HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

STARS.

If you bright orbs that gem the night,
Be each a blissful dwelling sphere,
Where kindred spirits re-unite,
Whom death has torn asunder here;
How sweet it were at once to die,
And leave this blighted world afar,
Mist soul in soul to cleave the sky,
And soar away from star to star

But oh, how dark, and drear, and lone,
Would seem the brightest world of bliss,
If, wandering through each radiant one,
We fail'd to find the lov'd of this!
If there no more the ties could twine
That death's cold hand alone could sever,
Those stars would then in mockery shine—
More hateful as they shine forever!

It cannot be!—each hope, each fear,
That lights the eye or clouds the brow,
Proclaims there is a happier sphere,
Than this bleak earth that holds us now:
There is a voice by sorrow heard
Whose heaven-stirr'd strain of life's galling chain:
That voice is God's unfailing word,—
"The pure in heart shall meet again"

STATEMENT &c.

Statement of Facts, relating to the transpast, on the Printing Press, in the possession of Mr. William Lyon M'Kenzie, in June 1826. Addressed to the public generally, and particularly to the subscribers and supporters of the Colonial Advocate.

(Concluded.)

As to the amount of damages awarded, I have no inclination to say much on the subject, nor do I think I need. It is but justice to Mr. M'Kenzie's Counsel, however to say, that they resorted to no unfair or unworthy means, to inflame or prejudice the Public. The Jury have by law the discretion of measuring the damages, and it would be wasting time to say much of the manner in which they have exercised it. I have no wish to do more than to observe, that for insults far less aggravating than abound in Mr. M'Kenzie's paper of the 18th May, 1826, he is stated to have been twice horse-whipped in different parts of the Province, and for that particular paper, to have been hung in effigy at Kingston and at Ancaster.

Of these outrages he has thought it prudent to take no notice.—Had I, or any other person, whom Mr. M'Kenzie had grossly libelled in that paper, met him in the street and chastised him on the spot as he deserved, I know not what damages he might have succeeded in obtaining here; but we have all read enough of such proceedings in other countries to know, that his chance of Six Pence damages with an English jury, who should have heard his libels read, would have been at least doubtful. By what law, or principle it is, that the property of a Ruffian is more sacred than his person, I am at a loss to understand.

But I have done with Mr. M'Kenzie and his verdict.—Before I conclude, I have a few words to offer, which I think are required by a sense of justice to others.

The Public know the individuals who were associated with me in the attack upon the Advocate Press—most of them were young men—that they are not lawless characters is best proved by appealing to the whole tenor of their lives, and by putting the single question, upon whose property did they ever trespass before?

Not satisfied with abusing us first—then suing us, and then after obtaining satisfaction, returning to the subject and abusing us again, Mr. M'Kenzie has thought it would be a good stroke of policy, to insinuate at least, that the Government, the Magistrates, the Crown Officers and others, were all concerned in the outrage; and if he can make any one believe it, the truth or falsehood of the statement, is not likely, as every one knows, to give him much concern.

He has accordingly thrown out certain hints for public suspicion to work upon, and then affects to regret, that his Counsel would not allow him upon the trial to attempt to prove the truth of his assertions, telling him very gravely, that it would hurt his cause.—They knew it would, and so did he, for not a question could have been asked with that view, that would not have proved at once upon me the injustice and the malice of his own insinuations. He thought it better therefore to confine his calumny to his paper, and say nothing about the proofs.

On this head I feel it right to state, truly and plainly, with respect to Mr. Allan, who is a Magistrate, and Mr. Heward, who is not, and I believe never has been, that I neither saw them, nor knew they were in view. The transaction took place just at that time, in a Summer afternoon, that people are usually to be seen standing or walking near their doors.—The house of Mr. Allan is immediately opposite to the Advocate office—the house of Mr. Heward near and in sight, though more distant—and the Attorney General's office stands between them.

Had Mr. Allan or Mr. Heward been in the street before we entered the house, I am convinced I should have seen them.—But as they were not, and as the whole transaction occupied but a moment of time, being scarcely sooner began than ended, had they known what was going on, they could not possibly prevent it—and as to their being parties to it, and approving it, because they happened to be in sight, it might be said as truly, that the crowd that stood on the bank, last Spring, and saw the Squaw quarrelling with Higgins, and strike him with the axe, were accomplices in his death.

Another statement wholly false is, that the party rendezvoused at the Attorney General's Office.—If they had done so, it would only have shewn more clearly their heedlessness and indiscretion—but there is not a word of truth in the assertion. It is well known that the Attorney General's residence is a mile from his Office, which he therefore does not see except in office hours, and which might be used by any Clerk who keeps the key of it, without the knowledge of the Attorney General, for any purpose. But the truth is, it was neither used nor intended to be used on this occasion as a place of rendezvous, any more than the office of the Canadian Freeman—not one of the party had been in it, or came from it—and the whole foundation for the story is, that some of the young men were seen to come past it, and from that direction, as others did past other houses in the other street. The office, however, was all the while locked up and fastened, and the Attorney General, I dare say, at his dinner at the other end of the town, knowing as much of what was doing as Mr. MacKenzie, who was at Lewistown.

As to my own conduct and motives,—I confess the want of prudence—the impropriety, of the former—I cannot, and do not admit, the impropriety of the latter—I feel now, and I felt it as strongly after an hours reflection, that what we did was wrong—and I regret it.—It was infringing the peace of society, and taking the law into our own hands; and it was setting an example which might lead to worse excesses. I feel that by one imprudent and rash proceeding, we have been the means of supporting rather than suppressing a nuisance, and that we were doing for a very despicable person the very thing he wanted—we were giving him notoriety which he wanted to obtain by any means, and at any price.

But I feel, that more than all, the Government, and those individuals of the Government whom Mr. M'Kenzie had been employed in traducing, had reason to complain of our want of consideration, in subjecting them to insinuations which they could not condescend to repel.

I allowed persons, thoughtlessly, to join me, whose connexion with the friends and Officers of the Government would afford a plausible ground for a malicious calumny, not considering that their having been provoked beyond others by the brutal slanders on their relations and employers, though it prompted them most strongly to the act, made them the last persons that should have been suffered to join in it.

As the best amendment I can make for the lateness of my reflection, I have taken upon myself the task without the knowledge, and consequently without the approbation of the Government, whose servant I am, to give to the public this true account of a matter, upon the fame of which Mr. M'Kenzie evidently hopes to live, after the injury has been recompensed.

As to the morality or immorality of the act, I am easy on that head, for I feel that I deserve more the respect of society and have more reason to respect myself, as an actor in the attack upon the Press of the Colonial Advocate, than those persons who, regardless of the peace and happiness, of families, have contributed funds for the propogation of scandal and falsehood, by subscribing to the paper which has proceeded from it.

The original of the affidavit which follows, may be seen by any person in my possession.

SAMUEL P. JARVIS.

York, January, 1828.

Samuel P. Jarvis, Charles Richardson, John Lyons, and James King, Esquires; Peter M'Dougall, Merchant; Henry Sherwood, Charles Heward, and Charles Baby, Gentlemen; severally make oath and say, that they were the Defendants in the action of Trespass brought by William Lyon M'Kenzie, for an injury done his Press and Types, in which a verdict of £625 was rendered for the Plaintiff—That the act complained of was committed without much time for reflection, and without any deliberate concert—that it proceeded from the impulse of their own minds, under a strong feeling of indignation, for very cruel, false, and scandalous attacks then lately made in the Colonial Advocate, upon some of the Defendants, or their relations or friends.—And, lastly, these deponents say, that the charges and insinuations made in some of the public Newspapers, that the Defendants were incited and persuaded to do the act complained of, either by the Government, or by any members of the Government, or by any Magistrate, or that they had communicated their intentions to, or consulted with any other person or persons who were not then actually assembled and met together, or that the same was made with their approbation, are wholly and utterly untrue.

Sworn before me, at Niagara, Charles Richardson, to the said Affidavit, this 10th day of January, 1828.

J. MUIRHEAD, J. P.

Since writing this Statement, I have read in the Montreal Gazette of a late date (13th December, 1827,) the following paragraph:—

"The Colonial Advocate of the 6th "instant, has embellished his paper with a "curious diagram, purporting to illustrate "the destruction of the printing materials "employed in the publication of this Journal, and giving the relative positions of "the individuals whom he asserts to have "been engaged in the affair. We would "advise Mr. M'Kenzie to let this matter "drop, as we have it in our power to throw "some light on the subject.—Does he "recollect declaring to an individual in "Montreal, that his real loss amounted "to forty-five dollars only, and that he "had cleared two thousand four hundred "and fifty dollars by this business!—If "Mr. M'Kenzie denies this, we beg leave "to remind him of the time and place "where, and the person to whom such "declaration was made, when the Editor "and Proprietor of the Colonial Advo"cate was last in Montreal, at a public "house, not a hundred miles from our Es"tablishment, and to a person then in our "employ."

It is not a bad comment upon the opinion I have expressed, and I dare say, if Mr. M'Kenzie, or any of his witnesses or friends desire to know more they can be satisfied by a reference to the conductor of that paper, of whose name I am ignorant.

I remember an Editorial remark of Mr. Garnett's, the Editor of the Gore Gazette, which leads me to think, that he could, if he would, throw further light upon this point.

In the mean time, I think the Montreal Gazette has made it pretty clear, that instead of calling the verdict a two-fold recompense for all Mr. M'Kenzie's loss, I should have been nearer the truth if I had used the words fifty-fold.

S. P. J.

The Annual Report of the Board of Directors of the Welland Canal Company, for 1827.

In presenting to the Stockholders the Annual Report of the proceedings of this Company, the Directors have every reason to congratulate them and the public on the result of the last year's operations. And although they have had to contend with many difficulties inseparable from works of such magnitude, yet these have been less than might reasonably have been expected.

Although the sanguine expectations, entertained last year by the Directors, that the amount of Stock then remaining unsubscribed would speedily be taken up, have not yet been realised as far as individual subscriptions are concerned, yet the timely and effectual support afforded by the Legislatures of both Provinces during the last session of their respective Parliaments, entirely relieved the Directors from that embarrassment, which must otherwise for a time have paralized their exertions. The ample means thus afforded have enabled the Directors to continue their operations during the past year with increased vigour.

On the opening of the season, the Contractors for the Deep Cut, Messrs. Beach, Hovey, and Ward, represented their inability to carry on the work farther at the price contracted for, and the Directors, after a full consideration of their proposal, consented to release them from their engagements, and to make preparations for re-letting that portion of the work. Preparatory, however, to entering into any new contracts for the completion of the Deep Cut, the Directors offered a reward of £125 to the person who would construct a Machine that would remove the greatest quantity of earth in a given time, at the least expense; and many intelligent men were competitors for the premium.

The best Inventions were those of Mr. Oliver Phelps, and of Messrs. Pratt & Simpson, who have used them with great advantage during the past season.

The Machine invented by Mr. Phelps, which has been generally used, consists of a wheel revolving round an axle, having one end fixed to the ground, and at such an angle as to bring the rim of the wheel upon the same plane with the slope of the road up the bank; around this wheel a rope is passed, with a hook at each end, to attach the empty cart going down and the load on coming up, keeping the cattle at a draught up and down—the empty team going down being generally sufficient to bring the returning load up, with little labour for the cattle drawing the latter; thereby, in effect, reducing the assent to a level.

The rains set in last Autumn much earlier than usual; and from the stiff and adhesive nature of the clay, the work could not be prosecuted with advantage in wet weather, and the Contractor thought it most judicious to suspend operations towards the latter end of October—which, in the end, proved fortunate, as the rain continued during the whole of the following month.

The Deep Cut contained in Sept. 1825, 1,487,514 cubic yards of earth: there now remains only 371,643 to be removed; consequently, there can be no reasonable doubt that the whole will be finished in good time next season, as we have had but little more than two entire seasons to remove the great proportion already excavated.

From this to the brow of the mountain, including sections 7 to 16, (or lock No. 1) a distance of 4 1-4 miles, the canal is finished and ready for the reception of water, with the exception of 12,000 cubic yards on section 15, which will stand over till next season. This section and No. 16, for a distance of twenty chains, averaged 20 feet of deep cutting; the excavation proved very hard, and the Directors cannot speak in too high terms of the perseverance, industry and good management of the Contracto's, Messrs. Bell, Richardson, & Co. under whose immediate direction it has been conducted. This part of the canal, from section 7 to 16,) being a continuance of the summit level, contained, on commencing in the spring of 1826, 407,641 cubic yards of excavation, and 124,587 yards of embankment, which has been finished by the same Contractors, who were mentioned in the Appendix to last year's Report.

The excavation along the declivity of the mountain, comprehending the sections from 17 to 30, inclusive, and extending to the distance of 4 9-10 miles, is all finished, except what is peculiarly left for backing or filling in the sides of the locks.

The locks down the mountain, thirty-two in number, are in a state of great forwardness, with the exception of two; and the whole may easily be finished early in the ensuing season. This part of the canal, embracing the mountain descent, contain'd originally 224,556 cubic yards of earth, and 57,000 yards of rock excavation; 363,318 yards of embankment, and 38,000 yards of puddling.

The remaining part of the canal, to lake Ontario, including a distance of 5 miles, is finished and filled with water: it presents a surface of great width throughout, and affords a correct view of the magnitude of the canal. This part required, originally, 157,566 cubic yards to be excavated, and 56,609 to be embanked. For a more particular detail see Engineer's Report, Appendix, [A.]

Of the 2,333,706 cubic yards of earth originally required to be excavated, on this northern section of the canal, 400,553 yards now only remain to be removed; and of the 536,469 yards of embankment at first required, 37,362 yet remain to be completed.

Fifteen miles of the Canal will be finished by the first of June next—leaving only a distance of 14 miles to be finished, in order to form an uninterrupted communication between lakes Erie and Ontario, by way of the Niagara and Welland Rivers.

This portion of the Canal (from Lake Ontario to the Welland) being so far advanced, and its speedy completion being no longer problematical, the Directors thought no further delay should be allowed to intervene before the remaining section, (from the Welland to Lake Erie,) was commenced; and this appeared the more necessary when it was considered, that the Province can certainly answer its object but imperfectly, while this section remained unfinished, and that several months would be required to drain the great marsh, previous to its being undertaken.—The Report of Mr. Barrett, which contains all the information relative to this part of the line, will be found in the Appendix, [B.] and the Board, for the reasons which have been mentioned, concurred, in the recommendation of their Engineer, advertised immediately for proposals, and placed it under contract to Messrs. Monson, Simpson, & Co. on the 4th October, who are now employed on this part of the line, which may be worked to advantage in the winter season. On this part of the line the clearing has been nearly finished, much of the grubbing has been done, the ditches carried between three and four miles, and about 72,000 cubic yards of earth have been excavated.

During the past year the work has been conducted under the immediate superintendance of Mr. Alfred Barrett, Principal Engineer, to whom the Company are much indebted for his industry, zeal, and good management, in the laborious and responsible situation he has occupied.

The 13,400 acres of land granted to the Company, by Government, has proved to be most fortunately situated—the line of the Canal running nearly through the centre of it.

The public advantages to be derived from this undertaking are daily developing themselves, not only by the rapid improvement of the country on its immediate line, but by the spirit of enterprise and exertion it calls forth in the inhabitants of the country more remote, who appear desirous of availing themselves directly of all the advantages the Canal is likely to afford, by improving the different streams leading into Lake Erie. The connexion of those Lakes, by Ship Navigation, will have a necessary tendency of facilitating the improvement of the Grand River, the Thames, the Otter, and many other large and valuable streams, taking their source a great distance in the interior of the country; and, consequently, will not only increase the present Trade, but create new sources, to a very great extent.

WELLAND CANAL OFFICE,
St. Catharines, Dec. 31, 1827.

Summary.

The Army.—The privilege hitherto confined to the Foot-Guards, in passing at once from the rank of Captain, to that of Lieutenant-Colonel, and now extending to the Royal Artillery, is not only a just tribute to the distinguished merits of that corps, but is also a military propriety, inasmuch as it is the suppression of battalion rank in a corps never employed on service in battalion.

It is supposed that the whole of the forty three Lieutenants affected by this Order, will accept of the unattached rank of Captain, as they will otherwise subject themselves to have a junior Officer placed over them in the Army.

The Officers of the Horse and Foot Artillery will commence wearing their splendid New Uniform on the commencement of the new year.—Dec. 4.

The arrival of the Birmingham, which has furnished us with London papers to the seventh of January, brought the important intelligence of the Allied Ambassadors having left Constantinople.—Mr. Stratford Canning had reached Corfu—the French Minister was on his way to Toulon, and the Russian had proceeded to Odessa. No symptom, however, of actual hostilities had appeared, and it is still doubtful if the Christian Courts will resort to any warlike measures, unless Turkey should be guilty of some outrage; indeed, it is stated from St. Petersburgh, that the Emperor had renewed his disavowal of any intentions of aggrandisement, at the expense of Turkey; and that, unless the latter power commenced hostilities, the Armies of Russia would remain stationary on the Pruth. So the matter stands at present.—Albion.

The revenue for the quarter ending the 5th of Jan. has decreased £70,000 upon the corresponding quarter year is a very trivial amount, about £5000.

Taher Pacha, who commanding the Turkish fleet at Navarino, had been appointed Captain Pacha.

The packet-vessel Fanny, from St. Malos bound to Jersey, struck upon a rock, and sank immediately on the 1st ultimo. Among the passengers who were drowned, we observe Lord Harley, son of the Earl of Oxford; young Collins, of the Library; a Mr. Miller; a Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, married only three weeks before; and a daughter of a Dr. Murray.

The health of Chief Justice Best, was such as to render the prospect of his return to his Official duties improbable.

Great fire at Havanna.—We learn from the Charleston Mercury, that a dreadful fire broke out on the night of the 9th ult in the village outside of Havanna, which continued burning until next morning. Upwards of six hundred houses, exclusive of large stores, were consumed; and, we regret to state, eleven persons perished in the flames.

DEATH OF GEN. BROWN.

The painful duty devolves upon us of announcing the decease of Major General Jacob Brown, late Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the U. States. He expired at his residence in Washington, on Sunday, after a brief illness of three or four days, preceded by a considerable prostration of longer duration.—N. Y. Spectator.

England.

The health of the King of England is very good. His Majesty has had a slight touch of the gout, which interfered with his field sports with the Prince Regent of Portugal, for one or two days; but the Court at Windsor seems as fond by the taking of a little blood he had completely recovered. His Majesty entertained large dinner parties at the Windsor Lodge, on the 1st and 2d January, and the company at the latter day spent the evening with the King. The newspapers speak of His Majesty's health, business, avocations, and amusements as usual. The following is from the London Courier of January 5th. It speaks for itself.

Windsor, Jan. 4.—His Majesty's time and attention continue occupied with public business at the Royal Lodge, dispatching messengers to the different Government offices during the first part of the day. His Majesty regularly dines and passes the evening with his suite. The weather being unfavorable, prevents His Majesty from enjoying his usual airing in the Great Park.

The Parliament of England, which had been prorogued to the 20th of December, was further prorogued by the King's Proclamation to the 22nd of January.

A most destructive fire occurred in the vicinity of Leeds, England, on the morning of the 17th of December, by the destruction of the "Abby Mills," in which a large amount of property was consumed, and from three to four hundred persons thrown out of employ.

A patent has lately been obtained in London for making a fire proof roofing of thin cast-iron plates, so as to lock into each other, and effectually carry off the rain.

Foreign Intelligence.

SPAIN.

Advices from Madrid to the 24th December, received in Paris, mention that their Majesties would remain at Barcelona until the Carnival. There was much talk of a general amnesty, and extending the Royal clemency to Afiances, Carlists, Liberals, Exiles, Bandits, &c. Highway robberies continued very frequent in the vicinity of Madrid. A strong body of bandits had showed themselves within sight of the capital, and compelled travellers, from noon to sunset, to pay a ransom before they could pass. Strong detachments had been, in consequence, sent against them.

By Cadiz papers to January 1st, it appears that a Lieutenant-General is about to be terminated—he had heard of an ox being roasted in one part of the country when the Bill had passed this House, and he hoped, that oxen would now be roasted in all parts of the country.

Mr. Perry considered the amendments as mere Moonshine—the advantages of the Bill remained the same, and when it passed, he hoped it would be the occasion of a general illumination throughout the Province.

Mr. Rolph considered the amendments, trifling and frivolous, but would give his cordial assistance in the measure.

Mr. Peterson was highly delighted that the Bill was now likely to pass—it would produce a general illumination, which would commence at York in a few days.

Mr. Randall was sorry that the 14 Clause excluded certain persons—it would therefore be inconsistent in him, by whose efforts His Majesty's Government were induced to admit all persons without distinction up to 1820, to approve of it. This clause he considered as varying from His Majesty's instructions in the way in which it had been amended by the Legislative Council.

The Committee rose, and reported the amendments as adopted.

The Amendments were then read a third time, forthwith.

On the question for their passing and being signed.

The Yeas and Nays being called for—it appeared that the House was unanimous (Mr. Randall having retired.)

The Speaker announced the question as "Carried."

Mr Rolph—I hope Mr. Speaker with three hearty Cheers to the King.

The Att'y. Gen.—I should hope Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Rolph—Now then—joined by several other Members—standing and waving of hats —Hurrah! Hurrah!! Hurrah!!!

Mr. Perry moved that 5000 copies of the Naturalization Bill with the amendments made by the Legislative Council and passed, be printed for the use of Members—Carried. —Adjourned.

Monday, 3 March.

The House met at a late hour, the several Committees being engaged in preparing their reports.

Prince Edward Division Bill—2 Reading, in Committee—Mr. Bidwell in the Chair.

The several clauses of the Bill being gone through and adopted, it was reported, and ordered for third reading.——Adjourned.

Tuesday, 4 March.

Prince Edward Division Bill—read third time, passed, signed, and sent to the Legislative Council.

St. Catharines incorporation Bill—reported and read.—On question for 2nd Reading.

Mr. Futhergill hoped it would never again be read in this House—in England, year after year, the repeal of such incorporations was asked for—he considered the powers given in this Bill, equal to those of the grand inquisition—if it should pass now, he had no doubt the people would hereafter when they felt the effect of its provisions, ask for its repeal.

Mr. Lefferty has been asked to support this Bill but would not do so, as it would injure an individual in St. Catharines, and especially Mrs. Shipman, whose property would be cut up by it.

Mr. Clark said that the Bill was introduced on a Petition from a large number of respectable inhabitants in St. Catharines—it placed the powers of the corporation in the hands of Trustees to be chosen by the people, and as they desired that the Bill should pass, he thought it was entitled to the attention of the House.

Capt. Matthews having a mortal abhorrence to all monopolies, should oppose this Bill—he moved that the Bill be read a second time, this day three months.

Mr. Gordon would oppose this motion, because although he might not be disposed to vote for the Bill in its present shape, yet the petitioners were in courtesy entitled to consideration, and such amendments might be suggested when the Bill was in Committee on its second reading as would render the measure desirable. St. Catharines was rapidly increasing in population, and was without a Police of any kind—he would therefore allow the Bill to go to its next stage, when amendments might be suggested by Honorable Gentlemen.

Mr. Beardsley had not been asked to support this Bill, and for the best reason, they knew he would not support it—the object was to give certain persons, power over their neighbors, and to lay the foundation for returning a member to the House of Assembly.

Mr. Randall from respect to the Petitioners would allow the Bill to go into Committee.

Capt. Matthews' motion for 2 Reading this day 3 months, was then put and lost. The Bill was ordered to a second reading.

Dundas Free Church—and 16 Mile Creek Harbor Bill—reported and Read—ordered for second reading.——Adjourned.

Wednesday, 5th March.

A Petition was read, praying for an alteration in the mode of Elections, the vo es to be given by ballott, instead of the manner now in practice.

Mr. Bidwell should agree to have the Petition referred to a Committee—it gave the best reason why the mode by ballott was preferable,—that it was free from influence.

Capt. Matthews considered it the most important measure that ever had been brought forward.

Mr. Fothergill thought this the proper time for taking the subject into consideration, as a General Election, would soon take place.

The Petition was referred to Messrs. Bidwell, Rolph, and Hamilton, to report by Bill or otherwise.

Port Hope Harbor—House in Committee—Mr. Rolph in the Chair.

Mr. Fothergill said that the present was not a new measure, but had been in contemplation for many years past—the only difference of opinion was as to the manner of carrying it into effect,—he had no objections to see a Harbor at Port Hope, but he was satisfied that Mr. Harris who had made the survey at that place, had made assertions, which the whole country knew to be untrue—Port Hope was a natural basin, and possessed many advantages for the construction of a Harbor.—Smith's Creek was the largest stream on the North shore of the Lake, with an extensive back country, with a Road leading to the new settlements, from the end of which a water communication would be found to the East and West for hundreds of miles. The people of Coburg were fighting against nature in attempting to draw the settlements to themselves, when the distance to them was 16 miles, and to Port Hope not more than 7.—Last year the imports and exports from Port Hope amounted to about 16,000 tons—the erection of the finest flouring Mills were built on Smith's Creek, and a Nail Manufactory was established where more than thirty tons of Nails were now ready for exportation.—Although he at one time agreed more than Mr. BROWN, he did not now possess sufficient property to give him any personal interest in the measure, which he hoped would now be successful. He moved the adoption of the Report of the Committee, recommending the measure.

Mr Barnhart would not oppose the adoption of the Report, but would observe that Mr. Trowbridge, who had estimated the probable expense of the work, had never seen the place, or made any actual survey.

Mr. Gordon said that in all cases, where it was shown that loans for public improvements could be safely made, and good security given for their repayment with the interest, he would extend his support to them.

The Report was adopted, and a Committee appointed to draft a Bill agreeable thereto.

Fredericksburgh Surveyy Bill—reported—read first time, and ordered for second reading.

Kingston Police Bill—reported—read first time, and ordered for second reading.—The object of this Bill is to give the Magistrates of the Town, the police authorities with which they are now vested by law, and to confer them upon a Town Council, to be elected annually by the inhabitant householders.

Mr. Bidwell, in introducing the Bill, charged the Magistracy with neglecting and violating a duty required of them by law, in not having published an annual account of the police funds.

Resolutions proposed by the Attorney General, on the subject of the Highways.

Resolved.—That in the opinion of this Committee the bad condition of the Highways in most parts of this Province, and particularly of the principal highway leading from the Eastern to the Western extremity thereof, is highly prejudicial to trade and agriculture, and to the general interests and convenience of all the inhabitants.

Resolved.—That in the opinion of this Committee the present state of this Province, both with respect to population and resources, is such as to render it necessary that provision should be made to expend public revenue upon such partial and incomplete improvements as were unavoidably undertaken in the early period of settlement, in order to render the roads available in the first instance.

Resolved.—That the improvement which it is most desirable to undertake first, is the making the main road from the Bay of Quinte to the Eastern District, so that which in the Western District, a convenient Stage Road, because it is that highway which the greatest portion of the population have reason to use in transporting their produce to market, and in their intercourse with each other, and because the actual condition of many parts of that road, present an obstacle to that certain and rapid communication by posts which is necessary for the interests of Government, and tends to discourage strangers of capital and enterprise from becoming inhabitants of a country where one of the first comforts and conveniences of life is so imperfectly enjoyed.

Resolved.—That in the opinion of this Committee those improvements of the highway's which require to be undertaken next in order, are such as are necessary to give to those Districts remote from Dundas Street on the principal highway, a convenient access, either to Dundas Street or in any other direction which would afford a more general accomodation to the inhabitants in their access to Market

Resolved—That in the opinion of this Committee whatever resources can be derived from the assessments applicable to the improvement of highways, would be well employed under a judicious and effective system of superintendance in opening, making, and amending the numerous concession roads and other internal communications of secondary improvement to the principal highways, but of great consequence to the interest, convenience and comfort of the people in their respective Townships.

War Office, Dec. 10, 1827.—9th Regt. of Foot—Lt. Gen Sir, P. Robinson, K. C. B. to be Col. v. Gen. Ross, dec.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 15, 1828.

The arrival of the Packet Ship Birmingham at New-York, affords us dates to 7th January, from England. We have given such extracts as our limits will admit.

Highways—We can easily conceive the disappointment which will be felt throughout the Country when it is known, that there is not the most distant probability of any thing being done by our Parliament this year for the improvement of the Highways.—When the subject was first introduced by the Attorney General, the principle of the measure he proposed, appeared so equitable and simple, that we felt assured the period was now arrived, when this improvement so long and so anxiously expected by the country would be commenced, on a plan, the least exceptionable of any that had ever yet been suggested. We stated at the time, that although some trifling modification might be made, yet that the general principle of the measure was such, as we had every reason to expect would be carried into effect. The series of Resolutions proposed, we have inserted in this days paper.—The details we have before stated—which were, that every person liable to perform statute labor, should commute for one day at 2s. 6d.—to create a fund for redeeming the principal, and paying the interest of a Loan of a sufficient sum, to put the principal road throughout the Province in a fit state for Stages to travel on, besides making improvements on some of the other principal highways in the Province. The sum proposed to be loaned for this purpose was £25,000, which the fund would have paid off in a few years, and there can be no doubt that with such security a sufficient sum could be obtained by way of loan, to put all the principal roads, in a perfectly practicable state. No objections urged against this mode, were, that it would be difficult for the people to pay the amount required—viz. 6d. a year,—and that all were called upon for an equal commutation, whether they resided in the immediate vicinity of the Roads to be first improved, or at a distance from them.

The measure however being one in which the general interest of the Province is concerned, the latter objection ought not to have weight, and as to the first, we can scarcely imagine than any person would find it extremely difficult from the proceeds of his yearly labor, or the sale of his produce, to devote the small sum of half a Dollar for the purpose of effecting so desirable an improvement —that none would object to do so, we have reason to believe.—A modification however was proposed by Mr. Coleman, which in some measure went to remove both these difficulties, by a proposal to commute for the one days labor at the rate of 3s. 6d. —2s. 6d. and 1s. 6d., according to the situation of the individuals, with respect to the contemplated improvements; those nearest the principal highways, paying the greater sum, and reducing it, as they were further removed—neither this or the proposal originally made were acceded to.

The two first Resolutions as proposed by the Attorney General were adopted,—to the remaining part Mr. Rolph, proposed an amendment, the substance of which was, that an Address should be presented to His Excellency the Lt. Governor, praying that the House might be informed what sums had been, and were still to be paid by the Canada Company to the Government—the amount realised from Sale of Crown Lands, since the change had taken place in the Land Granting system—the amount received from Ferries,—to whom Leased, and on what terms—and the sums received for Crown Timber cut under Licences from the Government. An additional resolution was proposed by Mr. Wilson, from Prince Edward, for an Address to His Excellency, for the amount of Militia fines received for the last thirteen years,—from what Regiments, and the names of the persons from whom the fines had been received.

We understood Mr. Rolph to state, that if the House would go with him in asking for this information, he would devise ways and means for the improvement of the Highways.—He proposed levying a tax on Coaches and two Wheel Carriages with Steel and Wooden Springs, and Waggons of the same description.—Coaches and Carriages are already taxed, and those who use spring-less Waggons, we think would very reasonably object, on such a proposition. That the Roads could be improved by such means is entirely visionary.—As to the information to be derived from addresses on the subjects alluded to, they form part of the Crown Revenue, and are already appropriated to various uses for the benefit of the Colony we believe, and the Hon. Gentleman himself we rather think could not have entertained any serious expectations, that they would be devoted to any other purposes. The resolutions however were adopted in Committee, and rejected in the House. The two first proposed by the Attorney General were carried, and without the rest of the series, our House of Assembly seem to have resolved nothing more than, that the Roads are in a bad state, and require to be improved. To this sage conclusion they have arrived, after a long discussion, and with this important information the country must rest satisfied, and be content to travel over bad roads, till their representatives "mend their ways."

The Hon. The Speaker, has informed the House of Assembly, that he has received a notification from the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, that it is His EXCELLENCY's intention to close the Session on 25th instant.

Court of Chancery.—The further consideration of the establishment of a Court of Chancery in the Province, is postponed, until the meeting of a new Parliament—a Resolution to this effect has been carried in the House of Assembly.

Sixteen Mile Creek Harbor.—A Bill authorising Wm. Chisholm, Esq. to construct a Harbor at the mouth of this River, has passed the House of Assembly, and when carried into effect will no doubt be an advantage to Vessels navigating the Lake, and to the inhabitants in shipping their produce. The proprietor is authorised to exact reasonable tolls, the duration of the right of property being limited to fifty years. If before that time however, the harbor dues shall be sufficient to refund the amount expended, with an annual profit for the outlay, of 20 per cent per annum, the Harbor is to become public property.

The Niagara Herald, (many of our readers, will now hear of such a paper for the first time,) is published at Niagara, by Mr. McBride, a member of the House of Assembly. In a former number we had occasion to allude to the conduct of Mr. McBride, on the Bill for the proposed loan to the proprietor of the Marmora Iron-Works.—Our remarks appear to have given him offence, because we said that after voting for the measure in all its previous stages, he had read his recantation from an anonymous Letter, on the passing of the Bill, stating that the Letter had been received by him from some of his most influential constituents.

If Mr. McBride is surprised at our remarks, we can assure him that, his conduct is generally matter of very great surprise, and that the manner in which he was brought to give his vote on the occasion, was the cause of that surprise being very much increased. We would ask Mr. McBride why he did not appear in the House, until his attendance was ordered by the Serjeant at Arms from an adjoining room—and why he remained in that room while the Bill was read a third time, and only made his appearance with the Serjeant at Arms, after discussion had taken place, and just as the question was put for its passing? He tells us very gravely, that the support he had previously given, was conscientiously witheld, when the Bill "was discussing."—That is, Mr. McBride would have it believed, that his conscience was troubled, and that the powerful arguments used against the Bill, while it was "discussing," convinced him that he had done wrong in giving it that support. The fact however is, that when the Bill was "discussing," he was so far proof against the arguments used by its opponents, that he continued to vote for it clause by clause—but on its third reading, when "discussion" was at an end, when brought from an adjoining room, the simple proposition put to him, was, "shall the Bill pass." It was then, and not till then, that Mr. McBride produced his anonymous Letter—read his recantation, and voted against the Bill.

Mr. McBride says that sufficient was advanced "in debate" to secure a cautious exercise of the opinion of the house, and perhaps to justify the rejection of the measure,"—But this defence can avail him but little, because in every stage of the Bill when there was any debate, he does not appear to have thought that "sufficient reasons were given to justify its rejection," as he invariably voted for it as we have before said, clause by clause. It was when no debate whatever took place, that for the first time he voted against it, on representations made to him in an anonymous Letter, the authors of which, as we have already stated, could not have so good an opportunity of judging of the merits of the question, as those who were in possession of facts, and arguments, to which he had previously given his assent. As to destroying Mr. McBride's popularity, we can only say, that if it is destroyed, the crime will be one of self destruction —he has himself to blame for it—his constituents however are the best judges, whether he has discharged his duties in such a manner as to entitle him to their suffrages at another election.

Mr. McBride says he cannot agree with us in our "comparative statement of the value of a Canadian Iron Mine"—and adds in a parenthesi's (notwithstanding his propensity to Iron.") This is indeed a sorry cut—we understand perfectly what Mr. McBride means, and we shall only tell him, that we hope he will never be more ashamed of any of his former occupations, than we are of those in which our honest endeavors have heretofore been engaged. Whatever his future occupations may be, we trust they may be more serviceable and reflect more credit upon him, that have his labors as a Legislator—and this we hope he will not consider as a sanguinary stab. His remarks respecting Mr. McGill are both unjust and ungenerous, and the remaining part of them where he alludes to the nods, and winks of one Gentleman, are as unintelligible to us, as we have no doubt they are to every body else.

We have received an interesting report, on the subject, on a quantity of Tobacco, sent from this Province, to the London Market, which shall be attended to in a short time.

SHIPWRECK OF THE LYDIA.

Havre, 18th December.—The crew and passengers of this vessel, to the number of 36, arrived this morning, by the Jean Baptiste Capt. Aubert, who took them off at sea the 26th November. The statement of Captain Sylvia is subjoined. The Lydia sailed from Cork on the 13th October for New-York. 16th was overtaken by a storm which split her sails. On 21st another storm, in which the mainmast was carried away, the pumps choaked, and two of the best hands disabled. 4th November fell in with ship Corinthian of Baltimore, bound to Lima, who refused us all succour, though informed that each one on board was reduced to an ounce of bad bread per 24 hours. Fortunately the same day fell in with the French ship Pauraga, from Charlestown to Havre, from whom we received some sails, and a few provisions. When we reached the 62 deg. of lonz. the mate was no longer able to work. 13th We spoke brig Ospra, from Salem, bound to Boston from Gibraltar, from whom we received a little bread and flour. 21st lost our other mast and the vessel became unmanageable. Every body being exhausted by fatigue and want, despair was visible in every face. Dissensions were exhausted—a dog—served for our food for three days; this last resource consumed, and famine staring us in the face, all thoughts were now turned to a horrible resource. The exhausted and miserable wretches whose strength had failed them, because the victims of those who could yet work at the pumps! In this desperate situation, Heaven sent to our relief on the evening of the 28th, the French brig Jean Baptiste, which restored hope to our worn-out spirits. A boat was sent to us, and two of our passengers returned in her, to communicate to the commander our frightful situation. Mr. Aubert said he was bound from Charlestown to Havre, and would take us all on board, we were 36, but when in spite of the rough weather, the women and children were safely transported to the French brig, the captain said that having a long route yet before him, he could not burden himself with so many people, but would send provisions and sails to those left on board. The boat returned with this news, and a scene of terrible despair ensued. The separation of mothers from children, and brother from brother, seemed more terrible than death itself, and as the brig prepared to make sail, the most piercing cries of despair were uttered from both vessels. The generous Frenchman touched by the scene, and listening rather to the dictates of human nature than of prudence (since he only had on board the necessary allowance for his own crew,) resolved to receive all in his vessel; and each sailor emulating the example of his captain, shared with the shipwrecked sufferers his bottle and his bread. To this generous devotedness do we owe our existence.

EARTHQUAKE AT POPAYAN.

Extract of a private letter dated in Nov. 1827.

On the 16th of the present month, one of the strongest earthquakes ever known in South America was experienced in this city. Its motion was undulating, in the direction of south-west and north-east; and it lasted three or four minutes. From precisely 6 o'clock in the evening, the earth continued in a constant convulsion, interrupted every 40 or 50 minutes by shocks more or less violent. At 5 in the morning, there was a shock so powerful that, in the opinion of some, it was equal to that which was felt in Bogota on the 17th June, 1826. The light shocks, however, still continued without intermission, until a quarter before 12, when we had a more formidable one than any one preceding, which produced the greatest destruction. The river Cauca soon afterwards turned into a channel never known before, which increased the terror of the inhabitants. who had fled in fear from the ruins of their houses to take refuge in the small buildings scattered along the river banks. Women and children, old people and persons of all classes, fled precipitately to the tops of the neighboring hills, to save from the water those lives which had been just rescued from the fury of the earthquake.

At this moment another shock was perceived, which, although less violent, was sufficient to increase the universal consternation. At 1 o'clock in the day, the Cauca began to fall: but the trembling of the earth continued until the third day, interrupted only by the occurrence of more violent shocks, one of which occured at five in the evening of the day above mentioned the 17th, and the other at half past four in the morning of the 18th.

TO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavors will be to promote the comfort of passengers; and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

To Irish Emigrants, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or ——— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

PARCHMENT DEEDS,
For Sale at the Gazette Office, York,

WILLIAM MARIAN respectfully acquaints his friends and the public in general, he has re-commenced the Baking business, in the house formerly known as the York Hotel, and solicits the patronage of the Public.

York, March 12th, 1828. 42-1

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Pots & Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—of good and enduring quality—sold in the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

JOHN WATKINS,
Kingston,

and in Montreal and Quebec by WILLIAM BUDDEN.

July, 30, 1827. 11-tf.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out to the Lessees from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 18th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease, not to be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their powet to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

Extract from the Order of Council, bearing date 18th April, 1819, above referred to:—

"That upon the renewal of any Lease for the whole or part of the term of twenty-one years, a Rent of One Pound Fifteen Shillings be reserved as Rent for the first seven years of the renewed term in addition to the increased Rent payable for the last period of Original Lease, adding One Pound Fifteen Shillings at the end of each period of seven years."

STEAM ENGINES.

The fertile genius of James Watt, did not stop at the accomplishment of two or three important particulars, but throughout the whole detail of components parts and of the various applications of the engines, he contrived miracles of simplicity and usefulness. It would exceed the prescribed bounds of this work to enter more minutely into the subject; but we may remark that, in the present perfect state of the engine, it appears almost a thing endowed with intelligence. It regulates with perfect accuracy the uniformity the number of its strokes in a given time, and it counts and records them as a clock does the beats of its pendulum; it regulates the quantity of steam admitted to work it, proportioned to the supply of water to the boiler; the supply of coals to the fire; it opens and shuts its valves with mathematical precision as to time and manner; it oils its joints; it takes out any air which may accidentally enter into parts that should be vacuous; it warns its attendants, by ringing a bell, when any thing goes wrong which it cannot of itself rectify—and with all these talents and powers, and though it have the power of six hundred horses, it is obedient to the hand of a child; its aliment is coal, wood, charcoal, or other combustible; it consumes none while idle; it never tires, wants no sleep; is not subject to malady when originally well made, and only refuses to work when worn out with age; it is equally active in all climates, and will perform the office of a water pumper, a miner, a sailor, a cotton-spinner, a weaver, a blacksmith, a miller—indeed it is of all occupations; and a small engine in the character of a steam horse, will be seen drawing after it on a rail road ninety tons of merchandise or a regiment of soldiers, with speed greater than that of our fleetest coaches. It is the king of machines, and the realization of the power of the most fabled, whose supernatural powers were occasionally at the command of man.

CAOUTCHOUC HOSE.

An interesting experiment took place on board the powerful floating engine belonging to the London Assurance Corporation, a few days since, in presence of the Directors, to ascertain the strength of a new invented hose, made of caoutchouc, or India rubber.

A length of leather hose and one of Indian rubber were attached to the engine, each furnished with a branch tightly forked. On working the engine for a short time, the leather hose, unable any longer to resist the accumulated pressure, burst in the solid part of the leather; while the India rubber hose remained sound and uninjured; and the engine itself became disabled, by the breaking of one of its cranks, without producing any effect upon the elastic material of which the new hose is constructed. The Norwich Union Society's engine is provided with these hose, and used them at the late calamitous fire at Fresh Wharf. The greatest advantage will be derived for the general adoption of the caoutchouc hose, in lieu of leather; but they cannot be laid across hot ruins.

ARTIFICIAL BLOOM.

A fine bloom is given by fruit-dealers to cucumbers, grapes, peaches, plums, and other fruits, after the natural color has faded, by powdering them with magnesia, pounded as fine as possible. It may at first sight appear surprising that a white powder should give an equal bloom to fruits of different colours; but the colour resides in the skin, and the magnesia has merely the effect of bringing that colour out.—Abridged from the Globe.

On ascertaining the above to a friend, he observed, that it was owing, he presumed, to a similar cause, that he had seen the colours of a carpet, on which some calculated magnesia had been accidentally scattered, completely revived.

CANADA COMPANY.—A Quarterly General Court of the Canada Company (of the above named Company (in conformity with the Company's Charter) was yesterday convened at the City of London Tavern, in Bishopsgate-street; William Williams, Esq. the Banker in the Chair.

There having assembled but a few Proprietors at the hour appointed for the Meeting.

The Chairman proposed to wait a short time, and after about a quarter of an hour, proceeded to address the Meeting. He said, that the object of the Court, in pursuance of the Charter, was to declare the amount of the dividend upon the capital stock of the Company. It had however, been rendered compulsory on the Directors to pay a dividend of four per cent, until the 29th of March 1829, whatever the income or expenditure of the Company might be; and that dividend would be payable to any Proprietor on the 19th January, or any subsequent day. The Court of Directors were anxious to give the proprietors the earliest information of the first proceedings between the Company and His Majesty's Government. They had, with that view, prepared a report of their proceedings; but, although the Court of Directors would be at all times anxious to give all possible information to the Proprietors, yet they must protest against this fact being drawn into a precedent, as it would be extremely inconvenient, and was not the custom of bodies of this nature. The worthy Chairman proceeded to read the Report, which gave a very favourable account of the state of the Company's affairs. Up to the 1st of Oct. there had been 1,300 applications for reserves of Crown lands.—Of these many had been rejected, but 40,350 acres of land had been disposed of for £19,364. Other large sales of the Company's land had been made, and whilst the number of applications for lots of the Company's land were continually increasing, the prices of the separate lots had been, in some instances, augmented fourfold. The Commissioners, who had been sent at the joint expense of the Government and the Company, for the purpose of selecting the million of acres which the Company was to purchase from the Government, had made a Report highly favourable to the Company's interests, and selected a million of acres which lay to a great extent upon the coast of Lake Huron, and which included the inlets of the Lake into the two principal rivers in that province, and the only harbour which was to be found in a distance of 250 miles. The proximity of this tract to the located and settled parts of Lower Canada upon the one hand, and the great facilities which it afforded for navigation on the other side, would produce the most material advantages to the Company's interests, and there was no doubt but the million of land (the million of selected acres) would, before long become the most important district in the western part of Lower Canada. An arrangement had also been made, which was of the utmost importance to the public, and especially to emigrants The Consequence of this arrangement was, that persons proceeding from this country to Canada, would, in going up the rivers, have the recommendation from any of the agents of the Company here, be, on their arrival at Montreal or Quebec, furnished with way bills, in consequence of which they would be conveyed to York or any other town in Upper Canada at their own cost, but the expence of conveyance would not in any case exceed £1 7s for an adult, and children half price sold. The advantage of this arrangement was, that in addition to the cheapness of the conveyance, it would enable emigrants, before they quitted this country, to calculate with precision the expence of their transmission to their final destination. The Report, which stated a great number of other circumstances, which showed the affairs of the Company to be in a very prosperous condition, was received and adopted with much applause.

After a long conversation it was agreed to print the Report and distribute it among the Shareholders, and also to inclose in the circulars with parts of the Report as were interesting to emigrants and the public, and to print and circulate the Prospectus as widely as possible.

A Shareholder inquired whether it was likely that any further calls would be made, and when? There had yet been only £10 per cent of the capital subscribed.

The Chairman said, that in his opinion it would be found necessary to make a small call upon the Shareholders soon after the middle of next year.

Thanks were then voted to the Directors, and the Chairman, during which the Meeting separated.

We may, however, safely add, that what we have stated is all that can be known at present, and that we will state as soon as we are informed who is Minister of this Empire. Morning Chronicle.

We copy the following passage from the leading article of the Times of this morning: "Mr. Huskisson had prepared such a plan of finance and retrenchment as he thought necessary for the security of the country; to this, also, Mr. Herries, it was subjected: upon which Mr. Huskison declared, that either himself or Mr. Herries must retire from the cabinet."—Alas! poor Times! we would seriously advise the Proprietary to dismiss their Whitehall Agent; for, in the above paragraph, he has betrayed his trust like a constituent. We have, on a proceeding occasion, disclaimed all traffic with treachery—we have uniformly abstained from bringing before our readers statements either suggested by the malignity of party, or resting on vague and groundless speculation—we, therefore, claim the complete confidence of the public, when we assert, that no plan of finance has been proposed by Mr. Huskisson from which Mr. Herries dissented. It would, indeed, be matter of serious regret, if two Statesmen, to whose practical knowledge on subjects of finance the Nation looked with well-merited respect, did really differ on the plan of finance most fit ed to the existing circumstances of the country. We again repeat, that no such difference of opinion exists. In truth, no plan of finance especially originating with Mr. Huskisson has been submitted to the Cabinet, nor is there the slightest reason to believe that the financial views of Mr. Herries would present any principle to which Mr. Huskisson would be likely to take an exception. The motive for bringing forward this false statement is sufficiently obvious; it is to put out of sight the real cause that has produced an occurrence which we have no doubt will be the subject of general regret; and, at the hazard even of early contradiction, to surprise the public into a declaration of its opinion. While we are writing this paragraph, we are actually in possession of the principal facts which preceded and accompanied the dissolution of Lord Goderich's Administration; but, as we prefer the honest object of assisting, as far as our humble means permit, the formation of a Government possessing the confidence of the King and his people, to catering for mere curiosity, we will, for the present, abstain from narrative or discussion.—Courier.

From the London paper of Friday, Jan. 11.

The Duke of Wellington had a long conference this morning with Mr. Huskisson, at the colonial office. We announced in general terms yesterday, what now is universally known, that the administration is dissolved, and that the Duke of Wellington has received orders from the King for the recomposition of the Cabinet. Expresses have been accordingly sent to all the members of the old Cabinet who are to be associated with the new. Of these Lord Bathurst and Mr. Peel are already in town. Lord Melville and others are expected. Lord Eldon arrived yesterday. Marquis Wellesley went yesterday to Windsor, but the result is not known.—Star.

Mr. Peel arrived yesterday and was immediately visited by Lord Wellington. Mr. Huskisson had a conference with Lord Goderich. Courier.

We have nothing to announce as to the Ministerial arrangements. We might repeat reports, if it were worth the trouble, but we cannot, and do not impede, but to facilitate the earnest desire of our Sovereign, which is to call to his councils men who are entitled to his confidence, and who on that ground would command the confidence of the country. It would be absurd to dissemble that great difficulties are in the way of such arrangements, and that these difficulties are augmented by the ill will or the indiscretion of partisans. Our confidence, however, is in the King; he knows what he wants and the wishes of the country require, and in his wisdom and firmness these wants and wishes will find protection. We shall be probably in condition to announce, in a day or two, what his Majesty's decision on these matters will be.—Courier.

The Standard, of the 11th, asserts that Mr. Peel will be appointed premier.

Summary.

The Marquis of D'ouro.—The Duke of Wellington's son, the Marquis of D'ouro will attain his majority on the 3d of next February, the young Marquis was born on that day in the year 1807. Splendid preparations are making at Strathfieldsay, in Berks, the seat of his Grace, to celebrate the day with becoming splendour; and a select party will be entertained on the occasion by the noble Duke.

We are gratified to observe, by the instances we are about to relate, that the Lord High Admiral bears strongly in his recollection the memory of those officers who have distinguished themselves in the naval service. Mr. Adam Duncan Ferguson, grandson of the late Admiral Lord Duncan, was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant on the navy on the 11th of October last, the anniversary of Lord Duncan's memorable action off Camperdown, his Royal Highness notifying the event by a letter in his own hand-writing to the widow of the gallant Admiral.

A curious computation has been made, which will be interesting to reflect upon at the teatable. 25,000,000lbs. of tea, and 170,000 tons of sugar, are annually consumed in the United Kingdom, averaging about 29 ounces of the former, and 12 of the latter, for each individual.

There is a son of Mungo Park, waiting at Acera (on the Gold Coast) for the Eden, by which he expects to receive some scientific instruments from Europe.—This modern Telemachus is a midshipman belonging to the Symbills, and is on the point of setting out in quest of certain intelligence respecting his father's death. He has already gone a journey of about 90 miles into the interior, in order to feel his way; and he appears to like his further plan very much, having assurance of three hundred miles safe convoy. He goes habited like a black, with a cloth about his loins; oils his skin every day, and wears neither shoes nor stockings.—Lit. Gaz.

This day, at one o'clock, the Lord High Admiral, his Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester, and his Grace the Duke of Wellington, accompanied by Don Miguel, reviewed the following troops, on the parade at the back of the Horse Guards:—A detachment of the 1st Regiment of Horse Guards, two detachments of the Oxford Blues, the three Regiments of Foot Guards, and the 79th Highland Regiment, stationed at the tower.—Globe, Jan. 5.

There is no particular news from Constantinople—nor does there appear to be any movements of the Russian army upon the Pruth.

England.

From the London Papers of January 10

Our readers must have been prepared, by what they have lately seen in our papers for some Minis erial changes. We understood that, on Tuesday, Lord Goderich went down to Windsor, to lay before his Majesty some circumstances of an embarrassing nature in the arrangements of his Government, and desired that he might see the Lord Chancellor that evening, though it might be late. The Lord Chancellor accordingly went down that evening, and the King requested that he would come down again yesterday morning with the Duke of Wellington. The Noble Lord and the Duke saw his Majesty, and it was arranged that his Grace should go down this morning to deliberate with his Majesty on the subject of the proposition then made to him, he having expressed a wish, under circumstances of so much moment, to give his Majesty the advice required from him, only after the most mature deliberation. Those matters stand at present, and it remains to be seen what the result will be. We will not venture to give an opinion, whether a mixed government, or whether a purely Tory one, or purely Whig one, will be recommended to his Majesty. We may, however, safely add, that what we have stated is all that can be known at present, and that we will state as soon as we are informed who is Minister of this Empire. Morning Chronicle.

We copy the following passage from the leading article of the Times of this morning: "Mr. Huskisson had prepared such a plan of finance and retrenchment as he thought necessary for the security of the country; to this, also, Mr. Herries, it was subjected: upon which Mr. Huskison declared, that either himself or Mr. Herries must retire from the cabinet."—Alas! poor Times! we would seriously advise the Proprietary to dismiss their Whitehall Agent; for, in the above paragraph, he has betrayed his trust like a constituent. We again repeat, that no such difference of opinion exists. In truth, no plan of finance especially originating with Mr. Huskisson has been submitted to the United States.

Several Bills and Petitions are before the Congress of the U.S. for the greater encouragement of domestic manufactures, either by higher duties upon foreign ones, or the total exclusion of them. Thus, it appears that, even in that country so noted for its freedom and boasted liberality, the old system still prevails of sacrificing public advantage to private interest. These laws professing to encourage particular trades and manufactures, are so many taxes upon the public for the advantage of the individuals who carry them on. Every one will see how ill this who will consider, that such advantage is never wanted nor asked for, except when the foreign commodity can be sold cheaper than the domestic; and that, in all such cases, it is clearly for the advantage of the public to buy where they can buy cheapest. The direct effect, in such cases, of every protecting or encouraging duty, is to compel the public to pay the high price instead of the low one, and that for the advantage of some individual who can furnish it at the former and not at the latter. Nor ought any weight to be granted to the argument, that such encouragement serves to make the country in which it takes effect, independent of foreign importation. Such an argument can have no weight, unless it can be shewn that foreign commerce is an evil, and that it ought to be diminished; To be independent of foreign commerce, can never be an advantage, but to a country which cannot defend its trade, or which has the prospect of being hemmed in within its own territories, so as not to be able to purchase supplies from abroad.—Quebec Star.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Thursday, 6th March.

Amherstburgh Market Bill—2nd Reading, in Committee.

Mr. Bidwell was unwilling to continue the powers already given to Magistrates in other Towns, and should therefore oppose the Bill in its present shape.

Mr Gordon wished that this measure should not be considered as a matter of Police—it was only for the establishment of a market on the same terms as had been granted to other Towns, and against which he had not heard of any complaints.

Mr. Fothergill being desirous that Mr. Bidwell's general measure should pass, vesting all Town authorities in the hands of a Town Council, voted against the Bill.

Mr. Gordon explained, that the Bill gave no additional powers to the Magistrates to levy Town taxes,—it only applied to the establishment of a market, in compliance with the wishes of the people of the Town of Amherstburgh, and on the same conditions, as all other markets in Towns throughout the Province, were established by Law.

After some further discussion, on motion of Mr. Wilkinson, the Committee rose, instructing the Chairman to move, to refer the Bill to a select Committee, to amend it in such a manner, that the authority for establishing & regulating a Market, should be vested in a Town Council, to be chosen annually by the people of the Town, instead of the Magistrates.

The motion was Carried in the House and the Bill, referred to a select Committee, for that purpose.

Port-Hope Harbor Bill.—Reported by the select Committee—Read first time, & ordered for second reading.

Waterloo Land Bill (for relief of Dan. Erb, and others)—read 2nd time,—ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Monday, 10th March.

The amendments made by the Legislative Council, to the Bill for the Relief of Religious Societies, being read a second time—on motion of—

Mr. Rolph—a Conference was requested on the subject of the said amendments.—Ordered.

Tobacco Ware-house Bill—and Tobacco Inspection Bill—Mr. Wilkinson of the select Committee to whom was referred these two Bills—the former introduced by himself, and the latter by Mr. Gordon, reported that the Committee, had agreed to adopt the Ware-house Bill, in preference. The report being received.

Mr. Wilkinson said that it was not his intention to press the Bill through this Session —he would however move the printing of it, that the persons who were interested in the measure, might have time to reflect upon its provisions.

Mr. Morris thought that both bills should be printed, that every information might be afforded.

Mr. Wilkinson had no objection to do so, and amended his motion for printing both Bills for the use of members.—Ordered.

HIGHWAYS—House in Committee—Mr. M'Donell in the Chair.

The Attorney General said, that when the House was last in Committee on this subject, he had occasion to occupy its attention at great length, in detail, on the several modes which had been proposed, for effecting the improvement of the Highways—he had discussed them one by one, and had endeavored to point out what appeared to him, to be their several advantages and disadvantages, and he would now say that he would not attempt to add any one of them, than that the Roads should remain, in what he considered their present disgraceful state—he had however submitted a specific proposal to the consideration of the House, which he considered as being the best, because he thought that its adoption would be the means of attaining the object, without expense, and without imposing any additional burthens on the people.—With the security, which the fund would create, by the payment of one days labor at the rate of two shillings and six pence, the Province would be able to avail itself of the offer made by the Imperial Govt., that whenever such security was offered for public improvements, they would borrow money for us in the English market, on the same terms as they procured it for themselves, & which would not be at a greater rate of interest than from 3 to 3 1-2 per cent, this together with the favorable rate of Exchange would be sufficient to authorise the loan on such security, of a much larger sum, than was required for carrying this object into effect—his proposal however extended only to the sum of £25000, at present. It had been objected by some Hon. Gentlemen that the people would find it difficult to pay the two shillings and six pence annually for one days labor—it had however, been proposed at one time in this House, that the whole of the Statute labor should be commuted for in money—the same objection was then made, as to the difficulty the people would experience in paying all in money—but there was a great difference, in calling upon them to commute for one day only, and he was of opinion that if during the year when they were selling their produce, this payment was kept in view, but little difficulty, if any, would be experienced in reserving so small a sum as two shillings and six pence, to meet it.

Mr. Hamilton repeated, that he considered it improper to call upon the Gore District, which had already made good roads, within its own bounds, to make roads for others—the people in new settlements, would in many cases find it extremely difficult to pay the 2s. 6d. annually—he should object to the measure generally, but if the Hon. Member for the Gore District, was to have its full share of any monies that might be raised for the improvement of the Roads.

Mr. Coleman considered it unfair to object to the general principle of the measure, because one District happened to have advantages in soil and situation, which enabled it without much difficulty or expense to make good roads, which others were not so fortunate as to possess—the mode proposed he considered as perfectly practicable and if something was not now done for improving the Highways, it would be a reflection on the Legislature—the measure was important, and the country expected that some general measure would be adopted and carried into effect without loss of time.

Mr. Perry had no doubt that the mode proposed might be practicable, for those who lived in Towns, on the main Road, or on the frontier—but its hardships would be felt by those who lived in the interior, whose money would be unavailable at home, as they make their own roads, but to be expended on such as were at a distance from them—the country was new, and required all their labor, and more too, but by this proposition one days labor was to be taken from each settler to be paid for at two shillings and six pence, to make a common Road—this he thought was not equal—it was not fair—it was taxing the poor, and favoring the rich, and this was the object of most of the measures, proposed by the Hon. and learned Gentleman who submitted the present one to the House—the Districts nearest should be carried he should move to have the Midland District excepted from its provisions, and should propose that it be left to repair its own roads by paying for exemption from Militia trainings—this would be no burthen to the Gore District, as that District should object too, to laying out so large a sum as £25000 in one year, because he thought it would be squandered, and instead of Commissioners, he thought that encouragement should be given to Road Societies, who would do more good—he would place a share of the money too, in the hands of Stage contractors, on their giving good security, and allow them to expend the money, where there were no Road Societies.

Mr. Cawthra opposed the establishment of Turnpikes and toll gates, at a distance of every 20 miles—he did not think it fair to take the back-woodsmans labor, to enrich those living on the main Roads—he would have toll gates erected and the dues paid by those, who derived the benefit from travelling on a Turnpike Road.

Mr. Lefferty was opposed to the general measure on the ground, that it amounted to an unequal taxation—it would take from his (the Niagara) District five thousand days work—this was the smallest sum he would legislate partially but would take care of his own District—he would prefer that each District should raise, and expend its own taxes.

The Atty. Gen said that in the course of Debate on Hon. Gentlemen charged him with bringing forward measures, intended to oppress the poor, and favor the rich—it was no doubt a very easy matter for that Hon. Gentleman, or any other Hon. Gent. to attribute such motives to his conduct, or that of any other person—he would ask the Hon. Member from Lenox and Addington by whom this charge had been so boldly made, to shew an instance where such motives could with any degree of justice be attached to him—& more considered of the utmost importance to the country had been introduced by him and had become a Law—he alluded to the Assessment Law, and he would ask that Hon. Gent., whether this was an instance of the motives he had attributed to him. With respect to the objections made by the Hon. Member from Wentworth (Mr. Hamilton) respecting the Roads in the Gore District, he would only say that if the Roads in that District required any repairs that Hon. Gent. had only to name them, and he should willingly embrace them in the present measure—by the Militia Training—if they were unnecessary, and the House was of that opinion, it would be unjust to exact a payment for being excused from attending them—they should respectively be done away altogether—if however they were considered necessary, it would be equally unjust to devote them to any other purpose

Capt. Matthews would go the full length of the measure, if he could be assured that the money would be well expended—he was aware however that in many cases it would be found difficult to raise the sum required yearly, and as the Government was already doing so much in the Bathurst District, by expending large sums of money there, the people of that District, who were so much nearer a market, should in his opinion make their own Roads—before giving his final vote, he would wait to be informed as to the details of the measure.

Mr. Morris said that members on both sides of the House appeared to agree, that the Roads of the Province were in a bad state, and that it deserved the serious attention of the Legislature, but the difficulty was the discovery of a measure for their improvement which would be approved of by all.—The Hon. Gent. from Wentworth opposed the mode suggested by the learned Atty Gen., because the Roads are good in the District of Gore, and thinks that it would be unjust to raise money from his constituents, to make roads in other parts of the Province. Did (ask Mr. M.) such sectional jealousies prevail when members from all parts of the Province voted a sum amounting to nearly £20,000, for the construction of a Harbour at Burlington Bay in that District The Hon. Member from Wentworth ought therefore, if the Roads are good in his District, to assist in mending them where they are bad. Another Hon. Gent. (Capt. Matthews) stated, that the people in the Bathurst District had no claim to an appropriation of money in their roads, as they lay near the Markets of Lower Canada, and the Government expended large sums of money for the improvement of their Navigation.—Mr. Morris said he was astonished to hear such arguments from Hon Gent., after the description given by the Atty Gen. of the worst of the roads in that part of the Province, and if they were so bad in summer when the learned Gent. visits Perth, what must they be in the Spring and Fall; there was no travelling passable at all seasons, and although the works in progress on the Canal are within 26 or 30 Miles of the best population, such is the nature of the country, that it is altogether impossible to convey any kind of Provisions for the supply of the workmen. Nothing was to be found in the Province like it, and yet on all former occasions when he applied to this House for aid to the utmost possible extent of the wants of the place, he was always met with the reply, that, if aid was given to one District, it must be given to all.—He asked if this was just, when they heard the difficulties under which the people of the Bathurst District Teams were often ten days on the road to Brockville with a couple of Barrels of Potash, when nature and distance dictated, that the conveyance should be by the Rideau to the St. Lawrence. Another reason he said why the Legislature should assist in making roads in that District, was, that the country was new, and had never enjoyed the advantages resulting from the Settlement of the Province.—£70,000 having been expended on the Highways before that District was in existence; and as there was now a population of 13,000 Souls, he considered it but fair for the learned Gentleman to say to Settlers, he confidently hoped that their claims would not go unnoticed, especially as they had never put the country to any expense in Legislating, as the people of the East end of Lake Ontario had done, having in eight years presented to the House, three petitions only. With respect to the plan proposed to raise the loan, he certainly thought, that it was the least burthensome of any yet suggested, and to expect such improvements without putting the people to some little inconvenience, was out of the question, for the financial affairs of the Province further he alluded to the information from the funds—it was, therefore, the duty of the House, to suit the measure to the situation of the people—he thought, if the commutation were reduced to 1s 6d, that the inhabitants in the back Townships would be much better pleased, for notwithstanding the opinion of Hon. Gent., great difficulty was felt in the remote Settlements, in raising the smallest sum in Cash; indeed the only consideration which could justify a plan of this kind, was the operation of the wild Land assessment act, which will at the same time throw large sums of money into those remote Townships; it was that this reduction in favor of the poorer classes of Settlers might not diminish the whole amount to be collected, he would propose that wealthy persons who keep many days work in reserve should commute for 2, 3, 4 or 5 days, in proportion to their Assessments.—Under all the circumstances of the Country, he thought it advisable to adopt the principle of the Resolutions, and in doing so he trusted that the House would grant such a sum to the repair of the Roads in the Bathurst District, as their deplorable condition required;—Roads thro' which it was impossible for Carriages to pass, and where the Mail is carried by a man on foot, between Perth and Richmond.

Mr. Wilson would apply a portion of the money to every part of the Province, and in his opinion the plan of Road Societies was preferable to the one suggested—the sum named would certainly be sufficient to make a good Road from one end of the Province to the other, but he would not take care to legislate for his own part of the country as well as others—it would be better too to allow the people to pay for being exempt from militia trainings, which were of no service either to King or Country.

Mr. Rolph thought that the money should first be raised, and then say how it was to be expended —in devising the ways and means taxation should be avoided, because the debt of the Province was already great—he mentioned this in order, that due consideration should take place under the present circumstances of the country—should we while laboring under a general state of poverty, resort to a general system of taxation? he objected to the mode proposed, because it was a tax on all, on those who can, as well as those who cannot pay—he knew that in his own District (London) the people found it difficult to pay their ordinary taxes—he objected to it also, because it took away the resources of one part of the country, to be applied in another, and he considered this as taking money out of one pocket to put into another. If the statute labor, as had been asserted, was not duly performed, he would propose to have the law enforced, and institute an inquiry, for ascertaining why good laws were not well administered—the Statute Labor should be left as it was and other sources of revenue be found for making the Roads, as the interior parts of the country require good roads as much as other places, and it would therefore be unfair to divert their labor, to other parts of the country, it was robbing them of so much labor which they required themselves, and would be a cruelty—the proposition he therefore hoped would not be adopted, but that other means would be devised for accomplishing the object. The question then was, what resources have we for the purpose, without resorting to taxation? He would name first, the sum to be annually paid to the Government, by the Canada Company—he would the House should be allowed to look into, and although it was intended to relieve the Mother Country, from the charge of supporting the Colony, yet if the latter was in need of assistance for Immigration, which she made, it ought to be at the disposal of the House—how this money from the Canada Company was expended he knew not, but he would call upon to find out by some address on the subject. Another source, was the amount received for Licences to cut Crown Timber—these he believed produced a considerable sum, and he would pray Her Majesty in his liberality to allow these monies to be expended for the general improvement of the country—if they were not sufficient he would then consent to provide for any necessary balance by taxation—another fund he should propose, would be an income Tax on those who received large Salaries—he would propose also to tax close and open Carriages, and Waggons with Steel and Wooden springs—with the resources he had already mentioned would raise a sufficient sum for the repair of the Roads—and if any balance should still be found wanting, he would then consent to a tax of one shilling per cent from each District, on the Assessments now collected—All together would certainly give enough to be expended on the Highways.

Capt. Matthews—was surprised at the proposal made by the learned Gentleman to tax Spring Waggons—they were not an article of luxury but of convenience, to the people of the country—he remembered that a similar proposal was once made in England, and attempted to be carried into effect, but had been evaded by dispensing with the Springs, and using Cushions instead—the tax was then imposed on the Cushions used in Waggons, and this was evaded, by using Straw—in whose convenience these Waggons were generally and quitting their petticoats, that they might ride easy—the proposition surprised him more than any he had heard in this house, and many particularly as it came from his Hon. and learned colleague.

The Attorney General said that it was his desire to ascertain whether the House would agree to the measure he had proposed, before he proceeded with the necessary detail, and the labor that must unavoidably be bestowed in preparing a Bill for carrying it into effect, if in a short time it should fail of. The plan which had been proposed as a substitute by the Hon. and learned Gentleman (Mr. Rolph), could not be expected to effect any thing this year, and if the House agreed to it, the measure would be successful. and of this he thought that Hon. & learned Gentleman must himself be aware.—As to the monies from the Canada Company, they were liable to many days work in case they should be appropriated, and formed part of the Crown Revenue. With respect to sales of Crown Timber, they had not realised a greater sum than £500, and the amount was already devoted to the improvement of the Navigation of the Ottawa River, and in the construction of the magnificent bridge over that River—the amount received from Ferries was too trifling to be considered of any consequence, and no surplus had arisen from that source. As to Crown Lands, it could not be expected that the sale of these, which at all events was extremely limited, could be considered as being at our disposal, instead of that of the Crown whose property they were.

The public debt of the Provinces having been alluded to, he would take this opportunity of requesting Hon. Gent., to refer to the public accounts—they would there find that during the last year about one sixth part of it, had been paid off, and with respect to the present measure he thought it unfair to consider it as a tax, or as adding in any respect to the public debt of the Province.

Mr. Bidwell would not commit to memory the mode proposed by the Attorney General, until he was satisfied, that no other sources could be got at for the improvement of the Roads. The Canada Company he considered as a perfect absentee system, and would therefore endeavor to ascertain how the monies received from them were expended—he would get this information at all events, and if it should then be found that no other means could be devised, he would vote for the present measure with some modifications—the information however should first be obtained

Mr. Hamilton would suggest as an additional resource, the interest received by the Province from the Bank Stock it had taken in the Bank of Upper Canada. As to the remarks of the Honble. Gentleman from Lanark, (Mr. Morris) by way of reply, that the Burlington Canal would not be a burthen to the country, as it would eventually pay both the interest and principal of the sum loaned for public purposes, for its construction.

Mr. Lefferty inquired whether any Hon. Gentleman knew what became of the fines paid by Quakers, Mennonists, and Tunkers for exemption from Militia duty—he thought they were properly added on the Roads.

Mr. Hamilton replied that they were already appropriated by Law, to the Districts in which they were paid—their amount was but trifling, as in times of peace they were not rigidly exacted.

Capt. Matthews proposed reducing the Salaries of Clerks, Public Offices,—they were better paid he said, here, than in England,

Mr Perry said that this would be only attacking the small fry—he would prefer beginning with the heads of Departments

Capt. Matthews answered, that he would take the small fry first, and make them serve as bait to catch the larger fish.

The House adjourned for want of a Quorum,

Tuesday, 11th March.

Highway Committee resumed.

Mr. Rolph proposed the resolution—

Mr. Perry was friendly to the inquiry proposed, and would also include the revenue derived under 14th Geo. 3.

Mr. Wells would rather abandon the measure, than proceed with it any further this Session.

Mr. Coleman proposed an amendment, that one day should be commuted for, at 3s 6d., 2s 9d., and 1s 6d., according to the situation of the person paying it, those nearest the principal Highway to be improved, paying the larger sum, and reducing it as they were further removed from the contemplated improvements—this he said would be but a small sacrifice to the public good, and would be amply repaid in the saving in wear and tear of Waggons and Harness.

The Attorney General felt that he had discharged all his duty, in submitting what he considered the most preferable course for the immediate improvement of the Roads—if the Committee should concur in the Resolution proposed by the hon. and learned Member (Mr. Rolph), he should not consider it necessary to pursue the measure any further.

Mr. Ralph.—If the House would go with him and agree to ask for the information which his Resolution embraced, he would then be prepared to devise means equally practicable with those suggested by the learned Attorney General for improving the Highways.

Mr. Bidwell preferred the Attorney General's measure, rather than be without one—something should certainly be done for the roads, and if no other funds could be found, he would make use of this—at the same time he would not agree to expend so large a sum in one year—labor was already scarce in many parts of the country, and would be more so next year, when the Crops of Farmers,—he would not therefore expend an immoderate sum in one year, and would prefer that a gradation should be observed in the commutation—the roads to be improved who were rated for six days labor or over should commute for the whole, and less in proportion as they were further from them.—The information for which the Resolution of Mr Rolph, need not stop the progress of this measure—both might be proceeded with at the same time, but before finally closing the one suggested by the learned Attorney General, he would wait for an answer to the address proposed by the Resolution now before the Committee.

Mr. M'Lean with some modification, approved of the measure proposed by the learned Atty. Gen. —the information which the resolution proposed obtaining, might be asked for, but the funds to which it alluded, forming part of the crown revenue, there could be no chance of getting money from such a source, for the improvement of the Roads.

Mr. Peterson could not assent to the mode proposed for improving the Roads, as it called upon the people to pay money—he considered it as unfair, and against the interests of the country—in many parts of the province it was difficult to raise a single shilling in money, the people in his District, found it no easy matter to pay their ordinary taxes, and more time would be spent in going to market to raise this additional two shillings and six pence, than would be required for the performance of the days labor which was proposed to be commuted for—he felt the same objection to paying in money, for exemption from militia trainings, and to taxes of any kind he was opposed.—As he felt desirous however that something should be done for the improvement of the roads, he hoped that some plan would yet be devised for so important an object.

Mr. Rolph's resolution for an address—on the subject of payments made, and to be made, by the Canada Company—sale of Crown Lands—Crown Timber—and Ferries was put and carried.

Mr Wilson proposed an additional Resolution for an address, on the subject of Militia fines—from what Regiments and the names of the persons paying such fines, for the last thirteen years. After some discussion this Resolution being put, was also Carried.

The Committee then rose, and reported the Resolutions—for receiving the Report Yeas 12—Nays 11.

The Resolutions being then severally put by the Speaker from the Chair—the two first of the series proposed by the Attorney General were Carried, and those of Messrs. Rolph and Wilson, for addresses on the subjects alluded to, lost.

Mr. Bidwell moved an address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for Reports of Common Schools and from Trustees of District Schools in the Province.—Carried.

Capt. Matthews' notice—bill for the better election of Grand Juries—Adjourned.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 22, 1828.

The arrival of the Packet Ship Sully, at New-York from Havre, puts us in possession of London dates to 11th January. The news she brings is important, and by the Packet Ship of 16th which has probably reached New York by this time, we may expect to learn, the nature of those who are to compose the new British Cabinet. Several extracts from English papers, for which we are indebted to the Albion will be found under their proper head.

As the Session of Parliment draws near to a close, members appear disposed to further the business without unnecessary delay, and for the last week there has certainly been a more business like appearance in the House, than during the previous part of the Session. Discussion is no doubt useful, for the purpose of eliciting information, and to afford an opportunity to every member who wishes to do so, of explaining his views on the various subjects which are under consideration. It is the repetition of this discussion at every stage of a measure, which unnecessarily, and very often improperly, occupies the House, to the exclusion of more important matter; and complaints of Hon. Members themselves bear us out in this remark.

The House was engaged on Thursday passing a Bill through Committee, to amend the wild Land Assessment Law. As we were not present when it was under consideration, we are not able to state precisely what its provisions are. We understand however that it authorises the payment of Taxes, in the District, when the person paying then resides, instead of having to remit them as formerly to the Treasurer of the District in which the Lands are situated. Some other alterations are made in the existing Law, of which if the Bill should pass, we will inform ourselves, and acquaint our readers. On the Bill being reported and the question put for receiving it, the House it seems was almost equally divided—its fate therefore may be considered uncertain.

A Bill for erecting a Light House on the False Ducks, has been introduced, and ordered for a second reading—it appropriates £1000 to the object in view, and will probably pass into a Law.

"A Peeler from Durham," has at length made his appearance in the columns of the Canadian Freeman. We have been threatened with the awful ire of this "Peeler" for some weeks past, and the delay which has taken place, may perhaps be accounted for, from the absence of a certain person. As his communication it appears, is "to be continued," we shall not disturb him, in the composition of his elegant piece of literature. Its purity of diction, and, sublimity of expression, will no doubt be preserved throughout, & for an impassioned piece of writing, will be unrivalled. Anticipating and giving credit for all its beauties, and elegancies, we leave the "Peeler" to "continue" his subject.—When he has done, and shall have emptied the Vessel of his wrath, we may perhaps offer him a word of advice, which we hope will not be lost upon him. At present as he appears to be in a most delightful passion, we shall not intercept him.—Only think how dangerous, it would be to do this, with a "Peeler," who talks so boldly, in the dark, of inflicting "summary chastisement"

We have given the opinions expressed by Hon. Members, on the subject of the Highways, as fully as our limits will admit. We regret exceedingly that the measure is again abandoned, and that the Roads must remain for another year at least, in their present state.

A press of business, prevents our attending to several other subjects.

The Editor of the Colonial Advocate, has made a discovery, which he communicates to his readers in his last number, and which will no doubt be considered of vast importance, to the country. In the Statutes of 1825—he has discovered that by an error of the press, we have made a misprint by the transposition of two figures—1285, for 1825.—This by most persons would be considered far more excusable, than calling the Duke of Wellington, "Master of the Ordinance," which the Editor of the Colonial Advocate has done, in the very same paper, where he announces his important discovery, of our misprint.

OTTAWA OR GRAND RIVER.

This great river is suspected to have its source in the Rocky Mountains, afar in the North West regions of Canada, and after descending over various sublime waterfalls, and down numerous shutes forming strong rapids, at last joins the St. Lawrence at the Island of Montreal. The Ottawa discharges over the Falls of Chaudiere during the months of Autumn, when it is at the lowest ebb, about 250, 000 tons of water every hour; as far as it has yet been explored, it averages one mile and a quarter broad, 150 feet deep, and at this place runs at a velocity of 9 miles an hour.—In the latter end of June or beginning of July, when the floods come roaring down, turning the falls to rapids, and the lakes to currents, rising at Hull 24 feet perpendicular; the discharge is computed at 1,000,000 tons per hour. Considering the season that the floods come down to the St. Lawrence, which is drawing near to midsummer, this river must traverse an immense distance, not less than 2500 miles; and from that point of embouchure of its floods, it must pass through immense wastes of snow. As far as it is known, the channel is rocky, banks steep, growing all species of hardwood. The stone is chiefly lime, in horizontal strata. About half a mile from the banks, the country is level and luxuriant, abounding in oak groves & rich red pineries. Conceiving the river to be an inclined plane, according to the discharge, velocity and distance calculated, the difference of level between the falls into the St. Lawrence and its source must be about 650 feet. In the extent of its course there are many Islands, and what in Canada are termed 30 mile lakes, or lakes of the second order. These are deep, & in many places out of soundings, while the current of the river are quite different from those in the large lakes, such as Ontario, Erie, &c.

The shores of its lakes are generally swampy, occasioned by the rising, every year, of the waters over them. They are covered with the finest timber of pine, and are of the same fertility prospect. The floods continue at a height about a month, but do not abate for three; they must be composed of as much melted snow as would cover at least 15,000,000 acres of land 5 feet deep.

As far up the noble stream as the Lake of the Chats, the country adjoining is tolerably well settled, to the distance it might be said, of 180 miles from the City of Montreal; the Settlers have found the country extremely healthy and fertile, and the waters good to drink; in Breweries it makes good ale, and is accounted excellent for washing, bleaching, dyeing &c. Where the country has been cleared 20 years, little thriving villages begin to spring up. Even the Indian one, of the Lake of the Two Mountains, begins to look similar to Ambleside on the banks of Windermere, England, praised by all feeling travellers and admirers of Lake scenery.

This River may be said to be the grand highway to the extensive and unexplored North West territories of Canada; along the banks, in many instances, the famous North West Company, had posts—now in possession of the Hudson Bay Company—it was expected that the Fur Trade would have enlightened the world by an account of the Ottawa? but it is to be regretted that this has not been done. The want of inclination does not seem to be the cause; but the want of general knowledge, and leisure to attend to any object but that which forms their wild and precarious business—it is not, after all, singular to say, that here one of the largest and most interesting rivers in the known world, running thro' a healthy country, and exceedingly large Colony of Great Britain, should at this time of the day remain almost unknown! On the English Maps, it is not to be seen, and the Geographer only hears of it as if it were one of the rivers of the Moon, which no one can tell whether it exists or not. The Nile and the Niger have their annual host of travellers —all well found from the Parent Country—but the glorious unknown Ottawa must not be visited by science; the burning, savage deserts of Africa, are more respected by her, than our own, dear, wonderful Canada.—N. Montreal Gazette.

HALIFAX.

We are happy to learn that the small-pox, that dissolating and loathsome disease which has swept off so many valuable members of our community, is fast subsiding, both in virulency and in the number attacked. The Typhus Fever has almost, if not entirely, disappeared; and the usual mode of life has followed in consequence of the introduction of these distempers among us, yet much gratitude is due from us all to the kind Providence who has laid his hand so lightly upon us.—Acadian Recorder.

FANCY BALL.—The Fancy Ball given last evening by Lieut. Colonel Fergusson, and the Officers of His Majesty's 52nd Regiment, afforded high satisfaction to a very large party. Mess Room, the great scene of amusement, was fitted up in a style of the utmost neatness. The fancy dresses, in most instances exhibited much taste, and the disguises were so good, that it was with difficulty many of the parties who had assumed characters could be discovered. A humorous Paul Pry, Active Forester, a Spanish Gentilla, Quakers, Gypsies, Pensioners, Mendicants, Flower Girls, French & Dutch Peasants, Knaves of Hearts, Clubs, Spades and Diamonds, Jews, Sailors, &c. all figured away among the gay throng, and gave a rich zest to the entertainment. Dancing commenced at an o'clock, which was kept up till 12, when the supper rooms were thrown open, and a profusion of delicacies and substantial dishes displayed. After supper the happy party again adjourned to the Ball Room. Dancing was resumed, and it was in vain that the passionate old Gentleman in his Night Gown and Slippers, complained of being deprived of his sleep, and repeatedly endeavored to turn them out of the house, his rage had no effect, and it was not until a late or rather early hour, that the company retired, highly delighted with the kind attention of their gallant friends.—Ib.

The Miramichi Mercury of the 15th inst. states that a Horizontal Wind Mill, has been erected by a Mr. Sanderson, near the Scotch Church. When completed, it will have 54 sails, and its power will be equal to 14 horses, and will drive 2 pair stones, and 2 saws. Its principal advantages are, that it will not require more than a light breeze, to put it in motion, that it can go at all seasons of the year, that it is accessable to all parts of the River, to the numerous settlements about the Bay, and round the coast, and that it can always be depended upon. We join with the Editor of the Mercury, in wishing the proprietor, all the encouragement to which so spirited an attempt is justly entitled.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Thursday, 6th March.

Amherstburgh Market Bill—2nd Reading, in Committee.

Mr. Bidwell was unwilling to continue the powers already given to Magistrates in other Towns, and should therefore oppose the Bill in its present shape.

Mr Gordon wished that this measure should not be considered as a matter of Police—it was only for the establishment of a market on the same terms as had been granted to other Towns, and against which he had not heard of any complaints.

Mr. Fothergill being desirous that Mr. Bidwell's general measure should pass, vesting all Town authorities in the hands of a Town Council, voted against the Bill.

Mr. Gordon explained, that the Bill gave no additional powers to the Magistrates to levey Town taxes,—it only applied to the establishment of a market, in compliance with the wishes of the people of the Town of Amherstburgh, and on the same conditions, as all other markets in Towns throughout the Province, were established by Law.

After some further discussion, on motion of Mr. Wilkinson, the Committee rose, instructing the Chairman to move, to refer the Bill to a select Committee, to amend it in such a manner, that the authority for establishing & regulating a Market, should be vested in a Town Council, to be chosen annually by the people of the Town, instead of the Magistrates.

The motion was Carried in the House and the Bill, referred to a select Committee, for that purpose.

Port-Hope Harbour Bill.—Reported by the select Committee—Read first time, & ordered for second reading.

Waterloo Land Bill (for relief of Dan. Erb, and others)—read 2nd time,—ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Monday, 10th March.

The amendments made by the Legislative Council, to the Bill for the Relief of Religious Societies, being read a second time—on motion of Mr. Rolph—

Mr. Rolph—a Conference was requested on the subject of the said amendments.—Ordered.

Tobacco Ware-house Bill—and Tobacco Inspection Bill.—Mr. Wilkinson of the select Committee on whom was referred these two Bills—the former introduced by himself, and the latter by Mr. Gordon, reported that the Committee, had agreed to adopt the Ware-house Bill, in preference. The report being received—

Mr. Wilkinson said that it was not his intention to press the Bill through this Session —he would however move the printing of it, that the persons who were interested in the measure, might have time to reflect upon its provisions.

Mr. Norris thought that both bills should be printed, that every information might be afforded.

Mr. Wilkinson had no objection to do so, and amended his motion for printing both Bills for the use of members.—Ordered.

House—House in Committee—Mr. M'Donell in the Chair.

The Attorney General said, that when the House was last in Committee on this subject, he had occasion to occupy its attention at great length, in detail, on the several modes which had been proposed, for effecting the improvement of the Highways—he had discussed them one by one, and had endeavored to point out what appeared to him, to be their several advantages and disadvantages, and he would now say that he would rather adopt any one of them, than that the Roads should remain, in what he considered their present disgraceful state—he had however submitted a specific proposal to the consideration of the House, which he considered as being the best, because he thought that its adoption would be the means of attaining the object, without expense, and without imposing any additional burthens on the people.—With the security, which the land would create, by the payment of one days labor at the rate of two shillings and six pence, the Province would be able to avail itself of the offer made by the Imperial Govt. that whenever such security was offered for public improvements, they would borrow money for us in the English market, on the same terms as they procured it for themselves, & which would not be at a greater rate of interest than from 3 to 3 1-2 per cent, thus together with the favorable rate of Exchange would be sufficient to authorise the loan on such security, of a much larger sum, than was required for carrying this object into effect—his proposal however extended only to the sum of £25000, or upwards. It had been objected by some Hon. Gentlemen that the people would find it difficult to pay the two shillings and six pence annually for one days labor—it had however, been proposed at one time in this House, that the whole of the Statute labor should be commuted for in money—the same objection was then made, as to the difficulty the people would experience in paying all in money—but there was a great difference. in calling upon them to commute for one day only, and he was of opinion that if during the year when they were selling their produce, this payment was kept in view, but little difficulty, if any, would be experienced in reserving so small a sum as two shillings and six pence, to meet it.

Mr. Hamilton repeated, that he considered it improper to call upon the Gore District, which had already made good roads, within its own bounds, to make roads for others—the people in new settlements, would in many cases find it extremely difficult to pay the 2s. 6d. annually—he should object to the measure generally as to any other part of the Gore District, was to have its full share of any moneies that might be raised for the improvement of the Roads.

Mr. Coleman considered it unfair to object to the general principle of the measure, because one District happened to have an advantages in soil and situation, which enabled it without much difficulty or expense to make good roads, which others were not so fortunate as to possess—the mode proposed he considered as perfectly practicable and if something was not done for improving the Highways, it would be a reflection on the Legislature—the measure was important, and the country expected that some general measure would be adopted and carried into effect without loss of time.

Mr. Perry had no doubt that the mode proposed might be practicable, for those who lived in Towns, on the main Road, or on the frontier—but its hardships would be felt by those who lived in the interior, whose money would be required from them, not to make their own roads—but to be expended on such as were at a distance from them—the country was new, and required all their labor, and more too, but by this proposition one days labor was to be taken from each settler to be paid for at two shillings and six pence, to make a common Road—this he thought was not equal—it was not fair—it was taxing the poor, and favoring the rich, and this was the object of most of the measures, proposed by the Hon. and learned Gentleman who submitted the present one to the House—if the measure should be adopted he hoped that the Home & Midland District excepted from its provisions, and should propose that it be left to repair its own roads by paying for exemption from Militia trainings—this would be no burthen to the people of that District—he should object to having the sum of £5000 on as £25000 in one year, because he thought it would be squandered, and instead of Commissioners, he thought that encouragement should be given to Road Societies, who would do more good—he would place a share of the money to each, to be given to large contractors, on their giving good security, and allow them to expend the money, where there were no Road Societies.

Mr. Scullick proposed the establishment of Turnpikes and toll gates, at a distance of every 20 miles—and thought it fair to let the back-woodsmans labor, to enrich those living on the main Roads—he would have toll gates erected and the dues paid by those, who derived the benefit from travelling on a Turnpike Road.

Mr. Fairly was opposed to the general measure on the ground, that it amounted to an unequal taxation—it would take from his (the Niagara) District five thousand days work—this was too much—he would not legislate partially but would take care of his own District—he would prefer that each District should raise, and expend its own taxes.

The Att'y. Gen said that in the course of Debate, an Hon. Member had charged him with bringing forward measures, intended to oppress the poor, and to favor the rich, for the purpose of very easy matter for that Hon. Gentleman, or any other Hon. Gent. to attribute such motives to his conduct, or that of any other person—he would ask the Hon. Member from Lenox and Addington by whom this charge had been so loldly made, to shew an instance where such motives could with any degree of justice be attached to him—a measure considered of the utmost importance to the country had been introduced by him and had become a Law—he alluded to the Assessment Law, and he would ask that Hon. Gent, whether this was an instance of the motives he had attributed to him. With respect to the objections made by the Hon. Member from Wentworth (Mr. Hamilton) respecting the Roads in the Gore District, he could only say that if the Roads in that District required any repairs that Hon. Gent. had only to name them, and he should willingly embrace them in the present measure. As to Militia Trainings—if they were unnecessary, and the House was of that opinion, it would be unjust to exact a payment for being excused from attending them—they should respect the claims of the aggrieved, and wherever they were considered necessary, it would be equally unjust to devote them to any other purpose.

Capt. Matthews would go the full length of the measure, if he could be assured that the money would be well expended—he was aware however that in many cases it would be found difficult to raise the sum required yearly, and as the Government was already doing so much in the Bathurst District, by expending large sums of money there, the people of that District, who were so much nearer a market, should in his opinion make their own Roads—before giving his final vote, he would wait to be informed as to the details of the measure.

Mr. Morris said that members on both sides of the House appeared to agree, that the Roads of the Province were in a bad state, and ought to receive the serious attention of the Legislature, but the difficulty was the discovery of a measure for their improvement which would be approved of by all.—The Hon. Gent. from Wentworth opposed the mode suggested by the learned Att'y Gen., because the Roads are good in the District of Gore, and thinks that it would be unjust to raise money from his constituents, to make roads in other parts of the Province. Did (ask Mr. M) such sectional jealousies prevail when members from all parts of the Province voted a sum amounting to nearly £20), 000, for the construction of the Burlington Bay in that District The Hon Member from Wentworth ought therefore, if the Roads are good in his District, to assist in mending them where they are bad. Another Hon. Gent. (Capt. Matthews) stated, that the people in the Bathurst District had no claim to an appropriation of money in their roads, as they lay near the Markets of Lower Canada, and as the Government expended large sums of money for the improvement of their Navigation.—Mr. Morris said he was astonished to hear such arguments from Hon Gent., after the description given by the Att'y. Gen of the state of the roads in that part of the Province, and if they were so bad in summer when the learned Gent. visits Perth, what must they be in the Spring and Fall; they must in many places impassable at all seasons, and although the money expended on the Canal are within 20 or 30 Miles of the best population, such is the nature of the country, that it is altogether impossible to convey any kind of Provisions for the supply of the Workmen. Nothing was to be found in the Province like it, and yet on all former occasions when he applied to this House for aid to render passable some of the worst places, he was always met with the cry, that if aid was given to one District, it must be given to all.—He asked if this was just, when they heard the difficulties under which the people in Bathurst labored —Taxes were often laid on the road to Brockville with a couple of Barrels of Potash, when nature and distance dictated, that the conveyance should be to the Ottawa, instead of the St. Lawrence. Another reason why the Legislature should assist in making roads in that District, was, that the country was new, and had never enjoyed the advantages conferred on those parts of the Province—£70,000 had been expended on the Highways before that District was in existence: and as there was now a population of 13,000 Souls, contributing as largely to the Provincial revenue as most of the Districts, he certainly hoped that their claims would not go unnoticed, especially as they had never put the country to any expense in Legislating, as the people at the Head of the Lake therein had proposed. Did (ask he) any petitions to the House, three petitions only. With respect to the plan proposed to raise the loan, he certainly thought, that it was the least burthensome of any yet suggested, and to avoid any imputation of it without putting the people to some little inconvenience, was out of the question, for the financial affairs of the Province forbid the slightest expectation from the funds—the people, on the other side of the House, to suit the measure to the situation of the people—he thought, if the commutation were reduced to 1s 6d, that the inhabitants in the back Townships would be much better pleased, for notwithstanding the opinion of Hon. Gents, great difficulty was felt in the remote Settlements, in raising the smallest sum in Cash; indeed the only consideration which could justify a plan of this kind, was the operation of the wild Land Assessment act, which will at the same time throw large sums of money into these remote Townships; and for this reduction in favor of the poorer classes of Settlers might not diminish the revenue to be collected, he would propose that wealthy persons who have many days work to perform should commute for 2, 3, 4 or 6 days, in proportion to their Assessment—in all the circumstances of the Country, he thought it advisable to adopt the principle of the Resolutions, and in doing so he trusted that the House would grant such a sum to the repair of the Roads in the Bathurst District, as their deplorable condition required:—Roads thro' which it was impossible for Carriages to pass, and where the Mail is carried by a man on foot, between Perth and Richmond.

Mr. Wilson would apply a portion of the money to every part of the Province, and in his opinion the plan of Road Societies was preferable to the one suggested—the sum named would certainly be sufficient to make a good Road from one end of the Province to the other, but he would take care to legislate for his own part of the country as well as others—it would be better too to allow the people to pay for being exempt from militia trainings, which were of no service either to King or Country.

Mr. Rolph thought that the money should first be raised, and then say how it was to be expended —in framing the ways and means taxation should be avoided, because the debt of the Province was already great—he mentioned this in order, that due consideration should take place under the present circumstances of the country—should we while laboring under a general state of poverty, resort to a general system of taxation! he objected to the mode proposed, because it was a tax on all, on those who can, as well as those who cannot pay—he knew that in his own District (London) the people found it difficult to pay their ordinary taxes—he objected to it also, because it took away the resources of one part of the country, to be applied in another, and he considered this as taking money out of one pocket to put into another. If the statute labor, as had been asserted, was not duly performed, he would provide a remedy for the neglect, and institute an inquiry into the manner, why good laws were not well administered—the Statute Labor should be left as it was and other means devised for the improvement of the Roads, as the interior parts of the country were as bad for roads as much as other places, and it would therefore be unfair to direct their labor, to other parts of the country, it was robbing them of so much labor which they required themselves, and would be a cruelty—the proposition he therefore hoped would not be adopted, but that other means would be devised for accomplishing the object. The question then was, to what amount was it safe for the purpose, without resorting to taxation? He would name first, the sum to be annually paid to the Government, by the Canada Company.—This fund the House already had control over. Mr. Cayley and Mr. Thews) stated, that the people in the Bathurst District had no claim to an appropriation of money in their roads, as they lay near the Markets of Lower Canada, and as the Government expended large sums of money for the improvement of their Navigation.—Mr. Morris said he was astonished to hear such arguments from Hon Gent., after the description given by the Att'y. Gen of the state of the roads in that part of the Province, and if they were so bad in summer when the learned Gent. visits Perth, what must they be in the Spring and Fall; they must in many places impassable at all seasons, and although the money expended on the Canal are within 20 or 30 Miles of the best population, such is the nature of the country, that it is altogether impossible to convey any kind of Provisions for the supply of the workmen. Nothing was to be found in the Province like it, and yet on all former occasions when he applied to this House for aid to render passable some of the worst places, he was always met with the cry, that if aid was given to one District, it must be given to all.—He asked if this was just, when they heard the difficulties under which the people in Bathurst labored —Taxes were often laid on the road to Brockville with a couple of Barrels of Potash, when nature and distance dictated, that the conveyance should be to the Ottawa, instead of the St. Lawrence. Another reason why the Legislature should assist in making roads in that District, was, that the country was new, and had never enjoyed the advantages conferred on those parts of the Province—£70,000 had been expended on the Highways before that District was in existence: and as there was now a population of 13,000 Souls, contributing as largely to the Provincial revenue as most of the Districts, he certainly hoped that their claims would not go unnoticed, especially as they had never put the country to any expense in Legislating, as the people at the Head of the Lake therein had proposed. Did (ask he) any petitions to the House, three petitions only. Mr. Wilson would apply a portion of the money to every part of the Province, and in his opinion rest, instead of that of the Crown whose property they were.

The public debt of the Province having been alluded to, he would take this opportunity of requesting Hon. Gent., to refer to the public accounts—they would there find that during the last year about one sixth part of it, had been paid off, and with respect to the present measure he thought it unfair to consider it as a tax, or as adding in any respect to the public debt of the Province.

Mr. Hamilton would not consent to support the mode proposed by the Attorney General, until he was satisfied, that no other sources could be got at for the improvement of the Roads. The Canada Company he considered as a perfect absentee system, and would therefore endeavor to ascertain how the monies received from them were expended—he would get this information at all events, and if it should then be found that no other means could be devised, he would vote for the present measure with some modifications—the information however should first be obtained

Mr. Hamilton would suggest as an additional resource, the interest received by the Province from the Bank Stock it had taken in the Bank of Upper Canada. As to the remarks of the Honble. Gentleman from Lenox, (Mr. Morris) he would reply, that the Burlington Canal would not be a burthen to the country, as it would eventually pay both the interest and principal of the sum loaned on public credit, for its construction.

Mr Lefferty inquired whether any Hon. Gentleman knew what became of the fines paid by Quakers, Menonists, and Tunkers for exemption from Militia duty—he thought they should be expended on the Roads.

Mr. Hamilton replied that they were already appropriated by Law, to the uses of the several Districts in which they were paid—their amount was not so trifling, as in times of peace they were not rigidly exacted.

Capt. Matthews proposed reducing the Salaries of Clerks in public Offices—they were better paid as said, here, than in England,

Mr. Perry said that this would be only attacking the small fry—he should prefer beginning with the heads of Departments.

Capt. Matthews answered, that he would take the small fry first, and make them serve as bait to catch the larger fish with.

The House adjourned for want of a Quorum,

Tuesday, 11th March.

Highway Committee resumed.

Mr. Rolph proposed his resolution—

Mr. Perry was friendly to the inquiry proposed, and would also include the revenue derived under 14th Geo. 3.

Mr. Walsh would rather abandon the measure, than proceed with it any further this Session.

Mr. Gowan proposed to commute for 1s 6d, but one days labor should be commuted for, at 3s 6d., 2s 9d., and 1s 6d., according to the situation of the person paying it, those nearest the principal Highway to pay most, paying the largest sum, and reducing it as they were further removed from the contemplated improvements.—This he said would be but a small sacrifice to the public good, and would be attended with the saving in wear and tear of Waggons and Harness.

The Attorney General felt that he had discharged his duty, in submitting what he considered the most practicable mode for the improvement of the Roads—if the Committee should concur in the Resolution proposed by the Hon. and learned Member (Mr. Rolph), he should not consider it necessary to pursue the measure any further.

Mr. Rolph.—If the House would go with him and agree to ask for the information which his Resolution called for, he should then be prepared to devise means equally practicable with those suggested by the learned Attorney General for improving the Highways.

Mr. Rolph requested the Attorney General's measure, rather than be without one—something should certainly be done for the roads, and if no other funds could be found, he would make use of his—at the same time he would not agree to expend so large a sum in one year—labor was already scarce in many parts of the country, and the effect would be to raise the price of it on the farmers,—he would not therefore go with that moderate sum this year, and would prefer that a gradation should be observed in the commutation—all who resided in the immediate vicinity of the roads to be improved who were rated for its days labor or over should commute for the whole, and less in proportion as they were further from them.—The information asked for by the Resolution of Mr Rolph, need not stop the progress of this measure, as it could be obtained at the same time, but before finally closing the one suggested by the General Government, he would wait for an answer to the address proposed by the Resolution now before the Committee.

Mr. M'Lean with some modification, approved of the measure proposed by the learned Atty. Gen. —the information which the resolution proposed obtaining, might be asked for, but the sum to which it alluded, forming part of the crown revenue, there could be no expectation of getting moneys from such a source, for the improvement of the Roads.

Mr. Peterson could not assent to the mode proposed for improving the Roads, as it called upon the people to pay money—he considered it as unfair, and against the interests of the country—in many parts of the province it was difficult to raise a single shilling in money, the people in his District, found it no easy matter to pay their ordinary taxes, and more time would be spent in going to market to raise this additional two shillings and six pence, than would be required for the performance of the days labor which was proposed to be commuted for—he felt the same objection to paying in money, for exemption from militia trainings, and to taxes of any kind he was opposed.—As he felt desirous however that something should be done for the improvement of the roads, he hoped that some plan would yet be devised for so important an object.

Mr. Rolph's resolution for an address—on the subject of payments made, and to be made, by the Canada Company—sale of Crown Lands—Crown Timber—and Ferries was put and carried.

Mr Wilson proposed an additional Resolution for an address, on the subject of Militia fines—from what Regiments and the names of the persons paying such fines, for the last thirteen years. After some discussion this Resolution being put, was also Carried.

The Committee then rose, and reported the Resolutions—for receiving the Report Yeas 12—Nays 11.

The Resolutions being then severally put by the Speaker from the Chair—the two first of the series proposed by the Attorney General were Carried, and those of Messrs. Rolph and Wilson, for addresses on the subject alluded to, lost.

Mr. Bidwell moved an address to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for Reports of Common Schools and from Trustees of District Schools in the Province.—Carried.

Capt. Matthews' notice—bill for the better election of Grand Juries —Ordained.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 22, 1828.

The arrival of the Packet Ship Sully, at New-York from Havre, puts us in possession of London dates to 11th January. The news she brings is important, and by the Packet Ship of 16th which has probably reached New York by this time, we may expect to learn, the names of those who are to compose the new British Cabinet. Several extracts from English papers, for which we are indebted to the Albion will be found under their proper head.

As the Session of Parliment draws near to a close, members appear disposed to further the business without unnecessary delay, and for the last week there has certainly been a more business like appearance in the House, than during the previous part of the Session. Discussion is no doubt useful, for the purpose of eliciting information, and to afford an opportunity to every member who wishes to do so, of explaining his views on the various subjects which are under consideration. It is the repetition of this discussion at every stage of a measure, which unnecessarily, and very often improperly, occupies the House, to the exclusion of other matter; and the complaints of Hon. Members themselves bear us out in this remark.

The House was engaged on Thursday passing a Bill through Committee, to amend the wild Land Assessment Law. As we were not present when it was under consideration, we are not able to state precisely what its provisions are. We understand however that it authorises the payment of Taxes, in the District, when the person paying then lands, lies in the interior, where the roads are deep, & according to the discharge, velocity and distance calculated, the difference of level between where it falls into the St. Lawrence and its source must be about 650 feet. In the extent of its course there are many Islands, and what is called the Lake of the Islands, or lakes, or lakes of the second order. These are deep, & in many places out of soundings, while the colour of their waters are quite different from those in the large lakes, such as Ontario, Erie, &c.

The shores of its lakes are generally swampy, occasioned by the rising, every year, of the waters over them. They are covered with half drowned timber, and present a melancholy prospect. The floods continue at a height about a month, but do not abate for three; they must be supposed of as much melted snow as would cover at least 15,000,000 acres of land 5 feet deep.

As far up the noble stream as the Lake of the Chats, the country adjoining is tolerably well settled, to the distance it might be said, of 100 miles from the City of Montreal; the Settlers have found the country extremely healthy and fertile, and the waters good to drink; in Breweries it makes good ale, and is accounted excellent for washing, bleaching, dyeing &c. Where the country has been cleared 20 years, little thriving villages begin to spring up. Even the Indian one, of the Lake of the Two Mountains, begins to look similar to Ambleside on the banks of Windermere, England, praised by all feeling travellers and admirers of Lake scenery.

This River may be said to be the grand highway to the extensive and unexplored North West territories of Canada; along the banks, in many instances, the famous North West Company, had posts—now in possession of the Hudson Bay Company—it was expected that the Fur Trade would have enlightened on him. At present as he appears to be in a most delightful passion, we shall not interrupt him.—Only think how dangerous, it would be to do this, with a "Peeler," who takes no lobby, in the dark, of inflicting "summary chastisement"

We have given the opinions expressed by Hon. Members, on the subject of the Highways, as fully as our limits will admit. We regret exceedingly that the measure is again abandoned, and that the Roads must remain for another year at least, in their present state.

A press of business, prevents our attending to several other subjects.

The Editor of the Colonial Advocate, has made a discovery, which he communicates to his readers in his last number, and which will no doubt be considered of real importance, to the country. In the Statutes of 1823—he has discovered that by an error of the press, we have made a misprint by the transposition of two figures—1825, for 1823.— This by most persons would be considered for nothing—among whom we claim the Duke of Wellington, "Master of the Ordinance," which the Editor of the Advocate has done, in the very same paper, where he announces his important discovery, of our misprint.

Colonial,

HALIFAX.

We are happy to learn that the small-pox, that dissolating and loathsome disease which has swept away so many valuable members of our community, is fast subsiding, both in virulency and in the number attacked. The Typhus Fever has almost, if not entirely, disappeared; though great loss of life has followed in consequence of the introduction of these pestilential diseases, much gratitude is due from us all to the kind Providence who has laid his hand so lightly upon us.—Acadian Recorder.

FANCY BALL.—The Fancy Ball given last evening by Lieut. Colonel Ferguson, and the Officers of His Majesty's 52nd Regiment, afforded high satisfaction to a very large party. Mess Room, the great scene of amusement, was fitted up in a style of the utmost neatness. The fancy dresses, in most instances exhibited much taste, and the disguises were so good, that it was with difficulty many of the parties who had assumed characters could be discovered. A humorous Paul Pry, Active Foresters, Spanish Guerillas, Quakers, Gypsies, Pensioners, Mendicants, Flower Girls, French & Dutch Peasants, Knaves of Hearts, Clubs, Spades and Diamonds, Jews, Sailors, &c. all figured away among the gay throng, and gave a rich zest to the entertainment. Dancing commenced at ten o'clock, which was kept up till 12, when the supper rooms were thrown open, and a profusion of delicacies and substantial dishes displayed, and the merry party again adjourned to the Ball Room. Dancing was resumed, and it was in vain that the passionate old Gentleman in his Night Gown and Slippers, complained of being deprived of his sleep, and repeatedly endeavored to turn them out of doors, his rage had no effect, and it was not until a late or rather an early hour, that the company retired, highly delighted with the kind attention of their gallant friends.—Ib.

The Miramichi Mercury of the 15th inst. states that a Horizontal Wind Mill, has been erected by a Mr. Manderson, near the Scotch Church. When completed, it will have 24 sails, and its power will be equal to 14 horses, and will drive 2 pair stones, and 6 saws. Its principal advantages are, that it will not require more than a light breeze, to put it in motion, that it can go at all seasons of the year, that it is accessable to all parts of the River, to the numerous settlements about the Bay, and round the coast, and that it can always be depended upon. We join with the Editor of the Mercury, in wishing the proprietor, all the encouragement to which so spirited an attempt is justly entitled.

TO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavors will be to promote the comfort of passengers; and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

TO IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or —— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

At Four o'clock this day, His EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR being seated on the Throne in the Legislative Council Chamber, and the House of Assembly being present, His EXCELLENCY was pleased to Prorogue the present Session with the following

SPEECH.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

The period of your Session having been extended to its usual length, there are some measures of great and general interest to the people of this Province, which I had hoped might have been presented to me as the result of your labors.

Having recommended to you, when you met, that some effectual provision for the improvement of the Roads should engage your attention, and being aware, from the Petitions presented to me, that measures for promoting other valuable objects would be proposed to your consideration, I have not suffered the prorogation of the Legislature to be hastened by any occurrences however unusual.

It is not in my power to do more than persevere in urging on future occasions, an application to those objects, which are so connected with the welfare of the people, that an earnest attention to them, on the part of the Legislature, could not fail to be rewarded with the immediate attainment of great practical good.

Gentlemen of the House of Assembly,

I thank you, in His Majesty's name, for the Supplies which you have granted for the Public Service.

Honorable Gentlemen and Gentlemen,

Among the Bills presented to me for the Royal Assent, I am pleased to find that, you have concurred in a measure providing for the convenient tenure of such parcels of ground as the various denominations of Christians may have occasion to occupy for Religious purposes.

The Naturalization Bill, which you have passed, remains to be decided upon by His Majesty's Government. After all the unnecessary excitement which has been produced by this question, I need only remind you that no measure could be devised here or in England, which could ever place the desired relief upon a more indulgent footing than it would long ago have been, if the wishes of this Government had been seconded when they were first publicly expressed.

I take leave of you in the confident expectation, that among a people so particularly favored as the Inhabitants of Upper Canada, no misapprehension as to their real interests, and the proper objects of all good Government, can be either general or lasting; and that this season of peace and prosperity, which we so happily enjoy, will hereafter be employed in a zealous and undivided application, to objects of evident and acknowledged utility.

To all to whom it may concern—

GREETING.

WHEREAS at a Session of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly of our Province of Upper Canada, begun and holden at York, on the seventh day of November in the sixth year of our Reign, and prorogued on the 30th day of January, in the seventh year of our Reign, an Act was passed entitled "An Act to prevent the operation in this Province of an Act of Parliament made in England in the twenty first year of the reign of His late Majesty King James the first, entitled 'An Act to prevent the destroying or murthering of Bastard Children, and to make other provision in lieu thereof.'" And Whereas, according to the Provisions of a certain Act of the Parliament of Great Britain, passed in the thirty first year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the third entitled "an Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's reign, entitled 'an Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America,' and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province.'" An authentic copy of the said Act has been transmitted to our Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the said Act having been referred to the Committee of the Lords of our Privy Council appointed for the consideration of matters relating to Trade and Foreign Plantations—We have been pleased by and with the advice of our said Privy Council, and by our Order in Council made at the Court at St. James, on the fourteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-Seven, to declare our Dis-allowance thereof.

NOW THEREFORE We have thought fit to issue this our Royal Proclamation that all persons whom it may concern may take due notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1828. NO. 44.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS.

Wednesday, 12th March.

Capt. Matthews brought in a Bill for the better election of Grand Juries,—Read, and 200 Copies ordered to be printed.

Court of Chancery.—The House went into a Committee on the Despatches received from His Majesty's Government on the subject, and after some discussion, a Resolution being carried to postpone its further consideration until the next Session of the Legislature,—the Committee rose and reported accordingly.

Sixteen Mile Creek Harbor Bill—2nd Reading—ordered for 3d Reading next Adjourned.

Thursday, 13th March.

The Bill for constructing a Harbor at the mouth of the 16 Mile Creek, was read a third time, passed, and sent to the Legislative Council.

An Address to His Majesty, on the subject of the independence of the Judges, passed the House, and a Committee appointed to wait upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to know when he would receive the same.—The Address is similar to that presented on a former Session on this Painful subject, and to which his Majesty's Government have already given an answer.—The present Address grew out of a discussion on the subject of the establishment of a Court of Chancery in this Province.

Friday, 14th March.

Religious Society Return Bill—(to ascertain the number of each denomination)—2nd Reading—in Committee.

Mr. Hamilton thought that such a Bill was much required—it would be the means of procuring valuable information, and settle disputes which at present existed on the subject,—the Bill should receive his hearty support.

Mr. Morris said that its necessity must be apparent to every Hon. Member—Some of the Sects were busy in taking a census of their Members, which was not likely to be as correct as could be desired

Mr Walsh observed that by one of the provisions of the Bill, a fine was imposed—he considered it as a most extraordinary proceeding, that a man should be declared liable to a penalty, for refusing to say, to what religious denomination he belonged.

Mr. Perry said that in the Schedule, there was a column for "non professing," and those who did not state to what denomination they were attached, could be placed under that head.

Mr Hamilton thought that without such a penalty the Bill would be useless, as the Assessors could not make out correct returns.

Capt. Matthews said, that if he had ever met with one thing more ridiculous than another, it was this Bill—it would lead to mischief, and divide Members of families who belonged to different sects, against each other—he would not himself submit to such a measure, and would refuse to tell his name and religion.

Mr. Hamilton had not himself made up his mind as to what denomination he belonged, and thought he never should—he liked them all equally well—

Mr. Ralph felt a repugnance to the measure generally, and to its provisions—there were many reasons why such a Bill should not be adopted.—No person should be obliged to record his Creed, as it might be made use of to affect his civil rights—he regarded a Scholarship in the University about to be erected, as a civil right, and a mans recording his name as belonging to any other denomination than that, which by the Charter would entitle him to the privilege, might be made use of as a reason for excluding him.—A burst of feeling at a Methodist Camp Meeting, might carry some away, as it might be made use of to affect his civil rights—he regarded a Scholarship in the University about to be erected, as a civil right, and a mans recording his name as belonging to any other denomination than that, which by the Charter would entitle him to the privilege, might be made use of as a reason for excluding him.—A burst of feeling at a Methodist Camp Meeting, might carry some away, so as to record their names as Methodists or Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland, and afterwards at the University might sign the 39 Articles of the Church of England—this would cause them to be looked upon with a jealous eye, and they would be called turncoats. The less we interfered with opinions on such a subject the better. He thought it would be strange to know how every mans door and ask him his faith, and if he refused to tell it, to set him down as non professing—a man might as well be asked what money he had in his house—whether he was a Whig or a Tory, and what were his political principles The Assessors would no doubt, in their tour through the country become admirable polemics, and if any persons should obstinately refuse to tell them to what Church they belonged, a fine would be imposed upon them on the Oath of the Assessor The proposition he considered as monstrous—it would lead to disputation among families at their very firesides, of an unprofitable kind, which might end in very unpleasant consequences.

Mr. Morris said that the University had been established under the present Charter, because the Governament supposed that the greater number of the inhabitants were Episcopalians. The census now taking by several of the sects, would in all probability be made in such a way as to furnish no data, to rectify this error. The Bill was intended to produce a correct return, which might afford such information to His Majesty's Government as would induce them to make some alteration in the University Charter, and place it on a different footing, from that which was at present intended.

Mr. Perry concurred in the opinion expressed by Mr. Morris. The Assessors would take correct returns, and no one he thought could have any objection, to say, to what sect he belonged.

Mr. Peterson knew that endeavors had been making for the last six months, to ascertain the numbers of each sect.—The present Bill was much required by the Country.—A Rev. Gentleman of the Church, had written to another Rev. Gentleman at York, that in Townships of Prince Edward County, two-thirds belonged to the Church of England—this statement he knew to be miserably incorrect, and he understood that it was the practice of Rev Gentlemen of that Church, in different parts of the Country, to go about making inquiry, and those whose minds were not made up as to what sect they should attach themselves, were set down by them, as belonging to the Church of England. If the truth was sent home, there would be no University under the present Charter—if allowed to go into operation, he considered that its object would be to establish an ecclesiastical tyranny, and that it would not be of any service to the country. The principle of the Bill was good, and he could not account for the opposition it met with from the learned Member from Middlesex (Mr. Ralph), whose arguments against it, he thought were very weak—that learned Gentleman must know that the people wish it, and he should therefore be delighted to give it his support.

Mr. Lefferty thought the Bill was required by the Country, but he would confine the inquiry to the heads of families which would show with sufficient accuracy what members belonged to each sect—he was sorry that the Methodists had done so much good, should have been attacked in the course of the debate.

Mr. Beardsley had not heard any such attack—the learned Member from Middlesex (Mr. Ralph) had spoken of enthusiastic bursts of feeling, and that when the pressure went off, they might change their opinions—there was nothing disrespectful in this, if he thought so he would have repelled the attack.

The Committee rose and reported the Bill, which was ordered for a third reading.

Summary.

It is gratifying to observe, that, amidst all our dangers, real and fancied, the exchange continues in our favour, a circumstance chiefly to be attributed to the influx of specie from the New World, to which England may be said now to stand in the nearly the very same relation that Spain ever did.

The public should be on their guard against counterfeit sovereigns and half-sovereigns, many being in circulation.

Singular Expedition across the Atlantic.—As a proof of the great celerity with which news is circulated at the present day, we may instance the following:—The American President's Speech, delivered at Washington, left New-York in the packet-ship Silas Richards, on the 17th December, arrived in Liverpool on Monday the 31st, was despatched, by express, to London at three o'clock, where it reached at three o'clock on Tuesday; was printed and published by five o'clock the same evening, in a second edition of the "Sun" Evening Paper, occupying nearly five columns, closely printed, and left London that night by all the mails at eight o'clock, arrived again in Liverpool on Wednesday at seven, copies of which were next day forwarded to New-York, which it would probably reach in about thirty days, thus affording President Adams an opportunity of perusing his own speech in the Sun paper, after having sailed across the Atlantic and back again, a distance of 7000 miles, in about forty-eight days!—Liverpool Courier, Jan. 9.

Upwards of £13,000 a-year will be saved in the Irish estimates by the proposed reduction of inspectors of the revenue, inspectors general of prisons, and inspectors of stamps.

HIS MAJESTY'S SPEECH.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Tuesday, January 29, 1828.

The Lord Chancellor entered the House at ten Minutes past two o'clock, and took his seat on the Bench usually occupied by the Lords Commissioners. The other Lords Commissioners were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and Lord Ellenborough.

At twenty minutes past two, the Usher of the Black Rod proceeded to the Lower House, for the purpose of summoning the attendance of the Commons to their Lordship's Bar, to hear the Royal Speech Read. The Speaker of the House of Commons was attended by about fifty Members.

The Clerk having read His Majesty's Commission—The Lord Chancellor read the following Speech:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen,—

"We are commanded by His Majesty to acquaint you, that His Majesty continues to receive from all Foreign Princes and States, assurances of their desire to maintain the relations of amity with this country, and that the Great Powers of Europe participate in the earnest wish of His Majesty to cultivate a good understanding upon all points which may conduce to the preservation of peace.

"His Majesty has viewed for some time past, with great concern, the state of affairs in the East of Europe.

"For several years a contest has been carried on between the Ottoman Porte & the inhabitants of the Greek Provinces and Islands, which has been marked on each side by excesses revolting to humanity.

"In the progress of that contest, the rights of neutral States, and the laws which regulate the intercourse of civilized Nations, have been repeatedly violated, and the peaceful commerce of His Majesty's subjects has been exposed to frequent interruption, and to depredations, too often aggravated by Acts of violence and atrocity.

"His Majesty has felt the deepest anxiety to terminate the calamities, and avert the dangers unspeakable from hostilities, which constitute the only exception to the general tranquility of Europe.

"Having been earnestly entreated by the Greeks to interpose his good offices, with a view to affect a reconciliation between them and the Ottoman Porte, His Majesty concerted measures for that purpose, in the first instance with the Emperor of Russia, and subsequently with his Imperial Majesty and the King of France.

"His Majesty has given directions that there should be laid before you copies of a Protocol, signed at St. Petersburgh by the Plenipotentiaries of his Majesty, and of his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, on the 4th of April, 1826, and of the treaty entered into between his Majesty and the Courts of the Tuileries and of St. Petersburgh, on the 6th of July, 1827.

"In the course of the measures adopted with a view to carry into effect the object of the treaty, a collision, wholly unexpected by his Majesty, took place in the port of Navarino, between the fleets of the Contracting Powers, and that of the Ottoman Porte.

"Notwithstanding the valour displayed by the combined fleet, His Majesty deeply laments that this conflict should have occurred with the naval force of an ancient Ally, but he still entertains a confident hope, that this untoward event will not be followed by further hostilities, and will not impede that amicable adjustment of existing differences between the Porte and the Greeks, to which it is so manifestly their common interest to accede.

"In maintaining the National faith, by adhering to the engagements into which His Majesty has entered, His Majesty will never lose sight of the great objects to which all his efforts have been directed—the termination of the contest between the hostile parties—the permanent settlement of their relations to each other—and the maintenance of the repose of Europe, upon the basis on which it has rested since the last treaty of peace.

"His Majesty has the greatest satisfaction in informing you that the purposes for which His Majesty, upon the requisition of the court of Lisbon, detached a military force to Portugal, have been accomplished. The obligations of good faith having been fulfilled, and the safety and independence of Portugal secured, His Majesty has given orders that the forces now in that country should be immediately withdrawn.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

"His Majesty has ordered the Estimates of the Current year to be laid before you. They have been prepared with every regard to economy consistent with the Public Service. We are commanded by His Majesty to recommend to your early attention an enquiry into the state of the Revenue and Expenditure of the Country.

"His Majesty is assured that it will be satisfactory to you to learn that, notwithstanding the diminution that has taken place in some branches of the Revenue, the total amount of the receipt during the last year has not disappointed the expectations which were entertained at the commencement of it.

" My Lords and Gentlemen,

"His Majesty has commanded us to inform you, that a considerable increase has taken place in the Export of the principal Articles of British Manufacture.

"This improvement of our Foreign Trade has led to a more general employment of the population, and affords a satisfactory indication of the continued abatement of those commercial difficulties.

"We are commanded by His Majesty to acquaint you, that His Majesty has concluded Treaties of Amity and Commerce with the Emperor of Brazil, and with the U. States of Mexico; copies of which will, by His Majesty's command, be laid before you

"His Majesty commands us to assure you, that he places the firmest reliance upon your continued endeavours to improve the condition of all classes of his subjects, and to advance the great object of His Majesty's solicitude—the prosperity and happiness of his people."

From the New York Albion.

The packets Britannia, New-York, and James Cropper, have arrived from Liverpool bringing London dates to the 16th of February. The information furnished by these papers is so abundant that we must content ourselves with giving a few of the principal items, instead of a general abstract of the whole, as we commonly do. The most important events are—the formation of an entire New Ministry, under the Duke of Wellington—the King's Speech—and the proceedings in Parliament. The first and second subjects will be found in their proper places, and we subjoin an epitome of the Parliamentary proceedings, as almost every topic of importance has been discussed in either Houses of the grand Legislature of the Nation.

The address to his Majesty was moved by the Earl of Chichester, and seconded by Lord Strangford. Both these noble Lords regretted the occurrence of the battle of Navarino. The Marquis of Londonderry expressed similar sentiments. Lord Holland spoke in favour of the battle, and denied that Turkey was the faithful and ancient ally that had been alleged.

Lord King agreed with the terms of the address, but regretted that no allusion had been made to the Corn Laws.

The Duke of Wellington then stated, that he had great pleasure in saying, that it was the intention of His Majesty's Government, during the Session of Parliament, to propose a measure with regard to the Corn Trade, founded upon the principles of the Bill of last Session. The Noble Duke then replied to the objections that had been taken to the word untoward, employed in the Royal Speech.—He meant to say, that he thought the affair was untoward, because the dreadful alternative of that battle was not contemplated in the Treaty of 6 July, and had an embarrassing effect on the negotiations at Constantinople. To prevent, and not to cause the effusion of blood, was the object of his Majesty's intervention. His Grace, however, absolved Admiral Codrington from all censure.

The Marquiss of Lansdowne said that there was no act of the late government, which he should not be prepared to defend, when the proper time for doing arrived. Lords Goderich and Dudley made the same declaration.

House of Lords, Feb. 1. The Marquiss of Londonderry called the attention of the House to the violent and outrageous conduct of the Catholic Association, which body had declared, that they would consider an enemy to Ireland, any member of either House of Parliament, who should directly or indirectly support the Administration having the Duke of Wellington, or any other man of similar principles at its head. This act the noble Marquis considered as intended as a sort of intimidation of Parliament, and called upon the House to join with him in expressing its reprehension of such improper proceedings.

Monday, Feb. 11.—The Earl of Darnley wished to know whether it was the intention of ministers to bring forward any measure whatever for bettering the condition of Ireland; if not, he would, at some early day move for the appointment of a committee, to take into consideration the state of that country, and suggest measures for its relief.

The Duke of Wellington said, that it was not the intention of Government to originate, in that House, any measures respecting Ireland. Some measures would, however, in the course of the Session, be submitted to, the other House, involving those recommended by his Noble Friend.

Viscount Goderich explained at great length, what led to the dissolution of the late ministry. From the statement of the Noble Lord it appears that the principal, if not the only, cause of that dissolution arose out of the disagreement between Mr. Huskisson & Mr. Herries, as to the appointment of the chairman of the proposed Finance committee. After describing the rise and progress of the difference between those gentlemen, and the failure of his attempts to remove it, the Noble Viscount went on to say, that under the circumstances, he thought it his duty to lay before his Majesty a statement of the dilemma in which he was placed. His Majesty then conceiving himself entitled to act as he thought proper for the good of his country, communicated his directions for the forming of a new administration to the Noble Duke now at the head of it.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Tuesday, Jan 29.

The Speaker having returned with his Majesty's speech, it was read to the House. The address was moved by Mr. C. Jenkenson, a relation of the Earl of Liverpool, and seconded by Mr. Grant. A debate then arose, in which Mr. Brougham, Mr. Bankes, Lords Russell, and Althorp took part, during which various sentiments were expressed on the words of the King's speech. Mr. Brougham in particular objected to the expression "untoward event," and complained of a military person being placed at the head of the nation. The address however, was agreed to without a division.

House of Commons, Feb. 7.—Mr. Brougham brought forward his motion on the "state of the Administration of the law," on which occasion he made a most luminous speech, which nearly fills the London daily papers. The further discussion of the subject however was deferred until the 22d of Feb. when it was expected to be resumed, with augmented interest.

House of Commons, Feb. 15.—Mr. Peel brought forward his motion for a "committee of finance," and, after a most able speech, he moved that the following be of that committee:—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Tierney, Mr. Herries, Sir John Newport, Mr. Ward, Lord Althorpe, Mr. Ashurst, Lord Lowther, Mr. Hume, Lord Howick, Sir E. Knatchbull, Mr. H. Drummond, Mr. Bankes, Mr. Baring, Mr. Grant, Mr. Wilmot Horton, Mr. Littleton, Mr. Vesey Fitzgerald, Sir Henry Parnell, Mr. Wilmot Horton, Sir M. W. Ridley, and Mr. Stanley.

Mr. Baring asked why Mr. Huskisson was not on the Committee, and was followed by Mr. Brougham, Mr. Grant, (Dumfries-shire) which he described all the persons named, as mere dross compared with that great man.—Mr. Peel said, that Mr. Huskisson was already overwhelmed with business; but, after some further discussion, Mr. H. expressed his willingness to submit to the wishes of the House, and he was added accordingly.

We had written so far when the Salem arrived from Liverpool with London papers to the 19th of February. On the 18th the explanations took place in the House of Commons and an extremely long debate ensued. The first difficulty in Lord Goderich's Cabinet arose from a dispute between Mr. Huskisson and Mr. Herries respecting the appointment of Lord Althorpe as Chairman of the Finance Committee, which dispute the Noble Lord unfortunately had not sufficient energy to stifle. It still seems uncertain whether the present Ministry will stand without some further changes. Mr. Huskisson it is supposed is not comfortable, and many papers, the John Bull inclusive, say that some of the appointments are only provisional. A little time, however, will decide this point.

Lord Cochrane has arrived in England.—He says that as the Turks have no longer any vessels at sea, his presence is not required.—The Hellas was left at Hydra.

Consols on 18th Feb. 85¼

The Marriage of Prince Hohenlohe of Langenbourg, with the Princess Feodore, daughter of the Duchess of Kent took place at Kensington, on the 12th of February.

The British army is to be withdrawn from Portugal immediately.

Bursting of the Thames Tunnel, and six men drowned.—We regret to announce that a second irruption of water took place early on Saturday morning in the Thames tunnel and that the gush was so sudden and violent, as to cause the loss of six lives. The present irruption has taken place several feet nearer the north shore of the river than the former one, and beyond the spot where the bags of clay had been sunk. It is said that proper soundings had not been made, and that the deposit of clay ought to have been more extensive than it was, as the soil of which is gravelly and liable to quicksands. About 100 men were employed at the time of the irruption, and the confusion was tremendous. In three minutes the tunnel was entirely filled with water. Mr. Brunel, Jun. was in the shield at the moment, and narrowly escaped with his life by swimming; he is much bruised in various parts of the body.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1828.

The late arrivals at New-York, bring us dates from England to 20th February.—The news is important, and under the proper head our readers will find His Majesty's Speech, delivered by Commission, on opening the Session of Parliament, on 29th January, together with a List of the new Ministry.

HIS EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, and family left York, on Thursday morning, for Stamford His EXCELLENCY embarked on board the Canada Steam-Packet, under a salute from the Garrison

In the United States, a Naturalization Bill has been reported to Congress, by the Judiciary Committee.—Its provisions are as follows:—

"That any Alien being a free white, who was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States between the 14th of April, 1802, and the 18th of June, 1812, and who has continued to reside within the same, may be admitted to become a Citizen of the United States, without having made any previous declaration of his intention to become a Citizen: Provided that when ever any person without a certificate of such declaration of intention, shall make application to be admitted a Citizen of the United States, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Court, that the applicant was residing within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States before the 18th of June, 1812, and had continued to reside within the same, or he shall not be admitted. And the residence of the applicant within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States for at least five years immediately preceding the time of such application shall be proved by the oath or affirmation of Citizens of the United States, which Citizen shall be named in the record as witnesses.—And such continued residence within the limits and under the jurisdiction of the United States when satisfactorily proved, and place or places where the applicant has resided for at least five years as aforesaid, shall be stated and set forth, together with the names of the Citizens, in the record of the Court, admitting the applicant; otherwise the same shall not entitle him to be considered and deemed a Citizen of the United States."

From this it will be seen, that the Government of the United States, consider it necessary to impose restrictions, and to require registered proofs before the party claiming Naturalisation, can be admitted to the rights and privileges of a Citizen.

Do we see the American Papers endeavoring to create a belief among these people, that it is the intention of their Government to deprive them of their rights? Is the law complained of as being unjust and arbitrary, or is any thing heard of its being considered degrading to be obliged to come into open Court with witnesses, to make the required registry?—Let those who misrepresented the intentions of this Government, when our House of Assembly passed the Naturalization Bill in 1826, compare that Act, with this Naturalization Law of the United States, and answer if they can for their misrepresentations. His Majesty's Government, as well as the Colonial Government were anxious to secure to these people their rights and privileges, and were desirous of carrying into effect a measure, the most liberal and safe, for the parties concerned, that could be devised.

Comparing the Act of 1826 passed by the Legislature of this Province, with the above, we cannot doubt that the former will be admitted to be a measure infinitely more liberal, and less difficult to be carried into effect by the parties interested, than the latter.

In the United States the party must produce witnesses to prove certain facts on oath, whose names, together with his own, must be entered on the record of registry, otherwise he is not entitled to be considered as a Citizen of the United States although he may have so considered himself for the last twenty-six years—that is from 1802 to 1828.

A striking difference between the two Acts, is, that while the provisions of the Law passed in this Province were so extended as to include all persons residing in the Province up to June 1820, that of the United States limits itself to 18th June, 1812, the very day on which they declared war against Great Britain: Those who have come into the States since that day and have neglected to comply with the provisions of the general Law on the subject are excluded.—Here, none were excluded, because all who chose to avail themselves of the Law could do so, by taking the Oath of Allegiance, and recording their names with some other particulars of identification, important to themselves and their families, without being called upon to adduce any proof whatever—they were admitted as evidence in their own cases; and yet a measure so liberal, and so easily complied with, when contrasted with the one above mentioned, was called degrading and odious. Let those who suffered themselves to be led away by designing men compare the two, and they will then be better able to appreciate the generous intentions of the Government towards them.

The imprisonment of two Officers of the Government, both at the heads of Departments, Colonel Coffin, and Col. Givins, by warrant of the Speaker, under the authority of a Resolution of the House of Assembly, for an alleged contempt and breach of privilege, is a fact which we have no doubt has already come to the knowledge of most of our readers.

On Saturday last they were committed for the residue of the Session, and pursuant to the terms of the warrant were released from confinement on Tuesday last, immediately after the Session was closed. As the right which has been assumed by the House of Assembly on this occasion, will be made the subject of an investigation before the highest tribunals, we shall not in this place attempt to discuss the merits of the question.—We shall briefly state such facts as are within our knowledge.

Col. Coffin and Col. Givins were summoned by the Chairman of a Select Committee, to attend and give information, on the Petition of William Forsyth, complaining of outrage.—Being aware that the usual practice of the House, when requiring the attendance of the heads of Departments belonging to the Government, was to address the Lieutenant Governor praying His permission for their attendance; these Gentlemen felt it to be their duty, to communicate to His Excellency that they had been served with Summons', in order that his pleasure might be made known to them, whether they were at liberty with his permission to attend the Committee. The reply to this application informed them that permission could not be given, and the Chairman of the Committee was acquainted immediately, by both Gentlemen with the result. The matter was then reported to the House, when a debate ensued, which ended in a Resolution, for issuing the Speaker's warrant for the apprehension of the parties.

Conscious that there was nothing in their conduct which could be construed as a wilful or intentional disrespect, and as the House had proceeded to an extre- which would probably bring the question of privilege to issue, they refused to be taken into custody unless it should be by force, acquainting the Sergeant at Arms at the same time, that if it was resorted to, they should seek for redress by actions at Law, both against the Speaker and himself.

Eventually force was resorted to, against which no resistance was made—the arrest being violent, they were brought to the Bar of the House, and there stated, that their non-attendance before the Committee, was not from a refusal on their own parts,—being at the head of Departments, they felt it to be their duty to obtain the permission of the Lt. Governor, usual on such occasions, and that the permission having been withheld, they had not felt themselves at liberty to comply with the Summons.

After a long debate, on motion of Mr. Ralph, seconded by Mr. Bidwell—the resolution for committal was carried, and the parties lodged in the Gaol

Such are the facts which we have endeavored to state as plainly as possible. The only remarks we shall offer upon them at present, are:—That the House of Assembly on this occasion deviated from the usual courtesy which has been invariably observed, when the attendance of persons at the head of Departments is required. The practice hitherto has been to address the Lt. Governor, requesting his permission for their attendance:—That the House, having on its part failed in the observance of that courtesy. Col. Coffin and Col. Givins would have acted in dereliction of what they felt to be a duty, if by any act on their part they had compromised, what the House of Assembly itself had by its invariable practice, acknowledged to be a prerogative of the Government.—And, that not having been guilty of any intentional or wilful disrespect to the House, in not attending before the Committee, their subsequent imprisonment, was an unnecessary, and improper severity.

The question of privilege, as we before stated, we shall not pretend to discuss, as it is reserved for a more solemn decision.

A Bill founded on the report of the Finance Committee of which Mr. Morris was Chairman, has passed during the present Session, which is of much importance to the Country. We allude to the Act for negociating a Loan in England, for the whole amount of the Provincial debt, £90,000 Ster. An Annual appropriation is made in the Law of £4,500 for the liquidation of the loan, which will be effected by the British Government on account of the Province in the London Market, on such terms, as will undoubtedly produce a great saving in the rate of Interest, and which together with the benefit of exchange, will be the means of giving us the command of a considerable sum of money on the transaction.

(From the Quebec Mercecury.)

We copy the following paragraph from the Oxford Herald, the Gentleman to whom it refers is the brother to the Revd. Dr. Mills Chaplain to the Forces.

Public Tribute.—The distress which so lately prevailed throughout the manufacturing districts, will, no doubt, be fresh in the recollection of the public. During that gloomy period, the Rev. Thos. Sturges Mills, Incumbent of Dob Cross, in Saddleworth, distinguished himself by his exertions in favor of the poor of that district; and the inhabitants being anxious to acknowledge his important services, purchased by subscription, an elegant tea service of plate, of the value of £100, which they presented to him at a public dinner, given at the Commercial Inn, Upper Mill, on Thursday, the 6th. The Reverend Gentleman arrived at the appointed hour, attended by a number of his friends, amongst whom were, Mr. Entwistle, of Foxholes, Mr. Dearden, of Richdale, Captain Taylor, of Oldham, Mr. Bankes, of Winstanley, &c. Jas. Buckley, Esq. of Hollowelle, presided, and was supported by J. Brown, Esq. as Vice President; and Mr. Abraham Mellor, Mr. Ammon Platt, Mr. H. Whitehead, and the Rev. T. Evans, who officiated as Stewards. On one piece of the plate, which was prepared by Messrs. Ollivents, of Manchester, in their best style, are engraved the arms of Mr. Mills, & on the reverse, the following inscription:—

"This Service of plate was
Rev. Thomas Sturges Mills, Incumbent of Dob Cross, by the Inhabitants of Saddleworth, as a token of their Gratitude, for his benevolent and unwearied exertions in behalf of the Suffering Poor during the unparalleled Distress of the Year 1826 and 7."

QUEBEC, MARCH 15.

We regret to state that a melancholy accident has occurred to Mr. Wm. Rogers, first clerk in the office of the Quarter Master General. This young gentleman set out a few days ago with a party of Officers of the Garrison, on an excursion in pursuit Mouse-Deer. When at a distance of nearly three days' march from the Settlements, Mr. Rogers was unfortunately wounded by the accidental discharge of the piece of one of the party: the ball entered under the shoulder, passed across the spine and came out at the loins on the opposite side. Mr. Rogers was with much difficulty conveyed to town, where he arrived this morning, and lies in a state of extreme suffering with little hope of his recovery.—The unfortunate gentleman, who was the innocent, cause of this lamentable accident, is in a state of mind which we shall not attempt to depict.—Official Gazette.

Mr. Rogers is this morning much easier, and some favourable symptoms have, we learn, appeared.—Mercury.

Communication.

For the U. E Loyalist.

Mr. EDITOR,

I was a spectator at the Bar of our House of Assembly, on Saturday evening, when Mr. Rolph's Resolution, seconded by Mr. Bidwell, was put to the vote, for the imprisonment of Colonel Coffin and Colonel Givins. My reflections on the scene which was passing before me, you may, if you think proper, give a place in your paper. It was only the night before, that I had read a speech of John Randolphs, lately made in the Congress of the United State, where he says—

"But, permit me to remind you, Sir,—for you were then too young to know much of these matters—that, previously, but nearly at the same time of my leaving that Administration, a certain wise man from the East joined it, who soon after went off to Canada, under strong suspicion of felony; and this was soon followed by a certain gentleman's giving in his adhesion, who had before been violently opposed to it, and to its best measures. Sir, I have not the least objection to being said of me, that I separated myself from Mr. Jefferson, when Barnabas Bidwell and John Quincy Adams joined him."

Here then, thought I, is the son of that same Bidwell whom Randolph speaks of—a Foreigner, sitting, by some unaccountable means, within the Walls of our Legislature, passing judgment against two old, tried, and faithful servants of the King—their lives spent in his service—often hazarded in defence of their Country—in scenes of danger; where, perhaps, his son, was not to be boldly or Constitutional Questions. would not dare to show his head, if the Country—for I cannot call it his—should ever require his Constitutional Services.

I listened for more, but heard no harangues about privilege and prerogative; but as I am an old Half-pay Officer, and do not pretend to be versed in these matters, my mind was more occupied with the inconsistency of a comrade being visited with punishment, because he had obeyed the orders of his Commanding Officer. This, thought I, is redeeming the order of things indeed—and when the vote was taken, I returned to my lodgings, pondering on what I had witnessed.

Yours, H. P.

To the Free and Independent Electors of the County of Durham.

GENTLEMEN,

THE period for a General Election not being far distant, and being again requested by a large body of the Freeholders of this County to become a Candidate, I now beg leave to announce to, you my intention of so doing, and to solicit your suffrages at the approaching Election.

From the increase of the population of this County since you were last called upon to exercise your Elective Franchise, you are entitled to an additional Member to protect your interests, and consult for the welfare of the Province.

In now offering myself to your notice, I feel confident that I may securely trust to the sincerity and steadiness of the attachment manifested to me on former occasions, and which I will not believe so fickle as to be shaken by any idle or absurd reports that may be circulated to prejudice me in your esteem.

If so fortunate as to be the object of your choice, I shall deem it no small gratification to fill a situation, to which the good opinion of my fellow subjects shall have called me.

Your knowledge of me, and my long residence among you, have afforded every opportunity of judging of my capacity to serve you.

I shall make no boast of my independence, nor make professions of what I shall do for you, because I trust that you feel well assured, I have always considered your interest and welfare as identified with my own.

Whatever may have occurred on former occasions, I trust that all bitterness of invective between contending Candidates will be done away, and that the proceedings at the Hustings on the day of Election, will be conducted with the utmost calmness and moderation.

I have hitherto made great sacrifices in upholding your rights; and I shall be once more firm at my post on the day of Election, when I trust I shall receive the general support of the County.

I have the honor to be,
GENTLEMEN,
Your faithful Servant,
G. S. BOULTON.

TO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavors will be to promote the comfort of passengers: and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

To IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or ——— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

THE SUBSCRIBER begs leave to inform his friends and the public that he has purchased the Store-House, Wharf, &c. lately the property of William Cooper, Esq'r. in this Town, where he will receive, store, and sell, on Commission, on the most reasonable terms, all descriptions of produce or merchandize, with which he may be favored.

The buildings are extensive and convenient, being at the head of the Wharf, where all vessels which come into the Bay, principally discharge and take in their cargoes. He flatters himself that the care and attention of the person superintending the Wharf and Store, will give general satisfaction.

There will be for sale a constant supply of Pork, Flour, Wheat, Oats, Corn, Peas, Salt, and Whiskey, also Stoves, Potash Kettles, Coolers, Sugar Kettles, a variety of castings and Grindstones.

YORK CUPOLA FURNACE.—Frederick R. Dutcher, respectfully informs his friends and the public, that he has removed from *J. M. Having commenced the business with a full determination to have his work done in the very best manner, and of first rate materials, he has procured a full set of patterns for both Flouring and Sawmills; he at all times keeps on hand a large assortment of Patent Ploughs both right and left handed of different patterns.

ALSO—Box Stoves, Sugar Kettles, Andirons, Fanning-Mill Irons; 12, 14, 28, and 56 pound Weights, Waggon Boxes, Sleigh Shoes, Plough Points, to fit almost any Patent Ploughs used in this country, &c. &c.—all of which he will warrant to be of the best kind, and as cheap as can be bought in Lower Canada, or Rochester, adding Transportation.

☞ All kinds of Country Produce taken in payment for Castings, at market price, delivered at the Works.

F. R. D. having engaged Mr. Joseph Anderson as Pattern Maker and Mill-Wright, he can furnish Patterns for all kinds of Machinery on the shortest notice.

BANK NOTICE.—DISCOUNT DAY, Wednesday of every Week.—Notes offered for Discount, must be put under cover to the Cashier, and left at the Bank the day before.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First.—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufacture of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

P. MAITLAND,

Lieut. Governor.

GEORGE the FOURTH, by the Grace of GOD, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

AND KNOW YE further, that for the purposes in the said Charter set forth, and for certain considerations concluded upon between Us and the said Canada Company, WE HAVE agreed to Assign and Transfer to the said Company the whole of certain Lands heretofore reserved to us within our said Province, and known by the name of "The Crown Reserves," in such Townships within our said Province as were actually laid out before the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four, except such parts and portions of the said Reserves as have been actually demised for —— term of years, or have been occupied either under written licence granted by our Government of Upper Canada, or on the faith of verbal promises made by our said Government, that the occupants should receive Grants or Leases of the Lands in their occupation; and except also, such portions of the said Crown Reserves as had before the twenty sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty four been occupied for ten years and upwards by persons who have resided upon them without any pretence of legal title, but who, nevertheless, have not hitherto been disturbed, in that occupation.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of our said Province to be hereunto affixed—WITNESS our trusty and well beloved SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, K. C. B. CHAP. III.

An Act to Amend the Assessment Law of this Province.

[Passed 25th March, 1828.]

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable persons holding Lands in the several Districts of this Province to pay the Rates and Taxes on the same to the Treasurer of the District in which they may reside. Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province,'" and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful, in certain cases, for any person or persons, holding or owning Lands in any District of this Province, which are not returned on the Assessment Roll of any Township or place therein, to pay the Rates on such Land to the Treasurer of the District in which he, she or they, or their agent or agents may reside, and the Treasurer who may receive such rates shall, and he is hereby required, on being requested so to do, to give a receipt for the same, specifying the amount paid, the period for which it is paid, the lot or parcel of Land on which the same is paid, and the Concession and Township in which such Land is situated, and also the time or date of such payment: Provided always, that in all cases when the Rates as aforesaid shall be paid by virtue of this Act to the Treasurer of another District than that in which the Land on which such Rates are paid is situated, the person so paying the Rates, shall at the same time, pay to such Treasurer a sum equal to five per cent on said Rates, in addition to such Rates, which per centage shall be retained by such Treasurer as a compensation for the duties imposed upon him by this Act.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall be the duty of the Treasurer of any District, receiving Rates and Assessments under this Act, on any Land not situated in his District, to keep an exact and accurate account of the monies which he shall receive for each District separately, stating the Lots, Parcels, or Tracts of Land on which the same may be paid, and the Concessions and Townships in which they may be situated; and the period for which such Rates are paid, and also the time or date of such payments, a copy of which account, verified upon oath, he shall transmit annually on the first day of July to the Treasurer of the District in which the Land may be situated, and shall at the same time transmit the amount of Taxes, Rates or Assessments, which he may have received under the provisions of this Act.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Treasurer of any District, on receiving money from the Treasurer of any other District, shall forthwith credit the several lots or parcels of Land, specified in the Schedule accompanying the money with the amount mentioned in such Shedule to be paid thereon, and shall within ten days after the same shall have been received transmit to the Treasurer from whom the same may have been received a receipt for the amount, specifying the Lots, Parcels or Tracts of Land on which such Rates or Taxes are paid, the amount paid on each particular lot or parcel of Land, the periods for which the same are paid, and the Concessions, Townships and Districts, in which the Lands are situated, and the time or date of the several payments, which receipt the Treasurer who may have received the Taxes in the first instance shall show to any person interested therein, on being requested so to do.

IV. And Whereas, in consequence of the difficulty of transmitting monies, many of the Inhabitants have been unable to pay the taxes on lands owned by them in distant Districts, and it is expedient to extend the period for the payment thereof: And whereas none of those persons who have paid the tax on wild lands on or before the first day of January in this present year have been subjected to the payment of more than fifty per cent. additional tax, and it is expedient to make provision respecting the increase of taxes in future: be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the amount of taxes due and payable on any lots or parcels of land shall be paid and satisfied on or before the first day of July, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, the same shall not be liable to any other or greater increase than fifty per cent, and that from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Treasurers of the several Districts, and they are hereby authorized and required, when the taxes, rates or assessments, have been suffered to fall in arrear for any period exceeding four years, to receive from any person and give a receipt for the tax on such lot or parcel of land, with no other addition or advance than fifty per cent on the amount due at the time of the payment thereof, and that in all cases when it shall be necessary to levy the amount of taxes in arrear by distress, or by the sale of a portion of the lands on which such taxes may be due, the amount of tax due thereon shall be levied with an increase of fifty per cent, and no more, exclusive of costs, any law to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

V. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the amount of taxes payable on any lot or parcel of land shall be paid and satisfied on or before the first day of July next, after the passing of this Act, the same shall not be subject to any greater increase than fifty per cent on the first five years.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the first day of July, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, the Treasurers of the several Districts, shall not receive any taxes on lands in any District other than that in which they shall severally reside in any case where the rates or taxes have been suffered to run or be in arrear for the space of Six years, knowing it to be so, but in such case the said tax shall be transmitted by the party desirous to pay the same, or his agent, to the Treasurer of the District in which the lands are situated.

VII. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid,—That in all cases where the rates, assessments, or taxes, have been suffered to remain unpaid for the space of eight years on any tract or parcel of land, it shall not be lawful for any Treasurer to receive and place to the credit of any lot, tract, or parcel of land, any sum in satisfaction of such rates, assessments, or taxes, less than the full amount due for the eight years which have been suffered so to remain unpaid, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the Treasurer of any District shall neglect or refuse to perform the duties imposed upon him by this Act he shall forfeit and pay for such neglect or refusal the sum of Fifty Pounds, to be recovered before the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, one half of which sum shall be paid to the informer or person prosecuting for the same, and the other moiety to be paid into the public funds of the District, and it shall be the duty of the Magistrates, in General Quarter Sessions next after the first day of July in each and every year, to examine the accounts required to be kept under this Act, and to ascertain whether the same had been transmitted, together with the monies, to the Treasurers of the several Districts interested therein.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Sixth Clause of an Act passed in the Sixth year of His present Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to amend and make permanent a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province passed in the Fifty ninth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, entitled 'An Act to repeal the several Laws now in force relative to levying and collecting rates and assessments in this Province, and further to provide for the more equal and general assessment of lands and other rateable property throughout the Province, and to render more effectual the several laws of this Province imposing rates and assessments, by providing under certain restrictions for the levying such rates and assessments by the sale of a portion of the lands on which the same are charged,'" be and the same is hereby repealed, and that the several Acts and duties therein prescribed, and required to be done by the several Treasurers shall be by them respectively performed, at or before the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, which shall ensue next after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, and at the same period in each and every year thereafter, and the respective Clerks of the Peace shall then proceed in manner pointed out by the seventh clause of the said last recited Act.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for all or any person or persons who may have paid the assessment upon their lands from time to time without the Lot or Concession being specified as the law requires, or in any case where an erroneous description of any lot or parcel of land may have been given, to make oath before any of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace within the respective Districts of this Province, that such sum or sums of money as have been paid from time to time for such lands as assessed, were for such lots and concessions, specifying the same to enable the Treasurers of the different Districts wherein lands are so affected to credit, and he is hereby directed to credit such lots so specified with the amount which may have been paid from time to time upon the assessment roll.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when from death or other causes such affidavit cannot be made, it shall and may be lawful for His Majesty's Justices of the Peace within their respective Districts, in General Quarter Sessions assembled, to hear and determine upon such evidence as may be adduced respecting such land being paid for, and if in favor of the plaintiff, to issue an order upon the Treasurer directing him to credit the respective lots accordingly.

CHAP. XI.

An Act to Repeal the Laws now in force respecting the late pretended Bank of Upper Canada, and to make provision for settling the affairs of the said Institution.

[Passed 25th March, 1828.]

WHEREAS a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His present Majesty, entitled, "An Act vesting in the hands of certain Commissioners therein named, all the Stock, Debts, Bonds, and Property of the pretended Bank of Upper Canada lately established at Kingston, for the benefit of the creditors of that Institution," and a certain other Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fourth year of His present Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to repeal part of an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament, entitled, 'An Act vesting in the hands of certain Commissioners therein named, all the Stock, Debt, Bonds, and Property of the pretented Bank of Upper Canada lately established at Kingston, for the benefit of the creditors of that Institution,' and to make further provision for settling the affairs of the said pretended Bank," have been found ineffectual; and it is expedient to provide other means for collecting the debts contracted with the said Institution, for the benefit of the creditors thereof: Be it therefore enacted, by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of, an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province;'" and by the authority of the same, that the said several Acts herein before recited be, and the same are, hereby repealed.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the holders of Stock in the said late pretended Bank shall and may meet at the Court House in the Town of Kingston, in the Midland District, on the first Monday in May next after the passing of this Act, at or after the hour of eleven in the forenoon of the same day, for the purpose of choosing some one person to be a Commissioner for the purposes herein after mentioned; and that the persons holding certificates given for notes of the said pretended Bank by the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the said pretended Bank, shall and may meet at the Court House in the Town of Kingston aforesaid, on the second Monday in May next after the passing of this Act, at or after the hour of eleven in the forenoon of the same day, for the purpose of choosing some one other person to be a Commissioner for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That at the respective Elections herein before provided for, the holders of Stock, and certificate holders, may vote by proxy; such proxy to be appointed by power of Attorney, under the hand and seal of the principal, that each Stockholder, and each certificate holder, shall have one vote, and no more; and that the Commissioners shall be chosen at such Elections respectively, by a majority of the votes so to be given personally or by proxy.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the two Commissioners to be chosen as aforesaid, shall and may, within one week from the time of their being so chosen, appoint some one person to be a Commissioner with them for the purposes of this Act.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case of vacancy by death, incapacity, removal from the District, or resignation, it shall and may be lawful for the surviving or remaining Commissioner or Commissioners, in case the Commissioner or Commissioners so vacating his or their appointment or appointments, shall have been chosen at either of the Elections provided for by this Act, to call a meeting of the Stockholders, or of the holders of the certificates, according to the nature of the vacancy to be supplied, to be held at the Court House in the Town of Kingston, at some day to be named by the said Commissioners; and of which public notice shall be given by advertisement in the several Newspapers in the Town of Kingston, at least two weeks before the time appointed for such meeting; and in case of vacancy of the Commissioner who shall have been appointed by the other two Commissioners in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for the two remaining Commissioners, and they are hereby required to appoint, within two weeks, a third Commissioner to supply such vacancy.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Acts of any two Commissioners, who shall be appointed under this Act, shall be valid, so far as the authority of such Commissioners shall extend.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the late pretended Bank, shall, within one week after the appointment of the Commissioners under this Act, deliver, or cause to be delivered over, upon request, to the Commissioners who shall be constituted under this Act, all the books, papers, documents, matters, and things, whatsoever, remaining in their charge, and appertaining to the said late pretended Bank, or the affairs thereof.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act may, from time to time, prosecute in and by the name of the Kingston Bank Commissioners, such actions at Law as may be necessary for the recovery of any debts due to the Institution, or to others, to the use and in behalf or on account of the said Institution, by mortgage, bond, note, or otherwise; and that all such debts, whether due by specialty or simple contract, may, if the Plaintiff shall choose to sue in that form, be recovered in action on an account statue, as between the Defendant and the parties suing by the name aforesaid; and such specialty or other proof of debt may be received as evidence of an account stated.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the statute of limitations shall not apply to bar or extinguish any debt due to the said late pretended Bank, provided the same shall be put in suit within one year from the passing of this Act.

X. And whereas from the sudden failure of the said Institution, and the consequent confusion in its affairs, which rendered it for a long time impracticable, to resort to the necessary legal remedy for the recovery of the debts then outstanding, it may have happened in some instances, that the indorsers of Notes, or drawers of Bills discounted at the said Institution have not received notice of non-payment or non-acceptance within the period which the Law requires. And it is expedient to prevent any advantage being taken of such omission when it has not operated to the prejudice of such Indorsers: Be it thereof further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the omission to give any such notice as aforesaid, upon any demand that may have become due after the failure of the said Istitution shall not bar a recovery against any Indorser, or Drawer unless it shall be satisfactorily proved, that such Indorser or Drawer, has by reason of such notice not being given, as the law requires, been prejudicial in the means of recovery, against the party by whose non-payment or non-acceptance he had become liable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That whenever any person, appearing to be indebted to the said Institution, shall have left this Province, since the failure of the said institution, and shall not be resident therein, it shall and may be lawful to serve process in any suit to be instituted under the authority of this Act, against such person, by leaving a copy of such process, at the last place of abode of such person within this Province, with any grown up person dwelling or living in such house, or by affixing a copy of such process in the Crown Office of this Province, eight days before the return thereof—and that a declaration in every such case, being filed in the Crown Office of this Province, and all other and subsequent proceedings in any such cause which in ordinary cases are served upon the Defendant, shall be considered to be served, by filing the same in the Crown Office at York, and the Office of Deputy Clerk of the Crown at Kingston, and on notice of such filing, inserted for two weeks in the Kingston Chronicle and Upper Canada Herald.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no Bond, Mortgage, Note, Security, or undertaking of what kind or nature soever, made to the said Institution, or to any person or persons to their use, shall be held to be invalid or irrecoverable on account of any alleged illegality, of the said Institution.

XIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act, shall, within two weeks after their appointment, cause a notice of their place and hours of business, to be advertised in the Upper Canada Gazette, and in all other Newspapers in Upper Canada, and in the Montreal and Quebec Gazettes, in six successive numbers of each paper, calling upon all holders of Notes or Certificates or other Creditors of the said late Institution, to present their claims within the period prescribed by this Act, or otherwise such claims will be forever barred and cancelled.

XIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every claim upon the said Institution, unless it shall be presented to the Commissioners to be appointed under this Act, on or before the first day of November next, shall be for ever extinguished and barred.

XV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act to exercise their discretion in regard to their giving a longer credit to any debtor or debtors to the said late Institution, and that they shall also have authority to accept of property, real or personal, or to receive Bills or Notes of the said late Institution, or certificates given for the same, in satisfaction of the whole or part of any debt which said Commissioners are authorized to collect, or to refer any such matter to arbitration, or make any compromise in regard to any such debt as they may think reasonable and proper.

XVI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person indebted to the said late Institution shall before the passing of this Act, have tendered payment of the debt, or any part thereof due by him, in Notes of the said late Institution, or certificates given for such Notes, no interest shall be charged in respect to such debt, or such part thereof as he shall have so tendered payment for, from the time of such tender having been so made.

XVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners shall make a Report to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, on the first day of January in every year of their proceedings under this Act, and of the state of the affairs of the said Bank to be laid before the Legislature at its next Session.

XVIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners who shall be constituted under this Act shall make half yearly dividends among the creditors of the said late Institution of the monies collected by them, first deducting therefrom their necessary disbursement in the execution of this Act; and the first of such dividends shall be made at the expiration of twelve Calendar months after the appointment of the said Commissioners.

XIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the said late Institution, shall be allowed to make out an account against the Government of this Province, for all disbursements necessarily incurred by them in the execution of the duties imposed upon them by Law, which account shall be sworn to by them, and shall be accompanied by the proper receipts, or other vouchers, and that it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to issue his warrant in favor of the said Commissioners, for the amount to be allowed in such account; which warrant shall and may be discharged by the Receiver General out of the monies of this Province remaining in his hands unappropriated, and the monies to be paid thereon shall be accounted for to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, in such manner and form as His Majesty shall be graciously pleased to direct.

XX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be deemed to be a Public Act, and as such shall be judicially noticed without specially shewing the same.

PROCLAMATION.

P. MAITLAND.

UPPER CANADA.

By His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, K. C. B. Lieutenant Governor of our Province aforesaid, and Major Gen. commanding His Majesty's Forces therein, &c. &c. &c.

WHEREAS a Barn in the Township of Hamilton, in the District of Newcastle, the property of Mr. B. McKeyes. Farmer, containing a quantity of Hay, and a variety of Farming implements, was consumed by fire some time in the month of July last, and there being reason to believe, that the same was set on fire by some wicked and malicious incendiary, the said B. McKeyes has offered a reward of Twenty-five Pounds, for the discovery of the offender, and hath besought His Majesty's Government to aid his endeavors, by offering a pardon to any person implicated in the perpetration of the said crime, other than the principal felon.

NOW KNOW YE, that a free pardon will be granted to any person not being the actual incendiary or his immediate procurer who will give such information as may lead to the conviction of the person or persons guilty of this most heinous offence. Given under my hand and seal of office, at York, this Twenty-first day of September, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-seven, and in the Eighth year of His Majesty's Reign. By Command of His Excellency.

NOTICE.—All persons having claims upon the Estate of the late William Weekes, Esq. of York, are hereby called upon to give in the same, duly substantiated, to the Solicitor General, one of the Trustees, on or before the 1st day of May next, as the affairs of the estate will immediately after that time be finally closed.

York, Nov. 19th, 1827. 26tf.

His MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for a renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their powet to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

Saturday, 15th March.

Religious Census Bill—3d Reading—passed and sent to the Legislative Council.—The Bill underwent some amendments, by striking out the penal Clause, and making alterations in the Schedule.

Address to the King, on the subject of the independence of the Judges—passed and signed, and a Committee appointed to wait upon His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor to know when he would be pleased to receive the same.

The Finance Committee made their report, which was ordered to be printed.——Adjourned.

Monday, 17th March.

Mr. Beardsley proposed a Resolution—the substance of which was,—that this House will not vote any supply for the year, until the Legislative Council concur in the Act for the repeal of the 44th of the late King, and the Jury regulation Bill.

Mr. Beardsley said, he had no doubt that the strong measures he had now proposed, would excite surprise—he expected it, but considered it a duty which he owed to the country—he had often heard it expressed as an opinion that Hon. Members, were still enough disposed to make a show of independence in passing Laws, but that they had not sufficient independence to take coercive measures to induce the Legislative Council to assent to them.—He had introduced this Resolution for the purpose of shewing that he did not shrink from the performance of an important duty, and if the measure did not meet with support, it was of no consequence whatever to him.

Mr. Wilson supported the resolution, because he wished to ascertain whether the House had any Constitutional powers.

Mr. Wilkinson observed that the question "be not now put."

Mr. Wilson would prefer trying the question at once, as it would operate as a touchstone with Hon. Members. Unless some change took place in the mode of selecting Juries, the country would be ruined—he knew that a Jury at Perth had found a verdict contrary to evidence.

Mr. Fothergill was of opinion that the time had not yet come for proposing such a Resolution—other measures equally important might be proposed by other Hon. Gentlemen, who were determined not to vote the supply, if they were refused.—The Hon. Gentleman had therefore better withdraw his resolution for the present, and give time for all to be included—to wait in short for the aggregate of offence.

Mr. Coleman expected such a measure from the Hon. Gentleman who felt annoyed, because his Jury Bill had not passed. The Honble. Member from Prince Edward too, (Mr. Wilson) supported it, because a partial measure of his own had failed. It should be recollected however that the Legislative Council had a right to exercise their judgment, on Bills sent up for their consideration, as well as this House. With respect to the Bill for the repeal of the 44th of the late King it had once been settled in this House with amendments, which were objected to,—other measures had been kicked out when sent from the Legislative Council, and if Hon. Gentlemen wished to deprive that branch, of the Constitutional right of exercising their opinions on Bills sent up for their concurrence, a pure democracy might as well be at once declared, vesting the power of making Laws in this House alone.

Mr. Hamilton considered it unwise to tack such a measure to the supply—on this occasion however it might be considered necessary, as the 44th of the King was a disgrace to the Statute Book—there were other matters equally important, yet he was unwilling to stop the supply on that account—he would wait a little longer, and get on peaceably if he could, as the Bill—if the question were now not now put, it would prevent an expression of opinion on this subject, and afford time for bringing forward other measures connected with the subject.

Mr. Perry said that it was perhaps intended by the Legislative Council to make the jury Bill, a more general measure. The supply however involved a principle of much greater consequence than this—he alluded to the disposal of the revenue under 14 Geo. 3, which was claimed by the Executive, and this House had from year to year asserted to the principle. When the supply Bill came more immediately under discussion, an attempt should in his opinion be made to take away this power from the Executive.

Mr. Beardsley was opposed to any delay, and would not consent to get rid of the question in this way—he considered it necessary if possible to coerce the Legislative Council to adopt the Jury Bill particularly, as mens lives and properties might be lost before next Session from the want of it.—The Sedition Law repeal Bill was important too, but not so much so as the Jury Bill,—against the former a man might guard himself, but he could not prevent the corruption which took place in packing Juries for his destruction.

Mr. McLean was surprised at the strange doctrines which had been broached as to the Constitutional powers of the different branches of the Legislature, and it appeared to him that the Hon. Member proposed his Resolution, only, because the other House, had exercised the same power, which the Assembly claims for itself,—and could this be considered a sufficient reason for withholding the supply—was the Legislative Council more interested in the supply than Members of this House, when a Bill voting the necessary sums was required for paying the Officers of the people and the Government, or could it be presumed that by passing such a Resolution as the one proposed by the Hon. Gentleman, that that Hon. body would be induced to change their opinions, contrary to their judgment.

The amendment, that the question be not now put, was lost.—The original question was then put and also lost.

The Committee reported on the petition of Bulkley Waters and others,—on the subject of the Clergy Reserves—the University, &c.—Mr. Bidwell stated that the Petitions reierred to the Committee, contained in all, about 4,000 signatures.—The Report is exceedingly voluminous.

The Committee, on the Petition for a loan of £2,000 to the Desjardins Canal, made their report.

Mr. Hamilton moved to refer it to the Committee of Supply —This was opposed by Messrs. Morris and Matthews, and on motion made by Mr. Perry, the report was ordered to be received this day three months.

Tuesday, 18 March.

House in Committee of the whole, on the Report of the Select Committee, on the Petition of Bulkley Waters and others.

Mr. Coleman thought that more time was required for considering the subject, as the report was very voluminous,—Hon. Members had not had an opportunity of reading it with attention.

Mr. Perry said that there was time enough for discussion now.

Mr. Rolph proposed putting the report, paragraph by paragraph for adoption.

Mr. Perry would rather put it in the gross, as it would otherwise occupy too much time.

The Attorney General would rather too that it should be put in the gross—it involved a question which could not be settled here, and for this reason he was disposed to avoid a discussion which must be useless, and of an improper kind.

Mr. Bidwell would put it at once in the gross.

Mr. McLean would not object—but before giving his vote, on a report so voluminous, made only last night, he should prefer that time was given for examining the report, and the evidence on which it was founded.

Mr. Rolph pressed his motion for taking the report paragraph by paragraph,—on which Mr. Bidwell withdrew his proposal for adopting it in the gross.

Mr. Scollick said that the Book before them might be called the Koran of Upper Canada—he had read Euclid, but was not half so much puzzled, as when looking over this bulky report. The Methodists appeared to be praised in the report, while credit was not given others for any good they had done.

Mr. Bidwell replied, that the report eulogized the Methodists, because they deserved it—the Committee had made particular enquiry, and as they had been aspersed it was proper that they should be defended. The Hon. Member who spoke last appeared more willing to have them aspersed, than to offer any defence in their behalf.

Mr. Scollick denied having any intention whatever to asperse the Methodists—as a body he respected them, but he saw no necessity for bestowing praises upon them, to the exclusion of all others. He looked upon the whole proceeding as an electioneering business.—Those who voted for the Book, made themselves sure of coming here again.

Mr. Walsh thought that the proceeding was irregular—an Address to the King was reported by the Committee, and it was only necessary to agree in its adoption, and the Report itself and the evidence could accompany it.

The Chairman then proceeded to read the report, paragraph by paragraph.—After the first paragraph was read—

Mr. Bidwell moved that it be adopted.

Mr. Perry said, that there was no necessity for such a motion—the previous motion of Mr. Rolph being for adopting the report paragraph by paragraph—it was therefore only necessary for the Chairman to read each clause, and by the previous motion it was already adopted.

The Chairman continued to read succeeding paragraphs, at the end of each, pronouncing it carried.—After several clauses had been thus pronounced carried, without any question put.

Mr. Walsh objected to this irregular mode of proceeding, which he said was the most extraordinary he had ever witnessed in the House —he would not consent that so unusual a course should be carried any farther.

Mr. Morris saw no necessity of adopting the report in Committee of the whole—it was not usual to do so, because it was already a document of the House, and would be placed on record in the Journals. It appeared to him that the Address to the King founded on the report was more properly the subject for the consideration of the Committee.

Mr. Clark thought that if the proceeding was continued in, it would be necessary to read the evidence, in order to form an opinion on the several paragraphs of the report.

Mr. Walsh could not adopt the report without knowing what the evidence was—when the select Committee now press the matter, and call upon Hon. Gentlemen to adopt their opinions they should give others time, to have as good an opportunity of judging as themselves.

Mr. Bidwell said that the select Committee who had prepared the report could not have any personal interest in the matter, more than other Hon. Members.

A discussion took place with respect to the plan which was to be in the report for disposing of the Clergy Reserves, viz:—to sell them for the purposes of Education and internal improvement.

Mr. Morris objected, that it was a departure from the course recommended last year—nothing was said at that time about internal improvement—a former address pointed out a different appropriation of the Reserves, and it might be considered inconsistent to vary from it.

Mr. Fothergill said, he understood that the Methodists would not take a share of the Reserves if they were offered to them. The Quakers he was certain would not touch an Acre, if they were equally divided, and what was to be done with the Lots which should thus be refused—he saw no better object than to expend them for the purposes of Education, and in the internal improvement of the Country.

Mr. Walsh thought that it would be an illegitimate channel, to divert the proceeds of the Reserves into—they were already appropriated to a special purpose by an Act of Parliament—his own opinion was, that the Methodists would not refuse a share, if it were offered to them.

Mr. Wilson explained—the Methodists he said could not accept of any share, as it would be contrary to their rules to do so.—The general wish was that the Reserves should go for Education and internal improvement.

Mr. Peterson sincerely believed that the Methodists generally would not desire one penny from the Reserves,—he should vote for Education and internal improvement as the objects on which the proceeds should be expended.

Mr. Lefferty said that as he believed not more than one-ninth of the Province were Episcopalians, he would try to get these lands out of the hands of the Ministers of that sect who already had a salary of £900 each per annum—let every tub, said the Honble. Gentleman, stand on its own bottom, and it will be found that there are more Presbyterians than any other.

Mr. Bidwell believed it to be the general wish of the people that the Reserves should be applied to the purposes of Education and general improvement—their proceeds might be made available for paying off the debt of the Province, incurred for improvements already commenced, and in the prosecution of others equally important. Their belonging to any particular denomination would be rather an injury to the cause of Religion, as it would tend to corrupt its purity.

The Report being gone through and adopted, the Address to His Majesty thereon, was then taken up and read.

Summary.

Mr. Brougham's Speech on the State of the Law, occupied the learned Gentleman six hours and two minutes; it is the longest on Parliamentary record. —Morning Chronicle.

The Marquis of Anglesea was to embark at Holy-head on the 10th February for Dublin.

Loss of British Shipping.—(Extracted from Lloyd's List, 1826.) 270 vessels wrecked; 805 driven on shore; 380 of these known to have been got off, and probably saved others; 90 sunk; 65 abandoned at sea; 31 missing, no doubt foddered; 13 condemned as unseaworthy; 6 burnt; 6 upset; 5 run down; 35 British vessels were taken by Pirates, Bacons Ayeresan and Columbian Cruisers, 19 of them afterwards retaken and 11 given up; 21 plundered by the Greeks of property to a considerable amount.

Trade continues very brisk at Kilmarnock. The carpet printers have obtained an advance of 1d. on the shilling.—Glasgow Chronicle, Feb. 16.

At the last Edinburgh agricultural meeting, at which about three hundred noblemen and gentlemen attended, Sir John Sinclair addressed the party after breakfast, and informed them that a great part of the bread which they had been eating was composed chiefly of potatoe flour, and if the public would be contented with such bread, Britain would never require a bushel of foreign grain.

Clinton's Heirs—

After disputing about forms, until the public hope, which had been strong, became weakened, and required a restoring power, and after the feelings of the unsolicting objects of the bounty of the state, were wounded and tortured, the Assembly have, by a vote of 68 to 25, finally passed a bill appropriating ten thousand dollars, for the support and education of the destitute children of De Witt Clinton. A son, as Mr. Granger observed, in the house on Wednesday, less than the sometimes daily receipt of the canal which grew up under his care and direction, and on which at one time hung his political fortune, and from which the state is now receiving and will continue to receive immense wealth. We blush for the character of the state.—Albany Gazette.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

January 29.

At half-past two o'clock the Speaker, accompanied by several Members, proceeded to the House of Lords, and at four o'clock returned and took the chair.

The Speaker then acquainted the House, that, in pursuance of the Act of Parliament, since the last Session, he had directed warrants to be issued for electing new Members for various places. Mr. Brougham gave notice, that, on the 7th February he would move for an inquiry into the state of law in this country, and the administration of justice in the different courts, with a view to reform the abuses which have crept in by time.—Mr. M. A. Taylor gave notice, that on the 14th of next month, he would move for certain returns respecting the Court of Chancery, previous to a general motion on the subject. Lord J. Russell gave notice, that on the 21st of February, he should move the repeal of the Corporation and test Acts.

Address to His Majesty.—The Speaker read the Speech. Mr. Jenkinson rose to move the Address. He came forward under very considerable embarrassment, arising from reflections pressed on his mind on the state of his noble father. That nobleman had held a situation from which, he had been removed by a circumstance that it was impossible for him to allude to without the most painful feelings. The devotion of Lord Liverpool to his country had contributed to effect the overthrow of those faculties which had been so long exerted with beneficial effect in the service of His King and Country. Mr. Jenkinson paid a tribute of respect to Mr. Canning's memory and also to the political sentiments of Mr. Peel. Mr. R. Grant seconded the address which were entirely in accordance with those of his noble relation Mr. Brougham commented on the terms in which the affair of Navarin was spoken of, and of the appointment of the Commander-in-Chief to the Premiership. Lord Palmerston stated the resignation of the former Office by the Duke, on the acceptance of the latter. The address was agreed to, and the House adjourned to the 31st.

January 31.

BATTLE OF NAVARINO.—In reply to some questions on the subject from Mr. Hobhouse and Mr. S. Rice, Lord Palmerston said, that although there was not the slightest intention of imputing blame to the gallant Admiral; yet, as there was no precedent for a vote of thanks for a victory gained over a country with which we are not at war, it was not the intention of Ministers to bring forward a motion of that kind upon the present occasion. Mr. Hobhouse gave notice, that on the 14th February he would move a vote of thanks to Sir Edward Codrington.

CATHOLIC ASSESSMENTS.—Mr. G. Bankes gave notice on the 4th inst. he would introduce a Bill to relieve English Catholics from the double assessments to which their properties are liable under the present land tax.

ADDRESS TO THE KING.—Mr. Jenkinson brought up the Address—Mr. Brownlow and some other Members condemned the expression "untoward" in the Royal Speech, when applied to the most glorious event in England's Naval history. The report was agreed to.

EAST RETFORD.—Mr. Tennyson moved for leave to bring in a Bill to disfranchise the borough of East Retford in favour of Birmingham. Mr. W. Bankes reminded the House that the borough of East Retford had not been convicted of bribery during the last Election, but merely of treating, which was a very inferior offence. Mr. Tennyson replied, that there had been a general system of corruption of every election that had occurred within the memory of man, and of which ample testimony could be produced. That was the ground on which he now stood, and for that he was ready to put witnesses to the Bar.—Leave was then given to bring in the Bill, which was subsequently read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time on the 15th of February.

February 1.

Sir J. Newport presented several petitions from Ireland, praying for Catholic emancipation. Mr. W. Dundas presented a petition from the Chamber of Commerce of Edinburgh, praying for a repeal of the stamp duties on receipts. Lord Palmerston gave notice, that on Monday next, he should move that the House resolve itself into a Committee of supply. Upon the motion of Mr. Greene, leave was given to bring in a Bill to empower Clergymen and their Parishioners to commute for corn rents the tithes within their respective parishes. The House adjourned to the 4th.

February 4.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY.—Lord Palmerston moved that the House form itself into a Committee of Supply. After some remarks from Mr. Liddel, the Speaker left the Chair, when Mr. Maberly, Sir John Sebright, and some others deprecated it highly, expedient that the whole amount of the several estimates which the Ministers intended to ask for, should be laid before the House, in order that a complete view of the expenditure might be stated over a whole; was granted. Mr. Goulburn and Lord Palmerston replied, promising the estimates of their Departments speedily. The House resumed.

King's Answer.—Lord Palmerston brought up His Majesty's gracious reply to the Address voted by the House.

CATHOLIC ASSESSMENT.—Mr. G. Bankes moved for leave according to notice, to bring in a Bill to relieve Catholics from the payment of a double land tax established in 1692, during the reign of William and Mary, which was a penalty on the conscience of Catholics. Mr. Hume seconded the motion, as he knew of a Catholic, Sir. Thomas Beddington, who had paid £50,000 on account of the double assessment. The Bill was read the first time and was to be read the second time on the 14th.

Greek Treaty.—Mr. Bankes asked whether it was intended to submit any other papers respecting the Greek Treaty, some other articles having been alluded to besides those appearing in the Treaties recently laid before the House. Lord Palmerston replied in the negative. There were no other treaties, or articles, there had been minutes of conference, of course, but there were no other articles, or treaties, to be understood, to be produced.

BATTLE OF NAVARINO.—Lord Wm. Powlett inquired of Lord Palmerston whether there was any intention on the part of Government, to make reparations to the Sublime Porte, by means of Pecuniary compensation, for the destruction of the fleet at Navarin, as a rumour prevailed that such was their intention, and, if true, this very circumstance would unquestionably imply a censure upon the conduct of Sir E. Codrington. Lord Palmerston disclaimed, for the Government any such intention.

February 5.

CATHOLIC CLAIMS.—Mr. A. Dawson presented petitions for the removal of Catholic restrictions and disabilities. In common with many others, he lamented the total extinction of Ireland in the King's Speech. The reason for such omission he deemed perfectly inadequate; it had been said that there was nothing extraordinary in the situation of Ireland. Was the assembling of four or five millions of inhabitants on the island day and almost at the same hour, to petition for their rights, nothing? The Hon. Member then presented several petitions, which were ordered to be printed. Mr. George Lamb, and Mr. V. Stuart presented similar petitions.—The petitioners regretted the change which had taken place in His Majesty's Government. The former administration gave hopes that their claims would experience becoming attention, but their hopes were dashed. As to the present Ministers, though the most skilful diplomatists, if they were opposed to the Catholic Claims, he should oppose them. He had twice changed his place in that House, but, never had he changed his sentiments.—The Irish Secretary might continue in Office. but under whom would the individual have act? The new Secretary for the Home Department (Mr. Peel), who would not take office under the late Mr. Canning, on account of the Catholic preponderance in the Cabinet. That right Hon. Gentleman was now in Office; and had not a right to assume that there was an anti-catholic Cabinet.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY.—Sir A. Grant presented the Report of the Committee of Supply. Agréed to, and Committee ordered to sit again to-morrow.

February 6.

ROBERT GOURLAY.—Mr. Hume presented a petition from Robert Gourlay, respecting the Poor Laws and Emigration, and praying that a Committee be appointed to inquire into the state of the Poor Laws.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.—Mr. Hume brought forward his motion on the subject of imprisonment for debt. It was a renewal of former motions, and he did so, from a conviction of what took place in Scotland. There no man could be arrested, except the debt was proved before a judge; and £5 was a recovered in Scotland, where £7 was got in England by enforcing the law. The property was rendered available; but in this country any one could be arrested on the oath of an individual, and consigned to prison without an inquiry into the debt. It was a disgrace in this country to these imprisonments for debt, or alleged debts, except Peers and Members of that House—an exception, the justice of which he could not perceive. In some of our Colonies, in Canada, the oppression of imprisonment were not allowed. He moved for returns of commitments to the King's Bench, &c. in 1827, distinguishing the amounts of debts. Also, warrants issued by the Sheriff of Surrey,—Ordered.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY.—The House resolved itself into a Committee of Supply.—Mr. Dawson moved that £83,300,000 be granted to pay off Exchequer Bills. Mr. Hume said he did not understand the course that was pursued, and he objected to the accumulation of this system of debt. Mr. Dawson moved for £734,200 to pay off Exchequer Bills issued for public works; and 7,000,000 to meet Exchequer Bills issued since 1823. Report to-morrow. Mr. Hume condemned the issues for new Commissions.

Catholic Claims.—Several petitions were presented from Parishes in Ireland, praying for Emancipation. Major General King said, though he felt it his duty to present a petition in favor of the claims, he was decidedly hostile to the question, and he could not but be troubled among those who were deaconned by a certain illegal assembly in Ireland (the Catholic Association,) if they differed in sentiment from the views of that body. The House was told that four millions of Catholics had assembled to petition for the removal of these disabilities, and that one million were capable of bearing arms. This, no doubt, was intended to intimidate those who might not be disposed to vote for Catholic emancipation; but he should never be deterred from giving his vote for such measures as he thought most likely to preserve the constitution. Sir T. Lethbridge deprecated the proceedings of the constitutional body now at work in Ireland, which denounced every Member giving his vote in support of the measures of the Duke of Wellington's administration, or indeed of any other administration opposed to emancipation. Of the present Ministry he declared his conviction that it was the most auspicious that the country could possess, and that policy would be beneficial. Mr. Spring Rice defended the legality of the Catholic Association, while he deprecated its violence. He considered the concession of the Catholic Claims unattended with any hazard.

February 7.

CATHOLIC CLAIMS.—A variety of petitions were presented in favor of Catholic emancipation.

TESTS ACTS.—Petitions from various bodies of Dissenters praying for the repeal of the Test Acts were presented.

IMPROVEMENT IN THE LAWS.—Mr. Brougham brought forward his promised motion for an Address to His Majesty, praying that he may be graciously pleased to direct that a Committee be appointed to inquire into the defects occasioned by time, and other circumstances, in our laws, and to propose such a remedy as may be deemed expedient. His speech which was at once perspicuous and luminous, occupied between six and seven hours in the delivery. He sat down amidst loud and renewed cheering. The further consideration of this important question was postponed till the 22d February, on the motion of the Solicitor General, who with Mr. Peel paid high compliments to the eloquence, the research, the moderation, and the sound judgment displayed by Mr. Brougham in his address.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.—Mr. Peel gave notice that on the 12th he would move for the appointment of a Committee to consider the state of the Financial Expenditure of the Kingdom.

February 8.

EAST RETFORD.—Mr. F. Clinton presented a petition from the Bailiff's, Aldermen, and Burgesses of East Retford, against the Bill for disfranchising that Borough, and praying to be heard at the Bar by Counsel against it. The Hon. Member gave notice, that on the second reading of the Bill he should move that the Petitioners should be heard by Counsel according to the prayer of the Petition.—Laid on the table.

WAYS AND MEANS.—Mr. Dawson moved that the Order of the day for the House going into a committee of ways and means. The House having resolved itself into a committee. Mr. Dawson moved that £20,000,000, be raised in Exchequer Bills to meet the Supplies granted to His Majesty for the service of the year. The usual transfer in aid of £5,000,000 was also proposed; and both Resolutions having been agreed to, the House resumed, and the Report was ordered to be received on Monday.

Mr. Fazakerly and Mr. Sykes presented Petitions against the Malt Act. Mr. Maurice Fitzgerald presented thirteen Petitions from the Catholics in Kerry in favour of Emancipation. Mr. Hume moved for returns to be connected with Savings Banks, and certain accounts relative to the reduced allowances in the Army, Navy, Ordnance, and Civil Establishments.

The House set only half an hour.

SAVINGS BANKS.—Mr. Hume rose merely to move an addition to the Returns he had already moved, respecting the Savings Banks. His present motion was on account of the rate per cent. if any, deducted by the Directors of each of the Savings Banks in the United Kingdom, from the sums received by them from Government, to be distributed among the depositors as interest of their deposits, and of the amount of such reduction from the dividends during the two last years, stating, also, how such sums have been applied by the Directors.—Ordered.

NAVY ESTIMATES.—Mr. Hume said, that as the Navy Estimates had been put into the hands of members, he intended also to make a motion, with a view of enabling them to be the question, and to make a comparison between the expenditure of 1792 and the estimates of the present year. His motion would be for a return of the establishment and expenditure of the Navy in 1792. He anticipated no objection, as in 1822 a similar return, for the estimates of that year, in 1760 had been laid on the table, for the purpose of comparing them with those of that year. Mr. G. Dawson said his only objection was the considerable expense that would be incurred. Besides, the papers were on the table, and the honorable Gentleman could make what use he pleased of them. He objected, he repeated, on the score of expense. Mr. Hume was glad to find so much attention to economy in His Majesty's Ministers; but he thought economy would best be observed by allowing the House to make the comparison between the two years. Motion negatived.

ARMY ESTIMATES.—Mr. Lamb presented the Estimates of the charges of the King's Land Forces, during the present year.—Ordered to be printed.

February 11.

Several petitions for Catholic Emancipation and repeal of the Test Acts were presented.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY.—Sir G. Cockburn moved the order of the day, for the House to resolve itself into a committee of Supply, and stated to the House, that in consequence of the Finance committee it was not the intention of His Majesty's Government to move for any supply for the Navy for beyond six months. The Estimate before the House was made out for the whole year, but the motion he should have to make, should the House resolve itself into a committee would be for half the Estimate only, as a supply for six months. Mr. Maberly objected till the Finance Committee had been appointed, and until the intentions of the Government were known with respect to retrenchment. Mr. Secretary Peel replied to the objections of Mr. Maberly. After the House was in committee Sir George Cockburn moved that 30,000 seamen, including 9,000 marines be employed for the ensuing six months, at the rate of £2 9s. per month per man. After several objections by Messrs. Hume, Maberly, Wood, &c. the motion was carried, as was also one for £288,000 for victuals for His Majesty's seamen.

February 12.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Mr. M. A. Taylor brought forward his motion relative to the Court of Chancery. His intention he stated to be the purgation of that Court, and to benefit the interests of these who were obliged to go into that Court. He moved for returns of all the Re-hearings and Appeals before the Lord Chancellor & Vice-Chancellor, set down for Hilary Term: also the number of pleas & demurrers of Bankrupt petitions, and how disposed of; and of all further directions and rehearings before the Master of the Rolls. After a discussion in which the Solicitor General, Mr. Peel, Mr. Secretary Peel, and Mr. Bankes joined, the motion was unanimously agreed to.

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.—IRELAND.—Sir John Newport complained of the expense and delay attending proceedings in that Court.—He moved for returns of the number of days, and the hour at which the Judges sat, and their names; the number of derelict and salvage causes, and the sum or sums lying to the credit of the Admiralty, and an account of applications made to lodge proceeds of sales, and if complied with to state the cases. No objection being offered by Mr. Lamb, the returns were ordered.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer moved the order of the day for bringing up the report. Mr. Hume again objected to the reception of the report till the House had been put in possession of more ample information respecting the Finance Committee. A long discussion took place when Mr. Peel assured the House that the Committee in question would have all the powers of that of 1817, and would embrace the whole of the public expenditure in all its various departments; but he would not enter into any particular explanation until the 18th.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1828.

Arrivals at New-York bring papers, one day later (21 Feb'y.) than those previously received—they do not however contain any additional news.

It will be seen by a Statement taken from the Lower Canada papers, that during the last year there were exported from this Province into the Lower Canada Market upwards of One hundred thousand Barrels of Flour. The quantity for Home consumption, increased as the demand has been in consequence of the number of Emigrants and Settlers arriving in the Province, must have been very considerable, and the surplus remaining for exportation shews, that the Trade of the country in this staple article, is in as flourishing a condition as could be expected.

An application was made during this Session if the Legislature, for an act of incorporation, for the improvement of the Navigation of the Grand River. A Capital of £50,000 was named in the Petition as the sum estimated to accomplish the object, to be taken in shares under the act. From the press of business however, the subject is deferred until the next meeting of the Legislature, when there is every reason to hope, that the wishes of the Petitioners will be complied with.—The surrounding County, one of the finest parts of Upper Canada, is fast Settling, and the quantity of produce for which transportation is required, now chiefly done by land carriage, is such as loudly calls for every possible facility being afforded for its conveyance to market. We have been favored with the following computation of the quantity of each kind, passing through the Town of Brantford for the last year, and which would have passed down the River, if the contemplated improvements were effected.

19,850	Barrels of Flour
2,500	do.	Whiskey
1,205	do.	Ashes
1,550	do.	Pork
400	do	(Miscellaneous.)

There are on the Stream 27 Lumber Mills, estimated to produce annually 4,720,000 feet of Lumber of all kinds—11 Grist-Mills—and 15 Distilleries.

The Steam-Boat Niagara, Capt. Mosier, arrived here from Prescott on Tuesday last, being her first trip for the Season. The Brothers and Superior cleared on Sunday, for Kingston. The Canada has for some time past been making her regular daily trips to and from Niagara. The Navigation has opened at a much earlier period than usual.

A new line of Stages has lately been established to run through from Dundas to York via Hamilton three times a week. The proprietors we understand are provided with good Horses, and comfortable Carriages, for the convenience of Travellers. The exertions they are making to add to the facility of communication in this part of the Country, will we hope be amply rewarded. Stage Books are kept at Howard's Inn, York, and Jone's Dundas.

The following is a Schedule of Bills which received the Royal Assent on Thursday the Twenty-fifth day of March Instant.

1. An Act to limit to a certain period the proceedings under an act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the 54th year of His late Majesty's Reign entitled "an Act to declare certain Persons therein described Aliens, and to vest their Estates in His Majesty," and to afford further facilities to the sale of Estates forfeited under the said Act in certain cases.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First.—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale at prices, at least 25 p. Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

TO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavors will be to promote the comfort of passengers: and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

TO IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam-Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or —— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable persons holding Lands in the several Districts of this Province to pay the Rates and Taxes on the same to the Treasurer of the District in which they may reside. Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province,'" and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful, in certain cases, for any person or persons, holding or owning Lands in any District of this Province, which are not returned on the Assessment Roll of any Township or place therein, to pay the Rates on such Land to the Treasurer of the District in which he, she or they, or their agent or agents may reside, and the Treasurer who may receive such rates shall, and he is hereby required, on being requested so to do, to give a receipt for the same, specifying the amount paid, the period for which it is paid, the lot or parcel of Land on which the same is paid, and the Concession and Township in which such Land is situated, and also the time or date of such payment: Provided always, that in all cases when the Rates as aforesaid shall be paid by virtue of this Act to the Treasurer of another District than that in which the Land on which such Rates are paid is situated, the person so paying the Rates, shall at the same time, pay to such Treasurer a sum equal to five per cent on said Rates, in addition to such Rates, which per centage shall be retained by such Treasurer as a compensation for the duties imposed upon him by this Act.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall be the duty of the Treasurer of any District, receiving Rates and Assessments under this Act, on any Land not situated in his District, to keep an exact and accurate account of the monies which he shall receive for each District separately, stating the Lots, Parcels, or Tracts of Land on which the same may be paid, and the Concessions and Townships in which they may be situated, and the period for which such Rates are paid, and also the time or date of such payments, a copy of which account, verified upon oath, he shall transmit annually on the first day of July to the Treasurer of the District in which the Land may be situated, and shall at the same time transmit the amount of Taxes, Rates or Assessments, which he may have received under the provisions of this Act.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Treasurer of any District, on receiving money from the Treasurer of any other District, shall forthwith credit the several lots or parcels of Land, specified in the Schedule accompanying the money with the amount mentioned in such Shedule to be paid thereon, and shall within ten days after the same shall have been received transmit to the Trearurer from whom the same may have been received a receipt for the amount, specifying the Lots, Parcels or Tracts of Land on which such Rates or Taxes are paid, the amount paid on each particular lot or parcel of Land, the periods for which the same are paid, and the Concessions, Townships and Districts, in which the Lands are situated, and the time or date of the several payments, which receipt the Treasurer who may have received the Taxes in the first instance shall show to any person interested therein, on being requested so to do.

IV. And Whereas, in consequence of the difficulty of transmitting monies, many of the Inhabitants have been unable to pay the taxes on lands owned by them in distant Districts, and it is expedient to extend the period for the payment thereof: And whereas none of those persons who have paid the tax on wild lands on or before the first day of January in this present year have been subjected to the payment of more than fifty per cent. additional tax, and it is expedient to make provision respecting the increase of taxes in future: be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the amount of taxes due and payable on any lots or parcels of land shall be paid and satisfied on or before the first day of July, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, the same shall not be liable to any other or greater increase than fifty per cent, and that from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Treasurers of the several Districts, and they are hereby authorized and required, when the taxes, rates or assessments, have been suffered to fall in arrear for any period exceeding four years, to receive from any person and give a receipt for the tax on such lot or parcel of land, with no other addition or advance than fifty per cent on the amount due at the time of the payment thereof, and that in all cases when it shall be necessary to levy the amount of taxes in arrear by distress, or by the sale of a portion of the lands on which such taxes may be due, the amount of tax due thereon shall be levied with an increase of fifty per cent, and no more, exclusive of costs, any law to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

V. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the amount of taxes payable on any lot or parcel of land shall be paid and satisfied on or before the first day of July next, after the passing of this Act, the same shall not be subject to any greater increase than fifty per cent on the first five years.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the first day of July, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, the Treasurers of the several Districts, shall not receive any taxes on lands in any District other than that in which they shall severally reside in any case where the rates or taxes have been suffered to run or be in arrear for the space of Six years, knowing it to be so, but in such case the said tax shall be transmitted by the party desirous to pay the same, or his agent, to the Treasurer of the District in which the lands are situated.

VII. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid,—That in all cases where the rates, assessments, or taxes, have been suffered to remain unpaid for the space of eight years on any tract or parcel of land, it shall not be lawful for any Treasurer to receive and place to the credit of any lot, tract, or parcel of land, any sum in satisfaction of such rates, assessments, or taxes, less than the full amount due for the eight years which have been suffered so to remain unpaid, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the Treasurer of any District shall neglect or refuse to perform the duties imposed upon him by this Act he shall forfeit and pay for such neglect or refusal the sum of Fifty Pounds, to be recovered before the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, one half of which sum shall be paid to the informer or person prosecuting for the same, and the other moiety to be paid into the public funds of the District, and it shall be the duty of the Magistrates, in General Quarter Sessions next after the first day of July in each and every year, to examine the accounts required to be kept under this Act, and to ascertain whether the same had been transmitted, together with the monies, to the Treasurers of the several Districts interested therein.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Sixth Clause of an Act passed in the Sixth year of His present Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to amend and make permanent a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province passed in the Fifty ninth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, entitled 'An Act to repeal the several Laws now in force relative to levying and collecting rates and assessments in this Province, and further to provide for the more equal and general assessment of lands and other rateable property throughout the Province, and to render more effectual the several laws of this Province imposing rates and assessments, by providing under certain restrictions for the levying such rates and assessments by the sale of a portion of the lands on which the same are charged,'" be and the same is hereby repealed, and that the several Acts and duties therein prescribed, and required to be done by the several Treasurers shall be by them respectively performed, at or before the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, which shall ensue next after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, and at the same period in each and every year thereafter, and the respective Clerks of the Peace shall then proceed in manner pointed out by the seventh clause of the said last recited Act.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for all or any person or persons who may have paid the assessment upon their lands from time to time without the Lot or Concession being specified as the law requires, or in any case where an erroneous description of any lot or parcel of land may have been given, to make oath before any of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace within the respective Districts of this Province, that such sum or sums of money as have been paid from time to time for such lots as assessed, were for such lots and concessions, specifying the same to enable the Treasurers of the different Districts wherein lands are so affected to credit, and he is hereby directed to credit such lots so specified with the amount which may have been paid from time to time upon the assessment roll.

CHAP. XI.

An Act to Repeal the Laws now in force respecting the late pretended Bank of Upper Canada, and to make provision for settling the affairs of the said Institution.

[Passed 25th March, 1828.]

WHEREAS a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His present Majesty, entitled, "An Act vesting in the hands of certain Commissioners therein named, all the Stock, Debts, Bonds, and Property of the pretended Bank of Upper Canada lately established at Kingston, for the benefit of the creditors of that Institution," and a certain other Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fourth year of His present Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to repeal part of an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament, entitled, 'An Act vesting in the hands of certain Commissioners therein named, all the Stock, Debt, Bonds, and Property of the pretended Bank of Upper Canada lately established at Kingston, for the benefit of the creditors of that Institution,' and to make further provision for settling the affairs of the said pretended Bank," have been found ineffectual; and it is expedient to provide other means for collecting the debts contracted with the said Institution, for the benefit of the creditors thereof: Be it therefore enacted, by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of, an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province;'" and by the authority of the same, that the said several Acts herein before recited be, and the same are, hereby repealed.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the holders of Stock in the said late pretended Bank shall and may meet at the Court House in the Town of Kingston, in the Midland District, on the first Monday in May next after the passing of this Act, at or after the hour of eleven in the forenoon of the same day, for the purpose of choosing some one person to be a Commissioner for the purposes herein after mentioned; and that the persons holding certificates given for notes of the said pretended Bank by the Commissioners hereinafore appointed for settling the affairs of the said pretended Bank, shall and may meet at the Court House in the Town of Kingston aforesaid, on the second Monday in May next after the passing of this Act, at or after the hour of eleven in the forenoon of the same day, for the purpose of choosing some one other person to be a Commissioner for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That at the respective Elections herein before provided for, the holders of Stock, and certificate holders, may vote by proxy: such proxy to be appointed by power of Attorney, under the hand and seal of the principal, that each Stockholder, and each certificate holder, shall have one vote, and no more; and that the Commissioners shall be chosen at such Elections respectively, by a majority of the votes so to be given personally or by proxy.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the two Commissioners to be chosen as aforesaid, shall and may, within one week from the time of their being so chosen, appoint some one person to be a Commissioner with them for the purposes of this Act.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case of vacancy by death, incapacity, removal from the District, or resignation, it shall and may be lawful for the surviving or remaining Commissioner or Commissioners, in case the Commissioner or Commissioners so vacating his or their appointment or appointments, shall have been chosen at either of the Elections provided for by this Act, to call a meeting of the Stockholders, or of the holders of the certificates, according to the nature of the vacancy to be supplied, to be held at the Court House in the Town of Kingston, at some day to be named by the said Commissioners; and of which public notice shall be given by advertisement in the several Newspapers in the Town of Kingston, at least two weeks before the time appointed for such meeting; and in case of vacancy of the Commissioner who shall have been appointed by the other two Commissioners in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for the two remaining Commissioners, and they are hereby required to appoint, within two weeks, a third Commissioner to supply such vacancy.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Acts of any two Commissioners, who shall be appointed under this Act, shall be valid, so far as the authority of such Commissioners shall extend.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the late pretended Bank, shall, within one week after the appointment of the Commissioners under this Act, deliver, or cause to be delivered over, upon request, to the Commissioners who shall be constituted under this Act, all the books, papers, documents, matters, and things, whatsoever, remaining in their charge, and appertaining to the said late pretended Bank, or the affairs thereof.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act may, from time to time, prosecute in and by the name of the Kingston Bank Commissioners, such actions at Law as may be necessary for the recovery of any debts due to the Institution, or to others, to the use and in behalf or on account of the said Institution, by mortgage, bond, note, or otherwise; and that all such debts, whether due by specialty or simple contract, may, if the Plaintiff shall choose to sue in that form, be recovered in action on an account statue, as between the Defendant and the parties suing by the name aforesaid; and such specialty or other proof of debt may be received as evidence of an account stated.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the statute of limitations shall not apply to bar or extinguish any debt due to the said late pretended Bank, provided the same shall be put in suit within one year from the passing of this Act.

X. And whereas from the sudden failure of the said Institution, and the consequent confusion in its affairs, which rendered it for a long time impracticable, to resort to the necessary legal remedy for the recovery of the debts then outstanding, it may have happened in some instances, that the indorsers of Notes, or drawers of Bills discounted at the said Institution have not received notice of non-payment or non-acceptance within the period which the Law requires. And it is expedient to prevent advantage being taken of such omission when it has not operated to the prejudice of such Indorsers: Be it therefore further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the omission to give any such notice as aforesaid, upon any demand that may have become due after the failure of the said Institution shall not bar a recovery against any Indorser, or Drawer unless it shall be satisfactorily proved, that such Indorser or Drawer, has by reason of such notice not being given, as the law requires, been prejudicial in the means of recovery, against the party by whose non-payment or non-acceptance he had become liable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That whenever any person, appearing to be indebted to the said Institution, shall have left this Province, since the failure of the said institution, and shall not be resident therein, it shall and may be lawful to serve process in any suit to be instituted under the authority of this Act, against such person, by leaving a copy of such process, at the last place of abode of such person within this Province, with any grown up person dwelling or living in such house, or by affixing a copy of such process in the Crown Office of this Province, eight days before the return thereof—and that a declaration in every such case, being filed in the Crown Office of this Province, and all other and subsequent proceedings in any such cause which in ordinary cases are served upon the Defendant, shall be considered to be served, by filing the same in the Crown Office at York, and the Office of Deputy Clerk of the Crown at Kingston, and on notice of such filing, inserted for two weeks in the Kingston Chronicle and Upper Canada Herald.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no Bond, Mortgage, Note, Security, or undertaking of what kind or nature soever, made to the said Institution, or to any person or persons to their use, shall be held to be invalid or irrecoverable on account of any alleged illegality, of the said Institution.

XIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act, shall, within two weeks after their appointment, cause a notice of their place and hours of business, to be advertised in the Upper Canada Gazette, and in all other Newspapers in Upper Canada, and in the Montreal and Quebec Gazettes, in six successive numbers of each paper, calling upon all holders of Notes or Certificates or other Creditors of the said late Institution, to present their claims within the period prescribed by this Act, or otherwise such claims will be forever barred and cancelled.

XIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every claim upon the said Institution, unless it shall be presented to the Commissioners to be appointed under this Act, on or before the first day of November next, shall be for ever extinguished and barred.

XV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act to exercise their discretion in regard to their giving a longer credit to any debtor or debtors to the said late Institution, and that they shall also have authority to accept of property, real or personal, or to receive Bills or Notes of the said late Institution, or certificates given for the same, in satisfaction of the whole or part of any debt which said Commissioners are authorized to collect, or to refer any such matter to arbitration, or make any compromise in regard to any such debt as they may think reasonable and proper.

XVI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person indebted to the said late Institution shall before the passing of this Act, have tendered payment of the debt, or any part thereof due by him, in Notes of the said late Institution, or certificates given for such Notes, no interest shall be charged in respect to such debt, or such part thereof as he shall have so tendered payment for, from the time of such tender having been so made.

XVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners shall make a Report to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, on the first day of January in every year of their proceedings under this Act, and of the state of the affairs of the said Bank to be laid before the Legislature at its next Session.

XVIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners who shall be constituted under this Act shall make half yearly dividends among the creditors of the said late Institution of the monies collected by them, first deducting therefrom their necessary disbursements in the execution of this Act; and that the first of such dividends shall be made at the expiration of twelve Calendar months after the appointment of the said Commissioners.

XIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the said late Institution, shall be allowed to make out an account against the Government of this Province, for all disbursements necessarily incurred by them in the execution of the duties imposed upon them by Law, which account shall be sworn to by them, and shall be accompanied by the proper receipts, or other vouchers, and that it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to issue his warrant in favor of the said Commissioners, for the amount to be allowed in such account; which warrant shall and may be discharged by the Receiver General out of the monies of this Province remaining in his hands unappropriated, and the monies to be paid thereon shall be accounted for to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, in such manner and form as His Majesty shall be graciously pleased to direct.

XX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be deemed to be a Public Act, and as such shall be judicially noticed without specially showing the same.

HALF-PAY AFFIDAVITS, of the latest form, for Sale at the Gazette Office.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claims of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 15th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, at such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant for a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

EMILY, OR A WIFE'S AFFECTION.

The sun was setting in a rich flood of crimson light, and tinging all around with his departing glory, as Emily de Vere left the church-yard of D—, where she had been lingering in mournful sadness beside the grave of her father. The hallowed spot lay in a sweet and fertile valley; the hills by which it was nearly surrounded seeming to shut it out from the world, and from the strife of men; and thus marking it out as a fitting receptacle for those who had finished their earthly pilgrimage, and for whom life, with all its stirring scenes, had for ever passed away.

At the period when our little narrative commences, Emily de Vere was an orphan. Her father had been dead about two months, after a lingering illness, during which he had experienced every consolation the unremitting and tender assiduities of his daughter could afford him. Mr. De Vere, in early life, was an eminent merchant; but great and unavoidable losses obliged him to relinquish the concern in which he was engaged, and, with the small residue of his fortune, to retire with his little daughter (Mrs. De Vere having died some months before) to the village of D—. Here it became his sole delight to watch over Emily, and to foster in her heart the seeds of religion and virtue.

As she advanced in years, Emily became all her fond and anxious parent could wish; and she possessed a firmness of character and strength of mind far above her years. She loved her father with a most intense and grateful affection; and when he died, Emily deeply felt her own loneliness.

During his long residence in the village of D—, Mr De Vere had formed an intimacy with the pastor of the parish; and at her father's death that worthy friend kindly proposed that Emily should become an inmate of the Parsonage. He also undertook to arrange every thing respecting the little property which devolved to her. Emily, who had no near relatives, felt grateful for Mr. Denby's offer, which she willingly accepted; and in his quiet yet cheerful home, under the protection of his amiable wife, she in some measure recovered her spirits.

When Emily had been at the parsonage about three months, she was prestigally invited, by a distant relation of her mother's, to spend a few weeks with her in London; and as Mr. Denby considered that change of scene would prevent her dwelling with such melancholy fondness on the memory of her lamented father, she was induced to yield a reluctant consent.

Emily had just entered her nineteenth year; and, though not regularly handsome, her countenance was intelligent and animated, and the result of contentment which played round her beautiful mouth, rendered still more prepossessing by the brilliancy of fine blue eyes, beneath a white and nobly formed forehead, excited more interest in the observer than a face in which the features are perfectly regular but destitute of expression. The sacred veil of modesty was spread over all Emily's attractions. Without that veil, they may charm, and will delight, for a season: but the woman possessing it may rest assured of having her merit prefered and appreciated in the sober moments of reflection and retirement.

Emily had never been in London until now; and, though a passionate lover of the country; she found much to admire in the metropolis. Soon, however, her heart longed for the green fields and peaceful scenes of her childhood; and the thought with pleasure of the time when she should return to Mr. Denby's.

Among the many visitors who frequented her relative's gay parties, was a gentleman of the name of Sidney Morton, who distinguished Emily by particular attention. He was possessed of an independent fortune, which he derived from his uncle, who had brought it at his death in addition to the bulk of his property. His father, who had been a widower since the day of Sidney's birth, and his elder brother, were the principal partners in an extensive banking house. Sidney had just attained his twenty-third year. He was handsome in person, possessed of the most elegant manners; in his temper he was frank and generous, but passionate, and possessed of strong and almost uncontrollable feelings. Of religion, he had never given himself the trouble to think. However, he frequented church occasionally, was charitable, was neither a professed gamester, nor a dissolute man of the world. Greatly to be deplored was his loss of a pious and affectionate mother! How much of all that is good does a child learn from the lips of so kind a friend! She has his welfare at heart, he knows that much! She has his welfare at heart, he knows that much! If his future character depends upon the precepts she now gives him, and that in after years, in the hour of temptation and danger, when she is slumbering in the dust, her warning voice may rise to his recollection, and deter him from sin, and its attendant misery.

Emily was particularly charmed with the conversation of Sidney, and the delicate attentions he paid her; especially as she knew him to be aware of the very small fortune she possessed. She surrendered herself to the delight she felt in his society, without pausing to reflect whether the qualities of his mind were proportioned to the charms of his person. She beheld him offer his bounty to the poor with a liberal hand; and if in their discourse they touched on religious topics, Sidney unhesitatingly assented to the opinions of Emily. Before she left town, Sidney succeeded in gaining her heart's best and warmest affections, and received a promise from the interesting girl that she would become his bride at the expiration of a few months. That time soon passed away, and they were united. Young, mutually attached, possessed of an ample competence, and full of bright hopes and happy feelings, life seemed to hold out to them an Elysian prospect. Alas! how short sighted is human judgment!

For some time Emily had scarcely a wish ungratified; though she could not conceal from herself that even then early Sidney seemed to have a greater taste for diversions and company than she could have wished. Ere six months of their union had passed away Emily saw with pain that Sidney ridiculed her strict observance of the Sabbath, and also generally walked to the house of God alone. Frustrated in all the efforts she made to win her beloved husband to the paths of peace, Emily did not forget to pray that he might be converted from the error of his ways; and that, in the hour of affliction, he might be a believer in that consoling faith which she herself professed.

Sidney had long been desirous of visiting Italy; and as Emily offered no objections to a plan with which she perceived he was so much delighted, arrangements were made for their immediate departure. They journeyed through most of the principal towns of the continent, and many of the chief of the monuments of art and relics of antiquity; and at leath took up their abode for a few months in the city of Naples.

Here Sidney renewed his acquaintance with Charles Estcourt, a young man whom he had formerly known in London. He was possessed of lively and pleasant manners, but his habits were depraved and dissipated. All his efforts to gain the attention or propitiate her friendship failed; nor could she bring herself to treat him with more than the forms which common politeness required.—By Estcourt, Sidney was introduced to the Marchese Albertini, a fascinating Neapolitan widow, but of questionable character. Sidney, however, was quite charmed with her grace and vivacity, and became a frequent attendant at her brilliant parties. From this time Emily felt with bitterness that her wedded happiness was over. She exerted all the talents she was gifted with to detain Sidney at home, but her endeavors were unsuccessful. Gaming was extensively carried on at the Marchese's; and Sidney, who had been prevailed on to play, had lost a considerable sum; yet he could not resolve to break the fetters which bound him to the Marchese's enchanting society. Often would Emily think of her once happy home, and her beloved and indulgent father; and though her tears flowed for his memory, she felt that he had not been spared to witness the distress and neglect to which she was now subjected. Yet her affection for Sidney never wavered. "Oh God of Mercy," she would exclaim, "in thy hands are the hearts of men—bend them to thy will, and all will be right!" Such a belief of eternal happiness, and to me, though it be even in the hour of affliction or of death."

One evening that Sidney had been spending with Estcourt, he had played much larger stakes than usual, and was unsuccessful to an amount which he knew would even occasion him much inconvenience. It was morning when he reached his home, flushed with wine, and inwardly execrating his own ill luck. Emily, trembling with a thousand apprehensions, had been unable to retire to rest, and sat waiting his return with the most fearful anxiety; but his gloomy and perturbed aspect overpowered her with terror and distress. Sidney spoke not, but threw himself into a chair, and sullenly rested his head on his hand as if in deep thought. Emily feared to interrupt his meditation; but anxiety prevailed over every other consideration, and, gently leaning over his shoulder, she inquired if he would not come to bed. "No, Emily," said he; "but it is time you were at rest, and I would wish to be alone."—Emily moved towards the door; but she still lingered, and could not forbear saying, in a gentle tone, "I fear you are ill, Sidney, will you not be down soon?" "No! I am not ill," he interrupted her in an angry voice; "but pray leave me, and ask no more questions."—"Sidney," replied Emily, "this is not as it should be—forgive me, but I must speak to you! if you are unhappy, why may not I share your grief! If you are distressed, let me endeavour to console you."—"It cannot be, Emily; your presence can give me no relief."—"Will not my love, my fond heart?" she exclaimed: "Oh, Sidney, beware—break not the bond of our union thus easily—cast me not off from your love and affection!"—"Emily! what can you mean!" said Sidney.—"Oh, I know—I foresee it all! It is Estcourt who will teach you to despise and desert me, and he will lead you to ruin. He is a gamester; but, dear Sidney, I implore you to stop short in that pursuit, if indeed, as I fear, you are but too often engaged in it. It hardens the heart—it deadens the feelings—it leads to crime, to misery, and death. We never can, we never shall be happy while you forsake your home to join in so fearful a vice."—How know you that I have been engaged as you say?"—"I read it in your countenance," said Emily; "disappointed hopes, and irritated feelings—but worse than either is the indifference, the carelessness, with which you meet my inquiries. I will not tell you that my heart is wounded—that my pride is hurt—but I will implore you for your own sake—for mine, if that now be of any value to you—to shake off the acquaintance of one who is seeking your ruin." "All this is very fine, Emily," said Sidney; "but in future I will thank you to keep your advice until the time when I may require it." "And so I would, dear Sidney, so I would; I would not care for poverty, nor distress, if you were unchanged—if you were but as kind and as attached as you once were. It is the want of that which causes my grief; it is for that I brave your anger now, ere worse ensue. Oh, dear Sidney! tell me only wherein I have offended you! tell me only what I can or should do to bring back your love!"—"Emily," he puzzled!" replied Sidney; "I never can, never shall cease to love and esteem you, so let that content you for the present, and now good night."—"I will try and believe you, dear Sidney," said Emily; "if it be indeed but a delusion, it will be one I would not wish to awake from!"—and she hastily left the room.

When Emily had quitted him, Sidney could not fail to feel the force of her just complaints. He knew and felt that he was neglecting her—her to whom he had vowed constant and unchanging love—and that his virtuous and amiable wife had a right to his most tender care and respect; but the returning morning would chase from his mind these reflections; for, though Sidney could form good resolutions, he wanted stability of mind to enable him to keep them. He was easily persuaded into the commission of actions which, on retrospection, he could not fail to condemn

(To be concluded in our next.)

Summary.

The London papers announce the death of the Earl of Radnor, of Sir Richard John Strachan, G. C. B., Dr. Hook, Dean of Worcester, Henry Neele, Esq., author of several popular works. Mr. Neele committed suicide.

Lord and Lady William Bentinck have sailed for India.

Don Miguel and his suite have sailed for Lisbon.

Washington Irving's "Life of Columbus" has made its appearance. Its execution is very highly spoken of in the Literary Gazette of February 2.

In the House of Commons, Feb. 21st, Mr. Herries complained of certain misstatements respecting him—stating that the difference between himself and Mr. Huskisson was the cause of the dissolution of the late Administration—and asserted that there was other more material considerations which led to that important catastrophe. Several members expressed their astonishment at this declaration, and demanded further explanations, which, however, Mr. H. refused to make.

The Marchioness of Loule, youngest daughter of the late King of Portugal, has arrived in England, with her husband, in a Schooner of War—the latter having fled from Lisbon to avoid her brother Don Miguel, who was displeased with her marriage.

The French troops were about to evacuate Cadiz.

The Bank of Messrs, Waters & Co. Swansea, has been robbed of £23,000, of which £13,000 was in specie.

It appears from our English papers that a great quantity of snow has fallen in the North part of England during the past winter. The coaches at times were unable to travel for the depth of snow. A rapid thaw had swelled the waters of the Tyne so suddenly, that at the Shields 50 or 60 ships laden were torn from their moorings, and some of them sunk. The noise from the rush of the waters is described as being terrific.

The ancient and beautiful Castle Carnarvon, Wales, lately suffered much damage from lightning.

A patent has been granted in England for a newly invented Air Bed or Matrass! The ticking is formed of cotton cloth with a coating of prepared gum elastic, and an outer covering of silk. It is so portable that it may be carried in the pocket, and may be filled and emptied at pleasure. They are sold in England for about $25, and are favorably spoken of.

The Corporation of Liverpool are said to have solicited the creation of a Bishopric, for which they in return offer to erect a Cathedral.

GURNEY'S STEAM-COACH.—This ingenious vehicle continually approaches nearer to perfection, under the care and skill of Mr. Gurney. It was running every day last week, in the Regent's park, and the New-road. On Wednesday it preserved at the rate of ten miles per hour, although loaded with fifteen persons outside and two inside. Thursday it was running for a considerable time in the square of Cavalry Barracks, in the Regents Park, when it was viewed by a number of distinguished personages. Among these was His Royal Highness Don Miguel, who was accompanied by Lord Mountcharles and several foreigners of distinction.

TURKEY.—The latest dates from Constantinople bear a warlike aspect, the Bosphorus has been closed against the vessels of all nations, and the subjects of the Three Powers told that they must consider themselves as Royas, or else quit the Capital, where no foreign right of protection would any longer be permitted!!

Immense chains were preparing to close the entrance of the Dardanelles; thirteen ships of the line and some frigates were fitting out at the arsenal; two ships of the line and one frigate are already in the port, between Tophano and Galata, and a squadron of large and small vessels in the Dardanelles.

GREECE.—Letters from Corfu speak of a disposition on the part of the Admirals to sail for the Peloponnesus, the conduct of Ibrahim Pacha forcing them to appear for a second time at Navarin.

The House unanimously voted thanks, and a piece of plate, value £50, to Dr. Johnston, for his humane, disinterested, and perswering exertions, in attending and prescribing to the sick Emigrants last Summer, at Bank Head Farm. This is as it should be, and honorable to the feelings of the House.—Halifax paper.

The Official Gazette of the 22d, contains an Order in Council, which after reciting the Act regulating the trade of British possessions abroad, which enacts that no goods, except the produce of the fisheries in British Ships, shall be imported into, nor any exported from, any of the British Possessions in America, other than the United Kingdom, unless to places therein described, entitled Free Ports, extends the provisions of the said Act to Pictou and Sidney, in the Province of Nova Scotia.

Herculaneum.—It seems that the excavations at Herculaneum, which had been suspended for a long time, are to be carried on on a new plan, and with redoubled energy. They are to direct their effort on that side of the buried city which presents the least difficulties, and is likely to afford the readiest and most interesting results, judging from the former attempts made in that quarter. It is said also, that the excavations, which are continued without interruption in the Island of Capræa, on the foundation of the city of Tiberius, are to be extended, and the most flattering expectations are accordingly entertained.—Liverpool Courier.

During the late violent gales, the perambulators of Portland Beach have picked up valuable bars of silver, and some gold and silver coins, thrown up from the wrecks on that dangerous coast.

NEW POTATOES were in the Philadelphia market several days ago, about the size of walnuts.—They were raised in New Jersey.

A State stopped Payment!—The Legislature of Maryland adjourned without passing any appropriation Bills, or providing any means for the payment of the salaries of the Officers of Government, and meeting the demands of other just claimants. The two houses differed about a General Assessment Bill.

We learn from the Delaware Journal that such has been the waste of time in Congress in not passing the appropriation Bills, that a Bill drawn by Coon. Biddle, now at sea, for $5,000 could not be paid, and that a vessel of war was detained from sailing, lately, for want o $10,000.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Feb. 7.

STATE OF THE LAW.

Mr. Brougham introduced his promised motion.—The learned gentleman commenced by stating that he should not touch upon Equity, because that had already been taken up by Parliament; nor upon the Criminal Law to which Mr. Peel had given his attention; nor upon the Commercial Law, which had by degrees adapted itself to the wants of society, and was far purer than any other part of the system. He also trusted that Mr. Peel would take up the law of Real Property: and he wished at present to confine himself to the business of the Common Law Courts, of which he had direct experience.

Mr. Brougham then entered into a detailed account of the jurisdiction and the business of the Courts at Westminster. He showed how extremely defective is the division of labour among them—that while the King's Bench is overwhelmed with the number of causes, and forced into mischievious arrears, the Common Pleas and Exchequer has scarcely any business to occupy them, owning to the greater expense of proceedings, or the monopoly among the lawyers in those courts. Not being able to see any peculiar virtue in the number 12, but seeing how unreasonable it was that an enormous increase in the legal business of the Courts should not have been met by an increase in the number of Judges, Mr. Brough am thought that fourteen would be a much better number than twelve, and that the additional two should attend exclusively to the Chamber-practice of taking bail, &c. and keep the full benches for the last six hours a day in all the Courts. The learned gentleman adverted to the political influence formerly manifested in the promotion of lawyers to the bench, and he challenged any lawyer to say, whether in every case which the Crown was concerned, they do not proceed with a knowledge of what would be the leaning of the judge. He passed a high eulogium, however upon Lord Tenterden and the other present Judges. He would have the Welsh Judges received among the English, and the judicial business of Wales put upon the same footing as that of the English provinces. He was not for the total abolition of payment by fees to the Judges—considering that mode as involving a wholesome stimulus to exertion. He ridiculed the present absurd division of the law terms, and their dependence upon the changes of the moon. He suggested the classification of causes, and the giving one species to each court, by which the business would not only be got through with far greater expedition, but would be better done, inasmuch as each Judge would be able to pay greater attention to the particular business of his Court. After pointing out the defects of the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts, and of the Privy Council in its judicial character, Mr. Brougham came to a local magistracy, to the constitution of which he strongly objected, as arbitrary, as tending to abuse, particularly in regard to the corrupt influence exercised by time, and of acting as their coadjutor in asserting them out of it. That is a power which no Ministry can give, and which no Government can take away. (Loud and long continued cheering.) When it had subsided the Hon. & learned gentleman moved, "That an humble address be presented to His Majesty, praying that he may be graciously pleased to direct that a Commission be appointed to inquire into the defects complained of by time, and other circumstances, in our laws, and to propose such a remedy as may be deemed expedient." The Hon. and learned gentleman then sat down amid renewed cheering, having spoken for upwards of six hours.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—February, 15.

On the 15th of February, Mr. Secretary Peel moved in the House of Commons for the appointment of a select committee on the present state of the public income and expenditure of the United Kingdom; and to consider and report what further regulations and checks it may be proper in the opinion of the committee to adopt, for the purpose of establishing an efficient controul over all charges incurred, and all matters connected with the receipt, custody, and application of the public money, and what further means may be adopted for the reduction of every part of the public expenditure, &c. The question was carried unanimously, and a large committee appointed.

Scotland.

We have more than once referred to the increasing prosperity of the Town of Kilmarnock, in as far as regards its principal department of trade, the carpet and bonnet business; and it is pleasing to be able again to communicate facts which bear out the assertions formerly made. These branches of manufacture have, for some time back, in a most flourishing state: great difficulty being sometimes experienced in fulfilling orders for the market. During the whole of the late dullness, when almost every business came in for a large share of the depression, the carpet and bonnet weaving suffered comparatively little, and not a farthing was deducted from the wages that had been previously given for the work.—Glasgow Chronicle.

Great activity prevails at present in Paisley, in almost every department of business; the demand for weavers at present is greater than it has been since the year 1825. The consequence is, that during the present month a considerable advance has taken place on the prices paid for weaving.

GREECE & TUKKEY.

HAVRE, Feb. 20, 1828.

"The Grand Sultan has issued a Proclamation, in which he refuses to acknowledge the independence of Greece, and calls upon all his subjects, civil and religious, to defend their rights and their country! Still we do not think there will be a war!"

A letter of the 21st says, the news from Constantinople is confirmed in all sides.

Letters from Constantinople of Jan. 9, and 11, confirm the accounts which the Gazette of Augsburg had published. The Porte has suddenly changed its language and attitude. On the 5th January three lists of proscription appeared, the first contained the names of 100 Frenchmen, the second those of 120 English, and the third of 85 Russians. All the remonstrances addressed to the Porte from different quarters were useless. The measure is executed with rigour. The individuals on these lists must quit the dominions of the Sultan in three days. The kind of manifesto which the Porte has published at the same time against the infidels, and particularly against the Russians, is an appeal to religious fanaticism; and this circumstance must have made the Ministers of the Powers, who interfered in favor of the exiles, think since that perhaps there would be no occasion to regret, in the sequel, that the permission to remain longer which was asked for several of them, was not obtained.

The Treaty of the sixth of July has provided the means to enforce peace, as well as the means of arrangement. The same agreement between the Powers which manifested itself during the negotiations will exist in the measures which the course of events may render necessary to attain the objects of the Treaty, which never was, nor will be, any other than to pacify Greece—to extinguish piracy in the Archipelago—and to maintain the balance of Europe. And whatever may happen, said the Minister who is the depository of our interests abroad, a few days ago, France will be, and preserve, the rank which becomes its honour, its power, and its dignity.

Paris, Feb. 20.—We receive the following accounts from Constantinople, dated Jan. 11:

"All that has passed for this last fortnight proves that the departure of the Ambassadors has made the Divan return to the measures resolved upon in the grand meeting of the 7th of December, after the news of the battle of Navarin, which resolutions have only been suspended since that time. Each new measure adopted by the Government is more rigorous than the preceding. The French, English, and Russian subjects who could not account for their means of subsistence, and who, to the number of 200 and 1,000, have been obliged to quit the capital.

From the London Courier of Feb. 23.

Some additional intelligence from Constantinople has been furnished by the Paris papers of Wednesday and Thursday. It corroborates the previous accounts, and, if true, would leave but feeble hopes of peace.

A circular order to the pachas avows that the forbearance of the Porte after the battle of Navarin was only to gain time, and accuses the Rusians having at length succeeded in seducing two other powers to assist in overthrowing the Ottoman empire.

The measures adopted by the Porte correspond with the disposition manifested in the documents we have alluded to. French, English, and Russian subjects, some of whom have resided at Constantinople for thirty years, have been obliged to quit the capital: the Armenian Catholics have been sent to Asia; vessels with corn have been unloaded for the supply of the Turkish Armies; reinforcements of men, cannon, and ammunition take their departure daily from Constantinople, and are to shape their course towards the Danube as soon as the weather is sufficiently open.

It appears, from the despatches received by our Government, that all the accounts relative to the proceedings at Constantinople, which have appeared in the Augsburgh Gazette are well founded—that is, the Armenian bonnet weaving suffered comparatively little, and not a farthing was deducted from the wages that had been previously given for the work.—Glasgow Chronicle.

From the London Times, Feb. 24.

The Porte seems resolved to fulfil its destiny, and rush into war. A proclamation like that of March 1826, has been issued by the Sultan, declaring Islamism in danger, and calling on all Mussulmen to arm. The pleasures of bloodshed have not been revoked in vain; the horsetails have been loosed to the wind, and 100,000 Asiatics are stated to be in full march to Europe.

Constantinople is one vast camp; immense chains have been drawn to protect the entrance to the Dardanelles—the whole naval strength of Turkey guards the Bosphorus, and warlike preparations resound on every side. Mahmoud has dared as yet no act of hostility, he seems resolved not to strike the first blow; but lists of proscription have issued, which include 1500 French, British, and Russian subjects. The Charges d'Affairs of the Neutral Powers protested against this tyranny but in vain. It is a question, however, whether the lives of the Europeans would be safe on the arrival of the Asiatic horde!—Those ruffian bands in 1820 spread murder and pillage along their whole line of march—they massacred without mercy in Smyrna and Constantinople, and it is therefore better that the subjects of the three Powers should be deported, than remain in the risk of being butchered in cold blood. Russia is not insensible of these proceedings: Wittgenstein is concentrating his force, and the Polish Army, the elite of the Russian Troops, is in march to the Pruth.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1828.

The New-York Spectator of 4th instant, has put us in possession of dates from England to 25th February. The news from Turkey is of such a nature as leaves very little room to hope, that the peace of Europe will not be disturbed.

In the House of Commons on 15th February, Mr. Peel in a speech of great length, on a motion for the appointment of a Finance Committee gave a very luminous view of the resources and expenditure of the Country. From the statement made by the Hon. Gentleman, it appears, that last year, the amount of the unredeemed debt was £777,476,000 the charge upon which amounted to £28,500,000, or nearly three million's less than it was in 1818, the amount or Capital of the funded debt within the same period having been reduced upwards of thirty-eight millions. The total ordinary revenue for 1827 was £49,581,000, the expenditure being £49,487,000, the Estimates for the present year are less than those of the last year, by £1,168,000.—After having gone through his calculations on these subjects, the Hon Gentleman proceeded to state, that

"If through the recommendation of the Finance Committee, it should appear practicable to make some reduction in the expenditure of next half-year, that I am confident will be cheerfully effected. [Cheers.] With respect to the Army Estimates, it has been proposed that a further reduction should be made in our Military Force—To effect this, there are two modes—the one by disbanding the regiments, and the other by reducing the number of men. In the former case there would be a claim on the part of those reduced, to pensions. By reducing the number of men merely, no expense was entailed on the country. The reduction of the men also could be immediately effected, and certainly if our military force will bear reduction at all, that is the way least open to objection. I have asked my Noble Friend, (the Earl Dudley) if it be possible to make a greater reduction than has yet been made in that branch of our expenditure which refers to foreign residents, especially with reference to the Ministerial, and also the Consular Establishments of South America.—(Hear, hear.) There is another point which will very naturally come under the consideration of the finance committee—I allude to the Colonial expenditure. (Hear, hear, hear.) Sir, it is a matter of notoriety, that the military establishments of many of our Colonies, particularly those immediately dependent on the Crown—I do not of course allude to such as have Legislatures of their own—amount to a considerable amount of expenditure. The Revenue which the Colonies to which I allude yield, is very trifling—the total amount of it I believe scarcely exceeds one million per annum, and it may not appear upon consideration to be inconsistent with perfect justice to make those Colonies no for meet the expenses incurred for their internal protection, as to lessen somewhat the burdens which they impose on the Mother Country (Hear, hear.) In treating of these matters I wish it, Sir, to be understood, that my mind is not under the guidance of any particular doctrines or political economy.—My single view is to keep the expenditure and income of the country as much as possible on a par with each other."

Alluding to His Grace the Duke of Wellington, Mr. Peel says, "I believe that the Noble Individual at present at the head of the highest department in the country, has both the disposition and the power to exercise a greater and more efficient controul over all the subordinate establishments, than any other person in the country. (Hear, hear.) I wish to avoid any thing like a political and party feeling in the consideration of a matter of this importance. I only mention the name of that Noble Person upon this occasion, because I consider him more capable than any other individual of efficiently executing that necessary control so indispensable to the well-being of the country. I will not, because, in the various civil offices he has filled, there can be no one who has not seen, both in the Ordnance and other departments heretofore under his direction, the most anxious desire on his part to introduce every retrenchment and every degree of economy compatible with the interests of the country. I am sure that that Noble Individual can be found for in the resources of the country, and upon which account he feels that there is not the slightest cause for the least despondency."

Mr. Peel concluded his speech which was received with repeated cheers, by moving

"That a Committee be appointed to inquire into the state of the income and expenditure of the United Kingdom and to consider and report what further regulations and checks should, in their opinion, be adopted for establishing an efficient controul over all the charges incurred, and over the receipt, custody, and application of the public money—and also to consider what further means can be taken to reduce any part of the public expenditure without detriment to the public service."

The Weather.—During the last week, after several days continuance of fine weather, it commenced snowing on Friday night, and on the following morning the ground was covered to the depth of about five inches, when Sleighs were again seen in our Streets. On Sunday there were showers of snow at intervals, and for a day or two following the fields in the neighborhood bore all the desolate appearance of the depth of Winter. The snow has however again entirely disappeared, and the genial warmth of the returning Sun of Spring, with an unclouded sky, would lead to the inhabitants that the season for his appointed labor is at hand.

The Colonial Advocate, alluding to the commitment of Colonel Coffin and Colonel Givins, says, that "at the desire of His Excellency they refused to come and tell the truth." Of this we shall only say, that it is positively untrue, as these Gentlemen did not refuse to attend the Committee—before attending however, which they had personally no objection to do, they considered it a point of duty to obtain the permission of His Excellency. That permission was withheld, for reasons which we have stated on a former occasion. On this subject, the following remarks from the Kingston Chronicle are appropriate:—

"While the power of sending for witnesses to give evidence in a matter before the House is readily conceded, we should not take leave to express even our dissent from the proposition, that because the House is vested with such powers it can in no case illegally exercise it. Privilege of Parliament is not confined to any one branch of the Legislature but is enjoyed by the three branches equally. No one branch can constitutionally encroach upon the rights of others. If any contempt of the King's dignity or majesty be offered by any person, in the Kingdom, from the meanest Peasant to the proudest Peer, such person is liable to punishment. So, the House of Lords have the power of bringing before them, and punishing for contempt, for offences against their body. And in like manner the House of Commons possess the same power. But yet, the powers of the three branches must be understood with certain limitations. For instance, the Commons cannot summon any Peer or Servant of the House of Lords before a Committee of the House; and if he refuses to obey such summons, commit him for a contempt of the order of the House. Neither can the Lords summon a Member of the Commons and commit him for refusing to obey their order. But in both cases, either House must communicate its request to the other House of Parliament, who, if they think fit, will order the attendance of the person required. But if they do not see fit to order such attendance, the person required is not compellable to attend to the request of the House desiring his attendance.—It was but the other day that our own House of Assembly were obliged to proceed in the manner pointed out, to procure the attendance of a Member of the Council, (The Honorable Archdeacon Strachan) before a Committee of the House. And yet, while they admit the privilege of the Council, they deny it to His Excellency, who, as the representative of the King, is at the head of our Legislature. The question, therefore, is narrowed down to this point. "Is the King, or his highest representative, entitled to the same respect from the Assembly as they do themselves expect and insist upon?"

An Observer, to Diogenes.—This placard, says the Canadian Freeman, "appears to have been printed at the Gazette Office in this Town."—Appearances, are deceitful—the placard was not printed "in the Gazette Office."

The Assizes for the Home District commenced on Monday last. There appears to be a good deal of business before the Court, and some trials have taken place which have resulted in the conviction of the parties.—Of these we shall obtain a list when the Court rises.—The Grand Jury have found four Bills for Libel, against the Editor of the Canadian Freeman.

Communication.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

Having observed in the Colonial Advocate of the 31 April, under the head of "civilities" that His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor "escorted the whole of the two Cabins of the Canada for himself and family, and would not allow even the Members of Assembly, who were returning home, to go over that day, except as Dock Passengers." I have to delare the same to be an impudent falsehood. His Excellency having condescended to intimate to me his desire to remove his family and household as early as possible, I hastened the equipment of the Canada, expressly on His Excellency's account, contrary to my intentions, and the requisite delay for outfit until 1st April. To all applications for passage on the day fixed for His Excellency's embarkation I replied, I consider of the vessel at His Excellency's orders.—The moment His Excellency came on board, and understood that I was not excluding passengers, I received His Excellency's orders to take on board every passenger that wished to embark.

The only further intimation I received of His Excellency's pleasure was, on my making application to know if I should stop at Niagara, I received for answer, that His Excellency had no desire to stop there, but that if I wished it, it could make no difference to His Excellency.

Born and bred under a Monarchial Government, educated in the discipline of a British Seaman, I have not yet learned the insolence of obeying a desire (to right an order) of the Representative of my Sovereign, by an impertinent wish of my own. I have only to say that as long as I command the Canada, and have a rug of Color to hoist, my proudest day will be passed in flutter at her Mast head, indicative of the presence and commands of the Representative of my King.

Our readers will perceive, by the advertisement of Mr. Phelps in a succeeding column, that active and vigorous operations are to be commenced at the Deep Cut on the Welland Canal, as early as the 15th inst.; and from the confident manner in which the Contractor speaks of the determination of the Directors to complete this section of the canal the present season, we have no doubt there can be no doubt of the success of the Company's Agent, (from assurances received on this side the Atlantic,) in procuring the necessary means to carry this desirable object into effect.—Farmers Journal.

We have authority on which we rely for stating the following gratifying intelligence. Letters have been received as late as the 10th of February from persons having the best opportunities of official information, which leave no doubt that the late proceedings of the Government here, have been fully approved at Home, and that there is every probability that Lord Dalhousie will be urged to hold the Government another year. Moreover, one Letter States that His Majesty's Government had come to a determination of pressing upon His Lordship the expediency of the continuance in Canada.—Montreal Gazette.

THE Subscriber having been appointed Agent to the above Company, at York, he is ready to Insure against loss or damage by Fire at moderate rates of Premium. The high standing of this Institution in England, and the Company allowing their Agents in Montreal to settle losses in this Country, with the Assured participating in the Profits of the Company, renders it worthy of Public Confidence. THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

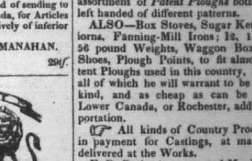
Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of their Works, are the following:—

First.—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.



Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

TO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing the Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavours will be to promote the comfort of passengers: and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped be duly appreciated, and command such preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

To IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam-Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or —— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

CHAP. III.

An Act to Amend the Assessment Law of this Province.

[Passed 25th March, 1828.]

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable persons holding Lands in the several Districts of this Province to pay the Rates and Taxes on the same to the Treasurer of the District in which they may reside. Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province,'" and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful, in certain cases, for any person or persons, holding or owning Lands in any District of this Province, which are not returned on the Assessment Roll of any Township or place therein, to pay the Rates on such Land to the Treasurer of the District in which he, she or they, or their agent or agents may reside, and the Treasurer who may receive such rates shall, and he is hereby required, on being requested so to do, to give a receipt for the same, specifying the amount paid, the period for which it is paid, the lot or parcel of Land on which the same is paid, and the Concession and Township in which such Land is situated, and also the time or date of such payment: Provided always, that in all cases when the Rates as aforesaid shall be paid by virtue of this Act to the Treasurer of another District than that in which the Land on which such Rates are paid is situated, the person so paying the Rates, shall at the same time, pay to such Treasurer a sum equal to five per cent on said Rates, in addition to such Rates, which per centage shall be retained by such Treasurer as a compensation for the duties imposed upon him by this Act.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall be the duty of the Treasurer of any District, receiving Rates and Assessments under this Act, on any Land not situated in his District, to keep an exact and accurate account of the monies which he shall receive for each District separately, stating the Lots, Parcels, or Tracts of Land on which the same may be paid, and the Concessions and Townships in which they may be situated, and the period for which such Rates are paid, and also the time or date of such payments, a copy of which account, verified upon oath, he shall transmit annually on the first day of July to the Treasurer of the District in which the Land may be situated, and shall at the same time transmit the amount of Taxes, Rates or Assessments, which he may have received under the provisions of this Act.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Treasurer of any District, on receiving money from the Treasurer of any other District, shall forthwith credit the several lots or parcels of Land, specified in the Schedule accompanying the money with the amount mentioned in such Shedule to be paid thereon, and shall within ten days after the same shall have been received transmit to the Treasurer from whom the same may have been received a receipt for the amount, specifying the Lots, Parcels or Tracts of Land on which such Rates or Taxes are paid, the amount paid on each particular lot or parcel of Land, the periods for which the same are paid, and the Concessions, Townships and Districts, in which the Lands are situated, and the time or date of the several payments, which receipt the Treasurer who may have received the Taxes in the first instance shall show to any person interested therein, on being requested so to do.

IV. And Whereas, in consequence of the difficulty of transmitting monies, many of the Inhabitants have been unable to pay the taxes on lands owned by them in distant Districts, and it is expedient to extend the period for the payment thereof: And whereas none of those persons who have paid the tax on wild lands on or before the first day of January in this present year have been subjected to the payment of more than fifty per cent. additional tax, and it is expedient to make provision respecting the increase of taxes in future: be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the amount of taxes due and payable on any lots or parcels of land shall be paid and satisfied on or before the first day of July, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, the same shall not be liable to any other or greater increase than fifty per cent, and that from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for the Treasurers of the several Districts, and they are hereby authorized and required, when the taxes, rates or assessments, have been suffered to fall in arrear for any period exceeding four years, to receive from any person and give a receipt for the tax on such lot or parcel of land, with no other addition or advance than fifty per cent on the amount due at the time of the payment thereof, and that in all cases when it shall be necessary to levy the amount of taxes in arrear by distress, or by the sale of a portion of the lands on which such taxes may be due, the amount of tax due thereon shall be levied with an increase of fifty per cent, and no more, exclusive of costs, any law to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

V. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the amount of taxes payable on any lot or parcel of land shall be paid and satisfied on or before the first day of July next, after the passing of this Act, the same shall not be subject to any greater increase than fifty per cent on the first five years.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the first day of July, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, the Treasurers of the several Districts, shall not receive any taxes on lands in any District other than that in which they shall severally reside in any case where the rates or taxes have been suffered to run or be in arrear for the space of Six years, knowing it to be so, but in such case the said tax shall be transmitted by the party desirous to pay the same, or his agent, to the Treasurer of the District in which the lands are situated.

VII. Provided always, and be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in all cases where the rates, assessments, or taxes, have been suffered to remain unpaid for the space of eight years on any tract or parcel of land, it shall not be lawful for any Treasurer to receive and place to the credit of any lot, tract, or parcel of land, any sum in satisfaction of such rates, assessments, or taxes, less than the full amount due for the eight years which have been suffered so to remain unpaid, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if the Treasurer of any District shall neglect or refuse to perform the duties imposed upon him by this Act he shall forfeit and pay for such neglect or refusal the sum of Fifty Pounds, to be recovered before the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, one half of which sum shall be paid to the informer or person prosecuting for the same, and the other moiety to be paid into the public funds of the District, and it shall be the duty of the Magistrates, in General Quarter Sessions next after the first day of July in each and every year, to examine the accounts required to be kept under this Act, and to ascertain whether the same have been transmitted, together with the monies, to the Treasurers of the several Districts interested therein.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Sixth Clause of an Act passed in the Sixth year of His present Majesty's Reign, entitled "An Act to amend and make permanent certain Act of the Parliament of this Province passed in the Fifty ninth year of the Reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, entitled 'An Act to repeal the several Laws now in force relative to levying and collecting rates and assessments in this Province, and further to provide for the more equal and general assessment of lands and other rateable property throughout the Province, and to render more effectual the several laws of this Province imposing rates and assessments, by providing under certain restrictions for the levying such rates and assessments by the sale of a portion of the lands on which the same are charged,'" be and the same is hereby repealed, and that the several Acts and duties therein prescribed, and required to be done by the several Treasurers shall be by them respectively performed, at or before the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, which shall ensue next after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine, and at the same period in each and every year thereafter, and the respective Clerks of the Peace shall then proceed in manner pointed out by the seventh clause of the said last recited Act.

X. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That from and after the passing of this Act, it shall and may be lawful for all or any person or persons who may have paid the assessment upon their lands from time to time without the Lot or Concession being specified as the law requires, or in any case where an erroneous description of any lot or parcel of land may have been given, to make oath before any of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace within the respective Districts of this Province, that such sum or sums of money as have been paid from time to time for such lands as assessed, were for such lots and concessions, specifying the same to enable the Treasurers of the different Districts wherein lands are so affected to credit, and he is hereby directed to credit such lots so specified with the amount which may have been paid from time to time upon the assessment roll.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That when from death or other causes such affidavit cannot be made, it shall and may be lawful for His Majesty's Justices of the Peace within their respective Districts, in General Quarter Sessions assembled, to hear and determine upon such evidence as may be adduced respecting such land being paid for, and if in favor of the plaintiff, to issue an order upon the Treasurer directing him to credit the respective lots accordingly.

CHAP. XI.

An Act to Repeal the Laws now in force respecting the late pretended Bank of Upper Canada, and to make provision for settling the affairs of the said Institution.

WHEREAS a certain Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fourth year of the Reign of His present Majesty, entitled, "An Act vesting in the hands of certain Commissioners therein named, all the Stock, Debts, Bonds, and Property of the pretended Bank of Upper Canada lately established at Kingston, for the benefit of the creditors of that Institution," and a certain other Act of the Parliament of this Province, passed in the fourth year of His present Majesty's Reign, entitled, "An Act to repeal part of an Act passed in the last Session of Parliament, entitled, 'An Act vesting in the hands of certain Commissioners therein named, all the Stock, Debt, Bonds, and Property of the pretented Bank of Upper Canada lately established at Kingston, for the benefit of the creditors of that Institution,' and to make further provision for settling the affairs of the said pretended Bank," have been found ineffectual; and it is expedient to provide other means for collecting the debts contracted with the said Institution, for the benefit of the creditors thereof: Be it therefore enacted, by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled by virtue of, and under the authority of, an Act passed in the Parliament of Great Britain, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain parts of an Act passed in the fourteenth year of His Majesty's Reign, entitled, 'An Act for making more effectual provision for the Government of the Province of Quebec in North America, and to make further provision for the Government of the said Province;'" and by the authority of the same, that the said several Acts herein before recited be, and the same are, hereby repealed.

II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the holders of Stock in the said late pretended Bank shall and may meet at the Court House in the Town of Kingston, in the Midland District, on the first Monday in May next after the passing of this Act, at or after the hour of eleven in the forenoon of the same day, for the purpose of choosing some one person to be a Commissioner for the purposes herein after mentioned; and that the persons holding certificates given for notes of the said pretended Bank by the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the said pretended Bank, shall and may meet at the Court House in the Town of Kingston aforesaid, on the second Monday in May next after the passing of this Act, at or after the hour of eleven in the forenoon of the same day, for the purpose of choosing some one other person to be a Commissioner for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.

III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That at the respective Elections herein before provided for, the holders of Stock, and certificate holders, may vote by proxy: such proxy to be appointed by power of Attorney, under the hand and seal of the principal, that each Stockholder, and each certificate holder, shall have one vote, and no more; and that the Commissioners shall be chosen at such Elections respectively, by a majority of the votes so to be given personally or by proxy.

IV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the two Commissioners to be chosen as aforesaid, shall and may, within one week from the time of their being so chosen, appoint some one person to be a Commissioner with them for the purposes of this Act.

V. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That in case of vacancy by death, incapacity, removal from the District, or resignation, it shall and may be lawful for the surviving or remaining Commissioner or Commissioners, in case the Commissioner or Commissioners so vacating his or their appointment or appointments, shall have been chosen at either of the Elections provided for by this Act, to call a meeting of the Stockholders, or of the holders of the certificates, according to the nature of the vacancy to be supplied, to be held at the Court House in the Town of Kingston, at some day to be named by the said Commissioners; and of which public notice shall be given by advertisement in the several Newspapers in the Town of Kingston, at least two weeks before the time appointed for such meeting; and in case of vacancy of the Commissioner who shall have been appointed by the other two Commissioners in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for the two remaining Commissioners, and they are hereby required to appoint, within two weeks, a third Commissioner to supply such vacancy.

VI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Acts of any two Commissioners, who shall be appointed under this Act, shall be valid, so far as the authority of such Commissioners shall extend.

VII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the late pretended Bank, shall, within one week after the appointment of the Commissioners under this Act, deliver, or cause to be delivered over, upon request, to the Commissioners who shall be constituted under this Act, all the books, papers, documents, matters, and things, whatsoever, remaining in their charge, and appertaining to the said late pretended Bank, or the affairs thereof.

VIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act may, from time to time, prosecute in and by the name of the Kingston Bank Commissioners, such actions at Law as may be necessary for the recovery of any debts due to the Institution, or to others, to the use and in behalf or on account of the said Institution, by mortgage, bond, note, or otherwise; and that all such debts, whether due by specialty or simple contract, may, if the Plaintiff shall choose to sue in that form, be recovered in action on an account statue, as between the Defendant and the parties suing by the name aforesaid; and such specialty or other proof of debt may be received as evidence of an account stated.

IX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the statute of limitations shall not apply to bar or extinguish any debt due to the said late pretended Bank, provided the same shall be put in suit within one year from the passing of this Act.

X. And whereas from the sudden failure of the said Institution, and the consequent confusion in its affairs, which rendered it for a long time impracticable, to resort to the necessary legal remedy for the recovery of the debts then outstanding, it may have happened in some instances, that the indorsers of Notes, or drawers of Bills discounted at the said Institution have not received notice of non-payment or non-acceptance within the period which the Law requires. And it is expedient to prevent advantage being taken of such omission when it has not operated to the prejudice of such Indorsers: Be it thereof further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the omission to give any such notice as aforesaid, upon any demand that may have become due after the failure of the said Institution shall not bar a recovery against any Indorser, or Drawer unless it shall be satisfactorily proved, that such Indorser or Drawer, has by reason of such notice not being given, as the law requires, been prejudicial in the means of recovery, against the party by whose non-payment or non-acceptance he had become liable.

XI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That whenever any person, appearing to be indebted to the said Institution, shall have left this Province, since the failure of the said institution, and shall not be resident therein, it shall and may be lawful to serve process in any suit to be instituted under the authority of this Act, against such person, by leaving a copy of such process, at the last place of abode of such person within this Province, with any grown up person dwelling or living in such house, or by affixing a copy of such process in the Crown Office of this Province, eight days before the return thereof—and that a declaration in every such case, being filed in the Crown Office of this Province, and all other and subsequent proceedings in any such cause which in ordinary cases are served upon the Defendant, shall be considered to be served, by filing the same in the Crown Office at York, and the Office of Deputy Clerk of the Crown at Kingston, and on notice of such filing, inserted for two weeks in the Kingston Chronicle and Upper Canada Herald.

XII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That no Bond, Mortgage, Note, Security, or undertaking of what kind or nature soever, made to the said Institution, or to any person or persons to their use, shall be held to be invalid or irrecoverable on account of any alleged illegality, of the said Institution.

XIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act, shall, within two weeks after their appointment, cause a notice of their place and hours of business, to be advertised in the Upper Canada Gazette, and in all other Newspapers in Upper Canada, and in the Montreal and Quebec Gazettes, in six successive numbers of each paper, calling upon all holders of Notes or Certificates or other Creditors of the said late Institution, to present their claims within the period prescribed by this Act, or otherwise such claims will be forever barred and cancelled.

XIV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every claim upon the said Institution, unless it shall be presented to the Commissioners to be appointed under this Act, on or before the first day of November next, shall be for ever extinguished and barred.

XV. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful to and for the Commissioners to be constituted under this Act to exercise their discretion in regard to their giving a longer credit to any debtor or debtors to the said late Institution, and that they shall also have authority to accept of property, real or personal, or to receive Bills or Notes of the said late Institution, or certificates given for the same, in satisfaction of the whole or part of any debt which said Commissioners are authorized to collect, or to refer any such matter to arbitration, or make any compromise in regard to any such debt as they may think reasonable and proper.

XVI. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person indebted to the said late Institution shall before the passing of this Act, have tendered payment of the debt, or any part thereof due by him, in Notes of the said late Institution, or certificates given for such Notes, no interest shall be charged in respect to such debt, or such part thereof as he shall have so tendered payment for, from the time of such tender having been so made.

XVII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners shall make a Report to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Person Administering the Government of this Province, on the first day of January in every year of their proceedings under this Act, and of the state of the affairs of the said Bank to be laid before the Legislature at its next Session.

XVIII. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners who shall be constituted under this Act shall make half yearly dividends among the creditors of the said late Institution of the monies collected by them, first deducting therefrom their necessary disbursements in the execution of this Act; and that the first of such dividends shall be made at the expiration of twelve Calendar months after the appointment of the said Commissioners.

XIX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners heretofore appointed for settling the affairs of the said late Institution, shall be allowed to make out an account against the Government of this Province, for all disbursements necessarily incurred by them in the execution of the duties imposed upon them by Law, which account shall be sworn to by them, and shall be accompanied by the proper receipts, or other vouchers, and that it shall and may be lawful for the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, to issue his warrant in favor of the said Commissioners, for the amount to be allowed in such account; which warrant shall and may be discharged by the Receiver General out of the monies of this Province remaining in his hands unappropriated, and the monies to be paid thereon shall be accounted for to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, in such manner and form as His Majesty shall be graciously pleased to direct.

XX. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That this Act shall be deemed to be a Public Act, and as such shall be judicially noticed without specially shewing the same.

HALF-PAY AFFIDAVITS, of the latest form, for Sale at the Gazette Office.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, if the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their powet to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

Miscellaneous.

(Concluded.)

The sorrow which Emily experienced from the dissipated life led by her husband, had a severe effect upon her health and spirits. The colour faded from her cheeks, and she had an ominous cough. Still she had ever a smile with which to greet Sidney when he returned to her; and his occasional fits of ill temper she bore with gentleness and forbearance. Sidney often sighed when he looked upon her, and his conscience upbraided him for the poor return which he had made for all the love and tenderness which she had ever manifested towards him; but he was too eager after that phantom, which men of the world so falsely call pleasure; and, capricious and lightly minded he endeavoured to lose the remembrance of the misery which troubled and upbraided him in wine and dissipation; and the deeper he drank of the intoxicating cup, the still further he was removed from happiness and inward peace.

Emily often expressed an earnest desire to return to England. She was wearied with the frivolity and licentiousness of Italian manners, and entertained a hope that, if she could succeed in prevailing upon Sidney to leave the continent, all might yet be well. At length he gave a reluctant consent, and the day was fixed on which they were to leave Naples.

Sidney had gone to the Marchese's one evening with a view of taking leave; but the tables were preparing for the various games of chance; a large party was assembled; and he was challenged by Estcourt to one of those games, which had made a fortune favoured him; and, finding himself a winner, he was persuaded to play for larger stakes, and he arose a loser to the amount of nearly all his fortune. Stung by his loss for the first time, he rushed from the house in a state of desperation.

Grief for the heavy loss which his own imprudence and folly had caused threw him into a fever. How anxiously did Emily watch and pray by his bedside for his recovery! But Sidney was insensible of her presence. He became delirious, and, during his paroxysms, accused himself of guilt and ingratitude, and loudly called upon Emily as the most moving terms. Youth and a good constitution enabled him eventually to triumph over his malady, and he was pronounced convalescent. Emily reproached him not, but rejoiced to find him sensible how little she regarded the loss of fortune, should it be the means of restoring him to his home and to virtue.

All the heedless beings who had gathered around Sidney in the day of his prosperity forsook him, when he could no longer minister to their gratification, and even the doors of the Marchese were closed against him. How delighted was it to turn from those time-serving reptiles to Emily, who affectionately endeavoured to alleviate his pangs of disappointment and self-reproach! Sidney could not view her tenderness unmoved. Bitter, indeed, were the accusations of his own heart.—To Emily he now clung as to the being on whom alone his happiness depended.

Emily's little property yet remained; and on that, added to what Sidney had left, they were yet able to live in tolerable competence, though in a style far different from that of former times.

Faulkner and Sidney at last left their native country; but she was too feeble to undertake so long a journey; and when Sidney—whose illness had occasioned her to struggle against physical weakness—was perfectly recovered, her spirits failed, her appetite forsook her, and she was compelled to have medical advice.

As Naples was now hateful to both, and as Sidney hoped that Emily would find benefit from the change, they took a small but pleasant cottage at Frescati. For a time, Emily's health seemed to improve; and all but herself anticipated complete recovery. She, however, felt within her the symptoms of gradual decay. One morning, during Sidney's absence, she applied herself to her drawing, as a mode of relieving the melancholy that oppressed her; but the subject was ill chosen—instead of relieving, it increased her weakness. She was giving the last touches the picture required. She had sketched, from memory, the well-known white cottage that had been her home during the lifetime of her father. "Yes," said Emily, surveying it with a pensive smile, "I have succeeded well in this instance—it is very like—but here I could scarcely fail, so deeply is the scene impressed on my memory. Oh! happy, peaceful home of my infant years, and early youth, must I never look on you more! Must love, and hope, and life fade thus early from me! A few years hence, I roamed in those green fields, a gay and laughing child, thoughtless of the unhappiness and sorrow which have since been my portion. And yet how wise is that decree of the Almighty, which veils futurity from our view, that a knowledge of the evil to come may not poison the bliss of our present existence."—Emily paused a moment, for her heart was full of tender recollections. "There is my own rose-tree by the door," she said, "that I tended with so much fondness—perhaps no care is now bestowed on it; but, like me, it is blighted and withering. The window—Ah! there it is, overshadowed with jessamine—my father's window—where he sat so often, and watched me coming up the garden walk, that he might hasten to meet me—where is he now? Where I shall soon be! Yes, father! dear father! Emily is about to join you; and Sidney, I must leave you to whom my heart is so closely wedded. Oh, that is a bitter thought! How shall I bear it? Strengthen me to endure thy dispensation, oh, Father of the universe!"—Emily folded her hands, and bowed her head submissively. "Emily!" said Sidney, in a tender tone, having entered unobserved—" why are you thus agitated? Come, let me put away this drawing—see what I have brought you!" and he unfolded carefully to pass a silken scarf around her shoulders, of a colour and embroidered pattern which he had formerly known her admire. "Not now," said Emily; "I cannot wear it now—not again, dear! but you were very kind to think of me. Alas!"—she paused, "I feel too well assured that my course on earth is drawing to a close; and I grieve only that I must part from you."—She threw her arms affectionately round his neck. "Dear Emily," said Sidney, "do not thus distress me, by even naming such an event. You were wrong, in your weak state, to indulge in drawing what was too likely to revive many sad feelings"—"Perhaps so," replied Emily; "but it is not the first time I have thought of death; and I wish you also to consider of it, my love. When I shall have left you far away, you may not be wholly unprepared. Dear, dear Sidney," continued she, "let me, before that fatal hour arrives, have the happiness of seeing your doubts and fears dispelled—of seeing what you do indeed own the Christian's faith. Assured of this, death will lose half its bitterness; and the certainty of our reunion will beam brightly amidst the gloom of the narrow grave. Oh! you will talk further of this another time, Emily," said Sidney; "but you must not exhaust your strength now: if due care be not taken to preserve you from infection of mind and spirits, we can have no reasonable ground to expect the restoration of your health."—" You are right, Sidney," replied Emily; "and in future I will endeavour to be more careful. Alas! I fear I value life too highly, as my existence now seems necessary to your happiness."—Sidney pressed her hand, in token of his affection, and led her to converse on other subjects.

The weather was now delightful; and, though Emily could not walk far, she felt inexpressible delight, when, leaning on her husband's arm, she took a few turns in the garden surrounding their cottage.—Soon after his recovery, Sidney had frankly confided to her the tale of his wanderings, for he could not be satisfied until she knew all, and had pronounced pardon. Emily wept, but she endeavoured to conceal the emotion with which she heard him; but she could not refrain from weeping when he spoke of the Marchese Albertini, although he was not aware that the melancholy that he had become sensible of her depravity.

Sidney soon perceived that Emily had experienced no essentially beneficial change in her health. Ultimate recovery was what he now dared not to expect. When in the height of their prosperity, at Naples, Emily had formed a slight acquaintance with an English clergyman named Faulkner; and Sidney, at her request, had entrusted him to visit them. The kind and venerable old man immediately complied, and Emily felt much comforted by his conversations. Her example operated powerfully on the mind of her husband; her pratice accorded with her belief; and it was delightful to observe the inward happiness she experienced from the faith which she possessed. Misfortune and sorrow had lowered Sidney's pride; his conscience reproached him for many and grievous sins; his only earthly treasure was about to pass away from him; and he needed the comforting assurance of divine pardon for past offences. It is impossible to depict the joy of Emily on being fully assured that he had entirely abandoned his erroneous opinions.

Emily, though in failing health, and suffering much from cough, was not confined to her bed. She had always been fond of flowers, and she delighted now to inhale the fragrance of some choice plants which had been placed in her chamber window; and she would sit and look out on the fair prospect before her, all bright and glowing with the rays of the setting sun, while her tears would fall as she thought of scenes and never again to wander forth in the open air. Yet she reprined not, for she considered her lot a blessed one in being spared to see the reformation of her husband, to regain his former greatness, and to witness so great a change wrought in his manners and habits of thinking. She had prayed for this; and she endeavoured to console herself with the thought, that their separation would be but for a few short years, when she might again hope to be forever reunited to the being on whom she had bestowed her dearest affections, and for whose interest she was so deeply solicitous.

About this time Emily had the satisfaction to receive a kind letter from Sidney's father, to whom she had written, unknown to her husband, telling of her own hopeless state of health, and entreating that he would receive and console his son in the event of her death. All this, and more, Mr. Mackworth promised; and Sidney's heart blessed Emily for the reconciliation which she had effected.

Emily lingered on; and, though given over by the Physicians, Sidney still hoped. One evening she had taken her usual place beside the window, in an easy chair, supported by pillows, while Sidney sat beside her, eagerly watching every movement of her still-lovely though emaciated countenance, when a letter was brought to her from Mr. Denby. Sidney read it to her. Emily sighed. "I shall never see him more on earth," she said; "but you, Sidney, will thank him for all his kindness; you will have gratitude to all those who have ever interested themselves for my benefit.—How calm will now be my last hour, compared with the agony that some months back would have torn my very soul, had I known that death was at hand, and that you did not confidently look forward, like myself, to a better and happier state of existence!"—"I, too, am thankful," said Sidney, "that I can at length feel the consolation which religion affords in the hour of affliction and bereavement." There was a pause of some minutes; and then Sidney, with his countenance of an evening sky, took up the holy volume, and read, with fervour and solemnity, some of its most beautiful and consoling passages. Emily gazed on him with a meekness of devotion; and, when he had finished, she raised her hands to heaven in thankfulness and prayer. It was a bright and beautiful evening; the setting sun tinging every object around with its golden hues; every bird and breeze, which sufficient enough of wind stirring to waft towards them the scent of the sweet flowers, and of various aromatic plants and shrubs. Emily raised herself, and looked out. "How beautiful!" she said, "and yet, England, mine own land, beloved place of my birth—would that I could die there! but God's will be done; and while you are with me shall I dare to repine?—and she pressed Sidney's hand affectionately. They sat some time longer gazing on the fair landscape; when Sidney, observing that Emily looked very pale, persuaded her to retire to rest. She faintly smiled assent to his proposition, and he assisted her to rise; but she was too weak to walk, and he carried her in a couch, and knelt down beside her. "Sidney," she said, with difficulty, "I feel that I am dying—we must part—yet only for a time—God be praised that now you know that consoling truth also. Oh, blessed Redeemer! strengthen and preserve my husband's faith!"—Emily was silent with difficulty, and Sidney raised her up. She threw her arms around his neck—a faint shudder passed over her frame—he felt the arms which encircled him relax in their wonted tenderness—he looked, all was still, and the spirit of his Emily had passed from a world of sin and suffering to find repose in the mansion of eternity.

GRANT POWELL,
Clerk, L. C.

York, 10th March, 1828.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 7th instant, transmitting a copy of certain Resolutions unanimously adopted by the Legislative Council, and requesting a copy of the Speech for publication which I delivered before that Honorable Body.

In compliying with commands so agreeable, I request you to convey my grateful thanks to the Legislative Council, for their kind consideration; and to accept my acknowledgements for the opportunity of vindicating my good name, and that unsullied reputation, which as a Father of a family, and a Christian Minister, I must deeply value, in the only way within my power, before my congregation in the Colony. If, therefore, I enter upon the subject in some detail, I hope this Honorable House will bear with me, for indeed it has long become intolerable to the whole Province; and as I have, from my situation, found it necessary to act a prominent part, and have been in consequence, exposed to much calumny and misrepresentation, it is due to myself, as well as to the public, to satisfy my numerous friends, and the world, that I have acted in a fair, honorable, and consistent manner; and with a degree of forbearance, which my accusers and calumniators had no right to expect.

It had long been a matter of deep regret to the late Bishop of Quebec, that he was unable to multiply the number of his Clergy in any way commensurate with the wants of his Diocese. For although many places were willing to comply with the conditions usually demanded by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," yet that venerable institution, from the narrowness of its means, and the many claims upon its funds, was unable to meet their requests. In this dilemma His Lordship turned his attention to the Clergy Reserves, and in order to render them productive, applied to His Majesty's Government to place them under the direction of those for whose benefit they were intended; and in consequence orders were given to incorporate the Clergy in each Province, for the purpose of managing and superintending the affairs of the trust. The priority given to these corporations, which began their sittings in 1819, was limited to leasing. They had no power to improve, to exchange, to open roads, or to alienate, or in any way to augment the value of the property, except so far as was necessary to defray the contingencies of their meetings. They were under the direction of the Executive Government of the Province, and were commanded to pay to His Majesty's Receiver General all the rents collected by them, in order to be appropriated as provided for in the 31st of the late King. Now although the Corporation was created by the issue of leases much more rapidly than before, yet many causes still operated to prevent any immediate advantage to the Church from their establishment.

These causes were, first, the great encouragement given by Government to Settlers of good character, by bestowing on them Land on payment of a trifling fee. Second—The gratuitous Grants of Land to each person as retained their Loyalty during the American Revolutionary War; and to Officers, Soldiers, and Sailors, who served in the late war in Europe and America. Third—the grants given by the Colonists to lands in fee simple to leases, even where the latter are more advantageous. Fourth—The difficulty of collecting rents from the smallness of the amount charged on each Lot, and from being scattered over the whole Province. Fifth—So long as applicants can get Lands of the best quality, and in the most convenient situations for nothing, or a trifling fee, the natural consequence is, that rents of Lands upon Lease is almost nominal. These things pressing forcibly on the minds of the Lord Bishop of Quebec and the Clergy, and on the Legislature of Upper Canada, induced them to seek the power of selling the Clergy Reserves to a limited extent, as well as leasing them, leaving the proceeds to be disposed of as provided for in the 31st of K. G.

From this measure they looked for many important advantages:—

First.—A large portion of the country, now in a manner locked up, would be made free.

Second.—The Lessees would be more punctual in paying their rents, for fear of losing any claim to renewal or advantageous purchase.

Third.—The means would be afforded of multiplying Clergymen to any number that might be required.

HALF-PAY AFFIDAVITS, of the latest form, for Sale at the Gazette Office.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, if the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their powet to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

EMILY, OR A WIFE'S AFFECTION.

(Concluded.)

The sorrow which Emily experienced from the dissipated life led by her husband, had a severe effect upon her health and spirits. The colour faded from her cheeks, and she had an ominous cough. Still she had ever a smile with which to greet Sidney when he returned to her; and his occasional fits of ill temper she bore with gentleness and forbearance. Sidney often sighed when he looked upon her, and his conscience upbraided him for the poor return which he had made for all the love and tenderness which she had ever manifested towards him; but he was too eager after that phantom, which men of the world so falsely call pleasure; and, capricious and lightly minded he endeavoured to lose the remembrance of the misery which troubled and upbraided him in wine and dissipation; and the deeper he drank of the intoxicating cup, the still further he was removed from happiness and inward peace.

Emily often expressed an earnest desire to return to England. She was wearied with the frivolity and licentiousness of Italian manners, and entertained a hope that, if she could succeed in prevailing upon Sidney to leave the continent, all might yet be well. At length he gave a reluctant consent, and the day was fixed on which they were to leave Naples.

Sidney had gone to the Marchese's one evening with a view of taking leave; but the tables were preparing for the various games of chance; a large party was assembled; and he was challenged by Estcourt to one of those games, which had made a fortune favoured him; and, finding himself a winner, he was persuaded to play for larger stakes, and he arose a loser to the amount of nearly all his fortune. Stung by his loss for the first time, he rushed from the house in a state of desperation.

Grief for the heavy loss which his own imprudence and folly had caused threw him into a fever. How anxiously did Emily watch and pray by his bedside for his recovery! But Sidney was insensible of her presence. He became delirious, and, during his paroxysms, accused himself of guilt and ingratitude, and loudly called upon Emily as the most moving terms. Youth and a good constitution enabled him eventually to triumph over his malady, and he was pronounced convalescent. Emily reproached him not, but rejoiced to find him sensible how little she regarded the loss of fortune, should it be the means of restoring him to his home and to virtue.

All the heedless beings who had gathered around Sidney in the day of his prosperity forsook him, when he could no longer minister to their gratification, and even the doors of the Marchese were closed against him. How delighted was it to turn from those time-serving reptiles to Emily, who affectionately endeavoured to alleviate his pangs of disappointment and self-reproach! Sidney could not view her tenderness unmoved. Bitter, indeed, were the accusations of his own heart.—To Emily he now clung as to the being on whom alone his happiness depended.

Emily's little property yet remained; and on that, added to what Sidney had left, they were yet able to live in tolerable competence, though in a style far different from that of former times.

Faulkner and Sidney at last left their native country; but she was too feeble to undertake so long a journey; and when Sidney—whose illness had occasioned her to struggle against physical weakness—was perfectly recovered, her spirits failed, her appetite forsook her, and she was compelled to have medical advice.

As Naples was now hateful to both, and as Sidney hoped that Emily would find benefit from the change, they took a small but pleasant cottage at Frescati. For a time, Emily's health seemed to improve; and all but herself anticipated complete recovery. She, however, felt within her the symptoms of gradual decay. One morning, during Sidney's absence, she applied herself to her drawing, as a mode of relieving the melancholy that oppressed her; but the subject was ill chosen—instead of relieving, it increased her weakness. She was giving the last touches the picture required. She had sketched, from memory, the well-known white cottage that had been her home during the lifetime of her father. "Yes," said Emily, surveying it with a pensive smile, "I have succeeded well in this instance—it is very like—but here I could scarcely fail, so deeply is the scene impressed on my memory. Oh! happy, peaceful home of my infant years, and early youth, must I never look on you more! Must love, and hope, and life fade thus early from me! A few years hence, I roamed in those green fields, a gay and laughing child, thoughtless of the unhappiness and sorrow which have since been my portion. And yet how wise is that decree of the Almighty, which veils futurity from our view, that a knowledge of the evil to come may not poison the bliss of our present existence."—Emily paused a moment, for her heart was full of tender recollections. "There is my own rose-tree by the door," she said, "that I tended with so much fondness—perhaps no care is now bestowed on it; but, like me, it is blighted and withering. The window—Ah! there it is, overshadowed with jessamine—my father's window—where he sat so often, and watched me coming up the garden walk, that he might hasten to meet me—where is he now? Where I shall soon be! Yes, father! dear father! Emily is about to join you; and Sidney, I must leave you to whom my heart is so closely wedded. Oh, that is a bitter thought! How shall I bear it? Strengthen me to endure thy dispensation, oh, Father of the universe!"—Emily folded her hands, and bowed her head submissively. "Emily!" said Sidney, in a tender tone, having entered unobserved—" why are you thus agitated? Come, let me put away this drawing—see what I have brought you!" and he unfolded carefully to pass a silken scarf around her shoulders, of a colour and embroidered pattern which he had formerly known her admire. "Not now," said Emily; "I cannot wear it now—not again, dear! but you were very kind to think of me. Alas!"—she paused, "I feel too well assured that my course on earth is drawing to a close; and I grieve only that I must part from you."—She threw her arms affectionately round his neck. "Dear Emily," said Sidney, "do not thus distress me, by even naming such an event. You were wrong, in your weak state, to indulge in drawing what was too likely to revive many sad feelings"—"Perhaps so," replied Emily; "but it is not the first time I have thought of death; and I wish you also to consider of it, my love. When I shall have left you far away, you may not be wholly unprepared. Dear, dear Sidney," continued she, "let me, before that fatal hour arrives, have the happiness of seeing your doubts and fears dispelled—of seeing what you do indeed own the Christian's faith. Assured of this, death will lose half its bitterness; and the certainty of our reunion will beam brightly amidst the gloom of the narrow grave. Oh! you will talk further of this another time, Emily," said Sidney; "but you must not exhaust your strength now: if due care be not taken to preserve you from infection of mind and spirits, we can have no reasonable ground to expect the restoration of your health."—" You are right, Sidney," replied Emily; "and in future I will endeavour to be more careful. Alas! I fear I value life too highly, as my existence now seems necessary to your happiness."—Sidney pressed her hand, in token of his affection, and led her to converse on other subjects.

The weather was now delightful; and, though Emily could not walk far, she felt inexpressible delight, when, leaning on her husband's arm, she took a few turns in the garden surrounding their cottage.—Soon after his recovery, Sidney had frankly confided to her the tale of his wanderings, for he could not be satisfied until she knew all, and had pronounced pardon. Emily wept, but she endeavoured to conceal the emotion with which she heard him; but she could not refrain from weeping when he spoke of the Marchese Albertini, although he was not aware that the melancholy that he had become sensible of her depravity.

Sidney soon perceived that Emily had experienced no essentially beneficial change in her health. Ultimate recovery was what he now dared not to expect. When in the height of their prosperity, at Naples, Emily had formed a slight acquaintance with an English clergyman named Faulkner; and Sidney, at her request, had entrusted him to visit them. The kind and venerable old man immediately complied, and Emily felt much comforted by his conversations. Her example operated powerfully on the mind of her husband; her pratice accorded with her belief; and it was delightful to observe the inward happiness she experienced from the faith which she possessed. Misfortune and sorrow had lowered Sidney's pride; his conscience reproached him for many and grievous sins; his only earthly treasure was about to pass away from him; and he needed the comforting assurance of divine pardon for past offences. It is impossible to depict the joy of Emily on being fully assured that he had entirely abandoned his erroneous opinions.

Emily, though in failing health, and suffering much from cough, was not confined to her bed. She had always been fond of flowers, and she delighted now to inhale the fragrance of some choice plants which had been placed in her chamber window; and she would sit and look out on the fair prospect before her, all bright and glowing with the rays of the setting sun, while her tears would fall as she thought of scenes and never again to wander forth in the open air. Yet she reprined not, for she considered her lot a blessed one in being spared to see the reformation of her husband, to regain his former greatness, and to witness so great a change wrought in his manners and habits of thinking. She had prayed for this; and she endeavoured to console herself with the thought, that their separation would be but for a few short years, when she might again hope to be forever reunited to the being on whom she had bestowed her dearest affections, and for whose interest she was so deeply solicitous.

About this time Emily had the satisfaction to receive a kind letter from Sidney's father, to whom she had written, unknown to her husband, telling of her own hopeless state of health, and entreating that he would receive and console his son in the event of her death. All this, and more, Mr. Mackworth promised; and Sidney's heart blessed Emily for the reconciliation which she had effected.

Emily lingered on; and, though given over by the Physicians, Sidney still hoped. One evening she had taken her usual place beside the window, in an easy chair, supported by pillows, while Sidney sat beside her, eagerly watching every movement of her still-lovely though emaciated countenance, when a letter was brought to her from Mr. Denby. Sidney read it to her. Emily sighed. "I shall never see him more on earth," she said; "but you, Sidney, will thank him for all his kindness; you will have gratitude to all those who have ever interested themselves for my benefit.—How calm will now be my last hour, compared with the agony that some months back would have torn my very soul, had I known that death was at hand, and that you did not confidently look forward, like myself, to a better and happier state of existence!"—"I, too, am thankful," said Sidney, "that I can at length feel the consolation which religion affords in the hour of affliction and bereavement." There was a pause of some minutes; and then Sidney, with his countenance of an evening sky, took up the holy volume, and read, with fervour and solemnity, some of its most beautiful and consoling passages. Emily gazed on him with a meekness of devotion; and, when he had finished, she raised her hands to heaven in thankfulness and prayer. It was a bright and beautiful evening; the setting sun tinging every object around with its golden hues; every bird and breeze, which sufficient enough of wind stirring to waft towards them the scent of the sweet flowers, and of various aromatic plants and shrubs. Emily raised herself, and looked out. "How beautiful!" she said, "and yet, England, mine own land, beloved place of my birth—would that I could die there! but God's will be done; and while you are with me shall I dare to repine?—and she pressed Sidney's hand affectionately. They sat some time longer gazing on the fair landscape; when Sidney, observing that Emily looked very pale, persuaded her to retire to rest. She faintly smiled assent to his proposition, and he assisted her to rise; but she was too weak to walk, and he carried her in a couch, and knelt down beside her. "Sidney," she said, with difficulty, "I feel that I am dying—we must part—yet only for a time—God be praised that now you know that consoling truth also. Oh, blessed Redeemer! strengthen and preserve my husband's faith!"—Emily was silent with difficulty, and Sidney raised her up. She threw her arms around his neck—a faint shudder passed over her frame—he felt the arms which encircled him relax in their wonted tenderness—he looked, all was still, and the spirit of his Emily had passed from a world of sin and suffering to find repose in the mansion of eternity.

GRANT POWELL,
Clerk, L. C.

York, 10th March, 1828.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 7th instant, transmitting a copy of certain Resolutions unanimously adopted by the Legislative Council, and requesting a copy of the Speech for publication which I delivered before that Honorable Body.

In compliying with commands so agreeable, I request you to convey my grateful thanks to the Legislative Council, for their kind consideration; and to accept my acknowledgements for the opportunity of vindicating my good name, and that unsullied reputation, which as a Father of a family, and a Christian Minister, I must deeply value, in the only way within my power, before my congregation in the Colony. If, therefore, I enter upon the subject in some detail, I hope this Honorable House will bear with me, for indeed it has long become intolerable to the whole Province; and as I have, from my situation, found it necessary to act a prominent part, and have been in consequence, exposed to much calumny and misrepresentation, it is due to myself, as well as to the public, to satisfy my numerous friends, and the world, that I have acted in a fair, honorable, and consistent manner; and with a degree of forbearance, which my accusers and calumniators had no right to expect.

It had long been a matter of deep regret to the late Bishop of Quebec, that he was unable to multiply the number of his Clergy in any way commensurate with the wants of his Diocese. For although many places were willing to comply with the conditions usually demanded by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," yet that venerable institution, from the narrowness of its means, and the many claims upon its funds, was unable to meet their requests. In this dilemma His Lordship turned his attention to the Clergy Reserves, and in order to render them productive, applied to His Majesty's Government to place them under the direction of those for whose benefit they were intended; and in consequence orders were given to incorporate the Clergy in each Province, for the purpose of managing and superintending the affairs of the trust. The priority given to these corporations, which began their sittings in 1819, was limited to leasing. They had no power to improve, to exchange, to open roads, or to alienate, or in any way to augment the value of the property, except so far as was necessary to defray the contingencies of their meetings. They were under the direction of the Executive Government of the Province, and were commanded to pay to His Majesty's Receiver General all the rents collected by them, in order to be appropriated as provided for in the 31st of the late King. Now although the Corporation was created by the issue of leases much more rapidly than before, yet many causes still operated to prevent any immediate advantage to the Church from their establishment.

These causes were, first, the great encouragement given by Government to Settlers of good character, by bestowing on them Land on payment of a trifling fee. Second—The gratuitous Grants of Land to each person as retained their Loyalty during the American Revolutionary War; and to Officers, Soldiers, and Sailors, who served in the late war in Europe and America. Third—the grants given by the Colonists to lands in fee simple to leases, even where the latter are more advantageous. Fourth—The difficulty of collecting rents from the smallness of the amount charged on each Lot, and from being scattered over the whole Province. Fifth—So long as applicants can get Lands of the best quality, and in the most convenient situations for nothing, or a trifling fee, the natural consequence is, that rents of Lands upon Lease is almost nominal. These things pressing forcibly on the minds of the Lord Bishop of Quebec and the Clergy, and on the Legislature of Upper Canada, induced them to seek the power of selling the Clergy Reserves to a limited extent, as well as leasing them, leaving the proceeds to be disposed of as provided for in the 31st of K. G.

From this measure they looked for many important advantages:—

First.—A large portion of the country, now in a manner locked up, would be made free.

Second.—The Lessees would be more punctual in paying their rents, for fear of losing any claim to renewal or advantageous purchase.

Third.—The means would be afforded of multiplying Clergymen to any number that might be required.

Fourth.—The popular objection against the Reserves as a barrier to improvement and internal connection would, in a great degree, be removed.

Fifth.—The Imperial Parliament would, in a few years, be relieved from the annual Grant in aid of the Society for the propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, in as far as respects Upper Canada.

Sixth.—Two or three hundred Clergymen living in Upper Canada, in the midst of their Congregations, and enjoying the greater portion of their Incomes from funds deposited in the Mother Country, must attach still more intimately the population of the Colony to the Parent State. Their influence would gradually spread, and they would infuse into the inhabitants a tone and feeling entirely English; so that the very first sentiments and opinions of the youth must become British.

After deeply in 1824 I was charged with a proposal to His Majesty's Government to enlarge the powers of the Corporation, so that they might be enabled to sell to a limited extent as well as to lease. On my arrival in London in April 1824, I laid this proposal before His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, Lord Bathurst, and found that His Lordship, as well as the Under Secretary, the Hon. R. W. Horton, were disposed to adopt it, if on consideration they should find it practicable, and not detrimental to the Church But as an Act of Parliament was required to authorise the sale of any portion of the property, it was deemed too late to bring it in during that Session, and it was therefore postponed to the next. In the mean time some progress had been made in the arrangements with the Canada Company to purchase all the Crown and Clergy Reserves in both Provinces, though subsequently the Company confined the motives to those in Upper Canada. To settle the conditions of sale with the Company, produced an embarrassing negotiation, and as I was perhaps the only person at that time in London that could give correct information concerning the Reserves, particularly those set apart for the Clergy, I was frequently referred to.

Pending this negotiation, which from the first as it appeared to me, Government wished to bring to a favorable conclusion, no Bill such as I wished for selling the Clergy Reserves could with propriety be brought into Parliament Nor was I particularly anxious to push my original measure, because I anticipated many advantages to the Province by the introduction of capital, and knew well that it would be better for the Government to sell to the Company a portion of the Clergy Reserves at a lower price than might be expected from disposing of them lot by lot to individuals, than at once relieve the Parent State from any expense whatever in supporting the Clergy in this Province. I, however, objected to the alienation of the whole of the Reserves, and only acquiesced in the propriety of selling one-half of what remained after deducting all that were leased or occupied—an arrangement which reduced the actual sale to little more than one-third of the Clergy Lands. It is immaterial for me to remark in this place, that during the settlement of the conditions of sale between the Canada Company and His Majesty's Government there were two to which I was strongly opposed, the first was the valuing of the Reserves at a ready money price from the average value paid in ready money for Town Lots in each District, on or before the first day of March 1824, because I considered it totally inapplicable to the mode of doing business in the Colony, which is hardly ever by paying money down, but by annual instalments with interest.

The other condition was, that the Company for Instalments, without Interest; which I considered altogether inconsistent with the object in view. And it was expressly on the ground, that those conditions were to be altered, so that a sum might be obtained for the Reserves, and an immediate fund for the support of additional Missionaries, that I was inclined to favor the arrangement. But in giving my opinion on these and other points, and supplying local information to His Majesty's Government, when called for, I did not, and could not, consider myself as acting officially, on the part of the Clergy Corporation, or with the consent and approbation of the Provincial Government. It is true, the proposals made by the Canada Company accorded in some degree with the one with which I was entrusted, which was merely to obtain a power to sell to a limited extent; but it was impossible for me to know how they would be received in Canada: and, although it was quite natural for the Colonial Government to apply to me for facts and opinions, I considered myself merely responsible for their correctness, and did not conceive that I had a right to reason upon them, or to urge them with the same fervor as I should have done if I would have been my duty to have done if acting as an accredited Agent, with respect to this particular arrangement. I did, however, continue to object to a ready money value, and to the sale only of large Tracts, and to the deferred payment without interest: and thought, that when I came away, both conditions were to be modified or given up — Anticipating from these alterations a favourable result, I gave it as my opinion, in July, 1824, that the arrangement as it would then stand, would be as fair as could be expected.

Summary.

We understand that Mr. Galt has, during his stay in this city, written a Farce, which will be produced at the Park Theatre in the course of a couple of weeks. The piece is called, 'My Aunt in Perplexity or Adventures of New-York.' A humorous character is introduced as an old Scotch Lady, just arrived at the City Hotel, from Auld Reekie, whose blunders, mishaps, and prejudices, are quite amusing. Mr. Maywood, an undertaker, is to personate the old lady, and has, accordingly, been engaged by Mr. Simpson for that purpose.—Albion.

The Depot of the 79th Highlanders, stationed at Belfast, was inspected by Major-General Thornton, on the 15th of Nov. last. After inspecting the men, who were paraded at 10 o'clock, in heavy marching order, and going round the Dinner Mess, he was pleased to express himself in terms similar to the state of the various appointments, as well as of the whole interior economy, in the following very flattering encomium:—

"The men of the 79th Depot, at the time of my last inspection, were a body of untrained Recruits, and I now find them to my surprise, and with the most pleasurable feelings, well-trained Soldiers."

After the review was over, the gallant General visited the Serjeants' Mess.—its abundance, and the excellent system on which it is conducted, drew from him this remark:

"No officer's Mess, in His Majesty's Service could be better; and no one could if asked to take a seat at the Table, wish to be better entertained." Belfast Paper.

We find in a Liverpool paper, an announcement of a new romance from the prolific pen of Sir Walter Scott. It is to be entitled "St. Valentine's Day, or the Fair Maid of Perth," in three volumes, and will from the second series of Chronicles of the Canongate.

It is said that £50,000 worth of gold and silver, are annually used at Birmingham, (Eng.) in guilding and plating.

It is calculated that there are upwards of 80,000 Deaf and Dumb persons in Europe alone. A Journal for the benefit of these unfortunate beings, has been established in France.

Extraordinary Performance. A wager for a small amount, as to the power of draught of a horse on the Monkland and Kirkintilloch railway, was decided in presence of a number of spectators, of the committee of management of the railway, and a great crowd of spectators. The horse in question started from Gargil colliery, drawing a weight of 68 tons, on 14 waggons, which he conveyed to Kirkintilloch, at a distance of seven miles, in the short space of one hour and forty-one minutes — The first two miles of the above distance was on a dead level, and the remainder was on a descent varying from 1 in 120 to 1 in 100, with several level tracts. We believe this to be the most extraordinary performance of the kind yet on record.

—Glasgow Chronicle.

Shocking.—A coroner's inquest was held on the body of Martha Snow (aged about 33) found dead in her bed on Saturday morning last. She occupied a room in a house on North Main Street, near the Baptist meeting house, and it appears, went to bed on her bed in a state of intoxication (to which she was unhappily addicted) about noon on Thursday, where she remained, until Saturday morning, when found dead. A physician who attended the inquest supposed she must have expired, 33 hours before the examination. Two children of the deceased 4 and 6 years of age, had slept in the same bed for two nights before her death was discovered. The eldest supposed her mother was fast asleep — It is said the deceased has left considerable property, and the unfortunate little children will be provided for. The Jury returned a verdict of death from cause unknown.—Providence American.

Extraordinary Birth —A friend has favoured us with the following extract of a letter, dated N. Rochdale, Jan. 29.

"There was a most singular occurrence took place on the 18th inst. at a place called Rattonhall, N. Rochdale. A poor labourer's wife was delivered of three boys and two girls, all at one birth The three boys she bore about 11 o'clock at night, and the two girls the following morning about 4 o'clock. I have seen and touched them myself. They are now, I am informed, put into spirits, for the inspection of the admirers of nature. They were all born alive, and are about 11 or 12 inches in length, and were all placed in one coffin when I saw them."

Windsor, Feb. 22.—Yesterday her Royal Highness the Dutchess of Kent and the Prince and Princess of Hohenlohe Langenbourg paid a visit to his Majesty at Windsor. At a quarter past one the Royal cavalcade entered the Great Park;—the Dutchess of Kent, the Princess Victoria, and the Prince and Princess of Hohenlohe Langenbourg in the splendid new carriage presented to the latter by her uncle Prince Leopold, the Prince of Leiningen, Baroness de Spaedth, Baroness de Letzen, and Sir John and Lady Conroy, following in two royal carriages, the out-riders and postillions wearing their full dress liveries.—On their arrival at the Royal Lodge, they were received by his Majesty (dressed in a plain blue coat, decorated with the Star of the Garter, and those of two foreing orders.) who conducted his distinguished visitants into the principal drawing-room. A splendid dejeune was arranged in the adjoining apartment to the Conservatory, in which his Majesty's private band were stationed. At four o'clock the King took leave of his visitors, who proceeded to Sandpit-gate, where they viewed the giraffe, and afterwards inspected the collection of foreign quadrupeds and birds belonging to his Majesty. The Royal party returned in the evening to Claremont. Immediately after the departure of his distinguished visitors, his Majesty gave separate audiences to the Marquis of Anglesea and the Right Hon. Mr. Huskisson, who had arrived at the Royal Lodge in the course of the afternoon. After the audiences, the noble Marquis and the Right Hon. Secretary of State for the London, partook refreshments at the Lodge, the former at five and the latter at half-past six o'clock.

The following military changes have been determined upon:—Four companies of the 93d Highlanders are under orders to proceed from Edinburgh Castle to Glasgow, and are to be replaced by the 4th Regiment from Portugal; the depot of the 1st or Royal Regiment moves from Glasgow to Paisley; the depot of the 24th Highlanders from Paisley to Stirling, and the depot of the 74th Regiment from Sterling to the Isle of Man.

One moved on Tuesday last, weighed 28 tons, and required 18 horses to drag it — Another weighing 25 tons, is to be raised and removed this day.

Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence was installed in the office of Worshipful Master of Lodge 403, the Prince of Wales's Lodge, at the thatched House Tavern, in the place of the late Duke of York One moved on Tuesday last, weighed 28 tons, and required 18 horses to drag it — Another weighing 25 tons, is to be raised and removed this day.

TWO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers are to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavors will be to promote the comfort of passengers: and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

To IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam-Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or —— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

TO PRINTERS.

A PRESSMAN—Wanted immediately at the Office of the U. E. Loyalist, to whom liberal wages will be given.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 20*s.* per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash Kettles, &c.—and at 22*s.* 6*d.* per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price for that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

SIX Building Lots, very eligibly situated in the immediate vicinity of the Roman Catholic Chapel.

Terms of Sale, which will be made easy to purchasers, may be learned of G. POWELL.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the CROWN Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respectful attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no paying given or renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be met with a favourable and very reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

Bursar, King's College.

THE U. E. LOYALIST.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1828. NO. 43.

A SPEECH, of the VENERABLE JOHN STRACHAN, D.D. Archdeacon of York, in the Legislative Council, Thursday, 6th March, 1828: on the subject of the Clergy Reserves.

From this time, I had no particular communication on the subject, as my stay in London, after my return from Scotland, was only for a few days. During my voyage across the Atlantic to this Country, I had occasion to draw up a Report of my proceedings for the information of the late Lord Bishop of Quebec; and in doing this, I turned to a copy of the articles of agreement between His Majesty's Government and the Canada Land Company, which was handed to me by one of the Stockholders as I was entering the Coach for Liverpool, on the 27th September, 1824, and which I had put away among my papers without examination, not supposing that it differed from what I considered to have been the final arrangement, before I left London for Scotland; I was therefore exceedingly disappointed and surprised to find, that the two articles to which I had particularly objected, namely, the valuation by the money price of the Crown, and the deferred payments without interest, both of which had, as believed, been modified or rejected, had been retained. Thinking that they had been introduced in error, I considered it my duty, as Chairman of the Clergy Corporation of Upper Canada, to bring them under the notice of the Lord Bishop of Quebec; but before doing this, some delay seemed both necessary and expedient. The Commissioners for valuing the Reserves were daily expected, and I judged it prudent to await their arrival, that I might ascertain whether they were allowed any discretion in interpreting the principle of valuation by the ready money price of Tracts, or whether it was to be strictly adhered to. The Commissioners having been detained beyond expectation, I brought the matter under the notice of the Bishop on the 17th February, 1825, and requested His Lordship's opinion and advice on the propriety of petitioning either for a voice in the valuation, or to have the Clergy Reserves exempted from the sale. The Bishop's opinion accorded entirely with my suggestions; and in consequence, a Meeting of the Clergy Corporation was called, and a Petition drawn up to the King and both Houses of Parliament. In this Petition, the Corporation prayed to have a voice in the valuation, and to get the conditions to which I had been opposed altered, or to get the Reserves withdrawn from the Company, that they were afraid of the reprehension of posterity, were they to make no effort to bring their views under the consideration of His Majesty's Government. With this document, Archdeacon Mountain was deputed to proceed to England. Its presentation was, however, left to the discretion of the Colonial Department; because the Corporation was convinced that both Lord Bathurst and the Honorable R. W. Horton, throughout the whole negotiation with the Canada Land Company, had manifested the most sincere and anxious feelings, to promote the interests of the Church in Canada. They had indeed given as much time and patience to the subject, as, considering the multitude of important matters daily calling their attention, surprised me at the time. Archdeacon Mountain, on his arrival in London, laid before Lord Bathurst a Letter supporting the prayer of the Petition of the Corporation for the management of the Clergy Reserves, stating that they considered themselves warranted to act in this behalf, as guardians of the interests of the Church, and would have felt themselves wanting in their duty had they not come forward in this crisis, to solicit the attention of His Majesty's Government to the view which they entertained of the case, and their apprehension, that a very considerable sacrifice of interest was likely to result from the proposed arrangements; they wished therefore, to avail themselves of the opening which they understood to have been so considerately afforded by the reservation on the part of the Crown, of a right to reconsider the view of the subject taken by the Lords of the Privy Council, or by Parliament, whenever the proposed Charter, or the Bill necessary to give it effect, should come under discussion. The two conditions already alluded to, were then brought under consideration, and their consequences fully stated. To Archdeacon Mountain's application, a most gracious answer was returned, which rendered it altogether unnecessary for him to press the matter further at that time. But in as far as regarded myself, it implied a change of opinion, which it was my duty to show could not fairly be ascribed to me, for it proceeded to state, that "The arrangement between Lord Bathurst and the Canada Land Company was not entered into without great consideration and inquiry; and his Lordship, on that occasion, had the benefit of the advice and assistance of the Reverend Gentleman by whom a Petition to His Majesty against the Bill now pending in Parliament, is signed in his character as President of the Clergy Corporation His Lordship had, therefore, not anticipated that objections to this measure would have arisen from the Clergy in Upper Canada, whose interests had been anxiously consulted in it; and who, in the person of one of their leading Members, had given his Lordship reason to expect, that the plan would have been regarded by them as an advantageous arrangement."

This charge of inconsistency was also communicated to the Society for the propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts; so that I found myself unexpectedly blamed on all sides. I had little difficulty, however, in effectually removing this impression; for I only brought to the Honorable R. W. Horton's recollection my objections, both in writing and conversation, to the principle of valuing the Reserves by a ready money price confined to large Tracts, as not applicable to this Country, and to the deferred payment without interest, and agreeable to his manly character and honorable principles, on being convinced of his misapprehension, he did not fail to do me ample justice, and to communicate his conviction of the probity of my conduct to the Society, and to say, that he considered it my duty to put the Bishop in possession of the probable consequences of the measure in agitation, in respect to the future prosperity and extension of the Church. After the Commissioners, appointed by His Majesty's Government to value the Reserves, had given in their Report, many new difficulties occurred, with which it is quite unnecessary for me to trouble the House; it is sufficient to state that when I reached London, on my second visit in 1826, for the sole purpose of soliciting a Charter for the establishment of an University in this Province, I found the Question of the Clergy Reserves still a matter of speculation, the month of June following, time the House was called upon to assist in providing for the maintenance of the Clergy. The great object of the Bill was to take the land out of mortmain and to get rid of this burden upon the Country. In their present state, they produced no revenue, and it was idle to dispute about appropriating what did not exist; that this question was much better left for future consideration, and therefore the present Bill did not pledge the Government or the country, beyond the disposal of the lands, for providing a fund for the support of the Clergy, and long before that time the question of appropriation, if thought necessary, might be brought under the consideration of the House.

Summary.

YEOMANRY CORPS.—Out of 170 Corps of Yeomanry which did exist in England, previous to the late circular from the Home Office, about 150 was disbanded on the 24th instant. The remaining Corps are those stationed in the Manufacturing and Mining Districts, which having been called into active operation in quelling disturbances within the last two years, are of course not meant to be included in that circular.

We understand that in consequence of the recent order for disbanding the Yeomanry Cavalry, the Right Hon. the Lord Rolls, has communicated to the Marquis of Lansdowne his wish, and that of his Corps under his command, to be retained in the service of His Majesty gratuitously, and to be allowed to assemble as formerly, with no other remuneration than that of the duty upon the horses of the Regiment being remitted, and exemption from the Militia.—Exeter Alfred.

GERMANY.—On the 23d of February, the shock of an earthquake was felt at Antwerp, Brussels, Louvaini, &c. The churches sustained some injury.

PORTUGAL.—By the arrival of the Swiftsure, from Gibraltar, we learn that Don Miguel arrived at Lisbon on the 22d of February, and had sworn to the Constitution.

Loss of the ship Terror.—The ship Potosi, Conyngham, 35 days from St. Ubes, arrived at Baltimore, reports that on the 14th of February, a gale of wind commenced from the S. E. to the S. W.; a number of vessels were driven ashore, and lost, as also many lives. His B. M. ship of war Terror, loaded with Stores for Admiral Codrington, was entirely lost, and upwards of one hundred of her men.

The Stock of the Manchester Rail-road, on which £27 has been paid, is now taken up with avidity at £56, an increase of nearly an hundred per cent.

Accounts from Madras to the 18th October, have been received. Hostilities have commenced against the Raja of Kolapore, the first operations of the British Army had been crowned by the reduction of a strong ghurry, hitherto deemed impregnable.

Lord Combermere was preparing to leave Calcutta on a tour of inspection to the Provinces, he was to set off on the 1st of November. Lord Amherst and family had not returned to the Presidency from their excursion to Upper India.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

From the N. Y. Spectator.

By the Packet Ship Brighton, Capt. Seber, from London, we have our files of London Papers to the 2d of March.

In the House of Commons on the 28th of February there was a majority of 44 in favor of the repeal of the celebrated Test and Corporation Acts.

The Marquis of Anglesea has been appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

We have nothing further of an Official character from Constantinople. The Globe of the evening of the first of March, says,—"Accounts from St. Petersburgh are to the 13th ult. The preparations for war in the South were continued."

Destruction of the New Theatre.—The roof of the New Brunswick Theatre, sit-ated in the East end of London, fell in on the 24th of February, during a rehearsal. It is said that about 170 persons were present, at the time. At the latest dates it was not known how many had lost their lives, twelve bodies had been found and the workmen were still employed in searching the ruins. Among the killed were the Manager and three or four of the performers. We shall give a detailed account of this disaster in our next.

LONDON, March 1.

TWO o'clock.—Within the last two hours there has been a variety of reports, and some of them of an unfavorable nature, which caused the Consol Market to look heavy, and decline from 86 3-4 to 85 1-2 1-4.

Four o'clock, closing Prices.—Consols 85 1-2 1-4: do. for Account, 85 1-4: Bank Stock, 170.

WINDSOR, Feb. 25.—His Majesty we are happy to say, continues in good health and excellent spirits; and is only prevented by the unfavourable state of the weather from taking his favourite exercises in the Park.

We are rejoiced to state in opposition to the assertions in other papers that his Majesty is perfectly recovered; and that he will resume his exercise in the Park as soon as the weather permits.—Feb. 27.

Yesterday the marriage of the Princess Feodore with the Prince Hohenlohe of Leugenbourg, took place at the residence of the Duchess of Kent, at Kensington. The Princess received on the occasion a most superb present in diamonds from his Majesty, & also a variety of valuable presents of jewellery from the Members of the Royal Family. The Members of the Royal Family arrived at the Palace soon after two o'clock. There were present, the Duke and Duchess of Clarence, the Duke of Sussex, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke of Cambridge, the Princess Sophia Matilda, and Prince Leopold.—The Bells of the Church of Kensington struck up a merry peal previous to the time appointed for the marriage, and continued ringing during the afternoon and evening. The bride and her royal sister the Princess Victoria were dressed entirely in articles ✠ British manufacture. Their dresses were of Buckinghamshire thread lace. As soon as the Royal Family had assembled, which was about three o'clock, the party proceeded to the great saloon, in which a magnificent altar had been fitted up, when Dr Kuper, Chaplain of the Royal German Chapel, united the illustrious Parties, according to the service of the Lutheran Church. The bride was given away by his Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, the Princess is in her 29th year, the Prince is in his 33d year. After the ceremony the Royal Party partook of a most splendid early dinner, given by the Duchess in honour of the occasion. The new married couple left Kensington about 5 o'clock, for the great saloon, a new carriage and four, for the seat of Prince Leopold, at Claremont, where their Highnesses will spend the honey-moon.

Foreign Intelligence.

AFFAIRS OF THE EAST.

The march of troops to Adrianople continues as well as the sending the Sultan's equipages, who, according to a report which is generally believed will go very shortly to that city.

The Capital wore a melancholy appearance, the rage of the Mussulmen against the Christians, inflamed by the firmans increased every moment. In addition, 200,000 Asiatics were expected.

From the Globe of 25th Feb.

The Turkey mail arrived this morning, bringing dates from Constantinople to the 27, and from Smyrna to the 19th ult. The manifesto, in substance, is fully confirmed; there is only one original copy in town, and it was immediately sent to H. M. Majesty's Ministers by the gentleman by whom it was received. The numbers of troops coming from Asia were very great, and the Turkish capital was already of some magnitude.

In addition to the above intelligence, there is a report circulated by the Greeks, on the authority (it is alleged) of accounts from Turkey nine days later than the mail, that dreadful excesses had taken place in Constantinople: that every Russian, and all persons lately under the protection of the Russians, had been put to death, and that the subjects of Prussia and England had also been ill-treated. What foundation the statement rests on we cannot yet ascertain. But the spirit which prevails at Constantinople gives reasonable ground for apprehending some violence on the part of the hordes who must be on their passage through that city.

From the Courier of the 25th.

The most rigorous measures continue to be adopted against the Armenians. All efforts to soften them proved fruitless.

The Odessa letters would leave us but little hope of peace; and the last letters from Vienna, of the 17th, express their fears that the Russian troops would immediately cross the Pruth. But such a measure would, we should think, emanate from the Emperor himself; unless his General on the Pruth has orders to commence operations as soon as he receives information of any offensive act having been committed by the Porte. This is not considered, either here or at Paris, to be improbable.

The Globe of the 28th Feb.—says "The wild rumors from Constantinople are repeated to-day at the Stock Exchange. It is now said that the hordes from Asia arriving at Constantinople, are immense as the proclamation orders all the male population to rally round the standard of the Prophet; that the greatest excesses have been committed; that the Russian Banker has been killed, and all the Russians in Constantinople; and that the other Franks have been sent to the Seven Towers, to protect their lives from the fury of the people.

From the Gazette de France, Feb. 27.

Orders have been sent to Brest, to arm the Jean Bart, the frigates Nymphe, Arethusa, and the goellete Bearnaise; at Cherburg, the corvette Egle; and at Bayonne the brig Capricieuse.

There sale every day from Toulin ships of war to reruise in the Levant. Several frigates have also sailed from the same destination.

All the Catholic Armenian Churches in Pera and Galata have been closed. The persecution of the Greeks and Armenians was not relaxed. On the 12th a firman appeared, according to which 27,000 chatolics of that nation were to quit Pera and Galata. This order was executed on the spot with all its rigour. On the application of the Austrian Internuncio, the blind and the old persons above 70, were suffered to remain. Thousands of Armenians had left their quarters to embark: fathers were seen carrying their children in baskets upon poles; their dwellings were immediately occupied by Mussulmen soldiers.

The Courier of the 1st of March, in commenting on an article in a Vienna paper, charging England with insincerity in her present alliance with France and Russia, remarks—'England does not distrust Russia and France; Russia and France do not distrust England. They have prescribed a plan and distinct line of policy, whose object is the preservation of the peace and tranquility of Europe."

The Globe of the evening of March 1st says, Accounts from St. Petersburgh are to the 13th ult. The preparations for war in the South were continued. Exchange on England steady at 10 3-8. The letters by the Hamburgh mail this morning state that on Saturday last, it was currently reported at Hamburg, that Turkey had declared war against Russia; the news was reported to come from Vienna express. A commercial house of some eminence at Hamburg had stopped payment.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1828.

By the New-York papers we have received English dates to 2d March. The news from the East continues to be of the same important character with that previously received.

We regret to observe that various rumors are abroad with respect to the ill state of the health of HIS MAJESTY. Some of the papers contradict these rumors, and the following extracts from the latest dates lead us to hope, that there is much in them without foundation:—

"On the 27th of February, the King proceeded, in his pony phaeton, to Snow-hill, where Sir John Copis' Fox-Hounds hunted a Fox in His Majesty's presence.

"Preparations were making at St. James' Palace for the reception of the King, who was excepted to arrive there on the 3d of March."

Wednesday the 23d inst. being the anniversary of our Most Gracious SOVEREIGN'S Birth day, a Royal Salute was fired from the York Garrison. The 68th Regiment paraded and fired three volleys on the occasion, which were followed by three hearty Cheers from the Regiment, in which they were joined by a large concourse of people who had assembled to witness the rejoicings of the day.—Some of the Militia Regiments were mustered on their parade grounds, and after the Salutes were fired, gave three cheers in honor of the occasion. The appearance of Capt. Denison's Militia Cavalry, in full dress and well mounted, reflected the highest credit on the Officers and men of the Troop.

The Canadian Freeman, in his remarks on the trial of Mr. Prentice, during the late Assizes, says, "The Attorney General seemed evidently to us, and we believe, to all in Court, prejudiced against Mr. Prentice in this trial."

As the best refutation to this unfounded remark, we refer our readers to Mr. Prentice's Letter, which is inserted in another part of this days paper. The trial has also been made the occasion by the Canadian Freeman, of attempting to create a prejudice against Mr. Dunn, the Receiver General. This Gentleman's testimony was given in the most open and candid manner, fully acquitting the accused of any dishonesty whatever, and stating his entire confidence in his integrity, as well as his ability, as a Clerk in his Office; and yet, because Mr Dunn in the most upright manner, declares his willingness to attribute the loss of any monies in the hurry of business, owing to a mis-count, rather to himself than to those in his employ, whose honesty he had no reason to doubt, the Canadian Freeman is pleased to make the most unjustifiable use of his declarations.

We have no doubt, that the conduct of the Canadian Freeman, in using this as an occasion to create a prejudice in the minds of the public, both against the Receiver General and the Attorney General, will be duly appreciated. As to the charge of "gross neglect," against Mr. Richardson, who was employed as Counsel with Mr. Washburn, by Mr. Prentice, that any "point" was "not cleared up," it is perfectly absurd; and we allude to it only with a view, to remove any impression which might possibly be made against Mr. Richardson, who has just entered on his professional career, and might be injured if it could be supposed, that he would be guilty of "gross neglect," towards his Client. The fact is, that Mr. Richardson, as well as Mr. Washburn, discharged his duty towards his client, with ability and integrity—there were no points that required to be cleared up, and the best proof of this is, that the Jury, without leaving their box, immediately pronounced their verdict of acquittal.

Rail Road.—We observe from the Lower Canada Papers, that it is intended to construct a Rail Road from Saint Johns to the Chambly Basin. The probable cost is estimated at £20,000.—This is the first project of the kind, suggested in Canada.

The Indictments for libel, against the Editor of the Canadian Freeman, as well as a Presentment of the same kind against the Editor of the Colonial Advocate, brought into Court by the Grand Jury during the last day of the Assizes, lie over for trial until the next Session.

The Editor of the Colonial Advocate has published at Mr. Fothergill's request, a Letter (or rather part of a Letter) addressed to us by the latter, in March last. Mr. Fothergill however has thought proper to suppress—the Postscript of his Letter, as well as our answer to it. Fortunately we kept a copy of both at the time, and now submit them to the public.

The following is the Postscript to Mr. Fothergill's Letter:—

"P. S. As I have no copy of the above, which has been hastily penned, I hope you will return it to me, if you do not intend to publish it."

Our answer to his Letter was as follows:—

"SIR,

"From the Postscript to your Letter, which I herewith return to you, it appears that you have "some doubt yourself as to the propriety of its being inserted in the U. E. Loyalist,—a little more "leisure and reflection may serve to convince you, "that after having, as I am satisfied in my own "mind you have done, adopted another mode of "attack against me, in another paper, you can "scarcely expect that you have a right to claim "this double advantage. If you think it of any "consequence, I have no objection however, to "publish your corrected Speech, on your furnishing me with a copy of it, it never having been "my intention to misstate what you said. The "main fact, as stated, I still believe to be correctly reported by me, although in the place, I may "have been mistaken, and this I have already said "in my Editorial remarks.

"When you shall have forwarded me your intended reply to Messrs. Burnham and Ruttan, it "will be time enough to give an answer on that "part of the subject—in the mean while—

I remain,
Yours, &c. &c.
ROBERT STANTON.

"To Charles Fothergill Esq. York."

Why Mr. Fothergill did not think proper to give this postscript and answer to his Letter, he alone can explain. His determination to publish any part of it, may have been hastily adopted, and as he is often in a hurry, we shall not attribute any improper motives to him. It is enough for us to shew, that there was no refusal on our part to correct any error that we had inadvertently fallen into, in reporting this speech of his. The error after all is in itself unimportant, and amounts to this:—that we understood Mr. Fothergill to say, that Mr. Ruttan had made use of certain expressions, at the Quarter Sessions, when in fact Mr. Fothergill said that the expressions were used by Mr. Ruttan at another place—his allusion to the Chairman of the Quarter Sessions, when speaking, at a moment when there was a good deal of confusion in the House, led us into this error. It appears to us, that as far as we are concerned, Mr. Fothergill has hastily attached a consequence to this matter, which it does not deserve.—As to the remarks of the Colonial Advocate with respect to it, we consider them unworthy of notice.

A writer in the Colonial Advocate calling himself "Alpha," objects to Mr. Keeler, as a Candidate at the ensuing election, because "he refused to sign the Petition against the Alien Bill." We would now ask, who has been the first to raise the cry of exclusion, on this subject. If any of those who supported the Alien Bill, and honestly used their endeavors to prevent the people from being misled when the Petition was in circulation, should now object to any person, because he had signed the Petition, it would be cried down as a political sin of the blackest die. But our modern patriots have a very convenient method of making the end justify the means, and inconsistency, and exclusion with them, have become necessary materials for carrying on their work.

Alpha has made a quotation which deserves the serious consideration of the people.—"The leaders of the people cause them to err, and they who are led of them are destroyed."—Shakspear says,—"The Devil can quote Scripture to answer his purpose."

The Cayuga Indian, whom we mentioned in our last, as having been committed to the Jail of this District, for the murder of a Squaw, died yesterday of the wound which he received from the son of the deceased.—Gore Gazette.

We are sorry to learn, that Mr. Israel Post, of Norwich, who was wounded by a shot from the Charivari party, mentioned in our paper of the 5th instant, died a few days ago of the wound—And we are equally sorry to learn, that the persons engaged in this diabolical transaction, have all effected their escape to the United States.—Ibid.

Communication.

To the Editor of the U. E. Loyalist.

SIR,

I perceive by the Canadian Freeman of this date, that he has stated that the Attorney General as Prosecutor for the Crown on my Trial, was prejudiced against me, whatever view Mr. Collins may have taken of the subject, I consider that the case, on the part of the Crown, was conducted by him with the greatest humanity.

I am Sir,
Your Ob't. Servt.

MR. HARTWELL'S REPLY.

TO THE BEVERLY COMMITTEE.

GENTLEMEN,

Since you did me the honor to nominate me as a person worthy the suffrages of my fellow Subjects for the ensuing Election for this County, I have seriously considered the subject, and after most mature deliberation have come to the determination not to offer myself were I confident of ultimate success.

The late extension of my business will require my whole time; and however much I may feel disposed to serve the public in the honorable situation of a Representative of the people, I cannot at this time, in justice to my family, comply with your unsolicited request.

Having come to this final determination I felt a duty I owed to the public, to you Gentlemen, and myself, to acquaint you with it at this early day, without waiting to most you at the day of your adjournment.

On a future occasion I hope and trust no impediment will interfere with my great desire to serve the County to the best of my ability as its Representative, should the Freeholders of the County of Leeds be disposed to confer on me this important trust.

I have the honor to be,
GENTLEMEN,
Your most obedient Servant,
JOSEPH K. HARTWELL.

Beverly, March 20th, 1828.

Lower Canada.

On Saturday afternoon last, a Meeting of the Merchants of this City, principally connected with the shipment of Ashes from this Province to the Mother Country, took place, pursuant to public advertisement, in the Room of the Committee of Trade, for the purpose of investigating certain complaints made against the inspection and quality of that most important branch of our Export Trade. Mr. M'Gill addressed the Meeting and alluded to the deterioration which Canada Ashes had undergone, in the Home Market during the last few years, and called upon the Merchants of this City to expose the errors of any remedy the defects of any existing evils. He did not attribute the lost character of our Ashes to the ignorance, but rather to the negligence of our Inspectors, and attributed most of the present evils to the anxiety of contending Inspectors to obtain an extensive business, who in consequence were induced to brand Ashes, of a higher value than that to which they were really entitled. He attributed the superior character of New-York & Boston Ashes to the circumstance that only one Inspector of that article was authorised in those cities, and that there an undue competition did not prevent the Inspectors acting conscientiously and impartially both as regards the manufacturer and the purchaser.—At the request of the Meeting several Gentlemen present read extracts from letters they had received from English Correspondents, complaining of Canada Ashes, and mentioning, in particular, the character of certain brands. A Committee was consequently appointed to investigate the said complaints and to suggest such remedies as they might deem necessary under present circumstances.—Montreal Gazette.

We understand that a Communication has been received in this city from the Civil Secretary for the information of the mercantile body interested in the trade of Pot and Pearl Ashes, intimating that under the existing laws, the Commissions granted to the present Inspectors will expire on the first day of May next, and that His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief will adopt "any measure that the Committee of Trade, at Montreal, would recommend or suggest, as conducing to place the Trade of Pot and Pearl Ashes on a better footing as regards the quality of the article exported or in any other way to benefit the general interests of the Trade."—Ib.

The Steam-Boat Laprairie, arrived yesterday afternoon, about three o'clock, being the first boat from Quebec this season. She encountered much ice in the River, near that Port.—Montreal Herald.

QUEBEC, APRIL 8.

The Ladies' Bazaar opened yesterday at two o'clock, from which hour to five, when it closed it was literally thronged with visitors. The several tables at which some of the most respectable ladies in the Society of Quebec presided, displayed a great variety of fancy articles chiefly made for the occasion, by Ladies who desired to promote the charity, and were alike creditable to the good taste and industry of the fair contributors as they were to these feelings which prompted them to exert themselves in so good a cause, a cause in which the female heart is never appealed to in vain. There were however some contributions from Gentlemen, particularly a Book of Sketches, by an Officer of rank in the Royal Artillery, who holds a distinguished place amongst Artists in Water Colours, and some very charming detached Sketches of Scenes in and about Quebec, and of the Costume of the Canadians, Indians, &c., by an Officer of the 79th Highlanders, which are executed with great spirit and are true to the life.—It has often occurred to us that Canadian views and subjects in the hand of the Engraver, would form matter for an entertaining graphick volume that could not fail in becoming popular, and would remunerate those who would undertake it, as it would be purchased for the reminiscences it would call up in those who had visited these Provinces, and if delineated with the strict fidelity, which so eminently characterizes the pencil of Officer whose contributed sketches are the object of our present remark, would become a valuable acquisition to the Port-folio of the Amateur or encourager of the fine Arts. We are sure that if the Officer referred to, would dedicate his leisure to such a work he would add greatly to his fame as an Artist and confer an obligation on the public; it would therefore afford us pleasure should we hereafter find that this hint has not been lost upon him.

The success of the Ladies' Bazaar in raising a fund for charitable purposes has been pre-eminent, the admission money, at 1s. for adults, and 6d each for children produced yesterday £25, and the proceeds of the articles exposed amounted to nearly £225. A very considerable sum will be added by the receipts of this day, and the result cannot but prove gratifying to the benevolent spirits by whom the plan was suggested.—Mercury.

TO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavors will be to promote the comfort of passengers: and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

TO IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macaulay, Esquire. Kingston; or —— Morris, Esquire. Brockville, Upper Canada. CHARLES SMYTH.

BANK NOTICE.—DISCOUNT DAY, Wednesday of every Week.—Notes offered for Discount, must be put under cover to the Cashier, and left at the Bank the day before.

THOMAS G. RIDOUT, Cashier.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25*l.* per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27*l.* 6*d.* per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current prices in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First.—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices

L'original, 12th October, 1827. 22tf.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any other authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared for the purpose of any of the Reserves under circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1828. NO. 49.

Mr. Warburton saw no reason for pushing the present measure through, till the general question was disposed of, but he did not rise to oppose the Bill. He likewise argued that a portion of the Reserves should be given to the Roman Catholics as well as to others.

Lord Binning spoke with great vehemence on the general question, and the claims of the Scotch Presbyterians, who had, according to him, no unfeasible right to aid from the proceeds of the Reserves. He quoted from a Letter and Memorial furnished by Dr. Lee, that there was thirty regular Congregations of Presbyterians in Upper Canada in connexion with the Kirk of Scotland, all of which, except four or five, were destitute of Clergymen, not being able to pay them. This misstatement caught Mr. Hume's sanctions had produced my letter to the Hon. R. W. Horton, astonished Mr. Easthope, the Member for Oxford, so much that he came to me for explanation. I said at the time, that the Presbyterians of Canada include all the British Provinces in North America. On this Mr. Easthope went up to Lord Binning and told His Lordship, who turned to the papers in his hand, and answered me in a manner, and of first rate materials, he has procured a full set of patterns for both Flouring and Sawmills; he at all times keeps on hand a large assortment of Patent Ploughs both right and left handed of different patterns.

They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavours will be to promote the comfort of passengers: and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them the trouble and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a transient Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

To Ships and Emigrants, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam-Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq'r. York; John Macauley, Esquire, Kingston; or ——— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada. CHARLES SMYTH.

and privileges secured to them, both by the 14th and 31st of Geo 3d, for which any portion of the Reserves, however great, would be but a miserable equivalent, as their rights and privileges will all be endangered the moment they lay any claim to the provision set apart for the maintenance of the Protestant Clergy, both by the Laws of England and those of this Province. Such has been my hostility to the Church of Scotland. It has consisted in doing her all the good in my power, consistent with my duty to my own Church—in living on the most friendly terms with her Clergy, and seeking for opportunities to add to their comforts and respectability; and even during the present excitement, I have ever considered the question of their claims to the Reserves as one of a public, and not a private nature, and which ought never to mingle itself with the charities of social life; and, however unfortunate I have been in the return which I have received from some of the Scotch Presbyterians, I shall still pursue the same line of conduct towards them.

Summary.

The steam boat Merrimack left Haverhill for Newburyport on the 11 inst.—This boat is propelled by one of Wadsworth's safety steam engines, and is the first boat in which an engine of this kind has been used. It differs essentially from any other in the principle of its boiler, which is composed of 70 small tubes, all kept full of water, and joined at one end to a large reservoir. A safety valve is placed at the opening of every tube into the reservoir, which, in fact, makes every tube a distinct boiler, holding about one gallon of water.—The tubes are made of wrought iron, and the reservoir is made amply strong by brace bolts. The whole is very compact, and occupies but little room. The Essex Gazette thinks the engine far superior to any other, on account of its safety, its economy in the consumption of fuel, and the space which it occupies. This engine is of 20 horse power and consumes less than three sixteenths of a cord of wood per hour—New York Gazette.

GREAT FIRE.

At a few minutes before 1 o'clock, yesterday morning, fire was discovered breaking out of the bell foundry of Lewis Aspinwall, in Beaver st. about midway between Green and South Market streets. The adjoining buildings being of wood, the flames spread with great rapidity, and all the exertions made could not prevent its progress, for about three honrs.

Another departure from the system of Free Trade has taken place. An order has been issued by the British Board of Customs, without previous notice, to impose an advalorem duty of 30 per cent. upon the sails and cordage of all Colonial vessels arriving in British ports, which were not registered previous to the 29th Jan. last. This measure it is stated was adopted to counteract the effects of late treaties with the Baltic & German states, by which cordage and sail-cloth were permitted to be imported into the North American Colonies at a duty of 15 per cent. and the supply was furnished by those foreigners, notwithstanding the bounty and drawback of 12 1-2 per cent. on imports from the Mother Country. The British capitalist was thus enabled to fit out his ships in Canada, instead of in British ports, and the English shipwright, ropemaker, sailmaker, &c. lost much of his employment.—New-York Mercantile Advertiser, 16th April.

St. Johns, April 1.

We are informed from a source which may be deemed authentic, that our Governor, Sir Howard Douglas has been nominated, by Government, as the person qualified for adjusting the disputed North EasternB oundary, before the Emperor of Russia, who has been agreed upon by Great Britain and the United States as the umpire between them. In this case it is probable His Excellency will soon embark for St. Petersburgh on his important mission. To be deprived of his Excellency's presence will be generally felt in this community—still it will afford a pleasure that his absence is necessary for the good of his country.—Star.

FROM LATE LONDON PAPERS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—Feb. 23.

POLICE OF THE METROPOLIS.

Mr. Peel introduced a motion for the appointment of a Committee, to inquire into the police of the metropolis. After referring to the appointment of a former committee, to inquire into the causes of the increase of crime generally, he said he believed, however, that any person whose situation afforded him the means of obtaining local information with respect to the state of many parts of the district which he had pointed out, would be perfectly satisfied that there was not that security for property, and even for person, but particularly for property, which, in every well-regulated society, all persons who gave their allegiance to the state, had a right to expect.—(Hear.) That inference was founded not only on the local experience and information possessed by magistrates residing in the neighborhood of the metropolis as to the state of their respective districts, but also on reports in the office of the Secretary of State, (copies of which had, he believed, at the instance of an honmember, been laid on the table of the house,) which would, to any one who accurately examined them, afford convincing proof that there had been such an increase in the number of commitments in London and Middlesex as strongly called for an inquiry into the causes of it. He was now speaking only of the increase of crime in London and Middlesex; any observation he might have to offer with respect to the increase of crime in the country, he would postpone until he had disposed, in the first instance, of the case of his own. The returns in his office to which he alluded contained an account of the number of commitments in each year to the prisons of London and Middlesex, for crimes committed by the population of that part of the kingdom.—The number of commitments in 1816, was 2,773; in 1821, 2,415; in 1822, 2,539; and in 1823, 2,503. In these four years there was no very material variation in the amount of the number of commitments. In 1823, there was a reduction of 100 on the number in 1820; but in 1824, there began to be an increase in the number of commitments, and that increase had gone on progressively augmenting until the end of 1827. In 1825, as he had before stated, the total number of commitments for criminal offences (from depositions included from his calculation cases of assault & other crimes of a petty nature) was 2,506.—In 1824, it was 2,621; in 1825, it was 2,902; in 1826, it increased rapidly to 3,457; and in 1827, there was a still more injurious comparison with the former year, the number being 3,981. Still, in the number of commitments in 1827, though less than that of 1826, there was an increase, as compared with previous years, so large that he thought the small diminution which had taken place as compared with 1826. was no reason why the house should not institute an inquiry into the subject. It was some satisfaction, in looking at this part of the question, to know, that the increase which had taken place, was not in that of the most aggravated nature—not in that class of offences connected with personal violence, such as murder—but merely in offences connected with property. When the number of commitments in 1824 was compared with that in 1820, there would appear to be a state in the former period of 624, there being, in 1820, 3,457 commitments, & in 1820, 2,775; but when he compared the number of commitments for simple larceny in the two years, he found that the increase under that head in 1827 was more than sufficient to account for the total increase. In 1820, the number of commitments for simple larceny was 1,324; in 1826, it was 2,118; being an increase of 794. The increase in the number of commitments in 1826, compared with 1820, was only 684; therefore it was evident there must have been a decrease in other offences with the exception of simple larceny. The considerations connected with this subject appeared to him of such importance, especially in the retirement from office he took considerable pains for the purpose of procuring information as to the amount of crime in foreign countries, compared with the amount of population in several large districts and towns in those countries, that he was induced to turn his attention to foreign countries, which, however, it would be difficult to bring into comparison with those of our own country, because in the former the classification was different from that in the latter. They returns to which he had previously referred to Berlin, Vienna, Antwerp, Paris, Brussels, Hamburgh, and several other of the largest cities of Europe. He had also procured similar returns from the principal towns and cities at home, such as, Liverpool, Glasgow, Dublin, & Edinburgh. He would allow that such documents furnished rather subjects of curiosity than guides from which any positive information could be drawn with safety; but he had that morning selected some remarkable facts from a work by M. Peyronnet, who was at the head of the police in Paris, & who had given his information in such admirable form that it was well worthy of attention. In that work M. Peyronnet entered into the details of all proceedings instituted against offenders in France, stating the proportion of crime to the population in each part, and of the different parts in relation to each other. The last census taken in Paris was in the year 1817; but in 1820 all authorities were agreed that no material alteration had occurred in the amount of population between these two periods.

The number of persons committed of and charged with, burglary, has increased in the several countries 96 in the last year, excepting in London and Middlesex, the number therein is rather less than the preceeding year. The number of persons convicted of, & charged with, the following crimes, has much increased during the last year,—namely, housebreaking, 132; cattle, horse and sheep-stealing, 139; forgery, 44; coining, 15, robbery of the person, 75; larceny, from the person, 26; embezzlement of property of their employers, 19; frauds, 53; receiving stolen goods, 126; offences under Lord Ellenborough's act, 35; and offences under the game laws, 102.

After some remarks on the inferences to be drawn from the foregoing statement, Mr. Peel proceeded to say: With respect to what was called police, we were still very far off by day but at night, when property was most exposed, and vigilance and activity were most needed, precaution seemed to desert us altogether.—At night each parish provided for its own protection, and for the protection of property, by means by which they might be avoided. He had another document which, in addition to those he had already produced, he would place in the hands of the noble lord, who he hoped would be chairman of the present committee. That document would show him that the increase of crime which constituted the ground of inquiry last year, was unfortunately redoubled since. It was better this fact should be known and stated, than that we should go on ignorantly boasting of our superior morality, while we neglected the means to improve it. The greater crimes—the more aggravated crime of murder for instance—had not increased in this country, but all offences against property had increased, and the moral habits of the people had consequently degenerated.

After some further remarks, Mr. Peel concluded by begging leave to move, "That a select committee be appointed to inquire into the causes of the increase of the number of commitments and convictions in London and Middlesex for the year 1827: into the state of the police of the metropolis and the districts adjoining thereto; and to report their observations thereupon to the House." (Cheers.)

Mr. Hume referred the increase of crime to the increase of taxation.

Mr. S. Rice complained that the parochial authorities threw difficulties in the way of reforming the police, and panegyrized the Marquis of Lansdown's improvement of the Hue and Cry, as the magnum opus of the last administration.

Mr. W. Horton begged to remind Mr. Hume that the remission of taxes would effect the rich. Mr. Horton contended that Roman Catholic emancipation could not have any effect in diminishing crime or remedying evil in Ireland.

Sir Edward Knatchbull defended the County Magistrates against observations made by Mr. Brougham in the long Speech. An untimely interference with the rights of the Christian powers, there would be no just ground on their part, for taking offence at it. It is also asserted that the Duke of Wellington meditates another attempt for renewing negotiations with the Porte.

It is also stated that the original Manifesto is not so hostile in its expressions, as the French translators made it.

Mr. Stratford Canning is said to have brought important despatches from Sir Edward Codrington and Heiden, who commands the Russian Squadron, has suggested that in the event of the Porte's refusing to concede to the terms demanded by the Allies, to blockade the extremities of the Hellespont, as in the then impoverished, and at present, exhausted state of the Turkish Empire, it is scarcely possible that Constantinople can be furnished for many weeks, and the resources of Romelia, it was stated must be pretty well consumed.

Accounts from Malta mention, that the Russian Admiral Heiden, had received communications from his Government, declaring that the Emperor considered all the brave Officers who distinguished themselves at Navarino as being entitled to the acknowledgments of Russia as well as those of their own Governments; and that the admiral was directed to forward to the capital a list of them all. He is also instructed to inquire what would be an appropriate mark of distinction for the son of Admiral Codrington, who was unfortunately wounded. His Majesty has offered the British Admiral one of his ships of the line for a flag Ship, in place of the Asia, and says he shall regard his acceptance of it as an honor.

Gazettes from the Ionian Islands to the 19th of January, furnish the official accounts of the arrival of the British and Russian Ambassadors from Constantinople, via Smyrna, at Corfu. They were entertained by the Lord High Commissioner at a Levee; and by Sir F. and Lady Adam, in the evening, by a ball and supper. At the latter the health of Sir S. Canning being offered, that gentleman replied in a speech, stating that he hoped the Turks would now perceive their error, give over their obstinacy, and consent to a work necessary to the honor of the Allies and the peace of Europe.

The Steam boat Cornwall, which has hitherto plied on Lake St. Francois, between Cotteau du Lac & Cornwall, was run down the dangerous Rapids of the Coteau du Lac, Cedres, Split-Rod and Cascades, and thence through Lake St. Louis to Lachine in three hours and a half, on Thursday last, without accident; the proprietor Mr. Dickinson, intends this Boat as well as the Steam-Boat St. Lawrence to run between Lachine and the Cascades, the ensuing season. The new Steam-Boat Neptune of 70 horse power, built last season is to take the place of the Cornwall, on Lake St. Francois.—Courant.

QUEBEC, April 17.

Captain Bayfield, R. N. and his party have returned from their expedition to Lake St. Peters.—As the public are much interested in the labors of those gentlemen, we shall give all the information we may be able to obtain, as to the various services to be perfor med in this Province.

We understand Captain Bayfield left Quebec with Lieutenant Collins and Mr. Bowen, on the 26th February last, and having engaged a party of Indians at Three-Rivers, the Survey was commenced at the Pointe du Lac on the 1st March.—They visited Nicolet, La Paie St. Antoine, the two villages of St. Francois, William-Henry, Berthier, Riviere du Loup, and Machiche.—The Church steeples of all these places being covered with tin, were excellent objects for Trigonometrical operations, and their relative positions and distances have been, we understand, very exactly determined.

The variation of the Compass was obtained in nine different parts of the Lake on the ice, at a distance from the shore, and consequently free from any local magnetical attraction of the soil or rocks which may, and in many parts of Canada often do exert great influence on the Needle.

Besides the great triangles which we have mentioned above as having been extended between the Church Steeples, and many other conspicuous objects, other minor Triangles were extended & objects coloured more highly than would have been the case, because it was desired by them to make a deeper impression on the various subjects of the Porte, so as to ensure their support in the defensive warfare expected to ensue, and that being never intended for the use of the Christian powers, there would be no just ground on their part, for taking offence at it. It is also asserted that the Duke of Wellington meditates another attempt for renewing negotiations with the Porte.

It is also stated that the original Manifesto is not so hostile in its expressions, as the French translators made it.

AFFAIRS IN THE EAST.

Alexandria, Dec. 29.—On the 28th, in the morning, a division of the Egyptian Fleet from Navarin, under the flag of the Captain Bey and the Patroni Bey, appeared off the harbour. Towards noon these vessels were close in to the shore, being the remains of that formidable fleet on which, six months ago, the hopes of the Porte were founded.—There are eight brigs, four cutters, four frigates, and several transports. A ship of the line and two frigates, which had separated from the squadron in a gale of wind, and respecting whose fate some apprehensions are entertained, are expected. Above fourteen thousand persons were landed and encamped on the coast. Among them are slaves of both sexes, wounded soldiers, and about four thousand troops, who have become unfit for service, as well as the entire harem of Ibrahim Pacha. It appears that it is intended to send from the Morea all those persons who cannot perform actual duty, and that a great motive is the scarcity of provisions.—Ibrahim Pacha himself will remain in the Morea. On the news that the fleet had entered our port, all the inhabitants assembled there, and the Viceroy himself inspected it. The sight of it appeared to awaken feelings in him which some persons thought they perceived on a preceding occasion, but respecting which they would willingly deceive themselves. It is affirmed, in short, that the Viceroy is in his heart by no means inclined to peace—that he very deeply feels the defeat at Navarin—and that he is, above all, extremely indignant that the Greeks are still permitted to carry on their operations both by sea and land without any opposition from the Allied Powers; and that he has even been induced to advise the Sultan, in case the excesses are suppressed, to have recourse to the sword and declare war, in which he may depend on the entire support of Egypt.—All the measures take here indicate preparations, if not for an offensive, yet for a defensive attitude.—Algemeine Zeitung, Feb. 21.

A commercial Letter from Odesso states, that active preparations were going on there for the expected campaign of the Russian Army. Large quantities of wheat had been purchased, to be baked for the use of the troops.

The London Times under the head of the Money Market of February 29, states in relation to the Turkish Manifesto, that it is the opinion of individuals closely connected with Constantinople and well acquainted with the character and policy of the Turkish Government, that all the passages in that document which the first view of them might be supposed to give offence or irritation to the Allied Powers, have been coloured more highly than would have been the case, because it was desired by them to make a deeper impression on the various subjects of the Porte, so as to ensure their support in the defensive warfare expected to ensue, and that being never intended for the use of the Christian powers, there would be no just ground on their part, for taking offence at it. It is also asserted that the Duke of Wellington meditates another attempt for renewing negotiations with the Porte.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, May 3, 1828.

We have no later dates from Europe.

The Legislature of New Brunswick has granted £12,000 for the improvement of the Roads—£400 for two Staff Officers, to inspect and instruct the Militia—£225 to the Adjutants of Militia Regiments, and £125 to the Sergeant Majors,—for 1828. In Nova-Scotia more than £20,000 has been appropriated to the improvement of the Roads.

In Upper Canada, it has been resolved that the Roads are bad!—and some have gone so far as to declare that Militia trainings are all humbug!—We can only say that things seem to be differently ordered in New-Brunswick and Nova-Scotia.—There the Legislatures, consider it necessary, to repair, bad roads, and to pay due attention to the effective state of their Militia.—Their example may be safely recommended as worthy of imitation.

Scythe Manufactory.—It is with much pleasure we see it announced to the public, by Ja's. Crooks, Esquire, of West Flamborough, that he has added, a Scythe Manufactory, to his other establishments at the head of the Lake. We are aware that a large sum has been annually expended for the importation of this article from the United States, the necessity for which will now, we hope, in a great measure be removed.

After having briefly stated what we understood to be the fact with respect to the Libel cases, against the Editor of the Canadian Freeman, we were led to believe that we should not have occasion to refer to the subject again. But when we see the Canadian Freeman in attempting to vindicate his conduct, commencing a most unjustifiable attack upon us, we feel ourselves under the necessity of repelling assertions which he has thought proper to make, altogether at variance with truth. The coarse and abusive language of the Freeman, we have been so long accustomed to, that we are not at all surprised at it—the epithets he pleases to attach to us, as well as to every other person with whom he happens to differ, cannot give us the least annoyance—but when he carries that "irritation," which he says, makes him, as "bold as a Lion," so far, as to accuse us of being actuated by feelings of indignation and revenge, we feel that it is due to the public, that we should notice such assertions in the manner they deserve. The Freeman would have it believed, that we were on the Grand Jury during the last Assizes, and took advantage of our situation to gratify a feeling of revenge against him—to this it is sufficient to answer, that we were not on the Grand Jury. As to the indignation of which we are accused, whatever our feelings may be in this respect, we believe they are the same as those which actuate every reasonable mind, calling forth the expression of honest indignation against that licentiousness which has but too strongly marked the conduct of some of our Public Journals, who not satisfied with a manly opposition against measures, supported by reason and argument, have wandered far, very far into the paths of personal abuse against men, which casts neither reason or argument to utter. As to revenge, we utterly disclaim any such feeling, either against the Freeman, or any one else. In the discussion of any question we feel it quite unnecessary to suffer so diabolical a passion to have any share or influence and if the Freeman feels it important to his defence to make such charges against us, we can only say that his defence must be a very lame one.—We think he had better rely on some other and more substantial grounds, than bringing forward accusations, which must result to his own disadvantage.

It being our intention, with the first number of our next volume to make a change in the arrangement of our paper, by publishing the Loyalist, on a separate sheet, we beg leave to request that our Agents in different parts of the Country will favor us with Lists of those persons who may be disposed to continue, or add their names to our Subscription List, under the proposed new arrangement.

The paper will be published on a Royal Sheet—quarto, affording us a greater space for news and other matter, than our present limits will admit.

Arrears of Subscriptions are requested, before commencing the new volume.

CELEBRATION OF HIS MAJESTY'S BIRTH DAY.—Tuesday last being the day appointed for Commemorating the Birth of His Majesty King George the Fourth, the troops in the Garrison, with Capt. Bethune's Troop of Dragoons, paraded in front of the Market Square. A Royal Salute was fired by the Artillery, and a feu de joie by the 16th Regiment.

At an early hour we were exceedingly gratified with the novel and splendid sight of the vessels in commission, decorated with the innumerable flags appertaining to the pride and glory of Britain. At one o'clock a royal salute was fired from guns placed near the residence of Commodore Barrie, and from the vessels moored near the Commodore's wharf. A feu de joie was also fired by the marines. The effect of the whole was exceedingly fine, and inspired the sons of Britain with feelings of the proudest exultation.—Kingston Chronicle.

Fatal Accident by fire.—A daughter of Mr. Mallen, of Hamilton, aged about seven years, was burned so shockingly from her clothes having been set on fire by the influence of the flames on Saturday last, that she died on the following Monday.—Gore Gazette.

Communication.

For the U. E. Loyalist.

MR. EDITOR,

Allow me through the medium of your paper, to inform the public, that what Alpha has written concerning me in the Colonial Advocate of the 20th instant, is unfounded and false!—and I defy him to prove what he has so wickedly insinuated against me, which is only the malicious invention of some cowardly enemy to endeavour to injure me in the public estimation—and I again assure that public, that I am not pledged to any particular party, and am determined to keep aloof from every thing like what has been alledged against me, and I entirely disclaim having any thing more to do with M. Ruttan in offering myself as a Candidate, further than in considering him as one, among my numerous friends, who have come voluntarily forward, and offered me their support at the ensuing Election.

AGRICULTURAL.

Mangel Wurtzel Seed.—Time of Sowing, months of April and May.—Prepare a plot or field, as for turnips or potatoes; open two drills with the plough, two feet apart, and put in a sufficient quantity of dung, according to the ground; then cover the dung with the double mould board plough once, or the single plough twice, by riding them up as high as can be well done, with a man shovelling between the drills right and left, smoothing the surface of the ridge above the dung, which will leave a space of ten or twelve inches broad. This complete method of fallowing will repay the trouble of shovelling, by raising a full proportion of earth under the roots.—After sowing, it should be well rolled, which completes the whole process. The crop to be afterwards treated the same as that of turnips or potatoes, by putting and taking off mould, &c. After the roots have been raised, the ground is in a remarkable fine situation for wheat or any other crop. Soak the seed in pond or rain water, previous to sowing.

USE.—Almost all kinds of animals eat the leaves and roots, with great avidity. But are particularly good for feeding swine, and are not less eagerly devoured than corn. They are excellent for milch cows, and possess the quality of making them give a large quantity of the best flavored milk. They are said to be equally useful for fattening cattle.

PARCHMENT DEEDS,
For Sale at the Gazette Office, York,
WITH AND WITHOUT BAR OF DOWER,

NEATLY PRINTED, from a revised form—a constant supply will be kept on hand. Price—Single Deed 2s. 6d. or 25s. per dozen. Memorials on paper, 7½d. each, or 6s. per dozen.

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 25s. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings, Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27s. 6d. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly—They are offered for sale at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that the Wares by no means so liable to crack, as the Car , or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—having, as he thinks, clearly shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily ne and consumption—both good and cheap, in d of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices A. ARCHD. McDONELL.

Kingston, 14th March, 1828.

☞ Reference may be made to John Kirby, Esq. John Macaulay, Esq. Kingston, and Robert Stanton, Esq. York. 48tf.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them most productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 18th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim, and in particular the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavours will be to promote the comfort of passengers; and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted detention at the ports of Passage, until a vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

To IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canal, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or —— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

THE U. E. LOYALIST.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1828. NO. 60.

A SPEECH, of the VENERABLE JOHN STRACHAN, D.D. Archdeacon of York, in the Legislative Council, Thursday, 6th March, 1828: on the subject of the Clergy Reserves.

But I am accused of being an apostate from the Kirk of Scotland.—Were this true, I need not be ashamed of doing what Archbishops Tillotson and Secker, and Bishop Butler have done before me, but my case is exactly this.—My mother belonged to the relief denomination, and was peculiarly mild in her religious opinions. My Father was attached to the non Jurants, and although he went occasionally with my mother, he was a frequent hearer of the late Bishop Skinner, to whose Church he was in the habit of carrying me—he died when I was very young, but not before his mind was impressed in favour of Episcopacy, and impressive circumstances separated me from my mother, who nevertheless lived to bless me on taking orders in the Church of England. My religious principles were well grounded at a very early period, but I readily confess that in respect to Church Government they were sufficiently vague and uninformed, for in this important subject my attention was never particularly drawn till I came to this country, when my Venerated friend the late Dr. Stewart of Kingston, urged me to enter the Church, and I never yet conceived, in the darkest season, whom I loved as a father, admitted me to the altar a little before I went to Quebec to take Holy Orders in 1799. Before I had determined to enter the Church of England I was inducted by the advice of another friend, the late Mr. Cartwright, a name dear to this Province, to make some inquiry respecting the Presbyterian Church of Canada then vacant. I did so—friends of a friend, under the seal of confidence, to make them. His answer was that Mr. Somerville had been appointed, and having thanked him for his trouble, I never thought of the matter. Not so this friend, for he has not only kept my letter twenty-five years, but he brings it out in the midst of this controversy, for the purpose of injuring me, and shewing, perhaps, though he is not aware, that I been living in the habits of friendly intercourse, and interchange of good offices for thirty years. Such are the baneful consequences of religious controversy.

But if any shall infer from the friendship I have always shewn to the Kirk of Scotland, and my moderation in the present controversy, that I am lukewarm in the cause of the Established Church, or that I want decision and fortitude to avow my principles, they will find themselves egregiously mistaken. In private life I shall continue kind to every one around me, and administer, but in supporting the just rights of the Established Church I shall proceed boldly and fearlessly, and spurn as I have hitherto done, that cold calculating selfish prudence which would deter me from standing up in her defence.

Neither the Clergy of the Church of England nor of the Church of Scotland, nor any Clergy of Alexander Fisher, at Mr. Proudfoot's Store Presbyterian Church of Canada, have any right to any thing from the Mother Country. That to obtain so desirable a measure, a respectful representation be made to the Imperial Parliament, and recommending that the Clergy Reserves be sold and applied as above stated, and that in future there should be the same Lands, instead of one-seventh part in each Township, as directed by the previous proceedings of the House, the reason for this resolution appeared to have been the obstacle formed by the Clergy Reserves against improvements and compactness of settlement, but not a doubt is expressed as to the Church to which the Reserves belong, nor a suggestion offered that the proceeds of the sales recommended, could be appropriated to any other purpose than that for which they were originally granted.

That in 1819 a law was passed, taxing Lands for the construction of roads; and as the unleased Clergy Reserves did not contribute any thing towards the accomplishment of a benevolent object, because they were still considered in the Crown, some persons began again to complain that they obstructed improvements, and interrupted communications. There was undoubtedly some foundation for this complaint; but the Land-holders who made it, and who considered it unjust, that such Lands should be exempted entirely from TAX, went no further than to require that by the Law should include all such reserves as were placed on public roads. To divide them among all Sects, or to divest them from their original destination, was not yet imagined. On the contrary, most persons considered the provisions wise; and many said, that since no quit rent was exacted in Canada, as in other Colonies, any temporary obstruction produced by the Clergy Reserves ought to be cheerfully borne. It was not until 1822 that the friends of the Church of Scotland began to speak of the claim of their Ministers, at that time no more than four in number, to a share of the Reserves, but not sufficiently loud to command attention. The claim was considered to proceed from a disappointment which they had met with in an application to Government for salaries to their Ministers. It was, however, understood, that representations had been sent home to His Majesty's Government, and to the General Assembly, by the Scotch Ministers in both Provinces, claiming a share of the Reserves as a branch of one of the National Churches, and supporting the claim under a supposed ambiguity of the phrase in the Act, "a Protestant Clergy."

Hitherto, no proceedings of any moment respecting the Clergy Reserves, had taken place in the Legislature of this Province. But in the session of 1823 and '24, the subject was introduced into the House of Assembly by the members belonging to the Kirk of Scotland. After some discussion, that House adopted five Resolutions, which I beg leave to read:—

Resolved—That when the Kingdoms of England and Scotland were united, the Subjects of both were placed on the same footing of reciprocity, and were to enjoy a full communication of every right privilege, and advantage, and that neither the Church of one nor the other thereby gained ascendency—on the contrary, that both were established by law as National Protestant Churches within their respective Kingdoms, and consequently the Clergy of both are equally entitled to a participation in the advantages which have resulted, or may hereafter result from the said union.

Resolved.—That the Provinces of Canada were annexed from the Crown of France, by the united exertions of Great Britain and Ireland, and that the Churches of England and Scotland had at the Conquest, an equal claim to enjoy the privileges which might be derived from the said Conquest.

Resolved.—That by the Act of the British Parliament, passed in the 31st year of His Majesty's Reign, The Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, was authorised to set apart a portion of one-seventh of the Lands for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy.

Resolved.—That if His late Majesty, when he graciously authorised an appropriation of land for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy in this Province, did not contemplate a provision for the Clergy of the Church of Scotland, that they ought now to come under His Majesty's most favorable consideration, by being otherwise provided for.

Resolved.—That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty, founded on the foregoing Resolutions, praying that His Majesty will be graciously pleased to direct such measures as will secure to the Clergy of the Church of Scotland residing, or who may hereafter reside in this Province, such support and maintenance as His Majesty shall think proper.

These Resolutions were sent up to this Honourable House for its concurrence; and, after a long and serious debate, they were rejected. Had it not been for the first and second there would have been no dispute in regard to the fifth. For I believe that it was the wish of every Member, that a respectable provision should be made for the Ministers of so respectable a body as the Church of Scotland. I well recollect my regret at finding myself compelled to oppose the Resolutions, and to vote with the majority on the two first, and which are not only weak and unsatisfactory, but had, in truth, no bearing upon the subject, and could not, by any possibility, assist in obtaining the prayer contained in the fifth. The reason assigned respecting the Union, are manifestly at variance with fact; and the Resolution founded upon the Conquest, totally inconclusive, and entirely set aside by the express provision for the extension of the Scottish Law. The expression in the third Resolution, seems to imply that a provision was made by the 31st of the King, which is altogether groundless. They never supposed any such thing; for such an opinion is here first put into the field. But although these two first were not considered necessary in by this House yet an Address founded upon them was adopted in the House of Assembly, and transmitted through His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to His Majesty's Government, of which the following is the conclusion. "We humbly entreat Your Majesty's consideration of the subject; and if, in the legal construction of the Act, it is considered that a provision for the Clergy of the Church of Scotland was contemplated thereby, we would most earnestly and respectfully express to Your Majesty our hope, that Your Majesty will be graciously pleased to extend to them Your Royal protection and consideration, by directing such provision to be made for their maintenance and support, as to Your Majesty may appear proper. That Your Majesty may long Reign in the confidence and affection of all your subjects, to guard and secure their rights is most persons considered the provisions wise; and most persons considered the provisions wise; and many said, that since no quit rent was exacted in Canada, as in other Colonies, any temporary obstruction produced by the Clergy Reserves ought to be cheerfully borne. HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to these Reserves, as may render them most productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 18th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having afforded any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim, and in particular the back rent due upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that, with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

TWO EMIGRANTS, who are desirous of sending to England, Ireland, or Scotland for their friends. PACKETS, for steerage passengers only, to sail on the 5th and 20th of every month, from Liverpool for New-York.

The Ships composing this Line, are all of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very lofty between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavours will be to promote the comfort of passengers; and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted detention at the ports of Passage, until a vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command such a preference and support as will insure its continuance and success.

To IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canal, by which is secured the readiest and cheapest conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

Those who wish to send for their Friends, can procure them a safe and expeditious passage, by applying to William Gamble, Esq. York; John Macaulay, Esquire, Kingston; or —— Morris, Esquire, Brockville, Upper Canada.

VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1828. NO. 60.

But I am accused of being an apostate from the Kirk of Scotland.—Were this true, I need not be ashamed of doing what Archbishops Tillotson and Secker, and Bishop Butler have done before me, but my case is exactly this.—My mother belonged to the relief denomination, and was peculiarly mild in her religious opinions. My Father was attached to the non Jurants, and although he went occasionally with my mother, he was a frequent hearer of the late Bishop Skinner, to whose Church he was in the habit of carrying me—he died when I was very young, but not before his mind was impressed in favour of Episcopacy, and impressive circumstances separated me from my mother, who nevertheless lived to bless me on taking orders in the Church of England. My religious principles were well grounded at a very early period, but I readily confess that in respect to Church Government they were sufficiently vague and uninformed, for in this important subject my attention was never particularly drawn till I came to this country, when my Venerated friend the late Dr. Stewart of Kingston, urged me to enter the Church, and I never yet conceived, in the darkest season, whom I loved as a father, admitted me to the altar a little before I went to Quebec to take Holy Orders in 1799. Before I had determined to enter the Church of England I was inducted by the advice of another friend, the late Mr. Cartwright, a name dear to this Province, to make some inquiry respecting the Presbyterian Church of Canada then vacant. I did so—friends of a friend, under the seal of confidence, to make them. His answer was that Mr. Somerville had been appointed, and having thanked him for his trouble, I never thought of the matter. Not so this friend, for he has not only kept my letter twenty-five years, but he brings it out in the midst of this controversy, for the purpose of injuring me, and shewing, perhaps, though he is not aware, that I been living in the habits of friendly intercourse, and interchange of good offices for thirty years. Such are the baneful consequences of religious controversy.

But if any shall infer from the friendship I have always shewn to the Kirk of Scotland, and my moderation in the present controversy, that I am lukewarm in the cause of the Established Church, or that I want decision and fortitude to avow my principles, they will find themselves egregiously mistaken. In private life I shall continue kind to every one around me, and administer, but in supporting the just rights of the Established Church I shall proceed boldly and fearlessly, and spurn as I have hitherto done, that cold calculating selfish prudence which would deter me from standing up in her defence.

Neither the Clergy of the Church of England nor of the Church of Scotland, nor any Clergy of Alexander Fisher, at Mr. Proudfoot's Store Presbyterian Church of Canada, have any right to any thing from the Mother Country. That to obtain so desirable a measure, a respectful representation be made to the Imperial Parliament, and recommending that the Clergy Reserves be sold and applied as above stated, and that in future there should be the same Lands, instead of one-seventh part in each Township, as directed by the previous proceedings of the House, the reason for this resolution appeared to have been the obstacle formed by the Clergy Reserves against improvements and compactness of settlement, but not a doubt is expressed as to the Church to which the Reserves belong, nor a suggestion offered that the proceeds of the sales recommended, could be appropriated to any other purpose than that for which they were originally granted.

That in 1819 a law was passed, taxing Lands for the construction of roads; and as the unleased Clergy Reserves did not contribute any thing towards the accomplishment of a benevolent object, because they were still considered in the Crown, some persons began again to complain that they obstructed improvements, and interrupted communications. There was undoubtedly some foundation for this complaint; but the Land-holders who made it, and who considered it unjust, that such Lands should be exempted entirely from TAX, went no further than to require that by the Law should include all such reserves as were placed on public roads. To divide them among all Sects, or to divest them from their original destination, was not yet imagined. On the contrary, most persons considered the provisions wise; and many said, that since no quit rent was exacted in Canada, as in other Colonies, any temporary obstruction produced by the Clergy Reserves ought to be cheerfully borne. It was not until 1822 that the friends of the Church of Scotland began to speak of the claim of their Ministers, at that time no more than four in number, to a share of the Reserves, but not sufficiently loud to command attention. The claim was considered to proceed from a disappointment which they had met with in an application to Government for salaries to their Ministers. It was, however, understood, that representations had been sent home to His Majesty's Government, and to the General Assembly, by the Scotch Ministers in both Provinces, claiming a share of the Reserves as a branch of one of the National Churches, and supporting the claim under a supposed ambiguity of the phrase in the Act, "a Protestant Clergy."

Hitherto, no proceedings of any moment respecting the Clergy Reserves, had taken place in the Legislature of this Province. But in the session of 1823 and '24, the subject was introduced into the House of Assembly by the members belonging to the Kirk of Scotland. After some discussion, that House adopted five Resolutions, which I beg leave to read:—

Resolved—That when the Kingdoms of England and Scotland were united, the Subjects of both were placed on the same footing of reciprocity, and were to enjoy a full communication of every right privilege, and advantage, and that neither the Church of one nor the other thereby gained ascendency—on the contrary, that both were established by law as National Protestant Churches within their respective Kingdoms, and consequently the Clergy of both are equally entitled to a participation in the advantages which have resulted, or may hereafter result from the said union.

Resolved.—That the Provinces of Canada were annexed from the Crown of France, by the united exertions of Great Britain and Ireland, and that the Churches of England and Scotland had at the Conquest, an equal claim to enjoy the privileges which might be derived from the said Conquest.

Resolved.—That by the Act of the British Parliament, passed in the 31st year of His Majesty's Reign, The Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or person administering the Government of this Province, was authorised to set apart a portion of one-seventh of the Lands for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy.

Resolved.—That if His late Majesty, when he graciously authorised an appropriation of land for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy in this Province, did not contemplate a provision for the Clergy of the Church of Scotland, that they ought now to come under His Majesty's most favorable consideration, by being otherwise provided for.

Resolved.—That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty, founded on the foregoing Resolutions, praying that His Majesty will be graciously pleased to direct such measures as will secure to the Clergy of the Church of Scotland residing, or who may hereafter reside in this Province, such support and maintenance as His Majesty shall think proper.

These Resolutions were sent up to this Honourable House for its concurrence; and, after a long and serious debate, they were rejected. Had it not been for the first and second there would have been no dispute in regard to the fifth. For I believe that it was the wish of every Member, that a respectable provision should be made for the Ministers of so respectable a body as the Church of Scotland. I well recollect my regret at finding myself compelled to oppose the Resolutions, and to vote with the majority on the two first, and which are not only weak and unsatisfactory, but had, in truth, no bearing upon the subject, and could not, by any possibility, assist in obtaining the prayer contained in the fifth. The reason assigned respecting the Union, are manifestly at variance with fact; and the Resolution founded upon the Conquest, totally inconclusive, and entirely set aside by the express provision for the extension of the Scottish Law. The expression in the third Resolution, seems to imply that a provision was made by the 31st of the King, which is altogether groundless. They never supposed any such thing; for such an opinion is here first put into the field. But although these two first were not considered necessary in by this House yet an Address founded upon them was adopted in the House of Assembly, and transmitted through His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to His Majesty's Government, of which the following is the conclusion. "We humbly entreat Your Majesty's consideration of the subject; and if, in the legal construction of the Act, it is considered that a provision for the Clergy of the Church of Scotland was contemplated thereby, we would most earnestly and respectfully express to Your Majesty our hope, that Your Majesty will be graciously pleased to extend to them Your Royal protection and consideration, by directing such provision to be made for their maintenance and support, as to Your Majesty may appear proper. That Your Majesty may long Reign in the confidence and affection of all your subjects, to guard and secure their rights is most persons considered the provisions wise; and most persons considered the provisions wise; and many said, that since no quit rent was exacted in Canada, as in other Colonies, any temporary obstruction produced by the Clergy Reserves ought to be cheerfully borne. It was not until 1822 that the friends of the Church of Scotland began to speak of the claim of their Ministers, at that time no more than four in number, to a share of the Reserves, but not sufficiently loud to command attention. That Your Majesty may long Reign in the confidence and affection of all your subjects, to guard and secure their rights as a branch of one of the National Churches, and in every portion of your widely extended dominions to the prosperity of Your Majesty's faithful subjects of Upper Canada."—It happened by a singular coincidence, that this Address reached His Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies early in 1824, about the same time with the memorial from the General Assembly, in consequence of the representations made by the Scotch Clergy residing in these Provinces, as I have already mentioned, which was similar in purport praying that some provision be made for their Missionaries in North America. Too prayer of this Memorial was promised to be granted upon the same condition as aid was granted to the Missionaries of the Church of England—namely, that His Majesty's Government had no objection to give assistance, but in the same manner as is done in England, through the Society for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts. Inquiry is made, whether such a Society exists in Scotland, and if not, what hope is there of such a Society being formed to assist with its funds the same object. I have reason to believe, that this answer was agreeable to the General Assembly; and that steps were immediately taken to organize a Society on the model of that in England, in order to satisfy the condition upon which the Grant was to be made. A partial Society was indeed immediately got up in the west of Scotland; but a National Society could alone answer the condition, and accordingly, arrangements were made to form one. Until this was done, it could not be expected that Government would give assistance, or proceed any farther in the matter; nor did it seem necessary to send any reply to the House of Assembly of this Province, pending these arrangements. But when every reason is believed, that the Society required would soon be established, and their Government would grant a sum of money to aid of its funds, and that it was the wish of both the General Assembly and Legislature of this Province, and insure its due and regular application. But the Common House of Assembly getting impatient, chose, on the 27th of February, 1826, to address His Majesty on the subject of the Clergy Reserves, and not confining themselves to a prayer for provision to the Mother Country of the Church of Scotland. The address prayed as follows:—"We further most represent, Most Gracious Sovereign, that the Lands set apart in this Province for the maintenance and support of a Protestant Clergy, ought not to be given to any one denomination of Protestants, to the exclusion of their Christian Brethren of other denominations, equally conscientious in their respective modes of worship, equally attached to the Throne, dutiful and loyal subjects, to the protection of Your Majesty's benign and liberal Government. We therefore humbly hope it will, in Your Majesty's wisdom, be deemed expedient and just, that not only the present Reserves, but that any funds arising from the sales thereof, should be devoted to the advancement of the Christian Religion generally, and the happiness of all Your Majesty's subjects, of whatever denomination; or if such application or distribution should be deemed inexpedient, that the profits arising from such appropriation should be applied to the purposes of education, and the general improvement of the Province." This address could not fail to excite astonishment, being so much at variance with the former; for here the vague expression, "all Protestant denominations," is substituted for the Kirk of Scotland. Now, to say nothing of the impracticability of such an appropriation, it is totally at variance with the British constitution, an essential part of which is an Established Church. But of this contradiction, no notice is taken in the answer, which contented itself to say that the appropriation of the Assembly, regarding an additional Reserve for the maintenance of a Protestant Clergy.

In June 1826, His Majesty's Government, agreeable to the Memorial of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and to the Address of the House of Assembly, founded on their Resolutions of December 1824, granted a provision for the Clergy of the Church of Scotland—not waiting, as was at first intended, either for the first adjustment of the claim made by the Scotch Clergy or for the formation and the establishment of a Society in Scotland for the propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts. I have reason to believe, that the Scotch Clergy themselves thought as I certainly think, King's Government thought as I certainly think, that a provision would set the question at rest, as far as regarded the Scotch Clergy. A provision was all they desired; and having obtained it, there was nothing more for them to do. They had to ask for no increase of the Reserves, which as yet yield little or nothing, was unreasonable, and was giving up a certainty for an uncertainty. I am, at the same time, willing to believe, that had the friends of the Scotch Church foreseen, as they easily might, for they were told that it would be the case, that the claim advanced by them in particular, as a branch of one of the National Churches, evidently set apart for the Established Church of England, would induce all the other Protestant denominations to claim an equal share, they would have hesitated before they made it—and yet, when I see their Advocates, without waiting for a reply, bringing forward the Resolutions of last Session of the Provincial Parliament, for the sale of the Reserves, I am at a loss what to think or believe. Had they been consistent in their object, they would have repeated the Address of 1823 till an answer had been elicited in fact, the prayer had been granted—and so soon afterwards promulgated in this Colony. Every body knows, that when an Address is not answered as soon as we expect, it is not unusual to renew it, nor is any change made in the request. But leaving this part of the subject, I think it just to remark, that the Church of England, through the whole contest, has been acting entirely on the defensive. She has never attacked others, but all Protestant denominations, have attacked her.—She has suffered all sorts of revilings without complaint, and her Clergy have borne the most atrocious calumnies with patient forbearance.—Such is the history of the progress of the opposition to the Clergy Reserves: and His Majesty's Government must see, that in giving way at all in a matter which till very recently was never agitated, they will not quiet expectations, but rather encourage discontent, unless they give way altogether, and leave the Church of England on a level with other denominations.

That the Church of England is, by law, the Established Church in this Province, will sufficiently appear from a very few observations.

Summary.

The Lord High Admiral has determined that the revenue cruisers shall, with all other portions of the naval force of the realm, be placed under his more immediate controul for the future. This measure must fail to be hailed by both officers and men belonging to this branch of our naval establishment, with great satisfaction.

Mr. Common Serjeant Denman and Mr. Sergeant Routh, it is said, are to have Silk Gowns.

The Emperor of Russia has conferred on Sir E. Codrington the Order of St. George; on Captain Curzon, the Order of St. Waldimir; and on Sir T. Fellowes and Captain Spencer, the Order of St. Anne. And the King of France has conferred on Sir E. Codrington the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Louis; on Captain Curzon & Captain Spencer, the Cross of the Order of St. Louis; and on Sir T. Fellowes, the Insignia of a Commander of the Legion of Honour.

By accounts from Lisbon to the 28th ult. we learn, that the Prince Regent had taken the oath to the charter on the 26th and that he had changed his ministry.

The King.—We have great satisfaction in being able to state that his Majesty is in the enjoyment of most excellenth health. Sir Henry Halford has seen the King within these two days; when he said that he never found his Majesty in the enjoyment of better health than at his present time.

The first report of the Finance Committee has made a favourable impression respecting the future utility of its labours.

The Battalions that compose the Brigh Army in Portugal will embark, towards the close of the present month, for their respective destinations—abroad and at home.

The Canadian Deputies arrived safe in Liverpool in the good ship Atlantic. Founds on the 19th, ult.

Chief Justice Campbell, of Upper Canada, arrived in town on Thursday, and has taken passage in the packet ship Brighton, which sails on the 1st of May, for London.—Albion.

The Reis Effendi has declared his regret at the conduct of the Greeks in his Manifesto, and protests that some of the most offensive passages in it are forgeries, whilst others have been misinterpreted by the Allies.

The negociations for peace between Russia and Persia, have been broken off, through the influence of Turkey, and hostilities were to recommence.

A Russian messenger, and one from France, arrived in London, and a Cabinet Council was held, on the 15th ult.

Advices were received at the Navy Office of the loss of the Transport Amelia, off Gibraltar, with all on board, containing many respectable young men, and amounting to 80 souls; and it is feared that other vessels had suffered in the same gale.

Silk Manufacture of England.—According to the statement of Mr. Huskisson, the Silk Manufacture of England now reaches the enormous sum of fourteen millions sterling per annum, and is consequently, after cotton, the greatest staple of the country.

Red Snow.—In Captain Parry's narrative, we find the following account:—

August 2d.—"In the course of this day's journey we met with a quantity of snow, tinged, to the depth of several inches, with some red colouring matter, of which a portion was preserved in a bottle for future examination. This circumstance recalled to our recollection our having frequently before, in the course of this journey, remarked that the loaded sledges, in passing over hard snow, left upon it a light rose coloured tint, which at the time, we attributed to the colouring matter being present out of the birch of which they were made. To-day, however, we observed that the runners of the boats, and even our own footsteps, exhibited the same appearance; and on watching it more narrowly afterwards, we found the same effect to be produced, in a greater or less degree, by heavy pressure on almost all the ice over which we passed, though a magnifying glass could detect nothing to give it this tinge. The colour of the red snow which we bottled, and which only occurred in two or three spots, appeared somewhat different from this, being rather a salmon than a rose colour; but both were so striking as to be the subject of constant remark."

We find it stated in the London Morning Herald of February 25, that the quantity of Porter brewed in London, by the ten principal brewers, in the last six months of 1828, was 611,592 barrels, while in the same period of 1827, it was only 518,120 barrels.

CHEAP TRAVELLING.—The Steam-Boat SANDUSKY, on the Hudson River, advertises in the New-York, papers, that she will carry passengers between New-York and Albany at ONE DOLLAR EACH and find them in board.—The distance between New-York and Albany is nearly the same as between Montreal and Quebec; and the Sandusky is a new boat, with excellent accommodations for passengers. The tow-boats running on the same rout, cary for the same amount.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FEB. 27.

Mr. HUME moved that an humble address be presented to His Majesty, praying that the House might be supplied with copies of the Acts of the Colonial Legislatures.

Mr. HUSKISSON said, that in many of the Colonies no copies were kept of any Acts of the Colonial Legislature, and Legislation had of late years gone on at a rapid rate. It would be therefore a work of infinite labor to supply copies of all the Acts passed. He proposed that where copies were not already in existence, written extracts of the most material parts should be supplied.

After a few words from Dr. LUSHINGTON, the motion was agreed to, with Mr. Huskisson's limitation.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT MANCHESTER

A dreadful catastrophe occurred at Manchester on the 29th February, by which many persons lost their lives. The number was not ascertained, when the packet sailed, but forty-seven dead bodies had been found.

It appears that the New Bailey Company was to launch a new flat from the yard, and that she would be full rigged for the occasion. The novelty of the circumstance caused a numerous company to assemble to witness the spectacle. The time appointed was one o'clock, an hour, at which a large proportion of the working classes of the town, consisting of men, boys and girls employed in the different factories are at leisure. A great number then succeded in getting on board the vessel, supposed not less than 400 or 500. Precisely at one o'clock she glided along the cradle to her destined element. As soon as she got into the water, it was observed that her position inclined to the right side; in a moment after she struck against the opposite bank, and then turned over on her right side, to the most striking deep into the water. The consequence of this sudden occurrence was, that nearly the whole of the individuals who crowded the decks were plunged into the water. The scene at this awful moment baffles all attempts at adequate description. The spectators appeared to be panic-struck, and alarm and terror were visibly depicted in every countenance.—On the river the groans and wailings of those who were drowning, and the cries of others for help, when struggling on the shore amidst the dense mass of persons immersed in the water, were lamentable in the extreme. Scores of men and boys were to be seen swimming to and from each shore, some bringing companions with them, whom they had great difficulty to save themselves from destruction, owing to the attempts made by drowning persons to lay hold of them for safety.'

When these painful sights presented themselves, many unhappy persons, unable to obtain assistance, were observed to disappear from the surface of the water. In a few moments the greater number had succeded in reaching the land; but very many, particularly boys and girls, who had sunk more than once to the bottom, the river, had become so feeble that they could hardly move, and others were dragged out apparently in a lifeless state. The two Misses Grime, so far shared the fate of other individuals on board, as to be thrown into the water, but, by the intrepid exertion of two young men, they were providentially rescued from destruction. Two flats were hauled, as soon as possible, near the capsized vessel, and men began immediately to drag for bodies which had sunk.—Notwithstanding the inclemency of the season, several men, who are good swimmers, stripped, and repeatedly dived into the water. In a short time, one dead body was pulled out, and in the space of an hour no less than thirty were discovered.

Among the number of persons taken to the New Quay Company's Yard, two, who, when dragged out of the river, were in a state of insensibility, were completely restored to life.

The London papers announce an improvement in the revenue for the present quarter, as compared with that of last year of two hundred thousand pounds.

Greek Slaves.—In the House, on the 5th of March, Sir R. Wilson wished to put a question to the right hon. Secretary for the Colonies, on the subject of a number of Greek Slaves which had been recently sent off by the Turks. He wished not to apply his question to any thing which took place previously to the battle of Navarin; but he understood that, since that affair, between 2000 and 3000 unfortunate Greeks had been seized as slaves, and sent to Alexandria. Such a transaction could not well have taken place without the consent of the Allied forces. He knew not what credit to attach to the rumour; and if it was false, it was right to give the right hon. gentleman an opportunity of contradicting it.

Mr. Secretary Peel said, that he should feel happy at being able to contradict the reports which had reached him from the Levant upon this subject, but he feared it was unfortunately too true that the Greek slaves had been carried from Navarin and its neighbourhood, into the possession of the Moreas, in the manner described by the hon. member. The fact was, that after the affair of Navarin, the Allied squadron was obliged to sail for Malta and other places, to repair the injury they had sustained in the conseqence was, that the blockade was interrupted, and the Pacha took the opportunity of sending off the transports and other vessels that remained, and in them the Greek slaves in question. He could, however, assure the House, that Government were most anxious to put an end to the practice, and had sent orders into the Mediterranean to intercept all vessels found engaged in it. (Hear,)

Sir R. Wilson said, that in the event of there being no war with Turkey, instructions might be sent out to the admiral on the station to prevent the possibility of the release of these slaves a matter of negociation.

Juvenile offenders.—In the House of Commons on the 6th of March a petition was presented by Mr. Dugdale, from the Magistrates of Warwick, stating the increase of crime in that county, and praying that the House would apply such remedies to check the evil, as in their judgment they might think effectual for that purpose. The Magistrates of that county, about ten years ago, founded an asylum for receiving juvenile offenders after conviction, and had succeded in preventing, when discharged from that asylum, many youths who had since become good members of society; but notwithstanding their efforts, crime was still increasing; and as an instance of that fact, the last year in the calendar for the county, there were one hundred and fifty persons, of whom not less than from 70 to 80 were mere boys. In a very able pamphlet, upon the subject, by Sir E. Wilmot, a magistrate of that county, the author attributed the increase of crime in some measure to the indiscriminate committing of boys, and suggested as a remedy the propriety of giving power to two or three magistrates to punish boys in a summary manner for certain ofences.

In the 5th of March the Recorder of London made a report of forty-three prisoners under sentence of death in Newgate.

Foreign Intelligence.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY.

From the London Courier of March 15.

A Russian Messenger and a French one arrived this morning. A cabinet council was held to-day, and was sitting when our paper went to press.—There are, as was to be expected, various rumours in the city: none of them deserving any attention. The week is closing upon us, and leaves us in a state of great anxiety for the next arrivals from that which, if not already become the seat of war, is likely to become so immediately. The Russians, after crossing the Pruth, are expected to stretch along the south bank of the Danube, and thus prevent the Turks from drawing supplies, or oppressing the inhabitants of Moldavia and Wallachia.—The Turks will confine themselves to the southern bank of the Danube. Meanwhile a report prevails, and is circulated with great confidence, that the Reis Effendi had, some time ago, but after the departure of the allied ambassadors, a conference with the ambassador of the Netherlands, in which he expressed his regret at their departure, particularly Mr. Stratford Canning's, who might have been the channel of re-opening a communication with Russia, and of whose return he was very desirous.

From the regret and surprise expressed by the Porte at the manner in which its manifesto has been viewed by foreign powers, it is inferred that the Divan is inclined to yield. But Russia would now exact considerable sacrifices, particularly as, in addition to the offensive manifesto, she charges Turkey with having excited Persia to make war, and recently with having instigated her to refuse ratifying the treaty of peace. The letters from Vienna impute the conduct of the Porte to the belief, that not only she would be seconded by Persia in a war against Russia, but that discord would dissolve the alliance between Russia, Great Britain and France

In this situation, the week closes upon us—Russia has taken her determination to avenge her own wrongs, and to make war against Turkey upon her own account. And the first intelligence made the next week will usher in, will probably be the passage of the Pruth.

In the mean time, the intentions of the allied powers respecting Greece will be carried into effect. France has determined to send troops and artillery; and the extracts we made yesterday from the Paris papers informed us, that several regiments had actually reached Toulon, where ships were ready to receive them, and proceed on a great military force. Turkey will not be able to spare a large land force for operations in Greece. Her whole attention must be directed to the Danube; besides the Russian Squadron in the Mediterranean will, most probably, be employed in operations on the coast of Anatolia, and thus occupy the attention of the Turks in that quarter.

From the Monitteur.

PARIS, March 13.—The news which has been received to-day from St. Petersburgh, justifies the apprehensions which were naturally conceived on the effect which the Turkish manifesto would excite in that capital. This document, whatever name it may have been celled, has been considered by the Russian Cabinet as a real declaration of war. The answer was given as repeated acts of hostility accompanied the publication of it. The Bosphorus entirely closed against navigation—Russian vessels confiscated—the influence of the Porte easily recognized in the rupture of a treaty which Russia was on the point of concluding with Persia—the losses sustained by Odessa, so many causes of complaint did not permit Russia again to refuse to declare the consequence was, that the moderation. We must, therefore, expect shortly to receive official notice of the passage of the Pruth by the Russian army, and of the occupation of the Principalities. It is affirmed, that orders have been given for the army to commence its march on the 12th of April

It is still difficult to foresee what may be the consequences with respect to the treaty of the 6th of July, of a determination which the provocations all directly proceeding from the Porte seem to render more particular to Russia. The conferences at London still continue, but their object does not seem to seek for means to maintain the bond which the Porte endeavours to break, and to make the occupation of the principalities, which it has rendered inevitable, co-ordinate with the treaty which it may appear proper to take simultaneously on the side of the Morea and the Archipelago. The Russian Cabinet has given reason to believe, by the sacrifices which it has hitherto made to the common cause, that it will co-operate sincerely to maintain a conformity of views and action, which circumstances, more imperious than unforeseen, have alone induced it to anticipate on its own part.

If this harmony, of which nothing yet indicates the interruption, should continue to direct the measures which have either side to attain the common object, the tranquility of Europe might be guaranteed; for it would be difficult to believe that the Porte would still persist in braving the demonstrations which the European alliances would render so formidable by its union. The union is desirable for all parties, especially for the Porte. Sensible, at length, to the danger of its situation, it must not wish to anticipate on its own part. The question, both for it and the peace of Europe, is to be decided between the Pruth and the Danube.

After the passage of the Pruth, the Porte will, doubtless, consider the employment of force evidence of danger, and the necessity of its submission, as well to the proposals of the 6th of July as to the conditions of the treaty of Akerman, which remain to be fulfilled. It is upon the basis of the treaties that we must wish that satisfaction may be obtained, for too many complicated questions would be met with by all parties upon the other side of that river, on the ruins of the Ottoman empire.

The same letters announce, that the treaty between Persia and Russia has not been signed, and that hostilities were going to recommence.

The Russian army, at the moment of passing the Pruth, is abundantly supplied with all necessary resources.

LATE AND IMPORTANT FROM ENGLAND.

The Ship Hamilton, Bunker, 31 days from Liverpool, arrived this morning: sailed on the 26th March. The Editors of the Commercial Advertiser are indebted to Captain Bunker for regular files of London and Liverpool papers—the former to the 24th of March, the latter to the 26th, both inclusive.

The King of England continues to enjoy excellent health. He gave a dinner party on the 21st of March.

The New Times of the 20th March, mentions that a rumor prevailed at the west end the day before, that the Duke of Wellington would proceed immediately to Russia, to confer with the Emperor on the affairs of the East. The same paper adds that there is no instance of such a step having been taken by a Prime Minister but the Mission of Lord Castlereagh, in 1814, was in some measure analogous.

The Paris papers of March 18, state that the Government are endeavoring to hire 100 Merchantmen at Marseilles, as transports; it is not known whether for the expedition to Greece, or to Algiers. A detachment of Artillery left Toulon for Toulouse on the 14th March. The soldiers were eager for their departure, and in high spirits.

Corn Laws.—In the House of Lords on the 20th March the Duke of Wellington gave notice that he should introduce certain measures relating to the Corn Laws, on the 28th March.

London, March 24.—The stock of Foreign Wheat is very low. There has been a petition handed round this day, and generally signed praying that a clause be introduced into the new Corn Bill, to permit the wheat in bond to be converted into flour for the use of the Colonies. Average price of wheat, for the week up to the 21st of March, 52s. 4d.

The "Town of Liverpool," Steam-Boat from Waterford for Liverpool, was wrecked on the 19th of March, near the Light House of the latter Port; crew, passengers, and a part of the cargo saved.

In the House of Commons on the evening of the 22d March, Sir R. Wilson asked if it was intended to sustain the treaty of the sixth July, and whether had been any orders to prevent provisions being sent to the Turkish stations in the Morea? Mr. Secretary Peel said there was no change in the views of the Government as to the treaty, and no notice had been received of any change in the Russian relations, or of any declaration of war by Russia against Turkey. When such intelligence arrived, it would be time enough to state the views of Government.. The instructions respecting the Morea continued, and the attention of the Government was called to them.

In addition to the above extracts, the Times of March 24th, announces the Gazette de France of the 22nd by Express. It has brought accounts from Bucharest, (the Capital of Wallachia,) to the last of February, at which period the Russians had not crossed the Pruth, for such an event could not have taken place without being almost immediately known in that Capital, and these accounts are wholly silent upon the subject. It would even appear, from general impressions at that place, which is too deeply interested in the issue not to procure the best information on a point of such high importance, was, that peace would not be broken.

A last effort is said to have been made by the Allied Courts in their conferences with the Russian and French Ambassadors, and Lord Dudley, in London, a courier is said to have been sent to Constantinople, with a fresh application in behalf of Greece, and with an understanding that no "Executive" measures would be adopted against the Porte till the answer of the Divan should have been received. This is giving us a strong proof of the pacific sentiments of Russia, who, though suffering severely in one great branch of her trade, by the closing of the Bosphorus, was willing to postpone an appeal to arms, at a moment when it would be decisive. It is also stated, however, that the Reis Effendi had communicated to the European Ministers yet residing in Pera, that new negotiations were out of the question, while the Greeks refused to submit. Two months have been thus gained, but whether favorable to the Porte, or the Allies, seemed doubtful.

From Corfu, Feb. 10.—The Fort of Scio still made an obstinate resistance, on the 7th Feb. In a sally made by the Turks on the 23d of January, only 200 out of 1000 returned to the fort, and all their colors and principal Officers had fallen into the hands of the Victorious Greeks, who lost only forty men.—Augsburgh Gazette.

From the Liverpool Chronicle of March 26.

RUSSIA AND PERSIA.—Hostilities have again commenced between these two countries, in consequence, as it is said, of the latter powers having refused to ratify the late treaty, the provisions of which were so manifestly to her disadvantage.

Portugal.—The affairs of Portugal are at present objects of considerable importance.—There is not any positive intelligence of the Regent having entirely thrown off the mask; but the indications are strong, the wish and the animus are sufficiently apparent.

Warlike preparations.—The preparations of France, according to the Paris papers, are upon a larger scale than was at first imagined. Hence it has been conjectured, that she has some designs upon Egypt, which, we believe, we may safely & positively contradict. Neither troops, nor stores, nor artillery have yet sailed from Toulon, and it should seem as if both France and England waited for some reply to despatches sent off to the Russian government. Meanwhile Turkey is carrying on her defensive preparations.

LONDON, March 24.

Letters from Toulon say, that only 9,000 men would be sent to Greece, besides 6,000 English, the whole to be under the chief command of Marshal Marmont, in the same manner as Sir E. Codrington commands the naval force. Ships of 300 tons were in requisition to take in the troops and cavalry; but the demand is no longer made, because 20 to 25 franks per ton per month are asked, and for three months certain.

Advices have reached town this morning from Odessa down to the 29th ult. They continue to speak of the warlike preparations of both parties. Of sixty ships in port, thirty-three has already been freighted by the local government. The speeches of the King's of England and of France were known there, and were people, in consequence, believed that matters might still be amicably arranged.

INTELLIGENCE FROM LISBON.

Despatches have been received by Government from Sir Frederick Lamb and General Clinton, dated Lisbon 16th March. Don Miguel had entirely thrown off the mask, and dissolved both the Chambers. Lisbon was in a great ferment, and universal confusion and distress prevailed. The conduct of Sir Frederick Lamb was highly characteristic of the representative of the King of England. He denounced the mischievous conduct which Miguel was pursuing, and predicted, that, if persevered in, it would end in destruction to himself, and be productive of the most direful catastrophe.

The presence of our troops in Lisbon, and the fleet in the Tagus, are the only obstacles to Miguel's being proclaimed King. When Sir Frederick Lamb remonstrated with Miguel on the extravagance of his conduct and its pernicious tendency, he affected total ignorance of what was going on. His mother has a printing-press at the palace, from which she printed of a vast number of proclamations of an inflamatory nature, which were ready for distribution the moment an opportunity offered. Miguel denied any knowledge of these proceedings, but when our Ambassador pulled one out of his pocket, and asked Miguel if he could read that! his confusion was unspeakable. Sir Frederick Lamb then informed Miguel that he could no longer believe anything he said, and took his departure. He then invited all the Ambassadors to a conference, and explained to his proceedings, of which they all approved, with the exception of the French and Spanish Ambassadors, who left the conference. This speaks volumes, so far as France is concerned; but we shall not, at present, speculate upon what may, but what must be the consequence of such connivance.

Several nobles and public characters have left Lisbon, to escape the vengeance or cruelty of Miguel.

The U. E. Loyalist.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1828.

Our New-York papers furnish us with English dates to 26th March, ten days later than those previously received. The news which will be found under the proper head, is important; but notwithstanding the "note of preparation" which is heard throughout Europe, there seems yet to be some hope entertained, that its tranquility may not be disturbed.

Matters appear to have approached so near a crisis, that we cannot remain much longer, in a state of suspense, as to their issue.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, arrived in townfrom Stamford, on Wednesday last, and returned by the Canada, the following day.

ELECTION MEETINGS.—We Learn from the Gore Gazette that a Meeting was lately held at Hamilton, in the Gore District, for the purpose of investigating the public conduct of the Members for the County of Wentworth, and of nominating two fit persons to represent the County in the next Parliament.—Judge Taylor presided, and Mr. A. K. Smith acted as Secretary.—From the address of John Willson, Esquire, the Speaker of the House of Assembly, we shall take the liberty of making a few extracts.

"His first object had always been to protect the rights and liberties of the people; in the attainment of this object, he might possibly have sometimes erred, but he had always acted conscientiously.—There were rights and liberties belonging to each branch of the Legislature; the Executive, the Legislative Council, and the House of Assembly, each had its right, and sometimes from a want of due discrimination we might err in our judgment concerning the nature of those rights,—he however had never given up the rights of the people; that he had always taken care of; while he endeavored not to encroach upon the rights of others."

We would recommend the sentiments expressed in this extract, to the particular attention of those, by whose vote on a late occasion, two respectable and old servants of the Country were deprived of their liberty, for the want of that "due discrimination" of the rights of others, of which Mr. Willson speaks.

His remarks on the subject of Education are equally entitled to consideration, and are such as we have no doubt, will be concurred in by all who read them.

"One of the first objects of his attention after he went to Parliament, was the education of the people. He was the author of the first Bill, passed on that subject, and he had also been a supporter to another Bill since introduced, for a similar purpose.—He was always a friend to education, for he well knew that an unlearned, uninformed people, could never properly understand their political rights and duties; they might be jealous of their own, but they were apt to undervalue the rights of others, which it was also necessary to appreciate."

After entering into an explanation, relative to his conduct on various occasions in Parliament—Mr. Willson proceeds—

In all his efforts to serve the public, for the last 20 years—whatever others might have done, he had not abused the Government—he could support his cause, by the voice of the people, without descending to any vulgar abuse towards the Government of his country—and if he could not get along without doing that, he would not get along at all.—He attributed the little opposition which had been made upon him, and the falsehoods which had been circulated, and too generally believed against him —to the influence of an abandoned, unprincipled, and licentious Press.

That "others," should consider it necessary to the support of their cause, or that of the people, to descend to "vulgar abuse" towards the Government of the Country, may appear extraordinary, but those who have marked the progress of some of the Patriots of the present day, must be satisfied, that the expressions used by Mr. Willson, are not stronger than circumstances warrant, and it must be also obvious that his opinion on the subject of the Press, is equally warranted by facts.

Mr. Willson concluded the address by saying—

"He had made up his mind to retire from public life, and but for the circumstances before stated he should have done so, and should never have again asked the public for their suffrages—but after all that had been said and done against him, he had determined again to meet his constituents, to explain all the circumstances of his case, and to throw himself again upon their protection."

Mr. Hamilton, very briefly addressed the audience—he had frequently differed with Mr. Willson, particularly as to the Welland Canal, which he termed a "dry ditch"—the money laid out upon which, he looked upon as thrown away—but as he and Mr. Wilson usually agreed, he should always give him his support Mr. D. K. Serres proposed Elijah Secord, Esquire, as a fit person to represent the County, and some person named Mr. Durand.—

"After some altercation", says the Gore Gazette, "about the manner of proposing the different names, a division took place, and we are informed (for we were not then present ourselves), that a Majority of the persons present, was declared to be in favor of Messrs Willson and Hamilton—when the meeting was dissolved."

From the Resolutions passed at a Public Meeting of Freeholders in the London District, published in this day's paper, it will be seen that Mahlon Burwell, and James Hamilton, Esquires, are nominated for the County of Middlesex, represented at present, by Captain Matthews and Mr. Rolph.

From the County of Halton, we have the following from the Gore Gazette:—

"COUNTY OF HALTON.—We have heard the a Meeting was held some days ago, in the Township of Trafalgar, for the purpose of nominating suitable persons to represent this County in the ensuing Parliament, but we have not heard what was the result of the Meeting. The names of a number of Candidates for the honor of representing this County, are before the public; but as yet, no general expression of public opinion has come to our knowledge relating to them. From the opportunity which we have had of ascertaining the sentiments of many of the Electors, however, we should judge that there are few persons whose names are before the public, who have an equal chance of success, with Mr. JAMES CROOKS; and we feel assured there is no one possesses superior qualifications for discharging the Parliamentary duties.

From the very intemperate manner in which the Canadian Freeman has continued to conduct his Paper we have of late abstained as much as possible, from noticing those sallies of ill temper and abuse, with which his columns abound, week after week. Perfectly aware, from what we have already seen, that it is useless to expect any thing like moderation from the Freeman, we have contented ourselves, with correcting some misstatements in his paper. His remarks on the subject of the late Assizes, rendered this duty necessary on our parts—we contradicted his statement as to our being on the Grand Jury, and making our situation subservient to the base passion of revenge against the Editor of the Freeman.—The fact was simply stated by us, that we were not on the Grand Jury, and a denial, of what we trust there can be little occasion for our repeating—that however we might regret, in common with all who think properly on the subject, that he should feel it necessary, in conducting a public journal, to depart from those ordinary rules of temper and moderation, in his opposition to measures, by defaming men; we nevertheless felt nothing like revenge, towards the person, who, while he boastingly prides himself, of being as "bold as a Lion," in pursuing such an unjustifiable course, appears to be without any of the more generous qualities of that noble animal. The only feeling we can have indeed, towards such a person, is more allied to pity than revenge, conscious as we are that the bread which is earned by catering for the worst passions of mankind, by endeavouring to cause them to view all around them with suspicion and distrust, cannot be sweetened, by any pleasurable reflections, but must on the contrary be eaten in bitterness. The only reply, which it is found convenient to make to the remarks we offered, in contradiction of the statements we have alluded to, is a tissue of common place vulgarity, on the change we have announced, as being intended in the arrangement of our paper.

From the style and temper which has marked the conduct of the Canadian Freeman, we would ask—Can conduct such as this, be entitled to the dignified appellation of "The Liberty of the Press!" Is it not rather a perversion of the means and opportunity, which circumstances have placed in the hands of an individual, intended originally to promote the happiness of men, and good order in Society? Is it not rather The Tyranny of the Press—the converting an Engine, as beautiful as it is powerful, intended to promote the cause of virtue and morality, and for the diffusion of general and useful information among mankind, into a disgusting and loathsome Vehicle in which the worst passions, and the most deleterious poisons may find a place, for the purpose of distribution among the people, under the specious appearance of Patriotism, and in the disguise of friendship, proclaiming itself as the assertor and defender of their rights?

Let it not be supposed that in making these remarks, we are disposed to question the right, or propriety of discussion on public matters. On the contrary we are ready to admit, that this is one of the legitimate uses of the Press, and while it is carried on in a spirit of forbearance and moderation—while it allows it-

ting entirely on the defensive. She has never attacked others, but all Protestant denominations, have attacked her.—She has suffered all sorts of revilings without complaint, and the Clergy have borne the most atrocious calumnies with patient forbearance.—Such is the history of the progress of the opposition to the Clergy Reserves: and His Majesty's Government must see, that in giving way at all in a matter which till very recently was never agitated, they will not quiet expectations, but rather encourage discontent, unless they give way altogether, and leave the Church of England on a level with other denominations.

That the Church of England is, by law, the Established Church in this Province, will sufficiently appear from a very few observations.

Summary.

The Lord High Admiral has determined that the revenue cutisers shall, with all other portions of the naval force of the realm, be placed under his more immediate controul for the future. This measure cannot fail to be hailed by both officers and men belonging to this branch of our naval establishment, with great satisfaction.

Mr. Common Serjeant Denman and Mr. Sergeant Routh, it is said, are to have Silk Gowns.

The Emperor of Russia has conferred on Sir E. Codrington the Order of St. George; on Captain Curzon, the Order of St. Waldimir; and on Sir T. Fellowes and Captain Spencer, the Order of St. Anne. And the King of France has conferred on Sir E. Codrington the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Louis; on Captain Curzon & Captain Spencer, the Cross of the Order of St. Louis; and on Sir T. Fellowes, the Insignia of a Commander of the Legion of Honor.

By accounts from Lisbon to the 28th ult. we learn, that the Prince Regent had taken the oath to the charter on the 26th and that he had changed his ministry.

The King.—We have great satisfaction in being able to state that his Majesty is in the enjoyment of most excellenth health. Sir Henry Halford has seen the King within these two days; when he said that he never found his Majesty in the enjoyment of better health than at the present time.

The first report of the Finance Committee has made a favourable impression respecting the future utility of its labours.

The Battalions that compose the Brish Army in Portugal will embark, towards the close of the present month, for their respective destinations—abroad and at home.

The Canadian Deputies arrived safe in Liverpool in the good ship Atlantic. Funds on the 15th, 83¾

Chief Justice Campbell, of Upper Canada, arrived in town on Thursday, and has taken passage in the packet ship Brighton, which sails on the 1st of May, for London.—Albion.

The late Reis Effendi has declared his regret at the publication of the Turkish Manifesto, and protests that some of the most offensive passages in it are forgeries, whilst others have been misinterpreted by the Allies.

The negociations for peace between Russia and Persia, have been broken off, through the influence of Turkey, and hostilities were to recommence.

A Russian messenger, and one from France, arrived in London, and a Cabinet Council was held, on the 15th ult.

Advices were received at the Navy Office of the loss of the Transport Amelia, off Gibraltar, with all on board, containing many respectable young men, and amounting to 80 souls; and it is feared that other vessels had suffered in the same gale.

Silk Manufacture of England.—According to the statement of Mr. Huskisson, the Silk Manufacture of England now reaches the enormous sum of fourteen millions sterling per annum, and is consequently, after cotton, the greatest staple of the country.

Red Snow.—In Captain Parry's narrative, we find the following account:—

August 2d.—"In the course of this day's journey we met with a quantity of snow, tinged, to the depth of several inches, with some red colouring matter, of which a portion was preserved in a bottle for future examination. This circumstance recalled to our recollection our having frequently before, in the course of this journey, remarked that the loaded sledges, in passing over hard snow, left upon it a light rose coloured tint, which at the time, we attributed to the colouring matter being pressed out of the birch of which they were made. To-day, however, we observed that the runners of the boats, and even our own footsteps, exhibited the same appearance; and on watching it more narrowly afterwards, we found the same effect to be produced, in a greater or less degree, by heavy pressure on almost all the ice over which we passed, thougg a magnifying glass could detect nothing to give it this tinge. The colour of the red snow which we bottled, and which only occurred in two or three spots, appeared somewhat different from this, being rather a salmon than a rose colour; but both were so striking as to be the subject of constant remark."

We find it stated in the London Morning Herald of February 25, that the quantity of Porter brewed in London, by the ten principal brewers, in the last six months of 1826, was 611,592 barrels, while in the same period of 1827, it was only 518,130 barrels.

CHEAP TRAVELLING.—The Steam-Boat SANDUSKY, on the Hudson River, advertises in the New-York papers, that she will carry passengers between New-York and Albany at ONE DOLLAR EACH and find them in board.—The distance between New-York and Albany is nearly the same as between Montreal and Quebec; and the Sandusky is a new boat, with excellent accommodations for passengers. The towns-taxes arising on the same rout, cary for the same amount.

England.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Feb. 27.

Mr. HUME moved that an humble address be presented to His Majesty, praying that the House might be supplied with copies of the Acts of the Colonial Legislatures.

Mr. HUSKINSON said, that in many of the Colonies no copies were kept of any Acts of the Colonial Legislature, and the translation had of late years gone on at a rapid rate. It would be therefore a work of infinite labor to supply copies of all the Acts required. He proposed that where copies were not already in existence, written extracts of the most material parts should be supplied.

After a few words from Dr. LUSHINGTON, the motion was agreed to, with Mr. Huskisson's limitation.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT MANCHESTER.

A dreadful catastrophe occurred at Manchester on the 29th February, by which many persons lost their lives. The number was not ascertained, when the packet sailed, but forty-seven dead bodies had been found.

It appears that the New Quay Company was to launch a new flat from the yard, and that she would be full rigged for the occasion. The novelty of the circumstance caused a numerous company to assemble to witness the spectacle. The time appointed was one o'clock, an hour, at which a large proportion of the working classes of the town, consisting of men, boys and girls employed in the different factories are at leisure. A great number then succeeded in getting on board the vessel, supposed not less than three hundred. Precisely at one o'clock the flat glided along the cradle to her destined element. As soon as she got into the water, it was observed that her position inclined to the right side; in a moment after she struck against the opposite bank, and then turned over on her right side, her mast striking deep into the water. The consequence of this sudden occurrence was, that nearly the whole of the individuals who crowded the deck were plunged into the water. The scene at this awful moment baffles all attempts at adequate description. The spectators appeared to be panic-struck, and nothing but terror were visibly depicted in every countenance. In the river the groans and wailings of those who were drowning, and the cries of others for help, when struggling to gain the shore amidst the dense mass of human beings immersed in the water, were lamentable in the extreme. Scores of men and boys were to be seen swimming towards each shore, some bringing companions with them; whilst others had great difficulty to save themselves from destruction, owing to the attempts made by drowning persons to lay hold of them for safety.

When these painful sights presented themselves, many unhappy persons, unable to obtain assistance, were observed to disappear from the surface of the water. In a few moments the greater number had succeeded in reaching the land; but very many, particularly boys and girls, who had sunk more than once to the bottom of the river, had become so feeble that they could hardly move, and others were dragged out apparently in a lifeless state. The two Misses Grime, so far shared the fate of other individuals on board, as to be thrown into the water, but, by the intrepid exertion of two young men, they were providentially rescued from destruction. Two flats were hauled, as soon as possible, near the capsized vessel, and men began immediately to drag for bodies which had sunk.—Notwithstanding the inclemency of the season, several men, who are good swimmers, stripped, and repeatedly dived into the water. In a short time, one dead body was pulled out, and in the space of an hour no less than thirty were discovered.

Among the number of persons taken to the New Quay Company's Yard, two who, when dragged out of the river, were in a state of insensibility, were completely restored to life.

The London papers announce an improvement in the revenue for the present quarter, as compared with that of last year of two hundred thousand pounds.

Greek Slaves.—In the House, on the 5th of March, Sir R. Wilson wished to put a question to the right hon. Secretary for the Colonies, on the subject of a number of Greek Slaves which had been recently sent off by the Turks. He wished not to apply his question to any thing which took place previously to the battle of Navarin; but he understood that, since that affair, between 2000 and 3000 unfortunate Greeks had been seized as slaves, and sent to Alexandria. Such a transaction could not well have taken place without the consent of the Allied forces. He knew not what credit to attach to the rumour; and if it was false, it was right to give the right hon. gentleman an opportunity of contradicting it.

Mr. Secretary Huskisson said, he should feel happy at being able to contradict the reports which had reached him from the Levant upon this subject, but he feared it was unfortunately too true that the Greek slaves had been removed from Navarin and its neighbourhood, into the ports of the Morea; in the manner described by the hon. member. The fact was, that after the affair of Navarin, the Allied squadrons continued to sail for Malta and other places, to repair the injuries they had sustained. The consequence was, that the blockade was interrupted, and the Pacha took the opportunity of sending off the transports and other vessels that remained, and in them the Greek slaves in question. He could, however, assure the House, that Government were in most anxious to put an end to this traffic, and had sent orders into the Mediterranean to intercept all vessels found engaged in it. (Hear.)

Sir R. Wilson said, that in the event of there being no war with Turkey, instructions might be sent out to make the release of these slaves a matter of negociation.

Juvenile offenders.—In the House of Commons on the 26th of March a petition was presented by Mr. Dugdale, from the Magistrates of Warwick, stating the increase of crime in that county, and praying that the house would apply such remedies to check the evil, as their judgment they might think effectual for that purpose. The Magistrates of that county, about ten years ago, founded an asylum for receiving juvenile offenders after conviction, and had since that period discharged from that asylum, many youths who had become good members of society; but notwithstanding the principles, crime was still increasing; and as an instance of this, at the last Quarter Sessions for the county, there were one hundred and fifty persons, of whom not less than from 70 to 80 were mere boys. In a printed pamphlet, upon the subject, by Sir E. Wilmot, a magistrate of that county, the author attributed the increase of crime in some measure to the indiscriminate committing of boys, and suggested as a remedy the propriety of giving power to two or three magistrates to discharge boys in a summary manner for certain ofiences.

On the 5th of March the Recorder of London made a report of forty-three prisoners under sentence of death in Newgate.

Foreign Intelligence.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY.

From the London Courier of March 15.

A Russian Messenger and a French one arrived this morning. A cabinet council was held to-day, and was sitting when our paper went to press.—There are, as was to be expected, various rumours in the city; none of them deserving any attention. The week is closing upon us, and leaves us in a state of great anxiety for the next arrivals from that which, if not already become the seat of war, is likely to become so immediately. The Russians, after crossing the Pruth, are expected to stretch along the north bank of the Danube, and thus prevent the Turks from drawing supplies, or oppressing the inhabitants of Moldavia and Wallachia.—The Turks will confine themselves to the southern bank of the Danube. Meanwhile a report prevails, and is circulated with great confidence, that the Reis Effendi had, some time ago, but after the departure of the allied ambassadors, a conference with the ambassador of the Netherlands, in which he expressed his regret at their departure, particularly Mr. Stratford Canning's, who might have been the channel of re-opening a communication with Russia, and of whose return he was very desirous.

From the regret and surprise expressed by the Porte at the manner in which its manifesto has been viewed by foreign powers, it is inferred that the Divan is inclined to yield. But Russia would now exact considerable sacrifices, particularly as, in addition to the offensive manifesto, she charges Turkey with having excited Persia to make war, and recently with having instigated her to refuse ratifying the treaty of peace. The letters from Vienna impute the conduct of the Porte to the belief, that not only she would be seconded by Persia in a war against Russia, but that discord would dissolve the alliance between Russia, Great Britain and France.

In this situation, the week closes upon us.—Russia has taken her determination to avenge her own wrongs, and to make war against Turkey upon her own account. And the first intelligence which the next week will usher in, will probably be the passage of the Pruth.

In the mean time, the intentions of the allied powers respecting Greece will be carried into effect. France has determined to send troops and artillery; and the extracts we made yesterday, from the Paris papers informed us, that several regiments had actually reached Toulon, where ships were ready, and every preparation made for immediate embarkation. The amount of the troops is stated to be 12,000 men. The French Admiral's fleet credit to attach to the rumour; and if it was false, it was right to give the right hon. gentleman an opportunity of contradicting it.

Mr. Secretary Huskisson said, he should feel happy at being able to contradict the reports which had reached him from the Levant upon this subject, but he feared it was unfortunately too true that the Greek slaves had been removed from Navarin and its neighbourhood, into the ports of the Morea; in the manner described by the hon. member. The fact was, that after the affair of Navarin, the Allied squadrons continued to sail for Malta and other places, to repair the injuries they had sustained. The consequence was, that the blockade was interrupted, and the Pacha took the opportunity of sending off the transports and other vessels that remained, and in them the Greek slaves in question. He could, however, assure the House, that Government were most anxious to put an end to this traffic, and had sent orders into the Mediterranean to intercept all vessels found engaged in it. (Hear.)

Sir R. Wilson said, that in the event of there being no war with Turkey, instructions might be sent out to make the release of these slaves a matter of negociation.

Juvenile offenders.—In the House of Commons on the 26th of March a petition was presented by Mr. Dugdale, from the Magistrates of Warwick, stating the increase of crime in that county, and praying that the house would apply such remedies to check the evil, as their judgment they might think effectual for that purpose. The Magistrates of that county, about ten years ago, founded an asylum for receiving juvenile offenders after conviction, and had since that period discharged from that asylum, many youths who had become good members of society; but notwithstanding the principles, crime was still increasing; and as an instance of this, at the last Quarter Sessions for the county, there were one hundred and fifty persons, of whom not less than from 70 to 80 were mere boys. In a printed pamphlet, upon the subject, by Sir E. Wilmot, a magistrate of that county, the author attributed the increase of crime in some measure to the indiscriminate committing of boys, and suggested as a remedy the propriety of giving power to two or three magistrates to discharge boys in a summary manner for certain ofiences.

On the 5th of March the Recorder of London made a report of forty-three prisoners under sentence of death in Newgate.

Foreign Intelligence.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY.

From the London Courier of March 15.

A Russian Messenger and a French one arrived this morning. A cabinet council was held to-day, and was sitting when our paper went to press.—There are, as was to be expected, various rumours in the city; none of them deserving any attention. The week is closing upon us, and leaves us in a state of great anxiety for the next arrivals from that which, if not already become the seat of war, is likely to become so immediately. The Russians, after crossing the Pruth, are expected to stretch along the north bank of the Danube, and thus prevent the Turks from drawing supplies, or oppressing the inhabitants of Moldavia and Wallachia.—The Turks will confine themselves to the southern bank of the Danube. Meanwhile a report prevails, and is circulated with great confidence, that the Reis Effendi had, some time ago, but after the departure of the allied ambassadors, a conference with the ambassador of the Netherlands, in which he expressed his regret at their departure, particularly Mr. Stratford Canning's, who might have been the channel of re-opening a communication with Russia, and of whose return he was very desirous.

From the regret and surprise expressed by the Porte at the manner in which its manifesto has been viewed by foreign powers, it is inferred that the Divan is inclined to yield. But Russia would now exact considerable sacrifices, particularly as, in addition to the offensive manifesto, she charges Turkey with having excited Persia to make war, and recently with having instigated her to refuse ratifying the treaty of peace. The letters from Vienna impute the conduct of the Porte to the belief, that not only she would be seconded by Persia in a war against Russia, but that discord would dissolve the alliance between Russia, Great Britain and France.

In this situation, the week closes upon us.—Russia has taken her determination to avenge her own wrongs, and to make war against Turkey upon her own account. And the first intelligence which the next week will usher in, will probably be the passage of the Pruth.

In the mean time, the intentions of the allied powers respecting Greece will be carried into effect. France has determined to send troops and artillery; and the extracts we made yesterday, from the Paris papers informed us, that several regiments had actually reached Toulon, where ships were ready, and every preparation made for immediate embarkation. The amount of the troops is stated to be 12,000 men. The French Admiral's fleet will be strongly reinforced. Ours may be reinforced; but the report of the British intention of government to send all the British troops in Portugal to the Morea, is incorrect. Nor do we think that the pacification of Greece, and giving her a qualified independence, will require a great military force. Turkey will not be able to spare a large land force for operation in Greece. Her whole attention must be directed to the Danube; besides the Russian Squadrons in the Mediterranean will, most probably, be employed in operations on the coast of Anatolia, and thus occupy the attention of the Turks in that quarter.

From the Moniteur.

PARIS, March 13.—The news which has been received to-day from St. Petersburgh, justifies the apprehensions which were naturally conceived on the part which the Turkish manifesto would excite in that capital. This document, the real name it may have been called, has been considered by the Russian Cabinet as a real declaration of war, which the numerous and repeated acts of hostility accompanied the publication of it. The Diplomatic chorus entirely closed against navigation—Russian vessels confiscated—the influence of the Porte easily overcome—every thing, in short, announces the crises of Government. The instructions respecting the Morea continued, and the attention of the Admirals was called to them.

In addition to the above, the New Times of March 24th, contains the Gazette de France of the 22nd by Express. This paper brought accounts from Bucharest, (the Capital of Wallachia,) to the last of February, at which period the Russians had not crossed the Pruth. But again an event could not have taken place without being almost immediately known in that Capital, and these accounts are wholly silent upon the subject. It would seem seem that the general impressions at that place, which is too deeply interested in the issue not to procure the best information on a point of such high importance, was, that peace would not be broken.

A last effort is said to have been made by the Allies, and after some conferences between the Russian, French Ambassadors, and Lord Dudley, in London, a courier is said to have been sent to Constantinople, with a fresh application in behalf of Greece, and with an understanding that no "Executive" measures would be adopted against the Porte till the answer of the Divan could have been received. This is giving us a strong proof of the pacific sentiments of Russia, who, though suffering severely in one great branch of her trade, by the closing of the Bosphorus, was willing to appeal to arms, at a moment when it would be decisive. It is also stated, however, that the Reis Effendi had communicated to the European Ministers yet residing at Pera, that new negotiations were not of the question, while the Greeks refused to submit. After the passage of the Pruth, doubtless, consider more attentively the extent of danger, and the necessity of its submission, as well to the proposals of the 6th of July as to the stipulations of the treaty of Akerman, which remain to be fulfilled. It is upon this bands of the Porte that we must wish that satisfaction may be obtained, for too many complicated questions would be met with by all parties upon the other side of that river, on the ruins of the Ottoman empire.

The same letters announce, that the treaty between Persia and Russia has not been signed, and that hostilities were going to recommence.

The Russian army, at the moment of passing the Pruth, is abundantly supplied with all necessary resources.

LATE AND IMPORTANT FROM ENGLAND.

The Ship Hamilton, Bunker, 31 days from Liverpool, arrived this morning; sailed on the 26th March. The Editors of the Commercial Advertiser are indebted to Captain Bunker for regular files of London and Liverpool papers—the former to the 24th of March, the latter to the 26th, both inclusive.

The King of England continues to enjoy excellent health. He gave a dinner party on the 21st of March.

The New Times of the 20th March, mentions that a rumor prevailed at the west end the day before, that the Duke of Wellington would proceed immediately to Russia, to confer with the Emperor on the affairs of the East. The same paper adds that there is no instance of such a step having been taken by a Prime Minister; but the Mission of Lord Castlereagh, in 1814, was in some measure analogous.

The Paris papers of March 18, state that the Government are endeavoring to hire 100 Merchantmen at Marseilles, as transports; it is not known whether for the expedition to Greece, or to Algiers. A detachment of Artillery left Toulon for Toulouse oh the 14th March. The soldiers were eager for their departure, and in high spirits.

Corn Laws.—In the House of Lords on the 20th March the Duke of Wellington gave notice that he should introduce certain measures relating to the Corn Laws, on the 28th March.

London, March 24.—The stock of Foreign Wheat is now getting very low. There has been a petition handed round this day, and generally signed praying that a clause be introduced into the new Corn Bill, to permit the wheat in bond to be converted into flour for the use of the Colonies. Average price of wheat, for the week up to the 21st of March, 58s. 4d.

The "Town of Liverpool," Steam-Boat from Waterford for Liverpool, was wrecked on the 19th of March, near the Light House of the latter Port; crew, passengers, and a part of the cargo saved.

In the House of Commons on the evening of the 22d March, Sir R. Wilson asked if it was intended to sustain the treaty of the sixth July, and whether there had been any orders to prevent the loyalious being sent to the Turkish stations in the Morea? Mr. Secretary Peel said there was no change in the views of the Government as to the treaty, and no notice had been received of any change in the Russian relations; or of any declaration of war by Russia against Turkey. When such intelligence arrived, it would be time enough to state the views of Government.. The instructions respecting the Morea continued, and the attention of the Admirals was called to them.

In addition to the above, the New Times of March 24th, contains the Gazette de France of the 22nd by Express. This paper brought accounts from Bucharest, (the Capital of Wallachia,) to the last of February, at which period the Russians had not crossed the Pruth. It would seem seem that the general impressions at that place, which is too deeply interested in the issue not to procure the best information on a point of such high importance, was, that peace would not be broken.

A last effort is said to have been made by the Allies, and after some conferences between the Russian, French Ambassadors, and Lord Dudley, in London, a courier is said to have been sent to Constantinople, with a fresh application in behalf of Greece, and with an understanding that no "Executive" measures would be adopted against the Porte till the answer of the Divan could have been received. The same letters announce, that the treaty between Persia and Russia has not been signed, and that hostilities were going to recommence.

The Russian army, at the moment of passing the Pruth, is abundantly supplied with all necessary resources.

Portugal.—The affairs of Portugal are at present objects of considerable importance.—There is not any positive intelligence of the Regent having entirely thrown off the mask; but the indications are strong, the wish and the animus are sufficiently apparent.

Warlike preparations.—The preparations of France, according to the Paris papers, are upon a larger scale than was at first imagined. Hence it has been conjectured, that she has some designs upon Egypt, which, we believe, we may safely & positively contradict. Neither troops, nor stores, nor artillery have yet sailed from Toulon, and it should seem as if both France and England waited for some reply to despatches sent off to the Russian government. Meanwhile Turkey is carrying on her defensive preparations.

LONDON, March 24.

Letters from Toulon say, that only 9,000 men would be sent to Greece, besides 6,000 English, the whole to be under the chief command of Marshal Marmont, in the same manner as Sir E. Codrington commands the naval force. Ships of 300 tons were in requisition to take in the troops and cavalry; but the demand is no longer made, because 20 to 25 francs per ton per month are asked, and for that time months certain.

Advices have reached town this morning from Odessa down to the 29th ult. They continue to speak of the warlike preparations making there. Of sixty ships in port, thirty-three tons already been freighted by the local government. The speeches of the King's of England and of France have been there, and some people, in consequence, believe that matters might still be amicably arranged.

INTELLIGENCE FROM LISBON.

Despatches have been received by Government from Sir Fredrick Lamb and General Clinton, dated Lisbon 18th March. Don Miguel had entirely thrown off the mask, and dissolved both the Chambers. Lisbon was in a great ferment, and universal confusion and distrust prevailed. The conduct of Sir Frederick Lamb was highly characteristic of the representative of a free State; his mother has denounced the mischievous plans Miguel was pursuing, and predicted. that, if persevered in, it would end in destruction to himself, and be productive of the most direful catastrophe.

The presence of our troops in Lisbon, and the fleet in the Tagus, are the only obstacles to Miguel's being proclaimed King. When Sir Frederick Lamb remonstrated with Miguel on the extravagance of his conduct and its pernicious tendency, he affected total ignorance of what was going on. His mother had a printing-press at the palace, from which she printed of a vast number of proclamations of an inflamatory nature, which were ready for distribution the moment any knowledge offered. Miguel denied any knowledge of these proceedings, but when our Ambassador pulled one out of his pocket, and asked Miguel if he could read that? his confusion was unspeakable. Sir Frederick Lamb then informed Miguel that he could no longer believe anything he said, and took his departure. He then invited all the Ambassadors to a conference, and explained his proceedings, of which they all approved, with the exception of the French and Spanish Ambassadors, who left the conference. This speaks volumes, so far as France is concerned; but we shall not, at present, speculate upon what may, but what must be the consequence of such connivance.

Several nobles and public characters have left Lisbion, to escape the vengeance or cruelty of Miguel.

YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1828.

Our New-York papers furnish us with English dates to 26th March, ten days later than those previously received. The news which will be found under the proper head, is important; but notwithstanding the "note of preparation" which is heard throughout Europe, there seems yet to be some hope entertained, that its tranquility may not be disturbed.

Matters appear to have approached so near a crisis, that we cannot remain much longer, in a state of suspense, as to their issue.

ELECTION MEETINGS.—We learn from the Gore Gazette that a Meeting was lately held at Hamilton, in the Gore District, for the purpose of "investigating the public conduct of the Members for the County of Wentworth, and of nominating two fit persons to represent the County in the next Parliament."—Judge Taylor presided, and Mr. A. K. Smith acted as Secretary.—From the address of John Willson, Esquire, the Speaker of the House of Assembly, we shall take the liberty of making a few extracts.

"His first object had always been to protect the rights and liberties of the people; in the attainment of this object, he might possibly have sometimes erred, but he had always acted conscientiously.—There were rights and liberties belonging to each branch of the Legislature; the Executive, the Legislative Council, and the House of Assembly, each had its right, and sometimes from a want of due discrimination we might err in our judgment concerning the nature of those rights,—he however had never given up the rights of the people; that he had always taken care of; while he endeavored not to encroach upon the rights of others"

We would recommend the sentiments expressed in this extract, to the particular attention of those, by whose vote on a late occasion, two respectable and old servants of the County were deprived of their liberty, for the want of that "due discrimination" of the rights of others, of which Mr. Willson speaks.

His remarks on the subject of Education are equally entitled to consideration, and are such as we have no doubt, will be concurred in by all who read them.

"One of the first objects of his attention after he went to Parliament, was the education of the people. He was the author of the first Bill, passed on that subject, and he had also lent his support to another Bill since introduced, for a similar purpose.—He was always a friend to education, for he well knew that an unlearned, uninformed people, could never properly understand their political rights, and would not be jealous of their own, but they were apt to undervalue the rights of others, which it was equally necessary to appreciate."

After entering into an explanation, relative to his conduct on various occasions in Parliament—Mr. Willson proceeds—

"In all his efforts to serve the public, for the last 20 years—he knew errors might have done, he had not absurd the Government—he could support his cause and the cause of the people, without descending to any vulgar abuse towards the Government of his country, and if he could not get along without doing that, he would not get along at all.—He attributed the furious attacks which had been made upon him, and the falsehoods which had been circulated, and too generally believed against him —to the influence of an abandoned, unprincipled, and licentious Press.

That "others," should consider it necessary to the support of their cause, or that of the people, to descend to "vulgar abuse" towards the Government of the Country, may appear extraordinary, but those who have studied the progress of some of the Patriots of the present day, must be satisfied, that the expressions used by Mr. Willson, are not stronger than circumstances warrant, and if there be also obvious that his opinion on the subject of the Press, is equally warranted by facts.

Mr. Willson concludes his address by saying—

"He had made up his mind to retire from public life, and but for the circumstances before stated he should have done so, and should never have again asked the public for their suffrages—but after all that had been said and done against him, he had determined again to meet his constituents, to explain all the circumstances of his case, and to throw himself again upon their protection."

Mr. Willson, very briefly addressed the audience—he had frequently differed with Mr. Willson, particularly as to the Welland Canal, which he termed a "dry ditch"—the money laid out upon which, he looked upon as thrown away—but as he and Mr. Willson usually agreed, he should always give him his support Mr. D. K. Serrs proposed Richard Record, Esquire, as a fit person to represent the County, and some person named Mr. Durand.—"After some discussion," says the Gore Gazette, "about the manner of proposing the different names, a division took place, and we are informed (for we were not then present ourselves), that a Majority of the persons present, was declared to be in favor of Messrs Willson and Hamilton—when the meeting was dissolved."

From the Resolutions passed at a Public Meeting of Freeholders in the London District, published in this day's paper, it will be seen that Mahlon Burwell, and James Hamilton. Esquires, are nominated for the County of Middlesex, represented at present, by Captain Matthews and Mr. Ralph.

"COUNTY OF HALTON.—We have heard that a Meeting was held some days ago, in the Township of Trafalgar, for the purpose of nominating suitable persons to represent this County in the ensuing Parliament, but we have not heard what was the result of the Meeting. The names of a number of Candidates for the honor of representing this County, are before the public; but as yet, no general expression of public opinion has come to our knowledge relating to them. From the opportunity which we have had of ascertaining the sentiments of many of the Electors, however, we should judge that there are few persons whose names are before the public, who have an equal chance of success, with Mr. JAMES CROOKS; and we feel assured there is no one possesses superior qualifications for discharging the Parliamentary duties.

From the very intemperate manner in which the Canadian Freeman has continued to conduct his Paper we have of late abstained as much as possible, from noticing those sallies of ill temper and abuse, with which his columns abound, week after week. Perfectly aware, from what we have already seen, that it is useless to expect any thing like moderation from the Freeman, we have contented ourselves, with correcting some misstatements in his paper. His remarks on the subject of the late Assizes, rendered this duty necessary on our parts—we contradicted his statement as to our being on the Grand Jury, and making our situation subservient to the base passion of revenge against the Editor of the Freeman.—The fact was simply stated by us, that we were not on the Grand Jury, and a denial, of what we trust there can be little occasion for our repeating—that however we might regret, in common with all who think properly on the subject, that he should feel it necessary, in conducting a public journal, to depart from those ordinary rules of temper and moderation, in his opposition to measures, by defaming men; we nevertheless felt nothing like revenge, towards the person, who, while he boastingly prides himself, of being as "bold as a Lion," in pursuing such an unjustifiable course, appears to be without any of the more generous qualities of that noble animal. The only feeling we can have indeed, towards such a person, is more allied to pity than revenge, conscious as we are that the bread which is earned by catering for the worst passions of mankind, by endeavouring to cause them to view all around them with suspicion and distrust, cannot be sweetened, by any pleasurable reflections, but must on the contrary be eaten in bitterness. The only reply, which it is found convenient to make to the remarks we offered, in contradiction of the statements we have alluded to, is a tissue of common place vulgarity, on the change we have announced, as being intended in the arrangement of our paper.

From the style and temper which has marked the conduct of the Canadian Freeman, we would ask—Can conduct such as this, be entitled to the dignified appellation of "The Liberty of the Press!" Is it not rather a perversion of the means and opportunity, which circumstances have placed in the hands of an individual, intended originally to promote the happiness of men, and good order in Society? Is it not rather The Tyranny of the Press—the converting an Engine, as beautiful as it is powerful, intended to promote the cause of virtue and morality, and for the diffusion of general and useful information among mankind, into a disgusting and loathsome Vehicle in which the worst passions, and the most deleterious poisons may find a place, for the purpose of distribution among the people, under the specious appearance of Patriotism, and in the disguise of friendship, proclaiming itself as the assertor and defender of their rights?

Let it not be supposed that in making these remarks, we are disposed to question the right, or propriety of discussion on public matters. On the contrary we are ready to admit, that this is one of the legitimate uses of the Press, and while it is carried on in a spirit of forbearance and moderation—while it allows itself to be limited by the bounds of truth, and respects the ordinary rules of decency and decorum, we should be the last to say any thing against it. But when we see these limits transgressed—when we see all these rules violated—and an utter forsaking of all that can render discussion desirable—when the eliciting of truth, and a desire to promote the usefulness of public measures, is sacrifised to the gratification of personal abuse—when calumny and reproach are the weapons made use of, in place of reason and argument, and the shafts are wilfully aimed, so as to injure the man, under the pretence that they are directed against his measures.—This we say—is not the Liberty—it is the Licentiousness—the Tyranny of the Press.

The liberty of the Press, like that which every individual has a right freely to exercise over his own property, is not to be understood without its limits.—A man may not of right, set fire to his own house—because it is his own, when that of his neighbor would be endangered, by such a rash and fearful act.—So—the Press,—Its Liberty consists in the temperate use of its powers. The pointedness of discussion is not denied to it, nor the warmth of argument withheld from it,—but so soon as that temperate use is infringed upon, we may safely conjecture, that the one who wields the power, has more regard for the licentiousness which it enables him to indulge in, than for the Liberty which it confers.—He sets fire, as it were, to his own house, regardless of the danger his neighbors may be exposed to.

Some there are too, who seem to forget, that, as well as for its Liberty, the Press should have a due regard for its dignity. The bandying of coarse and vulgar epithets—the abuse of character—attempts to render those odious in public, whose virtues entitle them to respect and admiration in private life—these things certainly do not constitute the dignity of the Press.—They resemble rather the conduct of that man, who lost to all sense of a proper respect for himself, feels none towards any other person—forgetful of what is due to himself, he has but little regard as to what others may be entitled to. Violence of manner, and recklessness of language, are the unerring marks, which distinguish this loss of self respect, and with it, the respect due to others,—a loss which all good men will deplore, and carefully guard against.

It requires no great stretch of imagination to apply this argument to the case before us. It may very fairly be suspected, that the Press which indulges itself in the same violence of manner, and in the same recklessness of language is destitute of that dignity, or self respect, which as we before said, it should be its concern to preserve, equally with its liberty. Its loss of self respect, is soon followed by licentiousness, and these combined, tend to make it, rather the enemy, than the friend of mankind.

From the first number of the next volume to commence the 7th June, THE LOYALIST will be published on a separate sheet.—The payment of Subscriptions in arrear, is respectfully requested, before commencing the new volume.

This day, precisely at 2 o'clock P. M. was launched in handsome style, into the Welland Canal, the Schooner which has for some time past been constructing in this village, named the "WELLAND CANAL, of St. Catharines," of 100 tons burden, being the First vessel that ever floated upon the waters of this Canal. She was erected by Mr. Armington, master builder, under the superintendance of Captain Northrup, and is allowed by Judges to be of an excellent model, and first rate workmanship; not surpassed, perhaps by any vessel on the Lakes. The enterprising owners are Messrs. Mouson, Merritt, and Chace. Her first trip will be to Prescott, laden with produce; Capt. MIDDLESEX.

At a meeting of the Free and Independent Electors of the County of Middlesex, held at Spades' Inn, St. Thomas, on Saturday, the 19th April, for the purpose of nominating fit and proper persons to represent the said County, in the ensuing Parliament, JOHN BOSTWICK, Esq. was appointed Chairman, and Mr. BELA SHAW, Secretary, and the following Resolutions were afterwards adopted:—

Resolved, That in the last Provincial Parliament subjects of much importance were agitated and carried into effect, subversive of the interest of the County of Middlesex and not in accordance with the wishes of the majority of its inhabitants.

Resolved, That no person is suitably qualified, or can reasonably be expected to have due influence, unless he possess well established principles of Morality and Religion, and true British feelings.

Resolved, That it is the duty of a Representative of the people, to strictly watch, and zealously avail himself of every opportunity to advance the permanent interests of the County he represents.

Resolved That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the Representatives of the County of Middlesex should be permanent residents of said County, whose interests consequently would be more strongly indentified with its prosperity.

Resolved, That in accordance with these sentiments, and duly appreciating the long tried and efficient services of Mahlon Burwell, Esq. he be solicited to offer himself as a Candidate to represent the County of Middlesex in the next Provincial Parliament.

Resolved, That having perfect confidence in the integrity and intelligence of James Hamilton, Esq. he be likewise requested to offer himself to the Electors as a Candidate to represent the County of Middlesex in the ensuing Parliament.

Resolved, That the Chairman be directed to transmit copies of these Resolutions to Mahlon Burwell, and James Hamilton, Esquires, and to convey to them the cordial wishes of this Meeting, at the same time assuring them, that it is believed they will receive the undivided support of the intelligent Electors of the County of Middlesex.

Resolved, That the Chairman procure one hundred copies of the proceedings of this Meeting to be printed.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Meeting be given to John Bostwick, Esq. for his candid and disinterested conduct in the Chair, and that the thanks of this Meeting be also given to Mr. Bela Shaw for his valuable services as Secretary.

JOHN BOSTWICK, Chairman.

BELA SHAW, Secretary.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY OF MIDDLESEX.

GENTLEMEN,

It was my intention to have attended to my own domestic affairs, and not to have interfered in the approaching Election, further than the giving or withholding my vote, but being officially served by the Chairman, with the proceedings of a public meeting, of the Electors of this county, held at Spades' Inn, by adjournment from the 8th to 19th instant, in the resolutions of which, honorable mention is made of my name, assuring me of the cordial wishes of the meeting, and of their belief, that I will receive the general support of the Electors in the County; I do not hesitate to inform the Freeholders generally, that I feel a pride in being voluntarily, and so kindly, invited to resume with them those political ties by which we have been mutually connected since the formation of our settlements, with only a change in the represenaton for the last four years, without having shaken the original confidence, which was interchanged at our commencement.

I have no interests but those that are closely allied with our common welfare—no incitement but that which must lead to public improvement—to maintain the good character of Middlesex, and make her people prosperous, wealthy and happy. Here is the land where all the best feelings which animate and enliven the human heart, in the course of exertion, and improvement, have had their influence upon me, so far as my capacity has been susceptible of their impression. All my labors of body and mind, since my boyhood up to the present day, have been exerted in Middlesex, and indentified with your own industry. And should I be one of the persons of your choice, I shall endeavor to discharge the important duties with that manly independence which becomes a situation so highly respectable.

I am,
Gentlemen,
Yours truly,
M. BURWELL.

Birth,

At York, on Sunday 4th instant, Mrs. D. Brooke, of a Son.

To the Independent Electors of the County of Durham.

GENTLEMEN,

NOTHING can be more satisfactory to my feelings after so many years residence among you in this County, than to witness the confidence you wish to repose in me by your continued requests for me to declare myself a Candidate to represent your interests in the ensuing Parliament, you will permit me to decline the high honor on this ground, namely, that my private affairs would unavoidably interfere with Public duty, having business that none but myself could attend to. But my dear friends and neighbors, let us be guarded—ponder and reflect before we surrender our rights, or rather to whom we entrust them.—Some talk of Electing Members in opposition to the existing Authorities. —Look around you for a moment—call to mind the comforts with which you are surrounded—the liberty with which we are invironed,—we sit around our fire-sides enjoying many privileges, light taxes, Religious toleration,—in fact no one can legally injure us or our property—let us interrogate ourselves, should the present pretenders to reformation gain the consumation of their wishes, should we be more happy? or should we be involved in calamities which history can best explain —Stick to your Land, maintain your rights by assisting with all your united power the energies of Government.—Serve your God, attend to your Bible, and then you will honor your King, serve your Country, and soon learn who to vote for.—As for myself, with all my power of mind and influence, I shall support the true interests of the United Empire, the integrity of which our ancestors have fought and bled for,—the Government have been liberal to us, depend upon it the magnanimity of the British Government and its representation will never forsake us nor our interests.

Wishing you every blessing,
I remain your faithful, &
Obedient Servant,
THOMAS T. ORTON.

To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING:

KNOW YE that by our Royal Charter bearing date the Nineteenth day of August, in the Seventh Year of our Reign, WE HAVE Incorporated a Company of persons under the name of the "Canada Company," for the purpose of purchasing, holding, improving, clearing, settling and disposing of waste and other Lands in our Province of Upper Canada, and for making advances of Capital to Settlers on such Lands, for making, opening, improving and maintaining Roads and other internal communications for the benefit thereof, and for the promoting cultivation of such articles as can advantageously be exported from the said Province, and for other purposes in the said Charter set forth: which said Charter being granted by our Letters Patent under the Great Seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, We have caused to be enregistered in the Office of the Secretary and Register of our Province of Upper Canada for the inspection of such of our Subjects, in our said Province of Upper Canada, as may desire to be informed thereof.

Wherefore we have thought fit to publish this our Proclamation, that all our loving Subjects may, for their advantage therein, have due notice and information of the said Charters and other the premises herein set forth; and that all persons may forbear, as they are hereby strictly enjoined, from committing any manner of trespass or depredation upon any of the Lands set apart for the said Company, or from attempting or offering any obstruction whatever to the due execution of the powers contained in the said Charter, or to the enjoyment of the privileges and advantages intended to be thereby conveyed and assured to the said Canada Company.

He will always have in his employ sea-worthy boats, navigated by careful and experienced boatmen, and his charges for transport will be as low as those of any similar establishment in the Province.

The subscriber will also pay every attention to the disposing of property that may be entrusted to his care agreeably to instructions.

ARCHD. McDONELL.

Kingston, 14th March, 1828.

☞ Reference may be made to John Kirby, Esq. John Macaulay, Esq. Kingston, and Robert Stanton, Esq. York. 46tf.

HIS MAJESTY having granted certain of the Crown Reserves to the Corporation of the King's College in exchange for an equal portion of lands heretofore set apart for the foundation of an University, the Council of King's College are proceeding to take such measures with respect to those Reserves, as may render them productive for the purpose intended, and at the same time afford every opportunity to the persons legally occupying or holding a Lease of any of the Reserves, to make such arrangements as will best suit their wishes and interests.

They are procuring an accurate inspection to be made of the situation and circumstances of every Lot, and have directed their Agent, when he finds any person actually resident upon any of the Reserves which he is directed to visit, to leave with such person a copy of this printed paper, by which he will understand, that if he is the Lessee of the Lot, or has gone upon it and made improvements under any proper authority, that the Council of King's College will pay every respect and attention to the interest and claim of such person, that they could with any justice have expected of the Government; and in particular, that whenever the Council is prepared to dispose of any of the Reserves under the circumstances above mentioned, the person having a claim to consideration, will have the choice, either to renew his Lease for twenty-one years upon the terms held out by the original Lease from the Crown, as specified in the subjoined Order in Council of the 13th April, 1819, or he shall have the refusal of the Lot, if the Council desire to sell it, in preference to any other purchaser, for such price as the Council are willing to accept.

But it is to be understood, that if the party chooses another Lease, there will be no pledge given for any renewal at the end of twenty-one years, the Government never having offered any assurance beyond the Grant of a second term; but in such case, the conditions on which the party can be allowed to continue to occupy it, will, no doubt, be settled with a due regard to every reasonable claim on his part—the back rent upon the first Lease must be paid to the Government before the Council will have it in their power to treat with the Claimant.

It is further to be understood, that with respect to Lots which have been leased, but never improved or occupied, unless the back rent shall be paid to the Receiver General before the 1st January, 1829, the Council will not feel themselves bound to consider the interest of the Lessee in disposing of the Lot.

JOSEPH WELLS,
Bursar, King's College.

York, 1st February, 1828. 87tf.

Extract from the Order of Council, bearing date 13th April, 1819, above referred to:—

THE MARMORA IRON WORKS.—The sale of these Works has been postponed until further notice.—But, the Wares of the Establishment are offered for sale at 20*s*. per Cwt. for all heavy Castings: Potash-Kettles, &c.—and at 27*s*. 6*d*. per Cwt. for Sugar-Kettles, Hollow Ware, Stoves, &c. delivered at Kingston, and Wheat, Flour, and Potash will be taken in payment, at the Current price in that Market—or a discount of 5 per Cent made for Cash.

Among the advantages which purchasers and dealers in the articles, would derive from giving a preference to the Castings of these Works, are the following:—

First.—The Wares are fully of a better quality, in regard to manufacture than those got elsewhere.

Secondly.—They are offered for sale, at prices, at least 25 per Cent under the rate at which the same kind of goods can be laid down in Kingston from Montreal, without taking into consideration the risk of transport.

Thirdly.—From the very superior quality of the Metal from which the Wares are Manufactured, and from the experience already had, by many who have used them for a length of time.—The Subscriber is warranted in saying, that they are by no means so liable to crack, as the Carron, or other Ware of similar Establishments, known to the people of this Province.

Lastly.—The receiving payment in the Produce of the Country, should be considered, an advantage (when combined with the other circumstances above enumerated), of sufficient importance to buyers, to secure a preference for the consumption of a Provincial manufacture, of superior quality and comparatively low price.

The undersigned in the name of Peter McGill, Esq., the present Proprietor, who has expended large sums, in perfecting the Establishment, since it came into his hands—hereby, begs to think, will be shown, that it is their interest, appeals to the Patriotism of the Merchants, and others of this Province, to give aid, support, and countenance to so great and praiseworthy an undertaking. The support required, is simply, to give a preference in their purchases to the Manufactures of Marmora, which are articles of daily necessity and consumption—both good and cheap, instead of sending to the United States, and Lower Canada, for Articles of a similar description, comparatively of inferior quality, and higher prices. THE U. E. LOYALIST.
VOL. 2. YORK, U. C. SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1828. NO. 61.

A SPEECH, of the VENERABLE JOHN STRACHAN, D.D. Archdeacon of York, in the Legislative Council, Thursday, 6th March, 1828: on the subject of the Clergy Reserves.

(CONCLUDED.)

At the capitulation of the Province of Quebec, General Amherst granted the free exercise of the Roman Catholic Religion, but the obligation of paying tithes he left to the King's pleasure. His Britannic Majesty, by the lenity of power, agreed to grant the liberty of the Romish Catholic Religion to the inhabitants of Canada, and promised to give the most effectual orders that his new subjects might profess the worship of their religion according to the rights of the Romish Church, and in as far as the laws of Great Britain permitted.—Now these laws at that time permitted only the Protestant Church of England to be established in any of the Colonies, for by the 1st of Elizabeth, cap. 1, the Protestant religion was established in every Colony the moment it became subject to the Crown of Great Britain, whether there was any proclamation to that effect or not. This Act retates not only to all the Queen's dominions, but is extended by positive words to such countries and places as may hereafter come to be subject to the Crown of England. By which words it is quite evident, that the Establishment of the Church of England in every Colony, was considered by the Legislature as indispensible part of the Constitutional policy of the Imperial Government, and was intended to take effect in all countries that either then made, or should thereafter make a part of the dominions of the Crown of England. Now clearly is this the case that in the Act of Union with Scotland, the Presbyterian form is secured within the bounds of that Kingdom only; and that in the Act of Union with Ireland, Ireland, Wales, and the town of Berwick upon Tweed, and the territories thereunto belonging. Thus the Religious Establishment of England is recognised by a fundamental law, to be the religious establishment of every British Colony, and was therefore that of the first class, Copper-fastened and Coppered, of about 400 Tons burthen, and as fast Sailers as any Packets in the Trade. They have superior accommodations, being very loft between decks; are commanded by experienced Masters, whose best endeavors will be to promote the comfort of passengers: and the appointed day of sailing will be strictly adhered to.

The facility and convenience of this establishment to persons residing at a distance, by saving them much delay and expense too often attending the uncertain and protracted departure of a Private Vessel, will, it is hoped, be duly appreciated, and command the same preference and support as with success in continuance and success.

To IRISH EMIGRANTS, this Line is especially recommended, on account of the easy and frequent communication between the Irish Ports and Liverpool, by means of Steam-Boats and Smacks; and to all, it will extend the peculiar advantages of a connexion with respectable Companies upon the Hudson River and the New-York Canals, by which is secured the safest and most speedy conveyance to either of the Canadian Provinces.

(CONCLUDED.)

At the capitulation of the Province of Quebec, General Amherst granted the free exercise of the Roman Catholic Religion, but the obligation of paying tithes he left to the King's pleasure. His Britannic Majesty, by the lenity of power, agreed to grant the liberty of the Romish Catholic Religion to the inhabitants of Canada, and promised to give the most effectual orders that his new subjects might profess the worship of their religion according to the rights of the Romish Church, and in as far as the laws of Great Britain permitted.—Now these laws at that time permitted only the Protestant Church of England to be established in any of the Colonies, for by the 1st of Elizabeth, cap. 1, the Protestant religion was established in every Colony the moment it became subject to the Crown of Great Britain, whether there was any proclamation to that effect or not. This Act retates not only to all the Queen's dominions, but is extended by positive words to such countries and places as may hereafter come to be subject to the Crown of England. By which words it is quite evident, that the Establishment of the Church of England in every Colony, was considered by the Legislature as indispensible part of the Constitutional policy of the Imperial Government, and was intended to take effect in all countries that either then made, or should thereafter make a part of the dominions of the Crown of England. Now clearly is this the case that in the Act of Union with Scotland, the Presbyterian form is secured within the bounds of that Kingdom only; and that in the Act of Union with Ireland, Ireland, Wales, and the town of Berwick upon Tweed, and the territories thereunto belonging. Thus the Religious Establishment of England is recognised by a fundamental law, to be the religious establishment of every British Colony, and was therefore that of the Province of Quebec, from the Conquest till the passing of the late Quebec Act. In that law no change was made, and the pleasure of his Majesty, re cited in the 31 Geo. 3d, together with the Provisions of that Act, (and especially that which speaks of distinction and of the spiritual jurisdiction of the Bishop) plainly point out that the expression is to be understood as referring to the Clergy of the Church of England only. "A Protestant Clergy" evidently means one single and entire body of persons; now the Clergy of the Church of England, and those of the Kirk of Scotland can never form one body If therefore the Clergy of the Kirk of Scotland be let in, there is no reason why any other denomination of Dissenters should not also be admitted, and the words "A Protestant Clergy" must then be taken to mean Presbyterian Teachers, which in fact appears to me to be absurd. The expression was used in contradistinction to the Romish Clergy of Quebec, and all the principles of the British Constitution, it was the established form of worship. Not that during so long a period the King was altogether negligent of his religion,—for his Majesty's Instructions to the Governors in the Canadas, he declares in express words, that the powers and privileges of an established Church, belong only to the Protestant Religion, and that those Instructions are still in force: and he directs that in laying out new Townships, glebes of not less than 300, and not more than 500 Acres be reserved for its support. Finding that tracts so small, could make no adequate provision, and that no tithes were ever collected from the Protestants, and that there was no support for the Protestant Clergy, actually resident within the Province, His Majesty, in pursuance of the desire to His Parliament, in 1791, to be enabled to make a permanent appropriation of Land, in the Canadas, for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy within the same, agreeable to the Lands granted, or to be granted, and He calls upon His Parliament to make such enactments as may most effectually fulfil His Majesty's intentions. Accordingly, by the 31 Geo. 3, chap. 31, one fourth of the lands in Upper Canada, have been appropriated for the support and maintenance of a Protestant Clergy, and so interwoven is this appropriation with the land property in the Province, that no Grant from the Crown is valid, unless it contains a specified reserve, equal to one-seventh of the land which it grants. It is here of importance to remark, that the phrase "a Protestant Clergy" was used in the instructions to the Governors-in-Chief, immediately after the Conquest. It was used in the 14th of George 3, in the first Constitutional Act of 1791, and evidently means the Clergy of the Church of England, in contradistinction to the, Clergy of the Church of Rome Soon after the passing of this law, instructions respecting the Reserves, were sent out, directing the Governor-in-Council to devise some permanent scheme for leasing them, and which was directed to be communicated to the Bishop of Quebec, for His Lordship's information and opinion. In their report the Council states that it is of great importance that the Established Constitution in Church and State, should be so interwoven with the whole social system in Upper Canada, as to engage men's interests as well as their feelings, in its support, to make it in popular and daily estimation,—all which is no less essential to the security of Property, than to the preservation of Religion, & maintenance of good order.

The King in the exercise of his Royal Prerogative, and following up the provisions of the Act, appointed a Bishop for Quebec, by which title both Provinces are included in one Diocese, and has from time to time attended to the wants of the Establishment, by constituting a Corporation of the Clergy for the management and superintendance of the Clergy Reserves, in order that this provision might be rendered more effectual, and by dividing the Diocese into Archdeaconries.

In regard to the enactments of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 31, which have respect to the appropriation for the support of a Protestant Clergy, they are all descriptive of the Church of England, and of no other Church, and from the evident care of continuing the phrase "a Protestant Clergy," from the 1st Elizabeth and includes now, as it did then, all the British Dominions except Scotland. Moreover this Diocese is a portion of the Ecclesiastical Province of Canterbury, and consequently the rights and privileges of the Church and Clergy within it, rest upon as firm a basis as those of England. It is true, these rights and privileges are not the same as in England or Ireland, but we have I any wish that they should be so—here we have no civil or political distinctions founded upon those that are religious, nor is any contribution levied for the support of the Church, from those who profess a creed different from hers: Nevertheless ours is the Religion of the State, and established by the fundamental laws of the Province.

It were easy to shew that the establishment of the Church of England in this Province, has been recognised by all writers who have had occasion to notice the subject; but I shall content myself with mentioning one of the noblest character and attainments. Mr. Burke in his famous Letter to Sir Hercules Langreshe, says:—"I voted last session for the establishment of the Church of England, with the establishment that was made some years before by an Act of Parliament of the Roman Catholic, in the French conquered country of Canada."

That the Church of England is considered and held to be the Established Church in the Colonies, is farther confirmed by the steps recently taken by His Majesty's Government for its support and establishment in the West Indies, and especially in New South Wales. In this latter country a reservation is made, of lands, for the maintenance of the Clergy, and for the support of Schools, similar to that which has taken place in this country, and a Charter has been granted for their management, with powers far greater than those conferred upon the Corporation of the Clergy of Canada.—It confers a power to sell to the extent of one-third of the Lands reserved in each County, and to grant Leases not exceeding thirty years, or the duration of three lives.—The disposal and expenditure of the monies received, which are to be expended in the erection of Churches and Parsonage Houses, and in the maintenance and support of the Clergy of the Established Church of England in the said Colony. A certain proportion is to be appropriated to the maintenance and support of Schools and School Masters, and also for opening and making Roads through them, &c. &c. The Corporation to consist of the Governor, the Chief Justice, the Secretary, the Members of the Legislative Council, the Archdeacon, and nine senior Chaplains.

On the subject of the University I shall say but little. The Charter is the most liberal that has ever been granted, and for the reason to believe, been copied for the College of New-Brunswick, and received by that Province as a most gracious boon.

Many men of every Christian denomination are freely admitted to all the advantages of education, and although such as are of the Established Church are placed under the more immediate care of the Institution in regard to Religion, it is presumed that others will be consulted to their respective teachers, so that on this most important of all subjects no difference can be anticipated. In Edinburgh, Episcopalian youth go to the University, for science and literature, but for Religious instruction, they attend Dr. Walker, an eminent Divine belonging to the Episcopal Church.—I am not aware at present, of any impediment to a similar arrangement being made by the Presbyterians of the Kirk of Scotland, or any other denomination within this Province, and if it should take place, the religious instruction of the Students of King's College, may be so conducted as to be satisfactory to all parties. But, religion must not be neglected, nor will I ever regard it as a matter of indifference, how the youth placed at a Seminary over which I preside, outer the world, in respect to their knowledge of Christianity. While therefore every precaution will be taken, to prevent unprofitable disputation, every effort will be made, to alleviate their minds, by directing their attention to those topics, which above all others are calculated to raise the moral and intellectual faculties, and to produce those manly, sober and pure graces, which confer such dignity and beauty on the Christian character.

I am aware that some institutions for promoting the instruction of the people have been recently established, from which Religion has been altogether excluded—But I have never heard, that any serious friend of the Gospel has come forward to patronise them.—Indeed no Christian can conceive the possible existence of a useful Seminary, the principals of which is the exclusion of Religious instruction.

Any one acquainted with the human heart, and the certain current of human habits and feelings, well knows, that the certain consequence of bringing up youth without religious principles and impressions, is to multiply reprobates. Daily experience shows the kind of men those must turn out to be, who have been brought up in the total neglect of all religious duties—of Sabbath worship—of reading the Scriptures, and of public and private prayer. Such men feel and say nothing worthy, or giving Religion a thought, unless they have been educated in it from their childhood!—Does not experience prove, that God in the distribution of his favors, has always put, by assisting, and cooperating, with secondary means, and that Religious Parents are the secondary means, which in return has appointed, to continue religion to their children.

But it is unnecessary to argue upon this subject, or to say more than to recall to Christians the positive command of Scripture—to teach children the fear of God—to bring them up in the fear and admonition of the Lord: While therefore King's College will be open to all denominations of Christians, it will nevertheless possess a religious character. On this point the Council will be of one mind, by which Union is secured, and the best pledge afforded of order and regularity.

But I have now finished the observations which I considered it my duty to make to this Honorable House;—and although there may be a difference among gentlemen, in regard to some of my opinions and arguments, I have stated them without reserve, and even at the risque of being thought tedious, that all may be able to judge of the grounds of my proceedings? And I do flatter myself, that every Hon Member of this House, whatever his private sentiments on the subject may be, will carry home the conviction, that throughout the whole, I have acted upon the most honest and consistent part—that I have never allowed the controversy on the subject of the Reserves, to mingle with my social relations, or admitted myself to defend what I deem the vested rights of the Established Church, upon any but fair principles.

Nor is it in this matter only that I have acted an upright and honorable part: I have given the most anxious and most minute investigation of my whole conduct, since I came into the Province, with the full confidence of being able to refute in the most triumphant manner any accusation that can be brought against me. Never have I in any respect compromised my character as a Christian Minister, or neglected to discharge with the utmost fidelity, the various duties that from time to time been assigned me, nor have I ever violated a public principle, or deserted a private friend.

I have only to apologise for the length of time which I have taken up, and to return my thanks for the patient hearing which has been given me and in closing, I have to express my regret, that the Members should have indulgence, as to my future attendance in this House. During the last twenty-nine years, I have been assiduously engaged as opportunities offered, in establishing the foundations of a system of Education for this Colony, which though still new in operation, contains the seeds of great perfection. The outline, by the Establishment of the University is now complete, and a strict superintendance will for many years be absolutely necessary. If therefore, I should not appear so often in my place, as my respect for the House would indicate, I hope my absence will meet with a kind interpretation: not that I wish to be absent when my presence is deemed necessary, or, when the interests of Religion and Education are concerned.—But in other matters I confess that I feel less interest and may be well spared, as many of my Hon. Friends are far more competent than I, to discuss and decide upon questions of policy, and the general business of the Country.

Honorable Gentlemen;—Devoted through life to my King, and the Civil and Ecclesiastical constitution of my Country—at peace with God, and my own conscience, I can bear with equanimity, calumny and reproach, and if necessary still greater evils; but I am nevertheless jealous of that unsullied reputation which I brought with me from Scotland, and which I trust I will carry with me to the Grave. This laudable jealousy, and my respect for public opinion, when founded on correct information, have induced me to make this appeal to the justice and candor of your Honorable House. I am anxious to retain the good opinion of those who know me best, and with whom I have acted for so many years, and I feel proudly conscious, that I deserve the friendship and esteem of all Hon. men, and the approbation of the whole Province.

PORTUGAL.

(From the London Papers.).

Captain Batty arrived on Tuesday with despatches from Lisbon. He had a long interview with the Duke of Wellington at the Treasury; and at about four o'clock his Grace issued instructions for summoning a Cabinet Council. The despatches from Sir E. Lamb (our ambassador) and Sir Wm. Clinton (commander of the British army), are dated the 12th inst., and they confirm to the fullest extent the unfavourable intelligence of the duplicity of Don Miguel, and the danger of the Constitution. The unexpected change has placed a great part of the Portuguese population in a state of extreme consternation. At the date of the despatches, only part of our troops had embarked; and it was grately apprehended that the embarkation of the remaining regiments, which was intended to take place less than a fortnight, would be the signal for the commencement of sanguinary scenes. No hope of successful opposition to this counter revolution appeared to be entertained, unless the British ambassador, acting on his responsibility, would detain the troops. Sir E. Lamb, under the circumstances, had already refused to allow the landing from a British vessel of £50,000, part of a loan which Don Miguel had negociated in England'—New Times.

It was decided, in the House of Commons, by a majority of, 157 to 121, that the extended franchise of East Redfort, instead of going to Birmingham, should be conferred on the adjacent hundred.

The sale of York House is now finally settled. It is disposed of to the Marquis of Stafford for £75,000.

The Briton has arrived at Portsmouth from Lisbon, with the English, French, and Portuguese Ambassadors on board. Lord Heytesbury (late Sir W. A'Court) is going to St. Petersburgh. The Portuguese Ambassador is to replace the Marquis Palmella. The object of the French Ambassador's arrival is not ascertained.

The Duke de Lavenguyon, Peer of France, has died, aged 85, from poison, accidentally administered in lieu of medicine.

By the proposed alterations in the law of evidence, the affirmation of Quakers is to be admitted in criminal cases, and in prosecutions for forgery the party whose name is forged shall be a competent witness.

The King.—The good health of our beloved Sovereign continues, we rejoice to say, unaltered; and his Majesty almost daily receives visits from his ministers, and the higher and most respected orders of the nobility, with whom he converses with a spirit and animation, which have not been exceeded during the whole of his truly popular reign.

It is said that the revenue is in a progressive improvement with the corresponding quarter of last year, and that there is a surplus of £200,000.

His Grace the Duke of Wellington is indefatigable in his attention to business. He sleeps on a mattress on a couch. His Grace rises at seven o'clock, and breakfasts at eight, and directly after attends to his official duties; the post letters arrive soon after nine o'clock, to which he gives decided answers, if it be in his power, the substance of the answer being written at the corner of the letters, for his private secretary to reply to. Soon after eleven o'clock, in general, the Duke rides on horseback to the Treasury, mostly on a white horse, which is a favourite with his Grace, having rode it at the battle of Waterloo. The Duke remains closely engaged in business at the Treasury till about five o'clock, except when called to attend the King's Privy Councils, Cabinet Councils, &c. The Duke does not take any food from the time of his early breakfast till his dinner—a period of nearly twelve hours. During the late indisposition of the Duke, which confined his Grace to the house several days, he could not be prevailed on to take any food in the middle of the day, although advised to do so by the profession.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—March 4.

Emigration.—Mr. W. Horton said he had given notice of his intention to bring before the House that evening three motions. He had a copy of the reports made by Col. Cockburn, who was sent out as a Commissioner to our Colonies in North America; the second for a repeal of the passengers' bill; and the third to enable the Parishes of England to pledge their poor rates for loans of money to enable them to assist a portion of the redundant population to emigrate.—The latter motion he should postpone to March 18. He now proposed to offer himself to the notice of the house upon the subject of the Emigration from the United Kingdom, having reference to the two Committees, which sat in the years 1826 and 1827, and joined a variety of evidence, and made a report thereon with suggestions by the Committee. In presenting himself to the notice of the House, upon the present occasion, he begged to be understood as not making any suggestions upon the authority of Government, nor indeed, was it his intention to propose any substantive measure, but his sole object was to call the attention of the house to a subject which he thought one of very great importance, namely, the redundant population of the country. In consequence of the want of employment by the peasantry of the south of Ireland, particularly in the immediate neighborhood of Cork, in the year 1823, the government decided to send out as an experiment some Emigrants, under the superintendance of Mr. Robinson, a Canadian Gentleman, who went to Ireland for that purpose.—He had never contended that an emigration of such a limited extent, could afford any effectual relief to Ireland, or to this country, and he had always said that it was only an experiment to ascertain what extent of relief could be afforded by an Emigration upon the same plan, and a greater extent. This experiment, and a similar one in 1825, succeeded to his utmost expectations. —The Committee of 1826 had furnished two reports, which the House had voted entirely satisfactory. It was not necessary to go over the ground that the Committees had taken; they established the proposition that there was a redundant population; he meant a redundancy of able-bodied laborers, for whose labor there was no effectual demand; and the Committee had reported, in Ireland, as well as in particular parts of Scotland and England. There could be no doubt that this redundancy was the cause of much of the misery of the laboring classes; besides which it must be remembered that the unemployed laborer consumes more than he produces, and adds nothing to the aggregate of private wealth.—He thought it right in this place, distinctly to mention that those Committees had never contemplated any Emigration that was not entirely voluntary. But they conceived that if the distress was so great as had been represented, it would require very little temptation to induce the distressed to accept the means of removal. It was not necessary to go over was very deep and the weather bad. After much fatigue they reached the neighbourhood of the yard or beat of the moose-deer. They encamped on the Saturday following very near the yard, and appear unknowingly to have alarmed the moose. On Saturday, Mr. Rodgers and Lt. Tylden left the encampment with two Indians, in search. Mr. Ryland and Lt. Wingfield remaining behind. About noon they came upon a track of the moose and followed. The snow being soft, the animal travelled pretty fast; about 3 o'clock, after running a distance of about six miles, the Indian who led saw the exhausted animal disappearing behind a considerable eminence, which it slid down. Arriving at the top the party began to descend; the two Indians and Mr. Rodgers were sliding down, and Lt. Tylden in the rear was just at the top of the descent. Mr. Rodgers being below him only 10 or 15 feet; Lt. Tylden had a cloth cover on his gun, the hammer was down on the cap. In passing some branches, the hammer hooked, and rising, it appears, not quite so far as the half-cock, fell with enough power on the nipple, that one of the barrels went off. The ball entered the body of Mr. Rodgers below the right shoulder blade, passed on the interior part of the spine and came out above the left hip bone. Mr. Rodgers immediately fell. It was only with the use of ropes that he was got to the top of the steep eminence. The chase was abandoned and an encampment formed; Mr. Rodger's under clothes taken off and those of Lt. Tylden substituted. One of the Indians was despatched to the other encampment, and returned through the forest during a dark night about eleven o'clock. The party were about ninety miles distant from any settlement; no medical assistance could be had; and, we believe, Mr. Rodgers, who has borne his sufferings with eminent fortitude, asked to be despatched. Of course this was refused, and the next morning the party set out on their ardous task: Mr. Rodgers having been laid on an Indian sleigh, well secured and defended by several blankets. After more than three days unremitted walking, they reached town on the Wednesday evening.

The new detonating guns, when carried with the hammer on the cap, are extremely dangerous. The safest way is to carry them at half-cock. Every year the most melancholy accidents occur from this cause.—Q. Gaz.

The Head Quarter Division of the 79th Regiment of Cameron Highlanders, under the command of Colonel Douglas, C. On Thursday morning last, George Simpson, Esquire, Governor of the Hon. Hudson's Bay Company's Territories, left Lachine for the Interior. He took with him very numerous queries addressed by the National History Society of this place to all the Factors and Traders in the Company's service now in the interior, relating to the Natural History and Physical Geography of the country, and the manners, habits, customs, languages and institutions of the Aboriginal inhabitants. Answers to these quiries will be received this and the succeeding Autumns, and when properly embodied, will be published by the Society.—Ib.

Fox Hunt.—To those who have enjoyed the chase in the Mother Country, either by participating in its pleasures, or who have been calm spectators, we need hardly allude to the joyous moments, and the delightful exhilaration, which the Sportsman enjoys in this truly manly amusement. The winding of the merlow horn, the animating soul-stirring music, and the ardent intense longing of the hounds; the pleasure which the horses seem to feel in the sport, the cries of the huntsmen, all tend to cause an inward glow, and hope and joy to beam on the countenances of those who are devoted to this amusement.

On Saturday morning, pursuant to notice, a number of gentlemen assembled at the Bridge erected at the intersection of Lower Lachine road by the Canal, to enjoy the pleasures of a fox hunt, a sport hitherto unknown in this Province. Many fine horses were exhibited, and many of the riders seemed to pant with eagerness for the unbagging of poor Reynard. The fox was allowed to go off in the fields between the Canal and the River, and began to run towards the Nun's Farm.—After he had been favored with "good law," the hounds, trusty and true, were put upon "the drag," and very soon "gave tongue," proceeding in full cry. The riders kept on the Lachine Road, and turned down the lane, which leads to the Nun's house opposite Nun's Island. Here Reynard turned, and was proceeding on his former track, when the hounds caused him to take a course across the Lachine Road. The fox passed within about 50 yards of the Sportsmen, on the Lachine Road and made along the Canal towards the woods. The hounds continued in full cry, and the equestrians exerted themselves very creditably for a first attempt, in their leaping over the fences and ditches, that impeded their progress. The fox soon stole away to the woods, and after some time, was found to have holed himself in a hollow stump on the farm of Mr. Bourgeois, in rear of Woodlands, the property of George Gregory, Esquire. Here Reynard was taken, bagged, and is in custody to afford sport on Wednesday next, to those who wish to follow the amusements of merry old England. The hounds on this occasion were not numerous, and though young, exceeded the expectations of their masters. No accidents, and few unsportmanlike misfortunes occurred during the whole chase, and on the whole, the sport was maintained in a manner that did credit to those engaged in it. The country people thought the inhabitants of Montreal were mad, or that something had occurred to disturb their mental faculties, when a poor unoffending fox should be thus pursued over fence and ditch, by men, horses and dogs, and for no other purpose than to keep him in a bag to be chased another day. "Comme ces Anglois sont droles" was a common expression. We however are pleased to view this introduction of one of the finest sports of England into this country, and hope it may be continued.

It is requested as a matter of courtesy to the tenants of the grounds, as well as giving fair play to the dogs, that the sportsmen who may attend on Wednesday next, do not enter the fields on the east side of the road, where the fox is to be turned out. Other dogs than those engaged in the chase, should not be brought upon the ground.—Ib.

Quebec, April 21.

Passengers which left New-York on Tuesday evening last at 5 o'clock, arrived at Montreal on Friday at 2 o'clock P. M. in 69 hours; 16 hours more might have brought them by Steam-boat to Quebec, making the time occupied in travelling from New-York to Quebec only three days and two hours. We have no doubt, that with the improvement in the rate of Steam-boats, a regular intercourse during the summer might be kept up between New-York and Quebec in three days; the mail has hitherto taken six days and a half to pass over this distance.

By a Royal Proclamation, published in this Gazette, the Provincial Parliament of Lower Canada is prorogued to the Twentieth day of June next.—Q. Gazette.

POSTSCRIPT

(From the N. Y. Spectator.)

The Packet Ship John-Jay, has just come up from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 8th of April, and to which date we have received our papers.

The London dates are to the 6th of April. The quarter's revenue was made up on the 4th. The Courier says there will be a considerable excess. I report states not less than between two and three hundred thousand pounds.

Russia and Turkey.—The Courier of the 5th in alluding to the affairs of the East, says that up to the latest accounts the "Russian troops had not passed the Pruth, but the day fixed for the passage was the 12th of April. The Emperor sets off for the army about a week afterwards. Turkey, though she has granted a three month's armistic to the Greeks, has not yet taken any step that can warrant us in supposing she intends to accede to such conditions as would induce Russia to desist from war. On the contrary, the latest advices left here increasing her main army at Adrianople, and strengthening the forts of the Dardanelles.

Liverpool, April 8.

There is no decisive intelligence from the East since our last publication. All the arrivals from Portugal prove that Don Miguel is proceeding, with most indecent haste and a perfect disregard of all his pledges, to the overthrow of the Constitution of Don Pedro. Our government has wisely resolved not to interfere in the domestic troubles of Portugal, because we could not do so without violating a grand principle of the law of nations.—The British troops are therefore to be immediately withdrawn, and this will probably be the signal for decisive steps on the part of the Absolutists. We fear that British residents and British commerce will suffer from the hostility of Don Miguel and the priests.

On the 15th instant, by the Rev. Mr. Harris, Mr. Silas Branham, Merchant, of this Town, to Miss Clarissa Jane Bastido, second daughter of Mr. David Bastido, of Stamford.

Sheriff's Office, Hamilton,

N.B. Any person or persons having any claim on the above named premises, or any part thereof, by years. He could understand from experience (and the best of all experience, because he had paid for it,) that it was utterly impossible that the individuals concerned in the speculation could obtain any remuneration, for it was idle to suppose that persons who emigrated would be in a condition to pay for the land. If the parties entitled were upon the spot, they might, indeed, in two or three years, be paid in produce, but otherwise it was one of the question. There was one essential point to be considered. When it was proposed to send persons out to Canada, it was quite clear, from Papers before the House, that it could not be done with respect to mere paupers, who would be worse off there than in this country, and it would cost an immense sum for Government at the rate of £50 or £60 each person, to send out even those who had a small capital: that plan was neither prudent nor practicable. He should also like to know how and on what terms Government could grant the land to the Company. It had been granted at the rate of 3s. and 5s. 6d. per acre, and the Company proposed to sell it to individuals, to whom they did not advance 6d., to enable them to emigrate, at the rate of 10s. per acre, while for what were called town-lots, the Company was to receive for every quarter of an acre in some cases 20s., in others 30s. and in others 40s. This appeared a most enormous profit, and if it were to be had, he saw no reason why Government should not have obtained it. At one period the shares of the Company, which were originally ten pounds, advanced to a premium above the cost price of thirty-six pounds, and even afterwards, when many relinquished their shares, owing to the revocation of the original grant by Government, the shares were still sold at £5 premium, or a profit of £8 upon £30. He did not charge the Company with having taken any undue means to impose upon the public, but he saw no reason why Government was to obtain no profit upon this grant of a million of acres, which was to be to advantageous to the Company. Besides, he was told the land which would with Government with fairness send out other emigrants to enter into competition with the Company? He believed, however, that the whole project was fallacious, and that it would end to the advantage of nobody concerned in it. With a view to putting the House in possession of all necessary information regarding the contract and the progress of the undertaking, he moved that there be laid before the House "An Account of the Quantity of Land in Upper Canada sold to the Canada Company, stating the terms and conditions of such sale—the sum of money paid in conformity thereto—the number of Persons sent out to Canada by the Company—the times when they were sent out—the Quantity of Land appropriated to them, with the Price paid or to be paid for the same."

Mr. W. Horton said, that as he was connected with the Colonial Department at the date of this transaction, he would merely say a few words, leaving it to the Secretary of State to give or withhold any further account required. He might, indeed, incidentally mention, that the House was already in possession of half the information the Honorable Alderman wished to obtain—the terms of the contract with the Company had been printed, and in the hands of Members for many years. As to the rest—what the Canada Company had done—he did not know what power the House possessed to compel that body to disclose in what manner its business had been conducted. He had this morning read over four closely printed folio pages of Resolutions, detailing with the utmost minuteness all the proceedings of the Company, from the time of its creation to the present hour, and from thence, he thought, the Honourable Alderman might have obtained all he desired on the second branch of his inquiry. The consistency of the argument of the Hon. Alderman he could not understand; because, first, he had contended that the Canada Company had obtained an enormous profit, which ought to have come into the hands of Government; and next he had insisted that the whole project was fallacious, and that the loss to the individuals engaged in it would be enormous also. With respect to the highest premium on the shares, it was quite certain that no person connected with the Colonial Department had participated in any of the advantages thus acquired. The price of the land sold had been settled by Commissioners after they had taken the utmost pains, with every facility, to arrive at a just conclusion. He hoped that the undertaking would be ultimately beneficial to the Company, because he was sure that all the ingredients of wealth were to be found in the cultivation of that land, and in the encouragement of colonization. It was in the power of any Hon. Member to investigate whether Government had or had not made an improvident bargain, although years had elapsed since it had been concluded; but neither he nor the House had a right to interfere with the private details and affairs of the Company. Government had obtained previous information, to the extent of more folios than the Hon. Alderman could read in 3 months, were he to begin to-morrow morning, and the utmost caution used to take care that the public did not suffer by the bargain.

Mr. Bright hoped that the Members of the Company would make fortunes, but recommended the Government should take care that the terms of the bargains were exactly fulfilled. It was of the utmost consequence that, from time to time, as far as possible, the House should make itself acquainted with the proceedings of the Company, especially with a view to the general question of Emigration. He, therefore, hoped that no technical objection would be thrown into the way of the production of the account required. In Canada there was a proportion of land, called Crown and Clergy Reserves, and as they most injuriously interfered with the prosperity of the Colony, by preventing communication between one part and another, he wished to know whether any of these Reserves had been extirpated.

Mr. W. Horton replied, that there was already before the House a Bill, which had for its object the progressive abolition of the Clergy Reserves. We understood him to say also, that the Crown Reserves were in a course of extinction.

Mr. Easthope assured the House, on behalf of the Canada Company, that it had not the slightest objection to the fullest investigation of its concerns. He had not been present at the beginning of the speech of the Hon. Alderman; when he entered the House the Hon. Alderman was speaking of the enormous profits of the Company: he (Mr. Easthope) could inform the House, that the shares were at this moment at 30 per cent discount. Nothing could be further from the intentions of the Members of the Canada Company than a desire to avoid the bargain into which they had entered; and they had recently been engaged with the Colonial Secretary in such a way as must have convinced him that they contemplated the speedy and full performance of the terms of the contract. The Honorable Alderman was now in full possession of the objects and undertakings of the Canada Company; for he (Mr. Easthope) had placed in his hands a prospectus, stating, pretty much at large, the views of the Company, and what was within the scope of its intentions. It was not the purpose of the Canada Company to do more than to place the lands purchased from Government at the disposal of such persons as might be inclined to take them; the Company would perform the preliminary steps necessary to a settlement—they did all that could not be done by limited capital, or perhaps by no capital, and which must be done before the land could be available for any profitable return. Such was the object of the establishment of the Company, and they invited the closest scrutiny of the manner in which they had proceeded in the attainment of that object. It would thus appear, that while the Company pursued its purpose with a due regard to the interests of the proprietors, they were at the same time governed by a laudable spirit of liberality.

Mr. Warburton insisted, that the House had a right to ascertain whether or not the Company had fulfilled its part of the Contract.

Mr. W. Horton replied, admitting this right, but denying the power of the House to inspect all the private accounts of the Company.

Mr. Warburton called upon Government to watch the proceedings of Such a body with jealousy, although he had no doubt, from the fair and candid statement of the Honorable Gentleman (Mr. Easthope), that at present there was nothing to be complained of. Care ought to be taken, that all parts of the contract were performed.

Mr. Stanley, in justice to the Canada Company, felt bound to state, that during the short time he had been in the Colonial Office, he had found that body ready to enter into the fullest explanations. Government had a right to demand it. He believed that the whole of the terms of the contract had been definitively settled. Some misapprehensions might arise out of the expressions used to-night: the contract at one time was called a grant, at another a sale, and at a third a bargain; but whatever it was, in fact, he was satisfied that no favour had been shown to the Company, but that it had obtained a certain portion of land that it might be put into a state capable of cultivation. The payments were made by annual instalments, and no title was given to the Company until they had fulfilled all the preliminary parts of the engagement; when the money was paid the title was given, and not till then. He did not mean to use the words in an opprobrious sense, but the fact ceatainly was, that the Company was a body of land jobbers. If the Proprietors ever derived any profits from the scheme, it could only be at a very remote period, and they must lay out of their money for many years. In the mean time heavy expences must be incurred, and before it would be taken by sellers, the Company must confer on the land a value that could only be given to it by the disbursement of a large capital. As one part of the motion was already satisfied, and another could not be complied with, he wished it would be withdrawn.

Mr. Hume said, that being one of those who were anxious to promote emigration, he was far from viewing this Company with a jealous eye, or from being disposed to reproach Government with the contracts they had entered into with it. On the contrary, he would like to see similar bargains made with a dozen other Companies on the same terms, and with the same object. This Company had purchased a million or two of acres at a certain price, and as this sum was received, it was to be applied to defray the expences of those Colonies which had been hitherto paid by that House. The Company assisted emigrants who had found their way across the Atlantic, with the means of removing themselves to the place where the land was to be taken, and it supplied them besides with provisions for the year or a year and a half. Thus the Company forwarded emigration in the best possible manner, without calling on the Government for any assistance. By its exertions large tracts of wild, which would otherwise remain barren, had been brought under cultivation. He differed so much from his Honble. Friend (Mr. Alderman Waithman) that he was sure, if other Companies could be induced to employ their capital in the same way, they would be amply repaid in six or seven years, and would render great benefit to the public, by finding employment in the Colonies for multitudes of people who could find none in this country. He trusted this Company would contemplate the speedy and full performance of the terms of the contract. The Honorable Alderman was now in full possession of the objects and undertakings of the Canada Company; for he (Mr. Easthope) had placed in his hands a prospectus, stating, pretty much at large, the views of the Company, and what was within the scope of its intentions. It was not the purpose of the Canada Company to do more than to place the lands purchased from Government at the disposal of such persons as might be inclined to take them; the Company would perform the preliminary steps necessary to a settlement—they did all that could not be done by limited capital, or perhaps by no capital, and which must be done before the land could be available for any profitable return. Mr. Warburton insisted, that the House had a right to ascertain whether or not the Company had fulfilled its part of the Contract.

Mr. W. Horton replied, admitting this right, but denying the power of the House to inspect all the private accounts of the Company.

Mr. Warburton called upon Government to watch the proceedings of Such a body with jealousy, although he had no doubt, from the fair and candid statement of the Honorable Gentleman (Mr. Easthope), that at present there was nothing to be complained of. Care ought to be taken, that all parts of the contract were performed.

Mr. Stanley, in justice to the Canada Company, felt bound to state, that during the short time he had been in the Colonial Office, he had found that body ready to enter into the fullest explanations. Government had a right to demand it. He believed that the whole of the terms of the contract had been definitively settled. Some misapprehensions might arise out of the expressions used to-night: the contract at one time was called a grant, at another a sale, and at a third a bargain; but whatever it was, in fact, he was satisfied that no favour had been shown to the Company, but that it had obtained a certain portion of land that it might be put into a state capable of cultivation. The payments were made by annual instalments, and no title was given to the Company until they had fulfilled all the preliminary parts of the engagement; when the money was paid the title was given, and not till then. He did not mean to use the words in an opprobrious sense, but the fact ceatainly was, that the Company was a body of land jobbers. If the Proprietors ever derived any profits from the scheme, it could only be at a very remote period, and they must lay out of their money for many years. In the mean time heavy expences must be incurred, and before it would be taken by sellers, the Company must confer on the land a value that could only be given to it by the disbursement of a large capital. As one part of the motion was already satisfied, and another could not be complied with, he wished it would be withdrawn.

Mr. Hume said, that being one of those who were anxious to promote emigration, he was far from viewing this Company with a jealous eye, or from being disposed to reproach Government with the contracts they had entered into with it. On the contrary, he would like to see similar bargains made with a dozen other Companies on the same terms, and with the same objects. This Company had purchased a million or two of acres at a certain price, and as this sum was received, it was to be applied to defray the expences of those Colonies which had been hitherto paid by that House. The Company assisted emigrants who had found their way across the Atlantic, with the means of removing themselves to the place where the land was to be taken, and it supplied them besides with provisions for the year or a year and a half. Thus the Company forwarded emigration in the best possible manner, without calling on the Government for any assistance. By its exertions large tracts of wild, which would otherwise remain barren, had been brought under cultivation. He differed so much from his Honble. Friend (Mr. Alderman Waithman) that he was sure, if other Companies could be induced to employ their capital in the same way, they would be amply repaid in six or seven years, and would render great benefit to the public, by finding employment in the Colonies for multitudes of people who could find none in this country. He trusted this Company would contemplate the speedy and full performance of the terms of the contract. One hundred millions presented as it was doing good to the country, and to many thousands who were deriving advantage from it, and he wished Government could persuade other Companies to enter upon similar undertakings in other Colonies.

Mr. Secretar. Huskisson said, that the Honourable Gentlemen (Mr. Hume) had taken a correct view of the utility of these Companies to the country. In other parts of the world there were immense tracts of wild land which were totally unproductive, and if by any Company they could be brought into cultivation, so as to make a return to the parties employed upon them, the result would be, not only beneficial to the Colony, but advantageous to the general interests of this country. He was glad that he could state, that Companies on the same principle had been formed in New South Wales and at Van Diemen's Land. He trusted they would be all successful; for to the extent in which they reclaimed lands from the state of nature, they contributed to the increase of the power and resources of this country. Before the Contract with the Colonial Department, the Canada Company had given for what it had purchased the full rate at which land was selling in the market. The Company was payable down ready money, and it had to look to a remote period for the return of the capital so embarked. The Honble. Member for Bristol (Mr. Bright) had talked as if this Company had been turned loose in Canada, to select for itself any favourite spot it might fancy. But what was the fact? The Company had first contracted for two millions of acres, consisting of Crown and Clergy Reserves.—Some difficulty arose as to the Clergy Reserves which could not be overcome, and the result was that they did not form part of the contract, and the Company received in lieu of them a million of acres, situated on the banks of Lake Huron, lying in one lot together. The Company obtained no title to those lands but as they were progressively settled, and the purchase money paid. As the Company in succession received the titles, the public would receive an annual sum in aid of the burthen which the colonies brought on this country in maintaining their civil establishments. Government had not been so improvident as to leave out of their view public improvements in those Colonies. It had been stipulated that one-third of the money from the Company should be expended in building bridges, making roads, and other public purposes of convenience and benefit. A more judicious appropriation of the land, instead of leaving it in a state unavailing to the public and useless to individuals, could not have been devised. There had been no mystery or attempt at concealment in any part of this arrangement. He had no doubt that the Company had no disposition or desire to conceal its proceedings. The best way in which its prosperity could be promoted was by making known all its proceedings, and inviting, rather than shunning, investigation. He knew nothing as to the profits of the Company, but he believed the Directors did not regard its affairs as likely to excite either jealousy or envy. He trusted that the great mass of papers already before the House would satisfy the Honourable Alderman, without adding to them these returns, more especially as the Honourable Alderman had, on the point in question, already obtained explanation. He hoped, therefore, that the Honble. Alderman would not press his motion, but be contented with applying to the Directors, any one of whom would give him the information he required. He could assure the Honourable Alderman, that this was no very large portion of the business of the Colonial Department. He had that morning looked through 50 folios of the correspondence, which had become very extensive on both sides. He agreed with his Honourable Friend the Member for Preston (Mr. Stanley) that this was a question which very much claimed the attention of Government, involving, as it did, so many interests connected with the permanent welfare and general prosperity of that important part of the King's dominions, and particularly as it concerned the constitutional rights of the inhabitants, under the Act of 1791. After the recess it was his intention to call the attention of the House to the whole of this great subject; and according to the view he had taken of it, in his best manner, he would submit the whole detail of the difficulties relating to the Administration of Canada, to a Committe of that House, in order to remove the evils which, he really believed, unintentionally on the part of those who were mixed in the feuds and dissensions of that colony, did tend to retard its improvement and check the progress of its wealth and prosperity. He would not then give the notice, but he took that opportunity of starting his intentions.

Sir Charles Burrell said, that as the quantity of foreign wool imported last year had exceeded that of the preceeding year by between thirteen and fourteen million pounds, how was it possible, that while the tax on foreign wool was merely nominal, the Australian Company could redeem the capital they had invested in their undertaking? Where but in the mother country could they hope for a good market?—He pressed this consideration on the attention of the Company. Honourable Gentleman.

Mr. Alderman Waithman, in reply, thought it would be much better if Government had agents of its own to sell the land to emigrants, instead of doing so through the intervention of the Company. He was surprised to hear that this Company paid any portion of the expenses of emigrants, as in the papers they had issued they declared they would not contribute towards the expenses of emigrants in their passage from the United Kingdom, or in their place of location; but that the "Company would be ready at all times to give them"—what?—"information," (a laugh.) The Company must be making great profits, as they were selling for twelve shillings an acre what cost them only three shillings an acre. But the Government by the individuals who purchased the land, he pledged himself from his own knowledge, that it never could take place, for the land would produce nothing but furze. He had himself some thousand acres on this side of Lake Ontario, and until this year he had never received a shilling from them, though the occupiers had often proposed to send him any number of bushels of the produce. From all the information he had obtained from the best sources, he considered that any expectation of receiving money was idle and impracticable. The Right Honourable Gentleman, the Secretary for the Colonies, was satisfied that this Company would act with candour and fairness. He was acquainted with some of the Directors, and had the fullest confidence in their integrity; but the public had thought the same of other Companies, which had so grievously deceived them. There was another Company by which 300 individuals had been sent & scattered abroad nobody could tell where, save some ten or twelve who had found their way back to society, and who, he was ashamed to say, were supported by public subscription at Philadelphia. Talk of Emigrants! Had not the House seen 500 Companies tumble down through their misconduct? Had not the newspapers teemed with advertisements respecting the grossest and most scandalous frauds as originating in compassion towards the poor?—There had been Companies of this kind in which more than one Member of the House had been implicated. Did they not know that at that moment a seat for a Borough was on sale? Did they not know that application had been made for the Chiltern Hundreds, in order that a Member might relinquish the seat he was hawking about for the largest sum of money he could obtain?

Mr. Stanley rose to order. The conduct of any Member of the House, however repugnent to common decency, had no connection with the question before the House.

Mr. Alderman Waithman was sorry he had enlarged on this topic, which he would not pursue.

Mr. Secretary Huskisson also spoke to order. The Hon. Member had made a Motion respecting the conduct of a particular Company in its transactions with Government, and applied for certain documents which Government was not willing to furnish. The reply should be confined to observations made in the discussion, and could not be extended to the proceedings of five hundred other Companies.

Mr. Alderman Waithman promised not to pursue the course objected to. He did not want any voluminous statement. His Motion would not occasion any expence. A single sheet would contain all he wanted He wished only for that information which it was necessary he should possess, before he considered a plan of this sort, more especially when a Bill was coming before the House to authorize the unwarrantable project of borrowing money by parishes for this purpose.

The Speaker called the Honourable Alderman to order. He must confine himself to the Motion, and not go into the discussion of measures not before the House.

Mr. Alderman Waithman acknowledged that he was wrong in that respect, but still pressed for the information which he deemed necessary.

Strangers were then ordered to leave the Gallery for a division, but none took place.

Mr. Alderman Waithman withdrew his Motion.

VERY LATE FROM ENGLAND.

The Packet Ship Canada, Rogers, arrived last evening in 23 days from Liverpool. We have English dates of the 17th of April.

The papers do not contain any news of moment relative to the movements of the Russians and Turks.

The Austrian Observer states, that the Turks have obtained a complete victory over the Greeks who besieged the Castle of Scio, by the capture and burning of the Greek fleet of the Squadron of Tahir Pacha. The Greeks were taken so unexpectedly that they abandoned their Cannon and Boggage.

The Journal of St. Petersburgh of the 20th of March contains a Rescript addressed by the Emperor Nicholas to the Governor General of the Capital, on the happy termination of the war with Persia. The Russians have come off not only victorious, but have acquired a large accession of teritory.

NINE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

The Courier says—"We should be glad to receive more detailed accounts from Greece than have yet been sent to this country, because we wish to find the Greeks making every exertion to raise a land force capable of acting against the Turks, and forcing them to evacuate their territory.—Much may be done by the Allied Powers, but much also must be and can only be done by themselves. Ibrahim Pacha seems to have remained altogether unmolested. He proceeds from one point to another, and traversing the Morea from West to East, destroying towns without obstacle or resistance. The Armistice has for a time put an end to hostile operations in that quarter."

"The approaching passage of the Pruth by the Russian Army, must, probably, be considered merely a Military demonstration, rather than the first act of a new war. It is reported that the cabinet of St. Petersburgh in its circular note on this subject, has assured the other powers that it will for the present confine itself to the military occupation of the Principalities, it being the intention of Russia to give the Porte a certain time, within which it must carry into effect the stipulations of the treaty of Akerman, which are not yet executed. The Danube will not be passed till the Porte shews that it means to persist in its faithless and inhuman conduct towards Russia."—Courier.

SPAIN.

The London Courier says, "we believe that the French Troops will retire altogether, and that the evacuation will be complete.—Spain and Portugal will then be left to themselves, and we shall see whether they remain equally quiet under their own troops.

PORTUGAL.

The British troops have arrived upon their native shores from Portugal; and the fleet and the marines only are left to extend protection or refuge, should necessity require, to the British residents. All the intelligence that has yet arrived is of the gloomiest description.

YORK, U. C. Saturday, May 24, 1828.

By a late arrival at New York, London dates to 16th, and Liverpool to 17th April are received, from which we have made such extracts as appear most interesting.

The account which is copied this day into our columns, from the Farmer's Journal, of the passage of the first Vessel, "The Welland Canal," through the Canal, whose name she bears, from the Town of St. Catharines into Lake Ontario, will, we have no doubt, be read with interest. To the inhabitants of the flourishing Town of St. Catharines, and the neighboring country, the day, must indeed have been hailed as a proud one, on which they saw the products of the County, borne from their very doors, in the stately Vessel, to be transported to "distant climes."

From the well known characters of the Directors, and the active exertions of Mr. Phelps, the Contractor, there is every reason to hope, that this stupendous work, uniting the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario, will soon be completed, and that when its benefits shall be felt from the one extremity of the Province to the other, the clamors which have been raised against it, by its worst enemies, will be "put to silence"

The Packet Ship Canada, arrived at New York, bring accounts of the safe arrival at Liverpool of the Hon D Cameron—Mr. Merrin, Agent for the Welland Canal Company, and Mr. Proudfoot, of York, were fellow passengers with Mr. Cameron.

The Act which authorized the levying Canal dues for the La Chine Canal, having expired, Boats are now passing through, free of toll. The Lower Canada papers complain, and very justly, of the inconvenience resulting from temporary Laws, of this kind.

The works at the Rideau Canal, we understand from a person lately from thence, are for the present, in a great measure suspended, waiting the arrival of further instructions, which are expected, to authorise its construction on a scale sufficiently large, for Steam Boat navigation.

While speaking of Canals, we remember that Mr. Hamilton, at a Public meeting lately held in the Gore District, was pleased to apply his favorite appellation of "a Dry Ditch," to the Welland Canal. The "departure of the first Vessel," from St Catharines, of about Ninety Tons, with a full cargo, through this "dry ditch," must be astounding news to the Honorable Gentleman. How much more astounding will it be for him, to hear or long, that the good Ship "Welland Canal," has arrived at Prescott, from Sandwich, with a full cargo of Tobacco. What ever effect such tidings as these may have upon him and others, who have used their utmost endeavors to defeat this great enterprize, they will be received by the inhabitants of Upper Canada, generally, with the most heartfelt satisfaction, and thanks to those, by whose unremitting care and exertions, the work has been successfully carried on.

Deaths by Drowning.—On Saturday last, a young man by the name of Burgess, in the service of the Hon. Peter Robinson, accompanied by Master Vaughan, Son of Mr. Vaughan of the York Theatre, went out on a shooting excursion. In attempting to cross the River Don, in a small Canoe, in the management of which they were not well skilled, it upset with them and before assistance could be rendered them, both were unfortunately drowned.

A Sobier, in the York Garrison, was dreadfully burned, last week, by the accidental explosion of a quantity of gunpowder, which he had upon his person.—The unfortunate man died two days after the accident.

We acknowledge the receipt of the first number of "The Kingston Gazette and Religious Advocate," published by Mr. S. Miles, at Kingston, under the well chosen motto, "Fear God—Honor the King." The Selections appear to be judiciously made, and as the object of the Editor is a laudable one, in the diffusion of religious information, we sincerely wish him success in the undertaking.

Adding to the establishment of a College in Upper Canada, the "Canadian Freeman," after using a little of his usual abuse against Dr. Strachan and the Attorney General, accusing the former of a design to establish a "School of bigotry,"—and the latter, of having made "deceitful assertions," with respect to the Charter for a similar College in New Brunswick,—gives the following :—

"Message to the House of Assembly, 27th March 1828.

"HOWARD DOUGLAS.

"The Lieutenant Governor has the pleasure of communicating to the House of Assembly a copy of the Charter received by the last mail from England, for the College of New Brunswick

"The House will perceive that the pledge of a Charter by which no religious Tests should be required of Students, for matriculation or admission to degrees, is fully redeemed; and the Lt. Governor confidently trusts that a foundation is thus laid which the gracious patronage of our beloved Sovereign, and the fostering care of the Legislature of this Province will prove a source of great and permanent benefit to New Brunswick."

"H. D."

In this message Sir Howard Douglas, alludes to the "matriculation of Students," and "admission to degrees" on which there are to be no religious tests.—The Canadian Freeman from his remarks would have it inferred, that "religious tests" are required on such occasions in King's College in Upper Canada. If he could plead ignorance for such misrepresentations as these, there might be some excuse for him, but that no such excuse can be pretended, we have reason to know. The following extract from the Royal Charter, o King's College at York, will shew that it is precisely on the same terms in these respects, as that in New Brunswick:—

"And we do further will, ordain, and appoint, That no religious test or qualification shall be required or appointed for any persons admitted or matriculated as Scholars within our said College, or of persons admitted to any degree in any art or faculty therein."

The Freeman says he cares "not a straw" for our opinion—and that he will "jog on in his own course." Let that course be consistent with truth and decency, and the Freeman is at liberty to place just as little value as he pleases on our opinions.—Whenever we find him straying from this path, we shall, as it may be convenient to us, "jog" his memory, that he is out of the way.—His attempts to induce a belief that the articles which appear in our paper, are either written by, or submitted to others, before making their appearance, are too trifling to be worthy of notice.

A man by the name of Campbell, a Cooper at Hogg's Mills on Yonge Street, put a period to his existence, on Friday 13th instant, by cutting his throat with a Drawing-Knife.—It is supposed that the man was insane.

With this number a second volume of our paper is completed, and as some previous preparation is necessary, before commencing the next under the new arrangement, our readers will see, by referring to the notice on this subject, that during the ensuing week, a paper will not be issued from this office.

From the first number of the next volume to commence the 7th June, THE LOYALIST will be published on a separate sheet.—The payment of Subscriptions in arrear, is respectfully requested, before commencing the new volume.

WELLAND CANAL.

Departure of the First Vessel!

Saturday last was a proud day for St. Catharines; and indeed, for Upper Canada. A scene was witnessed within its borders, that will long be held in remembrance by the active friends and steady supporters of the splendid plans of internal improvement now in progress in this section of the colony—the free and uninterrupted passage of the first loaded vessel that ever floated on the waters of the Welland Canal, from this village (where she was built) to lake Ontario, a distance of five miles of artificial Steam Boat Navigation, constructed up the valley of the 12 mile creek, directly into the interior of the country. A scene which was at once, so grand, so novel and interesting, as to call forth the spontaneous acclamations of every liberal and patriotic spectator assembled on the joyous occasion.

It was a matter of sincere regret to many, that the projector of this great work, (Wm. Hamilton Merritt, Esq.) was not present, being now in London endeavoring to procure the necessary means for its completion to Lake Erie; and there can be little doubt but his efforts will be crowned with success.

On Friday our little village was honoured by the presence of Lieutenant Governor Sir F. Maitland, in company with the Directors of the Welland Canal, among whom were the Receiver General, the Attorney General, and the Solicitor Gene al, of the Province, who proceeded to the head of the Canal, on a tour of examination to the Deep Cut. The following day they returned to this village, where the usual transactions and decisions of the Board, on the events of the past month, were had in the Secretary's Office.

The new Schooner "Welland Canal of St. Catharines," being in readiness to clear on her first voyage, with her cargo on board, lying in the Canal opposite Mr. Monson's storehouse, at the foot of our village, the Lieut. Governor, and the several Officers of the Government, were invited to the Vessel's pier-up to become his guests, and partakers of the heart-felt satisfaction of being among the first to be borne upon the bosom of those miniature seas, they themselves had been, by their untiring perseverance and industry, the instruments of bringing into existence. They readily accepted the offer; and at half-past 10, the word was given, when the vessel moved off majestically upon this chanel of her native element, thus artificially formed by human power, with her sails mast towering above the trees of the forest on either bank, through a track of country which scarcely two score years ago was a howling wilderness, but now abounding with highly cultivated farms and flourishing villages, amid the loud huzzas of the passengers on board and the multitude of hardy pioneers and sons of the soil, assembled on the shores and surrounding highlands to view the novel scene.

On her entrance into and exit from each lock, on her way down to Port Dalhousie, she was greeted by the people, who thronged and literally lined the banks of the Canal from one village to the other, with a discharge of musketry, and loud-and reiterated cheers. On passing the second lock, we took a note of the time required for drawing off the water, and ascertained it to be about six minutes and a half. During the whole passage the vessel glided smoothly and silently along the artificial channel prepared for her reception, without the least interruption or annoyance whatever; affording one of the most pleasing sights to every truly patriotic beholder. The company on board, while she was thus gently but proudly making her way to Lake Ontario, partook of a cold collation and other refreshments, in the elegantly finished and furnished cabin, which had been bountifully provided by the Captain, whose gentlemanly conduct towards his distinguished guests on this occasion, deserves commendation. On her arrival at the piers, she was again greeted by a large concourse of spectators with long continued cheers, accompanied by the following sentiments, proposed by Mr. Martindale:—

1. The King, and his Representative.
2. The Constitution.
3. The General Agent, Directors, and Engineers of the Welland Canal.
4. Success to the new Schooner, "Welland land Canal, of St. Catharines."
5. May we all speedily witness the waters of the Welland mingle with those of Ontario, through the valley of the 12 Mile Creek.

She then passed the guard-lock into the space between the piers; and after 3 times 8 more hearty cheers were responded and re-echoed from the adjoining hills, the company retired, many of them with their bosom swelling at least, if not overflowing, we have reason to hope and believe, with gratitude to the great and all-wise disposer of events, for having benignantly smiled upon, and thus far crowned with complete success, the laudable designs of the projector of this great national work, purchased by him with unabated ardour, and strenuously supported by His Excellency, the Officers of His Government, and a majority of the Representatives of the people.

LA CHINE CANAL.—We have been informed that between the 3rd instant, when the levy of tolls on the Canal was discontinued, and the afternoon of the 10th instant, thirty-four boats passed through the Canal, on their voyage upwards and nearly the same number had come down. The average rate of toll on a boat up and down the Canal we understand to be abut £5 10 each, so that in the short space of one week, and at rather a dull period of the year, there has already been a loss of about £180, which if continued during the whole of the business season, will shew a deficiency of public revenue of nearly £5000.—Such is but one of the many evils that have arisen from a system of temporary laws being applied to regulate important and permanent objects.—Montreal Gazette.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

The Gaspé, the first arrival from Europe this season, came into port early yesterday morning, which is ten days later than the first vessel from sea last spring. At this period last year there was upwards of ninety vessels in the harbour.

The Gaspé, on the 26th ult. off St. Peter's, spoke the Brig Day, 30 days from Liverpool, for Gaspé, which vessel had been two days among the ice on the Great Bank. The Day stated that the Brig Ann, McKenzie, sailed two days before her for Quebec, and that the Ship Margaret was to sail two days after her. Saw a great deal of ice to the eastward of the great bank, and met an extensive field outside of St. Paul's; run along the edge of it about 100 miles, steering North, then met the ice ahead—got clear on the 29th ult. after having been fast 24 hours. The Barks Wallsend and Scott, which also arrived yesterday, were detained in the ice for some days, and have received damage.

The Ship Superb from Bristol to Quebec, with a general cargo, to W. & G. Pemberton, struck the ice about the 28th ult off Cape Ray, and received much damage. Captain Cain, (the Master) went on board a Schooner to obtain assistance; unfortunately his boat was stove alongside the Schooner and he was unable to return to the Ship. During the night the lights on board the Superb disappeared, and at day-light she was no where to be seen.—Eighteen hands remained on board the Ship.—Captain Cain and the other four seamen arrived here yesterday in the Wallsend. This vessel met with a great deal of ice off the Magdalen Islands, about the first instant. Nine Sail were seen by her at that time.

Fourteen vessels left Hull for Quebec about the same time as the Wallsend.

The Cargo of the Wm. Hunter, wrecked last fall at Kamouraska, has been brought up in a Schooner.

The Earl Douglass, was to leave the London Docks on the 5th ulto., Captain Scott, Mr. Trew, Commist. Lieut. Wilson and Messrs. Symes and Crawford, take passage in her

OBITUARY.

We copy with regret the following obituary notice which has appeared in a Bengal Journal. Lieutenant Colonel Chambers and his Lady, who were the objects of it, were well known in this country. The Lieutenant Col. during the war with America when he served in Upper Canada and in the more recent campaigns against the Burmese, was eminently conspicuous for zeal and gallantry, his lady who was possessed of great personal attractions, was the daughter of Lieut. Warberton formerly of the 60th Regt. and was, we believe, born in this Province, both were in the prime of life.—Q. Mercury.

We last night received the Calcutta Government Gazette and Bengal Hurkaru to the 2d Oct. The following is an extract:—

BANGALORE, Aug. 31.—Lieutenant Colonel Chambers, C. B., of His Majesty's 41st Regt. accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Chambers, were on their way from Bellary to Bangalore, on a visit to their son and daughter. Their arrival on the 1st or 2d of the ensuing month was looked for with pleasing anxiety by their numerous friends and acquaintances; but, alas, the pleasing anticipation has been in a moment blasted for ever by the arrival of intelligence late this afternoon, that Colonel and Mrs. Chambers are dead. This melancholy event occurred at Baughapilly, about seventy miles from Bangalore, at which place, it appears, that curse of our climate, cholera, rages with fatal violence.

LODO, 5th May, 1828.

GENTLEMEN,

I thank you sincerely for your general assurances of support, at the next election. I must, however, decline them. I am just recovering (a little) from one of those painful, distressing and debilitating attacks, which so often assail me; and which, had I been from home, must have been my last.

I have, in consequence, yielded to the wishes of my family, and to a sense of my rapidly increasing infirmity, mental as well as personal, to serve you any longer.

Be assured that you will sustain no loss.—You have always judged far too favorably of me. I never was cut out for a Legislator. I should not, nevertheless, have declined a compliance with your desires, did not infirmity say to me (in a voice not to be disregarded) you must.

Gentlemen, I take my very respectful leave of you.

J. MATTHEWS.

more hearty cheers were responded and re-echoed from the adjoining hills, the company retired, many of them with their bosom swelling at least, if not overflowing, we have reason to hope and believe, with gratitude to the great and all-wise disposer of events, for having benignantly smiled upon, and thus far crowned with complete success, the laudable designs of the projector of this great national work, purchased by him with unabated ardour, and strenuously supported by His Excellency, the Officers of His Government, and a majority of the Representatives of the people.

LA CHINE CANAL.—We have been informed that between the 3rd instant, when the levy of tolls on the Canal was discontinued, and the afternoon of the 10th instant, thirty-four boats passed through the Canal, on their voyage upwards and nearly the same number had come down. The average rate of toll on a boat up and down the Canal we understand to be abut £5 10 each, so that in the short space of one week, and at rather a dull period of the year, there has already been a loss of about £180, which if continued during the whole of the business season, will shew a deficiency of public revenue of nearly £5000.—Such is but one of the many evils that have arisen from a system of temporary laws being applied to regulate important and permanent objects.—Montreal Gazette.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

The Gaspé, the first arrival from Europe this season, came into port early yesterday morning, which is ten days later than the first vessel from sea last spring. At this period last year there was upwards of ninety vessels in the harbour.

The Gaspé, on the 26th ult. off St. Peter's, spoke the Brig Day, 30 days from Liverpool, for Gaspé, which vessel had been two days among the ice on the Great Bank. The Day stated that the Brig Ann, McKenzie, sailed two days before her for Quebec, and that the Ship Margaret was to sail two days after her. Saw a great deal of ice to the eastward of the great bank, and met an extensive field outside of St. Paul's; run along the edge of it about 100 miles, steering North, then met the ice ahead—got clear on the 29th ult. after having been fast 24 hours. The Barks Wallsend and Scott, which also arrived yesterday, were detained in the ice for some days, and have received damage.

The Ship Superb from Bristol to Quebec, with a general cargo, to W. & G. Pemberton, struck the ice about the 28th ult off Cape Ray, and received much damage. Captain Cain, (the Master) went on board a Schooner to obtain assistance; unfortunately his boat was stove alongside the Schooner and he was unable to return to the Ship. During the night the lights on board the Superb disappeared, and at day-light she was no where to be seen.—Eighteen hands remained on board the Ship.—Captain Cain and the other four seamen arrived here yesterday in the Wallsend. This vessel met with a great deal of ice off the Magdalen Islands, about the first instant. Nine Sail were seen by her at that time.

Fourteen vessels left Hull for Quebec about the same time as the Wallsend.

The Cargo of the Wm. Hunter, wrecked last fall at Kamouraska, has been brought up in a Schooner.

The Earl Douglass, was to leave the London Docks on the 5th ulto., Captain Scott, Mr. Trew, Commist. Lieut. Wilson and Messrs. Symes and Crawford, take passage in her

OBITUARY.

We copy with regret the following obituary notice which has appeared in a Bengal Journal. Lieutenant Colonel Chambers and his Lady, who were the objects of it, were well known in this country. The Lieutenant Col. during the war with America when he served in Upper Canada and in the more recent campaigns against the Burmese, was eminently conspicuous for zeal and gallantry, his lady who was possessed of great personal attractions, was the daughter of Lieut. Warberton formerly of the 60th Regt. and was, we believe, born in this Province, both were in the prime of life.—Q. Mercury.

We last night received the Calcutta Government Gazette and Bengal Hurkaru to the 2d Oct. The following is an extract:—

BANGALORE, Aug. 31.—Lieutenant Colonel Chambers, C. B., of His Majesty's 41st Regt. accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Chambers, were on their way from Bellary to Bangalore, on a visit to their son and daughter. Their arrival on the 1st or 2d of the ensuing month was looked for with pleasing anxiety by their numerous friends and acquaintances; but, alas, the pleasing anticipation has been in a moment blasted for ever by the arrival of intelligence late this afternoon, that Colonel and Mrs. Chambers are dead. This melancholy event occurred at Baughapilly, about seventy miles from Bangalore, at which place, it appears, that curse of our climate, cholera, rages with fatal violence.

LODO, 5th May, 1828.

GENTLEMEN,

I thank you sincerely for your general assurances of support, at the next election. I must, however, decline them. I am just recovering (a little) from one of those painful, distressing and debilitating attacks, which so often assail me; and which, had I been from home, must have been my last.

I have, in consequence, yielded to the wishes of my family, and to a sense of my rapidly increasing infirmity, mental as well as personal, to serve you any longer.

Be assured that you will sustain no loss.—You have always judged far too favorably of me. I never was cut out for a Legislator. I should not, nevertheless, have declined a compliance with your desires, did not infirmity say to me (in a voice not to be disregarded) you must.

Gentlemen, I take my very respectful leave of you.
