proper—two subjects were embraced in one Bill which the Despatch, most distinctly recommended should be kept separate—the Bill for construction of registry complained of last year, he thought would affect the feelings of many persons from whom it was required by this Bill, as much as the other class from whom it was exacted last year, the feelings of the one were as much entitled to consideration as the other, and the Registry had not been intended to give offence to any,—he had never so intended it, and had never thought of such a measure himself, until it was recommended by H. M. Government. The Resolutions he had proposed on a former occasion were intended to submit the question to the Imperial Parliament, in order that they might dispose of it—this appeared to him at the time, to be the proper course to be pursued, but it was objected to, on the ground that no Legislative interference was necessary.

With respect to the doctrine of allegiance, the Learned Gentleman, (Mr. Sherwood) in a new disposed to give credit to H. M. Government, as having acted wisely in leaving it to be determined by law of nations—last year however he had made a different opinion, he then considered that the doctrine of double Allegiance—the Bill of last year containing a clause, whereby all other allegiance was implied to be renounced, did not affect the Law on the question, and was only inserted that the people might be aware of what was implied on their taking the oath of allegiance. If His M. Government felt that the general question being now before countries might be embarrassed in any manner by such a provision, he could have no objection to leave it out of the Bill.—The law of nations would determine the point quite as fully, as could be done by such a clause. It was well known that the doctrine of allegiance in the U. States, was entirely different from that which was maintained in Great Britain—the former country considered allegiance as dissolved, and the free, dual doctrine of Allegiance,—its subjects were no longer bound than suited their own convenience, and were at liberty to remove from the country, which could no longer command their obedience—and yet it was said their violence was offered to the conscience of these people, when they were told in the Bill, that on their taking the Oath of Allegiance to Great Britain, a renunciation of all foreign allegiance was implied in that oath. If however it was supposed that it would tend to entangle the question with any difficulties between the two Governments he had no objection to yield the clause, which related to allegiance, leaving it to be determined by the Law of nations. The determination of Great Britain under that Law was clear and explicit, as she claimed a perpetual allegiance In 1818 that the present question was by her agitated, in the House of Assembly, when certain Resolutions were passed, expressing doubts as to the legal rights of the persons, for whom a remedy was now desired. The Resolutions had not however the first to question these rights, but had ultimately left themselves called upon in justice to those whose interests were liable to be questioned by the Resolutions which had declared that the House of Assembly, to interfere for their protection, and to set those doubts at rest—it had as he before stated been proposed by himself to refer the subject to the Royal Parliament, but it was refused, and he was told that it would be considered an insult, as they were Subjects already, and that consequently any interference, or appeal to the Imperial Parliament, to know that clear act upon them was unnecessary—from year to year however the question had occupied the attention of this Legislature, and in the second Session of this Parliament a Bill was sent down from the Legislative Council, declaring no restrictions whatever—but a violent clamor was raised against it,—on that occasion he had expressed his opinion, that strictly speaking we had no power to Legislate upon the subject, but as H. M. Government, had expressed their willingness to adopt such measures as should be considered necessary for the security of the people, and consequently as the best course to be pursued at the time, to secure all titles to property, which could be legally done by this Legislature, and confiding in the assurances of H. M. Government to attend to them as address, praying for the confirmation of all other rights, he was also desirous should been attended to—this mode was also refused, and the declaratory law was passed, but not assented to by the Legislative Council—he had already expressed his opinion on the Bill, which had been passed last year, and with the exception of the clause relating to Allegiance, his opinion remained unchanged, that it was the best that could be passed, he considered it sufficiently explicit on that point.

Mr. Clark had given his support to the Bill of last year from a conviction of its necessity, and he was still of opinion that it was more guarded and would have answered the desired object, better than the one now under consideration, which however with an anxious desire to settle the question he should vote for. That misrepresentation had gone abroad, no one could deny, and the people had been led to believe that the Parliament had passed a Bill to make them all Aliens—his own conduct had been most cruelly misrepresented, but assertions of having discharged his duty, he did not fear the consequences.

Mr. Rolph would not reply at this time to the objections which were urged against the Bill, but as misrepresentation had been spoken of, he would take this opportunity of stating that the most unfair statements had been made against himself—the most malicious misrepresentations had been made against him, and that in the Government papers, and it would be unlike well to the language it derived. Last year it had been thrown at the him and those who voted with him, in the most insulting manner, that after the Bill had been restored to the order of the day, no amendments were offered, and that others had voted for the Bill because no better measure was proposed to them.—The Bill of last year after being negatived by the casting vote of the Speaker was certainly restored to the order of the day on his motion seconded by Mr. Bidwell, but it would have been more candid to have stated what he had afterwards proposed, that the Bill should be referred to a select committee, for which purpose he had made a motion, but no sooner had he made it, than he was deserted by those whose support he expected, and being thus thrown upon his back, and foiled in his attempts to amend the Bill, it was again referred to a Committee of the whole House, and finally passed—he made this statement that the whole matter might go the country.

Mr. Clark, said that some of the remarks of the learned Gentleman appearing to be intended for him, he would only say in reply, that he never made any pledge to that learned Gentleman, or any other member, to support such a measure.

Mr. Cole—thought that the object of the learned Gentleman, in referring the Bill to a select Committee, was intended to deprive the Attorney General of the merit of having introduced the Bill.

Mr. McBride had voted for the Bill of last year because he thought it a good one—he should vote for this because he considered it better.

Mr. VanKoughnet should vote against the Bill, because it conferred privileges without distinction on all, and those who had left the country during the war would be equally entitled to its benefits—those who were truly loyal would have no objections, to the Bill of last year,—the present Bill besides was not framed according to the instructions, which would never have been seen, if misrepresentations had not been made against the Bill of last year.

After some amendments and alterations had been made in the Bill, it was reported, and ordered for a third reading.

Mr. Scollick reported on the Petition of Dan. Erb and others by Bill—read 1st time and ordered for second reading.—Adjourned.

Naturalization (on Civil Rights) Bill—Third Reading.

Mr. J. Jones should proposed the recommitment of the Bill before it passed in order that that part of the Bill to which he objected was expunged, in Committee, might be again restored.

(Expunged referred to by Mr. Jones marked in Italics.)

And be it further enacted &c. that nothing in this Act contained, shall be taken to repeal or in any manner alter or affect any statute passed by the Legislature of this province, respecting the elective franchise, or the eligibility of members to serve in the said Assembly, or in any manner to affect or interfere with a certain Act of the Parliament of Great Britain, passed in the 59th year of his late Majesty's reign entitled "an Act to declare certain persons therein described aliens, and to vest their estates in his Majesty," or any part thereof.—Adjourned.

Friday, 8th Feb'y.

The Port Hope Harbor Committee, presented their report—in favor of the measure.

On motion of Mr. Rolph, the Hon. House resolved itself itself into a Committee of the whole, on His Excellency's reply to the Address presented yesterday.

Mr Rolph said that the subject now under consideration should be discussed in a dispassionate manner, even if it should be felt that some cause of provocation existed—he should endeavor to abstain from the intemperate language, unless driven to it, by those who would think it wise to adopt exciting it, and then raising an outcry for the retaliation. The House was forced into this unpleasant discussion—because it had felt itself called upon to thank His Majesty for the most unconstitutional exercise of His Royal Prerogative, in having withheld his Assent from the Naturalization Bill of last Session. Gratitude called for this expression of thanks from the House, and the Address might have been forwarded through any other channel, but as matter of courtesy, it had been thought proper by an address to His Excellency, to request that he would be pleased to forward it to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to be presented to His Majesty. The House in doing this had simply requested the performance of a ministerial act,—a duty which the ex-gency of any opinion, but when it had been presented with the request to His Excellency, he had been pleased to say that not only should he transmit the Address to His Majesty, but should deem it necessary to the House, that the Petition of the people, contained charges against the Government, and that a vindication should accompany the Address. The reply also contained charges against this Assembly.—These as well as the statements complained of in the Petition whether true of false did not apply to the question. It would have been enough if His Excellency had simply informed the House, that he should comply with their request, by forwarding the Address to His Majesty.—The reply charged the House with new, warmly approving the instructions and concurring in sentiments that this had not been the feeling on former occasions, and its proceedings on those occasions, were called a refusal to pass any measure in whatever shape proposed to be sent home to pass the declaratory Law.—From this it would be supposed that the measure had been submitted in various shapes, which was not the case. This deviation from the address of the House was excessively unjust, because in that Address nothing could be found to warrant it—it was the more wanton, as the advisers of His Excellency, would not gain their ends, by making such charges of misconduct against this House. It became the House in its own vindication and that of the country to repel the charges made against it. It was not the first instance in which this House had been reprimanded,—without taking any notice of it—they had abstained for the purpose of preserving tranquility. On opening the present Session we were told that His Excellency derived satisfaction, from the harmony which existed, and if he was sincere, why should it be the first to throw an insult upon us. The House had been courteous in its proceedings, and it now became necessary, more than ever, to assert its constitutional dignity to repel the charges made against it. The address to His Majesty he had no doubt would be received, as a tribute of gratitude, from the constitutional people, and should the House allow the gall of bitterness to be mixed with it, by representations which it is told will accompany it, charging as with misconduct two or three years ago—if these unjust representations are allowed to go home, without an explanation on our parts, knowing that they are to be sent, our silence would be set down as acknowledged guilt. Having a standing in the Government, the House should endeavour to preserve its character, and constitutional weight, if this was not done what would become of it The reply of His Excellency says that the Petitions referred to in the Despatch from Lord Goderich contain false representations—this has nothing to do with the conduct of the House, and although the Government might take this ground, if it could be considered to correct those false statements, yet the reply had gone back to years that were past, thereby travelling out of the subject of the address to His Excellency. That part of the Petition he should not now speak of, because that Petition spoke for itself. (Here the learned Gentleman read the Petition against the Naturalization Bill of last Session, which contained the names of 4000 persons.)—[Note by the Editor.—It struck us being remarkable, that in this debate in which frequent reference to this Petition was made, that the number of signers to it, was represented at 4000 and 5000, and although no Hon. Member spoke of this as being the correct number, yet no one seemed prepared to say that the number of signers exceeded that amount. From the official return, which we have before us, the bearer of it to England, it may be inferred that not more than 4,000 persons actually signed it—if it had been otherwise, we should suppose, that he would have stated the number to be greater than 4000, because it will be recollected that while the Petition was in circulation here, it was stated at one time that the signatures amounted to 10,000.—If that state ment was made, those who knew best, did not take the pains to contradict it.]

Such continued the Honble. and learned Gentleman, is the Petition—drawn up in the moment of alarm, the ill-natured critic may object to some of its expressions, but in signing it, the people but used the constitutional exercise of an undoubted right. The Hon. and learned Gentleman concluded, by reading the Resolutions, he intended to submit, as follows:—

Resolved.—That from the answer of His Excellency to the Address of this House, it appears that in attempting to vindicate the conduct complained of, the charges and imputations alledged to be contained in the Petition to which Lord Gollerich refers, he intends to represent to the Secretary of State, that the instructions of which this House so warmly approves, do but suggest a measure which is not in accordance with the views entertained by this House in the second Session, from the desires to obtain a declaratory law, although in attempting such vindication against any supposed imputations contained in the said Petition, it was obviously unnecessary, irrelevant, and unwarrantable to censure, much less to misrepresent, the past conduct of this House.

Resolved.—That this House in the second Session did not reject the measure in whatever form proposed, from the desire to obtain a declaratory law, but the declaratory law adverted to by His Excellency, was an amendment of a Bill sent from the Legislative Council for concurrence, which Bill professed to give only the right to hold land, and which had it further proposed (as it did not) to confer the right of voting, was not being passed at any Election in this Province, would have been utterly void.

Resolved.—That His Excellency in the second Session of this House, by Message recommended Provincial Legislation upon a subject of vital importance to the best interests of the people, when this House could not constitutionally engage in it. And had this House in compliance with such advice, professed to pass a law securing the political rights called in question, it would have been utterly void, and therefore would have been a Legislative declaration against those rights so long enjoyed by the people, with the knowledge and sanction of the three branches of the Provincial Legislature, without affording any remedy for disabilities which would have been thereby mischievously admitted and confirmed.

Resolved.—That the prevailing belief of their right to exercise the Elective franchise, and of their capacity to become seized of lands, by inheritance or otherwise, was encouraged and sanctioned by His present Excellency in giving the Royal Assent (instead of reserving it for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure thereon) to an Act passed in the 58th year of George the third, entitled, "An Act for vesting in Commissioners the Estates of certain traitors, and also the Estates of persons declared Aliens by an Act passed in the 54th year of His Majesty's reign, entitled, 'An Act to declare certain persons therein described, Aliens, and to vest their estates in His Majesty,'" inasmuch as the said Acts recognise and approve the very principle contended for by this House in this said declaratory Bill. And His Excellency in His Message on that subject in the second Session of this Parliament, admitted that a difference of opinion had prevailed in favor of the civil rights of the persons in question.

Resolved.—That this House in the second Session, being called upon to legislate without the power, could discreetly adopt no other than an Act declaratory of the prevailing construction of the Law—as acted on for 85 years, without making a Parliamentary admission, which would vacate the seats of several sitting Members, authorise Returning Officers at another Election to deviate from the long established usage in favor of voters and Candidates, and seriously disturb the peace, happiness and welfare of the Province.

Resolved.—That the Imperial Legislature in subsequently passing an Act enabling the Provincial Legislature to naturalize foreigners, did not express disapprobation of the course taken by this House under the critical and peculiar existing circumstances upon which they were thrown; and that notwithstanding any misrepresentation which may be transmitted against the people of this Province and their representatives, this House will not cease to repose, as they have full reason to do, every confidence in the wisdom of the exalted justice of His Majesty and His Majesty's Government.

Resolved.—That the Petition referred to by Lord Goderich does not, in the opinion of this House, contain any groundless imputations against the Government of this Colony.

Resolved.—That an humble address be presented to His Majesty praying him to take the foregoing Resolutions into His Royal consideration, to put the most favorable construction upon the conduct of His faithful Commons; and representing the circumstances under which the above Resolutions were adopted, and that Bidwell and Perry be a Committee to draft and report the said Address.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1828.

The papers by the last Mail do not bring us any later European news.

The Editor of the Canadian Freeman intimates, that the Address of thanks to His Majesty, from the House of Assembly, for having withheld His assent to the Naturalization Bill of last Session, which amounts to a vote of censure upon themselves for having passed it, will be had in remembrance, when the Rump Parliament is clean forgotten and out of mind. The Editor of the Canadian Freeman is in the confidence of the House, and encouraged, to report its opinions and proceedings, and may therefore be considered as high authority on this occasion.

Improvement of the Breed of Horses.—A Resolution was submitted to the Committee of Supply on Wednesday, by Mr. Charles Jones, to appropriate a sum of money for the purpose of importing from England, for the use of the Province, one or more of the best Horses, with a view to improve the breed in this Country. When we first heard the Resolution read, judging from what has taken place in other Countries on this subject, we had no doubt, but that it would pass unanimously. To our surprise, however, it was rejected; and that surprise was the greater on seeing many Members, who, we supposed, would have felt a deep interest in a measure which related so immediately to the farming interest—Farmers themselves—voting against it.

Mr. Jones, and those who advocated the Resolution, are entitled to credit for their endeavors, although they have been unsuccessful.

Engraved Map of the Rideau Canal.—After considerable opposition, a Bill has passed the House of Assembly, appropriating £180 for the purchase of 500 copies of this Map, for the use of Members, to be distributed throughout the Province. The expense which has been incurred by the Province, in making Surveys, &c. of the most eligible routes for improving the Inland Navigation, amounting to little more than £2,000, will be amply repaid when the extensive works which are now in operation are completed. The result of these Surveys has led the British Government to undertake, at its own expense, the making of the Rideau Canal—a work which will be of incalculable benefit to the new and flourishing Settlements in that part of the Country through which it will pass, as well as to the general interests of the Province. The thousands of money that must be spent in its progress, giving employment to thousands of laborers and mechanics—the facilities it will afford in carrying the productions of the Country to Market, and the increased value it will consequently give to landed property, independent of the security it will afford to the Country in the event of war, we should think, would be sufficient reasons to interest every person in the undertaking: and yet, strange to say, the Bill of which we are speaking was objected to by Mr. Bidwell, on the ground, that the Map could not be considered of much use, as the Province could feel little interest in the work, now that it was undertaken by the Government. Mr. Morris' reply was appropriate: that the liberality which had been evinced by the Government, in undertaking this important work, which would so materially benefit the Country, was the best reason that could be given why the people of the Province should feel a greater interest in it.

We confess, it appeared to us, as being strange doctrine, that we should feel no interest whatever in great public works, such as the Rideau Canal, because they are undertaken by the Government, without any expense to the Province.

The Editor of the Colonial Advocate accompanies his last number with a Pamphlet, "Part the Second," of his account of the trespass on his Office in 1826. The repeated attempts which he has made to revive this affair, after having appealed to the Laws for redress, which has been fully and amply awarded to him, and the scurrilous attacks he has made on the persons concerned, are no doubt intended to create sympathy in his behalf. These repeated attempts have received their best answer in the Pamphlet lately published, which we are now copying into our paper, and to which we beg leave to direct the attention of our readers. This will convince every unprejudiced man, that Mr. M'Kenzie has most completely failed in his endeavors to create a belief, that the "Outrage," as he pompously calls it, was any thing like a concerted plan, and that his assertions of its having been countenanced by the Government, are altogether inventions of his own, and utterly false.

The whole affair, from the Affidavit in the Pamphlet, appears to resolve itself to this—That the infamous character of the Colonial Advocate created a feeling of indignation which was rather warmly expressed by the persons concerned in the trespass, in going into the Office, on the impulse of the moment, and destroying, according to Mr. M'Kenzie's own account, about Fifty Dollars worth of Type, &c. for which he has been paid £625. His account of the amount of actual loss, will be admitted as correct, when it is considered, that to accomplish the destruction of a Printing Office, valued at £500, which he says his was worth, would not be the work of a few minutes, but hours of industrious destruction (if we may use the term), and it is well known that minutes only, and not many of them either, instead of hours, summed up the whole time occupied by the trespassers.

GARRISON BALL.—Major Winniett and the Officers of 68th Regt. entertained their friends on Thursday evening last, with a Splendid Ball and Supper.

The Mess-Room, and the quarters of the Commandant were decorated in the most beautiful style, displaying several transparencies. Dancing was kept up to a late hour, when the party retired highly gratified with the unremitting attention of their gallant entertainers, to promote the hilarity of the evenings amusement.

The Recitations at the Royal Grammar School yesterday, were highly creditable to the young Gentlemen, and gave the utmost satisfaction to the numerous spectators assembled on the occasion.—We have procured a Copy of the Address spoken by Master Wells, and shall have much pleasure in inserting it next week.

York, 12 Feby. 1828.

MR. EDITOR.

I have often reflected with astonishment upon the conduct of those persons concerned in the attack upon the office of the Colonial Advocate, in affecting to treat with indifference, statements relating to that trespass, so unfounded & false, as those repeatedly made by M'Kenzie (the Editor of the Advocate) and disseminated by him through the country.

The only cause, to which, I can attribute their silence heretofore, and their great neglect in not immediately publishing to the world, a true statement of all the facts connected with the case, is that, they must have thought M'Kenzie's character to be so well known to those, to whom he sends his papers as to render a contradiction of his assertions entirely unnecessary. This, I will admit, would have been a sufficient reason, joined with the unpleasantness of entering into a public controversy with a man, who would most willingly sacrifice both truth and his own reputation, for the sake of gratifying his malignant and malicious feeling; if his falsebooks were read by those only, who are acquainted with his private character and who are governed by a sense of justice and good feeling; but these are few in comparison to those, who know him from report only and most naturally assume his assertions to be true, until publicly contradicted. In order to remove any unfavourable impressions which, this latter class of persons may have formed from reading the Colonial Advocate, Mr. Jarvis, one of the individuals concerned in the trespass has now thought it proper and necessary to publish a true account of all the circumstances relating thereto, which he has done in a most candid and able manner, and which is not made up of mere assertions in opposition to those of the Editor of the Advocate but, of facts, supported by the affidavit of eight disinterested persons. Let any man entirely divested of prejudice, read the several numbers of the Colonial Advocate publish'ed since June 1826, and what, will be his opinion (taking for granted that, every thing therein stated to be true;) will he not think that, M'Kenzie has been injured, and that the cause which produced such injury was conniv'ed at, by the Executive Government of this Province? and that Magistrates and other persons holding high & honorable situations under the government, were immediately concerned; and in truth that the act is one which cries aloud for legislative interference, but, let this same person peruse Mr. Jarvis's statement of the facts, and the accompanying affidavit in support of them —what, let me ask, will then be his opinion? will he not say that, it is a reflection upon the Province, to allow a man of M'Kenzie's infamous character to go unpunished—and a dereliction of duty on the part of the public officers in permitting the publication of such gross libels against the Government, to go unnoticed—will he not if he is a subscriber to his paper, immediately have his name taken from the list. He will—and every honest man in the country who is similarly situated, will follow his example. As a proof of the truth and correctness of the statement just referred to, M'Kenzie has not presumed to contradict a single circumstance contained in it, but has noticed it in away which shews great cunning on his part, but which can never do away with the effect which it must produce upon the minds of an impartial public.

The Editor of the Canadian Freeman, a person quite as unprincipled as M'Kenzie, has commenced a most base and vile attack upon the Author merely for the reason that his name with that of the Editor of the Advocate, in the prefatory remarks to his pamphlet. His attack is confined to one single transaction which, he himself states "is with the feelings of a hangman harrowed up by the little reptile M'Kenzie," and asks "where was the horsewhip of Jarvis when this appeared in the Advocate. Nevertheless in the very next number of his paper, he brings the same circumstance to the recollection of the Public, and endeavours to make it appear in a most aggravated point of view—conduct most inconsistent—unfeeling and highly disgraceful in any man, and most particularly so in the Editor of a public journal. It would appear that, he is courting the horsewhip which, he says should have been applied to M'Kenzie's back; but Mr. Jarvis has too much good sense to notice him at all. The transaction to which he has so unfeelingly recurred is one which is well known to the inhabitants of this Town generally. Mr. Jarvis though unfortunate, has own to have acted an honorable and upright part, and his subsequent conduct in surrendering himself to the officers of justice and enduring a long and painful imprisonment which ended in a public trial, at which he was honorably acquitted by a Jury of his country, has reflected that credit upon his character which such Calumniators as the Editor of the Advocate and Freeman can never injure.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1827, or in the event of the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

Farmer, containing a quantity of Hay, and a variety of Farming implements, was consumed by fire some time in the month of July last, and there being reason to believe, that the same was set on fire by some wicked and malicious incendiary, the said B. M'Keyes hath offered a reward of Twenty-five Pounds, for the discovery of the offender, and hath besought His Majesty's Government to aid his endeavors, by offering a pardon to any person implicated in the perpetration of the said crime, other than the principal felon.

NOW KNOW YE, that a free pardon will be granted to any person not being the actual incendiary or his immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the person or persons guilty of this most heinous offence.

Given under my hand and seal of office, at York, this Twenty-first day of September, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-seven, and in the Eighth year of His Majesty's Reign.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. FRENCH BURR MILL-STONE FACTORY.—E. & J. HAWARD, have established a branch of their French Burr Mill-Stone Factory, in the Village of St. Catharines, on the Welland Canal, for the accommodation of their Canada customers—where they will keep on hand, MILL-STONES, of various sizes, and will furnish on short notice, at New-York prices, any size or quality required. Their long experience in the business, and the superior advantage, by receiving their Blocks direct from the quarries in France, and the general satisfaction which their Mill-Stones have given, (which are in extensive use in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, in the Territory of Michigan, and in Upper Canada,) will, they trust, warrant them the patronage of Flouring Establishments throughout the Province.

☞ Orders addressed to them at St. Catharines, will meet with the most punctual attention. They will also dress Stones for use, and put them in operation, at reasonable charges. They will give purchasers instructions for dressing or putting Stones in operation, free of expense. Jan. 1828.

REFERENCES.—For particular recommendation of their Mill-Stones, which are warranted, they would refer to the following Gentlemen who have Stones of their manufacture in successful operation:—

Grant & Kerby, Fort Erie Mills; G. McMicking, Chippawa; Clark & Street, Bridgewater Mills: W. H. Merritt, St. Catharines; J. Crooks, Flamboro' West; S. Andrus, Auctioneer; Norton & Bliss, Blenheim; M. Lewis Grand River Village; J. Wilson, Long Point; Cross & Fisher do.; J. Zavitz, Kettle Creek; W. Cornwall, (near) York. 37-12.

WILLIAM FARQUHAR, WATCH-MAKER, Silver-Smith, and Jeweller, of Montreal, most respectfully returns thanks to the Ladies and Gentlemen of York, for the liberal encouragement he has received from them on his first visit, and begs leave to inform them, that he intends coming twice a year, regularly, with a well selected stock of Goods, and fashionable articles, at moderate prices; which he is enabled to do, in consequence of importing his goods direct from the manufactures in London, Sheffield, and Birmingham.

N. B.—Orders for Goods to be imported from England, or for Plate to be made at Montreal, punctually attended to.

ALSO—Chronometer, Duplex, Horizontal, Lever, Repeating, and plain Verticle Watches, carefully cleaned and repaired, at 90 Notre-Dame-Street, Montreal.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works is postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25*s.* per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Ket les, &c.—and at 27*s.* 6*d.* per Cwt. for Stove-Kettles, &c.—and will be delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly—They are offered for sale at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Wares of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

THE SUBSCRIBER being about to enter into a different line of business, begs to return his sincere thanks to his numerous friends and the public, for the past favors and the confidence they have reposed in him for the last ten years; and he trusts that he may enjoy a continuance of their support.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any other authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of the Reserve under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 28th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

Poetry.

Address, spoken by Master GEORGE DUPONT WELLS, on the 15th February, 1828, at the Royal Grammar School, York, U. C.

Since last with anxious hearts we met you here,
On time's swift wing hath flown another year;
And now again, the School-boy trembling stands,
To seek his laurels at your high'ral hands—
Fearful thro' failure of his feeble pow'rs,
To lose the meed of all his toilsome hours:
Yet, those kind looks his recreant fears beguile,
And hope beams bright, from Beauty's fav'ring smile.

Oh! happy are the hours in labour spent,
Which lead us thus up Learning's hard ascent;
Tho' on the road, some craggy steeps arise,
The heart ready-'dauntless—and the eye
Oft' may our Friends with kind applause to-day,
Still strew with roses all the arduous way.
In those fair lines that breast the Atlantic's foam,
To which we give th' endearing name of Home,
Where Science shines in never clouded day,
And cherish'd Learning sheds its brightest ray,
How many a spirit, tow'ring and sublime,
Shew'd its first glimm'rings in its Schoolboy time.
And here, perchance, the last for fost'ring State,
We trace her paths, to prosper and be great;
Tho' faintly beams as yet, bright Learning's Sun,
We want not beacon lights to guide us on—
The Land we claim, shall yet be known to fame,
That prove her worthy of the British name.

Amidst our Sov'reign's Councils, with what pride,
We see them sit, the public weal to guide;
We find them even within our Senate walls,
With social firmness, to defend our rights;
And gladly hear th' admiring stranger say,
"They bear the palm of Eloquence away."

We hear them in our Church's holy place
Spread the blest Volume of eternal Grace;
And who more skill'd than they, to lead our Bar
With fame and honor, thro' the wordy war;
The slender thread of argument to draw,
And trace the subtle truth of Statute Law?

Such are the bright examples we prefer,
And following these, are sure we cannot err;
And while their line of conduct we pursue,
Say,—Do we seek in vain applause from you?

Let this be then our animating hope,
With this, to honours in the race to cope;
For, once like us, they conn'd each tedious rule,
Yes,—once were Schoolboys in this very School!
And He who train'd them thus in virtue's ways,
To rise to our pursuits, and future surveys!
And us, to further emulation calls,
With future honours in our College Halls!

Yes,—Holy Fane! soon shall thy walls arise,
In green and lovely limited Grandeur's Skies;
Soon shall we hear the grave Professor's voice
In Truth and Science, teach us to rejoice:
Soon shall thy youth, within his silent room
In study'd converse, with the Muse consume,
And thoughtful, wander thro' thy sunny glades,
And court the Muses in thy classic shades.

Now, as we bless our Sov'reign's gen'rous hand,
That fills with Bounty all this happy Land,
And thanks the CARLE, who bears his kingly sword,
Who into Learning's Fount, that Bounty pour'd,
While love and gratitude our feelings claim,
Amidst their warmest glow—lies STRACHAN's name;
Then round his brows, our grateful chaplets bend,
As Youth's kind Father, and the Schoolboy's friend.

Statement of Facts, relating to the trespass, on the Printing Press, in the possession of Mr. William Lyon M'Kenzie, in June 1826. Addressed to the public generally, and particularly to the subscribers and supporters of the Colonial Advocate.

STATEMENT &c.

Why an abuse of the Press, licentious beyond all former example, was suffered by the Government to continue with impunity, it is not my business to inquire. I can easily conceive, that a great unwillingness should be felt, to notice a paper so utterly contemptible, and conducted so entirely without regard to the maintaining a character, either for decency or truth. I can readily suppose, that it must have anticipated with confidence, that the public at large would receive from the perusal of such a paper, no other impressions than abhorrence of its falsehoods and contempt for its author; and that any official notice of either, would only be giving a degree of importance to such a journal, which it never could attain if left to itself. How far it is right to forbear on such principles, or to forbear at all, I will not presume to say; my individual opinion is, that the Laws should not have been allowed to be insulted so long and so grossly with impunity; and I believe, that the forbearance shown, has only encouraged and increased an evil that other measures would have cured. But no part of the responsibility rests with me; what I desire to give to the Public, is merely a statement of facts.

Finding, it would seem, that his paper, conducted as it was, was not very profitable, he began in the Spring of 1826, to shew symptoms of discontinuing it; and, if I remember right, for I have no file of his papers before me, he threw out several hints of his intention to do so, complaining of the want of zeal and interest in the people, which prevented "their supporting an Independent Press;" but perceiving, as I hope I may more truly represent it, that the morality and honest principles of the people prevented their contributing to support any man in obtaining a living by inventing and disseminating slander.

Nevertheless, before Mr. M'Kenzie could make up his mind to abandon his employment and endeavour to earn his living by honest industry, he was determined to make one or two desperate efforts to draw the universal attention of the public upon him. Perhaps his hope was, that he should compel the Government to prosecute him, by the unexampled scurrility of his language; or, perhaps he expected to gain a rather less degree of notoriety by enraging individuals and provoking them to a prosecution, which he of course would represent as persecution; or he may have meant principally to make an experiment, whether, by making his columns the vehicle of the grossest and coarsest slanders, and of the most malicious lies, against the living and the dead, against men and women, the powerful and the helpless, he should not at least secure the patronage of all those whose minds and hearts were so utterly depraved, as to rejoice in this degredation of human nature, and thus draw a subsistence from some source, no matter how polluted.

Under the influence of some or all of these motives, he began in the month of May, 1826, to send into the world a series of libels, unequalled for their disgusting rivaldry, for their hardened insolence, and for their brutal and unfeeling cruelty; and these libels were directed, not merely against persons in public situations, who had borne his slander for years with silent contempt, but against persons unknown in public life, and unconnected with politics, against married women, against aged widows, and even against our friends who had been long dead, and who, while they lived, were universally beloved and respected. Many of the foul aspersions thus published to the world, had no connection with any public measure; the misfortunes, the poverty, the former occupations, the personal appearance of individuals were all made alike the objects of unfeeling and impious abuse, regardless of the pain which the wanton calumny might bring to the bosoms of relations and friends. To make the insolence the more intolerable, no pains were taken to avoid mention of names; on the contrary, they were given at full length—no blanks—no asterisks—all set down plainly, to amuse the malice of the world, and to insure the whole mass of unmanly scandal being as fully understood and applied abroad, as it might otherwise only have been among ourselves.

I cannot reconcile it to myself to be the means of giving a second publication to these horrid papers, which I am sure, it has been the endeavour of all good men to forget; and, therefore, I will not, for the sake of justifying my own conduct the more plainly, polute the public eye, with placing before them any part of these productions, which no language can describe. But I call upon any man who may have preserved a file of the Colonial Advocate, to turn to the number published on the 18th May, 1826, as well as to those immediately preceding and following it, and then to inform me, if he can, in what Country, and at what time, the feelings of a whole Society were ever so barbarously and cruelly outraged as they were by this man, whom no one had injured—whom, indeed, many of those whom he thus insulted, did not know by sight, and of whose existence even, it is very probable, some of the persons he abused were unconscious.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

[House in Committee on His Excellency's reply to the Address presented yesterday.]

Friday, 8th Feb'y.

Mr. J. Jones thought that the course pursued by the Hon. and Learned Gentleman, was one which would improperly occupy the House, and retard the business of the country. There was nothing in the reply which warranted such a proceeding, and before censuring the Executive, as had been done on this question, it would be well to take a short review of what had been done respecting it.—It had first been moved in this Assembly in 1817, when Resolutions were introduced by the late Member for Norfolk—these Resolutions were not in accordance with the sentiments of the Executive, or of the Assembly persisting in them, a hasty prorogation had taken place, and the people had been awakened to their situation as respected their legal rights.—A communication was subsequently made, to the Imperial Government by the Executive of this Province, and its interference asked, in favor of the Persons interested. During the first Session of the next Parliament, however, on complaint of an improper allusion having been made from Lennox and Addington, of a Member who was not present, Resolutions were past of a nature admitting the principle contained in those he had adverted to, passed in a previous Parliament, although the person whose seat was vacated, was not declared ineligible from any legal disability.—These Resolutions passed by the House of Assembly and sent to the Legislative Council for their concurrence, declared in effect that the persons alluded to, labored under disabilities which could only be removed by the Imperial Parliament and proposed an application to the Imperial Legislature, to naturalize all persons then in the Province, not legally entitled to be regarded as Subjects, it being thought that such would remove objections. This Assembly would strengthen that which had already been made by the Provincial Government. In the following Session the Attorney General had proposed certain Resolutions with an address, but nothing was done.—Afterwards, in consequence of a despatch from home, and by direction of His Majesty's Government the subject was submitted to this Parliament in its second Session, information at the same time being given that His Majesty would concur in any Bill that might be considered necessary for settling the question. One was sent down from the Legislative Council, intended to confirm these people in the rights of British Subjects, and to secure them the possession of their properties. This House however was of opinion that it did not embrace both these objects, and it was proposed to amend it in such a manner, as should put the subject beyond all doubt—not indeed that we had, strictly speaking, at that time the power of Legislating on the subject, but from the tenor of the despatch, there was no doubt, that if the Provincial Legislature, expressed their wishes, His Majesty would recommend their being carried into full effect by an Act of the Imperial Parliament—or if this mode should not be considered advisable, in consequence of our not having the power to Legislate, it was proposed by the Attorney General, that an address from both branches embracing those wishes, founded on Resolutions which be submitted, should be sent to His Majesty, in order that the subject might be brought before the Imperial Parliament, and finally disposed of, to the satisfaction of all persons concerned in this Province—both of these courses were objected to, it being contended that nothing more was required than a declaratory law—such a law was therefore passed, containing declarations which were directly contrary to the decisions of the Courts of Law in England—it did not go through the other branch of the Legislature, but this House afterwards passed Resolutions containing in substance the provisions of that declaratory Law. An address founded on these resolutions, did not produce, and could not be expected to produce any thing effectual, and the next Session (1826—27) instructions to the Provincial Government, were communicated to this Legislature, in the name of His Majesty's Government. Hon. Members then complained that these instructions were an improper interference, —a Bill however, conformable to them had passed both Houses, and was reserved, according to the provisions of the Act lately passed, giving to the power of Legislating on the subject, for His Majesty's Assent—misrepresentation was made with respect to the law—Petitions were got up, and industriously circulated, but he believed that not more than 850 signatures had been procured below the Midland District—where meetings had been called for the purpose of getting the people to sign them, not many names were procured, because an opportunity was thus afforded of fairly explaining the provisions of the Bill to the people.—A petition however had gone about with them privately, and the people had been induced he believed to sign them in ignorance of the true provisions of the Bill, and from misrepresentations made to them, of the intentions of the Government and the Legislature.—His Excellency has very properly said that these Petitions contain misrepresentations.—There were the fullest misrepresentations in them, both against the Executive, and this House. The object of the Government had been to set this question at rest, and to secure the rights and privileges of the people which were liable to be legally questioned; and with such intentions, could it be supposed that they, or any public body would submit to such misrepresentation, without making any reply.

Mr. Jones concluded by proposing the following in amendment to the first Resolution.

"That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency Sir L. Gosford Governor of this Province, thanking His Excellency for his uniform intentions, in favor of a considerable portion of the inhabitants of this Province, who labor under serious disabilities in exercising the civil rights of subjects of His Majesty, since the question first arose in the Assembly of this Province in the Session of 1817—18, by which it appeared that many inhabitants of this Province claiming to be subjects, could not be legally so regarded."

Mr. Hamilton objected to the amendment, he believed the whole merits of this question might be traced farther back, than had been intimated by the Learned Gentleman—it might be traced to that period when an attempt was made to give the right of voting at Elections, to persons who held Location tickets—he had no doubt it was the desire of the Executive to establish this right, and then under a regular system of Emigration, they would have had these persons under their thumb, until they had procured their Deeds. This however was defeated, and he was happy that it was so. The Despatch of Lord Bathurst, alluded to, as having been submitted to the House in its second Session, he had no doubt, would have been concurred in by every one, but it was well known that we had not at that time the power to Legislate on the subject, and it was then that misrepresentation commenced, it was then that His Excellency had gone through the country, and received addresses which were prepared, calling this House "farfious demagogues," the persons signing those addresses had told His Excellency that they would uphold the constitution, meaning no doubt, that the factious demagogues would uphold it if they could.

Doctor Strachan then went home, and misrepresentation he had no doubt had been made with respect, to the conduct of the House. From year to year a redress of grievances had been sought for, and the Executive has insulted us, and even now when Lord Goderich in his despatch wishes to cover all their political sins, His Excellency from the tenor of his reply on this occasion, seems determined to push on, and the House should be heard in its own vindication.

The Atty. Gen. said that the Hon. Gentleman seemed to have forgotten, that the grievances of which he complained, had been made the subject of a special investig ation, in a former Session, when that Hon. Gentleman, had brought the matter under consideration by his motion for an inquiry into the state of the Province, and yet what intolerable grievances had been made out at that time. After much time had been spent, it had resulted in the discovery, that a Mr. Hardy's name was very properly struck off, from the List, but with some other matters of equal importance, yet the Hon. Gent. took occasion on every opportunity to refer to the subject of grievances, which existed only in his own imagination. To such conduct he could only apply the phrase, which was certainly not a common one, for it was a scriptural phrase of the Dog "returning again to his vomit." If the Hon Gent. considered it at all necessary, he was at liberty again to go into the state of the Province, and if he thought that any grievances existed, he hoped he would discharge it his duty to us, as the discussion would best prove the fallacy of charges, made in this loose manner against the Government. The subject of Location tickets had been mentioned by the Hon. Gentleman, and from his statement would have it supposed, that the Government had some deep laid scheme to influence the Elections—they were to accomplish this design, by an extensive plan of Emigration, whereas in fact, no such plan had ever been carried into execution; but it might perhaps be matter of information to the Hon. Gentleman to be told, that within a short period of time, the opinion of H. M. Government had been received, which declared that persons in actual possession of Lands under location tickets who had complied with the terms on which those lands were granted, were entitled to vote at Elections.

With respect to the course proposed to be pursued by the Resolutions, which were submitted by the Hon. and learned Gent. if the House should adopt them, he should not regret it, because it would lead to a development of the truth. It was asserted in these resolutions, that the House had refused on a former occasion to pass a Bill on the subject of Naturalization, in whatever shape it was proposed to them. The despatches on this subject had at any time been laid before us, and from these it would be seen, that terms more favorable even than the Bill which had been brought in this Session, when recommended by His Majesty's Government had not been acceded to; and was it to be wondered at, that the unremitting exertions which had been used by the Colonial Government, that it should suffer misrepresentations, such as had been made against it, to go unanswered, and more particularly when an address of thanks was to be sent to His Majesty which, referring as it did to the Petition containing those misrepresentations, shewed that the Hon. concurred in them. The Government had all along been actuated by an honest desire to settle this important question, and the charge which had been thrown out by the Hon. and learned Gentleman of an intention to insult the House, in the reply which had been made to an address on this occasion, had not improperly been answered by another Honble. Gentleman, who had stated that His Excellency had stopped the progress of the Bill, and on part, by informing the House that the address would be accompanied by statements vindicating the conduct of the Executive from the misrepresentations which had been so industriously circulated against it, both in this Province, and by the Petitions which had been sent to England.—During the discussion last year, it was true that Petitions had been laid on the Table against the Bill, but was it not well known what means were resorted to, to get the people to sign them?—was it not known that false copies of the Bill had been circulated, and had it been attempted to be denied that this was not the fact, when it was so stated in this House—was it not equally well known that many persons had signed those Petitions, on its being represented to them, that it was the wish of the House of Assembly that they should do so. These Petitions were known to be the result of misrepresentation, and although as had been truly stated, many of them were presented to the House, yet knowing these facts, the House had notwithstanding passed the Bill.—After it had passed and was reserved for the Royal Assent, the misrepresentation was actively continued, and the Petition against it, was not, except in a few cases, submitted to the people at Public Meetings called for the purpose, because when this was done, and an opportunity was afforded of fairly explaining the intentions of the Government, and the provisions of the Bill, the people were satisfied, and all apprehension done away—the utmost pains however had been taken in obtaining signatures privately, and many persons he had no doubt had put their names to it, in perfect ignorance of the slanderous calumnies which it contained. Yet this Petition, drawn up by some person, certainly in utter ignorance of the facts of the case, or wilfully misrepresenting them—printed at a Printing Office in this Town, instead of having been adopted at Public Meetings regularly circulated, by unknown Agents, and signatures procured on representations urged no one knew how; such a Petition so got up, containing charges, as well against this House as against the Executive, goes to England, without any opportunity of refuting it, from the secret manner in which it was sent, of any explanation being given, and is the House now prepared to resolve that under such circumstances, that Petition contains no unjust representations. If the House was conscious of its own dignity, it would be but one opinion which would be expressed in such a manner as would convince His Majesty's Government, and the country, that misrepresentations such as the Petition contained, would not be allowed to be uttered, without the marked disapprobation with which they so justly merited. The Petition stated, that the "most serious afflictions" were threatened—what are these serious afflictions? if they exist at all, it must be the fault of Hon. Members of this House that they are not removed; and the Petitioners dignity would be but one opinion more extraordinary, when it was known to the most casual observer of the condition of the people of this colony, that the blessings of peace and plenty, were enjoyed by them to the fullest extent. A "melancholy gloom" it was said in the Petition overspread the land. —Had any person, but those by whose misrepresentations, the people had been deluded, ever seen or heard of this "melancholy gloom"—innumerable grievances, were also complained of—to which it was stated public opinion had long expressed—when and where, the Petition did not state; and if the persons who had signed it were called upon, it would be found that not one grievance could be complained of.—The Legislature it was asserted had "refused to attend to their instructions," and that "cruel restrictions" were imposed by the Government. Now it was well known, that in submitting these instructions to the House, the Executive had done so, for the purpose of informing them on what terms, if they thought proper, they would feel disposed to give its Assent to a Law Naturalizing these persons, and that whatever restrictions were considered necessary, were such as could not be objected to by the Executive, as from the provisions of the Law which had been passed by the Imperial Parliament in 1828, giving to this Legislature the power of conferring Naturalization, an Act which it might pass for that purpose, was expressly reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure. And yet this Petition accusing the Executive of having imposed "cruel restrictions," was secretly got up, and secretly conveyed home—and when such false, and unfounded slanders were known to have been made, was it to be expected that they would be suffered to remain uncontradicted.—The Petitioners were unable to vary materially from a compliance with the terms of the Bill would place them in a "degrading condition"—that their "feelings would be wounded," and that they would be placed in "utter peril."—What was the "degrading condition," to which they would be reduced—was it degrading to those who had taken the Oath of Allegiance to His Majesty, to be required to take it again, or was there any thing in this which could wound the feelings of those who felt a sincere attachment to the Government when they had first taken that Oath. The "utter peril" of being considered "Traitors" to their native country, on renouncing their allegiance, was not to be apprehended, it being the well known doctrine of Allegiance in the United States, that it was considered binding so long only as it united the persons contracting at any time he was at liberty to make choice of any other country, without incurring the risk of Treason—the peril therefore was nothing more than an imaginary one, or a wilful misrepresentation of the person by whom the Petition was drawn up. The Petition further represented, that unless the Petitioners "take the oath, they must resume the character of Aliens"—that they ever had been Aliens was at one time denied, but this expression seemed to admit it—if as had been contended they were really Subjects, it might reasonably be supposed, that gratitude towards a Government, which had afforded them its protection for so great a length of time, would have induced them to consider it no very great hardship to come forward, and renew that allegiance, by taking an oath, which would confirm to them in the permanent and undisputed enjoyment of that protection. The Petition went further to state that they would be "ruined if they refused to comply"—how this ruin was to be effected by a Law which was intended to confirm them in their possessions, and which meddled not with any particular case, but left all to the exercise of their own judgments, it would be difficult to discover, and after the protection which had been afforded for so many years, it was an aggravation to charge the Government with a desire, to "strip them of their very farms"—could these Petitioners if the matter had been fairly explained to them, really feel any apprehension, that the Bill was intended as a "measure of refined cruelty," and that any of its provisions were intended to injure them of their lands. Yet it was on such a Petition as this, that the House, forgetful he would say of the duty it owed to itself, had founded an Address of thanks to His Majesty, and in doing so could be considered in no other light than as a public, the body passing an Act of censure on themselves. If that address contains the truth, it goes to approve of the Petition, whereas the House should in support of its own dignity, and its own public Acts, have declared its disapprobation of it.—In any reference that could be drawn from the addres, approving as it did of the Petition, was, that it was a necessary interference to save the people from Executive tyranny and oppression, and against such calumnies, ought not a reply to be made The people he was convinced would understand, the bent of these proceedings, and from the recollection of what had already taken place on this question, would at last come to the proper conclusion, that the most unjustifiable attempts had been made use of, to prejudice the public mind against the honest endeavors of the Government to bring this important matter to a satisfactory termination. In the course of this debate the name of a Venerable Friend had been made use of, in the most unparliamentary manner, and he would take this opportunity of stating, that the insinuation which had been thrown out of his having travelled through the country, with a view to get up addresses to His Excellency, was utterly untrue—it was within his own personal knowledge that his visit to the Eastern part of the Province, on private business was made when the intention of His Excellency to inspect the new settlements, was not known to him.—The charge of the Hon. Gentleman with respect to his having used his influence in procuring the instructions which were received last year, was equally unfounded. At this subject there was no mystery in the conduct of the Executive—what those instructions were, was not known to any Member of the Government, until the moment they were received.

The Address, in effect approved of the language of the Petition, and was intended to induce the people, to see them [illegible] escaped from the tyranny, which was intended to have been practised towards them by the Executive, and was it to be expected that the Government would be so dead to all feeling, of what was due to itself, as not to point out, the errors and misrepresentations which had been unjustly cast upon it. The Address sanctioned a document containing untrue and unfair statements, and while Hon. Members, claimed the freedom of speech in their own vindication on the floor of this House, had not the Executive a right when it is charged in a Petition with a desire to oppress the people, and when that Petition was bolstered up by the sanction of the Address of this House, to vindicate itself from such aspersions. He agreed in the opinion which had been expressed, that the House, had a right to protect its constitutional standing, at the same time however he thought, that it should not detract from the constitutional standing of any other branch of the Legislature, by giving its support to misrepresentation.

Mr. Cameron knew that the statement made by the Hon. and learned Att'y. Gen'l. with respect to the addresses which were said to have been prepared by a Rev. and Venerable Gentleman, was correct. His visit to the E. District was on private family affairs,—he had spent a night at his (Mr. C's.) house in Glengarry, and the subject of addresses was not alluded to in any manner by the Venerable Gentleman.

Mr. Fothergill would express his opinion, in order that the reasons for his vote on this occasion might be known. The Bill which was introduced this Session he hoped would allay all feeling on the question, and he looked upon it, as a most glorious triumph of liberal principles. With respect to the misrepresentations which were said to have been used against the Bill of last Session, he had been ance, by taking an oath, which would confirm sent, and it had created general indignation, which he in vain endeavored to suppress. At a Public Meeting which was held, he had refused to be any part, of what he called upon as the Representative of the people, he had felt himself bound to state his opinions, which were the same as those he had expressed in this House. At that Meeting the Bill was certainly read, but some of its clauses were purposely omitted.—The Durham address he considered as the greatest libel on the House of Assembly, it was drawn up by a Magistrate, at Port Hope, and when a Meeting was called to get signatures to it, the whole address was not read to the people, the offensive parts were omitted, and it was signed in ignorance of its containing any such passages,—the people were therefore duped, and a boast was afterwards made of it. To prevent the people from signing the petition against the Bill, every artifice had been used, notwithstanding at Port Hope Meeting five or six hundred persons had put their names to it. The reply he had put an end to all calm discussion, and it was the duty of the House to repeal the charges made against it.

Mr. Bidwell would be sorry to express an opinion upon all the acts of the Government to this question, because all that was necessary to form such an opinion was not before the House, and that necessary information had been refused on a former occasion, when he had moved for an application to have the correspondence laid before them. Of that which was within the knowledge of the House, however, an expression of opinion could be safely pronounced. The Bill of the Legislative Council sent down in the 2nd Session of this Parliament, it was said professed to secure the rights of the people—this was not the case however, as the Bill contained provisions which would have prevented them from exercising the elective franchise.

While he regretted the necessity which was imposed upon the House, to adopt the Resolutions, which had been read, he considered that the only course left open to the House required that it should be done. The Hon. and learned Att'y. Gen'l. had most ingeniously misrepresented the statements contained in the Petition against the Bill of last year, but the people when signing it, he had no doubt felt that they confined that truth. The object in restoring the Bill to the order of the day last Session, was with a view to have it substituted by Mr. Rolph's Bill, which he considered preferable. He should vote for the Resolutions, because he felt that it was due to the dignity of the House, to repel the insult which had been offered to it, and if this was not done, and the House submitted in silence, it would no longer deserve the countenance of the country. There had not been any desire on the part of the House to reflect on the conduct of the Executive, and those who advised had voted for the Bill, not because they felt the propriety of such a measure, but that they were prevented by the embarrassing situation in which they were placed from proposing any other—he did not blame them for having acted in this manner, but the embarrassment being now removed and more favorable conditions acceded to, in consequence of the wishes of the people having been made known, Hon. Members had an opportunity of more freely exercising their discretion. The allegation that the instructions had embarrassed the discretion of the House, was consequently true. It was equally true, that the Petitioners were placed in a state of "peril." The Bill as first which they complained, left them no choice, between the odious condition of Registering themselves, or losing their Lands, they had been told by cringing sycophants, that they must overcome, the prejudices which they here, as well as in England, to do what was right, on this important question, false Patriots had however misguided the people, who had been induced to sign the Petition against the Bill of last year, from the grossest misrepresentations.

Mr. Perry and Mr. Wilson, supported the Resolutions.

Mr. Rolph said that from the political truism expressed in the amendment which had been proposed for the first Resolution, the House might be told that by rejecting that amendment it would place itself in a dilemma. This however he considered as a mere contrivance to get rid of the question, and might be compared to a desperate remedy, in a desperate case; but as he had already seen a good deal of this kind of management in this, and former Sessions, he should turn from the amendment, and recommend the adoption of the original. The good motives of the Government had been expatiated upon and it had been asked, if they had not a right to vindicate themselves—the same question might with equal propriety be asked as it respected the charges made against this House, and to meet which a vindication was the mere necessary, as His Excellency, had called upon us to do—Statements might have an undoubted privilege of the people, and it was proper that their constituents should thank His Majesty for having attended to their constitutional complaints, add in offering those thanks he was satisfied that they only attended to the wishes of the people, it was only reasonable that such statements were to to be made, it remained silent under the imputations which had been cast upon it.—On this occasion a candid and open course was adopted, and it was no doubt done for the purpose of affording the House an opportunity of replying, and this reply he would now make by adopting the Resolutions, and let the country be made acquainted with it. The Executive considered it necessary to offer its vindication to H. M. Government, but the people were not do this for themselves—they could not be called together to make their defence—they expected that this should be done for them by their representatives.

The Petition of the people it was said had been got up secretly—this might be said by those who wished to conciliate the Government, but it was enough for the people to know, that it had been favorably received by Lord Goderich and the Imperial Parliament. If the Petition had been got up at public meetings, it would no doubt have been objected, that the people had signed it, from having been excited by popular speeches, and when it was said to have been signed privately, it was stated that misrepresentation had been used to procure signatures—so that in either case no credit would be given to it. The reply which had influenced the people to put their names to it—such doctrine as this would lead to the total suppression of public opinion—the fact however, was that no misrepresentation had been made. The Petition spoke the language of truth—after the perusal of the Bill of last year "a melancholy gloom" did indeed prevade Upper Ganada—the people were dissatisfied with the measure, thousands felt that the titles to their estates were placed in a precarious situation—that the Great Seal of the Province, to their Deeds, was about to be broken in pieces, unless they would go through certain forms, which they considered odious—many had in consequence left the Province, and was not this "a melancholy gloom" pervading the Country. These odious conditions were now done away by our gracious Sovereign, and because the wishes of the people had been complied it, some Hon. Members appeared to be stung with disappointment.

The instructions of last year had properly been represented as "embarrassing the discretion of the House," and several members had voted for the Bill, not because they felt the propriety of such a measure, but that they were prevented by the embarrassing situation in which they were placed from proposing any other—he did not blame them for having acted in this manner, but the embarrassment being now removed and more favorable conditions acceded to, in consequence of the wishes of the people having been made known, Hon. The conduct of the House however as well as the Petition should be left to stand on its own merits, but the advisers of His Excellency, feeling the sting of disappointment, tell us in their reply, we have regarded the statements in the Petition far too favorably—they attack us, and we will attack you—this he considered pitiful. The address of thanks for the conciliatory despatch which had been received, was such as every loyal heart would respond to. The right of petition, was an undoubted privilege of the people, and it was proper that their constituents should thank His Majesty for having attended to their constitutional complaints, add in offering those thanks he was satisfied that they only attended to the wishes of the people, it was only reasonable that such statements were to to be made, it remained silent under the imputations which had been cast upon it.—On this occasion a candid and open course was adopted, and it was no doubt done for the purpose of affording the House an opportunity of replying, and this reply he would now make by adopting the Resolutions, and let the country be made acquainted with it. Of the several Packet Ships due at New-York, the John Jay, is the only one, that has yet arrived, bringing London dates to 7th. and Liverpool to 8th December. The latest accounts from Constantinople are to 11th November, which though only one day later than those previously received, the Ablion remarks "are important, as they advise us of the continuance of the allied Ambassadors at Constantinople, and of the fact that the Ottoman Porte was for from declaring war, has consented to an additional term of six days in order to enable it to come to a final decision upon the great question of peace or war."

The New-York Spectator contains a paragraph, stating that the Brig Jane, which arrived on 5th inst. from Poros in Greece whence, she sailed on 18th Nov., brought a Letter to a Mercantile house in New-York, which states that the news of the day was, that the Grand Signior had declared war against the Allies. This account it adds, is entitled to the credit of a rumor, and no more.

Advices from Spain to 14 Decem., state, that their Majesties were every where received with enthusiasm, and that the Rebellion was put down.

Nathaniel Snelson who robbed the Philadelphia Bank of about 40000 dollars, and who sailed from Quebec last fall, has been apprehended, at Liverpool,—he surrendered himself quietly, and about 30,000 dollars in bills and notes were restored by him.

We do not find any news in the late papers from Portugal.

The sudden death of His Excellency De Witt Clinton will be felt as a severe loss to his country. We hear of this melancholy occurrence, from private sources,—the papers left Albany before it took place, and the particulars are to us unknown.

The delegates have left Lower Canada for England via New-York. Mr.—Gale proceeds thither also, having left Montreal a few days before them, in the capacity of Agent on behalf of the Province, to oppose, as we understand, the representations to be made by the delegates.

The Session.—For several days past the House has been principally occupied in ordinary matters, second and third reading of Bills &c. In order to afford an opportunity to the numerous Committees to whom various subjects of importance have been referred, to prepare their reports, the sittings for some days past have not been long. The address to His Majesty, founded on the resolutions of Friday 8 instant, together with His Excellency's reply to the address of the House praying him to transmit the same to England, will be found in this days paper, and we beg leave to direct the particular attention of our readers to these documents.

Court of Chancery—A message has been received by the Assembly, from His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, accompanied with various documents, relating to this important subject. It has not yet been taken up by the House.

The University—An address has been presented to the Lieutenant Governor, requesting him to lay before the House of Assembly, a Copy of the Charter, and other documents connected with the establishment of the University in this Province. These papers are in course of preparation to be communicated to the House, when we hope to have an opportunity of procuring copies of them, for the information of our readers. While mentioning this subject, we would just say, that it is with satisfaction, we turn from the disgusting attacks which have been made upon some of our most distinguished public characters, who have taken an interest in this measure, to the very near and appropriate allusion which is made to it, and them, in the Address spoken at the Royal Grammar School, on Friday week, which will be found on the first page of our paper. The lines are the production of a young Gentleman of this Town, and are not only creditable to his feelings, but evince a great degree of Poetical talent.

The Colonial Advocate, continues to labor at his dirty work, and would fain endeavor to make the people believe that the "Outrage," was an Official one.—Can he, or does he deny the Affidavit at the end of the Pamphlet?—It will not do—all his endeavors are vain, and he might as well devote his columns to some other and better purpose.—He has made himself known, during his Election ring Travels—the people have seen him, and have expressed their opinion, of his deserts.—His opinions are recorded against himself and have proved him to be "given to change," and that, "weekly." The good people of the County of York have therefore come to the very reasonable and prudent conclusion that a man of such Camelion like character is not to be depended upon.—Let them beware, lest the honest exercise of their judgement, does not call forth his ire—abuse costs nothing with him—he will perhaps abuse them; indeed we hear that he has done it already.—The Advocate over acted his part—he should have been contented with the £626—instead of this he revives the most infamous falsehoods to suit his purpose, and when he has drawn down upon himself, an answer which he cannot gainsay—he endeavors to prop one falsehood by uttering another.—This is the usual refuge, which persons of "crooked ways" resort to, and the exposure only serves to involve them in double disgrace.—Such is Mr. McKenzie's case, and it is difficult to say whether he most deserves to be pitied, or despised.

Iron Works at Marmora.—The application of the proprietor of these Works, to the House of Assembly, for assistance to carry them on, on a scale commensurate with the wants of the Province, there is now little doubt, will be successful, a Resolution having passed the Committee of Supply, on which a Bill has been introduced, for granting to him, on public credit, the sum of £10,000 Sterling for the term of ten years with interest to be paid annually—the principal to be liquidated in the five last years of the term, at the rate of £2,000 per annum. The security given, is considered even by the opponents of the measure to be ample, consisting as it does of the whole of the works, on which a Capital of more than £30,000 has been expended, together with a tract of several thousand Acres of Land, containing the beds of Ore; besides the personal security of the firm of M'Gill & Co. of Montreal, in a bond for the sum loaned. The importance of the manufacture of Iron, an article of the first necessity in this Province, and which the Marmora Iron works will be enabled to supply to any extent required, together with the full security given for the loan, the exertions which have been made, and the immense Capital expended in bringing them to their present state of perfection, are sufficient reasons, to shew the necessity of giving encouragement to this branch of manufac-

THE ADDRESS.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty

Most Gracious Soverign:

We your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects the Commons of Upper Canada in Provincial Parliament assembled, humbly beg leave to throw ourselves upon Your Majesty's justice, under the following painful circumstances.

Alive to the very gracious manner in which your Majesty lately regarded the peace and happiness of all classes of your people in this Province, we passed an humble address of thanks to your Majesty—and waiting upon His Excellency, Sir Peregrine Maitland, in the most respectful manner, and according to the usual practice of Provincial Parliament cases, we requested him to transmit the same to the principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, that it might be, by him presented to Your Majesty.—His Excellency was pleased to refuse it, and added that "in order to vindicate the government of this Colony, from the groundless imputations contained in the petition to which Lord Goderich refers, he would take care to call the special attention of the Secretary of State to the circumstances, that the instructions of which this house now so warmly approve, do but suggest a measure, which in whatever form proposed, was rejected by the house in the second Session of this Parliament, in a desire to obtain a declaratory law, which your Majesty had determined to be wholly inadmissible."

Thus apprised of His Excellency's intention to represent to your Majesty our conduct in this House two years ago, and to ascribe to us feelings and motives which are utterly foreign, we feel that in our opinion some evil disposed person have induced His Excellency to believe; we felt it to be our duty from an anxious desire to preserve Your Majesty's favour and confidence to pass certain resolutions explanatory of the critical and embarrassing situation in which we were placed in the second session of this Parliament, and the course which under such circumstances we pursued in the exercise of our honest and upright discretion. To these resolutions now transmitted to Your Majesty, we most humbly pray your royal attention, and that Your Majesty will be graciously pleased thro' your principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, to give us an opportunity of laying before Your Majesty, such explanations as from the nature and extent of the charges, preferred against us, may be required for our full justification in Your Majesty's sight.

We submit to most Gracious Sovereign humbly to beg your Majesty to be pleased to put the most favourable construction upon the conduct of your faithful commons, and not withstanding any misrepresentation which may be transmitted to the prejudice of the people in this Province or the representatives, we humbly beg to offer our assurance that we shall not cease to repose as we have full reason to do every confidence in the exalted justice of your Majesty and your Majesty's Government.

HIS EXCELLENCY'S REPLY.

I will transmit your resolutions and address to His Majesty's Secretary of State, and not the less readily from the representations they contain respecting my conduct in the matter to which they refer.

The unusual language which appears in them, I regret on public grounds, but it can scarcely fail to be contrasted by His Majesty with the assurances which I have so constantly received from the high throne, of the people whose interests and happiness it has been my study to promote.

When I had occasion to advert to your proceedings in order as I stated to vindicate my Government, it was a great satisfaction to me to feel that I had only to refer His Majesty's Government to the decisive evidence of your Journals, which it is a part of your privilege to lay before them.

I have ever had reason to repose with too much confidence, in the candor and good sense of the great mass of the people to apprehend any injurious effect from the attempt to excite a groundless suspicion that they are subject to be misrepresented by me to their Sovereign. However much therefore I may regret them on other grounds, I do not in that point of view feel much concern at the expressions in regard to this Government which the house of assembly have thought fit to use in their resolutions, and in their address to the King.

ture, which must result in the greatest benefits to the Province generally. The Advertisement contained in this paper, points out some of these benefits, and shews on what terms the Marmora wares are disposed of.

Friday Evening.—The Attorney General has this day submitted to the House, after a most luminous Speech, his propositions for effecting the improvement of the Highways. At this late hour we can only state the general nature of the Resolutions which he has introduced.—He suggests that all persons liable to perform Statute Labor shall commute for one day, at the rate of 2s. 6d. which will realise about £5000 per annum, and which shall form a fund for paying the interest and liquidating the principal of a loan of £25,000 to be expended on the principal Highway, from the Eastern boundary of the Province to Sandwich, so as to render it practicable for Stage Coaches, and for some other of the Main Roads in the Province.—The proposition we have every reason to think, will, with some trifling modification be carried into effect.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

MR DEAR SIR.

Some days since a Card was put into my hands, by which I understood that the examination at the Royal Grammar School in York was to commence on the next Friday—and though in my fondness for a Bachelor's life I have generally tried to persuade myself that a family of Children was a great Plague—and the neighbourhood of a School an intolerable nuisance, I could not refrain from wishing to be present. The contents of the card forced on my recollection times long past by—& scenes far over the sea in which I was myself an actor—I desired again to recal the joyous hours of boyhood, and by sympathy with others to feel again the hopes and fears, the anxious but pleasurable excitements of that happiest period of human life.

Accordingly at an early hour on the day appointed I attended at the School, in which I found my worthy and Reverend friend Doctor Phillips in the midst of his boys—they were truly a set of fine little fellows—I do not wonder at my friend the Doctor being proud of them, and the mutual confidence and good understanding which seemed to subsist between the master and his scholars—proved at once the good discipline in which the school was kept, and the kindly feelings of the instructor towards his pupils—some of the boys I was before acquainted with—many I am sorry to say, were new first to me, so that I had full employment, until the company who were to witness the examination arrived, in learning the names, and watching the sly pranks of the spirited little urchins of the younger classes—who seeing that the master could not attend to their proceedings, seemed to feel their innocent gaiety, which even the impending examination was not sufficient to conquer.

The Lieutenant Governor and Lady Sarah Maitland soon entered with their suite. His Excellency and her Ladyship took their places on an elevated Bench opposite the Stage, the room was gradually filled with company and displayed agreat portion of the beauty, elegance and fashion of the Metropolis—I acknowledge I could not help sighing—& do not I beg of you be so malicious as to take pleasure in my weakness. For alas there was much more than sufficient in the scene to move the heart of a determined old Bachelor. I could not endure to reflect upon my state of single blessedness—so I determined to occupy my mind in making observations on the course of the examination—and to report them to you, for the purpose of being inserted in your valuable paper if you should think them correct. I was happy as I made this resolution in receiving a friendly nod. from yourself as you entered the room, as it assured me that you would be able to judge of the impartiality and propriety of my statement.

The business of the day commenced with an Address—written by a gentleman of this town. Of its merits I shall say nothing, as you have hinted your intention to give it to the public in your next paper. I can only say, I am confident it has given pleasure to all participants in the feelings expressed by the author; and acknowledge that the compliments paid to the distinguished individual designated in the address, as "Youth's kind father and the schoolboy friend," and to the gentlemen who owe to him their education, were richly deserved and on the other hand I am sure that title given to that Gentleman, could not have been disagreeable to one who had exerted himself so long in promoting education in the Province and whose exertions had been so eminently successful.

This opening address was spoken by Mr. George Dupont Wells. The Poet's wife were present must have felt that ample justice was done to his production. The distinct enunciation, correct emphasis and tasteful action of the young gentleman, was highly creditable to himself and his instructors in the art of elocution.

Mr. George Sherwood and Mr George C. Strachan went through the the well known, and excellent scene of Edward and Warwick. I should without hesitation have said it was admirably done—but that I think they were excelled by others in Elocution. I feel the less reluctance to give this judgment because both these gentlemen can well spare the prize of excellence on this particular from the honor's which they deservedly gained in others.

The audience was then entertained by a Parliamentary debate. In which Mr. G. Strachan would perhaps have been the best speaker but for his serious mien not quite as good as that of others, and in some measure lessened the effect of his declamation. I think Mr. H. W. Blackstone and Mr. Wells displayed the point of promptness very closely—Mr. John Strachan repeated the "Men of Ross," very well—Mr. James L. Robinson considering that he is almost too young for the exercise, repeated Brutus on the death of Cæsar, admirably.

If I were to mention every name and remark on every piece spoken, it would take up more room than you can afford to a single article—I shall confine myself therefore to the most distinguished.

"Alexander's feast," was spoken by Mr. H. W. Blackstone—it was done with great spirit and elicited great applause from the Audience.

"Campbell's last Man," by Mr. John Strachan, well.

Addison's Hymn—by Mr. G. D. Wells—well.

The two first acts of the Adelphi of Terence—were performed in their native tongue. The manner in which it was done, did high honor to the school—Mr. G. Strachan as Mitio—Mr. G Sherwood—as Demea, Mr. W. McMurray as Ctesipho and Mr. H. W. Blackstone as Sannio, shone the most.

The company seperated very much gratified at what they had witnessed—I was also well pleased, though I could not help comparing my solitary condition, with that of the happy parents I saw around me—I found my Bachelor prejudice much disturbed, and determined to attend the examination which was to proceed on the following Tuesday

Yours,
A. B.

For the U E. Loyalist

By the Canadian Freeman of the 7th inst. I observe that a Mr. "Gamaliel," in rather broad terms, has attacked the Letter of the Bishop of Quebec to those under his charge—This attack appears to me wanton and uncalled for, inasmuch as after a careful and attentive perusal of the Bishop's Letter, I cannot discover that it expresses an illiberal word, or indicates any feeling but that which has emanated from an honest, and impartial desire to set forth the rights of the Church as they are established, with a view to the more clear, and general understanding of them, to prevent imposition upon its adherents, without overrating any thing in its favor—in short it appears to me to have been dictated by a nice feeling of benevolence and Christian charity, which I have read with no small degree of satisfaction and pride, that a communication of such a pure, meek, and amiable character should proceed from the head of the Church in defence of its established rights, after being assailed in various Communications that have appeared in Journals of both Provinces with a spirit that can never attach true credit to a Christian cause

This "Gamaliel" affects a degree of fluency and ease when writing upon "Constitutional" matters; but his readers will be better able to measure the extent of his "Constitutional" knowledge, when they read and compare the history of the Provinces, their "Constitutional" Act (31 Geo 3d) and the Bishop's Letter, and the belief of the Bishop may they may have gained with his most sapient supposition that "His Majesty under the persuasion of some Civil Counsellors should in the exercise of his Royal Prerogative by Proclamation, or Order in Council, declare this Province to be annexed to the Coalty of Middlesex in England as a portion thereof," as a case in point—this will at once shew the character of his pretensions, and the strength of his argumentative powers—and may lead to the conviction that his "Constitutional" knowledge is not so profound as he would assume, and that he may censure the Bishop's Letter is not only indecent, but impertinent.

"Gamaliel's" remarks upon the opinion of the Bishop as to the Members of the Church, "that her disciples as we are disposed to believe, estimate her choice of any other single society," are unbecoming and disingenuous.—What authority has he for insinuating that this is not the real belief of the Bishop, in so far as it relates to those who have been partakers of Canada where from the industry of the enemies of the Church, a contrary opinion has been held, actual exertion has been since made to ascertain her numbers, and the belief of the Bishop has been fully borne out, as evincing a good knowledge of the country—and it is my belief that if an actual census of this Province were made, the result would prove the correctness of the opinion.

"Gamaliel" may call "Judgement" that the Bishop's letter contains "doctrines" that "tend to the subversion of our well-balanced Constitution," but if his readers, previous to making up their "judgment" will read the particulars beforementioned, I doubt not, they will be convinced, that neither the Bishop, Doctor Strachan, nor themselves, will have occasion to ask information about the "constitution," or the rights of the Church, "at the feet of" this "Gamaliel."

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands hereinafter reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, by their Evidence therein, give due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our said Province, and Major General Commanding our Forces therein, at York, this Twenty-eighth day of December in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-six, and in the Seventh Year of our reign.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25½ per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Ket les, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly—They are offered for sale at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the care which has hitherto been taken in the moulding, they have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are strictly necessary and consequently economical—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

W. WINTER WRIGHT.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim in consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 15th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term: but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

Poetry.

The following touching effusion is from a little Volume entitled "My early days," by Walter Farquhar, Esq.

A MOTHER'S GIFT.

Remember, love, who gave thee this,
When other days shall come;
When she who had thy earliest kiss,
Sleeps in her narrow home.
Remember 'twas a mother gave
The gift to one she'd die to save.

That mother sought a pledge of love,
The holiest for her too:
And from the gifts of God above,
She chose a goodly one.
She chose for her beloved boy,
The source of light, and life, and joy.

And bade him keep the gift,—that when
The parting hour would come,
They might have hope to meet again,
In an eternal home.
She said his faith in that would be
Sweet incense to her memory.

And should the scoffer in his pride,
Laugh that fond faith to scorn,
And bid that cast the pledge aside,
That he from youth had borne.
She bade him pause and ask his breast,
If he, or she, had loved him best.

A parent's blessing on her son
Goes with this holy thing:
The love that would retain the one
Must to the other cling.
Remember 'tis no idle toy,
A mother's gift—Remember, boy!

Statement of Facts, relating to the trespass, on the Printing Press, in the possession of Mr. William Lyon M'Kenzie, in June 1826. Addressed to the public generally, and particularly to the subscribers and supporters of the Colonial Advocate.

STATEMENT &c.

Need I say what must have been the feelings of those thus injured, and what ought to have been the feelings of all mankind, against the individual who, for the chance of making a few pounds by such a trade, rather than by the honest exercise of his mind and hands, could thus scatter his base calumnies to excite the hatred of the malignant, and the ridicule of the unfeeling, to inflict pain and injury for which he could never atone?

If I speak warmly on this subject, it is because I am myself the instance of the most cruel persecution of this heartless man. I never had with him either transaction or dispute of any kind—I held no situation that made me responsible for any act of the Government, or that gave me any share in their measures—I am not, and never was, a politician, not having either the station or the disposition, and not pretending to the talent that leads a person into the path; if any merit belongs to me for it, I had, like almost every other person, allowed his slanderous attacks upon myself and others to pass unnoticed. I never condescended to be the author of a line in print in which he or his Colonial Advocate was spoken of.

But this signified nothing—I was connected with persons who served the Government—in an humble office I had the honor to serve it myself. I was, as every man of character is, the friend of those Gentlemen whom he thought it his interest to abuse most; and I had a mother and a wife, whose feelings he might wound, and children, whose love and respect for their father might make them one day feel their share of the pain, to which they could not yet be sensible.

These were, in Mr. M'Kenzie's eyes, sufficient reasons, for I can fancy no other, for stigmatizing me in his paper as a Murderer—in his paper, which he boasted of sending to all corners of the world, and which you all know he sent to all who would receive it, and to hundreds who would not.

In making this charge, he knew he should be understood by all who read his Paper here, to be alluding to an occurrence, the most distressing of my life, which he has, within these few days, unreservedly recurred to in his Paper, endeavouring to attach to it every feeling of horror for which falsehood could invent a motive.

I will not, I cannot, for feeling forbids me, dwell upon the circumstances of a misfortune, which the heart of no man should have suffered him wantonly to recall to the recollection of those whose affliction may have been at least alleviated by time—it is not necessary I should.—Conscious that I acted under a fatal necessity, which the condition of human society imposes, I surrendered myself unhesitatingly to the officers of Justice—I endured imprisonment, unmitigated by favor—I underwent a public trial under circumstances of peculiar disadvantage, and was readily acquitted by a Jury of my Countrymen. The whole melancholy story has been long given to the world—I will not do so now—injustice to myself or such violence to the best feelings of mankind, as affect to be without that lasting sensation of regret, which the greatest of misfortunes has unavoidably occasioned, and which it is my lot, as it has been the lot of many with whom I cannot presume to compare myself, to bear and to lament.

After Mr. M'Kenzie had, in defiance of all shame and of every feeling of restraint, sent into the world the very disgraceful Papers I have alluded to, and in particular that of the 18th May, 1826, which I have already mentioned, he seemed to consider it a very necessary measure of prudence to keep himself as much as possible from the view and contact of the Society which he had insulted.

He could not indeed have walked into the street, without meeting the husband, son, or brother of some female whose feelings he had outraged, and scarcely indeed without meeting some one of the numerous individuals whose characters he had wantonly attacked, with an equal disregard of decency and truth.

I only desire any person to turn to his paper of the 18th May, 1826, and, having read it as deliberately as his patience will allow him, to ask himself, whether it is not expecting too much from the members of any community on earth, to suppose, that the person who had dared to propogate these odious slanders, could, while the recollection of them was fresh in the minds of those he had insulted, walk the public streets, with impunity, enjoying with a malignant smile, the pain he had inflicted. My belief is, that he thought and felt it to be unsafe to make the experiment; for he could hardly have done otherwise than expect the same chastisement here, which, for much less provocation, he had more than once received in other parts of the Province.

The public feeling, indeed, was immediately expressed, and very unequivocally; Letters from those who had formerly befriended him, were inserted in other newspapers, declaring their abhorrence of his conduct—Subscribers withdrew their names—his papers were returned; and those who had been his Agents, were anxious to rid themselves of the discredit of having any connection with such a paper, or such a person, by publicly renouncing their Agency.

It was currently reported, that his creditors, seeing that his situation had become hopeless, had, by his consent, taken possession of his Press, and that he had given up his establishment, and intended to take leave of the Province. I believe now, that it was so—that the experiment he had made was indeed about to end in the way most creditable to the Country—that the want of public patronage, and the decided expression of public detestation had really put an end to Mr. M'Kenzie's slanderous career.

In common with others I expected such a result, and did not believe that another paper would be issued from the press of the Colonial Advocate. No one has greater reason than myself to wish that not another had—for in that case, my first notice of Mr. M'Kenzie's press would have been spared as well as this—the last, I trust, which I shall ever feel it necessary to take of him, or of his trade of calumny, which he has since driven, and which he no doubt will continue to drive so long as it suits his purpose, and is permitted to go unpunished.

But the rancour of Mr. M'Kenzie's mind was not yet satisfied.—He had up to the moment of his hasty departure shot his poisoned arrows where he pleased—he had been called to no account—he had had every thing his own way—and even when he left his trade and this country together he yielded only to a necessity of his own creating. But what was his last resource? He went to Lewistown to be sure—and took up his residence in the U. States—but he left as managing journeyman at York, a person who had some years ago been convicted of a seditious libel, and pardoned upon his earnest assurance no doubt, of repentance—and in the hands of this man, and two or three apprentices, the press was still left, to usher into the world, under the conduct of no person apparently responsible, such falsehoods as Mr. M'Kenzie, now out of the reach of justice, might choose to send them from a foreign country.

When the first number that was printed, under those extraordinary circumstances, made its appearance, it is not to be wondered, that all had not patience under such an abuse.

Mr. M'Kenzie has affected to record the eight day of June, as a sort of era in this Province, because it was signalized by a trespass on a Press, which in his hands, had been used only to destroy whatever was most valuable in public or private life; and which he had so abused, that he had actually accomplished with it, at last his own destruction.

The facts have all been detailed on Oath, in a Court of Justice—they have since been trumpeted forth with more or less exaggeration in the newspapers of the province.—There is never a less room for misrepresentation or doubt—whatever was done was done openly—there was neither an attempt or wish to conceal a single particular of the transaction—It can all be told in a few words.

In company with eight or nine persons, most of them, perhaps all of them, younger than myself, I went to the office of the Advocate at about half past six o'clock in the afternoon, with the determination to abate an intolerable public nuisance—with a perfect readiness to abide the consequences—but I will freely grant without having reflected sufficiently upon them. The Press was overturned—the Types were scattered about, and some portion of them, unquestionably, lost, thrown away, and destroyed. No personal violence was offered to any body, nor was any intended, though I do not deny that if resistance had been made, under the influence of the feelings which actuated myself and my companions, our intentions would probably have been nevertheless persevered in.

As it was the extent of the injury was what I have described and nothing more. I do not pretend to be able to estimate the loss correctly—(not the loss of Mr. M'Kenzie, for it turns out that the press was really no longer his)—but I have heard others state, and I fully believe it, that 50 pounds, and perhaps less, would have paid the whole loss he had sustained.—The Press was soon afterwards in operation again, and I imagine without any very great expense in materials or repairs.

An expression of indignation, rather than deliberate destruction, was the purpose of our attack. In either point of view, I admit its impropriety, so far as Society is concerned, and still more its folly—of all that followed, the public are aware. Of course, Mr. M'Kenzie, as a moments reflection might have led us to expect, came back to the Province, delighted with his success. He had at length succeeded in producing such an effect, as I am satisfied he had been long contemplating. He had, on the one hand, a few inconsiderate individuals on whom he could wreak his vengeance, for an injury little more than imaginary—while on the other, he could make it answer the purpose of his politics, by affecting to believe, that the Government, or any person whom he chose to traduce, had been the contrivers of this hasty and thoughtless act. The loss, in point of fact, did not fall upon him, but, for all that, he now might assume the language of complaint, represent himself as persecuted, &c. by my imprudence, and the imprudence of others associated with me, he had a straight road before him for repairing his broken fortunes. We were all known, and were some of us responsible; and it was not long before an action brought against he by Mr. M'Kenzie, in £2,000 damages, showed pretty plainly his conviction, that he had at last brought his Press and Types to good market—his creditors, it is well known, rejoiced with him, and they had reason.

The Report of the Select Committee to whom was referred the Petition of Peter McGill Esq., praying for aid to carry on the Marmora Iron works, was read—and supported by evidence and documents. The Report was adopted, and on Motion of the Atty Gen., a Resolution passed, authorising the introduction of a Bill, complying with the prayer of the petitioner for a Loan of £10,000 he giving in security the establishment of the Marmora Iron works, valued at £17,000, together with the Lands attached thereto, and the personal bond of the firm in Montreal, for the payment of the interest on the loan, and liquidation of the principal in ten years. From the discussion which took place, it appeared that a Capital of upwards of £30,000, was expended by the former proprietor of these works, Mr. Hayes, that several miles of Road were cut at his expense, that since they had fallen into the hands of Mr. McGill, a further outlay of Capital had been made, and that with the loan now prayed for they are in such a state of perfection as will enable them, to supply Hollow ware, Castings, Bar Iron, &c. in sufficient quantities to meet the demands of the Province at a lower rate, than they can be purchased in Montreal.

The Resolution was reported, and being carried, a Bill is to be introduced authorising the loan.

Highways—House in Committee of the whole—Mr. ——— in the Chair.

The Attorney General said that a Committee had been appointed, and reported during the last Session, which was very properly composed of Members from different parts of the Province, but in consequence of the lateness of the Session it had not been fully acted upon—from the short discussion which then took place, it appeared that the Members had felt a degree of alarm, from the supposition that a tax was proposed which would be burthensome to the people.—The subject therefore, although one of the utmost importance to the Country, had been suffered to lie over. He had felt it to be his duty to bring it again under consideration, and instead of referring it to a select Committee, whose report might share the same fate, as that of last year, he had thought it the better course to have it taken up at once by a Committee of the whole House, where every Hon. Member would have an opportunity of expressing his sentiments, and where it could be more clearly ascertained whether they would give their approbation to any measure which might be suggested for the contemplated improvement of the Highways. When the House concurred in any particular mode for carrying the object into effect the subject could then be referred to a select Committee to draft a Bill conformable thereto. It could not be denied that the general state of our Highways, was such, as was disgraceful, and that they were both inconvenient and dangerous in many places, and had excited the general complaint of Travellers. At different periods, since 1804, to the present time, sums had been expended on the Roads amounting in all to nearly £50,000, sufficient to have made a good Turnpike from one end of the Province to the other—he would not say however that he was surprised that this had not been done, nor would he say that the grants made by former Parliaments were injudicious, because it had been found necessary to open many Roads from the new settlements which had been made, to afford the people an opportunity of having access to Markets, and the monies expended, had been laid out, over a great surface of Road. The measure which he should now submit to the House, would have for its object the making of the Road from the Eastern boundary of the Province to Sandwich, practicable for Stage Coaches at all seasons of the year, while at the same time it would embrace the improvement of the principal Cross ways in the Province—such as those from Cornwall to Hawkesbury—Perth to Nepean—Brockville to Perth—Niagara to Hamilton, and from the Grand River to the Lake in the Gore—and he also thought might be undertaken simultaneously, and it would perhaps be advisable to leave others to a gradual improvement, to be effected by the Statute Labor, and monies which might be voted from time to time would become good, but those he had mentioned he considered as being of the first importance, as great commercial Roads. The Assessment might be made on the same principle, which with the Statute Labor would be sufficient at present, to render all the other Roads as good as circumstances required. His proposal with respect to the great Roads was, that the Province would not be to make it a turnpike road in its whole extent—many parts of it were already as good as could be desired, and his object was to expend a sum sufficient to make the whole, which should make the whole perfectly practicable throughout for Stages. From personal knowledge and information he had obtained, in several parts which would require much improvement, he computed that there were about 110 miles which would require to be improved, embracing those parts which were considered the most serious obstacles to travelling—from the expense incurred in similar undertakings, he estimated that about £300 per mile would be required, exclusive of Bridges, and Culverts—the whole of which expenditure would require the sum of £22,000, and to cover the other expences he had named, he should propose that the sum of £25,000 be loaned, for carrying the object into effect. He had given the subrations which he should submit would be, that the Province should be divided into three great divisions, with a Commissioner in each—that the three Commissioners should be the persons to travel from one extent of the Province to the other, and from actual observation, agree on the particular places which required the contemplated improvement—that the Commissioner should, in his own division, should then advertise for letting out the Road, in jobs, by Contract, taking good security for the due performance of the work, which when completed, was to be subject to the inspection and approval of the three Commissioners.—By this mode the whole route could be put in operation at once, and would have the effect of producing a degree of emulation in the several Districts in the performance of the work allotted to each—by this means too, he had little doubt that the whole might be completed within one year.—He hoped that Hon. Members would come to the consideration of this important question, without sectional prejudices,—it was certainly desirable to make all the improvement as possible, but the object he had named he thought he was of particular importance, the great highway leading through the Province, being that which was necessarily used by travellers, who in general, were not to be induced to entertain prejudices against the Country.

The Hon. and learned Gentleman here adverted to the several modes which had been proposed on former occasions, for the improvement of the highways,—viz:—by an additional Assessment on Horses, and improved lands—by incorporating Turnpike Companies—the establishment of Lotteries—Juries on Statute Labor, &c. &c. all of which had not been carried into effect, and closed by submitting a series of Resolutions, embracing the plan he should now propose:

The plan which he proposed was, that all persons liable to perform Statute Labor, shall commute for one day only, at the rate of 2s. 6d.—The number of heads of families in the Province might be said be estimated at 40,000, which would realize the sum of £5000 per annum, of certain revenue, without imposing any new burthens on the people, to form a fund for the payment of the interest, and redemption of principal of £25,000, which he proposed should be loaned for the improvement of the Highways, and that that improvement should be commenced immediately.

Mr. Samuel Jones, After the very satisfactory speech of the Hon. and learned Gentleman, considered is unnecessary to say much on the subject. To some of the modes formerly proposed for improving the Highways, he should have felt himself compelled to object, but he was happy that the one now suggested was such as he could heartily concur in, as it did not call for any additional labor, or impose any new taxes on the people—a small sum in money was required as a commutation for one days labor, which must otherwise be necessarily performed,—the measure was one which fully met with his approbation, and he had no doubt, would be generally approved of by the House.

Capt. Matthews—although opposed to levying a Tax on some of the articles, which had been mentioned on former occasions, should support the present measure generally.

Mr. Lefferty—if any new taxes were imposed, the best that could be levied, would in his opinion, be an Income Tax, on those who were receiving large Salaries.——

Mr. Hamilton said that in his District they had good roads already, and having done their duty in this respect, he should think it hard if they had to apply their means in helping their neighbors—to taxes of all kinds he should object.

The Attorney Gen. explained—his measure did not appear to be understood—he did not propose any new taxes—he laid before the Committee several plans which had been proposed, with the hope he might be able to select which after much consideration he considered preferable, leaving it to the Committee to determine which they would chose. The measure he proposed was simply, to commute for one days labor, now required by statute, at the rate of two shillings and six pence, to form a fund as the security for a Loan of £25,000.

Mr. Perry agreed that the state of the Highways was such, as called for improvement, but he did not like the plan proposed of expending the money—the labor was much required in the Harbor, and the mode in which that labor was exacted under the present Law was in his opinion extremely unjust, as he had stated on a former occasion. The system proposed by the Resolutions might in many cases be found oppressive. He had given the subject a good deal of consideration, and would suggest, that Race Horses—Theatres—Shows and Exhibitions should be taxed—these were fair subjects for taxation, and would realise a sum sufficient to make a gradual improvement—he would not expend so large a sum as that named in the resolutions at once, as it would be liable to be squandered—he would also propose a sum to be paid in lieu of the performance of Militia duty.

Mr. Lefferty would rather see the money expended in the District, where it was raised.

Mr. Walsh considered it preferable to retire from this, the last Session of a Parliament, without putting on any more taxes on the country.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Scollick would divide the money generally among the several Districts.

The first Resolution, being put and carried, the Committee rose and obtained leave to sit again,——Adjourned.

Saturday, 23 Feby.

The House was occupied during the day, on a question of privilege, on a Petition presented by Capt. Matthews from Timothy Street, for aid to erect Iron works in Toronto. The Petition was voted to be, a scandalous production, containing indecent and ironical allusions on the conduct of the House, and after a long discussion, the greater part of which was with closed doors, the Petitioner was brought to the Bar, and on declaring that it was not his intention to offer any insult to the House, he was admonished by the Speaker, and discharged.

Summary.

The reported change in the Ministry is contradicted.

A London paper gives a letter from Madrid, stating that the Government of the U. States had offered the Spanish Government a pecuniary consideration, for certain privileges for its Merchant Ships in the Island of Cuba.

The plan of Sir Robert Peel is, that all persons liable to perform Statute Labor, shall commute for one day only, at the rate of 2s. 6d.—The number of heads of families in the Province might be said be estimated at 40,000, which would realize the sum of £5000 per annum, of certain revenue, without imposing any new burthens on the people, to form a fund for the payment of the interest, and redemption of principal of £25,000, which he proposed should be loaned for the improvement of the Highways, and that that improvement should be commenced immediately.

GREECE.

It would seem by the accounts from Constantinople, that war was momently expected between a Turkey and the Allied powers. The Russian Troops on the Turkish frontier, were under the command of Count Wittgenstein. who made so conspicuous a figure at the time of Bonaparte's invasion, and were said to be ready to cross the Pruth at a moments warning.

The British Squadron at Navarino had been recruited by three Ships of the Line.

According to accounts from Constantinople, of the 27th ult. the Sultan was preparing for action. The field equipage were ready, and the horses to be used in the campaign had been sent to Adrianople.

We find successive rumors from two or three different quarters, in the latest papers, of the destruction of a Greek Squadron at or near Scio. The accounts however are so brief and contradictory, and the opinions of different Editors so inconsistent, that it is impossible to give entire credit to any representation. The probability we think is, that Admiral Rigny has destroyed a considerable number of piratical vessels under the Greek Flag.—N. Y. D. Adv.

Death of De Witt Clinton.—The death of this great and truly respectable man is thus announced in the Albany Gazette of the 12th ult.

"DE WITT CLINTON IS NO MORE! The bright luminary which has shed its glory upon our country for thirty years is set for ever! but its remembrance will ever be as green as the hills over which it has revolved, and as permanent as the adamantine rocks of our country. Last evening at about 7 o'clock, the whole city was thrown into agitation and alarm, by the report of the death of the GREAT MAN, and subsequent accounts but too fatally confirmed the fact. An immense crowd assembled in front of his late dwelling, to ascertain the truth of the rumour which had gone forth, the most being loth to believe its accuracy, till it was fully confirmed by the attending physicians. He was sitting in his study, and while conversing with two of his sons, his head fell forward, and life instantly left him. His death was probably occasioned by a rupture of the heart. All attempts to resuscitate him proved vain.

DE WITT CLINTON.

He was a scholar of no ordinary acquirements—a man of genius in all its commanding attributes—a statesman who disdained all the petty arts of the demagogue—a patriot who loved his country and died in her service. His is the fame that "follows after"——enduring, expanding, increasing. He fell, by a great man should wish to fall, in the full possession of intellectual vigor, "with his buckler on," administering the will and wielding the destinies of a mighty commonwealth.—Albany Gazette.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, March 1, 1828.

The Packet Ships Canada and Corinthian, have arrived at New-York, bringing English dates to 2 January. The following Summary of News is from the latter.

The House was occupied during the day, on a question of privilege, on a Petition presented by Capt. Matthews from Timothy Street, for aid to erect Iron works in Toronto. The Petition was voted to be, a scandalous production, containing indecent and ironical allusions on the conduct of the House, and after a long discussion, the greater part of which was with closed doors, the Petitioner was brought to the Bar, and on declaring that it was not his intention to offer any insult to the House, he was admonished by the Speaker, and discharged.

It is assumed, by the London Journals, 1st, that the allied Ambassadors left Constantinople on the 4th or 5th of December; 2dly, that the arrival of the Russian Ambassador at New Orleans was the signal for the Russian army to invade the Turkish Provinces; and, 3dly, that the troops were to advance without waiting for further orders from St. Petersburgh. The campaign was to have commenced, and is now probably raging in the Provinces of Wallachia and Moldavia. But these conclusions, or rather the data from which they are drawn, may not be true, and we unfortunately have not the means of establishing either the truth or fallacy of them. To see the business, however, in as clear a light as the state of things will admit of, we have taken a series of editorial articles from the London Courier, consecutively, from the 21st of Dec. to the 2d of Jan. the latest date. From these, our readers must judge for themselves, and we leave them accordingly to form their own opinions. The extracts are, in our estimation, of great and intense interest.

There are rumours of a change of the British Ministry having been in contemplation. The facts seem to be these, Lord Goderich expressed a desire to retire from the fatigues and anxieties of public life—having never recovered the domestic affliction of the loss of his only child, last year. Lord Harrowby was offered the Premiership, but declined, when the excellent Lord Goderich consented, at the request of the King, to remain at his post, even at the sacrifice of his own feelings and comfort. The extracts which we have given will fully explain this transaction."

Captain Philpot arrived yesterday evening, at the Colonial-Office, with despatches from Lieut.-General the Earl of Dalhousie, G. C. B. in Canada."—Courier, Jan 2d.

Corrections.

We stated in our last number that there appeared to be little doubt, that the Bill granting aid to the proprietor of the Marmora Iron Works, by a loan of £10,000, on the ample security which was offered, would pass the House of Assembly. On public grounds, we regret that we have now to state that the Bill was on Friday, rejected, by a Majority of one, and that the advantages which were expected to result from an encouragement to this important Home Manufacture, will not be realised to the Country. The Works we have no doubt will not remain altogether idle, but from the peculiar circumstances, under which they are situated, it cannot be expected, that the benefits which they would otherwise be so competent to produce to the country, can be brought fully into operation for some time to come. It has been remarked that the annual value of manufactures of this kind in England, exceed that of the Gold Mines of Peru, and we think the valuable beds of Iron Ore, at the Marmora Iron Works, may very properly be considered as of greater value, than a Gold Mine would be to Upper Canada. The object of the application, and of those who supported the measure, was to bring into full play these inexhaustible sources of wealth, of so much importance to the general interest of the community.—When we last week, expressed the opinion, that there could be little doubt of the success of the measure, we did so from the fact, that is appeared to be the sense of the House, by a Majority of seven, that a Bill should be introduced for carrying the object into effect. During its discussion however it was deserted by some of those, who we should have expected to have found ranked among its warmest advocates. Although we feel an unwillingness in this place to mention the names of any persons, we yet, cannot avoid remarking, that Mr. Bidwell who voted for the measure at first, (cautiously we grant) was afterwards found, (and believing it, as we do, to be the general desire of the people in the part of the country he represents, that these extensive Works should be cherished and supported,) without any plea on the score of unwillingness on the part of his constituents, afterwards voting against a measure which in the first instance he received his support, and who, when he gave that support stated, that although he felt considerable difficulty in coming to a conclusion, had yet determined to give it his vote, as affording encouragement to Home Manufactures, of the greatest importance to the country. Mr. Perry too, when the subject was first discussed, certainly proposed the expediency of naming the sum of £5,000 instead of £10,000, stating however at the same time, that if it appeared to be the sense of the House, he might perhaps, for the sake of forwarding so important a branch of Home Manufactures, be induced to "stretch his conscience" (his own words,) and vote for the full sum. Mr. M'Bride who had previously voted for the Bill as all its stages, read his recantation, from a Letter purporting to be from some of his most influential constituents, disapproving of his conduct —On inquiry it appeared, this was an anonymous Letter, and on such a document it seems, he was induced to yield the judgement he had previously formed on an important question, during the discussion on which, he had an opportunity of examining into facts, and hearing arguments, of which his correspondents must have been in utter ignorance.

The measure has failed, and we again repeat that we regret it, convinced as we are that its success would have been attended with immense advantages to the country generally.—The Bill after having been recommitted, with a view as it was stated of affording an opportuity for offering some amendments, and the Committee having reported it amended, the report on motion of Mr. Perry was ordered to be received "this day three months."

Highways.—We have not been able to give more than a very short sketch of the Attorney General's Speech, on introducing his Resolutions on this important subject. The plan he proposes is one which we should suppose, would meet with very general concurrence; and when it comes under discussion in the House, we hope to see a desire on the part of Honorable Members, to forward so desirable an improvement. The improvement of the great Post Road through the Country is certainly of the first consequence, and to effect this, every thing like sectional feeling should be overcome. The stranger in travelling through a Country, forms a more or less exalted opinion of it, from the state of the Roads he passes over; and it must be considered, that their present condition is calculated to excite no very creditable reflections on its inhabitants. Even during the Summer months, it is difficult, if not altogether impracticable, to run a Stage from Kingston to York, in consequence of the many obstacles which present themselves. If any parts of the Road, it is true, are as good as can be expected; and the object of the present measure is to render them so throughout. It is proposed to effect this without imposing any additional taxes whatever on the people, but simply requiring them to pay half a dollar in lieu of one days labor, which most otherwise be performed in kind—this cannot surely be considered as a hardship on any person in such a Country,as this, where the wages of a day laborer are certainly worth more than the half dollar, which each person would be required to pay, taking into consideration at the same time, the great public good which is to be effected, and that that good is to be realized almost immediately.

Cobourg Harbor.—The Bill for constructing a Harbor at Cobourg, has been reported by the Committee and was read a first time on Wednesday last. We hope that so desirable a measure may be carried into operation, and that the Bill will not meet with any serious opposition.—From experience however we have now learned, not to be over sanguine with respect to the success of any measure, however favorable the prospects of ultimate success may have at first appeared. When we see some persons, supporting a measure on its introduction, and afterwards, when much time has been occupied in its discussion, and in carrying it thro' its several stages, loading it with difficulties, and then finally abandoning it, and voting against it, we cannot say that we have a perfect assurance of the success of any particular measure, from what in other places is considered, as a tolerably certain criterion for forming an opinion We know that all the Meetings held throughout the District containing a population of (I should suppose) fifteen thousand souls I verily believe, not one hundred signatures were obtained! The residue were made up in such a way, and by such means, as need no explanation from the "Fort Hope Meeting" and the "Haldimand Meeting" at which latter place there were 23 signatures obtained out of a population of at least 1500 souls, four or five of which Indians, and the rest, with a few of a low particular notice that a great part of the rest were persons without Landed property and were likely ever to remain so.

But I do not wish to revive a discussion that, (however it has originated through falsehood and misrepresentation, and however the imaginary cause removed by the same means,) seems now happily to be brought to a close; my only object in so doing is to shew to the conduct of Mr. Fothergill in this instance, is gained him at least the reputation of consistency, which he will no doubt take account in this District; and if his regard still, for neither truth nor honor were sufficient, one would suppose that common sense would have prevented the committing of so gross a blunder, upon even decency, as that attack contains.

Your obedient Servant.

To Zaccheus Burnham, Esquire.

Sir,

I should not have taken the trouble to notice the unwarrantable use of my name made by Mr. Fothergill in the House of Assembly, as reported in the U. E. Loyalist of the 9th February—were it not accompanied by an expression from you which might be construed into a confirmation of the charge made by him against me.

Knowing as I do, that you would not be guilty of stating or confirming a falsehood, I am free to acquit you at once of any intention at all militating to my prejudice. I therefore have to request, that you think I have a right to call upon you for a public explanation

Your Speeches stand reported thus—

"Mr. Fothergill knew that the people had been told that if they signed such Petitions they would be excluded—it prevented some from signing—but in spite of all 6 out of six hundred had signed it.—This was at the Quarter Sessions—and Henry Ruttan was the person who had told the people so."

"Mr. Burnham had supposed that the Honible Gentleman in speaking of the Quarter Sessions might have alluded to him as he was present at the time—Mr. Ruttan's name being mentioned removed the impression."

"I was present at the time"—at what time!—at the time I made use of the expressions attributed to me by Mr. Fothergill! You see the impression from this without explanation would be, that there was a time at which you heard me make use of the expressions alluded to.

There was a time I know well, when I have endeavoured to counteract the effects produced by the dissemination of seditious principles; and that time was ever since my judgment was sufficiently matured to distinguish between good and evil—but there never was a time at which I told the people that if they signed those Petitions they would be excluded,—nor the slightest intimation given by numbers who asked my advice with regard to the propriety of it, that they had an undoubted right to Petition His Majesty upon all subjects involving their public interests, and that if they were satisfied that it was unnecessary to Legislate upon the civil rights of foreigners (which at that time spoused to be the sum total of the arguments made use of by the writers on those occasions) they could be with propriety sign the Petitions—at the same time cautioned them against the machinations of a party raised for the worst of purposes, until they should have time to reflect and judge for themselves—this I dwelt upon both in public and in private, and, this you may recollect, if you recollect any thing at all about it.

I have no recollection of ever seeing or hearing of one of these Petitions at a "Quarter Sessions." You were present (in July I think) when the Grand Jury passed over the Gaoler's report on the misdemeanants confined in English and American papers, relative to the state of Upper Canada but nothing further, if my recollection serves me, passed at that time.

As for Mr. Fothergill, I have not seen him at a Quarter Sessions these two or three years past.

If he alludes to the "Fort Hope Meeting" his statement is equally untrue—I ask you, Sir, was there to the best of your judgment 100 men present when the Spectatifying ended at dark—I think there was not—and how were the names got? I ask are his "500 signatures out of 600." There was no signing done that day except to the address to His Excellency until night, at which time the Petitions were brought out and signed by the persons in that way reduced from about 300 (which to the best of my judgment was about the number assembled in the morning) to 80 or 60 at most! and I am informed eighteen signed Mr. Fothergill's Petition.

I have no doubt but he feels chagrined and sore at his success in the Newcastle District, being the only District, as I seem to recollect, in Canada, true to him for operations. He was, unfortunately for him, too well known, his apostacy in politics was too recent, and where people had the means of information, he was "Fothergill" more few. No clearer exemplification of this need be than this—that at all the Meetings held throughout the District containing a population of (I should suppose) fifteen thousand souls I verily believe, not one hundred signatures were obtained! The residue were made up in such a way, and by such means, as need no explanation from the "Fort Hope Meeting" and the "Haldimand Meeting" at which latter place there were 23 signatures obtained out of a population of at least 1500 souls, four or five of which Indians, and the rest, with a few of a low particular notice that a great part of the rest were persons without Landed property and were likely ever to remain so.

But I do not wish to revive a discussion that, (however it has originated through falsehood and misrepresentation, and however the imaginary cause removed by the same means,) seems now happily to be brought to a close; my only object in so doing is to shew to the conduct of Mr. Fothergill in this instance, is gained him at least the reputation of consistency, which he will no doubt take account in this District; and if his regard still, for neither truth nor honor were sufficient, one would suppose that common sense would have prevented the committing of so gross a blunder, upon even decency, as that attack contains.

H. RUTTAN.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

Mr Dean Sir,

Pursuant to the Resolution expressed in my communications of last week, I called at the School on Tuesday, and found His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, the Honorable and Venerable the Archdeacon of York, and several Gentlemen, just preparing to enter the House, with the Examiners, and I were read by Mr. G. Sherwood, and he was joined in the responses by the voices of all the Boys, who behaved with much decorum and propriety.

The Boys were then put through the Church Catechism, then the classical examination commenced with the sixth class,—the Boys were very small, but acquitted themselves well in Valpy's Delectus, and with the Grammar, and I construed—The fifth class parsed and construed, a more difficult part of the same Book, with an ease, which I had never seen surpassed—the 4th class did well with Cornelius Nepos.—The third very well with Virgil and Cæsar's Commentaries.—The second class—in Horace, Cicero, and the Grammar. They were all good Scholars.—I admired particularly the manner in which the Grammar was conducted Mr. G. Sherwood, and Mr W. McMurray as the best in the class.

Mr. G. Strachan was then examined in Horace, Homer—Cicero's Orations, and Xenophon's Cyropedia—and acquitted himself so well in all, that I saw at once the high honor that awaited him of being made Captain of the School, a distinction which his superior attainments certainly entitled him. Mr. G. Sherwood does not stand far behind him, and will no doubt have that honor the next time.

Classes in Geography and English Grammar were examined, and answered the questions proposed with much promptitude; after which followed the inspection of Arithmetical, Geometrical, and Mathematical Books of the Scholars.—The pleasure of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor was then announced, that the following young Gentlemen should be declared Kings Scholars:—

Mr. Samuel Smith,
" Henry Scadding,
" Leslie Caldwell,
" Chs's Thos. FitzGibbon.

During the whole time His Excellency the Lieut. Governor, with the interest he always feels upon subjects tending to public improvement, attended to the examination of each class, and the degree of proficiency attained by each of the Scholars—now and then proposing such questions as were best calculated for discovering the Boys most worthy of being distinguished. After the examination His Excellency signified his pleasure, that Mr. Geo. Strachan should be "Captain of the School."

His Excellency then distributed the prizes, and though in the course of the distribution, I could see the eyes of successful boys light up with animation, and their cheeks flushed with all the commendable pride of success, compared upon this public notice of their merits; I could not observe any sign of disappointment or vexation.—Indeed as far as I could learn, the boys who got the prizes were those looked up to by their companions for their proficiency in the departments in which they were successful. The Premiums announced were as follows:—

1st Class—Mr. G. Strachan—Robertson's History of America.

2nd Class—in consequence of the paper being lost, on which the marks of approbation throughout the year were placed opposite to each boy's name, it was impossible to determine the merits of the two Candidates—Mr. George Sherwood. or Mr. William McMurray were best entitled to the prize; and this point was left for further inquiry.—Doctor Phillips spoke very highly of both of the young Gentlemen.

3rd Class—Mr. John Strachan—a handsome edition of Pope's Homer.

4th Class—Mr. R. Duggan—Fathers find Fox, taut.

Premiums for the best Recitations.—Mr. Blackstone—History of England.—Mr. G. Wells—Robinson Crusoe.

A premium having been proposed for the best original verses written by any of the boys, on the Marmora Iron Works.—Five or six pieces were attempted—the verses which obtained the prize are so meritorious, considering the extreme youth of the author by whom they were written, (Mr. J. L. Robinson) that I must request you to insert them.

TO THE MEMORY OF GENERAL WOLFE!

Near to Quebec, on Abraham's plain,
The valiant hero, Wolfe was slain.
But e'er his parting spirit fled,
And he was numbered with the dead.
He gain'd the prize for which he fought—
That prize alas! too dearly bought.
And to the nation they raise,
A Monument of lasting praise.
He saw the French in terror yield,
As o'er Britain's valor gain'd the field.
The anguish of his mortal part,
Ceas'd in the triumph of his heart,
And just as life's last sigh was spent,
They gave the cry of "I conquer."

This youthful author is about ——— years of age —he received a handsome edition of Dryden's Virgil.

Premiums for good behaviour.—Mr. G Sherwood—Clarke's Poems.—Mr. G. Billings—Guthrie's Travels.

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor seemed well satisfied with the progress of the Boys, and the examination of the School was conducted, and about four o'clock, the examination had finished His Excellency departed

I hope Mr. Editor before long to see this excellent establishment much more extensive than it is at present, indeed I am sure must become so, from the learning and attention of its teachers, and the peculiar advantages it offers to those youths, who are intended for students in the new University.

For my own part, for the reasons mentioned in my last letter, Sir, I feel yet much disquieted, and I fear must continue so, until I shall have an opportunity of meeting the old of my departed friend, Dr. Phillips—under whose hands I hope to change the name by which I now describe myself.

Yours very truly

Coroner's Inquest.—On the 10th inst. a Coroner's Inquest was held at Point Fredrick, on the bodies of George Howeth and John, Wood, of the Royal Artillery, and Wm. Thacker, seaman, all of whom were drowned near the parade the preceeding evening.—Verdict accidental death. It appeared that the artillery men came by their unfortunate death by attempting to cross to Kingston; and the seaman, on hearing their cries, ran to their assistance, and perished in the generous attempt. We anxiously look forward to the finishing of the bridge, which will prevent the melancholy record of such accidents.—Kingston Chronicle.

The proprietors of the Steam-Tow-boat Hercules are now building two barges of the

The Editors of Newspapers in Upper & Lower Canada and in the States, upon the frontier, are requested, as a matter of benevolence, to give insertion to the subjoined statement and list of names.—

It has become an extremely common practice among the Emigrants, who arrive in Quebec from Europe, and some others of the working classes, and in many instances, there is reason to suppose that it is concerted between the husband and the wife, that, as the winter sets in or approaches, and the demand for work begins to slacken, the former should leave the latter with her children to solicit charity, and proceed himself, where he can earn good wages, which he lays by, trusting, that a deserted and helpless family will be regularly provided for from some charitable funds. The wife frequently protests and in some cases truly, an absolute ignorance of the movements and actual sojourn of the husband.

The names of some of these absentees have been accordingly collected, from time to time, with such particulars, as there has been opportunity to gather, and the present publication is made, both as warning to others who may be tempted to act in the same manner, and for the information of the parties themselves, who are hereby assured that the Conductors of the burthened and depressed Institutions for objects of Charity in this City, have been obliged to make it an invariable rule, to refuse all assistance whatever, to women and families so deserted, and they have consequently no resource but to solicit charity, in the midst of a Canadian Winter, from door to door. The men therefore are called upon, to make remittances immediately, for the relief of those who belong to them, and their employers are most earnestly requested, to use their influence with them to this effect, or to stop their wages for the benefit of their families.

Any information which it may be desirable to forward, respecting the individuals, named in the subjoined list, may be addressed to Captain Thomas, Secretary to the Emigrants' Society, Quebec.

THE Subscriber having been appointed AGENT to the above Company, at York, he is ready to Insure against loss or damage by Fire at moderate rates of Premium. FOR SALE.—Lot No. 29, and part of 30, in the 7th Concession of the Township of Pickering, containing 200 Acres, and having an eligible situation for a Mill. For terms apply to Mr. Andrew Mercer, York.

York, 26th October, 1827. 22tf

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purposes intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

Those who procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1810, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

JOSEPH WELLS,
Bursar, King's College.

FRENCH BURR MILL-STONE FACTORY.—E. & J. HAWARD, have established a branch of their French Burr Mill-Stone Factory, in the Village of St. Catharines, on the Welland Canal, for the accommodation of their Canada customers—where they will keep on hand, MILL-STONES, of various sizes, and will furnish on short notice, at New-York prices, any size or quality required. Their long experience in the business, and the superior advantage, by receiving their Blocks direct from the quarries in France, and the general satisfaction which their Mill-Stones have given, (which are in extensive use in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, in the Territory of Michigan, and in Upper Canada,) will, they trust, warrant them the patronage of Flouring Establishments throughout the Province.

☞ Orders addressed to them at St. Catharines, will meet with the most punctual attention. They will also dress Stones for use, and put them in operation, at reasonable charges. They will give purchasers instructions for dressing or putting Stones in operation, free of expense. Jan. 1828.

REFERENCES.—For particular recommendation of their Mill-Stones, which are warranted, they would refer to the following Gentlemen who have Stones of their manufacture in successful operation; viz.

Grant & Kelly, Fort Erie Mills; G. McMicking, Chippawa; Clark & Street, Bridgewater Mills; W. H. Merritt, St. Catharines; J. Crooks, Flamboro' West; S. Andrews, Ancaster: Norton & Bliss, Blenheim; M. Lewis Grand River Bridge; J. Wilson, Long Point; Cross & Fisher, do.; J. Zavitz, Butler's Creek; W. Corpwall, (near) York. 37-12

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Ket.les, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—and who is determined, as by shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices.

THE FARMER'S CREED.

Let this be held the Farmer's Creed:
For stock seek out the choicest breed,
In peace and plenty let them feed;
Your fields sow with the best of seed,
Let them not dung, nor dressing need;
Inclose and drain them with all speed,
Extirpate then each noxious weed;
AND YOU WILL SOON BE RICH INDEED.

Statement of Facts, relating to the trespass, on the Printing Press, in the possession of Mr. William Lyon M'Kenzie, in June 1826. Addressed to the public generally, and particularly to the subscribers and supporters of the Colonial Advocate.

STATEMENT &c.

In the mean time, and up to the moment of the trial, Mr. M'Kenzie was to be seen, traversing every corner of the District, spreading the story of "his wrongs," —his wrongs indeed!! the wrongs of him who, in almost every Paper that he published with that Press, inflicted without provocation, without other possible motive than malice, envy, or hopes of gain, injuries to characters and feelings which no money could repair.

He took his stand at the corners of the principal streets, leading into the town in order to catch the people of the country as they passed, and to qualify them by his harangues, of a piece no doubt with the statements in his Papers, to discharge, coolly and impartially, the duty of jurors, in his own case at the approaching Assizes, and in the hope, that, if they could not be chosen, they might at least perform the friendly task of instructing their neighbours.

His Counsel at the trial, thought it neither proper nor prudent to give, by his assertions, any countenance to the base falsehoods which Mr. M'Kenzie had uttered for the purpose of implicating the Government, and various official characters, in a transaction of which the Defendants alone were the authors; but the wrongs, the losses, the sufferings of the plaintiff were made the ground of an appeal to the compassion of the jury, and they were called on to prove their indignation against an outrage of which the circumstances were of course painted with the strongest colouring by the counsel, while the provocation, which no language could exaggerate, was kept out of view.

It was proved on the trial, by Mr. Mackenzie's own witnesses, that the general tenor of his Paper was scandalous and scurrilous; and the council for the defence, in language which must have carried conviction to every candid mind, shewed it to be a certain fact, that, in the first place, Mr. M Kenzie had sustained no actual damage, and that if he had, it was to be charged solely to his own misconduct, and to provocations more aggravated than had ever before been endured; and that the peace of Society having been infringed, and the possessions and property of an individual trespassed upon, some damages must of course be given; yet, if they were limited either to the amount of the loss which Mr. M'Kenzie had suffered, or of the recompence which his conduct deserved they must be small indeed.

The plain fact is, that the Press in Mr. M'Kenzie's hands had become worthless, and was a loss to him—when he abandoned it, it was left to his creditors—the loss of it, therefore, as to Press and Types, (had it amounted to £50), was in effect their loss, and not his. The loss of the opportunity of using such an engine of malice and falsehood, was in reality no loss to him or them; for while he had used it, unmolested, and unrestrained, either by force or law, or religion or morality, it had only incumbered him with debt, and covered him with contempt.

The jury found a verdict of £625—and it has been paid, not wholly by the Defendants themselves, but by a tax, if I may call it so, which our inconsiderate act imposed upon Society in various parts of the Province. We were enabled to pay it, and to disappoint the malice of Mr. M'Kenzie, by the voluntary contributions of persons who, sharing the feelings of indignation under which we had acted, regretted, while they condemned, the rash, imprudent, and improper act, into which those feelings had hurried us.

Mr. M'Kenzie, having received a more than tenfold recompense for an injury provoked by himself, is evidently disappointed, that individuals, whom his own unprincipled scurrilities had led into the only act of violence perhaps which can be laid to their charge, have not been for ever ruined by it—he would be content with nothing less than that they should be marked out, for the remainder of their lives, as proscribed members of Society—for ever unworthy of the countenance of the public, or the confidence of their Government. He would wish that an injury offered to a venomous Press, which had once been his, should be the only offence never to be pardoned and never to be atoned for—and he would see, with pleasure, nine or ten individuals, for one trespass heedlessly committed without concealment or disguise, and under the most provoking circumstances, ruined and disgraced for the rest of their lives, whilst he is permitted to continue, as he had done for years before, to stab the reputation of those persons and their families, without provocation, without remorse, and without punishment.

He has accordingly been ever since complaining, that myself and one or two others whom he ridiculously and falsely represents as holding high situations under the Government, have not been ruined beyond redemption by this one act; and he has uncharitably and basely pretended to construe the forgiveness or forbearance of the Government (after we had suffered for our indiscretion) into an approbation of the act. The object of such insinuations is as evident as its injustice—he must think meanly of the hearts and minds of his readers, on whom he endeavours to impress such groundless suspicions. While he has been labouring to produce this impression, which he knows to be false, he and the others whom he was prosecuting at law, have always felt that our case was most unfortunately prejudiced, and our trial prevented from being equal and dispassionate, by the step which His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor thought it proper to take, in dismissing Mr. Lyons from being a Clerk in his office, and thereby pronouncing, in the strongest terms, his condemnation of an act which was the subject of a law suit depending against us.

Besides this artifice of attempting to throw suspicion on the Government, Mr. M'Kenzie next attempts to console himself for his disappointment in not seeing our ruin complete, as well as his own fortune established, by stating that the extravagant verdict of the jury, which he hoped was calculated to ruin ourselves and families, was paid wholly by the Officers of Government, and by certain individuals, whose characters and feelings he had cruelly outraged, and by pretending that having done this, they had thereby proved not merely that they approved of the act, but that they had instigated and contrived it. I have on my part to assure the public, that so far from being indemnified by the contributions, which from various motives were made for our relief, the burthen fell heavily upon such of us as had the means of paying any thing: And I affirm, that the share of the verdict which I myself had to defray from no very abundant means, was such, that if Mr. M'Kenzie had made as much clear profit by his Press, during the whole time he has employed it in the work of detraction, he would not have found it necessary to leave the concern and abandon it to his creditors. With this simple fact before the public, I will ask, upon what calculation did the jury found their verdict? I have also to assure Mr. M'Kenzie, rather than the public, for many of the latter already know the fact, that among the contributors to the payment of the verdict, were many both of men and women, whose names had never been made the topics of his slander, and who, living in different parts of the Province, and having no reason for personal resentment against him, yet felt that the cause was that of Society in general, and voluntarily offered to bear their share in the consequences of a pardonable imprudence, committed under the influence of a most unpardonable provocation—so general was the scandal excited by Mr. M'Kenzie's paper!! As to the idea, that those who contributed to our relief approved of the act, it is hardly deserving of a serous refutation.

In point of fact, both I and my companions had the mortification to find that no one approved of an act, the impolicy of which, on every account (to say nothing of its bad tendency as an example), was too evident not to be seen by every body, and by ourselves as well as others, as soon as we reflected upon it.

No persons certainly had more reason to regret or condemn it, and none, I am persuaded, did more justly or more heartily condemn it, than the very persons whom Mr. M'Kenzie would insinuate (though he well knows better) to have given it their countenance.

It is true that some persons seemed to think it reprehensible chiefly as a breach of the Laws—and others as affording an evident triumph and advantage to a worthless person. All concurred in censuring and regretting the transaction from the moment it was known, and if we had been unassisted, except by those who thought we had done wisely, Mr. M'Kenzie's malignant wishes might have been gratified to the utmost.

Another act to which Mr. M'Kenzie has resorted for the purpose of raising a prejudice against us, and at the same time injuring the Government, is his insinuating that we had favor shewn us in not being prosecuted criminally for the act, as well as being made to pay more than ten times the value of the property, which we overturned and threw about.

We went without disguise or concealment of any kind, and in open day, to the premises of Mr. M'Kenzie, and did what I have stated, and nothing more. We were all known, and immediately prosecuted by him for damages. There was nothing to investigate; every thing was known, and it was for Mr. M'Kenzie to determine, whether, besides trying to fill his pocket with damages, he should also have us brought up before the Sessions or Assizes and punished in another way.

If it is the duty of the Government or of Crown Officers to prosecute criminally for every trespass done to individuals, whether those individuals complain of it or not, I think I have a right to ask why the Crown Officers have allowed Mr. M'Kenzie to call me a murderer, another person a shoeblack, and another a Beggar, in his Newspaper as often as he pleases, and to abuse in the most offensive manner, not only the whole Magistracy of the District in a body, but every individual, male and female, whom he chooses to make the object of his malice. I think their character is as dear to them, and mine to me, as the old Press and Types which Mr. M'Kenzie knows he had never paid for, could possibly be to him.

I know if I complain, or if any other person should complain, of Mr. M'Kenzie's Libels, the Grand Juries must notice them, and the Attorney General must conduct the prosecution; but, inasmuch as we have not thought it worth our while to do so, Mr. M'Kenzie has gone unpunished by the public, although he has not, as we were forced to do, made any recompence to the individuals for the injuries he and his Press had inflicted.

But people will know better what to think of those insinuations and complaints of Mr. M'Kenzie, when I state to them, as I now do, that the Defendants were, above all things, anxious that they should have been prosecuted criminally by the Grand jury or the Crown Officers, while the civil cause was depending; they would cheerfully have suffered any imprisonment, or paid any fine to the public, upon an Indictment, in the hope that such punishment would have prevented the Jury from giving as large damages to Mr. M'Kenzie, and they were disappointed, (and the Crown Officers know it), that they did not think proper in this case, any more than in other cases of trespass committed against the person or property of an individual, to interfere uncalled for by that individual, who knew the aggressors and had chosen his remedy against them. Our Counsel stated, very truly, at the trial, the handle that Mr. MacKenzie would have made, and the motives which he would have imputed to such a departure in his case from the ordinary forms of proceeding. But what is best of all, Mr. M'Kenzie has, within these few days, confessed in his paper that the Grand Jury, hearing the evidence given in court, did notice the transaction so far, that they sent for him to their room, and only forbore to proceed upon his complaint because he expressly declined to prosecute, alledging, that he thought the civil action was punishment enough.

No sooner has Mr. M'Kenzie pocketed his £625, and applied a small part of it in repairing the injury done to his Press, and the rest to his other purposes, than he resumes his trade of slander, and abuses the Grand Jury and the Court altogether, because we were not indicted, although he tells us himself, that he was expressly applied to and declined to prosecute.

I shall only say of this, that it is like Mr. M'Kenzie.

Summary.

It was feared for some time that the Thames Tunnel Company would not be able to proceed for want of funds, but we observe by the latest papers that they have obtained a loan from the government, sufficient for its completetion at an interest of two per cent.

The copy rights of the works of Sir Walter Scott which belonged to the sequestered estate of Constable and Co., were recently sold at Edinburgh for £8,500.

The Courier contradicts the report of the intended resignation of Lord Goderich, the English Premier. His state of health, it was admitted, was not good, but having such able coadjutors as Messrs. Herries, Tierney, &c. his labours in the department of the Finances would be much lessened.

The eldest son of the late Marshal Ney h betrothed to the only daughter of M. Lafitte, the Paris Banker, and considered as one of the richest heiresses in France.

The celebrated Marshal Marmount, Duke of Ragusa has become insolvent.

Polar Expedition.—We understand the Lord High Admiral has resolved upon fitting out another expedition to the North Pole.

England.

Liverpool, 1st January 1828.—Ashes have been in fair demand, and the prices of them have further advanced: Montreal Pot Ashes now sell at 29s. 6d, to 30s. for new, and sold at 28s. to 29s. per cwt. The stock of them in this port amounts to 5000 barrels, and at the close of 1826 it was 12 700.—Montreal Pearl Ashes sell at 32s. to 31s. 6d., with a stock of 4600 barrels, whilst at the close of 1826 it was 8100. United States Pot Ashes sell at 29s. 6d. to 30s., and Pearls at 31s. to 32s., and the stocks of both in this market are 1000 barrels against 4100 at the close of 1826.

During the whole of the last month the corn markets of this country were in a dull state, and the prices have been declining. Wheat for home use now sells of 7s. to 9s. per 70lb.; in bond for exportation at 4s. 6d. to 4s. 10d., at which one or two cargoes have been purchased for shipment to France. Flour is also more in request for shipment to Brazil & the West Indies at 23s. per barrel; and at this time there is no fresh Flour in the market.—There has been scarcely any demand for Indian Corn for a month past, and the price of it is now nominally 32s to 33s. per 480lb., but it is doubtful whatever a sale of any quantity could be made at 31s.—The average of Wheat for the week ending the 21st Dec. was 52s. per Imperial quarter, and Barley was 30s. 6d.

His Royal Highness Don Miguel, says the London Courier of Dec. 31, landed at Greenwich yesterday, about half past two o'clock. He was received by the Lord High Admiral, who was on the spot for the purpose, three hours, waiting for the Infant's arrival. The young Portuguese Prince is of the middle size, of mild, agreeable features, and bears a strong likeness to the members of his uncle's family. He partook of a slight refreshment in the mansion of the Governor, Sir R. Keats, and then set off, with his Royal Highness, the Duke of Clarence, for town, where he arrived about half past three o'clock in the afternoon, and alighted at the residence of Earl Dudley, in Arlington-street. His Royal Highness is expected at Windsor this day, and to-morrow one of his Majesty's stags is to be turn'd out, to give his Royal Highness the pleasure of an English stag hunt. The Infant will leave this country by way of Falmouth, for which purpose the Perla has been ordered from the westward from Portsmouth. He will probably sojourn with us for ten or fourteen days.

The business in the British Funds (Jan.) 1 has been so limited as scarcely to deserve any other observations than the notice of that fact. Consols for the Account, which left off on Saturday, at 84¼, opened this morning at the same price, then went down to 84¼ buyers, at which they continued through the remainder of the day. The Four per Cents 1826 are at 101¾ to 101¾. The Four per Cents for the opening was last done at 101¾. Exchequer Bills, and India Bonds, are about stationary. The former at 53 to 54, and the latter at 62 to 65.

January 2.—Consols opened this morning at 84 to 84¼, but on the reception of the news of the departure of the Russian ambassador from Constantinople, they fell to 83¾ 84, at which quotation they closed.

Ireland.

Melancholy Occurrence.—Died, on the 15th December, at the house of her father in Fitzwilliam-square, Isabella Jane, only Daughter of David Reid, Esq. of Milibank, near Fermoy, County of Cork, and aged 23 years.—The circumstances of Miss Reid's death form one of the most melancholy tales which it has ever been our painful task to record. The morning of last Tuesday had been appointed for the marriage of this amiable young lady, to James Hadden, Esq. Captain in the 3d Dragoon Guards; an union in which the characters and situation of the parties held out a prospect of worldly happiness, resting upon the fairest and most solid foundations. On Monday night, the family, with the exception of the mother of the young lady, had retired to rest.—Mrs. Reid remained in the drawing-room. A little after 11 o'clock she was alarmed by the cries of distress, and on rising to leave the apartment, she was met at the door by her beloved daughter in her night dress, in a flame of fire. By the exertions of Mrs. Ried, and a maid servant who followed, Miss Reid was wrapped in the curtain of the drawing-room and the fire extinguished, but not until its ravages had proceived effects upon her delicate frame which no human skill could relieve. The best medical aid was promptly procured, and every human remedy resorted to, but in vain!—And after a period, from the time of the occurrence of this fatal accident, of two days, spent in a perfect possession of her faculties—in perfect composure and resignation to the will of God, and without uttering a complaint, this precious and, perhaps, too highly valued gift of a bountiful and gracious God, was removed by him who gave and has taken away, and who had reserved for her a happier lot than all the advantages and endearments this world could bestow.

Foreign Intelligence.

GREECE.

Reported Destruction of the Greek Fleet.—At Vienna, papers of Dec. 29, also announce Smyrna letters of the 24th of the same month, "which make no mention of the burning of the Greek fleet." It is added:—"We begin to doubt the truth of this news." We hope the doubt is well founded; but the London Courier requires no doubt upon the subject. It is, moreover, stated from Frankfort, Dec. 25, that the letters which arrived that day from Vienna, confirmed the burning of the Greek fleet; adding, that Admiral Cochrane was put on board the vessel of the French Admiral, but was released after having given his parole of honor that he would not undertake any thing against the Turks.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Monday, 25th Feb'y.

Petitions read and referred.

House in Committee of the whole on Supply.

Mr. Burnham of the Committee, on whom was referred the Petition of John Covert and others, praying for an Act for constructing a Harbour at Port Hope, reported in favor of the measure.—The Report was received and a Committee appointed by a Resolution to draft a Bill conformable thereto.—In the course of discussion, Mr. Fothergill said that although he should not oppose the measure, he hoped that a similar application from Port Hope would be favorably entertained. Although a Harbor might be required for Coburg, yet the interests of one two places were in some measusure separate, and if only one should be determined on, Port Hope he thought was the preferable place—more than 50,000 bushels of Wheat had passed through it last year.—Smith's Creek, on which the Town stood was the original stream in that part of the country, and possessed many natural advantages for the construction of a Harbor, which Coburg did not afford—there it was an exposed Coast, and though he did not mean to say any thing against the person who made the survey and estimate, he had been told that he was not an Engineer.—The cost was estimated at £7500, but in his (Mr. F's.) opinion, it would require perhaps £20,000 to accomplish the object—Some years ago, the people of Port Hope, excavating a basin for a Dock, and he considered it doubtful whether the piers would stand the heavy sea which rolled in there—one pier which had formerly been carried out was swept away already.

Mr. Jessup said that if the Harbor at Port Hope was asked for on the same terms as that at Coburg he should vote for it. The tolls at the latter were all devoted to liquidate the loan, and the interest was provided for, by private subscription among the persons who had prayed for the construction of the Harbor.

Mr. Burnham was of opinion that the Hon. Gentleman was mistaken in supposing that the Harbor would cost £20,000—and as to the piers standing, he thought there could be no doubt upon the subject, for in it was known, that Vessels had already laid along side a Wharf constructed by a Gentleman at Cobburg, and had loaded and unloaded.—The Wharf built in the ordinary manner had not been swept away, and was found to answer a very convenient purpose. A Harbor would afford many important facilities, for the shipment of produce—the quantities exported would be very large, as all the flour, &c. from the Peterborough Settlements come to Coburg, and not to Port Hope, the Rend from the Rice Lake to the former place being very good.

(Messrs. Burnham, Attorney General, and Jonas Jones, are the Committee to draft the Bill, for the Coburg Harbor.)—Adjourned.

Tuesday, 26th Feb'y.

M'Gill Loan Bill—2nd Reading—in Committee—Mr. Thompson (Y.) in the Chair.

The Bill being gone through was reported as amended, and ordered for a third reading.

Wednesday, 27th Feb'y.

M'Gill Loan Bill—3rd Reading.—On motion made the Bill was recommit ed.

Ernestown Road Society Bill—reported, and read first time.—It incorporates the Society, for the improvement of the Road, and appropriates £100 a year from the public funds of the Province to their aid.—Ordered for second reading.

Coburg Harbor Bill—reported—read first time, and ordered for second Reading.—Adjourned.

NATURALIZATION BILL.

RESERVED FOR HIS MAJESTY'S ASSENT.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That a Copy or Extract from any Book of Registry, made under the authority of this Act, of the whole entry made in such Register, with the Signature of the person whose name is recorded therein, and certified by the Register or by the Secretary of the Province for the time being, or their respective Deputy or Deputies, shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient evidence of the Naturalization of the person therein described.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That whenever any Register shall remove out any Book of Registry to the Secretary of the Province, as hereinbefore provided, he or his Deputy, if he shall have a Deputy, shall, at the end of such Book of Registry, verify the same on Oath to be taken before some one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in which the said Register and his Dep-ty shall severally depose that, to the best of his or their knowledge and belief, such Book of Registry forms a true and correct record of the statements made to him or them by the several persons therein described, and which they severally verified by Oath or Affirmation taken before him or them.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That after the first day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and fifty, no further Oath shall be administered or proceedings had for the purpose of being Naturalized under this Act.

X. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person, to whom it shall belong to attest the truth of any such Record, shall neglect or omit to attest the same in manner aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of Two Hundred Pounds, to be recovered by information in His Majesty's Court of King's Bench; but such omission shall not prejudice the right of any person who may have taken the Oath or made the Affirmation required by this Act, or preclude him from receiving a Certificate or Extract, according to the Provisions thereof.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 8, 1828.

We have no later dates from England, than were given in our last number.

Naturalization Bill.—The amendments made by the Legislative Council to this Bill, were on Saturday last, concurred in by the House of Assembly, and we give a copy of it in this days paper, as it passed both branches of the Legislature, and reserved for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure.

The Editor of the Advocate asks us, what we think now—and whether the party wish to "keep the question open?" We will answer plainly, by saying, that we are inclined to think, if they could safely have done otherwise, they would not now have closed it, and the best proof of this is, that the "Ambassador" Mr. Randal, made a dying effort to "keep it open." He voted against the amendments, or rather, after uttering sentiments which satisfactorily shewed his desire to prevent its being closed, he backed out from the question, and when the Yeas and Nays were taken, he was not to be found, or more properly speaking, although within the limits of the House, he refused to be present, when his attendance was ordered.—This man has been extolled as being a person to whom the people are highly indebted, and yet he stands alone, against the unanimous voice of the House of Assembly, in their concurrence to the amendments.—If he disapproved of them, why we ask, should he be ashamed to have his name recorded on the Journals of the House, though it should stand alone, on so important a question—or did he suppose that by retiring to an adjoining room, while the vote was taken, the Country would remain in ignorance of his conduct, or be satisfied with the lame explanation of his friend of the Advocate, Mr. M'Kenzie, that Mr Randal was "not in the House at the time."—If he supposed either of these things, he will now be convinced, that he was mistaken.

It will be recollected, that during the debate in Committee on the Naturalization Bill, the 14th clause was amended, to suit the views of Mr. Randal, and that Mr. Bidwell stated, that the explanation which was given by that person, satisfied him, that it was the intention of the Government, that the provisions of the Bill should extend to persons, who were excluded by that clause, as originally introduced by himself. To include or exclude any person, or persons, was important—so Mr. Randal seems to have considered it, and in the fullness of his heart, he throws wide his arms, to receive all. Mr. Bidwell yields to his argument, and his own Bill, in the 14th clause is amended on Mr. Randal's explanation of the intentions of His Majesty's Government, which he says were the result of his efforts. In the Legislative Council, however, this same 14th clause is again amended, and restored to what it originally was, and Mr. Bidwell forsaking the able explanation of the Ambassador, and his effort—adopts it with three cheers, while the Ambassador himself retires to another room—"deserted it his utmost need."

A novel scene, was exhibited in the House of Assembly on Saturday last On the adoption of the amendments to the Naturalization Bill, the Yeas and Nays being called for, Members present unanimously stood up,—the Speaker announced the question as "Carried"—when Mr. Ralph, addressing the Chair, said he hoped it would be with three hearty cheers to the King—objections were about to be made to this unusual course of proceeding, but before they could be heard, the Drill which seemed to have prepared Members, with their Hats in their hands, was carried into actual practice, and the walls of our Deliberative Assembly rung with the hip—hip—huzzah, of a Theatre, or the convivial board. It has been asserted that spectators below the bar joined in this boisterous proceeding, but as far as our observation extended, we saw nothing of the kind.—It would in our opinion have been indecorous to do so, and might lead to a dangerous precedent, because if persons at the Bar, can with impunity applaud the proceedings, may they not also express their disapprobation —The scene was certainly a novel one.

From Mr. Burnhams reply to Mr. Ruttan's Letter it appears, that we were incorrect, as to the place, where Mr. Fothergill, said he heard Mr. Ruttan, make use of the words alluded to. It seems that Mr. Fothergill spoke of a meeting at Port-Hope as being the place where he heard Mr. R. make use of the expressions, and not at the Quarter Sessions, as we supposed. The mention of "the Chairman of the Quarter Sessions" inadvertently led us into this error. The error as to the place however, is unimportant.—The main fact, we have correctly reported—that Mr. Fothergill, stated, that Mr. Ruttan had made use of expressions which the latter denies having ever used. Mr. Burnhams answer speaks for itself,—and between two stools, Mr. F. may fairly be considered, as having come to the ground.

The Hon. D. Cameron, proceeded on Wednesday last to England, via Niagara. We understand Mr. Cameron taken with him the Naturalization Bill, which has been reserved by the Lieutenant Governor for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure.

A failure.—Notwithstanding the studied attempts made by Speechifying in the House of Assembly, and throwing out of divers hints, how very acceptable it would be to certain persons, if the inhabitants of the Town of York would patronise the Chandlers, by burning an extra quantity of Tallow, after the amendments to the Naturalization Bill had passed—notwithstanding the repeated allusions to Rushes, Tar-Barrels, and Roast Ozen—and notwithstanding the display of the Firm of "Essex and Wentworth," at their new establishment —all would not do. On Wednesday night, the glimmerings of a few lights, stuck up in the windows of some half dozen of detached houses, scarcely served to render "darkness visible" in our Streets.—This is what the Colonial Advocate announces as "THE ILLUMINATION"—and—"a great number of Houses." It is ludicrous enough to hear this same Colonial Advocate talking of those "who durst not light up." The fact is, not a fortieth part of the Town was lit up, and what has been the consequence of the cowering conduct? Why—they have reflected credit upon themselves, and upon the Town.

The pompous "durst not" of the Colonial Advocate will appear superlatively ridiculous, when it is known, that no intimation whatever of a public mind was given of this Illumination; but even if it had, we can tell him, that as many would still have dared to disobey the mandate, by refusing to "light up," and that without any fear of the consequences.

The Colonial Advocate has been guilty of making a most base, and false insinuation in his account of this (nicknamed) illumination.—He insinuates that a figure was hung in effigy, intended to represent a person, whose name we will not place in the same paragraph with this allusion to Mr. M'Kenzie's falsehood. If Mr. M Kenzie, or any other person intended it to be, what he now insinuates it was meant for, why "durst" they not avow it at the time?—He well knows, that if it had been done, the feelings of this community, are not so far lost to a proper sense of the feelings of respect, and esteem, for the rank and talents, and public and private virtues of the individual whom he delights in pursuing with his most wicked malice, but that a sufficient number would have been found, ready to resent such an insult, in the manner it deserved

The affair on the whole was a complete failure—and was heartily laughed at, by those who it was intended to annoy, and at an early hour, the feeble glimmerings being extinguished, the Firm of "Essex and Wentworth," at the Sign of the Crown, we have no doubt found themselves enabled, to declare a very handsome dividend of Candle ends.

Port Hope Harbor.—The Bill for the construction of this work, has been introduced into the House of Assembly, and received a first reading. As the Petitioners appear to have determined on carrying it into effect on the same plan as that at Coburg, we hope their wishes will be realised.—The success of both would be a double advantage to the Country, and no one can surely object, that advantages should be multiplied to any extent.

Communication.

For the U. E Loyalist.

To Henry Ruttan, Esq.

Sir,

In reply to your Letter of the 18th instant, I have to state, that neither Mr. Fothergill's remarks, nor my own, on the subject to which you allude, are correctly reported in the U. E. Loyalist.

Mr. Fothergill said, that at a meeting in Port-Hope, more numerously attended than any he had ever before seen in that Village, the people were told by the Chairman of the Quarter Sessions for the District of Newcastle—that a move had been made use of any such expression, or thought of doing so. Here I was interrupted by Mr. Fothergill who said he meant Mr. Ruttan, supposing he was the Chairman of the Quarter Sessions.—I replied, Mr. Ruttan was not there—but it recurring immediately to my recollection that you was present, I so stated it, adding at the same time that I never heard you make use of any such expression as mentioned by Mr. Fothergill—that I recollected your having addressed the meeting on the steps of the door, when it was nearly the dusk of the evening, and when the greater number of persons had dispersed—you cautioned them against signing any Petition without due consideration, and urged reasons in the manner you mention. I think I am correct in saying, I saw no one sign a Petition at the meeting, or saw any Petition offered for signature. I recollect Mr. Fothergill in addressing the meeting, say, he did not know a meeting was to take place that day, until about ten o'clock, when he saw the people collecting—that he had understood there was to be a training in the adjoining County that day, but from some unaccountable cause which he could not understand he observed all the intelligence, respectability and wealth of that County from the East, had come up to Port-Hope, and thereby injured the sale of his goods, which he should have completed that day, had he not been interrupted, and that he thought in justice the loss he had sustained, should be made good to him.

Sir,

CHARGE OF MURDER.—Two persons, named SHEELER and JOHN YOUNG; both of the Township of Barton, in this neighbourhood; have been committed to Hamilton Jail, upon a charge of murder—the latter as principal, the former as accessory—under the following circumstances:—

About a week ago, in consequence of some remarks which had been made by Sheeler, calculated to excite suspicion that a murder had been committed; he (Sheeler) was taken before Messrs. Proctor and Secord, two Magistrates of the District; and voluntarily deposed, in substance, as follows:—That some time last summer, Young invited Deponent to accompany him, and a young man, named Masters—who then resided with Young—into the woods; that when the party came to the edge of the woods, Young told Sheeler, to remain on the outside until he returned—that a short time after they had separated from him, he, Deponent, heard a struggle succeeded by the groans, as of a person in distress—that, soon afterwards, Young came out of the woods, and told Deponent, that he had "hard work of it," but that he had "killed him (Masters) at last"—that Young appeared to have been in the water, and his arms and legs were wet—that he Deponent, had been hindered, by threats from disclosing these facts, from fears for his own personal safety.

Sheeler further deposed that he believed Young to have been actuated by motives of revenge on account of Masters having given evidence against him upon a charge of stealing Timber.

In consequence of this disclosure, the Magistrates committed Sheeler, and issued their warrant for the apprehension of Young, who had, in the mean time, left home for the United States, as his friends state, "for the purpose of bringing back Masters," who—they said—"had left this Country for the State of New-Jersey, about the time at which the homicide was charged to have been committed." Young, however, was pursued, and subsequently apprehended near the frontier, & now stands committed for trial.

We understand, that though the strictest search has been made, in the neighbourhood where the murder is said to have been committed, no traces of the body have been discovered; nor have any circumstances come to light, in corroboration of Sheeler's testimony.

Resting, therefore, as the matter now does, upon the—not very probable—statement of Sheeler alone, it would be unjust in the extreme, to the Accused,—and might prejudice his case hereafter—were the public to form a hasty decision to his disadvantage; until some evidence, in support of Sheeler's deposition be obtained, therefore there is room to hope, (which, for the sake of his numerous connexions in this neighbourhood, we sincerely do) that he may not be guilty of the dreadful crime with which he is charged.—Gore Gazette.

P. MAITLAND,

Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come

GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.
